Half. Here's good stuffe toward.

Fal. Giuememy Rapier, Boy. Dol. I prethee lack, I prethee doe not draw.

Fal. Get you downe stayres.

Boft. Here's a goodly tumult : Ile forsweare keeping house, before Ile be in these tirrits, and frights. So: Murther I warrant now. Alas, alas, put vp your oaked Weapons, put vp your naked Weapons.

Dol. I prethee lack be quier, the Rascall is gone: ah, you whorson little valiant Villaine, you.

Hoff. Are you not hurt i'th' Groyne? me thought hee made a threwd Thrust at your Belly.

Eal. Haue you turn'd him out of doores ?

Bad. Yes Sir: the Rascall's drunke: you have hurt him (Sir) in the shoulder.

Fal. A Rascalleo braue me.

Del. Ah, you sweet little Rogue, you: alas, poore Ape, how thou sweat it? Come, let me wipe thy Face: Come on, you whorson Chops: Ah Rogue, I love thee: Thou sit as valorous as Helter of Troy, worth fue of Againem nen, and tenne times better then the nine Worthies: sh Villaine.

Fal. A rascally Slave, I will tolle the Roque in a Blan-

Del. Doe, if thou dar'ft for thy heart : if thou doo'ft, He canuas thee betweene a paire of Sheetes.

Enter Musique.

Page. The Mulique is come, Sir.
Fal. Let them play: play Sirs. Sit on my Knee, Dd. A Rascall, bragging Slave: the Rogue fled from me like

Del. And thou followd'A him Tike a Church: thou whorfon little tydic Bartholmew Bore-pigge, when wilt thou leave fighting on dayer, and foyning on nights, and begin to patch vp thine old Body for Heauen?

Emerthe Prince and Poises disputs'd

Fal. Peace (good Dol) doe not speake like a Deathshead: doe not bid me remember mine end.

Del. Sirrha, what humor is the Prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow : hee would have made a good Pantler, hee would have chipp'd Bread well.

Dol. They say Poines hath a good Wit.

Fal. Hee a good Wit ! hang him Baboone, his Wit is as thicke as Tewksburie Mustard; there is no more conceit in him, then is in a Mallet.

Dal. Why doch the Prince love him to then?

Fal. Because their Legges are both of a bignesse: and hee playes at Quoits well, and eates Conger and Fennell, and drinkes off Candles ends for Flap-dragons, and rides the wilde. Mare with the Boyes, and iumpes vpoo loyn'd-Rooles, and sweares with a good grace, and weares his Boot very smooth, like vnto the Signe of the Legge; and breedes no bate with telling of discreete stories: and fuch other Gamboll Faculties hee hath, that shew a weake Minde, and an able Body, for the which the Prince admits him; for the Prince himfelfe is such another: the weight of an hayre will turne the Scales betweene their Haber-de-pois.

Proce. Would not this Naue of a Wheele have his Eares cut off?

Pom. Let vs beat him before his Whore.

Proce. Looke, if the wither'd Elder hath not his Poll claw'd like a Parrot.

Poin. Is it not frange, that Delire should so many veeres out-line performance?

Fal. Kille me Do!.

Pronce. Saturne and Venus this yeers in Conjunction?

What fayes the Almanack to that?

Poin. And looke whether the fierie Trigon, his Man, be not lisping to his Masters old Tables, his Note-Booke, his Councell-keeper?

Fal. Thou do'ft give me flatt'ring Buffes.

Del. Nay truely, I kiffe thee with a most constant

Fal. I am olde, I am olde.

Dol. I loue thee better, then I loue ere a scuruie young Boy of them all.

Fal. What Stuffe wilt shou haue a Kirtle of? I shail receive Money on Thursday: thou shalt have a Cappe to morrow. A merrie Song, come : it growes late, wee will to Bed. Thou wilt forget me, when I am gone.

Dol. Thou wile fee me a weeping, if show fay ft fo. prove that ever I dreffe my felfe handforms, till thy serorne : well, hearken che end.

Fal. Some Sack, Francis.

Frm. Poin Anon, anon, Sir.

Fal Ha? a Baffard Sonne of the Kings? And are not thou Power, his Brother?

Prince. Why thou Globe of finfull Comments, what a Life do'ft thou lead ?

Fal. A better then thou: I am a Gentleman, thou are a Drawer.

Prince. Very true, Sis : and I come to draw you out by the Eares.

Hof. Oh, the Lord preserve thy good Grace: Welcome to London. Now Heaven bleffe that sweete Face of thine: what, are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whorlon mad Compound of Maichie: by this light Flesh, and corrupt Blood, thou art welcome.

Dol How? you fat Foole, I scome you.

Poin. My Lord, hee will drive you out of your reuenge, and turne all to a merryment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You whorlan Candle-myne you, how wildly did you speake of me even now, before this bonest, vertuous, civill Gentlewornan?

Hoft. Bleffing on your good heart, and so shee is by my treth.

Fal. Didft thou heare ma?

Prince Yes: and you knew me, as you did when you ranne away by Gads-hill: you knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose, to trie my patience.

Fal. No, no, no: not so I did not thinke, thou wast within hearing.

Price. I shall drive you then to confesse the wilful abuse, and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abule (Hall) on mine Honor, no abule, Prince. Not to disprayle mer and call rae Pander, and Bread-chopper, and I know not what?

Fal. No abule (Hal.)

Poin. No abole?

Fal. No abuse (Ned) in the World : honest Ned none. I disprays'd him before the Wicked, that the Wicked might not fall in love with him: In which doing, I have done the part of a carefull Friend and a true Subiech, and thy Father is to give me thankes for it. No abuse (Hal:) none (Nrd) Bone; no Boyes, none.

Prince. See now whether pure Feare, and entire Comardife, doth not make thee wrong this vertuous Gentle-woman, to close with vs? Is shee of the Wicked? Is thine Hofteffe heere, of the Wicked ? Or is the Boy of the Wicked? Or honest Bardupb (whose Zeale burnes in his Nose) of the Wicked?

Foin. Answere thou dead Elme, answere.
Fal. The Fiend hath prickt downe Badelph irrecoverable, and his Face is Lucifers Priuy-Kitchin, where hee doth nothing but roft Mault-Wormes : for the Boy, there is a good Angell about him, but the Deuill ourbids him too.

Prince. For the Women?

Fal. For one of them, thee is in Hell alreadie, and burnes poore Soules : for the other, I owe her Money; and whether shee bee damn'd for that, I know nos.

Heff. No.1 warrant you.

FAL. No.

Fal. No, I thinke thou are not : I thinke thou are quit for that. Marry, there is another Indicament upon thee, for fuffering flesh to bee cated in thy house, contrary to the Law, for the which I thinke thou wilt howle.

Holl. All Victuallers doe so; What is a Loynt of Murcon, or two, in a whole Lent?

Prince. You, Gentlewoman

Del. What sayes your Grace?
Felf. His Grace sayes that, which his slesh rebells

Hoff. Who knocks so lowd at doore? Looke to the doore there, Francis?

Enter Peto.

Prince. Peto, how now? what newes , Pero. The King, your Father, is at Westrainster, And there are twentie weake and wearied Poftes, Come from the North: and as I came along, I met, and ouer-tooke a dozen Captaines, Bare-headed, I weating, knocking at the Tauernes, And asking euery one for Sir lobn Falfraffe. Prince. By Heaven (Poines) I feele me much to blame,

So idly to prophane the precious time, When Tempels of Commotion, like the South, Bome with black Vapour, doth begin to melt, And drop vpon our bare vnarmed heads,

Give me my Sword, and Cloake:

Falshaffe, good night. Exit. Fall. Now comes in the sweetest Morfell of the night, and wee must hence, and leave it unpickt. More knocking at the doore? How now? what's the matter?

Bod. You must away to Court, Sit, presently,

A dozen Captaines stay as doore for you.

Falt. Pay the Mulitians, Sirths: farewell Hoftelle, farewell Dot. You fee (my good Wenches) how men of Meric are fought after: the undeferuer may sleepe, when therman of Action is call'd on. Farewell good Wenches: If I be not fent away poste, I will see you againe, ere I

Dol. I cannot speake: if my heart bee not readie to burst -- Well (sweete lacke) have a care of thy felfe.

Falft. Farewell, farewell. Hoff. Well, fare thee well : I have knowne thee these twentie nine yeeres, come Pescod-time. but an honefler, and truer-hearted man --- Well, fare thee

Bard. Mistris Teare-sheet,

Hoft. What's the matter?
Bod. Bid Miftris Toxe-freet come to my Masser. Hoff. Oh runne Del, runne: runne, good Del.

Adus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter the King, with a Page.

King Goe, call the Earles of Surrey, and of Warwick : But ete they come, bid them ore-reade these Letters, And well confider of them: make good speed. Exit.

How many thousand of my poorest Subjects Are at this howre afleepe ? O Sleepe, O gentle Sleepe, Natures fost Nurse, how have I frighted thee, That thou no more will weigh my eye-lids downe, And steepe my Sences in Forgetfulnesse? Why rather (Sleepe) lyest thou in smoakie Cribs, Vpon vneasie Pallads stretching thee, And huiffir with buffing Night, flyes to thy flumber, Then in the perfum'd Chambers of the Great? Vnder the Canopies of coffly State And full'd with founds of fweeteft Melodie? O thou dull God, why lyest thou with the vilde, In loathfome Beds, and leau'st the Kingly Couch, A Warch-cafe, or a common Larum-Bell? Wilt thou, ypon the high and giddie Maft, Seale up the Ship-boyes Eyes, and rock his Braines, In Cradle of the tude imperious Surge, And in the visitation of the Winder, Who take the Ruffian Billowes by the top, Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them With deastining Clamors in the slipp'ry Clouds, That with the hurley, Death it felfeawakes? Canst thou (O partiall Sleepe) give thy Repose To the wet Sea-Boy, in an houre fo rude: And in the calmest, and most stillest Night, With all appliances, and meanes to boote, Deny it to a King? Then happy Lowe, lye downe, Vneasie lyes the Head, that weares a Crowne.

Euter Warwicke and Surrey.

War. Many good-morrowes to your Maiestie.

King. Is it good-morrow, Lords? War. 'Tis One a Clock, and past.

King. Why then good-morrow to you all(my Lords:) Have you read o're the Letters that I fent you?

War. We have (my Liege.) King. Then you perceive the Body of our Kingdome, How foule it is : what ranke Difeales grow, And with what danger, neere the Heatt of it? War. It is but as a Body, yet diftemper'd, Which to his former strength may be restor d, With good aduice, and little Medicine:

My Lord Northumberland will foone be cool'd. King. Oh Heaven, that one might read the Book of Fate,

And fee the revolution of the Times Make Mountaines levell, and the Continent Wearse of solide firmenesse) melt it selfe Into the Sea : and other Times, to fee The beachie Girdle of the Ocean

Too wide for Neptunes hippes; how Chances mocks And Changes fill the Cuppe of Alteration With divers Liquors. Tis not tenne yeeres gone, Since Richard, and Northumberland, great friends, Did feast together; and in two yeeres after, Were they at Warres. It is but eight yeeres fince, This Percie was the man, neerest my Soule,

Who, like a Brother, toyl'd in my Affaires, And layd his Loue and Life under my foot: Yea, for my take, even to the eyes of Richard Gaue him defiance. But which of you was by (You Coulin Newil, as I may remember)

When Richard, with his Eye, brim-full of Teares, (Then check'd, and rated by Northumberland) Did speake these words (now prou'd a Prophecie:) Northumberland, thou Ladder, by the which

My

My Coulin Bullingbrooks afcends my Throne:
(Though then, Heaven knowes, I had no fuch intent,
But that necessitie fo bow'd the State,
That I and Greatnesse were compell'd to kisse;
The Time shall come (thus did hee follow it)
The Time will come, that soule Sinne gathering head,
Shall breake into Corruption: so went on,
Fore-telling this same Times Condition,
And the division of our Amitie.

War. There is a Historie in all mens Llues, Figuring the nature of the Times deceased. The which observed, a man may prophecie With a neere ayme, of the maine chance of thinga, As yet not come to Life, which in their Seedes And weake beginnings lye entreatured: Such things become the Hatch and Brood of Time; And by the necessaries forme of this, King Richard might create a perfect guesse, King Richard might create a perfect guesse, Would of that Seed, grow to a greater falsenesse, Which should not finde a ground to roote vpon, Vnlesse on you.

King. Are these things then Necessities?
Then let vs meete them like Necessities;
And that same word, even now cryes out on vs.
They say, the Bishop and Northamberland

Are fiftie thouland Ittong.

War. It cannot be (my Lord:)
Rumor doth double, like the Voice, and Eccho,
The numbers of the feared Please it your Grace
To goe to bed, upon my Life (my Lord)
The Pow'rs that you alreadie have fent forth,
Shall bring this Prize in very easily.
To comfort you the more, I have received
A certaine instance, that Glandow is dead.
Your Maiestie hath beene this fort-night ill,
And these unseason'd bowres perforce must adde
Vnto your Sicknesse.

King. 1 will take your counfaile: And were these inward Warres once out of hand, Wee would (deare Lords) vnto the Holy-Land.

Excunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Shakow and Silence: with Mouldie, Shadow, Wart, Feeblo, Bull-calfe.

Shal. Come-on, come-on, come-on: give mee your Hand. Sit; give mee your Hand, Sit: an early flitter, by the Rood. And how doth my good Coufin Silonce t Sil. Good-morrow, good Coufin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my Coufin, your Bed-fellow? and your fairest Daughter, and mine, my God-Daughter Elles !

Sil. Alas, a blacke Ouzell (Coufin Shallow.)

Shal. By yea and nay, Sir, I date fay my Coufin William is become a good Scholler? here is at Oaford fill, is here not?

Sil. Indeede Sir, to my coft.

Shal. Her most then to the inner of Court shortly 1 I was once of Clements Inne 3 where (I thinke) they will talke of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were call'd lustic Shallow then (Coufin)
Shal I was call'd any thing; and I would have done any thing indeede too and roundly too. There was I, and little lobe Dost of Stassouthite, and blacks George Bare, and France Pick-bose, and will Squele a Cot-fal-man, you had not foure (uch Swindge-bucklers in all the Innes of Courtagaine: And I may fay to you, were knew where the Bara-Rebair were, and had the best of them all at commandement. Then was lacke Fall affe (now Six lobe)
a Boy, and Page to Thomas Membray, Duke of Notfolke.

Sil. This Sir John (Coufin) that comes hirher anon s-bout Souldiers?

Shal. The fame Six lobn, the very fame: I faw him breake Scoggan's Head at the Court-Gare, when here was a Crack, not thus high: and the very fame day did Inght with one Sampfon Stock-fifth, a Fruiterer, behinde Gieyes-Inne. Oh the mad dayes that I have fpent! and to fee how many of mine olde Acquaintance are dead?

Sd. Wee shall all follow (Coufin.)

Shal. Certainer 'ess certaine: very fure; very fure: Death is certaine to all, all thall dye. How a good Yoke of Bullocks at Stamford Fayre?

Sil. Truly Coulin, I was not there,

Shal. Death is certaine. Is old Double of your Towne living yet?

Sil Dead, Sir.

Shal Dead? See, see: hee drew a good Bow: and dead? hee shot a fine shoote. Isha of Gaunt loved him well, and betted much Money on his head. Dead? hee would have elapt in the Clowt at Twelve-fcore, and carryed you a fore-hand Shass at fourereene, and soure-teene and a halfe, that it would have done a mans heart good to see. How a score of Ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be : a score of good Ewes may be worth tenne pounds.

Shal And is olde Double dead?

Enter Bardolph and bu Boy.

sil. Heere come two of Sit lobo Falfaffer Men (as I thinke)

Shal. Good-morrow, honest Gentlemen.
Bord. I beseech you, which is lustice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow (Sir) a poore Esquire of this Countie, and one of the Kings Justices of the Peace:
What is your good pleasure with me?

What is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My Captaine (Sit) commends him to you:
my Captaine, Sit John Fallaffe: a tall Gentleman, and a most gallant Leader.

Shal. Hee greetes me well: (Sir) I knew him a good Back-Sword-man. How doth the good Knight? may I aske, how my Lady his Wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon : a Souldier is better accommodated, then with a Wife.

Shall It is well faid, Sir; and It is well faid, indeede, too: Better accommodated? it is good, yea indeede is it: good phrases are surely, and every where very commendable. Accommodated, it comes of Accommoda:

very good, a good Phrase.

Bard. Patdon, Sir, I have heard the word. Phrase call you it? by this Day, I know not the Phrase: but I will maintaine the Word with my Sword, to bee a Souldier-like Word, and a Word of exceeding good Command. Accommodated: that is, when a man is (as they say) accommodated: or, when a man is, being whereby whereby he thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing.

Enter Falftaffe.

Shal. It is very just : Looke, heere comes good Sir John. Give me your hand, give me your Worships good hand: Trust me, you looke well: and beare your geares very well. Welcome, good Sit Iobn.

Fal. I am glad to fee you well, good M. Robert Shallow: Master Sme-card as I thinke?

Shal. No fir lobn, it is my Cofin Schence : in Commission on with mee.

Fal. Good M. Silence, it well befits you should be of

Sil. Your good Worship is welcome.
Fal Fye, this is hot weather (Gentlemen) have you provided me heere halfe a dozen of fufficient men?

Shal, Marry have we fir : Will you fir?

Fal. Let me fee them, I befeech you. Shal. Where's the Roll? Where's the Roll? Where's the Roll? Let me fee, let me fee, let me fee : fo, fo, fo, fo 1 yea marry Sir. Raphe Mouldie: let them appeare as I callt let them do fo, let them do fo : Let moe fee, Where is Moulde? Moul. Heere, If it please you.

Shal. What thinke you (Sit lohn) a good limb'd fellow: youg, firong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldle? Mont. Yez, if it please you.

Fal. The more time thou wert vs'd.

Shal Ha, ha, ha, most excellent. Things that are mouldie, lacke vie : very fingular good. Well faide Sie John, very well faid.

Pel. Pricke him.

Med. I was prickt well enough before, if you could have let me alone: my old Dame will be undone now, for one to doe her Husbandry, and her Drudgery; you need not to have prickt me, there are other men fitter to goe out, then I.

Fal. Go too: peace Mouldie, you hall goe. Mouldie, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent?

Shallow. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside: Know you where you are? For the other fit lot : Let me fee: Simon Shadow.

Fal. I marry, let me have him to fit vnder: he's like to be a cold fouldier, Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Heere fit.

Fal. Shadow, whole sonne are thou?

Shad. My Mothers Sonne, Sit.

Falft. Thy Mothers sonne: like enough, and thy Fathets shadow: so the sonne of the Female, is the shadow of the Male: it is often fo indeede, but not of the Fathers Substance.

Shal. Do you like him, fir lobn?

Falf. Shadow will ferue for Summer : pricke him : For wee have a number of shadowes to fill appethe Muster-Booke.

Shal. Thomas Wart?

Falf Where's he?

Wart. Heere fir.

Falf. Is thy name War?

Wart. Yezfir.

Fal. Thouarta very ragged Wart.

Shal. Shall I pricke him downe.

Sir John?

Falft. It were superfluous: for his apparrel is built vpon his backe, and the whole frame flands vpon pins:prick him no more

Shal. Ha, ha, ha, you can do it lir: you can doe it 1 1 commend you well, Francis Feeble.

Feeble. Heere fir.

Shal. What Trade art thou Feeble?

Freble. A Womans Taylor fir.

Shal. Shall I pricke him, sit? Fal. You may:

But if he had beene a mans Taylor, he would have pricked you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemies Battaile, as thou hast done in a Womans petticote?

Feeble. I will doe my good will fir, you can have no

Falft. Well faid, good Womans Tailour: Well fayde Couragious Feeble: thou wilt bee as valiant as the wrathfull Doue, or most magnanimous Mouse. Pricke the womans Taylour well Mafter Shallow, deepe Maifter Shal-

Feeble. I would Wart might have gone fir.

Fal. I would thou wert a mans Tailor, that & might'st mend him, and make him fit to goe. I cannot put him to a private fouldier, that is the Leader of fo many thoufands Let that fuffice, most Forcible Feeble.

Feeble. It Mall Suffice.

Falft. I am bound to thee, reuerend Fooble. Who is Shal. Peter Bulcalfe of the Greene.

Bul. Heere fit.

Fal. Trust me, a likely Fellow. Come, pricke me Bul calfe till he roare againe.

Bul. Oh, good my Lord Captaine.

Fal. What? do'ft thou roare before th'art prickt.

Bul. Oh fir, I am a difeased man. Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bul. A whorfon cold fir, a cough fir, which I caught with Ringing in the Kings affayres, ypon his Coronation day, fir. Fal. Come thou shalt go to the Warres in a Gowne: we will have away thy Cold, and I will take fuch order. that thy friends shall ring for thee. Is heere all?

Shal. There is two more called then your number : you must have but source heere sir, and so I pray you go in with me to dinner,

Fal. Come, I will goe drinke with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to fee you in good troth, Master shal. Ofir lobn, doe you remember fince wee lay all night in the Winde mill, in S Georges Field,

Falftaffe. No more of that good Mafter Shallow: No more of that.

Shal. Hal'it was a merry night. And is lone Nightworke alive?

Fal. She lives, M. Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with me.

Fal. Neuer, neuer: The would alwayes fay thee could not abide M. Shallow.

Shall could anger her to the heart: Thee was then a Bona Roba. Doth the hold her owne well.

Fal. Old, old, M Shallow.

Shal. Ney, the must be old, the cannor choose but be old: certaine thee's old; and had Robin Night-works, by old Night-works, before I came to Chowers Inne

That's little live yeeres agoe.

Shal, Hah, Coulin Silence, that thou hadft leene that, that this Knight and I have feene : hah, Sir Isha, faid I well?

Fall. Wee have heard the Chymes at mid-night, Ma-Act Shallow

Shal. That wee have, that wee have; in faith, Sir lohn, wee have : our watch-word was, Hem-Boyes. Come, let's to Dinner; come let's to Dinner: Oh the dayes that wee have forne. Come, come.

Bul Good Mafter Corporate Bordolph, fland my friend, and heere is foure Harry tenne shillings in French

Crownes for you: in very truth, fir, I had as lief be hang'd fir, as goe: and yet, for mine owne part, fir, I do not care; but rather, because I am vowilling, and for mine owne part, have a defire to flay with my friends : elfe, fir, I did not care for mine owne part, fo much.

Bard. Go-too: fland afide.

Mould. And good Master Corporall Captaine, for my old Dames lake, stand my friend . shee hath no body to doe any thing about her, when I am gone: and the is old, and cannot helpe her felfe : you shall have forcie, fir.

Bard Go-100: Aand alide,

Feeble, I care not, a man can die but once : wee owe a death. I will never beare a base minde: if it be my deshnie, fo: if it be not, fo: no man is too good to ferue his Prince: and let it goe which way it will, he that dies this yeere, is quit for the next.

Bard. Well faid, thou are a good fellow Feeble. Nay, I will beare no base minde.

Falf. Come fir, which men shall I have !

Shal. Foure of which you pleafe.

Hard. Sir, a word with you: I have three pound, to free Mouldie and Ball-cafe.

Falft. Go-too: well.

Shal. Come, fir lohn, which foure will you have?

Falf. Doe you chuse for me.

Shal. Marry then, Moulder, Bull-calfe, Feeble, and Falft. Mouder, and Bull-calfe: for you Moulde, Play at home, till you are past feruice : and for your part, Bulealfo, grow till you come vnto it : I will none of you.

Shal. Sir laba Sir laba, doe not your felfe wrong they are your likelyest men, and I would have you feru'd with

Falf Will you tell me (Mafter Shallow) how to chuse a man? Care I for the Limbe, the Thewes, the flature, balke, and bigge affemblance of a man? give mee the Spirit (Mafter Shallow.) Where's Wari? you fee what a ragged appearance it is : hee shall charge you, and discharge you, with the motion of a Pewterers Hammer : come off, and on, fwifter then hee that gibbets on the Brewers Bucket. And this same halfe-fac'd sellow. Shadow, give me this man : hee presents no marke to the Enemie, the foe-man may with as great syme levell at the edge of a Pen-knife: and for a Retrait, how swiftly will this Feeble, the Womans Taylor, runne off. O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a Calyuer into Warts hand, Bardolpho

Bard Hold Wart, Traverse thus, thus, thus.

Falft Come, manage me your Calyuer · fo: very well, go-too, very good, exceeding good. O, give me alwayes a little, leane, old, chopt, bald Shot. Well faid wor, thou att a good Scab. hold, there is a Teller for thee.

Shal. Hee is not his Crafes-mafter, hee doch not doe it right I somember at Mile-end-Greene, when I lay at Clements Inne, I was then Sit Doposes in Arthur Show there was a little quier fellow, and her would manage you his Peece thus and hee would about and about, and come you in, and come you in a Rah, esh, esh, would here say, Bowner would here say, and away againe would hee goe, and againe would be come; I hall never fee fuch a fellow.

Falf. There fellowes will doe well, Mafter Shallow Farewell Mafter Silvace, I will not vie many worder with ou: fare you well, Gentlemen both: I thanke your must a dozen mile to night, Bardolph, grue the Soulders Costes.

Shal. Sit Ish, Heaven blette you, and profper your Affaires, and fend vs Peace. As you retorne, vibr my house. Let out old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure I will with you to the Court

Fall. I would you would, Master shallow

Shal. Gonoos I have spoke as a word. Fare you

Era.

Falf. Fare you well, gentle Gentlemen. On Bodolph, leade the men away. As I returne, I will ferth of these lastices; I doe see the bottome of lustice Shall low. How subject were old men are to this vice of Lying? This same staru'd Justice hath done nothing but prace to me of the wildenesse of his Youth, and the Feater hee hath done about Turnball-street, and corry third word a Lye, duer pay'd to the hearer, then the Turkes Tribute. I doe remember him at Clements lime. like a man made after Supper, of a Cheefe-paring. When bee was naked, hee was, for all the world, like a forked Radish, with a Head fantastically caru'd rpon at with a Knife. Hee was so forlorne, that his Dimenhous (to any thicke fight) were inuncible. Hee was the very Gemus of Famine: bee came ever in the rere-ward of the Fashion: And now is this Vices Dagger become a Squire, and talkes as familiarly of John of Grant, as if hee had beene (wome Brother to him; and He be (wome hee never faw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he burst his Head, for crowding among the Marshals men. I saw it, and told Iohn of Gaunt, hee best his owner Name, for you might have trofs'd bim and all his Apparrell into an Eele-skinne: the Case of a Treble Hoeboy was a Manfion for him : a Court : and now hath hee Land, and Beeves. Well, I will be acquainced with him, if I returne: and it shall goe bard, but I will make him a Philosophers two Stones to me. If the young Dace be a Bays forthe old Pike, I fee no resson, in the Law of Nature, but I may frap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. Excus.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Encer ibe Arch-bipop. Mostra Hastings, Westmerland, Coleade.

Bish. What is this Forrest call'd? Haft. Tis Gualtree Forrest, and't shall please your Bish. Here fund (my Lords) and send discoverers forth, To know the numbers of our Enemies.

Hall Wee

Hart. Wee have fout forth alreadic.

Bifh. Tis well done.

My Friends, and Brethren (in these great Affaires)

I must acquaint you, that I have receiv'd

New-dated Lettors from Northumberland:

Their cold intent, tenure, and substance thus.

Here doth hee wish his Person, with such Powers

As might hold fortance with his Qualitic,

The which hee could not levie: whereupon

Hee is retyr'd, to ripe his growing Fortunes,

To Scotland; and concludes in heartie prayers,

That your Attempts may over-live the hazard,

And searefull meeting of their Opposite.

Mow. Thus do the hopes we have in hum, touch ground,

Mow. Thus do the hopes we have in him, touch ground, And dalls themfelves to pieces.

Enter a Mossenger.

Haft. Now? what newes?

Meff. West of this Forces, servely off a mile,
In goodly forme, comes on the Enemie:
And by the ground they hide, I judge their number
Vpon, or neere, the rase of thirtie thousand.

Mow. The just proportion that we gave them out.
Letys sway-on, and face them in the field.

Enter Westmerland.

Bib. What well-appointed Leader fronts va here? Mow. I thinke it is my Lord of Westmerland. weft. Health, and faire greeting from our Generall, The Prince, Lord Ishn, and Duke of Lancatter. Bilb. Say on (my Lord of Weltmerland) in peace; What doth concerne your comming? West. Then (my Lord) Vnto your Grace doe 1 in chiefe addresse The substance of my Speech. If that Rebellion. Came like it selfe, in base and abject Routs. Led on by bloodie Youth, guarded with Rage, And countenanc'd by Boyes, and Beggerie: I say, if damn d Commotion so appeare, In his true, native and most proper shape, You (Reverend Father, and thele Noble Lorde) Had not beene here, to dreffe the ougly forme Of bale, and bloodie Infurrection, With your faire Honors. You, Lord Arch-bishop, Whole Sea is by a Civill Peace maintain'd, Whole Beard, the Silver Hand of Peace hath touch'd, Whose Learning, and good Letters, Peace hath tutor'd, Whole white Inuestments figure Innocence, The Doue, and very bleffed Spirit of Peace. Wherefore doe you so ill translate your selfe, Out of the Speech of Peace, that beares such grace. Into the harsh and hoystrous Tongue of Warre? Turning your Bookes to Graucs, your Inkero Blood, Your Pennes to Launces, and your Tongue diuine To a lowd Trumper, and a Point of Warre. Bift. Wherefore de Ithis? fo the Question flands. Briefely to this end : Wee are all discasid, And with our furfetting, and wanton howres, Have brought our felues into a burning Feuer, And wee mull bleede for it : of which Difeale, Our late King Richard (being infected) dy d. Bui (my most Noble Lord of Wellmeiland)

I rake not on me here as a Phylician,

Nor doe las an Enemie to Peace,

Troope in the Throngs of Militarie men: But rather thew a while like fearefull Warre. To dyet ranke Mindes, ficke of happinesse, And purge th'obstructions, which begin to stop Our very Veines of Life: heare me more plainely. I have in equall ballance suffly weigh'd, What wrongs our Arms may do, what wrongs we fuster. And finde our Griefes heavier then our Offences. Wee fee which way the streame of Time doth runne. And are enforc'd from our most quiet there, By the rough Torrent of Occasion, And have the fummarie of all out Griefes (When time thall ferue) to thew in Articles ; Which long ere this, were offer d to the King, And might, by no Suit, gayne our Audience: When wee are wrong'd, and would vnfold our Griefes, Wer are deny'd accesse vnto his Person, Euen by those men, that most have done vs wrong, The dangers of the dayes but newly gone, Whose memorie is written on the Earth With yet appearing blood; and the examples Of every Minutes instance (prefere now) Hath put vs in thefe ill-befeeming Armes: Not to breake Peace, or any Branch of it, But to establish here a Peace indeede, Concurring both in Name and Qualitie.

West. When euer yet was your Appeale deny d? Wherein haue you beene galled by the King f What Peere hath beene suborn'd, to grate on you, That you should seale this lawlesse bloody Booke Of forg'd Rebellion, with a Seale divine? Bijh. My Brother generall, the Common-wealth, I make my Quarrell, in perticular. West. There is no neede of any fuch redresse: Or if there were, it not belongs to you. Mow. Why not to him in parc, and to vs all, That feele the bruizes of the dayes before, And fuffer the Condition of these Times To lay a heavie and vnequall Hand vpon our Honors? West. Oiny good Lord Mowbray, Conftrue the Times to their Necessities, And you shall say (indeede) it is the Time, And not the King, that doth you muries. Yet for your part, it not appeares to me, Either from the King, or in the present Time, That you should have an ynch of any ground To build a Griefe on : were you not reftor'd To all the Duke of Norfolkes Seignories, Your Noble, and right well-remembred Fathers? Mow. What thing, in Honor, had my Father loft, That need to be reviu'd, and breath'd in me? The King that lou'd him, sa the State Rood then, Was forc'd, perforce compell'd to banish him: And then, that Henry Bullingbrooke and hee Being mounted, and both rowfed in their Seates, Their neighing Courfers daring of the Spurre, Their armed Staues in charge, their Beauers downe, Their eyes of hee fparkling shrough fights of Steele, And the lowd Trumpet blowing them together: Theo, then, when there was nothing could have flay'd My Father from the Breast of Bullingbrooke; O, when the King did throw his Warder downe, (His owne Life hung vpon the Staffe hee threw) Then threw hee downs himfelfe, and all their Lives, That by Indictment, and by dint of Sword, Have hoce mil-carryed under Bullingbrooke.

Well You

Woff. You speak (Lord Moubras) now you know not what. The Earle of Hereford was reputed then In England the most valiant Gentleman. Who knowes, on whom Fortune would then have smil'd? But if your Father had beene Villor there, Hee nore had borne it out of Couentry. For all the Countrey, in a generall voyce, Cry'd hate vpon him : and all their prayers, and lone, Were fet on Herford, whom they do ied on, And blefs'd, and grac'd, and did more then the King. But this le meere digression from my purpose. Here come I from our Princely Generall. To know your Griefessto tell you, from his Grace, That hee will give you Audience : and wherein It shall appeare, that your demands are just, You shall enjoy them, every thing fet off, That might so much as thinke you Enemies.

Mon. But hee hath forc'd vs to compell this Offer,

And it proceedes from Pollicy, not Loue.

West. Montray gou ouer-weene to take It for This Offer comes from Mercy, not from Feare. For loc, within a Ken our Army lyes, Vpon mine Honor, 2ll too confident To give admittance to a thought of feare. Our Battsile is more full of Names then yours, Our Men more perfect in the vie of Armes, Our Armor all as firong, our Caufe the beft; Then Resson will, our hearts should be as good. Say you not then, our Offer is compell'd.

Mow. Well, by my will, wee shall admit no Parley. Well. That argues but the shame of your offence:

A rotten Case abides no handling.

Hast. Hath the Prince Iohn a full Commission, In very ample vertue of his Father, To heare, and absolutely to determine Of what Conditions wee shall stand upon? West. That is intended in the Generals Name:

I muse you make so slight a Quostion. Bish Then take (my Lord of Westmerland) this Schedule, For this containes our generall Grieuances:

Esch seuerall Article herein redress'd, All members of our Cause, both here, and hence,

That are infinewed to this Action, Acquitted by a true substantiall forme, And present execution of our wills, To vs, and to our purpoles confin'd, Wee come within our awfull Banks againe,

And knit our Powers to the Arme of Peace. Wost. This will I show the Generall. Please you Lords; In fight of both our Battailes, wee may meete

At either end in peace: which Heaven fo frame, Or to the place of difference call the Swords, Which must decide it.

Bish. My Lord, wee will doe fo.

Mow. There is a thing within my Bosome tells me, That no Conditions of our Peace can Rand.

Hast. Feare you not, that if wee can make out Peace Vpon fuch large termes, and fo absolute, As our Conditions thall confift ypon, Our Peace shall stand as firme as Rockie Mountaines.

Olow. I, but our valuation shall be such, That every flight, and falle-derived Caule, Yea, cuery idle, nice, and wanton Reafon, Shall, to the King, tafte of this Action: That were our Royall faiths, Martyrs in Loue,

Weefhall be winnowed with fo rough a winde,

That even our Corne shall seeme as light as Chaffe, And good from bad finde no partition.

Eft. No, no (my Lord) note this: the King is wearie Of daintie, and luch picking Grievances: For hee hath found, to end one doubt by Death. Realues two greater in the Heires of Life. And therefore will her wipe his Tables cleane, And keepe ao Tell-tale to his Memorie, That may repeat, and Historie his loffe, To new remembrance. For full well hee knowes, Hee cannot fo precifely weede this Land, As his mis-doubts present occasion : His foes are so en-roosed with his friends. That plucking to vnfixe an Enemie, Hee doth vnfasten so, and shake a friend. So that this Land, like an offensive wife, That hath entag'd him on, to offer ftroken, As he is striking, holds his Infant vp, And hangs resolu'd Correction in the Arme, That was vpreat'd to execution.

Haft. Besides, the King hath wasted all his Rods, On late Offenders, that he now doth lacke The very Instruments of Chasticement: So that his power, like to a Fangleffe Lion

May offer, but not hold.
Bish. Tis very true:

And therefore be afford (my good Lord Marthal) If we do now make our attonement well, Our Peace, will (like a broken Limbe vniced) Grow stronger, for the breaking.

Mon. Beitlo :

Heere is return'd my Lord of Westmer and. Enser Westmerland.

West. The Prince is here at hand:pleaseth your Lordship To meet his Grace, just distance tweene our Armies? Mow. Your Grace of Yorke, in heaven's name then forward.

Bish. Before, and greet his Grace(my Lord) we come,

Enter Prince Ichn.

John. You are wel encountred here(my cofin Moning) Good day to you, gentle Lord Archbishop, And fo to you Lord Haftings, and to all My Lord of Yorke, it better shew'd with you, When that your Flocke (affembled by the Bell) Encircled you, to heare with reverence Your expossion on the holy Text, Then now to fee you heere an Iron man Chearing a rowt of Rebels with your Drumme, Turning the Word, to Sword; and Life to death : That man that fits within a Monarches heart, And ripens in the Sunne-Shine of his favor Would hee abuse the Countenance of the King, Alack, what Mischiefes might hee fet abroach, In shadow of such Greatnesser With you, Lord Bishop, It is even fo. Who hath not heard it spoken. How deepe you were within the Bookes of Heaven? To vs, the Speaker in his Parliament; To va, th'imagine Voyce of Heaven it felfe ; The very Opener, and Intelligencer, Betweenethe Grace, the Sanctities of Heaven; And our dull workings. O, who shall beleeve, But you mil-vie the reuerence of your Place, Employ the Countenance, and Grace of Heaven, As a falle Fauorite doth his Princes Name, In deedes dis-honorable! You have taken vp, Vnder

Vader the countertested Zeale of Heaven. The Subjects of Heauens Subflitute, my Father, And both against the Peace of Hesuen, and him,

Have here vp-fwarmed them.

846. Good my Lord of Lancaster, Tam not here against your Fathers Peace: But (as I told my Lord of Westmerland) The Time (mif-order'd) doth in common fence Crowd vs, and crush vs, to this monstrous Forme, To hold our fafetie vp. I fent your Grace The parcels, and particulars of our Griefe, The which bath been with scorne shou'd from the Court: Whereon this Hydra-Sonne of Warre is borne, Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleepe, With graunt of our most just and right desires; And true Obedience of this Madnelle cur d. Stoope tamely to the foot of Maiestie.

Mow. If not, wee readie are to trye our fortunes,

To the last man.

Haft. And though wee here fall downe, Wee have Supplyes, to fecond our Attempt: If they mil-carry, theirs shall second them And fo, successe of Mischiefe shall be borne, And Heire from Heire shall hold this Quarrell vp, Whiles England Chall have generation,

John. You are too Challow (Haftings)

Much too shallow,

To found the bottome of the after-Times.

West. Pleaseth your Grace, to antiwere them directly, How farre-forth you doe like their Atticles.

John. I like them all, and doe allow them well : And (weste here, by the honor of my blood, My Fathers purpoles have beene mistooke, And some, about him, have too lauishly Wrested his meaning, and Authoritie. My Lord, thele Griefes shall be with speed redrest: pon my Life, they shall. If this may please you, Discharge your Powers vnto their seuerall Counties, As wee will ours : and here, betweene the Armies, Let's drinke together friendly, and embrace, That all their eyes may beare those Tokens home,

Ot our reftored Love, and Amitie.

8 1/b. I take your Princely word, for these redresses, lobn. I give it you, and will maintaine my word :

And thereupon I drinke voto your Grace.

Haft. Goe Captorne, and deliner to the Armie This newes of Peace; let them have pay, and part o I know, it will well please them. High thee Captaine

Byb. To you my Noble Lord of Westmerland. West. I pledge your Grace:
And if you knew what paines I have bestow'd,

To breede this present Peace, You would drinke freely : but my loue to ye, Shall shew it selfe more openly bereafter.

Bis I doe not doubt you.

Weft. I em glad of it. Health to my Lord, and gentle Coulin Mowbray. Mow. You wish me health in very happy season, For I am, on the fodaine, fomething ill.

Bif Against ill Chances, men are ever merry, But heavinesse fore-tunnes the good event.

West. Therefore be merry (Cooze) fince sodaine forrow Serves to lay thus, some good thing comes to morrow.

Bif. Beleeue me, I am paffing light in ipitit. Mow. So much the worle, if your owne Rule be true.

John. The word of Peace is render'd : hearke now they shows

Alow. This had been chestefull, after Victorie. Bib. A Peace is of the nature of a Conquest:

For then both parties nobly are fubdu'd, And neither partie loofer.

Iohn. Goe (my Lord)

And let our Army be discharged too:

And good my Lord (fo please you) let our Traines March by vs that wee may perufe the men Exu.

Wee should have coap'd withall.

Bub. Goe, good Lord Haltings:

And ere they be difmils'd, let them march by. Exit John. 1 cruft (Lords) wee fhall lye to night together.

Enter West merland. Now Coulin, wherefore stands our Army still?

Well The Leaders having charge from you ro fland, Will not goe off, vntill they heare you speake.

John. They know their duties. Haft. Our Army is dispers'd :

Like youthfull Steeres, vnyoak'd, they tooke their course Eaft, Weft, North, South: or like a Schoole, broke vp, Each hurryes towards his home, and sporting place.

west. Good cidings (my Lord Hastings) for the which, I doe arrest thee (Traytor) of high Treason:

And you Lord Arch-bishop, and you Lord Mombray, Of Capitall Treason, lattach you both.

Mow. Is this proceeding iuff, and honorable?

West. Is your Assembly so?

Bifb. Will you thus breake your faith?

lobn. I pawn'd theenone: I promised you redresse of these same Grievances Whereof you did complaine; which, by mine Honor, I will performe, with a most Christian core-But for you (Rebels) looke to taffe the due Meet for Rebellion, and fuch Acts as yours. Most shallowly drd you these Armes commence, Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent hence. Strike vp our Drumnies, pursue the scatter d ftray, Heaven, and not wee, have fafely fought to day. Some guard these Traitors to the Block of Death, Treasons true Bed, and yee! der up of breath.

Enter Falfraffe and Collemile. Falft What's your Name, Sir? of what Condition are you? and of what place, I pray?

Col. 1 am a Knight, Sir

And my Name is Collewile of the Dale.

Falst. Well then, Collewile is your Name, a Knight Is your Degree, and your Place, the Dale. Cohemile shall full be your Name, a Traytor your Degree, and the Dungeon your Place, a place deepe enough: fo shall you be still collembe of the Dale.

Col. Are not you Sir lobn Falftaffe?

Falft. As goodaman as he fir, who ere I am . doeyee yeelde fir, or thall I (weate for you? if I doe fweate, they are the drops of thy Louers, and they weep for thy death, therefore rowze vp Feare and Trembling, and do obseruance to my mercy

Col. I thuske you are Sir lobe Falflaffe, & in that thought yeeld me.

Fal. I have a whole Schoole of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a Tongue of them all, speakes anie other word but my name; and I had but a belly of any indiffetencie. I were simply the most active sellow in Europe : my wombe, my wombe, my wombe vndoes moc. Heere corpes our Generall.

Enter Prince lobn, and Westmerland.

Isba. The heat is past, follow no farther now ; Call in the Powers good Coulin Weltmerland. Now Falitafe, where have you beene all this while? When every thing is ended, then you come. These tardie Tricks of yours will (on my life) One time or other, breake fome Gallowes back.

Falf I would bee forry (my Lord) but it fhould bee thus: I never knew yee, but rebuke and checke was the reward of Valout. Doe you thinke me a Swallow, an Arrow, or a Bullet? Have I, in my poore and olde Motion. the expedition of Thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremelt ynch of pollibilitie. I have foundred nine score and odde Postes: and heere (trauell-tainted as Lam) haue, in my pure and immaculate Valour, taken Sit John Collewile of the Dalo, a most furious Knight, and falorous Enemie : But what of that ? hee faw mee, and reelded: that I may suffly fay with the hooke-nos'd cllow of Rome, I came, faw, and ouer-came.

John. It was more of his Courtefie, then your defer-

Falft. I know not: heere hee is, and heere I yeeld him: and I befeech your Grace, let it be book'd, with the rest of this dayes deedes; or I sweate, I will have it in a particular Ballad, with mine owne Picture on the top of it (Collowle killing my foot:) To the which course, if I be enfore'd, if you do not all thew like gilt two-pences tome; and I, in the cleare Skie of Fame, o're-shine you as much as the Full Moone doth the Cynders of the Ele. ment (which shew like Pinnes-heads to her) beleeve no the Word of the Noble: therefore let mee have right, and let defert mount Toba. Thine's too heavie to mount.

Fulf. Let it shine then.

John. Thine's too thick to fhine.
Fall Let it doe something (my good Lord) that may doe me good, and call it what you will.

Ichn. Is thy Name Collewsle?

Col. It is (my Lord.)

Idm. A famous Rebell art thou, Collewile.

Falft. And a samous true Subiect tooke him Cal. Iam (my Lord) but as my Betters are,

That led me hither: had they beene rul'd by me, You should have wonne them dearer then you have.

Felf. I know not haw they fold themselves, but thou like a kinde fellow, gau'ft thy felfe away; and I thanke thee, for thee. Enter Westmerland, John. Haue you left pursuit? West. Retreat is made, and Execution stay'd. John. Send Colleville, with his Confederates, To Yorke, to prefent Execution.

Blunt, leade him hence, and fee you guard him fure. Exit with Collewile. And now dispatch we toward the Court (my Lords)

I hearethe King, my Father, is fore ficke. Our Newes shall goe before vs, to his Maiestie, Which (Coulin) you shall beare, to comfort him; And wee with lober speede will follow you.

Falft My Lord, I bescech you, give me leave to goe through Gloveestershire: and when you come to Court,

Rand my good Lord 'pray in your good report,

Iohn Fare you well Faulaffe: 1 in my condition, Shall better fprake of you, then you deferue. Exit,

Faill. I would you had but the wit I twere better then your Dukedome. Good faith, this fame young fober-blooded Boy doth not love me, nor a man cannot make him laugh: but that's no maruaile, hee drinkes no Wane. There's never any of thefe demute Boyes'come. to any proofe; for thinne Drinke doth to over-coole their blood, and making many Fish-Meales, that they fall into a kinde of Male Greene-tickneffe : and then, when they marry, they get Wenches. They are generally Fooles, and Cowards ; which some of ve should be too, but for inflamation. A good Sherris-Sack hath a twofold operation in it: it afcends me into the Braine, dryes me there all the foolish, and dull, and cruddie Vapours, which enuiron it: makes it apprehensive, quieke, forge-tiae, sull of nimble, sierie, and delectable shopes; which deliver do're to the Voyce, the Tongue, which is the Birth, becomes excellent Wit. The second propertie of your excellent Sherris, is, the warming of the Blood ! which before (cold, and fetled) left the Liver white, and pale; which is the Badge of Pufillanimitie, and Cowardize: but the Sherris warmes it, and makes it course from the inwards, to the parts extremes: It illuminateth the Face, which (as a Beacon) glues warning to all the rest of this little Kingdome (Man) to Arme: and then the Vitall Commoners, and in-land pettie Spirits, muster me all to their Captaine, the Heart; who great, and puffr up with his Resinue, doth any Deed of Coursge and the Valoue comes of Sherris. So, that skill in the Weapon is nothing, without Sack (for that fets it a-worke:) and Learning, a meere Hoord of Gold, kept by a Devill, till Sack commences it, and fets it in acl, and vie. Hereol comes it, that Prince Harn is valiant: for the cold blood hee did naturally inherite of his Father, hee hath, like leane, firrill, and bare Land, manured, husbanded, and cyll'd, with excellent endeauour of drinking good, and good flore of fertile Sherris, that hee is become very hot, and valiant. If I had a thousand Sonnes, the first Principle I would ceach them, should be to forsweare thinne Potations, and to addict themselves to Sack. Enter Bordolph How now Bardolph:

Bard. The Armie is discharged all, and gone. Falft. Let them goe: He through Gloucestershire, and there will I visit Mafter Robert Shallow, Esquire : I have him alreadie tempering betweene my hoger and my thombe, and shortly will I seale with him. Come away.

EXTUNE.

Scena Secunda.

Enser King, Warmicke, Clarence, Gloucester. King. Now Lords, if Heaven doth give successfefull end To this Debate that bleedeth at our doores Wee will our Youth lead on to higher Fields, And daw no Swords, but what are fan aify'd Our Nauie is addreffed, our Power collected, Our Substitutes, in absence, well invested, And every thing lyes levell to our wish; Onely wee want a little personall Strength: And pawie vs, till thefe Rebels, now a-foot, Come undemeath the yoake of Government.

192. Both which we doubt not, but your Maieflie Shall foone entoy,

King. Hum.

King. Humphrey (my Sonne of Gloucester) where is the Prince, your Brother?

Glo. I thinke hee's gone to hunt (my Lord) at Wind-

King. And how accompanied?
Glo. I doe not know (my Lord.)

King. Is not his Brother, Thomas of Clsrence, with

Clo. No (my good Lord) hee is in presence heere. Clor. What would my Lord, and Father?

Clar. What would my Lord, and Father?

King. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance thou are not with the Prince, thy Brother?

Hee loves thee, and thou do'st neglest him (Thomas.)

Thou haft a better place in his Affection,

Then all thy Brothers : cherish it (my Boy)
And Noble Offices thou may it effect

Of Mediation (after I am dead)

Betweene his Greatnesse, and thy other Brethten.
Therefore omit him not: blunt not his Loue,
Nor loose the good advantage of his Grace,
By seeming cold, or carelesse of his will.
For hee is gracious, if hee be observed:
Hee hath a Teare for Pitie, and a Hand
Open (as Day) for melting Charitie:

Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, hee's Flint, As humorous as Winter, and as sudden, As Flawes congealed in the Spring of day. His temper therefore must be well obseru'd: Chide him for faults, and doe it reuerently,

When you perceive his blood enclin'd to mirth: But being moodie, give him Line, and scope, Till that his passions (like a Whale on ground)

Confound themselues with working Learne this Thomas, And thou shalt proue a shelter to thy friends,

A Hoope of Gold, to binde thy Brothers in:
That the writed Veffell of their Blood (Mingled with Venome of Suggestion,
As force, perforce, the Age will power it in)
Shall never leake though it does work as form

As torce, perforce, the Age will powre it in)
Shall neuer leake, though it doe worke as frong
As Aconitum, or talh Gun-powder.

Clar. I shall observe him with all care, and love.

King. Why are thou not at Windsor with him (Thomas?)

Clar Hee is not there to day 1 hee dines in Lon-

King. And how accompanyed? Canst thou tell that?

Clar. With Points, and other his continual followers.

Aing. Most subtest is the fattest Soyle to Weedes:
And her (the Noble Image of my Youth)
Is over-spread with them: therefore my griefe
Stretches it selfe beyond the howre of death.
The blood weepes from my heart, when I doe shape
(In sormes imaginatie) th' vnguided Dayes,
And totten Times, that you shall looke vpon,
When I am sleeping with my Ancestors.
For when his head-strong Riot hath no Curbe,
When Rage and hot-Blood are his Counsailors,
When Meanes and lauss shall his Affections flye
Towards fronting Perill, and oppos'd Decay?

Wer. My gracious Lord, you looke beyond him quite: The Prince but fludies his Companions,

Like a strange Tongue: wherein, to gaine the Language, Tis needfull, that the most immodest word Be look'd vpon, and learn'd: which once actayn'd, Your Highnesse knowes, comes to no farther vse, But to be knowne, and hated. So, like grosse termes. The Prince will, in the perfectnesse of time, Cast off his sollowers: and their memorie Shall as a Patterne, or a Measure, live, By which his Grace must meter the lives of others, Turning pass-euills to advantages.

King. Tis scldome, when the Bee doth leave her Comb

In the dead Carrion.

Enter Westmerland, Who's heere? Westmerland?

Woft. Health to my Soueraigne, and new happinesse Added to that, that I am to deliver.

Prince John, your Sonne, doth kille your Graces Hand:
Mowbray, the Bishop, Scroope, Hastings, and all,
Are brought to the Correction of your Law,
There is not now a Rebels Sword wisheath'd,
But Peace puts forth her Oliue every where.
The manner how this Action hath beene borne,
Here (at more leysure) may your Highnesse rede,

With every course, in his particular.

King. O Westmerland, thou art a Summer Bird,
Which ever in the haunch of Winter sings

The lifting vp of day

Enter Harcourt.

Looke, heere's more newes.

Hare. From Enemies, Heauen keepe your Maiestie:
And when they stand against you, may they fall,
As those that I am come to cell you of.
The Earle Northumberland, and the Lord Bardolfe,
Wich a great Power of English, and of Scots,
Are by the Sherise of Yorkeshire ouerthrowne:
The mammer, and true order of the fight,

This Packet (please it you) containes at large.

Kmg. And wherefore should these good newes

Make me ficke?

Will Fortune neuer come with both hands full.
But write her faire words ftill in fouleft Leiters?
Shee eyther giues a Stomack, and no Foode,
(Such are the poore, in health) or elfea Feaft,
And takes away the Stomack (fuch are the Rich,
That haue aboundance, and enjoy it not.)
I should rejoyce now, at this happy newes,
And now my Sight fayles, and my Braine is giddie.

And now my Sight fayles, and my Braine is giddle

O me, come neere me, now I am much ill.

Glo. Comfort your Maieflie.

Cla. Oh, my Royall Facker. Well. My Soueraigne Lord, cheare vp your felfe Jooke vp.

War. Be patient (Princes) you doe know, those Rics

Are with his Highnesse very ordinarie.

Are with his Highneffe very ordinarie.

Stand from him, giue him ayre:
Hee'le straight be well.

Clar. No, no, hee cannot long hold out: these pangs,
Th'incessant care, and labour of his Minde,
Hath wrought the Mure, that should confine it in,
So thinne, that Life lookes through, and will breake out.

Glo. The people feare me: for they doe observe Vnfather'd Heires, and loathly Births of Nature: The Seasons change their manners, as the Yeere Had found some Moneths alleepe, and leap'd them o

War Speak

war. Speake lower (Princes) for the King reco-

Glo. This Apoplesie will (certaine) be his end. King. I pray you take me vp, and beare me hence Into tome other Chamber Coftly pray. Let three be no noyle made (my gentle friends) Voleffe fome doll and faunusable hand Will whilper Mulicke to my wearse Spirit. Wer, Call for the Mulicke in the other Roome. King. Set me the Crowne ypon my Pillow here.

Clar. His eye is hollow, and hee changes much. War. Lelle noy's, Isle noyle.

Enter Prince Henry.

P Hen. Who saw the Duke of Clarence? Clar I am here (Brother) full of heavinesse. P. Ilen How now? Raine within doores, and none abroad? How dotlithe King? Glo. Exceeding ill.

P. Hem. Heard hee the good newes yer? Tell it him.

Glo Hee alrer'd much, vpon the hearing it. P. Hen. If hee be ficke with loy, Hee'le recouer without Physicke.

War. Not so much noyse (my Lords)

Sweet Prince Speake lowe.

The King your Father, is dispos'd to sleepe. Clar Lerva with draw into the other Roome. War Wil't please your Grace to goe along with vs? P. Hen. No. I will fit, and watch here, by the King. Why doin the Crowne lye there, vpon hi Pillow, Being fo troubletome a Bed-fellow i Opnilish'd Perturbation! Golden Care! That keep Athe Ports of Slumber open wide, To many a watchfull Night: Acepe with it now, Yet not to found, and halle fo deepely sweete, As her whose Brow (with homely Bigger bound) Snores out the Warch of Night. O Maieflie! When thou do'll pinch thy Rearer, thou do'll lit Like a rich Armor, worne in hear of day, That feald'if with lafette : by his Gates of breath, There lyes a dowlney feather which stirres not : Did hee suspire, that light and weightlesse dowlne Perforce must moue. My gracious Lord, my Father, This fleepe is found indeede: this is a fleepe, That from this Golden Rigoll hath divore d So many English Kings. Thy due, from me, Is Teares, and heavie Sorroves of the Blood, Which Nature, Loue, and filiall tenderneffe, Shall (O deare Father) pay thee plenteoully.

Which Hesuen shall guard : And put the worlds whole strength into one gyant Arme, It thall not force this I ineall Honor from me.

This, from thec, will I to mine leave, As'tis lett to me.

My due, from thee, is this Imperiall Crowne,

Deriues it selfe to me. Loc, heere it fits,

Which(as immediate from thy Place and Blood)

Enter Warmicke, Glowcester, Clarence.

King. Evariouske Gloncoffer, Clarence.
(Var Doth the King call? War. What would your Maiestic? how fares your Gisce?

King. Why did you leave inchere slone (my Lordir) Cla, We left the Prince (my Brother there (my Liege) Who underrooke to fit and watch by you. King. The Prince of Wales? where is hee? let mee fee him.

War. This doore is open, hee is gone this way. Glo Hee came not through the Chamber where wee Asyd. King. Where is the Crowne I who tooke it from my

Pillow

War. When wee with-drew (my Liege) wee left it

King. The Prince bath ca'ne it hence : Goe leeke him out. Is hee to haltse, that hee doch suppose My fleepe, my death & Finde him (my Lord of Werwick) Chide him hither: this part of his consoynes With my difeate, and helpes to end me, See Sonnes, what things you are ! How quickly Nature falls into revole When Gold becomes her Obie &! For this, the foolish over-carefull Fathers Have broke their fleepes with thoughts, Their braines with care, their bones with industry. For this, they have ingroffed and pyl'd vp The canker'd heapes of Arange-archieved Gold: For this, they have beene thoughtfull, to inuelt Their Sonnes with Arts, and Martiall Exercises: When, like the Bee, culling from every flower The vertuous Sweetes, our Thighes packe with War, Our Mouthes with Honey, wee bring it to the Hine; And like the Bees, are murthered for our paines. This bitter tafte yeelds his engroffements, To the ending Father.

Enter Warnerdy.

Now, where is hee, that will not flay to long, Till his Friend Sicknesse hach determin'd me?

War. My Lord, I found the Prince in the next Roome, Washing with kindly Teares his gentle Cheekes, With such a deepe demeanure, in grest forrow, That Tyranny, which never quafft but blood, Would (by beholding him) have wash'd his Knife With gentle eye-drops. Hee is comming hither.

King But wherefore did hee take away the Crowne?

Enter Prince Henry. Loe, where hee comes. Come hither to me (Hary.) Depart the Chamber, leave vs heere alone. P Hen. I never thought to heare you speake againe. King. Thy wish was Father (Hory) to that thought: I stay too long by thee, I wearie thee. Do'll thou so hunger for my emprie Chayre, That thou wilt needes invest thee with mine Honors, Before thy howre be ripe? O foolish Youth! Thou feek'st the Greamesse, that will over-whelme thee. Stay but a little : for my Cloud of Dignitie Is held from falling, with so weake a winde, That it will quickly drop: my Day is dimme.

Thou halt stolne that, which after some sew howres Were thine, without offence : and at my death Thou hast feal'd up my expectation. Thy Life did manifest, thou lou'dst me not, And thou wilt have me dye affur'd of it Thou hid it a thousand Daggers in thy thoughts, Which thou half wherted on thy flonie heatt, To stab as halfe an howse of my Life.

What? canst thou not forbeare me halfe an howre?

Then

Then get thee gone, and digge my grave thy felfe, And bid the merry Bels ring to thy eare That thou are Crowned, not that I am dead Let all the Teares, that should bedew my Hearfe Be drops of Balme, to fanctifie thy heads Onely compound me with forgotten duft. Give that, which gave thee life, voto the Wormes : Plucke downe my Officers, breake my Decrees; For now a time is come, to mocke at Forme. Henry the fift is Crown'd: Vp Vanity, Downe Royall State: All you fage Counfailors, hence: And to the English Cours, astemble now From eu'ry Region, Apes of Idlenesse, Now neighbor-Confines, purge you of your Scum: Haue you a Rustian that (will (weare) drinke) dance? Reuell the night? Rob? Murder? and commit The oldest sinnes, the newest kinde of wayes? Be happy, he will trouble you no more: England, (hall double gill'd, his trebble guile. England, shall give him Office, Honor, Might? For the Fift Harry, from curb'd License pluckes The muzzle of Restraint; and the wilde Dogge Shall flesh his tooth in every Innocent.

Omy poore Kingdome (ficke, with civill blowes) When that my Care could not with-hold thy Ryots, What wilt thou do, when Ryot is thy Care?
O, thou wilt be a Wildernesse againe, Peopled with Wolves (thy old Inhabitants.

Prince. Opardon me (my Liege) But for my Teares, The most Impediments vnto my Speech, I had fore-stall'dthis decre, and deepe Rebuke, Ere you (with greefe) had spoke, and I had heard The course of it so farre. There is your Crowne, And he that weares the Crowne immortally, Long guard it yours. If laffect it more. Then as your Honour, and as your Renowne, Let me no more from this Obedience rife, Which my most true, and inward duteous Spirit Teacheth this proftrate, and exteriour bending. Heaven witnesse with me, when I heere came in And found no course of breath within your Maiestle, How cold it frooke my heart. If I du faine, O let me, in my present wildenesse, dye, And neuer live, to shew th'incredulous World, The Noble change that I have purposed. Comming to looke on you, thinking you dead. (And dead almost (my Liege) to thinke you were) I spake vnto the Crowne (as having sense) And thus vpbraided it. The Care on thee depending, Hath fed vpon the body of my Father, Therefore, thou best of Gold, are worst of Gold. Other, lesse fine in Charract, is more precious, Preferring life, in Med'cine potable:
But thou, most Fine, most Honout'd, most Renown'd, Haft eate the Beater vp. Thus (my Royall Llege) Accusing it, I put it on my Head, To try with it (as with an Enemie, That had before my face murdred my Father) The Quarrell of a true Inheritor. But if it did infect my blood with loy. Or fwell my Thoughts, to any straine of Prides If any Rebell, or vaine spirit of mine, Did, with the less Affection of a Welcome,

Give entertainment to the might of it,

Let heaven, for ever, keepe it from my head. And make me, as the poorell Vallaile is. That doth with awe, and terror kneele to it. Kong. O my Sonne! Heaven put it in thy minde to take it hence, That thou might'st ionne the more, thy Fathers love. Pleading so wifely, in excuse of it. Come hither Harrie, fit thou by my bedde, And heare (I thinke, the very latef. Counsell That ever I shall breath : Heaven knowes, my Sonne) By what by-pathes, and indirect crook'd-wayes Lmet this Crowne: and I my felfekoow well How troublesome it sate vpon my head. To thee, It shall descend with better Quiet, Better Opinion, better Confirmation For all the foyle of the Atchieuement goes With me, into the Earth. It feem'd in mee, But as an Honour Inarch'd with boyff rous hand, And I had many living, to vpbraide My gaine of it, by their Affiftances. Which dayly grew to Quarrell, and to Blood-shed, Wounding supposed Peace.
All these bold Peaces, Thou feeft (with perill) I have answered : For all my Reigne, hath beene but as a Scene Asting that argument. And now my death Changes the Moode: For what in me, was purchas'd, Falles vpon thee, in a more Fayrer fort. So thou, the Garland wear's successively. Yet, though thou fisnd it more fure then I could do, Thou are not firme enough, fince greefes are greene: And all thy Priends, which thou must make thy Friends Haue but their stings, and teeth, newly tak'n out, By whose fell working, I was first aduanc'd, And by whose power, I well might lodge a Feare To be againe displaced. Which to awoyd, I cut them off : and had a purpole now To leade out many to the Holy Land; Least rest, and lying still, might make them looke Too neere voto my State. Therefore (my Harris Be it thy course to busie glddy Mindes With Forraigne Quarrels : that Action hence botne out. May waste the memory of the former dayes. More would I, but my Lungs are mafted fo, That frength of Speech is veterly deni de mee. How I came by the Crowne, O heaven forgive : And grant it may, with thee, in true peace liuc. Frince. My gracious Liege: You wonne it, wore it . kept it, gaue it me, Then plaine and right must my possession be; Which I, with more, then with a Cornmon paine, Enter Lord John of Lancaster, and Warneske.

Gainst all the World, will rightfully maintaine

Ring Looke, looke,
Heere comes my John of Lancaster:
John Health, Peace, and Happinesse,
To my Royall Father.
Ring. Thoubring st me happinesse and Peace (Sonne John:
But health (alacke) with youthfull wings is stowne
From this bare, withered Trunke. Vpon thy sight
My worldly businesse makes a persod.
Where

The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Where is my Lord of Watwicker prin. My Lord of Warwicke,

King. Doth any name particular belong Voto the Ludging, where I hist did fwoon'd? War. Tis call d Irrufalem, my Noble Loid.

King. Laudbe to heaven : Even there my life muft end.

Is hoch beene propheti de to me many yeares,

I should not dye, but in Jernfalem : Which (vainly) I supposed the Holy. Land. But beare me to that Chamber, there He lye:

In that lerofalem, Thall Harry dye.

Excurs.

Adus Quintus. Scana Prima.

Enter Shallow, Science, Falltaffe, Bardolfe, Page, and Danie.

Shal. By Cocke and Pye, you shall not away to night. What Dany, I fay.

Ful You inust excuse me, M. Robert Shallow.

Shal I will not excuse you : you shall not be excused. Excuses shall not be admitted : there is no excuse shall ferue : you thall not be excus'd. Why Davie

Daue. Heere fit.

Shal. Dany, Dany, Dany, let me see (Dany) let me see: William Cooke, bid him come hither. Sir lobn, you shal not be excus'd.

Davy. Marry fir, thus : those Precepts cannot bee feru'd . and againe fur, shall we sowe the head-land with Wheate :

Shal Withred Wheate Dang. But for William Cook: are there no youg Pigeons?

Dauy. Yes Sir.

Heere is now the Smithes note, for Shooing, And Plough-Irons.

Shal. Let it be cast, and payde: Su loba, you shall Dany Sir, a new linke to the Bucket muft needes bee had: And Sir, doe you meane to stoppe any of Williams Wages, about the Sacke he loft the other day, at Hinckley Fayre ?

Shal. He shall answer it:

Some Pigeons Day, a couple of hort-legg'd Hennes: a ioynt of Mutton, and any pretty little time Kickshawes, tell William Cooke.

Dauy Doth the man of Warre, stay all night su? Shal Yes Dauy:

I will vie him well. A Friend i'th Court, is better then & penny in purle. Vie his men well Dany, for they are atrant Knaues, and will backe-bite.

Dasy No worle then they are bitten. le : For they have maruellous fowle linnen.

Shallow, Well conceited Day : about thy Businesse, Dasg.

Daug. I befrech you fit,

To countenance William Vifor of Woncot, against Cle-mou Perker of the hill.

Shal. There are many Complaints Daug, against that Vife, that Vifer is an arrant Knaue, on my knowledge.

Dang ligraunt your Worthip, that he is a knaue Sir.) But yet heaven forbid Sir, but a Knaue Thould have foone Countenance, at his Friends requell. An honeft man fir. is able so speake for himselfe, when a Knaue is not. I have feru'd your Worthippe tively fir, shele eight yeares: and if I cannot once or twice in a Quarter beare out a knaue, against an honest man, I have but a very little credite with your Worthippe. The Knaue is mine honest Friend Sir, therefore I beleech your Worthip, let him bee Counternanc'd.

Shal Goloo.

I fay be shall have no wrong: Looke about Day. Where are you Sir John? Come, off with your Boots. Give me your hand M. Bordoffe.

Bard. I am glad to fee your Worthip.

Shal. I thanke thee, with all my heart, kinde Master Bordolfe: and welcome my tall Fellow: Come Sir John.

Falftaffe. He follow you, good Mister Robert Shaken. Bardolfe, looke to our Horsles If I were faw de into Quantities, I should make foure dozen of such bearded Hermites staues, as Master Shallow. It is a wonderfull thing to fee the femblable Coherence of his mens spirits, and his: They, by observing of him, do beare themselves like foolish lustices: Hee, by converting with them, is turn'd into a lustice-like Seruingman. Their spurts are so married in Conjunction, with the participation of Society, that they flocke together in confent, like fo many Wilde-Geeie. If I had a fuite to May flet Shellow, I would humout his men, with the imputation of beeing neere their Mayster. If to his Men, I would currie with Maister Shallow, that no man could better command his Servance. It is certaine, that either wife bearing, or ig-norant Carriage is caught, as men take difeates, one of another; therefore, let mentake beede of their Companie. I will deutle matter enough out of this Shallow, to keepe Prince Harry in continual Laughter, the wearing out of fixe Fashions (which is source Tearmes) or two Actions, and he Chall Isugh with Internalisms. Oit is much that a Lye (with a flight Oath) and a self (with a fadde brow) will doe, with a Fellow, that never had the Ache in his shoulders. O you shall see him laugh, till his Face belike a wet Cloake, ill laid vp.

Shal Sit Jobn.

Falf. I come Maker Shallow, I come Maker Shallow.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Earle of Warniche, and the Lord Chiefe Influce.

Warnicke Hownow, my Lord Chiefe Inflice, whe. cheraway

Ch. Inf. How doth the King? Ware. Exceeding well: his Cares Are now, all ended.

Ch. InA Thope, not desd.

Wors. Hee's walk'd the way of Nature. And to our purpoles, he lives no more.

Ch. Infl I would his Maiefly had call'd me with him, The feruice, that I truly did his life. Hath left me open to all insuries.

Wo.

War. Indeed I thinke the yong King loves you not.
Ch. Juft. I know he doth not, and do arme my felfe
To welcome the condition of the Time,
Which cannot looke more hideoufly you me,
Then I have drawne it in my fantafie,

Enter John of Lancaster, Gloucester, and Clarense.

War. Heere come the heavy Issue of dead Harrie:

O, that the living Harrie had the temper

Of him, the worst of these three Gentlemen:
How many Nobles then, should hold their places,
That must strike sale, to Spirits of vilde forst

(h. Just. Alas, I feare, all will be over-turn'd.
Ishn. Good morrow Cosin Warwick, good morrow.

Glow. Cla. Good morrow, Cosin.
Iohn. We meet, like men, that had forgot to speake.

War. We do remember: but our Argument

Is all too heavy, to admit much talke.

Ioh Well: Peace be with him, that hath made vs heavy

Ch. Lust. Peace be with vs, least we be heavier.

Glow. O, good my Lord, you have lost a friend indeed:

And I dare sweate, you borrow not that face

Offeeming forrow, it is fure your owne.

Ishn. Though no man be affur d what grace to finde,
You fland in coldest expectation.

You fland in coldest expectation.

I am the forrier, would twere otherwise.

Cla. Wel, you must now speake Sir John Falst affe faire, Which swimmes against your streame of Quality.

Ch.luft. Sweet Princes: what I did, I did in Honor, Led by th'Imperiall Conduct of my Soule, And never shall you see, that I will begge A ragged, and fore-stall'd Remission.

If Troth, and vpright Innocency sayle me, Ille to the King (my Master) that is dead, And tell him, who hath sent me after him.

War. Heere comes the Prince,

Enter Prince Hanrie.

Ch. Iufl. Good morrow: and heaven faue your Maiesty Prince. This new, and gorgeous Garment, Maiesty, Sits not so easie on me, as you thinke, Brothers, you mixe your Sadnesse with some Feare: This is the English, not the Turkish Court: Not Amurah, an Amurah succeeds, But Harry, Harry: Yet be fad (good Brothers) For (to speake truth) it very well becomes you Sorrow, so Royally in you appeares, That I will deeply put the Fashion on, And weare it in my heart. Why then be fad, But entertaine no more of it (good Brothers) Then a joynt burthen, laid vpon vs all. For me, by Heauen (I bid you be affur'd) The be your Father, and your Brother too: Let me but beare your Love, He beare your Cares; But weepe that Horrie's dead, and so will I. But Harry lives, that shall convert those Teares By number, into houres of Happinesse. lobin to. We hope no other from your Maielty.

Iohn, or . We hope no other from your Malefly, Prin. You all looke firangely on me : and you most, You are (1 thinke) after d, I loue you not.

Ch.luft. I am affur'd (if I be meafur'd rightly)
Your Maiefty hath no iust cause to hate mee.

Pr.No?How might a Prince of my great hopes forget So great Indignities you laid vpon me? What? Rate? Rebuke? and roughly fend to Prifon Th'immediate Heire of England? Was this easie? May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?

Ch. Iuft. I then did vie the Person of your Father : The Image of his power, lay then in me, And in th'administration of his Law, Whiles I was buse for the Commonwealth, Your Highnesse pleased to forget my place, The Maiefty, and power of Law, and Justice, The Image of the King, whom I prefented, And frooke me in my very Seare of Judgement. Whereon (as an Offender to your Father) I gave bold way to my Authority, And did commit you. If the deed were ill, Be you contented, wearing now the Garland. To have a Sonne, fet your Decrees at naught? To plucke downe luftice from your awefull Bench?
To trip the course of Law, and blunt the Sword That guards the peace, and fafety of your Person? Nay more, to spurne at your most Royall Image, And mockeyour workings, in a Second body Question your Royall Thoughts, make the case yours: Be now the Father, and propose a Sonne. Heare your owne dignity to much prophan'd, See your most dreadfull Lawes, so loosely slighteds Behold your felfe, so by a Sonne disdained: And then imagine me, taking you part, And in your power, fost silencing your Sonne: After this cold confiderance, sentence me; And, as you are a King, fpeake in your State, What I have done, that misbecame my place, My person, or my Lieges Soueraigntie.

Prin. You are right lustice, and you weigh this well : Therefore still beare the Ballance, and the Sword : And I do wish your Honors may encrease, Till you do live, to fee a Sonne of mine Offend you, and obey you, as I did.
So shall I line, to speake my Fathers words: Happy am I, that have a man so bold, That dares do Iustice, on my proper Sonne; And no leffe happy, having fuch a Sonne, That would deliuer up his Greatnesse so, Into the hands of lustice. You did commit me: For which, I do commit into your hand, Th'vnflained Sword that you have vs'd to beare: With this Remembrance; That you vie the same With the like bold, just, and impartiall spirit As you have done gainst me. There is my hand, You shall be as a Father, to my Youth: My voice shall found, as you do prompt mine eare, And I will stoope, and humble my Intents, To your well-practis'd, wife Directions And Princes all, beleeue me, I befeech you? My Father is gone wilde into his Graue, (For in his Tombe, lye my Affections) And with his Spirits, fadly I furnine, To mocke the expectation of the World; To frustrate Prophesies, and to race out Rotten Opinion, who hatli writ me downe After my feeming. The Tide of Blood in me, Hath prowdly flow'd in Vanity, till now. Now doth it turne, and ebbe backe to the Sea, Where it shall mingle with the state of Floods, And flow henceforth in formall Maiefty Now call we out High Court of Parliament, Now call we out High Court of Passional And let vs choose such Limbes of Noble Counsaile,
That

The Second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

That the great Body of our State may go In equalitanke, with the best govern'd Nation, That Warre, or Peace, or both at once may be As things acquainted and familiar to vs. In which you (Father) shall have formost hand. Our Coronation done, we will areite (As I before remembred) all out State, And heaven (configning to my good intents)
No Prince, nor Peere, shall have just cause to say, Heaven shorten Harres happy hie, one day. Exemu.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falflaffe, Shallow, Silence, Bardolfe, Page, and Piffoll

Shat Nay, you shall see mine Orchard: where, io an Arbor we will eate a last yeares Pippin of my owne graffing, with a dish of Carrawayes, and so forth (Come Cofin Silence, and then to bed.

Fal. You have heere, a goodly dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren : Beggers all, beggers all Sit John: Marry good agre. Spread Dany spread Danie: Well faid Danie

Falft. This Danie ferues you for good vies he is your Seruingman, and your Husband.

Shal. A good Varler, a good Vatler, a very good Varlet, Sir lobn: I have drunke too much Sacke at Supper. A good Varlet. Now hit downe, now hit downe. Come Colin.

Si. Ah firra (quoth-a) we shall doe nothing but eate, and make good cheere, and praise heaven for the merrie yeere. when flesh is cheape, and Femaies deere, and luftie Lads rome heere, and there : fo merrily, and ever among fo merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart, good M. Silence, Ile give you a health for that anon.

Shal. Good M Bardelfe: Come wine, Danie.

Da. Sweet fir, sie: le be with you anon : most sweete fir, fit. Mafter Page.good M. Page, fit: Proface. What you want in meatt, wee'l have in drinke: but you beare, the least's all.

Shal. Be merry M Bardolfe, and my little Souldiour

there, be merry.

Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wise ha's all. For women are Shrewes, both short, and tall : Tis merry in Hall, when Beards wagge all;

And welcome merry Shrouetide. Be merry, be merry. Fal. I did not thinke M. Silence had bin a man of this Mertle.

Sil, Who I! I have beene meny twice and once, ere now,

Day. There is a dish of Lether-coats for you.

Shal. Davis.

Das. Your Worship: He be with you ftraight, A cup of Wine, fir ?

Su. A Cup of Wine, that's briske and fine, & drinke vneo the Leman mine: and a metry hears lives long-a. Eal. Well (aid, M. Silence.

Sil. If we shall be merry now comes in the sweete of thenight

Fot. Health, and long life to you, M. Silence

Sil. Fill the Cuppe, and let it come. He pledge you a mile to the bottome.

Shal. Honeft Bardolfe, welcome . If thou want it any thing, and wilt not call, beforew thy heart. Welcome my little tyne thee'e, and welcome indeed too : lle drinke to M. Bardolfe, and to all the Cauthernes about London.

Dan. I hope to see London, once ere l'die. Bar. If I might fee you there, Danie, Shal. YouTeracke a quart together! Ha, will you ove M. Bardolfe?

Bar. Yes Sir, in a pottle pot.

Shal. I thanke thee : the knaue will flicke by thee . I can affure thee that. He will not out, he is true bred.

Ber. And He flicke by him, fir.

Shal. Why there spoke a King lack nothing, be merry. Looke, who's at doore there, ho: who knockes?

Why now you have done me right.

Sil. Dome right, and dub me Knight, Soulige. Ist not fo?

Fal. Tis Co.

Sille's for Why then fay an old man can do four what. Den. If it please your Worshippe, there's one Piffell come from the Court with newes.

Fal. From the Court? Let him comein.

Enter Pift. H.

Hownow PiAoll?

Piff. Sir lohn, 'Saue you fir.

Fal. What winde blew you hither, Pistoll?

Pift. Not the ill winde which blowes none to good, sweet Knight: Thou art now one of the greatest men in the Realme

Sil. Indeed, I thinke he bee, but Goodman Fuffe of Bailon

Pall. Puffe? puffe in thy teeth, most recreant Coward base. Sit John, I are thy Pistoll, and thy Friend : helter skelter have I rode to thee, and rydings do I bring, and luckie toyes, and golden Times, and happie Newes of

Fal. I preihee now deliuer them, like a man of this

Pift. A footra for the World, and Worldlings bale, I speake of Affrica, and Golden 10yes

Fal. Obale Allyrian Knight, what is thy newes? Let King Comtha know the truth thereof.

Sil. And Robin-hood, Scarler, and John.

Pift. Shall dunghill Curres confront the Hellicons? And shall good newes be baffel'd?

Then Piffoll lay thy head in Futies lappe.

Shel. Honefl Gentleman.

I know not your breeding.

Poft. Why then Lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, Sir. If fir, you come with news from the Court, I take It, there is but two wayes, either to viter them, of to conceale them. I am Sir, under the King, in some Authority.

Pift. Vader which King?

Bezonian, speake, or dye.
Shal. Vnder King Harry Pift. Hary the Fourth? or Fift?

shal Harry the Fourth.

Pif. A foorts for thine Office. Sir John, thy tender Lamb-kinne, now is King, Hary the Eift's the man, I speare the truth. When Pistoll lyes, do this, and figge-me, like The bragging Spanistd.

Eal.

Fal. What, is the old King dead?

Y Lord, lle tell you, that selfe Bill is vrg'd,
Which in th'eleueth yere of 9 last Kings reign
Was like, and had indeed against vs past,
But that the scambling and vnquiet time
Did push it out of farther question.

Bifh. Ely. But how my Lord shall we refift it now? Bifh. Cant. It must be thought on: if it passe against vs. We loofe the better halfe of our Possession : For all the Temporall Lands, which men devout By Testament have given to the Church Would they strip from vs; being valu'd thus, As much as would maintaine, to the Kings honor, Full fifteene Earles, and fifteene hundred Knights, Six thousand and two hundred good Esquires: And to reliefe of Lazars, and weake age Of indigent faint Soules, past corporall toyle, A hundred Almes-houses, right well supply'd: And to the Coffers of the King belide, A thousand pounds by th'yeere Thus runs the Bill. Bifb. Ely. This would drinke deepe. Bilb. Cant Twould drinke the Cup and all.

Bilb. Ely. But what prevention?

Bift. Cam. The King is full of grace, and faire regard.

Bifb Ely. And a true louer of the holy Church.

Bifb Cart. The courses of his youth promis'd it not.
The breath no sooner less this Fathers body,
But that his wildnesse, mortify'd in him,
Seem'd to dye too: yea, at that very moment,
Consideration like an Angell came.
And whipt th'offending Adam out of him;
Leauing his body as a Paradise,
T'inuelop and containe Celestiall Spirits.
Neuer was such a sodiaine Scholler made:
Neuer came Reformation in a Flood,
With such a heady currance stowing saults:
Not neuer Hidra-headed Wilsulnesse
So soonedid loose his Seat; and all at once;
As in this King.

Bifb Ely. We are blessed in the Changes

Bift Ely. We are bleffed in the Changes
Bift Cant Heare him but reason in Divinisie;
And all-admiring, with an inward wish
You would defire the King were made a Prelate;
Heare him debate of Common-wealth Affaires;
You would say, it hath been all in all his study;
List his discourse of Warre; and you shall heare
A fearefull Battaile rendred you in Musique.

Turne

Turnehim to any Caule of Pollicy,
The Gordian Knor of it he will valoofe,
Familiar as his Garter: that when he speakes,
The Ayre, a Charter'd Libertine, is still,
And the mute Wonder lurketh in mens eares,
To steale his sweet and honyed Sentences:
So that the Art and Pradique part of Life,
Must be the Mistresset this Theorique.
Which is a wonder how his Grace should gleane it,
Since his addiction was to Courses vaine,
His Companies valetter'd, rude, and shallow,
His Houres fill'd vp with Ryots, Banquets, Sports;
And never noted in him any studie,
Any retyrement, any sequestration,
From open Hunts and Popularitie.

B. Eig. The Strawberry growes underneath the Nettle, And holefome Berryes thrive and ripen beft, Neighbourd by Fruit of bafer qualitie: And so the Prince obscur'd his Contemplation Under the Veyle of Wildnesse, which (no doubt) Grew like the Summer Grasse, fastest by Night,

Valeene, yet cressive in his facultie.

B.Cont. It must be fo; for Miracles are ceast:
And therefore we must needes admit the meanes,
How things are perfected.

B. Elp. But my good Lord:
How now for mittigation of this Bill,
Vrg'd by the Commons? doth his Maieflie
Incline to it, or no?

B. Cast. He feemes indifferent:
Orrather fwaying more upon our part.
Then cherishing th'eashibiters against us:
For I have made an offer to his Maieslie,
Vpon our Spirituall Convocation,
And in regard of Causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his Grace at large,
As touching France, to give a greater Summe,
Then ever at one time the Clergie yet
Did to his Predecessors part withall.

B. Ely. How did this offer feeme received, my Lord?

B. Cast. With good acceptance of his Maiestie:
Saue that there was not time enough to heare,
As I perceived his Grace would faine have done,
The feueralls and winded no passages
Of his true Titles to some certaine Dukedomes,
And generally, to the Growne and Seat of France,
Derived from Edward his great Grandfather.

B. Ely. What was the impediment that broke this off?

B. Ety. What was th impediment that broke this off?

B. Carr. The French Embaffador vpon that inflant

Crau'd audience; and the howre I thinke is come,

To give him hearing: Is it foure a Clock?

B. Ely. Ic is.

B. Cant. Then goe wein, to know his Embassie:
Which I could with a ready guesse declare,
Before the Frenchman speake a word of it.

B. Ely. Ile wait vpon you, and I long to heare it.

T.Cave. God and his Angels guard your facted Throne,

And make you long become it. King. Sure we thanke you. My learned Lord, we pray you to proceed, And infly and religiously vafold, Why the Law Salike, that they have in France, Or Inould or Should not barre 73 in our Clayme 1 And God forbid, my deare and faithfull Lord, That you should fashion, week, or bow your reading, Or nicely charge your understanding Soule, With opening Titles miscreate, whose right Sures not in native colours with the truth For God doth know, how many now in health, Shall drop their blood, in approbation Of what your touerence shall incide vs to. Therefore take beed how you impawne our Person, How you awake our fleeping Sword of Warre; We charge you in the Name of God take heed: For neuer two fuch Kingdomes did contend, Without much fall of blood, whole guiltleffe drops Are every one,2 Woe a fore Complaint, 'Gainst him, whose wrongs gives edge vnto the Swords, That makes such waste io briefe mortalitie. Vnder this Conjuration, speake my Lord: For we will heare, note, and beleeve in heart, That what you speake, is in your Conscience washt, As pure as sinne with Baptisme. B. Cor. Then heare me gracious Soueraign, & you Peers, That owe your felues, your lives, and feruices, To this Imperial! Throne. There is no barre To make against your Highnesse Clayme to France, But this which they produce from Pharamond, In terram Salicam Mulures ne succedesil, No Woman shall succeed in Salike Land: Which Salike Land, the French uniustly gloze To be the Realme of France, and Pharamond The founder of this Law, and Female Barre. Yet their owne Authors faithfully affirme, That the Land Salike is in Germanie, Betweene the Flouds of Sala and of Floe: Where Charles the Great having Subdu'd the Saxons, There lest behind and settled certaine Freach: Who holding in difdaine the German Women, For some dishonest manners of their life, Establisht then this Law; to wit, No Female Should be Inheritrix in Salike Land Which Salike (as I faid) twixt Elue and Sala, Is at this day in Germanie, call'd Merfen. Then doth it well sppezre, the Salike Law Was not devised for the Realme of France: Nor did the French possesse the Salike Land, Vntill sourchundred one and twentie yeeres After defunction of King Pharamond, Idly suppos'd the founder of this Law, Who died within the yeere of our Redemption, Foure hundred twentie fix: and Charles the Great Subdu'd the Saxons, and did feat the French Beyond the River Sala, in the yeere Eight hundred five. Besides, their Writers Lay, King Pepin, which deposed Childerike, Did as Heire Generall, being descended Of Blithild, which was Daughter to King Clotheir, Make Clayme and Title to the Crowne of France. Hugh Capet allo, who viurp: the Crowne 01

Of Charles the Duke of Loraine, sole Heire male Of the true Line and Stock of Charles the Great: To find his Title with some shewes or truth, Though in pure truth it was corrupt and naught, Convey'd himselfe as th'Heire to th' Lady Lingure, Daughter to Charlemaine, who was the Sonne To Lewes The Emperour, and Lewes the Sonne Of Charles the Great: 2110 King Lower the Tenth, Who was fole Heire to the V furper Caper, Could not keepe quiet in his conscience, Wearing the Crowne of France, till fatisfied, That faire Queene Isabel, his Grandmother, Was Lineall of the Lady Ermengare, Daughter to Charles the forefaid Duke of I oraine : By the which Marriage, the Lyne of Charles the Great Was re-vnited to the Crawne of France So, that as cleare as is the Summers Sunne, King Pepins Title, and Hugh Capets Clayme. King Lowes his fatisfaction, all appeare To hold in Right and Title of the Female: So doe the Kings of France voto this day. Howbert, they would hold up this Salique Lew, To barre your Highnesse clayming from the Female, And rather thuse to hide them in a Net, Then amply to imbarre their crooked Titles, V furpt from you and your Progenitors. King May I with right and conference make this claim? For in the Booke of Numbers is it writ,

King. May I with tight and confetence make this claim Eigh. Cont. The finne upon my head, dread Soucraigne: For in the Booke of Numbers is it writ, When the man dyes, let the Inheritance

Goe my dread Lord, to your great Grandfires Tombe,
From whom you clayme; muoke his Warlike Spirit,
And your Great Vickles, Edward the Black Prince,
Who on the French ground play'd a Tragedic,
Making defeat on the full Power of France:
Whiles his most mightie Father on a Hill
Stood fauling, to behold his Lyons Whelpe
Forrage in blood of French Nobilitie.
O Noble English, that could entertaine
With halfe their Forces, the full pride of France,
And let another halfe stand laughing by,
All out of worke, and cold for action.

Byb. And lye panillion'd in the fields of France.

Byb. Cas. O let their bodyes follow my deare Liege
With Bloods, and Sword and Fire, to win your Right:
lo ayde whereof, we of the Spiritualtie
Will rayle your Highnesse fuch a mightie Summe,
As never did the Clergie st one time
Bring in to any of your Ancessors.

King. We must not onely arms thousade the French, But Ly downs our proportions, to defend Against the Scot, who will make roade upon vs, With all aduantages.

Bift. Can. They of those Marches, gracious Souersign.
Shall be a Wall sufficient to defend
Our in-land from the pulsering Botderers.

Kmg. We do not meane the courling inatchers onely, But feare the maine intendment of the Scot, Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to va: For you shall reade, that my great Grandfather Neuer went with his forces into France, But that the Scor, on his vnformitht Kingdome, Came pouring like the Tyde into a breach, With ample and brim fulneffe of his force, Galling the gleaned Land with hot Affayes, Girding with grieuous fiege, Cafiles and Townes: That England being emptie of defence, Hath shooke and trembled at th'ill neighbourhood, B. Can She hath bin the more fear'd the harm'd, my Liege: For heare her but exampl'd by ber felfe, When all her Chevalrie hath been in Prance, And thee a mourning Widdow of her Nobles, Shee hath her felfe not onely well defended, But taken and impounded as a Stray The King of Scots: whom thee did fend to France. To fill King Edwards fame with prisoner Kings, And make their Chronicle as rich with prayie, As is the Owle and bottome of the Sea With lunken Wrack, and lum-leffe Treasuries. Bifb. Ely. But there's a faying very old and true, If that you will France was, then with Scotland first begin. For once the Eagle (England) being in prey, To her enguarded Neff, the Weszell (Scot) Comes Incaking, and to lucks her Princely Egges, Playing the Moule in absence of the Car, To tame and hauocke more then the ean eate.

Exer. It followes theu, the Cat must stay at home, Yet that is but a crush'd necessity, Since we have lockes to safegard necessaries. And pretty traps to eatch the petry theeves. While that the Armed hand doth sight abroad, Th'adussed head defends it selfe at home: For Government, though high, and low, and lower, Put into parts, doth keepe in one consent, Congreeing in a full and natural close, Like Muscke.

Cont. Therefore doth heaven divide The flate of man in divers functions, Setting endenour in continual motion: To which is fixed as an ayme or butt, Obedience: for so worke the Hony Bees, Creatures that by a rule in Nature teach The Ad of Order to a peopled Kingdome. They have a King, and Officers of forts, Where some like Magistrates correct as home: Others, like Merchants venter Trade abroad: Others, like Souldiers armed in their flings, Make boote spon the Summers Veluet buddes: Which pillage, they with merry march bring home. To the Tent-royal of their Emperor Who busied in his Maiesties surveyes The finging Malons building roofes of Gold, The civil Cicizens kneeding vp the hony; The poore Mechanicke Porters, crowding to Their heavy burthens at his narrow gate:

The fad-ey'd Justice with his furly humme, Delivering ore to Executors pale The Iszie yawning Drone: I this inferre, That many things having full reference To one confent, may worke contrariously, As many Arrowes looked leverall wayes Come to one nistke : as many wayes meet in one towne, As many fresh stream es meet in one falt fea; As many Lynes close in the Dials center: So may a thousand actions once a toote, And in one parpole, and be all well borne Without defeat. Therefore to France, my Liege, Divide your happy England into foure, Whereof, take you one quarter into France, And you withall shall make all Galiia shake. If we with thrice fuch powers left at home, Cannot defend our owne doores from the dogge, Let vs be worried, and our Nation lofe The name of hardinesse and policie.

King. -Call in the Meffengers fent from the Dolphin. Now are we well refolu'd, and by Gods helpe And yours, the noble finewes of our power, France being ours, wee'l bend it to our Awe, Or breake it all to pecces. Or there weel fit, (Ruling in large and ample Eniperie, Ore France, and all her (almost) Kingly Dukedomes) Or lay these bones in an vinworthy Vrne, Tomblesse, with no remembrance ouer them Either our History shall with full mouth Speake freely of our Acts, or else our grave Like Turkish mute, shall have a tonguelesse mouth, Not worshipt with a waxen Epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.
Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our faire Cosin Dolphin: for we heare,
Your greeting is from him, not from the King.

Amb. May't please your Marchie to give vs leave Eccely to render what we have in charge: Or shall we sparingly show you sarre off The Dolphins meaning, and our Embassie.

King. We are no Tyrant, but a Christian King, Vnto whose grace our passion is as subject As is our wretches settled in our prisons, Therefore with franke and with vocutbed plainnesse, Tell vs. Dolphins minde

Amb. Thus than in few:
Your Highnesse lately sending into France,
Did claime some certaine Dukedomes, in the right
Of your great Predecessor, King Edward the third.
In answer of which claime, the Prince our Master
Sayes, that you sauour too much of your youth,
And bids you be aduis'd: There's nought in France,
That can be with a nimble Galliard wonne:
You cannot reuel! into Dukedomes there.
He therefore sends you meeter for your spirit
This Tun of Tressure; and in lieu of this,
Desires you let the dukedomes that you claime
Heare no more of you. This the Dolphus speakes.

Kmg. What Treasure Vncle? Exe. Tennis balles, my Liege.

Kin, We are glad the Dolphon is so pleasant with vs, His Present, and your paines we thanke you for: When we have match our Rackets to these Balles, We will in France (by Gods grace) play a set, Shall strike his fathers Crowne into the hazard. Tell him, he hath made a match with such a Wrangler,

That all the Courts of France will be diffueb d With Chaces. And we understand him well, How he comes o're vs with our wilder dayes, Not measuring what we we made of them. We never valew'd this poore leave of England, And therefore hung hence, did grue our felfe To batharous license: As us ever common, That men are mercieft, when they are from home But tell the Dolphin, I will keepe my State, Belike a King, and thew my fayle of Greatnesse, When I do rowfe me in my Throne of France. For that I have layd by my Maiestie, And plodded like a man for working dayes : But I will rife there with fo full a glorie, That I will dazle all the eyes of France, Yez ficke the Dolphon blinde to looke on vs. And tell the pleasant Prince, this Mocke of his Hath tuth'd his balles to Gun-stones, and his soule Shall fland fore charged, for the wastefull vengeance That shall flye with them: for many a thousand widows Shall this his Mocke, mocke out of their deer hasbands; Mocke mothers from their fonnes, mock Caffles downe: And some are yet ungotten and unborne, That shall have cause to cutse the Dolphins seeme. But this lyes all within the wil of God, To whom I do appeale, and in whose name Tel you the Dolphm, I am comming on, To venge me as I may, and to put forth My tightfull hand in a wel-hallow'd caufe. So get you hence in peace: And tell the Dolphon, His Iest will savour but of shallow vot, When thousands weepe more then did laugh at it. Convey their with fafe conduct. Fare you well. Exerni Ambassadari.

Exe. This was a merry Meffage,
King. We hope to make the Sender blush at it
Therefore, my Lords, omit no happy howee,
That may give furth'rance to out Expedition:
For we have now no thought in vs but France,
Save those to God, that runne before out businesse.
Therefore let our proportions for these Warres
Be soone collected, and all things thought vpon,
That may with reasonable swiftnesse adde
More Feathers to out Wings: for God before,
Wee'le chide this Dalphon at his fathers doore.
Therefore let every man now taske his thought,
That this faire Action may on foot be brought.

Flourish. Emer Chorus. Now all the Youth of England are on fire, And filken Dalliance in the Wardrobe lyes: Now thriue the Armorers, and Honors thought Reignes folely in the breast of euery man. They fell the Paflure now, to buy the Horle; Following the Mirror of all Christian Kings, With winged heeles, as English Maraul For now fits Expectation in the Ayre, And hides a Sword, from Hilts vnto the Point, With Crownes Imperiall, Crownes and Cozonea Promis'd to Harry, and his followers.
The French aduis'd by good intelligence Of this most dreadfull preparation, Shake in their feare, and with pale Pollicy Seeke to divere the English purposes. O England: Modell to thy inward Greatneffe, Like little Body with a mightie Heart:

What

What mightst theu do, that honous would thee do, Were all thy children kinde and naturall: But fee, thy fault France bath in thee found out, A nest of hollow bosomes, which he filles With treacherous Crownes, and three corrupted men: One, Richard Earle of Cambridge, and the fecond Henry Lord Scroops of Malham, and the third Six Thomas Groy Knight of Northumberland, Haue for the Gilt of France (O guilt indeed) Confirm'd Conspiracy with fearefull France, And by their hands, this grace of Kings must dye, If Hell and Treason hold their promises, Erche take ship for France; and in Southampton. Linger your patience on, and wee'l digeft Th'abule of distance; force a play: The furnineis payde, the Traitors are agreed, The King is fer from London, and the Scene Is now transported (Gentles) to Southampton. Thereinthe Play-house now, there must you sit, And thence to France shall we concey you fafe, Andbringyou backe: Charming the natrow feas To give you gentle Paffe : for if we may, Wee'l not offend one ftomacke with our Play. But till the King come forth, and not till then, Vnto Southampton do we thift our Scenc.

Enter Corporall Nym, and Lieutenant Bardelfe. Bar. Well met Corporall Nym. Nym. Good morrow Lieutenant Bardolfe.

Bar. What, are Ancient Piffell and you friends yet? Nym. For my part, I care not : I say little : but when time thall ferue, there hall be fmiles, but that hall be as it may. I dare not fight, but I will winke and holde out mine yron : it is a finiple one, but what shough? It will tofte Cheefe, and it will endure cold, as another mans fword will: and there's an end.

Bar. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friendes, and wee'l bee all three fworne brothers to France: Ler't be fo good Corporall Nym.

Nym. Faith, I will live fo long as I may, that's the cercalne of it: and when I cannot live any longer, I will doe as I may t That is my reft, that is the rendenous of it.

Bar. It is certaine Corporall, that he is marryed to Nell Quickly, and certainly the did you wrong, for you were croth-plight to her

Nym. I cannot tell, Things must be as they may men may sleepe, and they may have their throats about them at that time, and fome tay, knives bave edges : It must be as it may, though patience be a tyred name, yet thee will plodde, there must be Conclusions, well, I cannot tell.

Enter Piftoll. O. Quickly. Bar. Heere comes Ancient Pifeol and his wife: good Corporall be patient heere. How now mine Hoalte Pi-

Piffoil: Comple agorge, that is the word. I defict he ca-gaine. O hound of Creet, think if thou my spoule to get? No, to the spitule goe, and from the Poudring sub of infamy, feech forth the Lazar Kire of Cressid kinde, Doll Teare-facets, the by name, and herefpoufe. I have, and I will hold the Quendam Quickety for the onely face : and Panen, there's enough to go to.
Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine Hoalt Piffell, you must come comy Mayfler, and your Hofteste: He is very sicke, & would to bed. Good Bardoife, put thy face betweens his fheets, and do the Office of a Warming-pan: Faith, he's very ill.

Bard Away you Rogue.

Hoft. By my troth be I yeeld the Crow a pudding one of these dayes: the King has kild his heart. Good Hulband come home presently.

Be. Come, shall I make you two friends. Wee must to France together: why the divel should we keep knows to cut one anothers throats?

Piff. Let floods ore-swell, and fiends for food howle

Nym. You 1 pay methe eight shillings I won of you as Berning?

Pife. Bale is the Slave that payes.

Now. That now I will have: that's the humor of it. Pif. As manhood shal compound spush home. Draw Bard. By this sword, heeshat makes the first thrust, Hoft. As ever you come of women, come in quickly to fit ishn: A poore heart, hee is fo thek'd of a burning quotidian Tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The King hath run bad humors on the Knight, that's the cuen of it.

Tift. Nym, thou hall spoke the right, his heart is fra-Ated and corroborate.

Nym. The King is a good King, but it must bee as it may the passes some humors, and carreeres.

Pift. Leevs condole the Kinght, for (Lambekins) we Enter Exeter, Becford, & Westmerland. Bed Fore Godhis Grace is bold to trust these traitors Ext. They shall be apprehended by and by. West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves, As if allegeance in their bosomes sate Crowned with faith, and conflant loyalty.

Bed. The King hath note of all that they intend, By interception, which they dreame not of Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow, Whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gracious faucuts; That he should for a forraigne purse, so sell

His Soueraignes life to death and treachery. Sound Trumpers.

Enter the King, Scroope, Cambridge, and Gray.

King. Now fits the winde faire, and we will abourd. My Lord of Cambridge, and my kinde Lord of Masham, And you my gentle Knight, give me your thoughts: Thinke you not that the powres we beare with vs Will cut their passage through the force of France? Doing the execution, and the acte, For which we have in head affembled them.

Sero. No doube my Liege, if each man do his best. King. I doubt not that, fince we are well perswaded We carry not a heart with vs from hence, That growes not in a faire confent with ours: Not leave not one behinde, that doth not with Succeife and Conquest to attend on vs.

Cars. Neuer was Monarch better fear'd and lou'd, Then is your Maiesty; there's not I thinke a subiect That fits in heart-greefe and vincafineffe Vnder the sweet shade of your government.

Kni. True: those that were your Fathers enemies, Have steep'd their gauls in hony,'and do serve you With hearts create of duty, and of zeale.

King. We therefore have great cause of thankfulnes, And shall forget the office of our hand Sooner then quittance of defert and merit,

According to the weight and worthine Se. Sero. So service shall with steeled sinewes toyle, And labour shall resresh it selfe with hope

To do your Grace incessant services.

King. We ludge no lelle, Vakle of Exerce, Inlarge the man committed yesterday, That rayl'd against our person: We consider It was excelle of Wine that let himon, And on his more advice, We pardon him.

Scro. That's mercy, but too much security: Let him be punish'd Souersigne, least example Breed (by his sufferance) more of such a kind.

Kong. Oletvs yet be mercifull.

Cam. So may your Highnesse, and yet punish too. Grey Sir, you there great mercy if you give him life After the cafe of much correction.

King Alas, your too much love and care of ere, Are heavy Orifons gainst this poore wretch. If little faults proceeding on diffemper, Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we firetch out eye When capitall etimes, thew'd, fwallow'd, and digefled, Appeare before vs? Wee'l yet inlarge that man, Though Cambridge, Scrope, and Gray, in their dezie care And tender preferuation of our person Wold have him purath'd. And now to our French ender, Who are the late Commissioners ?

Cam. I oue my Lord, Your Highnesse bad me aske for it to day.

Ser. So did you memy Liege. Gray. And I my Royall Souersigne. King. Then Richard Earle of Cambridge, there it yours: There yours Lord Scroope of Massam, and S: Knight:

Gray of NorthumberLand, this fame is yours: Reade them, and know I know your worthinesse. My Lord of Westmerland, and Vokle Exerce We will abourd to night. Why how now Gentlemen? What fee you in those papers, that you loose So much complexion? Looke ye how they change: Their cheekes are paper. Why, what reade you there, That have so cowarded and chac'd your blood Out of apparance.

Cam. I do confesse my fault,

And do submit me to your Highnesse mercy. Cray. Sero. To which we all appeale.

King. The mercy that was quicke in vabur lete, By your owne countaile is suppress and kill'd: You touft not dare (for shame) to talke of mercy. For your owne reasons turne into your bolomes, As dogs vpon their maifters, worrying you: See you my Princes, and my Noble Peeres, There English monflers: My Lord of Cambridge home, You know how apt our loue was, to accord To furnish with all appertinents Belonging to his Honour; and this man, Hath for a few light Crowner, lightly conspir'd And sworne vnto the practises of France To kill vs heere in Hampton. To the which, This Knight no leffe for bounty bound to Vs Then Cambridge is, hath likewise swome. But O, What shall I say to thee Lord Scroope, thou cruell, Ingratefull, fauage, and inbumane Creature Thou that did 2 beare the key of all my counsailes, That knew'ft the very bottome of my foole, That (almost) might's have coyn'd me into Gelde, Would'A thou have practis'd on me, for thy vie? May it be possible, that forralgue hyer Could out of thee extract one sparke of euill That might annoy my finger? Tislo strange, That though the truth of it stands off as grosse As blacke and white, my eye will scarfely fee it. Tresson, and murther, ever kept together, As two yeake divels fwome to eythers purpole, Working to groffely in an natural cause, That admiration did not noope at them. But thou (gainst all proportion) didst bring in Wonder to write on tresson, and on marther ! And whatfocuter curning fiend it was That wrought vpon thee fo prepofteroully, Hath got the voyce in hell for excellence:

And other divels that fuggest by treasons, Do botch and bungle vp damnation, With parches, colours, and with formes being fetche From glift'ring femblances of piery: But he that temper'd thee, bad thee fland vp, Gaue thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason. Valeffe to dub thee with the name of Traitor. If that fame Dæmon that hath gull'd thee thus, Should with his Lyon-gate walke the whole world, He might returne to vastie Tartar backe, And tell the Legions, I can never win A foule fo easie as that Englishmans. Oh, how half thou with italoufie infected The sweetnesse of offiance? Shew men dutifull, Why so didft thou: seeme they grave and learned? Why so didst thou. Come they of Noble Family? Why fo didft thou. Seeme they religious? Why lo didst thou. Or are they spare in diet, Free from groffe palsion, or of mirth, or anger, Constant in spirit, not swerning with the blood, Gamish'd and deck'd in modest complement, Not working with the eye, without the eare, And but in purged judgement trufting neither, Such and so finely boulted didst thou seeme: And thus thy fall hath left a kinde of blor. To make thee full fraught man, and best indued With tome suspicion, I will weepe for thee. For this revolt of thine, me thinkes is like Another fall of Man. Their faults are open, Acrest them to the answer of the Law And God acquit them of their practifes,

Exe. larrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Richard Earle of Cambridge .

I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Thomas Lord Scroope of Marstam.

I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Thomas

Grey, Knight of Northumberland.

Scro. Our purpoles, Godiufly hath discouerd, And I repent my fault more then my death, Which I beteech your Highnesse to forgiue,

Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me, the Gold of France did not feduce, Although I did admit it as a motiue, The fooner to effect what I intended: But God be thanked for prevention, Which in sufferance heartily will reioyce, Befeeching God, and you, to pardon mee.

Gray. Neuer did faithfull subiect more reioyce At the discourry of most dangerous Treason, Then I do at this houre loy ore my felfe, Prevented from a damned enterprize;

My fault, but not my body, pardon Soueraigne. King. God quit you in his mercy: Hear your sentence You have conspir'd against Our Royall person, Ioyn'd with an enemy proclaim d, and from his Coffers, Receyu'd the Golden Earnest of Our death: Wherein you would have fold your King to flaughter, His Princes, and his Peeres to servitude, His Subieas to oppression, and contempt, And his whole Kingdome into desolation: Touching our person, seeke we no reuenge, But we our Kingdomes safety must so tender Whole ruine you fought, that to her Lawes We do deliner you. Get you therefore hence, (Poore miserable wretches) to your death: The tafte whereof, God of his mercy give

You patience to indure, and true Repentance Of all your deare offences. Beare them hence. Exis. Now Lords for France: the enterprise whereof Shall be to you as vs, like glorious. We doubt not of a faire and luckie Warre, Since God fo graciously hath brought to light This dangerous Treason, lurking in our way To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now, But every Rubbe is smoothed on our way. Then forth, deare Countreymen: Let vs deliuer Our Puissance into the hand of God, Putting it fraight in expedition Chearely to Sea, the fignes of Warre aduance, No King of England, if not King of France. Enter Pistoll, Nim, Bardolph, Boy, and Hostelle.

Hostesse. Prythee honey sweet Husband let me bring thee to Staines.

Piffoll. No: for my manly heart doth erne. Bardolph, be blythe: Nim, rowfe thy vaunting Veines: Boy, brifile thy Courage vp : for Falfaffe hee is dead, and wee must erne therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, wherefomere hee is, eyther in Heauen, or in Hell.

Hoftese. Nay sure, hee's not in Hell: hee's in Arthurs Bosome, if euer man went to Arthurs Bosome: a made a finer end, and went away and it had beene any Christome Child: a parted eu'n sust betweene T welue and One, eu'n at the turning o'th' Tyde: for after I faw him fumble with the Sheets, and play with Flowers, and fmile vpon his fingers end, I knew there was but one way: for his Nose was as sharpe as a Pen, and a Table of greene fields. How now Sir Iobn (quoth 13) what man? be a good cheare: lo a cryed out, God, God, God, three or foure times : now I, to comfort him, bid him a should not thinke of God; I hop'd there was no neede to crouble himselfe with any fuch thoughts yet: fo a bad me lay more Clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the Bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as any tione: then I felt to his knees, and fo vp-peer'd, and vpward, and ail was as cold as any stone.

Nim. They say he cryed out of Sack. Hostefe. I, that a did.

Bard. And of Women.

Hostesse. Nay, that a did not.

Boy. Yes that a did, and faid they were Deules incarnare.

Woman. A could neuer abide Carnation, 'twas a Calour he neuer lik'd.

Bog. A said once, the Deule would have him about Women.

Hostesse. A did in some sort (indeed) handle Women: but then hee was rumetique, and talk'd of the Whore of Babylon.

Boy. Doe you not remember a saw a Flea sticke vpon Bardolphs Nofe, and a faid it was a blacke Soule burning in Hell.

Bard. Well, the fuell is gone that maintain'd that fire: that's all the Riches I got in his service.

Nim. Shall wee shogg? the King will be gone from Southampton.

Pift. Come, let's away, My Loue, give me thy Lippes: Looke to my Chattels, and my Moueables: Let Sences rule: The world is, Pitch and pay: trust none: for Oathes are Strawes, mens Faiths are Wafer-Cakes, and hold fast is the onely Dogge: My Ducke, therefore Camero bee thy Counfailor. Goe, cleare thy Chrystalls. Yoke. fellowes in Armes, let vs to France, like Horseleeches leeches my Boyes, to lucke, to fucke, the very blood to fucke.

Bor. And that's but vn wholesome food, they say, Pull. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Rad. Farwell Hofteste.

Nim. I cannot kille, that is the humor of it? but adieu.

Piff. Let Huswilerie appeare: keepe close, I thee command.

Hoflesse. Farwell, adieu.

Exemi

Enter the French King , the Dolphon , the Dubes of Berry and Britains.

Ring. Thus comes the English with full power vpon vs,
And more then carefully it va concernes,
To answer Royally in our defences,
Therefore the Dukes of Berry and of Britaine,
Of Brabant and of Orleance, shall make forth,
And you Prince Dolphin, with all swift dispatch
To tyne and new repayre our Townes of Warre
With often of courage, and with meaner desendants
For England his approaches makes at fierce,
As Waters to the lucking of a Gusse.
It his va then to be as provident,
As seare may teach vs, out of late examples
Left by the farall and neglected English,
Vpone our fields.

Dolphia. My most redoubted Father, It is most meet we arme vs 'gainst the Foe: For Peace it felfe should not to dull a Kingdome, (Though War not no knowne Quarrel were in queftion) But that Defences, Musters, Preparations, Should be maintain'd, affembled, and collected, As were a Warre in expectation. Therefore I fay, tis meet we all goe forth, To view the fleicand feeble parts of France : And let vs doe it with no fhew of feare, No, with no more, then if we heard that England Were busied with a Whitson Morris-dance: For, my good Liege, thee is to idly King'd, Her Scepter so phansastically borne, By a vaine giddie fluillow humorous Youth, That feare attends her not.

Const. O peace, Prince Dolphin,
You are too much mistaken in this King:
Question your Grace the late Embassadors,
With what great State he heard their Embasse,
How well supply'd with Noble Councellors,
How modest in exception; and withall,
How tetrible in constant resolution:
And you shall find, his Vanities fore-spent,
Were but the out-side of the Roman Bresse,
Couering Discretion with a Coat of Folly;
As Gardeners doe with Ordure hide those Roots
That shall first spring, and be most delicate,
Dolphin. Well, its not so, my Lord High Constable.

Dayposs. Well, its not to, my Lord Figh Contail.
But though we thinke it fo, it is no matter:
In cases of desence, it is best to weigh
The Enemie more mightie then he seemes,
So the proportions of desence are fill'd:
Which of a weake and niggardly projection,
Doth like a Miser spoyle his Coat, with seanting
A little Cloth.

King. Thinks we King Harry ftrong:
And Princes, looke you ftrongly arme to meet him.
The Kindred of him hath bette fleshs spon vs:

And he is bred out of that bloodie straine,
That haunted vain our familiar Pathes.
Winnesse our too much memorable sname,
When Cresty Battell stally was strucke,
And all our Princes captiu'd, by the hand
Of that black Name, Edward, black Prince of Wales;
Whiles that his Mountaine Stre, on Mountaine standing
Vp in the Ayre, crown'd with the Golden Sunte,
Saw his Herolcall Seed, and smil'd to see him
Mangle the Worke of Nature, and deface
The Patternes, that by God and by French Fathers
Had eventle yeeres been made. This is a Stem
Of that Victorious Stock: and let us feate
The Nature mightinesse and sate of him,
Enter a Messenger.

Mef. Embassadors from Horry King of England, Doe crave admittance to your Marchie.

King. Weele give them present audience. Goe, and bring them.

You see this Chase is hotly followed, friends.

Dolphin. Turne head, and stop pursuit; for coward Dogs
Most spend their mouths, when they seem to threaten Runs farre before them. Good my Soutraigne
Take up the English short, and let them know
Of what a Monorchie you are the Head:
Selfe-love, my Liege, is not so vile a sinne,
As selfe-neglecting.

Enter Exter. King. From dur Brother of England?
Ext. Prom him, and thus he greets your MaleRie:
He wills you in the Name of God Almightie, That you deuest your felfe, and lay apert The borrowed Glories, that by gift of Heauen, By Law of Nature, and of Nationalong To him and to his Heires, namely the Crowne, And all wide-firetehed Honors, that pertains By Custome, and the Ordinance of Times, Visto the Crowne of France: that you may know 'Tis no finister, nor no awk-ward Clayme, Picke from the worme-holes of long-vanishe dayers Nor from the dust of old Oblivion rake, He fends you this most memorable Lyne, In every Branch truly demonstrative; Willing you over-looke this Pedigree: And when you find him evenly deriu'd From his most fam'd, of famous Ancestors, Edward the third; he bids you then sefigne Your Crowne and Kingdome, indirectly held From him, the Native and true Challenger.

King. Or elfe what followes? Exe. Bloody conftraint : for if you hide the Crowns Euen in your hearts, there will he rake for it. Therefore in fierce Tempest is he comming, In Thunder and in Earth-quake, like a lowe: That if requiring faile, he will compell. And bids you, in the Bowels of the Lord, Deliuer up the Crowne, and to take mercie On the poore Soules, for whom this hungry Warre Opens his vastic lawes; and on your need Turning the Widdowes Teares, the Orphans Cryes, The dead-mens Blood, the priny Maidens Grosnes, For Husbands, Farhers, and betrothed Louers, That shall be swallowed in this Controverse. This is his Clayme, his Threatning, and my Mossage: Vnlesse the Dolphin be in presence here; To whom expressely I bring greeting to.

Eing. For

Kong. For vs, we will confider of this further: To morrow shall you bears our full intent Back to our Brother of England. Delph. For the Dolphra,

I fond here for him: what to him from England?

Exe. Scorne and defiance, fleight rogard, contempt, And any thing that may not mil-become The mightie Sender, dorh he prize you ac. Thus fayes my King; and if your Fathers Highnesse Doe not, in grount of all demands at large, Sweeten the bitter Mock you fent his Maieshe; Hee'le call you to so hot an Answer of it, That Caues and Wombie Vaultages of France Shall chide your Trespas, and returne your Mock Infecond Accent of his Ordinance.

Dolph. Szy: if my Father render faire returne, It is egainst my will: for I defire. Nothing but Oddes with England. To that end, as matching to his Youth and Vanitie,

I did present him with the Paris-Balls.

Exe. Reele make your Paris Louer shake for it, Were it the Mistresse Court of mighrie Europe: And be affor'd, you'le find a diff rence, As we his Subjects have in wonder found, Betweene the promise of his greener dayes, And there he masters now; now he weighes Time Even to the vtmost Graine; that you shall reade In vour owne Losses, if he flay in France.

King. To sacrrow shall you know our mind at full. Flowrilb.

Exr. Disparch vs with all speed, least that our King Come here himselfe to question our delay; For he is footed in this Land already. Kog. You shalbe soone dispatche, with faire conditions. A Night is but frash breathe, and little pawle, To answer matters of this consequence.

Actus Secundus.

Flourilb. Enter Chorus. Thus with imagin'd wing our fwift Scene flyes, In motion of no lesse celeritie then that of Thought. Suppose, that you have seene The well-appointed King at Douer Peer, Embarke his Royaltie; and his brave Fleet, With filken Streamers, the young Phobas fayning; Play with your Fancles: and in them behold. Vpon the Hempen Tackle, Ship-boyes climbing; Heare the shrill Whiftle, which doth order give To founds confus'd: behold the threaden Sayles, Borne with th'inuifible and creeping Wind, Draw the huge Bottomes through the furrowed Sea, Bresting the lostie Surge. O, doe but thinke You fland vpon the Riuage, and behold A Citie on the inconftant Billowes dauncing: For so appeares this Fleet Maie Alcall, Holding due course to Harflew, Follow, follow: Grapple your minds to sternage of this Nauie, And leave your England as dead Mid-night, Siil, Guarded with Grandstres, Babyes, and old Women, Eyther palt, or not armu'd to pyth and puillence: For who is he, whole Chin is but enriche

With one appearing Hayre, that will not follow These cull'd and choyse-drawne Caustiers to France? Worke, worke your Thoughts, and therein fee a Siege: Behold the Ordenance on their Carriages, With fatall mouther gaping on girded Harflew. Suppose th'Embassador from the French comes back : Yells Harry, That the King doth offer him Kasherine his Daughter, and with her to Downe. Some petty and vaprofitable Dukedomes.
The offer likes not: and the nimble Gunner With Lynstock now the divellish Cunnon touches, Alarmen, and Chambers gos off. And downe goes all before them. Still be kind,

And each out our performance with your mind. Exit.

Enter the King, Exeter, Bedford, and Cloucofter Alarum: Scaling Ludders as Harflow.

Oncemore vato the Breach, Desre friends, once more; Or close the Wall vp with our English dead: In Peace, there's nothing so becomes a man, As modest stillnesse, and humilitie: But when the blaft of Warte blowes in our eares, Then imitate the sction of the Tyger: Stiffen the line wes, commune vp the blood, Disguise faire Nature with hard-fauour'd Rage : Then lend the Eye a terrible aspect: Let it pry through the partage of the Head, Like the Braffe Cannon: let the Brow o'revihelme is As searefully, as doth a galled Rocke O're-hang and jury his confounded Bale, Swill'd with the wild and waftfull Ocean. Now fet the Teeth, and stretch the Nosthrill wide, Hold hard the Breath, and bend vp every Spirit To his full height. On, on, you Noblish English, Whose blood is fee from Fathers of Warre-proofe: Fathers, that like formany Alexanders, Have in these parts from Morne till Even fought, And theath'd their Swords, for lack of argument. Dishonournot your Muthers: now attest, That those whom you call'd Fathers, did beget you. Be Coppy now to me of großer blood, And teach them how to Warre, And you good Yeomen, Whole Lyms were made in England; thew vs here The mettell of your Paffure: let vs fwesze, That you are worth your breeding: which I doubt not: For there is none of you so meane and base, That hath not Noble suffer in your eyes. I fee you frand like Grey-hounds in the flips, Straying vpon the Start. The Game's sfoot: Follow your Spirit; and upon this Charge, Cry, God for Harry, England, and S. Goorges Alerum, and Chambers gus off.

Enter Nim, Bardolph, Piffoll, and Boy. Berd On,on,on,on, to the breach, to the breach. Nim. Pray thee Corporall flay, the Knocks are too hot : and for mine owne part, I have not 2 Cale of Lives: the humor of it is too hot, that is the very plaine-Song

Piff. The plaine-Song is most just : for humors doe abound: Knocks goe and come: Gods Vaffals drop and dye and Sword and Shield, in bloody Field, doch winne

Boy. Would I were in an Ale-house in London, I would give all my fame for a Pot of Ale, and laferie.

Pif. And I: If wither would prevayle with may my purpose should not sayle with may but thicker would I high.

Rey Anduly, but not as truly, as Bird doth ling on bough.

Enter FlueBen

Fla. Vp to the breach, you Dogges; auaunt you Cullions.

Fift. Be mercifull great Duke to men of Mould: >bate thy Rage, abate thy manly Rage; abate thy Rage, great Duke Good Bawcock bate thy Rage: vie leniue tweet Chuck.

Non These be good humon: your Honor wins bad

Boy. As young as I am, I have observed these three Swashers: I am Boy to them all three, but all they three, though they would ferue me, could not be Man to me; for indred three fuch Antiques doe not amount to a man: for Bardolph, hee is white-liver'd, and red-fac'd; by the meanes whereof, a faces it out, but fights not : for Piffall, hee hath a killing Tongue, and a quiet Sword; by the meanes whereof, a breakes Words, and keepes whole Weapons : for Nim, hee hath heard, that men of few Words are the best men, and therefore hee Cornes to fay his Prayers, left a should be shought a Coward: but his few bad Words are marche with as few good Deeds; for a neuer broke any mans Head but his owne, and that was against a Post, when he was drunke. They will seale any thing, and call it Purchase. Bardolph stole a Luce-case, borest twelue Leagues, and sold it for three halfepence. Nim and Bardolph are Iworne Brothers in filching : and in Callice they fole a fire-shouell. I knew by that peece of Service, the men would earry Coales. They would have me as familior with mens Pockers, as their Gloves or their Hand-kerchers: which makes much against my Manhood, if I should take from anothers Pocket, to put into mine; for it is plaine pocketting vp of Wrongs. I must leaue them, and seeke some better Service : their Villany goes against my weake stomacke, and therefore I muft caft it vp.

Enter Gower.

Gner. Captaine Fluellen, you mult come prefently to the Mynes; the Duke of Gloucefler would speake with you.

Flus To the Mynes? Tell you the Duke, it is not fo good to corne to the Mynes: for looke you, the Mynes is not according to the disciplines of the Warre; the concavities of it is not sufficient: for looke you, this thuersarie, you may discuss vanto the Duke, looke you, is dighimselfe soure yard under the Countermines: by Chefes, Ithinke a will plowe up all, if there is not better directions.

Gower. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the Order of the Siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irish man, a very valiant Gentleman ysaith.

Welch. It is Captaine Makmorree, is it not?

Cower. I thinke it be.

welch. By Chybu he is an Affe, as in the World, I will verific as much in his Beard: he ha's no more directions in the true disciplines of the Warres, looke you, of the Roman disciplines, then is a Puppy-dog.

Enter Makmorries, and Captaine lamy.

Cover. Here a comes, and the Scots Captaine, Captaine

Lamy, with him.

Welch Captaine Jamy is a marvellous falorous Gen-Heman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in th'nunchiant Warres voon my particular knowledge of his dite dione; by Chafes he will maintaine he. Argument as well as any Militarie man in the World, in the disciplines of the Pristine Warres of the Romans.

Scot. I fay gudday, Captaine Flaction.

Wellb. Godden to your Worthup, good Captaine lanet.

Gower. How nove Captaine Macketorice, baue you quit elle Mynes: haue the Propers given o're.

Iruh. By Chrish Law ash ill done: the Worke ish give over, the Trompet found the Retreat. By my Hand I sweare, and my fathers Soule, the Worke ish ill done: it ish give over: I would have blowed up the Towne, so Chrish save me law, in an houre. O wish ill done, tish ill done; by my Hand tish ill done.

Welch. Captaine Machinerice, I befeech you now, will you voutfale me, looke you, a few disputations with you, as partly couching or concerning the disciplines of the Warre, the Roman Warres, in the way of Argument, looke you, and friendly communication: partly to faithful my Opinion, and partly for the faithful concerning the direction of the Militarie difference of the Militarie difference on the Militarie difference on the Militarie difference on the Militarie difference on the Militarie difference of the Militarie difference on the Militarie difference that fall I mary.

Scot. It fall be vary gud, gud feith, gud Capters bath, and I fall quit you with gud leue, as I may pick occasion:

cipline, that is the Point.

Irdb. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me: the day is hot, and the Weather, and the Warres, and the King, and the Dukes: it is no time to discourse, the Town is beseach'd: and the Trumpet call vs to the breech, and we talke, and be Chrish do nothing, its shame for vail: so God same us shame to stand still, it is shame by my hand: and there is Throats to be cut, and Workes to be done, and there is nothing done. So Christ same law.

Scot. By the Mes, ere there eyes of mine take themfelues to flomber, ayle de gud feruite, or Ile ligge rich' grund for it; ay, or goe to death: and Ile pay's as valoroufly as I may, that fal I fuerly do, that is the breff and the long: mary, I wad full faine heard some question tween you tway.

Welch. Captaine Markowries, I thinke, looke you, vider your correction, there is not many of your Nation.

Irifb. Of my Nation? What ish my Nation? Ish a Villaine, and a Basterd, and a Knaue, and a Rascail. What ish my Nation? Who talkes of my Nation?

Welch. Looke you, if you take the matter otherwise then is meant, Captaine Machinerrice, peruduenture I shall thinke you doe not vie me with thet affabilitie, as in discretion you ought to vie me looke you, being as good a man as yout selfe, both in the disciplices of Warre, and in the derivation of my Birth, and in other particularities.

Irib. I doe not know you so good a man as my selfe: so Chrish saue me, I will out off your Head.

Gower. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other Scot. A, that's a foule fault.

A Paring.

Gower. The Towne founds & Parley.

Welch. Copraine Machinerice, when there is more better oportunitie to be required, looke you, I will be so bold as to tell you, I know the disciplines of Warre: and there is an end.

Enter the King and all his Trame before the Gates.
King. How yet resolves the Governoor of the Towne?
This is the letter Parle we will admit:

There.

Therefore to our best mercy give your selves, Or like to men prowd of destruction, Defie vs to our worst: for as I am a Souldier, A Name that in my thoughts becomes me best; If I begin the batt'rie once againg, I will not leave the halfe-archieued Harflew, Till in her athes the lye buryed. The Gates of Mercy shall be all shut vp, And the flesh'd Souldier, rough and hard of heart, In libertie of bloody hand, shall raunge With Conscience wide as Hell, mowing like Graffe Your fresh faire Virgins, and your sloweing Infants, What is it then to nie, if impious Warre, Arrayed in flames like to the Prince of Fiends, Doe with his fmyrcht complexion all fell feats, Enlynckt to wast and desolation? What is't to me, when you your felues are caufe, If your pure Maydens fall into the hand Of hot and forcing Violation?
What Reyne can hold liceratious Wickednelle, When downe the Hill he holds his fierce Carriere? We may as bootleffe spend our vaine Command Vpon thenraged Souldiers in their spoyle, As fend Precepts to the Leuiarban, to come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harflew Take pitty of your Towne and of your People, Whiles yet my Souldiers are in my Command, Whiles yet the coole and temperate Wind of Grace O're-blowes the filthy and contagious Clouds Of headly Murther, Spoyle and Villany. If not: why in a moment looke to fee The blind and bloody Souldier, with foule hand Defire the Locks of your shrill-shriking Daughters: Your Fathers taken by the filner Beards, And their most reverend Heads dasht to the Walls: Your naked Infants spitted vpon Pykes, Whiles the mad Mothers, with their howles confus'd, Doe breake the Clouds; as did the Wines of Iewry, At Herods bloody-hunting flaughter-men What lay you? Will you yeeld, and this auoyd? Or guiltie in desence, be thus destroy'd.

Enter Goner Nour.

Goner. Our expectation hath this day an end:
The Dolphin, whom of Succours we entreated,
Returnes vs, that his Powers are yet not ready,
To rayle fo great a Siege: Therefore great King,
We yeeld our Towne and Liues to thy foft Mercy:
Enter our Gates, dispose of vs and ours,
For we no longer are desentible.

King. Open your Gates: Come Vnckle Exeter, Goe you and enter Harflew; there remaine, And fortifie it strongly 'gainst the French: Vse mercy to them all for vs.deare Vnckle. The Winter comming on, and Sicknesse growing Vpon our Souldiers, we will retyre to Calis. To night in Harslew will we be yout Guest, To mortow for the March are we addrest.

Flourish, and enter the Towne.

Kash. Cest asses pour une soyes alons nous a diner.

Enter the King of France, the Dolphin, the Constable of France, and others.

Kmg. Tis certaine he hatb past the River Some.
Conft. And if he be not fought withall, my Lotd,
Let vs not live in France: let vs quit all,

And give our Vineyards to a batharous People.

Dalph. O Diecornians: Shall a few Sprayes of vs,
The emptying of our Fathers Luxutie,
Our Syens, put in wilde and favage Stock,

Spirt vp fo fuddenly into the Clouds, And over tooke their Grafters?

Bru. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards: Mort du mavue, if they march along

Vnfought withall, but I will felfmy Dukedome,

To

To buy a Nobbry and a durtie Farme In that nooke-shotten lie of Albion.

Conft. Dieu de Battailes, where have they this mettell? Is not their Clymete foggy, taw, and dull?
On whom, as in despight, the Sunic looker pule, Killing their Fruit with frownes. Can fodden Water, A Drench for fur-reyn'd lades, their Barly broth, Decoa their cold blood to fuch valiant heat? And shall our quick blood, spirited with Wine, Sceme froffier O, for honor of our Laud, Let va not hang like roping Ifyckles Vpon our Houses Thatch, whiles a more frostie People Sweat drops of gallant Youth in our rich fields : Poore we call them, in their Natine Lords.

Dophin. By Faith and Honor, Our Madames mock at vs, and plainely fay, Our Mettell is bred out, and they will give Their bodyes to the Lust of English Youth, To new-Rore France with Bastard Warriors.

Brit. They bid vs to the English Dancing-Schooles, And teach Lanolia's high, and fwifi Carranto's, Saying, our Grace is onely in our Heeles, And that we are most loftie Run-awayes.

King Where is Montror the Herald? speed him hence, Let him greet England with our sharpe defiance Vp Princes, and with Spirit of Honor edged, More Tharper then your Swords, high to the field : Charles Delabreit, High Constable of France, You Dukes of Orleance, Burban, and of Berry, Alenson, Brabaus, Bar, and Burgonie, lagues Chastillion, Rambures, Vandemons, Beumont, Grand Pree, Rouff, and Faulconbridge. Logs, Lestrale, Boxciquall, and Charaloges, High Dukes, great Princes, Barons, Lords, and Kings: For your great Seats, now quit you of great frames: Barre Harry England, that Iweepes through our Land With Penons painted in the blood of Harflew: Rush on his Hoass, as doth the melted Snow Vpon the Valleyes, whose low Vasfall Scar, The Alpes dorh (pit, and void his chewme vpon. Goc downe vpon him you have Power enough, And in a Captive Charlot, into Roan Bring him out Prisoner.

Const. This becomes the Great. Sorry am I his numbers are so few, His Souldiers fick, and familh: in their March: For I am fure, when he shall fee our Army, Hee'le drop his heart into the finck of feare, And for archicuement, offer vs his Ranfome.

King. Therefore Lord Conflable, halt on Monting, And let him fay to England, that we fend, To know what willing Ransome he will give.

Prince Dalphiu, you shall stay with vs in Roan.
Dalph. Not so, I doe beseech your Maiestie. King Be patient, for you shall remaine with vs. Now forth Lord Constable, and Princes all, And quickly bring vs word of Englands fall Execut

> Enter Captaines, English and Welch, Gower and Fluellen.

Gover. How now Captaine Fluelen, come you from the Bridge?

Fla. I affure you, there is very excellent Services committed at the Bridge,
Gower. Is the Duke of Excier fale?

Fla. The Duke of Exceer is as magnanimous as Aga.

ow, and a man that I love and honour with my foult and my heart, and my dutie, and my live, and my living, and my vetermost power. He is not, God be prayfed and bleffed, any hurt in the World, but keepes the Bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an aunchient Lleutenant there at the Pridge, I thinke in my very conscience hee is as valuent a man as Marte Ambeny, and hee is a man of no estimation in the World, but I did lee him doe as gallant serulce.

Comer. What doe you call him? Flu. Hee is call'd eunchions Postoll Gower. I know him not Enter Pifto2.

Flu. Here is the man.

Piff. Captaine, I ther befeech to doe me faucurs; the Duke of Excret doth love thee well.

Flu. I, I prayle God, and I have merited forme love at his hands.

Pill. Bardolph, a Souldier firme and found of heart, and of buxome valour, hath by cruell Fate, and giddie Fortunes furious fickle Wheele, that Goddeffe blind, thet stands upon the rolling restelles stone.

Flu. By your patience, aunchient Piffell : Fortune is painted blinde, with a Muffler afore his eyes, to fignific to you, that Fortune is blinde; and shee is painted also with a Wheele, to fignifie to you, which is the Morall of it, that shee is turning and inconstant, and mutabilitie, and variation; and her foot, looke you, is fixed upon a Sphericall Stone, which rowles, and rowles; and rowles: in good truth, the Poet makes a most excellent description on of it : Fortune is an excellent Morall.

Pift. Fortune is Berdulphs foe, and frownes on him: for he hath stolne a Pax, and hanged must a be: a damned death: Itt Gallower gape for Dogge, let Man goe free. and let not Hempe his Wind-pipe suffocate: but Exner hath given the doorne of death, for Pax of little price. Therefore goe speake, the Duke will heare thy voyce; and let not Bardolphs vitall thred bee cut with edge of Penny-Cord, and vile reproach. Speake Captaine for his Life, and I will thee requite.

Aunebient Tiffell, I doe partig underftand your meaning.

Piff. Why then reloyce therefore.

Flu. Certainly Aunchient, it is not a thing to reionce at: for if, looke you, he were my Brother, I would defire the Duke to vie his good pleafure, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be vied.

Piff Dye, and be dam'd, and Figo for thy friendfhip.

Flu. It is well.

Pist The Figge of Spaine. Zwit.
Flm. Very good.
Gower. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit Rascall, I cemember him now: a Bawd, a Cut-purfe.

Flw. He affure you, a vitired as praue words at the Pridge, as you shall see in a Summers day: but it is very well: what he ha's spoke to me, that is well I warrant you, when time is ferue.

Gower. Why 'cis a Gull, a Foole, a Rogue, that now and then goes to the Warres, to grace himselfe at his returne into London, under the forme of a Souldier : and furb fellowes are perfit in the Great Commanders Names, and they will learne you by rote where Services were done; at fuch and fuch a Sconce, at fuch a Breach, at fuch a Conuoy: who came off brauely, who was thor, who difgrac'd, what termes the Enemy flood on: and this they conne perfitly in the phrase of Warre; which they tricke vp with new-tuned Oathes; and what a Beard of the Generalls Cut, and a horride Sute of the Campe, will doe among foming Bottles, and Ale-washt Wits, is wonderfull to be chought on: but you must learne to know such flanders of the age, or elfe you may be maruelloufly mi-

Flu. I tell you what, Captaine Gower: I doe perceive hee is not the man that hee would gladly make thew to the World hee is: if I finde a hole in his Coar, I will tell him my minde : hearke you, the King is comming, and I must speake with him from the Pridge.

Drum and Colours. Enter the King and bis Poore Souldiers.

King. How now Fluellen, carn it thou from the Bridge? Flu. 1, to please your Marettie: The Duke of Exerer ha's very gallantly maintain'd the Pridge; the French is gone off, looke you, and there is gallant and most praue passages: marry, th'athuersarie was have possession of the Pridge, but he is enforced to retyre, and the Duke of Exercis Mafter of the Pridge: I can tell your Maieftie, the Duke is a praue man.

King. What men haue you loft, Fluellen !
Flu. The perdition of th'athuersarie hath beene very reat, reasonnable great: marry for my part, I thinke the Duke bath loft neuer a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a Church, one Bardolph, if your Maieflie know the man: his face is all bubukles and whelkes, and knobs, and flames a fire, and his lippes blowes at his nose, and it is like a coale of fire, sometimes plew, and fometimes red, but his nose is executed, and his fire's

Kmg. Wee would have all fuch offendors fo cut off: and we give expresse charge, that in our Marches through the Countrey, there be nothing compell'd from the Villages; nothing taken, but pay'd for: none of the French vpbrayded or abused in disdamefull Language; for when Leuitie and Crueltie play for a Kingdome, the gentler Gamefter is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter Mourting. Mounting. You know me by my habit.

King. Wellthen, I know thee : what shall I know of thee?

Mountiey. My Masters mind.

King. Vnfold it.

Mountroy. Thus layes my King: Say thou to Harry of England. Though we feem'd dead, we did but fleepe: Aduantage is a better Souldier then rashnesse. Tell him, wee could have rebuk'd him at Harflewe, but that wee thought not good to bruife an injurie, till it were full ripc. Now wee speake vpon our Q. and our voyce is imperiall: England shall repent his folly, see his weakeneffe, and admire our fufferance. Bid him therefore confider of his ransome, which must proportion the losses we have bome, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we haue digested; which in weight to re-answer, his pettinesse would bow under. For our losses, his Exchequer is coo poore; for th'effusion of our bloud, the Muster of his Kingdome too faint a number; and for our difgrace, his owne perion kneeling at our feet, but a weake and worthlesse satisfaction. To this adde defiauce: and tell him for conclusion, he hash betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounce: So farre my King and Master; To much my Office.

King. What is thy name? I know thy qualitie.

Mount. Mountage.
King. Thou doo'ft thy Office fairely. Turne thee back, And tell thy King, I doe not feeke him now, But could be willing to march on to Callice, Without impeachment: for to fay the footh Though tis no wildome to confesse so much Vinto an enemie of Craft and Vantage, My people are with ficknesse much enfeebled, My numbers leffen'd: and those few I have, Almost no better then so many french; Who when they were in health, I tell thee Herald I thought, vpon one payre of English Legges Did march three Frenchmen. Yet forgive me God. That I doe bragge thus; this your ayre of France Hath blowne that vice in me, I must repent : Goe therefore tell thy Master, heere I am; My Ransome, is this frayle and worthlesse Trunke; My Army, but a weake and fickly Guard: Yet God before, tell him we will come on, Though France himselse, and such another Neighbor Stand in our way. There's for thy labour Mountage. Goe bid thy Master well aduite himselfe. If we may passe, we will: if we be hindred, We shall your tawnic ground with your red blood Discolour: and so Mountiny, fare you well. The summe of all out Answer is but this : We would not seeke a Battaile as we are, Nor as we are, we fay we will not fhun it: So tell your Master.

Mount. I shall deliver so: Thankes to your Highnesse.

Glouc. I hope they will not come vpon vs now. King. We are in Gods hand, Brother, not in theirs: March to the Bridge, it now drawes toward night, Beyond the River wee'le encampe our selucs, And on to morrow bid them march away.

> Enter the Constable of France, the Lord Ramburs, Orleance, Dolphin, with others.

Conft. Tut, I have the best Armour of the World:

would it were day.

Orleance. You have an excellent Armour: but let my Horse have his due.

Const. It is the best Horse of Europe.

Orleance. Will it neuer be Morning ! Dolph. My Lord of Orleance, and my Lord High Constable, you talke of Horse and Armour?

Orleance. You are as well prouided of both, as any Prince in the World.

Dolph. What a long Night is this? I will not change my Horse with any that treades but on source postures: ch' ha: he bounds from the Earth, as if his entrayles were hayres: le Chenal volante, the Pegalus, ches les narmes de few. When I bestryde him, I foare, I am a Hawke: he crots the syre: the Earth fings, when he touches it : the bafeft home of his hoose, is more Musicall then the Pipe of Hermes.

Orleance. Hee's of the colour of the Nutmeg.

Dolph. And of the heat of the Ginger. It is a Beaft for Perfoue: hec is pure Agre and Fire; and the dull Elements of Earth and Water ocuer appeare in him, but only in parient stillnesse while his Rider mounts him: hee is indeede a Horse, and all other lades you may call Beafts.

Conft. Indeed my Lord, it is a most absolute and ex-

Dolph. It is the Prince of Palfrayes, his Neigh is like the bidding of a Monarch, and his countenance enforces Homage.

Orieance. No more Cousin.

Dolph. Nay, the man hath no wit, that cannot from the riling of the Latke to the lodging of the Lambe, varie descrued prayse on my Palfray : it is a Theame as fluent as the Sea: Turpe the Sands into eloquent tongues, and my Horse is argument for them all : 'tis a subject for a Soucraigne to reason on, and for a Soucraignes Souersigne to ride on: And for the World, familiar to vs. and vnknowne, to lay apart their particular Functions. and wonder at him, I once writ a Sonner in his prayle, and began thus, Wonder of Nature.

Orleance. I have beard a Sonnet begin fo to ones Mi-

Aresse.

Dolph. Then did they imleate that which I compos'd to my Courler, for my Horle is my Mistrelle.

Orleance. Your Mistresse beares well.

Dolph. Me well, which is the prescript prayle and perfection of a good and particular Mistresse.

Conft. Nay, for me thought yesterday your Mistresse threwdly shooke your back.

Dolph. So perhaps did yours. Conft. Mine was not bridled.

Dolph. Other belike the was old and gentle, and you rode like a Kerne of Ireland, your French Hole off, and in your ftrait Stroffers.

Conf. You have good indgement in Horseman-

Dolph. Be warn'd by me then: they that ride fo, and ride not warily, fall into foule Boggs: I had rather have my Horle to my Mistresse.

Conft. I had as live have my Mistresse a Tade.

Dolph. I cell thee Cooffable, my Mistresse weares his owne hayre.

Gow. I will speake lower.

Flu. I pray you, and befeech you, that you will. Exis. King. Though it appears a little out of fashion, There is much care and valour in this Welchman.

Enter shree Souldiers, I ohn Bates, Alexander Cours, and Michael Willsams.

Court. Brother Iohn Bates, is not that the Morning which breakes yonder?

Bases. I hinke it be: but wee have no great cause to defire the approach of day.

Williams. Wee fee yonder the beginning of the day, but I thinke wee shall never see the end of ic. Who goes there?

King. A Priend.

Williams. Vnder what Captaine setue you? King. Vnder Sit Loom Erpingham.

Williams. A good old Commander, and a most kinde

Gentleman: I pray you what thinkes he of our effate?

King. Euen as men wrackt vpon a Sand, that looke to be washt off the next Tyde.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the King? King. No: not it is not meet he should: for though I speake it to you, I thinke the King is but a man, as I am: the Violet smells to him, as it doth to me; the Element shewes to him, as it doth to me; all his Sences have but humane Conditions: his Ceremonies layd by, in his Nakednesse he appeares but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted then ours, yet when they stoupe, they shoupe with the like wing: therefore, when he sees reason of seares, as we doe; his seares, out of doubt, be of the same rellish as ours are: yet in reason, no man should possess the same rellish as ours are: yet in reason, no man should possess the same rellish as ours are: yet in reason, no man should possess the same rellish as ours are: yet in reason, no man should possess the same rellish as ours are: yet in reason, no man should possess the same rellish as ours are: yet in reason, no man should possess the same rellish as ours are: yet in reason, no man should possess the same rellish as ours are: yet in reason, no man should possess the same rellish as ours are: yet in reason, no man should possess the same rellish as ours are: yet in reason, no man should possess the same rellish as ours are: yet in reason, no man should possess the same rellish as ours are: yet in reason, no man should possess the same rellish as ours are the same rellish as ou

Bates. He may thew what outward courage he will: but I beleeue, as oold a Night as 'ris, hee could with himfelfe in Thames up to the Neck; and to I would he were, and I by him, at all aduentures, to we were quit here.

King. By my troth, I will speake my conscience of the King: I thinks her would not with himselfe soy where, but where her is.

Bases. Then I would be were here alone; so should be be fure to be cansomed, and a many poore mens lives faucd.

fure to be canformed, and a many poore mens lives faucd,

King. I dare fay, you love him not so ill, to wish him here alone: how soever you speake this to feele other mens minds, me thinks I could not dye any where so contented, as in the Kings company; his Cause being sust, and his Quarrell honorable.

Williams. That's more then we know.

Bates. I, or more then wee should seeke after; for wee know enough, if wee know wee are the Kinga Subjects: if his Cause be wrong, our obedience to the King wipes the Cryme of it out of vi.

Williams. But if the Caufe be not good, the King himfelfe hath a heavie Reckoning to make, when all those Legges, and Armes, and Heads, chopt off in a Battaile, shall iowne together at the latter day, and cry all, We edy
dat fuch a place, some swearing, some crying for a Surgean; some upon their Wiues, lest poore behind them;
some upon the Debts they owe, some upon their Children
rawly lest: lamasear'd, there are sew dye well, that dye in a Battaile: for how can they charitably dispose of any thing, when Blood is their argument? Now, if these men doe not dye well, it will be a black matter for the King, cliat led them to it; who to disobey, were against all proportion of Subsection. King So, if a Sonne that is by his Father fent about Merchandize, doc finfully miscarry upon the Sea; the imputation of his wickednesse, by your rule, should be impoled upon his Father that lent him: or if a Servant, vnder his Masters command, transporting a summe of Money, be affayled by Robbers, and dye in many irreconcil'd Iniquities; you may call the businesse of the Master the author of the Servants damnation: but this is not fo: The King is not bound to answer the particular endings of his Souldiers, the Father of his Sonne, nor the Mafter of his Servant; for they purpole not their dearh, when they purpole their feruices. Belides, there is no King, be his Cause neuer so spotlesse, if it come to the arbitrement of Swords, can rive it out with all vnspotted Souldiers: some (peraduenture) have on them the guilt of premeditated and contriued Murther; some, of beguiling Virgins with the broken Seales of Penurie; fome, making the Warres their Bulwarke, that liaue before gored the gentle Bosome of Peace with Pillage and Robberie. Now, if these men have deseated the Law, and outrunne Native punishmens; though they can out-fitip men, they have no wings to Bye from God. Warre is his Beadle, Watre is his Vengeante: fo that here men are punishe, for before breach of the Kings Lawes, in now the Kings Quarrell: where they feared the death, they have borne life away; and where they would bee fafe, they periss. Then if they dye vnprouised, no more is the King guiltie of their damnation, then hee was before guiltie of thole Impieties, for the which they are now visited. Every Subjects Dutie is the Kings, but every Subjects Soule is his owne. Therefore should every Souldier in the Warres doe as every ficke man in his Bed, wash every Moth out of his Conscience : and dying so, Death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was bleffedly loft, wherein fuch preparation was gayned: and in him that escapes, it were not finne to thinke, that making God fo free an offer, he let him out live that day, to fee his Greatnesse, and to teach others how they should propose.

Well Tis

Will. Tis certaine, every man that dyes ill, the ill spon his owne head, the King is not to answer it.

Bates. I doc not defire hee should aufwer for ene, and yet I determine to fight luftily for him. "

King. I my felfe heard the King foy he would not be ranforn'd.

Will. I, hee faid fo, to make vs fight thearefully : but when our throats are cut, hee may be ranfom'd, and wee ne're the wifer.

King: If I liuc to fee it, I will never trust his word af-

Will. You pay him then: that's a perillous shot out of an Elder Gunne, that a poore and a primate displeasure can doe against a Monarch : you may as well goe about to turne the Sunne to yee, with fanning in his face with a Peacocks feather : You'le geuer truft his word after; come, ties a foolish laying.

King. Your reproofess something too round, I should be angry with you, if the time were contienient.

Well. Let it bee a Quarrell betweene vs, if you

King. I embrace it.
Will. How shall I know thee agains?

King. Giue meany Gage of thine, and I will weare it in my Bonner: Then if ever thop dar'll acknowledge it, I will make it my Quarrell.

Will. Heere's my Glove: Give mee another of King. There.

Will. This will I also weare in my Cap. if ever thou come to me, and fay, after to morrow, This is my Gloue, by this Hand I will take thee a box on the care,

King. If eyer I line to fee it, I will challenge it, will. Thou dar'll as well be hang'd.

Korg. Weil, I will doe it, though I take thee in the Kings companie.

Will. Keepe thy word : fare thee well.

Bates. Befriends you English sooles, be friends, wee have French Quarcels enow, if you could tell how to rec-Exit Souldiers.

King. Indeede the French may lay twentie French Crownes to one, they will beat vs., for they beare them on their shoulders : but it is no English Treason to cut French Crownes, and to morrow the King himfelfe will be a Clipper.

Vpon the King, let vs our Liues, out Soules,

Our Debes, our carefull Wines,

Our Children, and our Sinnes, lay on the Kingt We mul beare all.

O hard Condition, Twin-horne with Greatnelle, Subject to the breath of every foole, whole fence No more can feele, but his owne wringing. What infinite hearts-cale must Kings neglect,

That private men enjoy!

And what have Kings, that Privates have not too, Sauc Ceremonie, saue generall Ceremonie? And what are thou, thou Idoll Ceremonie? What kind of God are thou? that fuffer it more Of mortall griefes, then doe thy worthippers. What are thy Rents? what are thy Commings in?.

O Ceremonie, thew me but thy worth, What? is thy Soule of Odoracion? Art thou ought elfe but Place, Degree, and Forme,

Creating awe and feare in other men? Wherein thou art leffe happy, being feard, Then they in fearing,

What drink'if thou ofe, in flead of Homage Iweer But poylon'd flatterie? O, be fick, great Greatneffe, And bid thy Ceremonie give thee cure.

Thinks thou the fierie Fouer will goe out With Titles blowne from Adulation? Will it give place to flexure and low bending ? Caust thou, when thou command'it the beggers knee.

Command the health of it : No, thou prowd Dreams. That play it so subtilly with a Kings Repose

I am a King that find thee : and I know, Tis not the Balme, the Scepter, and the Ball. The Sword, the Mafe, the Crowne Imperiall,

The enter-tiffued Robe of Gold and Pearle, The farfed Title running fore the King The Throne he fits on: nor the Tyde of Pompe.

That beates spon the high shore of this World: No, not all thefe, thrice-gorgeous Ceremonie; Not all thefe, lay'd in Bed Maieficail,

Can fleepe fo foundly, as the wretched Slaue: Who with a body fill'd, and vacant mind, Gets him to reft, cram'd with distressefull broad,

Neuer fees horride Night, the Child of Heil: But like a Lacquey, from the Rife to Set, Sweates in the eye of Phebra; and all Night

Sleepes in Elizium: next day after dawne, Doth rife and helpe Hiperio to his Horse, And followes fo the euer-running yeere

With profitable labour to his Graue: And but for Ceremonie, fuch a Wretch, Winding up Dayes with toyle, and Nights with fleepe, Had the fore-hand and vantage of a King. The Slaue, a Member of the Countreyes peace.

Enioyes it; but in grolle braine little wots, What watch the King keepes, to maintaine the peace;

Whole howres, the Pelant bell advantages.

King. Good old Knight, collect them all together

At my Tent : Ile be before thee. Esp. Ishall doo't any Lord. Erit.

King. O God of Battailes, fieele try Souldiers hours, Pollelle them not with feare: Take from them now The sence of reckning of th'opposed numbers a Pluck their hearts from them. Not to day, O Lord, O not to day, thinke not vpon the fault My Father made, in compaffing the Crowne. I Richards body have interred new, And on it have bellowed more contrite secres, Then from it issued forced drops of blood. Fine hundred poore I have in yearely pay, Who twice a day their wither d hands hold vp Toward Heaven, to pardon blood : And I have built two Chauntries, Where the fad and folemne Priests Sing still For Richards Soule. More will I doe: Though all that I can doe, is nothing worth; Since that my Penitence comes after all,

The Constable desires thee, thou wilt mind Thy followers of Repentance; that their Soules May make a peacefull and a sweet retyre
From off these fields: where (wretches) their poore bodies Must lye and sester.

King. Who hath fent thee now?

Mars. The Conftable of France. King. I pray thee beare my former Answer back: Bid them atchieue me, and then fell my bones. Good God, why fhould they mock poore fellowes thus? The man that once did fell the Lyons skin While the beaft liu'd, was kill'd with hunting him. Amany of our bodyes shall no doubt Find Native Graves: vpon the which, I truft Shall witnesse live in Brasse of this dayes worke. And those that leave their valiant bones in France, Dying likemen, shough buryed in your Dunghills, They shall be fam'd: for there the Sun shall greet them, And draw their bonors recking vp to Heauen, Leauing their earthly parts to chooke your Clyine, The finell wheteof shall breed a Plague in France, Marke then abounding valour in our English : That being dead, like to the bullets crafing, Breske out into a second course of mischiefe, Killing in relaple of Morealitie. Let me speake prowdly : Tell the Constable, We are but Warriors for the working day: Our Gaynesse and our Gilt are all besimpreht With aynie Marching in the painefull field. There's not a piece of feather in our Hoash Good argument (I hope) we will not flye:

And time hath wome vs into flowensie. But by the Malle, out hearts are in the trim: And my poore Souldiers tell me, yet ere Night, They'le be in freiber Robes, or they will pluck The gay new Coats o're the French Souldiers heads, And turne them out of seruice. If they doe this, As if God please, they shall; my Ransome then Will soone be leuyed. Herauld, faue thou thy labour : Come thou no more for Ranfome, gentle Herauld, They shall have none, I sweere, but these my loyous: Which if they have, as I will leave vm them, Shell yeeld them little, tell the Constable. King. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we meet; Vnto our brother France, and to our Sifter Health and faire time of day: Ioy and good wifnes To our most faire and Princely Cosine Lathering; And as a branch and member of this Royalty, By whom this great assembly is contriuid, We do salute you Duke of Eurgogue, And Princes French and Peeres health to you all.

Fra. Right ioyous are we to behold your face, Most worthy brother England, sairely met, So are you Princes (English) every one. Quee. So happy be the Issue brother Ireland
Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting,
As we are now glad to behold your eyes,
Your eyes which hitherto have borne
In them against the French that meet hem in their bent,
The fatall Balls of murthering Bassliskes:
The venome of such Lookes we fairely hope
Have lost their qualitie, and that this day
Shair change all griefes and quartels into love.

Eng. To cry Amen to that, thus we appeare. Que. You English Princes all, I doe Salote you Burg. My dutic to you both, on equall love. Great Kings of France and England: hat I have labour'd With all my wits, my painer, and ftrong endeuors, To bring your most Imperial Maiestics Vnto this Barre, and Royall enter view; Your Mightineffe on both parts best can witnesse. Since then my Office hath so force preuay!'d, That Face to Face, and Royall Eye to Eye, You have congreeted: let it not difgrace me, If I demand before this Royall view, What Rub, or what Impediment there is, Why that the naked, poore, and mangled Peace, Deare Nouric of Atts, Plentyes, and 109full Bitths, Should not in this best Garden of the World. Our fertile France, put vp her louely Vilage? Alas, thee hath from France too long been chas'd, And all her Husbandry doth lye on heaper, Corrupting in it owne fertilities Her Vine, the merry chearer of the heart, Vnpruned, dyes : her Hedges euen plezch'd, Like Purfoners wildly ouer-growne with hayre, Put forth diforder'd Twigs: her fallow Leas, The Dainell, Hemlock, and ranke Femeuary Doth toot ypon; while that the Culter rulls, That should deracionce such Saungery : The even Meade, that erft brought (weetly forth The freckied Cowslip, Burner and greene Clouer, Wanting the Sythe, withall vncorrected, ranke $ Conceives by idlenesse, and nothing teemes, But hatefull Docks, rough Thistles, Keklyes, Burres, Loofing both beautie and villitie; And all our Vineyards, Fallowes, Meades, and Hedges,

Defective in their natures, grow to wildnesse. Even so our Houses, and our selnes, and Children, Have lost, or doe not learne, for want of time, The Sciences that should become our Country; But grow like Sanages, as Souldiers will, That nothing doe, but meditate on Blood, To Swearing, and sterne Lookes, defus'd Actyre, And every thing that seemes vanaturall. Will you, faire Sifter, Goe with the Princes, or flay here with vs?

Quec. Our gracious Brother, I will goe with them; Happily a Womans Voyce may doe lone good, When Articles too nicely vig d, be frood on.

England. Yet leave out Coulin Katherine here with vs, She is our capitall Demand, compris'd Within the fore-ranke of our Articles.

Ques. She hash good deaue. Excunt opens.

Manet King and Katherine, King. Faire Kashermejand most faire, Will you vouchfafe to teach a Souldier tearmes, Such as will enter at a Ladyes eare, And pleade his Loue-furt to her gentle heart.

Kath Your Maiestie shall mock at me, I cannot speake your England.

King. Office Katherine, if you will love me foundly with your French heart, I will be glad to heare you confelle it brokenly with your English Tongue. Doe you like me, Rate?

men are full of deceres?

Lady. Ony, dat de tongeus of de mans is be full of deceitr: dat is de Princelle.

Kmg. The Princelle is the better English-woman: yfaith Kese, my woolng is fit for thy understanding, I am glad thou canst speake no better English, for if thou could the thou would the finde me such a plaine King, that thou wouldst chicke, I had fold my Farme to buy my Crowne: I know no wayes to mince it in love, but direally to lay, I love you; then if you vege me farther, then to fay, Doe you in faith? I weare out my fuite : Give me your answer, yfaith doe, and so clap hands, and a bargaine: how fay you, Lady t

Kash. Sanf voftre honeur, one understand well.

King. Marry, if you would put me to Verles, or to Dance for your fake, Kate, why you andid me: for the one I have neither words nor measure; and for the other, I haue no strength in measure, vet a reasonable measure in frength If I could wione a Lady at Leape-frogge, or by vawing into my Saddle, with my Armout on my backe; vinder the correction of bragging be it spoken. I should quickly leape into a Wife: Or if I might buffet for my Loue, or bound my Horse for her fauours, I could lay on like a Butcher, and fit like a lack an Apes, neuer off. But before God Kare, I cannot looke greenely, nor gaspe out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in processacion; onely downe-right Oathes, which I neuer vie till vrg'd, nor neuer breake for veging. If thou canst loue a fellow of this remper, Kate, whole tace it por worth Sunne-burping? that never lookes in his Glasse, for love of any thing he fees there? let thine Eye be thy Cooke. I speake to thee plaine Souldier : If thou canst loue me for this, take me? if not? to lay to thee that I shall dye, is true; but for thy love, by the L. No: yet I love thee too. And while thou liu Il, deare Kase, take a fellow of plaine and vncoyned Constancie, for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to wooe in other places: for these sellowes of infinit tongue, that can tyme themselves Into Ladyes fauours, they doe alwayes reason themselves out againe. What I a speaker is but a prater, a Ryme is but a Ballad; a good Legge will fall, a stratt Backe will stoope, a blacke Beard will turne white, a curl'd Pate will grow bald, a faire Face will wither, a full Eye will war hollow: but a good Heart, Kare, is the Sunne and the Moone, or rather the Sunne, and not the Moone; for it thines brighe, and never changes, but keepes his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me? and take me; rake a Souldier: take a Souldier; take a King. And what fay's thou then to my Loue? speake my faire, and fairely, I pray thee.

Karb. Is it possible det I sould loue de ennemie of Fraunce?

King. No, it is not possible you should love the Enemie of France, Kase; but in louing me, you should loue the Friend of France: for I loue France so well, that I will not part with a Village of it; I will have it all mine: and Kase, when France is mine, and I am yours; then yours is France, and you are mine.

Kaub. I cannot tell wat is dat.

Kmg. No, Karel I will tell thee in French, which I am fure will hang vpon my tongue, like a new-married Wife about her Husbands Nicke, hardly to be shooke off; 16 quand for le possession de France. & quand vous . mes le pos. seffion de moy, (let mee fee, what then? King. No faith is t not, Kate: but thy speaking of my Tongue, and I thine, most truely fallely, must needes be graunted to be much at one. But Kate, doo'ft thou understand thus much English? Canst thou love mee?

Kath. I cannot tell.

Kag. Can any of your Neighbours tell, Kate? Ile aske them. Come, I know thou lovest me; and at night when you come into your Closer, you'le question thus Gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kare, you will to ber disprayse those parts in me, that you love with your heart : but good Kate, mocke me merciful'y, the rather gentle Princeste, because I loue thee cruelly. If ever thou beeft mine, Kase, as I have a fauing Faith within me tells me thou shale; I get thee with skambling, and thou must therefore needes proue a good Souldier-breeder; Shall not thou and I, betweene Saint Donnie and Saint George, compound a Boy, halfe French halfe English, that thall goe to Conftantinople, end take the Turke by th Rentd. Shall wee not? what fay'st thou, my faire Flower-de-Luce.

King. Now fye vpon my falle French: by mine Honor In true English, I loue thee Kate; by which Honor, I dare not sweare thou lovest me, yet my blood begins to flatterme, that thou doo'ft; notwithstanding the poore and vncen pering effect of my Vilage. Now beshrew my Fathers Ambition, hee was thinking of Civill Warres when hee got me, therefore was I created with a flub-borne out-fide, with an aspect of Iron, that when I come to wood Ladyes, I fright them: but in faith Kate, the elder I wax, the better I shall appeare. My comfort is, that Old Age, that ill layer vp of Beautie, can doe no more spoyle vpon my Face. Thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt weare me, if thou weare me, better and better : and therefore tell me, most faire Kathering, will you have me? Put oft your Maiden Blushes, attouch the Thoughts of your Heart with the Lookes of an Empresse, take me by the Hand, and say, Harry of England, I am thine: which Word thou shalt no sooner bleffemine Eare withall, but I will tell thee slowd, Eng-Land is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Heary Planaginet is thine; who, though I speake it before his Face, if he be not Fellow with the best King, thou shalt finde the best King of Good-sellowes. Come your Anfwer in broken Mulick; for thy Voyce is Mulick, and thy English broken: Therefore Queene of all, Katherine, breake thy minde to me in broken English; wilt thou have me?

Kath. Dat is as it shall please de Roy mon pere.

Ring. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate.

Karb. Den it fall also content me,

King. Vpon that I kiffe your Hand, and I call you my Mess. My honourable Lords, health to you all.

Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of losse, of slaughter, and discomfirure:
Guyen, Champaigne, Rheimes, Orleance,
Paris, Guysors, Postiters, are all quite loss.

Beds. What say st thou man, before dead Henry's Coarse?

Speake softly, or the losse of those great Townes
Will make him burst his Lead, and rise from death.

Glost. Is Paris lost? is Roan yeelded vp?

If Henry were recall'd to life againe,

These news would cause him once more yeeld the Ghost.

Exo. How were they lost? what trecherie was vs'd?

Meff. No trecherie, but want of Men and Money.
Amongh the Souldiers this is couttered,
That here you maintaine feuerall Factions:
And whil's a Field should be dispatcht and fought,
You are disputing of your Generals.
One would have lingring Warres, with little cost;
Another would flye swift, but wanteth Wings:
A third thinkes, without expence at all,
By guilefull faire words, Peace may be obtayn'd.

Mef. My gracious Lords, to adde to your laments, Wherewith you now bedew King Heartes hearle, I must informe you of a dismall fight, Betwitthe sout Lord Talbot, and the French.

Bin. What?wherein Talbot overcame, 15't 10?

3. Mef. O no: wherein Lord Talbot was o rethrown: The circumstance He rell you more at large. The tenth of August last, this dreadfull Lord, Retyring from the Siege of Orleance, Having full scarce fix shouland in his croupe, By three and twentie thousand of the French Was round incompaffed, and fet vpon: No leyfure had he to enranke his men. He wanted Pikes to fet before his Archers: Inflead whereof, shatpe Stakes plucks out of Hedges They pitched in the ground confusedly, To keepe the Horsemen off, from breaking in-More then three houres the fight continued: Where valisht Talber, about humane thought, Enacted wonders with his Sword and Lance. Hundreds he fent to Hell, and none durft frand him: Here, there, and every where enraged, he flew. The French exclaym'd, the Deuill was in Armes, All the whole Army flood agaz'd on him. His Souldiers Spying his vndaunted Spirits A Talbot, a Talbot, cry'd out amaine, And rushe into the Bowels of the Battaile. Here had the Conquest fully been seal'd vp, If Sir Iohn Falltaffe had not play d the Coward. He being in the Vauward, plac't behinde, With purpose to relieue and follow them, Cowardly fled, not having flruck one froake. Hence grew the generall wrack and massacre : Enclosed were they with their Enemies. A base Wallon, to win the Dolphins grace, Thrust Talbor with a Speare into the Back, Whom all France, with their chiefe affembled strength, Durst not presume to looke once in the face.

English, with great lesse.

Exter Charles, Alanfon, and Reignou.

Charles Who ever faw the like? what even have 1?

Dogges, Cowards, Dastarda: I would ne're bave fled,

But that they left me inidit my Enemies.

Reigneir. Salisbury is a desperate Homicide, He fighteth as one weary of his life: The other Lords, like Lyons wanting foode, Doe rush vpon vs as their hungry prey.

3 Alang Froy.

Akonfon. L'. oyjard, a Countreyman of ours, records, England all Olivers and Rowlands breed, During the time Edward the third did raigne: More truly now may this be verified; For none but Samfers and Golinfies It fendeth forth to tkirmith: one to tenne? Leane taw-bon'd Rascals, who would e'te suppose, They had fuch courage and audacitie?

Charles. Let's leave this Towne, For they are hayre-brayn'd Slaues, And hunger will enforce them to be more eager. Of old I know them; rather with their Teeth The Walls they le teare downe, then for fake the Siege.

Reigner. I thinke by some odde Gimmors or Deuice Their Armes are fet, like Clocks, full to firike on; Else ne're could they hold out so as they doe: By my confent, wee'le euen let them alone.

Almson. Beit lo.

Enter the Bastard of Orleance.

Bafford. Where's the Prince Dolphin? I have newes for him.

Dolph. Baltard of Orleance, thrice welcome to va Bast. Me thinks your looks are sad, your chear appal'd. Hath the late ouerthrow wrought this offence? Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand: A holy Maid hither with me I bring, Which by a Vision lent to her from Heaven, Ordayned is to rayle this tedious Siege, And drive the English forth the bounds of France: The spirit of deepe Prophecie she hath, Exceeding the nine Sibyls of old Rome: What's past, and what's to come, she can descry. Speake, hall I call her in ? beleeve my words, For they are certaine, and unfallible.

Dolph. Goe call her in: but firft, to try her skill, Reigner Stand thou as Dolphin in my place; Question her prowdly, let thy Lookes be sterne, By this meaner shall we found what skill the hath,

Enter loans Pazel

Reignett. Faire Maid, is't thou wilt doe these wondrous feats?

Puzel. Reigner, 1s't thou that thinkest to beguile me? Where is the Dolphin? Come, come from behinde, I know thee well, though never feene before. Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me; In private will I talke with thee apart : Stand back you Lords, and give vs leave a while. Reignerr. She takes vpou her brauely at fult dalh. Pazel. Dolphin, I am by birth a Shepheards Daughter, My wit vntrayn'd in any kind of Art i Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd

To shine on my contemptible estate. Loe, whilest I wayted on my tender Lambes, And to Sunnes parching heat display'd my checkes, Gods Mosher deigned to appeare to me, And in a Vision full of Maiestie, Will'd me to leaue my base Vocation, And free my Countrey from Calamitie: Her ayde the promis'd, and affur'd fuccelle. In complex Glory shee reveal'd her selse: And whereas I was black and fwart before With those cleare Rayes, which shee infustd on me, That beautie am I bleft with, which you may fee.

Aske me what question thou can't possible, And I will answer vapremeditated ! My Courage tric by Combatus thou der'd, And theu fielt hade that I exceed my Sex. Resolve on this shou shall be fortunate. If thou receive me for thy Warlike Mate.

Diph. Thou hast astonisheme with thy high termiza Onely this proofe He of thy Valour make, In fingle Combat thou shalt buckle with me; And if thou vanquishest, thy words are true, Otherwise I renounce all confidence.

Puxel. I am prepar di bere is my keene-edg'd Sword, Deckt with fine Flower-de-Luces on each fide, The which at Toursine in S. Katherines Church-yard, Our of a great deale of old Iron, I chole forth.

Dolph. Then come a Gods name, I feare no woman, Puzel. And while I live, He ne're flye from a man.

Here they fight and loane de Puzel ourcouns. Dolph. Stay, flay thy hands, thou art an Amezon, And highteft with the Sword of Debara.

Puzel. Christs Mother helpes me, elle I were coo

Dolph. Who e're helps thee, 'tis thou that must bely me . Impariently I burne with thy delire, My heart and hands thou haft at once subde d. Excellent Puzzl, if thy name be fo, Let me thy feruant, and not Soueraigne be, Tis the French Dolphin fueth to thee thus.

Pazel. I must not yeeld to any rights of Love. For my Profession's facred from above : When I have chased all thy Foes from hence, Then will I thinke vpon a recompence.

Dalph. Meane time looke gracious on thy proftrate

Reigneir. My Lord me thinkes is very long in talke. Alar Doubtlesse he thrines this weman to ber smock, Else ne're could he so long protract his speech.

Reigneir. Shall wee disturbe him, since hee keepes no

Alan. He may meane more then we poor men do know, These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues. Reigneir. My Lord, where are you? what deuile you on? Shall we give o're Orleance, or no?
Pazel. Why no, I fay: diffruffull Recreants,

Fight till the last gaspe: He be your guard.

Dolph. What thee layer, He confirme: wee'le fight

Pazel. Affign'd am I to be the English Scourge. This night the Siege affuredly lle rayle: Expect Saint Martins Summer, Haleyers dayes, Since I have entred into thefe Warres. Glory is like a Circle in the Water, Which never ceaseth to enlarge it selfe, Till by broad spreading, it disperse to naught. With Homies death, the English Circle ends, Dispersed are the glories it included: Now am I like that prowd infulting Ship, Which Cafer and his fortune bare at once.

Dolph. Was Mahamer inspired with a Done? Thou with an Eagle art inspired then. Heleo, the Mother of Great Conference, Nor yet S. Philips daughters were like thee. Bright Starre of Vorus, false downs on the Earth, How may I reuerently worthin thee enough?

Alamson. Leane off delayer, and let ve rayle the Siege.

Reigneir. Wo.

Reigneir. Woman, do what thou can't to faue our honors,
Drive them from Orleance, and be immortalized.
Dolph. Prefently wee'le try: come, let's away about it,
No Prophet will I truft, if thee prove falls.

Enter Gioster, with bis Serving - swn.

Glost. I am come to survey the Tower this day; Since Hearies death, I feare there is Convey nee: Where be these Warders, that they wait not here? Open the Gates, tis Gloster that calls.

1. Warder. Who's there, that knocks to imperiously of Gloft. 1. Man. It is the Noble Duke of Glofter. 2. Warder. Who cre he be, you may not be let in. 1. Man. Villaines, answer you to the Lord Protector? 1. Warder. The Lord protect him, to we answer him,

We doe no otherwise then wee are will'd.

Gloss. Who willed youlor whose will stands but mine? There's none Protector of the Realme, but 1: Breake up the Gates, lie be your warrantize; Shall 1 be flowted thus by dunghill Groomese spoodule. What noyle is this? what Traytors have were here?

Glofters men rufb at the Tower Gates, and Woodwile the Lieutenant speakes within.

Cloff. Lieutenant, is it you whose voyce I heare?
Open the Gates, here's Glosser that would enter.
Woodside. Have patience Noble Duke, I may not open,
The Cardinall of Winchester forbids:
From him I have expresse commandement,
That thou nor none of thine shall be let in,
Gloss. Faint-hearted Woodside, prizest how fore me?

Arrogant Winebester, that haughtie Prelate,
Whom Henry our late Soueralgne ne're could brooke?
Thou are no friend to God or to the King:

Open the Gates, or Ile shut thee out shortly.

Serving usen. Open the Gates vnto the Lord Protector,
Or wee'le burst them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter to the Protector at the Tower Gates Winchester and his men in Tawney Coates.

Winebest. How now emblious Vmphen, what meanes this?

Gloft. Piel'd Prieft, doo'ft thou command me to be thut out?

Winch. I doe, thou most vsurping Proditor, And not Protector of the King or Realme.

Gloft. Stand back thou manifelt Conspirator,
Thou that contribued it to murther our dead Lord,
Thou that giu'st Whores Indulgences to sinne,
Ile canuas tnee in thy broad Cardinalls Hat,
If thou proceed in this thy insolence.

Winch. Nay, fland thou back, I will not budge a foot: This be Damascus, be thou curied Cain,

To flay thy Brother Abel, if thou will.

Gloft. I will not flay thee, but He drive thee back; Thy Scarlet Robes, as a Coilds bearing Cloth, He vie, to carry thee out of this place.

Winch. Doe what thou dar'st, I beard thee to thy Gloft What? am I dar'd, and bearded to my face?

Draw men, for all this priviledged place,
Blew Costs to Tawny Costs. Priefl, beware your Beard,
I meane to tugge it, and to cuffe you foundly.
Vider my feet I frampe thy Cardinalls Hat:

In spight of Pope, or dignities of Church, Hereby the Cheekes lie drag thee up and downe.

svinch. Gloster, thou wilt answere this before the Cloft. Winchester Goose, I cry, a Rope, a Rope, Now beat them hence, why doe you let them slay? Thee Ile chase hence, thou Wolfe in Sheepes array. Out Tawney-Coares, out Scarlet Hypocrite.

Here Closters wen beat out the Cardinalis men, and enter in the burly-burly the Maior of London, and his Officers.

Maior. Fye Lords that you being supreme Magistrates, Thus contumeliously should breake the Peace.

Cloft. Peace Maior, thou know it little of my wrongs.

Here's Beauford, that regards nor God nor King,
Hath here distrayn'd the Tower to his vic.

or the court of the Realme;

And would have Armour hereout of the Tower,

To Crowne himselie King, and suppresses the Prince.

Glost. I will not answer thee with words, but blo wes.
Here they thirms of againe.

Maior. Naught refts for me, in this symultuous firife, But to make open Proclamation.

Come Officer, as lowd as e're thou canflicty:
All manner of men, affimbled here in Armes this day, against Gods Peace and the Kings, we charge and command you, in his Highnesse Name, to repayre to your severall dwelling places, and not to weare, handle, or use any Sword, weapon, or Dagger bence-forward, upon paine of death.

Cloft. Cardinall, lie be no breaker of the Law:
But we shall meet, and breake our minds at large.

Winch. Gloffer, wee'le meet to thy cost, be sure:
Thy heart-blood I will have for this dayes worke,
Major, lie call for Clubs, if you will not a way:
This Cardinall's more haughtic then the Deuill.

Gloft. Maior farewell: thou doo'st bu; what thou nay'st.

Winch. Abhominable Glofler, guard thy Head,
For I intend to have it ere long.

Maior. See the Coast clear d, and then we will depart
Good God, these Nobles should such stomacks beere,
I my selfe fight not once in sortie yeere.

Enter the Master Gunner of Orleance, and bis Bay.

M. Gumer. Sirtha, thou know it how Orleance is before id,
And how the English have the Suburbs wonne.

Boy. Father I know, and oft have shot at them,
How e're vnsortunate, I mis'd my syme.

M. Gunner. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rul'd by me:
Chiese Master Gunner am Las this Towne,
Something I must doe to procure me grace:
The Princes espyals have informed me,
How the English, in the Suburbs close entrencht,
Went through a secret Grate of Iron Barres,
In yonder Tower, to over-peere the Citte,
And thence discover, how with most advantage
They may vex vs with Shot or with Assault,
To intercept this inconvenience,
A Peece of Ordnance gainst it I have placed,

And

If I could feethem. Now doe thou watch, For I can flay no longer. If thou fpy it any, runoc and bring me word, And thou shall finde me at the Governors. Exs. Boy Father, I warrant you, take you to care,

And even thele three dayes have I watcht,

He neuer trouble you, if I may fpye them. Exis.

> Enser Salubery and Talbot on the Tentets, with others.

Salub. Tulber, my life, my iog, againe return'd? How wert thou handled, being Prisoner? Or by what meaner got's thou to be releas'd? Discourse I prethee on this Tutters 10p.

Talbot. The Earle of Bedford had a Priloner, Call'd the braue Lord Ponton de Santrayle, For him was I exchang'd, and ranfom'd. But with a baser man of Armes by farre. Once in contemps they would have basserd me ; Which I disdaining, scorn'd, and craued death, Rather then I would be so pil'd esteem'd: In fine, redeem'd I was as I defir'd. But O, the trecherous Falfraffe wounds my heart, Whom with my bare fifts I would execute, If I now had him bronght into my power.

Salisb. Yet tell'ft thou not, how thou wert enter-

Tal. With scoffes and scomes, and contumelious tounts, In open Market-place produc't they me, To be a publique spectacle to all: Here, sayd they, is the Terror of the French, The Scar-Crow that affrights our Children fo. Then broke I from the Officers that led me, And with my nayles digg'd fronces out of the ground, To hurle at the beholders of my shame. My grifly countenance made others flye, None durst come neere, for scare of suddaine death. In Iron Walls they deem'd me not fecure: So great feare of my Name mongst them were spread, That they supposed I could rend Barres of Steele. And fourne in pieces Posts of Adamant, Wherefore a guard of cholen Shor I had, That walkt about me every Minute while: And if I did but friere out of my Bad, Ready they were to thoot me to the hears. Enser the Boy was a Linftock.

Salisb. I grieve to heare what torments you ender'd, But we will be reveng'd fufficiently. Now it is Supper time in Orleance: Here, through this Grare, I count each ons, And view the Frenchasca how they fortifie: Let vs looke in, the fight will much delight thee: Sit Thomas Gargrane, and Six William Glasjdele, Let me haue your expresse opinions, Where is best place to make our Batt'ry next?

Gargrase. I thinke at the North Gate, for these flands Lords.

Classidate. And I heere, at the Bulwarks of the Talb. For ought I fee, this Citie must be famisht, Her: they foot, end Or with light Skirmishes enferbled. Salubury falls downs.

Selisb. O Lord have mercy on vs, wretched finners. O Lord have mercy on me, woful man. Talb. What chance is this, that fuddenly hath croft to? Speake Schoon; at leaft, if thou could, speake:

How far'st thou, Mirror of all Martiall men! One of thy Eyes, and thy Cheekes fide ftruck of?? Accurled Tower, accurred farall Hend, That hath contrin'd this wolul Tragedie. In thirteene Batteiles, Salubary o'reconne: Heary the Fift he fielt trayn'd to the Warres. Whil'il any Trumpe did found, or Drum fruck vp. His Sword did ne're leave firiking in the field Yet liu'ft thou Salubary? though thy speech doth sayle, Out Eye thou hast to looke to Heaven for grace. The Sunne with one Eye vieweth all the World. Heaven be thou gracious to none aliae, If Salubury wants mercy at thy hands. Bezre hence his Body, I will helpe to bary it. Sir Thomas Gargrane, half thou any life?
Speake unto Talber, nay, looke up to him. Selibrary cheare thy Spirit with this comfort, Thou shalt not dye whiles-He beckens with his band, and smiles on me: As who should say, When I am dead and gone, Remember to avenge me on the French. Flantagines I will, and like thee, Play on the Lute, beholding the Towner burne: Wretched shall France be onely in my Name.

Here an Alarum and is Thunders and Lightens. What stirre is this? what tumult'r in the Heapens? Whence commeth this Alarum, and the poyle?

Enter a Meffenger. Mef. My Lord my Lord, the French have gether'd head The Dolphin, with one local de Puzel 10yo'd, A holy Propheteffe, new rifen vp, Is come with a great Power, to rayle the Siege.

Here Salubary Infecto birafelfo up, and groanet. Tab. Heare, heare, how dying Salisbary doth grosne It irkes his hearthe cannot be reveng'd. Frenchmen, lie be a Salubary to you.
Puzal or Puffel, Delphin or Dog-fish, Your hearts He stampe out wi h my Horfes heeles, And make a Quagmire of your mingled braines. Convey me Salubary into his tent, And then weele try what there daftard Frenchmen date. Listen. Exerten.

Har en Alwan againe, and Talbat perfuel the Dolphin, and driven bim: Then enter loane de Puzel, driving Englishmen before ber. Then enser Talkes.

Telb. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force ? Our English Troupes retyre, I cannot flay them, A Woman clad in Armour chaseth them.

Exter Parel. Here, here thee comes. He have a bowt with thee: Deuill, or Deuils Dam, Ile coniure thee: Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a Witch,

And straightway give thy Soule to him thou fern's Puzzl. Come, come, 'tis onely I that must different thee. Herethy fight.

Talb. Heavens, can you suffer Hell so to preusyle?

My breft He burft with furnining of a rearrage, And from my shoulders crack my Armes slun-But I will chassife this high-minded Strumper.

They fight againe.
Pazel. Talbet ferwell, thy houre is not yet come, I must go: Victuali Orleance forthwith: A ferr Alarm: show energhe Tenne

Sab Souldiers.

Circ.

Ore-take me if thou careft, I feorne thy strength.
Goe, goe, cheare up thy bungry-started men,
Helpe Salisbury to make his Testament,
This Day is ours, as many more shall be.
Ext.
Tallo. My thoughts are whirled like a Potters Wheele,
I know not where I am, nor what I doe:
A Witch by seare, not force, like Banribal,
Drives back our troupes, and conquers as she lists:
So Bees with smoake, and Doves with noy some stench,
Are from their Hyues and Houses driven away.
They call'd va, for our stercenesse. English Dogges,
Now like to Whelpes, we crying runne away.

A foort Alorum.

Hearke Countreymen, eyther renew the fighe,
Or teare the Lyons out of Englands Coat;
Renounce your Soyle, glue Sheepe in Lyons flead;
Sheepe run not halfe fo trecherous from the Wolfe,
Or Horfe or Oxen from the Leopard,
As you flye from your oft-fubdued flaues.

Alarem. Here enother Shirmifb.
It will not be, retyre into your Trenches:
You all confented vnto Salisbaries death,
For none would firske a stroake in his revenge.
Petal is entied into Orleance,
In spight of vs, or ought that we could doe
O would I were to dye with Salisbary,
The shame hereof, will make me hide my head.

Alarum, Retreat, Flourifb.

Exter on the Falls, Paxel, Dolphin, Reigneir, Alanfon, and Souldiers.

Puecl. Advance our waning Colours on the Walls, Referred is Orleance from the English.

Thus Is me de Puece hath performed her word.

Dolph. Divinest Creature, Aftrea's Daughter, How shall I honour thee for this specesse? Thy promises are like Adam Garden, That one day bloom'd, and fruitfull were the aext. France, triumph in thy glorious Prophetesse, Recover'd is the Towne of Orleance, More blessed hep did ne're befall our State. Reigneir. Why ring not out the Bells alowd,

Throughout the Towne?
Dolphin command the Citizems make Bonfires,
And feaft and banquet in the open freets,
To celebrate the joy that God hath given vs.

Alass. All France will be repleat with mirth and joy, When they shall heare how we have play'd the men,

Dolph. Tis locur, not we, by whom the day is wonne:
For which, I will divide my Crowne with her,
And all the Priests and Fryers in my Realme,
Shall in procession sing her endlesse prayse.
A stately er Pyramis to her Ile reare,
Then Rhodopho's or Menaphis ever was.
In memorie of her, when she is dead,
Her Asses, in an Vine more precious
Then the rich-lewel'd Coffer of Darim,
Transported, shall be as high Festivals
Before the Kings and Queenes of France.
No longer on Saint Dennis will we cry,
But locus de Parel shall be France's Saint.
Come in, and let vs Banquet Royally,
After this Golden Dry of Victorie.
Flourish.

Adus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Sergeant of a Band, with two Sent wels.

So. Sirs, take your places, and be vigilant: If any noyfe or Souldier you perceine Neere to the walles, by fome apparant figue Let vs have knowledge at the Court of Guard.

Sent. Sergeant you shall. Thus are poore Seruitors (When others sleepe vpon their quiet beds) Constrain'd to watch in darknesse, raine, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, and Burguody, with scaling Ladders: Their Drawnes beating a Doad March.

Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubted Bargondy,
By whose approach, the Regions of Arreys,
Wallon, and Picardy, are friends to vs:
This happy night, the Frenchmen are secure,
Hauing all day carows'd and banquetted,
Embrace we then this opportunitie,
As fitting best to quittance their deceite,
Contriu'd by Art, and balefull Soccerie.

Contriud by Art, and balefull Socceric.

Bed, Coward of France, how much he wrongs his fame,
Dispairing of his owne armes forticude,
To joyne with Witches, and the helpe of Hell.

Bur. Traitors have never other company.
But what's that Pazell whom they tearme so pure?

Tal. A Maid, they say.

Bod. A Maid? And be so martial!?

Bor. Pray God the prove not malculine ere long:
If windermeath the Standard of the French
She carry Armour, as the hard begun

She carry Armour, as the hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practife and converte with spirits.

God is our Fortresse, in whose conquering name

Let vs resolue to scale their slinty bulwarkes.

Bod. Ascend brave Talou, we will follow thee.
Tal. Not altogether: Better farre I guesse,
That we do make our entrance severall wayes:
That if it chance the one of vs do faile,

The other yet may rife against their force.

Bed. Agreed; lie to youd corner.

Ber. And I to this.

Tal. And heere will Talber mount, or make his grave Now Seliebury, for thee and for the right Of English Henry, shall this night appeare How much in dury, I am bound to both.

Sent. Arme, arme, the enemy doth make affault.
Cry, S. George, A Talbor.

The French leape ore the walles in their shirts. Enter severall wayes, Bastard, Stanson, Reignier, balfo ready, and halfo vursady.

Alan. How now my Lords? what all enteadic for Baft. Virteady? I and glad we feep'd fo well.

Rety. Twas time (1 trow) to wake and lesue our beds;

Hearing Alacums at our Chamber doores.

Alan. Of all exploits fince first I follow'd Armes,

Nere heard I of a warlike enterprize

Mare

More venturous, or desperate then this Baft. I thinke this Talbos be a Frend of Hell. Reig. If not of Hell, the Heavens fure favour him. Alanf. Here commeth Charles, I maruell how he sped?

Enter Charles and loane Baft. Tut, holy loane was his defensive Guard. Charl. Is this thy cunning, thou decenful Dame? Didft thou se firft, to flatter va withall, Make vs partakers of a little gayne,

That now our loffe might be ten times fo much?

Jome. Wherefore is Charles impacient with his friend? At all times will you have my Power slike? Sleeping or waking, must I fill preuzyle, Or will you blame and lay the fault on me? Improvident Souldiors, had your Watch been good, This sudden Mischiefe neuer could have falne.

Charl. Duke of Alanson, this was your default, That being Captaine of the Watch to Night, Did looke no better to that weightie Charge.

Alanf. Had all your Quarters been as fafely kept, As that whereof I had the government, We had not beene thus thamefully surpriz'd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reig. And so was mine, my Lord. Charl. And formy felfe, most part of all this Night Within her Quarter, and mine owne Precinct,

I was imploy'd in passing to and fro, About relicuing of the Centinels. Then how, or which way, should they first breake in e loane. Question (my Lords) no further of the case, How or which way; 'tis fure they found some place, But weakely guarded, where the breach was made: And now there rests no other shift but this, To gather our Souldiors, scatter'd and disperc't, And lay new Plat-formes to endammage them.

Alarum. Enter a Souldier, crying, a Talbor, a Talbor: they flye, leaving their Clothes bebind

Sould. He be so bold to take what they have left : The Cry of Talbor ferues me for a Sword, For I have loaden me with many Spoyles, Ving no other Weapon but his Name. Exit.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundie. Beaf. The Day begins to breake, and Night is fled, Whose pitchy Mantle over-vayl'd the Earth. Here found Retreat, and cease our hot pursuit. Retres. Talb. Bring forth the Body of old Salisbury, And here aduance it in the Market-Place, The middle Centure of this curfed Towne.

Now have I pay'd my Vow vnto his Soule: For every drop of blood was drawne from him, There hath at least five Frenchmen dyed to night. And that hereafter Ages may behold What ruine happened in reuenge of him, Within their chiefest Temple lle creet A Tombe, wherein his Corps shall be interr'd: Vpon the which, that every one may reade, Shall be engrau'd the facke of Orleance, The trecherous manner of his mournefull death, And what a terror he had beene to France. But Lords, in all our bloudy Maffacre, I muse we met not with the Dolphins Grace,

His new-come Champion, vertuous lower of Acte, Nor any of his false Confederates.

Bedf. Tis thought Lord Talber, when the fight begen, Rows'd on the fudden from their drowfie Beds, They did smongst the troupes of armed mea, Leape ore the Walls for refuge in the field.

Burg My felfe, as farre as I could well difcorne, For Imoake and duskie vapours of the night, Am fure I fcar'd the Dolphin and his Trull When Arme in Arme they both came fwiftly running. Like to a payre of louing Turtle-Dooes, That could not live afunder day or night. After that things are fer in order here, Wee'le follow them with all the power we have.

Emer a Meyenger. Meff. All hayle, my Lords: which of this Princely trayne Call ye the Warlike Talbot, for his Alls So much applauded through the Realme of France? Talb. Here is the Talber, who would speak with him!

Mef. The vertuous Lady, Counteste of Overgne, With modellie admiring thy Renowne, By me entreats (great Lord) thou would'it vouchfale To visit her poore Cafile where she lyes, That the may boaft the hath beheld the man, Whole glory fills the World with lowd report.

Burg. Is it even to? Nay, then I fee out Watter Will turne vnto a peacefull Comick fport, When Ladyes craue to be encountred with You may not (my Lord) despise her gentle suit.

Talb. Ne're trust me then: for when a World of men Could not preuzyle with all their Oratorie, Yet hath a Womans kindnesse over-rul'd: And therefore tell her, I returne great thankes, And in fubmiffion will attend on her.

Will not your Honors beare me company? Bedf. No, truly, tis more then manners will. And I have heard it layd, Vnbidden Guelts Are often welcommel when they are gone.

Talb. Well then, alone (fince there's no remedie) I meane to proue this Ladyes courtefie. Come hither Captaine, you perceive my minde. sybopers.

Capt. I doe my Lord, and meane accordingly.

Enter Counteffe.

Court. Porter, remember what I gaue in charge, And when you have done to, bring the Keyes to me. Port. Madame, I will.

Court. The Plot is layd, if all things fall out right, I shall as famous be by this explois, As Scythian Torogras by Cyrus death, Great is the rumour of this dreadfull Knight, And his atchieuements of no lette account : Faine would mine eyes be wienesse with mine eares, To give their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Meffenger and Talbot. Mess. Madame, according as your Ladyship defu'd, By Message crau'd, so is Lord Talber come. Count. And he is welcome: what; is this the man ! Alef. Madame, it is,

Count. Is this the Scourge of France?
Is this the Telbot, so much fear'd abroad? That with his Name the Mothers still their Babes? I see Report is sabulous and false.

I thought I should have seene some Hercula, A fecond Fielder, for his grim aspect, And large proportion of his strong knit Limbes, Alas, this is a Child, a filly Dwarfe: It cannot be, this weake and writhled fhrimpe Should frike such terror to his Enemies.

Talb. Mademe, I have beene boid to trouble your But since your Ladyship it not at leysure, He fort some other time to visit you.

Court. What meanes he now i

Goe aske him, whither he goes?

Meff. Stay my Lord Tables, for my Lady craves,
To know the cause of your abrupt departure? Talb. Marry, for that shee's in a wrong beleefe,

I goe to certifie her Talbot's here. Enter Porter with Keyes.

Court. If thou be be, then art thou Prisoner. Tals. Prisoner? to whom?

Connt. To me, blood-thirftie Lord: And for that cause I tray n'd thee to my House. Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me, For in my Gallery thy Picture hangs: But now the substance shall endure the like, And I will chayne thefe Legges and Armes of thine, That half by Tyrannie thefe many yeeres Wasted our Countrey, flaine our Citizens, And sent our Sonnes and Husbands captivate. Talb. Ha, ha, ha.

Count. Laughest thou Wretch?

Thy mirch shall turne to mosne. Tals. I laugh to see your Ladyship so fond, To thinke, that you have ought but Talbers shadow, Whereon to practife your seueritie. Count. Why? art not thou the man ? Talb. I am indeede.

Course. Then have I substance too. Talb. No, no, I am but shadow of my selfe: You are deceived, my lubstance is not here; For what you fee, is but the smallest part, And least proportion of Humanitie: I tell you Madame, were the whole Frame here, It is of fuch a spacious loftie pitch,

Your Roofe were not sufficient to contayn't. Count. This is a Riddling Merchant for the nonce, He will be here, and yet he is not here :

How can these contrarieties agree? Till. That will I show you presently. Words bis Horne, Drummes frike up, a Peale of Ordenones: Enter Souldiors

How fay you Madame? are you now perswaded, That Talbot is but Inadow of himfelfe? These are his substance, sinewes, armes, and strength, With which he yoaketh your rebellious Neckes, Razeth your Cines, and subverts your Townes, And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot, pardon my abule, I finde thou art no leffe then Fame hath bruited. And more then may be gathered by thy shape. Let my presumption not prouoke thy wrath, For I am forry, that with reverence

I did not entertaine thee 25 thou art. Talb. Be not difmay'd, faire Lady, nor misconfter The minde of Talber, as you did mistake The outward composition of his body. What you have done, both not offended me: Nor other fattifaction doe I crave,

But onely with your patience, that we may Take of your Wine, and fee what Cates you have, For Souldiers flomacks alwayes ferue them well. Count With all my heart, and thinke me honored, To feast so great a Warrior in my House.

> Enter Richard Plantagenet, Warrock, Somerfet, Poole, and others.

Torke. Great Lords and Gentlemen, What meanes this filence? Dare no man answer in a Case of Truth?

Suff. Within the Temple Hall we were too lowd, The Garden here is more convenient

Tak. Then say at once, if I maintain'd the Truth: Or elfe was wrangling Somerfet in th'error? Suff. Falth I have beene a Truant in the Law, And never yet could frame my will to it, And therefore frame the Law vnto my will.

Som. Iudge you, my Lord of Warwicke, then be-(Weent Vs.

w r. Berween two Hawks, which flyes the higher pitch, Between two Dogs, which hath the deeper mouth, Between two Blades, which beares the better temper, Between two Hories, which doth beare him bell. Between two Girles, which hath the metryest eye, I have perhaps some shallow spirit of Judgement : But in these nice sharpe Quillets of the Law, Good faith I am no wifer then a Daw, Tork. Tut, tut, here it a mannerly forbearance: The truth appeares to naked on my fide, That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well appartell'd, So cleare, fo thining, and fo evidens, That it will glimmer through a blind-mans eye.

Tork. Since you are tongue-ty'd, and so loth to speake, In dumbe significants proclayme your thoughts: Let him that is a true-borne Gentleman, And stands upon the honor of his birth, If he suppose that I have pleaded truth, From off this Bryer pluck a white Role with me.

Som. Let him that is no Coward, nor no Flatterer, But dere maintaine the partie of the truth, Pluck a red Role from off this Thorne with me. War. I love no Colours: and without all colous Of base infinuating flatterie, I pluck this white Role with Plantagenet.

Suff. I pluck this red Role, with young Somerfer, And fay withall, I thinke he held the right.

Farmon. Stay Lords and Gentlemen, and pluck no more Till you conclude, that he vpon whose side The fewest Roses are cropt from the Tree, Shall yeeld the other in the right opinion.

Sons, Good Mafter Vernon, it is well obie fed : If I have fewell, I subscribe in Glence.

Tork. And I. Vornan. Then for the truth, and plainnesse of the Case, I pluck this pale and Maiden Blossorne here, Giving my Verdict on the white Role side. Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off, Leaft bleeding, you doe paint the white Rose red, And fall on my fide fo against your will.

Vernon. If I,my Lord, for my opinion bleed, Opinion shall be Surgeon to my hurs, And keepe me on the fide where still I am, Som: Well, well, come on, who elfe?

Larger, Vn

Leager. Valetie my Studie and my Bookes be folle, The argument you held, was wrong in you; In figne whereof, I pluck a white P. ofe too. Torks. Now Some fee, where is your argument?

Som. Here in my Scabbard, medicating, that Shall dye your white Role in a bloody red. York Meane time your cheeks do counterfeit our Roles:

For pale they looke with feare, as witneffing
The truth on our fide.

Som. No Plantagenet:

Tis not for feare, but anger, that thy cheekes Blush for pure thane, to counterfeit our Roses, And yet thy tongue will not conselle thy error,

Torke. Hath not thy Role a Canker, Somerfee?

Som. Hath not thy Role a Thorne, Plantagenet?

Torke. I, starpe and piercing to maintaine his truth,

Whiles thy consuming Canker eates his falsehood.

Som. Well, He find friends to weare my bleeding Roles,

That shall maintaine what I have faid is true,

That shall maintaine what I have said is true, Where sails Plantageout dare not be seene.

Torke. Now by this Maiden Bloffome in my hand, I scorne thee and thy fashion, pecuish Boy.

Suff. Turne not thy feomes this way, Plantagenet. Yorke, Prowd Poole, I will, and feome both him and thee.

Suff. He turne my part thereof into thy throat, Som. Awdy, away, good William de la Poole,
We grace the Yeoman, by converfing with him.
Warm. Now by Gods will thou wrong 'thim, Somerfet:
His Grandfather was Lyonel Duke'of Clarence,
Third Sonne to the third Edward King of England:
Spring Creftleffe Yeomen from to deepe a Roor?
Torke. He bestes him on the place's Priviledge,

Or durst not for his craven heart say thus,

Som. By him that made me, He maintaine my words
On any Plot of Ground in Christendome.
Was not thy Father, Richard, Earle of Cambridge,
For Treason executed in our late Kings dayes:
And by his Treason, stand those thou attainted,
Corrupted, and exempt from ancient Gentry.
His Trespas yee lives guiltie in thy blood,

And till thou be rettor'd, thou art's Yeoman,
Torke. My Father was strached, not strainted,
Condemn'd to dye for Treason, but no Traytor;
And that He proue on better men then Somerfer,
Wereg owing time once ripened to my will.
For your partaker Poele, and you your selfe,
He note you in my Booke of Memorie,
To scourge you for this apprehension;
Looker of well and so you are well ware'd.

Looke to it well, and fay you are well warn'd.

Som. Ali, thou thalt finde vs ready for thee still a
And know vs by these Colours for thy Foes,
For these my friends in spight of thee shall we are.

Torke. And by my Soule, this pale and angry Rose, As Cognizance of my blood-drinking hate, Will I for euer, and my Faction weare, Vattil it with me to my Graue, Or flourish to the height of my Degree.

Suff. Goo forward, and be chooked with thy ambition:
And to farwell, virill I meet thee next.

Som. Have with thee Poole: Farwell ambitious Re-thard. Exit.

Torke. How I am brau'd, and mult perforce endure

Warm. This blor that they object against your House, Shall be whipt out in the next Parliament, Call'd for the Truce of Winchester and Clausester:
And if thou be not then created Tonke,
I will not live to be accounted Wominity.
Meanetime, in figuall of my love to thee,
Againft prowd Somerfer, and William Poole,
Will I upon thy partie weare this Rose.
And here I prophecies this brawle to day,
Gnowne to this faction in the Temple Garden,
Shall send betweene the Red-Rose and the White,
A thousand Soules to Death and deadly Night
Torke. Good Master Vernon, I am bound to you,
That you on my behalfe still will I weare the same,
Lamper. And so will I.
Torke. Thankes gentle.

Torke. Thankes gentle.

Come, let vs foure to Dinner: I dere fay.

This Quartell will drinke Blood another day.

Execute.

Exter Mortimer, brought in a Chayre, and Injors.

Mort. Kind Kcepers of my weake decaying Age, Lee dying Mortaner here rest himselfe. Even like a man new haled from the Wrack. So fare my Limbes with long Imprisonment: And these gray Locks, the Pursuisants of death, Neffer-like aged, in an Age of Care, Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer. These Eyes, like Lampes, whose wasting Oyle is spent, Waxe dimme, as drawing to their Exigent. Weake Shoulders, ouer-borne with burthening Griefe. And pyth-leffe Armes, like to a withered Vine, That droupes his sappedesse Branches en the ground. Yet are thefe Feet, whofe frength-leffe flay is pumme, (Vnable to Support this Lumpe of Clay) Swift-winged with defire to get a Graue, As witting I no other comfort have. But tell me, Kceper, will my Nephew come?

Keeper. Richard Plantagemen, my Lord, will come: We fent vnto the Temple, vnto his Chamber,

And answer was return'd, that he will come.

More. Enough: my Soule shall then be fatisfied.
Poore Gentleman, his wrong doth equal mine.
Since Horry Monmouth first began to reigne,
Retore whose Glory I was great in Armes,
This loathsome sequestration have I had;
And even since then, hath Riebard beene obscur'd,
Depriv'd of Honor and Inheritance.
But now, the Arbitrator of Despaires,
Tust Death, kinde Vmpire of mens miseries,
With sweet enlargement doth dismisseme hence:
I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter Richard.

Keeper. My Lord, your louing Nephew now is come.

Mor. Richard Plantagenes, my friend. is he come?

Ruch. I, Noble Vnckle, thus ignobly vs'd,

Your Nephew, late despited Richard, comes.

More. Direct mine Armes, I may embrace his Neck, And in his Bosom spend my latter gaspe.

Ohtell me when my Lippes doe touch his Cheekes, That I may kindly give one fainting Kisse.

And now declare sweet Stem from Torkes great Stock, Why didst thousay of late thou wert despised?

Rich. First

Exit.

Rich First leane thine aged Back against mine Arme, And in that ease, lie tell thee my Disease. This day in argument vpon a Case, Some words there grew'twist Samerfer and me : Among which tearmes, he vs'd his lauish rongue, And did vpbrayd me with my Fothers death; Which obloquie for barres before my tongue, Elfe with the like I had requited him.
Therefore good Vnckie, for my Fathers fake, In honor of a true Plantagenee, And for Alliance lake, declare the raule My Father, Earle of Cambridge, lost his Head.

More. That cause (faire Nephew) that imprison'd me, And hath detayn'd me all my flowring Youth, Within a loathfome Dungeon, there to pyne, Was curfed Instrument of his decease.

Rich. Discouer more at large what cause that was,

For I am ignorant, and cannot guesse
More. I will, if that my fading breath permit, And Death approach not, ere my Tale be done. Henry the Fourth, Grandfather to this King, Depos'd his Nephew Richard, Edwards Sonne, The first begotten, and the lawfull Herre Of Edward King, the Third of that Descent. During whose Reigne, the Percus of the North, Finding his Viurpation most vaiust. Endeuour'd my advancement to the Throne. The resion mou'd thefe Warlike Lords to this, Was, for that (young Richard thus remou'd; Leauing no Heire begotten of his Body) I was the next by Birth and Parentage: For by my Mother. I deriued am From Lionel Duke of Clarence, third Soons To King Edward the Third; whereas hee, from John of Gaune doth bring his Pedigree, Being but fourth of that Heroick Lyne. But marke: as in this haughtle great attempt, They laboured, to plant the rightfull Heire, I lost my Libertie, and they their Lives. Long after this, when Hemy the Fift (Succeeding his Father Bulling brooke) did reigne; Thy Father, Earle of Cambridge, then deriu'd From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of Yorke, Marrying my Sifter, that thy Mother was; Againe, in pitty of my hard diffreste, Leuied an Army, weening to redeeme, And have install'd me in the Disdeme: But as the rest, so fell that Noble Earle, And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers, In whom the Title rested, were suppress.

Rich. Of which, my Lord, your Honor is the laft. Mort. True; and thou feeft, that I no Issue have, And that my fainting words doe warrant death: Thou art my Heire; the reft, I wish thee gather : But yet be wary in thy studious care.

Rech. Thy graue admonishments preusyle with mer But yet me thinkes, my Fathers execution

Was nothing leffe then bloody Tyranny. Mors. With filence, Nephew, be thou pollitick, Strong fixed is the House of Lancaster. And like a Mountaine, not to be remou'd. But now thy Vnckle is remouing hence, As Princes doe their Courts, when they are cloy'd With long continuance in a fetled place.

Rich.O Vuckle, would fome part of my young yeeres

Might but redeeme the paffage of your Age.

More. Thou do'ft then wrong me, as y flaughtererdoth, Which glueth many Wounds, when one will kill. Mourne not, except thou for row for my good, Onely give order for my Funerall. And to farewell, and faire be all thy hopes And prosperous be thy Life in Peace and Warre. Rich. And Peace, no Warre, befall thy parting Soule. In Prison haft thou spent a Pilgrimage, And like a Hermite over-past thy dayes. Well, I will locke his Councell in my Breft, And what I doe imagine, let that reft. Keepers convey him hence, and I my felle Will fee his Buryall better then his Life, Ent Here dyes the duskie Torch of Mortimer, Chooke with Ambition of the meaner fort, And for those Wrongs, those butter Injuries, Which Somerfer hath offer'd to my House, I doubt not, but with Honor to redreffe. And therefore hafte I to the Parliament, Eyther to be reflored to my Blood,

Scena Prima. Actus Ternus.

Or make my will th'aduantage of my good.

Flourish. Enter King, Exeter, Closter, Winchester, Warwick, Somerfet, Suffolk, Richard Plantagenet Gloster offers toput up a Bill: Winchefter frachesic terres it. Winch. Com'ft thou with deepe premeditated Lines? With written Pamphlets, fludiously deuis'd? Humfrey of Glofter, if thou canft accuse, Or ought intend'ft to lay vnto my charge, Doe it without invention, suddenly, As I with fudden, and extemporall speech, Purpose to answer what thou canst obiect. Glo. Presumptuous Priest, this place comands my patièce, Or thou should'st finde thou hast dis-honor'd me. Thinke not, although in Writing I prefert'd The manner of thy vile outragious Crymes, That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able Verbaim to rehearle the Methode of my Pennc. No Prelace, such is thy audacious wickednesse, Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentious prancks, As very Infants prattle of thy pride. Thou art a most permitious V surer, Froward by nature, Enemie to Peace, Lascinious, wanton, more then well beseemes A man of thy Profession, and Degree. And for thy Trecherie, what's more manifelt? In that thou layd'it a Trap tomake my Life, As well at London Bridge, as at the Tower, Belide, I feare me, if thy thoughts were lifted, The King, thy Souersigne, is not quite exempt From enuious mallice of thy swelling heart. Winch. Glofter. I doe defie thee. Lords vouchsafe To give me hearing what I shall reply. If I were couctous, ambitious, or peruerle, As he will have me: how am I so poote? Or how haps it, I feeke not to aduance Or rayle my felfe? but keepe my wonted Calling. And for Diffention, who preferresh Peace More then I doe? except I be prouok'd. No, my good Lords, it is not that offends, It is not that, that hath incens'd the Duke: It is because no one should fwzy but hee, No one, but hee, should be about the King; And that engenders Thunder in his breaft,

And

And makes him rore these Accusations forth But he thall know I am as good.

Glass. As good?

Thou Bastard of my Grandfather.
wisch. 1, Lordly Siz: for what are you, I pray, But one imperious in anothers Throne?

Gloff. Am I not Protector, fawcie Prieft? Wench. And am not I a Prelate of the Church? Glost. Yes, as an Out-law in a Castle keepen,

And rieth it, to patronage his Theft.

Winch. Vorcuerent Glocefler.

Gloss. Thou are reverent,

Touching thy Spirinrall Punction, not thy Life. Winch. Rome shall remedie this.

Warw. Roame thither then.

My Lord, it were your durie to forbeare. Som. I, see the Bishop be not over-borne: Methinkes my Lord should be Religious,

And know the Office that belongs to fuch. Warm. Me thinkes his Lordship should be humbler, It fitteth not a Prelate so to plead.

Som. Yes, when his holy State is toucht fo necre. Warw. State holy, or vnhallow'd, what of that?

Is not his Grace Protector to the King? Rich. Plantagenet I see must hold his tongue, Least it be said, Speake Sirrha when you should : Must your bold Verdict entertalke with Lords?

Else would I have a fling at Winchester.

King. Vinches of Gloster, and of Winchester, The speciall Warrh-men of our English Weale, I would preuzyie, if Prayers might preuayle, To ioyne your hearts in love and amitie. Oh, what a Scandall is it to our Crowne, That two fuch Noble Peeres as ye should intre? Beleeve me, Lords, my tender yeeres can tell, Civill diffention is a viperous Worme, That gnawes the Bowels of the Common-wealth

A noyse within, Downe with the Tawny-Coass.

King. What tumult's this? Ware. An Vprore, I dare warrant, Begun through malice of the Bishops men. A noyse againe, Stones, Stones.

Enter Maior.

Major. Oh my good Lords, and vertuous Henry, Pitty the Citie of London, pitty vs: The Bilhop, and the Duke of Gloffers men, Forbidden late to earry any Weapon, Have fill'd their Pockets full of peeble flones; And banding themselves in contrary parts, Doe pelt so fast at one anothers Page, That many have their giddy braynes knockt out: Our Windowes are broke downe in enery Street, And we for feare, compell'd to fhut our Shops.

Enter in skirmift with bloody Pates. King. We charge you, on allegeance to our felfe, To hold your flaughtring hands, and keepe the Pease: Pray' Vackle Gloffer mittigate this ftrife.

1. Sormer. Nay, if we be forbidden Stones, weele fall to it with our Teeth.

2. Sarung. Doe what ye dare, we are as resolute. Skirmish againe.

Gloft. You of my household, leave this peeuish broyle, And let this vnaceultom'd fight afide.

3. Sers. My Lord, we know your Grace to be a man Just, and vpright; and for your Royall Birth, Inferior to none, but to his Maseffie: And ere that we will fuffer fuch a Prince, So kinde a Father of the Common-vicale, To be difgraced by an Inke-horne Mace, Wee and our Wlues and Children all will fight, And have our bodyes flaughered by thy foet. 1 Some I and the very parings of our Nayles Shall pitch a Field when we are dead.

Begin of aire.

Gloft. Stay Stay, I fay: And if you love me, as you fay you doe, Let me perswade you to forbeare a while.

King. Oh, how thus discord doch efflict my Soule. Can you,my Lord of Winchester, behold My lighes and teares, and will not once relent e Who should be pittifull, if you be not ? Or who should study to preferre & Peace, If holy Church-men take delight in broyles?

Warn. Yeeld my Lord Protector, yeeld Winchester, Except you meane with obflinate repulse To flay your Soueraigne, and destroy the Realme. You fee what Mischiele, and what Murther too, Hath beene enacted through your enmine: Then be at peace except ye thirlf for blood.

Wrich. He shall submit, or I will never yeeld. Gloff Compassion on the King commands one storpe, Or I would see his heart out, ere the Priest

Should ever get that priviledge of me. Ware. Behold my Lord of Winchester, the Duke Hath banisht moodie discontented fury, As by his smoothed Brower is doth appeares Why looke you fill to fterne, and tragical?

Gloft. Here Winebester, I offer thee my Hand. King. Fie Vnekle Beauford, I have heard you preach, That Mallice was a great and grieuous finne: And will not you maintaine the thing you teach? But proue a chiefe offendor in the fame.

Warw. Sweet King: the Bishop hath a kindly gyrd: For shame my Lord of Winchester relent; What, shall a Child instruct you what to doe? Winch. Well, Duke of Glofter, I will yeeld to thee

Loue for thy Loue, and Hand for Hand I give. Gloft. Lbut I feare me with a hollow Heart. See here my Friends and louing Countreymen, This token ferueth for a Flagge of Truce, Betwixt our sclues, and all our followers: So helpe me God, as I diffemble not.

Winch. So helpe me God, as I intend it not. King. Oh louing Vnckle, kinde Duke of Gloster, Haw joyfull am I made by this Contract, Away my Masters, trouble vs no more, But joyne in friendship, as your Lords have done,

1. Seru. Content, lle to the Surgeons. 2. Seru. And so will I.

3. Serv. And I will see what Physick the Teverne affords.

Worw. Accept this Scrowle, most gracious Soucraigne, Which in the Right of Richard Planingenet, We doe exhibite to your Maiellie. Gb. Well vrg'd, my Lord of Warwick: for fweet Prince,

And if your Grace marke every circumstance, You have great reason to doe Richard right, Especially for those occasions

At Elram Place I told your Maiestie.

Kup. And

King. And those occasions, Vnckle, were of force: Therefore my louing Lords, our pleafure is, That Richard be reftored to his Blood. IVara. Let Rubard be restored to his Blood,

So thall his Fathers wrongs be recompene's Winch. As will the reft, fo willeth Winchester. Korg. If Richard will be true not that all alone,

But all the whole Inheritance I give, That doih belong voto the House of Torke, From whence you spring, by Lineall Descent.

Rich. Thy humble feruant vowes obedience, And humble feruice, till the point of death.

King Stoope then, and fet your Knee against my Foot, And in reguerdon of that durie done, I gyrt thee with the valiant Sword of Torke. Rile Richard, like a true Plantagenet,

And rife created Princely Duke of Torke Rich. And so thrive Richard, as thy foes may fall,

And as my dutic (prings, so perish they, That grudge one thought against your Maiesty.

AR. Welcome high Prince, the mighty Duke of Torke. Som. Perish base Prince, ignoble Duke of Tores. Glost. Now will it best ausile your Maiestie, To crosse the Seas, and to be Crown'd in France a The presence of a King engenders love Amongsthis Subiects, and his loyall Friends, As It dif-animates his Enemies.

King. When Glofter fayes the word, King Henry goes, For friendly counfaile cuts off many Foes.

Gloft. Your Ships alreadie are in readineffe. Sense Flourist. Exempt.

Menes Exerer. Exet. I, we may march in England, or in France, Not feeing what is likely to enfue: This late diffention growne betwixt the Peeres, Burnes under fained afhes of forg'd loue, And will at last breake out into a flame, As festred members tot but by degree, Till bones and fleth and finewes fall away. So will this base and envious discord breed. And now I feare that fatall Prophecie, Which in the time of Henry, nam'd the Fift, Was in the mouth of every fucking Babe, That Henry borne at Monmouth should winne all, And Henry borne at Windfor, loofe all: Which is so plaine, that Exeter doth with, His dayes may finish, ere that haplesse time.

Scana Secunda.

Enter Pacell difquis'd, with foure Souldiers with Sacks upon short backs.
Pacell. These are the Citie Gates, the Gates of Roan, Through which our Pollicy must make a breach. Take heed, be wary how you place your words, Talke like the vulgar fort of Market men, That come to gather Money for their Corne. If we have entrance, as I hope we shall, And that we finde the flouthfull Watch but weake, lle by a figne give notice to our friends, That Charles the Dolphin may encounter them.

Souldier. Our Sacks thall be a meane to fack the City And we be Lords and Rulers over Roan, Therefore wee'le knock.
Wasch, Chela. Knock,

Pucell. Peafauns la pouvre gens de Fraunce, Poore Market folkes that come to feil their Corne. Watch. Enter, goe in, the Market Bell is rung.

Pucell. Now Roan, He shake thy Bulwarkes to the ground.

Enter Charles, Baftard, Alanfon. Charles. Saint Denme bleffe this happy Stratagome, And once againe wee'le sleepe secure in Roan.

Baftard. Here entred Pucell, and her Practifants: Now the is there, how will the specifie? Here is the best and safest passage in.

Reig. By thrusting out a Torch from yonder Tower, Which once discern d, shewes that her meaning is, No way to that (for weaknesse) which she entred.

Enser Pacell on the top, thrasting out a

Torch burning.

Pucell. Behold, this is the happy Wedding Torch, That toyneth Roan / nto her Countreymen, But butning fatall to the Talbonites

Bastard See Noble Charles the Beacon of our friend,

The burning Torch in yonder Turret flands.
(barler. Now shine it like a Commet of Revenge, A Prophet to the fall of all our Foes.

Reig. Deferre no time, delayes baue dangerous ends, Enter and cry, the Dolphin, presently, And then doe execution on the Watch. Alerum.

An Alaram. Taibot in an Exertion. Talb. France, thou shalt rue this Treason with thy teates, If Talbos but survive thy Trecherie. Pucell that Witch, that damned Sorceresse, Hath wrought this Hellish Mischiefe vnawares, That hardly we escap't the Pride of France. Ezis. An Alarum: Excursions. Bedford brought in sicke in a Charge

Enter Talbot and Burgonie without : within, Pucell, Charles, Bast and and Reigneir on the stalls. Pacell. God morrow Gallants, want ye Corn for Bread? I thinke the Duke of Burgonie will fast, Before heele buy againe at fuch a rate. Twas full of Darnell 1 doe you like the tafte?

Burg. Scoffe on vile Frend, and shamelesse Curtizan, I trust ere long to chooke thee with thine owne, And make thee curse the Haruest of that Come. Charles. Your Grace may starue (perhaps) before that Bedf. Oh let no words, but deedes, reuenge this Tresfon.

Pacell. What will you doe, good gray-beard? Breake a Launce, and runne a-Tile at Death, Withio a Chayre.

Talb. Foule Frend of France, and Hag of all despight, Incompals'd with thy luftfull Paramours, Becomes it thee to tauns his vapent Age, And twit with Cowardife a man halfe dead? Damfell, He have a bowt with you againe, Or elfe let Telbos perish with this shame.

Pacell. Are ye lo hot, Sir: yet Pacell hold thy peace, If Telbor doc but Thunder, Raine will follow

They whifter together in counfell.
God speed the Parliament: who shall be the Speaker ?

The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Talb. Dare yee come forth, and meet va in the field? Pucell. Belike your Lordship takes vs then for fooles, To try if that our owne be outs, or no.

Talb. I speake not to that tayling Hecare, But vnto thee Alanfon, and the telt. Will ye, like Souldiors, come and fight le out?

Alans. Seignior no.
Talb. Seignior hang: base Mulerers of France, L ke Pelant foot-Boyes doe they keepe the Walls, And date not take vp Armes, like Centlemen.

Pucell. Away Captaines, let's get vs from the Walls, For Talber meanes no goodnelle by his Lookes. God b'uy my Lord, we came but to tell you That wee are here. Exenut from the Walls. Talb. And there will we be too, ere it be long. Or elle reproach be Talbors grestelt fame. Vow Burgonie, by honor of thy House, Pricks on by publike Wrongs fustain'd in France,

Either to get the Towne againe, or dye. And I, as fure as English Henry lives, And as his Father here was Conqueror As fure es In this late betrayed Towne, Great Cordelions Heart was buryed; So fire I sweare, to get the Towne, or dye.

Burg. My Vowes are equall partners with thy Talb. But ere we gor, regard this dying Prince. The valiant Duke of Bedford : Come my Lord, We will bestow you in some better place, Fitter for ficknesse, and for crafie age.

Bodf. Lord Taibor, doe not lo dishonour me : Here will I fit, before the Walls of Roan, And will be partner of your wezle or woe.

Burg. Coursgious Bulford, let vs now perswade you Berg. Not to be gone from hence: for once I read, The Rout Pendragon, in his Litter fick Came to the field, and vanquished his foes. Me thinkes I should revive the Souldiors hearts,

Because I ever found them as my selfe. Talb. Vndannted spirit in a dying breast, Then be it fo: Heavens keepe old Bedford fafe. And now no more adoc, brane Burgonie, Der gather we out Forces out of hand,

And fet vpon our boafting Enemie.

An Alarum . Excussions Enter Sa loba Falflaffe, and a Captains.

Copr. Whither away Sir loba Falftaffe, in Such hafter Falft Whither away ? to faue my felfe by flight, We are like to have the overthrow agains.

Cape. White will you flye, and leave Lord Talbort Faig. I, all the Talbort in the World, to fave my life.

Copr. Cowardly Knight, ill forcune follow thee.

Retreat Excurpors. Pucel, Alarfon, and Charles flye.

Bedf. Now quiet Soule, depart when Heauen please, For I have seene our Enemies overthrow. What is the rrust or fliength of foolish man? They that of late were daring with their scoffes, Are glad and fame by flight to faue themfelues. Bedford fer and is carryed in by rue in bis Chaire.

An Alarum, Einer Talba, Buryour, and the reft

Tab. Loft, and recovered in a day againe, This is a double Honor, Burgons: Yet Heavens have glory for this Vidorie.

Burg. Warlike and Martiall Talber, Burgarde Insbrines thee in his heart, and there ereds Thy noble Deeds, 23 Valors Monuments.

Tall. Thanks gentle Duke: but where is Pucol worn? thinke her old Familiar is afleepe. Now where's the Baftards branes, and Charles his glikes What all amore? Roan hangs her head for griefe, That foch a valiant Company are fled. Now will we take some order in the Towne, Placing therein some expert Officers, And then depart to Parls, to the King, For there young Harry with his Nobles Ige.

Burg. What wills Lord Talber, pleaseth Burgonin.
Talb. But yet before we goe, let's not forget The Noble Duke of Bedford, late decess'd. Bux fee his Exequies fulfill'd in Rosn. A braver Souldier neuer couched I. sunce, A gentler Heart did neuer fway in Court But Kings and mightieft Potentates muft die, For that's the end of humane miferie.

Scana Tertia.

Emn Chales, Pofead, Alanfor, Pucil. Pucel Dismay not (Princes) at this accident, Nor grieue that Roan is fo recovered i Nor grieue that would rather corrosue, Care is no cure, but rather corrosue, For things that are not to be remedy Let fransike Talbet triumph for a while, And like a Peacock sweepe along his tayle, Wee'le pull his Plumes, and take away his Tragne, If Dolphin and the rest will be but rul'd.

Charles. We have been guided by thee hitberto, And of thy Cunning had no diffidence, One fudden Foyle shall neuer breed distrutt

Baftard. Search out thy wit for fecret pollicies, And we will make thee famous through the World. Alanf. Wee'le feethy Sessue in some holy place, And have thee reverenc's like a bleffed Saint,

Employ thee then, sweet Virgin, for our good.

Pacell. Then thus it must be, this doth land devise: By faire perswasions, mixt with sugred words, We will entice the Duke of Burgonie

To leave the Talber, and to follow va. Charles. I marry Sweeting, if we could doe that, France were no place for Homper Warriors, Nor should that Nation boast it so with vs.

But be estirped from our Provinces. Alens. Por ever should they be expuls'd from France, And not have Title of an Earledome here.

Purell. Your Honors thall perceive how I will worke, To bring this matter to the wished end.

Drumme founds a farre of. Hearke, by the found of Drumme you may perceive Their Powers are marching vnto Paris-ward. Here found an English March.

There goes the Talber, with his Colours (pred, And all the Troupes of English after him.

French

French March.

Now in the Rereward comes the Duke and hiss Fortune in fauor makes him lagge behinde, Summon a Patley, we will talke with him.

Charles. A Parley with the Duke of Burgonic.
Burg. Who craues a Parley with the Burgonic?
Pucell. The Princely Charles of France, thy Country-

Burg. What (ay'ft thou Charles? for I am marching hence.

Charles. Speake Purel, and enchaunt him with thy Pucel. Brave Burgonie, and oubted hope of France, Stay, let thy bumble Hand-maid speake to thec.

Bwg. Speake on, but be not over-tedious.

Puce B. Looke on thy Country, look on fertile France,
And fee the Cities and the Townes defact,
By wasting Ruine of the cruell Fot,
As lookes the Mother on her lowly Babe,
When Death doth close his tender-dying Eyes.
See, see the pining Maladie of France:
Behold the Wounds, the most vanarural Wounds,
Which thou thy selfe hast given her woful Brest.
Oh turne thy edged Sword another way,
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that helpe
One drop of Blood drawhe from thy Countries Bosome,
Should grieve thee more then streames of forraine gore.
Returne thee therefore with a floud of Terres,

And wash away thy Countries stayned Spots.

Burg. Either she hath bewitcht me with her words,

Or Nature makes me fuddenly relent. Pucell Befides, all French and France exclaimes on thee Doubting thy Bitth and lawfull Progenie. Who joyn'st thou with, but with a Lordly Nation, That will not truft thee, but for profits fake? When Talbot hath fet footing once in France, And fashion'd thee that Instrument of Ill, Who then, but English Heary, will be Lord, And thou be thrust out, like a Fugiture? Call we to minde, and marke but this for proofe: Was not the Duke of Orleance thy Foe? And was he not in England Prifoner? But when they heard he was thine Enemie. They fet him free, wishout his Ransome pay'd, In spight of Burgonie and all his friends, See then, thou fight' Ragainst thy Countreymen, And soyn'st with them will be thy flaughter-men. Come, come, returne; returne thou wandering Lord,

Charles and the rest will take thee in their armes.

2 sag. I am vanquished:
These haughtie wordes of hers
Have batt'red me like roaring Cannon-shot,
And made me almost yeeld vpon my knees.
Forgiue me Countrey, and sweet Countreymens:
And Lords accept this heartie kind embrace.
My Forces and my Power of Men are yours.
So farwell Talbot, lie no longer trust thee.

Puced. Done like a Frenchman : turne and turne a-

Charles. Welcome braue Duke, thy friendship makes vs fresh.

Ballard. And Joth beget new Courage in our Breaks.

Alans. Puccel hath brauely play'd her part in this, And doth descrue a Coronet of Gold.

Charles. Now leaves on, my Lords,
And loyne our Powers,
And feeke how we may prejudice the Foe.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter the King Gloucester, Winchester, Torke, Suffolke, Somerset Warmicke, Exeter: To them, with bis Souldsore, Talbot

Talb. My gracious Prince, and honorable Peeres, Hearing of your arrivall in this Realme, I have a while given Truce virto my Warres, To doe my dutie to my Soveraigne. In figne whereof, this Arme, that hath reclaym'd To your obedience, fiftie Fortreffes, Twelpe Ciries, and feuen walled Townes of fireight, Befide five hundred Prifoners of effecme; Less fall his Sword before your Highmeffe feet: And with fubmiffive loyaltie of heart Afcribes the Glory of his Conqueft got, First to my God, and next virto your Grace.

King Is this the Lord Talbot, Vnckle Gloncester, That hath so long beene telident in France?

Clost. Yes, if it please your Maiestie, my Liege.
King. Welcome braue Captaine, and victorious Lord.
When I was young (as yet I ain not old)
I doe remember how my Father said,
A stouter Champion neuer handled Sword.
Long since we were resolved of your truth,
Your faithfull service, and your toyle in Warre:
Yer neuer have you tasted our Reward,
Or beene reguerdon'd with so much as Thanks,
Because till now, we neuer saw your face.
Therefore stand vp, and for these good deferts,
We here create you Earle of Shrewsbury,
And in our Coronation take your place.

Senet, Flores Exempt.

Manet Vernon and Baffet,

Verm. Now Sir, to you that were so hot at Sea,
Disgracing of these Colours that I weare,
In honor of my Noble Lord of Yorke
Dar'st thou maintaine the former words thou spak's?

Baff. Yes Sir, as well as you dare parronage The envious barking of your fawere Tongue, Against my Lord the Duke of Somerset.

Uern. Sirths, thy Lord I honour as he is.

Baff. Why, what is he? as good a man as Terke.

Vern. Hearke ye: not for in witnesse take ye that.

Striker hom.

Eass. Villaine, thou knowest
The Law of Armes is such,
That who so drawes a Sword, this present death,
Or else this Blow should broach thy dearest Bloud.
But le vnto his Maiestie, and crave,
I may have libertie to venge this Wrong,
When thou shalt see, slemeet thee to thy cost.
Vern. Well miscreant, le be there as soone as you,
And after meete you, sooner then you would.

Exeun

Adus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter King, Glocefter, Winchester, Torke, Suffolke, Somerfer, H'armiche, Talbor, and Comernor Exerer Gla. Lord Bishop set the Crowne vpon his head. Win. God faue King Henry of that name the fint. Glo. Now Gouernour of Paris take your oath, That you elect no other King but him; Efteeme none Friends, but fuch as are his Friends, And none your Foes, but fuch as shall precend Mulicious practifes againft his State : This shall ye do, so helpe you righteous God.

Enser Felfraffe. Fal. My gracious Soueraigne, as I rode from Calice,

To haste voto your Coronation: A Letter was delivered to my hands.

Writ to your Grace, from th'Duke of Burgundy. Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgandy, and thee: I vow'd (base Knight) when I did meete the next, To teare the Garter from thy Crauena legge, Which I have done, because (vnworthily) Thou was't installed in that High Degree, Pardon me Princely Henry, and the reft : This Daftard, at the battell of Poidiers, When (but in all) I was fixe thousand frong, And that the French were almost ten to one, Before we met, or that a flroke was given, Like to a truftie Squire, did run away. In which affault, we loft twelve hundred men My felfe, and divers Gentlemen beside, Were there furpriz'd, and taken prisoners. Then judge (great Lords) if I have done amiffe: Or whether that fuch Cowards ought to weate This Ornsment of Knighthood, yes or no?

Glo. To fay the truth, this fact was infamous, And ill befreming any common man

Much more a Knight, a Captaine, and a Leader.
Tal. When first this Order was ordain'd my Lorde, Knights of the Garrer were of Noble birth; Valiant, and Vertuous, full of haughtie Courage, Such as were growne to credit by the warres: Not fearing Death, nor fhrinking for Diffreffe, But alwayes resolute, in most extrezines. He then, that is not furnish'd in this fort, Doth but vsurpe the Secred name of Knight, Prophaning this most Honourable Order, And should (If I were worthy to be judge) Be quite degraded, like a Hedge-borne Swaine, That doth presume to boss of Gentle blood.

K. Staine to thy Countrymen, thou hear'll thy doom: Be packing therefore, thou that was'ta knight s Henceforth we banish thee on paine of death. And now Lord Protector, view the Letter Sent from our Vnckle Duke of Burgundy.

Glo. What meanes his Grace, that he hath chaung'd his Stile? No more but plaine and bluntly ? (To the King.) Hath he forgot he is his Soueraigne? Or doth this churlish Superscription Pretend some alteration in good will? What's heere ? I bane upon afpeciall canfo, At owd with compossion of my Countries Eracle, Together with the pittifull complaints Office as your oppression funder upon,

And roya'd with Charles, she rightfull bing of France Omonstrous Treachery Canthis belo That in alliance, amity, and oathes, There should be found such falle differbling guile? King. What? doth my Vnckle Burgundy revole? Glo. He doth my Lord, and it become your foe. King. Inthat the world this Letter doth contained Glo lets the world, and all (my Lord) he writes King. Why iten Lord Talber there shal talk with him And grue him chasticement for this abufe. How fay you (my Lord) are you not content? Tal. Content, my Liege Yes But $ 1271 prevented, I should have begg'd I might have bene employd. King Then gather frength, and march voro hum Graight: Let him perceive how ill we brooke his Treston. And what offence it is to flout his Friends.

For faton your peruitions Fallion,

Tal I going Lord, in heart defiring Aill You may behold confusion of your fors Enter Vernon and Beffu.

Ver. Grant me the Combate, gracious Soveraigne. Baf. And me (my Lord) grant me the Combete 100 Torke. This is my Servant, beare him Noble Prince. Som. And this is mine (fweet Horry) fauour him.

King. Be patient Lords, and give them leave to speak. Say Gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaime, And wherefore crave you Combate? Or with whom Ver. With him (my Lord) for he harh done me wrong Baf. And I with him, for he hath done me wrong. King, What is that wrong, wheref you hoth complain

Firftlet me know, and then He answer you

Baf. Croffing the Sea, from England into France, This Fellow heere with envious carping tongue, Vpbraided me about the Rose I weare, Saying, the fanguine colour of the Leaves Did represent my Masters blushing cheekes i When Rubbornly he did repugne the truth, About a certaine question in the Law, Argu'd betwixt the Duke of Yorke, and him. With other vile and ignominious tearmes. In confucation of which rude reproach, And in defence of my Lords worthinesse, I crave the benefit of Law of Armes

Ver. And that is my petition (Noble Lord:) For though he feeme with forged queint concerte To fer a gloffe spon his bold intent, Yecknow (my Lord) I was prounk'd by him, And he first tooke exceptions at this badge, Pronouncing that the palenesse of this Flower, Bewray'd the faintnesse of my Mastera heart.

Torke. Will not this malice Somerfet be left?
Som. Your private grudge my Lord of York, will out,

Though ne're fo cumingly you fmother it. King. Good Lord, what madneffe rules in brainficke men, When for fo flight and friuolous a caufe, Such factious zmulations shall arise? Good Cofins both of Yorke and Somerfet, Quiet your felues (I pray) and be at peace.

Torke, Let this differetion field be tried by fight, And then your Highnesse shall command a Peace. Som. The quarrell toucheth none but vs alone, Betwirt our selves let vs decide it then. There is my pledge, accept it Somerfet. Ver. Nay, let ureft where it began at firft.

Bef.

Baff. Confirme it fo, mine honourable Lord.
Glo. Confirme it fo ? Confounded be your firste, And perish ye with your audacious prate Prefumptuous vallals, are you not ofham'd With this immodest clamorous outrage, To rrouble and disturbe the King, and Vs And you my Lords, me thinkes you do not well To beare with their peruerse Obiections : Much leffe to take occasion from their mouthes, Totalle a mutiny betwixt your felues, Let me perswade you take a better course.

Exa. It greeues his Highnesse, Good my Lords, be Friends.

King. Come hither you that would be Combatants Henceforth I charge you, 25 you love our favour, Quite to forget this Quarrell, and the cause. And you my Lords : Remember where we are, In France, amongst a fickle wavering Nation: If they perceyue diffention in our lookes, And that within our felues we difagree; How will their grudging flomackes be prouok'd To wilfull Disobedience, and Rebell? Beside, What infamy will there arise, When Forraigne Princes shall be certified, That for a toy, a thing of no regard, King Henries Pecres, and cheefe Nobility. Destroy'd themselves, and loft the Realme of France? Oh thinke vpon the Conquest of my Father, My render yeares, and let vs not forgoe That for a trifle, that was bought with blood. Let me be Vmper in this doubtfull ftrife : I fee no reason if I weare this Role, That any one should therefore be suspitious I more incline to Somerlet, than Yorke : Both are my kinfmen, and Iloue them both. As well they may upbray'd me with my Crowne, Because (forfooth) the King of Scots is Crown'd. But vour discretions better can perswade, Then I amable to inftruct or teach : And therefore, as we hither came in peace, So let vs fill continue peace, and loue. Cofin of Yorke, we inflitute your Grace To be out Regent in these parts of France: And good my Lord of Somerfer, vnite Your Troopes of horsemen, with his Bands of soote, And like true Subjects, fonnes of your Progenitors, Go cheerefully together, and digeft Your angry Choller on your Enemies.
Our Selle, my Lord Protector, and the reft, After some respit, will returne to Calice; From thence to England, where I hope ere long To be presented by your Victories, With Charles, Alanfon, and that Traiterous roue.

Exeunt Manet Torke, Warwick, Exeter, Vernon.

war. My Lord of Yorke, I promise you the King Prettily (me thought) did play the Orator.)

Torke. And so he did, but yet I like it not, in that he weares the badge of Somerset.

War. Tush, that was but his fancie, blame him not, I dare presume (sweet Prince) he thought no harme, Tork. And if I wish he did. But let it rest,

Other affayres must now be managed. Flourish. Manes Exeter.

Exer Well didft thou Richard to Suppresse thy voice: For had the passions of thy heart burst out, I feare we should have seene decipher'd there Morerancorous spight, more furious raging broyles, Then yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd: But howfoere, no simple man that fees This jarring discord of Nobilitie, This shouldering of each other in the Court, This factious bandying of their Fauoutker, But that it doth prefage fome ill event. Tis much, when Scepters are in Childrens hands: But more, when Enuy breeds vakinde devision. There comes the ruine, there begins confusion.

> Enter Talbot with Trumpe and Drumme, before Burdeaux.

Talb. Go to the Gates of Burdeaux Trumpeter. Summon their Generall vnto the Wall.

Enter Generall aloft. English John Talbot (Captaines) call you forth, Servant in Armes to Harry King of England, And thus he would. Open your Citte Gates, Be humble to vs, call my Souersigne yours, And do him homage as obedient Subieas, And He withdraw me, and my bloody power. But if you frowne upon this proffer'd Peace, You tempt the fury of my three attendants Leane Famine, quartering Steele, and climbing Fire, Who in a moment, eetien with the earth, Shall lay your stately, and ayre-brauing Towers,

If you for take the offer of their love.

Cap. Thou ominous and fearefull Owle of death. Our Nations rerror, and their bloody fcourge, The period of thy Tyranny approacheth. On vs thou canst not enter but by death: For I protest we are well fortified, And strong enough to issue out and fight. If thou tetire, the Dolphin well appointed. Stands with the snares of Warre to tangle thee. On either hand thee, there are squadrons pircht, To well thee from the liberty of Flight; And no way canft thou turne thee for redrelle, But death doth front thee with apparant spoyle, And pale definiction meets thee in the face i Ten thousand French have take the Sacrament, To syue their dangerous Artillerie Vpon no Christian soule but English Telbos: Loe, there thou flands a breathing valiant man Of an invincible vnconquer'd spirit: This is the lateft Glorie of thy praise, That I thy enemy dew thee withall:
For erethe Glaffe that now begins to runne, Finish the processe of his sandy houre, These eyes that see thee now well coloured, Shall fee thee withered, bloody, pale, and dead. Drimafare off.

Harke, harke, the Dolphins drumme, a warning bell. Sings heavy Mulicke to thy timorous foule, And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

Tul. He Fables not, I heare the enemie: Out tome light Horsemen, and peruse their Wings. O negligent and heedlesse Discipline, How are we park'd and bounded in a pale? A little Heard of Englands timorous Deere, Maz'd with a yelping kennell of French Curres.
If we be English Deere, be then in blood,
Not Rescall-like to sall downe with a pinch, But rather moodie mad : And desperate Stagges,

Turne

Turne on the bloody Hounds with heads of Scoole, And make the Cowards fland aloofe at bay i Sell every man his life as decre as mine, And they shall finde deere Deere of vs my Friends. God, end S. George, Talbor and Englands right, Prosper our Colons in this dangerous figlit.

> Euror a Majinger that meets Torke. Error Torke with Trumpes, and many Soldiers.

Torky. Are not the speedy scouts return'd againe, That dog'd the mighty Army of the Dolphin?

Melf. They are resulted my Lord, and give it out, That he is march'd to Burdeaux with his power To fight with Talber as he march'd along. By your espyals were discourred Two mightier Troopes then that the Dolphin led, Which loyn'd with him, and made their march for (Burdeaux

Torke. A plugue vpon that Villaine Somerlet, That they delayes my promifed supply Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege. Renowned Talber doth expect my zyde, And I am lowted by a Traitor Villaine, And cannot helps the noble Cheualier: God comfort him in this necessity: If he miscarry, farewell Warres in France,

Enter another Melfenger. s. Mef. Thou Princely Leader of our English ftrength, Never fo needfull on the earth of France, Sporre to the rescue of the Noble Talbot, Who now is girdled with a waste of Iron, And hem'd about with grim destruction To Burdeaux warlike Duke, to Burdeaux Yorke, Elfe farwell Talbor, Prance, and Englands honor.

Torke. O God, that Sometiet who in proud heart Doth flop my Cornets, were in Talbors place, So frould wee lave a valiant Geneleman, By forfeyting a Treutor, and a Coward : Mad ire, and wrathfull fury makes me weepe, That thus we dye, while remisse Traitors scepe.

Mef. O lend fome fuccour to the diffreft Lord Torke. He dies, we loofe: I breake my waslike words We mourne, France smiles : We loofe, they dayly get,

All long of this vile Traitor Somerfer.

Mef. Then God take mercy on brave Tallors foule, And on his Sonne yong labr, who two houres face, I met in trauaile towardois warlike Fasher; This feuen yeeres did not Talbos fee his sonne, And now they meete where both their lines are done.

Torke. Alas, what ioy shall noble Talbu have, To bid his yong some vielcome to his Grove: Away, vexation almost stoppes my breath. That fundred friends greete in the houre of death, Lucie farewell, no more my fortune can. But cutle the caule I cannot ayde the man. Maine, Aloys, Foreiers, and Toures, are wonne away, Long all of Samerfer, and his delay. Ezu

Mef. Thus while the Vulture of fedition, Feeder in the bolome of fuch great Commanders, Skeping neglection doth betray to loffe : The Conquest of our fearle-rold Conqueror, That ever-living man of Memorie, Howie the fift: Whiles they each other croffe, Liues, Honours, Lands, and all, hurrie to lolle.

Emer Semerfor was bis Armis.

Son. It is too law, I cannot ked them now ! This expedition was by Yorky and Talbon, Too rashly plotted. All our generall force, Might with a fally of the very Towor Be buckled with the over-during Talles Hath fullied all his gloffe of former Honor By this vabeedfull, desperate, wilde adventure t Toks fer him on to fight, and dye in frame, That Tables deed, great Tarks might beare the name.

Cap. Herre is his Milliam Lurte, who with me Set from our orc-matcht forces forth for syde.

Same How now Six Welliams, whether were you less? La. Whether my Lord, from bought & fold L. Talas, Who ring'd about with bold advertise, Crics out for noble Yorke and Somerfes, To beate affayling death from his weake Regions. And whiles the honourable Captains there Drops bloody fwer from his warre-westled limbes. And in advantage lingting lookes for refere. You his false hopes, the trust of Englands honor, Keepe off aloose with worthlesseemulation: Let not your private discord keepe away The levied fuceours that should lend him syde, Whilehe renowned Noble Gondeman Yould up his life vato a world of oddes. Oriennee the Baftard, Charles, Burgendie, Alarfen, Regnard, competic him work, And Talbes perifherh by your default

Sam, Yorke fer himon, Yorke should have fent him

syde.

Luc. And Yorke as fast vpon your Grace excluirous," Swearing that you with-hold his leuied boast, Collected for this expidition.

Som. York lyes: He might have lent, & had the Horles lowe him little Dutie, and leffe Loue,

And take foule frome to favne on him by fending. Lu. The fraud of England, nor the force of France, Hark now intrapt the Noble-minded Talbu: Never to England shall he beare his life,

But dies betraid to fortune by your finite.

Som. Come go, I will dispatch the Horsemen firant Within fixe houres, they will be at his syde.

Lu. Too late comes rescue, he is tane or flaine, For flye he could not, if he would have fled: And flye would Talber never though he might. Sem. If he be deed, brave Talbor then adieu

Lu. His Fame lives in the world . His Shame in you

Enter Talba and bis Some.

Tal. O yong labe Tolber, I did fend for there To seconthee in Aratagems of Warre, That Talbers name might be in the ereviu'c. When saplesse Age, and weake vnable limbes Should bring thy Father to his drooping Chaire. But Omalignant and ill-boading Starres. Now thou art come vnto a Feast of death, A terrible and vosvoyded danger : Therefore deere Boy, mount on my swiftest harfe, And Ile direct thee how thou shalt escape By sodzinedight. Come, dally not, be gone. Jobn. Is my name Talbar? and am I your Sonnt?

Sim!

And shall I flye? O, if you love my Mother, Dishonor not her Honorable Name, To make a Bastard, and a Slave of me: The World will say, he is not Taibus blood, That basely sted, when Noble Taibus stood.

That befely fled, when Noble Talke: flood,
Talk. Flye, to reuenge my death, if I be flaine.
Iohn. He that flyes fo, will no re returne againe.
Talk. If we both flay, we both are fore to dye.
Iohn. Then let me flay, and Father doe you flye:
Your losse is great, so your regard should be;
My worth vaknowne, no losse is knowne in me.
Vyon my death, the French can little boast;
Inyours they will, in you all hopes are lost.
Flight cennot stayne the Honor you have wonne,
But mine it will, that no Exploit have done
You fled for Vantage, cuery one will sweare:
But if I bow, they'le say it was for seare.
There is no hope that ever I will flay,
If the first howre I strinke and run away:
Here on my knee I begge Mortalitie,
Rather then Life, preserved with Insamle.

Talb. Shall all thy Mothers hopes lye in one Tombe? Ishm. I rather then lie shame my Mothers Wombe. Talb. Vpon my Blessing I command thee goe. Ishm. To sight I will, but not to slye the Foe. Talb. Part of thy Father may be saud in thee. Ishm. No part of him, but will be shame in mee. Talb. Thou never hads Renowne, nor canst not lose is, Ishm. Yes, your renowned Name: shall slight abuse it? Talb. Thy Fathers charge that cleare thee from y staine. Ishm. You cannot witnesse for me, being slaine.

If Death be so apparant, then both slye.

Talb. And leave my followers here to fight and dye # My Age was never tainted with fuch fhame.

Tobo. And shall my Youth be guiltie of such blame?
No more can i be severed from your side,
Then can your selfe, you felse in twaine divide:
Stay, goe, doe what you will, the like doe!;
For live! will not, if my Father dye.

Talb. Then here I take my leaue of thee, faire Some, Borne to eclipfe thy Life this afternoone:
Come, fide by fide, together live and dye,
And Soule with Soule from France to Heaven flye. Exis.

Alarum: Excursions, wherein Talbots Sound is borner'd about, and Talbot rescues him.

Talb. Saint George, and Victory; fight Souldiers, fight:
The Regent hath with Talbot broken is word,
And left vato the rage of France his Sword.
Where is John Talbot? pawle, and take thy breath,
I gaue thee Life, and refeu'd thee from Death.
John, Otwice my Father, twice am I thy Sonne:

The Life thou gau'lt me first, was lost and done, Fill with thy Warlike Sword, despight of Face, To my determin'd time thou gau'lt new date.

Talb. When fro the Dolphins Crest thy Sword struck fire, It warm'd thy Fathers heart with prowd desire Of bold-fac't Victorie. Then Leaden Age, Quicken'd with Youthfull Spleene, and Warlike Rage, Beat downe Alanjon, Orleance, Bangundie, And from the Pride of Gallia rescued thee.

The irefull Bastard Orleance, that drew blood from the my Boy, and had the Maidenhood Of thy first fight, I soone encountred,

And interchanging blowes, I quickly shed

Some of his Ballated blood, and in difgrace Befooke him thus : Contaminated, bafe, And mis-begotten blood, I spill of thing. Meane and right poore, for that pure blood of mine, Which thou didft force from Talbet , my brane Boy. Here purpofing the Bafterd to deftroy, Came in strong rescue. Speake thy Fathers care:
Art thou not wearie, John? Mow do'it thou fare? Wilt thou yet leave the Battaile, Boy, and file, Now thou art feel'd the Sonne of Chiualtie? Flye, to reuenge my death when I am dead, The helps of one stands me in linle stead. Oly, too much folly it it, well I wot, To hazard all our lines in one imall Bost. If I to day dye not with Frenchmens Rage, To morrow I shall dye with mitkle Age. By me they nothing gaine, and if I flay, Tis but the shortning of my Life one day. In thee thy Mother dyes, our Households Name, My Death's Renengeathy Youth, and Englands Fame: All these and more, we hazard by thy stay; All these are sau'd, if thou wilt flye away.

Tobo. The Sword of Grizance hath not made me smort, These words of yours draw Life-hiood from my Heatt. On that advantage, bought with fuch a shame, To sauca paltry Life, and flay bright Fame, Before young Talbot from old Talbot flye, The Coward Horse that beares me, fall and dyes And like me to the pesant Boyes of France, To be Shames scorne, and subject of Mischance. Surely, by all the Glorie you have wonne, And is I slye, I am not Talbot Sonne. Then talke no more of flight, it is no boot, If Sonne to Talbot, dye at Talbots foot.

Talb. Then follow thou thy delp'rate Syre of Creet,
Thou Icarus, thy Life to me is fweet:
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy Fethers fide,
And commendable prou'd, let's dye in pride.

Exts.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter old Talbot led.

Talb. Where is my other Life? mine owne is gone. O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant Iobu? Triumphant Death, finear'd with Caprinitie, Young Talbots Valour makes me finile at thee. When he perceiv'd me thrinke, and on my Knee, His bloodie Sword he brandisht ouer mee, And like a hungry Lyon did commence Rough deeds of Rage, and fierne Impatience: But when my angry Guardant flood slone, Tendring my ruine, and assay'd of none, Dizzie-cy'd Furie, and great rage of Heart. Suddenly made him from my fide to flart Into the clustring Battaile of the French 1 And in that Sea of Blood, my Boy did drench His ouer-mounting Spirit; and there di'de My Icarus, say Blossome, in sis ptide.

Enter with John Talbes, barne.

Seru. O my dearc Lord, loe where your Sonne is borne,
Tal. Thou antique Death, which laugh if we here to feest,
Anon from thy intulcing Tyrannie,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuitie,
Two Talbers winged through the lither Skie,
In thy despight thall scape Mortaltrie.

O thou whose wounds become hard savoured death, Speake to thy father, ere thou yeeld thy breath, Braue death by speaking, whither he will or not Imagine him a Frenchnian, and thy Foe.
Poore Boy, he fmiles, methinkes, as who should say, Had Death bene French, then Death had dyed to day, Come, come, and say him in his Fathers attnes.
My spirit can no longer beare these harmes.
Souldiers adieu: I have what I would have,
Now my old armes are yong John Talbots grave.

Death

Exter Cherles, Alanfon, Burgundse, Baftard, and Pucell.

Char. Had Yorke and Somerfet brought refcue in,
We should have found a bloody day of this.

B. A. How the york whele of Tellest and in wood

Bast. How the yong whelpe of Talbots raging wood, Did flesh his punie-sword in Frenchmens blood.

Pac. Once I encountred him, and thus I faid to Thou Maiden youth, be vanquished by a Maide. But with a proud Maiesticall high scorne He answer'd thus: Yong Talbar was not borne To be the pillage of a Giglot Wench: So rushing in the bowels of the French, He left me proudly, as ynworthy sight.

Bar. Doubtleffe he would have made a noble Knight: See where he lyes inherced in the armes Of the most bloody Nursser of his harmes.

Baft. Hew them to peeces, hack their bones affunder, Whole life was Englands glory, Gallia's wonder.

Char. Oh no fotbeare: For that which we have fled During the life, let vs not wrong it dead.

Enter Lucie.

Lw. Herald, conduct me to the Dolphins Tent,
To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day,
Ches. On what libraiffus melling are thousen

Char. On what submissione message are thousent?

Lucy Submission Dolphin? Tis a meere French word.

We English Warriours wot not what it meanes.

I come to know what Prisoners thou hast tane,

And to survey the bodies of the dead.

Char. For puloners askft thou? Hell our prison is.

But tell me whom thou feek it?

Luc. But where's the great Alcides of the field, Valiant Lord Talbot Earle of Shrewsbury? Created for his tare fuccesse in Armes. Great Earle of Walford. Waterford. and Valence, Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Vrebunfield, Lord Strange of Blackmere. Lord Verdon of Alton, Lord Conswell of Wosefield, Lord Furnimal of Sheffeeld, The thrice victorious Lord of Falconbridge, Knight of the Noble Otder of S. George.
Worthy S. Michael and the Golden Flacce, Great Marshall to Henry the fixt, Of all his Warres within the Realme of France.

PMc. Heere's a filly flately fille indeede:
The Turke that two and fiftie Kingdomes hath,
Writes not fo tedious a Stile as this.
Him that thou magnififf with all thefe Titles,
Stinking and fly-blownelyes heere at our feete.

Luey. Is Talbor flaine, the Frenchmens only Scourge, Your Kingdomes terror, and blacke Nomefar? Oh were mine eye-balles into Bullest turn'd, That I in rage might shoot them at your faces. Oh, that I could but call these dead to life. It were enough to fright the Realme of France. Were but his Picture lest amongst you here,

It would amaze the prowdest of you all.
Give me their Bodyes, that I may beare them hence,
And give them Buriall, as beseemes their worth,

Pucel. I thinke this vpffste is old Talber, Ghoff, He speakes with such a proud commanding spirit: For Gods sake let him have him, to keepe them here. They would but flinke, and putrifie the ayre.

Cher. Go take their bodies hence,

Lucy. He beare them hence but from their ashes shall be reard

A Phoenix that shall make all France affear'd.

Char. So we be rid of them, do with him what y will and now to Paris in this conquering value,

All will be ours, now bloody Talbert slaine.

Scena secunda.

SENNET.

Enter King, Glocefler, and Exeter.

Ring. Have you perus'd the Letters from the Pope, The Empetor, and the Earle of Armmack? G4. I have my Lord, and their intent is this, They humbly for ento your Excellence, To have a godly peace concluded of,

Betweene the Realmes of England, and of France.

Kmg. How doth your Grace affect their motion?

Glo. Well (my good Lord) and as the only meanes
To stop effusion of our Christian blood,

And flablish quietnesse on every side.

King. I marry Vnckle, for I alwayes thought
It was both impious and vnnaturall,
That such immanity and bloody strife
Should reigne among Professor of one Faith.

Glo. Belidemy Lord, the looner to effect,
And furer binde this knot of amute,
The Earle of Arminackeneere knit to Charles,
A man of great Authoritie in France,
Proffers his onely daughter to your Grace,
In marriage, with a large and functions. Dougles

In marriage, with a large and fumptuous Downie.

King Marriage Vickle? Alas my yeares are yong: And fitter is my fludie, and my Bookes,
Than wanton dalliance with a Paramotr.
Yet call th'Embaffadors, and as you pleafe,
So let them have their anfiweres every one:
I shall be well content with any choyee
Tends to Gods glory, and my Countries weale.

Enter Winebester, and ibree Ambassaders.

Exe. What, is my Lord of Winchefter install'd, And call'd vnto a Cardinall's degree?
Then I perceive, that will be verified.
Henry the Fift did formetime prophesse.
If once he come to be a Cardinall,
Heel make his cap coequall with the Crowne.

King My Lords Ambassadors, your several states
Have bin consider and debased on,
Your purpose is both good and reasonable:
And therefore are we certainly resolute,
To draw conditions of a strendly peace.

Which

Which by my Lord of Winchester we meane Shall be transported prefently to France.

Clo. And for the proffer of my Lord your Mafter, I have inform'd his Highnesse to se large, As Liking of the Ladies vertuous gists, Her Beauty, and the valew ofher Dower, He doth intend she shall be Englands Queene,

Ring. In argument and proofe of which contract,
Beare her this lewell, pledge of my affection.
And fo my Lord Protector feetbeen guarded,
And fafely brought to Doner, wherein finip'd
Commit them to the fortune of the fea.

Exempt.

Win. Stay my Lord Legate, you shall first receive The summe of money which I promised Should be delivered to his Holinesse, For closshing me in these grave Ornaments.

Legar. I will attend vpon your Lordships leysure.

Wm. Now Winchester will not submit, I crow,
Or be inseriour to the proudest Peere;
Humfier of Gloster, thou shalt well perceive,
That neither in birth, or for authoritie,
The Bishop will be over-borne by thee:
Ile either make thee stoope, and bend thy knee,
Or sacke this Country with a mutiny.

Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alanfon, Bastard, Reignier, and lonc,

Cha. These newes (my Lords) may cheere our drooping spirits:

Tis said, the front Parissans do revolt, And turne againe voto the warlike French.

Alan. Then march to Paris Royall Charles of France, And keepenot backeyour powers in dalliance.

Pocel. Peace be amongst them if they turne to vs, Else tuine combate with their Pallaces.

Enter Scout.
Scout Successe vnto our valiant Generall,

And happinesse to his accomplices.

Char What tidings send our Scouts? I prethee speak.

Scout. The English Armythat divided was

Into two parties, is now conjoyn'd in one,
And meanes to glue you battell prefently.

Cher. Somewhat too fodaine Sirs, the warning is. But we will prefently prouide for them.

Bur. I trust the Ghost of Talbos is not there:
Now he is gone my Lord, you need e not feare.
Pucel. Of all base passions, Feare is most accurst.
Command the Conquest Charles, it shall be thine:

Let Heary fret, and all the world repine.

(bar. Then on my Lords, and France be fortunate.

Executions.

Executions.

Enser Ione de Pucell.

Pac. The Regent conquers, and the Frenchmen flye, Thow helpe ye charming Spelles and Periapts, And ye choife spirits that admonish me, And give me figures of surve accidents.

Thunder, You speedy helpers, that are substitutes

Vader the Lordly Monarch of the North, Appeare, and ayde me in this enterprize. Enter Fiends.

This speedy and quicke appearance argues proofe Of your accustom'd diligence to me. Now ye Familiar Spirits, that are cull'd Out of the powerfull Regions under earth, Helpe me this once, that France may get the field.

Helpe me this oace, that France may get the field.

They malke, and freake nos.
Oh hold menot with filence ouer-long:

Oh hold menot with filence over-long:
Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
Ilelop a member off, and give it you,
In earnest of a further benefit:
So you do condificend to helpe me now.

They hang absir beads.

No hope to have redreffer My body shall Pay recompence, if you will graunt my suite.

They shake their heads.

Castnot my body, nor blood-sartifice.

Intreste you to your wonted furtherance ?

Then take my soule; my body, soule, and all,

Before that England guil the French the foyle.

They depart.

See, they forfake me. Now the time is come, That France must vale her losty plumed Crest, And let her head fall into Englands lappe. My ancient Incantations are too weake. And hell too strong for me to buckle with Now France, thy glory droopeth to the dust.

Excursions Burgundie and Yorke sight band to band. Eveneb siye.

Torke. Damfell of France, I thinke I haue you fait, Vnchaine your spirits now with spelling Charmes, And try if they can gaine your liberty.
A goodly prize, fit for the diuels grace.
See how the vegly Witch doth bend her browes, As if with Circe, she would change my shape.

Prec. Chang'd to a worfer shape thou canst not be:

Ter. Oh, Charles the Dolphin is a proper man,

No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Puc. A plaguing mischeese light on Charles, and thee,
And may ye both be sodainly surpriz'd
By bloudy hands, in sleeping on your beds.

Yorke. Fell banning Hagge, Inchantresse hold thy congue.

Puo. I prethee giue me leage to curse awhile.

Tarke. Curse Miscreant, when thou comst to the stake

Excurse.

Alarum. Enter Suffolke with Margaret

Saff. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.

Oh Faireff Beautie, do not feare, nor flye: For I will touch thee but with reuerend hands, I kiffe thefe fingers for eternall peace, And lay them geotly on thy tender fide. Who art thou, fay? that I may honor thee.

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a King, The King of Naples, who so ere thou are.

Soff. An Earle I am, and Suffolke am I call'd Be not offended Natures myracle, Thou are alotted to be tane by me: So doth the Swan her downie Signets faue,

Oh flay:

Exis

Keeping them pilloner underneath his wings : Yet if this feruile viage once offend, Co, and be free againe, as Suffolkes friend. Oh flay: I have no power to let her palle, My hand would free her, but my heart fayes no. As playes the Sunne vpon the glaffie freames, Twinkling another counterfetted beame, So feemes this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes. Faine would I woe her, yet I dare not speake : He call for Pen and Inke, and write my minde: Fye De la Pole, disable not thy selfe Haft not a Tongue? Is the not heere? Wilt thou be daunted at a Womans fight? I : Beauties Princely Maiesty is such, 'Confounds the congue, and makes the fenfes rough Mar. Say Earle of Suffolke, if thy name be fo, What ransome must I pay before I passe? For I perceive I am thy prisoner. Suf. How canst thou tell she will deny thy suite, Before thou make a triall of her loue? M Why (peak'st thou not? What ransom must I pay? Suf. She's beautifull; and therefore to be Wood: She is a Woman; therefore to be Wonne. Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransome, yea or no? Suf. Fond man, remember that thou hast a wife, Then how can Margaret be thy Paramour? Mar. I were best to lezue him, for he will not heare. Suf. There all is marr'd : there hes a cooling card. Mar. He talkes at randon: fure the man is mad. Suf. And yet a dispensation may bee had. Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me. Suf. He win this Lady Margaret. For whom? Why for my King: Tush, that's a woodden thing. Mo He talkes of wood: It is some Carpenter.
Suf. Yet so my sancy may be satisfied, And peace established betweene these Realmes. But there remaines a scruple in that too Forthough her Father be the King of Naples, Duke of Anion and Mayne, yet is he poore, And our Nobility will scorne the match. Mar. Heare ye Captaine? Are you not at leyfure? Saf. It shall be so, disdaine they ae're so much: Henry is youthfull, and will quickly yeeld. Madam, I haue a sceret to reueale. Mer. What though I be inthral'd, he feems a knight And will not any way dishonor me.
Suf. Lady, vouchiafe to listen what I say. Mar. Perhaps I shall be rescu'd by the French, And then I need not crave his curtefie. Suf. Sweet Madam, give me hearing in a cause. Mar. Tufh, women haue bene captinate ere now. Suf. Lady, wherefore talke you fo? Mar. 1 cry you mercy, 'tis but Quid for Quo. Suf. Say gentle Princelle, would you not suppose Your bondage happy, to be made a Queene? Mar. To be a Queene in boodage, is more vile, Than is a slave, in base feruility :

For Princes Mould be free. Saf. And so shall you, If happy Englanda Royali King be free. Mar. Why what concernes his freedome vnto mee? Suf. He vndertake to make thee Heartes Queene, To put a Golden Scepter in thy hand, And fet a precious Crowne vpon thy head, If thou wilt condifcend to be my-Mar What?

Mer. I am voworthy to be Hearns wite. Suf. No gentle Madam, I vnworthy am To woe lo faire a Dame to be his wife, And have no portion in the choice my felfe. How fay you Madam, are ye so content? MA. And if my Father please, I am content. Suf. Then call our Captaines and our Colours forth, And Madam, at your Fathers Caffle walles, Weel craue a parley, to conferre with him. Sound.

Enter Pergnier on the Wallet. See Reigner fee, thy daughter prisones.
Reig. To whom? Rong. Towl

Reig. Suffolke, what remedy? I am a Souldier, and vnapt to weepe, Or to exclaime on Fortunes fieldenesse.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough my Lord, Confent, and for thy Honor give confect, Thy daughter shall be wedded to my King, Whom I with paine have wooed and wonne thereto t And this her case hald imprisonment, Hath gain'd thy daughter Princely libertie.

Reig. Speakes Suffolke as he thinkes I

Suf. Paire Margani knowes,

That Suffolke doth not flatter, face, or faine. To give thee answer of thy just demand. Suf. And heere I will expect thy comming.

Reig. Vpon thy Princely warrant, I descend, Trumpets found, Euter Reignier. Reig. Welcome braue Earle imo our Territories, Command in Anien what your Honor pleases. Suf. Thankes Reignier, bappy for lo lweet a Childe, Fit to be made companion with a King : What answer makes your Grace vnto my suite? Reig. Since thou doll dargne to woe her little worth, To be the Princely Bride of fuch a Lord 1 Vpon condition 1 may quietly Enloy mine owne, the Country Masse and Assen, Free from oppression, or the Aroke of Waree, My daughter shall be Herries, if he pleafe. suf. That is her ransome, I deliver her, And those two Counties I will yndertake Your Grace shall well and quietly entoy. Reig. And I againe in Homes Royall name, As Deputy voto that gracious King, Suf. Reigner of France, I give thee Kingly thankes,

Giue thee her band for figne of plighted faith. Because this is in Trafficke of a King. And yet me thinkes I could be well content

To be mine owne Atturney in this case. Ile over then to England with this newes. And make this matriage to be foleraniz'd: So farewell Reignter, let this Diamond fafe In Golden Pallaces as it becomes. Reg. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace

The Christian Prince King Henrie were he heere.

Mar. Farewell my Lord, good withes, praise. & palers, Shall Suffolke ever have of Magaret. Shee is going. Suf. Farwell (weet Madam: but hearke you Magan, No Princely commendations to my King.

Mar. Such commendations as becomes a Maide, A Virgin, and his Servant, fay to him.

Suf. Words sweetly plac'd, and modestie directed,

But Madame, I must trouble you againe, No louing Token to his Maieflie? Mar. Yes, my good Lord, a pure vnspotted heart, Neuer yet raint with love, I fend the King. Suf. And this withall. Kiffeber. Mar. That for thy felfe, I will not fo presume, To fend such pecuith tokens to a King.

Suf Oh wert thou for my felfe: but Suffolke flag, Thou mayest not wander in that Labyrinch, There Minotaurs and vgly Treasons lurke, Solicite Henry with her wonderous praile Bethinke thee on her Vertues that formount, Mad naturall Graces that extinguish Art, Repeate their semblance often on the Seas, That when thou com'it to kneele at Henries feete. Thou mayest bereaue him of his with with wonder. Ext

Enter Torke Franche, Shepheard, Pucell. Tor. Bring forth that Sorcereffe condemn'd to burne. Shep Ah lone, this kils thy Fathers heart out-right, Haue I fought every Country farre and neete, And now it is my chance to finde thee out, Must I behold thy timelesse cruell death : Ah love, fweet daughter lone, He die with thee. Pred Decrepit Miler, bale ignoble Wretch, I am descended of a gentler blood Thou art no Father, nor no Friend of mine. Shep. Out, out: My Lords, and please you, 'tis nor so

I did beget her, all the Parish knowes: Her Mother liucth yes, can testifie She was the first fruite of my Bachler-ship.

War. Gracelelle, wilt thou deny thy Parentage? Torke. This argues what her kinde of life hath beene, Wicked and vile, and so her death concludes.

Shep. Tye love, that thou wilt be so obstacle: God knowes, thou art a collop of my flesh, And for thy fake have I shed many a teare:

Deny me not, I prythee, gentle Ione.
Pucell. Pezant auant. You have suborn'd this man Of purpole, to obscure my Noble birth.

Shep. 'Tis true, I game a Noble to the Priest, The mome that I was wedded to her mother. Kneele downe and take my bleffing, good my Gytle. Wilt thou not floope? Now curfed be the time Of thy nativitie: I would the Milke Thy mother gaue thee when thou fuck's her brest, Had bin a little Rats-bane for thy sake. Or elfe, when thou didft keepe my Lambes a-field, I wish some rauenous Wolfe had earen thee, Doeft thou deny thy Father, curfed Drab? O burne her, burne her, hanging is too good. Torke. Take heraway, for the heth liu'd too long,

To fill the world with victous qualities. Puc. First let me tell you whom you have condemn'd: Not me, begotten of a Shepheard Swaine, But issued from the Progeny of Kings. Vertuous and Holy, chosen from aboue, By inspiration of Celestiall Grace, To worke exceeding myracles on earth. I neuer had to do with wicked Spirits. But you that are polluted with your luftes. Stain'd with the guiltleffe blood of Innocents, Corrupt and tainted with a thousand Vices: Because you want the grace that others have, You judge it fireight a thing impossible To compasse Wonders, but by helpe of divets.

No misconceyued, Ione of Airc hath beene A Virgin from her tender infancie, Chafte, and immaculate in very thought, Whole Maiden-blood thus rigorously effurd, Will cry for Vengeance, at the Gates of Heaven. Torke. Il: away with her to execution.
www. And hearke ye firs: because she is a Maide.

Spare for no Paggots, let there be enow: Place barrelies of pitch upon the fatall stake, That fo her torrute may be fliorined.

Puc. Will nothing turne your varelenting hearts? Then lone discover thine infirmity, That warranteth by Law, to be thy priviledge. I am with childe ye bloody Homicides Murther nor then the Finite within my Wombe,

Although ye hale me to a violent death,
Tor. Now heaven forfend, the holy Maid with child? War. The greatest miracle that ere ye wrought.

Is all your street precisenesse come to this?

Yorke. She and the Dolphin have bin rugling, I did imagine what would be her refuge.

War. Well go too, will have no Bastards live.

Especially since Charles must Father it.

Picc. You are deceyu'd, my childe is none of his, It was Alanfon that intoy'd my loue. Torke. Alanfon that notorious Macheuile?

It dyes, and if it had a thousand lives.

Pue. Oh give me leave, I have deluded you, Twas neyther Charles, nor yet the Dake I nam'd, But Reignier King of Naples that preuayl'd War. A married man, that's most intollerable.

Tor. Why here's a Gyrle: I think the knowes not wel (There were to many) whom the may accuse

War. It's figne the hath beene liberall and free. Tor. And yet for footh the Is a Virgin pure. Strumper, thy words condemne thy Brar, and thee. Vie no intreaty, for it is in vaine

Pu. Then lead me hence: with whom I leave my curfe. May never glorious Sunne reflex his beames Vpon the Countrey where you make abode: But darknesse, and the gloomy shade of death Inurron you till Mischeefe and Dispaire, Drive you to break your necks, or hang your felues Exit Enter Cardinall.

Torke. Breake thou in preces, and confume to ashes, Thou fowle accurled minister of Hell.

Car. Lord Regent, I do greere your Excellence With Letters of Commission from the King. For know my Lords, the States of Christendome, Mou'd with remorfe of these out-ragious broyles, Have earnefly implor'd a general peace, Betwixt our Nation, and the afpyring French; And beere as hand, the Dolphin and his Traine Approacheth, to conferre about some matter.

Torke. Is all our trauell turn'd to this effect, After the flaughter of fo many Peeres So many Captaines, Gentlemen, and Soldiers, That in this quarrell have beene overthrowne, And fold their bodyes for their Country es benefit, Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace? Haue we not lost most part of all the Townes, By Treason, Falshood, and by Treacherse, Our great Progenitors had conquered: Oh Warwicke, Warwicke, I forefee with greete The veter losse of all the Realme of France. War. Be patient Yorke, if we conclude a Peace It shall be with such first and severe Covenances, As little shall the Frenchmen gaine thereby.

Enser Charles, Alanfon, Baftard, Resquier.

Char. Since Lords of England, it is thus agreed, That peacefull truce shall be proclaim'd in France, We come to be informed by your felues, What the conditions of that league must be.

Torke. Speake Winchester, for boyling choller chokes The hollow passage of my payson'd voyce. By sight of these our balefull enemies.

Win. Charles, and the tell, it is enached thus : That in regard King Henry gives confess, Of meere compassion, and of lenty To vale your Countrie of diffreffefull Warre, And fuffer you to breath in fruitfull peace, You shall become true Liegemen to his Crowne And Charles, upon condition thou wilt (weste To pay him tribute, and fubmit thy felfe, Thou shalt be plac'd as Vicerny under him, And still entoy thy Regall dignity.

e Han. Must he be then as shadow of himselfe ? Adorne his Temples with a Coronet, And yet in Substance and authority, Retaine but priviledge of a private man? This proffer Is abfurd, and reasonlesse.

Char. Tis knowne already that I am possess With more then halfe the Gallian Territories, And therein reverenc'd for their lawfull King. Shall I for lucre of the rest vn-vanquisht, Detract fo much from that prerogative, As to be call'd but Viceroy of the whole? No Lord Ambastador, Ile rather keepe That which I have, than courting for more Be cast from possibility of all.

Yorke. Infulring Charles, halt thou by fecret mesnes Vs'd intercession to obtaine a league, And now the matter growes to compremize, Stand's thou aloose vpon Comparison Either accept the Title thou vlurp'it, Of benefit proceeding from our King, And not of any challenge of Defert, Or we will plague thee with inceffont Warres Reig. My Lord, you do not well in obstinzcy, To cauill in the course of this Contract: If once it be neglected, tento one We shall not finde like opportunity.

Alan. To fay the truth, it is your policie. To lave your Subjects from luch maffacre And ruthleffe flaughters as are dayly feene By our proceeding in Hollility And therefore take this compact of a Truce, Although you breake it, when your pleasure serues IFAT. How layft thou Charles? Shall our Condition fland?

Char. It Shall: Onely referu'd, you claime no interest In any of our Townes of Garrison.

Tor. Then I weare Allegeance to his Maiefty, As thou are Knight, never to disobey Nor be Rebellious to the Crowns of England, Thou nor thy Nobles, to the Crowne of England. So, now dismiffe your Army when ye please: Hang vp your Enfignes, let your Drummes be fill, For heere we entertaine a folemne peace. Lows

Adus Quintus.

Enter Suffely in conference must she King, Glocefler, and Exerer.

King. Your wondrous rare description (noble Earle)
Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish dimes Her vertues graced with externall gifts, Do breed Loues feeled pattions in my heart, And like as rigour of tempefuous guftes Prouokes the mightiest Hulke against the tide, So am I driven by breath of her Renowae, Either to luffer Ship wracke, or arrive Where I may have fruition ofher Love.

Suf. Tush my good Lord, this superficial tale, Is but a preface of her worthy praise? The cheefe perfections of that lovely Dame, (Had I (ufficientskill to veter them) Would make a volume of intiting lines, Able to raush any dull concein And which is more, the is not fo Divine, So full replease with choice of all delights, But with as humble lowline le of minde, She is content to be at your command:
Command I meane, of Vertuous chafte intents, To Love, and Honor Henry as her Lord.

King. And otherwise, will Henry ne're presume : Therefore my Lord Procedor, give confent,
That Magiret may be Englands Royall Queene.

G/4 So should I give consent to flatter sinne, You know (my Lord) your Highnesse is betroath'd Vnto another Lady of esteeme, How shall we then dispense with that contract, And not deface your Honor with reproach? Suf. As doth a Ruler with villawfull Oathes, Or one that at a Triumph, having vow'd To try his Arength, for taketh yet the Liftes By reason of his Adversaries oddes.

A poore Earles daughter is vnequall oddes, And therefore may be broke without offence. Gloucester. Why what (I pray) is Along wer more

Suf. Yes iny Lord, her Father is a King, The King of Naples, and Ierusalem, And of such great Authoritie in France, As his alliance will confirme our peace, And keepe the Frenchmen in Allegeance.

Glo. And fo the Earle of Arminacke may doc. Because he is neere Kinsman vnto Charles.

Exer Beside, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower,

Where Reignier sooner will receyue, then give.

Suf. A Downemy Lords? Disgrace not so your king, That he should be so abiect, base, and poore, To chook for wealth, and not for perfect Love. Henry is able to enrich his Queene, And not to feeke a Queene to make him rich, So worthlesse Pezants bargaine for their Wius, As Market men for Oxen, Sheepe, or Horse. Marriage is a matter of more worth, Then to be dealt in by Atturney-ship : Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affects,

Must be companion of his Nupsiall bed. And therefore Lords, fince he affects ber mol. Most of all these reasons bindeth vs, In our opinions the thould be preferr'd. For what is wedlocke forceds but a Hell, An Age of discord and continual strife,
Whereas the contrarie bringeth bliffe,
And is a patterne of Celestiell peace,
Whom should we match with Henry being a King, But Margaret, that is daughter to a King Her peereleffe feature, loyned with her birth, Approves her fit for none, but for a King. Her valiant courage, and vndaunted foirit. (More then in women commonly is feene) Will answer our hope in issue of a King. For Henry, some voto a Conqueror, Is likely to beget more Conquerors, If with a Lady offo high resolue (As is faire Margarer) he be link'd in loue.
Then yeeld my Lords, and heere conclude with mee. That Margaret shall be Queene, and some but thee.

King. Whether it be through force of your report,

My Noble Lord of Suffolko: Or for that My tender youth was never yet attaint With any passion of inflaming love I cannot tell : but this I am affur'd,

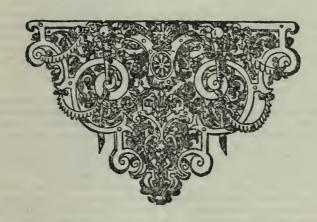

I feele fuch tharpe differsion in my breaft. Such fierce alarums both of Hope and Feare, As I am ficke with working of my thoughts.

Take therefore shipping, poste my Lord to France, Agree to any couenants, and procure That Lady Moyerer do vouchfafe to come To crosse the Seas to England, and be crown'd King Howies faithfull and annointed Queene. For your expences and fufficient charge, Among the people gather vp a tenth.
Be gone I fay, for till you do returne,
I rest peoplexed with a thousand Cares.
And you (good Vnckle) banish all offence: If you do censure me, by what you were, Not what you are, I know it will excuse This sodaine execution of my will. And to conduct me, where from company, I may revolue and ruminate my greefe.

Gla I greefe I feareme, both at first and last.

Suf. Thus Suffolke hath prenail'd, and thus he goes As did the youthfull Peris once to Greece, With hope to finde the like event in love, But prosper better than the Troisn did: Margaret shall now be Queene, and rule the King: But I will rule both her, the King, and Realme.

Enter King, Duke Humfrey, Salubury, Warwicks, and Beauford on the one fide.

The Queene, Suffolke, Torke, Somerfes, and Eucking barn,

Sugolbe. S by your high Imperial Maiefly, I had in charge at my depart for France,
As Procurator to your Excellence,
To marry Princes Margaret for your Grace;

So in the Famous Ancient City, Toures, In presence of the Kings of France, and Smill, The Dukes of Orleance, Calaber, Britaique, and Alanfon, Seuen Earles, twelue Barons, & twenty reuerend Bithops I have perform'd my Taske, and was espous'd, And humbly now vpon my bended knee, In fight of England, and her Lordly Peeres, Deliver vp my Title in the Queene To your most gracious hands, that are the Substance Of that great Shadow I did represent: The happieft Gift, that ever Marqueffe gave, The Fairest Queene, that ever King receiu'd.

King. Suffolkearife. Welcome Queene Magaret, I can expresse no kinder signe of Loue Then this kinde kisse : O Lord, that lenu. me life, Lend me a heart replease with thankfulneffe : For thou hast gluen me in this beauteous Face A world of earthly bleffings to my foule, If Simpathy of Loue vnice our thoughts.

Queen. Greet King of England, & my gracious Lord, The mutuall conference that my minde hath had, By day, by night; waking, and in my dreames, In Courtly company, or at my Beades, With you mine Alder liefest Soueraigne, Makes me the bolder to falute my King, With rader termes, such as my wit affoords, And ouer ioy of heart doth minister.

Ring. Her fight did rauisn, but her grace in Speech, Her words yeled with wisedomes Maiesty, Makes me from Wondring, fall to Weeping ioyes, Such is the Fulnesse of my hearts content. Lords, with one cheerefull voice, Welcome my Loue. All Weel. Long line Qu. Margares, Englands happines Florigh Queen. We thanke you alt.

Suf. My Lord Protector, fo it please your Grace, Heere are the Articles of contracted peace, Betweene our Soueraigne, and the French King Chales, For eighteene moneths concluded by confent.

Clo Reads. Inprimis, It is agreed between the French K. Charles, and William de la Pole Marqueffe of Suffalte, Ambassador for Henry King of England, That the ful Henry Bal espouse the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Krienur King of Negles, Suilisa, and Ierusalem, and Crowns ber Quene of England, ere the thirteeth of May next enfoung.

Item, That the Dutchy of Aniou, and the County of Main,

Mall be releafed and delivered to the King ber father.

Kmg. Vnkle, how now?
Glo. Pardon me gracious Lord. Some sodaine qualme hath Arucke me at the heart, And dim'd mine eyes, that I can reade no further.

Kmg. Vnckle of Winchester, I pray read on.

Win. Item, It is furiber agreed betweene them, That the Dutcheffe of Anion and Marke, Shall be released and delimered omer to the King her Father, and shee sent ouer of the Keng of Englands owne proper Cost and Charges, without being on

Kmg. They please vs well. Lord Marques kneel down. We heere create thee the first Duke of Suffolke, And girt thee with the Sword. Cofin of Yorke, We heere discharge your Grace from being Regent I'th perts of France, till terme of eighteene Moneths Befull expyrd. Thankes Vncle Winchester, Gloster, Yorke, Buckingham, Sometser, Salisburie, and Warwicke. We thanke you all for this greet fauour done, In entertainment to my Princely Queene. Come, let vs in, and with all speede provide To see her Coronation be perform'd Exis King, Queens, and Suffolke.

Moves the reft. Clo. Brave Peeres of England, Pillars of the State, To you Dake Humfrey must vaload his greefe: Your greefe, the common greefe of all the Land. What? did my brother Heary spend his youth, His valour, coine, and people in the warres? Did he so often lodge in open field: In Winters cold, and Summers parching beste, To conquer France, his true inheritance And did my brother Bed and toyle his wits,

To keepe by policy what Henrie got: Houe you your felues, Senwrfer, Bucking barn, Broue Torke, Salinbory, and victorious warnicke, Receiud deepe featres in France end Normandie: Or hath mine Vnekle Beauford, and my felfe, With all the Learned Countell of the Resime, Studied to long, fat in the Councell house, Early and late, debating too and fro How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe, And hath his Highnesse in his infancie, Crowned in Paris in despight of foes, And shall these Labours, and these Honours dye? Shall Henries Conquest, Bedfords vigilance Your Deeds of Warre, and all our Counfell dye? O Peeres of England; shamefull is this League, Facall this Marriage, cancelling your Fame, Blotsing yout names from Bookes of memory, Recing the Charracters of your Renowne, Deficing Monuments of Conquer'd France, Vindoing all as all bad neuer bin.

Co. Nephew, what meanes this passionate discourses This preservation with fuch cureumflance i For France, 'tis ours ; and we will keepe it fill.

Glo. I Vnckle, we will keepe it, if we can i But now it is impossible we hould. Suffolke, the new made Duke that rules the roft, Hath given the Dutchy of Aside and Magne, Vnto the poore King Reignier, whose large style Agrees not with the leannelle of his purle.

Sal. Now by the death of him that dyed for all, These Councies were the Keyes of Normandie: But wherefore weepes Warwicks, my valiant forme?

Wer. For greeie that they are past recouerie. For were there hope to conquer them agains, My sword should seed hot blood, mine eyes no teares. Anies and Maine? My selfe did win them both: Those Provinces, these Armes of mine did conquer, And are the Cittles that I got with wounds, Delluer'd up agains with peacefull words ? Afor: Dist.

Tarke. For Suffolkes Dake, may he be suffocate, That dims the Honor of this Warlike Isle : France should have torne and rent my very harr, Before I would have yeelded to this League. Incuer read but Englands Kings have had Large fummer of Gold, and Dowries with their wives, And our King Wenty gives away his owne. To match with her that brings no vantage

Hum. A proper ieft, and never beard before, That Suffolke thould demand a whole Fifteenth, For Coffs and Charges in transporting her a She frould have flaid in France, and fleru'd in France Before.

Cer. My Lord of Gloffer, now ye grow too hot, It was the pleafure of my Lord the King.

Him. My Lord of Winchefter I know your minde. Tis not my speeches that you do missike to But tis my presence that doth troubleye, Raneour will out, proud Presse, in thy face if ce thy suite: If I longer stay, We shall begin our ancient bickerings: Lordings farewell, and fay when I am gone, I prophefied, France will be loftere long. Exit Handry. Car. So, there goes our Protector in a rage : Tis knownero you he is mine energy :

Nay more, an enemy voto you all,

And no great friend, I feore me so the King; Confider Lords, he is the next of blood, And he fre apparant to the English Crowne: Had Hourse got an Empire by his marriage, And all the wealthy Kingdomes of the Well, There's reason he should be displeas'd as it : Looke to it Lords, let not his smoothing words Bewirch your hearts, be wife and circumfpett. What though the common people favour him, Calling him, Humfrey the good Duke of Gloffer, Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voyce, Ielu maintaine your Royall Excellence, With God preferue the good Duke Humfrey I feare me Lords, for all this flattering gloffe, He will be found a dangerous Protector.

Buc. Why should he then protect out Soueraigne? He being of age to gouerne of himselfe. Cofin of Sometfet, toyne you with me, And altogether with the Duke of Suffolke, Wee'l quickly hoyfe Duke Humfrey from his fezt.

Car. This weighty businesse will not brooke delay. lle to the Duke of Suffolke presently. Exu Cardinall Som Cofin of Buckingham, though Hoofines pride And greatnesse of his place be greefe to vs, Yet let vs watch the haughtie Cardinall, His insolence is more intollerable Then allthe Princes in the Land belide, If Gloffer be displac'd, hee Ibe Protector.

Bue. Or thou, or I Sometfet will be Proteclors, Despite Duke Humfrey, or the Cardinall.

Exit Buckingham, and Somerfee.
Sal. Pride went before, Ambition followes him. While these do labout for their owne preferment, Behooves it vs to labor for the Reslme I neuer faw but Humfrey Dake of Glofter, Did beare him like a Noble Gentleman: Of have I feene the haughty Cardinall, More like a Souldier theo a man o'th'Church, At fout and proud as he were Lord of all Sweare like a Ruffian, and demoone himfelfe Valike the Ruler of a Common-weale, Warwicke my fonne, the comfort of my age, Thy deeds, thy plainneffe, and thy house-keeping, Hath wonne the greatest fauout of the Commons, Excepting none but good Duke Humfrey, And Brother Yorke, thy Acts in Ireland, In bringing them to civill Discipline Thy late exploits done in the heart of France, When thou wert Regent for our Soueraigne, Haue made thee fear'd and honor'd of the people, Toyne we together for the publike good, In what we can, to bridle and suppresse The pride of Suffolke, and the Cardinall, With Somerfets and Buckinghams Ambition And as we may, cherish Duke Humfries deeds, While they do tend the profit of the Land.

War. So God helpe Werwicke, as he loues the Land, And common profit of his Country.

Tor. And to layes Yorke, For he hash greatest cause.

Salisbury. Thenicus make haft away, And looke vnto the maine. Warwicks. Vnto the maine?

Oh Father, Maires is loft, That Maus, which by maine force Wervicke did winne, And would have kept, so long as breath did left Main

m 3

Main-chance father you meant, but I meant Alder, Which I will win from France, or elfe be flaine.

Exit Wordicks , and Salubary . Marci Torky . Torke. Amou and Masse are given to the French, Paris is lost, the fine of Nermandse Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone : Suffolke concluded on the Articles, The Peeres agreed, and Hours was well pleas'd, To change two Dukedomes for a Dukes faire daughter I carmot blame them all, what is cotheme Tir thine they give away, and not their owne. Pirates may make cheape penyworths of their pillages.
And purchale Friends, and give to Carrezans, Sull revelling like Lords till all be gone, While as the filly Owner of the goods Weepes over them, and wrings his hapleffe hands. And thakes his head, and trembling stands aloofe, While all is fhar'd, and all is borne away, Ready to flerue, and dare not touch his owne. So Yorkemust be, and free, and blee his congue, While his owne Lands are bargain'd for, and fold: Me thinkes the Realmes of England, France, & Ireland, Beare that proportion to my flesh and blood, As did the fatall brand Alibes burnt, Voto the Princes hears of Calidon: Aviewand Maine both given vnto the French ? Cold newes for me : for I had hope of France, Euen as I have of ferrile Englands foile. A dry will-come, when Yorke shall claime his owne, And therefore I will take the Newils parts, And make a flow of love to proud Duke Humfrey, And when I spy advantage, elaime the Crowne, For that's the Golden marke I seeke to hit: Not shall proud Lancofter vsurpo my right, Not hold the Scepter in his childish Fist, Nor weare the Diadem vpoo his head, Whole Church-like humors fits not for a Crowne. Then Yorke be still a-while, till time do ferue: Watch thou, and wake when others be afleepe, To prie into the ferrets of the State. Till Howie furfetting in loyes of love, With his new Bride, & Englands deere bought Queen, And Humfrey with the Peeres be falne at iarres : Then will I raife sloft the Milke-white-Rofe, With whose sweet smell the Ayre shall be persum'd, And in in my Standard beare the Armes of Yorke, To grapple with the house of Laneaster, And force perforce He make him yeeld the Crownz, Whose bookish Rule, hath pull'd faire England downe. Exit Torke.

Ester Duke Humfrey and bis wife Element.

Elia. Why droupes my Lord like overwipen'd Com,
Hanging the head at Ceres plenteous load?

Why doth the Great Duke Humfrey knit his browes,
As frowning at the Fassours of the world?

Why are thine eyes fix to the fullen earth,
Gazing on that which feemes to dimme thy fight?

What feeft thou there? King Humfrey Diadem,
Inchae'd with all the Honors of the world?

If (a., Gaze on, and grouel on thy face,
Vntilkthy head be circled with the fame.

Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious Gold,
What, is't too thort? I le lengthen it with mine,
And having both together heav'd it vp,
Wee'l both together lift our heads to heaven,
And never more abase our fight so low,

As to vouch see one glance veto the ground.

Flum. O Ned, sweet Ned, if thou dost love thy Lord,
Banish the Canker of ambitious thoughts:
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Against my King and Nephew, vertuous Hawy,
Be my last breathing in this mortall world.

My troublous dreames this night, doth make me fad,

Fir. What dream'd my Lord, tell me, and ill require to

With Invest rehearfall of my mornings dreame ;

Haw, Meshought thus flate mine Office-badge as

Was broke in twaine 1 by whom, I have forgot, But as I thinke, it was by th Cardinall, And on the peeces of the broken Wand Were placed the heads of Edmand Duke of Somerfet, And Walliam de la Pole first Duke of Suffolke. This was my dreame, what it doth bade God knowes.

Eli. Tut, this was nothing but an argument,
That he that breakes a flicke of Glofters grove,
Shall loofe his head for his prefumption.
But lift to me my Humfrey, my Sweete Duke:
Me thought I fate in Seste of Maiesty,
Inthe Cathedrall Church of Westminster,
And in that Chaire where Kings & Queens were moved
Where Hamie and Dame Many over kneel'd to me,
And on my head did fet the Diadem.

Home. Nay Elmer, then must I chide outsight:
Prefumptuous Dame, ill-aurter'd Elizaer,
Art thou not fecond Woman in the Realme?
And the Protectors wise belou'd of him?
Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Aboue the reach or compasse of thy thought?
And wilt thou still be harmoring Treachery,
To tumble downer thy husband, and thy selfe,
From top of Honor, to Disgraces seete?
Away from me, and let me heare no more.

Elia. What, what, my Lord? Are you to chollericke With Elianor, for telling but her dreame? Next time Ite keepe my dreames vinto my felfe, And not be check'd.

Him. Nay be not angry, I am pleas'd againe.
Enter Mosseger.

Mef. My Lord Protector, 'to his Highnes pleafare, You do prepare to ride vnto S. Albans, Where as the King and Queene do meane to Harrise.

His. I go, Come Nel thou wiltride with wifer. Hum
Eli. Yes my good Lord, Ile follow prefently.
Follow I mult, I cannot go before,
While Glofter beares this bale and humble minde.
Were I a Man, a Duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stambling blockes,
And smooth my way upon their headlesse erakes.
And being a woman, I will not be flacke
To play my part in Fortunes Pageant.
Where are you there? Sir John, may seare not man,
We are alone, here's none but thee, & I. Entry House.

Hume. Iclus preferue your Royall Maiefly.

Elia. What faift thou? Maiefly: I am but Grace.

Hume. But by the grace of God, and Humer aduice,

Your Graces Title shall be multiplied.

Elia. What fails thou man? Hast thou as yet confirtd With Margerie landare the conning Witch, With Roger Ballingbrooke the Conjunct? And will they vadertake to do me good? Mure. This they have promifed to shew your Highnes A Spirit rais d from depth of vader ground,

That faill make answere to such Questions,

As by your Grace shall be propounded him.

Eliceor. It is enough, He chinke vpon the Questioner:
When from Saint Albour we doe make recurse,
Weetle see these things effected to the full.
Here Hume, take this reward, make merry man
With thy Consederates in this weightie cause.

Exit Elient.

Stame. Have must make merry with the Ducheste Gold:
Marry and stell: but hort goys, Sir Joint Hawe!
Scale up your Lips, and give no words but Mum,
The businesse asketh sheet secree:
Dame Elient gives Gold, to bring the Witch:
Gold cannot some amisse, were she a Devill.
Yethare I Gold siyes from another Coast:
I dare not say, from the rich Cardinall,
And from the great and new-made Duke of Sussolke;
Yet I doe finds it so: for to be plaine,
They (knowing Dame Elients) asspring humor)

And buzzethese Conjurations in her brayne. They say, A crassic Knaue do's need no Broker, Yez am I Sussile and the Cardinalis Broker. Hume, if you take not heed, you shall goe neers. To call them both a payre of crastic Knaues. Well, so it stands: and thos I feare at last. Humes Knauesie will be the Duchesse Wracke, And her Actainture, will be Humpfrojes fall; Sort how it will; I shall base Gold for all.

Have byred me to vnder-mine the Ducheffe,

Enter shree or four Peristoners, the Armorers
Man being one.

1. Per. My Masters, let's stand close, my Lord Protector will come this way by and by, and then wee may deliver our Supplications in the Quill.

2. Per. Marry the Lord protect him, for bee's a good man, I clu bieffe him.

Enter Suffilly and Queene.

Pare. Here a comes me thinkes, and the Queene with him: He be the first fure.

2. Fes. Come backe foole, this is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my Lord Procedot.

Suff. How now fellow: would'ft any thing with me? t. Per. I pray my Lord pardon me, I tooke ye for my Lord Protector.

Quess. To my Lord Protector? Are your Supplications to his Lordhip? Let me fee them: what is thine? 1. Per. Mine is, and't please your Grace, against John t. Per. Mine is, and't please your Grace, against lobm Goodman, my Lord Cardinals Man, for keeping my House, and Lands, and Wise and all, from me.

Suff. Thy Wife too? that's forme Wrong indeede. What's yours? What's heere? Against the Duke of Suffolke, for enclosing the Commons of Melforde. How now, Sir Knaue?

2. Per. Alas Sir, I am but a poore Petitioner of our whole Towneship.

Peter. Against my Master Thomas Horner, for saying. That the Duke of Yorke was rightfull Heite to she Crowne.

Querne. What fay'fl thou? Did the Duke of Yorke fay, bee was rightfull Heite to the Crowne?

Peter. That my Miltreffe wee? No forfooth my Mafter faid, That he was, and that the King was an Viurper.

Suff. Who is there !

Ease Sermans.

Take this fellow in, and fend for his Master with a Pursevant presently: wee'le heare more of your matter before the King.

Exit.

Queens. And as for you that love to be protected Vinder the Wings of our Protectors Grace, Begin your Suites anew, and fue to him.

Teare the Supplication.

Away, base Cullions: Suffike let them goe.

All. Come, let's be gone. Querze. My Lord of Suffolke, tay, is this the guile? Is this the Fashions in the Court of England? Is this the Government of Britaines !le? And this the Royaltic of Albions King? What, shall lling Henry be a Pupill fill, Vnder the furly Glofters Governance? Am I a Queene in Title and in Stile, And must be made a Subject to a Duke? I tell thee Poole, when in the Citie Tours Thou ran'll a-tilt in honor of my Love, And ftol'ft away the I adies hearts of France ; I thought King Henry had refembled thee, In Courage, Courtship, and Proportion: But all his minde is bent to Holineffe, To number Auc - Maries on his Beades : His Champions, are the Prophets and Apoliles His Weapons, holy Sawes of facted Writ, His Studie is his Tilt-yerd, and his Loues Are brazen Images of Canonized Saints. Exit. I would the Colledge of the Cardinalla Would chuse him Pope, and carry him to Rome, And fee the Triple Crowne vpon his Head; That were a State fit for his Holineffe.

> Suff. Madame be patient: as I was cause Your Highnesse come to England, so will I In England worke your Graces full coment.

Queeno. Belide the baughtie Protector, have we Beauford The imperious Churchman; Somerfor, Buskingham, And grumbling Torke: and not the least of these, But can doe more in England then the King.

Saff. And he of their that can doe most of all, Cannot doe more in England then the Nemb: Salubury and Warvink are no simple Peeres.

Quetre. Not all thefe Lords do ver me halfe formuch, As that prowd Dame, the Lord Protectors Write: She fweepes it through the Court with troups of Ladies, More like an Empresse, then Duke Hampbryes Write: Strangers in Court, doe take her for the Queene: She beares a Dukes Reuenewes on her backe, And in her heart the scornes our Pouertie: Shall I not live to be avenged on her? Contemptuous base-borne Callot as she is, She vaunted mongst her Minions to ther day, The very trayne of her worst wearing Gowne, Was better worth then all my Fathers Lands, Till Saffork gave two Dukedomes for his Daughter.

Soff. Madame, my felfe houe lym'd a Buth for her,
And plac't a Quier of fuch enticing Birds,
The file will light to liften to the Leyes,
And neuer mount to trouble you againe.
So let her reft: and Madame lift to me,
For I am bold to countaile you in this,
Althoughly effection to the Cardinall,
Yet mult we loyne with him and with the Lords,
Till we have brought Duke Humpbry in differen.

As for the Duke of Yorke, this late Complaint
Will make but little for his benefit;
So one by one wee'le weed them all at last,
And you your selfe shall steere the happy Helme. Exc.

Sound a Sonner.

Enter the King, Duka Humfrey, Cardenall, Brickingbam, Yorks, Salubury, Warnicke, and the Duchoffe.

King. For my part, Noble Lords, I care not which,
Or Somerfet, or Torke, all's one to me.
Torke. If Torke have all demean'd himselfe in France,
Then let him be denay'd the Regent-ship.
Som. If Somerfet be unworthy of the Place,
Let Torke be Regent, I will yeeld to him.
Warre. Whether your Grace be worthy, yes or no,
Dispute not that Torke is the worthyer.

Card. Ambitious Werwicke, let thy betters speake, Wars. The Cardinall's not my bener in the field.
Buck, All in this presence are thy betters, Warwicke, Warwicke may live to be the best of all.
Salub-Peace Sonns, and show some reason Bucking bars.
Why Somerfer should be present in this?

Why some Because the King for footh will have it so.

Hump. Madame, the King is old enough himselfe
To give his Censure: These are no Womens matters.

Queene. If he be old enough, what needs your Grace

To be Protector of his Excellence?

Humf. Madame, I am Protector of the Realme, And at his pleasure will religne my Place. Suff. Religne is then, and leave thine insolence.

Since thou wert King; as who is King, but thou?
The Common-wealth bath dayly run to weach,
The Dolphun bath preusyl'd beyond the Seas,
And all the Peeres and Nobles of the Resime
Houe beene as Bond-men to thy Souersignaie.

Card. The Commons hast thou rackt, the Clergies Bags Are lanke and leane with thy Extorsions.

Sow. Thy fumptuous Buildings, and thy Wives Attyre Have east a malle of publique Treasurie.

Back, Thy Ctueltie in execution Vpon Offendors, hash exceeded Law, And left thee to the mercy of the Law.

Dezze. Thy fale of Offices and Towner in France,
If they were knowne, as the suspect is great,
Would make thee quickly bop without thy Head.

Ext. Elemfrey.

Give me my Farne: what Mynion, can ye not?

Sos gives the Duckesse abox on the ecre.

1 cry you mercy, Madamerwas it you?

Duch. Was't 1? yea, I it was, prowd French-woman:
Could 1 come necre your Besutie with my Nayles,
I could fet my ten Commandements in your face.

King. Sweet Aunt be quiet, ewas against her will.

Dach. Against her will, good King? looke to't in time.

Shee'se hamper thee, and dandle thee like a Baby:

Though in this place most Master weare no Breeches,

She shall not strike Dame Elizaer vareueng'd.

Ext: Elsarer,
Bark: Lord Cardinall, I will follow Ehsuer,
And liften after Humfry, bow he proceedes:

Shee's tickled now, her Fume needs no spurtes,
Shee's gallop farre enough to her destruction.

Ent Budginghern.

Enter Hundry.

Hamf. Now Lords my Choller being over-blowne, With walking once about the Quadrangle, Leome to talke of Common-wealth Affayres. As for your trightfull falle Objections, Prove them, and I lye open to the Lawi But God in mercie to deale with my Soule, As I in dutie love my King and Countrey. But to the matter that we have in hand: I fay, my Souteraigne, Take is meeted man Tobe your Regent in the Realme of France.

Suff. Before we make electron, give me leave. To thew fome reason, of no little force, That Torke is most vinneet of any man.

Torke. He tell thee, Saffolke, why I am ynemeet.
First, for I cannot flatter thee in Ptide:
Next of I be appointed for the Place,
My Lord of Somerset will keepe me bere,
Without Discharge, Money, or Furniture,
Till France be wonne into the Dolphins hands:
Last time I danc't attendance on his will,
Till Paris was besieg'd, somish, and lost.

Wars. That can I witheste, and a fouler fact
Did never Traytor in the Land commit.
Suff. Peace head-strong Warsete.

War. Image of Pride, why foodd I bold my peace?

Enter Armorer old bis Man,

Suff. Because here is a man accused of Treason,
Pray God the Duke of Yorke excuse himselfe.
Torke. Doth any one accuse Torky for a Traytos?
Kmg. What mean'st thou, Sufficke? tell ma, what are these?

Suff Please it your Malestie, this is the man. That do that cuse his Master of High Treason; His words were these: That Richard, Duke of Yorke, Was rightfull Heire vnto the English Crowne, And that your Maiestie was an Ysurper.

King. Say man, were these thy words?

Armorer. And't shall please your Maiestie, I never sayd nor thought any sech matter; God is my witnesse, I am fallely accus'd by the Villaine.

Peier. By their tenne bones, my Lords, headid (peake them to me in the Garret one Night, as wee were fromting my Lord of Yorkes Armor.

Torke. Base Dunghill Villaine, and Mechenicall Ile have thy Head for this thy Traytors speech: I doe beseech your Royall Maiestie, Let hum have all the rigor of the Law.

Armerer. Alas, my Lord, hang me if ever I spake the words: my accuser is my Prentice, and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did yow ypon his knees he would be even with me: I have good witnesse of this; therefore I befeech your Maieflie, doe not cast away an honest man for a Villaines accusation.

Eng. Vnckle, what shall we say to this in law?

Eumf. This doome, my Lord, if I may judge:
Let Somerfer be Regent o're the French,
Because in Torke this breedes suspicion;
And let these have a day appointed them
For single Combat, in convenient place,
For he hash withesse of his sevents malice:
This is the Law, and this Duke Homostryes doome.

Sera I

Som. I humbly thanke your Royalf Majestie.

Armorer. And I accept the Combat willingly.

Peter. Alas, my Lotd, I cannot fight; for Gods sake pitty my case: the spight of man prenayleth against me.

O Lord haue mercy vpon me, I shall neuer be able to fight a blow: O Lord my heart.

Humf. Sirtha, or you must fight, or elfe be hang'd.

King. Away with them to Peifon: and the day of Combat, shall be the last of the next moneth. Come
Somerfes, wee'le see thee sent away.

Flourish. Exenns.

Enter the Wetch, the two Priests, and Bulling brooks.

Hume. Come my Masters, the Duchesse I tell you expects performance of your promises.

Bulling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided: will her Ladythip behold and heare our Exorcismes?

Hume. I, what elfe? feare you not her courage.

Bulling. Thaue heard her reported to be a Woman of an innincible spirit: but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while wee be buse below; and so I pray you goe in Gods Name, and leaue vs.

Exit Hume.

Mother Iordan, be you profitate, and grouell on the Earth; Iohn Somibmell reade you, and let vs to our worke.

Enter Elianor alofe.

Elianor. Well faid my Masters, and welcome all: To this geere, the fooner the better.

Bulba, Pattence, good Lady, Wizards know their times:
Deepe Night, darke Night, the filent of the Night,
The sime of Night when Troy was fet on fire,
The time when Screech-owles cry, and Bandogs howle,
And Spirits walke, and Ghofts breake up their Graues;
That time beft fits the worke we have in hand.
Madame, fit you, and feare not: whom weer syfe,
Wee will make fast within a hallow'd Verge.

Here doe the Ceremonies belonging, and make the Cirele, Bullingbrooke or Southwell reades, Conjuco tc, &c. It Thunders and Lightens terribly: then the Spiris erfeth.

Spirit. Ad fum.

Witch. Afmath, by the eternall God,
Whose name and power thou tremblest at,
Answere that I shall aske: for till thou speake,
Thou shalt not passe from hence.

Spara. Aske what thou wilt; that I had layd, and done.

Bulung. First of the King: What shall of him become?

Spirit. The Duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose: But him out-live, and dye a violent death.

Bulling. What fates await the Duke of Suffolke?

Sport. By Water shall be dye, and take his end.

Bulling. What shall befall the Duke of Somerset?

Sport. Let him shun Castles.

Safer shall he be upon the sandie Plaines,

Then where Castles mounted stand. Haue done, sot more I hardly can endure.

Bulling. Discend to Darknesse, and the burning Lake: False Fiend avoide.

Thunder and Lightning. Exu Spirit.

Enter the Duke of Yorke and the Duke of Buckingham with their Guard, and breake in.

Torke. Lay hands upon these Traytors, and their trash: Beldam I thinke we watcht you at an ynch. What Madame, are you there the King & Commonweale Are deepely indebted for this pecce of paines; My Lord Protector will, I doubt it not, See you well guerdon'd for these good deferts.

Elianor. Not halfe so bad as thine to Englands King, Iniurious Duke, that threatest where's no cause.

Buck. True Madame, none at all; what call you this? Away with them, let them be clapt up close, And kept a funder: you Madame shall with vs. Stafford take her to thee.

Wee'le see your Trinkets here all forth-comming.

All away.

Exu.

Torke.Lord Buckingham, methinks you watch ther well:
A pretty Plot, well chosen to build upon.
Now pray my Lord, let's see the Deuils Writ.
What haue we here?
The Dake yet lues, that Henry shall depose:
Ent bim out-line, and dye a violent death.

Ent birmont-line, and die a violent death.

Why this is sulf Aio Aacids Romanoi vincere posso.

Well, to the rest:

Tell me what fare awaits the Duke of Suffolke?

By Water [hall he dye, and take his end.

What shall bettle the Duke of Sometset?

The Lord Duke of Sometset?

Let him shunne Casiles,
Safer shall be be upon the sandie Plaines,
Then where Casiles mounted stand.
Come, come, my Lords,
These Oracles are hardly attain'd,

And hardly understood.
The King is now in progresse towards Saint Albones,
With him, the Husband of this louely Lady:

With him, the Husband of this louely Lady:
Thither goes these Newes,
As fast as Horse can carry them:

A forry Breakfast for my Lord Protector.

Buck Your Grace shal give me leave, my Lord of York;
To be the Poste, in hope of his reward.

Torke. At your pleasure, my good Lord. Who's within there, hoe?

Enter a Serwingman.
Inuite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick
To suppe with me to motrow Night. Away.
Exems

Enter the Ring, Queene, Protector, Cardinall, and Suffolke, with Faulkners hallowing.

Queene. Beleeue me Lords, for flying at the Brooke, I faw not better sport these seuen yeeres day: Yet by your leaue, the Winde was very high, And ten to one, old seams had not gone out.

King. But what a point, my Lotd, your Faulcon made, And what a pytch she slew about the rest:

To see how God in all his Creatures workes, Yea Man and Birds are sayne of climbing high.

Suff. No maruell, and it like your Maiestie.

My Lord Protectors Hawkes doe towre so well, They know their Master loues to be aloss. And beares his thoughts aboue his Fauleons Pitch.

Glost. My Lord, tis but a base ignoble minde, That mounts no higher then a Bitd can sore.

Cord. 1

Card. I thought as much, hee would be about the Clouds.

Class. I my Lord Cardinall, how thinke you by that? Were It not good your Grace could flye to Heaven?

King. The Treasurje of cuerlesting Toy.

Card Thy Heaven is on Earth, thine Eyes & Thoughts Best on a Crowne, the Tresfure of thy Heart, Pernitious Protector, dangerous Peere,

That smooth's it so with King and Common-weale.

Gloft. What, Cardinali?

Is your Priest-hood growne peremptorle?
Tantane animu Calefibus re, Church-men to hot? Good Vnckle hide fuch mallice i

With fuch Holynelle can you doe it?

Suff. No mallice Sir, no more then well becomes

So good a Quarrell, and so bad a Peere. Glost. As who, my Lord?

Suf, Why, as you, my Lord,

Ant like your Lordly Lords Protectorship.
Gloft. Why Suffolke, England knowes thine infolence.

Queene. And thy Ambition, Gloffer. Kug. I prythee peace, good Queene, And whet not on thele furious Peeres,

For bleffed are the Peace-makers on Earth

Card, Let me be bleffed for the Peace I make Against this prowd ProteCor with my Sword.

Gloft. Faith holy Vnckle, would't were come to that. Card. Marry, wheo thou dar'lt.

Gloft. Make up no factious numbers for the matter, In thine owne person answere thy abuse.

Cord. I, where thou dar'lt not peepe And if thou dar ft, this Eucoing,

On the East fide of the Grove.

King. How now, my Lords: Card. Beleeve me, Coulin Glaffer,

Had not your man put up the Fowle so suddenly, We had had more sport.

Come with thy two hand Sword.

Gloft. True Vockle, are ye aduis'd?

The East side of the Groue:

Cardinall, I am with you.

King, Why how now, Vnckle Gloffer?

Glofe. Talking of Hawking; nothing elfe, my Lord.

Now by Gods Motner, Pricet,

He shaue your Crowne for this, Or all my Fence shall fayle.

Card. Medice serpsum, Protector see to't well, proted your felfe.

King. The Winder grow high, So doe your Stomacks, Lords: How itkeform is this Mulick to my heart?

When such Strings large, what hope of Harmony? I pray my Lorde let me compound this strife.

Emer one crying a Miracle.

Gloft. What meanes this noyle? Fellow, what Miracle do'ft thou proclayme?

One. A Miracle, a Miracle.

Suffolke. Come to the King, and tell him what Miracle.

One. Forfooth, a blinde man at Saint Albanes Shrine, Within this halfe house hath receiv'd his fight, A man that ne're law in his life before.

King. Now God be prays'd, that to belowing Soules Gives Light in Darknesse, Comfort in Despaire

Enter the Masor of Saint Albanes, and his Bertmen, bearing the man betweene two in a Chaper.

Card. Here comes the Townel-men, on Procession, To present your Highnesse with the man.

Kmg. Great is his comfort in this Earthly Vale, Although by his fight his finne be multiplyed.

Gloff. Stand by, my Masters, bring him neere the King,

His Highnesse pleasure is to talke with him.

King. Good-fellow, tell vs here the circumftance, That we for thee may glorifie the Lord.

What, hast thou beene long blinde, and now reflered? Simpe. Borne blinde, and't please your Grace.

Wife. lindeede was he. S.f. What Woman is this?

Wife. His Wife, and't like your Worthip.

Cloft. Hadft thou been his Mother, thou could'ff band

King. Where were thou borne

Storpe. At Barwick to the North, and't like your King. Poore Soule, Gods goodnesse hath beene great to thee t Let neuer Day nor Night Inhallowed paffe, But fall remember what the Lord hath done.

Queene. Tell me, good-fellow, Cam'st thou here by Chance, or of Denotion,

To this holy Shrines

Simpe. God knowes of pure Devotion, Being call'd a hundred times, and oftner, In my fleepe, by good Saint Alber : Who faid; Symon, come; come offer at my Shrine, And I will helpe thee.

Wife. Most true, forsooth ; And many time and oft my felfe have heard a Voyce,

To call him fo.

Card. What, art thou lamz? Simpe. I, God Almightie helpe me.

Suff. How cam'ft thou lo?

Simps, A fall off of a Tree.
Wife. A Plum.tree, Master,
Gless. How long hast thou beene blinde?
Simps. O borne so, Master.
Gless. What, and would st climbe a Tree? Simpe. But that in all my life, when I was a youth Wife. Too true, and bought his climbing very deare.

Cloft. Masse, thou lou'dst Plummes well, that would'st. venture fo.

Siepe. Alas, good Mafter, my Wife defired some Dainsons, and made me climbe, with danger of my Life.

Gloff. A subtill Knaue, but yet it shall not serve: Let me fee thing Eyes: winck now, now open them, In my opinion, yet thou feeft not well.

Simpe. Yes Master, cleare as day, I thanke God and Saint Albomes.

Gloff. Say It thou me so: what Colour is this Cloake

Simpe. Red Master, Red as Blood.

Cloft. Why that's well faid: What Colour is my Sampe. Black forfooth, Coale-Black, as Iez.

King. Why then, show know'st what Colour Let is Soff. And yet I thinke, let did be never fee.

Gloft. But

Glof. Bet Clockes and Gownes, before this day, a many.

Wife. Never before this day, in all his life, Glift. Tell me Sirrha, what's my Name?

Singe Alas Master, I know uoc.

Simpe. I know not.

Singe. No indeede, Mafter. Gloft. What's thine owoe Name?

Sumpe. Sander Simpeoxe, and if it please you, Mafter.

Gloff. Then Samder, fit there, The lying it Knaue in Christendome.

If thou hadft beene borne blinde, Thou might ff as well have knowne all our Names, As thus to name the feuerall Colours we doe weare. Sight may diffinguish of Colours:

But suddenly to nominate them all

It is impossible.

My Lords, Saint Albom here hath done a Miracle: And would ye not thinke it, Cunning to be great, That could reflore this Cripple to his Legges sgaine.

Simpe. O Mafter, that you could?
Glaft. My Mafters of Saint Albanes, Haue you not Beadles in your Towne,

And Things call'd Whippes? Maier. Yes, my Lord, if it please your Grace.

Cloft. Then fend for one presently.

Maior. Sirtha, goe ferch the Beadle hither straight.

Gloff. Now fetch me a Scoole hither by and by, Now Sirrha, if you meane to faue your felfe from Whipping, leape me over this Stoole, and ronne away

Simpe. Alas Mafter, I am not able to fland alone : You goe about to totture me in vaine.

Enter a Beadle with Whippes.

Cloft. Well Sir, we must have you finde your Legges. Sirrha Beadle, whippe him till he leape ouer that fame

Boadie. I will, my Lord. Come on Sirrha, off with your Doublet, quickly. Simpe, Alas Mafter, what shall I doe? I am not able to

After the Boadle harb hit bim once, he leapes oner the Stoole, and roomes away: and they follow and ory , A Meracle.

King. O God, feeft thou this, and bearest so long? Oreene. It made me laugh, to fee the Villaine runne. Gloft. Follow the Knaue, and take this Drab away. Wife. Alas Sir, we did it for pure need.

Gloft. Let the be whipt through every Market Towne, Till they come to Barwick, from whence they came.

Card. Duke Hwmfrey ha's done a Miracle to day. Soff. True: made the Lame to leape and Age away.
Gloft. But you have done more Miraeles then I: You made in a day, my Lord, whole Townes to fiye.

Enter Buckhogbom.

King What Tidings with our Coufin Buckingbam?

Buck, Such as my heart doth tremble to vafold: A fort of naughtie persons, lewdly bent, Vnder the Countenance and Confederacie

Of Lady Eliener, the Protectors Wife, The Ring-leader and Head of all this Roue, Haue practis'd dangeroully against your State. Dealing with Witches and with Conjurers, Whom we have apprehended in the Fact,
Rayling vp wicked Spirits from vnder ground,
Demanding of King Homies Life and Death,
And other of your Highnesse Privile Councell, As more at large your Grace shall understand.

Card. And fo my Lord Protector, by this meanes Your Lady is forth-comming, yet at London. This Newes I thinke hath turn'd your Weapons edge; Tis like, my Lord, you will not keepe your houre.

Gloff. Ambitious Church-man, leave to afflict my heart. Sorrow and griefe haue vanquisht all my powers; And vanquisht as I am, I yeeld to thee, Or to the meanest Groome.

King. O God, what mischiefes work the wicked onese Heaping confusion on their owne heads thereby, Queene. Glother, see here the Taindure of thy Nest, And looke thy felle be faultleffe, thou wert beft.

Cloft. Madame, for my felfe, to Heauen I doe appeale, How I have lou'd my King, and Common-weale: And for my Wife, I know not how it frands. Sorry I am to beare what I have heard. Noble face is: but if fhee have forgot Honor and Vertue, and convers't with fuch, As like to Pytch, defile Nobilitie; I banish her my Bed, and Companie And give her as a Prey to Law and Shame, That harh dis-honored Gloffers honeA Name.

Korg. Well, for this Night we will repole vs here t To morrow toward London, back againe, To looke into this Businesse thorowly, And call these foule Offendors to their Answeres; And poyfe the Caufe in Iustice equal Scales, Whole Beame stands fure, whole rightful cause prevailes. Flowrish.

Enter Torke, Salibury, and Warwick,

Torks. Now my good Lords of Salisbury & Warwick. Our simple Supper ended, give me leave, In this close Walke, to fatisfie my selfe, In crauing your opinion of my Title, Which is infallible, to Englands Crowne.

Salish. My Lord, I long to heare it at full,
Warm. Sweet Tarke begin: and if thy clayme be good, The Newills are thy Subjects to command.

Torke. Then thus : Edward the third, my Lords, had feven Sonnes a The first, Edward the Black-Prince, Prince of Wales; The second, William of Hatfield; and the third, Lowel, Duke of Clarence; next to whom, Was loba of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancafter; The fift, was Edmand Langley, Duke of Yorke & The fixt, was Thomas of Woodflock, Duke of Gloffer; William of Windfor was the feuenth, 11aft. Edward the Black-Prince dyed before his Father, And left behinde him Richard, his onely Soone, Who after Edward the third's death, raign'd as King, Till Henry Bullingbrooks, Duke of Lancefter, The eldest Sonne and Heire of John of Gaunt, Crown'd by the Name of Harry the fourth, Seiz'd on the Realme, depos'd the rightfull Fang, Sent his poore Queene to France, from whence the came,

And

And him to Pumfret; where as all you know. Harmelelle Richard was murthered transeroufly. Warm. Father, the Duke hath told the truth : Thus got the House of Lancuster the Crowne. Torke Which now they hold by force, and not by right For Richard, the first Sonnes Heire, being dead, The Issue of the next Sonne should have reign'd.

Salub. But William of Hatfield dyed without an Heire.

Torke. The third Sonne, Duke of Clarence, From whole Line I clayme the Crowne, Had Iffue Phillip, a Daughter, Who marryed Edmond Moremer, Earle of Marcha Edmand had Islue, Roger Earle of March; Koger had iffue, Edmond, Anne, and Elianor

Salub This Edmond, in the Reigne of Bulling brooks, As I have read, layd clayme vnto the Crowne, And but for Owen Glendour, had beene King; Who kept him in Captivitie, till he dyed.

But to the reft.

Torke. His elden Sifter, Anne, My Mother, being Heire vnto the Crowne, Marryed Richard, Earle of Cambridge, Who was to Edmond, Langley, Edward the thirds fife Sonnes Sonne; By her I clayme the Kingdome. She was Heire to Roger, Earle of March, Who was the Sonne of Edmond Mortuner, Who marryed Phillip, fole Daughter Vnto Lional, Duke of Clarence. So, if the Illue of the elder Sonne Succeed before the younger, I am King. Warw. What plaine proceedings is more plain then this? Herry doth clayme the Crowne from John of Gaunt, The fourth Sonne, Torke claymes it from the third: Till Lionels Iffue fayles, his should not reigne. It fayles not yet, but flourishes in thee, And in thy Sonnes, faire flippes of fuch a Stock. Then Father Solisbury, kneele we tagriher, And in this private Plot be we the firA, That shall salute our rightfull Sourraigne With honor of his Birth-right to the Crowne. Borb. Long live our Souersigne Rubard, Englands

Torte. We thanke you Lords: But I am not your King, till I be Crown'd, And that thy Sword be flayn'd With heart-blood of the House of Lancaster: And that's not suddenly to be perform'd, But with aduice and filent feerecie. Doe you as I doe in these dangerous dayes, Winke at the Duke of Suffolkes miolence, At Beaufords Ptide, at Somerfees Ambition, At Buckingbam, and all the Crew of them, Till they have loat'd the Shepheard of the Flock, That vertuous Prince, the good Duke Humfrey: Tis that they feeke; and they, m feeking that, Shall finde their deaths, If Torke can prophecie.

Salub. My Lord, breake we off; we know your minde

Warm. My heart affores me, that the Earle of Warwick Shall one day make the Duke of Yorke a King

Yorke And Newill, this I doe affure my felte, Richard shall live to make the Earle of Warwick The greatest man in England, but the King.

Sound Trumpets Enter the King and State. with Gurrd, to banth the Duchefe.

King. Stand forth Dame Elizar Cobbam. In fight of God, and vs, your guilt is great, Receive the Sentence of the Law for finne, Such as by Gods Booke are adjudg'd to death You fouce from hence to Prison, back againes From thence, vnto the place of Execution The Witch in Smithfield shall be burnt to ashes, And you three shall be strangled on the Gallowes. You Madame, for you are more Nobly borne, Despoyled of your Honor in your Life, Shall, after three dayes open Penance done, Live in your Countrey here, in Banishment, With Sir lobo Stady, in the Ile of Man.

Elianor. Welcome is Banishmens, welcome were cry

Cloft. Elianor, the Law thou feeft hath judged thee, I cannot iustifie whom the Law condemnes: Mine eyes are full of textes, my heart of griefe. Ah Humfry, this dishonor in thine age, Will bring thy head with forcow to the ground, I befeech your Maiestie give me leaue to goe ; Sorrow would follace, and mine Age would eafe.

King. Stay Humfrey, Duke of Glofter,

Ere thou goe, give vp thy Staffe, Horry will to himselfe Protector be, And God shall be my hope, my slay, my guide, And Lanthorne to my feete: And goe in peace, Humfrey, no leffe belou'd, Then when thou wert Procector to thy King.

Queme. I fee no reason, why a King of yeeres Should be to be protected like a Child God and King Hemy governe Englands Realme: Grue vp your Staffe, Sir, and the King his Realme.

Gloft. My Staffe? Here, Noble Henry, is my Staffe: As willingly doe I the same refigne, As ere thy Father Homy made it mine; And even as willingly at thy feete I leave it, As others would ambitioufly receive it. Farewell good King: when I am dead, and gone, May honorable Peace attend thy Throne.

Exu Glofter. Queene. Why now is Henry King and Margaret Queen, And Humfrey, Duke of Gloffer, Carce himfelfe, That beares so shrewd a mayme; two Pulls at once; His Lady banishe, and a Limbe lope off This Staffe of Honor ranght, there let n ftand, Where it best fits to be, in Henries hand. Suff. Thus droupes this loftie Pyne, & hangs his sprayes,

Thus Elsanors Pride dyes in her youngest dayes Torke, Lords, let him goe. Please it your Maiestie, This is the day appointed for the Combat, And ready are the Appellant and Defendant, The Armorer and his Man, to enter the Lifts, So pleale your Highnesse to behold the fight.

Queene. I, good my Lord: for purpolely therefore Left I the Court, to fee this Quarrell try'de.

King. A Gods Name fee the Lyfts and all things fa, Here let them end it, and God defend the right. Torke. I neuer law a fellow worle bestead, Or more afraid to fight, then is the Appellant, The feruant of this Armorer, my Lords.

Enter at one Doore the Armorer and his Neighbors drinking so him so much, that hee is drunke; and he enters with a Drumme before him, and his Staffe, with a Sand-bagge sastened to it: and at the other Doore his Man, with a Drumme and Sand-bagge, and Prentices drunking to him.

1. Neighbor. Here Neighbour Horner, I drinke to you in a Cup of Sack; and feare not Neighbor, you shall doe well enough.

2. Neighbor. And here Neighbour, here's a Cuppe of Charneco.

3. Neighbor. And here's a Pot of good Double-Beere Neighbor: drinke, and feare not your Man.

Armorer. Let it come yfaith, and He pledge you all,

and a figge for Peter.

1. Prent. Here Peter, I drinke to thee, and be not a-fraid.

2. Prent. Be merry Peter, and feare not thy Master,

Fight for credit of the Prentices.

Peter. I thanke you all:drinke, and pray for me, I pray you, for I thioke I have taken my last Draught in this World. Here Robin, and if I dye, I give thee my Aporne; and Will, thou shall have my Hammer: and here Tom, take all the Money that I have. O Lord blesse me, I pray God, for I an never able to deale with my Master, hee hath learnt so much sence already.

Salub. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blowes.

Sirrha, whar's thy Name ?

Peter, Peter forfooth.
Salub, Peter? what more?

Peter. Thumpe.

Salub. Thumpe? Then fee thou thumpe thy Mafter

Annorer. Masters, I am come hither as it were vpon my Mans instigation, to proue him a Knaue, and my selfe an honest man: and touching the Doke of Yorke, I will take my death, I neuer meant him any ill, nor the King, nor the Queene: and therefore Poter have at thee with a downe-tight blow.

Torke. Dispatch, this Knaues tongue begins to double.

Sound Trampers, Alarum to the Combattants.

They fight, and Peter strikes bim downe.

Armorer. Hold Peter, hold, I confesse, I confesse Trea-

Torke. Take away his Weapon: Fellow thanke God, and the good Wine in thy Masters way.

Peter. O God, have I overcome mine Enemies in this presence? O Peter, thou hast presury!'d in right.

King. Goe, take hence that Traytor from our fight,
For by his death we doe perceive his guilt,
And God in Iustice hath reweal'd to vs
The truth and innocence of this poore fellow,
Which he had thought to have murther'd wrongfully.
Come fellow, follow vs for thy Reward.

Sound a stours to. Execut.

Enter Dake Hamfrey and his Men in Mourning Cloakes.

Gloft. Thus fornetimes hath the brightest day a Cloud: And after Summer, euermore succeedes Barren Winter, with his wrathfull nipping Cold; So Cares and Joyes abound, as Seasons steet. Sirs, what's a Clock?

Sers. Tenne, my Lord.

Gloft. Tenne is the houre, that was appointed one,
To watch the comming of my punisht Duchesse:
Vnneath may shee endure the Flintie Streets,
To treade them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, illean thy Noble Minde abrooke
The abie& People, gazing on thy face,
With envious Lookes laughing at thy shame,
That cift did follow thy prowd Cheriot-Wheeles,
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.
But soft, I thinke she comes, and lle prepare
My teare-stayn'd eyes, to see her Miseries.

Enter the Duchesse in a white Sheet, and a Topst burning in her kand, with the Sherise and Officers.

Sorn. So please your Grace, wee'le take her from the Sherife.

Glosser. No, stirre not for your lives, let her passe

by.

Elienor. Come you, my Lord, to fee my open shame? Now thou do'st Penance too. Looke how they gaze, See how the giddy multitude doe point, And nodde their heads, and throw their eyes on thee. Ah Gloster, hide thee from their hatefull lookes, And in thy Closer pent vp, tue my shame, And banne thine Enemies, both mine and thine.

Gloft. Be patient, gentle Nell, forget this griefe. Eleanor. Ah Glester, teach me to forget my felfe: For whilest I thinke I am thy married Wife, And thou a Prince, Protector of this Land; Me thinkes I should not thus be led along, Mayl'd'vp in shame, with Papers on my back, And follow'd with a Rabble, that reloyce To fee my reares, and heare my deepe-fer groanes. The ruthleffe Flint doth cut my tender feet, And when I flart, the envious people laugh, And bid me be aduited how I treade Ah Humfrey, can I beare this shamefull yoake? Trowest thou, that ere He looke vpon the World, Or count them happy, that enloyes the Sunne? No: Darke shall be my Light, and Night my Day. To thinke vpon my Pompe, shall be my Hell Sometime lie say, lam Duke Humfreyes Wife, And he a Prince, and Ruler of the Land : Yet so he rul'd, and such a Prince he was, As he flood by, whileft I, his forlorne Ducheffe, Was made a wonder; and a pointing flock To every idle Rascall follower. But be thou milde, and blush not at my shame, Nor flirre at nothing, till the Axe of Death Hang over thee, as fure it shortly will. For Suffolke, he that can doe all in all With her, that hateth thee and hates vs all, And Torke, and impious Beauford, that falle Prieft, Haue all lym d Bushes to betray thy Wings, And Bye thou how thou canft, they le tangle thec. But feare not it ou, vntill thy foot be laar'd, Nor never feeke prevention of thy foes.

Gloft. Ah Nelt, for beare: thou ay mest all awry,
I must offend, before I be attainted:
And had I twentie times so many foes,
And each of them had twentie times their power,
All these could not procure me any scathe,
So long as I am loyall, true, and crimelesse.
Would'st have me rescue thee from this reproach?

Why

Gloft. Witnesse my toures, I cannot flay to speake. Exts Glofter.

Elianor. Art thou gone to? all comfort goe with thee, For some abides with me : my loy, is Death; Death, at whose Name I oft have beene afeat'd, Because I wish'd this Worlds eternitie; Stanky, 1 prethee goe, and take me hence, I care not whither, for I begge no favor; Onely convey me where thou are commanded.

Stanley. Why, Madame, that is to the lie of Man,

There to be vs'd according to your State.

Elianor. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach : And shall I then be vsid reproachfully t Seanley. Like to a Duchelle, and Duke Humfreyer Lady,

According to that State you shall be vs'd. Elianor. Sherife farewell, and better then I fare,

Although thou liast beene Conduct of my shame. Sherife. It is my Office, and Madame pardon me. Elianor. I, I, farewell, thy Office is discharg'd:

Come Stanley, shall we goe? Stanley. Madame, your Penance done,

Throw off this Sheet,

And goe we to attyre you for our lourney, Elianor. My thame will not be shifted with my Sheet: No, it will hang vpon my richeft Robes, And thewie felfe, areyre me how I can. Goe, leade the way, I long to fee my Prison.

King. I muse my Lord of Glotter is not come: 'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man, What c're occasion keepes him from vs now

Queene. Can you not seed or will ye not observe The frrangenesse of his alter'd Countenance? With what a Maiestie he beares himselfe, How infolent of late he is become, How prowd, how peremptorie, and valike himselfe. We know the time fince he was milde and affable, And if we did but glance a farre-off Looke, Immediately he was voon his Knee,

That all the Court admir'd him for Submiffion Box meet him now, and be it in the Morne, When every one will give the time of day He knits his Brow, and thewer an angry Eye, And passet by with fife vabowed Knee, Dildaining datie that to vs belongs Small Curres are not regarded when they gryene, But great men tremble when the Lyon rores, And Humfry is no little Man in England First note, that be is neere you in difeent, And should you fall, he is the next will roowne. Me seemeth then, it is no Policie, Respecting what a rancorous minde he beares, And his advantage following your deceafe, That he should come about your Royall Person, Or be admitted to your Highnelle Councell By flatterie hath he wonde the Common hearts : And when he please to make Commotion, Tis to be fear'd they all will follow hun Now tisthe Spring, and Weeds are shallow-rooted, Suffer them now, and they'le o're-grow the Gorden, And chooke the Herbes for want of Husbandry. The reverence are I beare voto my Lord, Made me collet these dangers in the Duke. If it be fond, cell it a Womans feste: Which feare, if better Reasons can supplant. I will subscribe, and fay I wrong'd the Duke. My Lord of Suffolke, Buckingham, and Yorke, Reprove my allegation, if you can, Or elle conclude my words effectuall. Soff. Well hath your Highneste scene into this Duke:

And had I first beene put to speake my minde, I thinke I should have told your Graces Tale. The Duchesse, by his subornation, Vpon my Life began her diuellish practifes : Or if he were not privile to those Faults, Yet by reputing of his high discent, As next the King, he was successive Herre, And such high vaunts of his Nobilitie. Did instigate the Bedlam braine-fick Duchesse, By wicked meanes to frame our Soutraignes fall Smooth tunnes the Water, where the Brooke is deepe, And in his simple shew he harbours Treason. The Fox barkes not, when he would steale the Lambe No, no, my Souerzigne, Glouffer is a man Vnfounded yet, and full of deepe deceir. Cad. Did he not, contrary to forme of Law, Deuile ftrange deaths, for small offences done ?

Torke. And did he not, in his Protectorship. Leuie great summes of Money through the Realme, For Souldiers pay in France, and never fent it? By meanes whereof, the Townes each day resolted.

Buck. Tut, thefe are perty faults to faults voknowne, Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Haraften

King. My Lords at once: the care you have of vs, To mowe downe Thomes that would annoy out Foot, Is worthy prayle: but shall I speake my conscience, Out Kinfman Gleffer is as innocent, From meaning Treason to our Royall Person, As is the fucking Lambe, or harmelesse Doue: The Duke is vertuous, milde, and too well given, To dreame on eaill, or to worke my downefall.

King. Cold Newes, Lord Somerfer: but Gods will be

Torke. Cold Names for me: for I had hope of France, As firmely as I hope for fertile England. Thus are my Bloffomes blafted in the Bud. And Caterpillers cate my Leaues away : But I will remedie this geare ere long, Or fell my Tide for a glorious Grane.

Gloft. All happinesse vnto my Lord the King: Pardon, my Liege, that I have ftay'd fo long. Suff. Nay Glefter, know that thou are come too foone, Vnleffe thou were more loyall then thou are: I doe arrest thee of High Treason here.

Gloft. Well Suffeller, thou shalt not see me blush, Nor change my Countenance for this Arrest: A Heart valpotted, is not easily daunted. The pureft Spring is not fo free from mudde As I am cleare from Treason to my Soueraigne. Who can accuse me? wherein am I guiltie?

Tarke.' Tis thought, my Lord, That you tooke Bribes of France And being Protector, flay'd the Souldiers pay, By meanes whereof, his Highnesse bath lost France.

Gloft. Is it but thought fo? What are they that thinke it? I never rob'd the Souldiers of their pay, Nor euer had one penny Bribe from France. So helpe me God, as I have watcht the Night, I Night by Night, in studying good for England. That Doyt that ere I wrested from the King, Or any Groze I hoorded to my vie. Be brought against me at my Tryall day. No: many a Pound of mine owne proper flore, Because I would not taxe the needie Commons, Have I dif-pursed to the Garrisons, And neuer ask'd for restitution.

Card. It ferues you well, my Lord, to fay fo much. Gloff. I say no more then truth, so helpe me God. Torke. In your Protectorship, you did devile Strange Tortures for Offendors, neuer heard of, That England was defend by Tyrannie. Gloft. Why tis well known, that whiles I was Protector, Pittie was all the fault that was in me: For I should melt at an Offendors teares. And lowly words were Ranforne for their fault: Valeffe it were a bloody Murtherer, Or foule felonious Theefe, that fleee'd poore paffengers,

I never gave them condigne punishment

Murther indeede, that bloodie finne, I tortur'd Aboue the Felon, or what Trespas else. Saff My Lord, thefe faults are easie, quickly answer &

But mightier Crimes are lay'd vnto your charge, Whereof you cannot eafily purge your felfe,

I doo arrest you in his Highnesse Name, And here commit you to my Lord Cardinall To keepe, vnikl your further time of Fryall.

King. My Lord of Glofter, 'tis my special hope,

That you will cleare your felfe from all fulpence, My Conscience tells me you are imocent.

Glof. Ah gracious Lord, these dayes are dangerous: Vertue is choakt with foule Ambition, And Charitie chas'd hence by Rancours hand a Foule Subornation is predominane, And Equitie exil d your Highnesse Land. I know, their Complot is to have my Life: And if my death might make this Iland happy, And proue the Period of their Tyrannie, I would expend it with all willingnesse. But mine is made the Prologue to their Play : For rhoulands more, that yet suspect no penil, Will not conclude their plotted Tragedie. Beaufords red sparkling eyes blab his hearts mallice, And Suffeits cloudie Brow his storme hates Sharpe Buckingham unburthens with his tongue, The envious Load that lyes upon his heart: And dogged Tarke, that reaches at the Moone Whose over-weening Arme I have plucks back, By false accuse doch levell as my Life. And you, my Soversigne Lady, with the reft, Caufeleffe haue lay'd difgraces on my head, And with your best endeaour have fire'd vp My llefest Liege to be mine Enemie : I all of you have lay'd your heads together, My felfe had notice of your Conventicles, And all to make away my guiltleffe Life. I shall not want faile Witneste, to condemne me, Nor ftore of Tressons, to augment my guilt: The ancient Proverbe will be well effected, A Staffe is quickly found to beat a Dogge.

Card. My Liege, his rayling is incollerable. If those that care to keepe your Royall Person From Treasons secret Knife, and Traytors Rage, Be thus vpbrayded, chid, and rated at And the Offendor graunted scope of speech, Twill make them coole in zeale vnto your Grace.

Suff. Hath he not twit our Soueraigne Lady here With ignominious words, though Clarkely coucht? As if the had suborned some to sweete Falle allegations, to o'rethrow his state, Qu, Box I can give the lofer leave to chide. Gloft. Fatre truer spoke then meant: I lose indeede, Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me false, And well fuch lofers may have leave to speake.

Buck. Hee'le wrest the sence, and hold vs here all day. Lord Cardinall, he is your Prisoner.

Card. Sirs, sake away the Duke, and guard him fure. Gloss. Ah, thus King Henry throwes away his Crutch, Before his Legges be firme to beare his Body. For what's more miserable then Discontent? Ah Vnckle Humfrey, in thy face I fee The Map of Honor, Truth, and Loyaltie And yet, good Humfre, is the houre to come, That ete I prou'd thee falle,or feat'd thy faith. What lowing Scarre now emules thy efface? That thefe great Lords, and Margaret our Queene, Doe leeke luburifion of thy harmelesse Life. Thou never didft them wrong, nor no man wrong: And as the Butcher takes away the Calle, And binds the Wretch, and beats it when it flrayes, Bearing it to the bloody Slaughter-house; Euen lo remorfelesse have they borne him hence : And as the Damme runner lowing vp and downe, Looking the way her hatmeleffe young one went And can doe naught but wayle her Darlings lolle, Euen so my selfe bewayles good Glefters cale With fad vnhelpefull teares, and with dimn'd eyes; Looke after him, and cannot doe him good: So mightie are his vowed Enemies. His fortunes I will weepe, and twixt each groane, Say, who's a Traytor? Cleffer he is none. Exn. Queene. Free Lords .

Cold Snow melts with the Sonnes hot Beames:

Honry, my Lord, is cold in great Affaires.

Too full of foolish pittie: and Gloffers show
Beguiles him, as the mournefull Crocodila

With forrow snares relenting passengers:
Or as the Snake, coll'd in a flowring Banke,
With shining checker'd flough doth sting a Child,
That for the beautie thinkes it excellent.
Beleeue me Lords, were none more wise then I,
And yet herein I judge mine owne Wit good;
This Glosser should be quickly rid the World,
To rid as from the seare we have of him.

Card. That he should dye, is worth te pollicie, But yet we want a Colour for his death: "The moet he be condemn'd by course of Law.

Suff. But in my minde, that were no pollicle: The King will labout fill to fauchis Life, The Commons haply rife, to fauchis Life; And yet we have but triviall argument, More then mistrust, that shewes him worthy death.

Torke. So that by this, you would not have him dye, Suff. Alt Torke, no man alive, to faine as I. Torke. 'Tis Torke that bath more reason for his death.

But my Lord Cardinall, and you my Lord of Suffolke, Say as youthinke, and speake it from your Soules: Wer't not all one, an emptie Eagle were set, To guard the Chicken from a hungry Kyte, As place Dake Humfrey for the Kings Protector?

Queene, So the poore Chicken should be sure of death.

Suff. Madame 'tis true: and wer'e not madnesse then,
To make the Fox surveyor of the Fold?
Who being accur'd a craftic Murtherer,
His guitt should be but idly posted ouer,
Because his purpose is not executed.
No: let him dye, in that he is a Fox,
By nature provid an Enomie to the Flock.
Before his Chaps be stayn'd with Crimson blood,
As Humster provid by Reasons to my Liege.
And doe not stand on Quillets how to say him:
Be it by Gynoes, by Snares, by Subtlerie,
Sleeping, or Waking, 'tis no matter how,
So be be dead; for that is good decett,
Which mates him first, that first intends decelt.

Owen. Three Noble Suffelly, its refolutely spoke.

Suff Not resolute, except so much wets done,
For things are often spoke, and seldome meant,
But that my heart accordeth with my tongee,

Cord. But I would have him dead my Lord of Suffelker,

Ere you can take due Orders for a Prich:
Say you confere, and censure well the deed,
And He proude his Executioner,
I tender so the safetie of my Liege.

Suff. Here is my Hand, the deed is worthy doing.

And change misdoubt to resolution; Be that thou hop'ft to be, or what thou art; Refigne to death, it is not worth th'enioying: Let pale-fac't feare keepe with the meane-borne man, And finde no harbor in a Royall heart. Faster the Spring-time showres, comes thought on thought, And not a thought, but thinkes on Dignitic. My Brayne, more buse then the laboring Spidet, Weaues tedious Snares to trap mine Enemies. Well Nobles, well: 'tis politikely done, To fend me packing with an Hoaft of men: I feare me, you but warme the flarued Snake, Who cherisht in your breafts, will fling your hearts. Twas men I lackt, and you will give them me; I take it kindly: yet be well assur'd, You put sharpe Weapons in a mad-mans hands. And for a minister of my intent, I have feduc'd a head-firong Kenrishman, John Cade of Ashford, To make Commotion, as full well he can, Vnder the Title of John Afortimer. In Ireland have I seene this stubborne Cade Oppose himselfe against a Troupe of Kernes, And sought so long, till that his thighes with Darts Were almost like a sharpe-quill'd Porpentine: And in the end being releved, I have feene Him capre vpright like a wilde Morilco, Shaking the bloody Darts, as be his Bells. Full often, like a shag-hayr'd craftie Kerne, Hath he conversed with the Enemie, And vndiscouer'd, come to me againe, And given me notice of their Villanies, This Deuill here shall be my substitute; For that John Mortimer, which now is dead, In face, in gate, in speech he doth resemble. Som. Rere vp his Body, wring him by the Nole. Qu.Runne, goe, helpe, helpe: Oh Henry ope thine eyes. Suff. He doth reuiue againe, Madame be patient.

King. Oh Heaueoly God.
24. How fares my gracious Lord?

Suff. Comfort my Soueraigne, gracious Henry comfort.

King . What, doth my Lord of Suffolke comfort me? Came he right now to fing a Rauens Note, Whose dismall tune bereft my Vitall powres: And thinkes he, that the chirping of a Wren, By crying comfort from a hollow breaft, Can chale away the first-concerned sound? Hide not thy poylon with fuch fugred words, Lay not thy hands on me : forbeare I fay, Their touch affrights me as a Serpents fting. Thou balefull Mellenger, out of my fight: Vpon thy eye-balls, murderous Tyrannie Sits in grim Maiestie, to fright the World. Looke not vpon me, for thine eyes are wounding; Yet doe not goe away : come Bafiliske, And kill the innocent gazer with thy light: For in the shade of death, I shall finde ioy; In life, but double death, now Glofter's dead.

Queene. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolke thus? Although the Duke was enemie to him, Yet he most Christian-like laments his death: And for my felfe, Foe as he was to me, Might liquid reares, or heart-offending groanes, Or blood-confuming fighes recall his Life;

I would be blinde with werping, ficke with grones, Looke pale as Prim-rofe with blood-drinking fighes, And all to lique the Noble Duke alive. What know I how the world may deeme of me? For it is knowne we were but hollow Friends: It may be judg'd I made the Duke away. So fhall my name with Slanders tongue be wounded, And Printes Courts be fill'd with my reproach: This ges I by his death: Aye me whappie, To be a Queene, and Crown'd with infamie.

King. Ah wae is me for Glofter, wretched man. Queen. Be woe for me, more wretched then he is. What, Doft thou turne away, and hide thy face? I amno losthfome Leaper, looke on me. Whate Artithou like the Adder waxen deafe? Be poylenous too, and kill thy forlorne Queene. Is all thy comfort flut in Glofters Tombe? Why then Dame Elianor was neere thy toy. Erect his Statue, and worship it, And make my Image but an Ale-house figne. Was I for this nye wrack'd vpon the Sea And twice by ankward winde from Englands banke Droue backe againe vnto my Natiue Clime. What boaded this? but well fore-warning winde Did feeme to fay, feeke not a Scorpsons Neft, No: fet no footing on this vnkinde Shore. What did I then? But curft the gentle gufts, And he that loos'd them forth their Brazen Caves, And bid them blow towards Englands bleffed shore, Or turne out Sterne vpon a dreadfull Rocke : Yet Æolus would not be a murcheret, But left that hatefull office voto thee. The pretty vaulting Searchis' dto drowne me, Knowing that thou wouldft have me drown'd on shore With tearer as falt as Sea, through thy vakindnesse. The splitting Rockes cowt'd in the finking fands, And would not dash me with their tagged fides, Because thy flinty heart more hard then they, Might in thy Pallace, perish Eleanor. As farre as I could ken thy Chalky Cliffes, When from thy Shore, the Tempest beste vs backe, I Rood vpon the Hatches in the forme: And when the duskie sky, began to rob My earnest-gaping-fight of thy Lands view, I tooke a coftly lewell from my necke, A Hartit was bound in with Diamonds, And threw it towards thy Land : The Sea receiv'dit, And fo I wish'd thy body might my Heart: And even with this, I loft faire Englands view, And bid mine eyes be packing with my Hear. And call d them blinde and duskie Specacles, For looking ken of Albions wished Coaft. How often have I tempted Soffolkes tongue (The agent of thy foule inconstancie)
To fit and watch me 25 Ascaniu did, When he to madding Dido would vafold His Fathers Acts, commenc'd in burning Troy. Am I not witchelike her? Or thou not falselike him? Ayeme, I can no more: Dye Elinar, For Horry weepes, that thou dost live so long.

That want their Leader, leaster up and downe,
And care not who they fling in his cruenge,
My felle have calm'd their ipitenfull mutuse,
Vntill they heare the order of his death.

King. Thathe is dead good Warwick, 'tis too true, But how he dyed, God knowes, not Hong. Buter his Chamber, view his breathlesse Co:pes, And comment then upon his sodaine death.

War. That shall I do my Liege; Stay Selsburie With the rude multitude, till I returne.

Rang. O thou that indgest all things, stay my thoghts My thoughts, that labour to persuade my soule, Some violent hands were laid on Humfrer lase; If my suffect be faste, forgive me God, For judgement onely doth belong to thee: Fainc would I go to chase his palse laps, With twenty thousand killes, and to draine Vpon his face an Ocean of saturates, To tell my love vnto his dumbe deasterunke, And with my singers seelehis hand, vnseeling; But all in vaine are these meane Obsequies, Bed pas forth.

And to furney his dead and earthy Image:
What were it but to make my fortow greater Warw. Come hither gracious Soueraigne, view this

King. That is to fee how deepe my grove is made, For with his foule fled all my worldly foliace: For feeing him, I feemy life in death.

War. As furely as my foule meends to line
With that dread King that tooke our flate upon him,
To free us from his Fathers wrathfull corfe,
I do beleeue that violent hands were laid
Vpon the life of this thrice-famed Duke.

Suf. A dreadfull Oath, fworne with a folerm tongue: What instance gives Lord Warwicke for his vow. Wer. See how the blood is setted in his face.

Oft have I feene a timely-parted Ghoft,
Of ashy semblance, meager, pale, and bloodsesse,
Being all descended to the labouring heart.
Who in the Consist that it holds with death,
Attracts the same for aydance 'gainst the enemy,
Which with the heart there cooles, and no're returneth,
To blosh and beautifie the Cheeke againe.
But see, his face is blacke, and full of blood:
His eye, balles further out, than when he lived,
Scaring sell gassly, like a strangled man:
His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp:
And was by rear'd, his nostrils stretch with strugling:
His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp:
And was display'd for Life, and was by strength subdude.

Looke on the sheets his haire (you see) is sucking.

Like to the Summers Corne by Tempest lodged:
It cannot be but he was murdred heere,

The least of all these signes were probable.

Suf. Why Warwicke, who should do the D. to death?

My selfe and Beauford had him in protection,

And we I hope sit, are no murtherers.

War, But both of you were vowed D. Humfries foes, And you (forfooth) had the good Duke to keepe: Tis like you would not feast him like a friend, And 'tis well feene, be found an enemy.

Queen. Than you belike suspect these Noblemen, As guilty of Duke Emmfres timelesse demla worw. Who finds the Heyter dead, and bleeding fresh, And fees fast-by, a Butcher with an Axe, But will suspect, twas he that made the saughter? Who finds the Partridge in the Puttocks Neft, But may imagine how the Bird was dead, Although the Kyte forre with vnbloudied Beake? Euen fo suspitious is this Tragedie,

War.

Qu. Are you the Butcher, Suffolkt where's your Knife? Is Reauford tearm'd a Kyte? where are his Tallons? Suff. I weare no Knife, to flaughter fleeping men, But here's a vengefull Sword, rufted with esfe, That shall be scowred in his rancorous heart, That flanders me with Murthers Crimfon Badge. Say, if thou dar'st, prowd Lord of Warwickshire, That I am Eultie in Duke Humfreyer death.

Warw. What dares not Warwick if falle Suffolke dans

Qu. He dates not calme his contumellous Spirit, Nor ceafe to be an arrogant Controller, Though suffethe date him twentie thouland times.

Warw. Madame be still : with reuerence may I say, For every word you speake in his behalfe,

Is flander to your Royall Dignitie.

Suff. Blunt-witted Lord, ignoble in demeanor, If ever Lady wrong'd her Lord fo much, Thy Mother tooke into her blamefull Bed Some sterne vntutur'd Churle; and Noble Stock Was graft with Crab-tree flippe, whose Fruit thou art, And never of the Newils Noble Race.

Mow. But that the guilt of Murther bucklers thee, And I should rob the Deaths-man of his Fee, Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames, And that my Soucraignes presence makes me milde, I would, false murd rous Coward, on thy Knee Make thee begge pardon for thy passed speech, And fay, it was thy Mother that thou meant B, That thou thy felle wast borne in Bastardie; And after all this fearefull Homage done, Give thee thy hyre, and fend thy Soule to Hell, Pernicious blood-fucker of fleeping men.

Suff. Thou shalt be waking, while I shed thy blood. If from this presence thou dat'st goe with me. Wow. A way even now, or I will drag thee hence : Viworthy though thou art, He cope with thee, And doe forme feruice to Dake Humfroges Ghost.

King. What ftronger Brest-place then a heart untainted? Thrice is he arm'd, that hath his Quarrell juft; And he but naked, though lockt vp in Steele, Whose Conscience with Iniuffice is corrupted. A nogfe within.

Queone. What noyle is this?

Emer Suffolke and Warmicks, with their Weapons drawne.

King. Why how now Lords & Your wrathfull Wespons drawne, Here in our presence? Dare you be so bold? Why what cumultuous clamor have we here? Suff. The crayt'rous warmick, with the men of Bury, Set all vpon me, mightie Soueraigne.

Enser Salisbury Salish Sits stand apart, the King shall know your minde.

Dread Lord, the Commons fend you word by me, Valeffe Lord Suffelle Araight be done to death Or banished faire Englands Territories, They will by violence teare him from your Pellace, And torture him with grievous lingring death. They fay, by him the good Duke Humfrey dy'de: They fay, in him they feare your Highnesse death; And meere inflinct of Loue and Loyaltie, Free from a Rubborne opposite intent, As being thought to contradict your liking, Makes them thus forward in his Banishment. They fay, in care of your most Royall Person, That if your Highnesse should intend to sleepe, And charge, that no man should disturbe your rest, In paine of your diflike or paine of death; Yet notwithfranding such a strait Edict, Were there a Serpent feene, with forked Tongue, That Byly glyded towards your Malestie, It were but necessarie you were wak't. Least being suffer'd in that harmefull sumber, The mortall Worme might make the fleepe eternall. And therefore doe they cry, though you forbid, That they will guard yon, where you will, or no, From fuch fell Serpents as falle Suffolke is ; With whole inuenomed and fatall fling, Your louing Vnckle, twentie times his worth, They say is chamefully bereft of life.

Commons within. An answer from the King, my Lord of Salisbury

Suff. Tis like the Commons, rude enpolisht Hindes, Could fend fuch Mellage to their Soueraigne: But you, my Lord, were glad to be imploy'd, To shew how queint an Orator you are. But all the Honor Salisbury bath wonne, Is, that he was the Lord Embassador, Sent from a fort of Tinkers to the King.

wabin. An answer from the King, or wee will all breake in.

King. Goe Salisbury, and tell them all from me, I thanke them for their tender louing care; And had I not beene cited fo by them, Yet did I purpose so they doe entrest: For fure, my thoughts doe housely prophecie, Mischance voto my State by Suffolkes meanes.
And therefore by his Maiestie I sweare, Whole farre-voworthie Deputie I am, He shall not breathe infection in this ayre, But three dayes longer, on the paine of death.

20. Oh Henry, let me pleade for gentle Suffalle.
King Vngentle Queene, to call him gentle Suffalle. No more I lay: if thou do'ft pleade for him, Thou wilt but adde encresse vnto my Wrath. Had I but fayd, I would have kept my Word; But when I (weare, it is irreuocable: If after three dayes space thou here bee'st found, On any ground that I am Ruler of, The World shall not be Ransome for thy Life. Come Warnicke, come good Warnicke, goe with mee,

I have great matters to impart to thee. Ex
Qu. Mischance and Sorrow goe along with you, Hearts Discontent, and lowre Affiction, Be play-fellowes to keepe you companie: There's two of you, the Deuill make a third, And three-fold Vengeance tend vpon your fteps. Suff. Ceale, gentle Queene, thele Execuations,

And let thy Suffolke take his beaute leave.

Quecne. Pye

The Second Part of Henry the Size.

Queen. Fye Coward woman, and foft harred wretch, Hall thou not spirit to cuife thine enemy.

suf. A plague vpon them : wherefore should I cuelle theme

Would cutles kill, as doth the Mandrakes grone, I would inuent as bitter fearthing termes, As curst, as harth, and horrible to heare, Deliuer'd ftrongly through my fixed teeth, With full as many fignes of deadly hate, As leane-fac'd enuy in her loathsome caue, My toogue snould stumble in mine carnest words, Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten Fliat, Mine heire be fixt an end, as one diffract: I, every loynt should seeme to cutse and ban, And even now my burthen'd heat t would breake Should I not cutie them. Poylon be their drinke. Gall, worse then Gall, the daintiest that they taste a Their sweetest shade, a groue of Cypresse Trees: Their checreft Prospect, murd'ring Basiliskes: Their Softest Touch, as Smart as Lyzards Aings: Their Mulicke, frightfull as the Serpents hille, And boading Screech-Owles, make the Confort full. All the foule terrors in darke feated hell-

Q. Enough (weet Suffolke, thou torment'it thy felfe, And these dread curses like the Sunne 'gainst glasse, Or like an ouer-charged Gun, recoile,

And turnes the force of them vpon thy felfe.

Suf. You bad me ban, and will you bid me leave? Now by the ground that I am banish'd from, Well could I curle away a Winters night, Though Randing naked on a Mountaine top, Where byting cold would never let graffe grow, And thinke it but a minute spent in sport.

Qu. Oh, let me intreat thee cease, give me thy hand, That I may dew it with my mournfull tea es: Nor let the raine of heaven wet this place, To wash away my wofull Monuments.
Oh, could this kisse be printed in thy hand, That thou might'st thinke vpon these by the Seale, Through whom a thoutand fighes are breath'd for thee. So get thee gone, that I may know my greefe, 'Tis but furmiz'd, whiles thou art franding by, As one that furfets, thinking on a want: I will repeale thee, or be well affur'd, Aduenrure to be banished my selfe : And banished I am, if but from thee. Go, speake not to me; even now be gone. Oh go not yet. Even thus, two Friends condemn'd, Embrace, and kiffe, and take ten thousand leaves, Loather a hundred times to part then dye; Yet now farewell, and farewell Life with thee.

Suf. Thus is poore Suffolke ten times banished, Once by the King, and three times thrice by thee. Tis not the Land I care for, wer't thou thence, A Wildernesse is populous enough, So Suffolke had thy headenly company: For where thou art, there it the World It felfe, With every severall pleasure in the World: And where thou are not, Defolation, I can no more: Liue thou to ioy thy life; My selfeno ioy in nought, but that thou live.

Enter Vaux.

Queene. Whether goes Vaux to fast? What newes I prethee?

Vasur. To fignific vnto his Meiefty, That Cardinall Bounford is at point of death: For fodsirily a greenous fir kneffe tooke him. That makes him gaspe, and flare, and catch the sire, Bisipheming God, and curling men on earth Sometime he talkes, as if Duke Humfres Gheft Were by his fide: Sometime, he calles the King And whilpers to his pullow, as to him, The fecrets of his ouer-charged foule, And I am fent to tell bis Maiefile, That euro now he cries alowd for him.

Qu. Go tell this heavy Mellage to the King. Ex Aye me! What is this World? What newes are thele? But wherefore greeve I at an hourer poore loffe. Omitting Suffolkes exile, my foults Treafore Why onely Suffolke mourne I not for thee? And with the Southerne clouds, contend to teares? Theirs for the earths encrease, mine for my forrowers. Now get thee hence, the King thou know ft is comming. If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.

Suf. Ill depart from thee, I cannot live. And in thy fight to dye, what were it elle, But like a pleafant flumber in thy tap? Heere could I breath my foule into the ayre, As milde and gentle as the Cradle-babe, Dying with mothers dugge betweene it's hpr. Where from thy fight, I thould be raging mad. And cry out for thee to close vp mine eyes:
To haue thee with thy lippes to flop my mouth: So should'it thou eyther turne my flying soule, Or I should breathe it so into thy body, And then it liu'd in sweete Elizium. To dye by thee, were but to dye in iest, From thee to dye, were torture more then death : Oh let me flay, befall what may befall.

Queen. Away: Though parting be a fretfull corofive, It is applyed to a deathfull wound. To France Sweet Suffolke: Let me heare from thee: For wherefore thou art in this world's Globe, lle haue an Iru that shall finde thee out.

Suf. Igo.

Qu. And take my heart with thee.
Suf. A lewell lockt into the wofulft Caske, That ever did contains a thing of worth, Fuen as a splitted Barke, so sunder we : This way fall I to death.

Qu. This way for me.

Execute

Enter the King, Saliebury, and Warnicke, to the Cardmal or bed.

King. How fare's my Lord? Speake Beauford to thy Soucraigne. Ca Isthou beest death, Ile give thee Englands Treasure, Enough to purchase such another Island, So thou wilt let me live, and feele no paine.

King. Ah, what a figure it is of eurll life, Where death's approach is seene so terrible.

War. Beauford it is thy Soueraigne speakes to thee. Beas. Bring me vnto my Triall when you will. Dy'de he not in his bed? Where should he dye? Can I make men live where they will or no?. Oh torture me no more, I will confesse. Aliue againe? Then shew me where he is, lle gire a thousand pound to looke vpon him. He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.

Comb

Combe downehis haire; looke,looke, it stands vpright, Like Lime-twigs set to catch thy winged soule: Give me some drinke, and bid the Apothecarie Bring the strong poyson that I bought of him.

Bring the strong poyson that I bought of him.

King. Oh thou eternall mouer of the heavens.

Looke with a gentle eye your this Wretch,

Oh beate away the busic medling Fiend,

That layes frong siege vnto this wretches soule,

And from his bosome purge this blacke dispaire.

D'ar. See how the pangs of death do make him grin.
Sal. Disturbe him not, let him passe peaceably.
King. Peace to his soule, is Gods good pleasure be Lord Cardrall, if thou thinks to nheauens blisse,
Hold up thy hand, make signall of thy hope.
He dies and makes no signe: Oh God forgive him.

War. So bada death, argues a monstrous life.

King. Fortesare to judge, for we are signers all.

Close up his eyes, and draw the Curtaine close,

Andlet us all to Meditation.

Execution

Alarum. Figh: at Sea. Ordnance goes off.

Enter Lieutenant, Suffolke, and others.

Lieu. The gaudy blabbing and remorfefull day,
Is crept into the bofome of the Sea:
And now loud houling Wolves aroufe the Iedes
That dragge the Tragicke melancholy night:
Who with their drowfie, flow, and flagging wings
Cleape dead-mens graves, and from their mifly lawes.
Breath foule contagious darkneffe in the ayre:
Therefore bring forth the Souldiers of our prize.
For whilft our Pinnace Anchors in the Downes,
Heere shall they make their rantome on the fand,
Or with their blood staine this discoloured shore.
Maister, this Prisoner freely give I thee,
And thou that art his Mate, make boote of this:
The other Walter Whitmore is thy share.

1. Gonz. What is my ransome Master, let me know.

Ma. A thousand Crownes, or else lay down your bead

Mus. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.

Liez. What thinkeyou much to psy 2000. Crownes,

And beare the name and port of Gentlemen?

Cut both the Villaines throats, for dy you shall t

The lives of those which we have lost in fight.

Be counter-poys'd with fuch a pettie furme.

1. Gone. He give it fir, and therefore fpare my life.

2. Gent. And fo will I and write home for it ftraight.

Whum. I loft mine eye in laying the prize abootd,
And therefore to revenge it, shalt thou dye,

And so should these, if I might have my will.

Luw. Be not so tash, take ransome, let him live.

Suf. Looke on my George, I am a Gernleman,
Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be payed.

Whit. And so am I: my name is Walter Whitmore.
How now? why statts thou? What doth death affright?

Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose found is death: A cunning man did calculate my birth, And told me that by Water I should dye: Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded,

Thy name is Guathier, being tightly founded.

Whit. Gualtier or Walter, which it is I care nor.

Neuer yet did base dishnour blurre our name,
But with our sword we wip'd away the blot.

Therefore, when Merchant-like I fell reuenge,
Broke be my sword, my Armes torne and defac'd,
And I proclaim'd a Coward through the world.

The Duke of Suffolke, Prilliam de la Pole,

White. The Duke of Suffolke, muffled up in ragges?

Suf. I, but these ragges are no patrof the Duke.

Lieu. But Joue was neuer flaine as thou shalt be,

Obscure and lowis Swaine, King Herries blood.

Suf. The honourable blood of Lancaster

Must not be shed by such a laded Groome:

Hast thou not kist thy hand, and held my flist op?

Bare-headed plodded by my foor-cloth Mule,

And thought thee happy when I shooke my head.

How often hast thou waited at my cup,

Suf. Stay Whitmore, for thy Prifoner is a Prince.

How often haft thou waited at my cup.

Fed from my Trencher, kneel'd downe at the boord,
When I have feafted with Queene Magaret?

Remember it, and let it make thee Creft-faine,
I, and alay this thy abortive Pride:
How in our voyding Lobby haft thou flood,
And duly wayted for my comming forth?

This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalfe,
And therefore shall it charme thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak Captaine, shall I stab the fordorn Swain.

Lieu. First let my words stab him, 28 he hath me.

Lieu. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.
Suf. Base staue, thy words are blunt, and so are thou.
Lieu. Conuey him hence, and on our long boats side,
Strike off his head.
Suf. Thou dai st not for thy owne
Lieu. Poole, Sir Poolet Lord,

I kennell, puddle, finke, whose filth and dire Troubles the filuer Spring, where England drinkes: Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth, For swallowing the Treasure of the Realme. Thy lips that kish the Queene, shall sweepe the ground i And thou that imil'dit at good Duke Humfries death, Against the senselesse winder shall grin in vaine, Who in contempt shall hisse at thee againe. And wedded be thou to the Hagges of hell, For during to affye a mighty Lord Vinto the daughter of a worthleffe King Hauing neyther Subject, Wealth, nor Diaders . By divellish policy are thou growne great, And like ambittous Sylla outer-gorg'd, With gobbers of thy Mother-bleeding heart. By thee Aniou and Maine were fold to France. The falle revolting Normans thorough thee, Disdaine to call vs Lord, and Piccardie Hath flaine their Governors, furpriz'd our Forts, And sent the ragged Souldiers wounded home. The Princely Warwicke, and the Neuds all, Whole dreadfull fwords were never drawne in vaine, As hating thee, and rifing up in armes.

And now the House of Yorke thrust from the Crowne, By shamefull murther of a guiltlesse King, And lofty proud increaching tyranny, Burnes with renenging fire, whose hopefull colours Advance our halfe-fac'd Sunne, friving to shine; Vnder the which is writ, Inuitin mabibut The Commons heere in Kent are vp in armes, And to conclude, Reproach and Beggetie, Is crept into the Pallace of out King, And all by thee : away, convey him hence.

Suf. Othat I were a God, to shoot forth Thunder Vpon these pality, serule, abiest Drudges:
Small things make base map proud. This Villaine beere,
Being Captaine of a Pinnace, threatens more
Then Bargalar the strong Illyrian Pyrate.
Drones sucke not Eagles blood, but rob Bee-bives:
It is impossible that I should dye

By

By fuch alowly Vatfall as thy felfe. Thy words move Rage, and not remorfe in me: I go of Mellage from the Queene to France : I charge thee wafr me fafely croffe the Channell.

Line. Water: W. Come Suffolke, I must wast thee to thy death.

Suf. Pina gelidus timor occupat arius, it in thee I feare. wal. I hou shalt haue cause to feare before I leaue thee. What, are yedanted now? Now will ye floope.

1. Gent. My gracious Lord intreat him speak him fair Suf. Suffolkes Imperiall conque is sterne and rough: Va'd to command, vntaught to pleade for fauour. Farre be it, we should honor such as these With humble fuite 1 no, rather let my head Stoope to the blocke, then these knees bow to any, Saue to the God of heaven, and to my King : And fooner dance vpon a bloody pole, Then stand vneouer'd to the Vulgar Groome. True Nobility, is exempt from feare:

More can I beare, then you dare execute.

Lies. Hale him away, and let him talke no mote : Come Souldiers, thew what cruelty ye can. Suf. That this my death may never be forget. Great men oft dye by vilde Bezonions. A Romane Sworder, and Banderto flane Murder diweet Tully Brusen Bastard hand Stab'd Inlines Cafar. Sauage Islanders Pompey the Great, and Suffalke dyes by Pyrate.

Exit Water with Suffolke.

Lieu. And as for these whose ransome we have ser, It is out pleasure one of them depart : Therefore come you with vs, and let him go.

Exit Lieutenant, and the rest. Monet the first Goot. Enter Walter with the body. Wal. There lethis head, and livelesse bodie lye, Vntill the Queene his Mistris bury it. ExII Walter.

1. Gent. Obarbarous and bloudy spectacle, His body will I beare vnto the King: If he renenge it not, yet will his Friends, So will the Queene, that living, held him deere.

Enter Benis, and lobn Holland.

Bruis. Come and get thee a fword, though made of a Lath, they have bene vp these two dayes.

Hol. They have the more neede to fleepe now then. Beuis. I tell thee, Iacke Cade the Cloathier, meanes to dreffe the Common-wealth and turne it, and fet a new nap vpon it.

Hol. So he had need, for 'tis thred-bare. Well, I say, it was neuer merrie world in England, fince Gentlemen came vp.

Brus. O miserable Age : Vertue is not regarded in Handy-crafts men

Hel. The Nobilitie thinke scorne to goe in Leather

Besis. Nay more, the Kings Councell are no good Workemen.

Hol. True : and yet it is faid, Labour in thy Vocati. on; which is as much to fay, as let the Magistrates be labouring men, and therefore should we be Magiffrates.

Benu. Thou haft hit it : for there's no better figne of a braue minde, then a hard hand.

Hol. I fee them, I fee them: There's Beff: Sonce, the Tanner of Wingliam.

Brais. Hee shall have the skinnes of our enemies, to make Dogges Leather of.

Hol. And Dicke the Butcher. Breit. Then is fin frucke downe like an Oze, and ing quiries throste cut like a Calfe.

Hel. And Smith the Wester. Ben. Argo, their thred of life is foun.

Hol. Come, come, let's fall in with them

Drumme. Enter Cade, Diche Butcher, Smith the Weaner, and a Sawjer, with infinite members.

Cade. Wee lots Cade, fo tearm'd of our supposed Father.

Bur. Or rather of Realing a Cade of Herrings.

Cade. For our enemies thall faile before vs, inspired with the spielt of putting down Kings and Printes. Command filence.

Bur. Silence.

Cade. My Father was a Mortimer.

Eut. He was an honest man, and a good Bricklayer.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet.

Burch. I knew her well, fine was a Midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lasses.

But. She was indeed a Pedlers daughter, & fold many Weaver. But now of late, not able to travell with her fun'd Packe, the washes buckes here at home.

Cade. Therefore ain I of an honorable house.

But. I by my faith, the field is honourable, and there was he borne, under a hedge: for his Father had never a house but the Cage.

Cade. Valiant I am,

Weaver A must needs, for beggery is valiant.

Cade I am able to endure much.
But. No question of that t for I have feene him whipt three Market dayes together.

Cade. I seare neither sword, not fire.

Wea. Hencede not seare the sword, for his Coate is of proofe.

But. But methicks he should fland in seare offire, being burnt I'th hand for Realing of Sheepe.

Cade. Be braue then, for your Captaine is Braue, and Vowes Reformation. There shall be in England, scuen halfe peny Loaues fold for a peny : the three hoop'd pot, shall have ten hoopes, and I wil make it Fellony to drink small Beere. All the Realme shall be in Common, and in Cheapside shall my Palfrey go to graffe: and when I am

King, as King I will be.
All. God (sue your Maiefty.

Cade. I thanke you good people. There shall bee oo mony, all shall eate and drinke on my score, and I will apparrell them all in one Livery, that they may agree like Brothers, and worship me their Lord.

Buz. The first thing we do, let's kill all the Lawyers. Cade. Nay, that I meane to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent Lambe should be made Parchment; that Parchment being scribeld ore, should vndoe a man. Some fay the Bee stings, but I fay, tiathe Bees waxe: for I did but feale once to a thing, and I was neuer mine owne man fince. How now ! Who's Emer of learne.

Werner. The Clearke of Chartam: hee can write and reade, and cast accompt.

Cade. O monstrous.

there?

Wea. We tooke him letting of boyes Copies.

Cade

Cado. Here's a Villaine.

wea. Ha's a Booke in his pocket with red Letters in't Cade. Nay then he is a Conjurer.

But. Nay, he can make Obligations, and write Court

Cade. I am forry for't: The man is a proper man of mine Honour: valeffe I finde him guilty, he thall not die. Come hither firrah, I must examine thee 1 What is thy name?

(learle. Emanuell.

But. They vie to writ it on the top of Letters: Twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone: Dost thou vie to write thy name? Or haft then a marke to thy felfe, like a honeft plain dealing man?

Clearly. Six I thanke God, I have bin fo well brought vp, that I can write my name.

All. He bath confest: away with him the's a Villaine and a Traitor.

Cade. Awey with him I fay 1 Kang him with his Pen and Inke-horns about his necke.

Exicone with the Clearke

Emer Michael. Mich. Where's our Generall?

Cade. Hecre I am thou particuler fellow.

Mash. Fly, fly, Ay, Sit Humfrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the Kings Forces.

Cods. Szand villaine, fland, or lle fell thee downe : he shall be encountred with a man as good as himselfe. He Is but a Knight, is a?

miss. No.

Code. To equal him I will make my felfe a knight pre-fently; Rife up Sir Iohn Marimer. Now have at him.

Enter Sir Humfrey Stafford, and bis Brosber, with Dram and Soldiers.

Staf. Rebellious Hlnds, the filth and fewm of Kent, Mark'd for the Gallowes: Lay your Weapons downe, Mome to your Cottages: for fake this Groome.

The King is mercifull, if you revolt.

Ero. But angry, wrathfull, and inclin'd to blood.

If you go forward: therefore yeeld, or dye.

Cade. As for these filken-coated flaues I pellenot. It is to you good people, that I speake, Over whom (in time to come) I hope to reigne.

For I am rightfull heyre unto the Crowne.
Seaff. Villaine, thy Father was a Playsterer, And thou thy felie a Sheareman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a Gardiner.

Bro. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this Edmund Monimer Earle of Merch, married the Duke of Characte daughter, did he not . senf. I fir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

Bro. That's falle.

Cads. I, there's the question; But I fay, 'ds true : The elder of them being put to nurfe, Was by a begger-woman fielae away, And ignorant of his birth and parentage, Became a Bricklayer, when he came to age.

His sonne am I, deny it if you can.

But. Noy, 'tis too true, therefore he shall be King. Wea. Sir, he made a Chimney in my Fathers house, & the brickes are alive at this day to tefufic it : therefore deny it not.

Staf. And will you credit this bale Drudges Worden. that speakes he knowes not what.

All. I marry will we: therefore get ye gone.

Bro. Iacke Cade, the D. of York hath taught you this. Cade. He lyes, for I invented it my felfe. Go too Sirrah, tell the King from me, that for his Fathers fake Herry the fift, (in whose time, boyes went to Span-counter For French Crownes) I am content he shall taigne, but He be Protector over him:

Butcher. And furthermore, wee'l have the Lord Sayre head, for felling the Dukedome of Mains.

Cade And good reason: for thereby is England main'd And faine to go with a flaffe, but that my puissance holds lt vp. Fellow-Kings, I tell you, that that Lord Say hath gelded the Commonwealth, and made it an Eunuch: & more then that, he can speake French, and therefore her is Staf. O groffe and miferable ignorance.

Cade. Nay answer if you can: The Frenchmen are our enemies: go too then, I ask but this: Can he that fpeaks with the tongue of an enemy, be a good Councellour, or

All. No no, an I therefore wee'l have his head.

Bro. Well, feeing gentle words will not prevayle, Affaile them with the Army of the King.

Staf. Herald away, and throughout every Towne, Proclaime them Traitors that are vp with Cade, That those which flye before the battell ends, May even in their Wives and Childrens fight, Be hang'd vp for example at their doores: And you that be the Kings Friends follow me.

Cade. And you that love the Commons, follow me: Now thew your felues men, 'tis for Liberty. We will not leave one Lord, one Gentleman: Spare none, but such as go in clouted shooen, For they are thrifty honeit men, and fuch As would (but that they dare not) take our parts.

But. They are all in order, and march toward vs. Cade. But then are we in order, when we are most out of order. Come, march forward.

Alarums to the fight, wherein both the Staffords are finine. Enser Cade and shereft.

Cade. Where's Dicke, the Butcher of Ashford?

Bus. Heere fir.

Cade. They fell before thee like Sheepe and Oxen. & thou behaued'A thy felfe, as if thou had A beens in thine owne Slaugheer-house: Therfore thus will I reward thee, the Lent shall bee as long agains as it is, and thou shalt have a License to kill for a hundred lacking one.

But. I defire no more.

Cade. And to speake truth, thou deseru's no lesse. This Monument of the victory will I beare, and the bo-dies shall be drugged at my horse heeles, till I do come to London, where we will baue the Malors (word born be-

But. If we meane to thrive, and do good, breake open the Gaoles, and let out the Prisoners.

Cade. Feare not that I warrant thee, Come, let's march towards London.

Enter the King with a Supplication, and the Queene with Suf-folkes bead, the Daile of Buckingham, and the Lord Say.

Queeno. Oft have I beard that greefe loftens the mind,

And makes it fearefull and degenerate, Thinke refore on revenge, and ceafe to werpe. But who can ceste to wrepe, and looke on this. Heere may his head lye on my throbbing breft. But where sihe body that I should imbrace !

Buc. What answer makes your Grace to the Rebells

Supplication?

Kong. He fend forme holy Bishop to intreat: For God forbid, formany simple soules Should perish by the Sword. And I my felfe, Rather then bloody Warre Mall cut them hore, Will parley with Jacke Cade then Generall. But stay, lle read it ouer once againe

Qu, Ah barbarous villainea. Hath this louely face,

Rul'dlike a wandering Plannet over me, And could it not inforce them to relent. That were enworthy to behold the fame.

Kong. Lord Say, lacke Cade hath In orne to huse thy head.

Say. I, but I hope your Highnesse shall have his. King. How now Madam? Still lamenting and inourning for Suffolkes death? I feare me (Loue) if that I had beene dead, Thou would'A not have mourn'd fo much for me 24. No my Loue, I should not mourne, but dye for Emer a Mellenger.

Mef. My Lord a prize, a prize, heeres the Lord Say, which fold the Townes in France. He that made vs pay one and twenty Fifteenes, and one shilling to the pound, the last Subfidie.

Enter George, wish the Lord Say.

Cade. Well, hee shall be beheaded for it ten times ; Ah thou Say. thou Surge, tray thou Buckram Lord, now art thou within point-blanke of our Iurisdiction Regall. What can't thou answer to my Maiesty, for giving vp of Normandie vato Mounsieur Basinsen, the Dolphine of France? Beit knowne vnto thee by these presence, euen the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the Beesome that must sweepe the Court cleane of such filth as thou art: Thou hast most traiterously corrupted the youth of the Realme, increcting a Grammar Schoole : and whereas before, our Fore-fathers had no other Bookes but the Score and the Tally, thou halt caused printing to be vs'd, and contrary to the King, his Crowne, and Dignity, thou haft built a Paper-Mill. It will be prooued to thy Face, that thou hast men about thee, that vsually talke of a Nowne and a Verbe, and fuch abhominable wordes, as no Christian eare can endure to heare. Thou hast appointed Iustices of Peace, to call poore men before them, about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou haft put them in prison, and because they could not reade, thou halt hang'd them, when (indeede) onely for that cause they have beene most worthy to live. Thou doft ride in a foot-cloth, doft thou not?

Say. What of that ?

Cade. Marry, thou ought'it not to let thy horse weate a Cloake, when honefler men then thou go in their Hofe and Doublets.

Dicke. And worke in their shirt to, 25 my selfe for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent

Drc. What fay you of Kent.

Say. Nothing but this : Tis bona terra, mala gens. Cade. Away with him, away with him, he speaks Latine.

Say. Heare me but speake, and beare mee wher'e you will:

Kent, in the Commentaries Cafar wtir, Is term'd the civel'st place of all this isle: Sweet is the Country, because full of Riches, The People Liberall, Valiant, Active, Wealthy, Which makes me hope you are not void of pitty. I fold not Mame, I loft not Normandie, Yet to recover them would loofe my life: luffice with fauour haue I alwayes done, Prayres and Tesres have mou'd me, Gifts could never, When have I ought exacted at your hands? Kent to maintains, the King, the Realme and you, Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned Clearkes, Because my Booke preferr'd me to the King, And feeing Ignorance is the curse of God, Knowledge the Wing wherewith we flye to hesuers. Valeffe you be polleft with divellish spirits, You cannot but forbeare to murther me: This Tongue hath patlied voto Forraigne Kings For your behoofe.

Cade. Tur, when firuck'ft thou one blow in the field? Sey. Great men haue reaching handstoft haue I ftruck Those that I never faw, and firucke them dead.

Go. Omenstrous Coward! What, to come behinde

Say. These cheekes are pale for watching for your good Cade. Glue hims box o'th'eare, and that wil make 'em red againe.

Ser. Long fitting to determine pooremens causes, Hath made me full of fielmesse and diseases.

(ade. Ye shall have a hempen Candle then, & the help of hatchet.

Dieke. Why dost thou quitter man?
Say. The Palsie, and not feate prouokes me.

Cade. Nay, he noddes at vs, 23 who should say, He be even with you. He fee if his bead will fland fleddier on a pole, or no: Take him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me: wherein haue I offended most? Have I affected wealth, or honor? Speake. Are my Chefis fill'd vp with extorted Gold? Is my Appairell sumptuous to behold? Whom have I injur'd, that ye feeke my death? These hands are free from guiltlesse bloodshedding. This breast from harbouring foule deceitfull thoughts. Olet meline.

Cade. I seele remorse in my selse with his words : but He bridle it : He shall dye, and it bee but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him, he ha's a Familiar vnder his Tongue, he speakes not a Gods name. Goe, take himaway I lay, and firike off his head presently, and then breake into his Sonne in Lawes house, Sir Iames Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both vppon two poles hither.

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah Countrimen : If when you make your prair's, God should be so obdurate as your selucs: How would it fare with your departed foules. And therefore yet relent, and faue my life.

Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye : the proudest Peere in the Realme, shall not weare a bead on his shoulders, valesse he pay me tribute: there shall not s maid be married, but the shall pay to me her Mayden-head ere they have it: Men shall hold of mee in Capite. And we charge and command, that their wives be as free as heart can wish, or tongue can tell.

Dicke. My Lord,

When shall we go to Cheapside, and take vp commodities vpon our billes ?

Cade. Marry presently. Al. Obraue.

Enter one with the heads.

Cade, But is not this brauer : Let them kille one another: For they lou'd well When they were aline. Now part them againe, Leaft they confult about the giuing vp Of some more Townes in France. Soldiers, Deferre the spoile of the Citie vntill night: For with thele borne before vs, in fleed of Maces, Will we ride through the fireets, & at every Corner Haue them kiffe. Away. Exit

Enter Buckingham, and old Clefford.

Bue. I heere they be, that dere and will diffure thee:
Know Cade, we come Ambassadors from the King
Vnto the Commons, whom thou hast missed,
And heere prinounce free pardon to them all,
That will for take thee, and go home in peace.

Clif. What fay ye Countrimen, will ye relent
And yeeld to mercy, while this offered you,
Or let a rabble leade you to your deaths.
Who loves the King, and will imbrace hit patdon,
Fling up his cap, and fay, God faue his Maiefly.
Who hateth him, and howers not his Father,
Henry the fift, that made all France to quake,
Shake he his weapon at vs, and paffe by.

All. Godsaue the King, Godsaue the King.

Cade What Buckingham and Clifford areye so braue?
And you base Pezants, do ye beleeue him, will you needs behang'd with your Pardons about your neckes? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gases, that you should leave me at the Whire-heart in Southwarke.
I thought ye would neuer have gizen out these Armet til you had recovered your ancient Freedome. But you are all Recreants and Dastards, and delight to live in saverie to the Nobility. Let them breake your backes with burthens, take your houses over your heads, rauss your Wires and Daughters before your faces. For me, I will make shift for one, and so Gods Cursse light vppon you all.

All Wee'l follow Cade, Wee'l follow Cade

Chf Is Cade the sonne of Henry the fift, That thus you do exclaime you'l go with him. Will he conduct you through the heart of France, And make the meanelt of you Earles and Dukes ? Alas, he hath no home, no place to flye too Nor knowes he how to live, but by the sporte, Valeffe by robbing of your Friends, and vs. Wer't not a shame, that whilst you live at rarre, The fearfull French, whom you late vanquished Should make a flare ore-leas, and vanguish you? Methinkes alreadie in this civill broyle, I fee them Lording it in London streets, Crying Villiago vnto all they meete. Better ten thouland bale-borne Cades milcarry, Then you should stoope vnto a Frenchmans mercv. To France, to France, and get what you have loft: Spare England, for it is your Native Coaft: Henry hath mony, you are strong and manly. God on our lide, doubt not of Victorie

AL A Clifford, a Clifford, Wee'l follow the King, and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever Feather so lightly blowne too & fro, as this multitude? The name of Henry the fift, hales them to an hundred mischiefes, and makes them leave mee defolate. I see them lay their heades together to surprize me. My sword make way for me, for heere is no staying: in despight of the divels and hell, have through the verie middelt of you, and heavens and honor be vivinesse, that no want of resolution in mee, but onely my Followers base and ignomimous treasons, makes me betake mee to my heeles

External transfer of the surprise makes me betake mee to Back What, is he fled? Go fome and follow him, And he that brings his head wnto the King, Shall have a shouland Crownes for his reward. Execut fome of them. Follow me fouldiers, wee'l desife a mane,

To reconcile you all voto the King.

Sound Trumpers. Enter Kong, Queens and Somerfel on the Torris.

Kong. Was ever King that ioy'd an earthly Throne, And could command no more content then I? No fooner was I crept out of my Cradle, But I was made a King, at nine months olde. Was never Subied long'd to be a King, At I do long and with to be a Subied.

Emor Buckengham and Clafford.

Buc. Health and glad tydings to your Maiefly.

Kin. Why Buckingham, it the Traiter Cade Surpris'd?

Or is he but retit'd to make him flrong?

Enter Mulsitude: with Halters obset their Necket.

Clif. He is fled my Lord, and all his powers do yeeld, And humbly thus with halters on their neckes, Exped your Highnesse doome of life, or death.

King. Then heaven fet ope thy cuerlasting gates,
To entertaine my vowes of thankes and praise,
Souldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives,
And shew'd how well you love your Prince & Countrey
Continue still in this so good a minde,
And Henry though he be infortunate,
Affure your sclues will never be vakinde:
And so with thankes, and pardon to you all,
I do dismisse you to your several Countries.

All. God save the King, God savethe King.

I pray thee Buckingham go and meete him,
And aske him what's the reason of these Armes.
Tell him, He send Duke Edmand to the Tower,
And Somerser we will commit thee thisher,
Vntill his Army be dismiss from him.

Somerfer. My Lerd, He yeelde my felfe to prifon willingly, Or vnto death, to do my Countrey good.

King. In any case, be not to rough in termes,
For he is sherce, and cannot brooke hard Language.

Buc. I will my Lord, and doubt not so to deale,
As all things shall redound vnto your good.

Go hid her hide him pulckly from the Duke.

Go bid her hide him quickly from the Duke.

Qu. For thousand Yorkes he shall not hide bis head,
But boldly stand, and front him to his face.

Qu. For thouland korkes he thail not nide his head.

Tow. How nower is Somerfer to libertie?

Then Yorke valoofe thy long imprisoned thoughts,

And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.

Shall I endure the fight of Somerfer?

Faile Ring, why haft thou broken faith with me,

Knowing how hardly I can brooke abuse?

King did I call thee? Northou art not King:

Not fit to governe and rule multitudes,

Which dar It now, no nor can't not rule a Traitor.

If you oppose your selves to march Lord Warwicke.

Clif. Hence heape of wrath, soule indigested lumpe,
As crooked in thy manners, as thy shape.

As crooked in thy manners, as thy shape.

Tor. Nay we shall heate you thorowly anon,

Clif. Take beade least by your heate you burne your feloes:

King. Why Warwicke, hath thy knee forgot to bow?
Old Salabury, shame to thy filuer haire,
Thou mad unificader of thy brain-ficke forme,
What wilt thou on thy death-bed play the Russians'
And seeke for forrow with thy Speckacles?
Oh where is Faith? Oh, where is Loyalty?
If it be bouisht from the frostie head,
Where shall it finds a harbour in the earth?
Wilt thou go digge a grave to finde out Warre,
And shame thine honourable Age with blood?
Why are thou old, and want stepperience?
Or wherefore does a does not the profession of t

Sal. My Lord, I have confidered with my felfe The Title of this most renowned Duke, And in my conscience, do repute his grace The rightfull beyre to Englands Royall seate.

King. Hast thou not sworne Allegeance voto me? Sal. I have.

Ki. Can't thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sinne, to sweare vnto a sinne:

But greater sinne to keepe a sinfull oath t

Who can be bound by any solemne Vow

To do a murd tous deede, to rob a man,

To force a spotlesse Virgins Chastitie,

To reave the Orphan of his Parrimonie,

To wring the Widdow from her custom'd right,

And have no other teason for this wrong,

But that he was bound by a solemne Oath?

Qu. A fubtle Traitor needs no Sophifter.

King. Call Buckingham, and bid him arme himfelfe.

Torke. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hall,

I em recolu'd for death and dignitie.

Old Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreames proue true

War. You were best to go to bed, and dreame egaine,

To keepe thee from the Tempest of the field.
Old Clif. I am resolu'd to beate a greater storme,

Then sny thou coult confere up to day:
And that He write upon thy Burgonet.
Might I have been hereby housed Ba

Might I but know thee by thy housed Badge.

War. Now by my Pathers badge, old Neads Creft,
The rempant Beare chain dto the regged staffe,
This day sie weare aloft my Burgonet,
As on a Mountaine top, the Cedar shewes,
That keepes his leaues in signific of any storme,

Euen io affright thee with the view thereof.

Old Cisf. And from thy Burgonet He rend thy Beate,
And tread it under foot with all contempt,
Despight the Bearard, that protects the Beare.

To Cliff. And so to Armes victorious Father,
To quell the Rebels, and their Complices.

Roch. Fie, Chesicie for theme, speake not in spight,

For you that fup with Iefe Christ to night.

70 Clif. Foule stygmaticke that's more then thou can't tell.

Ric. If not in heaven, you'l furely fup in hell. Excuss

War. Chifford of Comberland, 'tis Warwicke cellen : And if thou doft not hide thee from the Besre, Now when the angrie Trumper founds alarum,
And dead mens cries do fill the emptie ayre,
Clifford I fay, come forth and fight with me,
Proud Northerne Lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Werwicke is hoarfe with calling theeto armes.

Enter Take.

Par. How now my Noble Lord? What all s. foot.

Tor. The deadly handed Clifford flew my Steed;
But match to match I have encounted him,
And made a prey for Cartion Kytes and Ctowes
Even of the bonnie beath he loved to well.

Enter Clifford.

War. Of one or both of with time is come.

Tor. Hold Warwick feek thee out fome other cheece
For I my felfe must bunt this Decre to death.

War. Then nobly Yorke, 'tis for a Crown thoo fights's.
As I intend Clifford to thrine to day,
it greenes my fouleto leave these rnassail d. Existan.

Clif. What feelt thou in me Yorke? Why doft thou paufe?

Take. With thy braue bearing should I be in love, But that thou art so fast mine enemie.

Cif. Nor should thy prowesse want praise & esteeme, But that it is shewne ignobly, and in Treason. Terke. So let it helpe me now against thy sword, Terke. Solet it helpe me now against thy sword, As I in justice, and true right expresses.

Clif. My foule and bodie on the action both.

Yor. A dreadfull lay, addresse instantly.

List Lasia Cerrone les cumenes.

For. Thus Warre hath given ther peace, for y art fill, Peace with his foule, heaven if it be thy will,

Enterjong Clifford.

Clif. Shame and Confusion all is on the rout, Feare frames disorder, and disorder wounds Where it should guard. O Warre, thou sonne of hella Whom angry heavens do make their minister, Throw in the frozen bolomes of our part, Hot Coales of Vengeance. Let no Souldier flye. He that is truly dedicate to Werre, Hath no felfe-lone : nor he that loves himfelfe, Hath not effentially, but by circumflance The name of Valour. O let the vile world end, And the premifed Flumes of the Laft day, Knit earth and heaven rogether. Nowlet the generall Trumper blow his blaff, Particularities, and petric founds To cease. Was't thou ordain'd (deere Father) To loofe thy youth in peace, and to atcheoue The Silver Livery of advised Age, And in thy Reverence, and thy Chaire-dayes, thus Todje in Ruffian battell ? Euen at this fight, My heart is turn'd to flone: and while 'tis mine, It shall be flony. Yorke, not our old men spares: No more will I their Babes, Teares Virginali, Shall be to me, even as the Dew to Fire, And Beautie, that the Tyrant oft reclaimes, Shall to my flaming wrath, be Oyle and Flax : Henceforth, I will not have to do with pitty. Mert I an infant of the house of Yorke, into as many gobbits will I cus it As wilde Aledea yong Abstrain did. In cruelty, will I feeke out my Fame. Come thounew ruine of olde Cliffords house: As did Amen old Anchyles beare, So beare I thee vpon my manly should as:

But then, & Emer bage a lining loade;

Nothing

Nothing to heavy as thefe woes of mine.

Enter Richard, and Somerfet to fight.

Rich. So lye thou there i For voderneath an Ale-house pattry figne, The Castle in S. Albent, Sometset Hath made the Wizard famous in his death: Sword, hold thy temper; Heart, be wrathfull still i Priesta pray for enemies, but Princes kill.

Fight. Excursions.

Enter King, Queene, and others,
Qu. Away my Lord, you are flow, for thame away.
King. Can we outrun the Heaueas? Good Margaret

Qa. What are you made of? You'l nor fight nor fly: Now is it manhood, whedome, and defence, To give the enemy way, and to fecure vs By what we can, which can no more but flye,

If you be tane, we then should see the bottome
Of all our Fortunes: but if we haply scape,
(As well we may, if not through your neglect)
We shall to London get, where you are lou'd,
And where this breach now in our Fortunes made
May readily be stopt.

Emer Clifford.

Off. But that my hearts on future milcheefe let,
I would speake blasphemy ere bid you flye t
But flye you must: Vucureable discomfite
Reignes in the bearts of all our present parts,
A way for your releefe, and we will live
To see their day, and them our Fortune give.
A way my Lord, away.

Alarum. Reveres. Emer Yorks, Richard, Warne why, and Soldwers with Drum & Colours.

Torke. Of Salsbury, who can report of him, That Winter Lyon, who in rage forgets Aged contusions, and all brush of Time. And like a Gallant, in the brow of youth, Repaires him with Occasion. This happy day Is not it selfe, not have we woome one foot, If Salsbury be lost.

Ruch. My Noble Father:
Three times to day I holpe him to his horfe,
Three times befrid him: Thrice I led him off,
Perfwaded him from any further act
But fill where danger was, fill there I met him,
And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his Will, in his old feeble body,
But Noble as he is, looke where he comes.

Enter Salubury,
Sal. Now by my Sword, well helt shou fought to day
By'th Maffe fo did we all. I thanke you Reclared
God knowes how long it is I have to live:
And it hash pleas'd him that three times to day
You have defended me from imminent death.
Well Lords, we have not got that which we have,
'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repayring Nature.

Fork. I know our fafety is to follow them,
For (as I heare) the King is fled to London,
To call a present Court of Parliament:
Let vs pursue bim ere the Writs go forth,
What sayes Lord Warwicke, shall we after them?

War. After them: nay before them if we can a Now by my hand (Lotds) twess a glorious day. Saint Albons battell wonne by famous Yorke, Shall be eternized in all Age to come. Sound Drumme and Trumpets, and to London all, And more fuch dayes as thefe, to vs befall, Execution.

FINIS.

The third Part of Henry the Sixt, with the death of the Duke of YORKE.

AEtus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Alarum.

Enter Plantagenet .Edward, Richard, Norfolkg, Mountagene, Warwicke, and Souldsets.

Warnocke.

Wonder how the King escap'd our hands?

Pl. While we pursu'd the Horsmen of 9 North.

Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland,
Whose Warlike cares could never brooke retreat,
Chear'd up the drouping Army, and himselfe.
Lord Clifford and Lord Stafford all a-brest
Charg'd our maine Battailes Front: and breaking in,
Were by the Swords of common Souldiers staine.

Edw. Lord Staffords Father, Duke of Buckingbam,

Is either flaine or wounded dangerous.
I cleft his Beauer with a down-right blow:
That this is true (Father) behold his blood.

That this is true (Father) behold his blood,

Mount. And Brother, here's the Earle of Wiltshires

Whom I encountred as the Battels ioyn'd. (blood

Rich. Speake thou for me, and tell them what I did.

Plan. Richard hath best deserved of all my sonnes:

But is your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerfer?

Nor. Such hope have all the line of John of Gascat.

Rub. Thus do I hope to Grake King Hem is r head.

Warr. And so doe I, victorious Prince of Torke.

Eefore I see thee seated in that Throne,

Which now the House of Lancafter viures,

I vow by Hesuen, these eyes shall neuer close.
This is the Pallace of the searefull King,
And this the Regall Seat: possesse it Torke,
For this is thine, and not King Homies Heires,
Plant. Assist me then, sweet Warwick, and I will,
For hither we have broken in by force.

Norf. Wee'le all affift you: he that flyes, shall dye, Plant. Thankes gentle Norfolke, stay by me my Lords, And Souldiers stay and lodge by me this Night.

Warw. And when the King comes, offer him no violence, Vnlesse he seeke to thrust you out perforce.

Plant. The Queene this day here holds her Parliament, But little thinkes we shall be of her counsile,
By words or blowes here let vs winne our right.

Reb. Arm'd as we are let's flay within this House.

arry. The bloody Parliament shall this be call'd.

Vnlesse Plantagenes, Duke of Yorke, be King,

And bashfull Henry deposid, whose Cowardize Hath made vs by-words to our enemies.

Plane. Then leave me not, my Lords be refolute.
I meane to take possession of my Right.
Warw. Neither the King, nor he that loves him best,
The prowdest hee that holds up Lancaster.

The prowdeft hee that holds up Lancaster,
Dates stirre a Wing, if Warnick shake his Bells.
He plant Plantagenet, root him up who dates:
Refolue thee Richard, clayme the English Crowns.

Flowrish. Enter King Henry, Clifford, Northumberland, Westmerland, Exeter, and the rest.

Hemy. My Lords, looke where the sturdie Rebell sits, Euen in the Chayre of State: belike he meanes, Backt by the power of Warwicke, that false Peere, To aspire vnto the Crowne, and reigne as King. Earle of Northumberland, he slew thy Father, And thine, Lord Clifford, & you both have vow'd revenge On him, his sonnes, his savorites, and his friends.

Northumb. If I be not, Heavens be reveng'd on me.

Northumb. It I be not, Heavens be reveng'd on me. Clifford. The pope thereof, makes Clifford mourne in Steele.

Westm. What, shall we suffer this? lets pluck him down, My heart for anger burnes, I cannot brooke it.

Henry. Be patient, gentle Earle of Westmerland.

Henry. Be patient, gentle Earle of Westmerland.
Clifford. Patience is for Poultroones, such as he a
Hedurst not six there, had your Father livid.
My gracious Lord, here in the Parliament

Let vs affsyle the Femily of Torke.

North Well haft thou fpoken, Coufin be it fo.

Henry. Ah, know you not the Citic fauouts them,

And they have troupes of Souldiers at their beck?

Western. But when the Duke is slaine, they le quickly

Hemy, Farre be the thought of this from Hemies heart, To make a Shambles of the Parliament House. Coufin of Exects, frownes, words, and threats, Shall be the Warre that Hemy meanes to vie. Thou factious Duke of Yorke descend my Throne, And kneele for grace and mercie at my feet,

I am thy Soucraigne.

Torke. I am thine.

Erre. For shame come downe, he made thee Duke of Yorke.

Torke. It was my Inheritance, as the Estledome was.

Exce. Thy

Exet. Thy Father was a Traytor to the Crowne. Warw. Exerce thou art a Traytor to the Crowne,

In following this viurping Homy.

Clifferd. Whom should hee follow, but his naturall

Ming?

Warw. True Clifford, that's Richard Duke of Yorke. Homy. And shall I fland, and thou fit in my Throne? Torkes It must and shall be so, content thy selfe. Warn. Be Duke of Lancaster, let him be King. Westm. He is both King, and Duke of Lancaster, And that the Lord of Westmerland shall maintaine.

Ware. And Warneick shall disprove it. You forget, That we are those which chas'd you from the field, And slew your Fathers, and with Colours spread Marcht through the Citie to the Pallace Gares. Northumb. Yes H'arwicke, I remember it to my griefe,

And by his Soule, thou and thy House shall rue it. Westm. Plantagenes, of thee and these thy Sonnes, Thy Kinfmen, and thy Friends, Ile have more lives Then drops of bloud were in my Fathers Veines.

Cliff. Vige it no more, left that in itead of words, I fend thee, Warwicke, fuch a Mellenger, As shall reuenge his death, before I firre.

Warn. Poore Clifford, how I scorne his worthlesse

Threats.

Plant. Will you we shew our Title to the Crowne? If not, our Swords shall pleade it in the field.

Henry. What Title hast thou Traytor to the Crowne? My Father was as thou art, Duke of Yorke, Thy Grandfather Roger Moreimer, Earle of March. I am the Sonne of Henry the Fift,

Who made the Dolphin and the French to Roupe, And sciz'd vpon their Townes and Provinces.

Ware. Talkenot of France, fish thou haft loft is all. Henry. The Lord Protector loft it, and not I: When I was crown'd, I was but nine moneths old.

Rich. You are old enough now,

And yes me thinkes you loofe: Father teare the Crowne from the Vlurpers Head.

Edward. Sweet Father doe to, set it on your Head. Mount. Good Brother, As thou lou'st and honored Armes, Let's fight it out, and not fland cavilling thus.

Richard. Sound Drummes and Trumpers, and the King will flye.

Plant, Sonnes peace.

Henry, Peace thou, and give King Henry leave to warw. Plantagenet that speake first: Heare bim Lorde, And be you filent and attentive too,

For he that interrupts him, shall not live.

Hen. Think It thou, that I will leave my Kingly Throne, Wherein my Grandfire and my Father fat? No: first shall Warre unpeople this my Realme; I, and their Colours often borne in France, And now in England, to our hearts great forrow, Shall be my Winding-sheet. Why faint you Lords e My Title's good, and better farre then his.

Warw. Prone it Harry, and thou shalt be King. Hes. Henry the Fourth by Conquest got the Crowne. Plant. 'Twas by Rebellion against his King. Henry. Iknow not what to fay, my Titles weake:

Tell me, may not a King adopt an Heire?

Flant. What then? Henry. And if he may, then am I lawfull King: For Richard, in the view of many Lords, Relign d the Crowne to Henry the Fourth, Whose Heire my Father was, and I am his.

Plan. He role sgainft him, being his Souersigne, And made him to refigne his Crowne perforce. Warw. Suppose, my Lords, he did it vnconfirsyn'd.

Thinke you twere prejudiciall to his Crowne? Exer. No: for he could not so religne his Crowne, But that the next Heire should succeed and reigne.

Hemy. Art thou against vs Duke of Exercit Exer. His Is the right, and therefore pardon me. Plant. Why whilper you, my Lords, and answer not? Exa. My Conscience tells me he is lawfull King. Henry. All will revolt from me, and turne to bim.

Northumb. Planagener, for all the Clayme thou lay's, Thinke not that Hary that be so depos'd

Warn. Depos'd he shall be, in despight of all Northumb. Thou art decelu'd: Tis not thy Southerne power

Of Effer, Notfolke, Suffolke, nor of Kent, Which makes thee thus prefumptuous and prowd, Can fet the Duke vp in despight of me.

Clifford. King Ham, be thy Title right or wrong, Lord Clifford vowes to fight in thy defence: May that ground gape, and fwallow mealine,

Where I shall kneele to him that flew my Father. Henry. Oh Clifford, how thy words revive my heast. Plans. Henry of Lancaster, efigue thy Crowne: What mutter you, or what conspire you Lords?

War. Doe right vnto this Princely Duke of Yorke, Or I will fill the House with armed meo, And over the Chayre of State, where now he fits,

Write vp his Title with vsurping blood.

Hestamper with bu foot, and the Souldwers show themselves.
Harry. My Lord of Warwick, heare but one word,

Let me for this my life time trigne as King. Plan. Confirme the Crowne to me and to mine Heires, And thou shalt reigne in quiet while thou liu It.

Heury. I am content: Richard Plantagener Enioy the Kingdome after my deceafe.

Classed. What wrong is this vato the Prince, your Sonne !

Wars. What good is this to England, and himselfe? Wostm. Base, searchull, and despayring Hom Clifford. How hast thou inited both thy selfe and vs? Westm. I cannot stay to heare these Articles. Norsbumb. Nor 1.

Clifford. Come Coufin, let vs tell the Queene their Westm. Farwell saint-bearted and dogenerate King, In whose cold blood no sparke of Honor bide: Northered Be thou 2 prey vato the Houle of Torke,

And dye in Bands, for this vnmanly deed. cliff. In dreadfull Warremay it thou be overcome,

Or live in peace abandon'd and despis'd.

Ware. Turne this way Hony, and regard them not. Erster. They seeke tenenge, and therefore will not yeeld.

Horry. Ah Exerc. Way thould you figh, my Lord? Henry. Not formy felfe Lord Warrick but my Seine, Whom I vnnaturally thall dif-inherne. Bot be it as it may: I here entayle The Crowne to three and to thine Heires for ever, Conditionally, that beere thou take an Oath,

To cease this Civill Warre : and whilft I live,

To bonor me as thy King, and Soversigne:
And neythes by Treafon nor Hoffilitie,
To feeke to purme downe, and reigne thy felfe.
Plant. This Oath I willingly take, and will performe.
Warw. Long line King Honry: Planagene: embrace

Henry. And long line thou, and these thy forward Sonnes.

Plant. Nove Terke and Lancafter are reconcil'd.

Exec. Accurst be be that seekes to make them foes.

Senet. Here they come downe.

*Plant. Farewell my gracious Lord, lie to my Cafile.

*Warn. And Ite keepe London with my Souidiers.

*Norf. And I to Norfolke with my follower.

*Mount. And I vnto the Sea, from whence I came.

*Henry. And I with griefe and forrow to the Court.

Exeter. Heere comes the Queene, Whose Lookes bewray her anger: lle scale away.

Horry. Exercis will I.

Queeze. Nay, goe not from me, I will follow thee, Henry. Be patient gentle Queene, and I will ftay. Queeze. Who can be patient in such extreames? Ah wretched man, would I had dy'de a Maid? And neuer seene thee, neuer borne thee Sonne, Seeing thou hast prou'd so vanaturall a Father. Hath he descru'd to loose his Birth-right thus? Hadst chou but lou'd him halfe so well as I, Or felt that paine which I did for him once, Or nourisht him, as I did with my blood; Thou would'st haue left thy dearest heart-blood there, Rather then have made that sauage Duke thine Heire, And dis-inherited thine onely Sonne.

Prime. Father, you cannot dif-inherite me:

If you be King, why should not I succeede?

Henry. Pardon me Margarer, pardon me sweet Some,

The Earle of Warwick and the Duke enforc't me.

Que. Enforc't thee? Art thou King, and wilt be forc't? I shame to heare thee speake; ah timorous Wretch, Thou halt vadone thy felfe, thy Sonne, and me, And giu'n vato the House of Yorke luch head, As thou shalt reigne but by their sufferance. To entayle him and his Heires vnto the Crowne, What is it, but to make thy Sepulcher, And creepe into it facte before thy time? Warnick is Chancelor, and the Lord of Callice, Sterne Falconbridge commands the Narrow Seas, The Duke is made Protector of the Realme, And yet shalt thou be safe? Such safetie findes The trembling Lambe, inuironned with Wolues. Had I beene there, which am a filly Woman, The Souldiers should have tofs'd me on their Pikes, Before I would have granted to that A&. But thou preferr's thy Life, before thine Honor. And feeing thou do ft, I here divorce my felfe, Both from thy Table Herry, and thy Bed. Vntill that Act of Parliament be repealed, Whereby my Sonne is dis-inherited. The Northerne Lords, that have for sworne thy Colours, Will follow mine, if once they fee them spresd: And spread they shall be, to thy foule disgrace, And veter raine of the House of Torke. Thus doe I leave thee: Come Sonne, let's away, Our Army is ready; come, wee'le after them.

Henry. Sury gentle Margant, and beare me speake.

Queene. Thou hast spoke too much already: get they one.

Henry. Gentle Sonne Edward, thou wilt flay roe?
Quene. I, to be murther d by his Enemies.
Prince. When I returns with victorie to the field,
Ile fee your Grace: till then, Ile follow her.

Queene. Come Sonne away, we may not linger shas.

Henry. Poore Queene,
How love to me, and to her Sonne,
Hath made her breake out into termes of Rage.
Reveng'd may she be on that hatefull Duke,
Whose haughtie spirit, winged with desire,
Will cost my Crowne, and like an emptie Eagle,
Tyre on the sless of me, and of my Sonne.
The losse of those three Lords torments my heart:
Ile write vnto them, and entreat them faire;
Come Cousin, you shall be the Messenger.

Exet. And I, I bope, shall reconcile them all.

Flourific Enter Richard, Edward, and Mountague.

Richard. Brother, though I bee youngest, give mee leave.

Edward. No, I can better play the Orator.

Moure. But I have reasons strong and forceable.

Easer the Duke of Torke.

What is your Quarrell? how began it first?

Edward. No Quarrell, but a flight Contention.
Torke. About what?

Rech. About that which concernes your Grace and vs., The Crowne of England, Father, which is yours. Torke. Mine Boy? not till King Henry be dead.

Richard. Your Right depends not on his life, or death.

Edward. Now you are Heite, therefore enjoy it now:

By giving the House of Lancaster leave to breathe,

It will out-tunne you, Father, in the end.

Take. I tooke an Oath, that hee should quietly reigne.

Edward.But for a Kingdome any Oath may be broken:

I would breake a thouland Oathes, to reigne one yeere.

Richard. No: God forbid your Grace should be for-

Tarks. I shall be, if I clayme by open Warre, Rubard. Ile proue the contrary, if you'le heare mee speake.

Tesles. Thou canst not, Sonne: it is impossible.
Riebard. An Oath is of no moment, being not tooke
Before a true and lawfull Magistrate.
That hath authoritie ouer him that sweares.
Henry had none, but did vsurpe the place.
Then seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,
Your Oath, my Lord, is vaine and struolous.
Therefore to Atmes: and Father doe but thinke,
How sweet a thing it is to weare a Crowne,
Within whose Circuit is Elizaum,
And all that Poets saioe of Blisse and Ioy.
Why doe we linger thus? I cannot rest,
Youll the White Rose that I weare, be dy'de
Euro in the luke-warm blood of Henries heart,
Torke. Richard ynough: I will be King, or dye.

Brother, thou shalt to London presently,
And whet on Warrick to this Enterprise,

Thou

Thou Richard thait to the Duke of Norfolke, And tell him privily of our intent.
You Edward shall voto my Lord Cohham.
With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise. In them I trust: for they are Souldiors, Wittie, courteous, liberall, full of spirit.
While you are rhus imploy d, what restetch more? But that I seeke occasion how to use, And yet the King not privile to my Drist, Nor any of the House of Lancaster.

Ensur Gabriel.

But flay, what Newes? Why commit thou in fush

Gabriel. The Queene,
With all the Northerne Earles and Lords,
Intend here to besiege you in your Castle.
She is hard by, with twentie thousand ment
And therefore fortise your Hold, my Lord.

What? think'th thou, that we feare them?

Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me,
My Brather Mournague shall poste to London.
Let Noble Warnicke, Cobham, and the rest,
Whom we have left Protectors of the King,
With powrefull Pollicie strengthen themselves,
And trust not simple Horry, not his Oathes.

Mount. Brother, I goe: He winne them, feare it not And thus most humbly I doe take my leaue.

Exit Mountague.

Smer Moremer, and his Brother.

York, Six Idm, and Six Hugh Identifier, mine Vinckles
You are come to Sandall in a happie bours.
The Armie of the Queene means to before vs.
Idea. Sixee first not needs, wee't meets ber in the feld.

Torke. What, with five thousand men?

Richard. I, with five hundred, Father, for a neede.

A Woman's generall: what should we feare?

A March afters off.

Edward. Theare their Drummes:
Let's fee out men in order,
And iffue forth, and bid them Battaile ftraight.
Turke. Five men to twentie: though the oddes be great,

I doubt not, Vackle, of our Victorie.

Many a Battaile haue I wonne in France,

When as the Enemie hath beene tenne to ones

Why should I not now beset the like successe?

Alcryon. Exis.

Enser Rusland, and bus Turor.

Ruland. Ah, whither shall I slye, to scape their hands Ah Tutor, looke where bloody Classed comes.

Enter Clifford.
Clifford Chaplaine away, thy Pciethood faues thy life As for the Brat of this accurated Duke, Whole Father flew my Father, he flash dye.
Tutor. And I, my Lord, will beare him company.
Clifford. Souldiers, away with him,
Tusa. Ah Clifford, menther not this trancent Child,
Leaft thou be haved both of God and Man
Esis.

Clifford. How power is he dead alreadise of Or is it feare, that makes him close his eyes of lie open them,

Rustend. So looks the pent-up Lyon o're the Wretch, That trembles under his devooring Pawes. And so he walkes insulating o're his Prey, And so he comes, to rend his Limbes alunder. Ah genule Clifford, kill me with thy Sword, And not with such a cruell threaming Looke. Sweet Clifford heare me speake, before I dye I am too meane a subject for thy Writh, Be thou revens d on men, and let me live.

Clifferd. In vaine thou speak st. poore Boy:
My Fathers blood hath stops the passage
Where the words should enter

Where thy words fhould enter.

Ruland. Then let my Fathers blood open it agains,
He is a man, and Clifford cope with hun.

Conford. Had I thy Brethren here, their lines and three Were not reuenge sufficient for me:
No, if I digg'd up thy fore-fathers Granes,
And hung their rotten Coffins up in Chaynes,
It could not stake mine ire, nor ease my heart.
The sight of any of the House of Tork,
Is as a furie to torment my Soule:
And till I root out their accurred Line,
And leave not one alive, I live in Hell.
Therefore—

Rulord. Ohlet me przy, before I take my dezth:
To thee I przy; weet Clifford pitty me.
Clifford. Such pitty as my Rapiers point a Fords.

Ruland. I never did thee harme: why wils thou flay

Clifferd. Thy Father hath.
Reviewd. But 'twes ere I was borne.
Thou haft one Sonne, for his fabr pitty ene,
Lenft in reuenge thereof, fith God is ruft,
He be as milerably flaine as I.
Ah, let me liue in Prifonall my dayes,
And when I give occasion of offence,
Then let me dye, for now thou haft no cause.

Clifford. No cause? thy Father flew my Father therefore dge.

Ruland. Di facian landi famma fe se cua. Clifford. Planagener, I come Planagene : And this thy Sonnes blood cleaving to my Elade, Shall ruft vpon my Weapon, till thy blood Congeal'd with this, doe make me wipe off both Ers. Marum. Enter Richard, Duby of Torke.

Torks. The Army of the Queene hath got the fields My Vackles both are flaine, in referring me; And all my followers, to the eager foe Turne back, and flye, like Ships before the Winde, Or Lambes purfu'd by hunger-fitzrued Woisers. My Sonnes, God knowes what hath bechanced them: But this I know, they have demean'd themfelius? Like men borne to Renowne, by Life or Desth. Three times did Richard make a Lane to me, And three cry'de, Courage Father, fight it out a And full as oft came Edward to my fide, With Purple Faulchion, pointed to the fille, In blood of those that had encountered him: And when the hardyest Warriors did recyte, Richard cry'de, Actowne, or die a glorious Tombe,

A Scepter, or an Batting Sepulcine.

With this we charg'd againe: but out alas,
We bodg'd againe, as I haue feene a Swan
With bootleffe labour fwimme against the Tyde,
And spend her strength with ouer-matching Waues,

A fhost Alarum walkas.

Ah hearke, the facall followers doe purfue, And I am faint, and cannot flye their furle: And were I frong, I would not fhome their furle. The Sands are numbred, that makes up my Life, Here must I flay, and here my Life must end.

Enter the Queene, Clefford, Northumberland, the young Prince, and Souldsers

Come bloody Clifferd, rough Northumberland, I date your quenchleffe furie to more rage. I am yout Butt, and I abide yout Shot.

Northumb. Yeeld to out mercy, proud Plantagenet.
Clifford. 1, to fuch mercy, as his ruthlesse Arme
With downe-right payment, the w'd voto my Father.
Now Phaeton hath tumbled from his Carre,
And made an Euening at the Noone-tide Prick

Trice My ashes, as the Phoenix, may bring forth A Bird, that will revenge upon you all:
And in that hope, I throw mine eyes to Heaven,
Scorning what ere you can afflict me with,
Why come you not? what, multitudes, and feate?

Cuff. So Cowards fight, when they can flye uo further, So Doues doe peck the Foulcons piercing Tallons, So desperate Theeues, all hopelesse of their Liues, Breathe out Inucctiues gainst the Officers.

Torke. Oh (lifford, but bethinke thee once agains, And in thy thought ore-run my former time: And if thou canft, for blufhing, view this face, And bite thy tongue, that flanders bim with Cowardice, Whose from hath made thee fain; and flye ere this.

Clifford. I will not bandie with thee word for word, But huckler with thee blowes twice two for one. Queene. Hold valiant Clifford, for a thouland causes

I would prolong a while the Traytors Life: Wrath makes him deafe; speake thou Northumber Lond. Northumb. Hold Clifford, doe not honor him so much, Northumb. Hold Clifford, doe not honor him form.

To prick thy finger, though to wound his hears.
What valout were it, when a Curre doch grinne,
For one to thrust his Hand betweene his Teeth,
When he might spurne him with his Foot away?
It is Warres prize, to take all Vantages,
And tenne to one, is no impeach of Valour.

Clifford. I, I, so strives the Woodcocke with the Gynne,

Northwad So doth the Condie Atuggle in the Net.

Tork. So triumph Theeues vpon their conquet'd Booty, So True men yeeld with Robbers, fo o're-matcht.

Northumb. What would your Grace have done vnto

Queene. Brave Warriors, Clasford and Northumberland,
Come make him fland upon this Mole-hill here,
That raught at Mountaines with out-fittetched Armes,
Yet parted but the shadow with his Hand.
What, was it you that would be Englands King?
Was't you that revell'd in our Parliament,
And made a Preachment of your high Descent?
Where are your Messe of Sonnes, to back you now
The wanton Edward, and the Justic Cenge?

And where's that valiant Crook-back Prodigie, Dicke, your Boy, that with his grumbling voyce Was wont to cheare his Dad in Mutinies? Or with the rest, where is your Darling, Rutland? Looke Torke, I flaya'd this Napkin with the blood That valiant Clifford, with his Rapiers point, Made flue from the Bosome of the Boy And if thine eyes can water for his death, give thee this to drie thy Cheekes withall Alas poore Torke, but that I hate thee deadly, I should lament thy milerable state I prythee grieue, to make me merry, Torke. What hath thy heric heart to parche thine entrayles, That not a Teare can fall, for Rutlands death? Why are thou patient, man? thou should'fabe mad: And I, to make thee med, doe mock thee thus. Stampe, raue, and fret, that I may fing and dance. Thou would'it be fee'd, I fee, to make me sport : Torke cannot foeske, vnlesse he weare a Crowne. A Crowne for Torke; and Lords, bow lowero turn ; Hold you his hands, whileft I doe fee it on. I marry Sir, now lookes he like a King. I, this is he that tooke King Howies Chaire, And this is he was his adopted Heire, But how is it, that great Plantagener Is crown'd fo foone, and broke his folemne Oath? As I bethinke me you should not be King, Till out King Homy had shooke hands with Death. And will you pale your head in Henries Glory, And rob his Temples of the Diademe, Now in his Life, against your holy Oath? Oh tis a fault too too unpardonable. Off with the Crowne; and with the Crowne, his Head, And whilest we breathe, take time to doc him dead. Clifford. That is my Office, for my Fathers fake.

Clifford. That is my Office, for my Fathers sake.

Queens Nay stay, let's heate the Orizons hee makes

Torke. Shee-Wolfe of France, But worse then Wolves of France, Whole Tongue more poylons then the Adders Tooth: How ill-befreming is it in thy Sex, To triumph like an Amazonian Trull, Vpon their Woes, whom Fortune captillares & But that thy Face is Vizard-like, vachanging, Made impudent with vie of euill deedes. I would affay, prowd Queene, to make thee blush. To tell thee whence thou cam'it, of whom deriu'd, Were shame enough, to shame thee, Were thou not shamelesse. Thy Father beares the type of King of Naples, Of both the Sicils, and Ierufalem, Yet not so wealthie as an English Yeoman. Hath that poore Monarch taught thee to infult? It needes not, nor it bootes thee nor, prowd Queene, Vnlesse the Adage must be verify'd, That Beggers mounted, runne their Horse to death, 'Tis Beautie that doth oft make Women prowd, But God he knowes, thy there thereof is small. Tis Vertue, that doth make them moft admir'd, The contrary, dorh make thee wondred at Tis Gouernment that makes them feeme Diuine, The want thereof, makes thee abhominable. Thou are as opposite to every good, As the Antipodes are vinto vs, Or as the South to the Septentrion. Oh Tygres Heart, wrapt in a Womans Hide,

How

How could'A thou drayne the Life-blood of the Child, To bid the Father wipe his eyes withall, And yet be feene to beare a Womans face? Women are foft, milde, pittifull, and flezible; Thou. sterne, obdurate, fintie, rough, remorfelesse. Bidft thou me rage? why now thou haft thy with. Would'ft have me weeper why now thou haft thy will. For raging Wind blowes up incessant showers, And when the Rage allayes, the Raine begins, These Teares are my sweet Railands Obsequies, And every drop cryes vengeance for his death, 'Gainst thee fell Clifford, and thee false Prench-woman. Northanh. Beshrew me, but his passions moves me so,

That hardly can I check my eyes from Teares.

Torke. That Face of his, The hungry Caniballs would not have toucht, Would not have flzyn'd with blood: But you are more inhumane, more inexorable, Oh, tenne times more then Tygers of Hyrcania. See, ruthleffe Queene, a hapleffe Pathers Teares: This Cloth thou dipd'ft in blood of my fweet Boy, And I with Teares doe wash the blood away. Keepe thou the Napkin, and goe boast of this, And if thou tell'A the heavie florie right, Vpon my Soule, the hearers will fined Teares: Yes, even my Foes will fined fast-falling Teares, And Ly, Alas, it was a pittious deed. There, take the Crowne, and with the Crowne, my Curle, And in thy need, such comfort come to thee, As now I reape at thy too cruell hand. Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the World, My Soule to Heaven, my Blood vpon your Heads.

Northand. Had he been flaughter-man to all my Kinne, I should not for my Life but weepe with him, To fee how inly Sorrow gripes his Soule.

Queen. What, weeping tipe, my Lord Northumber land? Thinke but upon the wrong he did vs all, And that will quickly drie thy melting Teares.

Clifford, Heere's for my Oath, heere's for my Fathers Death.

Queene. And heere's to right our gentle-hearted

King Torke. Open thy Gate of Mercy, gracious God, My Soule flyes through these wounds, to seeke out thee. Queene. Off with his Head, and fet it on Yorke Gates, So Torke may ouer-looke the Towne of Yotke.

Flourish.

A Merch. Enter Edward, Richard, and their power.

Edward. I wonder how out Princely Father fcap't: Or whether he be scap't away.or no, From Cliffords and Northumberlands purfuit? Had he been ta'ne, we should have heard the newes; Had he beene flaloe, we should have heard the newes: Or had he feap't, me thinkes we should have heard The happy cidings of his good escape. How fares my Brother? why is he so sad?

Richard, I cannot joy, vntill I berefolu'd Where our right valuant Father is become. I faw him in the Battaile range about, And watcht him how he fingled Clifford forth. Me thought he bore him in the thickest troupe, As doth a Lyon in a Heard of Neat, Or as a Beare encompais'd round with Dogges : Who having pincht a lew, and made them cry, The reft frend all aloofe, and barke at him. So far'd ou: Father with his Enemies, So fled his Enemies my Warlike Fathers Me thinkes 'tis prize enough to be his Sonne. See how the Morning opes her golden Gates, And takes her farwell of the glorious Sunne, How well resembles it the princ of Youth, Trimm'd like a Yonker, prauncing to his Love?

Ed. Dazle mine eyes, or doe I fee three Summe;?

Rich. Three glorious Sunnes, each one a perfect Sunne, Not seperated with the racking Clouds, But fever'd in a pale cleare-shimog Skye. See, see, they loyne, embrace, and seeme to kille, As if they vow'd some League inviolable. Now are they but one Lampe, one Light, one Summer In this, the Hesuen figures fome event.

Edward The wondrous frange, The like yet never heard of. I thinke it cites vs (Brother) to the field, That wee, the Sonnes of braue Plantagent, Each one alreadie blazing by our meeder, Should not with flanding toyne our Lights together, And over-shine the Earth, as this the World What ere it bodes, hence-forward will I beare Vpon my Targuet three faire fhining Sunces. Rebard Ney, beare three Daughters:

By your leaue, I speake it, You loue the Breeder better then the Male.

Enter une blooker.

But what art thou, whose heavie Lookes fore-tell Some dreadfull flory hanging on thy Tongue! Meff. Ah, one that was a wofull looker on. When as the Noble Duke of Yorke was flaine,

Your Princely Father, and my louing Lord.

Edward. Oh speake no more, for I have heard too

Richard. Say how he dy'de, for I will beare it all Meff. Environed he was with many foer, And stood against them, as the hope of Troy
Against the Greekes, that would have entred Troy, But Hercules himfelfe must yeeld to oddes: And many froakes, though with a little Aze Hewes downe and fells the hardeft-tymber'd Oake. By many bands your Father was febdu'd, But onely flaught red by the irefull Arme Of vn-relenting Clifford, and the Queene: Who crown'd the gracious Duke to high despight, Laugh'd in his face: and when with griefe he weps, The ruthleffe Queene gaue him, to dry his Cheekes, A Napkin steeped in the harmeleffe blood Of Iweet young Restand, by rough Cliffed flaine : And after many scornes, many foule raunts, They tooke his Head, and on the Gates of Yorke They for the same, and there it doth remaine,

Edward. Sweet Duke of Yorke, our Prop to leane upon, Now thou are gone, wee have no Staffe, no Stay. Oh Clifford, Doyft'rous Clifford thou half flaine The Bowre of Europe, for his Chevalrie, And trecherously hast thou vanquisht him, For hand to hand he would have vanquisht thee. Now my Soules Pallace is become a Prifon: Ah, would the breake from bence, that this my body

The faddell spectacle that ere I viewd.

Might

Might in the ground be closed up in rest: For neuer henceforth shall I ioy againer Neuer, obneuer shall I fee more ioy.

Rich. I cannot weepe: for all my bodies moyssure
Scarse series to queech my Furnace-burning hart:
Nor can my tongue valoade my hearts great burthen,
For selfe-same winde that I should speake withall,
Is kindling costes that fires all my brest,
And burnes me vp with slames, that rears would quench.
To weepe, is to make less the depth of greese:
Teares then for Babes; Blowes, and Reuenge for mee.
Richard, I beare thy name, The venge thy death,
Or dye renowned by attempting it.

Ed. His name that valiant Duke both left with thees His Dukedome, and his Chaire with me is left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that Princely Eagles Bird, Shew thy defcent by gazing 'goinft the Sunne: For Chaire and Dukedome, Throne and Kingdome fay, Either that is thine, or else thou wer't not his.

March. Enter Warwicke, Mar quesse Moumacute, and their Army.

Warrick, How now faire Lords? What faire? What powers abroad?

Rich. Great Lord of Warwicke, if we should tecomp Our baleful newes, and at each words deliuerance Stab Poniards in our slesh, till all were told, The words would adde more anguish then the wounds, O valiant Lord, the Duke of Yorke is slaine.

Edw. O Warwicke, Warwicke, that Plantagenet Which held thee deerely, so his Soules Redemption, Is by the sterne Lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten dayes ago, drown'd thefe newes in teares And now to adde more measure to your woes, Ic ome to tell you things fith then befalne. After the bloody Fray at Wakefield fought, Where your braue Father breath'd bis latest gaspe, Tydings, as swiftly as the Postes could runne. Were brought me of your Losse, and his Depart. I then in London, keeper of the King, Multer'd my Soldiers, gathered flockes of Friends, Marcht toward S. Albons, to intercept the Queene, Bearing the King in my behalfe along a For by my Scouts, I was aductifed That the was comming with a full intent To dath our late Decree in Parliament, Touching King Herries Oath, and your Succession : Short Tale to make, we at S. Albons met, Our Battailes loyn'd, and both fides hercely fought a But whether twas the coldnesse of the King, Who look'd full gently on his warlike Queene, That robb'd my Soldiers of their heated Spleene. Or whether 'twas report of her successe. Or more then common feare of Cliffords Rigour, Who thunders to his Captines, Blood and Death, I cannot judge : but to conclude with truth, Their Weapons like to Lightning, came and went a Our Souldiers like the Night. Owles lazie flight, Or like a lazie Thresher with a Flaile, Fell gently downe, as if they firucke their Friends. I cheer'd them op with inflice of our Caufe, With promife of high pay, and great Rewards: But all in vaine, they had no heart to fight, And we (is them) no hope to win the day, So that we fled the King ento the Queene,

Lord George, your Brother, Norfolke, and my Selfe,

In hafte, post hafte, are come to loyne with you: For in the Marches herre we beard you were, Making another Head, to fight againe,

Ed Where is the Duke of Norfolke, gentle Warwick?
And when came Gsorgs from Burgundy to England?
ww. Some fix miles off the Duke is with the Soldlers,
And for your Brother he was letely fent
From your kinde Aunt Dutchesse of Burgundie,
With ayde of Souldiers to this needfull Warre.

Rich, Twas oddes belike, when valient Warwick fled; Oft haue I heard his praifes in Pursuite, But no're till now, his Scandall of Retire.

War. Nor now my Scandall Richard, dost thou heare:
For thou shalt know this strong right hand of mine,
Can plucke the Diadem from faint Horries head,
And wring the awefull Scepter from his Fift,
Were he as samous, and as bold in Warre,
As he is fam'd for Mildnesse, Peace, and Prayer.

Rieb. I know it well Lord Warwick, blame me not,
Tis loue I beare thy glories make me fpeake;
But in this troublous time, what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our Costes of Steele,
And wrap our bodies in blacke moutning Gownes,
Nomb'ring our Aue-Maries with our Beads?
Or shall we on the Helmets of our Foes
Tell our Devotion with revengefull Armes?
If for the last, say I, and to it Lords,

War. Why therefore Warwick came to feek you out, And therefore comes my Brother Mountague Attend me Lords, the proud infulting Queene, With Clifford, and the haught Northumberland, And of their Feather, many moe proud Birds, Haue wrought the eafie-melting King, like Wax. He fwore confest to your Succession, His Oath enrolled in the Parliament. And now to London all the crew are gone. To frustrate both his Oath, and what beside May make against the house of Lancaster. Their power (I thinke) is thirty thousand frong: Now, if the helpe of Norfolke, and my felle, With all the Friends that thou brave Earle of March, Among Rethe louing Welfhmen can's procure, Will but amount to fine and twenty thousand, Why Via, to London will we march, And once againe, beffride our foaming Steeds, And once againe cry Charge vpon our Foes, But never once againe turne backe and flye.

Rich. I, now me thinks I heare great Warwick speak; Ne're may he live to see a Sun-shine day, That cries Retire, if Warwicke bid him stay.

Ed. Lord Warwicke, on thy shoulder will Heave, And when thou fails (as God forbid the houre) Must Edward fall, which perill heaven foresend.

The next degree, is Englands Royall Throne:
For King of England these thon be proclaim'd
In every Burrough as we passe along,
And he that throwes not up his cap for iou,
Shall for the Fault make forfeit of his headking Edward, valiant Richard Moursague:
Stay we no longer, dreaming of Renowne,
But found the Trumpets, and about our Taske.
Rich. Then Cinford, werethy heart as hard as Steele,

Rich. Then Clifford, werethy heart as hard as Steel.
As thou haft thewne it filmtie by thy deeds,
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.
Ed. Then fitthe vp Drums, God and S. George for vs

P

Enter a Moffenger.

War. Hownow? what newes Mef. The Duke of Norfolke fends you word by me, The Queene is comming with a puissant Hoast, And craves your company, for speedy counsell. War. Why thenix fores, braue Warriors, let's away.

Exempt Omnes.

Flouryh, Enter the King the Queene, Clifford, Northumand Tong Prince, with Drumme and Trumpettes.

2n. Welcome my Lord to this braue to wn of Yorke, Yonders the head of that Arch-enemy, That fought to be incompast with your Crowne. Doth not the obiect cheere your heart, my Lord.

R. I, as the rockes cheare them that feare their wrack, To fee this fight, it irkes my very foule: With hold revenge (deere God) 'tis not my fault,

Nor wittingly baue I instring'd my Vow.

CIJ. My gracious Liege, this too much lentry And harmfull pitty must be layd aside: To whom do Lyons cast their gentle Lookes? Not to the Beaft, that would viurpe their Den. Whose hand is that the Forrest Beare doth licke? Not his that spoyles her yong before her face. Who scapes the lurking Scrpens mortall sting? Not he that fets his foot vpon her backe. The smallest Worme will turne, being troden on, And Doues will pecke in lafegard of their Brood. Ambitious Yorke, did levell at thy Crowne, Thou smiling, while he knit his angry browes. He but a Duke, would have his Sonne a King, And raise his issue like a louing Sire. Thou being a King, bleft with a goodly fonce, Did'ft yeeld confent to difinherit him : Which argued thee a most vnlouing Father. Vnreasonable Creatures feed their young, And though mans face be fearefull to their eyes, Yer in protection of their tender ones, Who hath not seens them even with those wings, Which sometime they have vs'd with fearfull flight, Make warre with him that climb'd vnto their nest, Offering their owne lives in their yongs defence? For shame, my Liege, make them your President Were it not pitty that this goodly Boy Should loofe his Birth-right by his Fathers fault, And long heereafter fay ynto his childe,
What my great Grandfather, and Grandfire got,
My catelesse Father fondly gaue away.
Ah, what a shame were this? Looke on the Boy, And let his manly face, which promifeth Successefull Fortune steele thy melting heart,

To hold thine owne, and leave thine owne with him.

King. Full well hath Clafford plaid the Orzeor, Inferring arguments of mighty force: But Clafford tell me, did'it thou never heare, That things ill got, had ever bad successe. And happy alwayes was it for that Sonne, Whose Father for his hoording went to hell: He leave my Sonne my Vertaous deeds behinde, And would my Father had left me no more: For all the rest is held at such a Rate, As brings a thousand fold more care to keepe, Then io possession any iot of pleasure.
Ah Cosin Yorke, would thy best Friends did know,

How it doth greeze me that my bead is heere. Q My Lord cheere vp your spirits, our foes are uye, And this soft course makes your Followers faint : You promist Knighthood to our forward sonne, Vnsheath your sword, and dub him presently. Edward, kneele downe.

King. Edward Plantagenet, arife a Knight, And learne this Lesson, Draw thy Sword in right.

Prm. My gracious Father, by your Kingly leave, Ile draw it as Apparant to the Crowne, And la that quarrell, vie it to the death. Clif. Why that is spoken like a toward Prince.

Erner a Waffenger. Meff. Royall Commanders, be in readinelle, For with a Band of thirty thousand men, Comes Warwicke backing of the Duke of Yerke, And in the Townes as they do march along, Proclaimes him King, and many five to him, Darraigne your hattell, for they are at hand. Clif. I would your Highneffe would depart the feld, The Queene hath best successe when you are absent.

Qu. I good my Lord, and leave vs to our Foruse.

King. Why, that's my fortune too, therefore Ile day.

North. Be it with resolution then to fight. Prin. My Royall Father, cheere thefe Noble Lords, And hearten those that fight in your defence: Vnibeath your Sword, good Father: Cry S. George.

March. Enter Edward Worwicks, Richard, Clarence. Norfelie, Islamingue, and Soldins.

Edw. Now periut'd Henry, will thou kneel for grace? And let thy Diadem vpon my head? Or bide the mortall Fortune of the field.

Qu. Go rate thy Minions, proud infulting Boy, Becomes it thee to be thus bold in termes, Before thy Souerzigne, and thy lawfull King? Ed. I am his King, and he should bow his knee:

I was adopted Heire by his confect.

Cla. Since when, his Oath is broke: for as I heze, You that are King, though he do weare the Crowne, Haue caus'd him by new Act of Parliament, To blot out me, and put his owne Sonne in.

Clif. And reason too, Who should succeede the Father, but the Sonne. Rich. Are you there butcher? O, I cannot speake. Clif. I Crooke-back, here I fland to answer the,

Or any he, the proudest of thy fort.

Rich. Twas you that kill'd yong Rutland, was it not?

Clif. I, and old Yorke, and yet not satisfied.

Rich. For Gods fakeLords give fignall to the light. War. What fay'A thou Beary, Wilt shou yeeld the Crowner (you speak Qu. Why how now long-tongu'd Warwicke, dare (you fpeak? When you and I, met at Sealbors left,

Your legges did better senuice then your hands. Wer. Then twas my turne to fly, and now tis thine: Clif. You said so much before, and yet you fled. War. Twas not yout valor Clifford droug me thence.

Nor. No. nor your manhood that durft make you flay. Rich. Northumberland, I bold thee reverently, Breake off the parley, for scarse I can refraine

The execution of my big-swolne heart Vpon that Clifford, that cruell Child-killer. Clif. I flew thy Father, cal'ft thou bim 2 Child?

Rich.

Rich. I like a Dastard, and a treacherous Coward, As thou didd'ft kill our tender Brother Rutland, But ere Sunfet, Ile make thee curse the decdt

King. Have done with words (my Lords) and heare me fpeake.

Qu. Defie them then, or els hold close thy lips. King. I prythee give no limits to my Tongue, I am a King, and priviledg'd to speake.

Clof. My Liege, the wound that bred this meeting here Cannot be cur'd by Words, therefore be full.

Rich. Then Executioner vnsheath thy sword: By him that made vs all, I am resolu'd,

That Cliffords Manhood, lyes vpon his congue.

Ed. Say Henry, shall I have my right, or no:
A thousand men have broke their Fasts to day, That no're shall dine, valesse thou yeeld the Crowne. War. If thou deny, their Blood spon thy head,

For Yorke in inflice put's his Armour on.

Pr.Ed. Is that be right, which Warwick saies is right, There is no vorong, but every thing is tight. war. Who ever got thee, there thy Mother Rauds,

For well I voc, thou hast thy Mothers tongue. Qu. But thou art neyther like thy Sire nor Damme,

But like a foule milhapen Stygmaticke, Mark'd by the Destinies to be avoided, As venome Toades, or Lizards dreadfull flings.

Reb. Iron of Naples, hid with English gilt, Whose Father beares the Title of a King,

(As if a Channell should be call d the Sea)
Sham it thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught, To let thy tongue detect thy bale-Lorne heart.

Ed. A wifpe of straw were worth a thousand Crowns, To make this shamelesse Callet know her selfe: Helen of Greece was fayrer farre then thou, Although thy Husband may be Menelass; And ne're was Agamemnons Brother wrong'd By that falle Woman, as this King by thee, His Father reuel'd in the heart of France, And ram'd the King, and made the Dolphin stoope: And had he match'd secording to his State, He might have kept that glory to this day. But when he tooke a begger to his bed, And grac'd thy poore Sire with his Bridall day, Euen then that Sun-shine brew'd a showre for him, That washt his Fathers fortunes forth of France, And heap'd fedition on his Crowneat home: For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy Pride? Had It thou bene meeke, our Title fill had flept, And we in pitty of the Gentle King, Had flipt our Claime, vizill another Age.

Cla. But when we law, our Sunshine made thy Spring, And that thy Summer bred vs no increase, We fet the Axe to thy viurping Roote: And though the edge hath something hit our selves, Yet know thou, fince we have begun to ftrike, Wee'l neuer leave, till we have howne thee downe,

Or bath'd thy growing, with our heated bloods. Edw. And in this resolution, I defie thee, Not willing any longer Conference. Since thou denied'st the gentle King to speake. Sound Trumpets, let our bloody Colours wave, And either Victorie, or elfea Graue.

Qu. Stay Edward.
Ed. No wrangling Woman, wee'l no longer flay,
These words will contenthousand lines this day.

Exercit ourses.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter Warnicks.

War. Fore-spent with Toile, as Runners with a Race. I lay me downe a little while to breath : For firokes received, and many blowes repaid, Have robb'd my strong knit finewes of their strength, And spight of spight, needs must I rest a-while,

Enter Edward roming.

Ed. Smile gentle heaven, or strike vagentle death, For this world frownes, and Edwards Sunne is clowded, War. How now my Lord, what happer what hope of good?

Enter Clarence.

Cta. Our hap is losse, our hope but sad dispaire, Our rankes are broke, and ruine followes vs. What counsaile give you? whether Chall we five?

Ed. Bootleffe is flight, they follow vs with Wings, And weake we are, and cannot shun pursuite.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah Warwicke, why halty withdrawn thy felfe? Thy Brothers blood the thirsty earth hath drunk. Broach'd with the Steely point of Cliffords Launce's
And in the very pangs of death, he cryde,
Like to a dismall Clangor heard from farre,
Warwicke, reuenge; Brother, reuenge my death,
So vnderneath the belly of their Steeds, That stain'd their Ferlockes in his smoaking blood, The Noble Gentleman gaue vp the ghoft.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our bloods He kill my Horse, because I will not flye: Why stand we like soft-hearted women heere, Wayling our losses, whiles the Foe doth Rage, Andlooke vpon, as if the Tragedie Were plaid in iest, by counterferring Actors. Heere on my knee, I vow to God aboue, Ile neuer pawfe againe, neuer stand full, Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,

Or Fortune given me measure of Revenge.

Ed. Oh Warwicke, I do bend my knee with thine, And in this you do chaine my foule to thine: And ere my knee rife from the Earths cold face, I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee, Thon fetter vp, and plucker downe of Kings: Befeeching thee (if with thy will it stands) That to my Foes this body must be prey, Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope, And give (weet passage to my sinfull soule. Now Lords, take leave vntill we meete againe, Where ere it be, in heaven, or in earth.

Rich. Brother, Give me thy hand, and gentle Warwicke, Let me imbrace thee in my weary armes: I that did neuer weepe, now melt with wo, That Winter should cut off our Spring-time lo.

War. Away, away: Once more sweet Lords farwell.

Cla. Yet let vs altogether to our Troopes, And give them leave to flye, that will not flay: And call them Pillars that will fland to ve : And if we thrive, promife them such rewards As Victors weare at the Olympian Games.
This may plant courage in their quailing breafts, For yet is hope of Life and Victory:

Fore

Exemu

Foreflow no longer, make we hence amaine.

Excursions. Enter Ruchard and Clifford.
Ruch. Now Clifford, I have singled the easione,
Suppose this arme is for the Duke of Yorke,
And this for Rucland, both bound to revenge,
Wes't thou invitor d with a Brazen wall.

Clif. Now Richard, I am with thee heere alone,
This is the hand that flabb'd thy Father Yorke,
And this the hand, that flew thy Brother Rutland,
And here's the heart, that triumpha in their death.
And cheeres these hands, that flew thy Sire and Brother,
To execute the like *pon thy selfe,
And so have at thee.

They Fight Narwicke course, Clifford flies.

Rich. Nay Warwicke, fingle out some other Chace,
For I my selse will hunt this Wolfe to death.

Exeurs:

Alarum. Enter King Henry alone. Hen, This battell fares like to the mornings Warre, When dying clouds contend, with growing light, What time the Shepheard blowing of his nailer, Can neither call it perfed day, not night. Now swayes it this way, like a Mighty Sea, Fore'd by the Tide, to combat with the Winder Now fwayes it that way, like the felfe-fame Ses, Fore'd to retyre by furie of the Winde. Sometime, the Flood preusiles; and than the Winde: Now, one the better: then, another beft; Both tugging to be Victors, breft to breft: Yer neither Conqueror, nor Conquered. So is the equal poise of this fell Warre. Heere on this Mole-hill will I sit me downe, To whom God will there be the Victorie: For Margaret my Queene, and Clifferd 200 Haue chid me from the Battell : Swearing both, They prosper best of all when I am thence. Would I were dead, if Gods good will were fo; For what is in this world, but Greefe and Woe. Oh God! methickes it were a happy life, Po be no better then a homely Swaine, To fit vpon a hill, as I do now, To carue out Dialls queintly, point by point, Thereby to fee the Minutes how they runne: How many makes the Houre full compleste, How many Houres brings about the Day, How many Dayes will finish up the Yeare, How many Yeares, 2 Mortall man may live. When this is knowne, then to duide the Times: So many Houres, must I tend my Florke; So many Houtes, must I take my Rest: So many Houres, must I Contemplate: So many Houres, must I Sport my selfe: So many Dayes, my Ewes have bene with yong: So many weekes, ere the poore Fooles will Eane: So many yeares, ere I shall sheere the Fleece: So Minutes, Houres, Dayes, Monthes, and Yeares, Paft ouer to the end they were created, Would bring white haires, vnto a Quiet grave. Ah! what a life were this? How sweet? how louely? Giues not the Hawthorne bush a sweeter shade To Shepheards, looking on their filly Sheepe, Then doth a rich Imbroider'd Canopie To Kings, that feare their Subjects treacherie? Oh yes, it doth; a thousand sold it doth And to conclude, the Shepherds homely Curds.

His cold thinne drinke out of her Leather Bottle, His wonted fleepe, under a fresh trees shade, All which secure, and sweetly he enloyes, Is farre beyond a Princer Desicates:
His Viands sparkling in a Golden Cup, His bodie couched in a curious bed,
When Care, Mistruss, and Treeson waits on him.

Alexano. Enter a Somo that hath half d his Father, es one doore; and a Father that hash hill d bis Some as another doore.

Son. Ill blowes the winde that profits no body, This man whom hand to hand I flew in fight, May be possessed with some store of Crownes, And I that (haply) take them from him now. May yet (ere night) yeeld both my Life and them To some man else, as this dead man doth me. Who's this? Oh God! It is my Fathers face. Whom in this Conflict, I (vnwares) have kill'd : Oh heavy times! begetting fuch Events. From Landon, by the King was I prest forth, My Father being the Earle of Warwickes man, Came on the part of Yorke, prest by his Master: And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life, Haue by my bands, of Life bereaved him. Pardon me God, I knew not what I did: And pardon Father, for I knew not thee. My Teares shall wipe away these bloody markes: And no more words, till they have flow'd their fill

King. O pitteous spectacle! O bloody Times!
Whiles Lyons Warte, and battaile for their Demes,
Poore harmlesse Lambes abide their enmity.
Weepe wretched man: Ile syde thee Teare for Teare,
And let our hearts and eyes, like Civill Warte,
Be blinde with teares, and break ore-charg'd with griese

Enter Faiber pearing of his Sonne.

Fa. Thou that so stourly hath resisted me,
Give me thy Gold, if show hast any Gold:
Por I have bought it with an hundred blowes.
But let me see: Is this our Foe-mans face?
Ah, no, no, it is mine onely Sonne.
Ah Boy, if any life be left in thee,
Throw up thine eye: see, see, what showres arise,
Blowne with the windie Tempest of my heart,
Vpon thy wounds, that killes mine Eye, and Heart,
O pitty God, this miserable Age!
What Stragems? how fell? how Butcherly?
Erreoneous, mutinous, and vnnaturall,
This deadly quarrell daily doth beget?
O Boy! thy Pather gave thee life too sone,
And hath berest thee of thy life too late.

King. Wo about wo strees more the common of King. Wo aboue wo: greefe, more the common greefe

O that my death would flay thefe ruthfull deeds:
O pitty, pitty, gentle heaven pitty:
The Red Rofe and the White are on his face,
The fatall Colours of our ftriuing Houses:
The one, his purple Blood right well resembles,
The other his pale Cheekes (me thinkes) presenteth:
Wither one Rose, and let the other flourish:
If you contend, a thousand lines must wither.

Son. How will my Mother, for a Fathers death Take on with me, and ne're be fatisfi'd?

Fa. How will my Wife, for flaughter of my Sonne. Shed feas of Teares, and ne're be fatisfid? King. How will the Country, for these wosul chances, Mis-thinke Mil-thinke the King, and not be facisfied?

Son. Was ever fonce, forcw'd a Farbers death?

Fath. Was over Father to bemoan'd his Sonne?
Hon. Wez over King to green'd for Subjects wee?

Much is year forrow; Mine, ten times fo much.

Son: The beare thee hence, where I may weepe my fill.

Path. These armes of mine shall be thy winding sheet:
My heart (sweet Boy) shall be thy Sepulcher,
For from my heart, thine I mage ne're shall go.
My sighing brest, shall be thy Fanerall bell;
And so obsequious will thy Father be,
Men for the lost of thee, having no more,
As Priam was for all his Valiant Sonnes,
Ile beare thee hence, and let them sight that will,
For I have courthered where I should not kill.

Exit

Hem. Sad-hearted-men, much overgone with Care;

Alarmas. Excursions: Enter the Queen she Prince, and Exerc.

Heere fits a King, more wofull then you are.

Prin. Fly Father, flye: for all your Friends are fled. And Warwicke rages like a chafed Bull: Away, for death doth bold vo in pursoite.

Qm. Mount you my Lord, towards Barwickepost s-

Edward and Richard like a brace of Grey-hounds, Hauing the fearfull flying Hare in fight, With fiery eyes, sparkling for very wreth, And bloody steele graspt in their yrefull hands Are as our backes, and therefore hence amaine.

Exit. Away: for vengeance comes along with them.
Nay, flay not to exposulate, make speed,
Or effecome after, lie away before.

Hen. Nay take me with thee, good fweet Exercs:
Not that I feare to flay, but loue to go
Whether the Queene intends. Forward, away. Estants

A lowd alarum. Enter Clifford Wounded.

Clif. Heere burnes my Candle out; I, heere it dies, Which whiles it lasted, gaue King Henry light. O Lancaster! I feare thy ouerthrow, More then my Bodies parting with my Soule: My Loue and Feste, glew'd many Friends to thee, And now I fall. Thy tough Commixtures melts, lappairing Henry, strength ning misproud Yorke a And whether flye the Gnats, but to the Sunne? And who shines now, but Hearus Enemies? O Phoebus! had'A thou never given consent, That Phacton Should checke thy fiery Steeds, Thy burning Carre never had fcorch'd the earth. And Henry, had'ft thou iway'd as Kings thould do, Or as thy Father, and his Father did, Giving no ground vnto the house of Yorke, They neuer then had sprung like Sommer Flyes t I, and ten thousand in this lucklesse Realme, Hed left no mourning Widdowes for our death, And thou this day, had ft kept thy Chaire in peace. For what doth cherrish Weeds, but gentle syre? And what makes Robbers bold, but too much lenity ? Bootlesse Plaints, and Curelesse are my Wounds s No way to five, nor firength to bold out flights The Fee is mercileffe, and will not pitty: For at their hands I have defem'd no picty. The syre hath got into my deadly Wounds,

And much ethile of blood, deeh make metsint: Come Torke, and Richard, Warwicke, and the rest, I Rab'd your Fathers bolomes; Split my brest.

Alorum & Reveat. Enter Edward Watwicke, Richard, and Soldiers, Monagus, & Clarenze.

Ed. Now breath we Lords, good fortune bids vapuale, And smooth the frownes of War, with peacefull lookee; Some Troopes pursue the bloody-minded Queeno, That led calme Henry, though he were a King, As doth a Saile, fill'd with affecting Gust Command an Argosie to stemme the Waues, But thinke you (Lords) that Clifford fied with them?

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape:
(For though before his face I speake the words)
Your Brother Richard markt him for the Grace.
And wherefoere he is, hee's surely dead. Clifford graver
Rich. Whose soule is that which takes hir heavy leave?
A deadly grone, like life and deaths departing.

See who it is.

Ed. And now the Battailes ended,

If Friend or Foe, let him be gently vied.

Rieb. Resoke that doorne of mercy for the Cefford,

Who not contented that he lopp'd the Branch
In hewing Rutland, when his leaves put forth,
But fet his murth'ring knife vnto the Roore,
From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring,
I meane our Princely Father, Duke of Yorke,

War. From off the gates of Yorke, ferch down I head, Your Fathers head, which Clifford placed there: In flead whereof, les this supply the roome, Measure for measure, must be asswered.

Ed. Bring forth that fatall Schreechowle to our house, That nothing fung but death, to vs and ours: Now death shall stop his dismall threatning found, And his ill-boading tongue, no more shall speake.

War. I thinke is understanding is bereft i Speake Clifford, dost thou know who speakes to thee? Darke cloudy death ore-shades his beames of life, And he not sees, not heares vs, what we say.

Rich. O would he did, and so (perhops) he doth, Tis but his policy to counterfer, Because he would avoid such bitter taunts Which in the time of death he gave our Father,

Cla If so thou think'st, Vex him with eager Words.

Rich. Clifford, aske mercy, and obtains no grace.

Ed. Clifford, repent in bootleffe penitence.

War. Clifford, devile excules for thy faults.

Cla. While we deuife fell Torrures for thy faults.
Ruch. Thou didd'st love Yorke, and I am fon to Yorke.
Edw. Thou pittied'st Rutland, I will pitty thee.

Cla. Where's Captaine Margaret, to sence you now?

War. They mocke thee Clifford,

Swesre as thou was't wont.

Ric. What, not an Osth? Nay then the world go's hard
When Clifford cannot spare his Friends an oath a
Lknow by that he's dead, and by my Soule,
If this right hand would buy two houres life,
That I (in all despight) might rayle at him,
This hand shoold chop it off: & with the issued Blood
Stifle the Villaine, whose vostanched thirst
Yorke, and yong Rutland could not fairstie

War. I, but he's dead. Of with the Traitors head.
And reare it in the place your Fathers flands.
And now to London with Triumphant march,

There to be crowned Englands Royall King : From whence, thall Warwicke cut the Sea to France, And aske the Ladie Bona for thy Queene : So shale thou finow both these Lands together, And having France thy Friend, thou fhalt not dread The feattred Foe, that hopes to rife againe : For though they cannot greatly fling to liurt, Yes looke to have them buz to offend thine eares ! First, will I sec the Coronation, And then to Britanny He croffe the Ses, To effect this marriage, so it please my Lord.

Ed. Euen as thou wilt fweet Warwicke, let it bee : For in thy shoulder do I builde my Seate ; And neuer will I vndertake the thing Wherein thy counfaile and confent is wanting: Rubard, I will create thee Duke of Gloucefter, And George of Clatence ; Warwicke ss our Selfe, Shall do, and vndo as him pleafeth best.

Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Glofter, For Glofters Dukedome is too ominous

Wer. Tut, that's a foolish observation : Richard, be Duke of Glofter: Now to London, To fee thefe Honors in possession. Exeunt > Ever Sinklo and Humfrey with Croffe bower m their bands.

(our selues:

Sink. Vnder this thicke growne brake, wee'l shrowd For through this Laund snon the Deere will come, And in this couert will we make our Stand, Culling the principall of all the Deere.

Hum. He ftsy about the hill, so both msy shoot. Sink. That cannot be, the noise of thy Croffe-bow Will scarre the Heard, and so my shoot is lost: Heere fland we both, and syme we at the best : And for the time shall not feeme tedious, He tell thee what befell me on a day. In this felfe-place, where now we meane to stand.

Sink. Heere comes a man, let's flay till he be paft; Enter the King with a Proyer booke.

Hen. From Scotland ain I ftolne euen of pure loue, To greet mine owne Land with my wishfull fight: No Harry, Harry, "tis no Laad of thine, Thy place is fill'd, thy Scepter wrung from thee, Thy Balme washt off, wherewith thou was Annointed: No bending knee will call thee Cafernow, No humble luters preale to speake for right: No, not a man comes for redrelle of thee For how can I helpe them, and not my felfe?

Sink. I, heere's a Deere, whose skin's a Keepers Pee . This is the quondam King; Let's feize vpon him. Hen. Let me embrace the sower Aduersaries,

For Wilemen lay, it is the wilest courle.

Hum. Why linger we? Let vs lay hands wpon him. Sunt. Forbeate a-while, wee'l heare a little more.

Hen. My Queene and Son are gone to France for aid:

And (as I heare) the great Commanding Warwicke I: thither gone, to craue the French Kings Sifter To wife for Edward. If this newes be true, Poore Queene, and Sonne, your labour is but lost: For Warwicke is a fubile Orator: And Lewis a Prince foone wonne with moving words 1 By this account then, Margaret may winne him, For the's a woman to be pittied much

Her fighes will make a batt'ry in his breft, Her terres will pierce into a Marble heart : The Tyger will be milde, whiles the doth mourne; And Ners will be tainted with remorte, To heare and fee her plaints, her Brinish Tearer. I, but thee's come to begge, Wsewicketo give ! Shee on his left lide, crawing syde for Howing He on his right, asking a wife for Edward Shee Weepes, and layes, her Howy is depos d: He Smiles, and layes, his Edward is inflaul'd; That the (poore Wretch) for greefe can speake no more Whiles Warwicke tels his Title, fmooths the Wrong, Inferreth arguments of mighty strength, And in conclusion winnes the King from her, With promise of his Sister, and what elfe, To strengthen and support King Edwards place. O Magaret, thus 'twill be, and thou (poore foule) Art then forfaken, as thou went'st forlorne

Hum. Say, what are thou talk'A of Kings & Queens's King. More then I feeme, and leffe then I was born to: A man at least, for lesse I should not be: And men may talke of Kings, and why not 1?

Hum. I, but thou talk'th, as if thou wer't a King, Ring. Why so I am (in Minde) and that's enough.

Hum. But if thou be a King, where is thy Crowne?

King. My Crowne is in my heart, not on my head t Not deck'd with Diamonds, and Indian Rones: Not to be seene : my Crowne, is call'd Content, A Crowne it is, that fildome Kings enioy.

Ham. Well, if you be a King crown'd with Concess, Your Crowne Content, and you, must be contented To go along with vs. For (as we thinke) You are the king King Edward hath depos'd: And we his subjects, sworne in all Allegeance, Will apprehend you, 25 his Enemie.

King But did you neuer (weste, and breake an Oath, Yum. No, neuer fuch an Oath, nor will not now. King. Where did you dwell when I was K. of England Hum. Heere in this Country, where we now remaine.

King. I was annointed King at nine monthes old, My Father, and my Grandfather were Kings: And you were Iwome true Subjects vato me: And tell methen, have you not broke your Oathes? Sin, No, for we were Subjects, but while you wer king

King. Why? Am I dead? Do I not breath a Man? Ah simple men, you know not what you sweate: Looke, 21 I blow this Feather from my Face, And as the Ayre blowes it to me againe, Obeying with my winde when I do blow, And yeelding to another, when it blowes, Commanded alwayes by the greater gult: Such is the lightnesse of you, common men. But do not breake your Oathes, for of that sinne, My milde intreatie shall not make you guiltie. Go where you will, the king thall be commanded, And be you kings, command, and He obey. Sinkle. We are true Subjects to the king,

King Edward King. So would you be agains to Henrie, If he were leated as king Edwardis.

Sorblo. We charge you in Gods name & the Kings, To go with vs vnto the Officers.

King. In Gods name lead, your Kings name be obeyd, And what God will, that let your King performe, And what he will, I humbly yeeld vnto.

Enser K. Edward, Glofter, Clarence, Ledy Gray. King. Brother of Gloster, at S. Albons field

This

This Ladyes Husband, Sir Richard Grey, was flaine, His Land then feiz'd on by the Conqueror, Her fuit is now, to repossesse those Lands, Which wee in Iustice cannoc well deny, Because in Quarrell of the House of Torke, The worthy Gentleman did lofe his Life. Rich. Your Highnesse shall doe well to graunt her sult

It were dishonor to deny it her.

Kung. It were no leffe, but yet Ile make a pawie. Rich. Yea, is it to:

I fee the Lady hath a thing to graunt,

Before the King will graunt her humble fuit.

Clarence. Hee knowes the Game, how true hee keepes the winde?

Rich. Silence.

King. Widow, we will confider of your fuit, And come some other time to know our minde.

wid. Right gracious Lord, I cannot brooke delay: May it please your Highnesse to resolve menow, And what your pleasure is, shall fatisfie me.

Rich. I Widow? then He warrant you all your Lands, And if what pleases him, shall pleasure you:

Fight elofer, or good faith you'le catch a Blow.

Clarence. I feare her not, voleffe the chance to fall. Rich. God forbid that, for hee'le take vantages.

King. How many Children hast thou, Widow? tell

Clarence. I thinke he meanes to begge a Child of her. Rich Nay then whip me : hee'le rather giue her two. Wid. Three, my most gracious Lord.

Rich. You shall have foure, if you'le be rul'd by him. Ring. 'Twere pictie they should lose their Fathers Lands.

Wid. Bepittifull, dread Lord, and graunt it then. King. Lords give vs leave, He trye this Widowes

Rich. I, good leave have you, for you will have leave Till Youth take leave, and leave you to the Crutch.

King. Now tell me, Madame, doe you loue you Children ?

Wid. I, full as dearely as I love my felfe.

King. And would you not doc much to doe them good ?

Wid. To doe them good, I would sustayne some harme.

King. Then get your Husbands Lands, to doe them good.

wid. Therefore I came voto your Maiestie.

King. Ile tell you how these Lands are to be got.

What service will thou doe me, if I give them?

wid. What you command, that refts in me to doe.

King: But you will take exceptions to my Boone.
Wad. No, gracious Lord, except I cannot doe it. King. I, but thou canst doe what I meane to aske. Wid. Why then I will doe what your Grace commands. Rich. Hee plyes her hard, and much Raine weares the Marble. Clar. As red as fire ? nay then, her Wax muft melt.

Pid. Why Roppes my Lord? shall I not heare my Taske?

King. An easie Taske, cis but to loue a King.
Wid. That's soone perform'd, because I am a Subiect

King. Why then, thy Husbands Lands I freely give thec.

wid I take my leave with many thousand thankes. Rich. The Match is made, thee feales it with a Curfie. King. But stay thee, the the fruits of love I meane. Wid. The fruits of Loue, I meane, my louing Liege. King. I, but I feare me in another fence.

What Loue, think'st thou, I sue so much to get?

Fed. My loue till death, my humble thanks, my prayers, That love which Vertue begges, and Vertue graunts.

King. No. by my troth, I did not meane such love.

Wid. Why then you meane not, as I thought you did.

King. But now you partly may perceive my minde, Wid. My minde will never graunt what I perceive Your Highnesse aymes at, if I syme aright.

To tell thee plaine, I ayme to lye with thee. Wid. Totell you plaine, I had rather lye in Ptison. King. Why then thou shalt not baue thy Husbands Lands.

Wid. Why then mine Honestie shall be my Dower, For by that loffe, I will not purchase them

King. Therein thou wrong'ft thy Children mightily, w.d. Herein your Highnelle wrongs both them & me; But mightie Lord, this merry inclination Accords not with the sadnesse of my fuit : Please you dismisse me, eyther with I, or no.

King . I, if thou wilt fay I to my request : No, if thou do'ft fay No to my demand.

Wid. Then No, my Lord: my fuit is at an end. Rich. The Widow likes him not, thee knits her Browes.

Clarence. Hee is the bluntest Wooer in Christendome.

King. Her Looks doch argue her replete with Modelly, Her Words doth thew her Wit incomparable, All her perfections challenge Soueraigntie, One way, or other, thee is for a King, And thee thall be my Loue, or elfe my Queene.

Say, that King Edward cake thee for his Queene? wid. Tis better faid then done, my gracious Lord:

I am a fubiect fit to jeaft withall, But farre vnfit to be a Soueraigne.

King. Sweet Widow, by my State I fweare to thee, I speake no more then what my Soule intends, And that is, to enjoy thee for my Love.

Wid. And that is more then I will yeeld ento: I know, I am too meane to be your Queene, And yet too good to be your Concubine.

King. You cauill, Widow, I did meane my Queene.
Wid. Twill grieue your Grace, my Sonnes should call you Father.

King. No more, then when my Danghters Call thee Mother.

Thou art a Widow, and thou halt some Children, And by Gods Mother, I being but a Batchelor, Haue other-fome. Why, tis a happy thing, To be the Father vnto many Sonnes:

Answer no more, for thou thalt be my Queene. Rich. The Ghoftly Father now hath done his Shrift. Clarence. When hee was made a Shriver, twas for shift. King. Brothers, you muse what Chat wee two haue had. Rich, The Widow likes It not, for thee lookes very fad.

King. You'ld thinke it strange, if I should marrie

Clarence. To who, my Lord? King. Wby Clarence to my felfe.

Rich Tha

Rieb. That would be tenne dayes wonder at the leaft.
Clarence. That's a day longer then a Wonder lafta. Rich. By lo much inthe Wonder in estremes King. Well, ieast on Brothers. I can tell you both, Her fuit is graunted for her Husbands Lands.

Enter a Noble man.

Nob. My gracious Lord, Horry your Foe is taken, And brought your Prisoner to your Pallace Gate King. See that he be convey'd voto the Towers And goe wee Brothers to the man that tooke him, To question of his apprehension. Widow goe you along: Lords vie her honourable.

Manes Richard

Rich. I, Edward will vfc Women honourably: Would he were wasted, Marrow, Bones, and all, That from his Loynes no hopefull Branch may fpring, To croffe me from the Golden time I looke for: And yet, betweene my Sonles delire, and me, The luftfull Edwards Tille buryed, Is Clarence. Homy, and his Sonne young Edward, And all the valook d-for Iffue of their Bodies, To take their Roomes, ere I can place my selfer A cold premeditation for my purpole. Why then I doe but dreame on Soueraigntie, Like one that flands upon a Promontorie, And spyes a fatre-off shore, where hee would tread, Wishing his foot were equall with his eye, And chides the Sea, that funders him from thence, Saying hee'le lade it dry, to have his way : So doe I wish the Crowne, being so farre off, And so I chide the meaner that keepes me from it, And fo (I fay) lle cut the Caufes off, Flattering me with impossibilities: My Eyes too quicke, my Heart o're-weenes too much, Vnleffe my Haad and Strength could equal them. Well, say there is no Kingdome then for Richard: What other Pleasure can the World affoord? He make my Heaven in a Ladies Lappe, And decke my Body in gay Omaments, And witch (were Ladies with my Words and Lookes. Oh miferable Thought! and more vnlikely, Then to accomplish twentie Golden Crownes. Why Loue for swore me in my Mothers Wombe: And for I should not deale in her soft Lawes, Shee did corrupt frayle Nature with some Bribe, To thrinke mine Arme vp like a wither'd Shrub, To make an envious Mountaine on my Back, Where fits Deformitie to mocke my Body & To thape my Legges of an voequall fize, To dis-proportion me in every part: Like to a Chaos, or an vn-lick'd Beare-whelpe, That carryes no impression like the Damme. And am I then a man to be belou'd? Oh monftrous fault, to harbour fuch a thought Then fince this Earth affoords no log to me But to command, to check, to o're-beare fuch, As are of better Person then my selfe: The make my Heauen, to dreame youn the Crowne, And whiles I line, t'account this World but Hell, Vntill mymis-shap'd Trunke, that beares this Head, Be round impaled with a glorious Crowne. And yet I know not how to get the Crowne, For many Lives stand betweene me and bome:

And I, like one loft in a Thornie Wood. That rents the Thomes, and is rent with the Thomes, Seeking a way, and Araying from the way, Not knowing how to finde the open Ayte, But toyling desperately to finde it out Torment my felfe, to catch the English Crowne; And from that torment I will free my felfe. Ot hew my way out with a bloody Aze. Why I can foule, and murther whiles I fruite, And cry, Content, to that which grieves my Heart, And wet my Cheekes with artificial Teares, And frame my Face to all occasions. He drowne more Saylers then the Mermaid Shall, He flay more gazers then the Bafiliake, He play the Oracot as well as Neftor December flyly then Viger could, And like a Synon, take another Troy. I can adde Colours to the Camelion, Change shapes with Prosew, for advantages, And fee the murtherous Macbeull to Schoole. Can I doe this, and cannot get a Crowne? Tut, were it farther off, Ile placke it downe.

Fluoris. Enter Lewis the French King, bu Sister Bona. bis Admiral. call d Bombon : Prince Edward, Queene Margares and the Earle of Oxfort. Lown fits, and riferb up agame.

Levis. Faire Queene of England, worthy Morant, Sit downe wish vs : it ill befits thy State, And Birth, that thou fould'it frand, while Lowe doch fit

Mag. No, mightie King of France: now Magan Most firike her sayle, and learne a while to serve, Where Kings command. I was (I must confesse) Great Albions Queengin former Golden dayes: But now mischance hath trod my Title downe, And with dif-honor layd me on the ground, Where I must take like Seat voto my fortune, And to my bumble Seat conforme my felfe.

Lows. Why say, faire Queene, whence fprings this deepe despaire?

Mary. From fuch a cause, as fills mine eyes with centes, And flops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares. Lewis. What ete it be, be thou fill like thy felle. And he thee by our fide. Seas ber by bir. Yeeld not thy necke to Fortunes youke, But let thy dauntleffe minde still ride in triumph, Over all mischance. Be plaine, Queene Mergaret, and tell thy griefe,

It shall be eas'd, if France can yeeld reliefe. Mag. Those gracious words Revive my drooping thoughts, And give my tongue-ty'd forrowes leave to speaks Now therefore be it knowne to Noble Levis, That Heary, fole possessor of my Love, Is, of a King, become a banishe man, And forc'd to live in Scotland a Forlome; While prowd ambitious Edward, Duke of Yorke, V furpes the Regall Title, and the Seat Of Englands true snoynted lawfull King, This is the cause that I, poore Magaret, With this my Some, Prince Edward. Henries Heire, Am come to craue thy just and lawfull ayde: And if thou faile verall our hope is done Scotland hath will to helpe, but cannot helpe:

Our

Our People, and our Peeres, are both mis-led, Our Treasure seiz'd, our Souldiors put to flight, And (as thou feeft) our felues in heavie plight.

Lewis. Renowned Queene, With patience calme the Storme, While we bethinke a meanes to breake It off.

Marg. The more wee flay, the stronger growes our Foe.

Lewis. The more I flay, the more lle succour thee. Marg. O, but impatience waiteth on true forrow. And see where comes the breeder of my forrow.

Enter Warwicke.

Lovis. What's hee approacheth boldly to our pre-Sence ?

Marg. Our Earle of Warwicke, Edwards greatest Friend.

Lowis. Welcome braue Warwicks, what brings thee to France? Hee descends. Shee arefeth.

Marg. I now begins a second Storme to rise, For this is hee that moues both Winde and Tyde. Warn. From worthy Edward, King of Albion,

My Lord and Soueraigne, and thy vowed Friend, I come (in Kindnesse, and vnfayned Loue) First, to doe greetings to thy Royall Person, And then to craue a League of Amitie: And leftly, to confirme that Amitie With Nuptiall Knot, if thou vouchfafe to granns That vertuous Lady Bona, thy faire Sifter, To Englands King, in lawfull Marriage.

Marg. If that goe forward, Hemies hope is done.
Warw. And gracious Madame, Speaking to Bo
In our Kings behalfe, Speaking to Bons.

I am commanded, with your leave and favor,

Humbly to kiffe your Hand, and with my Tongue To tell the passion of my Soueralgnes Heart; Where Fame, late entring at his heedfull Earcs, Hath plac'd thy Beauties Image, and thy Vertue.

Marg. King Lovis, and Lady Bona, heate me speake,

Before you answer Warwicke. His demand Springs not from Edwards well-meant honest Loue, But from Deceit, bred by Necessities
For how can Tyrants safely gouerne home,
Vriesse abroad they purchase great allyance? To prove him Tyrant, this reason may suffice, That Honry liueth still : but were hee dead, Yet here Prince Edward (Ands, King Horrus Sonne. Looke therefore Lowis, that by this League and Mariage Thou draw not on thy Danger, and Dis-houor: For though Vsurpers sway the rule a while, Yet Heau'ns are just, and Time suppresset Wrongs Wars. Iniurious Margaret.

Edw. And why not Queene? Wow. Because thy Father Henry did vsurpe, And thou no more att Prince, then thee is Queene, Oxf. Then Warwicke disapulls great lobe of Gaunt, Which did subdue the greatest part of Spaine; And after John of Gaunt, Honry the Fourth, Whose Wildome was a Mirror to the wisest : And after that wife Prince, Henry the Pift, Who by his Prowelle conqueted all Frances From these, out Herry lineally descends.

Warw. Oxford, how haps it in this smooth discourse, You told not, how Henry the Sixt hath loft All that, which Henry the Fift had gotten to Me thinkes these Peeres of France should simile at that, But for the rest: you tell a Pedigree Of threescore and two yeeres, a filly rime To make prescription for a Kingdomes worth. Oxf. Why Warwicke, canft thou speak against thy Liege Whom thou obeyd'st thirtie and fix yeeres, And not bewray thy Treason with a Blush?

Warw. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right, Now buckler Falsehood with a Pedigree?

For shame leave Henry, and call Edward King.

Oxf. Call him my King, by whose injurious doome My elder Brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere Was done to death? and more then fo, my Father, Euen in the downe-fall of his mellow'd yeeres, When Nature brought him to the doore of Death? No Warwicke, no: while Life vpholds this Arme, This Anne vpholds the House of Lancaster.

Warw. And I the House of Torke. Lews . Queene Margares, Prince Edward, and Oxford, Vouchsafe at our request, to stand aside, While I vie further conference with Warwicke.

They Rand aloofe.

Morg. Heavens graunt, that Warwicker wordes be witch him not.

Lew. Now Warvicke, tell me even vpon thy conscience Is Edward your true King? for I were loth To linke with him, that were not lawfull chosen.

Warw. Thereon I pawne my Credit, and mine Hc

Lewis. But is hee gracious in the Peoples eye? Farw. The mote, that Hemy was unfortunate. Lovis. Then further: all dissembling fet aside. Tell me for truth, the measure of his Love Vnto our Sifter Bona.

War. Such it seemes, As may beseeme a Monarch like himselfe. My selfe have often heard him say, and sweare, That this his Loue was an externall Plant, Whereof the Root was fixt in Vertues ground, The Leaves and Fruit maintaill'd with Beauties Sunne, Exempt from Enuy, but not from Disdaine, Volesse the Lady Bora quit his paine.

Lowis. Now Sister, let vs heare your firme resolue.

Bona. Your graunt, or your denyall, shall be mine. Yet I confesse, that often ere this day, SpeakstoWa When I have heard your Kings defert recounted, Mine eare hath tempted judgement to defire.

Lewis. Then Warwicke, thus:
Our Sifter shall be Edwards. And now forthwith shall Articles be drawne, Touching the Ioyature that your King must make, Which with her Dowrie shall be counter-poys'd: Draw neere, Queene Margaret, and be a witnesse, That Bona shall be Wife to the English King.

Pr. Edw. To Edward, but not to the English King Marg. Deceitful Warwicks, it was thy deuice, By this alliance to make vold my fuit: Before thy comming, Lewis was Herries friend.

Lewis. And fill is friend to him, and Margaret. But if your Title to the Crowne be weake, As may appeare by Edwards good successe: Then 'tis but reason, that I be releas'd From giving ayde, which late I promifed. Yet shall you have all kindnesse at my hand, That your Estate requires, and mine can yeeld.

nat your Estate requires, and single states when Warm. Hours now lives in Scotland, at his ease;

Where having nothing, nothing can he lofe.

And as for you your felle (our quondam Queene) You have a Father able to maintaine you,

And better 'twere, you troubled him, theo France. Mar. Peace impudent, and fhamelette Warwicke, Proud ferter vp, and puller downe of Kings,

I will not hence, till with my Talke and Teares (Both full of Truth) I make King Lewis behold Thy flye conucyance, and thy Lord: false love,

Post blowing a horne Wilhin.

For both of you are Birds of felfe-same Feather. Lever. Warwicke, this Is some poste to vs, or thee. Enter sbe Pofte.

Poft. My Lord Amballador, These Letters are for you. Speaker to Warwick. Sent from your Brother Marquelle Montagus. Thele from our King, vnto your Maielly. To Lows. And Madam, thefe for you: To Mergan From whom, I know not.

They allreade their Letters. Oxf. I like it well, that our faire Queene and Mistris Smiles at her newes, while Warnicke fromnes at his.

Prince Ed. Nay marke how Lewis stampes as he were netled. I hope, all's for the best.

Lew. Warwicke, what are thy Newes? And yours, faire Queene.

Mar. Mine such, as fill my heart with vnhop'd loyes. T/ar. Mine full of forrow, and hearts discontent. Low. What? has your King married the Lady Grey?

And now to footh your Forgery, and his, Sends me a Paper to perswade me Patience? Is this th'Alliance that he feekes with France? Dare he presume to scorne valn this manner?

Mar. I rold your Maiefly as much before i This proueth Edwards Loue, and Warwickes honefty.

War. King Lewis, I heere protest in fight of beauen. And by the hope I have of heavenly bliffe That I am cleere from this mildeed of Edwards; No more my King, for he dishonors me, But most himselse, if he could see his shame. Did I forget, that by the House of Yorke My Father came vntimely to his death? Did I let palle th'abule done to my Neece? Did I impale him with the Regall Crowne? Did I put Henry from his Native Right? And am I guerdon'd at the laft, with Shame? Shame on himselfe, for my Defert is Honor.
And to repaire my Honor lost for him, I heere renounce him, and returne to Hemy My Noble Queene, let former grudges palle, And henceforth, I am thy true Servicour : I will revenge his wrong to Lady Tone, And replant Homy in his former state.

Mar. Warwicke, Thefe words haueturn'd my Hate, to Loue,' And I forgine, and quite forget old faults, And ioy that thou becom'lt King Henries Friend. War. So much his Friend, I, his vnfained Friend,

That if King Lewis vouchlafe to furnish vs With some few Bands of chosen Soldiours, He vndertake to Land them on our Coaft, And force the Tyrant from his fear by Warre. Tis not his new-made Bride shall succour him. And as for Clarence, as my Letters tell me, Hee's very likely now to fall from him, For matching more for wanton Luft, then Honor, Bons. Deere Brother, how shall Bons be reveng'd, But by thy halpe to this diffrested Querne ? Mar. Renowned Prince, how that Poore Heary live, Vnlesse thou rescue him from faule dispaire? Bono. My quartel, and this English Queens, are one.

Or then for Arength and lafety of our Country.

War. And mine faite Lady Bona, toynes with yours. Lew. And mine, with hers, and thine, and diagreese Therefore, at laft, I fitmely am refolu'd You shall have syde.

Mar. Let me gloe humble thankes for all at once. Low. Then Englands Mellenger, resurne in Polle, And tell falle Edward, thy supposed King, That Lowu of France, is fending over Maskers To rewell it with him, and his new Bride. Thou feelt what's past, go feare thy King withall.

Bona. Tell him, in hope bee'l proue a widower shorely I werre the Willow Garland for his fake.

Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are lay deafide,

And I am ready to put Armor on.

Wer. Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong. And therefore lle vn-Crowne him, er't be long.

Low. But Warwicke, Thou and Oxford, with five thousand men Shall croffe the Seas, and bid falle Edward battaile: And as occasion ferues, this Noble Queen And Prince, shall follow with a fresh Supply. Yet ere thou go, but answer me one doubt What Pledge have we of thy firme Loyalty?

War. This thall affure my constant Loyalry, That if our Queene, and this young Prince agree, Ile ioynamine eldeft daughter, and my Io To him forthwith, in holy Wedlocke bands.

Mar. Yes, I agree, and thanke you for your Motion. Sonne Edward, the is Faire and Vertuous, Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwicke, And with thy hand, thy faith irreuocable, That onely Warwickes daughter shall be thine. Prin. Ed. Yes, I accept her, for the well deferues it,

And heere to pledge my Vow, I give my hand. He gives his band to Name. Lew. Why flay we now? These soldiers shalbeleused,

And thou Lord Bourbon, our High Admirall Shall wast them over with our Royall Fleete. I long till Edward fall by Warres mischance, For mocking Marriage with a Dame of France.

Exems. Moses Wormake. War. I came from Edward as Ambassador, But I returne his sworne and mortal! Foe: Matter of Marriage was the charge he gane me, But dreadfull Warre shall answer his demand. Had he none elle to make a stale but me? Then none but I, shall turne his lest to Sorrow. I was the Cheefe that rais'd him to the Crowne, And He be Cheefe to bring him downe againe a Not that I pitty Herries milery, But seeke Revenge on Edwards mockery.

Exis.

Enter Richard, Clarence, Somerfet, and Mountague.

Rich. Now tell me Brother Clarence, what thinke you Of this new Marriage with the Lady Gray? Hath not our Brother made a worthy choice? Clas Alas, you know, tis farre from hence to France, How

How could be flay till Warwicke made recurne? Som. My Lords, forbeare this talke; heere comes the King.

Flowrish. Enter King Edward Lady Grey, Penbrooke, Stafford, Hastings: foure stand on one side, and foure on the other.

Rich. And his well-chosen Bride. Clarence. I minde to tell him plainly what I thinke. King. Now Brother of Clarence,

How like you our Choyce,

That you ftand pensiue, as halfe malecontent? Clarence. As well as Lewis of France, Or the Earle of Warwicke,

Which are so weake of courage, and in judgement, That they le take no offence at our abuse,

King. Suppose they take offence without a eause They are but Lewis and Warwicke, I am Edward, Your King and Warwicker, and must have my will. Rich. And shall have your will, because our King: Yet hastie Marriage seldome proueth well.

Yea, Brother Richard, are you offended too?

Rich. Not I : no !

God forbid, that I should wish them sever'd, Whom God bath loyn'd together : I, and twere pirtie, to funder them, That yoake fo well together.

King. Setting your skornes, and your mislike aside, Tell me some reason, why the Lady Grey Should not become my Wife, and Englands Queenz? And you too Somerfer, and Mountague, Speake freely what you thinke.

Clarence. Then this is mine opinion:
That King Lewis become your Enemle, For mocking him about the Marriage

Of the Lady Bona. Rich. And Warwicke, doing what you gave in charge,

Is now dis-honored by this new Marriage. King. What, if both Lowis and Warwick be appear'd,

By fuch invention as I can deuise?

Mount. Yet, to have joyn'd with France in such alliance, Would more have firength ned this our Commonwealth 'Gainst forraine stormes, then any home-bred Marriage. Hast. Why, knowes not Mountagus, that of it felfe,

England is safe, if true within it felfe

Mount. But the lafer, when 'tis back'd with France. Hall. Tis better vfing France, then trufting France : Let vs be back'd with God, and with the Seas, Which he hath giu'n for fence impregnable, And with their helpes, onely defend our felues: In them, and in our felues, our fafetie lyes.

Clar. For this one speeth, Lord Hastings well deserves To have the Heire of the Lord Hungerford.

King. I, what of thet? it was my will, and graunt, And for this once, my Will shall stand for Law. Rich. And yet me thinks. your Grace hath not done well, To give the Heire and Daughter of Lord Scales Vnto the Brother of your louing Bride; Shee better would have fitted me, or Clarence:

But Hyang Bride you burie Brotherhood.

Clar. Orelse you would not have bestow'd the Heire
Of the Lord Bonuill on your new Wives Sonne, And leave your Brothers to goe specde elsewhere. King. Alas poore Clarence: Is it for a Wife

That shou are malecontent? I will prouide thee.

Clarence. In chusing for your selfe, You shew'd your judgement : Which being shallow, you shall give me leane To play the Broker in mine owne behalfe; And to that end, I fhortly minde to leave you.

King. Leade me, or tarry, Edward will be King, And not be ty'd vnto his Brothers will.

Lady Grey. My Lords, before it pleas'd his Maieslie To rayle my State to Title of a Queene, Doe me but right, and you must all consesse, That I was not ignoble of Descent, And meaner then my felfe have had like fortune But as this Title honors me and mine, So your diflikes, to whom I would be pleasing, Doth cloud my loyes with danger, and with forrow.

King. My Loue, forbeare to fawne vpon their frownes. What danger, or what forrow can befall thee, So long a Edward is thy conflant friend, And their true Soucraigne, whom they must obey? Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too, Vnlesse they seeke for hatred at my hands: Which if they doe, yet will I keepe thee lafe, And they shall feele the vengeance of my wrath.

Rich. Theare, yet fay not much, but thinke the more,

Enter a Poste.

King. Now Messenger, what Letters, or what Newes from France?

Post. My Soueraigne Liege, no Letters, & sew words, But (uch as I (without your special) pardon)

Dare not relate.

King. Goe too, wee pardon thee : Therefore, in briefe, tell me their words, As neere as thou canft guelle them.

What answer makes King Lemis vnto our Letters? Post. At my depart, these were his very words a Goe tell false Edward, the supposed King, That Lewis of France is sending over Maskers,

To reuell it with him, and his new Bride.

King. Is Lewis to braue? belike he thinkes me Henry. But what said Lady Bona to my Marriage? Post. These were her words, vtt red with mild distaine Tell him, in hope hee'se prove a Widower shortly, Ile weare the Willow Garland for his sake.

King. I blame not her; the could fay little leffe: She had the wrong. But what faid Hemiss Queene? For I have heard, that the was there in place.

Post. Tell him (quoth she)
My mourning Weedes are done,
And I am readie to put Armour on.

King. Belike the minds to play the Amazon. But what faid Warwickero thefe injuries?

Poft. He, more incens'd against your Maiestie, Then all the rest, discharg'd me with these words: Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong, And therefore Ile vncrowne him, et't be long. King. Ha?dusft the Traytor breath out so prowd wores? Well, I will arme me, being thus fore-warn'd: They shall have Worres, and pay for their presumption. But fay, is Warwicke friends with Margaret?

Post. I, gracious Soueraigne, They are so link'd in friendship,

That yong Prince Edward marryes Warwicks Daughter.

Clarence. Belike, the elder; Clarence will have the younger.

Now

Now Brother King farewell, and fit you fall, For I will hence to Warvickes other Daughter, That though I want a Kingdome, yet in Marriage I may not proue inferior to your felfe. You that love me, and Warnely, follow me.

Exil Clarence and Samer fet followers.

Rich. Not 1:

My thoughts syme as a further matter i I thay not for the love of Edward, but the Crowne.

King. Clarence and Semerfer both gone to Warwicke? Yet ain I arm'd against the worst can happen t And hafte is needfull in this desp'rate cafe Pembrooke and Stafford, you in our behalfe Goe leuie men, and make prepare for Warre; They are alreadie, or quickly will be landed My selfe in person will straight follow you.

Exerni Pembrooke and Stafford But ere I goe, Haftings and Mountague Resolue try doubt: you twalne, of all the rest, Are neere to Warvicke, by bloud, and by allyance a Tell me, if you loue Warwicke more then me; If it be fo, then both depart to him: I rather with you foes, then hollow friends. But if you minde to hold your true obedience, Giue me affurance with some friendly Vow,

That I may neuer haue you in suspect. Mount. So God helpe Mountague, as hee proues

Halt. And Haltings, as hee fauours Edwards cause. King. Now, Brother Richard, will you frand by vs ? Rich. 1, in despight of all that shall withstand you. King. Why fo: then am I fure of Victorie.

Now therefore let vs hence, and lofe no howre, Till wee meet Warnicks, with his forreine powre. Exewet

> Enter Warwicke and Oxford in England, with French Sculdiors.

Warm. Trust me, my Lord, all hitherto goes well, The common people by numbers fwarme to va

Enter Clarence and Somerfet. But fee where Somerfes and Clarence comes : Speake suddenly, my Lords, are wee all friends?

Clar. Feare not that, my Lord. Warw. Then gentle Clarence, welcome ento Warrate. And welcome Somerfer: I hold it cowardize, To rest mistrustfull, where a Noble Heart Hath pawn'd an open Hand, in figne of Loue; Else might I thinke, that Clarence, Edwards Brother, Were but a fained friend to our proceedings : But welcome (weet Claronce, my Daughter fall be thine. And now, what refts? but in Nights Couerture, Thy Brother being careleffely encamp'd, His Souldiors larking in the Towne show, And but attended by a simple Guard, Wee may surptize and take him at our pleasure, Our Scouts have found the adventure very eafie : That as Wyfes, and fout Diameds, With fleight and manhood fole to Rhefs Tents, And brought from thence the Thracian fatall Steeds; So wee, well couer'd with the Nights black Mantle, At vnawares may beat downe Edwards Guard, And feize himfelfe: I fay not, flaughter him, For I Intend but onely to susprize him, You that will follow me to this attempt Applaud the Name of Henry, with your Leader. They all cry. 11 my. Why then, let's on our way in fent fore, For Warwicks and his friends, God and Saint George.

Enter ibree Waschmen to guard the Kings Tom.

1 Wach. Come on my Mafters, each man take his fland, The King by this, is fet him downe to fleepe.

2. Wateb. What, will be not to Bed?

1. Wasch. Why, no for he hash made a folemne Yow. Never to lye and take his natural Reft, Tlil Warnicke, or himselse, be quite supprest. 3 Waich. To morrow then belike fhall be the day,

If Warwicke be so neere so men report. 3. Watch. But fay, I pray, what Noble man is that,

That with the King here teffeth in his Tent? 1. Watch. Tis the Lord Haftings, the Eings chiefest friend

3. Warch. O, is it fo? but why commands the King, That his chiefe followers lodge in Towner about him, While he himselfe keepes in the cold field?

2. Waseb. 'Tis the more honour, because more dange.

3. Watch. I, but give me worthip, and quiemelle, I like it better then a dangerous honor. If Warmicke knew in what estate he stands, Tis to be doubted he would waken him.

1. Watch. Valesse our Halberds did shut op his pass

2. Wath. I: wherefore elfe guard we his Royall Test, But to defend his Perfan from Night-foes?

Enter Warnicks, Clarence, Oxford, Somerfes, and French Souldsors, films all

Warv. This is his Tent, and fee where fland his Guard: Courage my Masters: Honor nove, or neucr : But follow me, and Edward Chall be ours.

1. Wareb. Who goes there? 2. Watch. Stay, or thou dyeft.

Warnicke and the rest ery all, Warnicke, Warnicke, and set woon the Guard who size, crying, Arma, Arme. Warwicke and the reft following them.

The Drumme playing, and Trumpet founding. Exter Harwicke, somerfes, and the reft, bringing the King out on bis Gowne, fitting in a Chaire: Pichard and Haftings flyes over the Stape.

Som. What are they that flye there? Warw. Richard and Haffings: let them goe, heere is the Duke.

K. Edw. The Duke?

Why Warkte, when wee parted,

Thou call'dft me King.
Wow. I, but the case is alter'd, When you difgrac'd me in my Embaliade, Then I degraded you from being King, And come now to create you Duke of Yorke. Alse, how hould you governe any Kingdome, That knownet how to vie Emballadors Nor how to be contented with one Wife, Nor how to vie your Brothers Brotherly, Nor how to studie for the Peoples Welfare, Nor how to throwd your felfe from Enemies? K.Eds. Yes K. Edw. Yea, Brother of Clarence,
Art thou here too?
Nay then I fee, that Edward needs must downe.
Yet Warwicks, in despight of all mischance,
Of thee thy selfe, and all thy Complices,
Edward will alwayes beare himselfe as King:
Though Fortunes mallice ouerthrow my State,
My minde exceedes the compasse of her Wheele.
Warw. Then for his minde, be Edward Englands King.

Takes off bis Crowne.

But Henry now shall weare the English Crowne, And be true King iodeede: thou but the shadow. My Lord of Somerset, at my request, See that forthwith Duke Edward be conuey'd Vitto my Brother Arch-Bishop of Yorke: When I have sought with Pembrooks, and his sellowes, He follow you, and tell what answer Lews and the Lady Bona send to him. Now for a-while sarewell good Duke of Yorke.

They leade him ent foreibly.

K.Ed. What Fates impose, that men must needs abide
It boots not to resist both winde and tide. Execute
Oxf. What now remaines my Lords for vs to do,
But march to London with our Solders?
War. I, that's the first thing that we haue to do,
To free King Hemy from impussomment,
And see hun leated in the Regall Throne.

Enser Rusers, and Lady Gray.

Rin. Madam, what makes you in this fodain change? Gray. Why Brother Rivers, are you yet to learne What late misfortune is befaine King Edward? Rin. What loffe of fome pitcht battell

Against Variates

Gray. No, but the losse of his owne Royall person.

Rim. Then is my Soueraigne staine?

Gray. I almost staine, for he is taken prisoner,

Either betrayd by falshood of his Guard,

Or by his Foe surprized at ynawares:

And as I further haue to ynderstand.

Is new committed to the Bishop of Yorke,

Fell Warwickes Brother, and by that our Foe.

Rim. These Newes I must confesse are full of greese, Yet gracious Madam, beare it as you may, Warwicke may toole that now hath wonne the day. Gray. Till then, faire hope must hinder lives decay: And I the rather waine me from dispaire For love of Edwards Off-spring in my wombe: This is it that makes me bridle passion, And beare with Mildnesse my missortunes crosse: 1,1, for this I draw in many a teare,

1,1, for this I draw in many a teare,
And stop the rising of blood-sucking fighes,
Least with my sighes or teares, I blast or drowne
King Edwards Fruite, true heyre to th'English Crowne.
Rus. But Madam,
Where is Warwicke then become?

Gray. I am inform'd that he comes towards London To fet the Crowne once more on Hemies head, Guelle thou the reft, King Edwards Friends must downe But to preuent the Tyrants violence, (For trush nothim that hath once broken Faith) lie hence forthwith vnto the Sanctuary,

To faue (at least) the heire of Edwards right:
There shall I rest secure from force and traud:
Come therefore let vs flye, while we may flye,
If Warwicke take vs, we are sure to dye.

Enter Richard, Lord Haftings, and Sir William Stanley.

Rich. Now my Lord Hestings, and Six Welliam Stanley
Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,
Into this cheesest Thicket of the Parke.
Thus stand the case: you know our King, my Brother,
Is prisoner to the Bishop here, at whose hauds
He hath good viage, and great liberty,
And often but attended with weake guard,
Come hunting this way to disport himselfe.
I have advertised him by secret meanes,
That Is about this houre he make this way,
Vinder the colour of his vivall game,
He shall heere finde his Friends with Horse and Men,
To set him free from his Captivitie.

Euter King Edward, and a Humfmon

Huntsman. This way my Lord,
For this way lies the Game.

King Edw. Nay this way man,
See where the Huntsmen fland.
Now Brother of Glotter, Lord Hastings, and the reft,
Stand you thus close to fleate the Bishops Deere?

Rich. Brother, the time and case, requireth bast,
Your horse flands ready at the Parke-corner.

King Ed. But whether shall we then?

Halt. To Lyn my Lord,
And thips from thence to Flanders.

Rich. Wel guest believe me, for that was my meaning
K.Ed. Stanley, I will require thy forwardnesse.

Rub. But whetefore flay we? its no time to talke.

K.Ed. Huntiman, what lay fl thou?

Wilt thou go along?

Hunti. Better do fo, then tarry and be bang'd.

Hunsf. Better do so, then carry and be hang'd.

Rich. Come then away, lets ha no more adoo,

K.Ed. Bishop farwell,

Sheeld thee from Warmsches frowne,

And pray that I may re-possesse to covere.

Flourish. Enter King Henry the fixt. Clerence, Warwicke, Somerfet, joung Henry, Oxford, Mountague, and Lieutenaus.

K.Hm. M. Lieurenant, now that God and Friends
Have thaken Edward from the Regall feate,
And turn'd my captive flate to libertic,
My feate to hope, my fortower voto 1096s.
At our enlargement what are thy due Fees?
Lew. Subjects may challenge nothing of their Sou'rains
But, if an humble prayer may prevaile,
I then crave patdon of your Maieflie.

K. Hm. For what, Lieutenant > For well vling me?
Nay be thou lure, lie well require thy kindnesse.
For that it made my imprisonment, a pleasure:
1, such a pleasure, as inceged Birds.
Conceiue; when after many moody Thoughts,
At last, by Notes of Houshold harmonie,
They quite forget their losse of Libertie.

But Varwicke, after God, thou fet'st me free.

And chiefely therefore, I thanke God, and thee,
He was the Author, thou the Instrument.

Therefore that I may conquer Portunes spight,
By living low, where Fortune cannot hurt me,
And that the people of this blessed Land
May not be punishe with my thwarting starres.

Varwicke, although my Head still weare the Crowne,
I here resigne my Government to thee,
For thou are fortunate in all thy deeds.

And now may feeme as wife as vertuous,
And now may feeme as wife as vertuous,
By fpying and acouding Forcunes malice,
For few men rightly temper with the Statres t
Yet in this one thing let me blame your Grace,
For chusing me, when Clarence is in place.

Clar. No Warmicke, thou are worthy of the Iway,
To whom the Head in an thy Nativitie,
Adjudg'd an Olive Branch, and Lawrell Crowne,
As likely to be bleft in Peace and Warre:
And therefore I yeeld thee my free confent.

Warw. And I chuse Clarence onely for Protector.

King, Warwick and Clarence, give me both your Hands
Now toyne your Hands, & with your Hands your Hearts,
That no diffention hinder Government:
I make you both Protectors of this Land,
While I my selfe will lead a private Life,
And in devotion spend my latter dayes,
To since rebuke, and my Creators prayse.

Warw. What answeres Clarence to his Soueraignes

Clar. That he consents, if Parackeyeeld consent.
For on thy fortune I repose my selfe.

Warw Why then, though loth, yet must I be content a Weele yoake together, like a double shadow To Henries Body, and supply his place; I meane, in bearing weight of Gouernment, While he enloyes the Honor, and his ease. And Clarence, now then it is more then needfull, Forthwith that Edvara be prenound a Traytor, And all his Lands and Goods conficate.

Clar. What elfe 's and that Succession be determined wow. I, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

King But with the first, of all your chiefe affaires, Let me entreat (for I command no more)
That Margaret your Queene, and my Some Edward,
Be sent for, to returne from France with speed:
For till I see them here, by doubtfull feare,
My 109 of libertie is halfe eelips d.

Clar. It shall bee done, my Soueraigne, with all

King My Lord of Somerfet, what Youth is that,
Of whom you feeme to have so tender care?

Somers. My Liege, it is young Henry, Earle of Richmond

King. Come hither, Englands Hope:

Lages bu Hand on bu Head.

If fecret Powers suggest but cruth
To my divining thoughts,
This prettie Lad will prove our Countries blisso.
His Lookes are full of peacefull Maiestie,
His Head by nature fram'd to weare a Crowne,
His Hand to wield a Scepter, and himselfe
Likely in time to blesse a Regall Throne:
Make much of him, my Lords; for this is hee
Must helpe you more, then you are burt by mee.

ENIT a Pofte

Par. What newes, my friend?
Pafe. That Edward is aleaped from your Brothes.
And fled (as hee heares fines) to Burgundie

For. Vulsuone newer but how made he eleape f Foste. He was convey'd by Rebord, Duke of Glorier, And the Lord Hastings, who attended him In fecret ambush, on the Forrest side, And from the Bishops Huntimen rescond bim.

For Hunting was his dayly Exercise.

Warw. My Brother was too carelesse of his charge.

But let vs hence, my Souerasgne, to provide

A falue for any fore, that may betide

Exemp

Maner Somerfet, Richmond and Oxford.

Som. My Lord, I like not of this flight of Edwards.
For doubtleffe, Bury under will yeeld him heipe,
And we shall have more Watres befor the long.
As Humiss late presaging Prophecie
Did glad my heart, with hope of this young Richmond.
So doth my heart missingue me, in these Cooks. Oas,
What may befall him, to his barme and ours.
Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
Forthwith weelessend him hence to Brittanie,
Till stormes be past of Civill Enmitte.

Oxf. 1: for if Edward re-possess the Crowne,
"Tushke that Richmond, with the rest, shall downe.

Som. It shall be so, he shall to Brittanie,
Come therefore, let's about it speedily.

Exempt.

Flouryb. Enter Edward, Richard, Haftings, and Soulders.

Edw Now Brother Rebard, Lord Hagings, and the reft, Yet thus farre Fortune maketh vs smends, And fayes, that once more I shall enterchange My wained state, for Hammer Regall Crowne. Well have we passed, and now re-passed the Seas, And brought deficed helpe from Brigundie. What then remaines, we being thus arrived From Rauenspure Hauen, before the Gates of Yorke, But that we enter, as into our Dukedome?

Rieb. The Gares made fast?

Brother, I like not this.

For many men that stumble at the Threshold,

Are well fore-told, that danger lurkes within.

Edw. Tulh man, aboadments must not now affright vs:
By faire or foule meanes we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repaire to vs.

Hast. My Liege, Ile knocke once more, to summon them.

Maior. My Lords,
We were fore-warned of your comming,

For now we owe allegence vnto Heary.

Edw. But, Mafter Major, if Heary be your King.

Yet Edward, at the least, is Duke of Yorke.

(Moor. True, my good Lord, I know you for no lesse.

Edw Why, and I challenge nothing but my Dukedome,
As being well content with the: alone.

Rich But

Rich. But when the Fox hath once got in his Note,
Heele foone finde meanes to make the Body follow.

Haff. Why, Mafter Maior, why fland you in a doubt?
Open the Gates, we are King Heeries friends.

Maior. 1, fay you fo? the Gates shall then be opened.

He descends,

Rich. A wife front Captaine, and foone perfwaded.
Haft. The good old man would faine that all were wel,
So twere not long of him: but being entred,
I doubt not I, but we shall soone perswade
Both him, and all his Brothers, voto reason.

Enter the Maior, and two Aldermen.
Edw. So, Master Maior: these Gates must not be shut,
But in the Night, or in the time of Warre.
What, seare not man, but yeeld me up the Keyes,
Takes bu Keyes.

For Edward will defend the Towne, and thee, And all those friends, that deine to follow mee.

March. Enter Mountgomera with Drumme and Souldiers.

Rich. Brother, this is Sir John Ma mgomerie, Our trustie friend, vnlesse l be deceiu'd.

Edv. Welcome Sir John: but why come you in Mount. To helpe King Edward in his time of storme, As every loyall Subject ought to doc.

Edw. Thankes good Mountgomeric But we now forget our Title to the Crowne, And onely clayme our Dukedome, Till God please to send the rest.

Mount. Then face you well, for I will hence againe, I came to ferue a King, and not a Duke:
Drumme firske vp, and let vs march away,
The Drumme begins to march.

Edw. Nay flay, Sit Iobn, a while, and wee'le debate
By what fafe meanes the Crowne may be recoure'd.

Mount. What talke you of debating? in few words, If you'le not here proclaime your felfe out King, lie leave you to your fortune, and be gone.
To keepe them back, that come to fuccour you.
Why shall we fight, if you pretend no Title?

Rich. Why Brother, wherefore fland you on nice

Edw When wee grow flonger, Then weele make our Clayme:

Till then, ils wildome to conceale our meaning.

Haft. Away with ferupulous Wit, now Atmes must rule.

Rich. And fesreleffe minds clyme fooueff vnto Crowns.

Brother, we will proclaime you out of hand,

The brust thereof will bring you many friends.

Edw Then be it as you will: for its my tight,

And Hemy but viurpes the Diademe.

Monus. I, now my Soueraigne speaketh like himselfe, And now will I be Edward Champson.

Haft. Sound Trumper, Edward shall be here proclaim'd:
Come, sellow Souldior, make thou proclamation.

Flourift. Sound.

Soul Edward the Fourth, by the Grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, &c.

Mount. And who foe regainlayes King Edwards right,

By this I challenge him to lingle fight.

Throwes downe bis Grantlet.

All Long live Edward the Fourth.

Edw. Thankes braue Mountgomery,
And thankes vito you all:
If fortune ferue me, lie require this kindneffe,
Now for this Nigbt, let's harbor here in Yorker
And when the Morning Sunne shall tayle his Carre
Aboue the Border of this Horizon,
Wee'le forward towards Warmicke, and his Mates;
For well I wot that Henry is no Souldier.
Ah froward Clarete, how eutil it befeemes thee,
To flatter Henry, and fortake thy Brother?
Yet as wee may, wee'le meet both thee and Warmicke.
Come on braue Souldiors: doubt oot of the Day,
And that once gotten, doubt not of large Pay Exerum.

Flouragh. Enter the King Warmicke, Mountague, Clarence Oxford, and Somerfet.

War. What counfaile, Lords? Edward from Belgia, With haftie Germanes, and blunt Hollanders, Hath pass'd in safetie through the Narrow Seas, And with his troupes doth march amaine to London, And many giddie people flock to him.

King Let's leuic men, and bear him backe againe, Clar A little fire is quickly trodden out, Which being suffer'd, Rivers cannor quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-beared friends,
Nor mutinous in peace, yet bold in Warre,
Those will I muster vp: and thou Sonne Clarence
Shalt stirre vp in Sustolke, Norfolke, and in Kent,
The Knights and Gentlemen, to come with thee.
Thou Brother Mountagne, in Buckingham,
Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt sind
Men well enclin'd to heare what thou command'ste.
And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belou'd,
In Oxfordshire shalt muster vp thy friends.
My Soversigne, with the louing Citizens,
Like to his lland, gyrt in with the Ocean,
Or modest Dyan, circled with her Nymphs,
Shall rest in London, till we come to him:
Faire Lords take leave, and stand uot to reply.
Farewell my Soversigne.

King. Farewell my Helter and my Troyes true hope.
Clar. In figne of truth, I kiffe your Highneffe Hand.
King. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate.
Mount. Comfort, my Lord, and fo I take my leave.
Oxf. And thus I leale my truth, and bid adieu.
King. Sweet Oxford, and my louing Mountague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell.
War. Farewell, sweet Lords, let's meet at Coventry.

Exeum.

Ring. Here at the Pallace will I reft a while. Coulin of Exerc, what thinkes your Lordflip? Me thinkes, the Power that Edward hath in field, Should not be able to encounter mine

Exa. The doubt is, that he will fedure the reft.

King. That's not my feare, my meed hath got me faine:
I have not flopt mine eares to their demands.

Nor posted off their faites with flow delayes,

My pittle hath beene balme to heale their wounds,

My mildnesse hath allay d their swelling grieses,

My mercie dry'd their water-flowing wares.

I have not been desirous of their wealth,

Nor much oppress them with great Subsidies,

Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd;

Then why should they love Edward more then me?

No Exam, their Graces challenge Grace:

And when the Lyon fawnes vpon the Lambe, The Lambe will never cease to follow him.

Show withm, A Luncafter, A Lancafter.

Exer. Hearke, hearke, my Lord, what Shours are these?

Emer Edward and his Souldiers.

Edw. Seize on the sharnesse'd Horry, beare him hence, And once againe proclaime vs King of England. You are the Fount that makes small Brockes to flow, Now stops thy Spring, my Sea shall suck them dry. And swell so much to chigher, by their ebbe. Hence with him to the Tower, let him not speake.

Exit with King Henry.

And Lords, towards Couentry bend we our course, Where peremptoric Warnicks now remaines:
The Sunne thines hor, and if we vie delay,
Cold bring Winter marres our hop'd-for Hay.
Rich. Away betimes, before his forces 10yne,

And take the great-growne Traytor vnawates:
Braue Warriors, march appaine towards Coventry.

Enter Warwicke, the Maior of Contenty, two Mcfongers, and others upon the Walls.

War. Where is the Post that came from valiant Oxford? How farrethence is thy Lord, mine honest sellow?

Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How farre off is our Brother Momnague?

Where is the Post that came from Momnague?

Mess. By this at Daintry, with a pussion troope.

Enter Somerule.

War. Say Somerude, what fayes my louing Sonne?
And by thy gueffe, how nights Clarence now?
Somerus. At Southam I did leave him with his forces,
And doe expect him here fome two howees bence.
War. Then Clarence's at hand, I heate his Drumme.
Somerus. It is not his, my Lord, here Southam lyes:
The Drumyour Honor heates, marcheth from Warwicke,
War. Who Chould that he? belike valook'd for friends
Somerus. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

March. Floursh. Enter Edward, Richard, and Souldiers.

Edw. Goe, Trumper, to the Walls, and found a Parle.

Rich. See how the furly the micke mans the Wall.

Wo. Oh vabid spight, is sportfull Edward come?

Where slept our Scouts, or how are they seduc'd,

That we could heare no newes of his repayre.

Edm. Now Warmicke, wilt thou ope the Citic Gates, Speake gentle words, and humbly bend thy Knee, Call Edmard King, and at his hands begge Mercy, And he shall pardon thee these Outrages?

war. Nay rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence,
Confesse who set thee vp, and pluckt the downe,
Call warnicke Patron, and be penitent,
And thou shalt still remaine the Duke of Yorke.

Pith 1 phonophray least the would have said the Kin.

Rich. I thought at least he would have said the King,
Or did he make the Ieast against his will?

War. Is not a Dukedome, Sir, a goodly gift?

Rich. I, by my faith, for a poore Earle to give,

Ile doe thee feruice for fo good a gift.

War. Twas I that gaue the Kingdome to thy Brother.

Edw. Why then 'tis mine, if but by Warvickes gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight: And Weakeling, Varmely takes his gift againe, And Henry is my King, Warmsche his Subject.

Edw. But Warnicker King is Edwards Prisoner. And gellant Warnicker, doe but answer this, What is the Body, when the Head is off?

Rub. Alasthat Warnicke had on more fore-cast, But whiles he thought to steale the single Ten, The King was styly singered from the Deck: You left poore Henry at the Bishops Pallace, And tenne to one you'le meet him in the Tower.

And tenne to one you'le meet him in the Tower.

Edw. 'Tis cuti fo, yet you are Warwicke fill.

Rich. Come Warwicke,

Take the time, kneele downe; kneele downe:
Nay when? Itake now, or elfe the Iron cooles,

Wer. I had rather chop this Hand off at a blow.

And with the other, fling it at thy face,

Then beare follow a fayle, to strike to thee.

Edw. Sayle how thou canft, Haue Winde and Tyde thy friend, This Hand, fast wound about thy coale-black hayre, Shall, whiles thy Head is warme, and new cut of, Write in the dust this Sentence with thy blood, Wind-changing Famicke now can change no more.

Enter Oxford with Drumme and Colours.

Or. Oh chearefull Colours, see where Oxford comes.
Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster.
Rech. The Gates are open, let us enter too.
Edw. So other foes may set upon our backs.
Stand we in good array: for they no doubt
Will issue out againe, and bid us battaile;
If not, the Ciric being but of small defence,
Weele quickly towze the Traitors in the same.
For. Oh welcome Oxford, for we want thy helpe.

Enter Mountague, with Drumme and Colours.

Mount. Mountague, Mountague, for Larcafter.

Rich. Thou and thy Brother both shall buy this Treason

Eurn with the dearest blood your bodies beare.

Edw. The harder matcht, the greater Victorie, My minde presageth happy gaine, and Conquest.

Enter Somerfet, with Drumme and Colours.

Som. Somerfet, Somerfet, for Langaffer.
Rich. Two of thy Name, both Dukes of Somerfet,
Have fold their Lives voto the House of Torke,
And thou shalt be the third, if this Sword bold.

Enter Clarence with Drumme and Coleurs.

Wie. And loe, where George of Clarence sweepes along, Of force enough to bid his Brother Battoile:
With whom, in vpright zeale to right, prevailes
More then the nature of a Brothers Love.
Come Clarence, come: thou wilt, if Francisks call.

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this meanes? Looke here, I throw my infamie at thee:
I will not ruinate my Fathers House,
Who gave his blood to ly me the stones together,
And set up Lancaser. Why, trowest thou, Warwicke,
That Clarence is so has this to bend the fatall lostruments of Warre

Agsinst

Against his Brother, and his lawfull King.
Perhaps thou wilt oblect my holy Ooth:
To keepe that Oath, were more impietie,
Then Iephab, when he foctifie'd his Daughter.
I am so forry for my Trespass made,
I here proclayme my felse thy mertall soe:
With resolution, wheresoe're I meet thee,
(As I will meet thee, if thou stirre abroad)
To plague thee, for thy soule mis-leading me.
And so, prowd-hearted Warwicke, I desie thee,
And to my Brother turne my blushing Cheekes.
Pardon me Edward, I will make amends:
And Richard, doe not frown e vpon my faults,
For I will henceforth be no more vnconstant.
Edw., Now welcome more, and ten times more be

Edv. Now welcome more, and ten times more belou'd, Then if thou neuer hadft deferu'd our hate.

Rich. Welcome good Clarence, this is Brother-like. Warw. Oh passing Traytor, periur d and vniust. Edw. What Warwicke, Wile thou leave the Towne, and fight?

Or shall we bear the Stones about thine Eares?

Ware. Alas, I am not coop dhere for desence:
I will away towards Barnet presently,

And bid thee Battaile, Edward, if thou dat'A.

Edw. Yes Warmche, Edward dares, and leads the way:

Lords to the field: Saint George, and Victorie. Excuss.

March. Warwicke and his companie followes.

Alarum, and Excursions. Enter Edward bringing forth Warwicke wounded.

Edw. So, lye thou there: dye thou, and dye out feare, For Wormicke was a Bugge that fear'd vs all. Now Mannague ht fast, I steke for thee, That Warnackes Bones may keepe thine companie.

Warw. Ah, who is night come so me, friend, or foe, And tell me who is Victor, Torke, or Warwicke i Why aske I that? my mangled body showes, My blood, my want of strength, my sicke heart shewes, That I must yeeld my body to the Earth, And by my fall, the conquest to my foe. Thus yeelds the Cedar to the Axes edges Whole Armes gave thelter to the Princely Eagle, Vnder whole thade the ramping Lyon flept, Whole top-branch ouer-peer'd loues spreading Tree, And kept low Shrubs from Winters pow rfull Winde. These Eyes, that now are dim'd with Deaths black Veyle, Haue beene as piercing as the Mid-day Sunne, To fearch the fecret Treasons of the World: The Wrinckles in my Browes, now fill'd with blood, Were lik ned oft to Kingly Sepulchers: For who hu'd King, but I could digge his Graue? And who durst smile, when warwicke bent his Brow? Loe, now my Glory (mear'd in duft and blood, My Patkes, my Walkes, my Mannors that I had, Even now forfake me; and of all my Lands, Is nothing left me, but my bodies length. Why, what is Pompe, Rule, Reigne, but Earth and Duft? And live we how we can, yet dye we must.

Enter Oxford and Somerfec.

Som. Ah Warwicke, Warwicke, wert thou as we are, We might recourt all our Leile againe:

The Queene from France hath brought a pulling power.
Even now we heard the newes: sh, could'st thou flye.

Warw. Why then I vould not flye, Ah Nountague,
If thou be there, sweet Brother, take my Hand,
And with thy Lippes keepe in my Soule a while.
Thou lou'st me not: for Brother, if thou dids,
Thy teares would wash this cold congcaled blood,
That glewes my Lippes, and will not let me speake.
Come quickly Mountague, or I am dead,
Som. Ah Warvicke, Mountague hach breath'd his last,

Som. Ah Warvicke, Mountague hath breath'd his laft, And to the latest gaspe, cry'd out for Warvicke: And sid, Commend me to my valiant Brother. And more he would have sid, and more he spoke, Whith sounded like a Cannon in a Vault, That mought not be distinguishe: but at last I well might heare, delivered with a groene, Oh sarewell Warwicke.

Nam. Sweet rest his Soule:
Flye Lords, and save your selves,
For Warvicke bids you all farewell, to meet in Heaven.
Oxf. Away, away, to meet the Queenes great powes.
Here they beare away his Body.
Exercise.

Flowrish. Enter King Edward in trieonoph, with Richard, Clarence, and the rest.

Korg. Thus farre out fortune keepes an spward course, and we are grac'd with wreaths of Victorie to But in the midft of this bright-shining Day, I spy a black suspicious threatning Cloud, That will encounter with our glotious Sunne, Ere he attaine his easefull Westerne Bed: I meane, my Lords, those powers that the Queene Hath rays'd in Gallia, have arrived our Coast, And, as we heare, march on to fight with vs.

Clar. A little gale will foone disperse that Cloud,
And blow it to the Source from whence it came,
Thy very Beames will dry those Vapours vp,
For every Cloudengenders not a Storme

For every Cloud engenders not a Storme.

Rich. The Queeness valued thirtie thousand strong,
And Somerses, with Oxford, fled to her:

If the haue time to breathe, be well assured
Her saction will be full as strong as ours.

Kmg. We are advertis'd by our loung friends.
That they doe hold their courie toward Tewksbury.
We having now the best at Barnet field,
Will thither straight, for willingnesse rids way,
And as we march, our strength will be augmented:
In every Countie as we goe along,
Strike vp the Drumme, cry courage, and away.
Exemp.

Flourish. March. Enser the Queene, joung Edward, Somerses, Oxford, and Souldiers.

Qu. Great Lords, wife men ne'r fit and waile their loffe, But chearely feeke how to redreffe their harmes. What though the Maft be now blowne ouer-boord, The Cable broke, the holding-Anchor loft, And halfe our Saylors fwallow'd in the flood? Yet lives our Pilot fill. Is a meet, that hee Should leave the Helme, and like a fearefull Lad, With tearefull Eyes adds Water to the Sea, And glue more firength to that which hath too much, Whiles in his moane, the Ship fplirs on the Rock, Which Industrie and Courage might have fau'd? Ah what a fhame, ah what a fault were this. Say Warnets was our Anchor: what of that?

q 3

And Mountague out Top-Malt: what of him? Out flaught'red friends, the Tackles : what of shele? Why is not Oxford here, another Anchor? And Somerfer, another goodly Maft? The friends of France our Shrowds and Tacklings? And though viskilfull, why not Ned and I, For once allow'd the skilfull Pilots Charge? We will not from the Helme, to lit and weepe, But keepe our Course (though the rough Winde say no) From Shelues and Rocks, that threaten vs with Wrack. As good to chide the Waves, as Speake them faire. And what is Edward, but a tuthleffe Sea? What Clarence, but a Quick-fand of Deceit? And Richard, but a raged fatall Rocke? All thefe, the Enemies to our poore Barke Say you can fwim, alas 'tis but a while: Tread on the Sand, why there you quickly finke, Bestride the Rock, the Tyde will wash you off, Or elle you famish, that's a three-fold Death. This speake I (Lords) to let you understand, If cale some one of you would flye from vs, That there's no hop'd-for Mercy with the Brothers, More then with ruthlesse Waues, with Saods and Rocks. Why courage then, what cannot be auoided, Twere childish weakenesse to lament, or feare.

Prince. Me thinkes a Woman of this valiant Spirit, Should, if a Coward heard her speake these words, Insus his Breass with Magnanimitre, And make him, naked, soyle a man at Armes. I speake not this, as doubting any here: For did I but suspect a fearefull man, He should have leave to goe away betimes, Leah in our need he might inseed another, And make him of like spirit to himselfe. If any such be here, as God forbid, Let him depart, before we neede his helpe.

Oxf. Women and Children of fo high a courage, And Warriots faint, why 'twere perpetuall shame. Oh braue young Prince: thy famous Grandfather Doth live againe in thee; long may st thou live, To beare his Image, and renew his Glories.

To beare his Image, and renew his Glories.

Som. And he that will not fight for such a hope,
Goe home to Bed, and like the Owle by day,
If he arise, be mock'd and wondred at.

Qu. Thankes gentle Somerfer, (weet Oxford thankes.
Prince. And take his thankes, that yet hath nothing elfe.

Enter a Mullenger.

Meff. Prepare you Lords, for Edward is at hand, Readie to fight: therefore be refolute.

Oxf. I thought no leffe: it is his Policie,
To hafte thus fail, to finde vs vnprouided.

Som. But hee's deceived, we are in readinesse,

Som. But hee's deceived, we are in readinesses.

Qu. This cheares my heart, to see your forwardnesse.

Out. Here pitch our Battaile, hence we will not budge.

Flourish, and march. Enter Edward, Richard, Clarence, and Souldiers.

Edw.Braue followers, yonder stands the thornie Wood, Which by the Heauens assistance, and your strength, Must by the Roots be hew he to your fire, I need not adde more fuell to your fire, For well I wot, ye blaze, to burne them out:

Giue fignal to the fight, and to it Lords.

Qu. Lords, Krüghts, and Gentlemen, what I should say, My leares gaine-say: for every word I speake, Yt see I drinke the water of my eye.

Therefore no more but this: Henry your Soveraigne Is Prisoner to the Foe, his State vsury'd,

His Realme a slaughter-house, his Subsects slaine,

His Statutes cancell'd, and his Treasure spent:

And yonder is the Wosse, that makes this spoyle.

You sight in suffice: then in Gods Nisme, Lords,

Be valiant, and gine signall to the sight.

Alarum, Estress, Extension.

Flourish. Enter Edward, Ruchard, Queene, Clarence, Oxford, Somerfee

Edw. Nowhere a period of turnultuous Broyles.

Away with Oxford to Harnes Castle straight.

For Somerfer, off with his guiltie Head

Goe heare them hence, I will not heare them speake.

Oxf. For my part, Ile not trouble thee with words.

Som. Not I, but stoupe with patience to my fortune.

Da. So part we fadly in this troublom World,
To meet with Joy in sweet Lerusalem.

Edw. Is Proclamation made, That who finds Edward,
Shall have a high Reward, and he his Life?

Rich. It is, and loe where youthfull Edward cornes.

Enter : be Prince.

Edw. Bring forth the Gallant, let vs heare him speake. What? can so young a Thorne begin to prick?
Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make,
For bearing Armes, for shiring vp my Sobiects,
Aud all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?

Prince. Speake like a Subject, prowd ambitious Torke.
Suppose that I am now my Fathers Mouth,
Refigne thy Chayre, and where I stand, kneele thou,
Whil'st I propose the selfe-same words to thee,
Which (Traytor) thou would shaue me answer to,

Qu. Ah, that thy Father had beene fo resolu'd Rub. That you might shill have worne the Petricoat, And no re have stolne the Breech from Lancaster.

Primes. Let Asp fable in a Winters Night, His Corrish Riddles forts not with this place.

Reb. By Heauen, Brat, Ile plague ye for that word.

24. I, thou wast borne to be a plague to men.

Ruh. For Gods sake, take away this Capune Scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding Crooke-backe, rather.

Edw. Peace wilfull Boy, or I will charme your tongue, Clar. Vntutor'd Lad, thou art too malapere. Prince. I know my dutie, you are all vndutifull; Lafetitious Edward, and thou persur'd George, And thou mile shapen Dicke, I tell ye all. I am your better. Traytors as ye are. And thou vsurp'st my Fathers right and mine. Edw. Take that, the likenesse of this Rayler bere.

Stabs hum.

Rich. Sprawl'A thou? take that, to end thy agonic.

Rich. Stabs him.

CLo. And ther's for twitting me with periutie

2a. Oh, kill me too.
Rich. Marry, and Itall. Offers to kill ber.
Edw. Hold, Richard, hold, for we have done too much Rich. Why

Rich. Why should shee live, to fill the World with words.

Edw. What? doth shee swowne? vie meanes for her recouerie.

Rich. Clarence excuse me to the King my Brother : He hence to London on a ferious marter, Ere ye come there, be fure to heare some newes.

Clu. What? what i

Exit. Rich Tower, the Tower.

Qu. Oh Ned, [weet Ned, speake to thy Mother Boy. Can'it thou nut speake? O Traitors, Murtherers!
They that stabb'd Cafar, shed no blood at all: Did not offend, nor were not worthy Blame, If this foule deed were by, to equall it. He was a Man; this (in respect) a Childe, And Men, ne're spend their fury on a Childe. What's worfe then Murtherer, that I may name it? No, no, my heart will burft, and if I speake, And I will speake, that so my heart may burft. Botchers and Villaines, bloudy Caniballes, How (weet a Plant have you vntimely cropt: You have no children (Butchers) if you had, The thought of them would have (tirr'd vp remorfe, But if you euer chance to haue a Childe, Looke in his youth to have him fo cut off As deathimen you have rid this Iweet yong Prince.

King. Away with her, go beare her hence perforce. Qu. Nay, neuer beare me hence, dispatch me heete: Here theath thy Sword, lle pardon thee my death: What? wilt thou not? Then Clarence do it thou.

(la. By heaven, I will not do thee so much case. Qu. Good Clarence do: [weet Clarence do thou do it. Cla. Did'il thou not heare me [weste I would not do it? Qu. I, but thon vielt to forsweare thy lelle. "Twas Sin before, but now "tis Charity

What wile anoi? Where is that divels butcher Richard? Hard favor'd Richard? Richard, where are thou ! Thou are not heere; Murther is thy Almef-deed: Petitioners for Blood, thou ne're put'it backe.

Ed. Away I fay, I charge ye beare her hence, 24. So come to you, and yours, as to this Printe. Exis Queene

Ed. Where's Richard gone.

(la. To London all in post, and as I guesse !

To make a bloody Supper in the Tower. Ed. He's fodaine if a thing comes in his head. Now march we hence, discharge the common fore With Pay and Thankes, and let's away to London, And fee our gentle Queene how well the fares, By this (I hope) the hath a Sonne for me. Exts.

Enter Henry the fixt, and Richard, with the Lieuenans on the Walles .

Rich. Good day, my Lord, what at your Booke fo hard?

Hen. I my good Lord . my Lord I should say rather, Tis sinne to flatter. Good was little better : *Good Gloster, and good Devill, were alike, And both prepolierous therefore, not Good Lord.

Rich. Sirra, leave va to our felues, we must conferre. Hen. So flies the wreaklesse shepherd from & Wolfe : So first the harmlesse Sheepe doth yeeld his Fleece, And next his Throate, vnto the Butchers Knife. What Scene of death hath Rollins now to Acte ? Rich. Suspition alwayer haunts the guilty minde,

The Theefe doth feare each bulh an Officer. Her. The Bird that hath bin limed in a both, With trembling wings mildoubteth every bush; And I the haplesse Male to one sweet Bird,

Haue now the fatall Obiect in my eye,

Where my poore yong was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd.

Rich. Why what a pecuish Foole was that of Creet, That taught his Sonne the office of a Fowle, And yet for all his wings, the Foole was drown'd

Hen. I Dedains, my poore Boy Icarus, Thy Father Minns, that dem'de our courle, The Sunne that fear'd the wings of my fweet Boy. Thy Brother Edward, and thy Selfe, the Sea Whole envious Gulfe did [wallow up his life: Ah, kill me with thy Weapon, not with words, My brest can better brooke thy Daggers point, Then can my cares that Tragicke History. But wherefore dost thou come? Is't for my Life?

Rich. Think'il thou I am an Executioner? Hen. A Persecutor I am sure thou art, If murchering Innocents be Executing, Why then thou are an Executioner.

Rich Thy Son I kill'd for his presumption. Hen. Hadft thou bin kill'd, when firft bidft prefume. Thou had'ft not liu'd to kill a Sonne of mine : And thus I prophelie, that many a thouland, Which now mistrust no parcell of my feare, And many an old mans fighe, and many a Widdowes, And many an Orphans water-standing-eye, Men for their Sonnes, Wives for their Husbands, Orphans, for their Parents timeles death, Shall rue the houre that ever thou was't borne. The Owle shriek'd at thy birth, an evill signe, The Night-Crow cry'de, aboding luckleffe time, Dogs howl'd, and hiddeous Tempelt shook down Trees: The Rauen rook'd her on the Chimnies top, And chare ring Pies in difmall Difcords fung: Thy Mother felt more then a Mothers paine And yet brought forth leffe then a Mothers hope. To wir.an indigested and deformed lumpe, Not like the fruit of fuch a goodly Trec. Teeth had'A thou in thy head, when thou was't borne, To lignifie, thou cam'il to bite the world: And if the rest be true, which I have heard, Thou cam'it-

Rich. He heare no more: Dye Prophet in thy Speech, Stabbes bim. For this (among fit the reft) was I ordain'd.

Hen. I, and for much more flaughter after this, O God forgiue my finnes, and pardon thee. Rich. What? will the aspiring blood of Lancaster Sinke in the ground? I thought it would have mounted. See how my Iword weepes for the poore Kings death. O may fuch purple teares be alway fhed

From those that wish the downfall of our house. If any sparke of Life be yet remaining, Downe, downe to hell, and fay I fent thee thither. Stabs bim againe.

I that have neyther piety, loue, nor feare, Indeed tis true that Hemis told me of: For I have often heard my Mother fay, I came into the world with my Legges forward. Had I not reason (thinke ye)to make hast, And seeke their Ruine, that vsurp'd our Right? The Midwite wonder'd, and the Women cri'de O lesus blesse vs, he is borne with teeth,

And

And so I was, which plainly signified, That I should snarle, and bite, and play the dogger Then since the Hennens have shap day Body to, Let Hell make crook'd my Minde to answer it. I have no Brother, I am like no Brother: And this word [Loue] which Gray-beards call Dialne, Be refident in men like one another, And not in me : I am my felfe alone. Chirenes bewere, thou keept'it me from the Light, But I will fort a pitchy day for thee : For I will buzze abroad fuch Prophehes, That Edward shall be fearefull of his life, And then to purge his feare, lle be thy death. King Henry, and the Prince his Son are gone, Clarence thy turne is next, and then the reft, Counting my felfe but bad, till I be best. Ile throw thy body in another roome, And Triumph Henry, inthy day of Doome. FrA Flourisb. Enter King, Queens, Clarence, Richard, Hastings, Nurse and Assendants.

King. Once more we fit in Englands Royall Throne,
Re-purchae'd with the Blood of Enemies:
What valiant Foe-men, like to Autumnes Corne,
Haue we mow'd downe in tops of all their pride?
Three Dukes of Somerfet, threefold Renowne,
For hardy and vndoubted Champions:
Two Cliffords, as the Father and the Sonne,
And two Northumberlands: two brauer men,
Ne're spurt'd their Coursers at the Trumpets sound
With them, the two brane Bezres, Warmerk & Montagus.
That in their Chaines setter d the Kingly Lyon,
And made the Forrest tremble when they roar'd.

Thus have we swept Suspition from our Seate, And made our Footstoole of Security.

Come hither Defe, and let me hille my Boy:

Kong Ned, for thee, thine Vnekles, and my selfe, Have in our Armors waters the Winters in ght, Went all afoote in Summers scalding heate.

That thou might's reposselse the Crowne in peace, And of our Labours thou shalt reape the gaine

Ruh. He blast his Harvest, if your head were laid, For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain d so thicke, to heave, And heave it shall some waight, or breake my backs, Worke thou the way, add that shall execute.

King. Clarence and Gloter, love my lovely Queene.
And the your Princely Nephew Brothers both.

Cla. The duty that I owe vnto you: Maichy, I Seale upon the lips of this sweet Babe.

Cls. Thanke Noble Clarence, worthy brother thanks Reb. And that I love the tree from hence y sprang'st Witnesse the louing kisse I give the Fruite, To say the truth, so Indas kiss his master, And cried all haife, when as he meant all harme.

King. Nowam I feated as my foule delights, Having my Countries peace, and Brothers loves, Cld. What will your Grace have done with Margores, Regnord her Father, to the King of France

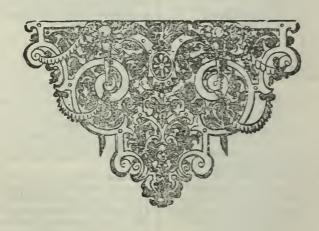

Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Ierusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransome.

King. Away with her, and waft her hence to France-And now what tests, but that we spend the time With stately Triumphes, mirthfull Comicke shewer, Such as besits the pleasure of the Court.

Sound Drums and Trumpets, farwell source annoy, For heere I hope begins our lasting toy.

FINIS.

The Tragedy of Richard the Third: with the Landing of Earle Richmond, and the Battell at Bosworth Field.

Adus Primus. Scana Prima.

Enter Rubard Daks of Glofter Solus.

Ow is the Winter of our Discontent,
Made glottous Summer by this Son of Yorke:
And all the clouds that lowr'd vpon our house
In the deepe bosome of the Ocean buried.

Now are our browes bound with Victorious Wreathes, Our bruifed armes hung up for Monuments; Our freme Alarums chang'd to merry Meetings; Our dreadfull Marches, to delightfull Measures. Grim-vilag'd Warre, hath smooth'd his wrinkled Front: And now, in stead of mounting Barbed Steeds, To fright the Soules of fearfull Adverfaries, He capers nimbly in a Ladies Chamber, To the lasciulous pleasing of a Lute. But I, that am not shap'd for sportiue trickes, Nor made to court an amorous Looking-glasse: I, that am Rudely stampt, and want loues Maiesty, To ftrut before a wonton ambling Nymph: I, that am curtail'd of this faire Proportion, Cheated of Feature by dissembling Nature, Deform'd, vn-finish'd, sent before my time Into this breathing World, scarse halfe made vp. And that so samely and unfashionable, That dogges barke at me, as I halt by them. Why I (in this weake piping time of Peace)
Haue no delight to palie away the time, Vnleffe to fee my Shadow in the Sunne, And defeant on mine owne Deformity. And therefore, fince I cannot prove a Lover, To entertaine these faire well spoken dayes, I am determined to proue a Villaine, And have the idle pleasures of these dayes, Plots have I laide, Inductions dangerous, By drunken Prophesies, Libels, and Dreames, To let my Brother Clarence and the King In deadly have, the one againft the other : And if King Edward be as true and iuft, As I am Subtle, Falle, and Treacherous, This day should Clarence closely be mew'd vpr About a Prophesie, which sayes that G, Of Edwards heyres the murtherer shall be Dive thoughts downe to my foule, here Clarence comes.

Enter Clarence and Brakenbury, guarded, Brothet, good day: What meanes this armed guard That waites upon your Grace?

Cla. His Matefy tendring my persons safery, Hath appointed this Conduct, to convey me to th Tower Rich. Vpon what cause?

Cla. Because my name is George.

Rich. Alackerny Lord, that fault is none of yours a
He should for that commit your Godfathers.
O belike, his Maiesty hath some intent.
That you should be new Christned in the Tower.
But what's the matter Clasence, may I know?

Cla. Yea Richard, when I know: but I proteft
As yet I do not: But as I can learne,
He hearkens after Propheties and Dreames,
And from the Crosserow pluckes the letter G:
And sayes, a Wizard rold him, that by G,
His issue distinherized should be.
And for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought, that I am he.
These (as I learne) and such like toyes as these,
Hath moon dhis Highnesse to commit me now.

Rich. Why this it is, when men are ruld by Women Tisnor the King that lends you to the Tower, My Lady Grey his Wife, Clarenee its fine.
That tempts him to this half hexteenity.
Was it not fine, and that good man of Worship.
Authory Woodculle her Brother there,
That made him fend Lord Hastings to the Tower?
From whence this present day he is deliuered?
We are not safe Clarence, we are not safe.

Cla. By heaven, I thinke there is no man fecure
But the Queenes Kindred, and night-walking Heralds,
That trudge betwixt the King, and Mistris Shore.
Heard you not what an humble Suppliant
Lord Haltmer was for her delivery?

Lord Hastings was, for her delivery?

Rich. Humbly complaining to her Deitie,
Got my Lord Chamberlaine his libertie
He tell you what, I thinke it is our way,
If we will keepe in favour with the King,
To be her men, and weare her Livery.
The jealous ore-worne Widdow, and her selfe,
Since that our Brother dub'd them Gentlewomen,
Are mighty Gossips in our Monarchy.

Bra I befeech your Graces both to pardon me, His Maiesty hath straightly given in charge, That no man shall have private Conference (Of what degree soever) with your Brother.

Rich

Rich. Even lo, and please your Worling Brakenbury, You may pattake of any thing we fay 1 We speake no Treason man; We say the King Is wife and vertuous, and his Noble Queene Well strooke in yeares, faire, and not icalious. We say, that Sourer Wife hath a pretty Foot, A cherry Lip, a bonny Eye, a palsing pleasing tongues And that the Queenes Kindred are made gentle Folkes. How fay you fir? can you deny all this !

Bra. With this (my Lord) my felfe have nought to Rech. Naught to do with Miltris Shore? I tell thee Fellow, he that doth naught with her (Excepting one) were bolt to do it fectetly alone.

Bra. What one, my Lord?

Reb. Her Husband Knaue, would'st thou betray me?

Bra. Ido beseech your Grace

To pardon me, and withall forbeare Your Conference with the Noble Duke.

Cla. We know thy charge Brakenbury, and will obey. Rich. We are the Queenes abiects, and must obey. Brother farewell, I will vino the King, And whatfoe're you will imploy me in, Were it to call King Edwards Widdow, Sifter, I will performe it to infranchise you. Meane time, this deepe difgrace in Brotherhood, Touches me deeper then you can imagine. Cla. I know it pleaseth neither of vs well.

Rich. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long, I will deliver you, or elfe lye for you :

Meane time, haue patience.

Exis Clar. Cla. I must perforce : Farewell. Reb Go treade the path that thou shalt ne're return: Simple plaine Clarence, I do loue thee fo, That I will shortly send thy Soule to Heaven, If Heaven will take the present at out hands. But who comes heere? the new delivered Haftings?

Enter Lord Hastings.

Haft. Good time of day voto my gracious Lord. Rich. As much vnto my good Lord Chamberlaine: Well are you welcome to this open Ayre,

How hash your Lordship brook'd impissonment? Haft. With patience (Noble Lord) as prisoners must: But I shall live (my Lord) to give them thankes

That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Rich. No doubt, no doubt, and so shall Claresce too, For they that were your Enemies, are his, And have prevail'd as much on him, as you. Haft. More pitty, that the Eagles should be mew'd, Whiles Kites and Buzards play at liberty.

Rich. What newes abroad?

Haft. No newes so bad abroad, as this at home: The King is fickly, weake, and melancholly, And his Physicians feare him mightily.

Reb. Now by S. John, that Newes is bad indeed

Ohe hath kept an evill Diet long, And ouer-much confum'd his Royall Person: Tis very greeuous to be thought vpon. Where is he, in his bed?

Haft. Heis.

Rich. Go you before, and I will follow you.

He cannot live I hope, and must not dye, Till George be pack'd with post-borse vp to Heaven He in to vige his hatred more to Clarence, With Lyes well fleet'd with weighty Arguments, And if I faile not in my deepe intent, Clarence hath not another day to live : Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy, And leave the world for me to bufsle in. For then, He marry Warwickes yongest daughter. What though I kill'd her Husband, and her Father, The readiest way to make the Wench amends, Is to become her Husband, and her Father: The which will I, not all fo much for love, As for another fecret close intent, By marrying her, which I must reach voto: But yet I run before my horse to Merket: Clarence still breathes, Edward still lives and raignes, When they are gone, then must I count my games. Enter the Coarfe of Henrie the fixt with Halberds to gnard it, Lady Anne being the UNDUTNET.

Ame. Set downe, set downe your honourable laid, If Honor may be shrowded in a Herse; Whil'ft I a-while obsequiously lament Th'vatimely fall of Vertuous Lancaster. Poore key-cold Figure of a holy King, Pale Afhes of the House of Lancaster; Thou bloodleffe Remnant of that Royall Blood, Be it lawfull that I muocate thy Ghoft, To heare the Lamentations of poore Arme, Wife to thy Edward, to thy flaughtred Sonne, Stab'd by the felfelame hand that made these wounds. Loc, in these windowes that let forth thy life, I powre the helpleffe Balme of my poore eyes, O corfed be the hand that made these holes: Curled the Heart, that had the heart to do it: Carfed the Blood, that let this blood from hence: More direfull hap betide that hated Weetch That makes vs wretched by the death of thee, Then I can wish to Wolves, to Spiders, Toades, Or any creeping venom'd thing that lines. If ever he have Childe, Abortive be it, Prodigeous, and entimely brought to light, Whole vely and vnnaturall Afpect May fright the hopefull Mother at the view, And that be Heyre to his vnhappinelle.
If ever he have Wife, let her be made More miserable by the death of bim, Then I am made by my young Lord, and thee.
Come now towards Chertley with your boly Lode, Taken from Paules, to be interred there. And still as you are weary of this waight, Rest you, whiles I lament King Herrius Coarse.

Enser Risbard Duke of Glofter

Rich. Stay you that beare the Coarfe, & fet it down. An. What blacke Magitian conjures vp this Fiend, To stop devoted charitable deeds? Rich, Villaines fer downe the Coarfe, or by S. Paol, He make a Coarfe of him that disobeyes.

Gen. My Lord stand backe, and les the Costin passe.
Rich. Vnmanner'd Dogge, Stand's thou when I commaund a Advance thy Halbert higher then my breft, Or by S. Paul Ile Strike thee to my Foote, And spurne upon thee Begger for thy boldnesse. Anne. What do you tremble? are you all affraid? Alas, I blame you not, for you are Mortall, And Mortall eyes cannot endure the Divell. Auant thou dreadfull minister of Hell Thou had'ft but power ouer his Mortall body, His Soule thou canft not have: Therefore be gone, Rich. Sweet Saint, for Charity, be not fo curft.

An. Foule Dinell. For Gods sakehence, and trouble vs not, For thou hall made the happy earth thy Hell: Fill'dit with curfing cries, and deepe exclaimes: If thou delight to view thy heynous decds, Behold this patterne of thy Butcheries.
Oh Gentlemen, see see dead Henriss wounds,
Open their congeal a mouthes, and bleed afterh. Blufh, blufh, thou lumpe of fowle Deformitie: For tis thy presence that exhales this blood From cold and empty Veines where no blood dwels. Thy Deeds inhumane and vnnaturall, Prouokes this Deluge most vnnaturall. O God! which this Blood mad'ft, reuenge his death:
O Earth! which this Blood drink'ft, reuenge his death. Either Heau'n with Lightning ftrike the murth'rer dead : Or Farth gape open wide, and eate him quicke, As thou doft (wallow up this good Kings blood, Which his Hell-gouern'd arme hath butchered. Rich. Lady, you know no Rules of Charity,

Which renders good for bad, Bleffings for Curies. An. Villaine, theu know's nor law of God nor Man, No Beaft so fierce, but knowes some touch of pitty Rich. But I know none, and therefore am no Beaft. As. O wonderfull, when divels tell the truth ! Rich. More wonderfull, when Angèls are so angry a

Of these supposed Crimes, to give me leave
By circumstance, but to acquit my selfe.

An. Vouchlafe (defus'd infection of man) Of these knowne enils, but to give me leave By circumstance, to curse thy cursed Selfe.

Rich. Fairer then tongue can name thee, let me have Some patient leyfure to excuse my selfe.

An. Fouler then beart can thinke thee, Thou can'it make no excuse current, But to hang thy felfe.

Rich. By such dispaire, I should accuse my selfe. An. And by dispairing shalt thou stand excused, For doing worthy Vengeance on thy selfe, That did st vnworthy slaughter vpon others.

Rich. Say that I flew them not An. Then fay they were not flaine: But dead they are, and divellish flave by thee.

Rich. I did not kill your Husband.

An. Why then he is aliue Rich. Nay, he is dead, and slaine by Edwards bands. An. In thy foule throat thou Ly ft,

Queene Margaret faw
Thy murd rous Faulchion (moaking in his blood: The which, thou once didd'ft bend against her brest, But that thy Brothers beate slide the point.

Rich. I was prouoked by her fland rous tongue,

That taid their guilt, vpon my guiltleffe Shoulders.

An. Thou was't prouoked by thy bloody minde. That never dream'ft on ought but Butcheries: Did'ft thou not kill this King ?

Rich. I graunt ye.

An. Do'ft grant me Hedge-hogge,

Then God graunt me too
Thou may it be damned for that wicked deede, Ohe was gentle, milde, and vertuous.

Rich. The better for the King of heaven that hath him. An. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come.

Rich. Let him thanke me, that bolpe to fend him thither:

For he was fitter for that place then earth.

An. And thou vnfit for any place, but hell. Rech. Yes one place elfe, if you will heare me name le,

An. Somedongeon.

Rich. Your Bed-chamber.
An. Ill rest betide the chamber wherethou lyest.

Rich. So will it Madam, till I lye with you. An. I hope lo.

Rich. I know fo. But gentle Lady Anne, To leave this keene encounter of our wittes,

And fall fomething into a flower method. Is not the causer of the timelesse deaths Of thele Plantagenets, Henrie and Edward,

As blamefull as the Executioner.

An. Thou was't the cause, and most accurst effect, Rich. Your beauty was the cause of that effect 1 Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleepe, To vindertake the death of all the world, So I might live one houre in your fweet bosome.

An If I thought that, I tell thee Homicide, These Nailes should sent that beauty from my Cheekes. Rich. These eyes could not endure y beauties wrack,

You should not blemish le, if I stood by; As all the world is cheared by the Sunne, So I by that: It is my day, my life.

An. Blacke night ore-shade thy day, & death thy life. Rich. Curle not thy felfe faire Creature,

Thou art both. As, I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee,

Rich. It is a quarrell moft venaturall, To be reueng'd on him that loueth thee.

An. It is a quarrell just and reasonable,
To be reueng'd on him that kill'd my Husband. Rieb. He that bereft the Lady of thy Husband, Did it to helpe thee to a better Husband,

As. His better doth not breath upon the earth. Rich. He lives, that loves thee better then he could. An. Name him.

Rich. Plantagenet. An. Why that was he.

Rieb. The felfelame name, but one of better Nature.

Rich. Heere: Spits at him. Why dost thou spit at me.

An. Would it were mortall poylon, for thy lake.
Rich. Neuer came poylon from to tweet a place.

As. Neuer hung poyson on a fowler Toade.
Out of my fight, thou dost infect mine eyes. Rich. Thine eyes (Iweet Lady) have infected rolne.
An. Would they were Bafiliskes, to frike thee dead.

Rich. I would they were, that I might dye at once? For now they kill me with a liuing death.

Those eyes of thine, from mine have drawne salt Teares;

Sham'd their Alpecta with itere of child ih drops: These eyes, which never shed remorfefull tears, No, when my Father Yorke, and Edward wept, To heare the pittlous moone that Rutland inade When black-fac'd Clifford Inooke his Iword at him. Nor when thy warlike Father like a Childe, Told the fad florie of my Fathers deuh, And twenty times, made paule to lob and weeper That all the flanders by had wer their cheekes Like Trees bedafti'd with raine. In that fad time, My manly eyes did scorpe an humble seare: And what these fortowes could not thence exhale, Thy Beauty hath, and made them blinde with weeping. I never fued to Friend, nor Enemy : My Tongue could never learne fweet smoothing word. But now thy Beauty is propos'd my Fee, My proud heart lues, and prompts my tongue to Speake. She lookes forafully as bim.

Teach not thy lip fuch Scome; for it was made For killing Lady, not for fach contempt. If thy revengefull heart cannot forgive, Loc heere Hend thee this sharpe-pointed Sword, Which if thoo plesse to hide in this true breft, And let the Soule forth that adoreth thee, I lay it naked to the deadly ftroke,

And humbly begge the death vpon my knee,

Shefals the Sword

Take vp the Sword againe, or take vp me.

An. Arise Dissembler, though I wish thy death, I will not be thy Executioner.

Ruch. Then bid me kill my felfe, and I will do it. An. I have already.

Rich. That was in thy rage: Speake it againe, and even with the word, This hand, which for thy love, did kill thy Love, Shall for thy loue, kill a farre truer Loue, To both their deaths shalt thou be accessary.

An I would I knew thy heart.
Rich. Tis figur'd in my tongue. An. I feate me, both are false. Rich. Then never Man was true.
An. Well, well, put vp your Sword.
Rich. Say then my Peace is made. An. That shalt thou know beereafter.

Rich. But Chall I live in hope. An. All men I hope live fo. Vouchsafe to weare this Ring.

Rich. Looke how my Ring incompasseth thy Finger, Even fo thy Brest incloseth my poore beart: Weare both of them, for both of them are thine. And if thy poore devoted Servant may But beg one fauour at thy gracious hand, Thou dost confirme his happinelle for ever-

An. Whatisit? Rich. That it may please you leave these sad designes, To him that hath most cause to be a Mourner, And presently repayre to Crosbie House: Where (after I have lokemply interrid At Chertley Monast'ry this Noble King, And wet his Grave with my Repentant Teares) I will with all expedient duty fee you,

For discrevaknowne Ressons, I beleech you, Grant me this Boon.

As. With all my heart, and much ke loyes me too, To see you are become so pentent. Traffel and Berkly, go along with me.

Was ever women in this hamour wome! lle haue her, but I will not keepe her long, What? I that kill d ber Husband, and his Father, To cake her in her hearts extresmest hate, With curses in her mouth, Teares in her eyes, The bleeding witnesse of my hatted by, Having God, her Conscience, and these bars against an, And I, no Friends to backe my fuite withall, But the plaine Divell, and diffembling lookes? And yet to winne ber? All the world to nothing Hah! Hath the forgot alreadle that brane Prince, Edward, her Lord, whom I (fome three mouther face) Stab'd in my angry mood, at Tewkesbury? A sweeter, and a louelier Gentleman, Fram'd in the prodigallity of Nature Youg, Valiant, Wile, and (no doubt) right Royal, The specious World cannot againe affoord : And will the yet abase her eyes on me, That crope the Golden prime of this sweet Prince, And made her Widdow to a wofull Bed? On me, whose All not equals Edwards Moytie? On me, that halts, and am mishapen thus? My Dukedome, to a Beggerly denier! I do mistake my person all this while: Vpon my life the findes (although I cannos) My selse to be a maru'llous proper man. Ile be at Charges for a Looking-glasse, And entertaine a score or two of Taylors, To fludy fashions to adorne my body: Since I am crept in favour with my felfe, I will maintaine it with some little coft. But first Ile torne you Fellow in his Grave, And then returne lamenting tomy Love. Shine out faire Sunne, till I bave bought a glaffe,

Scena Tertia.

That I may fee my Shadow as I passe.

Enert the Queene Morber Lord Kiners, and Lord Gray.

RialHaue patience Madam, ther's no doubt his Malety Will soone recouer his accustom'd health. Gray. In that you brooke it ill, it makes him worfe, Therefore for Gods lake entertaine good comfort, And cheere his Grace with quicke and merry eyes Qu. If he were dead, what would betide on me! Gray. If he were dead, what would betide on me?

Gray. No other harme, but loffe of fuch a Lord.

Qu. The loffe of fuch a Lord, includes all harmes.

Gray. The Heavens have bleft you with a goodly Son,
To be your Comforcer, when he is gone.

On. Ah! he is yong; and his minority
Is put vnto the trust of Richard Gloufter,
A man that loues not me, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded he shall be Protector?

Mr. It is determin'd, not concluded yets
But so it must be, if the King milicarry.

Enter Buckingbarn and Derby.

Cray. Here comes the Lord of Buckingham & Derby.

Buc Good time of day vnto your Royall Grace.

Der. God make your Maieffy toyful, as you have bin

Qu. The Counteffe Rebmond, good my Lof Derby.

To your good prayer, will fearfely fay, Amen.

Yet Derby, not with flanding fhee's your wife,

And loues not me, be you good Lord affur'd,

I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Der. I do beseech you, either not beleeue
The entitious flanders of her false Accusers:
Or if she be accus'd on true report,
Beare with her weaknesse, which I thinke proceeds
From way ward sicknesse, and no grounded malice.

Qn. Saw you the King to day my Lord of Derby.

Der. But now the Duke of Buckingham and I.

Ate come from vifiting his Maiefly.

Que. What likelyhood of his amendment Lords.
Buc, Madam good hope, his Grace speaks chearfully.
Qu. God grant him health, did you confer with him?
Buc. I Madam, he defires to make attonement;

Betweene the Duke of Gloufter, and your Brothers, And betweene them, and my Lord Chamberlaine, And fent to warme them to his Royall prefence.

Qu. Would all were well, but that will neuer be, Ifeare our happinesse is at the height.

Emer Richard.

Rab. They do me wrong and I will not indure it, Who is it that complaines vnto the King,
That I (forfooth) emflerne, and love them not?
By holy Faul, they love his Grace but lightly,
That fill his eares with furth diffentious Rumors.
Because I cannot flatter, and looke faire,
Smile in mens faces, smooth, decelue, and cogge,
Ducke with French nods, and Aprish cuttese,
I must be held a rancorous Enemy.
Cannot a plaine man live, and thinke no harme,
But thus his timple truth must be abus d,
With filken, slye, in sinuaring Iackes?

Grey. To who in all this presence speaks your Grace?

Rich. To thee, that hast not Honesty, nor Grace:

When have I injur'd thee? When done thee wrong?

Or thee? or thee? or any of your Faction?

A plague you you all. His Royall Grace
(Whom God preserue better then you would wish)

Cannot be quiet sease a breathing while,

But you must trouble him with lewd complaints,

Bot you must trouble him with lewd complaints,

Qu. Brother of Glouster, you mistake the matter:
The King on his owne Royall disposition,
(And not prouok'd by any Sutor else)

(And not prouok'd by any Sutor elfe)
Ayming (belike) at your interiour hatred.

That in your outward action shewes it felfe Against my Childten, Brothers, and my Selfe, Makes him to fend, that he may learne the ground.

Rich. I cannot tell, the world is growne so bad, That Wrens make prey, where Eagles dare not pearch. Since eueric Iaeke became a Gentleman, There's many a gentle person made a lacke.

Qu. Come, come, we know your meaning Brother You enuy my advancement, and my friends: (Gloffer God grant we never may have neede of you.

Ruch Meanetime, God grants that I have need of you.

Our Brother is imprison d by your meanes,

My selfe disgrac d, and the Nobilitie

Held in contempt, while great Promotions

Are daily given to ennoble those
That scarse some two dayes since were worth a Noble.

Particiate to the two days index we worth a work.

From that contented hap which I intoy'd,
I neuer did incense his Maiestie
Against the Duke of Clarence, but have bin
An earnest advocate to plead for him.

My Lord you do me shamefull inverse,
Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects,
Rich! You may deny that you were not the meane
Of my Lord Hashing; late imprisonment.

Rish. She may my Lord, for Rish. She may Lord Rishers, why who knowes not for She may do more fir then denying that:
She may helpe you to many faire preferments,
And then deny her ayding hand therein,

And then deny her ayding hand therein,
And lift those Honors on your high defert.
What may the not, the may, I matry may the.
Riw. What matry may the?

Ric. What marrie may the? Marrie with a King.
A Batcheller, and a handsome ftripling too,
I wis your Grandam had a worser match.

Qu. My Lord of Glouster, I have too long borne
Your blunt vpbraidings, and your bitter scottes:
By heaven, I will acquaint his Maietie
Of those grosse taunts that of I have endur'd.
I had rather be a Countrie servan: maide
Then a gress Queene, with this condition,
To be so batted, scorn'd, and stormed as,
Small ioy have I in being Englands Queene.

Enter old Queene Margaret.

Mar. And lefined be that small, God I befeech him, Thy honor, state, and seate, is due to me.

Rich. What? threat you me with telling of the King?
I will avouch't in presence of the King:

I will auouch t in prefence of the King:
I dare adventure to be fent to th' Towre.
Tis time to speake,
My painer are quite for one.

My paines are quite forgot.

Margarer. Our Diuell,

I do remember them too well:

Thou killd'ft my Husband Henrie in the Tower,

And Edward my poore Son, at Tewkesburie.

Rich. Ere you were Queene,
I, or your Husband King:
I was a packe-borfe in his great affaires:
A weeder out-of his proud Aduersaries,
A liberall rewarder of his Friends,
To royalize his blood. I spent mine owue.

Margaret. I and much better blood. Then his, or thine.

Rich.

Rich. In all which time, you and your Husband Gray Were factions, for the House of Longager; And Rower, lo were you : Was not your Husband, In Alargarett Battaile, at Saint Albons, Saine ? Let me put in your mindes, if you forget What you have beene ere thish and what you are: Withall, what I have beene, and what I am.

2,M A murch rous Villaine, and fo ftill thou are. Rich. Poore Clarece did forfake his Father Warnte. I and for (wore himfelfe (which Ielis pardoo.)

Q. M. Which God revenge.

Rich. To fight on Edwards partie, for the Ceowne, And for his meede, poore Lord, he is mewed *ps I would to God my heart were Flint, like Edwards, Or Edwards loft and pittifull, like mine ; I am too childish faolish for this World.

Q.M. High thee to Hell for shame, & leave this World Thou Cacademon, there thy Kingdome is.

Rm. My Lord of Glofter: in those busie dayes, Which here you vege, to proue vi Ecemies, We follow'd then our Lord, our Soueraigne King, So should we you, if you should be our King.

Rich. If I should be? I had rather be a Pedler:

Farre be it from my heart, the thought thereof.

Qu. As little toy (my Lord) as you suppose You hould entry, were you this Countries King, As little toy you may suppose in me, That I enjoy, being the Queene thereof.

Q M. A listle joy enjoyes the Queene thereof, For I am thee, and altogether toylette: I can no longer hold me patient. Heareme, you wrangling Pyrates, that fall out, In Charing that which you have pill'd from me: Which off you crembles not, that lookes on me? If not, that I am Queene, you bow like Subie as ; Yet that by you depos'd, you quake like Rebella. Ah gentle Villaine, doe not turne away.

Rich. Foule wrinckled Witch, what mak'ft thou in my

2.M. But repetition of what thou half marr'd, That will I make, before I let thee goe.

Ruch. Were thou nor banished, en paine of death? Q M. I was: but I doe find more paine in banishmem. Theo death can yeeld me here, by my abode. A Husband and a Sonne thou ow'ft to me,

And thou a Kingdome; all of you, allegeance: This Sorrow that I have, by right is yours,

Aud all the Pleafures you vlurpe, are mine Rich. The Curfe my Noble Father layd on thee, When thou didft Crown his Warlike Brows with Paper And with thy scornes drew's Rivers from his eyes, And then to dry them, gau'ft the Duke a Clowt, Sceep'd in the faultleffe blood of prettie Rulad, His Curfes then, from bitternelle of Soule, Denounc'd against thee, are all falne upon thee: And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed.

Qu. So iuft is God, to right the innovem. Haft. O,'twas the fouleft deed to flay that Babe, And the most mercilesse, that ere was beard of.

Kin. Tyranis themselves weps when it was reported. Dorf No man but prophecied revenge for it. Buck Northumberland, then prefent, wept to fee it. 2 M. Whar? were you insiling all before I came, Ready to catch each other by the throat,

And corne you all your hacred now on me? Did Torter dread Curse prevaile so much with Heauen, That Henries death, my louely Edwards death,

Should all but answer for that peruils Brat? Can Cutfer merce the Clouds, and emer Heaven? Why then give way dull Clouds to my quick Curles. Though not by Warre, by Surfer dye your King, As ours by Murther, to make him a King Edward thy Sonne, that now is Prince of Wales. For Edward our Soone, that was Prince of Wales, Dye in his youth, by like untimely utolence. Thy felfe a Queene, for me that was a Queene, Our-live thy glory, like my wretched felfe: Long may it thou live, to wayle thy Childrens death, And fee another, as I fee thee naw, Deck'd in thy Rights, as thou art Hall'd in mine. Long dye thy happie dayes before thy death, And after many length ned howres of greefe, Dye neyther Mother, Wife, not Eaglands Queene Rours and Derfer, you were franders by, And to walt thou, Lord Hafforgs, when my Sonne Was flab d with bloody Daggers: God, I pray him, That none of you may live his naturall age, But by fome valook'd accident cut off. Rub. Have done thy Charme, & hateful wither'd Hagge.

Rich. Margares. Q.M Richard. Rich Ha. Q.M. I call thee not.

Rich. I cry thee mercie then : for Idid thinke, That thou hadft call'd me all thefe bitter names. Q M. Why lo I did, but look'd for no reply.

Ohlet me make the Period to my Curfe. Rub. Tis done by me, and ends in Margare. Qu. Thus have you breath'd your Cur leagainft your lelf. Q.M. Poore painted Queen, vain flourish of my forume, Why threw'st rhou Sugar on that Bottel'd Spider, Whole deadly Web enforreth thee about? Foole, foole, thou whet It a Knife to kill thy felfe : The day will come that thou halt will for me,

To helpe thee eurle this poylonous Bunch-backt Torde. Haft. Falle boding Woman, end thy frantick Curle, Least to thy barme, thou mode our petience.

2. M. Foule shame "pon you, you have all moo'd mine. Ri. Were you wel ftru'd, you would be taught your duty. 2 M To ferue me well, you all should do me duty, Teach the to be your Queene, and you my Subie 202

O ferue me well, and reach your felues that duty. Dorf. Dispute not with bee, thee is looseteke. Q.M. Peace Mafter Marquelle, you are malapert, Yout hee-new stampe of Honoria learce currant. O that your yong Nobility could judge What 'twere to lofe it, and be miferable. They that fland high, have many blasts to shake them, And if they fall, they dash themselves to peeces. Rich. Dor. It touches you my Lord, as much at me. Rich. I, and much more : but I was borne fo highs Our syerie builderh in the Cedars top, And dallies with the winde, and fcornes the Sunne. Mar. And turnes the Sun to Made: alas, alas, Witnesse my Sonne, now in the shade of death, Whose bright out-shining beames, thy cloudy weath Hath in eternall darkneffe folded vp. Your ayery buildeth in our ayeries Neft : O God that feelt it, do not fuffer it, As It is wonne with blood, loft be it fo.

Buc. Peace, peace for shame : If not, for Charity. Mar. Vrge neither charity, nor shame to me; Vncharitably with me have you dealt, And shamefully my hopes (by you) are butcher'd. My Charity is outrage, Life my shame, And in that shame, still live my sorrowes rage.

Buc. Haue done, haue done. Mar. O Princely Buckingham, Ile kille thy hand, In figne of League and amity with thee r Now faire befull thee, and thy Noble house t Thy Garments are not spotted with our blood; Nor thou within the compelle of my curle. Buc. Norno one heere : for Curles neuer paffe

The lips of those that breath them in the syre. Mar. I will not thinke but they ascend the sky, And there awake Gods gentle fleeping peace. O Buckingham, take heede of yonder dogges Looke when he fawnes, he bites; and when he bites, His venom tooth will rankle to the death. Haue not to do with him, beware of him, Sinne, death, and hell haue fet their markes on him, And all their Ministers attend on him.

Rich. What doth the fay, my Lord of Buckingham. Buc, Nothing that I respect my gracious Lord.

Mar. What dost thou scorne me

For my gentle counfell? And footh the divell that I warne thee from. Obut remember this another day: When he shall split thy very heart with forrow t And fay (poore Margaret) was a Prophetesse: Liuc cach of you the subjects to his hate, And he to yours, and all of you to Gods.

Buc. My haire doth stand an end to heare her curses. Rim. And so doth mine, I muse why she's at libertle. Rich. I cannot blame her, by Gods holy mother, She hach had too much wrong, and I repent

My pare thereof, that I have done to her.

Mar I neuer did her any to my knowledge.
Rich. Yet you have all the vantage of her wrongs I was too hat, to do formebody good, That is too cold in thinking of it now t Marry as for Clarence, he is well repayed: He is frank'd up to fatting for his paines, God pardon them, that are the coule thereof.

Rin A vertuous, and a Christian-like conclusion To pray for them that have done feath to vs. Rieb. So do I euer, being well aduis'd.

Speakes to hamfolfe. For had I curft now, I had curft my felfe

Enter Caresby.

Cates. Madam, his Malesty doth call for you, And for your Grace, and yours my gracious Lord. Qu. Catesby I come, Lords will you go with mes. Riu. We wast vpon your Grace.

Breum all but Glofter. Rich, I do the wrong, and first begin to brawle. The fecret Mischeefes that I fet abroach,

I lay voto the grecuous charge of others. Clarence, who I indeede have cast in darknesse, I do beweepe to many simple Gulles, Namely to Derby, Hastings, Buckingbam And tell them "tis the Queene, and her Allies, That flire the King againft the Duke my Brother. Now they beleeve it, and withall whet me To be reveng'd on Rivers, Dorfet, Grey. But then I figh, and with a peece of Scripture; Tell them that God bids vs do good for cuill : And thus I cloath my naked Villanie With odde old ends, Rolne forth of holy Writ, And feeme a Saint, when most I play the deuille.

Enter two muriberers. But foft, heere come my Executioners,

How now my hardy flout refolued Mates, Are you now going to dispatch this thing?

Vil. We are my Lord, and come to have the Warrant, That we may be admitted where he is.

Ric. Well thought vpon, I have it heare about me: When you have done, repayte to Crosby place; But firs be sodaine in the execution, Withall obdurate, do not heare him pleades For Clarence is well spoken, and pernappes May moue your hearts to pitty, if you marke him.

Vil Tur, cut, my Lord, we will not fland to prate, Talkers are no good dooers, be affur'd:

We go to vie our hands, and not our tongues. Rich. Your eyes drop Mill-Rones, when Fooles eyes I like you Lads, about your bufinesse straight.

Go,go,dispatch. Ud. We will my Noble Lord.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Clarence and Keeper. Resp. Why lookes your Grace to heavily to day. Cls. O, I have past a miserable night, So full of fearefull Dreames, of vgly lights, That at I am a Christian faithfull man I would not spend another such a night Though tweet to buy a world of happy dalers So full of dismall terror was the time. Keep. What was your dream my Lord, I pray you tel me Cla. Me thoughts that I had broken from the Tower, And was embark'd to croffe to Burgundy, And in my company my Brother Gloufter, Who from my Cabin tempted me to walke, Vpon the Hatches: There we look'd roward England,

And cited up a thousand heavy times, Durin?

The Life and Dearn of Richard the Third.

During the warres of Yorke and Lancatter That had befalse vs. As we poe'd along Vpon the glddy footing of the Hatches. Me thought that Glouller stambled, and in falling Strookeme (that thought to flay him) ouer-boord, Into the tumbling billowes of the maine. O Lord, me thought what paine it was to drowne, What dreadfull noise of water in mine eares, What fights of vgly death within mine eyes. Me thoughts, I saw a thousand fearfull wrackers A thousand men that Fishes gnaw'd vpon : Wedges of Gold, grest Anchors, beapes of Pearle, Inefirmable Scones, vovalewed lewels, All scattred in the bottome of the Sea, Some lay in dead-mens Sculles, and in the holes Where eyes dld once inhabit, there were crept (As 'twere in scorne of eyes) reflecting Gemmes, That woo'd the flimy bottome of the deepe, And mock'd the dead bones that lay feattred by.

Krep. Had you fuch leyfure in the time of death Togaze vpon thefe fecrets of the deepe ! Cla. Me thought I had, and often did I Arive To yeeld the Ghoft: but fill the enuious Flood Stop din my foule, and would not let it forth To had the empty, vall, and wanu mag agre : But Imether'd it within my panting bulke, Who almost burst, ro belch it in the Sea.

Reep. Awak'd you not in this fore Agony? Clar. No, no, my Dreame was lengthen'd after life. O then, began the Tempest to my Soule. I past (me thought) the Melanchially Flood, With that fowre Ferry-man which Poets write of Vnto the Kingdome of perpetuall Night. The first that there did greet my Stranger-soule, Was my great Father-in-Law, renowned Warwicke, Who spake alowd: What scourge for Periurie, Can this darke Monarchy affoord falle Clarence? And so he vanish'd. Then came wand'ring by, A Shadow like an Angell, with bright hayre Dabbel'd in blood, and he shriek'd out slowd Clarence is come, falle, fleeting, persur'd Clarence, That flabb'd me in the field by Tewkesbury : Seize on him Furies, take him voto Tormeni. With that (me thought) a Legion of foule Frends Inuiron'd me, and howled in mine cares Such hiddeous cries, that with the very Nolle, I (trembling) wak d, and for a feafon after, Could not beleeue, but that I was in Hell, Such terrible Impression made my Dreame. Keep Ne marvell Lord, though it affrighted you,

Cla. Ah Keeper, Keeper, I have done thefe things (That now give evidence against my Soule) For Edwards lake, and fee bow he requires mee. O God! if my deepe prayres cannot appeale thee, But thou wilt be aveng'd on my mildeeds, Yet execute thy wrath in me alone : O spare my guiltlesse Wife, and my poore children. Keeper, I prythee he by me a-while, My Soule is heavy, and I faine would fleepe. Keep I will my Lord, God give your Grace good reft.

I am affraid (me thinkes) to heare you tell it

Encer Brakenbery the Lieutenza.

Bra Sorrow breaker Seafons, and repoling houres, Makes the Night Morning, and the Noon-tide night:

Princes have but their Titles for their Glazies, An outward Honor, for an inward Toyle, And for vafelt Imaginetions They often feele a world of reflieffe Cares : So that betweene their Titles, and low Nisoe, There's oothing differs, but the our ward face.

Lan in Murbarre

1. Mur. Ho, who's heere?

Bra. What would it thou fellow? And how carrier it thou hither.

2. Other I would speak with Clarence, and I came his ther on my Legges.

Bra. What to breefe?

t. Tis better (Sir) then to be redious: Let him fee our Commission, and talke so more. Bra. I am in this, commanded to deliver

The Noble Duke of Claronce to your bards. I will not reason what is meant becreby, Because I will be guildelle from the meaning. There lies the Duke afleepe, and there the Keyts. lle to the King, and fignific to him, That thus I have tefign'd to you my charge.

1 You may fir, 'tis a point of wifedome t Par you well

2 What, shall we stab him as he sleepes.

1 No: hee'l fay 'twas done cowardly, when be wakes 2 Who he shall neser wake, vntill the great ludge-

1 Why then hee'l fay, we flab'd him Decping.

2 The origing of that word ludgement, bath beed a kinde of remorfe in me.

1 What? art thou affraid?

2 Not to kill him, having a Warrant, But to be damn'd for killing him, from the which No Warrant can defend me.

1 I thought thou had it bin resolute.

2 Solam, to let him liue.

1 He backe to the Dake of Gloufler, and well him to

2 Nay, I prythee ftay a little : I hope this passionare humor of mine, will change,

It was wont to hold me but while one tels twenty. 1 How do'A thou feele thy felfe now?

3 Some certaine dregges of conference see per with-a mee.

1 Remember our Reward, when the deed's done.

2 Come, he dies : I had forgot the Reward-

1 Where's thy conscience now.

3 O, in the Duke of Gloufters parle.

When bee opens his perfe to give vs our Reward, thy Confcience flyes out.

2 Tis no macter, let it goe : There's few or none will entertaine it.

1 What if it come to thee againe?

2 He not meddle withit, it makes a man a Coward : A man cannot steale, but it accreseth nim : A man cannot Sweare, but it Checkes him: A man cannot lye with his Neighbours Wife, but it detects him. Tis a blufhing shamefac'd spirit, that mutinies in a mans botome : It filles a man fall of Obflacles. It made me once reftore a Purise of Gold that (by chance) I found. It beggars any man that keepes it : It is turn'd out of Townes and Cit ties for a dangerous thing, and every man that means to line well, endeaours to truft to himselfe, and line without it.

1 Tia

Zarit.

Tis cuen now at my elbow, perswading me not to kill the Dkue.

2 Take the divell in thy minde, and beleeve him not t He would infinuate with thee but to make thee figh. t I am strong fram'd, he cannot preuaile with me.

2 Spokelike a tall man, that respects thy reputation.

Come, shall we fall to worke?

- 1 Takehim on the Coffard, with the hiltes of thy Sword, and then throw him into the Malmefey-Butte in the next roome.
 - 2 O excellent deuice; and make a fop of him.

I Soft, he wakes.

2 Strike.

No, wee'l reason with him.

Cla. Whereart thou Keeper? Glueme a cup of wine.

You shall have Wine enough my Lord anon.

Cla. In Gods name, what art thou?

1 A man, 25 you are.

Cla. But not as I am Royall.

I Nor you as we are, Loyall.

Cla. Thy voice is Thunder, but thy looks are humble. My voice is now the Kings, my lookes mine owne. Cla. How darkly, and how deadly doft thou speake?

Your eyes do menace me: why looke you pale? Who fent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

3 To,to,to-Cla. To murther me ?

Both. I,I.
Cla. You fearfely have the hearts to tell me for And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it. Wherein my Friends have I offended you?

Offended vs you have not, but the King.

Cla. I shall be reconcil'd to him againe. 2 Neuer my Lord, therefore prepare to dye.

Cla. Are you drawne forth among a world of men
To flay the innocent? What is my offence? Where is the Euidence that doth accuse me? What lawfull Quest have given their Verdict vp Vnto the frowning ludge? Or who pronouve'd The bitter fentence of poore Clarence death, Before I be conuich by course of Law? To threaten me with death, is most valawfull. I charge you, as you hope for any goodneffe, That you depart, and lay no hands on me a The deed you undertake is damnable.

1 What we will do, we do voon command.

And he that hath commanded, is out King. Cla. Erroneous Vallala, the great King of Kings Hath in the Table of his Law commanded That thou shalt do no murther. Will you then Spurne at his Edict, and fulfill a Mans? Take heed: for he holds Vengesnee in his hand, To hutle vpon their heads that breake his Law.

2 And that same Vengeance doth he hutle on thee, For falle Forswearing, and for murcher too : Thou did A receive the Sacrament, to fight

In quarrell of the House of Lancaster,

And like a Traitor to the name of God, Did'st breake that Vow, and with thy treacherous blade, Vnrip it the Bowels of thy Sou raignes Sonne.

2 Whom thou was t I worne to cherifh and defend.

How canst thou vige Gods dreadfull Law to vs.

When thou hall broke it in such deere degree? Cla. Alas! for whose fake did I that ill deede? For Edward, for my Brother, for his fake. He fends you not to mutther me for this :

For in that finne, he is as deepe as I. If God will be avenged for the deed. O know you yet, he doth it publiquely, Take not the quarrell from his powrefull arme: He needs no indirect, or lawlesse course, To cut off those that have offended him.

Who made thee then a bloudy minister, When gallant springing braue Plantagener,
That Princely Nouice was strucke dead by thee? Cla. My Brothers love, the Divell, and my Rage.

1 Thy Brothers Loue, our Duty, and thy Faults, Prouoke vs hither now, to flaughter thee.

Cla. If you do loue my Brother, bate not me: I am his Brother, and I love him well. If you are hyr'd for meed, go backe againe, And I will fend you to my Brother Glouster: Who shall reward you better for my life, Then Edward will for tydings of my death.

2 You are deceiu'd, Your Brother Glouster hates you.

Cla. Oh no, he loues me, and he bolds me deere : Go you to him from me.

I I fo we will.

Cla. Tell him, when that our Princely Father Yorke. Blest his three Sonnes with his victorious Arme, He little thought of this divided Friendship Bid Gloufter thinke on this, and he will weepe.

s I Milstones, as he lessoned vs to weepe.

Cla. O do not flander him, for he is kinde.

1 Right, as Snow in Harueft: Come, you deceive your felfe,

Tishe that fends vs to destroy you heere.

Cla. It cannot be, for he bewept my Fortune, And hugg'd me in his armes, and fwore with fobs, That he would labour my delinery.

Why so be doth, when he deliuers you From this earths thraldome, to the loyes of heauen.

Make peace with God, for you must die my Lord. Cla. Haue you that holy feeling in your foules, To counsaile me to make my peace with God, And are you yet to your owne foules fo blinde, That you will warre with God, by murd'ring me. O firs confider, they that fet you on To do this deede, will hate you for the deede.

2 What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and faue your foules: Which of you, if you were a Princes Sonne, Being pent from Liberty, as I am now,
If two fuch murtherers as your felues came to you, Would not intreat for life, as you would begge Were you in my diffresse.

Relent? no: Tis cowardly and womanish. Cla. Not to relent, is beaftly, fauage, dinellish : My Friend, I fpy some picty in thy lookes : O, if thine eye be not a Flatterer, Come thou on my fide, and intreate for mee,

A begging Prince, what begger pitties not.
2 Looke behinde you, my Lord.

Take that, and that, if all this will not do, Stabs him. He drowne you in the Malmesey-But within.

3 A bloody deed, and desperately dispatcht: How faine (like Pilate) would I wash my hands Enter s. Mursherer Of this most greeuous murther.

t How now? what mean's thou that thou help's me not? By Heaven the Duke Chall know how flacke you haue beene.

2. Mar I would be knew that I had tau'd his brother, Take thou the Fee, and tell him what I fay, For I repent me that the Duke is flame.

1. Mir. So do not I : go Coward as thou are. Well, le go hide the body in sonie hole, Till that the Duke give order for his burnall a And when I have my meede, I will away, For this will out, and then I must not stay.

Emer Rescliffe, and Glofler.

Rich Good morrow to any Sourraigne King & Quern And Princely Peeres, happy ome of day.

King, Happy indeed as we have spent the day: Gloffer, we have done deeds of Charny, Made peace of enemity, fatre loue of line, Betweene thele swelling wrong incensed Peeres.

Rich. A bleffed labour my most Sourraigne Lords Among this Princely heape, if any heere By falle intelligence, or wrong furmize Hold me a Foe. If I vowillingly, or in my tage, Haue ought committed that is hardly borne, To any in chis presence, I desire To reconcile me to his Friendly peace : Tis death to me to be at enmitte I have it, and defire all good mens love, First Madam, I intreate true peace of you, Which I will purchase with my ductious service. Of you my Noble Cono Buckingham, If ever any grudge were lodg'd betweene vs. Of you and you, Lord Ravers and of Darfes. That all without defert have frown'd on me: Of you Lord Wooduil, and Lord Scales of you, Dukes, Earles, Lords, Gentlemen, indeed of all I do not know that Englishman alive, With whom my foule is any iot at oddes, More then the Infant that is borne to night:

I thanke my God for my Humility.

Qu. A holy day shall this be kept beereafter: I would to God all Arifes were well compounded. My Sourraigne Lord, I do beferch your Highne Te To take our Brother Clarence to your Grace, Rich. Why Madam, have I offred love for this, To be so Bowted to this Royall prefence? Who knowes not that the gentle Duke is dead? 767 You do him inturie to scome his Coarle. al flare.

King. Who knowes not he is dead? Who knowes he is?

Qu. All-feeing heaven, what a world is this? Buc. Looke I sopale Lord Derfet, as the rest?

Dar. I my good Lord, and no man in the presence, But his ted colour hath forfooke his cheekes.

Kong. Is Clarence dead? The Order was reverft.
Rub. But he (poore man) by your first order dyed. And that a winged Mercurie did beare: Some tardie Cripple bare the Countermand, That eame too lagge to fee him buried. God grant, that some lesse Noble, and lesse Loyall, Necret in bloody thoughts, and not in blood, Deserve por worse then wretched Clarence did, And yet go current from Suspition.

Enser Early of Derby.

Dr. A boone my Sourraigne for my ferulee done, King. I prethee peace, my foule is full of forrow. Dr. I will not rife, vnleffe your Highnes heare me.

Ring Then lay at once, what is it thou requests.

Der. The forfeit (Soueraigne) of my feruants life. Who flew to day a Riorous Gentleman Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolke.

King. Haue I a rongue to doome my Brothers death! And shall that tongue give pardon to a flave? My Brother kill'd no man, his fault was Thought, And yet his punishment was bitter death.

Adus Secundus. Secon Prima.

Flowrist. Enter the King ficke the Ducone, Lord Moquefe Dorfet, Rivers, Hallings, Caresby, Buckingbam, Woodwall.

King. Why to: now have I done a good daies work. You Peeres, continue this vnited League: I, euery day expect an Embassage From my Redeemer, to redeeme me hence. And more to peace my foule shall part to heaven, Since I have made my Friends at peace on earth-Dorfes and Rouers, take each others hand, Diffemble not your hatted, Sweare your love.

Kru. By heaven, my foele is purg'd from grudging hate And with my hand I feale my true hearts Loue.

Haft. So thrive I, as I truly sweare the like. King. Take heed you dally not before your King, Lest he that is the supreme King of Kings Confound your hidden fallhood, and award

Either of you to be the others end.

Haft. So prosper Las I swezre perfect loue.
R. And Las I loue Hafings with my heart, King. Madam, your felfe is not exempt from this : Not you Sonne Darfet, Buckinghars not you; You have bene factious one against the other. Wise, love Lord Haftings, let him kille your hand, And what you do, do it enfeignedly.

Qu. There Haftings, I will never more remember Our former hatred, so thriue I, and mine.

King. Dorfet, imbrace him: Hastings, love Lord Marquesse.

Dor. This interchange of loue, I heere protest Vpon my pare, shall be inviolable.

Haft. And so sweare I.

King. Now Princely Buckingham, seale & this league With thy embracements to my wives Allies,

And make me happy in your voiry.

Buc. When over Buckmoham doth turne his hate Vpon your Grace, but with all dutious love, Doth cherish you, and yours, God punish me With hate in those where I expect most love, When I have most need to imploy a Friend. And most assured that he is a Friend, Deepe, hollow, treacherour, and full of gulle, Be he ynto me: This do I begge of heauen, When I am cold in love, to you, or yours.

King. A pleating Cordiall, Princely Buckingham.
Is this thy Vow, vnto my fickely heart: There wanteth now our Brother Glofter heere, To make the bleffed period of this peace.

Bue. And in good time, Heere comes Su Richard Rascliffe, and the Duke.

Who

Who fued to me for him? Who (in my wrath) Kneel'd and my feet, and bid me be adult'd?
Who spoke of Brother-hood? who spoke of loue? Who told me how the poore foule did forfake The mighty Warwicke, and did fight for me? Who told me in the field at Tewkesbury, When Oxford had me downe, he refrued mes And faid deare Brother live, and be a King ! Who told me, when we both lay in the Field, Frozen (almost) to death, how he did lap me Euen in his Garments, and did give himselfe (All thin and naked) to the numbe cold night? All this from my Remembrance, brutish weath Sinfully pluckt, and not a man of you Had fo much grace to put it in my minde. But when your Carters, or your wayting Vasfalls Have done a drunken Slaughter, and defac'd The precious Image of our deere Redeemer, You straight are on your knees for Pardon, pardon, And I (vniustly too) must grant it you. But for my Brother, not a man would speake, Nor I (vngracious) speake vnto my selfe For him poore Soule. The proudest of you all, Haue bin beholding to him in his life Yet none of you, would once begge for his life. O God! I feare thy inflice will take hold On me, and you; and mine, and yours for this.
Come Hastings helpe me to my Closset.
Ah poote Clarence.

Execut some with K Execut some with K.& Queen. Rich. This is the fruits of rashnes: Markt you not, How that the guilty Kindred of the Queene Look'd pale, when they did heare of Clarence death. Buc. We wait vpon your Grace.

Enter the old Dutcheffe of Torke, with the two children of Clarence.

Edw. Good Grandam tell vs,is our Father dead? Dutch. No Boy.

Daugh. Why do weepe so oft? And beate your Brest?

And cry, O Clarence, my vnhappy Sonne.

Boy. Why do you looke on va, and shake your head,

And call vs Orphans, Wretches, Castawayes, If that our Noble Father were alive?

Dat. My pretty Cofins, you militake me both, I do lament the ficknesse of the King, As loath to lose him, not your Fathers death: It were lost forrow to walle one that's lost.

By. Then you conclude, (my Grandam) he is dead: The King mine Vnckle is too blame for it. God will revenge it, whom I will importune With earnest prayers, all to that effect.
Daugh. And lo will I.

Dur. Peace children peace, the King doth love you wel. Incapcable, and shallow Innocents,

You cannot guelle who caus'd your Fathers death. Boy. Grandam we cant for my good Vnkle Glofter

Told me, the King prouok'd to it by the Queene, Deuis'd impeachments to impsison him; And when my Vnekle told me fo, he wept. And pittled me, and kindly kift my cheeke: Bad me rely on him, as on my Father, And he would love me deerely as a childe.

Das. Ah! that Deceit should fleale such gentle shape, And with a vertuous Vizor hide deepe vice. He is my fonne, I, and therein my shame, Yet from my dugges, he drew not this deceit.

Boy. Thinke you my Vnkle did diffemble Grandam? Dut. I Boy. Boy. I cannot thinke it. Hearke, what noise is this?

Enter the Queene with her haire about her ears, Rivers & Dorfet after ber.

Qu. Ah! who shall hinder me to waile and weepe? To chide my Fortune, and torment my Selfc. He ioyne with blacke dispaire against my Soule, And to my felfe, become an enemie.

Due. What meanes this Scene of rude impatience? Qu. To make an act of Tragicke violence. Edward my Lord, thy Sonne, our King is dead. Why grow the Branches, when the Roote is gone? Why wither not the leaves that want their fap? If you will live, Lament : if dye, be breefe, That our fwift-winged Soules may catch the Kings, Or like obedient Subjects follow him, To his new Kingdome of nere-changing night.

Dur. Ah so much interest have in thy forrow, As I had Title in thy Noble Husband: I have bewept a worthy Husbands death, And liu'd with looking on his Images: But now two Mirrors of his Princely femblance, Are crack'd in pieces, by malignant death, And I for comfort, have but one falle Glaffe, That greeues me, when I fee my shame in him. Thou are a Widdow: yet thou are a Mother, And hast the comfort of thy Children left, But death hath snatch'd my Husband from mine Armes, And pluckt two Crutches from my feeble hands, Clarence, and Edward. O, what cause have I, (Thine being but a moity of my mosne) To ouer-go thy woes, and drowne thy cries.

Boy. Ah Aunt! you wept not for our Fathers death : How can we ayde you with our Kindred teates? Daugh. Our fatheriesse distresse was left vomoan'd,

Your widdow-dolour, likewise be vowept.
Qu. Giue me no helpe in Lamentation, I am not barren to bring forth complaints: All Springs reduce their currents to mine eyes, That I being govern'd by the waterie Moone, May fend forth plenteous teates to drowne the World. Ah, for my Husband, for my deere Lord Edward.

Chil. Ah for our Father, for our deere Lord Clarence. Dut. Alas for both, both mine Edward and Clarence.
Qu. What stay had I but Edward, and hee's gone? Chil. What flay had we but Clarence? and he's gone. Dut. What stayes had I, but they ? and they are gone.

Qm. Was never widdow had so deere a losse. Chil. Were neuer Orphans had so deere a loue.

Dur. Was neuer Mother had so deere a losse. Alas! I am the Mother of these Greefes, Their woes are parcell'd, mine is generall. She for an Edward weepes, and so do I 1

I for a Clarence weepes, to doth not thee: These Babes for Clarence weepe, so do not they. Alas! you three,on me threefold diffieft: Power all your teares, I am your fortowes Nurle, And I will pamper it with Lamentation.

Der. Comfort deete Mother, Godis much displeasid, That you take with vothankfulnesse his doing. In common worldly things, 'tis call'd vngratefull, With dull vnwillingnelle to repay a debt, Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent : Much niore to be thus opposite with heaven, For it requires the Royall debt it lent you.

Riveri. Madam, bethinke you like a carefull Mother Of the young Prince your sonne: fend fraight for him, Let him be Crown'd, in him your coinfort lives. Drowne desperate fortow in dead Edwards grave, And plant your loyes in living Edwards Throne.

Emer Richard, Buckingham, Derbie, Ha-Singiand Ruichfe.

Rich. Sifter have comfort, all of vs have caufe To waile the dimming of our shining Starre: But none can helpe our harmes by wayling them. Madam, my Mother, I do cry you metcie, I did not see your Grace. Humbly on my knee, leraue your Bleffing.

Dut. God bleffe thee, and put meeknet in thy breaft, Loue Charity, Obedience, and teue Dutie.

Rith. Amen, and make me die a good old man, That is the butt-end of a Mothers bleffing; I maruell that her Grace did leave it out.

Buc. You clowdy-Princes, & hart-forowing-Peeres, That beare this heavie mutuall loade of Moane, Now cheere each other, in each others Loue: Though we have spent our Harvest of this King, We are to reape the Haruell of his Sonne. The broken rancour of your high-swolne hates, But lately fplinter'd, knit, and joyn'd together, Must gently be preseru'd, cherifht, and kept : Me feemeth good, that with fome little Traine, Forthwith from Ludlow, the young Prince be fet Hither to London, to be crown'd our King.

RINCTI. Why with some little Traine,

My Lord of Buckingham?

Bue. Marrie my Lord, leaft by a multitude, The new-heal'd wound of Malice should breake oue, Which would be so much the more dangerous, By how much the effect is greene, and yet vingouem d. Where every Horse beares his commanding Reine, And may direct his course as please himselfe. As well the feare of harme, as harme apparant, In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Rich. I hope the King made peace with all of vs. And the compact is firme, and true in me.

Rus. And fo in me, and fo (I thinke) in all. Yet fince it it but greene, it should be put To no apparant !tkely-hood of breach, Which haply by much company might be vrg'd: Therefore I say with Noble Buckingham, That it is meete so sew should fetch the Prince.

Haft. And so say I.

Rich. Then be it so, and go we to determine Who they shall be that strait shall poste to London. Madam, and you my Sifter, will you go To give your censures in this businesse. EXTINE

Torke I would that I might thanke you, as, as, you call me.

Gb. How? Torke. Little.

Prince. My Lord of Yorke will fill be croffe in talker Vnckle, your Grace knowes how to beare with him. Torke. You meane to beare me, not to beare with me : Vnckle, my Brother mockes both you and me, Because that I am little, like an Ape,

He thinkes that you should beare me on your shoulders.

Buck With what a Therpe provided wit he restons: To mittigate the fcome he gives his Vackle, He prettily and spriy tounts himfelfe: So cunning, and fo young, is wonderfull.

Glo. My Lord, wilt please you passe along? My felse, and my good Coulin Buckingbam, Will to your Mother to entreat of her To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.

Torks. What.

Torke. What, will you goe vnto the Tower, my Lord? Prince. My Lord Protector will have it fo. Torke. I shall not sleepe in quiet at the Tower. Glo. Why, what should you feare? Torke. Marry, my Vnckle Clarence angry Choft: My Grandam told me he was muther'd there.
Prince I feare no Vnckles dead. Glo. Nor none that live, I hope. Prince. And if they live, I hope I need not feare. But come my Lord : and with a heavie heart, Thinking on them, goe I voto the Tower. A Senet. Exeunt Prince, Torke, Haftings, and Durfet.

Manet Richard, Buskingham, and Catesby. Buck. Thinke you, my Lord, this little prating Torke

Was not incenfed by his subtile Mother, To taunt and scorne you thus opprobriously?

Glo. No doubt, no doubt: Oh'tis a perillous Boy. Bold, quicke, ingenious, forward, capable: Hee is all the Mothers, from the top to toe. Buck. Well, let themseft: Come hither Catesby, Thou are sworne as deepely to effect what we intend, As closely to conceale what we impart : Thou know'ft our reasons vrg'd vpon the way. What think'st thou? is it not an easie matter, To make William Lord Hastings of our minde, For the installment of this Noble Duke

In the Seat Royall of this famous Ile? Cates. He for his fathers fake so loues the Prince, That he will not be wonne to ought against him.

Buck. What think's thou then of Stanley? Will not hee?

Cases, Hee will doe all in all as Haffings doeb. Buck. Well then, no more but this : Goe gentle Catethy, and as it were farre off, Sound thou Lord Hallings, How he doth fland affected to our purpole, And fummon him to morrow to the Tower, To fir about the Coronation. If thou do'ft finde him tractable to vs. Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons : If he be leaden, yeie, cold, vn willing, Be thouso too, and so breake off the talke, And give vs notice of his inclination: Por we to morrow hold divided Councels, Wherein thy felfe shalt highly be employ'd.

Rich. Commend me to Lord William: tell him Catesby, His apcient Knot of dangerous Aduersaries To morrow are let blood at Pomfret Caftle, And bid my Lord, for joy of this good newes, Glue Miftresse Shere one gentle Kisse the more.

Buck. Good Caresby, goe effect this businesse soundly. Rich. Shall we heare from you, Cassiby, ere we fleepe? Carer. You shall, my Lord.

Rich. As Crosby House, shere shall you find vs both. Exit Caresby.

Buck, Now, my Lord, What shall wee doc, if wee perceive Lord Haftings will not yeeld to our Complets? Rich. Chop off his Head: Something wee will determine: And looke when I am King, clayme thou of me The Earledome of Hereford, and all the moveables Whereof the King, my Brother, was possest.

Bork: He clayme that promite at your Graces hand. Rich. And looke to have it yeelded with all kindnelle. Come let vs suppe betimes, that afterwards Wee may digest our complots in some forme, Exercus.

Scena Secunda.

Enter a Meffenger to the Doore of Haftings.

Mef. My Lord, my Lord. Hast. Who knockes ! Mef. One from the Lord Stanley. Haft. What is't a Clocke? Mef. Vpon the stroke of source.

Enter Lord Haftings. Hast. Cannot my Lord Stanley sleepe thele tedious

Meff. Soit appeares, by that I have to fay: First, he commends him to your Noble selfe.

Haft. What then? Mess. Then certifies your Lordship, that this Night He dreamt, the Bore had rased off his Helme: Besides, he sayes there are two Councels kept; And that may be determin'd at the one, Which may make you and him to rue at th'other. Therefore he fends to know your Lordships pleasure, If you will presently take Horse with him, And with all speed post with him toward the North,

To frun the danger that his Soule divines.

Haff. Goe fellow, goe, returne vnto thy Lord,
Bid him not feare the seperated Councell: His Honor and my felfe are at the one, And at the other, is my good friend Catesby; Where nothing can proceede, that toucheth vs, Whereof I shall not have intelligence: Tell him his Feares are shallow, without instance. And for his Dreames, I wonder hee's fo simple, To trust the mock'ry of vnquiet slumbers. To flye the Bore, before the Bore purfues, Were to incense the Bore to follow vs, And make pursuit, where he did meane no chase. Goe, bid thy Master rise, and come to me, And we will both together to the Tower, Where he shall see the Bore will vie vs kindly Meff. He goe, my Lord, and tell him what you fay. Exit.

Enter Casesby.

Cates. Many good morrowes to my Noble Lord. Hall. Good morrow Catesby, you are early ftirring: What newes, what newes, in this our tott'ring State ? Cates. It is a reeling World indeed, my Lord: And I beleeve will never fland vpright Till Ruhard weare the Garland of the Realme. Haft. How we are the Garland?

Doeft thou meane the Crowne?
Cates. I,my good Lord. Haft. le haue this Crown of mine out fro my fhonlders, Before le fec the Crowne fo foule mif-plac'd: But canft thou gueffe, that he doth syme at it?

Cates. 1.

Cases. I, no my life, and hopes to find you forward, Vpon his partie, for the gains thereof:
And thereupon he fends you this good newes,
That this fame very day your enemies,
The Kindred of the Queene, must dye at Pornfree.

Haft. Indeed I am no mourner fur that newes, Because they have beene still my adversaries:
But, that He glue my voice on Richards side,
To barre my Masters Helrea in true Descent,
God knowes I will not doe it, to the death.

Cares. God keepe your Lordship in that gracious

mino

Haft. But I shall laugh as this a twelue-month hence,
That they which brought me in my Masters hate,
I live to looke upon their Tragedie.
Well Caresby, ere a fort-night make me older, lie send some packing that yet thinke not on the Carest, 'Tis a vile thing to dye, my gracious Lord,

When men are unprepar'd, and looke not for it.

Haft. O montrous, montrous and to fall air out
With Rivers Ucushan, Grees: and to twill do?

With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey: and to twill doe With fome men elle, that thinks themselves as fase At thou and I, who (as thou knows?) are deare To Princely Richard, and to Buckingham.

Cates. The Princes both make high account of you, For they account his Head upon the Bridge.

Ball. I know they doe, and I have well deferred it.

Enter Lord Stonley.

Come on, coine on, where is your Bore-speare man?
Feare you the Bore, and goe so vnprouided?
Stan. My Lord good morrow, good morrow Caterby:

You may least on, but by the holy Rood, I doe not like these severall Councels, I.

Haft. My Lord, I hold my Life 26 deare as yours,
And neuer in my dayes, I doe proteft,
Was it so precious to me, as tis now:
Thinke you, but that I know our state secure,
I would be so triumphant as I am?
Sta, The Lords at Pomsret, who they rode from Lond

Sta. The Lords at Pomfret, whe they rode from London, Were locund, and supposed their states were sure. And they indeed had no cause to misseus:

But yet you see, how soone the Day o're-cast.

This sudden stab of Rancour I missous:

Pray God (I say) I proue a needlesse Coward.

What, shall we toward the Towers the day is spent,

Hast. Come, come, have with you:

Wor you what, my Lord,

To day the Lords you talke of are beheaded, Sta. They for their truth, might better wear their Heads, Then fome that have accused them, weare their Hats. But come, my Lord, let's away

Enter a Purfusuant.

Haft. Goe on before, the talke with this good fellow.

Exil Lord Stanley, and Carethy

How now, Sirrha? how goes the World with thee?

Purf. The better, that your Lordship please to aske.

Haft. I tell thee man, it is better with me now,

Then when thou mer'if me last, where now we meet:

Then was I going Prisoner to the Tower,

By the suggestion of the Queenes Allyes,

But now I tell thee (keepe it to thy selfe)

This day those Enemies are put to death,

And I in better fiste then ere I was.

Purf. God hold is, to your Honors good centers. Hoff. Gramercic fellow i there, drinke that for me, Throws hom his Purfe.

Parf. I thanke your Honor.

Enn Pursuman.

Ener a Priof.

Pruft. Well met, my Lord, I am glad to fee your Ho.

Haft. I thanke thee, good Sit Idm, with all my heart.
I am in your debt, for your last Exercise:
Come the next Sabboth, and I will content you
Pruft. Ile wait upon your Lotdfrip.

Emer Budengham.

Bue. What, talking with a Prieft, Lord Chamberlaine? Your friends at Pointret, they doe need the Prieft, Your Honor hath no forming worke in hand.

Haft. Good faith, and when I met this holy man, The men you talke of, came into my minde,

What, goe you toward the Tower?

Bue. I doe, my Lord, but long I cannot fray theres. I shall returne before your Lordship, thence.

Haft Nay like enough, for I flay Dinner there.

Bue. And Supper too, although thou know 'A it not Come, will you goe?'

Hast. He wait voon your Lordship.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Richard Ruscliffe, with Halberds, carrying the Nobles to death at Pomfres.

Rivers. Sit Richard Rateliffe, let me tell thee this, To day shalt thou behold a Subject die, For Truth, for Dutie, and for Loyaltie.

Gry. God bleffe the Prince from all the Pack of you, A Knot you are, of damned Blood-fuckers.

Vaugh. You live, that shall try wor for shis beere-

Ras. Dispatch; the limit of your Lives is out.
Ravers. O Pomstet, Pomstet! O thou bloody Prison!
Fatall and aminous to Noble Peeres:
Within the guiltie Closure of thy Walls,
Rechard the Second here was backe to death:
And for more flander to thy dismall Seat,
Wee give to thee our guiltiesse blood to drioke.
Orey. Now Marganess Curse is falne upon our Heads,

Org. Now Margarett Curie 12 falne vpon our Heads, When thee exclaimed on Halloret, you, and I, For flanding by, when Richard that der Sonne.

Rwers. Then curs'd fine Richard,
Then curs'd fine Buckingham.
Then curs'd fine Hallings. On remember God,
To heare her prayer for them, as now for vs:
And for my Sifter, and her Princely Sonnes,
Be satisfy'd, deare God, with our true blood,
Which, as thou know's, vniustly must be spile.

Rus. Make hafte, the houre of death is expirate.

Rusers. Come Gray, come Vaughan, let vs here embrace.

Farewell, vntill we meet agains in Heatien.

Emer Buckingham Darby, Hassings, Bilhop of Ely, Norfolke, Rascliffe, Lowell, with others, at a Table.

Haft. Now Noble Peeres, the cause why we are met, Is to determine of the Coronation:

In Gods Name (peake, when is the Royall day?

Buck, Is all things ready for the Royall time?

Darb. It is, and wants but nomination.

Ely. To morrow then I judge a happie day.

Buck Who knowes the Lord Protectors mind herein?
Who is most inward with the Noble Duke?

Ely. Your Grace, we thinke, should soonest know his minde.

Buck, We know each others Faces: for our Hearts, He knowes no more of mine, then I of yours, Or I of his, my Lord, then you of mine:
Lord Hoftogs, you and he are neere in love.

Haft. I thanke his Grace, I know he loves me well:
But for his purpose in the Coronation,
I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd
His gracious pleasure any way therein:
But you, my Honorable Lords, may name the time,
And in the Dukes behalfe Ile give my Voice,
Which I presume hee'le take in gentle part.

Enter Gloucofter.

Ely. In happie time, here comes the Duke himselfe.

Rub. My Noble Lords, and Cousins all, good morrows
I have been e long a sleeper: but I trust,
My absence doth negle & no great designe,
Which by my presence might have been e concluded.

Back, Had you not come vpon your Q my Lord,
William, Lord Haftings, had pronounc'd your part;
I meane your Voice, for Crowning of the King.
Rich. Then my Lord Haftings, no man might be bolder,

Rich. Then my Lord Hastings, no man might be bolder, His Lordship knowes me well, and loves me well. My Lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborne, I saw good Strawberries in your Garden there, I doe beseech you, send for some of them.

Ely. Mary and will, my Lord, with all my heart.

Exit Bishop.

Rieb. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you.
Catesby hath founded Hastings in our businesse,
And findes the testic Gentleman so hot,
That he will lose his Head, ere give consent
His Masters Child, as worshipfully he tearmes it,
Shall lose the Royaltie of Englands Throne.

Buck. Withdraw your felfe a while, lle goe with you.

Darb. We have not yet fet downe this day of Triumph: To morrow, in my judgement, is too fudden, For I my felfe am not to well provided, As elfe I would be, were the day prolong d.

Enter the Bishop of Ely.

Ely. Where is my Lord, the Duke of Gloffer?

I have fent for these Strawberries.

Ma.His Grace looks chearfully & smooth this morning,

There's fome concelt or other likes him well,
When that he bids good mortow with fuch spirit.
I thinke there's nener a man in Christendome
Can leffer hide his love, or hate, then hec,
For by his Face straight shall you know his Heart.

Derb. What of his Heart perceive you in his Face, By any lively hood he shew'd to day?

Heft. Mary, that with no man here he is offended: For were he, he had shewne it in his Lookes.

Enter Richard, and Buckingham.

Rich. I pray you all, tell me what they deferue, That doe conspire my death with diuellish Plots Of damned Witcheraft, and that have prevail'd Vpon my Body with their Hellish Charmes.

Haft. The tender love I beare your Grace, my Lord, Makes me most forward, in this Princely presence, To doome th'Offendors, who soe're they be: I say, my Lord, they baue deserved death.

Rich. Then be your eyes the witnesse of their enill.
Looke how I am bewitch'd: behold, mine Arme
Is like a blassed Sapling, wither'd vp:
And this is Edwards Wise, that monstrous Witch,
Consorted with that Harlot, Strumpet Shore,
That by their Witchcraft thus have marked me.

Haft. If they have done this deed, my Noble Lord. Rich. If? thou Protector of this damned Strumper, Talk fit hou to me of Ifs: thou are a Traytor, Off with his Head; now by Saint Paul I (weare, I will not dine, vntill I fee the same.

Lovell and Ratelife, looke that it be done: Exam.

The rest that love me, tife, and follow me.

Mones Lovell and Raicliffs, with the Lord Haftings.

Hast Woe, woe for England, not a whit for me, For I, too fond, might have prevented this:
Stanley did dreame, the Bore did rowse our Helmes,
And I did scorne it, and dissaine to slye:
Three times to day my Foot-Cloth-Horse did stumble,
And started, when he look'd vpon the Tower,
As loth to beare me to the slaughter-house.
O now I need the Priest, that spake to me:
I now tepent I told the Pursolvant,
As too triumphing, how mine Enemies
To day at Pomsret bloodily were butcher'd,
And I my selfe secure, in grace and fauour.
Oh Magaret, Magaret, now thy heavise Curse
Is lighted on poore Hastings wretched Head,
Ra-Come, come, dispatch, the Duke would be at dinner

Make a short Shrift, he longs to see your Head.

Haft. O momentarie grace of mortall men,

Which we more hunt for, then the grace of God!
Who builds his hope in ayre of your good Lookes,
Liues like a drunken Sayler on a Mast,
Readie with euery Nod to tumble downe,
Into the fatall Bowels of the Deepe.

Low. Come, come, dispatch, 'tas bootlesse to exclaime, Hast. O bloody Rebard: miserable England.

I prophecie the fezrefull'strime to thee,
That ever wretched Age hath look'd vpon.
Come, lead me to the Block, beare him my Head,
They smile at me, who shortly shall be dead.

Exeunt.

Enter Richard and Buchingham, in rossen Armour, maruellom ill-famoured.

Richard. Come Cousin,
Canst shou quake, and change thy colour,
Murther thy breath in middle of a word,
And then againe begin, and stop againe,
As if thou were distraught, and mad with terror?

Buck, Tut, I can counterfeit the deepe Tragedian, Speake, and looke backe, and pric on every fide, Tremble and flart at wagging of a Straw I Intending deepe fulpition, gaffly Lookes Are at my feruice, like enforced Smiles; And both are readic in their Offices, At any time to grace my Stratagemes. But what, is Caterby gone?

Rich. He is, and fee he brings the Maior along.

Enter the Major, and Caterby.

Buck. Lord Maior.
Rieb. Looke to the Draw-Bridge there.
Buck. Hearke, 2 Drumme.
Rieb. Casesby, o'te-looke the Walls.
Buck. Lord Maior, the reason we have sent.
Rieb. Looke back, defend thee, here are Enemies.
Buck. God and our Innocencie desend, and guard va.

Enter Lonell and Ratcliffe, with Hastings Head.

Rich. Be patient, they are friends: Raicliffe, and Lone B. Lone B. Here is the Head of that ignoble Traytor, The dangerous and unfulpe Oed Hastings.

Rich. So deare I lou'd the man, that I must weepe: I tooke him for the plainest batmelesse Creature, That breath'd vpon the Earth, a Christian. Made him my Booke, wherein my Soule recorded The Historie of all her secret thoughts. So smooth he dawb'd his Vice with shew of Vertue, That his apparant open Guilt omitted, I meane, his Conversation with Shores Wise, He liu'd from all attainder of suspects.

Buck, Well, well, he was the couerust sheltred Traytor.
That ever livid.

Would you imagine, or almost believe,
West not, that by great preservation
We live to tell it, that the subtill Traytor
This day had plotted, in the Councell-House,
To murther me, and my good Lord of Glosser.

Major. Had he done so?

Rich. What? thinke you we are Turkes, or Infidels?
Or that we would, against the forme of Law,
Proceed thus rashly in the Villaines death,
Bur that the extreme perill of the case,
The Peace of England, and our Persons (asette,
Enforc'd vs to this Execution,

Maior. Now faire befall you, he defers'd his death, And your good Graces both have well proceeded, To warne falle Traytors from the like Attempts.

Buck. I neuer look'd for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with Miftreffe Shore:
Yet had we not determin'd be should dye,
Vntill your Lordship came to see his end,
Which now the louing haste of these our friends,
Something against our meanings have prevented;
Because, my Lord, I would have had you heard
The Traytor speake, and timorously consesse
The manner and the purpose of his Treasons:

That you might well have fignify'd the fame Vinto the Citizens, who haply may Misconfler vs in him, and wayle his death.

Ma. But, my good Lord, your Graces words shal serve,
As well as I had seene, and heard him speake;
And doe not doubt, right Noble Princes both,
But Ile acquaint our dutious Citizens
With all your just proceedings in this case,

Rub. And to that end we wish'd your Lordship here, T'auoid the Censures of the carping World.

Buck, Which fince you come too late of our intent, Yet withelfs what you heare we did intend: And so, my good Lord Major, we bid farwell.

Rich. Goe after, after, Coulin Bucking harn The Malor towards Gulld-Hall hyes him in all poste : There, at your meetest vantage of the time, Inferre the Bastardie of Edward Children: Tell them, how Edward put to death a Citizen Onely for faying, he would make his Sonne Heire to the Crowne, mezaing indeed bis Houle, Which, by the Signe thereof, was tearmed for Moreover, vrge his hatefull Luxurie, And beastiall appetite in change of Lust, Which Bretcht vnto their Servants, Daughters, Wines, Euen where his raging eye, or fausge heart, Without controll, lusted to make a prey. Nay, for a need, thus farre come neere my Person: Tell them, when that my Mother went with Child Of that infatiate Edward; Noble Torke, My Princely Father, then had Warres to France, And by true computation of the time, Found, that the Iffue was not his begot : Which well appeared in his Lineaments, Being nothing like the Noble Duke, my Father 2 Yet touch this sparingly, as twere farre off, Because, my Lord, you know my Mother lines.

Buck. Doubt not, my Lord, ile play the Orator,
As if the Golden Fee, for which I plead,
Were for my felfe: and fo, my Lord, adue,
Rich, If you thriue wel, bring them to Baynards Gaftle,
Where you shall finde me well accompanied

With reuerend Fathers, and well-learned Bishops,

Buck. I goo, and towards three or foure a Clocke
Looke for the Newes that the Guild-Hall affoords.

Looke for the Newes that the Guild-Hall affoords.

Exit Buckingham.

Rieb. Goe Lovel with all speed to Doctor Shaw,

Goe thou to Fryer Penter, bid them both
Meet me within this houre at Baynards Caftle.
Now will I goe to take some prime order,
To draw the Brats of Clarence out of fight,
And to give order, that no manner person
Have any time recourse vnto the Princes.

Enter a Scrivener

Ser. Here is the Indictment of the good Lord Haft age, Which in a fet Hand fairely is engrofs'd,
That it may be to day read o're in Pauler.
And marke how well the fequell hangs together:
Eleuen houres I have spent to write it outs,
For yester-night by Cauchy was it feat me,
The Precedent was full as long a doing,
And yet within these five houres Hastings lin'd,
Vintainted, wiexamin'd, free, at libercie.
Here's a good World the while,
Who is so groffe, that cannot see this palpable detice?

Yet who so bold, but sayes he sees it not?
Bad is the World, and all will come to nought,
When such ill dealing must be seene in thought,

Enter Richard and Buckingham at Jouerall Doores

Rub. How now, how now, what fay the Citizens?

Buck. Now by the holy Mother of our Lord,

The Citizens are mum, fay not a word.

Rich. Toucht you the Baffardie of Edwards Children? Buck I did with his Contract with Lady Lucy, And his Contract by Deputie in France, Th'vniatiate greedinesse of his delire, And his enforcement of the Citie Wives, His Tyrannie for Trifles, his owne Bastardie, As being got, your Father then in France, And his refemblance, being not like the Duke. Withall, I did inserre your Lineaments, Being the right Idea of your Father, Both in your forme, and Noblenesse of Minde a Layd open all your Victories in Scotland, Your Diseipline in Warre, Wildome in Peace, Your Bountie, Vertue, faire Humilitie: Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpole, Vntoucht, or fleightly handled in discourse. And when my Oratorie drew toward end, I bid them that did love their Countries good, Cry, God faue Richard, Englands Royall King.

Rich. And did they fo Buck. No, fo God helpe me, they spake not a word, But like dumbe Statues, or breathing Stones. Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale : Which when I faw, I reprehended them, And ask'd the Maior, what meant this wilfull filence? His answer was, the people were not vsed To be spoke to, but by the Recorder. Then he was vrg'd to tell my Tale againe:
Thus fayth the Duke, thus hath the Duke inferr'd, But nothing spoke, in warrant from himselfe. When he had done, some followers of mine owne, At lower end of the Hall, hurld vp their Caps, And some tenne voyces cry'd, God seue King Rubard: And thus I tooke the vantage of those few. Thankes gentle Citizens, and friends, quoth I, This generall applaule, and chearefull thows, Argues your wifdome, and your love to Richard : And even here brake off, and came away.

Rich. What tongue-leffe Blockes were they, Would they not speake?

Will not the Major then, and his Brethren, come?

Buck. The Major is here at hand: intend fome feare, Benot you spoke with, but by mightie suit: And looke you get a Prayer-Booke in your hand, And stand betweene two Church-men, good my Lord, For on that ground lie make a holy Descast: And be not easily wome to our requests, Play the Maids part, still answer may, and take it.

Rich. I goe: and if you plead as well for them,
As I can say nay to thee for my selfe,
No doubt we bring it to a happie iffue.

Buck Go, go vp to the Leads, the Lord Maior knocks.

Enter the Mior, and Citizens.

Welcome, my Lord, I dance attendence here, I thinks the Duke will not be spoke withall.

Enter Catesby

Buck, Now Casesby, what sayes your Lord to my request?

Casety. He doth entreat your Grace, my Noble Lord,
To visit him to morrow, or next day:
He is within, with two right reverend Fathers,
Diulnely bent to Meditation,
And in no Worldly suites would he be mou'd,
To draw him from his holy Exercise.

Buck. Returne, good Catesby, to the gracious Duke, Tell him, my felfe, the Maior and Aldermen, In deepe defignes, in matter of great moment, No Jeffe importing then our generall good, Are come to have some conference with his Grace.

Catesby. Ile fignifie fo much vnto him fitsight. Exis.

Buck. Ah ha, my Lord, this Prince is not an Edward,
He is not lulling on a lewd Loue-Bed,
But on his Knees, at Meditation:
Not dallying with a Brace of Curtizans,
But meditating with two deepe Divines:
Not fleeping, to engroffe his idle Body,
But praying, to enrich his watchfull Soule.
Happie were England, would this vertuous Prince
Take on his Grace the Soueraigntie thereof,
But fure I feare we shall not winne him to it.

Maior. Marry God defend his Grace should say yes

Maior. Marry God detend his Grace should lay v

Buck, I feare he will: here Careby comes againe.

Enter Catesby.

Now Catesby, what layes his Grace?
Catesby. He wonders to what end you have affembled

Such troopes of Citizens, to come to him,
His Grace not being warn'd thereof before:
He feares, my Lord, you meane no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am, my Noble Coufin should Suspect me, that I meane no good to him:
By Heaven, we come to him in perfit love.
And so once more returne, and tell his Grace.
When holy and devout Religious men
Are at their Beades, its much to draw them themee,
So sweet is zeslous Contemplation.

Emer Richard aloft, betweene two Bifhaps.

Malor. See where his Grace flands, tweene two Clergie men.

Buck. Two Props of Vertue, for a Christian Prince, To stay him from the fall of Vanitie:
And see a Booke of Prayer in his hand,
True Ornaments to know a holy man.
Famous Planagener, most gracious Prince,
Lend sauourable eare to our requests,
And pardon vs the interruption
Of thy Deuotion, and right Christian Zenle.

Rieb. My Lord, there needes no fuch Apologies I doe befeech your Grace to pardon me, Who earneft in the feruice of my God, Defert'd the vifitation of my friends.
But leaving this, what is your Graces picafure?

Buck, Even that (I hope) which pleafeth God abone.

And all good men, of this vngouern'd He.

Ruh, I doe suiped I have done force offence,

Ruh. I doe suspect I have done some offence,
That seemes disgracious in the Cities eye,
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

o reprenend my ignorance.

Buck, You have, my Lord:
Would it might please your Grace,
On our entreaties, to amend your fault.

Rich. Elle wherefore breathe I in a Christian Land.
Buck, Know then, it is your fault, that you refigne The Supreme Sest, the Throne Maiefficall, The Sceptred Office of your Ancestors, Your State of Fortune, and your Deaw of Birth, The Lincall Glory of your Royall House, To the corruption of a blemisht Stock; Whiles in the mildnesse of your sleepie thoughts, Which here we waken to our Countries good, The Noble Ile doth want his proper Limmes : His Face defac'd with skarres of Infamie, His Royall Stock graffe with ignoble Plants, And almost shouldred in the swallowing Gulfe Of darke Forgetfulnesse, and deepe Oblivion. Which to recure, we heartily folicite Your gracious selse to take on you the charge And Kingly Gouernment of this your Land: Not as Protector, Steward, Substitute, Or lowly Factor, for anothers gaine; But as fuccessively, from Blood to Blood, Your Right of Birth, your Empyrie, your owne. For this, conforted with the Citizens, Your very Worshipfull and louing friends, And by their vehement instigation,

In this just Cause come I to move your Grace, Rich. I cannot wil, if to depart in filence, Or bitterly to speake in your reproofe, Best fitteth my Degree, or your Condition. If not to answer, you might haply thinke, Tongue-ty'd Ambition, not replying, yeelded To beare the Golden Yoake of Soueraigntie, Which fondly you would here impose on me-If to reproue you for this fuit of yours, So season'd with your faithfull loue to me, Then on the other fide I check'd my friends. Therefore to speake, and to apoid the first, And then in speaking, not to incurre the last, Definitiuely thus I answer you. Your love deferues my thankes, but my defere Vametitable, shunnes your high request. First, if all Obstacles were cut away, And that my Path were euen to the Crowne, As the ripe Revenue, and due of Birth: Yes so much is my povertie of spirit, So mightie, and so manie my defects, That I would rather hide me from my Greatnelle, Being a Barke to brooke no mightie Sea; Then in my Greatnesse couet to be hid, And in the vapour of my Glory fmother'd. But God be thank'd, there is no need of me, And much I need to helpe you, were there need : The Royall Tree hath left vs Royall Fruit, Which mellow'd by the stealing howres of time, Will well become the Seat of Maiestie, And make (no doubt) vs happy by his Reigne. On him I lay that, you would lay on me, The Right and Fortune of his happie Starres, Which God defend that I should wring from him.

Buck, My Lord, this argues Confeience in your Grace, But the respects thereof are nice, and triviall, All circumstances well confidered.
You say, that Edward is your Brothers Sonne, So say we too, but not by Edwards Wife:

For first was he contract to Lady Lucie Your Mother lives a Witneffe to his Vow; And afterward by fubflitute betroth'd To Bons, Sifter to the King of France These both put off, s poore Petitioner, A Care-cras d Mother to a many Sonnes, A Beautie-waining, and diffrested Widow, Euen in the after-noone of her best dayes, Made prize and purchase of his wancon Eye, Seduc'd the pitch, and height of his degree, To bale declention, and loath'd Bigarnie. By her, in his valawfull Bed, he got This Edward, whom our Manners call the Prince. More bitterly could I expostulate. Saue that for reverence to some aline, I give a sparing limit to my Tongue Then good, my Lord, take to your Royall felfe This proffer d benefit of Dignities If not to bleffe vs and the Land withall, Yet to draw forth your Noble Anceftrie From the corruption of sbufing times, Vnto a Lineall true derived course.

Maior. Do good my Lord, your Citizens entrest you.

Buck Refuse not, mightie Lord, this proffer a love.

Catesb. O make them in offull, grant their lawfull fort.

Rueb. Alas, why would you heape this Care on me?

I sm vnfit for State, and Maiestie:

I am vnfit for State, and Maiestie: I doe befeech you take it not amisse, I cannot, nor I will not yeeld to you.

Buck. If you refuse it as in love and zeale,
Loth to depose the Child, your Brothers Sonne,
As well we know your tendernesse of beart,
And gentle, kinde, esseminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your Kindred,
And egally indeede to all Estates:
Yet know, where you accept our suit, or no,
Your Brothers Sonne shall never reigne our King,
But we will plant some other in the Throne,
To the disgrace and downe-fall of your House:
And in this resolution here we leave you.
Come Citizens, we will entrear no more.

Exemp.

Caseb. Call him againe, sweet Prince, accept their suit:
If you denie them, all the Land will rue it,
Rob. Will you enforce me to a world of Cares.
Call them againe, I am not made of Stones,
But penetrable to your kinde entreaties,
Albeit against my Conscience and my Soule.
Enter Buckingham, and the rest.

Enter Buckingham, and tage grave men,
Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To beare her burthen, where I will or no.
I must have patience to endure the Load:
But if black Scandall, or foule-fac'd Reproach,
Attend the sequell of your Imposition,
Your meere enforcement shall acquittance me
From all the impure blots and staynes thereof;
For God doth know, and you may partly see,
How farre I am from the desire of this.

Maier. God blesse your Grace, wee see it, and will Rich. In faying fo, you shall but fay the truth.

Buck. Then I falute you with this Royall Title,
Long live King Richard, Englands worthin King.

Al. Amen.

Buck. To morrow may it please you to be Crown'd.

Rich. Euen when you please, for you will baue it so.

Buck. To

Buck. To morrow then we will attend your Grace. And so most joyfully we take our leave.

Rich. Come, let vs to our holy Worke againe. Excunt. Farewell my Coufins, farewell gentle friends.

Scena Secunda.

Setted a Senner. Enter Richard in porrigo, Bac-Mugbam, Carety, Racciffe, Louel.

Rob. Standall apart. Coufio of Buckingham. Buck. My gracious Soueraigne.
Rick. Give methy hand. Sound. Thus high, by thy advice, and thy affiftance, Is King Richard feared: But shall we weare these Glories for a day?

Or shall they last, and we reloyce in them?

Buch. Still live they, and for ever let them laft.
Rich. Ah Bucking ham, now doe I play the Touch, To trie if thou be surrant Gold indeed : Young Edward lives, thinke now what I would speake.

Buck. Say on my louing Lord.
Rich. Why Buckingham, I fay I would be King.

Buck. Why fo you are, my thrice-tenowned Lord. Rub. Ha? am I King? tis fo: but Edward lines.
Buch True, Noble Prince.
Rub. O bitter confequence!

That Edward (till should live true Noble Prince. Coufin, thou wast not wont to be so dull. Shall I be plaine? I wish the Baftards dead, And I would have it fuddenly perform d.

What fay'st thou now? speake suddenly, be briefe. Buck Your Grace may doe your pleafure.
Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all Ice, thy kindnesse freezes:
Say, haue I thy consent, that they shall dye?

Euc. Giue me some litle breath, some pawle, deare Lord, Before I politively speake in this:

I will resolue you herein presently. Exit Buck.

Casesby. The King is angry see he gnawes his Lippe. Rich, I will converse with Iron-witted Fooles, And vnrespective Boyes: none are for me, That looke into me with confiderate eyes,

High-reaching Buckingbam grower circumspect. Boy

Page. My Lord.

Rich. Know'll thou not any, whom corrupting Gold Will tempt voto a close exploit of Death?

Page. I know a discontented Gentleman, Whole humble meanes match not his haughtie spirit: Gold were as good as twentie Orators, And will (no doubt) tempt him to any thing.

Rich. Whot is his Name?

Page. His Name, my Lord, is Tirred.

Rich. I partly know the man : goe call him hither, The deepe revoluing wittie Buckingham,

No more shall be the neighbor to my counsailes. Hath he fo long held out with me, vntyr'd, And Rops he now for breath? Well, be it fo.

Enter Stanley.

How now, Lord Stanley, what's the newes? Stanley. Know my louing Lord, the Marquelle Dorfet As I heare, is fled to Richmond, In the parts where he abides.

Rieb. Come hither Caterby, rumor it abcord, That Anne my Wife is very grieuous licks,

I will take order for her keeping close. Inquire me out some meane poore Gentleman, Whom I will marry flraight to Clarace Daughter: The Boy is foolish, and I seare not him. Looke how thou dream ft: I say againe, give out, That Anne, my Overne, is ficke, and like to dye. About it, for it flands me much vpon To flop all hopes, whose growth may demmage me, I must be marryed to my Brothers Daughter, Or elle my Kingdome stands on brittle Glasse: Murther her Brochers, and then marry her, Vncertaine way of gaine. But I am in So farre in blood, that finne will pluck on finne, Teare-falling Pittle dwells not in this Eye.

Enter Tyrrel.

Is thy Name Tyrrel?

Tyr. lames Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.
Rich. Arrithou indeed?

Ty. Proue me, my gracious Lord. Rich. Dar'st thou resolut to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Please you :

But I had rather kill two enemies.

Rich. Why then thou haft it : two deepe enemies, Foes to my Rest, and my sweet sleepes diffurbers, Are they that I would have thee deale vpon: Tyrrel, I meane those Bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open meanes to come to them, And soone lle rid you from the seere of them.

Rich. Thou fing'ft Iweet Mufique: Hearke, come hither Tyrrel, Goe by this token: rife, and lend thinc Eare, Worker.

There is no more but fo: fay it is done, And I will love thee, and preferre thee for it.

Tyr. I will dispatch it ftraight.

Enter Backing harm.

Buck. My Lord, I have confidered in my minde, The late request that you did found me in.

Rich. Well, let that reft : Dorfer is fled to Richmond.

Rich. Stanley, hee is your Wives Sonne: well, looke

Buck. My Lord, I clayme the gift, my due by promile, For which your Honor and your Falth is pawo'd, Th'Earledome of Hertford, and the moneables, Which you have promifed I shall possesse.

Rich. Stanley looke to your Wife: if the coasey

Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buck. What layes your Highnesse to my just request !
Rub. I doe remember me. Herry the Sixt
Did prophecie, that Richmond should be King,

When Richmond was a little pecuish Boy. A King perhaps.

Buck, May it please you to resolve me in my sult.
Rieb. Thou troublest me, I am not in the vaine. Exe. Buck. And is it thus? repayes he my deepe service With fuch contempt? made I him King for this? O let me thinke on Hoftings, and be gone

Enter Tyrrel.

That ever yet this Land was guilty of a Digition and Forrest, who I did suborne
To do this peece of rushfull Butchery, Albeit they were flesht Villaines, bloody Dogges, Melted with tendetnesse, and milde compassion, Wept like to Children, in their deaths (ad Story.
O thur (quoth Digition) lay the gende Babes:
Thus, thus (quoth Forrest) girdling one another Within their Alablaster innocent Armes:
Their lips were foure red Roses on a stalke,
And in their Summer Beauty kist each other.
A Booke of Prayers on their pillow lay,
Which one (quoth Forrest) almost chang'd my minde:
But on the Divell, there the Villaine stop:
When Digition thus told on, we smothered
The most replenished sweet worke of Nature,
That from the prime Creation ere she framed.
Hence both are gone with Conscience and Remorse,
They could not speake, and fo I left them both,
To beare this tydings to the bloody King.

Euser Richard.

And heere he comes. All health my Souersigne Lord.
Re. Kinde Tirrel, am I happy in thy Newes.
Tir. If to have done the thing you gave in charge.
Beget your happinesse, be happy then,
For it is done.

Rich. But did'ft thou see them dead.

Tir. I did my Lord.
Eich. And buried gentle Tirres.

Tir. The Chaplaine of the Tower hath buried them, But where (to fay the cruth) I do not know.

Rich. Come to me Tirre! foone, and after Supper, When thou shalt tell the processe of their death. Meane time, but thinke how I may do the good, And be inheritor of thy desire.

Farewell till then.

Tir. I hambly take my leave.

Rich. The Sonne of Clarence have I pent up close, His daughter meanly have I matcht in marriage. The Sonnes of Edward sleepe in Abrabanus bosome, And Asme my wife bath bid this world good night. Now for I know the Britaine Richmond symes At yong Eluzabeth my broshers daughter, And by that knot lookes proudly on the Crowne, To her go I, a folly thriuing woocr.

Euter Rateliffe,

Rat. My Lord.

Rieb. Good or bad newes, that thou com'fi in fo bluntly?

Res. Bad nevs my Lord, Marson is fled to Richmond, And Buckingham backt with the hardy Welfbrmen Is in the field, and fill his power encreaseth.

Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more neere,
Then Buckingham and his rash leuied Strength.
Come, I have learn'd, that searfull commenting
Is leaden service to dult delay.
Delay leds impotent and Snaile-pac'd Beggery:
Then service expedition be my wing,
Ioues Mercusy, and Herald for a King:
Go muster men: My counsaile is my Sheeld,
We must be breese, when Traitors brave the Field.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enser old Queene Margaret.

Mar. So now prosperity begins to mellow,
And drop into the rotten mouth of death:
Heere in these Consines slily have I lurkt,
To watch the waining of mine enemies.
A dire industion, am I witnesses,
And will to France, hoping the consequence
Will proue as bitter, blacke, and Tragicals,
Withdraw thee wretched Margares, who comes heere?

Enter Dutcheffe and Queene.

Qu. Ah my poore Princes! ah my tender Babes:
My enblowed Flowres, new appearing (weets:
If yet your gentle foules flye in the Ayre,
And be not fixt in doorne perpetuall,
Houer about me with your ayery wings,
And heare your mothers Lamentation.

Mar. Houer abouther, fay that right for right Hath dim'd your Infant mome, to Aged night Dur. So many miferies have craz'd my voyce,

That my woe-wested tongue is fill and mute.

Edward Plantagenet, why art thou deed?

Man Plantagenet dock wife Plantagenet.

Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet,
Edward for Edward, payers a dying debt.

2s. Wilt thou, O God, flye from fuch gentle Lambs,
And throw them in the intrailes of the Wolfe?
When didft thou fleepe, when fuch a deed was done?

Mar. When holy Harry dyed, and my fweet Sonne.
Dat Dead life, blind fight, poore mortal lluing ghoft,
Woes Scene, Worlds fhame, Graues due, by life viurps,
Breefe abstract and record of recious dayes,
Rest thy wriest on Englands lawfull earth,
Vniawfully made drunke with innocent blood.

Qu. Ah that thou would'it affoone affoord a Graue, As thou canft yeeld a melancholly feate: Then would I hide my bones, not rest them heere, Ah who hath any cause to mourne but wee?

Mar. If ancient for row be most reverent,
Give mine the benefit of ligneurie,
And let my greefes frown on the vpper hand
If for row can admit Society.

A Hell-hound that doth hunt vs all to death:
That Dogge, that had his teeth before his eyes,
To worry Lambes, and lap their gentle blood:
That foule defacer of Gods handy worke:
That reignes in gauled eyes of weeping foules:
That excellent grand Tyrant of the earth,
Thy wombelet loofe to chafe vs to out graves.
O vpright, juft, and true-difposing God,
How do I thanke thee, that this carnall Curre

Prayes

Prayes on the Muc of his Mothers body, And makes her Puc-fellow with others mone. Dut. Oh Harries wife, triumph not in my woes : God witnelle with me, I have wept for thine.

Mur. Beare with me . I am hungry for reuenge, And now I cloy me with beholding it. Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward, The other Edward dead, to quit my Edward Yong Yorke, he is but boote, because both they Marcht not the high perfection of my loffe. Thy Clarence he is dead, that flab'd my Edward, And the beholders of this franticke play, Th'adulterate Haftings, Rivers, Vaughan, Gray. Vntimely fmother'd in their dusky Graves. Richard yet lives, Hels blacke Intelligencer. Onely referu'd their Factor, to buy foules, And fend them thither : But at hand, at hand Infues his pittious and impittied end. Earth gapes, Hell burnes, Fiends roare, Saints pray, To have him fodainly convey'd from hence: Cancell his bond of life, deere God I pray, That I may live and fay, The Dogge is dead.

I call'd thee then, poore Shadow, painted Queen, The presentation of but what I was; The flattering Index of a direfull Pageant; One heau'd a high, to be burl'd downe below: A Mother onely mocke with two faire Babes ; A dreame of what thou wast, a garish Flagge To be the syme of every dangerous Shot, A figne of Dignity, a Breach, a Bubble; A Queene in teast, onely to fill the Scene. Where is thy Husband now? Where be thy Brothers? Where be thy two Sonnes? Wherein dost thou loy? Who fues, and kneeles, and fayes, God faue the Queene? Where be the bending Peeres that flattered thee? Where be the thronging Troopes that followed thee? Decline all this, and fee what now thou art. For happy Wife, a most distressed Widdow: For 10 yfull Mother, one that wailes the name : For one being fued too, one that humbly fues: For Queene, a very Caytiffe, crown'd with care : For the that foorn'd at me, now foorn'd of me ; For the being feared of all, now fearing one: For the commanding all, obey'd of none. Thus hath the course of Justice whirl'd about. And left thee but a very prey to time, Having no more but Thought of what thou waft To torture thee the more, being what thou art, Thou didft vsurpe my place, and doft thou not Vsurpethe inft proportion of my Sorrow? Now thy proud Necke, beares halfe my burthen'd yoke, From which, euen heere I flip my wearied head, And leave the burthen of it all, on thee. Farwell Yorkes wife, and Queene of fad mischance, These English woes, shall make me smile in France.

2x. O thou well skill'd in Curles, flay a-while, And teach me how to curle mine enemies.

Mar. Forbeare to fleepe the night, and fast the day: Compare dead happinesse, with living woe: Thinke that thy Babes were sweeter then they were, And he that flew them fowler then he is:

Rub. Loe at their Birth, good flarres were opposite.
Qu. No, to their liues, ill friends were contrary. Rich! All vnauoyded is the doome of Desiny. Qu. True: when anoyded grace makes Delliny.

My Babes were deftin'd to a fairer death, If grace had bleft thee with a fairer life.

Rich. You speake as if that I had flaine my Cofins? 24. Cofins indeed, and by their Vnckle couzend, Of Comfort, Kingdome, Kindred, Freedome, Life, Whose hand soeuer lanch'd their tender hearts, Thy head(all indirectly) gave direction. No doubt the murd rous Knife was dull and blunt, Till it was wheeted on thy stone-hard heart, To reuell in the Intrailes of my Lambes. But that still vie of greefe, makes wilde greefe tame, My tongue should to thy eares not name my Boyes, Till that my Nayles were anchor'd in thine eyes: And I in such a desp'trate Bay of death, Like a poore Barke, of failes and tackling reft,

Rush all to peeces on thy Rocky bosome. Rieb. Madam, so thriue I in my enterprize And dangerous successe of bloody warres, As I intend more good to you and yours,

Then ever you and yours by me wete harm'd.

Qu. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven, To be discovered, that can do me good.

Rich. Th'adusncement of your children, gentle Lady Qe. Vp to fome Scatfold, there to lofe their heads.

Reb. Vnto the dignity and height of Fotune,
The high Imperiall Type of this earths glory.

Qu. Flatter my forrow with report of it: Tell m, what State, what Dignity, what Honor, Canst thou demise to any childe of nine.

Rich. Even all I have; I, and my felfe and all. Will I withall indow a childe of thine: So in the Lethe of thy angry foule, Thon drowne the fad remembrance of those wrongs, Which thou supposed I have done to thee.

Qu. Be breefe, lenst that the processe of thy kindnesse Last longer telling then thy kindnesse date.

Rich. Then know,

That from my Soule, I lougtly Daughter,

Qu. My daughters Mother thinkes it with her foule. Rich. What do you thinke?

Qu. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soule So from thy Soules love didft thou love her Brothers,

And from my hearts love, I do thanke thee for it. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning s I meane that with my Soule I love thy daughter, And do intend to make her Queene of England.

Qu' Well then, who dost of meane shallbe her King. Rich. Euen he that makes her Queene:

Who elfe should bee?

Qu. Whac, thou?

Rich. Euen fo: How thinke you of it? Qu. How can't thou woo her? Rich. That I would learne of you,

As one being best acquainted with her humour.

Que. And wilt thou learne of me? Rich. Madam, with all my heart.

Qu. Send to her by the man that flew her Brothers, A paire of bleeding hearts : thereon ingrave Edward and Torke, then haply will she weepe: Therefore present to hereas sometime Margares Did to thy Father, steept in Rutlands blood, A hand-kercheefe, which fay to her did dreyne The purple sappe from her sweet Brothers body, And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withall. If this inducement move her not to love, Send her a Letter of the Noble deeds: Tell her, thou mad'it away her Vnckle Clarence, Her Vnckle Rivers, I (and for her fake) Mad'A quicke conveyance with her good Aunt Anne.

Rich. You mocke me Madam, this not the way

To win your daughter,
24. There is no other way, .

Vnlesse thou could'st put on some other shape, And not be Richard, that hath done all this. Ric. Say that I did all this for love of her,

Qu, Nay then indeed the cannot choose but hate thee Having bought love, with fuch a bloody spoyle.

Rich. Looke what is done, cannot be now amended: Men shall deale vnaduifedly sometimes, Which after-houres glues leyfure to repent. If I did take the Kingdome from your Sonnes, To make amends, He give it to your daughter: If I have kill'd the iffue of your wombe, To quicken your encrease, I will beget Mine yssue of your blood, vpon your Daughter: A Grandams name is little leffc in love, Then is the doting Title of a Mother; They are as Children but one steppe below, Euen of your mertall, of your very blood: Of all one paine, faue for a night of groanes Endur'd of ber, for whom you bid like forrow. Your Children were vexation to your youth,

But mine shall be a comfort to your Age, The loffe you have, is but a Sonne being King, And by that lolle, your Daughter is made Queene. I cannot make you what amends I would, Therefore accept such kindnesse at I can Dorfet your Sonne, that with a fearfull foule Leads discontented stoppes in Porraine soyle, This faire Alliance, quickly snall call home To high Promotions, and great Dignity.
The King that calles your beauteous Danghter Wife,
Familiarly Chall call thy Dorfer, Brother i Againe shall you be Mother to a King : And all the Ruines of diffreffefull Times, Repayed with double Riches of Content. What? we have manygoodly dayes to fee : The liquid drops of Teares thu, you have thed. Shall come againe, transform'd to Orient Pearle, Advancaging their Love, with interest Often-times double gaine of happinelle, Go then (my Mother) to thy Daughter go, Make bold her balhfull yeares, with your experience. Prepare her eares to heare a Woers Tale. Put in her tender heart, th'aspiring Flame Of Golden Soveraignty: Acquaint the Princesse With the sweet filent houses of Marriage loyes: And when this Arme of mine hath chaftifed The perry Rebell, dull-brain d Buckingham, Bound with Triumphant Garlands will I come, And leade thy daughter to a Conquerors bed : To whom I will retaile ray Conquest woone, And the thalbe fole Victore Te, Cafar: Cafar.

Qn. What were I beat to fay, her Fathers Brother Would be her Lord! Or shall I say her Vnkle? Or he that flew her Brothers, and her Vnkles? Vnder what Title shall I woo for thee, That God, the Law, my Honor, and her Loue,

Can make secree pleasing to ber tender yeares?

Rich. Inferre saire Englands peace by this Alliance.

Qu. Which she shall purchase with still lasting warre. Rich. Tellher, the King that may command, intreats. Qu. That as her hands, which the kings King forbids. Rich. Say the thell be a High and Mighty Queene.
24. To vaile the Title, as her Mother doth.
Rich. Say I will love her everlaftingly. Que But how long shall that title ouer last? Rich. Sweetly in force, vnto her faire lives end.

Qn. But how long fairely shall her sweet life last? Rich. As long as Heaven and Nature lengthens it. Qu. As long as Hell and Riebard likes of it. Rich. Say, I her Soueraigne, am her Subiect low. Rich, Be eloquent in my behalfe to her. Qu. An honest cale speeds best, being plainly told.

Rich. Then plainly to her, tell my louing tale. Qu. Plaine and not honest, is too barsh a style. Rich. Your Reasons are too shallow, and to quicke.
20. O no, my Reasons are too deepe and dead, Too deepe and dead (poore Infants) in their graves, Harpe on it fill shall I, till heart-strings breake.

Rich. Harpe not on that firing Madam, that is past. Now by my George, my Garter, and my Crowne. Qu. Prophen'd, dishonor'd, and the third vsurpt.

Rich. I Swesse.

Qu. By nothing, for this is no Oath : Thy George prophan'd, bath loft his Lordly Honor; Thy Garrer blemish'd, pawn'd his Knightly Versne; Thy Crowae vourp'd, difgrac'd his Kingly Glery:
If fomething thou would'il (weare to be believe'd, Sweare then by Comething, that thou half not wrong'd.

Rich. Then by my Selle, Qu. Thy Selfe, is selfe-mistri'd. Rich. Now by the World. 9n. To full of thy foole wrongs Ruch. My Fathers death. Qu, Thy life hath it diffrance'd. Rich. Why then, by Heaven.

Qu. Heanens wrong is most of all:
If those didd's seare to breake an Oath with him, The vnity the King my husband made. Thou had it not broken, not my Brothers died. If thou had'ft fear'd to breake an outh by him, Th'Imperiall mercall, circling now thy head, Had grac d the tender temples of my Child, And both the Princes had bene breathing heere, Which now two tender Bed-fellowes for duft, Thy broken Faith hath made the prey for Wormers What can'il thou fweareby now.

Rub. The time to come.
Qu. That thou helt wrenged in the time ore-past: For I my felfe have many teares to wash Heereafter time, for time past, wrong'd by thee. The Children line, whose Fathers thou hast staughter'd, Vngouem'd youth, to waile it with their age: The Parents live, whose Children thou hast butcher'd, Old barren Plants, to waile it with their Age. Sweare not by time to come, for that thou haft Milvs'd ere vs'd, by times ill-vs'd repat.

Ruch. As I entend to prosper, and repent: So thrive I in my dangerous Affayres
Of hostile Armes: My selfe, my selfe consocrad: Heaven, and Fortune barre me bappy boures: Day, yeeld me not thy light; nor Night, thy reft. Be opposite all Planets of good lucke To my proceeding, if with decre hearts love, Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts, I tender not thy beautious Princely daughter. In her, confills my Happinelle, and thine: Without her, followes to my felfe, and thee; Her felfe, the Land, and many a Christian foule, Death, Desolation, Ruine, and Decay: It cannot be anoyded, but by this: It will not be anoyded, but by this. Therefore deare Mother (I must call you so) Be the Atturney of my love to ber: Pleade what I will be, not what I have become; Not my deferts, but what I will deferue: Vrge the Necessity and state of times, And be not poculi h found, in great Designes. Qn. Shall I be tempted of the Direct thus?

Reb. Lifehe Dinell tempt you to do good.

2s. Shall I forget my felfe, to be my felfe.

Reb. Life your felfes remembrance wrong your felfe.

Qu. Yet thou didft kil my Children. Reb. But in your daughters wombe I bury them. Where in that Neft of Spicery they will breed Schues of themselves, to your recemforture.

Que Shall I go win my daughter to thy will? Rich. And be a happy Mother by the deed. Qu. I go, write to the very shortly,

And you shal vaderfland from me her mind. Rich. Beare her my true loves kiffe, and fo farewell. Relenting Foole, and fallow-changing Woman

Ra. Most mightie Soueraigne, on the Westerne Coast Rideth a puiffant Naule: to our Shores Throng many doubtfull hollow-bearted friends, Vnarm'd, and vnresolu'd to beat them backe. Tis thought, that Richmond is their Admirall 1 And there they hull, expeding but the aide Of Buckey barn, to welcome them ashore. Rich. Some light-foot friend polt to & Duke of Norfolk:

Rescliffe thy felfe, or Catesby, where is bee?

Ca. Here, my good Lord.
Rich. Casesby, Aye to the Duke. Cas. I will, my Lord, with all convenient hafte. Rich. Catesby come hither, poste to Salisbury: When thou com's thither: Dull vamindfull Villaine, Wby flay's thou here, and go'ft not to the Duke? Cas. First, mighry Liege, tell me your Highnesse pleasure, What from your Grace I shall deliuer to him.

Rich. Otrue, good Carety, bid him leuie Araight The greatest frength and power that he can make,

And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.

Cas. I goe.

Ras. What, may it pleese you, shall I doe at Salisbury ≥

Rich. Why, what would'st thou doe there, before I

Ret. Your Highaeffe told me I should poste before, Rich. My minde is chang'd:

Emer Lord Stanley.

Scanler, what newes with you? Sta None, good my Liege, to plesse you with y hearing, Nor none so bad, but well may be reported.

Rich. Hoyday, e Riddle, neither good nor bad: What need'st thou runne so many miles about, When thou mayest tell thy Tale the neerest way? Once more, what newes?

Stan. Richmond is on the Seas.

Rich. There let him finke, and be the Seas on him, White-liuer'd Runnagate, what doth he there?

Sien. I know not, mightie Soueraigne, but by guesse. Rich. Well, 25 you gueffe.

Sian. Stirr'd up by Da fet, Buckingham, and Aforton, He makes for England, here to claying the Crowne.

Rich. Is the Chayre emptie? is the Sword vnfway'd?

Is the King dead? the Empire vnpoffelt? What Heire of Torke is there alive, but wee? And who is Englands King, but great Torker Heire? Then tell me, what makes he vpon the Seas

Ston. Valelle for that, my Liege, I cannot gueffe. Rich. Valeffe for that he comes to be your Liege, You cannot guesse wherefore the Welchman comes.

Thou wilt revolt, and flye to him, I feare.

Stan. No, my good Lord, therefore mistrust me not.

Rich. Where is thy Power then, to beat him back? Where be thy Tenants, and thy followers? Are they nor now upon the Westerne Shore, Safe-conducting the Rebels from their Shippes?

Stan. No. my good Lord, my friends are in the North.

Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they in the North, When they should sexue their Soueraigne in the West?

Stan. They have not been commanded mighty King Pleafeth your Maiestie to give me lesue, He muster up my friends, and meet your Grace, Where and what time your Maiettie shall plesse. Rich. I, thou would'A be generco logue with Richmond-But He not trust thee.

Ster. Most mightie Sourraigne, You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtfull, I never was not never will be falle.

Rich. Goe then, and muster men: but leave behind Your Sonne George Stanley : looke your heart be firme, Or else his Heads assurance is but fraile.

Stan. So deale with him, as I prove true to you. Exit Starley.

Dor. Six Christopher, tell Richmond this from me,
That in the flye of the most deadly Bore,
My Sonne George Stanler is frankt vp in hold:
If I reualt, off goes yong George: head,
The feare of that, holds off my prefent ayde,
So get there gone: commend me to thy Lord.
Withall say, that the Queene hath heartily consented
He should espouse Elizabeth hir daughter.
But tell me, where is Princely Richmond now?
Chra. At Penbroke, or at Hertford West in Wales.

Der. What men of Name refort to him.
Chri, Sir Walter Herbert, a tenowned Souldiet,
Sir Gubert Talbox, Sir William Stanley,
Oxford, tedoubted Pernbroke, Sir lamer Blunt,
And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant Crew,
And many other of great name and worth:
And towards London do they bend their power,
If by the way they be not fought withall.

Der. Well hye thee to thy Lord: I kille his hand, My Letter will resolue him of my minds.

Richm Fellowes in Armes, and my most louing Frends Bruis'd vaderneath the yoake of Tyranny, Thus farre into the bowels of the Land, Have we marcht on without impediment; And heere receive we from our Father Stanley Lines of faire comfort and encouragement: The wretched, bloody, and vsurping Boare, (That spoyl'd your Summer Fields, and fruitfull Vines) Swilles your warm blood like walh, & makes his trough In your embowel'd bolomes: This foule Swine Is now cuen in the Centry of this Ifle, Ne're to the Towne of Leicester, as we learne: From Tamworth thicher, is but one dayes march. In Gods name cheerely on, couragious Friends, To respe the Harnelt of perpetual peace, By this one bloody tryall of tharpe Warre.

Oxf. Every mans Conference is a thouland men,
To light against this guilty Homicide.

Her. I doubt not but his Friends will turne to vs.

Blunt. He hath no friends, but what are friends for fear
Which in his deerest neede will flye from him.

Richm. All for our vantage, then in Gods name march,
True Hope is swift, and flyes with Swallowes wings,
Kings it makes Gods, and meaner creatures Kings,
Execute Output,

Rich. Here pitch our Teot, even here in Bolworth field, My Lord of Surrey, why looke you to lad?

Sur. My heart is ten times lighter then my lookes.
Rich. My Lord of Norfolke.

Nor. Heere most gracious Liege.
Rich. Norfolke, we must have knockes:

Ha, must we not?

Nor. We must both give and take my louing Lord.

Rich. Vp with my Tent, heere wil I lye to night,

But where to morrow? Well, all's one for that.

Who bath descried the number of the Traisors?

Nor Six or feven thousand is their vimost power.

Rich. Why our Bartalia trebbles that accounce
Besides, the Kings name is a Tower of thrength,
Which they upon the adverse Faction went.

Be to the Perfon, Noble Father in Law.

Tell me, how fares our Noble Mother? Der. I by Actourney, blesse thee from thy Mother, Who prayes continually for Richmonds good: So much for that. The filent houres Reale on, And flakie darkeneffe breakes within the East. In breefe, for so the feason bids vabe, Prepare thy Battell early in the Morning, And put thy Fortune to th'Arbitrement Of bloody ftroakes, and mortall staring Warre: I, as I may, that which I would I cannot, With best aduantage will deceive the time. And syde thee in this doubtfull (hocke of Armes, But on thy fide I may not be too forward, Least being seene, thy Brother, tender George Be executed in his Fathers fight, Farewell : the leyfure, and the fearfull time Cuts off the ceremonious Vowes of Lone, And ample enterchange of fweet Discourse, Which fo long fundred Friends should dwell vpons God give vs leyfure for these rites of Loue. Once more Adieu, be valiant, and speed well.

Riebm. Good Lords conduct him to his Regiment:
lle fittue with troubled noife, to take a Nap,
Left leaden flumber peize me downe to morrow,
When I should mount with wings of Victory:
Once more, good night kinde Lords and Gentlemen.

Exemp. Maner Richmond.
Othou, whose Captaine I account my felfe,
Looke on my Forces with a gracious eye:
Put in their hands thy bruising Irons of wrath,
That they may crush downe with a heavy fall.
Th'viurping Helmets of our Adversaries:
Makevs thy ministers of Chasticement,
That we may praise thee In thy victory:
To thee I do commend my watchfull soule,
Ere I let fall the windowes of mine eyes:
Sleeping, and waking, oh defend me still.

Enter the Ghost of Prince Edward, Sonneto Heavy the fixt.

Ch. to Rt. Let me fit heavy on thy foule to morrow t Thinke how thou stab's me in my prime of youth At Teukesbury: Dispaire therefore, and dye.

Choft to Richm. Be chestefull Richmond,
For the wronged Soules
Of hurcher'd Princes, fight in the behilf:

Of butcher'd Princes, fight in thy behalfe: King Hender iffue Richmond comforts thee.

Enter the Ghoft of Henry the first.

Choft. When I was mortall, my Annointed body

By thee was punched full of holes;

Thinke on the Tower, and me: Dispaire, and dye,

Harry the first, bids thee dispaire, and dye.

To Richm. Vertuous and holy be thou Conqueror:

Harry that prophetied thou should's be King,
Doth comfort thee insleepe: Liue, and flourish.

Enter

Poore Clarence by thy gnile betrsy'd to death:

To murrow in the battell thinke on me,

And fall thy edgelesse Sword, dispaire and dge.

To Ricom. Those off-spring of the house of Lancaster

To Richm. Thou off-fpring of the house of Lancast The wronged heyres of Yorke do pray for thee, Good Angels guard thy battell, Liue and Flourish.

Ever the Gloft' of Rivers, Gray, and Vaughen.

Rivers, that dy'de at Pomfret: dispaire, and dye.

Grey. Thinke vpon Grey, and let thy foule dispaire.

Vaugh, Thinke vpon Vaughen, and with guilty feeze

Let fall thy Lance, dispaire and dye.

All to Rubm. Awake,
And thinke our wrongs in Rubods Bosome,
Will conquer him. Awake, and win the day.

Enter the Gooft of Lord Haftings.

Gho. Bloody and guilty: guiltily awake, And in a bloody Battell end thy dayes. Thinke on Lord Hastings: dispaire, and dye. Hast. to Rich. Quiet vortoubled scale, Awake, awake:

Arme, fight, and conquer, for faire Englands fake.

Enserabe Ghosts of the two yong Princes.
Ghosts. Dreame on thy Cousins
Smothered in the Tower:
Let was be laid within thy bosome Riebard,
And weigh thee downe to ruine, shame, and death,
Thy Nephewes soule bids thee dispaire and dye.
Ghosts to Riebard. Sleepe Richmond,

Sleepe in Peace, and wake in Loy, Good Angels guard thee from the Boares annoy, Liue, and beget a happy race of Kings, Edwards unhappy Sonnes, do bid thee flourish.

Edwards unhappy Sonnes, do bid thee flourist

Essar the Ghost of Annu fit Wife.

Ghost to Rich. Richard, thy Wife,

That wretched Anne thy Wife,

That neuer slept a quiet houre with thee,

That never flept a quiet houre with thee, Now filles thy fleepe with perturbations, To morrow in the Battaile, thinke on me, And fall thy edgeleffe Sword, dispaire and dye:

Chost to Richm. Thou quiet foule,
Sleepe thou a quiet fleepe:
Dreame of Successe, and Happy Victory,
Thy Adversaries Wife doth pray for thee.
Enter the Chast of Buckingham.

Ghost to Rich. The first was I
That help'd thee to the Crowne:
The last was I that selt thy Tyranny.
O, in the Battaile think on Buckingham,
And dye in terror of thy gultinesse.
Dreame on, dreame on, of bloody deeds and death,
Fainting dispaire; dispairing yeeld thy breath.
Ghost to Richm. I dyed for hope

Ere I could lend thee Ayde;
But cheere thy heart, and be thou not dismayde;
God, and good Angels fight on Richmonds fide,
And Richard fall in height of all his pride.

Rich. Give me another Horle, bind up my Wounds:
Have mercy left. Soft, I did but dreame.
O coward Confeience! how dost thou affaich me?
The Lights burne blew. It is not dead audnight.
Cold fearefull drops fland on my trembling flash.

What? do I featerry Selfe? There's none elfe by, Richard loves Richard, that is, I am I. Is there a Murtherer heere? No; Yes, I am: Then flye; What from my Solfe ! Gross reason: why? Left I Resenge. What? my Solfe upon my Solfe? Alacke, House my Solfe. Wherefore? For any good That I my Selfe, have done vnto, my Selfe? Ono. Alas, I rather bate my Seife, For hatefull Deeds committed by my Selfe. I am a Villaine: yet I Lye, I am not. Foole, of thy Selfe speaks well: Foole, do not flater. My Confeience hath a thoufand feuerall Tongues, And every Tongue brings in a feuerall Tale, And overie Tale condemnes me for a Villaine; Perturie, in the high'ff Degree, Morther, flerne murther, in the dyr'st degree, All fenerall finnes, ell vs d in cach degree, Throng all to'th Barre, crying all, Guiley, Guiley. I shall dispaire, there is no Creature loues me ; And if I die, no soule shall pittie me. Nay, wherefore should they? Since that I my Solfe, Finde in my Selfe, no pittle to my Selfe. Me thought, the Soules of all that I had tourther'd Came to my Tent, and every one did threat To morrowes vengeance on the head of Richard Enter Racliffe.

Res. My Lord.

King 'Who's shere?

Res. Reschiff my Lord, 'tis I: the early Village Cock

Hash twice done falteration to the Morne,

Your Friends are vp, and buckle on their Atmour.

King. O Reschiffe, I feare, I feare.

Res. Nay good my Lord, be not effected of Shedows.

King. By the Apoftle Paul, shadowes to night

Haue stroke more terror to the soule of Richard,

Then can the substance of terr thousand Souldiers

Armed in proofe, and led by thallow Richard.

Tis not yet neere day. Come go with me,

Vinder our Tenta Ile play the Ease-dropper,

To heate if any meane to shrinke from me,

Exema Richard & Radiffe,

Enter the Lords to Richmond fixing in his Tent.

Richm. Good morrow Richmond.
Rich. Cry mercy Lords, and watchfull Gentlemen,
That you have tane a tardic fluggard beete?
Lords. How have you flept my Lord?
Rich. The sweeteff fleepe,
And fairest booding Dreames,
That ever entred in a drowfie head,
Have I since your departure had my Lords.
Me thought their Soules, whose bodies Richmarcher'd,
Came to my Tent, and cried on Victory:
I promise you my Heart is very locond,
In the remembrance of so faire a dreame,
How faire into the Morning is it Lords?
Lor. Vpon the stoke of foure.

Rich. Why then 'tis time to Arme, and give direction.
His Oranon to bu Saiduers.

More then I have faid, louing Countrymen, The leyfure and inforcement of the time Forbids to dwell upon: yet temember this,

God

God, and our good cause, fight upon our fide, The Prayers of holy Saints and wronged foules, Like high rear'd Bulwarkes, fland before our Faces, (Richard except) those whom we fight agains, Had rather have vs win, then him they follow. For, what is he they follow ? Truly Gemlemen, A bloudy Tyrant, and a Homicide: One rais'd in blood, and one in blood effablish'd; One that made meanes to come by what he hath, And flaughter'd those that were the meanes to help him: A bale foule Stone, made precious by the foyle Of Englands Chaire, where he is falfely fet : One that hath ever beene Gods Enemy. Then if you fight against Gods Enemy God will in lustice ward you as his Soldiers. If you do fweare to put a Tyrant downe, You sleepe in peace, the Tyract being slaine: If you do fight against your Countries Foes, Your Countries Fat shall pay your paines the hyre, If you do fight in safegard of your wives, Your wives shall welcome home the Conquerors. If you do free your Children from the Sword, Your Childrens Children quits it in your Age. Then in the name of God and all thefe rights, Aduance your Standards, draw your willing Swords. For me, the ransome of my bold attempt. Shall be this cold Corpes on the earth's cold face. But If I thrive, the game of my attempt, The least of you shall share his part thereof. Sound Drummes and Trumpets boldly, and checrefully. God, and Saint George, Richmond, and Victory.

Enter King Richard, Rescliffe and Catesby.

K. What faid Northumberland as touching Richmond?
Rat. That he was never trained up in Armes.
King. He faid the truth: and what faid Surrey then?
Rat. He fmil'd and faid, the better for our purpole.
King. He was in the right, and so indeed it is.
Tell the clocke there.
Give finites.
Give me a Kelender: Who saw the Sunne to day?

Ret. Not I my Lord.
King. Then he dissiplies to shine 1 for by the Booke
He should have bran'd the East an houre ago,
Ablacke day will it be to somebody. Reselifes.
Ret. My Lord.

Ret. My Lord.

King. The Sun will not be feene to day,
The sky doth frome, and lowre you our Army,
I would thefe dewy teares were from the ground.
Not shine to day? Why, what is that to me
More then to Richmond? For the felfe-fome Heauen
That frownes on me, lookes fadly you him.

Euter Narfolke.

Nor. Arme, arme, my Lords the foe vanuts in the field.
King.. Come, buftle, buftle. Caparifon my horse.
Call vp Lord Scanley, bid him bring his power,
I will leade forth my Soldiers to the plaine,
And thus my Battell shal be ordeed.
My Foreward shall be drawne in length,
Consisting equally of Horse and Foots
Our Archets shall be placed in the midst;
Iohn Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Earle of Surrey,
Shall haus the leading of the Foot and Horse.
They thus directed, we will sllow

In the maine Battell, whole puillance on either fide Shall be well-winged with our cheefest Horse:
This, and Saint George to boote.
What think it thou Norfolke.

Nor. A good direction warlike Soueraigne, This found I on my Tent this Morning. Icokey of Norfolke, be not fo bold,

For Diskon thy maister w bought and fold. King. Aching deviled by the Enemy. Go Gentlemen, every man to his Charge, Let not our babling Dreames affright our foules: For Conscience is a word that Cowards vie, Desis'd at first to keepe the strong in awe, Our frong armes be our Conference, Swords our Law. March on, joyne brauely, let vs 100't pell mell, If not to heaven, then hand in hand to Hell. What shall I say more then I have inferr'd? Remember whom you are to cope withall, A fort of Vegabonds, Rafcals, and Ron-awayes, A form of Brittaines, and bafe Lackey Pezants, Whom their o're-cloyed Country vomits forth To desperate Adventures, and assur'd Destruction. You seeping safe, they bring you to vnrest: You having Lands, and blest with beauteous wives, They would restraine the one, distaine the other, And who doth leade them, but a paltry Fellow? Long kept in Britaine at our Mothers coft, A Milke-lop, one that never in his life Felt fo much cold, as over shooes in Snow: Les's whip these straglers o're the Seas againe, Lash hence these ouer-weening Ragges of France, These famish'd Beggers, weary of their lives, Who (but for dreaming on this fond exploit) For want of meanes (poore Rats) had hang'd themfelues. I fwe be conquered, let men conquer vs, And nor these bastard Britzines, whom our Fathers Have in their owns Land beaten, bobb'd, and thump'd, And on Record, left them the heires of shame. Shall these curry our Lands? lye with our Wines? Rauish our daughters! Drum of arre of Hearke, I heare their Drumme, Right Gentlemen of England, fight holdly yearnen, Draw Archers draw your Arrowes to the head, Spurre your provid Horses hard, and ride in blood, Amaze the welkin with your broken flaues.

What layes Lord Stanley, will he bring his power?

My. My Lord, he do th deny to come.

King. Off with his fonne Georges head.

Nor. My Lord, the Enemy is past the Mersh t

After the barralle, let George Stanley dye.

Retreat and Flourish. Enter Riebmond. Derby bearing the Crowne, with discres other Lords.

Richm. God, and your Armes
Be prais'd Victorious Friends;
The day is ours, the bloudy Dogge is dead.
Der. Couragious Richmond,
Well haft thou acquit thee: Loe,
Heere thefe long viurped Royalties,
From the dead Temples of this bloudy Wrerch,
Haue I pluck'd off, to grace thy Browes withall.
Weare it, and make much of it.

THE TROLOGUE.

Come no more to make you laugh, Things now,
Toat beare a Weighty, and a Serious Brow,
Such Noble Scanes, at draw the Eye to flow
We now present. Those that can Pitty, heere
May (if they I minke st well) let fall a Teare,
The Subject will desenue it. Such as give Their Maney out of hope they may believe.
May heere finde Truth too. Those that come to see
Onely a show or two, and so a gree,
The Play may passe: If they be still and wisling,
Ille undertake may see away their shilling
Richly in two short houres. Onely they
That come to heare a Merry, Baway Play,
A nogle of Targets: Or to see a Fellow
In along Moticy Coate, garded with Yellow,

Will be deceju'd. For gentle Hearers, know To ranke our chosen Truth with such a show As Foole, and Fight is, beside for seysing Our owne Braines, and the Opinion that we bring To make that onely true, we now intend, Will leave us never an under standing Friend. Enter the Dute of Norfolke at one doore. At the other, the Dute of Buckinghom, and the Lord Aburgaucusy.

Buckingham.

Ood morrow, and well met. How have ye done

The Since last we saw in France?

Norf Ithanke your Grace:
Healthfull, and euer fince a freih Admirer
Of what I faw there,

Buck. An entimely Ague Staid me a Personer in my Chamber, when Those Sunnes of Glory, those two Lights of Men Met in the vale of Andren.

Nor. Twist Guynes and Arde,
I was then prefent, law them falute on Horsebacke,
Beheld them when they lighted, how they clung
In their Embracement, as they grew together,
Which had they,
What foure Thron'd ones could have weigh'd

Such a compounded one?.

Buck. All the whole time
I was my Chambers Prifoner.

Nor. Then you loft The view of earthly glory : Men might fay Till this time Pompe was fingle, but now married To one about it felfe. Each following day Became the next dayes mafter, till the laft Made former Wonders, It's. To day the French, All Clinquant all in Gold, like Heathen Gods Shone downe the English; and to morrow, they Made Britaine, Iodia: Euery man that flood, Show dlike a Mine. Their Dwarfish Pages were As Cherubins, all gilt: the Madams too, Not vs'd to toyle, did almost sweat to beate The Pride vpon them, that their very labour Was to them, as a Painting. Now this Maske Was cry'de incompareable and thenfuing night Made it's Foole, and Begger. The two Kings Equall in luftre, were now beft, now worst As presence did present them Him in eye, Still him in praise, and being present both, Twas faid they faw but one, and no Difcemer Durst wagge his Tongue in centure, when these Sunnes (For so they phrase 'em) by their Heralds challeng'd The Noble Spirits to Armes, they did performe

Beyond thoughts Compalle, that former fabulous Storie Being now feene, possible enough, got credit That Boun was beleeu'd.

Bac. Ohyougo farre.

Nor. As I belong to worthip, and affect In Honor, Honefty, the trad of curry thing, Would by a good Discourser loose lone life, Which Adious selfe, was tongue too.

Buc. All was Royall, To the disposing of it bought rebell'd, Order gave each thing view. The Office did Diffinally his full Function : who did guide, I mesne who fet the Body, and the Limber

One certes, that promifes no Element La luch a busicelle.

Buc. I pray you who, my Lord!

Nor. All this was ordred by the good Discretion

Of the right Reverend Cardinali of Yorke.

Buc. The diugli speed him: No mans Pye is freed From bis Ambitious finger. What had be To do in these herce Vanities? I wonder, That such a Keech can with his very bulke Take vp the Rayes o'th'benefictall San, And keepe it from the Earth.

Nor. Surely Sir,

There's in him stuffe, that put's him to these ends: For being not propt by Auncestry, whose grace Chalkes Successors their way; nor call'd apon For high feats done to'th' Crowne; neither Allied To eminent Affiftants ; but Spider-like Out of his Selfe-drawing Web. O gives vs note, The force of his owne merit makes his way A guift that heaven gues for him, which buyes A place next to the King.

Abro. I cannot tell What Heaven hath given him: let fome Graue: eye Pierce into that, but I can fee his Pride Peepe through each part of him: whence ha's he that, If not from Hell? The Diuell is a Niggard, Or ha's given all before, and be begins

A new Hell in himselfe.

Buc. Why the Divell, Vpon this French going out, tooke he vpon lum (Without the printy o'th King) t'appoint Who should attend on him? He makes up the File Of all the Gentry; for the malt part fuch To whom as great a Charge, as little Honor He meane to lay upon ; and his owne Letter The Honourable Boord of Councell, our Must ferch him in, he Papers.

Abar. I do know Kinfmen of mine, three at the less, that have By this, fo licken'd their Effaces, that never They shall abound as formerly.

Buc. Omony Haue broke their backes with laying Mannors on 'em For this great Ioomey. What did this vanity But minister communication of A most pooreissue.

Nor. Greeningly I thinke, The Peace betweene the French and vs, not valewes The Cost that did conclude it.

Bre. Every man. After the hideous storme that follow'd, was

A thing Infpir'd, and not confulring broke Into a general! Propheter That this Tempete Dalbing the Garment of this Peace, aboaded The fodeine breach on't.

Zuc. Why all this Bulinette Our Reverend Cardinall carried, Nor. Like it your Grace,

The State takes notice of the private difference Betwixt you, and the Cardinall. I admie you (And take it from a heart, that wishes towards you Honor, and plenteous (afety) that you reade The Cardinals Malice, and his Potency Together; To confider further, that What his high Harred would effect, wants not A Minister in his Power. You know his Nature, That he's Revengefull; and I know, his Sword Hath a sharpeedge : It's long, and't may be saide It reaches farre, and where 'twill not extend, Thirber he daris it. Bolome vp my counsell, You'l finde it wholefome. Loe, where comes that Rock That I advice your shunning.

Enter Cardinal Wolfey, the Purfeborne before bom, arrists of the Guad, ordin Secretarin sub Popers . The Cardonal in hispassage, fixed bis eye on Buck-barn, and Bucking hom on burn but full of differe.

Co. The Duke of Euckingbams Surveyor Ha? Where's his Examination?

Ser. Heere lo please you Car. Is he in person, ready! Secr. 1, please your Grace.

Car. Well, we shall then know more, & Buckergham Shall leften this bigge looke.

Exerts Cardinall, and by Trane. Buc This Butchers Curre is venom'd-mouth'd, and I

Have not the power to muzzle him, therefore best Not wake him in his flumber. A Beggers booke, Our-worths a Nobles blood.

Nor. What are you chaff'd? Aske God for Temp'rance, that's th'appliance onely Which your difeafe requires.

Bue. I read in's looks Matter against me, and his eye reuil'd Me as his abie dobied, at this inftant He boresme with fome tricke; He's gone to'th King: He follow, and out-frare bim.

Nor. Stay my Lord, And let your Reason with your Choller question What 'tis you go about : to climbe fleepe hilles Requires flow pace at first. Anger is like A full hot Horse, who being allow d his way Selfe-mettle tyres him : Not a man in England Can aduise me like you: Be to your selfe, As you would to your Friend.

Heat not a Futnace for your foe so hot
That it do sindge your selfe. We may our-rume
By violent swistingse that which we run at;
And lose by our-running: know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor till run ore,
In steeming to augment it, wasts it, be adust d;
I say againe there is no English Soule
More stronger to direct you then your selfe;
If with the say of reason you would quench,
Or but allay the fire of passion.

Buck, Sir,
I am thankfull to you, and He goe along.
By your prescription: but this top-proud fellow,
Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but
From fincere motions, by Intelligence,
And proofes as cleere as Founts in Inf., when Wee see acb grane of grauell; I doe know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Norf. Say not treasonous.

Buck To th'King lie say's, &t make my vouch as strong as shore of Rocker attend. This holy Foxe, Or Wolfe, or both (for he is equall rau'nous As he is subtile, and as prone to mischiefe, As able to perform't) his minde, and place insecting one another, yea reciprocally, Only to shew his pompe, as well in France, As here at home, suggests the King our Master To this last costly Treasy: Th'enterview, That swallowed so much treasure, and like a glasse

Did breakenth'wrenching, Norf. Faith, and so it did.
Buck, Pray give me favour Sir: This cunning Cardinass

The Articles o'th' Combination drew As himselfe pleas'd; and they were ratified As he cride thus les be, to as much end, As give a Crutch to th'dead. But our Count-Cardinall Has done this, and tis well: for worthy Wolfer (Who rannoterre) he did it. Now this followes, (Which as I take it, is a kinde of Puppie To th'old dain Treason) Charles the Emperous, Vnder pretence to see the Queene his Aunt, (For twas indeed his colour, but he came To whilper Wolfer) here makes visitation, His feares were that the Interview betwist England and France, might through their amity Breed him fome presudier; for from this League, Peep'd harmes that mense'd him Privily Deales with our Cardinal, and as Ptros Which i doe well; for I am fure the Emperous Paid ere he promis'd, whereby his Suit was granted Ere it was ask'd. Bot when the way was made And pou'd with gold: the Emperor thus defir'd, That he would please to alter the Kings course, And breake the forefaid prace. Let the King know (As foone he shall by me) that thus the Cardinall Does buy and fell his Honour as he pleases, And for his owne advantage.

Norf. Tamforry
To hearethis of him; and could with he were Something militaken in c.
Buck. No not a fillable:

Buck. No not a fillable:

I doe pronounce him in that very thape
He shall appeare in proofe.

Enter Brandon, a Sorgeam at Atmes before him, and two or these of the Guard.

Brandon. Your Office Sergeant: execute it.

My Lord the Duke of Buckingham and Earle Of Hersfird Stafford and Northampton, I Arreft thee of High Treason, in the name Of our most Soueraigne King.

Buck. Lo you my Lord.
The net has faine upon me, I shall perish
Vinder deuice, and practifes

Bron. I am forry,
To fee you cane from liberty, to looke on
The busines present. The his Highnes pleasure
You shall to th' Tower

Buck, It will helpe me nothing
To plead mine Innocence; for that dye is on me
Which makes my whit if part, black. The will of Heat's
Bedone in this and all things: I obey.
O my Lord Aburgany: Fare you well.

Bran. Nay, he must be are you company. The King Is pleas'd you shall to the Tower, till you know How he determines further.

Abur. As the Duke faid.
The will of Heaven be done, and the Kings pleasure
By meobey'd.

Bran. Here is a warrant from
The King, tattach Lord Mountacute, and the Bodies
Of the Dukes Confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Pecke, his Councellour.

The Life of King Henry the Eight.

Kin. Lady mine proceed.

Queen, I am folicited not by a few,
And those of true condition. That your Subjects
Are in great grievance: There have beene Commissions
Sens downe among 'em, which hath flaw dethe heart
Of all their Loyalicis; wherein, although
My good Lord Cardmall, they vent reproches
Most bitterly on you, as putter on
Of these exactions, yet the King, our Masser (not Whose Honor Heaven shield from soile; even he escapes
Language vinnannerly; yea, such which breakes
The sides of loyalty, and almost appeares
In lowd Rebellion.

Norf. Not almost appeares, It doth appeares (or, vpon these Taxations, The Clothiers all not able to maintaine. The many to them longing, have put off. The Spinsters, Carders, Fullers, Weavers, who Vnsit for other life, compeld by hunger. And lack of other meanes, in despenate manner. Daring thewent too thiceth, are all in vproze, And danger serves among them.

Kin. Taxation?
Wherein? and what Taxation? My Lord Cardinall,
You that are blam'd for it alike with yz,
Know you of this Taxation?

Cord. Pleafe you Sir,
I know but of a fingle part in ought
Persaines to th'State; and from but in that File
Where others tell fleps with me.

Queen. No, my Lord?
You know no more then others? But you frame
Things that are knowne alike, which are not wholfome
To those which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions (Whereof my Soueraigne would have note) they are Most pessilent to th'hearing, and to beare 'em,
The Backe is Sacrifice to th'load; They say
They are deuis'd by you, er else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.

Km. Still Exaction: The nature of it, in what kinde let's know, Is this Exaction?

Queen. I am much too ventutous
In tempting of your patience, but am boldned
Vnder your promis'd pardon. The Subiects griefe
Comes through Commissions, which compels from each
The fixt part of his Substance, to be leuied
Without delay; and the pretence for this
Is nam'd, your warres in France: this makes bold mouths,
Tongues spir their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegeance in them; their cutses now
Llue where their prayers did and it's come to passe,
This tractable obedience is a Slane
To cach incensed Willi 1 would your Highnesse
Would give it quicke consideration; for
There is no primer basenesse.

Km. By my life, This is against our pleasure.

Card Andforme, I have no further gone to this, then by A fingle voice, and that not past me, but By learned approbation of the ludges: If I am Traduc'd by ignorant Toogues, which senther know My faculties not person, yet will be The Chronicles of my doing: Let me fay, Tis but the face of Place, and the rough Brake That Vertue must goe through : we mud not fine Our necellary actions, in the feare To cope maneious Cealurers, which ever, As rau nous Fishes doe a Vessell follow That is new trien'd; but benefit no further Then vainly longing. What we oft doe beft. By ficke laterpreters (once wesks once) is Not ours, or not allow'd; what worth, as oft Hitting a groffer quality, is cride up For our bell Ad i fiwe hall fland full, In feare our motion will be mock'd, or carp'd as, We should take roote here, where we be; Or fit State- Statues onely.

Kin Things done well,
And with a cate, exempt themfelves from feare:
Things done without example, in their iffue
Ate to be fear'd. Have you a Prefident
Of this Commission? I believe, not any.
We must not rend our Subitests from our Lawes,
And flicke them in our Will. Sixt part of each?
A trembling Contribution; why we take
From every Tree, lop, barke, and part o'th' Timber 1
And though we leave it with a roote thus backe,
The Ayre will drinke the Sap. To every County
Where this is question'd, fend our Letters, with Free pardon to each man that has deny'de
The force of this Commission: pray looke too't;
I put it to your care.

Card. A word with you.
Let there be Letters with to every Shire,
Of the Kings grace and pardon: the greeved Compacts
Hardly conceive of me. Let it be possed,
That through our Interceffion, this Resolvement
And pardon comes: I shall anon advise you
Further in the proceeding.

Exu Secree,

Euter Surveyor.
Queen. I can forty, that the Puke of Buckingbon
Is run in your displessore.

Kin. It grieves many : The Gentleman is Learn'd, and a most rare Speaker, To Nature none more bound; his crayning such, That he may furnish and instruct great Teachers, Andneuer fecke for ayd out of himfelfe: yet fee, When thele lo Noble benefits shall prone Not well dispos'd, the minde growing once corrupt, They turne to vicious formes, ten times more vgly Then ever they were faire. This man so compleat, Who was enrold mongst wonders; and when we Almost with rapish'd liftning, could not finde His houre of speech, a minute: He, (my Lady) Hath into monstrous habits put the Graces That once were his, and is become as blacke, As if beforear'd in hell. Sit by Vayou finall heare (This was his Gentleman in trust) of him Things to strike Honour sad. Bid him recount The fore-recited practifes, whereof We cannot feele too little, heare too much.

Card.

Card. Stand forth, & with bold Tpirit relate what you Moft like a carefull Subject have collected Out of the Duke of Bucking bam.

Kin. Speake freely.

Sur. First, it was vivall with him; every day It would infed his Speech: That if the King Should without iffue dye; hee'l carry it fo To make the Scepter his. Thefevery words l'ue heard him vitter to his Sonne in Law, Lord Aburgany, to whom by oth he menac'd Revenge vpon the Cardinall.

Card. Please your Highnesse note This dangerous conception in this point, Not frended by his with to your High person; His will is most malignant, and it stretches Beyond your oyour friends.

Queen. My learn'd Lord Cardinall,

Deliver all with Charity.

Kin. Speake ons

How grounded hee his Title to the Crowne Vpon our faile; to this poyne, haft thou heard him, At any time speake ought?

Sur. He was brought to this, By a value Prophetie of Nicholas Hemon. Kin. What was that Henten?

Sur. Sir, a Chartraux Fryet, His Confessor, who fed him every minute With words of Soueraignty.

Km. How know'st thou this?

Sur. Not long before your Hignesse sped to France, The Duke being at the Rose, within the Patish Saint Laurence Poultney, did of me demand What was the speech among the Londoners, Concerning the French Lourney. I replide, Men feare the French would proue perfidious To the Kings danger: presently, the Duke Said, twas the feare indeed, and that he doubted 'Twould prove the verity of certains words Spoke by a holy Monke, that oft, sayes he, Hach fenc to me, withing me to permit loba de la Car, my Chaplaine, a choyce howre To heare from him a marrer of some moment: Whom after under the Commissions Scale, He sollemnly had sworne, that what he spoke My Chaplaine to no Creature living, but To me, should vicer, with demure Confidence, This paulingly enfu'de; neither the King, nor's Heyres (Tell you the Dake) Chall prosper, bid him thrive To the love o'th' Commonsity, the Duke Shall governe England, Queen. If I know you well,

You were the Dukes Surveyor, and loft your Office On the complaint o'th' Tenants; take good need You charge not in your spleene a Noble person, And spoyle your nobler Soule; I say, take heed;

Yes, heartily befeech you.

Kin, Lechim on: Goe forward. Sur. On my Soule, He speake but truth. I told my Lord the Duke, by th Diaels illusions The Monke might be deceived, and that 'twas dangerous For this to ruminate on this fo farre, vutil It forg'd him some designe, which being beleeu'd It was much like to doe: Heanswer'd, Tush, It can doe me no damage; adding further, That had the King in his last Sicknesse faild, The Cardinals and Sir Thomas Bourls heads

Should have gone off.

Kin. Ha? What, so rancke? Ah, ha, There's mischiese in this man; canft show fay forther

Ser. I can my Liedge. Kin. Proceed.

Ser. Being at Greenwich,

After your Highnesse had reproved the Duke About Sir William Blumer (uant, Kin. I remember of fuch a time, being my fwom fer-The Dake retein'd him his, Bus on: what hence?

Sur. If (quoth he) I for this had beene committed, As to the Tower, I thought; I would have plaid The Part my Father meant to all vpon Th'V Surper Ruchard, who being at Salsbury, Made fast to come in's presence; which if granted, (As he made semblance of his duty) would Haue put his knife into him.

Kin. A Gyant Trayeor.

Card. Now Madam, may his Highnes liue in freedome, And this man out of Prison.

Queen. Godmendall. (fay'ft? Kin. Ther's fornthing more would out of thee; what Ser. After the Duke his Father, with the knife He stretch'd him, and with one hand on his dagger, Another spread on's breast, mounting his eyes, He did discharge a horrible Oath, whose tenor

Was, were he cuill vs'd he would outgoe His Father, by as much as a performance Do's an irresolute purpose.

Kim. There's his period, To theath his knife in vs : he is attach'd, Call him to present tryall: if he may Finde mercy in the Law, tis his; if none, Let him not feck't of vs : By day and night Hee's Traytor to th' height.

Scana Tertia.

Enter L. Chamberlame, and L. Sarlys. L. Cb. 1s's possible the spels of France should inggle Men into fuch ftrange myfteries?

L. San. New cultomes, Though they be never lo ridiculous,

(Nay let 'em be vumanly) yet are follow'd. L. Ch. As farre as I fee, all the good our English Haue got by the late Voyage, is but meerely A fit or two o'th' face, (but they are shrewd ones) For when they hold 'em, you would (weste directly Their very nofes had been Councellours

To Pepus or Clotharius, they keepe State So. L. San, They have all new legs, And lame ones ; one would rake it That neuer fee'em pace I close, the Spauco

A Spring-halt rain'd among ern. L. Cb. Death my Lord, Their cloathes are after fuch a Pagan cut too'c, That fure th'baue wome out Christen dome: how now? What newes, Six Thomas Least?

Enter Sir Thomas Louell. Lowell, Faith my Lord. I heare of none but the new Proclamation, That's clapt vpon the Court Gate.

L. Chan.

L. Cham, What li't for?

Lau The reformation of our travel'd Gillants, That fill the Court with quarrels, talke, and Taylors.

L. Cham I'm glad to there;
Now I would pray out Monfieurs
To thinke an English Courtiet may be wise,
And never see the Learne,

Lou. They must either
(For so run the Conditions) leave those tempinus

Of Foole and Feather, that they got in France, With all their honourable points of ignorance Pertaining thereunto; as Fights and Fire-workes, Abusing better men theo they can be Out of a forreigne wisedome, renouncing cleane The faith they have in Tennis and tall Stockings, Short blifted Breeches, and those types of Travell; And understand agains like honest men, Otpack to their old Playsellowes; there, I take it They may Cera Pranlegie, wee away

The lag end of their lewdnesse, and be laugh dat,
-L. San. Tis time to give 'em Physicke, their diseases

Are growne to catching.

L'Cham What a losse out Ladies Will have of these term vanities?

Louis. Imatry.

There will be woeindeed Lords, the flye whorfons Have got a fpeeding tricke to lay downle Ladies.
A French Song and a Fiddle, ha't no Fellow

L. Son The Divell fiddle em.

I am glad they are going,
For fure there in o converting of 'em. now
An honest Country Lord at I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plaine long,
And have an houre of hearing, and hy'r Lady
Held currant Musicketoo.

L. Cham. Well faid Lord Sands, Your Coles tooth is not cast yet? L. San. No my Lord, Nor shall not while I have a sturepe.

L. Cham. Six Thomas,
Whither were you a going?
Low To the Cardinals;
Your Lordflip is a guest too.

L Cham O, tis crue;
This night he makes a Supper, and a great one,
To many Lords and Ladies; there will be
The Beauty of this Kingdome Ile affore you.

Low. That Churchman

Betres a bounteous minde todeed,

Ahand as fruitfull as the Land that feeds vs,

His dewes fall every where.

L. Cham. No doubt hee's Noble; He had a blacke mouth that faid other of him. L. San He may my Lord,

Ha's wherewithall in him; Sparing would thew a worle finne, then ill Doctine, Men of his way, should be most liberall.

They are fet heere for examples.

L. Cham. True, they are fo;
But few now give fo great ones.

My Barge flayes;

Your Lordship shall along: Come, good Sit Thomas,
We shall be late else, which I would not be,
For I was spoke to, with Sit Herry Gulfford

This night to be Compttollers.

L. San. 1 am your Lordships.

Exeun:

Scena Quarta.

Hobones. A final Table wider a State for the Cardenal, a longer Table for the Guefts. Then Emer Ann Bulen, and desert when Lades & Genetionen as Gueft, as one Deers as an other twee rater so through Guilford.

S Hen, Godf Ladyes,
A generall welcome from his Grace
Salutes ye all; This Night he dedicates
Tofsire content, and you. Note heere he hope.
In all this Noble Beuy, has brought with her
One care abroad, hee would have all as merry:
As first, good Company, good wine, good welcome,
Can make good people.

Ener L. Chamberlaim L. Sands and Louil.
O my Lord, y'are taidy,
The very thought of this faire Company,
Clapt wings to me.
Cham You are young Sit Horry Coulford

San. Sit Thomas Land, had the Cardinall
But halfe my Lay-thoughts in him, fone of thefe
Should finde a running Banket, ere they refled,
I thinke would better pleafe 'em: by my life,
They are a fweet fociety of faire ones.

Los Othat your Lordship were bet now Confessor,

To one or two of thefe. San. I would I vere,

They should finde easie pennance.

Low Futh how easie?

San- As easie as a downe bed would affoord in Cham. Sweet Ladier will it please you fit, Sir Harry Plice you that fide, lle take the charge of this: His Grace is entring. Nay, you must not freeze, Two women plac'd together, makes cold weather My Lord Sand, you are one will keepe 'em waking: Pray sit between these Ladies.

See By my faith, And thanke your Lordship: by your leave sweet Ladies, Ist chance to talke a little wilde, for give one.

I had it from my Father.

An. Bul Was he mad Sir?

See. O very mad, exceeding mad, in love too;
Bothe would bite none, inflat I doe now,
He would Kiffe you T wenty with a breath.
Cham, Wellfaid my Lord:
So now y are fairely feared. Gutlemen,
The pennance I yes on you, if the fe faire Ladies
Paffe away frowning.

San. For my little Cure,

Let me alone.

Hobores. Enter Cardinal Wolfer, and takes his State.

Card Y'are welcome my faire Quests, that nobic Lady
Or Gentleman that is not freely merry
Is not my Friend. This to confirme my welcome,
And to you all good health.

Son. Your Grace is Noble,

Let me have such a Bowle may hold my thankes.

And save me so much talking.

Card. My Lord Sands, am beholding to you: cheere your neighbours: Ladies you are not merry; Gentlemen.

Whose fault is this?

San The red wine firft muft rife In their faire cheekes my Lord, then wee shall have 'em, Talke vs to filence.

An. B. You are a merry Gemiler

My Lord Sands.

San. Yes, if I make my play: Heer's to your Ladiship, and pledge it Madams For tis to fuch a thing.

An.B. You cannot shew me.

Drum and Trumpes, Chambers discharge. San. I told your Grace, they would talke anon. Card. What's that?

Cham. Looke out there, fome of ye.

Card. What warlike voyce,

And to what end is this? Nay, Ladles, feare not; By all the lawes of Warre y'are priviledg'd.

Enter a Servant.

Cam. How now, what is't? Sera. A noble troupe of Strangers, For fo they feeme; th'have left their Barge and landed And hither make, as great Embassadors From forraigne Princes

Card. Good Lord Chamberlaine, Go, gine 'en welcome; you can speake the French tongue And pray receive 'em Nobly, and conduct 'em Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty Shall thine at full upon them. Some attend him-All rife, and Tables remort d.

You have now a broken Banker, but wee'l mend it. A good digestion to you all; and once more I thowre a welcome on yee: welcome all.

Hoboycs. Enter King and others as Markers, habited like Shopbeards, ofher'd by the Lord Chamberlaine. They passe directly before the Cardinall, and gracefully sa-

A noble Company: what are their pleasures? Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they praid To tell your Grace: That bauing heard by fame Of this to Noble and to fatte affembly, This night to meet heere they could doe no leffe, (Out of the great respect they beare to beauty)
But leave their Flockes, and vnder your faire Conduct

Crave leave to view these Ladies, and entreat An houre of Reuels with 'em.

Card. Say, Lord Chamberlaine, They have done my poore house grace: For which I pay em a thouland thankes,

And pray 'em take their pleasures. Choose Ladies, King and An Bullon. King The fairest hand I ever touch'de O Beauty, Till now I neuer knew thee.

Muficke, Dane.

Card. My Lord.

Cham. Your Grace.
Card. Pray tell 'em thus much from mes There should be one amongst'em by his person More worthy this place then my felfe, to whom (If I but knew him) with my loue and dury would furrender it. Whilper.

Cham I will my Lord. Card. What fay they ?

Cham. Such some, they all confesse There is indeed, which they would have your Grace Find out, and he will take it. Card. Let me fee then,

By all your good leaves Gentlemen; heere He malte My royall choyce.

Kin. Ye have found him Cardinall, Youhold a faire Affembly; you doe well Lord: You are a Churchman, or He tell you Cardinall, I should indge now vnhappily.

Card. I am glad Your Grace is growne so pleasant.

Kin. My Lord Chamberlaine, Prothee come hither, what faire Ladie's that?

Cham, An't please your Grace, Sir Thomas Bulkens Daughter, the Viscount Rochford,

One of her Highnesse women. Kin. By Heaven the is a dainty one, Sweet heart, were vamannerly to take you out, And not to kille you. A health Gentlemen,

Let it goe round. Card. Sir Thomas Louell, is the Banket ready

I'th' Privy Chamber?
Low, Yes, my Lord.
Card. Your Grace

I feare, with dancing is a little heated,

Km. I feare too much. Card. There's fresher agre my Lord,

In the next Chamber.

Kin, Lead in your Ladies eu'ry one : Sweet Partner, I must not yet forsake you: Let's be merry, Good my Lord Cardinall: I have halfe a dozen healths. To drinke to these faire Ladies, and a measure To lead 'em once againe, and then let's dreame Who's best in fauour, Let the Musicke knock it.

Execute with Trumpets.

Actus Secundus, Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen at Severall Doores.

1. Whether away fo faft?

2. O, God faue yer

Eu'n to the Hall, to heare what Chall become Of the great Duke of Buckingham.

1. lle saue you That labour Sir. All's now done but the Ceremony Of bringing backe the Prisoner.

3. Were you there?

z. Yes indeed was I.

2. Pray speake what ha's happen'd.

1. You may guesse quickly what.
2. Is he found guilty?

z. Yes truely is he,

And condemn'd vpen's 2. I am forty fort.

1. So are a number more.

2. But pray how past it? t. He tell you in a little. The great Duke Came to the Bar; where, to his accusetions He pleaded fill not guilty, and alleadged Many sharpe reasons to descatthe Laws. The Kings Acturney on the contrary, Vrg'd on the Examinations, process, confessions

DI

Of dluers witneffes, which the Duke defie'd To him brought when were to his face; As which appear'd against him, his Surveyor Sir Gilbers Pecke his Chancellour, and John Car, Confessor to him, with that Dluell Monke, Hopkins, that made this mischiefe.

2 That was hee

That fed him with his Prophecies.

1. The faine,

All these accused him strongly, which he faine Would have flung from him; but indeed he couldnot; And so his Pecres vpon this euidence, Haue found him guilty of high Treason. Much He spake, and learnedly for life : But all Was either pittied in him, or forgotten.

2. After all this, how did he beare himselfe? x. When he was brought agen to th' Bar, to heare His Knell rung out, his ludgement, he was flir'd With fuch an Agony, he (weat extreamly, And fomshing spoke in choller, ill, and haffy:

But he fell to himfelfe againe, and fweetly, In all the rest shew'd a most Noble patience. 2. I doe not thinke he feares death.

1. Sute he does not,

He neuer was fo womanish, the cause He may a little grieue at.

2. Certainly,

The Cardinall is the end of this.

t. Tis likely, By all contectures: First Kildarn Attendure; Then Deputy of Iteland, who remou'd Earle Surrey, was fent thither, and in half too, Least he should helpe his Father.

2. That tricke of State Was a deepe envious one,

r. At his teturne, No doubt he will requite it; this is noted (And generally) who ever the King favours, The Cardnall instantly will finde imployment, And farreenough from Court too.

2. All the Commons Hate him perniciously, and o' my Conscience With him ten faddom deepe: This Duke as much They loue and doate on: call him bounteous Buchmgham, The Mirror of all courtelie.

Enser Buckinghem from hu Arraignment, Tipflaves before bim, the Axe with rice edge towards bim. Halberds on each Ede, accompanied with Sir Thomas Louell, Sir Nicholas Venn, Sir Walter Sands, and common people, &c.

1. Stay there Sir,

And fee the noble ruin'd man you speake of.

2. Let's frand close and beholdhim, Buck All good people, You that thus force have come to pitty me; Heate what I fay, and then goe home and infe me. I have this day receiv'd a Traitors judgement, And by that name must dye; yet Heaven beere witnes, And if I have a Conscience, let it fincke me, Euen as the Axe falls, if I be not falthfull. The Law I beare no mallice for my death, T'has done voon the premiles, but Justice: But those that sought it, I could with more Christians: (Be what they will) I heartly forgive em; Yet let 'em looke they glory not in mischiefe;

Nor build their tuils on the groves of groat men ; For then, my guildeffe blood must cry against 'em For farther life in this world I we're hope, Nor will I fue, all hough the King have mercies More then I dare make faulte. You few that lou'd me, And dere be bold to weepe for Buching bam, His Noble Friends and Fellower; whom to leave In only bitter to him, only dying : Goe with me like good Angels to my end, And as the long disorce of Steele falson me, Make of your Prayers one (weer Sacrifice, And lift my Soule to Heaven. Lead on a Gods name,

Louell. I doe beseech your Grace, for charity If ever any malice in your bears

Buck, Sir Thomas Lourd, I as free forgive you

Were hid sgain? me, now to forgive me frankly.

As I would be forgiven : I forgive all. There cannot be those numberielle offences Gainst me, that I cannot take peace with: No blacke Enuy fhall make my Grave, Commend mee to his Grace: And if he speake of Bucking haw; pray well him, You met him halfe in Heauen: my vower and prayers Yet are the Kings; and till my Soule for fake. Shall cry for bleffings on him. May be live Longer then I have time to tell his yeares; Euer belou'd and louing, may his Role be; And when old Time shall lead him to his end, Goodnesse and he, fill up one Monument.

Lan. To th' water fide I must conduct your Grace. Then glue my Charge up to Sir Niebelas Umix,

Who undertakes you to your end.

Vaux. Prepare there, The Duke is comming. See the Barge be ready; And fit it with fuch furniture as fuites The Greatnesse ofhis Person.

Buck. Nay, Six Nicholas, Let it alone, my State now will but mocke me. When I came hither, I was Lord High Conflable, And Duke of Buckingham . now poore Edward Bakes, Yet I am richer then my base Accusers, That never knew what Truth meant: I now feele it; And with that blond will make 'em one day groans for't My noble Father Henry of Buckingben. Who first rais'd head against Viurping Richard, Flying for fuccour to his Serunt Danifler, Being diffrest; wet by that wretch betraid, And without Tryatl, fell; Gods peace be with him. Henry the Seaventh succeeding, truly pittying My Fathers loffe; like a most Royell Prince Reftor'd me to my Honours : and out of ruines Made my Name once more Noble. Now his Soane, Hory the Eight, Life, Honour, Name and all That made me happy; at one ftroske ha's taken For ever from the World. I had my Tryail, And must needs say a Noble one; which makes me A little happier then my wretched Father: Yet thus forre we are one in Fortunes; bach Fell by our Secuents, by chole Men we lou'd moil A most vnnarurall and faithlesse Seruice. Heaven ha's an end in all: yet, you that heave me, This from a dying man receive as certaine

Where you are liberall of your loues and Councels,

Be fare you be not loofe; for thate you make friends

And give your hearts to; when they once perceive The least rub in your fortunes, fall away Like water from ye, neuer found againe But where they meane to finke ye: all good people Pray for me, I must now forfake ye, the last houre Of my long weary life is come vpon me: Farewell; and when you would lay fomthing that is fad, Speake how I fell. I have done; and God forgive me.

Excust Duke and Trame.

1. O, this is full of pitty; Sir, it cals I feare, too many curies on their heads That were the Authors.

2. If the Duke be guiltleffe, Tis full of woe: yet I can grue you inchling Of an enfung evill, if it fall, Greater then this

1. Good Angels keepe it from vs: What may it ber you doe not doubt my faith Sir?

2. This Sceret is so weighty, twill require A frong faith to conceale it.

1: Let me have it : I doe not talke much.

2. I am confident; You shall Sir: Did you not of late dayes beare A buzzing of a Separation Betweene the King and Raberme?

t. Yes, hut it held not; For when the King once heard it, out of anger He fent command to the Lord Mayor Braight To flop the rumor; and allay those tongues That durst disperse it

2. But that flander Sit, Is found a truth now: for it growes agen Fresher then e'reit was; and held for certaine The King will venture at it Either the Cardinall, Or some about him neers, have out of malice To the good Queene, possest him with a scruple That will undoe her: To confirme this too, Cardinall Campenus is arriv'd, and lately, As all thinke for this bufines.

1. Tis the Cardinall; And meerely to revenge him on the Emperour, For not beflowing on him at his asking, The Archbishopeteke of Toledo, this is purpos'd.

2. Ithinke You have hit the marke; but is't not cruell, That the should feele the smart of this : the Cardinall Will have his will, and the must fall.

t. Tis wofull. Wee are too open heere to argue this: Let's thinke in private more-Excum.

Scena Secunda.

Emer Lord Chamberlame, reading the Letter.

They were young and handforme, and of the best breed in the T Lord, the Horses your Lordhip sens for, with all the North When they were ready to fet out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinalls , by Commission , and mane power tooks em from me, with the reason bu maifter would bee feru dbefore a Subject, if not before the King, which deur mouthes I feare he will indeede ; well, let him haue them; bee will have all I thinke.

Enter to the Lord Chamberlame, the Dukes of Norfolke and Suffolke.

Norf. Well met my Lord Chamberlaine. Cham. Good day to both your Graces. Suff. How is the King imployed? Cham. I left him priuate,

Full of fed thoughts and troubles. Norf. What's the cause?

Cham, It secmes the Marriage with his Brothers Wife

Ha's crept too neere his Conscience. Suff. No, his Conscience

Ha's crept too neere another Ladie. Norf. Tis fo;

This is the Cardinals doing: The King-Cardinall. That blinde Prieff, like the eldeft Senne of Fortune, Turnes what he lift. The King will know him one day. suff. Pray God he doe, Hee'l neuer know himselfe elle.

Norf. How holely he workes in all his bufineffe, And with what zeale? For now he has crackt the League Between vs & the Emperor (the Queens great Nephew) He dives into the Kings Soule, and there scatters Dangers, doubts, wringing of the Confesence, Feares, and despaires, and all these for his Marriage. And out of all thefe, to restore the King, He counsels a Divorce, a losse of her That like a lewell, ha's hung twenty yeares About his necke, yet never loft her luftre; Of her that loves him with that excellence, That Angels love good men with: Even of her, That when the greatest stroake of Fortune falls
Will blessethe King: and is not this course pious?

Cham. Heaven keep me from fuch councel: 113 most true These newes are every where every tongue speaks 'em, And every true heart weepes for't. All that date Looke into these affaires, see this main end, The French Kings Sister Heaven will one day open The Kings eyes, that to long have flept vpon This bold bad man.

Suff. And free vs from his flavery. Norf. We had need pray, And heartily, for our deliverance; Or this imperious man will worke vs all From Princes into Pages: all mens honours Liclike one lumpe before him, to be fashion'd Into what pitch he pleafe.

Suff. For me, my Lords, I love him not, not feate him, there's my Creede: As I am made without him, so He stand If the King please : his Carles and his bleffings Touch me alike: th'are breath I not beleeve in-I knew him, and I know him: fo I leave him To him that made him proud; the Pope.

Norf. Let's in; And with some other busines, put the King From the fe fad thoughts, that work too much voon him: My Lord, youle beare vs company?
Cham Excuse me,

The King ha's fent me otherwhere: Belides You'l finde a most vofit time to distutbe him: Health to your Lordships.

The Life of King Henry the Eight.

Norfolks. Thankes my good Lord Chamberlaine. Basis Lord Chamberlains, and the King drawes the Cortains and fits reading penfinety.

Suff. How lad helookes; lure he is much afflicted. Kin, Who's there? Ha?

Norff. Pray God he be not angry. Kin. Who's there I say? How dare you thrust your Into my private Meditations?

Who am 1? Ha?

Norff. A gracious King, that pardons all offences Malice ne're meant : Our breach of Duty this way. Is businesse of Estate; in which, we come To know your Royall pleasure, Rin. Ye are too bold:

Go too; He make ye know your times of bulinelle : Is this an howre for temporall affaires? Ha?

Enter Wolfer and Cumperus with a Commission. Who's there? my good Lord Cardinall? Omy Walfer, The quiet of my wounded Conscience; Thou art a cure fit for a King; you'r welcome Most learned Reverend Sir, iato our Kingdome. Vie vs, and it: My good Lord, have great care, I be not found a Talker.

Wd. Sir, you cannot; I would your Grace would give vs but an boore Of private conference.

Kin. Weare buhes goe. Neeff. This Priest ba's ao pride in him? Suff. Not to speake of: I would not be fo ficke though for his place: Bur this cannot continue.

Norff. If it doe, lle venture one; haue at bim. Suff. I another .

Exeunt Norfolke and Suffolke. Wol. Your Grace ha's gruen a Prefident of wifedome Aboue all Princes, in committing freely Your scruple to the voyce of Christendome: Who can be angry now? What Entry reach you! The Spaniard tide by blood and favour to her Must now confesse, if they have any goodnesse, The Tryall, iust and Noble. All the Clerkes, (I meane the learned ooes in Christian Kingdomes) Haue their free voyees. Rome (the Nurle of Judgement) Inuited by your Noble felfe, hath fent One generall Tongue vato vs. This good man, This iuft and learned Pricit, Cardnall Campeius, Whom once more, I prefent vuto your Highnesse.

Kin. And once more in mine armes I bid him welcome, And thanke the holy Conclave for their loves, They have fent me fuch a Man, I would have wish'd for. Cam. Your Grace could needs deferue all ftrangers loues, You are so Noble: To your Highnesse hand I tender my Commission; by whose vertue, The Court of Rome commanding. You my Lord Cardinall of Torke, are loyn'd with me their Seruant, In the unpartiall judging of this Bufineffe.

Km. Two equals men : The Queene shall be acquain-Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner? Wel. I know your Maiesty, ha's alwayes lou'd ber So deare in heart, not to deny her that

A Woman of leffe Place might aske by Law; Schollers allow'd freely to argue for her:

Kin. I, and the best she shall have; and my fauour To him that does best, God forbid els: Cardinall, Prethee eall Gardinar to me, my new Secretary. I find him a fit fellow, Emer Gardwer.

Wol. Yes, he was.

Comp. Was he not held a learned man f

Wol Yes lurely.

Camp. Beleeue me, there's an ill opinion spread then, Euen of your felfe Lord Cardinall

Wd. How? of me?

Camp They will not ficke to fay, you emide him; And fearing he would rife (he was fo vertuous) Kept him a forraigne manstill, which so greet'd bim, That he ran med, and dide.

Wal. Heav'ns peace be with him: That's Christian care enough : for living Marmurers, There's places of rebuke. He was a Foole; For he would needs be vertuous. That good Fellow, If I command him followes my appointment, I will have none so neere els. Learne this Brother, We live not to be grip'd by meaner perfons.

Kin. Deliuer this with modefly toth Queene.

Ex 11 Garder.

The most convenient place, that I can thinke of For fuch receipt of Learning, is Black-Fryers: There ye shall meere about this waighty business. My Wolfey, fee it furnish'd, Omy Lord, Would it not grieve an able man to leave So sweet a Bedsellow? But Conscience, Conscience; O 'tis a render place, and I must leave her.

Scena Tertia.

Ester Aum Bullen, and an old Lady.

An. Not for that neither; here's the pang that placher His Highnesse, having liv'd so long with her, and stre So good a Lady, that no Tongue could ever Pronounce dishonour of her; by my life, She never knew harme-doing: Oh, now after So many courses of the Sun enthroaned, Still growing in a Maiesty and pompe, the which To leave, a thouland fold more bitter, then 'Tis fweet at first l'acquire After this Processe. To give her the auaunt, it is a pitty Would moue a Monfler.

Old La. Hearts of most hard temper Melt and lament for her.

An. Oh Gods will, much better She ne're had knowne pompe; though't be temporall, Yet if that quarrell Fortune, do diuorce It from the bearer, 'tis a fufferance, panging As foule and bodies feuering.

OUL. Alas poore Lady, Shee's a ftranger now againe.

An. So much the more Must piery drop vpon her; verily I (weare, tis better to be lowly borne,

And

And range with humble livers in Content, Then to be perk'd vp in a glifting griefe,

And weare a golden forrow.

Old L. Our content Is our best having.

Ame: By my troth, and Maidenhead, I would not be a Queene. Old.L. Beshrewme, I would, And venture Maidenhead for's, and so would you For all this spice of your Hipocrise: You that have to faire parts of Woman on you, Haue (100) a Womansheart, which ever yet Affected Eminence, Wealth, Soveraignty Which, to fay footh, are Bleffings; and which guifes (Sauing your mincing) the capacity
Of your fost Chiuerell Conscience, would receive, If you might please to firetch it Anne. Nay, good troth.

Old L. Yes troth, & troth; you would not be a Queen? Anne. No, not for all the riches under Heaven. Old. L. Tis strange; a threepence bow'd would hire me

Old as I sm, to Queene it : but I pray you, What thinke you of a Durchesse? Have you limbs

Tobeare that load of Title?

Au. No in truth.

Old. L Then you are weakly made; plucke off a little, I would not be a young Count in your way, For more then blufhing comes to: If your backe Cannot vouchsafe this burthen, tis too weake

Euer to get a Boy.

An. How you doe talke; I fweare againe, I would not be a Queene,

For all the world:

Oil. L. In faith, for little England You'ld venture an emballing : I my felle Would for Camarumshire, although there long'd No more to th' Crowne but that : Lo, who comes here !

Enter Lord Chamberlaine. (know L. Cham. Good motrow Ladies; what wer't worth to The feerer of your conference?

Au. My good Lord, Not your demand; it values not your asking: Our Milfris Sorrowes we were pittying.

Cham. It was a gentle businesse, and becomming The action of good women, there is hope All will be well.

An. Now I pray God, Amen.

Cham, You beare a gentle minde, & heavinly bleffings Follow fuch Creatures That you may, faire Lady Perceive I speake fincerely, and high notes Tanc of your many vertues; the Kings Wisiesty Commends his good opinion of you, to you; and Doe's purpose honour to you no lesse flowing Then Marchionelle of Pembreote; to which Title, A Thousand pound a yeare, Annuall support, Out of his Grace, he addes.

An I doe not know What kinde of my obedience, I should tender; More then my All, is Nothing: Nor my Prayers Are not words duely hallowed; nor my Wilhes More worth, then empty vanities: yer Prayers & Wishes Are all I can returne. Beseach your Lordship, Vouchfafe to speake my thankes, and my obedience, As from a blushing Handmaid, to his Highnesse; Whose health and Royalty I pray for.

I fhell not falle t'approve the faire conceit The King hath of you. I have perus dher well, Beauty and Honour in her are so mingled, That they have caught the King : and who knowes yet But from this Lady, may proceed a lemme. To lighten all this He. I'le to the King, And lay I spoke with you.

Exit Lord Chamberlaine.

An. My honour'd Lord. Old L. Why this it is : See, fee, I have beene begging fixteene yeares in Court (Am yet a Courtier beggetly) nor could Come pat betwist too early, and too late For any fuit of pounds: and you, (oh fate)
A very fresh Fish heere; fye, sye, sye vpon This compel'd fortune: have your mouth fild vp. Before you open it.

An. This is strange to me.

Old L. Howtofts it? Is it bitter? Forty pence, no: There was a Lady once (tis an old Story That would not be a Queene, that would the not For all the mud in Egypt; have you heard it?

An. Come you are pleasant. Old. L. With your I beame, I could O're-mount the Laike: The Marchioneffe of Fembrooker A thousand pounds a yeare, for pure tesped? No other obligation? by my Life, That promifes mo thousands: Honours traine Is longer then his fore-skirt; by this time I know your backe will beare a Dutcheffe, Say, Are you not fironger then you were?

An. Good Lady, Make your felfe mirth with your particular fancy, And leave me out on't. Would I had no being If this falute my blood a lot; it faints me Tothinke what followes.

goes about the Cours, comes to the King, and kneeles at his Feese. Then speakes.

Sir, I defire you do me Right and Iuflice, And to bestow your pitry on me; for I am a most poore Woman, and a Stranger, Borne out of your Dominions : having heere No ludge indifferent, nor no more a flurance Of equall Friendship and Proceeding. Alas Sir In what have I offended you? What caule Hath my behaulour given to your displeasure, That thus you should proceede to put me off. And take your good Grace from me? Hezuen witnesse, I have bene to you, a true and humble Wife, At all times to your will conformable: Euer in feare to kindle your Diflike, Yea, fubica to your Countenance: Glad, or forty, As I faw it inclin'd? When was the house I ever contradicted your Defire? Ormade it not mine too? Or which of your Friends Have I not stroug to love, although I knew He were mine Enemy? What Friend of mine, That had to him deriu'd your Anger, did ! Continue in my Liking? Nay, gaue notice He was from hence discharg'd? Sir, call to minde, That I have beene your Wife, in this Obedience, Vpward of twenty yeares, and have bene bleft With many Children by you. If in the course And processe of this time, you can report, And proue it too, against mine Honor, aught; My bond to Wedlocke, or my Loue and Dutie Against your Sacred Person; in Gods name Turne me away: and let the fowl'st Contempt Shut doore vpon me, and lo give me vp To the sharp's kinde of Iustice. Please you, Sir, The King your Father, was reputed for A Prince most Prudent; of an excellent And vamarch'd Wit, and Judgement. Ferdinand My Father, King of Spaine, was reckon'd one The wifell Prince, that there had reign'd, by many A yeare before. It is not to be question'd, That they had gather'd a wife Councell to them Of every Realme, that did debate this Bufinelle, Who deem'd our Marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly Befeech you Sir, to spare me, till I may Be by my Friends in Spaine, aduis'd; whose Counsaile I will implore. If not, i'th'name of God Your pleasure be fulfill'd. Wal. You have heere Lady.

Wol. You have heere Lady,
(And of your choice) the Reverend Fathers, men
Of fingular Integrity, and Learning;
Yea, the elect o'th Land, who are affembled
To pleade your Cause. It shall be therefore bootiesse,

That longer you define the Court, as well For your owne quiet, as to reftifie What is unfeiled in the King

Camp His Grace
Hath Spoken well, and justly: Therefore Madam,
It's fitchis Royall Session do proceed,
And that (without delay) their Arguments
Be now produc'd, and heard.

On. Lord Cardinall, to you I speake. Wol. Your pleasure, Madam.

On Sir, I am about to weepe; but thinking that Weare a Queene (or long have dream'd fo) certaine. The daughter of a King, my drops of teares, lle turne to sparkes of fire.

Wel, Be patient yet.

Qu. 1 will, when you are humble; Ney before,
Or God will punish me. 1 do beleeue
(Indue'd by potent Circumflances) that
You are mine Enemy, and make my Challenge,
You shall not be my Judge. For it is you
Haue blowne this Coale, betwint my Lord, and me;
(Which Gods dew quench) therefore, I say againe,
I viterly abhorre; yes, from my Soule
Refuse you for my Judge, whom yet once more
I hold my most malicious Foe, and thinke not
At all a Friend to truth.

Wel. I do profeste

You speake not like your selfe : who everyer Haue flood to Charity, and displayd th'effects Of disposition gentle, and of wisedome, Ore-topping womans powre. Madam, you do me wrong I have no Spleene against you, nor injustice For you, or any : how farre I have proceeded, Or how farre further (Shall) is warranted By a Commillion from the Confidence. Yea, the whole Confistorie of Rome. You charge me, That I have blowne this Coale: I do deny it, The King is prefent: If it be knowne to him, That I gainfay my Deed, how may he wound, And worthily my Falsehood, yea, as much As you have done my Truth, Ifhe know That I am free of your Report, he knowes I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him It lies to cure me, and the Cure is to Remove these Thoughes from you. The which before His Highnesseshall speake in, I do befeech You(gracious Madam) to unthinke your speaking, And to fay to no more.

Queen. My Lord, my Lord,

I am a simple woman, much too weake T'or pofe your cunning. Y'are meek, & humble-mouth'd You figne your Place, and Calling, in full feeming, With Meekenesse and Humilitie: but your Hear: Is cramm'd with Arrogancie, Spleene, and Pride. You have by Fortune, and his Highnesse favors, Gone flightly o're lowe steppes, and now are mounted Where Powres are your Retainers, and your words (Domeflickes to you) serue your will, as't please Your selfe pronounce their Office. I must rell you, You tender more your persons Honor, then Your high profession Spirituals. That agen I do refule you for my Judge, and heere Before you all, Appeale vnto the Pope, To bring my whole Cause fore his Holinelle, And to be judg'd by him.

She Curties to the King, and offers to depart.

That man i'th' world, who fhall report he ha's
A better Wife, let him in naught be trufted,
For speaking false in that; thou art alone
(If thy tare qualities, sweet gentlenesse,
Thy mecknesse said like, Wife-like Gouernment,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Soweralgne and Pious els, could speake thee out)
The Queene of earthly Queenes: Shee's Noble borne;
And like her true Nobility, the ha's
Carried her selfe towards me,

Wol. Most gracious Sir,
In humblest manner I require your Highnes,
That it shall please you to declare in hearing
Ofall these eares (for where I am tob d and bound,
Theremust I be valoos'd, although not these
At once, and fully satisfide) whether ever I Did broach this busines to your Highnes, or Laid any scruple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on toor ever
Have to you, but with thankes to God for such A Royall Lady, spake onc, the least word that might Beto the presudice of her present State,
Or touch of her good Person?

Ria. My Lord Cardinall,
I doe excuse you; yea, vpon mine Honour,
I free you from't: You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so; but like to Viliage Curres,
Barke when their fellowes doe By some of these
The Queene is put in anger; y'are excus'd:
But will you be more infliste? You ever
Hane wish'd the steeping of this busines, never defir'd
It to be stir'd; but oft have hindied, off
Thepass gas made toward it; on my Honour,
I speake my good Lord Cardnall, to this point;
And thus farre cleare him.

Now, what mou'd me too't,
I will be bold with time and your attention:
Then marke th'inducement. Thus it came; give heede
My Confetence first receiv'd a tendernes,
Scruple, and pricke, on certaine Speeches vtter'd
By th' Bishop of Baron, then French Embassador,
Who had beene hither, sent on the debating
And Matriage't wixt the Duke of Orloanse, and
Our Daughter Mary'. I'th' Progresse of this busines,
Ere a determinate resolution, hee
(I meane the Bishop) did require a respite,
Whether our Daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our Matriage with the Dowager,
Sometimes our Brothers Wise. This tespite shooke

The bosome of my Conscience, enter'd me; Yea, with a spitting power and made to tremble The region of my Bread, which forc'd luch way, That many maz'd confiderings, did throng And preft in with this Caucion. First, me thought I flood not in the smile of Heaven, who had Commanded Nature, that my Ladies wombe If it conceiu'd a male-child by me, should Doeno more Offices of life too't; then The Grave does to th' dead: For her Male Iffue, Or dide where they were made, or shortly after This world had syt'd them. Hence I tooke a thought, This was a Judgement on me, that my Kingdome Well worthy the bell Heyre o'th' World) fhould not Be gladded in't by me. Then followes, that I weigh'd the danger which my Real mes flood in By this my I flues faile, and that gaue to me Many a groaning throw: thus hulling in The wild Sea of my Confeience, I did Reere Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present licere together: that's to say, I means to rectific my Conscience, which I then did seele full licke, and yecnot well, By all the Reverend Fathers of the Land, And Dodors learn'd. Firft I began in private, With you my Lord of Lincolne; you remember How under my oppression I did sceke When I first mou'd you.

B. Lim. Very well my Liedge, Kin 1 have looke long, be pleas'd your felfe to fay How farre you lansfide me.

Lin. So please your Highnes,
The question did at first so stagger me,
Bearing a State of mighty moment int.
And consequence of dread, that I committed
The daringst Counsaile which I had to doubt,
And did entrease your Highnes to this coutse,
Which you are running heere.

Kin. I then mou'd you,

My Lord of Cauterbury, and got your leave

To make this prefent Summons vnfolicited.

I left no Reuerend Person in this Court;

But by particular consent proceeded

Vnder your hands and Seales; therefore goe on,

For no disther'th' world against the person

Of the good Queene; but the sharpe thorny points

Of my alleadged reasons, drives this forward:

Proue but our Marriage lawfull, by my Life

And Kingly Dignity, we are contented

To weare our mortall State to come, with her,

(Katherine our Queene) before the primess Creature

That's Parragon'd o'th' World

Camp. So please your Highnes,
The Queene being absent, it is a needfull strees,
That we advoume this Court cill further day;
Meane while, and the earnest motion
Made to the Queene to call backeher Appeale
She intends vato his Holimesse.

Kin. I may perceive
These Cardinals trifle with me: I abhorre
This dilatory floth, and trickes of Rome.
My learn'd and welbeloued Servanc Cramer,
Prethee returne, with thy approach: I know,
My comfort comes along: breake up the Cours;
I (ay, set on.

Suf. Which of the Peeres Haue vncontemn'd gone by him, or at least Strangely neglected? When did he regard The stampe of Noblenesse in any person Out of himselfe?

Cham. My Lords, you speake your pleasures: What he deferoes of you and me, I know: What we can do to him (though now the time Giver way to vs) I much fearc. If you cannot Barra his accesse to'th'King, never attemp Any thing on him : for he hath a Witchcraft Ouer the King in's Tongue.

Nor. O feare him not, His spell in that is out : the King hath found Matter against him, that for ever marres The Hony of his Language. No, he's lealed (Not to come off) in his displeasure.

Ser. Sir,

I should be glad to heare such Newes as this Once every houre.

Nor. Belezue it, this is true. In the Dinorce, his contrarie proceedings Are all vafolded: wherein be appeares. As I would with mine Enemy.

Ser. How come His practiles to light?

Suf. Most frangely. Sur. O how? how ?

Suf. The Cardinals Letters to the Pope milestried,

And came to th'eye o th'King, whetein was read How that the Cardinall did increat his Holine Ce To flay the ludgement o'th Divorce; for if It did take place, I do (quoth be) perceive My King is rangled in affectiou, to A Creature of the Queenes, Lady Anne Enler, Sur. Ha's the King this?

Suf. Belceue ic.

Sur. Will this worke?

Chair. The King in this perceives him, how he coasts And hedges his owne way. But in this point, All his trickes founder, and he brings his Physicke After his Potients death; the King already Hath married the faire Lady.

Sur. Would he had.

Suf. May you be happy in your wish my Lord, For I prefesseyou have it.

Ser. Now all my joy Trace the Conjuntion.

Suf. My Amen too't.

Nor. All mens.

Suf. There's order given for her Coronstion: Matry this is yet but youg, and may be left To some eares vnrecounted. But my Lords She is a gallant Creature, and compleate In minde and feature. I perswade me, from her Will fall fome bleffing to this Land, which shall In it be memoriz'd.

Sur. But will the King Digest this Letter of the Cardinals? The Lord forbid

Nor. Matry Amen. Suf. Nono:

There be moe Waspes that buz about his Nose, Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinall Campeum, Is (tolne away to Rome, hath 'tane no leave, Ha's left the cause o'th'King vnhandled, and Is posted as the Agent of our Cardinall, To second all his plot. I do offure you, The King cry'de Ha, at this, Cham. Now God incense him,

And let him cry Ha, lowder.

Norf. But my Lord When returnes Cranmer?

Suf. He is ceturn'd in his Opinions, which Have fatisfied the King for his Divorce, Together with all famous Colledges Almost in Christendome: shortly (I beleeve) His fecond Marriage shall be published, and Her Coronstion. Katherine no more Shall be call'd Queene, but Princesse Dowager, And Widdow to Prince Aribur.

Nor. This same Creamer's

A worthy Fellow, and hath cane much paint In the Kings bufinelle.

Suf. Heha's, and we shall see him

For it. an Arch-by shop.

Nor. So I heare. Suf. Tis Co

Enser Wolfey and Cromwell.

The Cardinall,

Nor. Obserue, obserue, hee's moody.

Car. The Packet Cromwell,

Gau't you the King?

Crom. To his owne hand, in's Bed-chamber. Card Look'd he o'thinfide of the Paper?

Crom. Prelently He did valesle them, and the fielt he view'd, He did it with a Serious minde ia heede Was in his countenance. You he bad Attend him heere this Morning.

Card. Is he ready to come abroad ! Cram, Ithinke by this be u.

Exit Cromwell.

Cord. Leave one a while. It shall be to the Dutches of Alzofore, The French Kings Sifter; He hall marry her Anna Bullens for him. There's more in't then fasse Vilage. Bullen? No, weet no Bullow: Speedily I with To heare from Rome. The Marchonelle of Peabroke?

Nor. He's disconsented. Suf. May be he heares the King Does whethis Anger to him.

Sur. Sharpe enough,

Lord for thy Justice. Car. Thelate Queenes Gentlewoman

A Knights Daughter To be ber Mistris Mistris? The Queenes, Queene? This Candle bumes not cleere, 'cis I muft fruffe it, Then out it goes. What though I know her veruse as And well delerung? yet I know her for A Spleeny Luthersa, and not who! some to Our cause, that she should lye ith befome of Our hardrul'd King. Againe, there is fprong +p An Heretique, an Arch-one; Crammer, one Hath crawl'd into the fasour of the King, And is his Oracle.

Nar. He is vex'd at something

Enter King yeading of a Scedule

Sur. I would 'twer formthing y would fret the string, The Master-cord on's heart.

Suf. The King, the King.

King. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated To his owne portion? And what expence by th'hours Seemes to Bow from him? How, ith name of Thrift Does he rake this together? Now my Lords, Saw you the Cardinall?

Ner. My Lord, we have Stood heere observing him. Some strange Commotion Is in his braine: He bices his lip, and flares, Stops on a sodaine, lookes upon the ground, Then layer his finger on his Temple : ftraight Springs out into fast gate, then stops againe, Strikes his brest hard, and anon, he casts His eye against the Moone: in most strange Postures We have feene him fet himlelfe.

King. It may well be, There is a mutiny in's minde. This morning, Papers of State he fent me, to perule As I requir'd; and wor you what I found There (on my Conscience put vewirtingly) Forfooth an Inventory, thus importing
The feuerall parcels of his Place his Treasure, Rich Stuffes and Ornaments of Houshold, which I finde at fuch proud Rate, that it out-speakes Possession of a Subied.

Nor. It's Heavens will, Some Spirit put this paper in the Packet, To bleffe your eye withall.

Kong. If we did thinke

His Contemplation were about the earth And fixe on Spirituall object, he should fill Dwell in his Musings, but I am affraid His Thinkings are below the Moone, not worth His ferious confidering.

King sabes bis Seat, whifters Lovell, who goes to the Cardinall.

Car. Heaven forgive me, Euer God bleffe your Highnesse.

King. Good my Lord You are full of Heavenly Ruffe, and beare the Inventory Of your best Graces, in your minde; the which You were now running o're : you have fearfe time To Reale from Spiritual leylure, a briefe fpan To keepe your earthly Audit, fure in that I deeme you en ill Husband, and am gald To have you therein my Companion.

Car. Sir, For Holy Offices I have a time; a time To thinke you the part of bulinelle, which I beare ith Scare: and Nature does require Her times of preservation, which perforce Ther fraile fonne, among'A my Brethren mortall, Must glue my tendance to King. You have faid well.

Car. And ever may your Highnesse yooke together,
(As I will lend you cause) my doing well,

With my well laying.

King. 'Tis well faid agen,

And the kinde of good deede to lay well, And yet words are no deeds. My Father lou'd you, He (sid he did, and with his deed did Crowne His word vpon you. Since I had my Office, I have kept you next my Heart, have not alone Imploy'd you where high Profits might come home, But par'd my prefent Hauings, to bestow

My Bounties vpon you.

Cor. What should this meane?

Ser. The Lord increase this businesse, King. Have I not made you The prime man of the State? I pray you rell me,

If what I now pronounce, you have found true .
And if you may confesses, say withall If you are bound to vs, or no. What lay you?

Car. My Souerzigne, I confesse your Royall graces Showr'd on me daily, have bene more then could My studied purposes require, which went Beyond all mans endeauors. My endeauors, Have ever come too short of my Desires, Yet fill d with my Abilities : Mine owne ends Haue beene mine fo, that evermore they pointed To'th'good of your most Sarred Person, and The profit of the State, For your great Graces Hesp'd vpon me (poore Vndeleruer) I Cannothing render but Allegiant thankes, My Prayres to heaven for you; my Loyaltie Which cuer ha's, and cuer shall be growing, Till death (that Winter) kill it.

King. Fairely answer'd: A Loyall, and obedient Subject is Therein illustrated, the Honor of it Does pay the Act ofic, as i th'contrain The fowlenesse is the punishment. I presume, That as my hand ha's open'd Bounty to you, My heart drop'd Loue, my powrerain'd Honor, more On you, then any: So your Hand, and Heart.

Your Braine, and every Function of your power. Should, notwithftending that your bond of duty, As twee in Loues particular, be more To me your Friend, then any.

Car. Ida professe, That for your Highnesse good, I ever labour d More then mine owne : that am, have, and will be (Though all the world should cracke their duty to you,

And throw it from their Soule, though perils did Abound, as thicke as thought could make 'em, and Appeare In formes more horrid) yet my Duty, As doch a Rocke agoinft the chiding Flood, Should the approach of this wilde River breake. And fland vnihaken yours.

King. Tis Nobly spoken: Take notice Lords, he ha's a Loyall breft, For you have seene him open't. Read o're this, And after this, and then to Breakfast with What appetite you have.

Exit King, frowning open the Cardinall, the Nobles throng after him limbing, and whifpering.

Car. What flould this meane? What sodaine Anger's this? How have I reap'd it? He parted Frowning from me, as if Ruine Leap'd from his Eyes. So lookes the chafed Lyon Vpon the daring Huntiman that has gall'd him: Then makes him nothing. I must reade this paper: I feate the Story of his Anger. 'Tis fo: This paper ba's undone me: Tisth' Accompt Of all that world of Wealth I have drawne together For mine owne ends, (Indeed to gaine the Popedome, And Ice my Friends in Rome.) O Negligence! Fit for a Foole to fall by : What crofte Diuell Made me put this maine Secret in the Packet I fent the King Us there no way to cure this? Nonew device to beate this from his Braines? I know 'twill flirre him ftrongly ; yet I know A way, if it take right, in spight of Fortune Will bring me off againe. What's this ? To th' Pope? The Letter (as I live) with all the Bufineffe witt too's Holinesse. Nay then, farewell : I have touch'd the highest point of all my Greatnesse, And from that full Meridian of my Glory, I haste now to my Setting. I shall fall Like a bright exhalation in the Evening, And no man fee me more.

Enter to Woolfey, the Dakes of Norfolke and Suffolke, the Earle of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlaine.

Nor. Heart the Kings pleafure Cardinall, Who commands you To render up the Great Seale prefently Into our handa, and to Confine your felfe To Asher-house, my Lord of Winchesters, Till you heare further from his Highnesse. Ca. Stay :

Where's your Commission? Lords, words cannot carrie Authority fo weighty.
Safe Who date crosse 'em,

Bearing the Kings will from his mouth expressely?

Car. Till I finde more then will, or words to doit, (I meane your malice) know, Officious Lords, Idare, and mult dany it. Now I feele Of what course Mettle ye are molded, Enuy, How eagerly ye follow my Difgraces

As if it fed ye, and how fleeke and wantoo Ye appeare in cuery thing may bring my ruine? Follow your envious courses, men of Malice You have Christian warrant for em, and no doubt In time will finde their fit Rewards. That Scale You aske with fuch a Violence, the King (Mine, and your Master) with his owne hand, gaue me i Bad meenioy it, with the Place, and Honors During my life , and to confirme his Goodnesse, Ti'de it by Letters Patents. Now, who'll take it?

Sur. The King that gaue it. Car. It must be himselfe then. Sur. Thou are a proud Traitor, Prieft. Car. Proud Lord, thou lyeft :

Within these fortie houres, Surrey durft better Haue burnt that Tongue, then faide fo.

Sur. Thy Ambition (Thou Searles finde) robb'd this bewarling Land Of Noble Buckingham, my Father-in-Law, The heads of all thy Brother-Cardinals, (With thee, and all thy best parts bound together) Weigh'd not a haire of his. Plague of your policie, You fent me Deputie for Ireland Farre from his fuccour; from the King, from all That might have mercie on the fault, thou gau'fl him: Whil'st your great Goodnesse, out of holy pitty. Absolu'd him with an Axe.

Wol. This, and all else This talking Lord can lay upon my credit, I answer, is most false. The Duke by Law Found his defens. How innocent I was From any private malice in his end, His Noble Iurie, and foule Cause can witnesse. If I lou'd many words, Lord, I should tell you, You have as little Honestie, as Honor, That in the way of Loyaltie, and Truth. Toward the King, my euer Roiall Mafter, Dare mate a founder man then Surrie can be, And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my Soule, Your long Coat (Priefl) protects you, Thou should it feele My Sword i'th'life blood of thee elfe. My Lords, Can ye endure to heare this Arrogance? And from this Fellow ? If we live thus tamely, To be thus laded by a peere of Scarlet, Farewell Nobilitie: let his Grace go forward, And dare vs with his Cap, like Larkes.

Card. All Goodnesse Is poylon to thy Stomacke.
Sar. Yes, that goodnelle

Of gleaning all the Lands wealth into one, Into your ownehands (Card'nall) by Extortion: The goodnesse of your intercepted Packets You writ to'th Pope, against the King : your goodnesse Since you provoke me, shall be moft notorious. My Lord of Norfolke, as you are truly Noble, As you respect the common good, the State Of our despis'd Nobilitie, our Issues, (Whom if he live, will scarle be Gentlemen) Produce the grand fumme of his finnes, the Articles Colleded from his life. Ile startle you Vorsethen the Sacring Bell, when the browne Wench

Car. Howmuch me thinkes, I could despite this man, of killing in your Armes, Lord Cardinall. But that I am bound in Charitie against it.

Those Articles, my Lord, are in the Kings hand: But thus much, they are foole ones.

Wal. So much fairer

And spotlesse, shall raine Innocence arise, When the King knower my Truth.

Sur. This cannot faue you ? thanke my Memorie, I yet remember Some of these Articles, and out they shall Now, if you can bloth, and erle guilde Cardinall, You'l frew a little Honeftie.

Wd. Speake on Sir,

I dere your worlt Obiections : If I blech, It is to fee a Nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had tather want those, then my head ; Haneat you.

First, that without the Kings affent or knowledge, You wrought to be a Legate, by which power You maim'd the Iuridiation of all Bishops.

Nor. Then, That in all you writ to Rome, or elfe To Forraigne Princes, Ego & Rex menu Was full inferib'd: in which you brought the King

To be your Servant.

Saf. Then, that without the knowledge Either of King or Councell, when you went Ambassador to the Emperor, you made bold To carry into Flanders, the Great Seale.

Sar. Item, You fent a large Commission To Gregory de Cassado, to conclude Without the Kings will, or the States allowance, A League betweene his Highneffe, and Forwa.

Suf. That out of meete Ambition, you have cous'd Your holy-Hat to be stampt on the Kings Coine.

Sur Then, That you have fent inumerable fuhffance, (By what meanes got, I leaue to your owne conscience) To furnish Rome, and to prepare the wayes You have for Dignities, to the meere vadooing Of all the Kingdome. Many more there are, Which fince they are of you, and odious, I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. Ony Lord,

Presenot a falling man too farre: 'tis Ventue : His faults lye open to the Lawes, let them (Not you) correct him. My heart weepes to fee him So little, of his great Selfe.

Sur. I forgive him.
Suf. Lord Cardinall, the Kings further pleafure is, Because all those things you have done of late By your power Legatiue within this Kingdome, Fall into'th' compaffe of a Premunire; That therefore such a Writ be sued against you, To forfeit all your Goods, Lands, Tenements, Castles, and whatsoever, and to be

Out of the Kings protection. This is my Charge.
Nor. And to wee'l leave you to your Meditations How to live better. For your stubborne answer About the giving backe the Great Seale to vs, The King shall know it, and (no doubt) shal thanke you. So fare you well, my little good Lord Cardinall.

Exercise all but Wolfer. Wal. So farewell, to the little good you beare me. Farewell? A long farewell to all my Greatneffe. This is the flate of Mao; to day he puts forth The render Leaves of hopes, to morrow Bloslowes, And beares his blushing Honors thicke vpon him: The third day, comes a Froft; a killing Froft, And when he thinkes, good easie man, full furely

HIS

His Greatnesse is a ripening, oppes his roote, And then he fals as I do. I have ventur'd Like little wenton Boyes that fwim on bladders t This many Summers in a Sea of Glory, But farre beyond my depth: my high-blowne Pride At length broke under me, and now ha's left me Weary, and old with Service, to the mercy Of a rude ftreame, that muft for ever hide me. Vaine pompe, and glory of this World, I hate ye, I feele my heart new open'd. Oh how wretched Is that poore man, that hangs on Princes fauoura? There is becwine that smile we would afpire too, That Iweet Afpect of Princes, and their ruine, More pangs, and feares then warres, or women have ; And when he falles, he falles like Lucifer, Neuer to hope againe.

Enter Crommell, flooding amazed

Why how now Cromwell?

Crons. I have no power to speake Sir.

Car. What, amaz'd

At my misforcunes ? Can thy Spirit wonder A great man should decline, Nay, and you weep lanifalneindeed.

Crom How does your Grace, Cord Why well:

Neuec fo truly happy, my good Cramell, I know my felfenow, and I feele within me, A peace about all earthly Dignities, A fill, and quier Confetence. The King ha's cur'd me, I humbly thanke his Grace, and from these shoulders These ruin'd Pillers, out of pitty, taken A loade, would linke a Nauy, (too much Honor)

O'tis a burden Cromoel, tis a burden Too heavy for a man, that hopes for Heaven.

Crom. I am glad your Grace, Ha's made that right vie of it.

Card. Ihope I have I am able now (me thinkes) (Out of a Fortitude of Soule, I feele) To endura more Mileties, and greater farre Then my Weske-hearted Enemies, dare offer.

What Newes abroad? Crom. The heaviest, and the worst, Is your displeasure with the King.

Cod Godbleffe him.

Crom. The next is, that Sir Thomas Moore is choken Lord Chancellor, in your place

Card. That's somewhat sodato But he's a Learned man. May he cominne Long in his Highnesse favour, and do lustice For Truths-lake, and his Confesence, that his bones, When he ha's run his course, and sleepes in Bleffings. May have a Tombe of Orphanes teares wept on ham. What more?

Crom. That Crommer is return'd with welcome ; Install'd Lord Arch-byshop of Canterbury.

Card. That's Newes indeed.

Crom. Last, that the Lady Arme, Whom the King hath to fecrecie long married, This day was view'd in open, as his Queenc, Going to Chappell t and the voyce is now Onely about her Corronation.

Card There was the waight that pull'd me downe. O (rommell,

The King ha's gone beyond me i All my Glories In that one woman, I have loft for ever.

No Sun, shall ever vince forth mine Honors, Or gilde againe the Noble Troopes that weighted Vpon my Imiles. Go get thee from me Cromwel, I am a poore falne man, vnworthy now To be thy Lord, and Master. Secke the King (That Sun, I pray may never fet) I have told him What, and how true thou art; he will advance thee: Some little memory of me, will flire him (I know his Noble Nature) not to let Thy bopefull feruice perish too. Good Cromwell Neglect him not; make vie now, and proude For thine owne future lafery.

Cross. O my Lord, Must I then leave you? Must I needet forgo So good, so Noble, and so true a Master ? Beare witnesse, all that have not hearts of Iron, With what a forrow Cronswel leaves his Loid The King shall have my service , but my prayres For ever, and for ever Chall be yours.

Card. Cromwd, I did not thinke to fhed a teare In all my Miferies: But thou half fore'd me (Out of thy hone it cruth) to play the Woman. Let's dry our eyes: And thus farre heare me Cromoel, And when I am forgotten, as I shall be, And Beepe in dull cold Marble, where no mension Of me, more must be heard of: Say I taught thee; Say Wolfer, that once trod the wayer of Glory And founded all the Depths, and Shoales of Honor, Pound thee a way (out of his wracke) to tile in: A fure, and fafe one, though thy Mafter mift it. Marke but my Fall, and that that Ruin'd me : Crommel, I charge thee, Bing away Ambirion, By that finne fell the Angels : how can man then (The Image of his Maker) hope to win by it? Love thy felfe last, cherish those hearts that hate thee; Corruption wins not more then Honefly. Still in thy right hand, carry gentle Peace To filence envious Tongues Be just and feare not; Let all the ends thou aym'if at, be thy Countries, Thy Gods, and Truths. Then if thou fall A(O Cromwell) Thou fall'it a bleffed Martyr. Serve the King: And prythee leade me in: There take an Inventory of all I have To the last peny, 'tis the Kings. My Robe, And my Integrity to Heaven, 12 all, I dare now call mine owne. O Cromwel, Crownel, Had I but feru'd my God, with halfe the Zeale I feru'd my King : he would not in mine Age Haue left me naked to mine Enemies.

Crom. Good Sir, have parience. Card. So I have. Parewell The Hopes of Court, my Hopes in Hesuen do dwell.

3 Well worth the feeing.

3 Good Sir, fpeake it to va?

As well as I am able. The rich ftream? Of Lords, and Ladies, having brought the Queene To a prepar'd place in the Quire, fell off A distance from her; while her Grace sate downe To rest a while, some halfe an houre, or so, In a rich Chaire of State, opposing freely The Beauty of her Person to the People. Beleeve me Sir, the is the goodlieft Woman That ever lay by man: which when the people Had the full view of, fuch a noyfe arole, As the shrowdes make at Sea, in a stirfe Tempest, As lowd, and to as many Tunes. Hass. Cloakes, (Doublets, I thinke) flew vp. and had their Faces Bin loofe, this day they had beene loft. Such ioy I neuer saw before. Great belly'd women, That had not halfe a weeke to go, like Rammes
In the old time of Warre, would thake the prease And make 'em reele before 'em. No man lining Could say this is my wife there, all were wouen So strangely in one peece.

O Griffish, ficke to death : My Legges like loaden Branches bow to'th' Earth, Willing to leave their burthen: Reach a Chaire, So now (me thinkes) I feele a little eale. Did'st thou not rell me Griffith, as thou lead's mee, That the great Childe of Honor, Cardinall ("alfoy Was dead i

Grif. Yes Madam: but I thanke your Grace Out of the paine you luffer'd, gave no eare too's Kab. Pre'thee good Griffith, tell me how he dy'de. If well, he slept before me happily

Formy example.

Grif. Well, the voyce goes Madam, For after the flour Earle Northumberland Arrefled him at Yorke, and brought him forward As a man forely tainted, to his Answer, He fell ficke fodainly, and grew foill He could not fit his Mule.

Karb. Alas poore man. Grif. At last, with easie Rodes, he came to Lelcester, Lodg'd in the Abbey; where the reverend Abbot With all his Covent, honourably receiv'd him ; To whom he gaue these words. O Father Abbot, An old man, broken with the stormes of State, Is come to lay his weary bones among yes Grue him a little earth for Charity, So went to bed ; where eagerly his ficknesse Pursu'd him fill, and three nights after this, About the houre of eight, which he himfelfe Foretold (hould be his laft, full of Repentance, Continual Meditations, Teares, and Sorrowes, He gave his Honors to the world agen, His bleffed part to Heaven, and flept in peace.

Karb. So may be rest, His Faults lye gendy on him : Yet thus farre Griffith, give me lesoe to speake him, And yet with Charity. Ha was a man Of an vnbounded flomacke, ever ranking Himselfe with Princes. One that by suggestion Ty deall the Kingdome. Symonie, was faire play, His owne Opinion was his Law. Ith presence He would say untruths, and be ever double Both in his words, and meaning. He was never (But where he meant to Ruine)pirtifull. His Promises, were as he then was, Mighry t But his performance, as he is now, Nothing a Of his owne body he was ill, and gave The Clergy ill example.

Graf. Noble Madame

Mens cull maoners, live in Braffe, their Vertues We write in Water. May it please your Highnesse To heare me speake his good now?

Karb. Yei good Griffinb, I were malicious elles

Grif. This Cardinall,
Though from an humble Stocke, undoubtedly Was fashion'd to much Hopor. From his Cradle He was a Scholler, and a ripe, and good one Exceeding wife, faire spoken, and perswading : Lofig, and fowte to them that lou'd him not But, to those men that lought him, sweet as Summer And though he were vnfatisfied in getting, (Which was a sinne) yet in beflowing, Madorn, He was most Princely : Euer witnesse for him Those twinner of Learning, that he rais d in you, Iphyich and Oxford , one of which, fell with him, Vinwilling to out-live the good that did it.
The other (though vininith'd) yet to Famous, So excellent in Art, and full fo rifing, That Christendome shall ever speake his Vereve. His Overthrow, heap'd Happinette spon him : For then, and not till then, he felt himfelfe, And found the Bleffedneffe of being little. And to adde greater Honors to his Age
Thon man could give him; he dy'de, learing God.

Karb. After my death, I with no other Herald, No other speaker of my living Actions, To keepe mine Honor, from Corruption, But fuch an honel Chronicler as Griffirb. Whom I most hated Living, thou hast made mee With thy Religious Truth, and Modeflie, (Now in his Ashes) Honor . Peace be with him. Patjence, bencere me still, and fer me lower, I have not long to stouble thee Good Griffab, Caufe the Mufistans play me that fad note I nam'd my Knell; whil'ft I fit meditating

The Times and Titles pow are alter'd ftrangely With me, fince fiell you know me.

Bue I pray you,

Wher is your pleasure with me!

Cap. Noble Lady, Pirst mine owne service to your Grace, the next The Kings request, that I would vilit you, Who greeues much for your weaknesse, and by me Sends you his Princely Commendations,

And heartsly entreats you take good corrsfort. Kash. O my good Lord, that comfort comes too late, Tis like a Pardon after Execution;

That gentle Phylicke given in time, had cor'd me: But now I am paft all Comforts heere, but Prayers. How does his Highneffe?

Cap. Madam, in good health.
Kash. So may be coes do, and ever flourish, When I shall dwell with Wormer, and my poore name Banish'd the Kingdome. Patience, is that Letter I caus d you write, yet lent away !

Pas. No Madam.

Kash. Sir, I most bambly pray you to definer This to my Lord the King.

Cap. Most willing Madam.

Kark In which I have commended to his goodnesse The Modell of our chafte loves : his young daughter, The dewes of Heaven fall thicke in Bleffings on her, Befeeching him to give her vertoons breeding She is yong, and of a Noble modell Nature, I hope the will deferoe well; and a little To love her for her Mothers lake, ther lou'd him. Heaven knowes how deeredy. My next poore Petition, Is, that his Noble Grace would have force pittle Vpon my wretched women, that follong Have follow'd both my Fortunes, faithfully, Of which there is not one, I dare mow (And now I should not lye) but will deserve For Vertue, and true Beautie of the Soule, For honeflie, and decent Carriage A right good Husband (let him be a Noble) And fure those men are happy that shall have 'em-The last is for my men, they are the poorest, (But poverty could never draw 'em from me) That they may have their wages, duly paid em, And formerhing over to remember me by. If Heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer lile And able meanes, we had not parted thus. Thefe are the whole Contents, and good my Lord, By that you love the deerest to this world, As you wish Christian peace to soules departed, Stand these poore peoples Friend, and vige the King

Cap. By Heaven I will, Or let me loofe the fashion of a man.

To do me this last right

Kab. I thanke you honest Lord. Remember me In all humilitie voto his Highneffe: Say his long trouble now is paffing Out of this world. Tell him in death I bleft him (For lo I will) mine eyes growdimme. Farewell My Lord. Griffab farewell. Nay Pature. Vou must not leave me yet. I must to bed, Call in more women. When I am dead, good Weach, Let me be vs'd with Honor; firew me ouer With Maiden Flowers, shat all the world may know I was a chafte Wife, to my Graue: Embalme me, Then lay me forth (although vnqueen'd) yet like A Queene, and Daughter to a King enterre ma ! can no more.

Is this a place to roate in? Fetch me a dozen Crab-cree Asues, and firong ones; thefe are but fwirches to 'em: He fcratch your heads tyou must be feeing Christenings Do you looke for Ale, and Cakes heere, you rude Raskalls?

Men. Pray Sir be parient; tis as much impossible. Valeffe wee I weepe 'em from the dore with Cannons To featter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em fleepe On May-day Morning, which will never be ! We may as well push against Powles as fitte em-Per. How got they in, and be bang'd?

Msm

Man. Alas I know not, how gets the Tide in ? As much as one found Cudgell of foure foote, (You fee the poore remainder) could diffribute, I made no spare Sir.

Port. You did nothing Sir.

Man. I am not Sampson, nor Sit Guy, nor Calebrand, To mow 'em downe before me : bur if I spar'd any That had a head to hit, either young or old, He or thee, Cuckold or Cuckold-maker : Let me ne're hope to see a Chine againe, And that I would not for a Cow, God saucher.

Within, Do you heare M. Porter?
Port. I shall be with you presently, good M. Pappy,

Keepe the dore close Sirha. Man. What would you have me doe?

Per. What thould you doe, But knock 'em downe by th' dozens? Is this More fields to mutter in? Or have wee some strange Indian with the great Toole, come to Court, the women so besiege vs? Bleffe me, what a fry of Fornication is at dore! On my Christian Conscience this one Christening will beget a thousand, here will bee Father, God-father, and all to-

Man. The Spoones will be the bigger Sir : There is a sellow somewhat neere the doore, he should be a Brasier by his face, for o'my conscience ewenty of the Dog-dayes now reigne in's Nose; all that stand about him are under the Line, they need no other pennance: that Fire-Drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his Nose discharged against mee; hee slands there like a Morter-piece to blow vs. There was a Habberdathers Wife of small wit, neere him, that rail'd vpon me, till her pinck'd porrenger fell off her head, for kindling fuch a combultion in the State. I mitt the Meteor once, and hit that Woman, who cryed out Clubbes, when I might see fromsarie, some sorry Truncheoners draw to her fuccour, which were the hope o'th' Strond where she was quartered; they fell on, I made good my place; at length they came to th' broome staffe to me, I defide 'em stil, when fodainly a File of Boyes behind 'eni, loose shor, deliuer'd such a showre of Pibbles, that I was faine to draw mine Honour in, and let 'em win the Worke, the Diuell was amonght 'em I thinke furely.

Por. These are the youths that thunder at a Playhouse, and fight for bitten Apples, that no Audience but the tribulation of Tower Hill, or the Limbes of Limehouse, their-deare Brothers are able to endure. I have fome of em in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three dayes; besides the running Banquer of two Besdles, that is to come.

Enter Lord Chamberlaine.

Cham. Mercy o'me : what a Multitude are heere? They grow still too; from all Parts they are comming, As it we kept a Faire heere? Where are thefe Porters ! Thefe lazy knaues? Y have made a fine band fellowes? Theres a crim cabble let in: are all thefe Your faithfull friends o'th' Suburbs? We shall have Great Rore of roome no doubt, left for the Ladies, When they palle backe from the Christening?

Per. And't please your Honout, We are but men; and what fo many may doe, Not being torne a pieces, we have done :

An Army cannot rule em. Cham. As I live,

If the King blame me for't I le lay ye all

By th' heeles, and fodzinly: and on your heads Clap round Fines for neglect : y'are lazy knaues, And heere ye lye baiting of Bombards, when Ye should doe Service. Harke the Trumpets found, Th'are come already from the Christening, Go breake among the preasse, and finde away out To let the Troope passe fairely; or He finde A Marthalliey, shall hold ye play these two Monthes Por Make way there, for the Princeffe. Man. You great fellow, Stand close vp, or lie make your head ske.

Por. You ith Chamblet, get vp o'th' rails, He pecke you o're the pales elfe. Exerni.

From thy endlelle goodnelle, fend prosperous life, Long and ever happie, to the high and Mighty Princesse of England Elizabet.

Flowifb. Enter King and Guard. Cran. And to your Royall Grace, & the good Queen, My Noble Partners, and my felfe thus pray Ali comfort, toy in this most gracious Lady, Heauen euer laid vp to make Perenta happy, May housely fall vpon ye.

Kin. Thanke you good Lord Archbishop 1

What is her Name !

Cran Elizabeth. Kim. Srand vp Lord,

With this Kiffe, take my Bleffing : God proted thee, Into whole hand, I give thy Life.

Cran. Amen.

Kin. My Noble Goffips, y'have beene too Prodigall; I thanks ye heartily t So Shall this Lady,

When the ha's fo much English. Cran. Let me speake Sir,
For Headen now bids me; and the words I vtter,

Let none thinke Flattery; for they'l finde'em Truth, This Royall Infant, Heaven full move about her; Though in her Cradle; yet now promiles Vpon this Land a thousand thousand Bleffings, Which Time shall bring to ripenesse: She shall be, (But few now living can behold that goodnesse) A Patterne to all Princes living with her, And all that shall succeed: Saba was never More conetous of Wifedome, and faire Vertue Then this pure Soule shall be. All Princely Graces That mould up fach a mighty Piece as this is, With all the Vertues that attend the good,
Shall fill be doubled on her. Truth shall Nerse her,
Holy Holy and Heavenly thoughts still Counfell ber She shall be lou'd and fear'd. Her owne shall blelle her; Her Foes shake like a Field of bearen Coine, And hang their heads with fortow , Good grower with her In her dayes, Eutry Man shall eate in lafety, Vinder his owne Vine what he planta; and ling The merry Songs of Peace to all his Neighbours. God shall be truely knowne, and those about her, From her shall read the perfect way of Honour, And by those claime their greatnesse; not by Blood. Nor Shall this peace sleepe with her: But as when The Bird of Wonder dyes, the Mayden Phoenix, Her Ashes new crease another Heyre, As great in admitation as het selfe.
So shall the leave her Blessednesse to One, (When Heaven shal call her from this clowd of darknes) Who, from the facted Ashes of her Honour Shall Star-like rife, as great in fame as the was, And so Rand fix'd. Peace, Plenty, Loue, Truth, Terror, That were the Seruants to this chosen Infant, Shall then be his, and like a Vine grow to him; Where ever the bright Sunne of Heaven shall shine, His Honour, and the greatnesse of his Name, Shall be, and make new Nations. He shall flourish,

And like a Mountaine Cedar, reach his branches, To all the Plaines about him: Our Childrens Children Shall fee this, and bleffe Heaven

Km. Thou speakell wonders.

Cran. She shall be to the happinesse of England.
An aged Princesse; many dayes shall seeher,
And yet no day without a deed to Crowness.
Would I had knowne no more: But she must day,
She must, the Saints must have her; yet a Virgin,
A most vnspotted Lully shall she passe
To the ground, and all the World shall mourne her.

Thus O Lord Archbishop
Thou hast made me now a man, never before
This happy Child, did I get any thing.
This Oracle of comfort, has so pleased me,
That when I amin Heauth, I first defire
To see what this Child does, and praise my Maket.
I thanke ye all. To you my good Lord Maior,
And you good Brethren, I am much beholding:
I haut received much Honour by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankfull. Lead the way Lords,
Ye must all see the Queene, and she must thanke ye.
She will be sicke els. This day, no man thinke
'Has businesse at his house; for all shall stay:
This Little-One shall make it Holy-day.

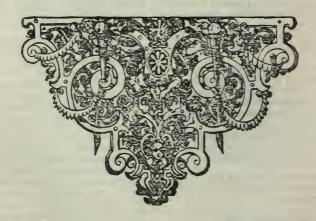

Exeunt.

THE EPILOGVE.

Ils tento one, this Play can never pleafe
All hos are heere. Some come to take their cafe,
And fleepe an Alt or two; but thos we feare

The Prologue.

NTroy there lyes the Scene: From Iles of Greece The Princes Orgillous, their high blood chaf'd Haue to the Port of Athens fent their shippes Fraught with theministers and instruments Of cruell Warre: Sixty and nine that wore Their Crownets Regall, from th' Athenian bay Put forth toward Phrygia, and their vow is mede To ransacke Troy, within whose strong emures The ranish'd Helen, Menelaus Queene, With wanton Paris sleepes, and that's the Quarrell. To Tenedos they come, And the deepe-drawing Barke do there difgorge Their varlike frautage: now on Dardan Plaines The fresh and yet wnbruised Greekes do pitch Their braue Pauillions. Priams fix-gated (ity, Dardan and Timbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien, And Antenonidus with massie Staples And corresponsive and fulfilling Bolts Stirre rup the Sonnes of Troy. Now Expectation tickling skittish spirits, On one and other side, Troian and Greeke, Sets all on hazard And bither am I come, A Prologue arm'd, but not in confidence Of Authors pen, or Actors poyce; but suited In like conditions, as our Aroument, To tellyou (faire Beholders) that our Play Leapes or e the vaune and firstlings of those broyles. Beginning in the middle . ftar ting thence away, To what may be digefted in a Play: Like, or finde fault, do as your pleasures are, Now good, or bad, 'tis but the chance of Warre.

E TRAGEDIE OF

Troylus and Cressida.

Atus Primus.

Screna Prima.

Enter Pendarus and Troyles.

Troylus.

All here my Varlet, He vnarme againe.
Why should I warre without the wals of Troy That finde fuch cruell battell here within? Each Troian that is master of his heart,

Let him to field, Troylus alas hath none.

Pan. Will this geere nere be mended? Troy. The Greeks are firong, & skilful to their firength, Fierce to their skill, and to their fiercenelle Valiant:

But I am weaker then a womans teare; Tamer then fleepe, fonder then ignorance; Leffe valiant then the Virgin in the night, And skilleffe as vnpractis'd Infancie.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this: For my pare, fle not meddle nor make no farther. Hee that will have a Cake out of the Wheate, must peedes tarry the grinding.
Trey. Haue I not tarried?

Pan. I the grinding, but you must carry the bolting.

Troy. Haue I not totried?

Par. Ithe boulting; but you must tarry the leau'ing.

Troy Still have I tarried.

Pas. I, to the leavening; but heeres yet in the word hereafter, the Kneading, the making of the Cake, the heating of the Ouen, and the Baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burne your lips.

Troy. Patience her felfe, what Goddeffe ete the be. Doth leffer blench at lufferance, then I doe: At Priams Royall Table doe I fit; And when faire Creffid comes into my thoughts, So (Traitor) then the comes, when the is thence PAR. Well; She look'd yesternight fairer, then euer I saw her looke.

Or any woman effe

Troy. I was about to tell thee, when my heart, As wedged with a figh, would nue in twaine, Lezit Heller, or my Father (hould perceiue me : I have (as when the Some doth light a-scorne) Buried this ligh, in wrinkle of a fmile: But forrow, that is couch'd in feeming gladnesse, Is like that mirth, Fate turnes to fudden fadneffe.

Pas. And her haire were not lomewhat darker then Helens, well go too, there were no more comparison betweene the Women. But for my pate fire is my Kinfwoman, I would not (as they tearme it) praise it, but I wold some-body bad heard her talke yesterday as I did: I will not dispraile your lifter Cafandra : wit, but-

Troy. Oh Pandarm I tell thee Pandarms When I doe tell thee, theremy hopes lye drown'd: Reply not in how many Fadomes derpe They lye indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad In Croffids love. Thou enswer's the is Faire, Powr'A in the open Vicer of my heart Her Eyes, her Haire, her Cheeke, her Gare, her Voice. Handlest in thy discourse. O that her Hand (In whose comparison, all whites are loke) Writing their owne reproach; to whole folt leazure, The Cigners Downe is harfn, and spiris of Sense Hard as the palme of Plough-man. This thou tel' (me; As true thou tel'ft me when I fay I loue her . But faying thus, instead of Oyle and Balme, Thou lai'ft in every gafn that love hath given me, The Knife that made it.

Pan. I speake no more then truch.

Troy Thou do'st not speake so much.

Pan Faith, lle not meddle in't: Let her be at shee is, if the be faire, 'tis the better for her and the be not, the ha's the mends in her owne hands,

Troy. Good Pandarus: How now Pandarus?

Pan. I have had my Labour for my travellall thought on of her, and ill thought on of you; Gone betweene and betweene, but small thankes for my labour.

Troy. What are thou angry Pandons? what with me? Pan. Because she's Kinne to me, therefore shee's not so faire as Helm, and the were not kin to me, the would be as faire on Friday, as Helor is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not and the were a Black-a Moore, 'us all one to me.

Trey. Say I the is not faire?

Trg. I doe not care whether you doe or no. Sheet a Foole to flay behinde her Father: Let ber to the Greeks, and fo He tell her the next time I fee her : for my part, le meddle nor make no more i'h'matter

Troy. Pandarui? Pan Not L

Troy. Sweete Pandarks.

Pan. Pray you speake no more to me, I will leave all as I found it, and there an end.

Same Alarum

Tra. Peace you ungracious Clamors, peace rude founds, Fooles on both fides, Helm must needs be faire, When with your bloud you daily paint her thus. I cannot fight vpon this Argument:

Exeunt.

Itis too flatu'd a Subject for my Sword, But Pandarus . O Gods! How do you plague me? I cannot come to Creffed but by Pandar, And he's as reachy to be woo'd to woe, As the is stubborne, chast, against all suite. Tell me Apolle for thy Daphnes Loue What Creffid is, what Pandar, and what we: Her bed is India, there she lies, a Pearle, Between our Ilium, and where thee recides Let'it be cald the wild and wandring flood . Our felfe the Merchant, and this fayling Pandar, Our doubtfull hope, our convoy and our Barke.

Enter Aneas. Alarum. Ane. How now Prince Trojlus?

Wherefore not a field?

Troy. Because not there; this womans answer lotts. For womanish it is to be from thence:

What newes Aneas from the field to day? Ene. That Paru is returned home, and hurt,

Troy. By whom Iness?

Ane. Trojlus by Monelans.

Troy. Let Paru bleed, 'tis but a scar to scorne, Paru is gor'd with Menelaus horne.

Ene. Harke what good sport is out of Towne to day Troy. Better at home, if would I might were may : But to the sport abroad, are you bound thither ?

Enc. In all fwift haft.

Troy. Come goe wee then togithet. Enter Cressid and her man.

Cre. Who were those went by: Man, Queene Hechon, and Hellen. Cre. And whether go they?

Man. Vp to the Easterne Tower, Whole height commands as subject all the vaile, To see the battell: Heltor whose pacience, Is as a Vertue fixt, to day was mou'd. He chides Andromache and ftronke his Armorer, And like as there were husbandry in Warre

Before the Sunne rofe, hee was harnest lyte, And to the field goe's he; where every flower

Did as a Prophet weepe what it for law, In Hectors wrath.

Cre. What was his cause of anger? Man. The noise goe's this;

There is among the Greekes, A Lord of Troian blood, Nephew to Heller, They call him Aiax.

Cre. Good; and what of him?

Man. They say he is a very manper fe and flands alone. Cre. So do all men, vulcife they are drunke, ficke or

Man. This man Lady, hath rob'd many bealls of their particular additions, he is as valiant as the Lyon, churlish as the Beare, flow as the Elephant: a man into whom nature hath fo crowded humors, that his valour is crushe into folly, his folly fauced with discretion : there is no man hath a vertue, that he hath not a glimple of, nor any man an attaint, but he catries some staine of it. Heis melancholy without cause, and mercy against the haire, hee bath the loynes of every thing, but every thing fo out or joyne, that hee is a gowtie Briarem, many hands and no vie; or purblinded Argu, all eyes and no light.

Cre. But how should this man that makes me smile, make Heltor angry?

Men. They say he yesterday cop'd Heltor in the battell and froke him downe, the diffaind & fhame whereof, hath ever fince kept Helter falting and waking. Enter Pandarns.

Cre. Who comes here ?

Man. Madam your Vncle Pandara

Cre. Heltors a gallant man.

Man. As may be in the world Lady.
Pan. What's that what's that?

Cre. Good morrow Vncle Pandarus. Pan. Good morrow Cozen Creffid: what do you talke of good mottow Alexander. how do you Cozen? when were you at Illium &

Cre. This morning Vncle.

Pan. What were you talking of when I came? Was Heller arm'd and gon ere yea came to Illium? Hellen was not vp? was she?

Cre. Helter was gone but Hellen was not vp?
Pan. E'ene so; Helter was stirting early.

Cre. That were we talking of and of his anger.

Pan. Washe angry?

Cre. So he faies here.

Pan True he war fo; I know the cause too, heele lay about him to day I can tell them that, and there's Troylur will not come fatte behind him, let them take heede of Troylus; I can tell them that too.

Cre. What is he angry too?

Pan. Who Troylus ?

Troylus is the better man of the two.

Cre. Oh Iupiter; there's no compatison.

Pan. What not betweene Troplus and Hellor? do you know a man if you fee him ?

Cre. I.if I euer faw him before and knew him.

Pan. Well I fay Troylus is Troylus. Cre. Then you fay as I fay,

For I am fure he is not Heiter

Pan. No not Hellor is not Trojles in some degrees.

Cre. Tis suft, to each of them he is himfelfe.

Pan. Himfelfelalas poore Troylas I would he were.

Cre. Soheis.

Pan. Condition I had gone bare-foote to India.

Cre. He is not Hector

Pan. Himfelfe? no? hee's not himfelfe, would a were himselse: well, the Gods are aboue, time must friend or endswell Troylus well, I would my heart were in her body; no, Heltor is not a better man then Troylus.

Cre. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cre. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th'others not come too't, you shall tell meanother tale when th'others come too't? Heller shall not have his will this yeare.

Cre. He shall not neede it if he haue his owne.

Pan. Norhis qualities.

Cre. No matter

Pan. Not his beautie.

Cre. Twould not become himsens over the her felfe Pan. You have no sudgement Neece; Hellen her felfe Swore th'other day that Troyles for a browne fassour (for lo tis I must confesse) not browne neither.

Cre. No, but browne,

Pan: Faith to fay truth, browne and not browne.

Cre. To fay the truth, true and not true

Pan. She prais'd his complexion about Paris.

Cre. Why Parahath colour Inough.

Pan Sohehas

Cre. Then Troylus should have too much, if the prati'd him aboue, his complexion is higher then his, he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion, I had as lieue Hellens golden tongue had commended Trojlus for a copper note.

Pan. I (weate to you,

I thinke Hellen loues himbetter then Paru.

Cre. Then shee's a merry Greeke indeed.

dan. Nay I am fure the does, the came to him th'other day into the compast window, and you know he has not palt three or foure haires on his chinne.

Crof. Indeed a Tapfters Arithmetique may soone bring his particulars therein, to a totall.

Pand. Why he is very yong, and yet will he within three pound life as much as his brother Heltor.

Cref. Is he is so young a man, and so old a lifter?

Pan. But to produc to you that Hellen loves him, the came and puts me her white hand to his clouen chio.

Cref. June have mercy, how came it clouen?

Park Why, you know tis dimpled, I thinke his fmyling becomes him better then any man in all Phrigia.

Cre. Oh he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Doorshee not?

Cre. Ohyes, and 'cwere a clow'd in Automme.

Pan Why go to then, but to proue to you that Hellen loves Troylus.

Cre. Trojlus wil frand to thee Proofe, if youle prooue it fo.

Pan. Troylast why he effecties her no more then Ie-Reeme an addle egge.

Cre. If you loue an addleegge as well as you loue an idle head, you would este chickens i'th'shell. Pas. I cannot chuse but laugh to thinke how she tickled his chin, indeed thee has a maruel's white hand I must needs confesse.

Cre. Without the racke.

Pan. And shee takes upon her to spie a white haire on

Cre. Alas poore chio? many a wart is richer.

Pand Burthere was such laughing, Queene Hecuba laught that her eyes ran ore,

Cre. With Milflones.

Pan. And Caffandra laught,

Cre. But there was more temperate fire vader the pot ofher eyes: did her eyes run ore too?

Pan. And Heltor laught.

Cre. At what was all this laughing?

Pand. Matry at the white haire that Heller spied on Troyles chin.

Cref. And thad beene a greene haire, I should have laught too.

Pand. They laught not fo much at the haire, as at his pretty answere.

Cre. What was his answere?

Pan. Quoth thee, heere's but two and fifty baires on your chinne; and one of them is white.

Cre. This is her question.

Pand That's true make no question of that, two and fiftie haires quoth hee, and one white, that white haire is my Father, and all the reft are his Sonnes. Ispiter quoth the, which of thele haires is Paris my husband? The forked one quoth he, pluckt out and give it him : but there was such laughing, and Heller so blushe, and Paris so chast, and all the rost so laught, that it past.

Cre. So let it now,
For is has beenes grest while going by.

Pos. Well Cozen,

I cold you a thing yesterday, think on't.

Cre. Soldoes

Pand, He betworne 'tis true, he will weepe you an'twere a man borne in Aprill, Sound arcircate.

Pan. That's Lacas, is not that a brave man, her's one of the flowers of Troy I can you, but marke Trojlm. you shal fee anon

Crr. Who's that !

Enter Antenor,

Pan. That's Antenor, he has a shrow'd wit I can tell you, and hee's a man good inough, hee's one o'th fourdefludgement in Troy wholoever, and a proper man of person: when comes Trojim? He shew you Trojim acon, if hee fee me, you shall fee him him nod at me.

Cro. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall fee.

Cre. If he do, the rich shall have, more.

Enser Helter

Pan. That's Heller, that, that, looke you, that there's a fellow. Goe thy way Heller, there's a braue man Neece, Obraue Helter! Looke how hee lookes ichere's a countenance;ift not a braue man?

Cre. Obraue man!

Pan. Is a not? It doorsa mans heart good, looke you what hacks are on his Helmet Jooke you yonder, do you fee? Looke you there? There's no iesting, laying on, cali't off, who ill as they fay, there be hacks.

Cre. Be those with Swords?

Emer Paris.

Pan. Swords, any thing he cares not, and the diwell come to him, it's all one, by Gods hd it dooes ones hear good. Yonder comes Paru, yonder comes Paru: looke yee yonder Neece, ift not a gallant man to, ift not? Why this is braue now; who faid he came hurt home to day? Hee's not hurt, why this will do Hellens heart good now, ha? Would I could fee Trojlus now, you shall Trojlus anon.

Cre. Can Hellemu fight Vncle :

Pan. Hellows no : yes heele fight indifferent, well, maruell where Troplas is; harke, do you not bacte the people crie Troplas : Helleman 11 3 Prieft.

Cre. What fuesking fellow comes youder?

Ester Trylm

Pan. Where ! Yonder? That's Daphobus. Tis Traylu! Ther's a man Necce, hem ; Brane Tropius, the Prince of Chiualrie.

Cre. Peace, for shame peace.

Pend. Marke him, not him 1 O brave Trojtus : looke well upon him Nesce, looke you how his Sword is bloudied, and his Helme more backs then Heurs, and how he lookes.

Troylus and Cressida.

lookes, and how be goes. O admirable youth! he ne'ce faw three and twenty. Go thy way Troylus, go thy way, had I a fifter were a Grace, or a daughter a Goddeffe, hee should take his choice. Oadmitable man ! Paris? Paris 15 durt to him, and I warrant, Helen to change, would give money to book

Enter common Scaldiers.

Cref Heere come more.

Pan. Asses, fooles, dolrs, chaffe and bran, chaffe and bran; porcedge after meat. I could live and dye ith'eyes of Trojla. Ne'te looke, ne're looke tthe Eagles are gon, Crowes and Dawes, Crowes and Dawes: I had rather be fuch a man as Troplus, then Agamemnon and all Greece.

Crof There is among the Greekes Achilles, a better man then Troylus.

Pan. Achilles? a Dray-man, a Porter, a very Camell. Cref. Well well. Pan. Well, well r Why have you any diferention?have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, b auty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gencleneffe, vertue, youth, liberalmy, and to forth : the Spice, and fals that featons a man?

Agem. Princes:

What greefe hath fet the Isundies on your cheekes? The ample proposition that hope makes In all defignes, begun on earth below Fayles in the promist largenesse: checkes and disasters Grow in the veines of actions highest rear'd. As knots by the conflux of meeting fap, Infect the found Pine, and diverts his Graine Tortiue and erant from his course of growth. Not Princes, is it matter new to vs That we come short of our suppose so farre, That after seuen yeares siege, yet Troy walkes stand, Sith every action that hath gone before, Whereof we have Record, Triall did draw Bias and thwart, not answering the ayme: And that unbodied figure of the thought That gaue't furmifed shape. Why then (you Princes) Do you with cheekes abash'd, behold our workes, And thinke them shame, which are (indeed) nought else But the protractive trials of great love, To finde persistive constancie in men? The finenesse of which Mettall is not found In Fortunes loue : for then, the Bold and Coward, The Wise and Foole, the Artist and vn-read, The hard and fost. seeme all affin'd, and kin. But in the Winde and Tempest of her frowne, Distinction with a lowd and powrefull fan, Puffing at all, winnowes the light away And what hath maffe, or matter by it felfe, Lies rich in Vertue, and vnmingled. Nester With due Observance of thy godly lest,

Great Agamemnon, Nofter Shall apply

Thy lateft words.

In the reproofe of Chance.

Lies the true proofe of men: The Sea being smooth, How many shallow bauble Boates dare faile Vpon her patient breft, making their way

With those of Nobler bulke? But let the Ruffian Boreas once enrage

The gentle Theeis, and anon behold

The strong ribb'd Barke through liquid Mountaines cut.

Bounding betweene the two moyf Elements Like Perfeus Horse. Where's then the fawcy Boate, Whose weake untimber'd sides but even now

Co-rival'd Greatnesse ! Either to harhour sed, Or made a Tofte for Neptune. Even fo,

Doth valours shew and valours worth divide

In Cormes of Fortune. For, in her ray and brightnesse,

The Heard hath more annoyance by the Brieze

Then by the Tyger: But, when the fplitting winde Makes flexible the knees of knotted Oakes, And Flies Bed under shade, why then

The thing of Courage,

As rowz'd with rage, with rage doth lympathize, And with an accent sun'd in feife-fame key,

Retyres to chiding Fortune.

Vhs. Agansemnon Thou great Commander, Nerve, and Bone of Greece, Heart of our Numbers, foule, and onely spirit, In whom the tempers, and the mindes of all Should be thus up : Heare what Vly fer speakes, Belides the applaule and approbation The which most mighty for thy place and fway,

Take but Degree away, vn-tune that fring. And hearke what Discord followes : each thing meetes In meete oppugnancie. The bounded Waters, Should life their bosomes higher then the Shores, And make a soppe of all this folid Globe i Strength should be Lord of imbecility And the rude Sonne flould frike his Father deads Force should be right, or rather, right and wrong, (Betweene whose endleffe sarre, Juftice recides) Should loofe her names, and fo should lustice too. Then every thing includes it felfe in Power. Power into Will, Will into Appetite, And Appetite(an vniuerfall Wolfe, So doubly seconded with Will, and Power) Must inske perforce en vniuerfall prey, And laft, eate vp himselfe. Great Agamemnon:

This Chaos, when Degree is suffocate,

Follower the chosking And this neglection of Degree, is it That by a pace goes backward in a purpofe It hath to climbe. The Generall's difdain'd By him one step below; he, by the next, That next, by him beneath to enery step Exampled by the first pace that is ficke Of bis Superiour, growes to an englous Feauer Ofpale, and bloodlesse Emulation. Hele. Now youthfull Treylas, do not these hie strains Ofdivination in our Sifter, worke Some rouches of remorfe? Or is your bloud So madly hot, that no diffeutle of reason, Nor feare of bed furceffe in a bad caule,

Can qualifie the fame?

Troy Why Brother Helter, We may not thinks the justinesse of each ade Such, and no other then event doth forme it, Moronce desect the courage of our mindes; Becaule Cafandra's mad, her brainficke raptores Camor distaste the goodnesse of a quarrell,

Which tesh our fourtell Honours all engaged To make it gracious. For my prheate part, I am no more touch'd, then all Priams fennes, And love forbid there fould be done among 'A es Such things as might offend the weaken foleens.

To fight for, and maintaine.

Par. Ellemight the world convince of curie, As well my vader-taking: ss your counfels: But I arrest the gods, your full consent Gaue wings to my propension, and cur off All feater attending on so dite a protect For what (alas) can thefe my fingle armes? What propugnation is in one mans valour To stand the push and entaity of those This quartell would excite? Yet I protest, Were I alone to passe the difficulties, And had as ample power, as I have will, Poris hould ne re retract what he hath done, Nortains in the pursuite.

Pri. Paris, you speake Like one be-sorted on your sweet delights; You have the Hony Mill bot thefe the Gall, So to be valuant, is no praise at all.

Per. Sir, I propole not meerely to my felfe, The pleasures such a bezory brings with it : But I would have the loyle of her faire Rape Wip'd off in honourable keeping her What Treason were it to the ransack'd Queene, Difgrace to your great worths, and shame to me, Now to deliver her possession vp On termes of bale compulsion? Can it be, That fo degenerate a straine as this, Should once fer tooting in your generous bofome? There's not the meanest fpint on our partie, Without a heart to dare, or fword to draw, When Holen is defended : nor none so Noble, Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death vnfam'd, Where Helen is the fubied. Then (1 fay) Well may we fight for her, whom we know well, The worlds large spaces cannot paralell.

Hell. Paru and Traylus, you have both faid well: And on the cause and question now in hand, Haue gloz'd, but superficially ; not much Vnlike young men, whom Arifials thought Vnfit to heare Morall Philosophie. The Reasons you alledge, do more conduce To the hot passion of distemp'red blood, Then to make up a free determination Twixr right and wrong: For pleafure, and revenge, Haue eares more deafe then Adders, to the voyce Of any true decision. Nature craves All dues be rendred to their Owners : now What neeter debt in all humanity, Then Wife is to the Husband? if this law Of Nature be corrupted through affection, And that great mindes of partiall indulgence, To their benuthmed wills relift the fame, There is a Law in each well-ordred Nation, To curbe those raging appetites that are Most disobedient and refractiurie. If Helen then be wife to Sparia's King (As it is knowne the is) thefe Morall Lawes Of Nature, and of Nation, speake alowd To kaucher backe return'd. Thus to perfift In doing wrong, extenueres not wrong, But makes it much more heavie. Hellers opinion

Is this in way or truth ; yet nere the leffe, My spritely brethren, I propend to you In relolution to keepe Helen (till ; Por 'cle a cause that hoth no meane dependance, Vpun our joynt and feuerall dignities.

Tra. Why? there you toucht the life of our defigne: Wereir not glory that we more afteded, Then the performance of our heaving spleanes, I would not with a drop of Tretan blood, Spens more in her defence. But worthy Hollor, She is a theame of honour and renowne, A spurre to valiant and magnetismous deeds, Whole prefent courage may beate downe our foes, And fame in time to come canonize vs. For I prefume brave Heiler would not look So rich aduantage of a promifd glory, As fmiles upon the fore-head of this action, For the wide worlds revenew.

Hell. I am yours, You value off-fpring of great Priama, I have a roilling challenge fent among it The dull and factious pobles of the Greekes, Will Arike amazement to their drowfie fpirits, I was aducreiz'd, their Great general! fleps, Whil'st emulacion in the armie crept : This I prefume will wakehim.

Achil. O tell tell.

Ther. He declin the whole questions Agamemmen commands Archilles, Achilles is my Lord, I am Passecias knower, and Patroclus is a foole.

Parry. You cafeall.

Ter. Peace foole, I have not done.

Achil. He is a primledg'd man, proceede Therfires. Ther. Agarsemum is a foole, Achilles is a foole, Ther. fires is a foole, and as aforefaid, Parraclus is a foole.

Acbil. Derive this? come?

Ther. Agamemnen is a foole to offer to command A. chilles. Achilles is a foole to be commanded of Againemes Therfites is a foole to ferue fuch a foole: and Passachus is a foole politiue, Patr. Why am I a foole?

Enter Agamemmen, Visfes, Nefter, Diamedes, Alax, and Chalcas.

Ther. Make that demand to the Creator, it fuffiles me thouser. Looke you, who comes here?

Achil. Patroclas, He speake with no body: come in with me 7 berfites.

Ther. Here is such patcherie, such lugling, and such knauerie : all the argument is a Cuckold and a Whore, a good quarrel to draw emulations, factions, and bleede to death upon: Now the dry Suppeago on the Subject, and Warre and Lecherie confound all.

Agam Where is Achilles !

Pair. Withinhis Tent, but ill dispos dmy Lord. Agen. Let it be knowne to him that we are here: He fent our Messengers, and we lay by Our appertainments, vifiting of him: Let bim be told of, so perchance he thinke We date not move the question of our place, Or know not what we are.

Pat. I shall so say to him. Ulif. We saw him at the opening of his Tent,

He is not ficke.

Aia. Yes, Lyon ficke, ficke of proud heart; you may call it Melancholly if will favour the man, but by my head, it is pride; but why, why, let him show ve the cause? A word my Lord.

Asax. What is he more then another? Aga. No more then what he thinkes he is.

Aia. Is he fo much, doe you not thinke, he thinkes himselfe a better man then I am?

Ag. No question

Asar. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?
Ag. No, Noble Asar, you are as firong, as valiant. as Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is? wife, no leffe noble, much more gentle, and also gether more tractable.

Aiax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what it is.

Aga. Your minde is the electer Alax, and your vertues the fairer; he that is proud, eates up himlelfe; Pride is his owne Glasse, his owne trumper, his owne Chronicle, and what euer praises it selfe but in the decde, devoures the dee de in the praise.

Cref Hard to feeme won: but I was won my Lord With the first glance; that euer pardon me, If I confesse much you will play the tyrant : I love you now, but not till now fo much But I might maister it; infaith I lye: My thoughts were like unbrideled children grow Too head-strong for their mother: see we fooles, Why liane I blab'd: who shall be true to vs When we are so vnsecret to our felues? But though I lou'd you well, I woed you not, And yet good faith I wisht my selfe a man; Or that we women had mens priviledge Offpeaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue, For in this rapture I thall furely speake The thing I thall repent : fee, fee, your filence Comming in dumbneffe, from my weakeneffe drawes

My foule of counfell from me. Stop my mouth.

Troy. And shall, albeit sweete Musickeissues thence.

Pan. Precty yfaith.

Cref. My Lord. I doe beteech you pardon me, 'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kiffe: I am asham'd; O Heavens, what have I done! For this time will I take my leave my Lord.

Troy. Your scaue sweete Crassid?

Pan. Leaue: and you take leave till to motrow more

Cref. Pray you content you. Troy. What offends yo Lady? Cref. Sir, mine owne company.

Troy. You cannot shun your selfe.

Cref. Let me goe and try.

I, have a kinde of felfe recides with you:
But an vnkinde felfe, that it felfe will leave,
To be anothers foole. Where is my wit?
I would be gone: I speake I know not what.

Troy. Well know they what they speake, that speakes so wisely.

Cre. Perchance my Lord, I fhew more craft then loue, And fell to roundly to a large confession,
To Angle for your thoughts: but you are wife,
Or else you loue not: for to be wife and loue,
Exceedes mans might, that dwels with gods aboue,

Troy. O that I thought it could be in a women: As if it can, I will prefume in you, To feede for aye her lampe and flames of love. To keepe her conflancie in plight and youth, Out-living beauties outward, with a minde That doth renew fivifier then blood decaies: Or that perfwasion could but thes convinceme, That my integritie and truth to you, Might be affronted with the match and waight Of such a winnowed puriritie in love: How were I then yp-lifted! but alas, I am as true, as truths simplicitie, And simpler then the infance of truth.

Cres. In that He warre with you.

Troy. O vertuous fight,
When tight with right wars who shall be most right:
True (waines in loue, shall in the world to come
Approve their truths by Trojlus, when their rimes,
Full of protest, of oath and big compare;
Wants similes, truth tir'd with iteration,
Astrue as steele, as plantage to the Moone:
As Sunne to day: as Turtle to her mate:
As Iron to Adamant: as Earth to th'Center:
Yet after all comparisons of truth,
(As truths authenticke author to be cited)
As true as Trajlus, shall crowne up the Verse,
And sactifie the numbers.

Cref Prophet may you be:

If I be falle, or swerue a harre from truth,

When time Is old and hath forgot it selfe:

When water drops have worne the Stones of Troy;

And blinde oblivion swallow'd Cities vp;

And nightie States characterissie are grated

To dustie nothing; yet let memory,

From false to false, among salse Maids in love,

Vpbraid my falsehood, when they are said as false,

As Aire, as Water, as Winde, as fandicearth;

As Foxeto Lambe; as Wolfe to Heisers Calse;

Pard to the Hinde, or Stepdame to her Sonne;

Yea, let them say, to sticke the heart of salsehood,

As falle as Croffed.

Pand. Go ton, a trargame made: leale it, feste it, The be the wirnelle here I hold your hand here my Coufins, if euer you proue falle one to another, fince I have taken fuch pames to bring you together, let all pittifull goers betweene be cal'd to the worlds end after my name : call them all Pandets; les all conflant men be Trojuffes, all falle viomen Creffuli, and all brokers betweene, Panders: lay, Amon.

Troy. Amen. Cref. Amen. Pan. Amen.

Whereupon I will shew you a Chamber, which bed, becaufe it shall not speake of your prettie encounters, preffe it to death : away.

And Cupid grant all tong-tide Maidens heere, Bed, Chamber, and Pander, to prouide this geere. Excum.

Enter Vlysses, Diornedes, Nester, Agarnemian, Mensians and Chalcas Floush.

Cal. Now Princes for the Service I have done you, Th'aduantage of the time promps me aloud, To call for recompence: appeare it to your minde, That through the fight I beare in things to love, I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession, Incur'd a Traitors name, expos d my felfe, From certaine and pollell conveniences, To doubtfull fortunes, fequeftring from me all That time, acquaintance, custome and condition, Made tame, and most familiar to my nature ; And here to doe you feruice am become, As new into the world, strange, vnacquainted. I doe bestech you, as in way of taste, To give me now a little benefit: Out of those many registred in premise, Which you fay, line to come in my behalfe.

Agam. What would'st thou of vs Troian? make demand? Cal. You have a Troian prisoner, cal'd Anthenor, Yesterday cooke: Troy holds him very deere. Oft have you (often have you, thankes therefore) Defir'd my Creffia in right great exchange. Whom Troy hath Rill deni'd : but this Anthenor, I know is such a wrest in their affaires; That their negotiations all most slacke, Wanting his mannage: and they will almost, Give vs a Prince of blood, a Sonne of Prizm, In change of him. Let him be fent great Princes, And he shall buy my Daughter : and her presence, Shall quite Arike off all fervice I have done, In most accepted paine.

Aga. Let Diomedes beare him, And bring vs Creffed hither: Calcas shall have What he requests of vs: good Diamed Furnish you fairely for this enterchange; Withall bring word, if Heller will to morrow Be an feet'd in his challenge. Aiax is ready.

Dio. This fhall I vodertake, and 'tis aburthen Which I am proud to beare.

Exit.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus in their Tens. Vlif. Achilles Stands i'th cotrance of his Tent; Please it our Generall to passe strangely by him, As if he were forgot: and Princes all, Lay negligene and loofe regard vpon him; i will come laft, 'as like heele question me,

Why fuch unplaufiue eyes are bent? why turn'd on him If fo, I have derifion medicinable, To vie betweene your strangenesse and his pride, Which his owne will shell have defire to drinke; It may doe good, pride both no other glaffe To show it lelfe, but pride : for supple knees, Frede estogance, and are the proud mans fees,
Agam. Weele execute your paspole, and put on

A forme of ftrangeneffe at we paffe along, So dor each Lord, and either greete him not, Or elfe disdainfully, which shall shake him more, Then if not lookt on. I will lead the way.

Achd. What comes the Generall to speake with me! You know my minde, He fight no more gainst Troy. Aga. What faies Aebilles, would be ought with vo? Nef. Would you my Lord ought with the Generali?

Achil. No.

Nef. Nothing my Lord.

Aga. The better. Achel Good day, good day.

Men. How dee you? how doe you? Achi. What, do's the Cuckold (come cae?

Alax. How now Patroclis?

Achil. Good morrow Aux? Alax. Hz

Achil. Good morrow.

Aiar. 1, and good next day too. Achd. What meane these sellowers know they not Achilles?

Pair. They passe by strangely: they were and to bend To fend their fmiles before them to Achilles; To come as humbly as they vs'd to creepe to holy Alcars. Achd. What am I poore of late?

Tis certaine, greatnesse once falue out with fortune, Must fall our with mentoo : what the declin'd is, He shall as soone reade in the eyes of others, As feele in his owne fall: for men like busser-flies, Shew not their mealie wings, but to the Summer: And not a man for being simply man, Hath any honour; but honour'd for those honours That are without him; as place, tiches, and fatour, Prizes of accident, as oft 23 merit: Which when they fall, as being shppery Randers; The loue that leand on them as flippery too, Doth one plucke downe another, and together Dye in the fall. But 'tis not fo with me; Fortune and I are friends, I doe enior At ample point, all that I did possesse, Saue these mens lookes: who do me thinkes finde on: Something not worth in me fuch rich beholding. As they have often given. Here is Ulifes, Heincerrupt his reading : how now Vifes?

Vif. Now great Their Sonne. Acbil. What are you reading? Vif. A Arange fellow here Writes me, that man, how dearely ever parted, How much in having, or without, or in, Cannot make boaft to have that which he hath; Not feeles not what he owes, but by reflection: As when his vertues thining upon others, Heare them, and they recort that heate againe

To the Sift giver.

Achie This is not ftrange Viffes: The beautie that is borne here in the face, The bearer knower not, but commends it felfe, Not going from it felfe: but eye to eye oppos'd,

Salutes

Salutes each other with each others forme. For fpeculation turnes not to it felfe, Till it hath trausil'd, and is married there Where it may fee it felfe : this is not strange at all, Vlif. I doe not ftraine it at the polition, It is familiar; bucat the Authors drift, Who in his circumstance, expresly proues That no may is the Lord of any thing, (Though in and of him there is much confifting,) Till he communicate his parts to others: Nor doth he of himfelfe know them for ought, Till he behold them formed in th'applause, Where they are extended : who like an arch reuerb'rate The voyce againe; or like a gate of feele, Fronting the Sunne, receives and renders backe His figure, and his heate. I was much rapt in this, And apprehended here immediately : The voknowne Alax; Heavens what a man is there? a very Horfe, That has he knowes not what. Nature, what things there Moff abiect in regard, and deare in vie. What things againe most deere in the estceme, And poore in worth : now shall we fee to morrow, An act that very chance doth throw vpon him? Asax renown'd? Oheauens, what some men doe. While some men leave to doe! How some men creepe in skittish fortunes hall, Whiles others play the Ideots in her eyes: How one man eates into anothers pride. While pride is feafling in his wanconnesse

And great Troy Chrinking. Acbil. I doe beleeue it : For they past by me, as my fers doe by beggars, Neither gaue to me good word, nor looke:

To fee thefe Grecian Lords; why, even already,

They clap the lubber Aiax on the shoulder,

As if his foote were on braue Helters breft,

What are my deedes for got?

Olif. Time hath (my Lord) a wallet at his backe, Wherein he puts almes for oblinion : A great fiz'd monfter of ingratitudes : Thole leraps are good deedes palt, Which are devour'd as fast as they are made, Forgot as foone as done : perfeuerance, deere my Lord, Keepes honor bright, to have done, is to hang Quite out of fashion. like a rusie male, In monumentall mockeie: take the instant way, For honour trauels in a straight so narrow, Where one but goes a breaft, keepe then the paths For emulation hath a thousand Sonnes, That one by one purfue; if you give way Or hedge alide from the direct forth right; Like to an entred Tyde, they all rush by, And leave you hindmoft: Or like a gallant Horse falne in first ranke, Lye there for pauement to the abiect, neere Ore-run and trampled on: then what they doe in present, Though leffe then yours in past, must ore-top yours : Fortime is like a fashionable Hoste, That flightly shakes his parting Guest by th'hand;

And with his armes out-firetchi, as he would flye, Graspes in the commet: the welcome ever smiles, And farewels goes out fighing : Olet not vertue feeke Remuneration for the thing it was : for beautie, with High birth, vigor of bone, defert in feruice, Love, friendship, charity, are Subiects all

To enuious and calumnlating time: One touch of nature makes the whole world kin: That all with one confent praise new borne gaudes, Though they are made and moulded of things past, And goe to dust, that is a little guilt. More laud then guilt oredufted. The present eye praises the present obiect: Then maruell not thou great and complear man, That all the Greekes begin to worship Aiax; Since things in motion begin to eatch the eye, Then what not flits: the cry went out on thee, And fill it might, and yet it may againe If thou would'it not entombe thy felfe alive. And cafe thy reputation in thy Tent : Whole glorious deedes, but in their fields of late. Made emulous missions mongst the gods themselves, And draue great Mars to faction.

Achil. Of this my privacie, I have strong reasons.

Vlif. But gainft your privacie The reasons are more potent and heroycall: Tis knowne Achilles, that you are in loue With one of Priami daughters.

Achil. Ha?knownel Ulif. Is that a wonder?

The providence that's in a watchfull State, Knowes almost cuery graine of Plutoes gold; Findes bottome in th'vncomprehensiue deepes; Keepes place with thought; and almost like the gods, Doe thoughts vnuaile in their dumbe cradles: There is a mysterie (with whom relation Durft neuer meddle) in the foule of State; Which hath an operation more divine, Then breath or pen can give expressure to: All the commerce that you have had with Troy, As perfectly is ours, as yours, my Lord, And better would it fit Achilles much, To throw downe Hellor then Tolixena. But it must grieue yong Pirbus now at home, When fame shall in her Hand found her trumpe; And all the Greekish Girles shall tripping sing, Great Heltors fifter did Achilles winne ; But our great Aiax brauely beate downe him. Farewell my Lord: 1 as your lover (peake ; The foole flides ore the lee that you should breake.

Pair. To this effect Achilles haue I mou'd you; A woman impudent and mannish growne, Is not more loth'd, then an effeminate man, In time of action: I fland condemn'd for this; They thinke my little stomacke to the warre, And your great love to me, testraines you thus : Sweete, toufe your felfe; and the weake wanton Capid Shall from your necke vnloofe his amorous fould, And like a dew drop from the Lyons mane, Be shooke to ayrie ayre.

Achil. Shall Aiax fight with Hector? Pair. I, and perhaps receive much honor by him. Achil. I fee my reputation is at flake.

My same is shrowdly goted. Pair. Othen beware: Those wounds heale ill, that men doe give themselves . Omission to doe what is necessary, Seales a commission to a blanke of danger, And danger like an ague fubtly taints Euen then when we lit idely in the funne. Achil. Goe call I berfires hither (weet Parroclus,

He fend the fools to Aux, and defice him Tinuite the Troisi Lords after the Combat To fee vs here vnarm'd. I have a womans longing. An appetite that I am ficke withall, To fee great Hollor in his weedes of peace; Dier Therfi.

To talke with him, and to behold his visage, Even to my full of view. A labour fau'd.

Ther. It wonder.

2cbd. What?

Ther. Wisk goes up and downe the field, asking for himselfe.

Ther. Heemust fight fingly co morrow with Heller, and is fo prophetically proud of anherolcall cudgelling, that he raves in faying nothing.

Achil. How can that be?

Ther. Why he fielkes up and downe like a Pearock, a firide and a fland: ruminates like an hoffeffe, that hath no Arithmatique but her braine to fet downe her reckoning a bites his lip with a politique regard, as who should lay there were wit in his head and twoo'd out; and fo there is: but it lyes as coldly in him, as fire in a flint, which will not shew without knocking. The mans vndone for euer; for if Hellor breake not his necke i'th'combat, heele break't himselfe in vaine-glory. He knowes not mee : I faid, good morrow Aux; And he replyes, thankes Agamemmen. What thinke you of this man, that takes me for the Generall? Hee's growne a very land-fish, languagelesse, a monster : a plague of opinion, a man may weare it on both fides like a leather Icikin.

Achil. Thou must be my Ambassador to him Therfices. Ther. Who, I: why heele answer no body: he profelles notanswering; speaking is for beggers: he weates his tongue in's armes: I will put on his prefence; let Parroclus make his demands to me, you shall see the Page. ant of Alax.

Achil. To him Patroclus; tell him, I humbly defire the valiant Aux, to invite the most valorous Helor, to come vnatm'd to my Tent, and to procure fale conduct for his perion, of the magnanimious and most illustrious, fixe or feauen times honour d Captaine, Generall of the Grecian Armie Agamemmon, &c. doe this.

Parro. Icue bleffe great Aiax. Ther. Hum.

Pair, I come from the worthy Achilles.

Ther. Ha?

Par. Who most humbly desires you to muite Heater to his Tent.

Pair. And to procure (see conduct from Agamannon.

Ther. Agamemion?

Pair. Imy Lord.

Ther. Ha?

Parr. What fay you too't.

Ther. God buy you with all my heart

Pair. Your answer fir.

Ther. If so morrow be a faire day, by eleven a clocke it will goe one way or other; howfoeuer, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr Your answer fir.

Ther Fare you well withall my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

760 No, but he's out a tune thus: what mulicke will be in him when Hester has knockt out his braines, I know not: but lam fute none, valeffe the Fidler Apollo get his finewes to make carlings on.

Achil. Come, thou shale beare a Letter to him Araight.

Ther Let me carry another to his Horse, for that's the more capable creature.

Achil. My minde is troubled like a Fountaine fir'd,

And I my felfe fee not the bottome of ic.

Ther. Would the Fountaine of your minde were cleere againe, that I might water an Alle at it : I had rather be a Ticke in a Sheepe, then fuch a valuatignorance.

Enter as one deore Aneas wa's a Torch, as another Paris, Diephabu: Anibense, Dursed ice Crecian, with Torches.

Par. See hos, who is that there? Dieph. It is the Lord Anras.

Ene. Is the Prince there in person? Had I fo good occasion to lye long As you Prince Pain nothing but liceverly bufnefie, Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Diom. That's my minde too: good morrow Lord

Par. A valiant Greeke Eneas, take his hand, Witnesse the processe of your speech within; You told how Diamed in a whole weeke by dayes Did haunt you in the Field.

Ene. Health to you valiant fir, During all question of the gentle truce: But when I meete you arm'd, as blacke defiance, As heart can thinke, or courage execute.

Drom. The one and other Diomed embraces, Our blouds are now in calme, and follong health. But when contention, and occasion meetes, By low, He play the hunter for thy life, With all my force, purfuite and pollicy

Ane. And thou shalt hunt a Lyon that will flye With his face backward, in humaine gendeneffe: Welcome to Troy; now by Anchifes life, Welcome indeede : by Venus hand I (weare, No man aliue can loue in such a fort, The thing he meanes to kill, more excellently.

Diom. We simpathize, lonc let Eneas live (If comy (word his fate benot the glory) A thousand compleate courses of the Sunne, But in mine emulous honor let him dy With every lognt a wound, and that to morrow.

Ane. We know each other well.

Dia We doe, and long to know each other worfe. Par. This is the most, despightful'it gentle greeting; The noblest hatefull love, that ere I heard of.

What businesse Lord so early? Anc. I was fent for to the King; but why, I know not Par. His purpose meets you; it was to bring this Greek To Calcha's house; and there to render him, For the enfreed Anthenor the faire Creffelt

Lets have your company; or if you pleafe, Haste there before vs. I constantly doe thinke (Or rather call my thought a certaine knowledge) My brother Troylus lodges there to night. Rouse him, and glue him note of our approach, With the whole quality whereof, I feare

We shall be much vowelcome. Ane. That I affure you:

Troplus had rather Troy were borne to Greece, Then Creffed bonne from Troy.

Par. There

Exerust.

Par. There is no helpe: The bitter disposition of the time will have it io. On Lord, weele follow you.

Ana. Good morrow all. Exit Anna Par. And tell me noble Diomed; faith tell ree true, Euen in the foule of found good fellow thip, Who in your thoughts merits faire Helen most?

My Selse, or Menelawi

Diam. Both alike. He merits well to have her, that doth feeke her, Nor making any fcruple of her foylure, With fuch a hell of paine, and world of charge. And you as well to keepe her, that defend her, Not pallating the tofte of her dishonour, With fuch a cofly loffe of wealth and friends: He like a puling Cuckold, would drinke vp The lees and diegs of a fiat tamed peece: You like a letcher, out of whorish loynes, Are pleased to breede our your inheritors: Both merits poyz'd, each weight no leffe nor more, But hear he, which heavier for a whore.

Par. You are too bitter to your country-woman. Dio. Shee's bitter to her countrey : heare me Paris, For every falle drop in her baudy veines, A Grecians life bath funke: for every fcruple Ofher contaminated earrion weight, A Troian hath beene flaine. Since the could fpeake, She hath not given fo many good words breath, As for her, Greekes and Troians Suffred death.

Par. Faire Dismed, you doe as chapmen does Dil praise the thing that you defire to buy : But we in filence hold this vertue well; Weeie not commend, what we intend to fell.

Here lyes our way.

Enter Troyles and Creffida.

Troy. Decretrouble not your selfe: the morne is cold. Cref. Then sweet my Lord, lle call mine Vnckle down; He shall vnbolt the Gates.

Trey. Trouble him not: To hed, to bed : fleepe kill those pritty eyes, And give as foft attachment to thy fences, As Infants empty of all thought.

Cref. Good morrow then. Troy. I prithee now to bed.

Cref. Are you a weary of me? Troy. O Creffida! but that the bufie day

Wak't by the Larke, hath rouz'd the ribauld Crowes, And dreaming night will hide our eyes no longer: I would not from thee.

Cref. Night hath beene too bilefe. Troy. Beshtew the witch! with venemous wights she As hidioully as hell; but flies the graspes of love, With wings more momentary, fwift then thought; You will catch cold, and curse me.

Cref. Prithee tarry you men will neuer tarry; O foolish Cressed, I might have still held off, And then you would have tarried. Harke, ther's one vp?

Pand, wahin. What's all the doores open here? Troy. It is your Vnckle. Enser Pandarus. Cref. A peltilence on him: now will he be mocking: I hall have fuch a lite.

Pen. How now, how now? how goe maiden-heads? Heare you Maide: wher's my cozin Creffel? Cref. Go hang your felf, you naughty mocking Vnckle: You bring me to doo ---- and then you floute me too. Par. To do what? to do what? let her lay what:

What have I brought you to doe?

Cref. Como, come, beshrew your heart: youle nere be good, nor fuffer others.

Pan. Ha,ha: alas poore wretche a poore Chipochia, haft nor slept to night? would he not (a naughty man) let it fleepers bug beare take him. One knochs.

Cref. Did not I tell you? would he were knockt ith' head. Who's that at doore? good Vnckle goe and fee. My Lord, come you againe into my Chamber: You smile and mocke me, as if I meant naughtily.

Troy. Ha, ha.

Cre. Come you are deceiu'd, I thinke of no fuch thing. How earnefly they knocke: pray you come in. Knocks. I would not for halfe Troy have you feene here.

Pan. Who's there? what's the matter? will you beate downe the doore? How now, what's the matter?

Enr. Good morrow Lord, good morrow Pas. Who's there my Lordie Eneas! by my troth ! knew you not: what newes with you to early?

And Is not Prince Troylus here? Pan. Here? what should he doe here?

Ene. Come he is here, my Lord, doe not deny him:

It doth import him much to speake with me.

Pan. Is he here fay you? 'tis more then I know, He be Sworne: For my owne part I came in late: what should he doehere?

Ene. Who, nay then: Come, come, youle doe him wrong, ere y'are ware: youle be so true to him, to be false to him: Doe not you know of him, but yet goe setch him hither, goe.

Enter Troylus.

Troj. How now, what's the matter? Ene. My Lord, I fearce have leisure to salute you, My matter is so rash: there is at hand, Pars your brother, and Deiphabus, The Grecian Diomed, and our Anthenor Deliuer'd to vs, and for him forth-with, Ere the first facrifice, within this houre. We must give up to Diomeds hand The Lady Creffida.

Troy. Is it concluded fo?

Ene. By Prium, and the general state of Troy, They are at hand, and ready to effect it.

Troy. How my archieuements mocke me; I will goe meete them: and my Lord Aneas, We met by chance; you did not finde me here.

An. Good, good, my Lord, the fecrets of nature Haue not more gift in tacitumitie. Exem

Enter Pandarsis and Cressid.

Pan. Is't poffible? no fooner got but loft : the divell take Anthener; the yong Prince will goe mad: a plague vpon Anthenor: I would they had brok's necke.

Cref. How now? what's the matter? who was here? Pan. Ah, ha!

Cref. Why ligh you so profoundly? wher's my Lord' gone? tellme swe't Vnckle, what's the matter?

Pan. Would I were as deepe under the earth as I am aboue.

Cref. O the gods! what's the matter?

Pan: Prythee get thee in : would thou had A nere been borne; I knew thou would'A be his death. O poore Gentleman: a plague vpon Authenor.

Cref. Good

Cref. Good Vnckle I befeech you, on my knees, I be-feech you what's the matter?

Par. Thou must be gone wench, thou must be gone; thou art chang'd for Aniberer: thou must to thy Father, and be gone from Trojlus : 'twill be his death : 'twill be his baine, he cannot beare it ..

Cref. O you immortall gods! I will not goe.

Pan. Thou must.
Cref. I will not Vnckle: I have forgot my Father:

I know no touch of confanguinitie : No kin, no loue, no bloud, no soule, so neere me, As the sweet Troyles: O you gods dinine Make Croffids name the very crowne of fallhood! If ever she leave Troylas : time, orce and death, Do to this body what extremitie you can; But the strong base and building of my loue, Is as the very Center of the earth, Drawing all things to it. I will goe in and weepe.

Ton. Doe, doe. Cres. Teare my bright heire, and scratch my praised cheekes, Cracke my cleere voyce with fobs, and breake my heart With founding Troylas. I will not got from Troy. Execut.

> Enter Paris, Troylus, Eneas, Deiphebus, Am Shenor and Domedes.

Par. It is great morning, and the houre prefixe Ofher deliverie to this valiant Grecke Comes fast vpon: good my brother Troyler, Tell you the Lady what she is to doe, And haft her to the purpole.

Troy. Walke into her house: He bring her to the Grecian presently; And to his hand, when I deliver her, Thinke it an Altar, and thy brother Trojlus

A Priest, there offring to it his heart.

Par. Iknow what tis to love, And would, as I shall pittie, I could belpe. Please you walke in, my Lords.

Exercit.

Enter Pandarus and Creffid. Par. Be moderate, be moderate. Cref. Why tell you me of moderation? The gricfe is tine, full perfect that I tafte, And no leffe in a fenfe as frong As that which causeth it. How can I moderate it? If I could temporife with my affection, Or brew it to a weake and colder pallat, The like alaiment could I give my griefe: My love admits no qualifying croffe; Ester Trojles.

No more my griefe, in such a precious losse. Pan. Here, here, here, he comes, a sweet ducke.

Cref. O Troylus, Troylus 1

Per. What a paire of spectacles is here? let me embrace too : oh hart, as the goodly faying is; O heart, heavie heart, why fighest thou without breaking? where he answers againe; because thou canst not ease thy smart by friendship, nor by speaking : there was neuer a truer rime; let vs cast away nothing, for we may live to have neede of fuch a Verle: we fee it, we fee it : how now Lambs?

Troy. Creffid: I loue thee in lo ftrange a puritie; That the bleft gods, as angry with my fencie More bright in zeale, then the denotion which Cold lips blow to their Deities : take thee from me.

Cref. Haue the gods enuie?

Pow. 1,1,1,1, tis too plaines cafe.

Cref. And is it true, that I must goe from Troy?

Troy. A hacefull truth.
Crof. What, and from Troylus too?

Troj. From Troy, and Trojlus.

Cref. 1A pullible?

Trey. And sodainely, where injurie of chance Puts backe leane-taking, justles roughly by All time of paule; rudely beguies our lips Of all reioyndure: forcibly preucots Our lockt embrasares; stranglos our deste vowes, Even in the birth of our owne laboring breath. We two, that with so many thousand sighes Did buy each other, must poorely fell our selves, With the rude breuitie and discharge of our Injurious time; now with a robbers hafte Crams his rich thecuerie vp, he knowes not how. As many farwels as be flars in heaven, With diffind breath, and confign'd killes to them, He fumbles vp into a loofe adiew; And scants vs with a fingle famish kiffe, Distasting with the salt of broken teares. Enter Spens

Aneau within. My Lord, is the Lady ready? Trey. Harke, you are call'd : some say the genius so Cries, come to him that inflandy must dye. Bid them have patience : The shall come anon.

Par. Where are my teates? raine, to lay this winde or my heart will be blowne up by the root.

Cref. I must then to the Greenans?

Troy. No remedy.

Cref. A wofull Creffed 'mong'ft the metry Greekes.

Troy. When thall we fee againe?

Troy. Here me my love: be thou but true ofheart.

Cref. I true? how now? what wicked deeme is this? Troy. Nay, we must vie expostulation kindely,

For it is patting from vs :

speake not, be thou true, as searing thee: For I will throw my Glose to death himselfe, That there's no maculation in thy heart: But be thou true, fay I to fashion in My sequent protestation: be thou true, And I will fee thee.

Cref. O you shall be expord, my Lord to dangers As infinite, as imminent : but Ile be true.

Troy. And Ile grow friend with danger;

Weare this Sleeue. Cref. And you this Glone. When thall I fee you?

Troy. I will corrupt the Grecian Centinels, To give thee nightly visitation.

But yet be true. Cref. O heavens : be true againe? Troy. Heare why I speake it; Love : The Grecian youths are fuil of qualitie,

Their louing well compos'd, with guift of nature, Flawing and swelling ore with Arts and exercise: How nouelties may moue, and parts with person. Alas, a kinde of godly icalouse; Which I besecch you call a vertuous since:

Makes me affraid.

Cres. O heavens, you love me not! Troy. Dye I a villaine then: In this I doe not call your faith in question So mainely as my merit : I cannot fing,

Nor heele the high Lauolt ; nor fweeten talke; Nor play at subtill games ; faire vertues all ;

To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant: But I can tell that in each grace of thefe, There lurkes a still and dumb-discourfine diwell, That tempts most cunningly : but be not tempted.

Cres. Doe you thinke I will:
Trey. No, but something may be done that we wil not: And sometimes we are divels to our selves, When we will tempt the frailtie of our powers, Prefuming on their changefull potentie.

Aneas within. Nay, good my Lord? Troy. Come kiffe, and let vs part. Paris within. Brother Troplus?

Trey. Good brother come you hither, And bring Anear and the Grecian with you,

Cref. My Lord, will you be true? Exit Troy. Who I? also it is my vice, my fault: Whiles others fish with craft for great opinion, I, with great truth, catch meere hmplicitie; Whil'ft fome with cunning guild their copper crownes, With truth and plainnesse I doe weare mine bare:

Enter the Greekes. Fezre not my truth; the morrall of my wit Is plaine and true, ther's all the reach ofit. Welcome fir Diomed, here is the Lady Which for Antener, we deliver you. At the port (Lord) He give her to thy hand, And by the way possesse thee what she is Entreate her faire; and by my foule, faire Greeke, If ere thou stand at mercy of my Sword, Name Creffed, and thy life shall be as safe As Priamis io Illion!

Diem. Faire Lady Creftid, So please you sauethe thankes this Prince expects: The lustre in youreye, heaven in your cheeke, Pleades your faire vilage, and to Diomed You shall be mistresse, and command him wholly.

Troy. Grecian, thou do'ft not vie me curteoully, To shame the seale of my petition towards, I praising her. I tell thee Lord of Greece : Shee is as farrehigh foaring o're thyprailes, As thou vitworthy to be cal'd her feruant: I charge thee vie her well, even for my charge: For by the dreadfull Pluto, If thou do'ft not, (Though the great bulke Achilles be thy guard) He cut thy throate.

Diom. Oh be not mou'd Prince Trojlus; Let me be priviledg'd by myplace and mellage, To be a speaker free? when I am hence, Ile answerro my lust: and know my Lord; He nothing doe on charge : to her owne worth She shall be priz'd: but that you say, be't io; Helpeake it in my spirit and honor, no.

Troy. Come to the Port. He tell thee Diomed, This braue, shall oft make thee to hide thy head: Lady give me your hand, and as we walke, To our owne selves bend we our needefull talke.

Sound Trumpet. Par. Harke, Hellers Trumpet. Ene. How have we spent this morning The Prince must thinke me tardy and remisse, That fwore to ride before him in the field.

Par. 'Tis Troylus fault: come, come, to field with him. Exeunt.

Dio. Let vemake ready ftraight. Enc. Yez, with a Bridegroomes fresh alacritie

Let vs addresse to tend on Hellors heeles: The glory of our Troy doth this day lye On his faire worth, and fingle Chiualrie.

Enter Aiax armed, Achilles, Patroclus, Agamemmon. Menelaus, Vlisses, Nester, Calcas de.

Aga. Here art thou in appointment fresh and faire, Anticipating time. With flatting courage. Give with thy Trumpet a loud note to Troy Thou dreadfull Aiax, that the appauled arre May pierce the head of the great Combatant, And hale him hither.

Aia. Thou, Trumper, ther's my purfe; Now cracke thy lungs, and split thy brasen pipe: Blow villaine, till thy sphered Bias cheeke Out-swell the collicke of puft Aquilon : Come, fretch thy cheft, and let thy eyes spout blouds Thou blowell for Helter Vlif. No Trumpet answers. Achil. 'Tis but early dayes.

Aga. Is not yong Diomed with Calcas daughter? Vis. "Tis he, I ken the manner of his gate, He rifes on the toe : that spirit of his In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Aga. Is this the Lady Creffid? Die Euen fhe.

Aga. Most deerely welcome to the Greekes, sweete Lady.

Neft. Our Generall doth falure you with a kiffe. Ulif. Yet is the kindenesse but particular; twere better the were kift in generall.

Neft. And very courtly counfell: He begin. So much for Neftor.

Achil. He take that winter from your lips faire Lady Acbilles bids you welcome.

Mene. I had good argument for killing once. Patro. But that's no argument for kuffing now;

For thus pop't Pair in his hardiment. Vlif. Oh deadly gall, and theame of all our fcornes, For which we loofe our heads, to gild his hornes.

Patro. The firft was Menelaus kiffe, this mine: Patroclus killes you.

Mene. Ohthis is trim.

. Parr. Paru and I kille evermore for him. Mene. He have my kille fir: Lady by your leave. Cref. In killing doe you render, or receiuc.

Pair. Both take and give. Cref. He make my march to live,

The kiffe you take is better then you give: therefore no kulle.

Mene. He give you boote, He give you three for one. Cref. You are an odde man, give even, or give none. Mene. An odde man Lady, every man is odde.

Cref. No, Parisisnot; for you know 'tistrue, That you are odde, and he is even with you.

Mene. You fillip me a'th' head. Cref. No. 11e be sworne.

It were no match, your naile against his horne: May I (weece Lady beg a kiffe of you?

Cref. You may Ulif. I doe defire it.

Cref. Why begge then?
Vif. Why then for Venus Take, give me a kills: When Hellen is a maide againe, and his-Cref. I am your debtor, claime it when 'tis due.

993

Vif. Nover's

Ulif. Neucr's my day, and men a kille of you. Diom. Lady a word, He bring you to your Father Neft. A womin of quicke lence. Viif. Fie, fie, vpon her : Ther's a language in her eye, her cheeke, her lip: Nay her fuote speakes, her wanton spirites looke out At cuery loynt, and motine of ber body : Oh thele encounterers fo glib of tongue, That give a coasting welcome etc it comes; And wide vnclaspe the tables of their thoughts, To every tickling reader : fet them downe, For fluttish spoyles of opportunitie; And daughters of the game. E. Enter all of Troy, Hellow, Paris, Lector, Helmus Exemus. and Attendants. Florifo. All. The Troians Trumper. Aga. Yonder comes the troope. Am. Haile all you flate of Greece : what shalbe done To him that victory commands? or doe you purpole, A victor shall beknowne : will you the Knights Shall to the edge of all extremitie Pursue each others or shall be divided By any voyce, or order of the field : Heller bad aske? Aga. Which way would Hellor have it? Ane. He cares not, heele obry conditions. Aga. 'Tis done like Hellor, but securely done, A little proudly, and great deale disprising The Knight oppos'd Ane. If act Achilles fit, what is your name? Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.
Am. Therefore Achilles; but what ere, know this, In the extremity of great and little : Valour and pride excel themselves in Hellor; The one almost as infinite as all; The other blanke as nothing: weigh him well: And that which lookes like pride, is currefie : This Aiax is halfe made of Helters bloud; In love whereof, halfe Helter flaies at home : Halfe heart, halfe hand, halfe Heltor, comes to feeke This blended Rnight, halfe Troian and halfe Greeke.

Achd. A maiden battaile then? O I perceive you. Aga, Here is fir, Diemed: goe gemle Knight, Stand by our Aiax: as you and Lord Ancas Confent vpon the order of their fight So be it: either to the vetermoft, Or elfe a breach: the Combatants being kin, Halle flints their frife, before their frokes begin. VIII. They are oppos'd already.

Aga, What Troian is that same that lookes so beaug? Ptif. The yongest Sonne of Priam; A true Knight; they call him Troylus; Not yet marure, yet matchleffe, firme of word, Speaking in deedes, and deedelesse in his tongue; Not foons prousk't, nor being prouok't, foone calm'd; His heart and hand both open, and both free: For what he has, he gives ; what thinkes, he thewes; Yet gives he not till indgement guide his bounty, Nor dignifies an impaire thought with breath ? Manly as Heller, but more dangerous; For Heller in his blaze of wrath subscribes To render obiects; but he, in heate of action, Is more vindecative then realous love, They call him Troylus; and on him erect, A fecond hope, as fairely built as Hellor.
Thus faies Ereas, one ahat knowes the youth Euenco his inches: and with private forle,

Did in great lilion thus translate lum to me. Alaum And. They are in altion.
Nost Now Asax hold thine owne Troy. Heller, thou Beep n, awake thee. Aga. His blowes are weldilpos'd where Aux. Whyns Diam. You most no more. Ase. Princes enough, so please you. Au I am not warme yet, let vs fight againe. Diom. As Heller pleases. Hell. Why then will I no more: Thou art great Lord, my Fathers fifters Some; A coulen german to great Prisms leede: The obligation of our bloud forbids A gorie emulation twixt vs twaine: Were thy commixion, Greeke and Trolan fo, That thou could'it fay, this hand is Grecian all, And this is Troian: the finewes of this Legge, All Greeke, and this all Troy: my Mothers bloud Rups on the deater cheeke, and this finisser Bounds in my fathers : by Ione multipotent, Thou should'it not beare from me a Greekish enember Wherein my fword had not impressore niade Of our ranke fend: but the just gods gainsay, That any drop thou borrwd It from thy mother, My facted Aunt, should by my mortall Sword Be drained. Let me embrace thee Aiax: By him that thunders, thou haft luftie Armer; Helior would have them fall ypon him thus. Cozen, all honor to thee. Ais. I thanke thee Heller: Thou art too gentle, and too free a man: I came to kill thee Cozen, and beare hence A great addition, earned in thy death. Hell. No: Nespedymus fo mirable, On whole bright creft, fame with her lowd ft (O yes) Cries, This is he; could'A promise to himselfe, A thought of added honor, torne from Heller. Ene. There is expectance here from both the fides, What further you will doe? Hell. Weele answere it: The issue is conbracement: Aux, farewell. Ais. If I might in entreaties finde successe, As feld I have the chance: I would defire My famous Coulin to out Grecian Tenta. Dions. Tis Agamemnous with, and great Ashilles Doth long to fee vnarm'd the valiant Hellor. Helt. Lucas, call my brother Trojlus to me: And fignifie this louing enterview To the expediers of our Troian pare: Defirethem home. Give me thy hand, my Coufin: I will goe eate with thee, and fee your Knights. Enter Agamemnon and the reft. Aia. Great Agamemuen comes to recetevs here. Hell. The worthielt of them, tell mename by name: But for Athilles, mine owne ferching eyes Shall finde him by his large and portly fize. Aga. Worthy of Armes: as welcome as to one That would be rid of fuch an enemic. But that's no welcome: vaderstand more cleere What's paft, and what's to come is firew'd with buskes And formeleffe ruine of oblinion: But in this excent moment, faith and troth, Strain'd purely from all hollow bias drawing: Bids thee with most divine integritie From heart of very heart, great Hellor welcome. Hell. I thanke thee most imperious Agamemon Age. My Aga. My well-fam'd Lord of Troy, no leffe to you. Men. Let me confirme my Princely brothers greeting, You brace of warlike Brothers, welcome hitier.

Helt. Who must we answer? Ene. The Noble Menelaus.

Hell. O. you my Lord, by Mars his gauntlee thanks, Mockenor, that I affect th'untraded Oath, Your guardam wife fricates Hill by Venus Glouc Shee's well, but bad me not commend her to you.

Men. Name her not now fir, the's a deadly Theame.

Hell. Operdon, I offend.

Nest. I have (thou gallant Troyan) scene thee oft Labouring for destiny, make cruell way Through rankes of Greekish youth: and I have seen thee As hot as Perfeus, sputte thy Phry gian Steed. And seene thee scorning forfeits and subduments, When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i'th'ayre, Not letting it decline, on the declined: That I have faid voto my standers by, Loe lupiter is yonder, dealing life. And I have seene three pause, and take thy breath, When that a ring of Greekes have hem'd thee m, Like an Olympian wrestling. This have I seene, But this thy countenance (Rill lockt in fleele) I neuer faw till now. I knew thy Grandfire, And once fought with him; he was a Souldier good, But by great Mars, the Captaine of vs all, Neuer like thee. Let an oldman embrace thee, And (worthy Warriour) welcome to our Tents.

Ane. Tis the old Neffor.
Held. Let me embrace thee good old Chronicle, That haft fo long walk'd hand in hand with time: Most reverend Neftor, I am glad to claspe thee

Ne.1 would my armes could match thee in contention As they contend with thee in courtefie.

Heat. I would they could.

Nest. Ha? by this white beard I'ld fight with thee to morrow. Well, welcom, welcome : I haue seen the time. Myf. I wonder now, how yonder City flands,

When we have heere her Base and pillar by vs. Helt. I know your fauour Lord VI, fes well Ah fir, there's many a Greeke and Troyan dead, Since first I faw your selfe, and Diamed

In Illion, on your Greekish Embassic. Vlyf. Sir, I foretold you then what would enfue, My prophetie is but halfe his journey yet; For yonder wals that pertly front your Towne, Yond Towers, whose wanton tops do busse the clouds, Must kisse their owne feet.

Helt. I must not beleeue you : There they stand yet: and modestly I thinke, The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost A drop of Grecian blood : the end crownes all, And that old common Arbitrator, Time, Will one day end it.

VIIS. So to him we leave it. Most gentle, and most valiant Hellor, welcome; After the Generall, I beseech you next To Feast with me, and see me at my Tent.

Achil. I shall forestall thee Lord Vly Tes, thou Now Hector I have fed mine eyes on thee, I have with exact view perus'd thee Hellor,

And quoted loynt by loynt. Helt. Is this Achilles

Achille I am Achilles.

Hell. Stand faite I prythee, let me looke on thee.

Achil. Behold thy fill.

Helt. Nay, I have done already.

Achil. Thou are to breefe, I will the second time. As I would buy thee, view thee, limbe by limbe.

Helt. O like a Booke of sport thou'lt reade me ore: But there's more in me then thou vnderstand'st. Why doest thou so oppresse me with thine eye?

Achil. Tell me you Heavens, in which part of his body Shall I deftroy him? Whether there, or there, or there, That I may give the locall wound a name, And make distinct the very breach, where-out Hellors great spirit flaw. Answer me heavens, Hell. It would discredit the bleft Gods, proud man, To answer such a question : Stand againe; Think it thou to eatch my life so pleafantly, As to prenominate in nice consecture Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Achd. Itell thee yea.

Hell, Wert thou the Oracle to tell me fo, I'ld not beleeve thee; henceforth guard thee well, For He not kill thee there, nor there, nor there, But by the forge that flythied Mars his helme, He kill thee every where, yea, ore and ore. You wiselt Grecians, pardon me this bragge, His insolence drawes folly from my lips, But He endeuour deeds to match these words. Or may I neuer-

Ainx. Do not chafe thee Cofin: And you Achiller, let these threats alone Till accident or purpose bring you too't. You may every day enough of Hestor If you have stomacke. The generall state I feare, Can (carle intreat you to be odde with him.

Hell. I pray you let vs fee you in the field, We have had pelting Warres fince you refus'd

The Grecians caule.

Acbil. Doft thou intreat me Heller? To morrow do I meete thee fell as death, To night, all Friends.

Helt. Thy hand wpon that match.

Aga. Firf, all you Peeres of Greece go to my Tent, There in the full convine you: Afterwards, As Helters leyfure, and your bounties shall Concurre together, feuerally intreachim. Beate lowd the Taborins, let the Trumpets blow, That this great Souldier may his welcome know. Excum

Troy. My Lord Uly fes, tell me I befeech you, In what place of the Field doth Calchas keepe? Utyf. At Menclaus Tent, most Princely Troyles, There Diomed Joth feast with him to night, Who neither lookes on heaven, nor on earth, But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view On the faire Creffid.

Troy. Shall I (fweet Lord) be bound to thee fo much,

After we part from Agumenmon Tent,

To bring me thither?

Vlyf. You shall command me fir: As gentle tell me, of what Honour was This Creffida in Troy, had the no Louer there That wailes her absence?

Troy. Ofir, to fuch as boatting thew their scarres, A mocke is due: will you walke on my Lord? She was belou'd, the lou'd: The is, and doorh; But still sweet Love is food for Fortunes tooth. Exeuer

Enter Achilles , and Patroclus .

Achil. He heat his blood with Greekish wine to night

Which with my Cemitar He coole to morrow: Patroclus, let vs Feafthim to the hight.

Pat. Heere comes Therfitte.

Achil. How oow, thou core of Enuy?

Thou crusty batch of Nature, what's the newes? Ther. Why thou picture of what thou feem'il, & Idoll of Ideor-worthippers, here's a Letter for thee.

Actual. From whence, Fragment?
Ther. Why thou full dish of Foole, from Troy.

Par. Who keepes the Tent now?

Ther. The Surgeons box, or the Patients wound,

Patr. Well faid aduerfity, and what need thefe tricks? Ther. Prythee be filent boy, I profit not by thy talke, thou art thought to be Achilles male Varlot.

Pairo, Male Varlot you Rogue; What's that?
Ther. Why his masculine Whore, Now the rotten diseases of the South, guts-griping Ruptures, Catarres, Loades a gravell i th'backe, Lethargies, cold Palises, and the like, take and take againe, such prepostrous discoue-

Pat. Why thou damnable box of enug thou, what mean's thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I cutfe thee?

Pair. Why no, you ruinous But, you whorfon indi-

Ringushable Curre.

Ther. No? why art thou then exasperate, thou idle. immateriall skiene of Sleyd filke; thou greene Sarconet flap for a fore eye, thou taffell of a Prodigals putfe thou: Ah how the poore world is pettred with fuch water-Bies, diminutiues of Nature.

Pas. Out gall.

Ther. Finch Egge.
Ach. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite From my great purpole in to morrowes battell 1 Heere is a Letter from Queene Hecuba, A token from her daughter, my faire Loue, Both raxing me, and gaging me to keepe An Oath that I have fworne. I will not breake it, Fall Greekes, faile Fame, Honor or go, or flay, My maior vow lyes heere; this lle obay: Come, come Therfues, helpe to trim my Tent, This night in banquetting must all be spent. Away Patroclus.

Ther. With too much bloud, and too little Brain, these two may run mad : but if with too much braine, and too little blood, they do, Ile be a curer of madmen. Heere's Agameonon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loves Quailes, but he has not fo much Braine as eare-wax; and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there his Brother, the Bull, the primative Statue, and oblique memoriall of Cuckolds, athrifty shooing-horne in a chaine, hanging at his Brothers legge, to what forme but that he is, shold wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turne him too: to an Affe were nothing; hee is both Affe and Oxe; to an Oxe were nothing, hee is both Oxe and Affe : to be a Dogge, a Mule, a Cat, a Fitchew, a Toade, a Lizard, an Owle, a Puttocke, or a Hetring without a Roe, I would not care : but to be Menelaus, I would conspire against Destiny. Aske me not what I would be, if I were not Therfues: for I care not to bee the lowfe of a Lazar, fo I were not Menelaus. Hoy-day, fpirits and fires.

Enter Heltor, Alax, Agamemnon, Vlyffes, Nefor Diomea, with Lights.

Aga. We go wrong, we go wrong.
Asax. No yonder 'eis, there where we fee the light. Heat I trouble you.

Alax, No,001 a whit.

Enter Achilles.

VIJf. Heere comes himselfe to guide you?

Achil. Welcome braue Heller welcome Princerall. Agam. So now faire Prince of Troy, I bid goodnight, Aiex commands the guard to tend on you.

Hell. Thanks, and goodnight to the Greeks general.

Alm. Goodnight my Lord.

Helt. Goodnight Iweet Lord Menelans.

Ther. Sweet draught : (weet quoth-a? (weet finkt,

Achil, Goodnight and welcom, both as once, to those that go, or tarry.

Ago. Goodnight

Achil. Old Neffor tarties, and you too Doomed. Keepe Hellor company an house, or two.

Die. I cannot Lord, I haue important bufmelie, The tide whereof is now, goodnight great Heller Hell. Give me your hand.

Ulys. Follow his Torch, he goes to Chalca Tent, He keepe you company.

Troj. Sweet fir, you honour me.

Hell. And fo good night.

Achil. Come, come, coter my Tent.

Ther. That same Diomed's a falle-hearted Rogue, a most vniust Knaue; I will co more trust him when bee leeres, then I will a Serpent when he hiffes : he will fpend his mouth & promise, like Brabler the Hound; but when he performes, Astronomers foretell it, that it is prodigsous, there will come some change: the Sunne borrowes of the Moone when Diomed keepes his word. I will tather leave to fee Hellor, then not to dogge him they fay, he keepes a Troyan Deab, and vies the Traitour Chaleau his Tent. Ile after--Nothing but Letcherie? All incontinent Varlets.

Enter Diomed.

Dio. What are you up here ho? speake?

Chal. Who cals?

Dio. Diemed, Chalcas (Ithinke) wher's you Daughter? Chal. She comes to you Enter Troyless and Vliffes.

Vlif. Stand where the Torch may not discover vs. Enter Crefied.

Troy. Crefied comes forth to him.

Die. How now my charge?

Cref. Now my sweet gardian: harke a word with you.

Troy. Yea, so familiar?

Vaf, She will fing any man at fir A fight.

Ther. And any man may finde her, if he can take her life : the inoted.

Dso. Will you remember?

Cal. Remember? yes.

Dio. Nay, but doe then; and let your minde be coupled with your words.

Troy. What should she remember?

Cref. Sweete hony Greek, tempt me no more to folly. Ther. Roguery. Die. Nay then.

Cref. He tell you what.

Dio. Fo, fo, come teil a pin, you are a forfwome .-Cref. In faith I cannot : what would you have me do?

Ther. A jugling tricke, to be fecretly open.

Die. What did you weare you would bestow on me Cref. I prethee do not hold me to mine oath, Bid me doe not any thing but that fweere Greeke.

Dio. Good

Dio. Good night. Troy. Hold, patience.
Utif. How now Troisn?
Cref. Diamed.

Dio. No, no, good night: He be your fuole no more.

Troy. Thy better must.
Cref. Harke one word in your eare.

Troy. Oplegue and mednesse! Vist. You are mound Prince, let vs depare I pray you,

Lest your displeasure should enlarge it selfe To wrathfull tearmes: this place is dangerous; The time right deadly : I befeech you goe.

Troy. Behold, I pray you.
Vis. Nay, good my Lord goe off: You flow to great distraction . come my Lord?

Tray. I pray thee stay? Vlif. You have not patience, come.

Troy. I pray you flay? by hell and hell torments, I will not speake a word.

Dio. And so good night.

Cref. Nay, but you part in anger.

Try, Doth that grieve thee? O withcred with! Our. Why, how now Lord?
Try, By love! will be patient. Cref. Gardian ? why Greeke ?

Dso. Fo, fo, adew, you palter,
Cref. In faith I doe not: come hither once againe.
Vis. You shake my Lord at something, will you goe

you will breake out.

Tray. She stroakes his cheeke.

Troy. Ney stay, by law I will not speake a word.

There is betweene my will, and all offences,

A goard of patience : (tay a little while.
Ther. How the diue!! Luxury with his fat rumpe and potato finger, tickles these together : frye lechery, frye.

Die. But will you then?

Cref. In fanh I will lo; neuer trust me elfe.

Die. Giue me some token for the furety of it.

Cref. He fetch you one.

Vif. You have sworne patience.

Trey. Feare menor fweere Lord. I will not be my felfe, nor have cognition

Enser Creffid. Of what I feele: I am all patience.

Ther. Now the pledge, now, now, now. Cref. Here Dismod, keepe this Sleeue. Troy. O bequire! where is thy Faith? Vif. My Lord.

Troy. I will be patient, outwardly I will.
Cref. You looke upon that Sleeve I behold it well: Helou'd me : O falle wench : giur't me againe.

Dio. Whose was't?

Cref. It is no matter now I have t againe. I will not meete with you to morrow night :

I psychee Diomed visite me no more.

Ther. Now she sharpens: well said Whet some.

Dio. I shall haue it.

Cref. What, this? Dio. I thar.

Cref. O all you gods I O prettie, prettie pledge; Thy Maister now lies thinking in his bed Of thee and me, and fighes, and takes my Gloue, And gives memoriall daintie kiffes to it; As I kiffe thee.

Dio. Nay, doenot fnatch it from me.

Cref. He that takes that, rake: my heart withall.

Dio. I had your heart before, this followes it.

Troy. I did (weare patience. Cref. You shall not have it Diamod; faith you shall not: He give you something else.

Dio. I will have this : whose was it?

Cref. It is no matter.

Dio. Come tell me whole it was?

Cref. 'Twas one that lou'd me better then you will.

But now you have it, take it.

Dio. Whole was it?

Cref. By all Dionas waiting women youd: And by her felfe, I will no: tell you whose.

Dio. To morrow will I weare it on my Helme, And grieve his spirit that dates not challenge it. Troy. Wert thou the divell, and wor'll it on thyhome,

It should be challeng'd.

(ref. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past ; and yet it is not;

I will not keepe my word.
Dio. Why then farewell,

Thou never shalt mocke Diomed againe.

Cref. You shall not goe : one cannot speake a word, But it Arait Races you.

Dio. I doe not like this fooling.
Ther. Not I by Pluto: but that that likes not me, please les me beil.

Dio. What shall I come? the house

Cref. I; come : O loue! doe, come: I shall be plagu'd.

Dio. Farewell till then.

Cref. Good night: I prythee come : Troyles farewell; one eye yet lookes on thee; But with my heart, the other eye, doth fee. Ah poore our fexe; this fault in vs I finde: The errour of our eye, directs our minde.: What errout leads, must erre: O then conclude, Mindes (wai'd by eyes, are full of turpitude.

Ther. A proofe of ftrength the could not publish more

Valeffe the fay, my minde is now turn'd where.
Uif. Al's done my Lord.

Troy. It is. Vuf. Why flay we then?

Troy. To make a recordation to my foule Of eucry syllable that here was spoke; But if I tell how thefe two did coact; Shall I not lye, in publishing a truth? Sith yet there is a credence in my heare a An esperance so obstinately strong, That doth invert that tell of eyes and eares; As if those organs had deceptions functions, Created onely to calumniate.

was Creffed here?

Exit.

Vlif. I cannot conjure Trolan.

Troy. She was not fure. Vlif. Most fure she was.

Troy. Why my negation hath no taste of madnesses Vlif. Normine my Lord: Creffed was here but now.

Troy. Let it not be beleen'd for womanhood : Thinke we had mothers; doe not give advantage To Aubbome Criticks, apt without a theeme For depravation, to square the general for.
By Creffel rule. Rather thinke this not craffel.

Vis. What hath the done Prince, that can feyle our mothers?

Troy. Nothing at all, volette that this were the.
Ther. Will be swagget blodelse out on's owne eye?

Troy. This sheet no, this is Diomids Croffida :

If besucie have a foule, this is not fbe?

If foules guide vowes; if vowes are fanctimonie; Iffandimonie be the godi delight. If there be rule in vnitie it felfe, This is not the: O madnelle of discourse ! That cause fets up, with, and against thy lelfe By foule authoritic : where reason can revole Without perdition, and loffe affume all reafons Without revolt This is, and is not Creffid: Within my foule, there doth conduce a fight Of this ftrangenature, that a thing inseperate, Divides more wider then the skie and earth ; And yet the spacious bredth of this division. Admits no Orifex for a point as fobile, As Ariachnes broken woofe to enter: Inflance, O inflance! ftrong as Plutoes gates : Creffid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven; Inflance, Oinflance, ftrong as heatten it felfe : The bonds of heaven are flips, diffolu'd and loos'd, And with another knot five finger sied, The fractions of her faith, orts of her love: The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greazle religies, Ofher ore eaten faith, are bound to Diomed

Vlif. May worthy Traylus be halfe attached With that which here his passion doth expresse? Troy. I Greeke: and that shall be divulged well In Characters, as red as Mars his heart Inflam'd with Venu: never did yong man fancy With so eternall, and so fixe a soule. Harke Greek: as much I doe Creffida loue; So much by weight, hate I her Diorned, That Sleeve is mine, that heele beare in his Helme : Were it a Caske compos'd by Vulcans skill My Sword should bite it : Not the dreadfull spout, Which Shipmen doe the Hurricano call, Constring'd in masse by the almighty Fenne, Shall dizzie with more ciamour Neptunes eare In his difcent; then shall my prompted sword, Falling on Diemed.

Ther. Heele tickle it for his concupie. Troy. O Creffid! O falle Creffid falle, falle, falle: Let all untruths stand by thy stained name, And theyle feeme glorious.

Plif. O containe your felfe: Your passion drawes eares hither.

Enter Extas. Ene. I haue beene fecking you this houre my Lord: Hellor by this is arming him in Troy.

Aiax your Guard, states to conduct you home.

Troj. Haue with you Prince: my curreous Lord adew: Farewell revolted faire: and Diomed, Stand fast and weare a Castle on thy head.

Vii. He bring you to the Gares. Trop. Accept diffracted thankes.

Execute Troylus, Eneas, and Uliffes.

Ther. Would I could meete that toague Diomed, I would croke like a Rauen : I would bode, I would bode : Patrocles will give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore: the Parros will not doe more for an Almond, then he for a commodious drab: Lechery, lechery, fill warres and lechery, nuthing elicholds fashion. A burning druell take them.

Enter Helter and Andromache. And. When was my Lord to much angently temper'd, To Rop his cares against admonishment? vasime, vnzime, and doe not fight to day.

Hell. You traine me to offend you; get you gone.

By the cuertafting gods, lle goe,

And My decames will fure prove ominous to the day Hell. No more I fay. Enter Caffendra.

Caffa, Where is my brother Heller?

And. Here lifter, sim d, and bloudy in intent; Confort with me in loud and deere perition: pursue wehim on knees ; for I have dreampt Ofbloudy turbulence; and this whole night Hath nothing beene but Phapes, and formes of Daughter.

Call O, ustrue.

Hell. Ha? bid my Trumpet found

Caf. No notes of fallie, for the heavens, fweet brother.
Hell. Eagon I fay: the gods have heard me (weare.
Caf. The gods are deale to not and peeush vowes;

They are polluted offrings, more abhord Then spotted Livers in the sacrifice.

And. Obepersivaded, doe not count u holy, To hurt by being just; it is as lawfull: For we would count give much to as violent thefte, And rob in the behalfe of charitie.

Caff. It is the purpose that makes strong the vowe; But vowes to every purpose must not bold:

Vnsme sweete Helter

Heal. Hold you fall I fay; Mine honour keepes the weather of my fate: Life every man holds deere, but the deere man Holds honor farre more precious, deere, then life. Enter Troylus

How now yong man? mean It thou to fight to day? And. Caffandra, call my father to perswade.

Exa Cafandra. Hell. No faith yong Treylen; doff thy harnelle youth. I am to day ith vaine of Chiualtie: Let grow thy Sinews till their knots be firong: And tempt not yet the brothes of the warre. Vnarme thee, goe; and doubt thou not braue boy,

He stand to day, for thee, and me, and Troy. Troy Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you;

Which better fits a Lyon, then a man. Hest. What vice is that? good Troplus chide me for su. Trop. When many times the captive Greeco fals.

Even in the fanne and winde of your faire Sword: You bid them rife, and live.

Hed. O'tis faire play.

Troj. Fooles play, by heaven Heller, Hell. How now? Troy. For th'loue of all the gods Let's leave the Hermit Pitty with our Mothers;

And when we have our Armors buckled on, The venom'd vengeance ride vpon our fwords, Spur them to ruthfull works, remethem from ruth.

Hell. Fie lausge, fie.

Heller, then 'tis warres.

Hed. Trojin I would not have you fight to day.

Troj. Who should with-hold me? Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mar, Beckning with herie trunchion my retire; Not Priamia and Hechba on knees; Their eyes ore-galled with recourse of teares: Nor you my brother, with your true fword drawne Oppol'd to hinder me, fhould ftop my way: But by my ruine.

Enter Priam and Caffandra. Caff. Lay hold spon him Prum, hold him fall: He is thy crutch; nowaf thou loofe thy ffsy, Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,

Fall all together,

Priam. Come Heller, come, goe backet Thy wife hath dreampt : thy mother hath had visions ; C. Sandra doch forefee; and I my felfe, Am like a Prophet fuddenly emapt, to cell thee that this day is ominous i Therefore come backe.

Helt Ances is a field, And I do Stand engag'd to many Greekes, Eveninthe faith of valour, to appeare

This morning to them.

Priam. I, but thou shalt not goe, Hell. I muft oot breake my faith: You know me dutifull, therefore deare fir, Let me not shame respect ; but give me leave To take that course by your consent and voice, Which you doc here forbid me, Royall Priam.

Caff. O Priam, yeelde not to him. And. Doe not deere father.

Hell. Andromache I am offended with you : Vpon the louc you beare me, get you in.

Exit Andromache.

Troy. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girle, Makes all thefe bodements.

Cuff. O farewell, deere Hellor : Looke how thou dieft; looke how thy eye turnes pale: Looke how thy wounds doth bleede at many vents : Harke how Troy roares; how Heenba cites out; How poore Andremache fhrils her dolour forth; Behold diffraction, frenzie, and amazement, Like witleffe Antickes one another meete. And all cry Hellor, Hellors dead : O Hellor !

Troy. Away, away.
Caf. Farewell: yes, fost: Heltor I take my leave; Thou do'ft thy felfe, and all our Troy decesue. Hell. You are amaz'd, my Liege, at her exclaime ?

Goe in and cheere the Towne, weete forth and fight: Doe deedes of praise, and tell you them at night.

Priam. Farewell, the gods with lafetie stand about Alarum.

Troy. They are at it, harke : proud Dwmed, beleeue I come to loose my arme, or winne my floris

Enter Pandar.

Pand. Doe you heare my Lord? do you heare?

Troy. What now?

Pand. Here's a Letter come from yourd poore girle.

Troy. Let me reade.
Pand. A whorson tisicke, a whorson rascally tisicke, fo troubles me; and the foolish fortune of this girle, and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o'th's dayes : and I have a rheume in mine eyes too; and fuch an ache in my bones; that voleffe a man were curft, I cannot tell what to thinke ou't. What fayes shee

Troy. Words, words, meere words, no matter from the heart;

Th'effect doth operate another way. Goewinde to winde, there turne and change together: My love with words and errors fill the feedes; But edifies another with ber deedes.

Pand Why, but heare you!

Troy. Hence brother lackie ; ignomic and shame Pursue thy life, and liue aye with thy name.

A LATUM.

Enter Therfites in excuefion.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another, Ile goe looke on : that diffembling abhominable varler Dian mode, has got that fame feuruse, dotting, foolish yong knauesSleeue of Troy, there in his Helme: I would faine fee them meet; that, that fame yong Troian affe, that loves the whore there, might fend that Greekish whore-maifterly villaine, with the Sleeue, backe to the diffembling luxurious drabbe, of a fleeueleffeerrant. O'th' torher fide the pollicie of those craftie swearing raseals; that stole old Moule-caten dry cheele, Neftor : and that fame dogfoxe Vliffes' is not prou'd worth a Black-berry. They fet me vp in policy, that mungrill curre Aiax, against that dogge of as bad a kinde, Achiller And now is the curie Asax prouder then the curre Achilles, and will not arme to day. Whereupon, the Grecians began to proclaime barbarisme; and pollicie growes into an ill opinion.

Enter Diomed and Troylus. Soft, here comes Sleeve, and th'other.

Troy. Flye not: for should'st thou take the River Scin, I would fwim after.

Diom. Thou do'ft miscall retire: I doe not flye; but aduantagious care Withdrew me from the oddes of multitude s

Who shall tell Priam so? or Heswar
Lethim that will a screechoule aye be call'd,
Goe in to Troy, and say there, Heller's dead:
There is a word will Priam turne to stone;
Make wels, and Niebes of the maides and wives;
Coole statues of the youth: and in a word,
Scatte Troy out of it selfe. But match away,
Haller is dead: there is no more to say.

Stay yet: you vile abhominable Tents,
Thus proudly pight vpon out Phrygian plaines:
Let Titan rife as early as he dare,
He through, and through you; & thou great fiz'd coward:
No space of Earth shall funder out two hates,
He haunt thee, like a wicked conscience shill,
That mouldeth goblins swift as frensies thoughts,
Strike a free march to Troy, with comfore goe;
Hope of reuenge, shall hide our inward woe.

I fend it through the Rivers of your blood Euen to the Court, the Heart, to th' feate o th' Braine, And through the Crankes and Offices of man, The strongest Nerues, and small inferiour Veines From me receive that naturall competencie Whereby they live. And though that all at once (You my good Friends, this layes the Belly) marke me.

2. Cit. I fir, well, well. Men. Though all at once, cannot See what I do deliver out to each, Yet I can make my Awdit vp, that all From me do backe receive the Flowre of all, And leave me but the Bran. What fay you too't?

a Cu. It was an answer, how apply you this? Men. The Senators of Rome, ate this good Belly, And you the mutinous Members: For examine Their Counsailes, and their Cares; disgest things rightly. Touching the Weale a'th Common, you shall finde No publique benefit which you receive But it proceeds, or comes from them to you, And no way from your felues. What do you thinke? You, the great Toe of this Assembly :

I the great Toe ? Why the great Toe? Mon. For that being one o'th lowest, basest, poorest Of this most wife Rebellion, thou goest formost

Theu Rascall, that are worft in blood to run, Lead it first to win some variage.
But make you ready you sille bass and clubs. Rome, and her Rats, are at the point of battell, The one fide must have baile.

Hayle, Noble Marine.

Mer. Thanks. What's the matter you diffentious roguet That rubbing the poore Itch of your Opinion, Make your selves Seabs.

2.Cit. We have ever your good word.

Mar. He that will give good words to thee, wil flatter Beneath abhorting. What would you have, you Cutter, That like not Peace, nor Warre? The one affrights you. The other maker you proud. He that truffs to you, Where he should finde you Lyons, findes you Hares: Where Foxes, Geele you are: No lurer, no, Then is the coale of fire vpon the Ice, Or Hailstone in the Sun. Your Vertue it, To make him worthy, whole offence subdues him, And curse that luftice did it. Who deserves Greatnes, Deferues your Hate: and your Affections are A fickmans Appetite; who defires most that Which would encrease his euill. He that depends Vpon your fauours, swimmes with finnes of Leade, And howes downe Oakes, with rushes. Hang yearust ye? With cuery Minute you do change a Minde. And call him Noble, that was now your Hate: Him vilde, that was your Garland. What's the matter, That in these severall places of the Citie, You cry against the Noble Senate, who (Vnder the Gods) keepe you in awe, which elfe Would feede on one another? What's their feeking? Men. For Corne at their owne tates, wherof they say The Citie is well flor'd.

Mar. Heng'em: They say?
They'l six by th' fire, and presume to know What's done i'th Capitoll: Who's like to rife, Who thrives, & who declines: Side factions, & give out Coniecturall Marriages, making parties ftrong, And feebling fuch as frand not in their liking. Below their cobled Shooes. They fay ther's grain enough? Would the Nobility lay ande their ruth, And let me vie my Sword, I'de make a Quarrie With thousands of these quarter'd saues, as high As I could picke my Lance.

Menen. Nay these are almost thoroughly persuaded: For though abundantly they lacke diferetion Yet are they passing Cowardly. But I beseech you, What fayes the other Troope?

Mar. They are distolu'd: Hang em; They faid they were an hungry, figh'd forth Prouerbes That Hunger-broke stone wals: that dogges must eate That meate was made for mouths. That the gods fem not Corne for the Richmen onely: With these threds They vented their Complainings, which being answer'd Anda petition granted them, a strange one, To breake the heart of generolity, And make bold power looke pale, they threw their caps As they would hang them on the hornes ath Moone, Shooting their Emulation.

Menen. What is graunted them? Mar. Fine Tribunes to defend their vulga: Wildoms Of their owne choice. One's Iunius Bruses, Sicinius Veluina, and I know not. Sdeath, Mef. Where's Casus Martins? Mar. Heere: what's the matter?

Wef. The newes is fir, the Volcies are in Armes.

Mar I am glad on't, then we shall ha meanes to vent Our mustie superfluity. See our best Elders.

Ester Sicinius Velusas, Annias Braths Commiss, Titus Larting, with other Senetours.

1. Sen. Martine 'tis true, that you have lately told va, The Volces are in Armes

Mar. They have a Leader, Talles Auffidies that will put you too't: I finne in enuying his Nobility : And were I any thing but what I am, I would wish me onely he.

Com. You have fought together?
Mer. Were halfe to halfe the world by theares, & he vpon my partie, I'de revolt to make Onely my warres with him. He is a Lion

That I am proud to hunt.

s. Sen. Then worthy Martin Attend upon Cominini to thele Warres.

Com. It is your former promile.

Mar. Siritis,

And I am constant : Trens Lucius, thou Shalt fee me once more ftrike at Tullus face What are thou fliffe? Stand'ft out?

Tit. No Cains Martini, He leane upon one Crutch, and fight with tother, Ere flay behmderhis Busnelle.

Men. Oh true-bred.

Son. Your Company to'th Capitoll, where I know Our greateff Friends actend vs.

Tit. Lead you on: Follow Cominus, we mult followe you, right worthy you Priority

Com. Noble Martins.

Sen. Hence to your homes, be gone.

Mar Naylet them follow,

The Volces have much Corne: take thefe Rats thither, To gnaw their Garners. Worshipfull Mutiners, Your valour puts well forth: Pray follow.

Citizens Steale away. Manet Sicur. O Brutus. Siein. Was ever man lo prond as is this Martiner?

Bru. He has no equall.

Siein. When we were chosen Tribunes for the people. Bra. Mark'd you his lip and eyes.

Siein. Nay, but bis taunes.

Bra. Being mou'd, he will not spare to gird the Gods. Siela. Bemocke the modell Moone.

Bru. The present Warres deuoure him, he is growne Too proud to be so valiant.

Siem. Such a Nature, tickled with good fuceelle, difdaines the Chadow which he treads on at noone, but I do wonder, his infolence can brooke to be commanded vnder Commini?

Bru Fame, ar the which he symes, In whom already he's well grac'd, cannot Better be held, not more attain'd then by Enter Tullus Auffidies with Senators of Corsolus.

1.Sen. So, your opinion is Auffiding, That they of Rome are entred in our Counfailer. And know how we proceede.

Auf. Is it not yours? What ever have bin thought one in this State That could be brought to bodily act, ere Rome Had circumuention: 'tis not foure dayes gone Since I heard thence, these are the words, I thinke I have the Letter heere : yes, heere it is; They have preft a Power, but it is not knowne Whether for East or West : the Dearth is great, The people Mutinous: And it is rumour'd. Commius, Martius your old Enemy (Who is of Rome worle hated then of you) And Tiens Larius, a most valiant Roman, These three leade on this Preparation Whether 'tis beat : most likely, 'tis for you: Consider of it.

1. Sen. Out Armie's in the Field: We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready Toanswer vs.

Auf Nor did you thinke it folly, To keepe your great precences vayl'd, till when They needs mult thew themselves, which in the harching It feem'd appear'd to Rome. By the discourry, We shalbe shortned in our syme, which was To take in many Townes, ere (almost) Rome Should know we were a-foot.

2. Sm. Noble Auffednus, Take your Commission, hye you to your Bands, Let vs alone to guard Corroles If they fet downe before's : for the remoue Bring vp your Army : but (I thinke) you'l finde Th'haue not prepar'd for vs.

Anf. O doubt not that, I speake from Certainties. Nay more, Some parcels of their Power are forth already, And onely hitherward. I leave your Honots. If we, and Cams Marinis chance to meete, Tis sworne betweene vs, we shall ever firike Till one can do no more Enter Volumenta and Utrgilla, mather and wife to Martin ; They for them downs on two lows flools: and four.

Volum. I pray you daughter fing or expresse your felse In a more comfortable fort : If my Sonne were my Hufband, I should freelier reiogce in that absence wherein he wonne Honor, then in the embracements of his Bed, where he would fhew most love. When yet hee was but tender-bodied, and the onely Soone of my womb; when youth with comelinelle pluck'd all gaze hit way; when for a day of Kings correcties, a Mother should not sel him an house from her beholding; I confidering how Honour would become such a person, that It was no betreethen Picture-like to houg by th'wall, if renowne made it not fire, was pleas'd to let him feete danger, where he was like to finde fame : To a cruell Warre I fent him, from whence he return d, his browes bound with Oake. I tell thee Daughter, I sprang not more in 10y at first hearing he was a Man-child, then now in fuft feeing he had proued himfelte a man.

Vog. But had he died in the Bulineffe Madame, how then ?

Volum. Then his good report should have beene my Sonne, I therein would have found iffue. Heare me profeffe fincerely, had la dozen fons each in my love alike, and none leffe deere then thine, and my good Martin, 1 had rather had eleven dye Nobly for their Countrey, then one voluptuoully furfer out of Action.

Emer a Genilewoman.

Gens. Madam, the Lady Veleria is come to visit you. Virg. Bescech you give me leave to retire my lelfe. Volum loderd you hall not:

Me thinkes, I heare hither your Husbands Drumme: See him plucke sufficius downe by th'haire : (As children from a Beare) the Volces (hunning him: Me thinkes I fee him Hampe thus, and call thus, Come on you Cowards, you were got in feate Though you were borne in Rome; his bloody brow With his mail'd hand, then wiping, forth he goes Like to a Harvest man, that task'd to mowe Or all, or loofe his byre.

Viry. His bloody Brow? Oh lupiter, no blood. Volum Away you Poole; is more becomes a man, Then gilt bis Trophe. The brefts of Hocuba When the did fuckle Heller, look'd not lovelier Then Hellors forhead, when it spit forth blood At Grecian (word. Contenume, tell Valeria We are he to bid her welcome. Exis Gons.

Va. Heavens bleffe my Lord from fell Auffaus.

Vol. Hee'l best Auffidies head below his knee,

And creade vpon his necke.

Enter Valeria with an Viber, and a Gentleworsen. Val. My Ladies both good day to you.

Vol Sweet Madam.

Vir. 1 am glad to fee your Lady hip.

Val. How do you both ? You are manifest house-keepers. What are you fowing heere? A fine spotte in good faith. How does your little Sonne?

I thanke your Lady-ship : Well good Madam. Vol. He had rather see the swords, and heare a Drum, then looke upon his Schoolmaster.

Val. . A my word the Fathers Sonne : Ile sweare 'tis a very pretty boy. A my troth, I look'd vpon him a Wentday halfe an houre together : ha's fuch a confirm'd countenance. I law him run efter a gilded Butter Ry, & when he caught it he let it go againe, and after it againe, and ouer and ouer he comes, and vp againe: catchi it again or whether his fall enrag'd him, or how twas, hee did to fee his seeth, and seare in Oh, I warrant how he mammoch

Val. One on's Fathers moods.

Val. Indeed la, tis a Noble childe.

Vng. A Cracke Madam.
Val. Come, lay alide your flitchery, I must have you play the idle Hulwife with me this efternoone Virg. No (good Madam) I will not out of doores VN. Not out of doores?

Volum. She shall the shall

Vog. Indeed no, by your patience; He not over the threshold, all my Lord returns from the Warres.

Val. Fye, you confine your felle most vareasonably: Come, you must go visit the good Lady that her in.

Vorg. I will wish liet ipeedy frength, and visite her with my prayers . but I cannot go thither.

Volum. Why I proy you.
Why. Tir not to laut labour, nor that I want love.

Vlag. Tis not to faue labour, nor that I want love. Vai. You would be another Penelope: yet they fay, all the yearne the foun in Vifes ablence, did but fill Aibre full of Mothes Coine, I would your Cambrick were ferhble as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pitte. Come you shall go with va.

Vo. No good Madam, pardon me, indeed I will not foorth.

U.d. In truth la go with me, and le tell you exerilent newer of your Husband.

rng. Oh good Madam, there can be none yet.

Unl. Verily I do not selt with your there came newes from him last night

Urr. Indeed Madam.

Val. In carnest it's true; I heard a Senatour speake it. Thus it is the Volcies have an Army forth, against who Cominus the Generall is gone, with one part of our Romane power. Your Lord, and Titus Larins, are fer down before their Citie Cambes, they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it breefe Warres. This is true on mine Honor, and fo I pray go with vs.

Fire. Give me excuse good Madame, I will obey you in every thing heeresfier.

Vol. Let her sone Ladie, as the is now: She will but disease our berter mirth.

Valoria. In eroth I thinke the would : Fare you well then. Come good sweet Ladie. Prythee Virgilia turne thy folemnesse out a doors, And go along with vs.

Porch No At a word Madam; Indeed I must not,

I wish you much mirth. Val. Well, then farewell.

Exern Ladies

Enter Alartin, Titru Larres, with Drumme and Colours, with Capicones and Souldiers, as before the Cary Corielia: 10 them a Mellenger.

Mariku. Yonder comes Newes: A Wager they have met.

Lar. My horfe to yours, no.

Mar. Tisdone. Lert. Agreed.

Ma

Mar. Say, ha's our Generall met the Enemy? Meff. They lye in view, but have not spoke as yet. Lart. So, the good Horse is mine.

Mart. Ile buy him of you. Lar. No, Ile not fel, nor give him: Lead you him I will For halfe a hundred yeares: Summon the Towne.

Mar. How farre off lie these Armics?

Moss. Within this mile and halfe. Mar. Then shall we heare their Larum, & they Ours. Now Mars, I prythee make vs quicke in worke, That we with smoaking swords may march from hence To belpe our fielded Friends. Come, blow thy blast.

They Sound a Parley: Enter two Senators with others on the Walles of Corsalus.

Tullus Auffichous, is he within your Walles? I Senat. No, nor a man that feares you leffe then he, That's leffer then a little : Drum a farre off.

Hearke, our Drummes Are bringing forth our youth : Weel breake our Walles Rather then they shall pound vs vp our Gates, Which yet feeme thut, we have but pin'd with Ruthes, They'le open of themselues. Hatke you, farre off

Alarum farroof.

There is Auffidious. Lift what worke he makes Among'ft your clouen Army. Mart. Oh they are at it.

Lart. Their noise be our instruction. Ladders has.

Enter the Army of the Volces.

Mar. They ferre ve not, but iffue for h their Citie. Naw put your Shields before your hearts, and fight With hearts more proofe then Shields. Aduance brane Titus,

They do disdaine vs much beyond our Thoughts, which makes me sweat with wrath. Come on my fellows He that retires, He take him for a Volce, And he shall seele mine edge.

Alarum the Romans are beat back to their Trenches

Enter Martius Curfing.

Mar. All the contagion of the South, light on you, You Shames of Rome: you Heard of Byles and Plagues Plaister you o're, that you may be abhorr'd Farther then seene, and one infect another Against the Windea mile : you soules of Geele, That beare the shapes of men, how have you run From Slaves, that Apes would beare; Plute and Hell, All hurs behinde, backes red, and faces pale With flight and agued feare, mend and charge home, Or by the fires of heaven, He leave the Foe, And make my Wattes on you : Looke too't: Come on, If you'l fland fast, wee'l beate them to their Wives, As they vs to our Trenches followes.

Another Alarum, and Martius followes them to gates, and is fout in.

So, now the gates are ope: now proue good Seconds, Tis for the followers Fortune, widens them, Not for the flyers: Marke me, and do the like.

Enter the Cati. 1.Sol. Poole-hardinesse, not I.

3. Sol Nor 1.

1. Sol. See they have thut him in. Alarum continues All. To th'pot I warrant him. Enter Tous Lerious Tis. What is become of Marias? All. Slaine (Sir) doubtleffe.

s. Sal. Following the Flyers at the very heeles,

With them he enters a who vpenthe fordaine Claps to their Gates, he is himselfe alone, To answer all the City.

Ler. Oh Noble Fellow! Who fenfibly out-dares his fenceleffe Sword, And when it bowes, frand ft vp : Thou art left Afarius, A Carbuncle intire : as big as thouart Weare not fo rich a lewell. Thou was't a Souldier Even to Calves wish, not herce and terrible Onely in strokes, but with thy grim lookes, and The Thunder-like percussion of thy founds Thou mad'ft thing enemies shake, as if the World Were Feauorous, and did tremble.

Ensor Martine bleeding reflected by the Enemy. 1 Sal. Looke Sir.

Ler. O'tis Marsins,

Ler's fetch him off, or make remaine alike.

They fight, and all enter she City.

Enter certains Romanes with froiles. 1. Rom. This will I carry to Rome.

2. Rom. And I this.

3 Rom A Murrain on't, I cooke this for Silver. exercit. Alarums continues fill a-farre off.

Enter Martins and Titus with a Trumpis Mar. See heere these mouers, that do prize their hours At a crack'd Drachme: Cushions, Leaden Spoones, Irons of a Doit, Dublets that Hangmen would Bury with those that wore them. These base flaves. Ere yet the fight be done, packe vp, downe with them. And harke, what noyfe the Generall soakes: To him There is the man of my loules hate, Auffidious Piercing our Romanes : Then Valiant Titus take Commenient Numbers to make good the City, Whil'st I with those that have the spirit, wil haste To helpe Cominisu

Lar. Worthy Sirathou bleed'ft, Thy exercise hath bin too violent, For a lecond course of Fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not :

My worke hath yet not warm'd me. Fare you well: The blood I drop, is rather Physicall

Then dangerous to me: To Aufidican thus, I will appear Lar. Now the faire Goddeffe Fortune, (and fight. Fall deepe in love with thee, and her great charmes Milguide thy Oppolers (words, Bold Gentleman: Prosperity be thy Page.

Mar. Thy Friendno leffe.

Then those the placeth highest: So farewell.

Lar. Thou worthielt Mastins, Go found thy Trumpet in the Market place, Call thither all the Officers 2'th' Towne

Where they shall know our minde. Away. Enter Commun as it were in revire, with foldlers.

Com. Breath you my friends, wel fought, we are come Like Romans, neither foolish in our flands, (off, Nor Cowardly in retyre: Beleeue me Sirs, We shall be charg'd againe. Whiles we have strooks By Interims and conveying gusts, we have heard The Charges of our Friends. The Roman Gods, Leade their successes, as we wish our owne, That both our powers, with Imiling Fronts encountring, May give you thankfull Sacrifice. Thy Newes? Enter a Messenger.

Mell. The Cittizens of Coricles have yfued, And given to Larrius and to Marthu Battaile:

Ifaw

I fave our party to their Trenchet dituen, And then came away.

Com. Though thou fpeakeft truth,

Merhinkes thou speak it not well. How long is't since?

Mes. About an houre, my Lord.

Com. Tis not a mile: briefely we heard their drummes.

Com. It is not a mile: briefely we heard their drummes. How could'lt thou in a mile confound an boure,

And bring thy Newes to late?

2006. Sples of the Volces

Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheele Three or foore miles about, else had I fit Halfe an houre lines brought my report.

Enter Mariou.

Com. Whose yonder.
That doe's appeare as he were Flead ?O Gods,
He has the sampe of Martina, and I have Before time seene him thus.

Mar. Come I toolate?

Com. The Shepherd knowes not Thunder fro a Taber,
More then I know the found of Marina Tongue
From every meaner man.

Marium. Come I too late?

Com. 1, if you come not in the blood of others,

But mantled in your owne.

In Armes as found, as when I woo'd in heart;
As merry, as when our Nupriall day was done,
And Tapers burnt to Bedward.

Controver of Warriors, how ist with Tine Lavine?

Mor. As with a man buffed about Decrees:

Condemning fome to death, and fome to exile,

Ransoming him, or pittying, threatning th'other; Holding Corisles in the name of Rome, Eurn like a fawning Grey-hound in the Leasth,

To let him flip at will.

Com, Where is that Slave Which told me they had beate you to your Trenches? Where is he? Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone,
He did informe the truth: but for our Gentlemen,
The common file. (a plague Tribunes for them)
The Moule ne're shunn'd the Cat, as they did budge
From Rascals worse then they.

Com. But how preusil'd you?

Ms. Will the time ferue to tell, I do not thinke: Where is the enemy? Are you Lords ath Field?

If not, why ceale you till you are fo?

Com. Martius, we have at difaduantage fought,

And did retyre to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their Battell? Know you on & Ede

They have plac'd their men of truft?

Com. As I guelle Marsins, Their Bandsi'th Vaward are the Antients Of their best trust: O're them Auffdiau,

Their very heart of Hope.

Mar. I do befeech you,

By all the Battailes wherein we have fought,

By th'Blood we have fined together,

By th'Vower we have made

To endure Friends, that you directly fet me

Against Affidious, and his Ametais,

And that you not delay the present (but Filling the aire with Swords aduane'd) and Darrs, We proper this very houre.

Com. Though I could wish,

You were conducted to a gentle Bath, And Balmes applyed to you, yet date I never Deny your asking, take your choice of those That best can sy de your action.

Mar. Those are they
That most are willings if any such be herre,
(Ash were sinne to doubt) that love this painting
Wherein you see me sinear d, if any seare
Lessen his person, then an ill report.
If any thinke, brane death out-weighes bad life,
And that his Countries deerer then himselfe,
Let him alone: Or so many so minded,
Wave thus to expresse his disposition,
And follow Maritus,

They all foot and names bein footd, take him up in then
Armes, and caft up their Caps.

Oh me alone, make you a fword of me:
If these showes be not outward, which of you
But is foure Volces? None of you, but is Able to be are against the great Auffaism
A Shield, as hard as his. A certaine number (Though thankes to all) must I select from all:
The rest shall be are the businesses in some other fight
(As cause will be obey'd:) please your o March,
And soure shall quickly draw our my Command,
Which men are best inclined.

Com. March on my Fellowes:
Make good this often:ation, and you shall
Divide in all, with vs.

Titus Lattius, baking fet a guard upon Carioles, going wab Drum and Trumpet toward Cominsus, and Cains Mertins, Enters with a Lieutenane, other Souldiours, and a Scout

Let. So, let the Ports be guarded; keepe your Duties
As I have fet them downe. If I do fend, diffrateh
Those Centuries to our ayd, the rest will serve
For a short holding, if we loose the Field,
We cannot keepe the Towne.

Lim. Feste not our care Sir.

Latt. Hence; and shut your gates vpon's:

Our Guider come, to th'Roman Campe conduct vs. Ext.

Alaram, as in Bastale.

Enter Mertisu and Auffidius at feveral doores.
Mar. He fight with none but therefor I do hate thee
Worle then a Promise-breaker.

Aufid. We hate alike: Not Affricke owner a Serpent I abhorre More then thy Fame and Enuy: Fix thy foot.

Mar. Let the first Budger dye the others Slave, And the Gods doome him after.

Auf. If I flye Marious, hollow me like a Hare.
Mar. Within these three houses Tulius
Alone I fought in your Corioles walles,
And made what worke I pleas'd: Tis not my blood,
Wherein thou seeft me masks, for thy Revenge
Wrench up thy power to thinghess.

Auf. Wer't thou the Heller, That was the whip of your bragg'd Progeny, Thou should'st not seepe me heere.

Herre they fight, and certaine Volces come in the ayde of Aufs. Marthus fights tulthey be drunen as breathles. Officious and not valuant, you have sham'd me In your condemned Seconds.

Flouris

Flourish. Alarum. A Retreat is sounded. Enser at one Doore Commisse, with the Romanes: As another Doore Martins, with his Arme in a Scarfs.

Com. If I should tell there o're this thy dayes Worke, Thou't not believe thy deeds: but He report it, Where Senators shall mingle teares with smiles, Where great Patricians shall attend, and shrug, Tth'end admire: where Ladies shall be frighted, And gladly quak'd, heare more: where the dull Tribunes, That with the suffic Plebeans, hate thine Honors, Shall say against their hearts, We thanke the Gods Our Rome hath such a Souldier.

Yet cam'st thou to a Morfell of this Feast, Hauing fully din'd before.

Enter Tiens with bu Power, from the Parfait.

Tites Larties. Oh Generall: Here is the Steed, wee the Capacifon: Hadft thou beheld-Martius. Pray now, no more ?

My Mother, who ha's a Charter to extoll her Bloud,
When the do's pray feme, grieues me:
I have done as you have done, that's what I can,
Induc'd as you have beenc, that's for my Countrey:
He that ha's but effected his good will,
Hath overta'ne mine Act.

Com. You shall not be the Grave of your descruing,
Rome must know the value of her owne:
'Twere a Concealement worse then a Thest,
No lesse then a Traducement,
To hide your doings, and to silence that,
Which so the spire, and rop of prayses vouch'd,
Would seeme but modest: therefore I beseach you,
In signs of what you are, not to reward
What you have done, before our Armie heare me.
Marting. I have some Wounds vpon me, and they strarts

To heate themselves remembred.

Com. Should they not:

Well might they sester 'gainst Ingrattude,
And tent themselves with death: of all the Horses,
Whereof we have ta'ne good, and good store of all,
The Treasure in this field atchieved, and Citie,
We render you the Tenth, to be ta'ne forth,
Before the common distribution,

At your onely choyle,

Martins. I thanke you Generall:
But cannot make my heart confent to rake
A Bribe, to pay my Sword: I doe refuse it,
And stand you my common part with those,
That have beheld the doing.

A long flowrift. They all cry, Martine, Martine, cast up their Caps and Launces: Commissions and Lartine standbare,

Mar. May these same Instruments, which you prophene, Neuer sound more: when Drums and Trumpets shall I'th'field proue flatterers, let Courts and Cities be Made all of salle-fac'd foothing: When Steele growes soft, as the Parasites Silke, Let him be made an Ouerture for th' Warres: No more I say, for that I have not wash'd

My Nose that bled, or foy!'d some debile Wretch, Which without note, here's many else have done, You shoot me forth in acclamations hyperbolicall, As if I lou'd my little should be dieted In prayses, sawe'st with Lyes.

Com. Too modest are you:

More cruell to your good report, then gratefull
To vs. that give you truly: by your parience,
If gainst your felse you be incens'd, weele put you
(Like one that meanes his proper harme) in Manacles,
Then reason safely with you: Therefore be it knowne,
As to vs., to all the World, That Caire Marine
Westes this Warres Garland: in token of the which,
My Noble Steed, knowner to the Campe. I give him,
With all his trim belonging; and from this time,
For what he did before Carioles, call him,
With all th'applause and Clamor of the Hoast,
CMarcus Caira Cariolanas, Beare th'addition Nobly events

Omnes, Marcus Caim Coriolanus.

Martins. 1 will goe wash:
And when my Face is faire, you shall perceive
Whether I blush, or no: howbeit, I thanke you,
I meane to stride your Steed, and at all timea
To vnder-crest your good Addition,
To th'sairenesse of my power.

Com. So, to our Tent:
Where ere we doe repole vs, we will write
To Rome of our fuccesse: you Time Larrius
Must to Cornoles backe, send vs to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their owne good, and ours.

Lartius. I shall, my Lord.

Martius. The Gods begin to mocke me:
I that now refus'd most Princely gifts,
Am bound to begge of my Lord Generall.

Com. Tak't, its yours: what is't?

Mattins. I formetime lay here in Corioles,
At a poore mans house: he vs'd me kindly,
He cry'd to me: I saw him Prisoner:
But then Aussidius was within my view,
And Wrath o're-whelm'd my pittie: I request you
To give my poore Host freedome.

Com. Oh well begg'd: Were he the Butcher of my Sonne, he should Be free, as is the Winde: deliver him, Time.

Lartine. Martine, his Name.

Martine. By Implier forgot:

I am wearie, yea, my memorie is tyr'd:

Have we no Wine here?

Com. Goe we to our Tent:
The bloud vpon your Visage dryes, tis time
It should be lookt too: come.

Men. Pray you, who does the Wolfe love > Siein. The Lambe.

Men. I, to deuour him, as the hungry Plebeians would the Noble Martins.

Brw. He's a Lambe indeed, that baes like a Beare. Men. Hee's a Beare indeede, that lives like a Lambe, You two are old men, tell me one thing that I shall aske you.

Both. Well fir.

Men. In what enormity is Martius poore in that you ewo have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poore in no one fault, but stor'd withall. Sicin. Especially in Pride.

Brn. And topping all others in boaffing.

Offen. This is strange now : Do you two know, how you are censured heere in the City, I mean of vs a'th'right band File, do you?

Both. Why? ho ware we censur'd?

Men. Because you talke of Pridenow, will you not

Both. Well, well fir, well.

Men. Why tis no great matter; for a very little theefe of Occasion, will cob you of a great deale of Patience:

Gluc your dispositions the reines, and bee angry at your oleafures (at the leaft) if you take it as a pleafure to you in being for you blame Martin for being preud.

Bru. Wedo it not alone, hr.

Men. I know you can doe very little alone, for your helpes are many, or elfe your actions would growe wondrous fingle: your abilities are to Infant-like, for dooing much alone. You talke of Pride: Oh, that you could turn your eyes toward the Napes of your necket, and make but an Interiour furney of your good selues. Oh that you could.

Both. What then fir?

Men. Why then you should discouer a brace of vamenting, proud, violent, testie Magistrates (alias Fooles) as any in Rome.

Sicia Meneraus, you are knowne well enough too. Men. I am knowne to be a bumorous Parrition, and one that loues a cup of hot Wine, with not a drop of alay-Ing Tiber in't : Said, to be fomething imperfect in fauouring the first complaint, hasty and Tinder-like vppon, to triviall motion: One, that converles more with the Buttocke of the night, then with the forhead of the morning, What I think, I ytter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two fuch Weales men as you are (I cannot call you Licerguffer,) if the drinke you give me, touch my Palat aduerly, I make a crooked face at it, I can fay, your Worshippes have deliver'd the matter well, when I finde the Assein compound, with the Major part of your syllables. And though I must be content to beare with those, that fay you are reverend grave men, yet they lye deadly, that tell you have good faces, if you fee this in the Map of my Microcolme, follower it that I am knowne well enough too? What harme can your beefome Conspectuities gleane out of this Charracter, if I be knowne wellenough too.

Brw. Come fir come, we know you well enough.

Menen. You know neither mee, your selves, nor any thing: you are ambitious, for poore knaues cappes and legges: you weare out a good wholefome Forenoone, in hearing a cause betweene an Orendge wife, and a Forsetfeller, and then reiourue the Controverfie of three-pence to a fecond day of Audience. When you are hearing a matter betweene party and party, if you chaunce to bee; pinch'd with the Collicke, you make faces like Mommers, let vp the bloodie Flagge against all Patience, and in toating for a Chamber-pot, dismisse the Controvershe bleeding, the more intangled by your hearing: All the peace you make in their Cause, is calling both the parties

Emer Volumina Virgilia and Valeria.

How now (my as faire as Noble) Ladyes, and the Moone were thee Earthly, no Nobler; whither doe you follow your Eyes fo fast ?

Volum. Honorable Memerica, my Boy Marten approches: for the love of Juno let's goe

Menen. Ha? Martius comming home?

Volum. I, worthy Menenius, and with most prosperous approbation.

Menen. Take my Cappe Supiter, and I thanke thee 1 hoo, Martin comming home?

2. Ladirs. Nay, tis true.

Volum. Looke, here's a Letter from him, the State hath another, his Wife another, and (I thinke) there's one at home for you.

Men . I will make my very house recle to night:

A Letter for me?

Virgil. Yes certzine, there's a Letter for you, I faw't. Menen. A Letter for me ? it gives me an Effate of feuen yeeres health; in which time, I will make a Lippe at the Phylician: The most foueraigne Prescription in Galon, is but Emperick queique; and to this Preservative, of no bettet report then a Horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded?

Virgil. Oh no, no, no,

Volum. Oh, he is wounded, I thanke the Gods for't. Menen. So doe I too, if it be not too much : brings a Victorie in his Pocket? the wounds become him.

Volum. On's Browes: Menenue, hee comes the third time home with the Oaken Garland.

Menen, Ha's he disciplin'd Aussidia soundly?
Volum. Tuns Larius writes, they sought together, but Auffulius got off.

Menso. And twas time for him too, Ile warrant him ther: and he had flay'd by him, I would not have been fo fiddlous'd, for all the Chests in Carioles, and the Gold that's in them. Is the Senate possest of this?

Volum. Good Ladies let's goe. Yes yes, yes: The Senate ha's Letters from the Generall, wherein hee gives my Sonne the whole Name of the Watre: he hath in this action out-done his former deeds doubly. Valer, In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him. Menen. Wondrous: I, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vogil. The Gods graunt them true.

Volum. True? pow waw. Mene. True? Ile be sworne they are true : where is hee wounded, God faue your good Worthips? Martius is comming home: hee ha's more cause to be prowd: where is he wounded?

Volum. Ith Shoulder, and ith left Arme 1 there will be large Cicatrices to shew the People, when hee shall stand for his place: he received in the repulse of Tarqua seuen hurts ith Body.

Mese. One ith' Neck, and two ith' Thigh, there's nine that I know.

Volum. Hee had, before this last Expedition, twentie hue Wounds vpon him.

Mene. Now it's twentie seuen; euery gaso was at. Eneroies Graue. Hearke, the Trumpers.

A (bowt, and flourist). Volum. Thele are the Vilhers of Marius : Before him, hee carryes Noyse; And behinde him, hee leaues Teares:

Death, that darke Spirit, in's peruie Arme doth lye. Which being advanc'd, declines, and then men dye.

Transpers found. A Sennet. Enter Cominises the Generall, and Titus Latins : betweene them Coriolanus, crown'd with an Oaken Garland, with Captaines and Souldiers, and a Herould.

Herauld. Know Rome, that all alone Marries did fight Within Cotioles Gates 1 where he hath woone, With Fame, a Name to Martine Cains: Thefe in honor followes Marine Caire Carisianes. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus.

Sound.

All Welcome to Rome, renowned Corlolanus. Corul. No more of this, it does offend my heart: pray now no more.

Com. Looke, Sir, your Mochet.

Corrol. Oh! you have, I know, petition'd all the Gods for my prosperitie.

Volum. Nay, my good Souldier, vp: My gentle Martins, worthy Coins And by deed-archieuing Honor newly nam'd, What is it (Coriolanses) must I call thee?

But oh, thy Wife.

Corio. My gracious filence, hayle: Would'it thou have laugh'd, had I come Coffin'd home, That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah my deare, Such eyes the Widowes in Carioles were, And Mothers that lacke Sonnes.

Mone. Now the Gods Crowne thee. Com. And live you yet? Oh my fweet Lady, pardon.

Volum. I know not where to turne. Oh welcome home; and welcome Generall, And y'are welcome all.

Mene. A hundred thousand Welcomes: I could weepe, and I could laugh, I am light, and heavie; welcome: A Curle begin at very root on's heart, That is not glad to fee thee, You are three, that Rome should dote on a Yet by the faith of men, we have Some old Crab-trees here at home, That will not be grafted to your Rallifb.
Yet welcome Warriors: Wee call a Nettle, but a Nettle:

And the faults of fooles, but folly. Com. Euer right,

Cor. Menenius, euer, euer. Herauld. Give way there, and goe on.

Cor. Your Hand, and yours? Ere in our owne house I doe shade my Head, The good Patricians must be visited, From whom I have receiv'd not onely greetings, But with them, change of Honors,

Volum, I have lived, To see inherited my very Wishes, And the Buildings of my Fancie :

Onely there's one thing wanting, Which (I doubt not) but out Rome Will cast vpon thee

Cor. Know, good Mother, I had rather be their fervant in my way, Then Iway with them in theirs.

1. Off. That's a brave fellow: but hee's vengeance

prowd, and lours not the common people

2. Off. Faith, there haih beene many great men that have flatter'd the people, who ne're loved them; and there be many that they have loved sthey know not wherefore To that if they love they know not why, they have vpon no better a ground. Therefore, for Corrolanne neyther to eare whether they loue, or have him, inanifelts the true knowledge he has in their disposition, and out of his Noble carelefnesse less them plainely fee's,

1. Off. If he did not care whether he had their love, or no, hee waved indifferently, twist doing their neyther good nor harme : but hee feckes their hare with greater devotion, then they can render it him; and leaves nothing vndone, that may fully discour him their opposite. Now to sceme to affect the mallice and displeasure of the People, is as bad, as that which he diflikes, to flatter them for their loue,

2. Off. Hee hath deserved worthily of his Countrey, and his affent is not by fuch easie degrees as chose, who having beene supple and courteous to the People, Bonnetted, without any further deed, to have them at all into their estimation, and report. but bee hath so planted his Honors in their Eyes, and his actions in their Hearts, that for their Tongues to be fileat, and not confesse fo much, were a kinde of ingratefull Injurier to report otherwise, were a Mallice, that giving it felfe the Lye, would plucke reproofe and rebuke from every Eare that heard it.

At fixteene yeeres, When Tarquin made a Head for Rome, he fought Beyond the marke of others: our then Dictator, Whom with all prayle I point at, faw him fight, When with his Amazonian Shinne he droue The brizled Lippes before him: he bestrid An o're-prest Roman, and i'th' Consuls view Slew three Opposers: Tarquini selse he met, And ftrucke him on his Knee : in that dayes feates, When he might act the Woman in the Scene, He prou'd best man i'th' field, and for his meed Was Brow-bound with the Oake. His Pupill age

Man-entred thus, he waxed like a Sea, And in the brunt of feuenteene Battailes fince, He lurcht all Swords of the Garland: for this last, Before, and in Corioles, let me fay I cannot speake him home : he stopt the flyers, And by his rare example made the Coward Turne terror into sport ; as Weeds before A Vessell under sayle, so men obey'd. And fell below his Stem: his Sword, Deaths stampe, Where it did marke, it tooke from face to foot. He was a thing of Blood, whose every motion Was tim'd with dying Cryes: alone he entred The mortall Gate of th' Citie, which he painted With shunlesse deftinie : aydelesse came off, And with a fudden re-inforcement strucke Carioles like a Planet: now all's his, When by and by the dinne of Warre gan pierce His readic sence: then firaight his doubled spirit Requiekned what in flesh was fatigate. And to the Battaile came he, where he did Runne recking o're the lives of men, as if 'twere A perpetuall spoyle; and till we call'd Both Field and Citie ours, he never flood To ease his Brest with panting.

3 Cit. You must thinke if we give you any thing, we hope to gaine by you.

Cons. Well then I pray, your price a th' Confulling a Cat. The price is, to aske it kindly.

Corso. Kindly fir, I przy let me ha'r : I haue wounds to thew you, which first bee yours in private your good voice Sit, what lay you?

2 Ch. You hall ha's worthy Sir.

Come A match Sir, there's in all two worthis voyces begg'd : I haue your Almes, Adieu.

3 Car. But this is something odde.

3 Cu. And twere to give againe i but 'tis no matter Exmuns. Enter two octor Citizens.

Coriol. Pray you now, if it may frand with the tune of your voices, that I may bee Confull, I have heere the Customarie Gowne.

t. You have deferued Nobly of your Country, and you have not deferved Nobly.

Corrol. Your Ænigma.

s You have bin a leourge to her enemies, you have bin a Rod to ber Friends, you have not indeede loved the Common people.

Cornel You should account mee the more Vertuous that I have not bin common in my Loue, I will fie flatter my sworne Brother the people to earne a deerer estimation of them, tis a condition they account gentle: & fince the wisedome of their choice, is rather to have my Hat, then my Heart, I will practice the infinusting nod, and be off to them most counterfeely, that is fir, I will counterfer the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifull to the defirers. Therefore befeech you, I may be Confull.

2. Wee hope to finde you out friend: and therefore give you our voices heartily.

1. You have receyved many wounds for your Coun-

Cornel. I wil not Scale your knowledge with thewing them. I will make much of your voyces, and to trouble you no farther.

Bob. The Gods give you toy Sie heartily.

Corial. Molliweer Voyces: Better it is to dye, better to fletue, Then craue the higher, which first we do deferue. Why in this Wooluish coague should I fland heere, To begge of Hob and Dicke, that does appeare

Than

Their needleffe Vouches : Custome calls me too't What Cuftome wills in all things, should we doo't? The Dust on antique Time would lye valwept, And meuntainous Error be too highly heapt, For Truth to o're-peere. Rather then foole it fo, Let the high Office and the Honor go To one that would doe thus. I am halfe through, The one part fuffered, the other will I doe.

Enter three Citizens mare,

Here come moe Voyces. Your Voyces? for your Voyces I have fought, Watcht for your Voyces: for your Voyces, beare Of Wounds, two dozen odde : Battailes thrice fix I have feene, and heard of: for your Voyces, Have done many things, some leffe, some more : Your Voyces? Indeed I would be Confull.

z.Cir. Hee ha's done Nobly, and cannot goe without any honest mans Voyce.

2.Ci. Therefore let him be Confull : the Gods give him toy, and make him good friend to the People. All. Amen, Amen. God faue thee, Noble Confull-Corio. Worthy Voyces.

Enter Meneuitus, wit's Brown and Scientists.

Mins. You have flood your Limitation: And the Tribunes endue you with the Peoples Voyce, Remaines, that in th'Officiall Markes innefted, You anon doe meet the Senate.

Cario. Isthis done !

Scient. The Cultome of Requelt you have discharg'd: The People doe admit you and are fummon'd

To meet anon, vpon your approbation.

Corio. Where? at the Senate-house? Scient. There, Covidantes

Corto. May I change thele Garments?

Stiein. You may, Sir.

Con. That He straight do: and knowing my felfe again, Repayre toth Senate-house.

Mine. He keepe you company, Will you along?

Brut. We fray here for the People. Scicin. Fare you well. Exeunt Coriol, and Mens. He ha's it now: and by his Lookes, me thinkes,

'Tis warme at's heart

Brus. With a prowd heart he wore his humble Weeds i Will you dismiffe the People?

Enter the Plebeimes.

Seici How now, my Masters, have you chose this man? r.Cir. He ha's our Voyces, Sir.

Brut. We pray the Gods, he may deferue your loues.

2.Cir. Amen, Sinto my poore viworthy notice,

He niock'd ve, when he begg'd our Voyces.
3. Cit. Certainely, he flowted vs downe-right. I.Cis. No, tis his kind of speech, he did not mock vs.

2.Cu. Not one amongst vs, save your selfe, but sayes He vs'd vs (cornefully: he should have shew'd vs

His Marks of Merit, Wounds receiv'd for's Countrey.

Scicis. Why To he did I em fure. All. No,no: no man faw 'em.

Cis. Hee faid hee had Wounds, Which he could fnew in priuzte: And with his Hat, thus waning it in fcome, I would be Confull, sayes he : aged Custome,
But by your Voyces, will not so petrait me.
Your Voyces therefore: when we graunted that,
Here was, I thanke you for your Voyces, thanke you Your most (weet Voyces: now you have left your Voyces, I have no further with you. Was northis macketie?

Sciein. Why eyther were you ignorant to fee't? Or feeing it, of fuch Childish friendlinelle,

To yeeld your Voyces?

Brss. Could you not have told him, As you were lesson'd: When he had no Power. But was a pettie feruant to the State, He was your Enemie, euer fpake againft Your Liberties, and the Charters that you beare. I'th' Body of the Weale: and now arriving A place of Potencie, and Iway o'th' State, If he should still malignantly remaine Fast Foe toth' Pleben, your Voyces might Be Curses to your selves. You should have said, That as his worthy deeds did clayme no leffe Then what he stood for: so his gracious nature Would thinke upon you, for your Voyces, And translate his Mallice towards you, into Loue, Standing your friendly Lord.

Scien. Thus to have faid, As you were fore-aduis'd, had couche his Spirit, And try'd his Inclination: from him pluckt Eyther his gracious Promise, which you might As cause had call'd you vp, have held him to; Or elfe it would have gall'd his furly nature, Which easily endures not Article, Tying him to ought, so putting him to Rage, You should have ta'ne th'aduantage of his Choller,

And pals'd him vnelected. Brut. Did you perceine, He did follicite you in free Contempt,

When he did need your Loues: and doe you thinke, ' That his Contempt shall not be brusing to you, When he hath power to crush Why, had your Bodyes No Heart among you? Or had you Tongues, to cry Against the Rectorship of Judgement?

Sciem. Haue you, ere now, deny'd the asker: And now againe, of him that did not aske, but mock, Beftow your fu'd-for Tongues?

3.Car. Hee's not confirm'd, we may deny him yez. 2.Cir. And will deny him :

Ile have five hundred Voyces of that found. z.Cir. I twice fine hundred, & their friends, to piece 'em. Brut. Get you hence inffently, and tell those friends, They have chose a Confull, that will from them take Their Liberties, make them of no more Voyce Then Dogges, that are as often beat for barking,

As therefore kept to doe fo.

Sowi. Let them affemblesand on a fafer Indgement, All renoke your ignorant election: Enforce his Pride, And his old Hate vnto you: belides, forger noc With what Contempt he wore the humble Weed, How in his Suit he fcorn'd you: but your Loues, Thinking vpon his Services, tooke from you Th'apprehension of his present portance, Which most gibingly, vograuely, he did fashion After the inucterate Hate he beares you.

Bret. Lay a fault on ve your Tribunes, That we labour'd (no impediment betweene) But that you must cast your Election on him. Scieri. Say you chose him, more after our commandment, Then as guided by your owne true effections, and that Yout Minds pre-occupy'd with what you rether must do, Then what you should, made you against the grains

To Voyce him Confull, Lay the fault on vs. bb

Brut. I.

Bruk I, Spare va not : Say, we read Lectures to you, How youngly he began to ferue his Countrey, How long continued, and what flock he fprings of, The Noble House o'th' Olerstans: from whence came That Ancus Martine, Numaes Daughters Sonne. Who after great Hoff die here was King, Of the fame House Publiss and Quimes were, That our best Water, brought by Conduits hither, And Nobly nam'd, fo twice being Cenfor, Washis great Ancestor.

Selein. One thus descended, That hath beside well in his person wrought, To be fet high in place, we did commend To your remembrances: but you have found, Skaling his present bearing with his past, That hee's your fixed enemie; and reuoke Your suddaine approbation.

Brus. Say you ne'te bad don't, (Harpe on that Rill) but by our putting on: And presently, when you have drawne your number, Repaire toth' Capitoll.

All. We will so: almost all repent in their election. Exeunt Pleberans.

Brut. Let them goeon: This Mutinie were better put in hazard, Then flay past doubt, for greater: If, as his nature is, he fall in rage With their refulall, both obsetue and answer The vantage of his anger.

Sciein. Toth' Capitall, come:

We will be there before the streame o'th' People: And this shall seeme, as partly 'tis, their owne, Which we have goaded on-ward.

Adus Tertius.

Cornet: Enter Corsolonous, Menenous, all the Centry, Commus, Tim Larius, and other Senators. Coris. Tullus Auffidius then had made new head.

Lessus. He had, my Lord, and that it was which caus'd Our swifter Composition.

Corse. So then the Volces fland but as at fiff, Readie when time shall prompt them, to make toade Vpon's againe.

Com. They are worne (Lord Confull) fo. That we shall hardly in our ages fee Their Banners wave againe.

Corw. Saw you Auffdins?
Latius. On lalegard he came to me, and did curle Against the Volces, for they had so vildly Yeelded the Towne: he is retyred to Antium.

Corio. Spoke he of me? Lasas. Hedid, my Lord. Corro. How? what?

Latius. How often he had met you Sword to Sword: That of all things upon the Earth, he hated

Your person most: That he would pawne his fortunes

To hopeleffe restitution, so he might Be call'd your Vanquisher.

Corro. At Antium lives he? Laims. At Antium.

Corso. I wish I had a cause to seeke him there, To oppose his hatted fully. Welcome home.

Enter Scienius and Brutus. Behold, these are the Tribunes of the People, The Tongues o'th' Common Mouth. I do despile them: For they doe pranke them in Authoritie, Against all Noble sufferance.

Scient. Palle no further. Cor. Hah? what is that?

Arms. It will be dangerous to goe on- No further.

Corso. What makes this change? Mine. The matter?

Com. Hath he not pass'd the Noble, and the Common?

Brut. Commiss,00

Corso. Have I had Childrens Voyces?

Senar. Tribunes give way , he shall toth' Market place.

Brut. The People are incens'd against him. Sciena. Stop, ot all will fall in broyle.

Corno. Are these your Heard?

Must these have Voyces, that can yeeld them now, And straight disclaim their toungs what are your Offices? You being their Mouthes, why rule you not their Teeth? Haue you not fet them on?

Mone. Be calme, be calme.

Cario. It is a purpos'd thing, and growes by Plot, To curbe the will of the Nobilitie: Suffer's, and live with such as cannot rule, Nor euer will be ruled.

Brut. Call't Dot a Plot:

The People cry you mocks them : and of late, When Corne was given them grais, you sepin'd, Scandal'd the Suppliants: for the People, call'd them Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes ro Noblenesse.

Corn. Why this was knowne before.

Brus. Not to them all

Corio. Haue you inform'd them fithence?

Bruz. How? I informe them ?

Com. You are like to doe such businesse.

Brut. Not valike each way to better yours. Corn. Why then should I be Confull? by youd Clouds

Let me deferoe fo ill as you, and make me Your fellow Tribune.

Screw. You show too much of that, For which the People stirre: if you will passe To where you are bound, you must enquire your way, Which you are out of, with a gentler fpirit, Or neuer be lo Noble as a Confull, Nor yoake with him for Tribune.

Mens. Let's be calme.

Com. The People are abus'd: fer on this paltring Becomes not Rome: nor ba's Corrolams Deferu'd this fo dishonor'd Rub, layd fallely I'th' plaine Way of his Merit.

Corro. Tell me of Corne: this was my speech,

And I will speak't againe.

Mew. Not now, bot now Senar. Not in this heat, Sir, now.

Cerro. Now as I live, I will. My Nobler friends, I craue their pardons: For the mutable ranke-sented Meynie, Let them regard me, as I doe not flatter, And therein behold themselves: I say againe, In foothing them, we nourish 'gainst our Senzee The Cockle of Rebellion, Infolence, Sedition, Which we our selves have plowed for, sow'd, & scatter'd,

By mingling them with vs, the honor'd Number, Who lack not Vertue, no, nor Power, but that Which they have given to Beggers.

Mene. Well, no more.

Senat. No more words, we beleech you. Corie. How? no more:

As for my Country, I have shed my blood, Not fearing outward force : So shall my Lungs Coine words till their decay, against those Meszels Which wedisdaine should Tetter vs, yet sought

The very way to catch them

Brik You speaks a thip people, as if you were a God,

To punish; Not a man, of their Infirmity.

Sicin. 'Twere well we let the people know't Mene. What, what? His Choller

Cor. Choller? Were I as patient as the midnight fleep.

By love, 'twould be my minde

Sacre. It is a minde that shall remain a poilon Where it is: not poylon any further.

Corro. Shall remaine?

Heare you this Triton of the Munnowes ? Marke you His absolute Shall?

Com. 'Twas from the Cannon.
Cor. Shall? O God! but most enwise Patricians. why You grave, but wreaklesse Senators, have you thus Gwen Hidra heere to choose an Officer, That with his peremptory Shall, being but The botne, and noile o'th' Monsters, wants not spirit To fay, heel turne your Current in a dirch, And make your Channell his ? If he have power, Then vale your Ignorance : If none, awake Your dangerous Lenity: If you are Learn'd, Benot as common Fooles; if you are noc, Let them have Cushions by you. You are Pleberans, If they be Senators, and they are no leffe, When both your voices blended, the great it rafte Most pallaces theirs. They choosetheir Magistrace, And such a one as he, who puts his Shall, His popular Shall, against a grauer Bench Then ever frown'd in Greece. By love himfelfe, It makes the Confuls bafe; and my Soule akes To know, when two Authorities are vp Neuher Supreame : How soone Confusion May enter twist the gap of Both, and take The one by th'other.

Com Well, on to'th'Market place.

Corn. Who ever gave that Counfell, to give forth The Corne a'th' Store-house gratis, as 'twas vs'd Sometime in Greece.

Mene. Well, well, no more of that.

Car. Thogh there the people had more absolute powre I say they norish t disobedience: fed, the ruin of the State.

Bru, Why shall the people give One that speakes thus, their voyce?

Corno. He give my Resions, More worthier then their Voyces. They know the Corne Was not our recompence refting well affor'd They ne're did feruice for't, being prest to'th'Warre, Even when the Navell of the State was touch'd, They would not thred the Gates: This kinde of Service Did not deserue Corne gratis. Being i'th Warre, There Mucinies and Revolts, wherein they show'd Most Valour, spoke not for them. Th'Accusetion Which they have ofcen made against the Senote, All cause vnborne, could never be the Natlue Of our fo franke Donation Well, what then? How shall this Bosome-multiplied, digest The Seaster Courtelie? Let deeds expresse What's like to be their words, We did request it, We are the greater pole, and in true feare They gave vs our demands. Thus we debale The Nature of our Seats, and make the Rabble

Call our Cares, Feares; which will in time Breakoope the Lockes a'th Senare, and bring in The Crowes to pecke the Esgles.

Mene. Come enough

Bra. Enough, with ouer measure.

Corio. No, take more.

What may be sworne by, both Divine and Humane, Seale what I end withall. This double worship, Whereon part do's dildaine with caule, the other Infult without all reason - where Gentry , Title, wisedom Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no Of generall Ignorance, it must omit Real Necessities, and give way the while To unstable Slightnesse. Purpose so barr'd, it followes, Nothing is done to purpole. Therefore befeech you, You that will be leffe featefull, then discreet. That love the Fundamentall part of State More then you doubt the change on'r. That preferte A Noble life, before a Long, and Wish, To iumpe a Body with a dangerous Phylicke. That's fore of death without it . at once plucke out The Mulittudinous Tongoe, let them ootlicke The sweet which is their poylon. Your dishonor Mangles true judgement, and beceaues the State Of that Integrity which should becom't : Not having the power to do the good it would For th'ill which doth controul't.

Bru. Has laid enough.

Siein. Ha's spoken like a Traitor, and shall answet As Traitors do.

Corn. Thou wretch, despight ore whelme thee: What should the people do with these bald Tribunes? On whom depending, their obedience failes To'th'greater Bench, in a Rebellion. When what's not meer, but what mult be, was Law, Then were they chosen : in a better houre. Les what is meet, be saide it must be meet, And throw their power i'th'dull.

Brw. Manifelt Tresion. Sum. This & Confull? No.

Ener an Adele.

Bra. The Ediles hoe : Let him be apprehended Siein. Go call the people, in whose name my Selfe Attach thee as a Traitorous Innouator: A Foe to'th publike Weale. Obey I charge thee, And follow to thine answer

Corno. Hence old Goar

All Wee'l Surety him

Com. Ag'd fir, hands off.

Cores. Hence rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones Out of thy Garments.

Sicsa. Helpeye Cicizens.

Enter a rabble of Plebesans with the Adiles.

Mere. On both sides more respect.

Siene. Heere's hee, that would cake from you all your power.

Bru. Seize him Adles.

All. Downe with him, downe with him a Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons:

They all buffle about Corrolanus. Tribunes, Patricians, Citizens what ho:

Sicinim, Brusus, Corcolonius, Citizens.

All. Peace, peace, peace, ftay, hold, peace.

More What is about to be? I am out of Breath, Confusions neere, I cannot speake. You, Tribunes To'th'people: Coriolanus, patience. Speak good Sichrins.

Bb 2 Sacin.

Selei. Heare me, People peace.

All. Let's here our Tribune : peace, focake, speake, (peake

Scies. You are at point to lose your Liberties : Marine would have all from you; Marine, Whom late you have nam'd for Confell, Mene. Fie, fie, fie, this is the way to kindle, not to ouench.

Sena. To vobuild the Citic, and to Lay all flat Solet. What is the Citie, but the People?

All. True, the People are the Citie

Brut. By the confent of all, we were establish'd the Peoples Magistrates.

AL You so remaine.

Mene. And so are like to doe.

Com. That is the way to lay the Citie flat, To bring the Roofe to the Foundation, And burie all, which yet distinctly raunges In heapes, and piles of Ruine.

Seics. This deferues Death.

Brut. Or let va frand to our Authoritie, O: let vs lose it: we doe here pronounce, Vpon the part o'th' People, in whose power We were elected theirs, Martins is worthy Of prefent Death.

Schei. Therefore lay hold of him:

Beare him toth' Rock Tarpeian, and from thence Into destruction cast him.

Brus. Rediles leize him. All Ple. Yeeld Martin, yeeld.

Afene. Heare me one word, beleech you Tribunes, heare me but a word.

Ædiles. Peace, peace.

Mene. Be that you feeme, truly your Countries ferend, And temp'rately proceed to what you would Thus violently redreffe.

Brur. Sir, those cold wayes, That feeme like prudent helpes, are very poyfonous, Where the Disease is violent. Lay hands voon him. And beare him to the Rock. Corso. drawes bu Sward.

Corio. No, lle die here: There's some among you have beheld me fighting,

Come trie vpon your selves, what you have seene me. Mene. Downe with that Sword, Tribunes withdraw a while. Brut. Lay hands upon him.

Mene. Helpe Martins, helpe: you that be noble, helpe him young and old

All. Downe with him, downe with him. Exeast. In this Misturie, the Tribunes, the Edder, and the People are beat m.

Mene. Goe, get you to out Houset be gone, away, All will be naught elfe.

2. Sena. Ger you gone.
Com. Stand fast, we have as many friends as enemies.

Mene. Shall it be put to that?

Sena. The Gods forbid :

I prythee noble friend, home to thy House,

Leaue vs to eure this Caule.

Mene. For tisa Sore vpon vs, You cannot Tent your felfe: be gone, befeech you.

Corie. Come Sir, along with vs. Mene. I would they were Barbarians, as they are, Though in Rome litter'd: not Romans, as they are not,

Though calued i'th' Porch o'th' Capitoll : Be gone, put not your worthy Rage into your Tongue, One time will owe another.

Coris. On faire ground, I could best forcie of them. Mere. I could my felfe take up a Erace o'th' best of them, yea, the two Tribunes.

Com, But now 'tis addes beyond Arithmetick, And Manhood is call'd Foolerie, when it stands Agamst a falling Fabrick. Will you hence, Before the Tagge returne? whose Rage doth rend Like interrupted Waters, and o're-beate What they are void to beare.

Mene. Pray you be gone: The trie whether my old Wit be in request With those that have but little: this must be petche With Cloth of any Colour.

Como. Nay, come away.

Exernet Coriotopo es

Patri. This man ha's mart'd his fortune, Mene. His nature is too noble for the World: He would not flatter Neptune for his Trident, Or low, for's power to Thunder: his Heart's his Mouth: What his Breft forges, that his Tongue must vent, And being angry, does forget that ever He heard the Name of Death. A Noise michael Here's goodly worke.

Patri. I would they were a bed. More. I would they were in Tyber.

What the vengeance, could he not speake 'em frice ! Enter Bruten and Securis with the tabble againe.

Siem. Where is this Viper,

That would depopulate the city, & be every man himself Mene. You worthy Tribunes.

Siem. He shall be throwne downe the Tarpeian rock With rigorous hands : he hath telifted Law And therefore Law shall scorne him surther Triall Then the fenerity of the publike Power, Which he so fees at naught.

I Cir. He shall wellknow the Noble Tribures me The peoples mouths, and we their hands.

All. He shall fure ont.

Mene. Sir,fir. SKID. Peace.

Me. Do not cry hauocke, where you shold but hunz Withmodest warrant.

Suin. Sir, how com'ft that you have holpe To make this rescue ?

Men. Heere me speake? As I do know

The Confuls worthinesse, so can I name his Faults.

Some Confull? what Confull? Mene, The Confull Corplanes.

Brw. He Confull.

Ad. No, no, no, no, no.

Mene. If hy the Tribunes leave,

And yours good people, I may be heard, I would craus a word or evo, The which shall turne you to no further harme,

Then fo much loffe of time. Sic. Speake breefely then For we are peremptory to dispatch This Viporous Traitor: to electhim hence Were but one danger, and to keepe him heere Our certaine death: therefore it is decreed,

He dyes to night. Menen. Now the good Gods forbid, That our renowned Rome, whole gratitude Towards her defermed Children, is enroll'd In Joues owne Booke, like an vnnaturall Dam Should now eate up her owne.

Sicon

siem. He's a Difeafe that mult be cut away Mene. Oh he's a Limbe, that he's but a Difeafe Mortall, to cut it off: to cure it, exfic. What ha's he done to Rome, that's worthy death? Killing our Enemies, the blood he hath loft (Which I dare youch, is more then that he hath By many an Ounce) he dropp'd it for his Country: And what is left, to loofe it by his Countrey, Were to vs all that doo't, and fuffer it A beand to th'end a'th World. Sicia. This is cleane kamme.
Brat. Meetely awry:

When he did loue his Country, it honour'd him. Menen, The feruice of the foote

Being once gangren'd, is not then respected For what before it was.

Bru. Wee'l begre no more:

Perfue him to his house, and plucke him thence, Leasthis infection being of carching nature, Spred further.

Menen. One word more, one word: This Tiger-footed-rage, when it shall find The harme of vnskan'd swiftnesse, will (too late) Tye Leaden pounds too's heeles. Proceed by Processe, Least parties (as he is below'd) breake out, And facke great Rome with Romanes.

Bria. If it were fo? Sicin. What do yetalke!

Haue we not had a tafte of his Obedience? Out Ediles smot: our selves resisted : come.

Mene. Consider this: He ha's bin bred i'th'Warres Since a could draw a Sword, and is ill school'd In boulted Language: Mesle and Bran together He throwes without distinction. Give meleaue, He go to him, and andertake to bring him in peace, Where he shall answer by a lawfull Forme (In peace) to his vemost perill.

1 Sow. Noble Tribunes, It is the humane way : the other course Will prove to bloody : and the end of it, Vnknowne to the Beginning.

Sis. Noble Mensum, be you then as the peoples officer: Mafters, lay downe your Weapons.

Brus Go not home.

Sic. Meet on the Market place: weel attend you there: Where if you bring not Martim, wee'l proceede In our first way.

Mener. He bring him to you. Let me defire your company : he must come, Or what is worst will follow.

Exempt Owner. Sena. Pray you let's to bim. Enter Coriclenne with Nobles.

Corio. Let them pull all about mine eares, present me Death on the Wheele, or at wilde Horles heeles, Or pile ten hilles on the Tarpeian Rocke, That the precipitation might downe fretch Below the beame of fight; yet will I full Bethus to them.

Enter Voluminia.

Noble. You do the Nobler. Corio. I mule my Mother Do's not approue me further, who was wont To call them Wollen Vallailes, things created To buy and fell with Groats, to thew bare heads In Congregations, to yawne, be fill, and wonder, When one but of my ordinance flood vp

To speake of Peace, or Warre. I talke of you, Why did you wish me milder? Would you have me Palfe to my Nature ? Rather fay, I play The man I am.

Volum. Oh fir, fir, fir,

I would have had you put your power well on Before you had worne it out.

Corio. Let go.

Fol. Yournight have beene enough the man you are, With Briding leffe to be fo: Leffer had bin The things of your dispositions, if You had not shew'd them how ye were dispos'd Ere they lack'd power to crosse you.

Corso, Let them hang. Value. I, and burne too.

Enter Mevenius with the Senators.

Men. Come, come, you have bin too rough, famithing too rough : you must returne, and mend it.

There's no temedy Valeffe by not fo doing, our good Citie

Cleave in the midd'ft, and perifh. Valum. Pray be countail'd;

I have a heart as little apt as yours, But yet a braine, that leades my vie of Anger To better vantage

Mone. Well faid, Noble woman : Before he should thus stoope to the heart, but that The violent fit a'th'time craues it as Phyficke For the whole State; I would put mine Armour on, Which I can scarsely beare.

Corio. What must I do? Mene. Returne to th'Tribunes.

Corio. Well, what then? what then? Meue. Repent, what you have spoke.

Corio. For them, I cannot do it to the Gods, Must I then doo't to them?

Volum. You are too absolute, Though therein you can never be too Noble, But when extremities speake. I have heard you say, Honor and Policy, like vnseuer'd Friends, I'th'Warre do grow together: Grant that, and tell me In Peace, what each of them by th'other loole,

That they combine not there? Corio. Tush, tush.

Mere. A good demand.

Volume. If it be Honor in your Warres, to feetne The fame you are not, which for your best ends You adopt your policy: How is it lesse or worse That it shall hold Companionship in Peace With Honour, as in Warre; fince that to both It stands in like request.

Corlo. Why force you this?

Volum. Because, that Now it lyes you on to speake to th'people: Not by your owne instruction, nor by'th'matter Which your heart prompts you, but with fuch words That are but roated in your Tongue; Though but Baffards, and Syllables Of no allowance, to your bolomes truth. Now, this no more dishonors you at all, Then to take in a Towne with gentle words, Which elfe would put you to your fortune, and The hazard of much blood. I would diffemble with my Nature, where My Fortunes and my Friends at flake, requir'd

Ishould do so in Honor, I am in this

Your Wife, your Sonne: These Senators, the Nobies, And you, will eather shew our generall Lowis, How you can frowne, then spend, a fawne upon "em, For the inheritance of their loues, and safegard Of what that want might ruine.

Menen. Noble Lady.

Come goe with vs, speake faire: you may salue so, Not what is dange fous present, but the losse

Of what is paft.

Oolum. I pry the now, my Sonne,
Goe to them, with this Bonnes in thy hand,
And thus farre having fleetche it (here be with them)
Thy Knee buffing the flones for in fisch bufineffe
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of this phorant
More learned then the eares, waving thy head,
Which often thus correcting thy flout heart,
Now humble as the ripeft Mulberry,
That will not hold the handling: or fay to them,
Thou art their Souldier, and being bred in broyles,
Hast not the fost way, which thou do'st confesse
Were fit for thee to vie, as they to clayme,
In asking their good loues, but thou wilt frame
Thy selfe (forsooth) hereafter theirs so fatre,
As thou hast power and person.

Menta This but done, Euen as the speakes, why their hearts were yours: For they have Pardons, being ask'd, as free,

As words to little purpole.

Volum. Prythee now,
Goe, and be rul'd: although I know thou hadd rather Follow thine Enemie to a fierie Gulfe,
Then flatter him in a Bower.

Here is Cominius.

Com I have beene i'th' Market place: and Sir 'tis fit You make strong partie, or desend your selfe By calmenesse, or by absence: all's in anger.

Menen. Onely faire speech.

Com. I thinke twill serve, if he can thereto frame his Spirit.

Volum. He must, and will:

Prythee now (sy you will, and goe about it.

Corro. Must I goe shew them my vnbath'd Sconee?

Must I withmy base Tongue give to my Noble Heatt
A Lye, that it must beare well? I will doo't.
Yet were there but this single Plot, to loose
This Mould of Marina, they to dust should grinde it,
And throw't against the Winde. Toth' Market place:
You have put me now to such a part, which never
I shall discharge toth' Life.

Com Come, come, wee'le prompt you.

Volum. 1 prythee now (weet Son, as thou hast faid
My praifes made thee first a Souldier; so
To have my praife for this, performe a part

Thou haft not done before

Corio. Well, I must doo't:
Away my disposition, and possesses
Some Harlots spirit: My throat of Warre be turn'd,
Which quier'd with my Drumme into a Pipe,
Small as an Eunuch, or the Virgin voyce
That Babies Iull a-sleepe: The smiles of Knaues
Tentin my cheekes, and Schoole-boyes Teates take vp
The Glasses of my sight: A Beggars Tongue
Make motion through my Lips, and my Arm'd knees
Who bow'd but in my Stirrop, bend like his
That hathregein'd an Almes. I will not doo't,
Least surcease to honor mine owne stuch,

And by my Bodies action, teach my Minde A most inherent Balenesse.

Volum. At thy choice then:

To begge of thee, it is my more dif-honor,

Then thou of them. Come all to ruine, let

Thy Mother rather feele thy Pride, then fesre

Thy dangetous Stoutneffe: for I mocke at death

With as bigge heart as thou. Do as thou lift,

Thy Valiantneffe was mine, thou fack if it from mer

But owe thy Pride thy felfe.

Corres. Pray be content:
Mother, I am going to the Market place
Chide meno more. He Mountebanke their Loues,
Cogge their Heatts from them, and come home beloud
Of all the Trades in Rome. Looke, I am going:
Commend me to my Wife, He returne Confull,
Or neuer trush to what my Tongue can do

I'th way of Flattery further.

Volum. Do your will.

Com. Away, the Tribunes do attend you arm your felf
To answer mildely: for they are prepar'd
With Accusations, as I heare more strong
Then are upon you yet.

Corio. The word is, Mildely. Pray you let us go,

Corio. The word is, Mildely. Pray you let vs go, Let them accuse me by invention -1 Will answer in mine Honor.

Menen. I, but mildely.

Corio. Well mildely be it then, Mildely. Exeunt

Enser Sicmum and Brunm.

Brn. In this point charge him home, that he affects Tyrannicall power: If he evade vs there,
Inforce him with his enuy to the people,
And that the Spoile got on the Annats
Was ne're distributed What, will he come?

Edile. Hee's comming.

Bru. How accompanied?

Edile. With old Menenium, and those Senators

That alwayes fauour'd him.

Siein. Haue you a Catalogue
Of all the Voices that we have procur'd, fet downe by th
Edile. I have: 'iss teady. (Pole?
Seein. Have you collected them by Tribes?

Edile. I have.

Sicin. Affemble presently the people hither:
And when they heare me say, it shall be so,
I'th'right and strength a'th' Commons: be it either
For death, for sine, or Banishment, then let them
I'll say Fine, cry Fine; if Death, cry Death,
Institute on the olde prerogative
And power i'th Trush a'th Cause.

Edile. I shall informe them.

Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry, Let them not cease, but with a dinne confus'd Inforce the present Execution Of what we chance to Sentence

Edi. Very well.

Siein. Make them be strong, and ready for this hine. When we shall hap to giu't them.

Bru. Go about it,

Put him to Choller straite, he hath bene vs'd
Euer to conquer, and to have his worth
Of contradiction. Being once chaft, he cannot Be rein'd againe to Temperance, then he speakes

What's

What's in his heart, and that is there which lookes With vs to breake his necke.

Enter Cortolanus, Menenius, and Cominim, with others.

Sicin. Well, beere he comes. Mene. Calmely, I do befeech you.

Corio. I, as an Hoffler, that fourth poorest peece Will beare the Knaue by'th Volume :

Th'honor'd Goddes

Keepe Rome in lafety, and the Chaites of Justice Supplied with worthy men, plant love amongs Through our large Temples with & thewes of peace And not our ftreets with Watte.

I Sen. Amen, Amen Mone. A Noble wish.

Enter the Edile with the Plebesans.

Siein. Draw neere ye people.

Edile. List to your Tribunes. Audience:

Peace I fay.

Corio. First heare me speake. Both Tri. Well, fay : Peace hoe.

Corio. Shall I be charg'd no further then this prefent?

Must all determine heere?

Sicin. I do demand,
If you submit you to the peoples voices, Allow their Officers, and are content To suffer lawfull Censure for such faults

As shall be prou'd vpon you

Corre. I am Content.

Mene. Lo Citizens, he sayes he is Content. The warlike Seruice he ha's done, consider: Thinke Vpon the wounds his body beares, which shew Like Graves i'th holy Church-yard.

Corio. Scratches with Briars, scarres to moue

Laughter onely.
Mene. Consider further:

That when he speakes not like a Citizen, You finde him like a Soldier : do not take His rougher A tions for malicious founds: But as I lay, such as become a Soldier,

Rather then enuy you,

Com. Well, well, no more Corso. What is the matter, That being past for Confull with full voyce 1 I am fo dihonour'd, that the very house

You take it off againc. Sicin. Answer to vs.

Corso. Say then: 'tis true, I ought fo

Sicin. We charge you, that you have contriu'd to take From Rome all feafon'd Office, and to winde Your selfe into a power tyrannicall,

For which you are a Traitor to the people.

Corio. How? Traytor? Mene. Nay temperately: your promise.

Corso. The fires i'th'lowest hell. Fould in the people: Call me their Traitor, thou injurious Tribune. Within thine eyes fate twenty thousand deaths

In thy hands clutcht: as many Millions in Thy lying rongue, both numbers. I would fay Thou lyest vnto thee, with a voice as free,

As I do pray the Gods.

Sicin. Marke you this people?
All. To'th'Rocke, to th'Rocke with him.

Sicin. Peace:

We neede not put new matter to his charge: What you have seene him do, and heard him speake :

Beating your Officers, curling your felues, Oppoling Lawes with stroakes, and heere delying Those whose great power must try him. Even this fo criminall, and in such capitall kinde Deserues th'extreamest death.

Bru, But since he hath seru'd well for Rome,

Corio. What do you prate of Service.

Brus. I talke of that, that know it

Corio. You?

Mone, Is this the promise that you made your mother, Com. Know, I pray you.

Corio. He know no further :

Let them pronounce the Reepe Tarpeian death, Vagabond exile, Fleaing, pent to linger But with a graine a day, I would not buy Their mercie, at the price of one faire word, Nor checke my Courage for what they can give, To haue't with faying, Good morrow.

Sicin. For that he ha's (As much as in him lies) from time to time Enui'd against the people; seeking meanes To plucke away their power: as now at last, Given Hostile frokes, and that not in the presence Of dreaded Iustice, but on the Ministers That doth distribute it. In the name a'th'people, And in the power of vs the Tribunes, wee (Eu'n from this inftant) banish him our Citie In perill of precipitation

From off the Rocke Tarpeian, neuer more To enter our Rome gates. I'th'Peoples name, I say it shall bee so.

All. It shall be so, it shall be so: lethim away: Hec's banish'd, and it shall be so.

Com. Heare me my Masters, and my common friends.

Sicin. He's fentenc'd: No more hearing. Com. Let me speake :

I have bene Confull, and can shew from Rome Her Enemies markes vpon me. I do loue My Countries good, with a respect more tender, More holy, and profound, then mine owne life, My deere Wives estimate, her wombes encrease, And treasure of my Loynes: then if I would Speake that.

Sicin. We know your drift. Speake what? Bru. There's no more to be faid, but he is banish'd As Enemy to the people, and his Countrey.

It shall bee so,

All. It shall be so, it shall be so.

Corio. You commoncry of Curs, whose breath I hate, As recke a'th rotten Fennes: whose Loues I prize, As the dead Carkasses of vnburied men, That do corrupt my Ayre : I banish you, And heere remaine with your vacettaintie. Let every feeble Rumor shake your hearts: Your Enemies with nodding of their Plumes Fan you into dispaire: Have the power still To banish your Defenders, till at length Your ignorance (which findes not till it feeles, Making but referuation of your felues, Still your owne Foes) deliver you As most abated Captines, to some Nation That wonne you without blowes, despising For you the City. Thus I turne my backe; There is a world elsewhere.

Exeuns Corsolanus, Comminus, with Cumalys. They all shour, and throw up their Caps.

Edile

Edik. The peoples Enemy is gone, is gone. All. Our enemy to banish'd, he is gone: Hoo,00. Sirin. Go fee him out at Gates, and follow him As he bath follow'd you, with all despight Giuehim deseru'd vexation. Let a guard Attend vs through the City.

All Come, come, lets fee him out at gates, comes The Gods preserve our Noble Tribunes, come. Exerni.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Coriolanus Volumnia, Virgilia, Merenius, Cominius, with the jong Nobility of Rome.

Corto. Come leaue your ceares: a brieffarwel: the beaft With many heads butts me away. Nay Mother, Where is your ancient Courage? You were vs'd To fay, Extreamities was the trier of spirits, That common chances. Common men could beare, That when the Sea was calme, all Boats alike Shew'd Mastership in floating. Fortunes blowes, When most strooke home, being gentle wounded, craues A Noble cunning. You were vs'd to load me With Precepts that would make inuincible The heart that conn'd them.

Virg. Oh heavens! O heavens! Corio. Nay, I prythee woman.

Vol. Now the Red Pestilence strike al Trades in Rome,

And Occupations perish.

Corio. What, what, what : I shall be lou'd when I am lack'd. Nay Mother, Refume that Spirit, when you were wont to fay, If you had beene the Wife of Hercules, Six of his Labours youl'd have done, and fau'd Your Husband formuch fwer. Coministe, Droopenot, Adieu: Fatewell my Wife, my Mother, lle do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius, Thy teares are falter then a yonger mans, And venomous to thine eyes. My (sometime) Generall, I have seene the Sterne, and thou halt oft beheld Heart-hardning spectacles. Tell these sad women, Tis fond to waile incutable strokes, As 'tis to laugh at 'em My Mother, you wot well My hazards still have beene your solace, and Beleeu't not lightly, though I go alone Like to a lonely Dragon, that his Fenne Makes fear'd, and talk'd of more then frene : your Sonne Will or exceed the Common, or be caught With cautelous batts and practice.

Volum. My firA fonne, Whether will thou go? Take good Committee With thee awhile: Determine on some course More then a wilde exposture, to each chance

That flart's i'th' way before thec.

Corio. Othe Gods! Com. He follow thee a Moneth, deuile with thee Where thou Inalt rest, that thou may'st heare of vs. And we of thee. So if the time thrust forth A cause for thy Repeale, we shall not send O're the vast world, to seeke a single man, And loofe advantage, which corh ever cools Ith'absence of the needer.

Corio. Fare ye well :

Thou hast yeares upon thee, and thou are too full

Of the warres furfets, to go roue with one That's yet vabruis'd : bring me but out at gate. Come my sweet wife, my deerest Mother and My Friends of Noble touch : when I am forth, Bidme facewell, and smile. I pray you come : While I remaine about the ground, you shall Heare from me flill, and never of me ought But what is like me formerly.

Menen. That's worthily As any eare can heare. Come, let's not weepe, If I could shake off but one seven yeeres From these old armes and legges, by the good Gods I'ld with thee, eucry foot.

Corso. Give me thy hand, come. Enter the 1000 Trouver, Secrims and Brusns, wub ibe Edde.

Sum, Bid them all home, he's gone: & wee'l no further The Nobility are vexed, whom we see have sided In his behalfe.

Brut. Now we have thewne our power, Let vs seeme humbler after it is done,

Then when it was a dooing.

Siein Bid them home: fay their great enemy is gone

And they, stand in their ancient strength,

Brut. Dismisse them home. Here comes his Mother

Enter Volmansa Vergilia and Menemica Sicin. Let's not meet ber. Brut Why?

SEM. They say she's mad.

Brut. They have tane note of vs:keepe on your way

Volum. Oh y'are well met :

Th'hoorded plague a'th'Gods requit your love. Menen. Peace, peace be not foloud.

Volum. If that I could for weeping, you should heare Nay, and you shall heare some. Will you be gone?

Vng. You shall stay too . I would I had the power

To lay foromy Husband.

Siern. Are you mankinde? Volum. I foole, is that a shame. Note but this Foode, Was not a man my Father? Had'ft thou Foxship To banish him that Brooke more blowes for Rome Then thou half spoken words, Sicm. Oh bleffed Heavens!

Volum. Moe Noble blowes, then ener & wife words. And for Romes good, He tell thee what : yet goe: Nay but thou shalt stay too: I would my Sonne Were in Arabia, and thy Tribe before him, His good Sword in his hand

Sum. What then?

Virg. What then? Heeld make an end of thy posterity Volum. Bastards, and all.

Good man, the Wounds that he does beare for Rome !

Menen. Come, come, peace. Sicia. I would he had continued to his Country

As he began, and not voknit himfelfe The Noble knot he made.

Bra. I would he had.

Volum. I would he had? Twas you incensit the rable. Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth, As I can of those Myfreries which heauen Will not have earth to know.

Brus. Praylet's go.

Volum. Now pray fit get you gone. You have done a brave deede : Ere you go, heare this : As farre as doth the Capicoll exceede The meanest house in Rome; so farre my Sonne

This

This Ladies Husband beere; this (do you fee) Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Brs. Well, well, wee'l leave you. Sison. Why flay we to be baited

Exit Triberies. With one that wants her Wits.

Volum. Take my Prayers with you. I would the Gods had nothing elfe to do, But to confirme my Curffes. Could I meete 'cm But once a day, it would vnclogge my heart Of what lyes heavy too't.

Mene. You have told them home.

And by my troth you have cause : you'l Sup with me. Volum. Angers my Meate : I suppe vpon my selfe, And so shall sterue with Feeding: Come,let's go, Leave this faint-puling, and lament as I do, In Anger, Juno-like : Come, come, come.

Mene. Fie, fie, fie. Exu.

Enser a Roman, and a Volco. Rom. I know you well fir, and you know mee: your name I thinke is Adrean.

Volce. It is fo fir, truly I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman, and my Services are as you are, against'em. Know you me yet.

Volce. Nicenor: no.

Rem. The fame fir.

Voke. You had more Beard when I last faw you, but your Fauour is well appear'd by your Tongue. What's the Newes in Rome : I have a Note from the Volcean state to finde you out there. You have well faued met a dayes iourney.

Rom. There hath beene in Rome straunge Insurrechions: The people, against the Senatours, Patricians, and Nobles.

Val. Hath bin; is it ended then? Our State thinks not fo, they are in a most warlike preparation, & hope to com vpon them, in the heate of their division

Rom. The maine blaze of it is past, but a finall thing would make it flame againe. For the Nobles receyue fo to heart, the Bapishment of that worthy Coriolania, that they are in a ripe aptnesse, to take al power from the people, and to plucke from them their Tribunes for euer. This lyes glowing I contell you, and is almost mature for che violent breaking out.

Vol. Corrolanus Banisht?

Rm. Banish'd fit.

Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence NL

Ram. The day ferues well for them now. I have heard it faide, the fittest time to corrupt a mans Wife, is when thee's falme out with her Husband. Your Noble Tullus Auffeding well appeare well in these Warres, his great Oppoler Correlation being now in no request of his coon-

Volce. He cannot choose: I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you. You have ended my Bufineffe, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall betweene this and Supper, tell you most frange things from Rome: all tending to the good of their Aduerlaries. Haue you an Army ready fay you?

Vol. A most Royall one: The Centurions, and their charges distinctly billetted already in th'entertainment, and to be on foot at an houres warning.

Rem l'amioyfull to heare of their readineffe.and am the man I thinke, that firall for them in prefent Action. So Gr, beartly well met, and most glad of your Company.

Valce. You take my part from me fis, I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Corio. Prepare thy brow to frowne: knowl? § me yet?

Anf. I know thee not ? Thy Name? Corio My name is Caise Marine, who hath done To thee particularly, and to all the Volces Great hurt and Milchiefe: thereto witnesse may My Surname Coriolanus. The painfull Service, The extreme Dangers, and the droppes of Blood Shed for my thanklesse Country, ste requitted: But with that Surname, a good memorie And witacife of the Malice and Displeasure Which thou should'it beare me, only that name remains. The Cruelty and Enuy of the people, Permitted by our dastard Nobles, who Haue all forlooke me, hath devour'd the reft : And luffer'd me by th'vnyce of Slaves to be Hoop'd out of Rome. Now this extremity. Hath brought me to thy Harth, not out of Hope (Mistake me not) to faue my life : for if I had tear'd death, of all the Men i th' World I would have voided thee. But in meere spight To be full quit of those my Banishers, Stand I before ther heere: Then if thou haft A heart of wreake in thee, that wilt revenge Thine owne particular wrongs, and stop those maimes Of thanie feene through thy Country, speed thee straight And make my mifery ferue thy turner So vieit, That my reuengefull Services may prove As Benefits to thee. For I will fight Against my Cankred Countrey, with the Spleene Of all the ruder Fiends. But if so be,

Thou dar'st not thus, and that to prove more Fortunes

Th'act tyr'd, then in a word, I also am Longer to live moft wearie : and prefent My throat to thee, and to thy Ancient Malice : Which not to cut, would thew thee but a Foole, Since I have ever followed thee with hate. Drawne Tunner of Blood out of thy Countries breft, And cannot live but to thy shame, vnlesse It be to do thee feruice

Auf. On Marine, Marine; Each word thou hast spoke, liath weeded from my heart A roote of Ancient Finty, If Iupiter. Should from yond clowd speake druine things, And fay 'tis true; I'denot beleeue them more Then thee all-Noble Marine. Let me twine Mine armes about that body, where against My grained Ash an hundred times hath broke, And fearr'd the Moone with Splinters : heere I cleep The Anuile of my Sword, and do contest As hotly, and as Nobly with thy Loue, As ever in Ambitious firength, I did Contend against thy Valour. Know thou first, I lou'd the Maid I married neuer man Sigh'd truer breath Butthat I feethee heere Thou Noble thing, more dances my rapt heart. Then when I first my wedded Mistris law Bestride my Threshold. Why, thou Mars I cell chee, We have a Power on foote, and I had purpole Once more to hew thy Target from thy Brawne, Or loofe mine Arme for't : Thou hast beate mee out Twelve scueraltimes, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters twist thy selfe and me: We have beene downe ogether in my fleepe, Vnbuckling Helmes, filling each others Throat, And wak'd halfe dead with nothing. Worthy Marine, Had we no other quarrell elfe to Rome, bur that Thou are thence Banish'd, we would muster all From twelve, to fenentic: and powning Ware Into the bowels of vngratefull Rome, Like a buld Flood o're-beare. Oh como go in, And take our Friendly Senators by'th'hands Who now are heere, taking their leaves of mee, Who am prepar'd against your Territories, Though not for Rome it felfe.

Corro. You bleffe me Gods.

Auf. Therefore most absolute Sir, is thou will have The leading of thine owne Reuenges, take Th'one halfe of my Commission, and see downe As bell thou art experienc'd, fince thou know It Thy Countries firength and weaknesse, thine own waies Whether to knocke against the Gates of Rome, Orrudely wifit them in parts remote, To fright them, ere deflroy, But come in, Lerme commend thee first, to those that Chall Say yea to thy defires. I He had fo, looking as it were, would I were hang'd but I thought there was more in him, then I could think.

2 So did I, He be fworne: He is simply the rarest man Sth'world.

I thinke he is : but a greater foldier then he, You wot one.

2 Whomy Master?

1 Nay, it's no matter for that.

2 Worth fix on him.

Nay not so neither: but I take him to be the greater Souldiour.

2 Faith looke you, one cannot tell how to fay that: for the Defence of a Towne, our Generall is excellent.

1 I, and for an affault too.

Enter the third Seruingman.

3 Oh Slaues, I can tell you Newes, News you Rascals Both. What, what, what? Let's partake.

3 I would not be a Roman of all Nations; I had as live be a condemn'd man,

Both. Wherefore? Wherefore?

3 Why here's he that was wont to thwacke our Generall, Cains Martins.

1 Why do you fay, thwacke our Generall?

3 I do not lay thwacke our Generall, but he was alwayes good enough for him

2 Come we are fellowes and friends: he was ever too hard for him, I have heard him fay so himselfe.

1 He was too hard for him directly, to fay the Troth on't before Corioles, he scotcht him, and notcht him like a

2 And hee had bin Cannibally given, hee might have boyld and eaten him too.

But more of thy Newes.

Why he is so made on heere within, as if hee were Son and Heire to Mars, let at vpper end o'th' Table: No question askt him by any of the Senators, but they sland beld before him. Our Generall himselfe makes a Mistels of him, Sanctifies himfelfe with's hand, and turnes up the white o'th'eye to his Discourse. But the bottome of the Newes is, our Generall is cut i'th'middle, & but one halfe of what he was yesterday. For the other ha's halfe, by the intreaty and graunt of the whole Table. Hee'l go he layes, and sole the Porter of Rome Gates by th'cares. He will mowe all downe before him, and leave his passage poul'd.

And he's as like to do't, as any man I can imagine.

Doo't? he will doo't: for look you fir, he has as many Friends as Enemies: which Friends fir as It were, durst not (looke you fir) shew themselves (as we terme it) his Friends, whilest he's in Directitude.

t Directitude? What's that ?

3 But when they shall see sir, his Crest vp againe, and the man in blood, they will our of their Burroughes (like Conies after Raine) and reuell all with him.

1 But when goes this forward:

3 To morrow, to day, presently, you shall have the Drum strooke up this afternoone: 'Tis as it were a parcel of their Feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips,

2 Why then wee shall have a stirring World againe : This peace is nothing, but to rust Iron, encrease Taylors, and breed Ballad-makers.

t Let me haue Warre fay I, it exceeds peace as farre as day do s night t It's fprightly walking, audible, and full of Vent. Peace, is a very Apoplexy, Lethargie, mull'd, deafe, sleepe, insensible, a getter of more bastard Children, then warres a destroyer of men.

'Tis fo, and as warres in some fort may be saide to be a Rauisher, so it cannot be denied, but peace is a great maker of Cuckolds.

1 I, and it makes men hare one another.

Reason, because they then lesse neede one another: The Warres for my money. I hope to fee Romanes as cheape as Volcians. They are rifing they are rifing.

Both. In, in, in, in.

Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius, and Brutus. Siem. We heare not of him, neither need we fear him, His remedies are tame, the present peace, And quietnesse of the people, which before Were in wilde hurry. Heere do we make his Friends Blush, that the world goes well : who rather had, Though they themselves did suffer by't, behold Diffencious numbers peffring streets, then fee Our Tradesmen inging in their shops, and going About their Functions friendly.

Enter Menenius.

Bru. We stood too't in good time. Is this Menonius? Sicin. 'Tis he, tis he: Ohe is grown most kind of late: Haile Sir. Mene. Haile to you both.

Siem. Your Corielanse is not much mift, but with his Friends: the Commonwealth doth stand, and so would do, were he more angry at it.

Mene. All's well, and might have bene much better, ifhe could have temporiz'd.

Sicin. Where is he, heare you? Mene. Nay I heare nothing:

His Mother and his wife, heare nothing from him.

Enter three or foure Citizens. All. The Gods preserve you both.

Siem. Gooden our Neighbours.

Bru. Gooden to you all, gooden to you all. 1 Our selves, our wives, and children, on our knees, Are bound to pray for you both.

Siem. Live, and thrive.

Brw. Farewell kinde Neighhours :

We wish t Consolanse had lou'd you as we did. All. Now the Gods keepe you.

Lien. Yet I wish Sir,

(I meane for your particular) you had not Joyn'd in Commission with him abut either have borne The action of your felfe, or elle to him, had left it foly.

Auf. I vnderstand thee well, and be thou sure When he shall come to his account, he knowes not What I can vrge against him, although it seemes And so he thinkes, and is no lesse apparant To th'vulgar eye, that he beares all things fairely t And Thewes good Husbandry for the Volcian State, Fights Dragon-like, and does archeeue as foone As draw his Sword : yet he hath left vindone That which shall breake his necke, or hazard mine, When ere we come to our account.

Liev. Sir, I befeech you, think you he'l carry Rome?

Auf. All places yeelds to him ere he firs downe, And the Nobility of Rome are his: The Senators and Patricians love him too: The Tribunes are no Soldiers: and their people Will be as rash in the repeale, as hasty To expell him thence. I thinke hee'l be to Rome As is the Afpray to the Fish, who takes it By Soueraigory of Nature, First, he was A Noble feruanc to them, but he could not Carry his Honors eeuen: whether 'was Pride Which out of dayly Fortune euer taints The happy man; whether detect of judgement, To faile in the disposing of those chances Which he was Lord of : or whether Nature, Not to be other then one thing, not mooning From th'Caske to th'Culhion : but commanding pence Even with the same austerity and garbe, As he controll'd the warre. But one of these (As he hath (pices of them all) not all, For I dare so farre free him, made him fear'd, So hated, and so banish'd: but he ha's a Merit To chooke it in the vit'rance: So our Vertue, Lie in th'interpretation of the time, And power vnto it felfe most commendable, Hath not a Tombe so evident as a Chaire Textoll what it hath done, One fire drives out one fire; one Naile, one Naile;

To keepe your name living to time.

Boy. A shall not tread on me : lle run away. Till I am bigger, but then lle fight.

Corio. Diot of a womans tendernesse to be, Requires nor Childe, nor womans sace to see:

I have fate too long.

Volum. Nay, go not from vs thus: Ifit were fo, that our request did tend To faue the Romanes, thereby to deftroy The Volces whom you ferue, you might condemne vs As poylonous of your Honnur. No, our fuite Is that you reconcile them : While the Volces May fay, this mercy we have shew'd ; the Romanes, This we received, and each in either lide Gine the All-haile to thee, and ery be Bleft For making up this peace. Thou know ((great Sonne) The end of Wartes uncertaine; but this certaine, That if thou conquer Rome, the benefit Which thou shalt thereby reape, is such a name Whole repetition will be dogg'd with Curles: Whole Chronicle thus writ, The man was Noble, But with his last Attempt, he wip'd it out: Destroy'd his Country, and his name remaines To th'infuing Age, abhorr'd. Speake to me Son: Thou halt affected the five ftraines of Honor, To imitate the graces of the Gods. To teare with Thunder the wide Cheekes a'th'Ayre, And yet to change thy Sulphure with a Boult That should but rive an Oake. Why do'ft not speake? Think'st thou it Honourable for a Nobleman Still to remember wrongs ? Daughter, (peake you . He cares not for your weeping. Speake thou Boy, Perhaps thy childiffnetfe will moue him more Then can our Reasons. There's no man in the world Mere bound to's Mother, yet heere he let's me prate Like one i'th'Stockes. Thou hast neuer in thy life, Shew'd thy deere Mother any curtefie, When the (poore Hen) fond of no second brood, Ha's clock'd thee to the Warres: and safelie home Loden with Honor. Say my Request's uniust, And spurne me backe: But, if it be not so Thou art not honest, and the Gods will plague thee That thon restrain's from me the Duty, which To a Mothers part belongs. He turnes away: Down Ladies: let vs thame him with him with our knees To his fur-name Coriolarus longs more pride Then pitty to our Prayers. Do eme : an end, This is the last. So, we will home to Rome, And dye among our Neighbours : Nay, behold's, This Boy that cannot tell what he would have, But kneeles, and holds up hands for fellowship, Doe's reason our Petition with more strength Then thou half to deny't. Come,let vs go : This Fellow had a Volcean to his Mother: His Wife is in Cariales, and his Childe Like him by chance : yet give vs our dispatch :

Holds her by the band filent.

Corre. O Mother, Mother!

What have you done? Behold, the Heavens do opt. The Gods looke downe, and this vinaturall Scene They laugh at. Oh my Mother, Mother: Oh! You have wonne a happy Victory to Rome.

But for your Sonne, believe it: Oh believe it, Most dangerously you have with him pressil'd. If not most mortall to him. But let it come:

Ansidum, though I cannot make true Warres, like frame consumint peace. Now good Ansidum, Were you in my steed, would you have heard A Mother lesse? or granted lesse Ansidum?

I am hushe yntill our City be afre, & then He speak a little

Anf. I was mou'd withall.

Corse. I date be (worne you were:
And fir, it is no little thing to make Mine eyes to (weat compation, But (good fir)
What peace you'l make, aduice me: For my part,
Ile not to Rome, Ile backe with you, and pray you
Stand to me in this cause. Oh Mother! Wift!

Auf. I am gled thou half fer thy mercy, & thy Henor At difference in thee: Out of that He worke

My selse a former Fortune.

Corio. I by and by; But we will drinke together:
And you shall beare
A better witnesse backe then words, which we
On like conditions, will have Counter-seal'd.
Come enter with vs: Ladies you deserve
To have a Temple built you: All the Swords
In Italy, and her Consederate Armes

Could not have made this peace.

Exter Menerum and Sicinim. ftone?

Mene. See you you'd Coin a'th Capitol, you'd corner

Sicin. Why what of thet?

More. If it be possible for you to displace it wish your little singer, there is some hope the Ladies of Rome, especially his Mother, may precalle with him. But I say, there is no hope in t, our throats are sentenced, and say uppon execution.

Sicin. Is't possible, that so short a time can alter the condition of a man.

Mess. There is differency between a Grub & a Buzterfly, yet your Butterfly was a Grub; this Marites, be growne from Man to Dragon: He has wings, hee's more then a creeping thing.

Siein. He lou'd his Mother deerely.

Mone So did he mee: and he no more remembers his Mother now, then an eight yeare old horse. The tertas see of his face, sowres ripe Grapes. When he walks, he moues like an Engine, and the ground shrinkes before his Treading. He is able to pietce a Corflet with his eye: Taikes like a knell, and his hum is a Battery. He fits in his State, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids bee done, is finisht with his bidding. He wants nothing of a God but Eternizy, and a Heaven to Throne in.

Siem. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Mme. I paint him in the Character. Mark what more cy his Mother shall bring from him: There is no more mercy in him, then there is milke in a male-Tyger, that shall our poore City finde: and all this is long of you.

Swin. The Gods be good vato vs.

Mene. No, in such a case the Gods will not bee good vnto vs. When we banish d him, we respected not them: and he returning to breake our necks, they respect not vs.

Emer a Missinger.

Met

Mef. Sir, if you'ld faue your life, flye to your House, The Plebeians have got your Fellow Tribune, And hale him vp and downe; all swearing, if The Romane Ladies bring not comfort home, They I give him death by Inches.

Enter another Meffenger. Sicin. What's the Newes? (prevayld, Meff. Good Newes, good newes, the Ladies have The Volcians are dislodg'd, and Martine gone : A merrier day did neuer yet greet Rome, No, not th'expulsion of the Tarquins Sicin. Friend, att thou certaine this is true?

Is't most certaine.

Mef. As certaine as I know the Sun is fire : Where have you lurk'd that you make doubt of it: Ne're through an Arch so hurried the blowne Tide, As the recomforted through th'gates. Why harke you :

Trumpets, Hoboyes, Drums beate, altogether. The Trumpers, Sack-buts, Platteries, and Files, Tabors, and Symboles, and the showting Romans A Bout within Make the Sunne dance. Hearke you.

Mene. This is good Newes : I will go meete the Ladies. This Volumnia, Is worth of Confuls, Senators, Patricians, A City full : Of Tribunes fuch as you, A Sea and Land full: you have pray'd well to day: This Morning, for tenthousand of your throates, I'de not have given a doit. Harke, how they loy Sound Still with the Shouts.

Sicin. First, the Gods bleffe you for your tydings : Next, accept my thankefulneffe.

Meff. Sir, we have all great cause to give great thanks. Siein. They are neere the City. Maf. Almost at point to enter.

Sicin. Wee'l meet them, and helpe the loy. Exercit.

Enter two Senators, with Ladies, passing over the Stage, with other Lords.

Sena, Behold our Patronnesse, the life of Rome: Call all your Tribes together, praise the Gods, And make triumphant fires, strew Flowers before them: Vnshoot the noise that Banish'd Martins; Repeale him, with the welcome of his Mother: Cry welcome Ladies, welcome

All. Welcome Ladies, vielcome.

A Flourish with Drummes & Trumpets.

EnterTulus Auffidius, with Attendents. Auf. Go tell the Lords a'th'City, I am heere: Deliver them this Paper: having read it, Bid them repayre to th'Market place, where I Euen in theirs, and in the Commons eares Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse: The City Ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends t'appeare before the People, hoping To purge himselse with words. Dispatch.
Ewter 3 or 4 Conspirator of Aussidius Fallion.

Most Welcome.

1. Con. How is it with our Generall?

Auf. Euen lo, as with a man by his owne Almes impoy fon'd, and with his Charity flaine.

2. Con. Most Noble Sir, If you do hold the same intent Wherein you wishe vs parties: Wee'l deliuer you Olyour great danger.

Auf Sir, I cannot tell,

We must proceed as we do finde the People.

3.Con. The People will remaine vncertaine, whit's Twixt you there's difference : but the fall of either Makes the Sururuor heyre of all.

Auf. Iknowit:

And my pretext to strike at him, admits A good conftruction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd Mine Honor for his truth : who being fo heighten'd, He watered his new Plants with dewes of Flattery, Seducing formy Friends : and to this end, He bow'd his Nature, never knowne before, But to be rough, vnswayable, and free. 3. Confp. Sir, his stoutnesse

When he did stand for Consull, which he lost

By lacke of Rooping.

Auf. That I would have spoke of. Being banish'd for't, he came vnto my Harth, Presented to my knife his Throat : I tooke him, Made him joynt-feruant with me: Gaue him way In all his owne defires: Nay, let him choose Out of my Files, his projects, to accomplish My best and freshest men, seru'd his designements In mine owne person : holpe to reape the Fame Which he did end all his; and tooke some pride. To do my felfe this wrong : Till at the last I scem'd his Follower, nor Partner; and He wadg'd me with his Countenance, as if I had bin Mercenary.

.Con. So he did my Lord: The Army marueyl'd at it, and in the laft, When he had carried Rome, and that we look'd For no leffe Spoile, then Glory.

Auf. There was it:

For which my finewes shall be stretcht voon him, At a few drops of Womens thewme, which are As cheape as Lies; he fold the Blood and Labour Of our great Action; therefore shall he dyc, And Herenew me in his fall. But hearke Drummes and Trumpets founds, with great Thowas of the people.

1. Con. Your Native Towne you enter'd like a Poffe. And had no welcomes home, but he returnes Splitting the Ayre with noyle.

2. Con. And patient Fooles,

Whose children he hath staine, their base throats teare

With giving him glory.
3. Con. Therefore at your vactage, Ere he expresse himselfe, or move the people With what he would fay, let him feele your Swords Which we will fecond, when he lies along After your way. His Tale pronounc'd, shall bury His Reasons, with his Body.

Auf. Say no more. Heere come the Lords, Enser the Lords of the City.

All Lords. You are most welcome home. Auf. I haue not desetu'dit.

Due worthy Lords, have you with beede perufed What I have written to you?

All. We have.

1. Lord. And greeve to heare't: What faults he made before the last, I thinke Might have found easie Fines: But there to end Where he was to begin, and give away The benefit of our Leures, answering vs With our owne charge: making a Treatie, where There was a yeelding; this admits no excuse.

PMF.

Mif. He approaches, you shall heare him Enter Corrolanus marching with Denemine, and Colours. The Commoners being with him.

Corio. Haile Lords, I am return'd your Souldier: No more infeded with my Countries love Then when I parted hence : but fill subfifting Vnder your great Command. You are to know, That prosperously I have attempted, and With bloody passage led your Warres, euen co The gates of Rome: Our spoiles we have brought home Doth more then counterpoize a full third part The charges of the Action. We have made peace With no leffe Honor to the Antiates Then Chame to th'Romaines. And we heere deliuer Subscrib'd by'th'Consuls, and Patricians, Together with the Scale ath Senat, what We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not Noble Lords, But tell the Traitor in the highest degree He hath abus'd your Powers

Corro Traitor? How now? Auf. 1 Traitor, Martins.

Corio. Martina?

Auf. I Martin, Caine Martine : Do'ft thou thinke He grace thee with that Robbery, thy stolne name

Corrolanses in Corroles ? You Lords and Heads a'th'State, perfidioully He ha's betray'd your businesse, and given vp For sertaine drops of Salt, your City Rome: I fay your City to his Wife and Mother, Breaking his Oath and Refolution, like A twift of rotten Silke, never admitting Counsaile a'th'warre : But at his Nurses teares He whin'd and roat'd away your Victory, That Pages blush'd at him, and men of heart Look'd wond'ring each at others.

Corio. Hear'st thou Mars?

Auf. Name not the God, thou boy of Teares.

Corio. Ha?

Aufid. No more.

Corio. Measurelesse Lyar, thou hast made my heart Too great for what containes it. Boy? Oh Slaue, Pardon me Lords, 'ris the first time that ever I was forc'd to fcoul'd. Your judgments my grave Lords Must give this Curre the Lye : and his owne Notion, Who weares my ftripes imprest wpon him, that Must beare my beating to his Graue, shall ioyne To thrust the Lye voto him.

2 Lord. Peace both, and heare me speake.

Corio. Cut me to peeces Volces men and Lads,
Strine off your edges on me. Boy, salse Hound: If you have writ your Annales true, 'tis there, That like an Eagle in a Doue-coat, I Flatter'd your Volcians in Consules. Alone I did it, Boy.

Juf. Why Noble Lords, Will you be put in minde of his blinde Fortune. Which was your shame, by this vnholy Besggart's Fore your owne eyes, and eares?

All Conft. Let him dye fort.
All Prople. Teare him to peeces, do it presently: He kill'd my Some, my daughter, be kill'd my Cofine Marcu, he kill'd my Father.

2 Lord Peace hoe : no outrage, peace : The man is Noble, and his Fame folds in This Orbe o'th'earth: His last officees to vs Shall have Indicious hearing. Stand Aufidens, And trouble not the peace,

Corio. O that I had him, with fix Aufidiuffer, or more

His Tribe, to vie my lawfull Sword.

Auf. Infolent Villaine. All Confp. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him.

Draw both the Conferencers, and hils Offartius, who falles, Auffidies flands on bim.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold.

Auf. My Noble Masters, heare me speake.

1 Lord. O Tullus

2. Lord. Thou hast done a deed, whereat Valour will weepe.

3. Lord. Tread not vpon him Mafters, all be quiet, Put vp your Swords.

Auf. My Lords,

When you shall know (as in this Rage Prouok'd by him, you cannot) the great danger Which this mans life did owe you, you'l reloyce That he is thus cut off. Please it your Honours To call me to your Senate, Le deliuer My selfe your loyall Servant, or endure Your heaniest Censure.

1. Lord. Beare from hence his body, And mourne you for him. Let him be regarded As the most Noble Coarse, that ever Herald Did follow to his Vrne.

2. Lord. His owne impatience, Takes from Auffidue a great part of blame: Lec's make the Best of it.

Anf. My Rage is gone, And I am firucke with forrow. Take him vp: Helpe three a'th'chrefest Souldiers, Ile be one. Bezte thou the Drumme that it speake mournfully: Traile your steele Pikes. Though in this City hee Harh widdowed and vnchilded many a one, Which to this houre bewaile the Iniury, Yethe shall have a Noble Memory.

Excuss bearing the Body of Morieu. A held March

The Lamentable Tragedy of Titus Andronicus.

Adus Primus. Scana Prima.

Flowersb. Enter the Tribunes and Senators alost. And then enter Saturninus and hu Followers at one doore, and Bassianus and hu Followers at the other, with Drown of Colours.

Saturninus,

Oble Patricians, Patrons of my right,
Defend the juffice of my Caufe with Armes.
And Countrey-men, my louing Followers,
Pleade my Successive Title with your Swords.

I was the fift borne Sonne, that was the last That wore the Imperiall Diadem of Rome. Then let my Fathers Honours live in me, Nor wrong nine Age with this indignitie.

Basicanu. Romaines, Friends, Followers, Fauourers of my Right.

If ever Basicanus, Casara Sonne,
Were gracious in the eyes of Royall Rome,
Keepe then this passage to the Capitoll.
And suffer not Dishonour to approach
Th'Imperiall Sente to Vertue: consecrate
To Justice, Continente, and Nobility.
But let Desert in pure Election shine;
And Romanes, fight for Freedome in your Choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus aloft with the Crowne.

Princes, that strive by Factions, and by Friends, Ambitioufly for Rule and Empery : Know, that the people of Rome for whom we fland A speciall Party, have by Common voyce In Election for the Romane Emperie. Chosen Andronicus, Sur-named Pions, For many good and great deferts to Rome. A Nobler man, a brauer Warriour, Lives not this day within the City Walles. He by the Senate is accited home From weary Warres against the barbarous Gothes, That with his Sonnes (a tetrot to our Foes) Hathyoak'd a Nation flrong, train'd vp in Armes. Ten yeares are spent, fince first he vodertooke This Caule of Rome, and chafficed with Armes Our Enemies pride. Five times he hath return'd Bleeding to Rome, bearing his Valiant Sonnes In Coffins from the Field. And now at last, laden with Honours Spoyles, Returnes the good Andronsess to Rome. Renowned Time, flourishing in Armes.

Let vs intreat, by Honour of his Name,
Whom (worthily) you would have now succeede,
And in the Capitoll and Senates right,
Whom you pretend to Honour and Adore,
That you withdraw you, and abate your Strength,
Dismifle your Followers, and as Suters should,
Pleade your Defects in Peace and Humblende.

Saturnone. How fayre the Tribune speakes, To calme my thoughts.

Rafiia. Marcu Andronicca, so I do affice
In thy sprightnesse and Integrity:
And so I Loue and Honor thee, and thine,
Thy Noble Brother Tum, and his Sonnes,
And Her (to whom my thoughts are humbled all)
Gracious Laumu, Romes rich Ornament,
That I will here dissuffice my louing Friends:
And to my Fortunes, and the Peoples Fauour,
Commit my Cause in ballance to be weigh d.

Exit Souldisms.

Saturains. Friends, that have beene
Thus forward in my Right,
I thanke you all, and heere Dismisse you all,
And to the Loue and Favour of my Coontrey,
Commit my Selfe, my Person, and the Cause.
Rome, be as just and gracious vinto me,
As I am confident and kinde to thee.
Open the Gates, and let me in.

Basius. Tribunes, and me, a poore Competitor.

Flowrish. They go up mis the Senat house

Enter a Captame.

Cq. Romanes make way: the good Andromesso, Patron of Vertue, Romes best Champion, Successfell in the Battailes that he fights, With Honour and with Fortune is return'd, From whence he circumferibed with his Sword, And brought to yoke the Enemies of Rome

Sound Drummes and Trumpers. And then enter two of Trius Sonaes; After them., two men bearing a Coffin coursed with blacke, then two other Sonnes. After them. Titue Andronce, and then Tamora the Queene of Goibes, Orber two Sonnes: Chiron and Demetries, with Maron the Moore, and others, as many us can bee. They fee downe the Coffin and Titus freakes.

Andronicus. Haile Rome: Victorious in thy Mourning Weedes:

oe as the Back e that hath discharg'd his fraught, Returnes with precious lading to the Bay From whence at firl the wegih'd her Aochorage : Commeth Andronicas bound with Lawrell bowes, To relatute his Country with his teares, Teares of true toy for his teturne to Rome, Thou great defender of this Capitoll, Stand gracious to the Rites that we intend. Romaines, of fine and twenty Valiant Sonnes, Halfe of the number that King Praem had. Behold the poore remaines alive and dead! These that Suruine, let Rome reward with Loue: Thefe that I bring vnto their latest home, With buriall among ft their Aunceftors Heere Gothes have given me leave to theath my Sword: Trim vakinde, and carelelle of thine owne, Why Suffer'th thou thy Sonnes unburied yet, To houer on the dreadfull shore of Stix? Make way to lay them by their Bretheren.

They open the Tombe.
There greete in filence as the dead are wont.
And fleepe in peace, flaine in yout Countries warres:
O facred receptacle of my toyes,
Sweet Cell of vertue and Noblitie,
How many Sonnes of mine hast thou in flore,
That thou wilt neuer render to me more!

Luc. Give vs the proadest prosoner of the Gothes,
That we may hew his limbes, and on a pile
Admanus frarrum, sacrifice his flesh:
Before this earthly prison of their bones,
That so the shadowes be not vnappeas'd.
Nor we disturb'd with produgies on earth.
Tis. I give him you, the Noblest that Survives,
The eldest Son of this distressed Queene.

10m. Stay Romaine Bretheren, gracious Conquetor, Victorious Titm, rue the teares I fhed, A Mothers teares in passion for her sonne : And if thy Sonnes were ever deere to thee, Oh thinke my sonnes to be 23 deere to mee Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome To beautifie thy Triumphs, and returns Captine to thee, and to thy Romaine yoake, But mult my Sonnes be flaughtred in the Areetes, For Veliant doings in their Countries cause? Ollf to fight for King and Common-weale, Were piety in thine, it is in thefe: Androness, fraine not thy Tombe with blood. Will thou draw neete the nature of the Gods? Draw neere them then in being mercifull, Sweet mercy is Nobilities true badge, Thrice Noble Titm, spare my first bome sonne.

Tit. Patient your felle Madam, and pardon me. These are the Brethren, whom you Gothes beheld Alive and dead, and for their Bretheren slaine, Religiously they aske a sacrifice: To this your sonne is markt, and die he must, Tappease their groaning shadowes that are gone.

Luc. Away with him, and make a fire straight, And with our Swords vpon a pile of wood, Let's new his limbes till they be cleane consum'd.

Exit Soones with Alarbine.
Tamo. O cruell irreligious piety.
Chi. Was ever Scythia halfe to barbarous e
Dem. Oppose me Scythia to ambitious Rosse,

Alarbia goes to reft, andwe furuise,
To tremble vider Trius threating looker,
Then Madam frind refold dibut hope withall,
The felte fame Gods that arm'd the Queene of Troy
With opportunitie of tharpe reuenge
Vion the Thracian Tyrant in his Tent,
May fauous Tamora the Queene of Gothes,
(When Gothes were Gothes, and Temora was Queene)
To quit the bloody wrongs vion her foes.

Enter the Sounes of Andronecus og aine.

Luci. See Lord and Father, how we have performed Our Romaine rightes, Alabas lumbs are lopt, And intrals feede the fathifting fire, Whose smoke like incense dorth persume the akie. Remaineth nought but to interre our Brethren, And with low'd Larums welcome them to Rome.

Tir. Let it be so, and let Audroneus Make shis his letest farewell to their soules. Flourish.

Then Sound Trampers, and lay the Coffias in the Tombo.
In peace and Honour rest you heere my Sonoca,
Romes readiest Champions, repose you herre in rest,
Secure from worldly chaunces and mishaps:
Heere lurks no I reason, heere no enuse swels,
Heere grow no damned grudges, heere are no stormes,
No noyse, but silence and Eternall steepe,
In peace and Honour rest you heere my Sounces.

Emer Leuinia.

Lan In peace and Honour, live Lord Tixm long,
My Noble Lord and Father, line in Fame:
Loe at this Tombe my tributant teares,
I tender for my Bretherens Obfequies.
And at thy feete Lkneele, with teares of loy
Shed on the earth for thy returne to Rome.
O bleffe me heere with thy victorious hand,
Whole Fortune Romes best Citizens appland.

Ti Kind Rome,
That naft thus louingly referred
The Cordiall of mine age to glad my hare,
Languia live, out-live thy Fathers dayes t
And Fames eternall date for vertues praife.

Afor. Long live Lord Tire, my beloved brother,
Gracious Triumpher in the eyes of Rome.

Tn. Thankes GendeTribune, Noble brother Marcus.

Ms. And welcome Nephews from foecessul wes, You that survive and you that sleepe in Fame:
Faire Lords your Fortunes are all alike in all,
That in your Countries service drewyour Swords.
But safer Triumph is this Funerall Pompe,
That hath aspir'd to Salam Happines,
And Triumphs over chaunca in honours bed.
Titus Averniess , the people of Rome,
Whole striend in instruction hast ever bene,
Send thee by me their Tribune and their trust,
This Palliament of white and spotlesse thue,
And name thee in Election for the Empire,
With these our late deceased Emperours Soones:
Be Candidatus then and put it on,
And helpe to set a head on headlesse Some.
The Author has done all offer Rome.

Tu. A better head her Glorious body fits, Then his that thakes for age and feebleneffe:

Whi:

What should I d'on this Robe and trouble you, Be chosen with proclamations to day To morrow yeeld up rule, refigne my life, And let abroad new businesse for you all. Rome I have bene thy Souldier forty yeares, And led my Countries drength successfully, And buried one and twenty Valiant Sonnes, Knighted in Field, Gaine manfully In Armes, In right and Service of their Noble Countrie Cive me a staffe of Honour for mineage. But not a Scepter to controu le the world, Vpright he held it Lordr, that held it lost,

Mar. Tuur, thou shalt obtaine and aske the Emperie Sec. Proud and ambitious Tribune can'st thou tell? Titus. Patience Prince Saturnmens.

Sat. Romaines do me right.

Patricians draw your Swords, and fheath there not Till Securinus be Romes Emperour: Androneus would thou wert shipt to hell, Rather then rob me of the peoples harts.

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good That Noble minded Titus meanes to thee. Tit. Content thee Prince, I will restore to thee The peoples harts, and weane them from themselves.

Bafs. Andronens, I do not flatter thee But Honour thee, and will doe till I die: My Faction if thou ftrengthen with thy Friend? I will most thenkefull be, and thankes to men Of Noble mindes, is Honourable Meede.

Tit. People of Rome, and Noble Tribunes heere, I aske your yoyces and your Suffrages, Will you bellow them friendly on Andronleus?

Tribunes. To gratifie the good Andronicus, And Gratulate his lafe returne to Rome, The people will accept whom he admits

Tir. Tribunes I thanke you, and this fore I make, That you Create your Emperours eldest sonne, Lord Saturnine, whose Vertues will Ihope, Reflect on Rome as Tytans Rayes on earth And ripen Iustice in this Common-wesle: Then if you will elect by my aduite, Crownehim, and fay: Long live our Emperour.

Mar. As. With Voyces and applaule of enery fort, Patricians and Picheans we Create Lord Saturemes Romes Great Emperour. And say, Long like our Enperour Saturmee.

A long Florrish till they come downe.

Satu. Titus Andronicus, for thy Fauours done,

To vs in our Election this day, I give thee thankes in part of thy Deferts, And will with Deeds require thy gentleneffe s And for an Onfet Tiens to advance Thy Name, and Honorable Familie, Launia will I make my Empresse, Rome s Royall Mistris, Mistris of my hare And in the Sucred Pathan her espouse: Tell me Andronicus doth this motion please thee?

Tu. It doch my worthy Lord, and in this match, Ihold me Highly Honoured of your Grace, And heere in light of Rome, to Saturnine, King and Commander of our Common-weale, The Wide-worlds Emperour, do I Confecrate, My Sword,my Charlot, and my Prisonerss, Presents well Worthy Romes Imperial Lords Receive them then, the Tribute that I owe, Mine Honours Enlignes humbled at my feete.

Satu. Thankes Noble Tizer, Father of my life, How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts Rome shall record, and when I do forget The least of these vnspeakable Deserts, Romans forget your Fealtie to me.

Tit. Now Madam are your prisoner to an Emperous,

To him that for you Honour and your State, Will vie you Hobly and your followers.

Saen. A goodly Lady, trust me of the Hue That I would choose, were I to thoose a new: Cleere vp Faire Queene that cloudy countenance, Though chance of warre Hath wrought this change of cheere, Thou com'Anot to be made a scome in Rome: Princely shall be thy vlage cuery way. Rest on my word, and let not discontent Daunt all your hopes: Madam he comforts you, Can make your Greater then the Queene of Gothes?

Laviola you ere not displeased with this? Lou. Not I my Lord, fith true Nobilitie, Warrants these words in Princely curtefie.

Sat . Thankes sweete Laninia Romans let va goe: Ransomlesse heere we fet our Prisoners free, Proclaime our Honors Lords with Trumpe and Drum.

Bafs. Lord Titus by your leave, this Maid is mine. Tit. How fir ? Are you in earnest then my Lord? Bafs. I Noble Titm, and resolu'd withall, To doe my felfe this reason, and this right.

Mare. Suum cuiquam, is our Romane Juffice, This Prince in Iuflice ceazeth but his owne.

Luc. And that he will and shall, if Luciss live. Tit. Trayrocs auant, where is the Emperous Guarde? Treason my Lord, Lauinia is surpris'd.

Sat. Surprif'd, by whom? Bafr. By him that iustly may Beare his Betroth'd, from all the world away. Musi. Brothers helpe to convey her hence away, And with my Sword He keepe this doore lafe.

Tn . Follow my Lord, and lle soone bring bor backe. Mat. My Lord you passe not heere.
Tie. What villaine Boy, bar'st me my way in Rome?

Mut. Helpe Lucius helpe. He kils bies

Luc. My Lord you are vniul, and more then fo, In wrongfull quarrell, you have flaine your fon. Tir. Nor thou, nor he are any fonnes of mine, My fonnes would never fo dishonour me. Traytor restore Louisia to the Emperour.

Luc. Dead if you will, but not to be his wife, That is anothers lawfull promist Loue.

Enter alofe the Emperous with Tamora and ber two Sounds, and Acron the Moore.

Empe. No Titus, no, the Emperour needs her not, Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stocke: He trust by Leisure him that mocks me once. Thee neuer: nor thy Trayrerous haughty fonnes, Confederates all, thus to dishonour me. Was none in Rome to make a stale But Saturnine? Full well Andronicus Agree these Deeds, with that proud bragge of thine, That faid'ft, I beg'd the Empire at thy hands Tit. O monstrous, what reproachfull words are these? Sat. But goe thy wayes, goe give that changing peece, To him that flourisht for her with his Sword :

A Valliant foune In-law thou shalt enjoy : One, fit to bandy with thy lawleffe Sonnes,

To

To ruffle in the Common-weelth of Rome.

Tir. These words are Razors to my wounded hare. Sas. And therefore lovely Tamora Queene of Gother, That like the stately 7 bebe mong ft her Nimphs Doft over-thine the Gallant'A Dames of Rome, If thou be pleaf'd with this my fodaine choyle, Behold I choose thee Tamera for my Bride, And will Create thee Emprelle of Rome. Speake Queene of Goths doft thou applau'd my choyle? And heere I sweare by all the Romaine Gods, Sith Prieft and Holy-water are fo neere, And Tapers burne fo bright, and every thing In readines for Hymeness Cand, I will not refalute the streets of Rome, Or clime my Pallace, till from forth this place, I leade espoul a my Bride along with me, Tame. And heere in fight of heaven to Rome I freeze, If Saturnine aduance the Queen of Gothes,

If Seturnine advance the Queen of Gothes,
Shee will a Hand-maid be to his defires,
Alouing Nurse, a Mother tohis youth.
Satur. Ascend Fatte Queene,

Panthean Lords, accompany
Your Noble Emperour and his louely Brid, e
Sent by the heavens for Prince Sationine,
Whose wisedome hath her Fortune Conquered,
There shall we Consummate our Spousaltries.

Exenutoranes.

Tit. I am not bid to waite vponthis Bride:
Titus when wer't thou wont to walke alone,
Dishonoured thus and Challenged of wrongs?

Enter Marcus and Tisus Sommer.

Mar O Titus fee! O fee what thou hast done!
In a bad quartell, flaine a Vertuous sonne.
Tit. No soolish Tribune, no: No sonne of mine,
Nor thou, nor these Confederates in the deed,
That hath dishonoured all our Family,

Vnworthy brother, and vnworthy Sonnes.

Luci. But let vs gruethim buriall as becomes:

Giue Mutsas buriall with our Bretheren.

Tri. Traytors away, he rest's not in this Tombe:
This Monument sue hundresh yeares hash stood,
Which I have Sumptuously re-edified:
Secre none but Souldiers, and Romes Servitors,
Repose in Face: None basely staine in braules,
Bury him where you can, he comes not heere.

Mor. My Lord this is impiety in you, My Nephew Alarias deeds do plead for him, He must be buried with his bretheren.

Tirus ewo Sonnes Speaker.
And Chall, or him we will accompany.

Ti. And shall! What villaine was it spake that word?

Titus some speakes.

He that would rouch dit in any place but heere.

Tu. What would you bury him in my despight?

Mar. No Noble Tum, but intreat of thee,

To pardon Mains, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, Euenthou hast stroke voon my Crest, And with these Boyes mine Honour thou hast wounded, My soes I doe repure you every one.

So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Scarc. He is not himselfe, let vs withdraw.

Scarc. Not I tell Manui bones be buried.

The Brother and the sennes knecke.

Mer. Brother, for in that name doth usture plea'd.

2. Some. Father, and in that name doth nazure freakc. Tit. Speake thou no more if all the refimill speede. Mar. Renowned Tirus more then halfe my foules. Luc. Deare Father, foule and fubftance of vs all. Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcau to interre His Noble Nephew heere in vertoes neft. That died in Honour and Lasener's cause. Thou are a Romaine, be not barbarous: The Greekes upon aduite did bury Aiex That New himselfe : And Larres some, Did graciously plead for his Funerala: Let not young Murius then that was thy joy, Be bar'd his entrance heere. 74 Rife Mercu, rife, The dismall'ft day is this that ere I faw, To be dishonored by my Somes in Rome: Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

They put him in the Tombe.

Luc. There lie thy bones (weet Matin: with thy Till we with Trophees do adorne thy Tombe. (friends
They all threele and fay.

No man thed reares for Noble Murinu, He lives in Fame, that di'd in vertues cause.

He lives in Fame, that di'd in vertues cause.

Mar. My Lord to step out of these sodden dumps,

How comes it that the subtile Queene of Gothes,

Is of a sodaine thus advanc'd in Rome?

71. I knownot Marcus: but I knowitis, (Whether by device or no) the heavens can tell, Is the not then beholding to the man, That brought her for this high good turne to farre? Yes, and will Nobly him remunerate.

Flownso.

Enter the Emperor, Tamora, and her two feet, with the Moore at one doore, Enter at the other doore Basisans and Lanina with others.

Sat. So Bassianns, you have plaid your prize,
God give you toy for of your Gallant Bride.
Bass. And you of yours my Lord: I say no more,

Nor wish no lesse, and so I take my leave.
Sai. Traytor, if Rome have law, or we have power,

Thou and thy Fuction shall repent this Rape.

Basi. Repecall you it my Lord, to cease my owne,
My true betrothed Love, and now my wife &
But let the lawes of Rome determine all,
Meane while I am possess of that is mine

Sa. Tis good fir: you are very short with vs, But if we live, weele be as sharpe with you.

Basi. My Lord, what I have done as best I may, Answere I must, and shall do with my life, Onely thus much I give your Grace to know, By all the duties that I owe to Rome, This Noble Gentleman Lord Time heere, Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd, That in the rescue of Lawresa, With his owne hand did shay his youngest Son, In zeale to you, and highly mou'd to wrath. To be controul'd in that he frankly gave: Recieve him then to favour Savarnese, That hath express thimselfe in all his deeds,

A Father and a friend to thee, and Romeo

Tit. Prince Bafisanus leave to plead my Deeds,
'Tis thou, and those, that have dishonoused me,
Rome and the righteous heavens be my sudge,
How I have lou'd and Honous'd Saturnine.

Tan. My worthy Lord if ever Tamora,

Were

Were gracious in those Princely eyes of thine, Then heare me speake indifferently for all: And at my fite (fweet) pardon what is paft. Sain. What Madain, be dishonoured openly,

And basely put it vp without revenge? Tam. Not somy Lord. The Gods of Rome for-fend, I should be Authour to dishonouryou. But on mine honout dare, I vndertake For good Lord Titte innocence in all: Whose sury not dissembled speakes his griefes : Then at my tute looke graciouste on him, Loofe not fo noble a friend on vaine suppose, Not with fowre lookes afflich his gentle heart. My Lord, be rul'd by me, be wonne at laft, Diffemble all your griefes and discontents, You are but newly planted in your Throne, Least then the people, and Patricians too, Ypona just furuey take Titus part, And fo supplant vs for ingratitude, Which Rome reputes to be a hainous fin ne. Yeeld at intreats, and then let me alone: He finde a day to massacre them all, And race their faction, and their familie. The cruell Father, and his trayt rous fonnes, To whom I fued for my deare sonnes life. And make thein know what tis to let a Queene, Kneele in the Areetes, and beg for grace in vaine.

Come, come, [weet Emperout, (come Androniers)

Take up this good old man, and cheere the heart, That dies in tempelt of thy angry fromne.

Kong. Rife Taxa, rife, My Emprelle hach prevail'd. Titus. I thanke your Maieslie, And her my Lord. Thefe words, thefe lookes, Infale new life in me.

Tamo. Time, I am incorparate in Roine, A Roman now adopted happily. And must adule the Emperour for his good, This day all quartels die Andronicus. And let it bemine honour good my Lord, That I have reconcil'd your friends and you. For you Prince Bassianus, I have past My word and promise to the Emperour, That you will be more milde and tradable. And feare not Lords: And you Laumis. By my adulfe all humbled on your knees,

You shall aske pardon of his Maiestie. Son. We doe.

And vow to heaven, and to his Highnes, That what we did, was mildly, as we might, Tendring our fifters honour and our owne.

Mar. That on mine honour heere I do protest.

King. Away and talke not trouble vs no more. Tamora. Nay, nay,

Sweet Emperour, we must all be friends, The Tribune and his Nephews kneele for grace, I will not be denied, fweet hart looke back.

King. Marcus, For thy (ake and thy brothers beere, And at my louely Tamora's intreats, I doe remit these young mens haynous faults. Stand vp: Laura, though you left me like a churle, I found a friend, and fure as death I fware,

I would not part a Batchellour from the Prieft. Come, if the Emperours Court can feaft two Brides, You are my guest Lauria, and your friends: This day shall be a Loue-day Tamora.

Tu. To morrow and it please your Maiestie, To hunt the Panther and the Hart with me, With horne and Hound, Weele give your Grace Bon war.

Saint. Beit fo Tital, and Gramercy to.

Artus Secunda.

Enter Aaren alone.

Aron. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus coppe, Safe out of Fortunes that, and fits aloft, Secure of Thunders cracke or lightning flash, Advanc'd about pale envies threatning reach: As when the golden Sunne falutes the morne, And having gilt the Ocean with his beames, Gallops the Zodiacke in his gliftering Coach, And over-lookes the highest piering hills :

Vpon her wit doth earthly honour waite, And vertue Roopes and trembles at her frowne. Then Aaron arme thy hart, and fit thy thoughts, To mount aloft with thy Emperiali Mistris, And mouat her pitch, whom thou in triumph long Hast prisoner held, settred in amorous chaines, And tafter bound to Aarons charming eyes, Then is Promesbens ti de to Cantafius. Away with flausth weedes, and idle thoughts. I will be bright and fine in Pearle and Gold, To waite vpon this new made Empreffe To waite faid I? To wanton with this Queene, This Goddelle, this Semerimin, this Queenc. This Syren.that will charme Romes Saturnine, And fee his ship wracke, and his Common weales. Hollo, what storme is this?

Enter Chiron and Demetrius brawing. Dem. Chiron thy yeres wants wit, thy wit wants edge And manners to introid where I am gracid, And may for ought thou know'st affected be.

Chi. Demerus, thou doo'st over-weene in all, And so in this, to beare me downe with braues, Tis not the difference of a veere or two Makes me leffe gracious, or thee more fortunate: l am as able, and as fit, as thou,

To ferue, and to deferue my Mistris grace, Andthat my fword upon thee shall approve, And plead my passions for Lauma's loue.

Aron. Clubs, clubs, these loners will not keep the peace. Dem. Why Boy, although our mother (vneduiled) Gaue you a daunting Rapier by your fide, Are you so desperate growne to threat your friends? Goe too : have your Lath gloed within your heart, Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Meane while fir, with the little skill I have, Full well shall thou perceive how much I dare. Deme. I Boy grow ye lo braue?

Aron. Why how now Lords? So nere the Emperours Pallace dare you draw,

And

And maintaine such a quartell openly?
Full well I wote, the ground of all this grudge.
I would not for a million of Gold,
The cause were knowne to them it most conceines.
Nor would your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonored in the Court of Rome;
For shame put vp.

Dems. Not I, till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosome, and withall
Thrust these reprochfull speeches downe his throat,
That he hath breath'd in my dishonour heere.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd, and full resolu'd,

Foule spoken Coward,

That thundrest with thy tongoe, And with thy weapon nothing dar'st performe.

Aron. A way I (ay.

Now by the Gods that wathke Gother adore,
This pretty brabble will vadoo viall:
Why Lords, and thinke you not how dangerous
It is to fet vpon a Princes right?
What is Leasure then become folioofe,
Or Bassianum so degenerate,
That for her love such quarrels may be broacht,
Without controvelement, Justice, or revenge?

Young Lords beware, and should the Empresse know.
This discord ground, the musicke would not please.
Chi. I care not I, knew she and all the world.

I loue Leninia more then all the world.

Demet. Youngling, Learne thou to make forme meaner choile, Lannus is thine elder brothers hope.

Arm. Why are ye mad? Or know ye not in Rome, How furious and impatient they be, And cannot brooke Competitors in love? I tell you Lords, you doe but plot your deaths,

By this devile.

Chi. Acres, a thousand deaths would I propose,

To archieue her whom I do loue.

Aron. To archeiue her, how?

Deme. Why, mak's thoust so strange?
Shee is a woman, therefore may be woo'd,
Shee is a woman, therefore may be wonne,
Shee is Lamina therefore must be lou'd.
What man, more water glideth by the Mill
Then wots the Miller of, and easie it is
Of a cut loase to steale a shue we know:
Though Basianus be the Emperours brother,
Better then he have worne Valcans badge.

Aron, I, and as good as Sasurnius may.

Deme. Then why should be disparte that knowes to With words, faire lookes, and liberality: (court it What hast not thou full often struck a Doe, And have her cleanly by the Keepers nose of

And borne her cleanly by the Keepers nose?

Aron. Why then it seemes some certaine snatch or so

Would serve your turnes.
Chi. I so the turne were served.

Deme. Asron thou half hit it.
Aron. Would you had hit it too,
Then should not we be tir'd with this adoo:
Why harke yee, harke yee, and are you such sooles,
To square for this? Would it offend you then?

Chi. Faith not me.

Deme. Nor me, so I were one.

Aren. For shame be friends, & loype for that you iss:
'Tis pollicie, and stratageme must doe
That you affect, and so must you resolve,

That what you cannot as you would atcheve. You must perforce accomplish as you may Take this of me, Lucreer was not more chaft Then this Lamons, Basilones love, A speedier course this linguing languishment Must we purfue, and I have found the path : My Lords, a folemne hunting is in hand. There will the louely Roman Ladies troopes The Forrest walkes are wide and spacious, And many unfrequented plots there are, Fitted by kinde for rape and villanie: Single you thither then this dainty Doe. And finke ber home by force, if not by words: This way or not at all, fland you in hope. Come, come, our Emprelle with het facted wit To villainie and vengance confectate, Will we acquaint with all that we intend, And the shall file our engines with aduite, That will not fuffer you to square your sclues, But to your wishes height advance you both. The Emperours Court is like the boule of Fame, The pullace full of tongues, of eyes, of exect: The Woods are ruthleffe, dreadfull, deafe, and dull : There speake, and flrike brave Boyes, & take your turnes There ferue your lufts, shadow'd from heavens eye, And revell in Laumia's Treasurie.

Chr. Thy counfell Lad smells of no cowardise.

Deme. Sy far and nefar, till I finde the fireames,
To coole this heat, a Charme to calme their firs,
Per Stigia per mane: Vibor.

Execute

Enter Titus Andronecus and bis three formet, making a nogfe with bounds and bornes, and Astrone.

Tit. The hunt is vp, the morne is bright and gray,
The fields are traggant, and the Woods are greene,
Vncouple heere, and let vs make a bay,
And wake the Emperour, and his louely Bride,
And rouze the Prince, and ring a hunters peale,
That all the Court may eccho with the noyle.
Sonnes let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the Emperours person carefully:
I have bene troubled in my sleepe this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspirid.

Worde Hornes.

Heere a cry of boundes, and worde bornes in a peale, then Enter Sasurmons, Tamera, Bassanus, Leuinia, Chiren, Demetrius, and their Attendants.

Ti. Many good morrowes to your Maieftie,)
Madam to you as many and as good.

I promifed your Grace, a Hunters peale.

Saur. And you have rung it lustily my Lords,
Somewhat to earely for new married Ladies.

Bass. Laninia, how say you? Lani. I say no:

I have bene awake two houres and more.

Sater. Come on then, horse and Charlots letvs have, And to our sport: Madam, now shall ye see, Our Romaine hunting.

Mar. I have dogger my Lord, Will rouze the proudeft Panther in the Chafe, And clime the highest Pomontary top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game Makes way, and runnes likes Swallowes ore the plaine

Dense. Chron.

Deme. Chiron we have not we, with Horse nor Hound But hope to plucke a dainty Doe to ground. Enter Auron alone.

Aron. He that had wit, would thinke that I had none, Tobury fo much Gold vnder a Tree, And never after to inherit it. Let him that thinks of me fo abiealy, Know that this Gold must comes stratageme, Which cunoingly effected, will beget A very excellent peece of villany And so repose sweet Gold for their vnrest, That have their Almes out of the Empresse Chest.

Enser Tamora so she Moore. Tamo, My louely Aaron, Wherefore look it thou fad, When every thing doth make a Gleefull boaft? The Birds chaum melody on euery bush, The Snake lies rolled in the chearefull Sunne, The greene leaves quiver, with the cooling winde, And make a cheker'd fhadow on the ground : Voder their sweete Chade, Aaron let vs fit, And whil's the babling Eccho mock's the Hounds, Replying shrilly to the well tun'd-Hornes, As if a double hunt were heard at once. Let vs fit downe, and marke their yelping noyfe: And after conflict, fuch as was suppos'd The wandring Prince and Dido once enloy'd, When with a happy florme they were surpris'd, And Currain'd with a Counfaile-keeping Caue, We may each wreathed in the others armes, (Our passimes done) possesse a Golden sumber, Whiles Hounds and Hornes, and fweet Melodious Bleds Be vnto vs, as is a Nurles Song Of Lullabie, to bring her Babe afleepe.

Aron. Madame, Though Venus gouerne your defires, Saturne is Dominator over mine: What fignifies my deadly standing eye, My filence, and my Cloudy Melancholie, My fleece of Woolly haire, that now undutles, Euen as an Adder when the doth vorowle To do some farall execution? No Madam, thefe are no Veneriall fignes, Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand, Blood, and reuenge, are Hammering in my head. Harke Tamora, the Empresse of my Soule, Which never hopes more heaven, then telts in thee, This is the day of Doome for Bassiamus; His Philomel must loose her tongue to day, Thy Sonnes make Pillage of her Chastity, And wash their hands in Bassian blood. Seeft shou this Letter, take it vp 1 pray thee, And give the King this fatall plotted Scrowle, New question me no more, we are espied, Heere comes a parcell of our hopefull Booty, Which dreads not yet their liues destruction.

Enter Bassianus and Laxinia.

Tomo. Ahmy Sweet Aloore: Sweeter to me then life. Aron. No more great Empresse, Bossianus comes, Be crosse with him, and He goe fetch thy Sonnes To backe thy quarrell what so ere they be. Baffi. Whom have we heere?

Romes Royall Empresse.

Vofurnishe afour well befeeming troope? Or is it Dim babited like her, Who hash abandoned her holy Groucs, To fee the generall Hunting in this Forreft?

Tamo. Saweie controuler of our private fleps: Had I the power, that some say Dian had, Thy Temples should be planted presently. With Hornes, as was Alleons, and the Hounds Should drive upon his new transformed limbes, Vnmannerly Intruder as thou art.

Laui. Voder your patience gentle Empresse, 'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in Horning, And to be doubted, that your Moore and you Are fingled forth to try experiments: Ione sheeld your husband from his Hounds to day,

Tis pirty they should take him for a Stag.

Baffe Beleeue me Queene, your swarth Cymerion, Dorh make your Honour of his bodies Hue, Spotted, deteffed, and abhominable. Why are you lequesteed from all your traine? Dismounted from your Snow-white goodly Steed, And wandred hither to an obfcure plot, Accompanied with a barbarous Moore, If foule defire had not conducted you?

Lari. And being intercepted in your sport, Great reason that my Noble Lord, be rated For Saucinesse, I pray you let vs hence, And let her loy her Rauen coloured loue, This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Baffi. The King my Brother shall have notice of this. Less. I, for these flips have made him noted long, Good King, to be fo mightily abused.

Tamora. Why I have patience to endure all this? Enter Chiron and Demerriate

Dem. How now decre Soueraigne And our gracious Mother,
Why doth your Highnes looke so pale and wan?

Tame. Have I not reason thinke you to looke pale. Thefe two have tie'd me hither to this place, A barren, decefted vale you fee it is. The Trees though Sommer, yet fortone and leane, Ore-come with Mosse, and balefull Misselto. Heere never thines the Sunne, heere nothing breeds, Vnlesse the nightly Owle, or fatall Rauen: And when they (hew'd me this abhorred pit, They told me heere at dead time of the night, A thousand Fiends, a thousand hilling Snakes, Ten thousand swelling Toades, as many Vrchins, Would make fuch fearefull and confused cries, As any mortall body hearing it, Should ftraite fall mad, or elle die fuddenly. No fooner had they told this hellish tale, But that they told me they would binde me heere, Vnto the body of a dismall yew, And leaue me to this miserable death. And then they call'd me foule Adulterelle, Lascinious Goth, and all the bitterest tearmes That ever eare did heare to such effect. And had you not by wondrons fortune come, This vengeance on me had they executed: Revenge ir, as you loue your Mothers life,

Or be ye not benceforth cal'd my Children. Dem. This is a witnesse that I am thy Sonne. feb kim. Chi. And this for me, Strook home to thew my ftrength LANI I come Semeramu, nay Barbarous Temora.

For

For no name fits thy nature but thy owne.

Tam. Give me thy poyntard, you shal know my boyes Your Mothers hand shall tight your Mothers wrong.

Deme. Stay Madam heere is more belongs to her, First thrash the Corne, then after burne the strew : This Minion flood upon her chaffity, Vpon her Nupriall vow, her loyaltie.

And with that painted hope, braues your Mightineffe, And (ball the carry this ento her grave?

Che. And if the doe,

I would I were an Eunuch,

Drag hence her husband to some secret bole, fand make his dead Trunke-Pillow to our luft,

Tamo But when ye have the hony we defire, Let not this Waspe out-live ws both to fling

Chr. I warrant you Madam we will make that fure:

Come Mistris, now perforce we will enjoy, That nice-prescrued honesty of yours.

Lawi. Oh Tamora, thou bear it a woman face. Tamo. I will not heare her speake, away with her. Laus. Sweet Lords intreat her heare me but a word Demer. Liften faire Madam, let it be your glory

To see her teares, but be your hart to them, As vnrelenting flint to drops of raine.

Laws. When did the Tigers young-ones teach the dam? O doe not learne her wrath, the taught it thee, The milke thou fuck it from her did turne to Marble, Even at thy Teat thou had'll thy Tyranny, Yet every Mother breeds not Sonnes alike, Do thou intreat her flew a woman pitty.

Chiro. What,

Would'st thou have me prove my selfe a bastard?

Law. Tis true, The Rauen doth not batch a Larke, Yet have I heard, Oh could I finde it now, The Lion mou'd with pitty, did indure To have his Princely pawes par'd all away. Some fay, that Rauens fofter forlorne children, The whil'st their owne birds famish in their neits : Oh be to me though thy hard hart fay no,

Nothing so kind but something pittifull. Tamo. I know not what it meanes, away with her. Louis. Ohlet me teach thee for my Fathers lake, That gave thee life when well he might have flame thee:

Be not obdutate, open thy deafe eares.

The worfe to her, the better lou'd of me.

Tame. Had'it thou in person nere offended me. Euen for bis lake am I pittiletle: Remember Boyes I powr'd forth teares in vaine, To faue your brother from the factifice, But flerce Andronicus would not relent, Therefore away with her, and vie her as you will,

Laxi. Oh Tanzora,

Be call'd a genile Queene, And with thine owne hands kill me in this place, For 'cis not life that I have beg'd fo long, Poore I was flame, when Baffumes dy'd.

Tam. What beg'ft thou then? fond woman let me go? Laur. 'Tis present death I beg, and one thing more,

That womanhood denies my tongue to tell: Oh keepe me from their worle then killing luft, And tumble me into some losthsome pit, Where never mans eye may hehold my body, Doe this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my iweet Sonnes of their fee,

No let them fatisfie their lust on thee.

Dome. Away, For thou halt flaid vs heere too long. Lanina No Garace, No womanhood? Ah beaftly creature, The blot and enemy to our general! home, Confusion fall

Chr. Nay then He stop your mouth Bring thou her husband,

This is the Hole where Auron bid vs hide him.

Tam. Farewell my Sonnes, see that you make het fare, Nete let my heart know merry cheere indeed, Till all the Andronici berusdesway: Now will I hence to feeke my lourly Meere And let my fpleeneful! Sonnes this Trull defloure.

Enter Auron with two of Titue Sonnes. Aron. Come on my Lords, the better foote before. Straight will I bring you to the lothforce pit, Where I espied the Pauther fast afteepe.

Quin. My fight is very dull what ere it bodes. Marti. And mine I promise you, were it not for forme, Well could I leave our sport to sleepe a while.

Quin. What art thou fallen? What subtile Hole is this,

Whose mouth is covered with Rude growing Briers, Vpon whole leaves are drops of new-fhed-blood, As fresh as mornings dew distil'd on flowers,

A very facall place it feemes to me

Speake Brother halt thou hurt thee with the fall? Marin Oh Brother,

With the dismal'st obied

That ever eye with light made heart lament. Arone Now will I ferch the King to finde them heers,

That he thereby may have a likely geffe, How these were they that made away his Brother.

EXU ATOT Marti. Why dost not comfort me and helpe me out, From this vnhallow'd and blood-stained Hole?

Quintin. lam surprised with an vocouth feare, A chilling fweat ore-runs my trembling leynts, My heart suspects more theo mine ese can fee.

Marti. To proue thou helt a true diwning heert, Aaron and thou looke downe into this den.

And fee a fearefull fight of blood and death. Quintim. Aaron is gone, And my compassionate heart Will not permit mine eyes once to behold

The thing whereat it trembles by furmile: Oh tell me how it is, for nere till now Was I a child, to feare I know not whes.

Marti. Lord Bessianus liesembrewed heere, All on a heape like to the flaughtred Lambe, In this deteffed, darke, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be darke, how doon thou know 'tis be? Mart. Vpon his bloodyfinger he doth weare A precious Ring, that lightens all the Hole: Which like a Taper in Some Monument, Doth thine vpon the dead mans earthly cheekes, And thewes the ragged intrailes of the pit: So pale did thine the Moone on Promus, When he by night lay bath'd m Maiden b lood: O Brother helpe me with thy fainting hand.

If feare hath made thee faint as mee it hath, Out of this fell devouring receptacle,

As natefull as Ociese milite mouth Quart. Reach me thy hand, that I may helpe thee out,

Or wanting ftrength to doe thee fo much good, I may be plucke into the swallowing wombe, Of this deepe pit, poore Bassianus grave: I have no firength to plucke thee to the brinke.

Mortius. Nor I no frength to clime without thy help. Quin. Thy hand once more, I will not loofe againe, Till thou art heere aloft, or I below, Thou can'il not come to me, I come to thee. Bethe fall in.

Enter the Ensperour , Acron the Moore.

Sater. Along with me, Ile fee what hole is he And what he is that now is leapt into it. Say, who are thou that lately did'if descend,

Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Marti. The vnhappie fonne of old Andronicus, Brought hither in a most valuekie houre,

To finde thy brother Bafrianus dead. Saur. My brother dead ? I know thou doft but ieft, He and his Lady both are at the Lodge Vpon the North-fide of this pleasant Chase, Tis not an houre fince I left him there.

Marti. We know not where you left kim all alive. But our alas, heere have we found him dead.

Enter Tamora, Andronicus, and Lucius.

Tamo. Where is my Lord the King? King . Heere Tamora, though gricu'd with killing griefe. Tans. Where is thy brother Bassianus? Kmg. Now to the bottome dost thou search my wound, Poore Bafriansu heere lies murchered. Tam. . Then all too lare I bring this fatall writ,

The complox of this timelelle Tragedie, And wonder greatly that mans face can fold, In pleasing smiles such murderous Tyrannie.

She grueth Sasurnine a Letter.

Saturninus reads the Letter. And if we miffer o meete bim bar force 'y, Sweet hunt from , Baffianus tis we means, Doe thou formuch as dig the grane for bins, Thousehood it our meaning looks for thy reward Among the Nettles at the Elder tree: Which over- baces the mouth of that fame pis : W bere we decresd to bary Baffianuss Dos shis and parchafe us thy lasting friends.

King. Oh Tamora, was ever heard the like? This is the pit, and this the Elder tree, Looke firs, if you can finde the huntiman out, That should have murthered Basisamo heere.

Aron. My gracious Lord heere is the bag of Gold. King. Two of thy whelpes, fell Curs of bloody kind Haue heere bereft my brother of bis life: Sirs drag them from the pie vnto the prison, There let them bide vntill we have deuls'd Some neuer heard-of cortering paine for them.

Tamo. What are they in this pit, Oh wondrous thing!

How eafily murder is discouered? Tir. High Emperour, vpon my feeble knee, Ibeg this bonne, with teares, not lightly thed, That this fell fault of my accurled Sonnes, Accueled, if the faults be prou'd in them. King. If it be prou'd? you fee it is apparant,

Who found this Letter, Tamara was it you? Tamora. Andronicus bimfelle did cake it vp. Ta. I did my Lord, Yet let me be their baile, For by my Fathers reverent Tombe I vow

They shall be ready at yout Highnes will . To answere their suspicion with their lives.

Kurg. Thou thate not baile them, fee thou follow me. Some bring the murthered bedy fome the murtheress, Let them not speake a word, the guilt is plaine, For by my soule, were there worse end then death, That end vpon them should be executed. Tamo. Androvicus I will entreat the King, Feare not thy Sonnes, they shall do well enough.

Tis. Come Lucius come, Stay not to talke with them,

Execus.

Enter the Emprosse Sonnes, with Lauinia, her hands cut off and ber tengne cut ous, and raussits.

Deme. So now goe rell and if thy conque can speake, Who c'was that cut thy tongue and rauthr thee.

Chi. Write downe thy mind, bewray thy meaning fo, And if thy flumpes will let thee play the Scribe.

Dem. See how with fignes and tokens the can frow io. Chi. Goe home,

Call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to walh. And so let's leave her to her frient walkes.

Chi. And c'were my cause, I should goe hang my selfe. Dem. If thou had'ft hands to helpe thee knit the cord. Excunz.

Winde Hornes.

Enter Marcus from bunting to Laminia. Who is this, my Neece that flies away to fall? Colen a word, where is your husband? If I do dreame, would all my wealth would wake me;
If I doe wake, fome Planet firike me downe, That I may flumber in eternall fleepe. Speake gentle Neece, what flerne vingentle hands Hath lope, and hew'd, and made thy body bare Of her two branches, those sweet Ornaments Whole circkling shadowes, Kings have sought to seep in And might not gaine fo great a happines As halfe thy Loue : Why dooft not speake to met Alas, a Crimfon river of warme blood, Like to a bubling fountsine flir'd with winde. Doth rife and fall betweene thy Rosed lips, Comming and going with thy hony breath. But fure fome Teres hath defloured thee, And least thou should'it detect them, cut thy tongue. Ah, now thou turn'ft away thy face for fhame: And notwithstanding all this tosse of blood, As from a Conduit with their issuing Spouts, Yet doethy cheekes looke red as Titani face, Blushing to be encountred with a Cloud, Shall I speake for thee? shall I say 'tis so ? Oh that I knew thy hart, and knew the beaft That I might raile at him to ease my mind. Sorrow concealed, like an Ouen flopt, Doth Lune the hart to Cinders where is is. Faire Philomela the but loft her congue, And in a tedious Sampler fowed her minde. But lovely Neece, that meane is cut from thes, A craftiet Teress haft thou met withall, And he hath cut those pretty fingers off, dd 2

That

That could have better fowed then Philomel.

Oh had the monfler feene those Lilly hands,
Tremble like Aspen leaves upon a Lute,
And make the liken strings delight to kiffe them,
He would not then have toucht them for his life.

Or had he heard the heavenly Harmony,
Which that sweet tongue hath made:
He would have dropt his kinse and fell asseepe,
As Cerberus at the Thracian Poets seete.
Come, let va goe, and make thy father blinde,
For such a sight will blinde a fathers eye.
One houres frome will drowne the fragrant meades,
What, will whole months of teares thy Fathers eyes?
Doe not draw backe, for we will mourne with thee:
Oh could our mourning ease thy misery.

Excus

Adus Tertius.

Enter the ludges and Senatours with Titm two fornes bound, passing on the Stage to the place of execution, and Titms going before pleading.

Ti. Heare me graue fathers, noble Tribunes Ray,
For pitty of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wattes, whilst you securely stept:
For all my blood in Romes great quartell shed,
For all the frosty nights that I have watcht,
And for these bitter teares, which now you see,
Filling the aged wrinkles in my checkes,
Be pittifull to my condemned Sonnes.
Whose soulces is not corrupted as 'tis thought:
For two and twenty sonies I never wept.
Because they died in honours lofty bed.

Andronicial lyeth downe, and the Indges passe by him.

For these, Tribunes, in the dust I write
My harts deepe languor, and my soules sad teares:
Let my teares stanch the earths drie appetite.
My sonnes sweet blood, will make it shame and blosh:
O earth! I will be friend thee more with raine
That shall distill from these two ancient raines,
Then youthfull Aprill shall with all his showres
In summers drought: lie drop youn thee still,
In Winter with warme reares I le melt the show,
And keepe eremall spring time on thy face,
So thou resulted of the land was a standard of the land.

Emer Lucius, with his weapon drawee.

Oh reuerent Tribunes, oh gencle aged men, inhinde my fonnes, reuerfe the doome of death, And let me fay(that neuer wept before)

No recares are now preualing Oratours.

1. Oh noble father, you lament in vaine,
The Tribunes heare not, no man is by,
And you recount your forrowes to a frome.

Tr. Ah Lucuu for thy brothers let me plead, Grave Tribunes, once more I intrest of you.

Ln. My gracious Lord, no Tribune heares you speake.
Ti. Why its no matter man, if they did heare
They would not marke metch if they did heare
They would not pitty me.

Therefore I tell my forrowes bootles to the finnes.

Who though they cannot answere my diffreste, Yet in some fort they are better then the Tribunes, For that they will not intercept my tale; When I doe weepe, they humbly at my secte. Receive my teates, and seeme to weepe with me, And were they but attited in grave weedes, Rome could afford no Tribune like to these. A stone is as soft waxe, Tribunes more hard then stones: Assone is silent and offendeth not, And Tribunes with their tongues doome men to death. But wherefore stand silent how with thy weapon drawise?

Lu. To referemy two brothers from their death,
For which attempt the Judges have promounc'th

My everlasting doome of banishment,

The Ohappy man, they have befriended thee to Why foolish Lucius, do it thou not perceive. That Rome is but a wilderness of Tigers?

Trigers must pray, and Rome affords no prey. But me and and mine: how happy are thou then, from these devoucers to be banished?

But who comes with our brother. Marcus beered.

Enter Marcus and Lawma.

Mar. Tum, prepare thy noble eyes to weepe, Or if not loathy noble heart to breake: 1 bring confuming forrow to thine age.

Ti. Will it confume me I Let me fee it then.

Mar This was thy daughten.

Ti. Why March to the is.

Luc. Ayemethis object kilsme.

Ti. Faint-harred boy, arife and looke vpon her, Speake Laumia, what accurfed hand Hath made thee handleffe in thy Fathers fight? What foole hath added water to the Sea? Or brought a faggot to bright burning Troy? My griefe was at the height before thou cam'it, And now like Nylm it didaineth bounds: Giueme a fword, Ile chop off my hands too, Fot they have fought for Rome, and all in vaine: And they have nur'ff this woe,

In feeding life:
In booteleffe prayer have they bene held vp,
And they have feru'd me to effectleffe vfe.
Now all the feruice I require of them,
Is that the one will helpe to cut the other:
'Tis well Lauma, that thou haft no hands,
For hands to do Rome feruice, is but vaine.

Luci. Speake gentle lister, who hash martyr'd thee?

Mar. O that delightfull engine of her thoughts,

That blab'd them with such pleasing eloquence,

Is torne from forth that pretty hollow cage,

Where like a sweet mellodius bird it sung,

Sweet varied notes inchanting enery care.

Luci. Oh swithous for her.

Luci. Oh say thou for her, Who hath done this deed?

More. Oh thus I found her straying in the Parke, Seeking to hide herselfe as doth the Deare That hath receiude some variousing wound.

Tit. It was my Deare,
And he that wounded her,
Hath hurt me more, then had he kild me dead:
For now I frand as one vpon a Rocke,
Imuson'd with a wildermeffe of Sea.
Who markes the waxing tide,
Grow watchy wase,

Expeding

Expecting ever when force envious forge, Will in his brinish bowels swallow him. This way to deathrny wretched formes are gone: Heere standsmy other sonne, a banishs wan, And heere my brother weeping at my woes. But that which gives my foule the greatest frume, Is deere Laurnia, deerer theo my foule. Had I but feene thy picture in this plight, It would have madded me. What shall I doe? Now I behold thy lively body fo? Thou haft no hands to wipe away thy teares, Not tongue to tell me who hath martyt'd thee: Thy husband be is dead, and for his death Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this. Looke Mareu, ah sonne Lucius looke on her; When I did name her brothers, then fresh teares Stood on her cheekes, as doth the hong deve, Vpon a gathred Lillie almost withered.,

Mar. Perchance the weepes because they kil'd her hosband.

Pirchance because the knowes him innocent Ti. If they did kill thy husband then be joyfull Because the law hath tane rounge on them. No, no, they would not doe so foule a deede, Witnes the forrow that their fifter makes. Gentle Lexants let me kille thy lips, Or make fome figues how I may do thee eafe : Shall thy good Vncle, and thy brother Lacino, And thou and I he round about fome Fountaine, Looking all downcwards to behold our cheekes How they are flain'd in meadowes, yet not dry With micry flime left on them by a flood : And in the Fountaine shall we gaze folong, Till the fresh taste be taken from that cleerenes, And made a brine pit with our bitter teares ? Or shall we cut away our hands like thine? Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumbe shewes Paffe the remainder of out hatefull dayes? What shall we doe? Let vs thet have our tongues Plot some devise of further miseries To make vs wondred ar in time to come.

La. Sweet Father cease your teares, fur as your griefe See how my wretched lifter lobs and weeps,

Bie. Patience deere Neece, good Tim drie thine

Ti. Ah Merem, Marcus, Brother well I wo:, Thy napkin cannot drinke a teste of mine, For thou poore man halt drown'd it with thine owne,

Lu. Abing Lanina I will wipe thy checker. Ti Marke Marcus marke, I voderstand her fignes, Had the a tongue to speake, now would the lay That to her brother which I faid to thee. His Napkin with hertrue teares all bewere Can do no service on her sorrowfull cheekes. Oh what a simpathy of woe is this! As farre from helpe as Limbo is frombliffe, Enter Arouthe Moore alone.

Moore. Titus Androsiom, thy Lord the Emperous, Sends thee this word, that if thou love thy lunnes, Let Marcus, Lucius, or thy felfe old Tum, Or any one of you, chop off your hand, And fend it to the King the for the fame, Will fend thee hither both thy fonnes alive, And that shall be the ransome for their fault.

Ti. Oh gracious Emperour, oh gentle Aaron. Did euer Rauen fing fo like a Larke, That glues (weet tydings of the Sunnes prife? With all my heart, He fend the Emperour my hend, Good Aren wile thou help to chop it off?

Lu. Stay Father, for that noble hand of thine, That hath throwne downe so many enemies, Shall not be fent: my hand will ferue the turne. My youth can better spare my blood then you, And therfore mine shall faue my brothers lives.

Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome And rear'd atoft the bloody Battleaze, Writing deftraction on the enemies Caffle? Oh none of both but are of high defert: My hand hath bin but idle,let it ferue To ransome my two nephewes from their death, Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Moore. Nay come agree, whose hand shall goe along For feare they die before their parden come.

Mar. My hand shall goe.

Lu. By heaven it shall not goe.

Tr. Sirs frive no more, such withered hearbs as these Are meere for plucking vp, and therefore mine.

Lu. Sweet Father, if I shall be thought thy sonne, Let me redeeme my brothers both from death. Mar. And for our fathers fake, and mothers care. Now let me thew a brothers loue to thee.

Ti. Agree betweene you, I will spare my hand.

Lu. Then Ile goe ferch an Axe.

Mar. But I will vie the Axe. Ti. Come hither Aaron, 11e dective them both,

Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine, Moore. If that be cal'd deceit, I will be honeft, And never whil'fillive deceive men for But Ile deceive you in another fort, And that you'l fay ere halfe an houre peffe.

He cars of True band

Enter Lucius and March sagains.

Ti. Now stay you strife, what shall be, is dispatche? Good Arm gluehis Maiestie me hand, Tell him, it was a hand that warded him From thousand dangers: bid him bury it? More hath it merited : That let it have As for for my fonnes, fag I account of them, As icwels purchaft at an easie price, And yet deere too, because I bought mine owne.

Arm. I goe Andronicus, and for thy hand, Looke by and by to have thy sonnes with thee: Their heads I meane: Oh how this villany Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it. Let fooles doc good, and faire men call for grace, Aron will have his foule blacke like his face.

Ti. O heere I life this one hand 7p to besuen, And bow this feeble ruine to the earth, If any power pitties wretched teares, To the .. call : what wilt thou kneele with me ? Doe then deare beart, for beauen shall heare our prayers, Or with our fighs weele breath the welkin dimme, And fraine the Son with fogge as foundme cloudes, When they do hug him in their melting bolomes.

Mar. Oh brother speake with possibilities,

And do not breake into thefe deepe extresmes.

Ti. Is not my forrow deepe, having no bottome?

442

Then

Ems.

Then be my pashous borcomlesse with them. Mar. But yet let reason governe thy lament Tiem. If there were reason for these miseries. They into limits could I binde my woes : When heaven doth weepe, doth not the earth oreflow t If the winder rage, doth not the Sea wax mad. Threatning the welkin with his big-swolne face! And will thou have a resson for this code ? I am the Sea. Harke how her fighes doe flow : Shee is the weeping welkin, I the earth: Then rouft my Ses be moved with her fighes, Then must my earth with her continuall teares, Become a deluge : ouerflow'd and drown'd : For why, my bowels cannot hide her woes, But like a drunkard must I vomit them: Then give me leave, for loofers will have leave, To eale their flomackes with their bitter tongues,

Enter a messenger with two beads and a band.

Meff. Worthy Andrenicus, ill art thou repaid, For that good hand thou lentit the Emperour : Heere are the heads of thy two noble sonnes. And heeres thy hand in scorne to thee fent backe : Thy griefes, their sports: Thy resolution mocke, That woe is me to thinke you thy woes, More then remembrance of my fathers death.

More. Now let hot Atna coole in Cicilie. And be my heart an euer-burning hell : These miseries are more then may be borne To weepe with them that weepe, doth eafe some deale, But forrow flouted at, is double death.

Luci. Ah that this fight should make so deep a wound, And yet detested life not shrinke thereat : That ever death should let life beare his name, Where life hath no more interest but to breath.

Mar. Alas poore hart that kille is comfortleffe,

As frozen water to a starved inake.

Tirm. When will this fearefull flumber have an end ? Mar. Now farwell Asmerie, die Andronicui, Thou doft not flumber, feethy two fors heads, Thy warlike hands, thy mangled daughter here : Thy other banisht sonnes with this deere fight Strucke pale and bloodleffe, and thy brother I, Even like a stony Image, cold and numme. Ah now no more will I controule my griefes, Rent off thy filuer haire, thy other hand Gnawing with thy teeth, and be this difmall fight The cloting vp of our most wretched eyes: Now is a time to florme, why art thou ftill?

Tuns. Ha,ha,ha, Mar. Why dost thou laugh ? it fits not with this houre.

Tr. Why I have not another teare to fied: Befides, this forrow is an enemy, And would viurpe vpon my watry eyes, And make them blinde with tributarie teares. Then which way shall I finde Revenges Caue? For these two heads doe seeme to speake to me, And threat me, I shall neuer come to bliffe, Till all these mischiefes be returned againe, Even in their throats that have committed them. Come let me see what taske I have to doe, You heave people, circle me about, That I may turne me to each one of you, And Iwezre vnto my fouleto right your wrongs. The vow is made, come Brother take a head,

And in this hand the other will I beare. And Lauria thou shalt be employed in these things: Beare thou my hand fweet wench betweene thy teeth: As for thee boy, goe get thee from my fight. Thou are an Exile, and thou must not flay, Hie to the Gother, and raile an army there, And if you love me, as I thinke you doe, Let's kiffe and part, for we have much to doe.

Mames Luciw.

Luci. Ferenell Andronicus my noble Father The woful'st man that ever hu'd in Rome: Farewell proud Rome, til Lucius come againe, Heloues his pledges descer then his life: Farewell Laumia my noble fifter, O would thou wert as thou to fore haft beene, But now, not Lucius not Laumia lives But in obligion and hateful griefes: If Lucius live, he will requit your wrongs, And make proud Saturame and his Empresse Beg at the gates likes Tarquin and his Queene. Now will I to the Gothes and raile a power, To be reueng'd on Rome and Saurane. Exp Lucas

A Brabes. Enter Andronicus, Marcus, Lanonic, and the Boy.

An. So, so, now siz, and looke you exce no more Then will preferue just to much strength in vs As will revenge thefe bitter woes of ours . Marcus vnknit that forrow_wreathen knot : Thy Neece and I (poore Creatures) want our bands And cannot passionate our tenfold griefe, With foulded Armes, This poore right band of mine, Is left to tirranize uppon my breaft. Who when my hart all mad with mifery, Bears in this hollow prison of my Beth, Then thus I thumpe it downe. Thou Map of woe, that thus doft talk in fignes, When thy poore hart beates without ragious beating, Thou canft not ftrike it thus to make in fill? Wound it with fighing girle, kil it with grones: Or get fome little knife betweene thy teeth, And just against thy hart make thou a hole, That all the teares that thy poore eyes let fall May run into that finke, and fosking in, Drowne the lamenting foole, in Sea falt tezres. Mar. Fy brother fy, teach her not thus to by

Such violent hands uppon her tender life,

An. How now! Has forrow made thee doate already?

Why Marcus, no man should be mad bet I: Wharviolent hands can the lay on ber life: Ah wherefore dost thou vige the name of hands, To pid Eneas tell the tale twice ore How Troy was burnt, and he made milerable? O handle not the theame, to talke of hands, Leaft we remember still that we have none. Fie, fie, how Frantiquely 1 (quare my talke As if we should forget we had no hands: If Marcus did not name the word of hands. Come, less fall too, and gentle girle eare this, Heere is no drinke? Harke Mareus what the faires, I can interpret all her marcir'd fignes, She faies. The drinkes no other drinke but reeses Breu'd with her forrow: meth'd uppon her cheekes, Speech. Speechlesse complayne, I will learne thy thought a In thy dumb action, will I be as perfect As begging Hermits in their holy prayers. Thou thalt not fighe not hold thy flumps to heaven, Nor winke, not nod, nor kneele, not make a figue, But I (of thefe) will wreft an Alphabet, And by still practice, learne to know thy meaning.

Boy. Good grandfire leaue these bitter deepe laments, Make my Aunt merry, with some pleasing tale.

Mar. Alasthe tender boy in possion mou'd, Doth weepe to see his grandires heavinesse. An. Peacetender Sapling, thou are made of teares, And teares will quickly melt thy life away

Marcus frikes the delb with a knife. What doeft thou firike at Marrus with knife. Mar. At that that I have kil'd my Lord, a Flys

An. Out on the murderour : thou kil'ft my hart, Mine eyes cloi'd with view of Tirranie: A deed of death done on the Innocent Becoms not Tum broher : get thee gone, I fee thou art not for my company

Mar. Alas(my Lord) I haue but kild a flie. An. But? How : if that Flie had a father and mother? How would he hang bis flender gilded wings And buz lamenting doings in the ayer, Poore harmeleffe Fly That with his pretty buzing melody, Came heere to make vs merry, And thou hall kil'd him.

Mar. Pardon me sit, It was a blacke illfauour'd Fly, Like to the Empresse Moore, therefore I kild him.

An. 0,0,0, Then pardon me for reprehending thee, For thou hast done a Charitable deed: Giuc me chy knife, I will infult on him, Flattering my felfes, as if it were the Moore, Come hither purposely to poyson me. Ther'es for thy felfe, and that's for Tamera : Ah firra, Yet I thinke we are not brought follow, But that betweene vs, we can kill a Fly, That comes in likenesse of a Cole-blacke Moore.

Mar. Alas poore man, griefe ha's fo wrought on him, Hetakes falle shadowes, for true substances And . Come, take away : Lauinia, goe with me, He to thy cloffet, and goe read with thee Sad stories, chanced in the times of old. Come boy, and goe with me, thy fight is young, And thou Inale read, when mine begin to dazell. Exercis

Actus Quartus.

Enter young Lucius and Laninia running after bim, and the Boy fles from ber wish his bookes under his arme. Enter Titus and Marcus.

Boy. Helpe Grandfier helpe, my Aunt Lauiste, Followes me enery where I know not why. Good Vncle Marcus fee how swife the comes, Alas sweet Aunt, I know not what you meane, Mar. Stand by me Lucius, doe not feare thy Aure, Titus. She loues thee boy too well to doe thee harme

Boy. I when my father was in Rome the did.

Mar. What meanes my Neece Louinia by these General 7). Feare not Lucius, some what doth she meane: See Lucius fee, how much the makes of thee s Some whether would the have thee goe with her. Ah boy, Cornella never with more care Read to her sonnes, then the hath read to thee, Sweet Poetry, and Tullies Oratour: Canst thou not gesse wherefore the plies thee thus?

Boy. My Lord I know not I, nor can I geffe, Valeffe tome fit or frenzie do possesse her: For I have heard my Grandher fay full oft, Extremitie of griefes would make men mad. And I have read that Herwha of Troy, Ran mad through forrow, that made me to feare, Although my Lord, I know my noble Aunt, Loues me as deare as ere my mother did, And would not but in fury fright my youth, Which made me downe to throw my bookes, and flie Causses perhaps, but pardon me sweet Aunt, And Madam, if my Vncle Marcus goe, I will most willingly attend your Ladyship.
Mar. Lucius I will.

Ti. How now Laninia, Marcus what memesthis? Some booke there is that the defires to fee, Which is it girle of thefe? Open them boy, But thou art deeper read and better skild, Come and take choyfe of all my Library, And so beguile thy forrow, till the heavens Reveale the damn'd contriver of this deed. What booke?

Why lifts the up her armes in sequence thus? Mar. I thinke the meanes that ther was more then one Confederate in the fact, I more there was : Or elfe to heaven the heaves them to revenge.

Ti, Lucius what booke is that she tossech so? Boy. Grandfier 'tis Ouids Metamorphofis, My mother gaue it me.

Mer. For love of her that's gooe, Pethahs the culd it from among the reft.

Ti. Soft, so bufily the turnes the leaves, Helpe her, what would the finde? Lauinia thall I read? This is the tragicke tale of Philomel? And treates of Terens treason and his rape, And rape I feare was roote of thine annoy.

Mar. See brother fee, note how the quotes the leaves Ti. Lauinen, wert thou thus furpriz'd fweet girle, Rauisht and wrong'd as Philomela was! Fore'd in the ruthlesse, vast, and gloomy woods? See, fee, I fuch a place there is where we did bunt, (O had we never never hunted there) Pacern'd by that the Poet heere describes, By nature made for murthers and for rapes.

Mar. O why should nature build so foule a den, Vnleffe the Gods delight in tragedies e Tr. Che fignes sweet girle, for heere are none but friend. What Romaine Lord it was durst do the deed? Or flunke not Satureine, 23 Tarquin etfle, That left the Campe to finne in Lucrece bed. Mar. Sit downe sweet Neece, brother sit downe by me, Appollo, Palla, Ince, or Mercury, Inspire me thar I may this treason finde. My Lord looke heere, looke heere Lannia.

He writes bu Name with his Staffe, and guides it wub frese and mouths. This landie plot is plaine, guide if shou canft

Ties

This after me, I have writ my name,
Without the helpe of any hand at ail.
Curst be that hart that fore stretchet shift:
Write thou good Neece, and heere display at last,
What God will have discovered for revenge,
Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrowes plaine,
That we may know the Traytors and the truth.

She take the staffe in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps and writes.

Ti. Oh doe ye read my Lord what she hash writs? Seuprum, Chiron, Demetrius

Mar. What, what, the luftfull formes of Tamora, Performers of this hainous bloody deed?

Ti. Marni Dominator poli,

Tam lens us andis stelera, tam lentus vides?

Mar. Oh calme thee gentle Lord: Although I know There is enough written vpon this earth, To flitte a mutinie in the mildest thoughts, And arme the mindes of infants to exclaimes. My Lord kneele downe with me: Lanmin kneele, And kneele fweet boy, the Romaine Helleri hope. And sweare with me, as with the wofull feete And father of that chast dishonoured Dame, Lord Ianus Brisius Sweare for Larreez cape, That we will profecute (by good aduste) Mortall revenge vpon these traytorous Gothes, And see their blood, or die with this teptoach

The Tis furce enough, and you knew how.
But if you hunt these Beare-wiselpes, then beware
The Dam will wake, and it she winde you once,
Shee's with the Lyon deepely still in league.
And ulls him whilst she palyeth on her backe,
And when he sleepes will she do what she list.
You are a young huntsman Michiel to a wat she list.
You are a young huntsman Michiel to a land come, I will goe get a lease of brasse,
And with a Gad of steele will write these words,
And lay it by the angry Northerne winde
Will blow these sands like sides leaves abroad,
And where a your session then. Boy what say you?

Boy. I fay my Lord, that if I were a man, Their mothers bed-chamber should not be safe, For these bad bond-men to the yoake of Rome.

Mar. I that's my boy, thy father hath full oft, For his ungratefull country done the like

Boy. And Vicle fo will I, and if I live.

Ti. Come goe with me into mine Atmorie,

Lucius Ile fit thee, and with all, my boy

Shall carry from me to the Empresse fonnes,

Presents that I intend to send them both,

Come, come, thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou not?

Boy. I with my dagger in their bosomes Grandsite:
Ti. No boy not so, lie teach thee another course,
Laminia come, Marcus looke to my house,

Lucius and He goe braue it at the Court,

I marry will we fir, and weele be waited on.

Execution

Mar. O heavens! Can you heare a good man grone

And not relent, or not compation him?

Marcus attend him in his extafie,

That hath more fears of fortow in his heart,

Then foe-mens markes upon his batter'd shield,

But yet so inst, that he will not reuenge,

Reuenge the heatens for old Andranecus.

Ensex. Aron, Chiron and Demetrius at one dore; and at another dore young Lucius and another, with a bundle of weapons, and verfes writ upon them.

He hath some message to deliver vs.

Aron. I some mad message from his mad Grandsather.

Boy. My Lords, with all the humblenesse I may.

Chi. Demetrius heeres the foune of Lucius,

Boy. My Lords, with all the humbleneffe I may, I greete your honours from Androniens.
And pray the Romane Gods confound you both.

Deme. Gramercie louely Lucius, what a the newes? For villanie's markt with rape. May it please you, My Grandsir e well adust d hath sent by me, The goodliest weapons of his Armorie, To gratise your honourable youth, The hope of Rome, for so he bad me say: And so I do and with his gifts present Your Lordships, when ever you have need,

And so I leave you both: like bloody villaines. Exn Deme, What's heere? a serole, & written round about e Let's see.

Integer vita sectorisque pursu, non egit moury iaculis acc ar-

Chi. O'tis a verse in Horace, I know it well.

You may be armed and appointed well,

I read it in the Grammer long agoe.

Moore, I iust a verse in Horace : right, you have it,
Now what a thing it is to be an Asse?
Heer's no found iest, the old man hath found their guilt,
And sends the weapont wrapt about with lines,
That wound (beyond their feeling) so the quick i
But were our writy Empresse well a foot,
She would applaud Andronesse conceit:
But let her rest, in her wriest a while.
And now young Lords, wa's thot a happy starre
Led vs. to Romesstrangers, and more then so;
Captines, to be advanced to this lieight?
It did me good before the Pallace gate.
To brave the Tribune in his brothers hearing.

Deme. But me more good, to see so great a Lord Basely intinuate, and send vs gifts.

Moore, Had he not reason Lord Demetrine?
Did you not wie his daughter very friendly?

Deme. I would we had a thousand Romane Dames At such a bay, by turne to serue our lust.

Chr. A charitable wish, and full of loue,

Moore. Heere lack's but you mother for 10 sy, Amen.

Chr. And that would she for twenty thousand more.

Deme. Come, let vs go, and pray to all the Gods

For our beloued mother in her paines.

Moore. Pray to the deuils, the gods have given vi ouer.

Flewrift.

Dem. Why do the Emperors trompets flourish thas? Chi. Belike for ioy the Emperour hath a sonne.

Deme. Soft, who comes heere? Enter Nurse with a blacke a Moore childe.

Ner. Good morrow Lords:

O tell me, did you fee Aaron the Moore?

Aron, Well, more or lesse, or nere a whit at all,
Heere Acron is, and what with Aaron now?

Nurse. Oh gentle Auron, we are all vadone, Now helpe, or woe betide thee euermore.

Aren. Why, what a catterwalking doft thou keepe? What doft thou wrap and fumble in thine armes?

Norse. O that which I would hide from heavens eye.
Our Empresse shame, and stately Romes difgrace,
She ja deliuered Lords, she is deliuered.

Atm To whom?

Nurse. I meane she is brought a bed? Aron. Wel God give her good rest,

What

Wast bath he fent her ?

Nafe. A deuill.
Arm. Why then the islthe Deuils Dam: a joyfoll iffue. Nurfe. A loyleffe, difmall, blacke &, for, swfull iffue, Heere is the babe as loathfome as a toad, Among It the fattell breeders of our clime The Empresse lends it thee, thy stampe, thy feale, And bids thee christen it with thy daggers point.

Aron. Out you whore, is black to bale a hue? Sweet blowle, you are a bequerous blofforme lute.

Deme. Villaine what hall thou done?

Aran. That which thou can'll not vindoe. Chr. Thou haft undone our mother.

Deme. And therein hellish dog, thou haft vindone. Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choyce, Accur'A the off-forms of fo foule a fiend.

Chi. It shall not live. Aron. It shall not die.

Nurft. Aaron it must, the mother wils it fo.

Aron. Whoe, must it Nurse? Then lee no man but I Doe execution on my flesh and blood

Deme. Ile broach the Tadpole on my Rapiers point: Nurse give it me, my sword shall soone disparch it

Aron. Sooner this (word shall plough thy bowels vp. Stay murtherous villaines, will you kill your brother & Now by the burning Tapers of the skie, That sh' one so brightly when this Boy was got, He dies vpon my Semitars Tharpe point, That touches this my first borne sonne and heire. I tell you young-lings, not Enceladus With all his threatning band of Tiphons broode, Not great Aleides, nor the God of warre, Shall cezzethis prey out of his fathers hands: What, what, ye languine shallow harted Boyes, Ye white-limb'd walls, ye Ale-house painted fignes, Cole-blacke is better then another hue, In that it fcotnes to beare another bue : For all the water in the Ocean. Can never turne the Swans blacke legs to white,

Although the lane them housely in the flood: Tell the Empresse from me, I am of age To keepe mine owne, excuse it how the can. Deme. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistris thus?

Aron. My mifteis is my mifteis: this my felfe, The vigour, and the picture of my youth: This, before all the world do I preferre, This mauger all the world will I keepe fafe,

Or some of you shall smooke for it in Rome. Deme By this our mother is for ever fham'd, Chs. Rome will despise her for this soule escape. Nor. The Emperour in his rage will doome her death. Chi. I blush to thinke vpon this ignominate.

Aran. Why ther's the priviledge your bearing beares: Fie trecherous hue, that will betray with blufhing The close enacts and counsels of the hart: Heer's a young Lad fram'd of another leere, Looke how the blacke flaue smiles vpon the father. As who should say, old Lad I am thine owne, He is your brother Lords, tenfibly fed Of that leife blond that first gaue life to you, And from that wombe where you imprisoned were He is infranchifed and come to light: Nay he is your brother by the furer fide.

Although my feale be fromped in his face. Nurse. Acran what shall say unto the Empresse! Dem. Adule thee Arm, what is to be done,

And we will all subsende to thy aduste: Same thou the child, so we may all be fafe.

Arm. Then fit we do was and let viall confult. My fonne and I will have the winde of you i Keepetbere, now talke at pleafuce of your lafety. Deroe. How many women faw this childe of his?

Arm. Why so braue Lords, when we soyne in league I am a Lambe: but if you braue the Moore,

The chafed Bore, the mountaine Lyonelle, The Ocean (wells not fo at Aaron flormes: But fay againe, how many faw the childe &

Nurse. Cornelus, the midwife, and my feife, And none elfe but the delivered Empresse.

Aron. The Empresse, the Midwife, and your felfe. Two may keepe counsell, when the the third's away Goe to the Empresse, tell her this I faid, Ho kuls ber Weeke, weeke, fo cries a Pigge prepared to th' fpit Deme. What mean'A thou Amon? Wherefore did'ft thou this?

Arom O Lord fir, 'tis a deed of pollicie? Shall the live to betray this guilt of our's: A long tongu'd babling Goffip i No Lords no a And now be it knowne to you my full intent. Not farre, one Mulueue my Country-man His wife but yesternight was brought to bed. Hischilde is like to her, faire as you are: Goe packe with bim, and give the mother gold, And tell them both the circumitance of all. And how by this their Childe shall be adnaune d, And be received for the Emperours heyre, And substituted in the place of mine, To calme this tempest whirling in the Court, And let the Emperour dandle him for his owne. Harke ye Lords, ye fee I have given her phyficke, And you must needs bestow her funerall The fields are neere, and you are gallage Groomes: This done, fee that you take no longer dates But fend the Midwise pretently to me. The Midwife and the Nurse well made away, Then let the Ladies tattle what they pleafe.

Chi. Acron I fee thou will not truft the ayre with fe Deme. For this care of Tamora, Het felfe, and hers are highly bound to thee.

Arm. Now to the Gothes, as I wife as Swallow Bies, There to dispose this treasure in mine arnies, And fecretly to greeze the Empresse biends : Come on you thick-lipt-flaue, He beare you hence, For it Is you that puts vs to our thifts . He make you feed on berries, and on rootes, And feed on curds and whay, and fucke the Goate, And cabbin in a Caue, and bring you vp To be a warriour, and command a Campe.

Enter 7 tm, old Marcu, young Lucine andother gentlemen with bower and Titue beares thearrowes with Lesters on the end of them.

Ta. Come Marcus, come, kinfmen this is the way. Sir Boy let me fee your Archerie, Looke yee draw home enough, and 'tis there fraight t Terras Aftrea religios, be you remembred Marcous. She's gone, the's fled, firs take you to your cooles, You Colens shall goe found the Ocean: And cast your ners, haply you may had her in the Sea, Yet ther's as little justice as at Land No Public and Semprenou, you must doe it,

Tis

Tis you must dig with Mattocke, and with Spade, And pierce the inmost Center of the earth : Then when you come to Placer Region, I pray you deliver him this petition, Tell him it is for luftice, and for aide, And that it comes from old Andronicas, Shaken with forrowes in ungrateful Rome. Ah Rome! Well, well, I made thee miferable, What time I threw the peoples fuffrages On him that thus doth tyrannize ore me. Gee get you gone, and pray be carefull all, And leave you not a man of warre vnfearcht, This wicked Emperous may have thips her hence, And kinfmen then we may goe pipe for inflice. Marc. O Publim is not this a heavie case

To fee thy Noble Vnchle thus diffract? Publ. Therefore my Lords it highly vs concernes, By day and night t'attend him carefully : And feede his humour kindely as we may, Till time beget some carefull remedie.

Mare. Kinfmen, his forrowes are past remedie. Toyne with the Gothes, and with reuengefull warre, Take wreake on Rome for this ingraticude, And vengeance on the Traytor Saurning.

Tir. Publims how now? how now my Maisters?

What have you met with her?

Publ. No my good Lord, but Plate fends you word If you will have revenge from hell you shall, Marrie for justice the is fo imploy'd, He thinkes with fow in heaven, or some where elfe : So that perforce you must needs flay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delayes, Ile dive into the burning Lake below, And pull her out of Acaron by the heeles. Marciu we are but thrubs, no Cedars we, No big-bon'd-men, fram'd of the Cyclops fize, Bot mettall Marcin feele to the very backe, Yet wrung with wrongs more then our backe can beate: And fith there's no iustice in earth nor hell, We will follicite heaven, and move the Gods To fend downe lustice for to wreake our wongs : Come to this geare, you are a good Archer Marche. Hogmes them the Arrowes.

Ad lonem, that's for you: here ad Appellonem, Le Martem, that's for my felfe, Heere Boy to Palles, heere to Mercery, To Saturaine, to Casse, not to Saturnine, You were as good to shoote against the winde. Too it Boy, Marcus loofe when I hid: Of my word, I have written to effect, Ther's not a God left vnfollicited.

Marc. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the Court, We will afflict the Emperour in his pride.

Tir, Now Maisters draw, Oli well said Lucius:

Good Boy in Virgoes lap, give it Pallas.

Marc. My Lord, I sime a Mile beyond the Moone, Your letter is with Inpiter by this.

Tit. Ha,hz, Publica, Publica, what hast thou done?

See, fee, thou hall fhot off one of Tauras hornes.

Mar. This was the sport my Lord, when Publia, shot, The Bull being gal'd, gave Aries such a knocke,
That downe fell both the Rams hornes in the Court, And who should finde them but the Empresse villaine: Shelaught, and told the Moore he should not choose But give them to his Maifter for a prefent.

Tu. Why there is goes, God give your Lordship ioy.

Emerthe Clowne wab a barbet and two Pigeons in H. Tiem. Newer newes, from besuen, Marcus the post is come. Sirrah, what rydings I have you any letters !

Shall I have luftice, what sayes Implier?

Clome. Ho the libbermaker, he fayes that he hathea ken them downe againe, for the man mest not be hang'd till the next weeke.

Tu. But what fayes Impuer I aske thee? Clowne. Alas fir I know not Inpact i I necer dranke with him in all my life. Til. Why villaine are not thou the Carrier?

Cloure. I of my Pigious fit, nothing else.
Th. Why, did it thou not come from beaven?

Clowne. From heaven? Also fir, I never carse there, God forbid I should be so bold, so prefe to besom in my young dayes. Why I am going with my pigeons to the Tribunall Plebs, to take vp a matter of brawle, berwixt my Vncle, and one of the Emperialls men.

Mar. Why fir, that is as he as can be to ferue for your Oration, and let him deliver the Pigions to the Emperoca from you.

Tit. Tell mee, can you deliver an Oration to the Emperour with a Grace?

Clowne. Nay truely fir, I could neuer fay grace in all

Tie. Sirrah come hither, make no more adoe, But give your Pigeons to the Emperour, By me thou thale have luftice at his hands. Hold, hold, meane while her's money for thy charges. Giue me pen and inke-

Sirrah, can you with a Grace deliver a Supplication? Clowne. 1fir.

Titza, Then here is a Supplication for you, and when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneels, then kille his foote, then deliver vp your Pigeons, and then looke for your teward. He be at hand fir, see you do it brauely.

Cloxene. I warrant you fir, let me alone. Tir. Sirrha halt thou a knife ! Come let me fee le Heere Moreus, fold it in the Oration, For thou hast made it like an humble Suppliant: And when thou half gioen it the Emperous, Knocke at my dore, and tell me what he fayes. Clowne. God be with you fit, I will. Tit. Come Maren let vs goe, Publim follow me.

Enter Emperour and Empresse, and ber two somes, the Emperour brings the Arrowes in his band that Titue foot at birs.

Saur. Why Lords, What wrongs are these? was ever scene An Emperour in Rome thus oper borne, Troubled, Confronted thus, and for the extent Of eg all iustice, vid in such contempt? My Lords, you know the mightfull Gods, (How ever these diffurbers of our peace But enen with law sgainft the willfull Senne: Of old Andronicas. And what and if His forrowes have so overwhelm'd his wits, Shall we be thus affliched in his wreakes, His fire, his frenzie, and his bitternelle ? And now he writes to heaven for his redreffe. Ser, bourse to Inse, and this to Admeny,

This to Apollo, this to the God of warre: Sweet scrowles to flie about the freets of Rome: What's this but Libelling against the Senate, And blazoning our Iniustice every where? A goodly humour, is it not my Lords? As who would lay, in Rome no Iustice were. But if I live, his fained extafies Shall be no shelter to these outrages: Buche and his shall know, that Justice lives In Saturninus health; whom if he fleepe, Hee'l to awake, as he in fury thall

Cut off the proud'st Conspirator that lives.

Tame. My gracious Lord, my louely Saturume,
Lord of my life, Commander of my thoughts, Calme thee, and beare the faults of Time age, Th'effects of forrow for his valiant Sonnes, Whose losse hach pier It him deepe, and scar'd his heart; And rather comfort his diffrested plight, Then profecure the meanest or the best For these contempts. Why thus it shall become High witted Tamora to glose with all: Asida. But Tirm, I have touch'd thee to the quicke, Thy life blood out : If Airm now be wife, Then is all fafe, the Anchor's in the Port.

How now good fellow, would'it thou fpeake with vs? Claw Yea forfooth, and your Mistership be Emperiall. Tam. Empresse I am, but yonder fits the Emperour. Clo. Tis he; God & Saint Stephen give you good den; I have brought you a Letter, & a couple of Pigions heere. He reads the Letter.

Satu. Goe take him away, and hang him presently. Clowne. How much money must I have? Tem. Come firrah you must be hang'd. Clow. Hang'd ? ber Lady, then I have brought vp a neck to a faire end.

Satu. Despightfull and intollerable wrongs. Shall I endure this monstrous villany? I know from whence this same deurse proceedes: May this be borne? As if his trayerous Sonnes, That dy'd by law for murther of our Brother, Have by my meanes beene butcher'd wrongfully? Goe dragge the villame hither by the baire Not Age, nor Honour, shall shape priviledge t For this proud mocke, lle be thy flaughter man: Sly franticke wretch, that holp'ft to make me great, In hope thy felfe should governe Rome and me.
Enter Nuntim Emillim.

Satur. What newes with thee Emilia ? Emil. Armemy Lords, Rome neuer had more caule, The Gothes have gather'd head, and with a power Of high refolued men, bent to the spoyle They hither march amaine, under conduct Of Lucius, Sonne to old Andronicus: Who threats in course of this teuenge to do As much as ever Corrolanse did.

King. Is warlike Lucina Generall of the Gothes? These tydings nip me, and I hang the head As flowers with frost, or grasse beat downe with stormes: I, now begins our forrowes to approach, Tis he the common people love fo much, My selfe hath often heard them say, (When I have walked like a private man) That Lucisa banishment was wrongfully, And they have wish that Lucius were their Emperour.

Tam. Why should you seare? Is not out City strong?

King, 1, but the Cittizens fauour Luciu, And will revolt from me, to fuccour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts Imperious like thy name. Isthe Sunne dim'd, that Gnats do flie in it? The Eagle suffers little Birds to ling, And is not earefull what they meane thereby, Knowing that with the shadow of his wings, He can at pleasure flint their melodie. Euen so mayest thou, the glddy men of Rome, Then cheare thy spirit, for know thou Emperour, I will enchaunt the old Andronicus, With words more fweer, and yet more dangerous Then baites to fish, or hony stalkes to sheepe, When as the one is wounded with the baite, The other rotted with delicious foode.

King. But he will not entreat his Sonne for vs. Tam. If Tamera entreat him, then he will, For I can smooth and fill his aged eare, With golden promises, that were his heart Almost Impregnable, his old eares deafe, Yet should both eare and heart obey my tongue. Goe thou before to our Embassadour, Say, that the Emperour requests a parly Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting.

King. Emiliu do this message Honourably. And if he fland in Hostage for his safety, Bid him demaund what pledge will please him best Frit.

Emil. Your bidding shall I do effectually. Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus, And temper bim with all the Art I have, To plucke proud Lucius from the warlike Gothes. And now (weet Emperous be blithe againe, And bury all thy feare in my deuifes.

Sain. Then goe successantly and plead for him. Exit.

Adus Quintus.

Flourish. Enter Lucisa with an Army of Gothers with Drum and Souldiers.

Luci. Approved warriours, and my faithfull Friends. I have received Letters from great Rome, Which fignifies what hate they beare their Emperour, And how defirout of our fight they are. Therefore great Lords, be as your Ticles wirnelle, Imperious and impatient of your wrongs, And wherein Rome hath done you any scathe, Let him make treble fatisfaction, Goth. Brave flip, sprung from the Great Andronicus, Whole name was once our terrour, now our comfort, Whof : high exploits, and honourable Deeds, Ingralefull Rome requires with foule contempr: Behold in vs, weele follow where thou lead'ft, Like Ainging Bees in hottest Sommers day, Led by their Maister to the flowred fields, And be aveng'd on cutfed Tamera: And as he faith, so say we all with him.

Luci. I humbly thanke him, and I thanke you all. But who comes heere, led by a lufty Goth? Emer a Gost leading of Aaron with his child in his armes.

Geth. Renowned Lucies, from our troups I ftraid, To gaze vpon a ruinous Monasterie,

And as I earneftly did fixe mine eye Vpon the wasted building, suddainely I heard a childe cry vndernearh a wall a I made vnto the noyfe, when foone I heard, The crying babe control'd with this discourse: Peace Tawny flaue, halfe n.e, and halfe thy Dam. Did not thy Hue bewray whose brat thou art? Had nature lent thee, but thy Mothers looke. Villaine thou might'ff have bene an Emperour. But where the Ball and Cow are both milk-white, They never do beget a cole-blacke-Calfe : Peace, villaine peace, euen thus he rates the babe, For I must beare thee to a trusty Goth, Who when he knowes thou art the Empresse babe, Will hold thee dearely for thy Mothers fake. With this, my weapon drawne I rusht wpon him, Surpriz'd him suddainely, and brought him hither To vie, 25 you thinke neecdefull of the man.

Luci. Oh worthy Goth, this is the incarnate deuill, That rob'd Andronicus of his good hand: This is the Pearle that pleaf'd your Empresse eye. And heere's the Bale Fruit of his burning luft. Say wall-ey'd flaue, whether would'ft thou conuay This growing Image of thy fiend-like face? Why doft not speake ? what deafe? Not a word? A halter Souldiers, hang him on this Tree, And by his fide his Fruite of Bastardie.

Aran. Touch not the Boy, he is of Royall blood.
Luci. Too like the Syre for euer being good. First hang the Child that he may see it sprall, A fight to vexe the Fathers foule withall.

Aron. Get me a Ladder Luciu, faue the Childe, And beare it from me to the Empresse: If thou do this, Ile shew thee wondrous things, That highly may aduantage thee to heare; If thou wilt not, befall what may befall, Ile speake no more: but vengeance rot you all.

Luci. Say on, and if it please me which thou speak's,

Thy child shall live, and I will fee it Nourisht. Arm. And if it please thee? why affure thee Lucius, Twill yeare thy foule to heare what I shall speake: For I must talke of Murthers, Rapes, and Massacres, Acts of Blacke-night, abhominable Deeds, Complots of Mischiefe, Treason, Villanies Ruthfull to heare, yet pittiously preform'd, And this shall all be buried by my death, Vnlesse thou sweare to me my Childe shall line.

Luci. Tell on thy minde, I fay thy Childe shall live

Aron. Sweare that he shall, and then I will begin. Luci. Who should I sweare by,

Thou beleeveft no God.

That graunted, how can'st thou beleeve an oath? Arm. Whatifl do not, as indeed I do not.

Yet for I know thou are Religious, And half a thing within thee, called Conscience. With twenty Popilh trickes and Ceremonies, Which I have feene thee carefull to obserue : Therefore I vegethy oath, for that I know An Ideor holds bis Bauble for a God, And keeper the oath which by that God he fweares, To that lie vrge him: therefore thou shalt vow By that same God, what God so ere it be That thou adorest, and hast in reverence, To saue my Boy, to nourish and bring him vp, Ore elfe I will discouer nought to thee.

Luci. Even by my God I (wesse to to thee I will. Aron. First know thou, I be got him on the Empresse. Luci. Oh most Insatiste luxurious woman! Aron. Tut Lucius, this was but a deed of Charitie, To that which thou shalt heare of me anon, Twas her two Sonnes that murdered Baffianus, They cut thy Sifters tongue, and raught her, And cut her hands off, and trim'd her as thou faw'it Lucius. Oh detestable villaine! Call'ft thou that Trimming ?

Aren. Why she was washt, and cut, and trim'd, And twas trim sport for them that had the doing of it. Luci. Oh barbarous beaftly villames like thy felfe! Arm. Indeede, I was their Tutor to instruct them, That Codding spirit had they from their Mother, As fure a Card as euer wonne the Set: That bloody minde I thinke they learn'd of me, As true a Dog as ever fought at head. Well, let my Deeds be witnesse of my worth: I rrayn'd thy Bretheren to that guilefull Hole, Where the dead Corps of Baffian to lay. I wrote the Letter, that thy Father found, And hid the Gold within the Letter mention'd. Confederate with the Queene, and her two Sonnes, And what not done, that thou half cause to rue, Wherein I had no Aroke of Mischeife in it. I play dehe Chester for thy Fathers hand. And when I had it, drew my felfe apart, Andalmost broke my heart with extreame laughter. I pried me through the Crevice of a Wall, When for his hand, he had his two Sonnes heads, Beheld his teares, and laught to hartily, That both mine eyes were rainie like to his; And when I told the Empresse of this sport, She founded almost at my pleasing cale, And for my tydings, gave me twenty killes.

Goth. What canst thou say all this, and never blush? Aron. I, like a blacke Dogge, as the faying is. Luci. Art thou not forry for thele hainous deedes? Aron. I, that I had not done a thousand more: Earn now I curse the day, and yet I thinke Few come within few compaffe of my curle, Wherein I did not some Notorious ill, As kill a man, or else devise his death, Rauish a Maid, or plot the way to do it, Accuse some Innocent, and fortweave my selfe, Set deadly Enmity betweene two Friends, Make poore mens Cattell breake their neckes, Set fire on Barnes and Haystackes in the night, And bid the Owners quench them with the teares: Oft have I dig'd up dead men from their graves, And fet them vpright at their deere Friends doote, Euen when their forrowes almost was forgot, And on their skinnes, as on the Barke of Trees, Haue with my knife carued in Romaine Letters, Leenot your forrow die, though I am dead. Tut, I have done a thouland dreadfull things As willingly, as one would kill a Fly, And nothing greeves me harrily indeede, But that I cannot doe ten thouland more.

Luci. Bring downe the diaell, for he must not die So sweet a death as hanging presently.

Aren. If there be diuels, would I were a devill, To live and burne in everlasting fire, So Imight have your company in hell,

But

But to torment you with my bitter tongue.

Lucio Sirs flop his mouth, & let him speake no more.

Enter Emillius.

Gotb. My Lord, there is a McGenger from Rome Defires to be admitted to your prefence.

Luc. Let him come neete.

Welcome Emillius, what the newes from Rome?

Emi. Lord Lacius, and you Princes of the Gothes,
The Romaine Emperour greetes you all by me,
And for he understands you are in Armes,
He craues a parly at your Fathers house
Willing you to demand your Hostages,
And they shall be immediately deliucred.

Coth. What fales our Generall?

Luc. Emilian, let the Emperour give his pledges

Vinto my Father, and my Vincle Marcia, Flourifb.

Andwe will come: march away.

Excurs.

Enter Tantora, and ber two Sonnes difquifed.

Tam. Thus in this strange and sad Habilliament, I will encounter with Andronicus, And say, I am Resenge fent from below, Yosoyne with him and fight his halnous wrongs: Knocke at his study where they say he keepes, To runninate strange plots of dire Resenge, Tell him Resenge; some to joyne with him, And worke confusion on his Enemies.

They knocke and Titus opens his fludy dore.

The Who doth molleft my Contemplation?
Is it your tricke to make me ope the dore,
That foiny fad decrees may flic away,
And all my fludic be to no effect?
You are deceived, for what I meane to do,
See beere in bloody lines I have fet downe:
And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Thus, I am come to talke with thee, Tit. No not a word: how can I grace my talke, Wanting a hand to give it action, Thou hast the ods of me, therefore no more.

Tam. If thou did'fl know me,

Thou would'st talke with me.

Tin. I am not mad, I know thee well enough,
Witnesse these crimson lines,
Witnesse these crimson lines,
Witnesse these Trenches made by griefe and care,
Witnesse these Trenches made by griefe and care,
Witnesse these tyring day, andheause night,
Witnesse all forrow, that I know thee well
For our proud Empresse, Mighty Tamora:

Is not thy comming for my other hand?

Tamo. Know thou fad man, I am not Tamora,
She is thy Enemie, and I thy Friend,
I am Reuenge fent from th'infernall Kingdorne,
To eafe the gnawing Vulture of the mind,
By working wreakefull vengeance on my Foes:
Came downe and welcome me to this worlds light,
Canfetre with me of Murder and of Death,
Ther's not a hollow Caue or lurking place,
No Vaft obfective, or Mifty vale,
Where bloody Murther or deteffed Rape,
Can couch for feare, but I will finde them out,
And in their eates tell them my dreadfull name,
Reuenge, which makes the foule offenders quake

Tab. Art thou Reuengerend art thou fent to me,
To be a torment to mine Enemies?

Tam. I am, therefore come downe and welcome me.

Tu. Doeme fome fervice ere I come to thee:
Loe bythy fide where Rape and Murder stands,
Now glue some furance that thou art Revenge,
Stab them, or teare them on thy Chariet wheeles,
And then Ile come and be thy Waggoner,
And whirle along with thee about the Globes.
Provide thee two proper Palfries, 2s blacke as Iet.
To hale thy vengefull Waggon swift away,
And sinde out Murder in their guilty cares.
And when thy Car is loaden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the Waggon wheele,
Trot like a Servile footeman all day long,
Euen from Epron rising in the East,
Vntill his very downefall in the Sea.
And day by day Ile do this heavy taske,
So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. There are my Ministers, and come with me.

Tir. Are them thy Ministers, what are they call'd?

Tam. Rape and Murder, therefore called fo,
Canfe they take venerance of such kind of men.

Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tin. Good Lord how like the Empresse Sons they are.
And you the Empresse: But we worldly men,
Haue miserable mad mistaking eyes:
Oh sweet Reuenge, now do I come to thee,
And if one armes imbracement will content thee,
I will imbrace thee: I to by and by.

I will imbrace thee i. it by and by.

Tam. This closing with him, fits his Lunacie,
What ere I forge to feede his braine-ficke fits,
Do you vphold, and mainfaine in your speeches,
For now he firmely takes me for Reuenge,
And being Credulous in this mad thought,
lle make him send for Lucium his Sonne,
And whil' fit at a Banquet hold him sure,
lle find some cunning practise our of hand
To scatter and disperse the giddle Gothes,
Or at the least make them his Enemies:
See heere he comes, and I mass play my theame.

Tit. Long have I bene for lorne, and all for thee, Welcome dread Fury to my woefull house. Rapine and Murther, you are welcome too, How like the Empresse and her Sonnes you are. Well are you fitted, had you but a Moore, Could not all hell afford you such a deuil!? For well I wote the Empresse neuer wags; But in her company there is a Moore, And would you represent our Queene aright It were convenient you had such a deuil!: But welcome as you are, what shall we doe?

Tam. What would'R thou have vs doe Andronicus?

Dom. Shew me a Murtherer, lle deale with him.

Chi. Shew me a Villaine that hath done a Rape,

And I am fent to be reveng'd on him.

Tam. Shew me a thousand that have done thee wrong,

And He be revenged on them all.

Tis, Looke round about the wicked firects of Rome, And then thou find if a man that's like thy felfe, Good Murder flash him, hee's a Murtherer. Goe thou with him, and when it istiy hap To finde another that is like to thee, Good Rapine flash him, he is a Rauisher. Go thou with them, and in the Emperours Court, There is a Queene attended by a Moore, Well mailt thou know her by thy owne proportion, For vp and downe she doth resemble thee. I pray thee doe on them some violent death, They have bene violent to me and mine.

Tom Well hast thou lesson'd vs, this shall we do.
But would it please thee good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius thy thrice Valiant Sonne,
Who leades towards Rome a Band of Warlike Gothes,
And bid him come and Banquet at thy house.
When he is heere, euen at thy Solemne Feast,
I will bring in the Empresse and her Sonnes,
The Emperour himselfe, and all thy Foes,
And at thy mercy shall they stoop, and kneele,
And on them shalt thou ease, thy angry heart:
What saies Androneus to this deuse?

Enter Marcus.

Tit. Marcus my Brother, 'tis fad Titus calls, Go gentle Marcus to thy Nephew Lucius, Thou shalt enquire him out among the Gothes, Bid him repaire to me. and bring with him Some of the chiefest Princes of the Gothes, Bid him encampe his Souldiers where they are, Tell him the Emperour, and the Empresse too, Feasts at my house, and he shall Feast with them, This do thou for my love, and so let him, As he regards his aged Fathers life.

Mar. This will I do, and soone returne againe.
Tam. Now will I hence about thy businesse,

And take my Ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me,
Or els Ile call my Brother backe againe,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.
Tam, What say you Boyes, will you bide with him,
Whiles I goe tell my Lord the Emperour.

How I have govern'd our determined iest?
Yeeld to his Humour, (mooth and speake him faire,
And carry with him till I turne agains.

Tit. I know them all though they suppose me mad, And will ore-reach them in their owne deuises,

A payre of curied hell-hounds and their Dam.

Dem. Madam depart at pleasure, leave va heere.

Tam. Facewell Andronicus, reuengenow goes
To lay a complot to betray thy Foes.

Tit. I know thou doo'A, and I weet reuenge farewell.

Chi. Tell vs old man, how shall we be imploy'd?

Tis. Tut. I have worke enough for you to doc, Publish come hither, Cases, and Valentine.

Pub. What is your will?
Tit. Know you thefe two?
Pub. The Empresse Sonnes
I take them, Chiron, Demetrius.

Time. Fix Publice, fie, thou are too much deceau'd. The one is Murder, Rape is the others name, And therefore bind them gentle Publice, Caim, and Valentine, lay hands on them, Oft have you heard me with for fuch an houre, And now I find it, therefore binde them fure.

(hi. Villaines forbeare, we are the Empresse Sonnes.

Pub. And therefore do we, what we are commanded.

Stop close their mouthes, let them not speake a word,

Is he ture bound, looke that you binde them fast. Execuse.

Enter Titus Androvicus with a knife, and Laninia with a Bason.

Tit. Come, come Lauria, looke, thy Foes are bound, Sirs Rop their mouthes, let them not speake to me, But let them heare what searefull words I vrter.

Oh Villaines, Chiron, and Demetrine, Here frands the spring whom you have flain'd with mud, This goodly Sommer with your Winter mixt, You kil'd her husband, and for that vil'd fault, Two ofher Brothers were condemn'd to death, My hand cut off, and made a merry ieft, Both her sweet Hands, her Tongue, and that more deere Then Hands or tongue, her spotlesse Chastisy, Iuhumaine Traytors, you constrain'd and for it. What would you say, if I should let you speake? Villaines for frame you could not beg for grace. Harke Wretches, how I meane to mattyr you, This one Hand yet is left, to cut your throats, Whil'ft that Laninia tweene her flumps doth hold: The Bason that receives your guilty blood. You know your Mother meanes to feast with me, And calls herselfe Revenge, and chinkes me mad. Harke Villaines, I will grin'd your bones to duff. And with your blood and it, lie make a Paffe, And of the Pafte a Coffen I will reare, And make two Passies of your shamefull Heads, And bid that ftrumper your vnhallowed Dam, Like to the earth [wallow her increase. This is the Feafl, that I have bid ber to. And this the Banquet the Chall furfet on, For worle then Philamel you vid any Daughter, And worse then Progre, I will be reveng'd, And now prepare your throats: Laumia come. Receive the blood, and when that they are dead, Let me goe grin'd their Bones to powder fmall, And with this harefull Liquor temperit, And in that Paste let their vil'd Heads be bakte. Come, come, be every one officious, To make this Banker, which I wish might prove. More sterne and bloody then the Centaures Feast.

So now bring them in, for He play the Cooke,
And feethern ready, gainft their Mother comes. Executs.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and the Gorber.

Luc. Vnckle Moreu, fince 'tis my Fathers minde That I repair to Rome, I am content.

Goth. And ours with thine befall, what Fortune will.

Luc. Good Vnckletake you in this barbarous Meste,
This Rauenous Tiger, this accurfed deuall,
Let him receive no fultenance, fetter him,
Till he be brought vnio the Emperous face,
For testimony other foule proceedings.
And see the Ambush of our Friends be strong,
If ere the Emperous meanes no good to vs.

Aron. Some deuill whifper curles in my eare, And prompt me that my tongue may viter for th, The Venemous Mallice of my (welling hears.

Luc. Away Inhumaine Dogge, Vnhallowed Slave, Sirs, helpe our Vnckle, to convey him in, The Trumpets them the Emperour is at hand.

Sound Trumpers. Enter Emperous and Empress, with Tributes and others.

Sat. What hath the Firemament more Suns then one?

Luc. What bootes it thee to call thy felfe a Sunne?

Mar. Romes Emperour & Nephewe breake the parle

These quarrels must be quietly debated,

The Feast is ready which the careful Trem,

Harh

Harh ordained to an Honourable end, For Peace, for Loue, for League, and good to Rome: Please you therfore drawnie and take your places. Sasur. Marcus we will.

A Table broughs in. Enter Titus like a Cooke, placing the meat on the Table, and Laminia with a vale oner ber face.

Tirm. Welcome my gracious Lord, Welcome Dread Queene, Welcome ye Warlike Cothes, welcome Lucius, And welcome all:although the cheere be poore, 'Twill fill your stomacks, please you eat of it. Sat. Why are thou thus attir'd Andronicus? Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well, To entertaine your Highnesse, and your Empresse. Ton. We are beholding to you good Andronicau?

My Lord the Emperour resolue me this, Was it well done of rath Virginius, To flay his daughter with his owne right hand, Because she was enfor'ft, flain'd, and deflowr'd?

Satur. It was Andronism.
Tit. Your reason, Mighty Lord?

Sat. Because the Girle, should not survine her frame,

Tir. And if your Highnesse knew my heart, you were:

And by her presence still renew his forrowes. Tis. A reason mighty, strong, and effectuall, A patterne, president, and lively warrant, Por me(most wretched) to performe the likes Die, die, Lauinia, and thy shame with thee, And with thy shame, thy Fathers sorrow die.

He kils ber. Sat. What hast done, vnnaturall and vnkinde? Tit. Kil'd her for whom my teares have made me blind.

I am as wofull as Virginius was, And have a thousand times more cause then he.

Sat. What was the rauistic stell who did the deed, Tis. Wilt please you cat,

Wilt please your Hignesse feed?

Tam. Why halt thou flaine thing onely Daughter?

They rauish ther, and out away her tongue,
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.
San. Go fetch them hither to vs presently. Tit. Why there they are both, baked in that Pie, Whereof their Mother dantily hath fed, Eating the flesh that she herselse hath bred. Tistrue, 'tis true, witnesse my kniues sharpe point.

He flabs the Empresse. Sarn. Die franticke wretch, for this accursed deed. Luc. Can the Sonnes eye, behold his Father bleed? There's meede for meede, death for a deadly deed

Mar. You fad fac'd men, people and Sonnes of Rome, By vprores feuer'd like a flight of Fowle, Scattred by windes and high temperaous gufts a Ohlet me teach you how, to knit againe This scattred Corne, into one mutuall sheafe, These broken limbs againe into one body

Goth. Let Rome herfelfe be bane vnto herfelfe. And thee whom mightie kingdomes curfic too, Like a forlome and desperate castaway, Doe shamefull execution on her felfe. But if my froftie figues and chaps of age, Grave witnelles of true experience. Cannot induce you to attend my words, Speake Romes deere friend, as 'erft our Aunceftor,

When with his solemne tongue he did discourse To love-ficke Didees fad attending care, The flory of that balefull burning night, When subtil Greekes furpriz'd King Priams Troy: Tell vs what Smon hath bewicht our cares, Or who hath brought the fatall engine in. That glues our Troy, our Rome the civill wound, My heart is not compact of flint nor fleele. Nor can I vtter all our bitter griefe, But floods of teares will drowne my Oratorie. And breake my very verrance, even in the time When it should move you to attend me most, Lending your kind hand Commiferation. Heere is a Captaine, let him tell the tale. Your hearts will throb and weepe to heare him speake,

Luc. This Noble Auditory, be it knowne to you, That curfed Chiron and Demetrius Were they that murdred our Emperours Brother, And they it were that rauished out Sifter, For their fell faults our Brothers were beheaded. Our Fathers teares despil d, and basely cousen'd. Of that true hand that fought Romes quartell out, And fent her enemies vnto the grave. Laftly, my felfe vnkindly banifbed. The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out, To beg reliefe among Romes Enemies, Who drown'd their enmity in my true ceares, And op'd their armes to imbrace me as a Friend: And I am turned forth, be it knowne to you, That have preferred her welfare in my blood, And from her bosome tooke the Enemies point, Sheathing the secle in my adventrous body. Alas you know, I am no Vaunter I, My fears can witnesse, dumbe although they are, That my report is just and full of truth: But foft, me thinkes I do digreffe too much, Cyting my worthlesse praise: Oh pardon me, For when no Friends are by, men praise themselves,

Marc. Now is my turne to speake: Behold this Child, Of this was Tamora delivered, The issue of an Irreligious Moore, Chiefe Architect and plotter of these wees, The Villaine is aliue in Titus house, And as he is, to witnesse this is true. Now judge what course had Titus to revenge Thele wrongs, vnspeakeable past patience. Or more therrany living man could beare. Now you have heard the truth, what fay you Romaines? Haue we done ought amisse? show ys wherein, And from the place where you behold vs now, The poore remainder of Andronici, Will hand in hand all headlong cast vs do sine, And or the ragged stones beat forth our braines. And n ake a mucuali closure of our house : Speake Romaines speake, and if you say we shall, Loe hand in hand, Luciss and I will fall.

Emili. Come come, thou reverent man of Rome, And bring our Emperour gently in thy hand, Lecius our Emperour for well I know, The common voyce do cry it shall be so.

Mar. Lucius, all haile Romes Royall Emperour, Goe, goe into old Time forrowfell house, And hither hale that misbelieving Moore, To be adjudg'd fome direfull flaughtering desile As punishment for his most wicked life. Lucius all haile to Romes gracious Gouernour.

Luc. Thankes gentle Romanes, may I governe fo, To heale Romes harmes, and wipe away her wee. But gentle people, give me ayme a-wifile, For Nature puts me to a heavy taske: Stand all aloofe, but Vnokle draw you neere. To fined observations teares upon this Trunke: Oh take this warme kisse on thy pale cold lips, These forrowfull drops upon thy bloud-staine face, The last true Duties of thy Noble Sonne.

Mar. Teare for teare, and louing kiffe for kiffe, Thy Brother Marcin teoders on thy Lipe: O were the fumme of thefe that I should pay Countlesse, and infinit, yet would I pay them.

Lur. Come hither Boy, come, come, and learne of va
To melt in showres: thy Grandstre lou'd thee well:
Many a time he dane'd thee on his knee:
Sung thee asleepe, his Louing Brest, thy Pillow
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
1 Meete, and agreeing with thine Infancie.
In that respect then, like a louing Childe,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender Spring,
Because kinde Nature doth require it so:
Friends, should associate Friends, in Greese and WoBid him farwell, commit him to the Graue,
Do him that kindnesse, and take leave of him.

Boy. O Grandfire, Grandfire: even with all my heart Would I were Dead, so you did Llue againe, O Lord, I cannot speake to him for weeping, My teares will choake me, if I ope my mouth.

Romans. You fad Andronics, have done with woes, Give sentence on this exertable Wretch, That hath beene breeder of these direcevents Luc. Sethim brest deepe in earth, and samish hum: There lethim stand, and rave, and ery for soode: If any one relecues, or pirites him, For the offence, he dyes. This is our doome: Some stay, to see him fast ned in the earth.

Area. O why should wrath be mure, & Fury dumber I am no Baby I, that with base Prayers I should repent the Eurla I have done. Ten thousand worse, then ever yet I did, Would I performe if I might have my will. If one good Deed in all my life I did, I do repent it from my very Soule.

Lucius Some louing Friends convey the Emp. hence,
And give him buriall in his Fathers grave.
My Father, and Laumia, thall forthwith
Be closed in our Housholds Monument:
As for that heynous Tyger Tamora,
No Funerall Rice, not man in moverfull Weeds:)
No moverfull Bell shall ring her Buriall:
But throw her soorth to Beasts and Birds of piey:
Her life was Beast-like, and devoid of pitty,
And being so, shall have like want of pitty.
See Justice done on Aaron that damn'd Moore,
From whom, our heavy happes had their beginning to
Then asterwards, to Order well the State,
That like Events, may no reit Ruinate. Executionness.

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDIE ROMEO and IVLIET.

Alus Primus. Scana Prima.

Erset Sampson and Gregory, with Swords and Bucklers, of the Honfe of Capuler.

Sampfon.

Regary: A my word wee'l not carry coales. Greg. No, for then we should be Colliars. Samp. I mean, if we be in choller, wee'l draw. Greg. I, While you live, draw your necke out o'th Collar.

Sang. I firike quickly, being mou'd.

Greg. But they art not quickly mou'd to firike. Sarsy. A dog of the house of Mountague, moves me. Greg. To move, is to fiir: and to be valiant, is to fland:

Therefore, if thou arr mou'd, thou runft away.

Samp. A dogge of that house shall move me to fland. I will take the wall of any Man or Maid of Mountagnes. Greg. That showes thee a weake slave, for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sump. True, and therefore women being the weaker Vessels, are ever thrust to the wall; therefore I will push Mountaguer men from the wall, and thrust his Maides to tite wall. cheir men.

Greg. The Quarrell is betweene our Mafters, and vs Samp. Tis all one, I will thew my felfe a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will bee citill with the Maids, and cut off their heads.

Greg. The heads of the Maids?

Sam. 1, the heads of the Maids, or their Maiden-heads, Take it in what sence thou wilt.

Greg. They mult take it fence, that feele it.
Samp. Me they shall feele while I amable to fland: And tis knowne I am a pretty peece of flesh.

Greg. Tis well thou art not Fish : If thou had'st, thou had it beene poore John. Drawthy Toole, bere comes of the House of the Abuntagues.

Enter two other Servingswen.

Sam. My naked weapon is out: quarrel, I willback thee

Gre. How? Turnethy backe, and ruc.

Sami. Feare me not.

Gre. No marry : I feare thee.

Sam. Let vs take the Law of our fides:let them begin. Gr. I wil frown as I passe by, & let the take it as they list Som. Nay, as they dare. I wil bite my Thumb at them, which is a difgrace to them, if they beare it.

Abra. Do you bite your Thumbe at vs fir?

Samp. I do bice my Thumbe, fir.

Abia. Do you bice your Thomb at vs, fir?

Sam. Is the Law of our fide, if I fay 1? Gra. No.

Sam. No fir, I do not bite my Thumbe at you fir: but I bite my Thumbe fir.

Oreg. Doyou quarrell fir?

Abra. Querrell fu? no fir.

(33 you Sam. If you do fir, I am for you, I ferue as good a man Abra. No better? Samp. Welifir.

Enter Bennolie.

Gr.Say bettershere comes one of my masters kinf nen.

Samp. Yes, better.

Abra. You Lye.

Samp. Drawifyou be men. Gregory, temember thy washing blow. They Fight.

Ben. Part Fooles, put up your Swords, you know not what you do.

Enter Tibalt.

Tys. What are thou drawne, among these heartlesse Hindes? Turne thee Benuolso, looke upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keepe the peace, put up thy Sword,

Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tib. What draw, and talke of peace? I hate the word As Thate hell, all Mountagees, and thee: Have at thee Coward.

Enter three or foure Citizens with Clubs.

Offi. Clubs, Bils, and Partifons, firike, beat them down Downe with the Capulets, downe with the Mountagues.

Enter uld Capulet in bis Gowne, and bis wife. Cap. What noise is this? Give me my long Sword ho. Wife. A crucch, a crutch: why call you for a Sword? Cap. My Sword I fay: Old Manntague is come,

And flourishes his Blade in spighe of me.

Enter old Mountagne, & his wife. & Wife. Thou shalt not fir a foote to feeke a Foe,

Enter Prince Eskales, with his Traine. Prince. Rebellious Subiects, Eneraies to peace, Prophapers of this Neighbor-stained Sceele, Will ty y not heare? What hoe, you Men, you Beafts, That quench the fire of your permitious Rage, With purple Fountaines isluing from your Veines a On paine of Torture, from those bloody hands Throw your mistemper'd Weapons to the ground And heare the Sentence of your mooned Prince. Three chill Broyles, bred of an Ayery word, By thee old Capaler and Mountague, Have thrice disturbed the quiet of our ferrets, And made Verma's ancient Citizens Cast by their Grave beseming Oroaments, To wield old Partizens, in heads as old,

Cankred

Cankred with peace, to part your Cankred hate, If euer you disturbe our streets againe, Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace. For this time all the rest depart away . You Capules thall goe along with me, And Manntague come you this afternoone, To know our Fathers pleasure in this case: To old Free-towns, our common judgement place: Once more on paine of death, all men deport. Moun. Who fet this auncient quarrell new abroach?

Speake Nephew, were you by, when it began t Ben. Heere were the fernants of your adversarie, And yours close fighting ere I did approach, I drew to part them, in the instant came The fiery Tibals, with his Sword prepar'd, Which as he breath'd defiance to my eares, He fwong about his head, and cut the windes, Who nothing hurt withall, hift him in scorne. While we were enterchanging shrults and blowes, Came more and more, and fought on part and part,

Till the Prince came, who parted either part. Wife. O where is Romeo, law you him to day? Right glad am I he was not at this fray.

Ber Madam, an houre before the worfhipt Son Peer'd forth the golden window of the Ealt, A troubled mind draue me to walke abroad. Where underneath the groue of Sycamour. That West-ward rooseth from this City side i So earely walking did I fee your Sonne Towardshim I made, but he was ware of me, And stole into the covert of the wood, I measuring his affections by my owne, Which then most sought, wher most might not be found: Being one too many by my weary felfe, Pursued my Honour, not pursuing his And gladly shunn'd, who gladly fled from me.

Mount. Many a morning hath he there beene seene, With testes augmenting the fresh mornings deaw, Adding to cloudes, more cloudes with his deepe lighes, But all fo foone as the all-cheering Sunne, Should in the farthest East begin to draw The shadie Curtaines from Auroras bed, Away from light fleales home my heavy Sonne, And private in his Chamber pennes himselfe, Shuts up his windowes, lockes faire day-light our, And makes himfelfe an artificiall night: Blacke and portendous must this humour proue, Vnleffe good counfell may the cause remove. Ben. My Noble Vncle doe you know the cause?

Moun. I neither know it, nor can learne of him. Ren. Have you importun'd him by any meanes? Moun. Both by my felfe and many others Friends, But he his owne affections counseller, Is to hunfelfe (I will not fay how true) But to himselfe so secret and so close, So fatte from founding and discovery, As is the bud bit with an envious worme, Ere he can spread his sweete leaves to the ayre, Or dedicate his beauty to the same. Could we bus learne from whence his forrowes grow, We would as willingly gue cure, as know.

Enter Ramco. Be " See where he comes, so please you step alide, Ile know his greeuance, or be much denide.

Mogn. I would thou wert to happy by thy ftay, To heare true shrift. Come Madam let's away. Execut.

Ben. Good morrow Coufin Rom. Is the day fo young? Ben. But new Arocke nine. Rem. Ayeme, fad houres feeme long. Was that my Father that went hence Tofaft? Ben. It was : what fadnes lengthers Romes shoures? Ro. Not having that, which having, makes them fnot:

Ben. In louc.

Romes. Out. Ben. Oflowe.

Rom, Out of her fauout where I am in loue. Ben. Alas that love so gentle in his view, Should be foryrannous and rough in proofe.

Rom. Alas that love, whose view is mussed full, Should without eyes, fee path-wayes to his will Where shall we dine? O me : what fray was heere? Yet tell me not, for I have heard it alle Heere's much to do wirli hate, but more with love: Why then, O brawling love, O louing hate; O any thing, of nothing first created : O heavie lightnesse, serious vanity, Mishapen Chaos of welleeing formes, Feather of lead, bright smoake, cold hre, sicke health, Still waking fleepe, that is not what it is . This love feele lathat feele no love in this. Doeft thou not laugh?

Bew. No Coze, I rather weepe. Rom. Good heart, at what i Ben. At thy good hearts oppression. Rom. Why fach is loves transg ression.

Griefes of mine owne lie heavie in my breaft, Which thou wilt propagate to haue it preast With more of thine, this love that thou half fowne, Doth adde more griefe, to too much of mine owne. Loue is a smoake made with the same of sighes, Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in Louers eyes, Being vest, a Sea nourisht with louing teares, What is it elle? a madnesse, most distreet,

A choking gall, and a preferring fweet : Farewell my Coze. Ben. Soft I will got along.

And if you leave me lo, you do me wrong. Rom. Tut I have lost my selfe, lam not bere, This is not Romes, hee's fome other where.

Ben. Tell me in ladnesse, who is that you love? Rom. What shall I grone and tell thee? Ben. Grone, why no : but fadly tell me who. Rom. A sicke man in sadnesse makes his will a

A word ill vrg'd to one that is fo ill : In sadnesse Cozin, I do loue a woman.

Ben. I zym'd fo neare, when I support you lou'd. Rom. A right good marke man, and shee's faire I love

Ben. A right faire marke, faire Coze, is soonest hit, Rom. Well in that hit you misse, sheel not be hit

With Cupids arrow, the hath Diens wit: And in frong proofe of chaftiry well arm'd. From loues weake childish Bow, the lives vocharm'd. Shee will not flay the fiege of louing tearmes, Nor bid th'incounter of affailing eyes. Nor open her lap to Sain &- leducing Gold: O the is rich in beautie, onely poore, That when she dies, with beautie dies her store.

Een. Then the hath (worne, that the will fill live chaft? Rees. She hath, and in that sparing make huge wast? For besury steru'd with her fenerity, Cuts beauty off from all posteritie.

She

She is too faire, too wifewi: fely too faire. To meriebliffe by making me dispaire : She hath for fworne to love, and in that vow Do I liue dead, that live to tell it now

Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget to thinke ofher. Rom. O teach me how I shoold forget to thinke.

Ben. By gruing liberty voto thine eyes,

Examine other beauties,

Ro. Tis the way to calhers (exquifit) in question more, These happy maskes that kisse faire Ladies browes, Being blacke, puts win mind they hide the faire: He that is ftrooken blind, cannot forget The precious treasure of his eye-fight lost : Shew me a Mistrelle that is passing faire, What doth her beauty ferue but as a note. Where I may read who past that passing faire. Farewell thou can'it not teach me to forget,

Ben. He pay that doctrine, or elle die in debt. Exeunt Enter Capulet Countie Paris and the Clowne.

Capu. Mountague is bound as well as 1, Inpenalty alike, and tis not hard I thinke, Formen fo old as wee, to keepe the peace.

Par. Of Honourable reckoning are you both, And pittie tis you liu'd at ods fo long : But now my Lord, what fay you to my fute?

Capu. But faying ore what I have faid before, My Child is yet a stranger in the world, Shee hath not feene the change of fourteene yeares, Let two more Summers wither in their pride Ere we may thinke her ripe to be a Bride.

Pars. Younger then the are happy mothers made.
Caps And too foone mat'd are those so early made: Farth hath swallowed all my hopes but the, Shee's the hopefull Lady of my earth: But wooe her gentle Paris get her heart, My will to her confent, is but a part. And thee agree, within her scope of choise,

Lyes my confent, and faire according voice : This night I hold an old accustom'd Feast, Whereto I have inuited many a Guelt, Such as I love, and you among the store, One more most welcome makes my number more

At my poore house, looke to behold this night, Earth Areading Rarres, that make darke heaven light, Such comfort as do lufty young men feele, When well appartel'd Aprill on the heele Of limping Winter treads, even such delight Among fresh Feunell buds shall you this night

Inherit atmy house: heare all all see And like her most, whose ment most shall be: Which one more verw, of many, mine being one, May fland in number, though in reckning none.

Come, goe with ine: goe fireah trudge about, Through faire Verona, find those persons out, Whole names are written there, and to them fay, My house and welcome, on their pleasure stay.

Ser. Find them out whole names are written. Heere it is written, that the Shoo-maker should meddle with his Yard, and the Taylor with his Last, the Fisher with his Pentill, and the Painter with his Nets. But I am fent to find those persons whose names are writ, & can never find what names the writing person hath here writ (I must 10 the learned) in good time, Enter Bennolio, and Romeo.

Ben. Tut man, one fire burnes our anothers burning, One paine is lefned by anothers anguish:

Turne giddle and be holpe by backward turning : One desparate greefe, cures with anothers lauguish : Take thou fome new infection to the eye. And the rank poyfon of the old wil die.

Rom. Your Plantan leafe is excellent for that

Ben. For what I pray thee? Rom. For your broken (hin.

Ben. Why Romeo art thou mad?

Rem. Not mad, but bound more then a mad man is: Shut up in prison, kept without my foode, Whipt and tormented : and Godden good fellow,

Ser. Godgigoden, I pray fir can you read? Rom. I mine owne fortune in my miserie.

Ser. Perhaps you have learn'd it without booke :

But I pray can you read any thing you (se

Roms. I, if I know the Letters and the Language. Ser. Ye say bonestly, rest you merry.

Rom, Stay fellow, I can read.

He reades the Letter.

Signeur Martino, and his wife and daughter: County An-filme and his beautions sisters: the Lady widdow of Utru-uio Seigneur Placentio, and his lovely Neeces Mercusio and his brother Valentine: mine vicle Capules his wiscond daugh. ters; my faire Neece Rofaline Linia Seigneur Valentio, This Cofen Tybalt: Lucio and the linely Helena. A faire affembly, whither should they come?

Ser. Vp.
Rom. Whither? ro supper?

Ser. To our house. Rom. Whose house?

Ser. My Mailters.

Rom. Indeed I should have asks you that before.

Ser Now le tell you without asking. Mymaister is the great rich Capulet, and if you be not of the house of Mountagues I pray come and crush a cup of wine. Rest Exit.

Ben. At this same anneient Feast of Capulets Sups the fatte Rosaline, whom thou so loues : With all the admired Beauties of Verona, Go thither and with vnattainted eye, Compare her face with some that I shall show, And I will make thee thinke thy Swan a Crow.

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye Maintaines such falshood, then turne teates to fice: And these who often drown'd could never die, Transparent Heretiques be burnt for hers. One fairer then my loue the all-feeing Sun Nere faw her march, fince first the world begun.

Ben. Tut, you saw her faire, none else being by, Herselse poyl'd with herselse in either eye: But in that Christall Tcales, let there be waid, Your Ladies love against some other Maid That I vill show you, shining at this Feast, And the thew feant thell, well, that now thewes best.

Rom. He goe along, no fuch fight to be showne, But to relayce in splendor of mine owne.

Enter Capulets Wife and Nurfe. Wife Nurle wher's my daughter? call her forth to me. Nurle. Now by my Maidenhead, at twelve yeare old I bad her come, what Lamb; what Ladi-bird, God forbid, Where's this Cirle? what Inlies?

Enter Iuliet.

Inlue. How now, who calls? Nur. Your Mother.

Inter. Madam I am heere, what is your will ?

Wife. This is the matter: Nurse gine leave swhile, we must talke in secret. Nurse come backe agains, I have remembred me, thou'se heare our counsell. Thou knowest my daughter's of a prety age.

Nurse. Faith I can tell her age voto anhouse.

Dif. Shee's not fourteene.

Nurse. He lay fourteene of my teeth,
And yet to my teene be it spoken,
I have but foure, shee's not fourteene.
How long is it now to Lamma tide?
Wife. A fortnight and odde dayes.

Nurfe. Even or odde, of all daies in the yeare come Lammas Eue at night shall she he fourteene. Sufan & she, God rest all Christian soules, were of an age. Well Susan Is with God, she was too good for me. But as I said, on La. mar Eue ut night shall she be fourteene, that shall she marie, I remember it well. 'Tis fince the Earth-quake now eleven yeares, and the was wean'd I never thall forget it, of all the daies of the yeare, vpon that day : for I had then laid Worme-wood to my Dug fitting In the Sunne vnder the Douehouse wall, my Lord and you were then at Mantua, nay I doe beare a braine. Butas! said, when it did taft the Worme-wood on the nipple of my Dugge, and felt it bitter, pretty foole, to fee it teachie, and fall out with the Dugge, Shake quoth the Done-house, 'twas no neede I trow to bid mee trudge; and fince that timeit is a eleuen yeares, for then she could stand alone, nay bith' roode the could have runne & wadled all about : for even the day before the broke her brow, & then my Husband God be with his foule, a was a merrie man, tooke up the Child, yea quoth hee, doeft thou fall vpon thy face? thou wilt fall backeward when thou haft more wit, wilt thou not Jule? And by my holy-dam, the pretty wretch lefte crying, & faid I: to fee now how a lest shall come about. I warrant, & I shall live a thousand yeares, I never should forget it : wilt thou not lules quoth be? and pretty foole it ftinted, and faid I.

Old La. Inough of this, I pray thee hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes Madam, yet I cannot chuse but laugh, to thinke it should leave crying, & say I: and yet I warrant it had you it brow, a bumpe as big as a young Cockrels stone? A perilous knock, and it cryed bitterly. Yes quoth my husband, sall'stypon thy face, thou wilt sall backward when thou commest to age: wilt thou not sale? It stituted and said I.

Iule. And flint thou too. I pray thee Nurse, say I.
Nur. Peace I have done: God marke thee too his grace thou wast the prettiest Babe that ere I nurst, and I might live to see thee married once; I have my wish.

Old La. Matry that marry is the very theame I came to talke of stell me daughter lulies, How stands your disposition to be Married?

Iuli. It is an houre that I dreamenot of.

Nur. An houre, were not I thine onely Nurle, I would fay thou had'd fuckt wifedome from thy teat.

Old La. Well thinke of matriage now, yonger then you Heere in Verona, Ladies of esteeme,
Are made already Mothers. By my count
I was your Mother, much voon these yeares
That you are now a Maide, thus then in briefe:

That you are now a Maide, thus then in briefe: The valiant Paris feekes you for his loue.

Nurse. A man young Lady, Lady, such a man as all the world. Why hee's a man of waxe.

Old La. Verous Summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay hee's a flower, infaith a very flower.

Old La: What say you, can you love the Gentleman?

This night you shall behold him at our Feast,

Read ore the volume of young Parw lace,
And find delight, writ there with Beauties pen:
Examine every leverall liniament,
And see how one another lends content:
And what obscur'd in this faire volume lies,
Find written in the Margent of his eyes.
This precsous Booke of Love, this vibound Lover,
To Beautifie him, onely lacks a Cover,
The fish lives in the Sea, and 'tis much pride
For faire without, the faire within to hide.
That Booke in manies eyes doth share the glorie,
That in Gold classes, Lockes in the Golden storie:
So shall you share all that he doth possess.
By naving him, making your selfe no lesse.
Numse. No lesse, any bigger: women grow by men.

Old La. Speake briefly, can you like of Paru love?

Inli. Ile looke to like, if looking liking move.

But no more deepe will I endart mine eye,

Then your confent gives strength to make flye.

Ser. Madam, the guests are come, supper seru'd vp. you cal'd, my young Lady askt for, the Nurse cur's in the Partery, and every thing in extremitie: I must be ce to wait, I be seech you follow straight.

Mo. We follow thee, Inlint, the Countie staies,
Nurse. Goe Gytle, seeke happy enights to happy daies.

Execute.

Enter Romeo, Mercuio, Eemulo, with fine or fixe other Markers, Torch bearers.

Rom. What shall this speed be spoke for our excuse Ot shall we on without Apologie?

Ben. The date is out of fuch prolixitie,
Weele have no Cupid, hood winks with a skarfe,
Beating a Tartars painted Bow of lath,
Skaring the Ladies like a Crow-keeper.
But let them measure vs by what they will,
Weele measure them a Measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a Torch, I am not for this ambling, Being but heavy I will beare the light.

Mer. Nay gentle Remeo, we must have you dance, Rom. Not I believe me, you have dencing shooes With nimble soles, I have a soale of Lead So stakes me to the ground, I cannot move.

Mer. You are a Louer, borrow Capids wings, And foare with them aboue a common bound. Rom. I am too fore enpeared with his shafe,

To foare with his light feathers, and to bound:
I cannot bound a pitch aboue dull woe,
Vnder loues heavy burthen doe I finke.

Hora. And to finke in it should you burthen love, Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough,
Too rude, too boy flerous, and it pricks like thome.

Mer. If love be rough with you be rough with love, Pricke love for pricking, and you beat love downe, Give me a Cafe to put my viluge in.

A Vifor for a Vifor, what care I
What curious eye doth quote deformities.

Here are the Beetle-browes shall blush for me.

Ben. Come knocke and enter, and no fooner in,

But every men berake bim to his lega.

Rom. A Torch for me, les wantons light of heart
Tickle the sencelesse russes with their heeles:
For I am properb'd with a Grandser Phrase,
Ile be a Candle-holder and looke on,
The game was nere so saire, and I am done.

Mer. Tet.

Mer. Tut, durs the Mouse, the Coastables owne word, If thou set dun, weele draw thes from the mise. Or lave your reverence love, wherein thou flickest Vp to the cares, come we burne day light ho.

Rom. Nay that's not fo. Mor. I meane fit I delay,

We wost our lights in vaine, lights, lights, by day; Take our good meaning, for our Judgement fits Fine times in that, ere once in our fine wits.

Rem. And we meane well in going to this Maske,

Eut'tis no wit to go.

Mer. Why may one aske? Rom. I dreampt a dreame to night

Mer, And so did I.
Rom. Well what was yours?

Aler. That dreamers often lye.

Ro. In bed a fleepe while they do dreame things true. Mer. O then I fee Queene Mab bath beene with you i She is the Fairies Midwife, & the comes in thape no bigger then Agat-Rone, on the fore-finger of an Alderman, drawne with a teeme of little Atomies, over mens notes as they be alleepe; her Waggon Spokes made of long Spinners legs : the Couer of the wings of Grashoppers, her Traces of the smallest Spiders web, her coullers of the Moonthines watry Beames, her Whip of Crickets bone, the Lash of Philome, her Waggoner, asmall gray-coated Gnat, not halfe fo bigge as a round little Worme, prickt from the Lazie-finger of a man. Her Chariot is an emptie Halelnut, made by the loyner Squittel or old Grub, time out a mind, the Faries Coach-makers : & in this state the gallops night by night, through Louers braines : and then they dreame of Loue. On Courtiers knees, that dreame on Curfies ftrait : ore Lawyers fingers, who ftrait dreamt on Fres, ore Ladies lips, who first on killes dreame, which of the angry Mab with blifters plagues, because their breath with Sweet meats tainted are. Sometime the gallops ore a Courtiers note, & then dreames he of smelling out afaze. & formitime comes the with Tith pigs tale, tickling a Parsons nose as a lies afterpe, then he dreames of apother Benefice. Sometime fbe driueth ore a Souldiers neche, & then dreames he of cutting Fortaine throats, of Brenches, Ambuscados, Spanish Blades : Of Healths five Fadome deepe, and then anon drums in his eares, at which he startes and wakes; and being thus frighted, fweeres a prayer or two & Ocepes againerthis is that very Mab that plats the mames of Horses in the night: & bakes the Elklocks in foule flutrish haites, which once vntangled, much misfortune bodes.

This is the hag, when Maides lie on their backs, That preffes them, and learnes them first to beare, Making them women of good carriage:

This is the.

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercuis peace,

Thoutalk'ft of nothing.

Mir. True,I talke of dreames : Which are the children of an idle braine, Begot of nothing, but vaine phantalie, Which is as thin of lub stance as the ayre, And more incontlant then the wind, who wood Even now the frozen bosome of the North: And being anger'd, puffes away from thence, Turning his fide to the dew drapping South. Bes. This wind you talke of blowes vs from our felocs,

Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Row. I feare too early, for my mind milgiues, Some consequence yet hanging in the Starres, Shall bitterly begin his fearefull date With this nights renels and expire the rearme By some vile forteit of vnamely death But he that bath the stirrage of my course, Direct my fute : on lustie Gentlemen. Ben, Strike Drum.

They march about the Stage, and Servingmen come forth wub cheir napkins.

Enter Sermont.

Ser. Where's Parpar, that he helpes not to take away? He shift a Trencher? he scrape a Trencher?

1. When good manners, thall lie in one or two mens hands, and they vnwashe too, 'tls a foulething.

Ser. Away with the Joynstooles, remove the Courtcubbord, looke to the Plate: good thou, faue mee a piece of Marchpane, and as thou louest me, let the Porter let in Sufan Grindstone and Not, Anthons and Pospers.

2. I Boy readie.

Ser. You are looks for, and cal'd for, asks for, & fought for in the great Chamber.

We cannot be here and there too, chearly Boyes, Be brisk swhile, and the longer liner take all.

Enter all the Greeft and Conslewemen to the Mashers.

1. Capa. Welcome Gentlemen. Ladies that have their toes Vnplagu'd with Comes, will walke about with you: Ah my Mistresses, which of you all Will now deny to dance! She that makes dainty, She He (weare hath Comes :am I come neare ye now? Welcome Gentlemen, I have frene the day That I have worne a Visor, and could tell A whilpering tale in a faire Ladies ware: Such as would please; 'tia gone, 'tia gone, 'tia gone, 'You are welcome Gentlemen, come Mustians play; Musicke places: and the dance.

A Holl, Hall, give roome, and fooce it Girles, More light you knaves, and turne the Tables vp . And quench the fire, the Roome is growne too hot. Ah sirrah, this valookt for sport comes well : Nay fit, nay fit, good Cozin Capuler, For you and I are past our dauncing dates a How long 'ift now fince last your felfe and 1 Were in a Maske?

2. Capit. Berlady thirty yeares.

1. Caps. What man: 'tis not fo much, 'tis not fo much, Tis fince the Nuptiall of Lacentie, Come Pentycost as quickely as it will, Some five and twenty yeares, and then we Maskt.

2. Cap. 'Tis more,' its more, his Sonne is elder fir:

His So me is thirty

3. Cap. Will you cell medies ? His Sonne was but a Ward two yeares agoe.

Ross. What Ladie is that which doth inrich the hand Of yonder Knight?

Ser. I know not fir .

Rom. Ofhe doth teach the Torches to burne bright: It feemes the hangs upon the cheeke of night, As a rich lewel in an Acthiops eare: Beauty too rich for vie, for earth too desre: So shewes a Snowy Doue trooping with Crowes, As yonder Lady ore her fellowes showes; The measure done, He watch her place of fland, And touching hers, make bleffed my sude hand.

Did my heart loue till now, for lweare it light, For I neuer law true Beauty till this night.

Tib. This by his voice, should be a Mountagus. Fetch me my Rapier Boy, what dares the saue Come hither couer'd with an antique face, To fleere and scorne at our Solemnitie? Now by the stocke and Honour of my kin, To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

Cap. Why how now kiniman, Wherefore storme you so?

Tib. Vncle this is a Mountagne, our foe: A Villaine that is hither come in fpight,
To scorne at our Solemnicie this night.

Cap. Young Romeo isit?
Tib. Tis he, that Villaine Romeo.

Cap. Content thee gentle Coz, let him alone, A beares him like a portly Gentleman:
And to fay truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a vertuous and well gouern'd youth:
I would not for the wealth of all the towne,
Here in my house do him disparagement:
Therfore be patient, take no note of him,
It is my will, the which if thou respect,
Shew a faire presence, and put off these frownes,
An ill beseeming semblance for a Feast,

Tib It fits when such a Villaine is a guest,

Ile not endure him.

Cap. He shall beendu'rd.
What goodman boy, I say he shall, go too,
Am I the Maister here or you? go too,
Youle not endure him, God shall mend my soule,
Youle make a Mutinie among the Guests:
You will fer cocke a hoope, youle be the man.

Tib. Why Vncle, 'tis a shame.

Cap. Go too, go too,
You are a sawcy Boy, 'ift so indeed?
This tricke may chance to scath you, I know what,
You must contrary me, marry 'tis time.
Well said my hearts, you are a Princox, goe,
Be quiet, or more light, more light for shame,
Ile make you quiet. What, cheately my hearts.

Tib. Parience perforce, with wilfull choler meeting, Makes my flesh tremble in their different greeting: I will withdraw, but this intrusion shall

Now feeming sweet, convert to bitter gall.

Rom. 1f I prophane with my vnworthiest hand,

This holy thrine, the gentle fin is this, My lips to bluthing Pilgrims did ready fland, To fmooth that rough touch, with a tender kiffe.

Iul. Good Pilgrime,
You do wrong your hand too much.
Which mannerly denotion shewes in this;
For Saints have hands, that Pilgrims hands do tuch,
And palme to palme, is holy Palmers kisse,

Rom. Have not Saints lips, and holy Palmers too?
Int. I Pilgrim, lips that they must vie in prayer.
Rom. O then deare Saint, let lips do what hands do,

They pray (grant thou) least faith turne to dispaire.

Ind. Saints do not moue, Though grant for prayers fake.

Rom. Then move not while my preyers effect I take: Thus from my lips, by thine my fin is purg'd.

Int. Then have my lips the fin that they have tooke.

Rom. Sin from my lips? Ottespasse sweetly vrg'd:

Give me my fin againe.

Ind. You kille by th'booke.

Nav. Madamyout Mother craues a word with you.

Rom. What is het Mother!

Nurs. Matrie Batcheler,

Her Mother is the Lady of the house,

And a good Lady, and a wise, and Vertuous,

I Nurst her Daughter that you talk t withall:

I tell you, he that can lay hold ofher,

Shall have the chincks,

Rom. Is the a Capulet ?

O deare account! My life is my foes debt.

Ben. Away, be gone, the sport is at the best.

Rom. I so I feare, the more is my votest.

Cap. Nay Gentlemen prepare not to be gone,
We have a trifling soolish Banquet towards:

It is teine for the state of th

Isli, Come hither Nurse, What is youd Gentleman:

Nur. The Sonne and Heire of old Tyberio.

Iuli. What's he that now is going out of doore?

Nur. Marrie that I thinke be young Perruchio.

Iul. What's he that follows here that would not dance?

Nur. I know not.

Int. Go aske his name; if he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedded bed.
Nor. His name ia Romeo, and a Mountague,

The onely Sonne of your great Enemie.

Iul. My onely Loue (prung from my onely hate,
Too early feene, vnknowne, and knowne too late,

Prodigious birth of Loue it is to me,
That I must loue aleathed Enemie.

Nur. What's this? whats this?
Iul. A rime, I learne even now

Of one I dan'st withall.

One call within, luler.

Nue. Anon, anon: Come let's away, the strangers all are gone.

Excust.

Chorue.

Now old defire doth in his death bed lie,
And yong affection gapes to be his Heire,
That faire, for which Loue gron'd for and would die,
With tender Iulier matcht, is now not faire.
Now Romeo is beloued, and Loues againe,
Alike bewitched by the charme of lookes:
But to his foe suppos'd he must complaine,
And the steale Loues sweet bait from seareful hookes:
Being held 2 soe, he may not have accesse
To breath such vowes as Louers vie rosweare,
And she as much in Loue, her meanes much lesse,
To meete her new Beloued any where:
But passion lends them Power, time, meanes to meete,
Temp'ring extremities with extreame sweete.

Exter Romeo alens.

Rom. Can I goe forward when my heart is here?
Turne backe dull earth, and find thy Center out.

Enter Bensolio, with Mercetio.

Ben. Romeo, my Cozen Romeo, Romeo. More. He is wife,

And on my life hath flolne him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way and leapt this Occhard wall.

Call good Mercusio: Nay Ile conjure soo.

Mer. Romes, Homours, Madmon, Paloco, Louer, Appeare thou in the likeneffe of a figh Speake but one rime, and I am latisfied: Cryme but sy me, Prousne, but Loue and day, Speake to my goship Venus one faire word One Nickname for her purblind Sonne and her, Young Abraham Cupid he that shot so true, When King Copberna lou'd the begger Maid, He heareth not he filrreth not he mouethn ot, The Ape is dead, I must conture him, I consure thee by Rosalmes bright eyes, By her High forehead, and her Scarlet lip, By her Fine foote, Straight leg, and Quinering thigh, And the Demeanes, that there Adiacent lie, That in thy likenesse thou appeare to va. Ben. And if he heare thee thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him, t'would anger him.

To taile a spirit in his Mistresse circle.

Of some strange nature, letting is stand.

Till she had laid it, and conjured it downe,

That were some spight.

My inuocation is faire and honest, & in his Mistris name, I comure onely but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid him felfe among these Trees
To be conforted with the Humerous night:

This Field bed is to cold for me to fleepe,

Blind is his Loue, and best bests the darke.

Mer. If Loue be blind, Love cannot hit the marke,
Now will he sit under a Medler tree,
And wish his Mistresse when they laugh alone,
O Remothat the were, O that she were
An open, or thou a Poprin Peare,
Rouce goodnight, lie to my Truckle bed,

Come shall we go?

Ben. Go then, for his in vaine to seeke him here

That meanes not to be found. Rom. He ieafts at Scarres that never felt a wound, But foft, what light through yonder window breaks? It is the East, and ladies is the Sunne. Atife faire Sun and kill the envious Moone, Who is already ficke and pale with griefe, That thou her Maid art far more faire then the : Be not her Mald fince the 1s envious, Her Vestal livery is but sicke and greene, And none but fooles do weare it, caft it off: It is my Lady, O it is my Loue, O that the knew the were, She speakes, yer the fayes nothing, what of that ? Her eye discoorses, I will answere it : I am too bold 'tis not to me the fpeakes: Two of the fairest starres in all the Heaven, Hauing some businesse do entreat het eyes, To twinckle in their Spheres till they returne. What if her eyes were there, they in her head, The brightnesse of her cheeke would shame those starres, As day-light doth a Lampe, her eye in heauen,

Would through the syrie Region streams so bright, That Birds would sing, and chinks it were not night:

That I might touch that cheeke,
Inc. Ayme,
Rom. She speakes,
Oh speake againe bright Angell, for thou are
As glorrout to this night being are my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven

See how the leanes her ebeeke vpon her hand.

O that I were a Glove vpon that hand,

Vinto the white opturned woodling eyes
Ofmortalls that fall backe to gaze on him,
When he beltrides the lazie puffing Cloudes,
And failes opon the bolome of the agre.

Iul. O Romeo, Romeo, wherefore art thou: Romeo?
Denie thy Father and refuse thy name:
Or if thou wilt not, be but sworne my Love,
And sle no longer be a Capuler.

Rom. Shall I beare more, or shall I speake at this?

In. 'Its but thy name that is my Enemy:
Thou art thy selfe, though not a Mountague,
What's Manuague? it is not hand nor soote,
Nor arme, nor face, O be some other name
Belonging to a man.
What? in a names that which we call a Rose,
By any other word would smell as sweete,
So Romeo would, were he not Romes call'd,
Retaine that deare perfection which he owes,
Without that title Romes, doffe thy name,
And for thy name which is no part of thee,

Rom. I take thee at thy word: Call me but Loue, and lie be new bapthe'd, Hence foorth I neuer will be Romeo.

Take all my felfe.

Iuli. What man art thou, that thus beforeen'd in night So flumblest on my counfell?

Rom. By a name, "
I know not how to tell thee who I am:
My name deare Saint, is hatefull to my felfe,
Because it is an Enemy to thee,
Had I it written, I would teare the word.

Isli. My eares have yet not drunke a hundred words Of thy tongues vetering, yet I know the found. Art thou not Romes, and a Montague!

Rom. Neither faire Maid, if either thee diflike.

Id. How cam's thou hither.
Tell me and wherefore?

The Orchard walls are high, and hard to climbe, And the place death, confidering who thou are, If any of my kinimen find thee here,

Rom. With Loues light wings

Did I ore perch these Walls,
For stony limits cannot hold Loue out,
And what Loue can do, that dares Loue attempt 1
Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me.

Int. If they do see thee, they will murther thee, Rom. Alacke there lies more perill in thine eye, Then twenty of their Swords Jooke thou but fweete, And I am proofe against their entity.

Iw. I would not for the world they faw thee here.

Rom. I have night a cloake to hide me from their eyes.

And but thou love me, let them finde mehere,

My life were better ended by their hate,

Then death proroged wanting of thy Love.

Int. By whose direction found it than out this place?
Rom. By Love that first did promp me to enquire,
He lent me counsell, and I tent him eyes,
I am no Pylot, yet wert thou as far
As that vast-shore-washet with the sarthest Sea,

I should aduenture for such Marchandise.

Ind. Thou knowest the maske of night is on my face,

Else would a Maiden blush bepaint my cheeke,

For that which thou hast heard me speake to night,

Fainc would I dwell on forme, salne, saine, denis

What I have spoke, but farewell Complement,

Doest thou Loue? I know thou wilt say I,

And

And I will take thy word, yet it thou fweet'ft, Thou maielt prouefalle: at Louen persuries They lay love laught, oh gentle Komes If thou doft Lout, pronounce it faithfully i Or if thou thinkest I am too quickly woone, He fromne and be pernerfe, and fay thee nay, So thou wilt wooe : But else not for the world. Lo truth faire Mountague I am too fond: And therefore thou matef thinke my behaulour light, Bur trust me Gentleman, Ile proue more true, Then those that have coying to be strange, I should have beene more strange, I must confelle, But that thou ouer heard'st ere I was ware My true Loues paffion, therefore pardon me, And not impute this yeelding to light Loue, Which the darke night hath so discourred. Rom. Lady, by yonder Moonel vow.

That tips with filuer all thefe Fruite tree tops. Int. O Sweare not by the Moone, th'inconstant Moone.

That monethly changes in her circled Orbe, Leaft that thy Loue proue likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I sweare by? Ind. Do not sweare at all: Orif thou wilt sweare by thy gratious selfe, Which is the God of my Idolatry, And Ile beleeue thee.

Rom. If my hearts deare loue. Iuli. Well do not sweare, although I joy in theen I have no loy of this contract to night, It is too talh, too vnaduild too fudden, Too like the lightning which doth ceale to be Ere, one can fay, it lightens, Sweete good night: This bud of Loue by Summers ripening breath, May proue a beautious Flower when next we meete: Goodnight, goodnight, as sweete repote and rest, Come to thy heart, as that within my breft.

Rom. O wilt thou leaue me fo vnfattifhed? Iuli. What latisfaction can'il thou have to night? Ro. Th'exchange of thy Loues faithfull vow for mine. Iul. I gaue thee mine before thou did'il request us

And yet I would it were to give againe. Rom. Would'Athou withdrawit,

For what purpole Loue?

Int. But to be franke and give it thee agains. And yet I wish but for the thing I baue, My bounty is as boundleffe as the Sea, My Laue as deepe, the more I give to thee The more I have, for both are Infinite: I beare some noyse within deare Loue adve :

Calinaba.

Anon good Nurle, sweet Mountague be true :

Stay but alittle, I will come againe. Rom. O bleffed bleffed night, I am afear'd Being in night, all this is but a dreame, Too flattering (weet to be subflantial).

Int. Three words deare Romero, And goodnight indeed, If that thy bent of Love be Honourable. Thy purpole marriage, fend me word to morrow, By one that Ile procore to come to thee, Where and what time thou wilt performe the right, And all my Fortunes at thy foote Belay, And follow thee my Lord throughout the world. Wehn: Madero.

I come, anon: but if thou meanest not well, waste Madam I do befeech theee

(By and by I come) To cesse thy finfe, and leave me to my gricle, To morrow will I fend.

Ram. So thrive my (sule

IL A thouland times goodnight Rome. A thousand times the worle to want thy light. Love goes toward Love as school-boyes fel thier books BarLoue fro Loue, towards schoole with beaute lookes.

Enter Inlust og autos.

Int. Hist Romes hist: O for a Falkners voice, To lure this Taffell georde backe againe, Boodsge is hoarfe, and may not speake aloud, Elfe would I teare the Caue where Eecho lier, And make her agric tongue wore hoarfe, then With repetition of my Romeo.

Rom. It is my foule that calls upon my name, How filter fweet, found Louers tongues by night,

Like fofteft Mulicke to attending eares.

Inl. Romer. Rom. My Neece. Inl. What a clock to morrow Shall I fend to theef

Rom. By the house of nine. Int. I will not faile, 'tis twenty yeares til then, I have forgot why I did call thee backe.

Rom. Let me fland here till thou temember it. Int. I shall forger, to have thee fill fland there, Remembring how I Love thy company.

Rom And He fill ftay, to have thee full forget, Forgetting any other home but this.

Tis almost morning, I would have thee gooe, And yer no further thena wantons Bard, That let's it hop a little from his hand, Like a poore prisoner in his twisted Gyues, And with a filken thred plucks it backe sgame,

So louing lealous of his liberry. Rom. I would I were thy Bird. Inl, Sweet fo would 1, Yet I should kill thee with much cherishings

Good night, good night. Rom. Parting is such sweete forrow,

That I shall say goodnightstill it be morrow. Int. Sleepe dwell vpoathine eyes peace in thy breft. Rom. Would I were Reepe and peace to sweet to tell, The gray ey'd morne failes on the frowning night. Checking the Easterne Clouds with streakes oflight, And darknelle fleckel'd like a drunkard reeles, From forth dayes pathway, made by Tital wheele Hence will I to my ghoftly Frieschofe Cell, Hisbelpe to craue, and my deare hap to cell

Ester Frier close with a besta.

Fri. The gray ey'd morne faules on the frowning night Checkring the Eafterne Cloudes with Areaks of light. And fleckled darknesse like a drunkard reeles, From forth dates path, and Treas borning wheeles ! Now ere the San adamce his burning eye, The day to cheere, and nights danke dew odry, I must vpfill this Ofer Cage of ours, With balefull weedes, and precious Juiced Bowers, The earth that's Natures mother, is her Tombe, What is her burying grave that is her wombe: And from her wombe children of divers kind

We lucking on her natural bolome find:
Meny for many vertues excellent:
None but for fome, and yet all different.
Omickle is the powerfull grace that lies
In Plants, Hearbs, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought fo vile, that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth fome special good doth give.
Nor ought so good, but firain'd from that fairevse,
Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse.
Vertue it selfe turnes vice being misapplied,
And vice sometime by action dignished.

Enter Romeo.

Within the infant tin'd of this weake flower,
Poyfon hath refidence, and medicine power:
For this being finels, with that part cheares each part,
Being tafted flayes all fences with the heart.
Two fuch opposed Kings encampe them ftill,
In man as well as Hearbes grace and sude will:
And where the worfer is predominant,
Full soone the Canker death eates up that Plant.

Rom. Good morrow Father.

Fri. Benedeeite.
What early tongue fo fweer faluteth me?
Young Sonne, it argues a diftempered head,
So foone to bid goodmorrow to thy bed;
Cate keepes his watch in euery old mans eye,
And where Care lodges, fleepe will neuer lye:
But where vnbrufed youth with vnfluft braine
Doth couch his lims, there, golden fleepe doth raigne;
Therefore thy earlineffe doth me affure,
Thou are vprous'd with fome diftemprature;
Ot if not fo, then here I hit it right.
Our Rowen hath not been in bed to night.

Rom. That last is true, the sweeter rest was mine.

Fro. God pardon sin: was thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghossly Father? No,

I have forgot that name, and that names wee.

Fri. That's my good Son, but wher hast thou bin then?

Row, He tell thee ere shou aske it me agen. I have beene feasling with mine enemie, Where on a sudden one hath wounded me, That's by me wounded:both our remedies Within thy helpe and holy phisickelies: I beare no harred, blessed man:for loe My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. Be plaine good Son, rest homely in thy drift, Ridling consession, finder but ridling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know my hearts deare Loue is fer, On the faire daughter of rich Capules; As mine on hers, to hers is fet on mine; And all combin'd, faue what thou must combine By holy martiage: when and where, and how, We met, we wooed, and made exchange of vow: He tell thee as we passe, but this I pray, That thou consent to marrie vas to day.

Fri. Holy S. Francis, what a change is heere? It Rofaline that shou didft Loue to deare So foone for faken? young mens Loue then lies Not truely in their hearts, but in their eyes. Icfu Maria, what a deale of brine Hath walls thy fallow cheekes for Rofaline? How much falt water throwne away in wast, To feason Loue that of it doth not tall. The Sunnot yet thy fighes, from heaves cleares, Thy old grones yet ringing in my auncient eares to here upon thy cheeke the staine doth fit,

Of an old teare that is not washt off yer.

If ere thou wast thy selfe, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes, were all for Refaline,
And art thou chang'd?pronounce this sentence then,
Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.

Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for louing Roseline.
Frr. For doing, not for louing pupill mine.
Rom. And bad'st me bury Loue.

Fri. Not in a grave,

Tolay one in, another out to have.

Rom. I pray thee chide me nor, her I Loue now Doth grace for grace, and Loue for Loue allow: The other did not fo.

Fri, O she knew well,

Thy Love did read by rote, that could not spell:
But come young waverer, come goe with me,
In one respect, she thy assistant be:
For this alliance may so happy prove,

To turne your houshould rancer to pure Loue.

Rom. Oles va hence, I stand on Sudden hast.

Fri. Wifely and flow, they stumble that run fast.

Enter Benudio and Mercuilo.

Mer. Where the deule flould this Romeo be? came he not home to night?

Ben. Not to his Fathers, I spoke with his man.

Mer. Why that same pale hard-harted wench, that Ro faline torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tibali, the kinfman to old Capulet, hath fent a Letter to his Fathers house.

Mer. A challenge on my life.

Ben. Romeo will answere it.

Mer. Any man that can write, may answere a Letter.
Ben. Nay, he will answere the Letters Maister how be dares, being dared.

Mer Alas poore Romeo, he is already dead stab'd with a white wenches blacke eye, runne through the care with a Loue song, the very pinne of his heatt, elest with the blind Bowe-boyes but- shaft, and is be a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why what is Tibele !

Mer. More then Peince of Cais. Oh hee's the Couraglous Captaine of Complements: be fights as you fing pricklong, keeps time, diffance, 2nd proportion, he refts his minum, one, two, and the third in your bofom: the very butcher of a filk button a Dualift, a Dualift; a Gentleman of the very first house of the first and second cause: ah the immortal Passado the Punto reverso, the Hay.

Ren. The what?

Mer. The Po. of such antique lisping affecting phantacies, these new tuners of accent: Iesu a very good blade, a very tall man, a very good whore. Why is not this a lammatable thing Grandstre, that we should be thus affiched with these strange flies: these fashion Mongers, these pardon mee's, who shand so tiluch on the new form, that they cannot fit at ease on the old bench. O their bones, their bones.

Enter Romeo.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Withouthis Roe, like a dryed Hering. O flesh, slesh, how are thou fishined? Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Laura to his Lady, was a kitchen wench, martie she had a better Loue to be sime her: Dide a dowdie, Cleopatra a Cipsie, Hellen and Hero, hildings and Harlots: This is a gray cie or so, but not to the purpose. Signior Romeo, Boniour, there's a French salutation to your

French flop : you gave vs the the counterfait fairely lait

Romes. Goodmorrow to you both, what counterfeit did I giac you?

Mer. The flip fir, the flip, can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon Mercutso, my bofinelle was great, and in fuch a case as mine, a man may straine currefie,

Mr. That's as much as to lay, fuch a cafe as yours con-Arains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning to curlie.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it. Rom. Amoft curteous expolition.

Mo. Nay, Iam the very pinck of curtefie.

Rom. Pinke for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why then is my Pump well flowr'd.

Mar. Sure wit, follow me this least, now till thou hall worne out thy Pump, that when the fingle sole of it is worne, the least may remaine after the wearing, soleungular.

Rom. Ofingle fol'd iealt, Soly fingular for the linglenelle.

Mer. Come betweene vs good Benselio, my wits faints.

Rom Swits and Spurs,

Swits and spurs, or He crie a match.

Mer. Nay, if our wits run the Wild-Goofe chale, I am donc : For thou haft more of the Wild-Goofe in one of thy wits, then I am fure I have in my whole five. Was I with you there for the Goofe?

Rom. Thou wast never with mee for any thing, when thou wast not there for the Goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the eare for that iell.

Rem. Nay, good Goofe bite not.

Caler. Thy wit is a very Butter-Iweeting,

It is a most sharpe sawce.

Rom. And is it not well feru'd into a Sweet-Goofe? Mer. Oh here's a wit of Cheuerell, that Aretches from an yach narrow, to an ell broad.

Rom. I ftretch it out for that word, broad, which added to the Goofe, proves thee farre and wide, abroad Goofe.

Mer. Why is not this better now, then groning for Love, now are thou fociable, now are thou Romes: now are thou what thou art by Art as well as by Nature, for this driveling Loue is like a great Naturall, that runs lolling vp and downe to hid his bable in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, flop there.

Mar. Thou defir'st me to stop in my tale against the Ben. Thou would'A elle have made thy tale large. (haire. Mer. Othou art deceiu'd, I would have made it short, or I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and means indeed to occupie the argument no longer.

Enter Nurse and ber mes.

Rom. Here's goodly geare.

A sayle, a sayle.

Mar. Two, two: a Shirt and a Smocke.

Nur. Peter? Peter. Anon.

Nur. My Fan Peter?

Mer. Good Peter to hide her face?

For her Fans che fairer face?

Nur. God ye good morrow Gentlemen.

Mer Godyegooden laire Gentlewomen.

Ner. Isit gooden !

Mer. Tis no leffe I rell you : for the bawdy hand of the Dyall is now spon the pricke of Noone.

Ther. Out vpos you: what a man are you?

Rom. Ota Getalewoman,

That God hath made, himfelfe to mar.

Nur. By my troth it is faid, for himselfe to, mar quath a Gentlemen : can any of you tel me where I may find the young Romeo?

Romes. I can tel! you: but young Romes will be older when you have found him, then he was when you fought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fallt of a worle.

Nur. You say well.

Mer. Yez is the worst wrell,

Very well tooke: Ifsith, wifely, wifely,

Nar. If you be he fir,

I defire forne confidence with you?

Ben. She will endite him to some Supper. Mar. A baud, a baud, a baod. Soba

. Rom. What haft thou found?

Mer. No Hare fir, voleffe a Hare fir in a Lenten ple, that is something stale and hoare ere it bespent.

An old Hare house, and an old Hare house is very good meat in Lent.

But a Here that is house is too much for a score, when It hoares ere it be fpent,

Romes will you come to your Fathers? Weele to direct

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell auncient Lady:

Farewell Lady, Lady, Lady.

Exn. Mercutio, Bernotio. Nur. I pray you fir, what fawcie Merchant was this that was fo full of his roperie?

Rom. A Gentleman Nurse, that loves to heare himselfe talke, and will speake more in a minute, then he will stand to in a Moneth.

Nur. And a speake any thing against me, Iletake him downe, & a were luftier then he is, and twentie fuch lacks: and if I cannot, He finde those that shall : scuruie knaue, I am none of his flurt-gils, I am none of his skannes mates, and thou must stand by too and suffer every knaue to vie me at his pleasure.

Per. I faw no man vie you at his pleasure : if I had, my weapon should quickly have beene out, I warrant you, I dare draw alloone as another man, if I fee occasion in a good quarrell, and the law on my fide.

Ner. Now afore God, I am fo vext, that every part about me quivers, skuruy knaue: pray you fir a word : and as I told you, my young Lady bid me enquire you out, what she bid me fay, I will keepe to my selse ; but first let me tell ye, if ye should leade her in a sooles paradise, as they fay, it were avery groffe kind of behaniour, as they fay : for the Gentlewoman is yong: & therefore, if you should deale double with her, truely it were an ill thing to be offered to any Gentlewoman, and very weake desling.

Nic. Nurse commend me to thy Lady and Mistresse, I protest vato thee.

Nur. Good heart, and yfaith I will tell her as much: Lord, Lord the will be a joyfull woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her Nurse i chou doest not marke me ?

Nor. I will tell her fir, that you do proteft, which as I take it, is a Gentleman-like offer. Rom. Bid her deuile some meanes to come to thrift this

And there fne fhall at Frier Laurence Cell Beshriu'd and married: here is for thy paines.

Ner. Notruly fir not a penny. Rom, Go 100, I say you shall.

Zimrfe

Now. This afternoone fir? well the shall be there.

Re. And stay thou good Nurse behind the Abbey wall,
Within this houre my man shall be with thee,
And bring thee Cords made like a tackled state.
Which to the high top gallant of my toy,
Must be my commony in the secret night.
Farewell, be truste and Ile quite thy paines:
Farewell, commend me to thy Mistrelle.

Ner. Now God in heauen bleffe thee:harke you fir,

Kom. What faift thou my deare Nurle?

Nurfe. Is your man fecret, did you nere heare fay two may keepe counfell putting one away.

Ro. Warrant thee my man as true as fleele.

Nor. Well fir,my Mistresse is the sweetest Lady, Lord, Lord, when swas a little prating thing. Othere is a Noble man in Towne one Park, that would faine lay knife aboard: but she good soulchad as seene a see Toade, a very Toade as see him: I anger her sometimes, and tell het that Park is the properer man, but sle wattant you, when I say so, shee lookes as pale as any clout in the vertall world. Dothnot Rosemarie and Romes begin both with a letter?

Rom. 1 Nurle, what of that ? Both with an R

Nor. A mocker that's the dog sname. R. is for theno, I know it begins with fome other letter, and the hath the prettieft fententious of it, of you and Rolemary, that it would do you good to heare it.

Rom. Commend me to thy Lady.
Nur. I a thousand times. Peter?

Per. Anon.

Nur. Before and apace. Exis Nurse and Peter.

Enter Iuliet.

Int. The clocke strook nine, when I did send the Nurse, In halfe an house the promised to returne, Perchance the cannot meete him: that's not fo: Oh the is lame, Loues Herauld thould be thoughts, Which ten times faster glides then the Sunnes beames, Driving backe shadowes over lowering hils Therefore do nimble Pinion'd Doues draw Loue, And therefore hath the wind-fwift Capid wings : Now is the Sun vpon the highmost hill Of this daies journey, and from nine till twelve, I threelong houres, yet the is not come. Had the affections and warme youthfull blood, She would be as swift in motion as a ball, My words would bandy her to my sweete Loue, And his to me, but old folkes, Many faine as they were dead, Vnwieldie, flow, heavy, and pale as lead.

Exter Nurse.

OGod the comes, O hony Nurse what newes?
Hast thou met with him? lend thy man away.

Nw. Peter stay at the gate.

Inl. Now good sweet Nurse:
O Lord, why lookest thousad?
Though newes, be sad, yet tell them merrily.
If good thou sham'st the musicke of sweet newes,
By playing it to me, with so sower a sace.

Nar. I am a weary, give me leave awhile, Fiehow my bones ake, what a jount have I had?

Izd. I would thou had'ft my bones, and I thy newes:
Nay come I pray thee speake, good good Nurse speake.
Nur. Ielu what hasteen you not stay a while?

Do you not fee that I am out of breath?

/u/ How are thou out of breath, when thou hast breth
To fay to me, that thou are out of breath?

The excuse that thou dost make in this delay,

Is longer then the tale thou dost excuse.
Is thy newes good or bad?answere to that,
Say either, and He stay the circustance;
Letme be satisfied, ift good or bad?

Now. Well, you have made a simple choice, you know not how to chuse a man. Romeo, no not he chough his face be better then any mans, yet his legs excels all mens, and for a hand, and a soote, and a body, though they be not to be talkt on, yet they are pass compare the is not the slower of currefie, but lie warrant him as gentle a Lambe go thy wases wench, serve God. What have you don'd at home?

Int. No no but all this this did I know before What fales he of our marriage what of that?

Nar. Lord how my head akes, what a head haue]?
It beates as it would fall in twenty peeces.
My backe a tother fide to my backe, my backe:
Bethrew your heart for fending me about
To catch my death with faulting yp and downe.

Int. If aith: I am fortie that that thou art fo well.

Sweet (weet, sweet Nurse, tell me what fases my Loue?

Nur. Your Love (ares like an honeft Gentleman, And a courteous, and a kind, and a handlome, And I warrant a vertuous; where is your Mother?

Int. Where is my Mother?
Why the is within, where thould the be?
How odly thou replift:
Your Love fales like an honest Gentleman;
Where is your Mother?

Nor. O Gods Lady deare,
Are you to hot? instrict come up I trow,
Is this the Poultis for my aking bones?
Henceforward do your messages your felfe.

Int. Heere's such a coile, come what saies Romeo?
Nor. Have you got leave to go to shriftto day?
Int. I have.

Nar. Then high you hence to Frier Lawrence Cell, There flaies a Husband to make you a wife:
Now comes the wanton bloud vp in your cheekes, Theile be in Scarlet straight at any newes:
Hie you to Church, I mult an other way.
To fetch a Ladder by the which your Loue
Muff climde a birds nest Soone when it is darke:
I am the drudge, and toile in your delight:
But you shall beare the burthen soone at night,
Golle to dinner hie you to the Cell.

Im Hie to high Fortune, honost Nurse, farewell. Exercise

Enter Frier and Rouses.

Fri. So smile the heavens upon this holy at, That after hour is, with forrow chide vs not.

Rom. Amen, amen, but come what fortow can, It cannot countervaile the exchange of soy That one short minute gives me in her sight: Do thou but close our hands with holy words. Then Love-devouring death do what he date, It is mough. I may but call her mine.

Fri. These violent delights have violent endes, and in their triumphidie like fire and powder; Which as they kille consume. The sweetest honey Is loathsome in his owned delicions offer, and in the taste consoundes the appesite. Therefore Loue moderately, long Loue doth so, Too swift arrives as tardic as too slow.

Enter Inliet.

Here comes the Lady. Oh so light a foot Will nece weare out the cuerlasting flint,

The Tragedie of Romeo and Fuliet.

A Louer may bestride the Gossamours, That ydles in the wanton Summer ayre, And yet not fall, to light is vanitie.

Int. Good even to my ghoftly Confessor. Int. As much to him, elfe in his thanks too much.

Fro. Ah Iulies, if the measure of thy toy Be heapt like mine, and that thy skill be more Tublaton it, then I weeten with thy breath This neighbour syre, and let rich mulickes congue, Vnfold the imagin'd happineffe that both Receiue in either, by this deere encounter,

Iul. Concert more rich in matter then in words, Brags of his substance, not of Ornament : They are but beggers that can count their worth, But my true Loue is growne wu fuch fuch exceffe,

I cannot fum vp fome of halfe my wealth. Fre Come, come with me, & we will make thost worke, For by your leaves, you shall not flay alone,

Till holy Church incorporate two in one. Enter Mercutio, Benuolio, and men.

Ben. I pray thee good Mercuio lets retire,

The day is hot, the Capuleis abtoad: And if we meet, we shal not scape a brawle, for now these hot dayes, is the mad blood firring

Mer. Thou are like one of these fellowes, that when he enters the confines of a Tauerne, claps me his Sword vpon the Table, and fayes, God fend me no need of thee: and by the operation of the fecond cup, drawes him on the Drawer, when indeed there is no need.

Ben. Am Ilike fuch a Fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou are as hot a Tacke in thy mood, as any in lealie: and affoone moved to be moodie, and afsoone moodie to be mou'd.

Ben. And what 100?

Mer. Nay, and there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other: thou, why thou wilt quarrell with a man that hath a hatte more, or a hatte leffe in his beard, then thou hast thou wilt quarrell with a man for cracking Nuts, having no other reason, but because thou hast hasell eyes: what eye, but such an eye, would spie out such a quarrell ? thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egge is full of meat, and yet thy head hath bin beaten as addle as an egge for quarreling: chou haft quarrel'd with a man for coffing in the ffreet, because he hath wakened thy Dog that hath laine affeepe in the Sun Did'A thou not fall out with a Tailor for wearing his new Doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shooes with old Riband, and yet thou will Tutor me from quarrelling?

Ben. And I were so apt to quarell as thou art, any man (hould buy the Fee-simple of my life, for an houre and a quarter.

Mer. The Fee-simple? O simple.

Enter Tybalt, Petruchio, and others.

Bh. By my head here comes the Capulets.

Mer. By my heele I care not.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speake to them. Gentlemen, Good den, a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of vs?couple it with something, make it a word and a blow.

Tib. You shall find me apt inough to that sir, and you will give me occasion.

Mercu. Could you not take some occasion without giuing? Tib: Mercutio thou confort's with Romes.

Mer. Confortiwhat doft thou make va Minfireis' & thou make Minstels of vs, looke to hesteroit ng but of cords heere's my fiddleflicke, heere's that first mase you daunce. Come confort.

Ben. We talke here in the publike haunt of even Either withdraw vnto forne private place, Or reason coldly of your greenances: Or elle depart, here all eres gaze on vs.

Mer. Mens eyes were made so looke, and let them gaze I will not budge for no mans pleafure I.

Enter Rames.

Tib. Well peace be with you fir, here comes my man Mr. But lie be hang'd fir if he weare your Livery. Marry go before to held heele be your follower, Your worthip in that fenfe, may call him man.

Tib. Romee, the love I beare thee, can affoord No better terme then this: Thou art a Villaine.

Rem. Tibalt, the season that I have to love thee, Doth much excuse the appertaining rage To fuch a greeting: Villaine am I none; Therefore farewell, I fee thou know's me not. Tib. Boy, this shall not excuse the insures

That thou hast done me, therefore turne and draw.

Rom. I do procest I neuer injur'd thee, But lou'd thee better then thou can'it deuife: Till thou shalt know the reason of my love, And so good Capules, which name I cender As dearely as my owne, be facished.

Mer. O calme, dishonourable, vile submission:

Alla Stucatho cattles it away.

Tybelr, you Rat catcher, will you walke? What woulds thou have with me?

Mer. Good King of Cats, nothing but one of your nine lives, that I meane to make bold withall, and as you shall vie me hereafter dry beate the teft of the eight. Will you pluck your Sword out of his Pilcher by the eates ? Make haff,leaft mine be about your eares ere it be out

Tib. 1 am for you.
Rom. Gentle Mercuito, put thy Rapier vp.

Mer. Come sir, your Passado.

Rons. Draw Benuelso, beat downe their weapons: Gentlemen, for shame forbeare this outrage, Tibalt Mercurio, the Prince expresly hath Forbidden bandying in Verona Ricetes. Hold Tybalt, good Mercuso.

Exit Tyball.

Mer. I am hurt.

A plague a both the Houses, I am sped: Is he gone and hath nothing?

Ben. What art thou hurt?

Mer. I, l, a scratch, a scratch, marry tis inough, Where is my Page go Villaine fetch a Surgeon. Rom. Courage man, the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No : 'tis not so deepe as a well, not so wide as a Church doore, but 'tis inough, 'twill ferue : aske for me to morrow, and you shall find me a grade man. I am pepper'd I warrant, for this world : a plague a both your houles. What, a Dog, a Rat, a Mouse, a Cat to scratch a man to death : a Braggarr, a Rogue, a Villaine, that fights by the booke of Arithmeticke, why the deu'le came you betweene vs? I was hurt vnder your arme.

Rem. I thought all for the best. Mer. Helpe me inco some house Benuelio, Or I shall faint: a plague a both your houses.

They have made wormes meat of me,

The Tragedie of Romeo and Iuliet ENIL.

I have it, and foundly to your Houses.

Rom. This Gentleman the Princes neere Alie, My very Friend hath got his mortall hure In my behalfe, my reputation stain'd With Tibalis flaunder, Tibalis that an houre Hath beene my Cozin: O Sweet Iulies, Thy Beauty hath made me Effeminate, And in my temper foftned Valours fteele.

Enser Bennolio.

Ben. O Romes, Romes, braue Mercutio's is dead, That Gallant Spirit hath aspir'd the Cloudes, Which too votimely here did fcome the earth.

Rom. This daies blacke Fate, on mo daies doth depend,

This but begins, the wo others must end. Enter Tybalt.

Ben. Here comes the Furious Tybals backe againe. Rom. He gon in triumph, and Mercusio flaine? Away to heauen respective Lenitie, And fire and Fury, be my conduct now. Now Tybale take the Villaine backe againe That lace thou gau'ft me, for Mercutios fouls Is but a little way about our neads, Staying for thine to keepe him companie t Either thou or I, or both, must goe with him.

Tib. Thou wretched Boy that didft confort him here,

Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

They fight. Tybals falles.

Ben. Romeo, away be gone: The Citizens are vp, and Tybale flaine, Stand not amaz'd, the Prince will Doome thee death If thou are taken: hence, be gone, away.

Rom. Ot Ism Fortunes foole. Bos. Why doft thou flay?

Exit Romeo.

Enter Citizens.

Citi. Which way tan he that kild Mercutio? Tibale that Murtherer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybals. Ceti. Vp fir go with me:

Icharge thee in the Princes names obey. Enter Proce, old Montague, Capulet, their Wines and all.

Frim. Where are the vile beginners of this Fray ? Ben. O Noble Prince, I can discouer all The voluckie Mannage of this fatall brall: There lies the man flaine by young Rameo, That flew thy kinfman brave Mercutio.

Cap. Wi. Tybals, my Cozin ? O my Brothers Child, O Prince, O Cozin, Husband, O the blood is spild Of my deare kinfman. Prince as thou art true, For bloud of ours, shed bloud of Mountague.

O Cozin, Cozin,
Prin. Benuolio, who began this Fray? Ben. Tybali here flaine, whom Romeo's hand did flay, Romeo that spoke him faire, bid him bethinke How nice the Quarrell was, and vrg'd withall Your high displeasure: all this vecered, With gentle breath, calme looke, knees humbly bow'd Could not take truce with the vntuly spleene Of Tybalis desfe to peace, but that he Tilts With Peireing Reele at bold Mercuio's breaft, Who all as hor, turne s deadly point to point, And with a Martiall feorne, with one hand beates Cold death aside, and with the other lends It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud, Hold Priends, Friends part, and (wifter then his tongue, His aged arme, beats downe their fatall points, And twixt them rushes, underneath whose arme, An enuious thrust from Tybals, his the life Of fout Mercusio, and then Tybals fled. But by and by comes backe to Romeo, Who had but newly entertained Revenge, And too't they goe like lightning, for ere] Could draw to part them, was fout Tybale flaine: And as he fell, did Romeo turne and flie: This is the truth, or let Benuolio die.

Cap. Wi. He is a kinfinan to the Mountague, Affection makes him falle, he speakes not true Some twenty of them fought in this blacke strife, And all those twenty could but kill one life. I beg for Iustice, which thou Prince must gives Romeo flew Tybale, Romes must not live.

Prim. Romeo flew him, he flew Mercutio, Who now the price of his deare blood dorh owe.

Cap. Not Romeo Prince, he was Mercutos Friend, His fault concludes, but what the law should end, The life of Tybale.

Prin. And for that offence. Immediately we doe exile him hence : I have an interest in your hearts proceeding: My bloud for your rude brawles doth lie a bleeding. But Ile Amerce you with fo ftrong a fine, That you shall all repent the losse of mine. It will be deafe to pleading and excuses, Nor teares, nor prayers shall purchase our abuses. Therefore vie none, let Romes hence in halt, Elfe when he is found, that houre is his laft. Beare hence this body, and attend our will: Mercy not Murders, pardoning those that kill.

Excunt

Enter Iuliet alone. Int. Gallop apace, you fiery footed fleedes, Towards Phebiu lodging, fuch a Wagoner As Phaeron would whip you to the west, And bring in Cloudie night immediately. Spred thy close Curtaine Love-performing night, That run-awayes eyes may wincke, and Romeo Leape to these armes, vntalkt of and vnscene, Louers can fee to doe their Amorous rights, And by their owne Beauties: or if Loue be blind, It best agrees (ich night: come civill night, Thou fober fuced Matron all in blacke, And learne me how to loofe a winning match, Plaid for a paire of flainlesse Maidenhoods, Hood my vnman'd blood bayting in my Cheekes, With thy Blacke mantle, till strange Loue grow bold, Thinke true Loue acted simple modestie : Come night, come Romeo, come thou day in night, For thou wilt lie vpon the wings of night Whiter then new Snow vpon a Rauens backes Coole gentle night, come louing blackebrow'd night. Give me my Romeo, and when I shall die, Take him and cut him out in little starres And he will make the Face of heaven fo fine, That all the world will be in Love with night, And pay no worthip to the Garish Sun. O I have bought the Mansion of a Loue, Butnot pollett it, and though I am fold, Not yet enioy'd, so tedious is this day, As is the night before some Festivall,

To an Impatient child that hath new robes
And may not weare them, O here comes my Nurse.

Enter Nurse with cords.

And the brings newes and every tongue that fpeaks
But Rossess, name, speakes heavenly eloquences:
Now Nurse, what newes? what hast thou there?
The Cords that Rosses bid thee setch?

New. 1.1, the Cords.

Inls. Ay me, what newes?

Thu do 0 the market the hand

Why doft thou wring thy hands.

Nor. A welady, hee's dead, hee's dead,
We are vndone Lady, we are vndone.

Alacke the day, hee's gone, hee's kil'd, he's dead.

Ind. Can heaven be lo equious?

Nur. Romeo can,

Though heaven cannot. O Romeo, Romeo.
Who ever would have thought it Romeo.

Iuli. What divell art thou,
That dost torment methus:
This torture should be roar'd in dismall hell,
Hath Rome slaine himselfe? say thou but I,
And that base vowell I shall poyson more
Then the death-darting eye of Cockattice,
I am not I, if there be such an I.
Or those eyes shot, that makes thee answere I:

If he be flaine fay I, or if not, no.
Briefe, founds, determine of my weale or wo.

Nor. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes, God saue the marke, here on his manly brest, A pitteous Coarse, a bloody piteous Coarse: Pale, pale as ashes, all bedawb'd in blood, All in gore blood, I sounded at the fight-

Vil. O breake my heart,
Poore Banckrout breake at once,
To prison eyes, nere looke on libertie.
Vile earth to carth refigne, end motion here,
And thou and Romeo presse on heave beere.

Nor. O Tybali, Tybali, the best Friend I had:
O curreous Tybali honest Gentleman,
That ever I should live to see thre dead.

In! What storme is this that blowes so contrarie? Is Romeo sughtred? and is Tybali dead? My dearest Cozen, and my dearer Lord: Then dreadfull Trumpet sound the general doome, For who is living, if those two aregone;

Nur. Tybelt is gone, and Romeo banished, Romeo that kil'd him, he is banished.

Iul. O God'

Did Rem'es hand shed Tybalss blood It did it did, alas the day, it did,

Nur. O Serpent heart, hid with a flowing face.
Iul. Did ever Dragon keepe fo faire a Cave?
Beautifull Tyrant, fiend Angelicall:
Rauenous Doue-feather'd Rauen,
Woluish-rauening Lambe,

Dispiled subflance of Diumest show;

Interposite to what thou sustly seem'st,

A dimoe Saint, an Honourable Villaine.

O Nature! what had'st thou to doe in hell,

When thou did'st bower thespirit of a fiend

In mortall paradise of such sweet stesh?

Was ever booke containing fuch vile matter So fairely bound? O that deceit should dwell In such a gorgeous Pallace.

Nw. There's no truft, no faith, no honestie in men, All periur'd, all for (worne, all naught, all diffemblers, Ah where's my man? give me force Aque-vitz?
These griefes, these woes, these sorrowes make me old:
Shame come to Romes.

Iul. Bliffer'd be thy tongue
For fuch a wish, he was not borne to shame:
Vpon his brow shame is asham'd to sit;
For 'tis a throane where Honour may be Crown'd
Sole Monarch of the vniuerfall earth:
O what a beast was I to chide him?

Nur. Will you speake well of him,

That kil'd your Cozen? Iul. Shall I speake ill of him that is my husband? Ah poore my Lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name, When I thy three houres wife have mangled it. But wherefore Villaine did'ft thou kill my Cozin? That Villaine Cozin would have kil'd my husband : Packe foolish teares, backe to your nature spring, Your tributarie drops belong to woe, Which you mistaking offer vo to ioy : My husband lines that Tibali would have flaine, And Tibals dead that would have flaine my husband ; All this is comfort, wherefore weepe I then? Some words there was worler then Tybalis death That murdered me, I would forget it feine, But oh, it presses to my memory, Like damned guilty deedes to sinners minds, Tybalt is dead and Romeo banished: That banished, that one word ban shed, Hath flaine ten thousand Tibalis: Tibalis death Was woe inough if it had ended there: Or if lower woe delights in fellowship, And needly will be rankt with other griefes, Why followed not when the faid Tibalis dead, Thy Father or thy Mother, nay or both, Which moderne lamentation might have mou'd. But which a rere-ward following Tybalts death Romes is banished to speake that word, Is Father, Mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet, All flaine, all dead. Romeo is banished, There is no end, no limit, measure, bound, In that words death, no words can that woe found. Where is my Father and my Mother Nurse ?

Nur. Weeping and wailing ouer Tybalis Coarfe, Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

In. Wash they his wounds with tears:mine shal be spect. When theirs are drie for Romeo's banishment. Take vp those Cordes, poore ropes you are beguil'd, Both you and I for Romeo's exild:

He made you for a high-way to my bed,

But I a Maid, die Maiden widowed.

Come Cord, come Nutfe, Ile to my wedding bed,
And death not Romeo, take my Maiden head.

Nur. Hie to your Chamber, lle find Romes
To comfort you, I wot well where he is:
Harke ye your Romes will be heere at night,
Ile to him, he is hid at Laurence Cell.

And bid him come, to take his last farewell.

Exit.

Enter Frier and Romes.

Fri. Remee come forth,
Come forth thou feerfull man,
Affliction is enamor'd of thy petts:
And thou are wedded to calamite,
Rem. Father what newes?

What

What is the Princes Doome !
What forrow croues acquaintance at my b and,
That I yet know not?
Fri. Too familiar

Is my deare Sonne with fuch fowre Company & bring thee tydings of the Princes Doome.

Rom. What leffe then Doomefday,

Is the Prioces Doome?

Fri. A gentler judgement vanisht from his lips, Not bodies death, but bodies banishment.

Rom. Ha, banishment? be mercifull, say death: For exile hath more terror in his looke, Much more then death: do not say banishment.

Fri. Here from Verona art thou banished: Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verons walles,
But Purgatorie, Tortute, hell it felse:
Hence banished, is banishe from the world,
And worlds exite is death. Then banished,
Is death, mistearm'd, calling death banished,
Thou cut'st my head off with a golden Axe,
And smilest vpon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. O deadly fin, O rude vnthankefulneffe!
Thy falt our Law calles death, but the kind Prince
Taking thy part, hath rufht afide the Law,
And turn'd that blacke word death, to banishment.
This is deare mercy, and thou seeff it not.

Rom. 'Tis Torture and not mercy, heaven is here Where Isliet lives, and every Cat and Dog, And little Moufe, every vnworthy thing Live here in Heaven and may looke on her, But Romeo may not. More Validitie, More Honourable flate, more Courtship lives In carrion Flies, then Romeo: they may feaze On the white wonder of deare Islati hand, And Reale immortall bleffing from her lips, Who even in pure and veltall modestie Still blush, as thinking their owne kisses fin. This may Flies doe, when I from this must flie, And faift thou yet, that exile is not death? But Romeo may not, hee is banished. Had'st thou no poylon mixt, no sharpe ground knife, No fudden meane of death though nere fo meane, But banished to kill me? Banished? O Frier, the damped vie that word in hell : Howlings attends it, how hast theu the hart Being a Divine, a Ghoftly Confessor, A Sin-Absolver, and my Friend profest To mangle me with that word, banished?

Fri. Then fond Mad man, heare me speake.

Rgm. O thou wilt speake againe of banishmens.

Fri. Ile give thee Armour to keepe off that word,

Advertities (weete milke, Philosophie,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banished/hang vp Philosophies
Vnlesse Philosophie can make a Julin,
Displant a Towne, reverse a Princes Doome, lt helpes not, it preuailes not, talke no more.

Fri. Othen I fee, that Mad men have no cares.

Rom. How should they, When wisenen have no eyes?

Fri. Let me dispaire with thee of thy estate,
Rom. Thou can'st not speake of that y dost not feele,
Were thou as young as Indiet my Loue:
An houre but married, Tybelt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,

Then mighted thou speake,
Then mighted thou teare thy hayre,
And fall vpon the ground as I doe now,
Taking the measure of an vnmade grane.

Enter Nurse, and knockes,

Frier. Atile one knockes, Good Romeo hide thy felfe.

Rom. Not I,
Vnlesse the breath of Hattlicke groanes
Mist-like infold me from the leatch of eyes

Kuocke

Pri. Harke how they knocke: (Who's there) Romeo arife, Thou wilt be saken, flay a while, Aand vp:

Knoch.

Run to my study: by and by, Gods will What simplenesse is this. I come, I come.

Kuoch

Who knocks to hard?
Whence come you? what's your will?
Enter Natife.

Nur. Let me come in, And you shall know my errand: I come from Lady Inlut.

Fre. Welcome then.

Nur O holy Frier, O tell me holy Frier, Where s my Ladies Lord? where's Romeo &

Fre. There on the ground, With his owne testes made drunke.

Nur. Ohe is even in my Mistresse case,
Iust in her case. O wofull simpathy:
Pittious predicament, even so lies she,
Blubbring and weeping, weeping and blubbring,
Stand vp, stand vp, stand and you be a man,
Por Iuster sake, for her sake rise and stand i
Why should you fall into so deepe an O.

Ram Nurle.

Nur. Ah fir, ah fir, deaths the end of all.

Row. Speak'st thou of Inderthow is it with her?

Doth not the thinke me an old Murtherer,

Now I have sain'd the Childhood of our ioy,

With blood removed, but little from her owne?

Where is the? and how doth the? and what sayes

My conceal'd Lady to our conceal'd Love?

Nor. Oh the layes nothing fir, but weeps and weeps.
And now lay on her bed, and then flatts up,
And Tybuli alls, and then on Roome cries,
And then downe falls againe.

Re.As if that name that from the dead levell of a Gun, Did myrder her, as that names curfed hand Murdred her kinfman. Oh tell me Frier, tell me, In what vile part of this Anatomie Doth my name lodge? Tell me, that I may facke The hatefull Manfion.

Fri. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy forme cries out thou art:
Thy ceares are womanish, thy wild acts denote
The vireasonable Euric of a beast.
Vnscemely woman, in a seeming man,
And ill beseeming beast in seeming both,
Thou hast armaz'd me. By my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Hast thou sain to Tybast? witt thou say thy selfe?
And slay thy Lady, that in thy life lies,
By doing damned hate vpon thy sole?
Why ray of thou on thy buth? the beauen and earth?

Since

Since birth, and heaven and earth, all three do meete In thee at once, which thou at once would'it loofe. Fie fie thou from'it thy frape, thy loue, thy wit, Which like a Vlurer abound'ft in all : And vielt none in that true vie indeed, Which should bedecke thy shape, thy loue, thy wit: Thy Noble thepe, is but a forme of waxe, Digressing from the Valour of a man, Thy deare Loue (worne but hollow perturie, Killing that Lone which thou half vow'd to cherish. Thy wit, that Ornzment, to shape and Loue, Mishapen in the conduct of them both Like powder in a skilleffe Souldiers flaske, le fet a fire by thine owne ignorance, And thou dismembred with thine owne defence. What, rowfe thee man, thy Inliet is alive, Por whose desre sake thou wast but lately deed. There are thou happy. Tybale would kill thee, Butthou flew'st Tybali, there art thou happie. The law that threatued death became thy Friend. And turn'd it to exile, there art thou happy. A packe or bleffing light vpon thy backe, Happinelle Courts thee in her best array, But like a mishaped and sullen wench, Thou puttest up thy Fortune and thy Loue: Take heed, zake heed, for such die miserable. Goe get thee to thy Loue as was decreed, Ascend her Chamber, hence and comfort her: But looke thou flay not till the watch be fet, For then thou can't not passe to Mantua, Where thou shalt live till we can finde a time To blaze your marriage, reconcile your Friends, Beg pardon of thy Prince, and call thee backe, With twenty hundred thouland times more toy Then thou went'st forth in lamentation. Goe before Nurle, commend me to thy Lady, And bid her hasten all the house to bed, Which heavy forrow makes them apt voto. Rausce is comming.

Nor. O Lord, I could have staid here all night, To heare good counsell: oh what learning is; My Lord Ile tell my Lady you will come.

Roms. Do so, and bid my Sweete prepare to chide.
Nor. Heere sit, a Ring she bid me gue you sit.:
Hie you, make hast, for it growes very late.

Rens. How well my comfort is reuse'd by this.

Fri. Go hence,
Goodnight, and here stands all your state:
Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the breake of day disguis'd from hence,
Soiourne in Mantas, lie find out your man,
And he shall signife from time to time,
Euery good hap to you, that chaunces heere:
Give me thy hand, 'tis late, farewell, goodnight.

Rom. But that a loy past loy, calls out on me, It were a griefe, so briefe to part with thee: Farewell.

Exercise

Enter old Capulet , bis Wife and Paris.

Cap. Things have false out fit for valuckily,
That we have had no time to move our Daughter:
Looke you, the Lou'd her kinfman Tybet dearely,
And so did I. Well, we were borne to die.
This very late, the 'l not come downe to night:
I promise you, but sor your company,

I would have bin a bed an houreago.

Par. These times of wo, associat no times to wook
Madam goodnight, commend me to your Daughter.
Lady. I will, and know her mind early to morrow.

To night, the is mewed up to her heavineffe.

Cop. Sir Parm, I will make a despetate tender
Of my Childes love: I thinke she will be evild
In all respects by me: nay more, I doubt it not Wise, go you to her ere you go to bed,
Acquaint her here, of my Sonne Parm Love,
And bid her, marke you me, on V'endiday next,
But soft, what day is this?

Par. Monday my Lord.

Cap. Monday, ha has well Wendlday is too foone.

A Thursday let it besa Thursday tell ber,
She shall be matried to this Noble Earle:
Will you be ready? do you like this hass?
Weele keepe no great adoe, a Friend or two,
For harke you, Tybals being flaine so late,
It may be thought we held him carelesty,
Being our kinsman, if we reuell much:
Therefore weele haue some halfe a dozen Friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?

Paru. My Lord,

I would that Thursday were to morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone, a Thut day, be it then a
Go you to Inliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her wife, a gainft this wedding day.
Fatewell my Lord, light to my Chamber hoa,
Afore me, it is fo late, that we may call it early by and by Goodnight,

Exemple

Enter Romeo and Iuliet aloft.

Int. Wilt thou be gone? It is not yet neere day 1
It was the Nightingale, and not the Larke,
That pier if the fearefull hollow of thine eare,
Nightly the fings on yond Pomgranet tree,
Beleeue me Loue, it was the Nightingale.

Rom. It was the Larkethe Herauld of the Morner
No Nightingale:looke Loue what enurous streakes
Do lace the seuring Cloudes in yonder East:
Nights Candles are burnt out, and locond day
Stands tipto on the missie Mountaines tops,
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Ind. Youd light is not daylight, I know it I:
It is fome Meteor that the Sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a Torch-beater,
And light thee on thy way to Idantua.
Therefore flay yet, thou need fl not to be gone,

Rom. Let me be tane, let me be put to death, I am content, so thou wilt have it so.

Ile say you gray is not the mornings eye,

'Tis but the pale reflexe of Conthan brow.

Northat is not Larke whose noates do beare. The valley heaven so high aboue our heads, I have more care to stay, then will to go:

Come death and welcome, salest wills it so.

How ist my soule, lets talke, it is not day.

Ind. Icis, it is, he hence be gone away:
It is the Larke that lings so out of tune,
Straining harsh Discords, and unpleasing Sharpes.
Some say the Larke makes sweete Drustion;
This dorth not so for she disadeth us. "
Some say, the Larke and loathed Toad change eyes,
O now I would they had chang'd voyces too:

Since arme from arme that voyce doth vs affray, Hunting thee hence, with Hunt f-vp to the day, O now be gone, more light and ith ght grower.

Rom More light & light, more darke & darke our woes. Enter Madam and Nur fe.

Nur. Madam

Iul. Nutic.

Nur. Your Lady Mother is comming to your chamber,

The day is broke, be wary, looke about.

[w]. Then window let day in, and let life out. Rem. Farewell, farewell, one kiffe and He descend.

Iul. Art thou gone for Loue, Lord, ay Husband, Friend, I must heare from thee every day in thehoure,

For in a minute there are many dayes, O by this count I shall be much in yeares, Ere I againe behold my Romeo.

Rom. Fareviell:

I will omit no oportunitie,

That may convey my greetings Loue, to thee.

Ist. O thinkest thou we shall ever meet againe? Rom. I doubt it not, and all these woes shall serus

For sweet discourses in our time to come. Iuilet. O God! I have an ill Divining foule, Me thinkes I see thee now, thou att so lowe, As one dead in the bottome of a Tombe, Either my eye-fight failes, or thou look it pale.

Rom. And trust me Loue, in my eye so do you : Drie forrow drinkes our blood. Adue, adue. Fxi. Iul O Fortune, Fortune, all men call thee fickle, If thou art fickle, what doft thou with him

That is renown'd for faith? be fickle Fortune: For then I hope thou wilt not keepe him long, But send him backe.

Enter Mother.

Lad. Ho Daughter, are you vp?

Int: Who ift that calls? Is it my Lady Mother-Is the not downe to late, or vp to early What vnaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

Led Why how now Inlet? lul. Madam I am not well.

Lad. Euermore weeping for your Cozins death? What wile thou wash him from his grave with teares ? And if thou could'ft, thou could'ft not make him live : Therefore have done, some gricse showes much of Loue, But much of gricle, shewes still some want of wit.

Inl. Yet let me weepe, for such a feeling losse. Lad. So shall you feele the losse, but not the Friend

Which you weepe for.

Int. Feeling to the lotte,

I cannot chuse but euer weepe the Friend. La. Well Girle, thou weep'ft not so much for his death. As that the Villaine lives which flaughter'd him.

Int. What Villaine, Madam? That fame Villaine Romes

Int. Villaine and he, be many Miles assunder: God pardon, I doe with all my hearts

And yet no man like he, doth grieve my heart. Lad. That is because the Traitor lives.

Iul. I Madam from the reach of these my hands a Would none but I might venge my Cozins death.

Lad. We will have vengeance for it, feare thou not. Then weepe no more, lle send to oce in Mantue, Where that same banisht Run-agare doth live, Shall give him such an vnaccustom'd dram, That he shall soone keepe Ty bale company: And then I hope thou will be facisfied.

Iul. Indeed I neuer shall be latisfied With Romeo, till I behold him. Dead Is my poore beart fo for a kinfman vent: Madam if you could find out but a man To beare a poylon, I would temper it; That Remee should vpon receiv thereof, Soone Reepe in quict. O how my heart abhors To heare him nam'd, and cannot come to him, To wreake the Loue I bore my Cozin, Vpon his body that hath flaughter'd him.

Mo. Find thou the meanes, and He find fuch a man. But now He tell thee toyfull tidings Gyrle.

Iul. And toy comes well, in such a needy time, What are they, befeech your Ladyship?

Mo. Well, well, thou haft a carefull Father Child? One who to put thee from thy hearinesse, Hath forted out a fudden day of ioy, That thou expects not nor I lookt not for. Isl. Madam in happy time, what day is this?
Mo. Marry my Child, early next Thursday morne,

The gallant, young, and Noble Gentleman, The Countie Para at Saint Peters Church, Shall happily make thee a joyfull Bride.

Iul. Now by Saint Peters Church, and Peter too, He shall not make me there a joy full Bride. I wonder at this haft, that I must wed Ere he that should be Husband comes to wee: I pray you cell my Lord and Father Madam, I will not marrie yer, and when I doe, I fweare It shallbe Romeo, whom you know I hate Rather then Paris. These are newes indeed.

Mo. Here comes your Father, tell him to your felfe, And see bow he will take it at your hands.

Emer Capulat and Nurse.

Cap. When the Sun fets, the earth doth dringle daevo But for the Sunfer of my Brothers Sonne, leraines downright. How now ? A Conduit Gyrle, what fill in teares? Euermore showring in one little body? Thou counterfaits a Barke, a Sea, a Wind: For fill thy eyes, which I may call the Sea, Do ebbe and flow with teares, the Barke thy body is Sayling in this falt floud, the windes thy fighes, Who raging with the teares and they with them, Without a sudden calme will ouer set Thy tempelt tolled body. How now wife? Haue you delivered to her our decree?

Lady. I ht; But the will none, the gives you chankes, I would the foole were matried to her grave.

Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you wie, How, will the none?doth the not give vs thanke? Is the not proud? doth the not count her bleft, Vnworthy as she is, that we have wrought So worthy a Gentleman, to be her Bridegrooms

Inl. Not proud you have, But thankfull that you have : Proud can I neuer be of what I have, But thankfull even for hate, that is meant Love.

Cap. How now? How now & Chopt Logicke ? what is this? Proud, and I thanke you; and I thanke you not. Thanke me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds, But fettle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,

To go with Paru to Saint Peters Church: Or I will drag thee, on a Hurdle thither. Out you greene fickneile certion, out you baggage, Yourallowface.

Lady. Fie, fie, what are you mad?

Iul. Good Father, I beleech you on my knecs Heate me with patience, but to speake a word.

F4. Hang thee young baggage, disobedient wretch, I tell thee what, get thee to Church a Thursday, Or neuer after looke me in the face. Speake not reply not, do not solwere me. My fingers itch, wife : we fearce thought vs bleft, That God had lent vs but this enely Child, But now I fee this one is one too much. And that we have a curle in having her : Out on her Hilding.

Nur. Godin heauen bleffe her,

You are too blame my Lord to ratcher fo, Fa. And why my Lady wisedome? hold your tongue, Good Prindence. Smatter with your goffip, zo.

Nur. I speake no tresson, Father, O Godigoden,

May not one speake? Fa. Peace you mumbling foole, Veter your grauitie ore a Gossips bowles For here we need it not.

La. You are too hot.

Fa. Gods bread, it makes me mad: Day, night, houre, ride, time, worke, play, Alone in companie, still my care hath bin To haucher marche, and hauing now provided A Gendeman of Noble Patentage, Offaire Demeanes, Youthfull, and Nobly Allied, Stuft as they fay with Honourable parts, Proportion'd as ones thought would wish a man, And then to have a wretched puling foole, A whining mammer, in her Fortunes tender, To answer, He not wed, I cannot Loue: I am too young, I pray you pardon me. But, and you will not wed, le pardon you. Graze where you will you shall not house with me ! Looke too't, thinke ou't, I do not vic to ieft. Thursday is neete, lay hand on heart, aduise, And you be mine, Ile give you to my Friend: And you be not, hang, beg, ftraue, die in the ftreets, For by my foule, Henere acknowledge thee, Nor what is mine shall never do thee good: Trust too't, bethinke you, lle not be for sworne Exis.

Iuli. Is there no pittie fitting in the Cloudes, That fees into the bottome of my griefe? O lweet my Mother cast menot away, Delay this marriage, for amonth, a weeke, Or if you do not, make the Bridall bed In that dun Monument where Tybale lies.

Mo. Talke not to me, for He not speake a word, Exit. Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee.

Iul. O God!

O Nurse, how shall this be prevented? My Husband is on earth, my faith in heaven, How shall that faith returne againe to earth, Vnlesse that Husband send it me from heaten, By leaving earth ? Comfort me, counsaile me: Hlacke, alacke, that heaven should practise stratagems Vpon lo loft a subject as my selfe. What faift thoughtf thou not a word of toy? Some comfore Nurie.

Nov. Faith here it is, Romeo is banished, and all the world so nothing, That he dares note come backe to challenge your Or if he do, it needs must be by stealth. Then fince the case so ftands as now it doth, I thinke It best you married with the Counte, Ohie's a Lowly Gentleman: Remess a dish-clout to him; on Eagle Madam Hath not lo greene, lo quicke, lo faire an eye As Pau hath, beshow my very beart, I thinke you are happy in this second match, For it excels your fustion If it did not, Your first is dead, or twere as good he were,

As living here and you no vie of him. Int. Speakest thou from thy bears? Ner. And from my feele 200, Or elle beshrewthen both.

Iul. Amen.

Nar. What? Lul. Well thou half comfetted me marvelous mudy, Goin, and tell my Lady I am gone, Having displeased my Father, to Lawrence Cell, To make confession, and to be absolu'd.

Nur. Marrie I will, and this is wifely done. Int. Auncient damnarion, O most wicked fiend! It is more fin so wish me thus for sworne, Or to dispraise my Lord with that same tongue Which she hath praised him with above compare, So many thousand times? Go Countellor, Thou and my bosome henchforth thall be twaine, He to the Frier to know his remedic, If all else faile, my selfe hauepower to die. Excent

Euter Frier and Countie Paris.

FrL On Thursday sirithe time is very short. Par My Father Capulet will have it fo, And I am nothing flow to flack his haft.

Fri. You say you do not know the Ladies mind? Vncuen is the course, I like it not.

Pa. Immoderately the weepes for Tybalis death, And therfore have I little talke of Love, For Venus finites not in a house of teares. Now fir, her Father counts it dangerous That the doth give her forrow to much fway: And in his wisedome, hasts our marriage, To stop the inundation of her teares, Which too much minded by her felfe alone, May be put from her by focietie. Now doe you know the reaton of this has?

Fri. I would I knew not why it should be flow'd Looke fir, here comes the Lady towards my Cell. Enter Inless.

Par. Happily met, my Lady and my wife. Ist. That may be fir, when I may be a wife.

Per. That may be must be Lone, on Thursday next. Jul. What muft be Chall be.

Fri. That's a certaine text.

Par. Come you to make confession to this Fathar? Isl. To answere that, I should confesse to you.

Far. Do not denic to him, that you Loue me.

Jul. I will confesse to you that I Love him. Par. So will ye, I am fure that you Loue me. Inl. If I do lo, it will be of more price, Benig spoke behind your backe, then to your face. Par. Poor: foule, thy face is much abufd with teares.

ful. The tearer have got small victorie by that:
For it was bad inough before their spight.

Pa. Thou wrong 'ft it more then teares with that report.
Id., That Is no flaunder fir, which is a truth,

And what I spake, I spake it to thy face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou half flaundred it.
Id. It may be fo, for it is not mine owne.

Are you at leifure, Holy Father now, Or shall I come to you at evening Masse?

Fri. My lessure serves me pensive daughter now.
My Lord you must intreat the time alone.

Par. Godfheild: I should disturbe Deuotion, Ialies, on Thursday early will I rowse yee, Till then adue, and keepe this holy kisse. Exist Para.

Come weepe with me, past hope, past care, past helpe.

Fr. O Iuliet, I alreadie know thy griefe,
It ftreames me paff the compaffe of my with a
I heare thou must and nothing may protogue it,
On Thursday next be married to this Countie,

Int. Tell me not Frier that thou hearest of this, Valeffe thou tell me how I may prevent it: If in thy wifedome, thou can't give no helpe, Do thou but eall my resolution wife, And with his knife, He helpe it prefently. God toyn'd my heart, and Romeos, thou our hands, And ere this hand bythee to Romeo feal'd 1 Shall be the Labell to another Deede, Or my true heart with trecherous revolt, Tume to another, this shall slay them both a Therefore out of thy long experien'th time, Giue me some present counsell, or behold Twixe my extreames and me, this bloody knife Shall play the empeere, arbitrating that, Which the commission of thy yeares and art, Could to no iffue of true honour bring : Be not so long to speak, I long to die, If what thou speak it speake not of remedy.

Fri. Hold Daughter, I doe spie a kind of hope, Which craues as desperate an execution, As that is desperate which we would preuent. If rather then to marrie Countie Para Thou hast the strength of will to flay thy selse, Then is It likely thou wile vidertake A thinglike death to chide away this shame, That coap it with death himselse, to scape so it and if thou dar's, le give thee remedic.

I'd. Oh bid me leape, tather then martie Paris,
From of the Battlements of any Tower,
Or walke in the buff hairs of any Tower,
Or walke in the buff hairs of any Tower,
Or walke in the buff hairs of any Tower,
Or hide me nightly in a Charnell house,
Or coorded quite with dead mens rating bones,
With reckie shankes and yellow chappels stulls:
Or bid me go into a new made graue,
And hide me with a dead man in his graue,
Things that to heare them told, have made me tremble,
And I will doe it without feare or doubt.
To live an vinitained wife to my sweet Love,
Fire Holdshare, so home he were the any accordant

Fri. Hold then: goe home be merrie, give consent,
To matrie Parie I wenfday is to morrow.
To morrow night looke that thou he alone,
Let not thy Nurse lie with thee in thy Chamber:
Take thou this Violl being then in bed,
And this distilling liquor drinke thou off,
When presently through all thy veines shall run,

A cold and drowfie humour : for no pulse Shall keepe his native progresse, but surcease: No warmth, no breath shall testifie thou livelt. The Roses in thy lips and checkes shall fade To many ashes, the eyes windowes fall Like death when he shut up the day of life: Each part depriu'd of supple government, Shall fliffe and flarke, and cold appeare like death, And in this borrowed likenesse of shrunke death Thou shalt continue two and forty houres, And then awake, as from a pleafant fleepe. Now when the Bridegroome in the morning comes, To rowle thee from thy bed, there art thou dead : Then as the manner of our country is, In thy best Robes vncouer'd on the Beere. Be borne to buriall in thy kindreds grave: Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault, Where all the kindred of the Capulers lie. In the meane time against thou shalt awake, Shall Romes by my Letters know our drife, And hither shall be come, and that very night Shall Romro beare thee hence to Maniua And this shall free thee from this present shame, If no inconfiant toy nor womanish feare. Abate thy valour in the acting it. Iul. Giue me, giue me.O tell not me ofcare.

Int. Give me, give me. O tell not me of care.

Fri. Hold get you gone, be frong and profperouse.
In this refolue, He fend a Frier with speed.
To Mantua with my Letters to thy Lord.

In. Love give me strength, And strength shall helpe afford a Farewell deare father.

Enter Father Capulet, Mother, Nurse, and Serning men swo or three.

Cap So many guests invite as here are weit.

Strah, go hare me twenty cunning Cookes.

Ser. You shall have none ill sir, for Ile trie if they can licke their singers

Cap. How canst thou trie them so?

Ser. Marrie fir, 'tis an ill Cooke that cannot licke his owne fingers therefore he that cannot licke his fingers goes not with me

Cap. Go be gone, we shall be much unsurnishe for this time what is my Daughter gone to Frier Lawrence?

Nur Iforfooth.

Cap. Well he may chance to do fome good on her,
A pecuifh felfe-wild harlotty it is.

Exter fullet.

Nur See where the comes from thrife With merrie lonke.

Cap. How now my headstrong, Where have you bin gadding?

Iul. Where I have learnt me to repent the fin C difobedient opposition.

To you and your behefts, and am enjoyn'd By holy Lawrence, to fall profirate here,
To beg your pardon: pardon! befeech you.

Henceforward I ameuer rul'd by you.

Cap. Send for the Countie, goe tell him of this.

Ile haue this knot knit up to morrow morning.

Iul. I met the youthfull Lord at Lawrence Cell.
And gove him what becomed Love I might.
Not stepping ore the bounds of modestie.

Cop. Why I am glad on't, this is well, stand up,

This

This is as't should be let me fee the County : I marrie go I fay, and feech him hither. Now afore God, this reveren'd holy Frier, All our whole Cittie is much bound to lum,

Int. Nutle will you goe with me into my Closet, To helpe me fore fuch needfull ornaments, As you thinke he to furnish me to morrow?

Mo. No not till Thursday, there's time inough.

Fa. Go Nurle, go with her, Weele to Church to motrow.

Execut Islies and Neerfe.

Mo. We shall be short in our proussion,

Tis now neere night.

Fa Tush I will Airre about, And all things shall be well, I warrant thee wifes Go thou to Inlier, helpe to deckerp her, The not to bed to night, let me alone : He play the hulwife for this once. What ho? They are all forth, well I will walke my felfe To Countie Paris, to prepare him *p Against to morrow, my heart is wondrous light, Since this same way-ward Gyrle is foreclaim'd.

Excust Father and Masher

Exercit.

Enter Inliet and Nurse.

Iul. I thoseattires are best, but gentle Nurse I pray thee leave me to my felfe to night t For I have need of many Oryfons, To move the heavens to smile vpon my flate, Which well thou know'ft, is croffe and full of fin-Emer Ottocher.

Mo. What are you bufic horneed you my help? Iul. No Madam, we have cul'd fuch necellaries As are behoovefull for our flateto morrow ; Soplease you, let me now be left alone; And let the Nurse this night sit up with you, For I am fete, you have your hands full all, In this fo fudden bufineffe. Mo. Goodnight.

Get thee to bed and rest, for thou hast need.

Int Farewell: God knowes when we shall meete againe. I have a faint cold feare thrills through my velnes, That almost freezes vp the heate of fire s He call them backe againe to comfort me. Nurse, what should she do here? My dismall Sceane, I needs must all alone: Come Viall what if this mixture do not worke at all? Shall I be married then to morrow morning? No, no, this shall forbidit. Lie thou there, What if it be a poylon which the Frier Subtilly hath ministred to have me dead, Least in this marriage he should be dishonourd, Because he married me before to Romeo? Ifeareit is, and yet methinkes it should not, For he hath fill beene tried a holy man. How, if when I am laid into the Tombe, I wake before the time that Romeo Come to redeeme me? There's a fearefull point: Shall I not then be ftiffed in the Vault ? To whose soule mouth no healthsome ayre breaths in, And there die strangled ere my Romes comes Or if I live, is it not very like, The horrible conceit of death and night, Together with the terror of the place, As in a Vaulte, an ancient receptacle,

Where for thele many hundred yeares the bones Of all my buried Aunceftors are packs, Where bloody Tybals, yet but greene in earth, Lies fellring in his throw'd, where as they fay, At fome houses in the night, Spirits refort. Alacke, alacke, is it not like that i So early waking, what with loathforme frels, And firikes like Mandrakes torne our of the earth, That living mortalls hearing them, run mad. Oil walke, shall I not be diffraught, Inuironed with all these hidrous feares, And madly play with my forefathers 10 ynts? And plucke the mangled Tybalt from his fhrows? And in this rage, with fome great kinfmans bone, As (with a club) dash out my desperate braines Olooke, me thinks I fee my Cozins Choft, Seeking our Romeo that did fpic his body Vpon my Rapiers point : flay Tybali, flay; Romeo, Romeo, Romeo, here's drinke : I drinke to thee

Enter Lady of the bonfe and Nio fo.

Lady. Hold,

Take these keies, and fetch more spices Nurse. Ner. They call for Dates and Quinces in the Pafrie Enter old Capula.

Cap. Come, flir, flir, flir, The second Cocke hath Crow'd, The Curphew Bell hath rung, 'tis three a clocke Looke to the bakte meates, good Angelica. Spare not for coft.

Ner. Go you Cot-queane, go, Get you to bed, faith youle be licke to morrow

For this nights watching.

Cap. No not a white what? I have watcht ere now All night for leffe cause, and note beene licke.

La. I you have bin a Mouse-hunt in your time, But I will watch you from such watching now. Exit Lady and Narfe.

Cap. A lealous hood, a lealous hood, Now fellow, what there?

Enter three or foure with fitts, and logs, and bashas. Fel. Things for the Cooke fir, but I know not what Cap. Make haft, make halt, firrah, fetch drier Logs Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.

Fel, I have a head fir, that will find out logs,

And never trouble Peter for the matter. Cap. Masse and well faid a merrie horson, ha, Thou shalt be loggethead; good Father, tis day.

Plan Casaficke The Countie will be here with Mulieke Itraight,

For so he said he would, I heare him neere, Nurse, wife, what ho? what Nurse I say? Enter Nurfe.

Go waken Inliet, go and trim het vp. Ile go and that with Parushie, make haft, Make halt, the Budegroome, he is come already. Make hall I say.

Nur. Miftris, what Miftris? Inliete Fast I warrant her she. Why Lambe, why Lady, he you fluggabed, Why Loue I fay? Madam, sweet heart: why Bride? What not a word? You take your peniworths now Sleepe for a weeke, for the next night I warrant The Countie Paris hath fee up his rest, That you shall rell but little, God forgiue me : Martie and Amen: how found is the a fleepe?

I must needs wake her i Madam, Madam, Madam, I, let the Councie take you in your bed, Heele fright you vp ytaith. Will it not be? What drest, and in your clothes, and downe agains & I must needs wake you : Lady, Ledy, Lady ? Alas, alas, helpe, helpe, my Ladyes dead, Oh weladay, that ever I was borne, Some Aqua-vitz ho, my Lord, my Lady & Mo. What noise is heere? Enter Mitthe. Nur. O lamentable day.

Mo. What Is the matter?
Nur. Looke, looke, oh heavie day. Mo. O me, O me, my Child, my onely life : Revine, looke vp, or I will die with thee : Helpe, belpe, call helpe.

Exter Falber.

Fa. For shame bring luliet forth, her Lord is come. Ner. Shee's dead: deceast, shee's dead:alacke the day. M. Alacke the day, shee's dead, shee's dead, shee's dead. F4. Ha? Let me fee her:out alas fhee's cold.

Her blood is feeled and her soynes are friffe : Life and these lips have long bene sep erateda Death lies on her like an vnumely froft Vpon the swetest flower of all the field.

Nar. O Lamentable day! Mo. O wofull time.

Fa. Death that hath tane her hence to make me waile,

Ties vp my tongue, and will not let me speake.

Enter Frier and the Counsin. Fri. Come, is the Bride ready to go to Church? Fa. Ready to go, but neuer to returne. O Sonne, the night before thy wedding day, Hath death laine with thy wife : there the lies, Flower as the was, deflowed by him. Death is my Sonne in law, death is my Heire, My Daughter he hath wedded. I will die,

And leave him all life living, all is deaths. Pa. Have I thought long to feethis mornings face, And doth it give me fuch a fight as this?

Mo. Accur'ft, vnhappie, wretched hatefull day, Most miserable houre, that ere time faw In lafting labour of his Pilgrimage. But one, poore one, one poore and loving Child, But one thing to reloyce and folece in,

And cruell dearh hath catcht it from my fight. Nir. O wo,O wofull, wofull, wofull day, Most lamentable day, must wofull day, That ever, ever, I did yez behold. O day, O day, O dey, O hatefull day, Neuer was feene fo blacke a day as this: O wofull day, O wofull day.

Pa. Beguild, dinorced, wronged, spighted, flaime, Mon detestable death, by thee beguil'd,

By cruell, cruell thee quite overthrowne: Oloue, Olifemot life, but loue in death.

Fat. Defpis'd, diftreffed, hated, martir'd, kil'd, Vncomfortable time, why cam'ft thou now To murther, murther our folemnitte? O Child, O Child; my foule, and not my Child, Dead are shou, alacke my Child is dead And with my Child, my loyes are buried

Fri. Peace ho for shame, confusions : Care lines nos In thele confusions, heaven and your felfe Had part in this faire Maid, now heaven hath all, And all the better is it for the Maid: Your part in her, you could not keepe from death,

But heaven keepes his part in eternall life : The most you fought was her promotion, For twas your heaven, the shouldft be advant, And weepe ye now, feeing the is adman'it About the Cloudes, s: high as Heaven it felfer . O In this love, you love your Child fo ill, That you run mad, feeing that the is well, Shee's not well married, that lives married long, But fhee's best married, that dies married yong. Drie vp your teares, and flicke your Rosematie On this faire Coarle, and as the custome is, And in her best stray beare her to Church a For though some Nature bids all vs lament. Yet Natures reares are Reasons mertiment.

Fa. All things that we ordained Festivall, Turne from their office to blacke Funerall: Our instruments to melancholy Bells, Our wedding cheare, to a fad burnall Feaft : Our folemne Hymnes, to fullen Dyrges change: Our Bridall flowers ferue for aburied Coarle: And all things change them to the contrarie.

Fet. Sit go you in ; and Madam, go with him, And go fit Paris, every one prepare To follow this faire Coarfe unto her grave : The heavens do lowre vpon you, for some ill: More them no more, by croffing their high will. Exercise

Ms. Faith we may put vp out Pipes and be gone, Nar. Honest goodsellowes: Ah put vp, put vp,

Enter Romes.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering truth of sleepe,
My dreames presage some toyfull newes at band i
My bosomes L. fits lightly in his throne;
And all this and ay an vecustom'd spirit,
Lifts me about the ground with cheerefull thoughts.
I dream my Lady came and sound me dead,
(Strange dreame that gives a dead man leave to thinke,)
And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reuris'd and was an Emperour.
Ah me, how sweet is love it selfe posses,
When but loves shadowes are so rich in joy.

Enter Remee's man.
Newes from Verena, how now Balthazer?
Doft thou not bring me Letters from the Frier of How doth my Lady? Is my Father well?
How doth my Lady Inher? that I aske againe,
For nothing can be ill, if the be well.

Man. Then the is well, and nothing can be ill. Her body fleepes in Capels Monument, And her immortall part with Angels liue, I faw her laid low in her kindreds Vault, And presently tooke Poste to tell it you:

O pardon me for bringing these ill newes, Since you did leave it for my office Sir.

Rem. Is it even so?
Then I denie you Starres.
Thou knowest my lodging, get the inke and paper,
And hire Post-Horses, I will hence to night.

Max. I do beleech you fir, have patience; Your lookes are pale and wild, and do import Some miladuenture.

Rom. Tufh, thou art deceiu'd.
Leaue me, and do the thing I bid thee do.
Haft thou no Letters to me from the Frier?
21an. No my good Lord.

Exit Man.

Rom. Mo matter : Get thee gone, And hyre those Horses, He be with thee straight. Well Inlier, I will be with thee to night : Lets see for meanes: O mischiese thou art swift, To enter in the thoughts of desperate men: I do remember an Appothecarie, And here abouts dwells, which late I noted In tattred weeds, with ouerwhelming browes, Culling of Simples, meager were his lookes, Sharpe miserie had worne him to thebones : And in his needie shop a Tortoyrs hung. An Allegater fluft, and other skins Of ill thap'd fifthes, and about his thelues, A beggerly account of emptie boxes, Greene earthen pots, Bladders, and mustie seedes, Remnants of packthred, and old cakes of Roles Were thinly scattered to make up a shew. Noting this penury, to my felfe I faid, An if a man did need a poylon now, Whose sale is persent death in Mantue, Here lives a Caitiffe wretch would fell it him. O this same thought did but fore-run my need, And this fame needie man must fell it me.

As I remember, this should be the house, Being holy day, the beggers shop is shut. What ho? Appothecarie?

App. Who call is lowed?

Rom. Come hither man, I fee that thou art poors, Hold, there is forthe Duckets, let me have
A dram of poylon, such foons speeding gears,
As will disperse it selfethrough all the veines,
That the life-wearie-taker may fall dead,
And that the Trunke may be discharged of breath,
As violently, as hastic powder fier d
Doth hurty from the latall Canons wombe.

App. Such mortall drugs I have, but Afanta law

Is death to any he, that viters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare and full of wretchednesse, And sear it to die? Famine is in thy checkes, Need and opression starueth in thy eyes, Contempt and beggery hangs upon thy backel. The world is not thy striend, nor the worlds laws. The world affords no law to make thee rich. Then be not poore, but breaks it, and take this.

App. My pourty, but not my will confents.

Rom. I pray thy pourty, and not thy will.

App. Put this in any liquid thing you will.

And drinke it off, and if you had the strength

Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight.

Rom. There's thy Gold,
Worse poyson to mens soules,
Doing more murther in this losthsome world,
Then these poore compounds that thou maiest not sell.
I sell thee poyson, thou has sold me none,
Farewell, buy sood, and get thy selfe in sess.
Come Cordiall, and not poyson, go with me

Enter Frier lobn to Frier Lawrence.

Iohn. Holy Franciscan Frier, Brother, ho?

Enter Frier Lawrence.

Law. This same should be the voice of Frier Iron.
Welcome from Maneua, what sayes Romes?
Or if his mind be writ, give me his Letter.

Iohn. Going to find a bare-foote Brothel out,
One of our order to affociate me,
Here in this Citie visiting the fick.
And finding him, the Seerchers of the Towne
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pessilence did raigne,
Seal'd up the doores, and would not let us forth,
So that my speed to Manusa there was said.

Law, Who bare my Letter then to Respect to him. I could not fend in there it is agains, Nor get a messenger to bring is thee, So fearefull were they of infection.

Law. Vahappie Fortune: by my Brotherhood
The Letter was not nice, but full of charge,
Of deare import, and the negleding it
May do much danger: Frier loba go hence,
Get me an Iron Crow, and bring it firsight
Vnto my Cell.

Ishn. Brother He go and bring it thee.

Law. Now must I to the Monument alone,
Within this three houres will faire Iuliet wake,
Shee will beshrew me much that Rosses
Hath had no notice of these accidents:
But I will write agains to Manue,

Entir

And

And keepe her at my Cell till Roman come, Poore lining Coarfe, clos'd in a dead mans Tombe,

Par. Give me thy Torch Boy, hence and fland aloft, Yet put it out, for I would not be feene: Vnder young young Trees lay thee all along, Holding thy care close to the hollow ground, So shall no foot you the Churchyard tread, Being loase, vnhirme with digging vp of Graues, But thou shalt heare it: whisle then tome, As signall that thou heatest some thing approach, Give me those showers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the Churchyard, yet I will adventure.

PaSweet Flower with flowers thy Bridall bed Iftrevi:
O woe, thy Canopie is dust and stones,
Which with sweet water nightly I will dewe,
Or wanting that, with teares destild by moness
The obsequies that I for thee will keepe,
Nightly shall be, to strew thy grane, and weepe.

Whister Boy.

The Bny gives warning, something doth approach,
What curfed foot wanders this vayes to night,
To croffe my obsequies, and true loves right!
What with a Torch? Mussle me night a while

Enter Romeo and Peter.

Rom. Give me that Mattocke, & the wrenching Iron, Hold take this Letter, early in the morning See thou deliver it to my Lord and Father, Give me the light; vpon thy life I charge thee, What ere thou hear'st or feeth, stand all aloofe, And do not interrupt me in my course. Why I descend into this bed of death, Is partly to behold my Ladies face: But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger, A precious Ring: a Ring that I must vie, In deare employment, therefore hence be gone: But if thou ieslous doft returne to prie In what I further shall intend to do. By hexuen I will teare thee toynt by ioynt, And frew this hungry Churchyard with thy limbs a The time, and my intents are fausge wilde: More herce and more inexorable tarre, Then emptie Tygers, or the roaring Sea.

Per. I will be gone fir, and not trouble you

Re. So shalt thou shew me friendship: take thou that,
Liue and be prosperous, and farewell good fellow.

Pet. For all this same, He hide me here about, His lookes I scare, and his intents I doubt.

Rom. Thou detestable mawe, thou wombe of death, Gorg'd with the deatest morfell of the earth:
Thus I enforce thy rotten I awes to open,
And in despight, lie cram thee with more food.

Par. This is that banifut haughtic Mountague,
That murdred my Loues Cozin; with which griefe,
It is supposed the faire Creature died,
And here is come to do some villanous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.
Stop thy unhallowed toyle, vile Mountague:
Can vengeance be pursued surther then death?
Condemned vallaine, I do apprehend thee.
Obey and go with me, for thou must die,

Rom. I must indeed, and therfore came I hither:
Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man,
Flie hence and leave me, thinke vpon those gone,
Let them affright thee. I befeech thee Youth,
Put not an other sin vpon my head,
By vrging me to surie. O be gone,
By heaven I love thee better then my selfe,
For I come hither arm'd against my selfe:
Stay not, be gone, live, and hereaster say,
A mad mans mercy bid thee run away,
Par. I do defie thy commisseration,
And apprehend thee for a Fellon here.

And apprehend thee for a Fellon here.

Ro. Wilt thou prouoke me of Then have at thee Boy.

Per. O Lord they fight, I will go call the Watch.

Pa. O I am flaine, if thon be mercifull,

Pa. Of am flatne, it toon be mercitall,
Open the Tombe, lay me with Inlier.
Rom. In faith I will, let me perule this face:
Mercania kinfman, Noble Countie Para,
What faid my man, when my betoffed foulo
Did not attend him as we rode? I thinke
He told me Para floudd have married Inlier.

He told me Paris should have married Inline.
Said he not so? Or did I dreame it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talke of Inline,
To thinke it was so? O give me thy hand,
One, writ with me in sowre missortunes booke.
He burse thee in a triumphant grave.
A Grave; O no, a Lanthorne; slaughtred Youth:

For here lies Inlet, and her beautie makes
This Vault a feafing presence full of light.
Death lie thou there, by a dead man inter'd.
How oft when men are at the point of death,
Haue they beene merrie? Which their Keepers call
A lightning before death? Oh how may 1
Call this a lightning? O my Loue, my Wife,
Death that hath suckt the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet you thy Beautie.
Thou are not conquer'd: Beauties ensigne yet
Is Crymson in thy lips, and in thy cheekes,

And Deaths pale flags s not advanced there.

Tybalt, ly it thou there in thy bloudy sheet?

O what more favout can I do to thee,

Then with that hand that cut thy youth in twaine,

To funder his that was thy enemie?

Forgiue me Cozen. / h deste Inlet:
Why art thou yet foliate? I will beleeve,
Shall I beleeve, that volubilizatial death is amorous?
And that the leane abhorsed Monster keepes

The chere in darke to be his Paramour?

For feare of that, I fill will fray with thee,
And neuer from this Pallace of dym night
Depart agains: come lie thou in my armes,

Heere's to thy health, where ere thou tumbiert in.
O true Appothecarie!

Thy drugs are quicke. Thus with a kiffe I die. Depart againe; here,here will I remaine, With Wormes that are thy Chambermaides: O here

Will I fet up my enerlafting reft:
And finake they oke of inaufpicious starres
From this world-wearied slesh: Eyes looke your last?
Armes take your last embrace: And lips, O you
The doores of breath, scale with a sighteous kisse
A datelesse bargaine to ingrossing death:

Come bitter conduct, come vníauoury guide, Thou desperate Pilot, now at once ruo on The dashing Rocks, thy Sea-ficke wearie Barke: Heere's to my Loue. O true Appothecary:

882

Thy drugs are quicke. Thus with a kiffe I dic. Enter Frier with Lantborne, Crow, and Spade. Fri. St. Francis be my speed, how oft to night Have my old fert flumbled at graves ? Who's there? Man. Here's one, a Friend, & one that knowes you well.

Fri. Bliffe be vpon you. Tell me good my Friend
What Torch is youd that vainely lends his light

To grobs, and eyeleffe Sculles? As I difcerne, It burneth in the Capels Monument Man. It doth so holy fir.

And there's my Master, one that you love.

Fri. Who isit?

Man. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he bin there? Man. Full halfe an houre. Fri. Go with me to the Vault.

Man. I dare not Sir: My Master knowes not but I am gone hence, And fearefully did menace me with death,

If I did flay to looke on his entents. Frs. Stay, then] le go alone, seares comes vpon me.

O much I feare some ill valuckie thing. Man. As I did fleepe under this young tree here, I dreamt my maister and another fought,

And that my Maitler flew him.

Fri. Romeo.

Alacke, alacke, what blood is this which flames The stony entrance of this Sepulcher? What meane these Masterlesse, and goarie Swords To lie discolour'd by this place of peace? Romeo, on pale : who cife? what Paris too? And steept in blood? Ah what an vn knd houre Is guiltie of this lamentable chance? The Lady Stirs.

Iul. O comfortable Frier, where's my Lord? I do remember well where I should be: And there I am, where is my Romes?

Fri. I heare some noyle Lady, come from that nest Of death, contagion, and vnnaturall fleepe, A greater power then we can contradict Hath thwarted our entents, come, come away, Thy husband in thy bosome there lies dead: And Paris too: come le dispose of thee, Among a Sifterhood of holy Nunnes: Stay not to question, for the watch is comming. Come, go good Iulier, I dare no longer ft ay.

Iul. Go get thee hence, for I will notuzway, What's here? A cup clos'd in my true lo:es hand? Poyson I see hath bin his timelesse end O churle, drinke all and left no friendly drop, To helpe me after, I will kille thy lips, Happlie some po ylon yet doth hang on them. To make me die wth a restorative.

Thy lips are warme.

Enter Bo; and Wutch.

maich. Lead Boy, which svay ? Iul. Yea noise?

Then ile be briefe. Ohappy Dagger. 'Tis in thy sheath, there rust and let me die Kils berfeife.

Boy. This is the place, There where the Torch doth burne Watch. The ground is bloody, Scarch about the Churchyard Go force of you, who ere you find attach. Pittifull fight, here lies the Countie flaine, And latiers bleeding, warme and newly dead Who here hath laine thefe two dayes buried, Go tell the Prince, runne to the Capulets, Raile vp the Mountagues, force others fearch, We fee the ground whereon thefe woes do lye, But the true ground of all thele pitcous vices, We cannot without circumftane descry.

Enter Romes Imas.

Watch. Here's Komeo'r man, We found him in the Churchyard.

Con. Hold him in fafety, till the Prince come hither. Enter Frier and another Wetchman.

3. War. Here is a Frier that trembles, fighes, and weepes We tooke this Mattocke and this Spade from him, As he was comming from this Church-yard fide.

Con. A great suspition, Ray the Frie too. Enter the Prince.

Prin. What misaduenture is so earely vp. That calls our person from our mornings reft?

Enter Capulet and bis Wife.

Cap. What should it be that they so shrike abroad? Wife. O the people in the streete cric Romeo. Some Julies, and some Paris, and all runne With open outery toward out Monument.

Pri. What feare is this which starties in your eares? Wat. Soueraigne, here lies the Countie Paris Daine,

And Romeo dead, and luiet dead before, Warnie and new kill'd.

Prin. Scarch.

Seeke, and know how, this foule murder comes. War. Here is a Frier, and Slaughter'd Romess man, With Instruments upon them fit to open

These dead mens Tombes.

Cap. O heaven!

O wife looke how our Danghter bleedes! This Dagger hath miltaine, for loe his houle Is empty on the backe of Mountaque, And is misheathed in my Daughters bosome. Wife. Ome, this fight of death, is as a Bell

That warnes my old age to a Sepulcher. Enter Mountaque.

Pri. Come Mountague, for thou art early vp To feethy Sonne and Herre, now early downe.

Moun. Alas my liege, my wife is dead to night, Griefe of my Sonnes exile hath flopt her breathe What further woe conspires against my age?

Prin Looke: and thou shalt see.

Mour. Othou vnrought, what manners in is this, To presse before thy Father to a grave?

Prin. Seale up the mouth of outra ge for a while, Till we can cleare thele ambiguities, And know their spring, their head, their true descent, And then will I be generall of your woes, And lead you even to death? meane time forbeate, And let mischance be flaue to patience,

Bring forth the parties of fuspition. Frs. I am the greatest, able to doe least, Yet most suspealed as the time and place Doth make against me of this direfull murther: And heere I stand both to impeach and purge

My felfe condemned, and my felfe excus'd. Prin. Then say at once, what thou doft know in this? Fri. I will be briefe, for my short date of breath

Is not fo long as is a tedious tale. Romeo there dead, was husband to that hair, And the there dead, that's Remecs faithfull wife:

I married them; and their stolne matriage day Was Tybalts Doomesday: whose vnrimely death Banish'd the new-made Bridegroome from this Citie: For whom (and not for Tybalt) Iuliet pinde. You, to remoue that fiege of Greefe from her, Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce To Countie Pars Then comes fhe to me, And (with wilde lookes) bid me deuise some meanes To rid her from this fecond Marriage, Or in my Cell there would the kill her felfe Then gaile I her (fo Tutor'd by my Art) A fleeping Potion, which to rooke effect As I intended, for it wrought on her The forme of death. Means time, I writ to Romeo, That he should hirher come, as this dyre night, To helpe to take her from her botrowed grave, Being the time the Potions force should cease. But he which bore my Letter, Frier lobn, Was flay'd by accident; and yesternight Return'd my Letter backe. Then all alone, At the prefixed houre of her waking, Came I to take her from her Kindreds vault, Meaning to keepe her closely at my Cell, Till I conveniently could fend to Romen. But when I came (some Minute ere the sime Ofher awaking) heere vntimely lay The Noble Paru, and true Romeo dead.
Shee wakes, and I intreated her come foorth, And beare this worke of Heaven, with patience: But then, a noyle did scarre me from the Tombe, And the (too desperate) would not go with me, But (as it feemes) did violence on her felfe. All this I know, and to the Marriage her Nurle is privy: And if ought in this miscarried by my fault, Let my old life be facrific'd, some house before the time, Vnto the rigour of severeft Law.

Prin. We still haue knowne thee for a Holy man. Where's Romeo's man? What can he fay to this? Boy. I brought my Master news of Inlies death,

And then in poste he came from Muntue To this same place, to this same Monument, This Letter he early bid me give his Father, And threatned me with death, going in the Vault, If I departed not, and left him there.

Proi. Giuc me the Letter, I will look on it Where is the Counties Page that rais'd the Watch? Sirra, what made your Mafter in this place?

Page. He came with flowres to frew his Ladies grave, And bid me stand aloofe, and so I did: Anon comes one with light to ope the Tombe, And by and by my Mailter drew on him, And then I ran away to call the Warch.

Prin. This Letter doth make good the Friers words, Their course of Love, the tydings of her death : And heere he writes, that he did buy a poyfon Of a poore Pothecarie, and therewithall Came to this Vault to dye, and lye with Iulier. Where be these Enemies? Capulet, Mountague, See what a scourge is laide upon your hate. That Heaven finds meanes to kill your loyes with Loue: And I, for winking at your discords too, Have loft a brace of Kinfmen : All are punish'd.

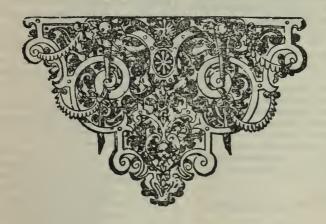

Cap. O Brother Mountague, give me thy hand, This is my Daughters ioynture, for no more Can I demand.

Moun But I can give thee more . For I will raise her Statue in pure Gold, That whiles Verona by that name is knownes There shall no figure at that Rate be set. As that of True and Faithfull Juliet.

Cap As rich shall Romeo by his Lady ly. Poore facrifices of our enimity.

Prin. A glooming peace this morning with it brings, The Sunne for forrow will not thew his head ; Go hence, to have more talke of these sad things, Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished. For neuer was a Storte of more Wo, Then this of Julies, and her Romeo. Exernt omnes

2 Thou are going to Lord Tomons Fraft.

Apr. I, to fee meate fill Knaues, and Wine hert fooles. Farthee well, farthee well.

Ape. Thou art a Foole to bid me farewell twice.

2 Why Apeniania ?

Ape. Should'A have kept one to thy felfe, for I meene to give thee none

I Hangthy selfe.

Ape. No I will do nothing at thy bidding: Make thy requests to thy Friend.

2 Away vnpesceable Dogge,

Or He spurne thee hence.

Ape. I will flye like a dogge, the beeles ath'Affe.

I Hee's opposite to humanity.

Comes shall we in;

And tafte Lord Timous bountie : he out-goes

The verie heart of kindnesse.

2 Hepowies it out : Plurus the God of Gold Is but his Steward: no meede but he repayes Senen-fold aboue it felfe : No guift to him, But breeds the giver a returne : exceeding All vie of quittance.

I The Noble minde he carries.

That ever govern'd men.

a Long may he live in Fortunes. Shall we in? He keepe you Company. Exeunt.

Hoboges Playing load Mufiche.

A great Banquet for a'd on : and then, Enter Lord Timon, the States, the Athenian Lords, Ventigius which Timon redeem'd from prison. Then comes dropping ofice all Ape. mantus discontentedly like bimselfe.

Ventig. Most honoured Timon, It hath pleas'd the Gods to remember my Pathers age, And call him to long peace: He is gone happy, and has left merich: Then, as in gratefull Vertue I am bound To your free heart, I do returne those Talents Doubled with thankes and ferrice, from whose helps I deriu'd libertie.

Tim. O by no meanes, Honest Vernigius: You mistake my love,

I gaue

Igane it freely ever, and ther's none Can truely fay he glues, if he receives: If our betters play at that game, we must not dare To imitate them; feults that are rich are faire.

Von. ANoble spirit.

Tim. Nay my Lords, Ceremony was but deuis'd at first To fet a gloffe on faint deeds, hollow welcomes, Recanting goodnesse, forry ere 'cis showne: But where there istrue friendship, there needs none. Pray fit, more welcome are ye to my Fortunes, Then my Fortunes to me.

1. Lord. My Lord, we alwaies have confest it. Aper. Ho ho, confest it! Handg dit? Have you not? Time. O Apermantus, you are welcome. Aper. No: You shall not make me welcome:

I come to have thee thrust me out of doores.

Tim. Fie, th'art a churle, ye have got a humour there Does not become a man, 'tis much too blame ! They say my Lords, Irafuror bresis oft, But youd man is verie angrie. Go, let him have a Table by himfelfe: For he does weither affect companie,

Nor is he fit for't indeed. Apor. Let me flayat thine apperill Times,

I come to observe, I give thee warning on't.

Tim. I take no heede of thee : Th'art an Athenian, therefore welcome: I my felfe would have no power,

Aper. I scome thy meate, 'twould chooke me : for I prythee let my meate make thee filent.

should nere flatter thee. Oh you Gods! What a number of men eats Timon, and he fees 'em not ? It greeues me to fee fo many dip there meate in one mans blood, and all the madneffe is, he cheeres them vp too. I wonder men dare trust themselves with men. Me thinks they should ennite them without knives, Good for there meate, and safer for their lives. There's much example for't, the fellow that fits next him, now parts bread with him, pledges the breath of him in a diulded, draught : is the readiest man to kill him, Tas beene proved, if I were a huge man Ishould feare to drinke at meales, least they should spie my wind-pipes dangerous noates, great men thould drinke with harnelle on their throases.

Tim. My Lord in heart : and let the health go round-2. Lord. Let it flow this way my good Lord.

Aper . Flow this way? A brave fellow. He keepes his tides well, those healths will make thee and thy Rate looke ill , Timon

Heere's that which is too weake to be a singer, Honest water, which nere left man i'th'mire : This and my food are equals, there's no ods, Peafts are to proud to give thanks to the Gods.

Apermantin Grace. Immortali Gods, I crave no pelfe, I pray for no man but my selfe, Graunt I may never prove fo fond, To trust man on his Oath or Bond. Or a Harlot for her weeping, Or a Dogge that feemer afleeping, Or a keeper with my freedome, Or my friends if I freeld need em. Amen. Sofallioo'e: Richmen fin, and I car root.
Much good dich thy good heart, Apermantus Tim. Captaine.

Alcibiades, your hearts in the field now.

Alci. My heart is ever at your feruice, my Lord. Tim. You had rather beat a breakefast of Enemies, then a dinner of Friends.

Ale. So they were bleeding new my Lord there's no meat like 'em, I could wish my best friend at such a Feast. Aper. Would all those Flatterers were thine Enemies then, that then thou might'ft kill 'em : & bid me to 'em. 8. Lord. Might we but have that happinelle my Lord, that you would once vie our hearts, whereby we might expresse some part of our zeales, we should thinke our selves for ever perfect.

Timon. Oh no doubt my good Friends, but the Gods themselves have provided that I shall have much helpe from you: how had you beene my Friends elfe. Why have you that chatitable title from thousands ? Did not you chiefely belong to my heart? I have told more of you to my felfe, then you can with modestic speake in your owne behalfe. And thus farre I confirme you. Oh you Gods (thinke I,) what need we have any Friends; if we should nere have need of ein? They were the most needlesse Crestures liuing; should we nete haue vie for 'em? And would most resemble sweete Instruments hung vp in Cafes, that keepes there founds to themfelues. Why I have often wisht my selfe poorer, that I might come neerer to you : we are borne to do benefits. And what better or properer can we call our owne, then the riches of our Friends? Oh what a pretious comfort'tis, to have fo many like Brothers commanding one anothers Fortunes. Oh loyes, e'nemade away er't can be borne : mine eies cannot hold out waterme thinks to forget their Faults. I drinke to you.

ofper. Thou weep'A to make them drinke, Timon. 2. Lord. Toy had the like conception in out eles.

And at that instant, like a babe sprung vp.

Aper. Ho, ho: I laugh to thinke that babe a baftard 3. Lord. I promise you my Lord you mou'd me much. Aper. Much.

Sound Tucker. Enter the Maskers of Amazons, with Luses in their bands , danneting and playing .

7im. What my anes that Trumpe? How now ?

Enter Seruant.

Ser. Please you my Lord, there are certaine Ladies Most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies? what are their wils?

Ser. There comes with them a fore-runner my Lord, which beares that office, to fignifie their pleasures. Im. I pray let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid with the Maske of Ladies.

Cap. Haile to thee worthy Timon and to all that of his Bountles tafte: the five best Sencesa cknowledge thee their Patron, and come freely to gratulate thy plentious bosome.

There taft, touch all pleas'd from thy Table rife:

They onely now come but to Feast thine eiesTime. They'r wecome all, let 'em haue kind admittance. Muficke make their welcome.

Luc. You see my Lord, how ample y'are belou'd.

Aper. Hoyday,
What a sweepe of vanitie comes this way. They daunce? They are madwomen,

Like

Like Madnesse is the glory of this life,
As this pompe shewes to a little oyle and roote.
We make our selves Fooles, to disport our selves,
And spend our Flatteries, to drinke those men,
Vpon whose Age we voyde it vp agen
With poysonous Spight and Enuy.
Who lives, that's not deprayed, or deprayes;
Who dyes, that beares not one spurne to their graves
Of their Friends guist:
I should seare, those that dance before me now,
Would one day sumpe vpon me; Tas bene done,
Men shut their doores against a setting Sunne.

The Lords rife from Table, with much adoring of Timon, and to from their loues, each fingle out an Amazon, and all Dance, men with women, a loftic straine or two to the Heboyes, and ccase.

Tim. You have done our pleasures
Much grace (faire Ladies)
Set a faire fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not halfe so beautifull, and kinde:
You have added worth vntoo't, and luster,
And entertain'd me with mine owne device.
I am to thanke you for't.

a Lord. My Lord you take vs even at the best.

Aper Faith for the worst is fifthy, and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet attends you.

Please you to dispose your selues.

All La. Most chankfully, my Lord. Exe

Tim. Flauisa. Fla. My Lord.

Tim. The little Casket bring me hither.
Fiz. Yes, my Lord. More lewels yet?
There is no croffing him in a humor,

Elfe I should tell him well, yfaith I should; When all's spent, hee'ld be cross then, and he could.

Tis pitty Bounty had not eyes behinde, That man might ne're be wretched for his minde, Exn.

1 Lord. Where be out men? Ser. Heere my Lord, in readinesse. 2 Lord. Out Horses.

2 Lord. Our Horses. Tim. Omy Friends:

I have one word to fay to you: Looke you, my good L.
I must intreat you honour me so much,
As to advance this sewell, accept it, and weare it,

Kinde my Lord.

1 Lord. I am so farre already in your guists.

All. So are weall.

Enter a Setuant.

Ser. My Lord, there are certaine Nobles of the Senate newly alighted, and come to visit you.

Tim. They are fairely welcome.

Enter Flanisus.

Fls. I beseech your Honor, vouchsafe mea word, it does concerne you neere.

Tim. Neere? why then another time He heare thee. I prythee let's be prouided to shew them entertainment,

Fla. I scatse know how.

Enter ans: ber Serwant.

Ser. May it please your Honor, Lord Lucius (Out of his free loue) hath presented to you Foure Milke-white Horses, trapt in Silver.

Tim. I shall accept them fairely : let the Presents Be worthily entertain'd. Enter a third Servant.

Hownow? What newes !

3. Ser. Please you my Lord, that honourable Gentleman Lord Lucullus, entreats your companie to morrow, to hunt with him, and ha's sent your Honour two brace of Grey-hounds.

Tim. He hont with him,

And let them be receiu'd, not without faire Reward.

Fla. What will this come to?

He commands we to provide, and give great guifts, and all out of an empty Coffer t

Nor will be know his Purfe, or yeeld me this, To thew blm what a Begger his heart is, Being of no power to make his withes good.

His promises flye so beyond his state, That what he speaks is all in debt, he ows for eu'ry word: He is so kinde, that he now payes interest for't;

His Land's put to their Bookes. Well, would I were Gently put out of Office, before I were for dout:

Happier is he that has no friend to feede, Then such that do e'ne Enemies exceede.

I bleed inwardly for my Lord.

Tim. You do your felues much wrong,
You bate too much of your owne merits.

Heere my Lord, a trifle of our Loue.

a Lord. With more then common thankes

I will receyve it.
3. Lord. Ohe's the very foule of Bounty

Tim. And now I remember my Lord, you gave good words the other day of a Bay Courser I rod on. Til yours because you lik'd it.

1. L. Oh, I befeech you pardon mee, my Lord, in that. Tim. You may take my word my Lord: I know oo man can iustly prasse, but what he does affect. I weight my Friends affection with mine owne: lle tell you true, lle call to you.

All Lor. Onone so welcome.

Tim I take all, and your feuerall vifitations. So kinde to heart, 'tis not enough to give. Me thinkes, I could deale Kingdomes to my Friends, And nere be wearie. Alcibiades, Thou are a Soldiour, therefore fildome rich, It comes in Charttieto thee: for all thy living Ismong'st the dead rand all the Lands thou hast Lye in a pitcht field.

Alc. I, defil'd Land, my Lord.

1. Lord. We are so versuously bound.

Tim. And so am I to you. 2. Lord. So infinitely endeer'd.

Tim. All to you. Lights, more Lights, 1 Lord. The best of Happines, Honor, and Fortunes

Kcepe with you Lord Timon.

Tim. Ready for his Friends.

Exercise Lords

Aper. What a coiles heere, seruing of beckes, and inting our of bummes. I doubt whether their Legges be worth the summes that are given for 'em.

Friendships full of dregges,

Me thinkes falle hearts, should never have found legges.
Thus honest Fooles lay out their wealth on Curties.

Tim. Now Aperment in (if thou wert not fullen)

I would be good to thee.

Appr. No. Ile nothing; for if I should be brib'd too, there would be none lest to raile vponthee, and then thou wouldst since the faster. Thou giu'st so long Timon (I feare me) thou will give away thy selfe in paper shortly. What needs these Feasts, pompes, and Vaine-glories?

T:33.

Frit

Tim. Nay, and you begin to rails on Societie once, I am fworne not to give regard to you. Farewell, & come with better Musicke.

Aper. So: Thou wilt not heate mee now, thou shalt not then. He locke thy heaven from thee: Oh that mens eares should be

To Counsell deafe, but not to Flatterie.

Enter a Senctor.

Sen, And late five thousand : to Varre and to Isidore He owes nine thousand, besides my former summe, Which makes it five and twenty. Still in motion Of raging wastes It cannot hold, it will not. If I want Gold, Reale but a beggers Dogge, And give it Tomon, why the Dogge coines Gold If I would fell my Horse, and buy twenty moe Better then he; why give my Horse to Timon. Aske nothing, give it him, it Foles me ftraight And able Horses : No Porter at his gate, But rather one that smiles, and full invites All that passe by. It cannot hold, no reason Can found his state in safety. Caphia hoa, Caphullay. Enter Caphis.

Ca. Heere fir, what is your pleasure.

Sen. Get on your cloake, & hast you to Lord Timen, Importune him for my Moneyes, be not ceeft With flight deniall; nor then filene'd, when Commend me to your Master, and the Cap Playes in the right hand, thus : but tell him, My Vies cry to me ; I must ferue my turne Out of mine owne, his dayes and times are pall, And my reliances on his fracted dates Haue fmit my credit. I loue, and honour him, But must not breake my backe, to heale his finger. Immediate are my needs, and my releefe Must not be tost and turn'd to me in words, But finde supply immediate. Get you gone, Put on a most importunate aspect, A vilage of demand : for I do feare When every Feather stickes in his owne wing, Lord Timon will be left a naked guli, Which flashes now a Phoenix, get you gone.

CA. I go lir. Sen. I go fir? Take the Bonds along with you, And have the dates in. Come.

Ca. I will Sir.

Sen. Go.

Enter Secward, wish wany billes in bu hand. Stew. No care, no stop, so senselesse of expence, That he will neither know how to maintaine it, Nor cease his flow of Riot. Takes no accompt How things go from him, nor refume no care Of what is to continue: neuer minde, Was to be lo vnwile, to be lo kinde. What shall be done, he will not heare, till feele: I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting, Fye, fie, fie, fie.

Enter Capbia, Isidore, and Varro. Cap. Good even Varro: what, you come for money? Var. Is't not your bufineffe too

Cap. It is, and yours too, I fidore?

Ifid. It is fo.

Cap. Would we were all discharged,

Var. I feate it,

Cap. Heere comes the Lord.

Enser Timon, and bis Traine.

Tims. So soone as dinners done, wee'l forth againe My Alcibiades. With me, what is your will?

Cap. My Lord, heere is a note of cettaine ducs.

Tim. Dues? whence are you?

Cap. Of Athens heere, my Lord. Tim. Go to my Steward.

Cup. Please it your Lordship, he hath put me off To the succession of new dayes this moneth: My Master is awak'd by great Occasion, To call vpon his owne, and humbly prayes you, That with your other Noble parts, you'l fuite, In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest Friend,

I prythee but repaire to me next morning.

Cap. Nay, good my Lord.

Tim. Containe thy selfe, good Friend. Var. One Varrous servant, my good Lord.

Ifid From Ifidore, he humbly prayes your speedy pay-

Cap. If you did know my Lord, my Masters wants.

Var. Twas due on forfeytute my Lord, fixe weekes,

If Your Steward puts me off my Lord, and I Am lent expressely to your Lordship. Tim. Giue me breath:

I do befeech you good my Lords keepe on, He waite vpon you instantly. Come hither . pray you How goes the world, that I am thus encountred With clamorous demands of debt, broken Bonds, And the detention of long fince due debts Against my Honor?

Stem. Please you Gentlemen, The time is vnagreeable to this bufineffe: Your importunacie cease, till after dinner, That I may make his Lordship understand: Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so my Friends, see them well entertain'd. Stew. Pray (raw neere.

Enter Apemantus and Foole.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the Foole with Apemantas, let's ha fome fport with 'em.

Var. Hang him, hee'l abuse vs.

Isid. A plague vpon him dogge.

Var. How doft Foole?

Ape. Dost Dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. I speake not to thee.

Apr. No 'tis to thy felfe. Come away.

16. There's the Foole hangs on your backe already. Ape. No thou fand'it fingle, th'art not on him yet.

Cap. Where's the Foole now ?

Ape. He last ask'd the question. Poore Rogues, and Viurers men, Bauds betweene Gold and want.

Al. What are we Apemantin ?

Apr. Asses.

Ape. That you ask me what you are, & do not know your selues. Speake to 'em Foole,

Foole. How do you Gentlemen? All. Gramercies good Foole:

How does your Mistris?

Foole

Pools. She's c'ne feeling on water to scal'd such Chickens as you are. Would we could fee you at Counth. Apr. Good, Gramercy.

Enter Page.

Foole. Looke you, heere comes my Mafters Page. page. Why how now Captaine? what do you in this wife Company.

How doft thou Apermantal

Ape. Would I had a Rod In my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably

Boy. Prychee Apomania reade me the superscriptiop of thefe Letters, I know not which is which.

Apr. Canft not read?

Poge No.

Aps There will little Learning dye then that day thou are hang'd. This is to Lord Timon, this to Alcibiades, Go thou was't borne a Ballard, and thou't dye a Bawd.

Page. Thou was's whelpt a Dogge, and thou shalt famish a Dogges death.

Answernot, I am gone.

Ape. Ene fo thou out-runft Grace, Foole I will go with you to Lord Timens.

Fools. Will you leave me there?

Ape. If Timon stay at home.

You three ferue three V furers?

Al. I would they fetu'd vs. Apr. So would I:

As good a tricke as ever Hangman feru'd Theefe.

Foole. Are you three Viuters men?

All. I Foole.

Foole. I thinke no Viurer, but ha's a Foole to his Serwant. My Mistris is one, and I am her Foole ; when men come to borrow of your Masters, they approach sadly, and go away metry: but they enter my Masters house merrily, and go away fadly. The reason of this?

Var. I could render one.

Ap. Do it then, that we may account thee a Whoremafter, and a Knaue, which not withflanding thou fhalt be no leffe efteemed.

Varro. What is a Whoremaster Foole?

Foole. A Foole in good cloathes, and something like thee. 'Tis s spirit, sometime t'appeares like a Lord, somtime like a Lawyer, sometime like a Philosopher, with two stones moe then's artificiall one. Hee is vegie often like a Knight; and generally, In all shapes that man goes vp and downe in, from fourescore to thirteen, this spirit walker In.

Var. Thou att not altogether a Foole:

Foole. Northou altogether a Wife man, As much foolerie as I have, so much witchou lack'A.

Apr. That answer might have become Apenantus, All. Alide, slide, heere comes Lord Tomon.

Enter Timon and Steward.

Mor. Come with me (Foole) come. Foole. I do not alwayes follow Louer, elder Brother, and Woman, sometime the Philosopher,

Stew. Pray you walken cere,

Exemi, He speake with you anon. Tim. You make me meruell wherefore ere this time

Had you not folly laide my state before me, That I might so have rated my expence As I had leave of meanes.

Siew. You would not heare me:

At many ley fures I propote.

Tim. Gotoot

Perchance forne fingle vantages you tooke, When my indisposition put you backe, And that vnaptnesse made your minister Thus to excuse your selfe.

Siew. O my good Lord, At many times I brought in my accompts, Laid them before you, you would throw them off, And say you found them in mine hone frie, When for some trifling present you have bid me Returne so much, I have shooke my head, and wept a Yes 'gainfi th' Authoritie of manners, pray'd you To hold your hand more close: I did indure Not fildome, nor no flight checkes, when I have Prompted you in the ebbe of your effete, And your great flow of debts; my lou'd Lord, Though you heare now (too late) yet nowes a time, The greatest of your having, lackes a halfe, To pay your present debes.

Tim Let all my Land be fold.

Stew. Tis all engaged, some forfeyted and gone, And what remainer will hardly stop the mouth Ofpresent dues; the future comes apace: What shall defend the interim, and at length. How goes our reck'ning?

Tim. To Lacedemon did my Land extend.

Stere. Omy good Lord, the world is but a word, Were it all yours, to give it in a breath, How quickely were it gone.

Tim. You tell me true.

Siew. If you suspect my Husbandry or Falshood, Call me before th'exacteft Auditors, And let me on the proofe. So the Gods bleffe me. When all our Offices have beene opprest With riotous Feeders, when our Vaules have wept With drunken spilth of Wine; when every roome Hath blaz'd with Lights, and braid with Minitrellie, I have retyr'd me to a wastefull cocke, And fet mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prythee no more.

Stew. Heavens have I faid, the bounty of this Lord: How many prodigall bits have Slaves and Pezants This night engluited : who is not Timens, What heart, head, fword, force, meanes, but is L. Timen: Great Timen, Noble, Worthy, Royall Timon: Ah, when the meanes are gone, that buy this praise, The breach is gone, whereof this praise is made: Feath won, fall loft; one cloud of Winter showres, Thefe flyes are coucht.

Tim. Come fermon me no further. No villanous bounty yet hath past my heart; Vnwisely, not ignobly have I given. Why doft thou weepe, canft thou the conscience lacke, To thinke I shall lacke friends : secure thy heart, If I would broach the vessels of my love, And try the argument of hearts, by borrowing, Men, and mens fortunes could I frankely vie As I can bid thee speake,

Su. Affurance bleffe your thoughts. Tim And in some fort these wants of mine are crowned, That I account them bleffings. For by these Shall I trie Friends. You shall perceive How you mistake my Forcunes: I am wealthie in my Friends. Within there, Floring, Serviling?

Enter

Enter three Servants.

Ser. My Lord, my Lord.

Trm. I will dispatch you severally.

You to Lord Lucius, to Lord Lucullus you, I hunted with his Honos to day; you to Sempronius; commend me to their loues; and I amproud fay, that my occasions have found time to vie 'em toward a jupply of mony: let the request be fifty Talents.

Flom. As you have faid, my Lord.
See. Lord Lucus and Luculus? Humh.

Tim. Go you fit to the Senators;

Of whom, even to the States best health; I have Deferu'd this Hearing; bid'em feod o'th'instant A thousand Talents to me.

Ste, I haue beene bold

(For that I knew it the most generall way)
To them, to vie your Signet, and your Name,
But they do shake their heads, and I am heere
No richer in returne.

Tan. Is't true? Can't be?

They answer in a joyne and corporate voice, That now they are at full, want Treature cannot Do what they would, are forrice; you are Honourable, But yet they could have wishe, they know not, Something bath beene amisse; a Noble Nature May catch a wrench; would all were well; its pitty, And so intending other serious matters, After distasseful lookes; and these hard Fractions With certaine balfe-caps, and cold moving nods, They froze me into Silence.

Tim. You Gods reward them: Prythee man looke cheerely. These old Fellowes Haue their ingratitude in them Heredisary : Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it fildome flowes, Tis lacke of kindely warmth, they are not kinde; And Nature, as it growes againe toward earth, Is falbion'd for the journey, dull and heavy.
Go to Ventiddius (prythee be not fad, Thou art true, and honest; Ingeniously I speake, No blame belongs to thee :) Ventiddius lately Buried his Father, by whose death hee's stepp'd Into a great estate: When he was poore, Imprison'd, and in scarsitie of Friends, I cleer'd him with fine Talents : Greet him from me, Bid him suppose, some good necessity Touches his Friend, which craues to be remembred With those five Talents; that had, glue't these Fellowes To whom 'tis instant due. Neu'r speake, or thinke, That Timons fortunes 'mong his Friends can finke.

Step. I would I could not thinke it: That thought is Bouoties Foe; Being free it felfe, it thinkes all others fo.

Elaminius waiting to speake with a Lord from his Master, enters a servant to hom.

Ser. I have told my Lord of you, he is comming down to you.

Flam. I thanke you Sir.

Enter Luculius.

Ser. Heere's my Loid.

Luc. One of Lord Timons men? A Guift I warrant. Why this hits right: I dreampt of a Silver Bason & Ewre to pight. Flamining, honest Flamining, you are verie respectively welcome fir. Fill me some Wine. And how does that Honourable, Complease, Free-hearted Gentleman of Athens, thy very bountifull good Lord and May-

Flom, His heelth is well fir.

Lue. I em right glad that his health is well fir : and what haft thou there under thy Cloake, pretty Flammins.

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box Sir, which in my Lords behalfe, I come to intreat your Honor to supply: who having great and instant occasion to vie fistice Talents, bath sent to your Lordship to surish him: nothing doubting your piesent affishance therein.

Lee. La, la, la, la, la: Nothing doubting fayes hee? Alas good Lord, a Noble Gendenian tis, if he would not keep to good a house. Many a time and often 1 ha din'd with him, and told him on't, and come againe to supper to him of purpose, to have him spend lesse, and yet he wold embrace no counsell, take no warning by my comming, every man has his sault, and honesty is his. I ha told him on't, but I could here get him from't.

Enter Servans with Wine.

Ser. Please your Lordship, heere is the Wine.

Luc: Flammun, I have noted threalwayes wise.

Heere's to thee.

Flam. Your Lordship speakes your pleasure.

Luc. I have obscrued thee alwayes for a towardlie prompt spirit, give theethy due, and one that knowes what belongs to reason; and vanst viethe time wel, if the time-vie thee well. Good parts in thee; get you gone sitrah. Drawneerer honest Flammius. Thy Lords a bountifull Gentleman, but thou art wise, and thou know'st well enough (although thou com'st to me) that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendshippe without securitie. Here's three Solidares for thee, good Boy winke at me, and say thou saw'st mee not. Face thee well.

Flam. Is t possible the world should so much differ, And we aliue that lived? Fly damned balenesse To him that worships thee.

Luc. Ha? Now I see thouart a Foole, and fit for thy Master.

Flam May these adde to the number y may scald thee:
Let moulten Coine be thy damnation.
Thou disease of a friend, and not himselfe:
Has friendship such a faint and milkie heart,
It turnes in less then two nights? O you Gods!
I feele ony Masters passion. This Slaue vnto his Honor,
Has my Lords meate in him:
Why should it thrine, and turne to Nutriment,
When he is turn'd to poyson?
O may Diseases onely worke vpon't:
And when he's sicke to death, let not that part of Nature
Which my Lord payd for, be of any power

Enter Lucius, with three strangers.

To expell ficknelle, but prolong his hower.

Luc. Who the Lord Timon? He is my very good friend and an Honourable Gentleman.

I We know him for no leffe, thogh we are but firengese to him. But I can tell you one thing my Lord, and which I heare from common rumours, now Lord Timous happie howres are done and past, and his estate shrinkes from him.

Lucius. Fye no, doe not beleeue it : hee cannot want for money.

2. But beleeve you this my Lord, that not long agoe, one of his men was with the Lord Lordilus, to botrow to many Talents, nay vrg'd extreamly fot's, and shewed what receffing helong'd too't, and yet was deny'de.

Luw. How?

2 I tell you, deny'de my Lord.

Luci. What a firange case was that? Now before the Gods I am a firand on't. Desired that honourable man? There was verte luttle Honourable wid in't. For my owne part, I must needes confesse, I have receyoed some small kindnesses from him, as Money, Plate, Iewels, and such like Trisles; nothing comparing to his: yet had hee mistooke him, and sent to me, I should no rehave denied his Occasion so many Talents.

Enter Servilius.

Soral. See, by good hap yonders my Lord, I have free to fee his Honor. My Honor'd Lord.

Served. Has onely lent his prefent Occasion now my Lord requesting your Lordship to supply his instant wie with so many Talents.

Lucil. I know his Lordfhip is but merry with me,

He cannot want lifty five hundred Talenta.

Serud. But in the mean true he wants leffe my Lord.

If his occasion were not vertuous,

I should not verge it halfe so faithfully.

Lue. Doft thou speake serrously Servilund

Seruil Vpon my foule tis true Sir.

Luci. What a wicked Beaft was I to disfurnish my felf against such a good time, when I might has she win my felfe Honourable? How valuckily it hapned, that I shold Purchase the day before for a little part, and vindo a great deale of Honour? Sermilus, now before the Goda I am not able to do (the more beast I say) I was sending to vie Lord Times my selfe, these Gentlemen can witnesse but I would not for the wealth of Athens I had done't now. Commend me bountifully to his good Lordship, and I hope his Honor will conceive the fairest of mee, because I have no power to be kinde. And tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions say, that I cannot pleasure such an Honourable Gentleman. Good Sandsway, will you befriend mee so farre, as to vie mine owne words to him?

Ser. Yes fir, I shall.

Lucil. He looke you out a good turne Servilius.

Why this is the worlds foule,

And suft of the same peece
Is every Flatterers sport; who can call him his Friend
That dips in the same dish? For m my knowing
Timos has bin this Lords Pather,
And kept his credit with his purse:
Supported his estate, nay Timose money
Has paid his men their wages. He ne're drinkes,
But Timose Silver treads upon his Lip,
And yet, oh see the monstrouseesse of man,
When he lookes out in an ungratefull shape;
He does deny him (in respect of his)

What cherizable men affoord to Beggers.

Alc. I am an humble Sucor to your Vertues;

For pitty is the vertue of the Law And none but Tyrants vie it cruelly. It pleases time and Fortune to lye heavie Vpon a Friend of mine, who in hor blood Hath Hept into the Law which is past depth To those that (without heede) do plundge intoo't. He is a Man (fetting his Face afide) of comely Vertues, Nor did he foyle the fact with Cowardice, And Honour in him, which buyes out his fault) But with a Noble Fury, and faire spirit, Seeing his Reputation touch'd to death, He did oppose his Foe: And with such soberand vinoted passion He did behoove his angerere twas spent, As if he had but prou'd an Argument

1 Sen. You undergo too Arica Paradox, Striuing to make an vgly deed looke faire: Your words have tooke fuch paines, as if they labour'd To bring Man-flaughter into forme, and fet Quartelling Vpon the head of Valour; which indeede Is Valour mif-begot, and came into the world, When Sects, and Factions were newly borne. Hee's truly Valiant, that can wisely suffer The worst that man can breath, And make his Wrongs, his Out-fides, To weare them like his Rayment, careleffely, And ne're preferre his injuries to his heart, To bring it into danger. If Wrongs be euilles, and inforce vs kill,

What Folly 'tis, to hazard life for Ill. Alci. My Lord.

Weigh but the Crime with this.

1. Sen. You cannot make groffe finnes looke cleare,

To revenge is no Valour, but to beare.

Alci. My Lords, then vnder fauour, pardon me, If I speake like a Captaine. Why do fond men expose themselves to Battell. And not endure all threats? Sleepe vpon't, And let the Foes quietly cut their Throats Without repugnancy ? If there be Such Valour in the bearing, what make wee Abroad? Why then, Women are more valiant That stay at home, if Bearing carry it: And the Affe, more Captaine then the Lyon? The fellow loaden with Irons, wifer then the Indge? If Wisedome be in suffering. Oh my Lords, As you are great, be pittifully Good, Who canno: condemne rashnesse in cold blood? To kill, I grant, is sinnes extreamest Gust, But in defence, by Mercy, 'tis most iust. To be in Anger, is impletie:
But who is Man, that is not Angries. Sen. You breath in vaine.

Ale. To vaine !

His service done at Lacedemon, and Bizantium, Were a sufficient briber for his life.

s What's that?

Alc. Why say my Lords ha's done faire service, And flaine in fight many of your encmies: How full of valour did he beare himfelfe In the laft Conflict, and made plenteous wounds?

3 He has made too much plenty with him i He's a sworne Riotor, he has a finne That ofeen drownes him, and takes his valour prisoner. If there were no Fors, that were enough To ouercome him. In that Beaftly furie, He has bin knowne to commit outrages, And cherrish Factions. Tis inferr'd tovs. His dayes are foule, and his drinke dangerous.

1 He dyes.

Alei, Hard face : he might baue dyed in warre. My Lords, if not for any parts in him, Though his right arme might purchase his owne time, And be in debt to none i yet more to moue you, Take my deferes to his, and loyne em both And for I know, your reverend Ages love Security, lle pawne my Victories, all my Honour to you Vpon his good returnes. If by this Crime, he owes the Law his life, Why let the Warre receive't in valiant gore, For Law is Arich, and Warre is nothing more.

We are for Law he dyes, vrge it no more On height of our displeasure: Friend, or Brother, Héforfeits his owne blood, that spilles another.

Ale. Must it be so! It must not bee: My Lords, I do befeech you know mee.

This yellow Slave, Will knit and breake Religions, bleffe th'accurft, Make the hoare Leptone ador'd, place Theeues, And give them Title, knee, and approbation With Senstors on the Bench: This is it That makes the wappen'd Widdow wed againe; Shee, whom the Spittle-house, and vicerous fores, Would canthe gorge at. This Embalmes and Spices Toth Aprill day againe. Come damn'd Earth, Thou common whose of Mankinde, that puttes oddes Among the rout of Nations, I will make thee Do thy right Nature. March afarre off. He? A Drumme ? Th'art quicke, But yet Ile bury thee : Thou't go (strong Theefe) When Gowty keepers of thee cannot stand :

Enter Alcobiades with Drumme and Fife in warlike manner, and Phryu a and Timandre.

Ale. What art thou there? speake.

7im. A Beaft as thou art. The Canker gnaw thy hart For shewing me againe the eyes of Man.

Ale. What is thy name! Is man fo hatefull to thee,

That art thy felfe a Man e

Nay Ray thou out for earneft.

Tim. I am Mifantropos, and have Mankinde. For thy part, I do with thou wert a dogge, That I might love thee fomething.

Alc. I know thee well:

But in thy Fortunes am valearn'd, and ftrange,

Tan.I know thee too, and more then that I know thee I not defire to know. Follow thy Dramme, With mans blood paint the ground Gules, Gules: Religious Cannons, civill Lawes are eruell, Then what should warre be? This fell whore of thine, Hath in her more destruction then thy Sword, For all her Cherubia looke.

Phrin. Thy lips rot off.

Tim. I will not kille thee, then the rot reutnes

To thine owne lippes againe,

Alc. How came the Noble Timon to this change? Tim. As the Moone do's, by wanting light to give: But then renew I could not like the Moone, There were no Sunnes to borrow of.

Alc. Noble Timon, what friendship may I do thee?

Tim. None, but to maintaine my opinion.

Alc. What is it Timout

Tim. Promise me Friendship, but performe none. If thou wilt not promise, the Gods plague thee, for thou art a man : if thou do'it performe, confound thee, for

Alc. I have heard in some fore of thy Miserles. Tim. Thou saw's them when I had prosperitle. Ale, I see them now, then was a blessed time. Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of Harlots. Timan. Is this th'Athenian Minion, whom the world oic'd fo regardfully ?

Tim. Att thou Timandra? Timan. Yes. Tim Be a whore fill, they love thee not that vie thee, ue them diseases, leaving with thee their Lust. e of thy falt houres, feafon the flaues for Tubbes and thes, bring downe Role-cheekt youth to the Fubfaft, d the Diet.

Timen Hang thee Monster.

Alc. Pardonhim (wert Timandra, for his wits e drowo'd and loft in his Calamiries.

I have but little Gold offate, brave Timon, The want whereof, doth dayly make reuolt In my penurious Band. I have heard and greeu'd How curfed Athens, mindelesse of thy worth, Forgetting thy great deeds, when Neighbour flates But for thy Sword and Fortune trod vpon them.

Tim. I psythee beate thy Drum, and get thee gone. Ale. I am thy Friend, and pitty thee deere Timon. Tim. How doest thou pitty him whom I doll troble, I bad rather be alone.

Ale. Why fare thee well: Heere is some Gold for thee.

Tim, Keepe it, Icannot eate it.

Ale. When I have laid proud Athens on a heape.

Tim. Warr'ft thou gainst Athens.

Alc. I Timon, and have caufe.

Tim. The Gods confound them all in thy Conquest, And thee after, when thou hast Conquer'd.

Ale. Why me, Timon?

Tion. That by killing of Villaines Thou was't borne to conquer my Country. Put vp thy Gold. Go on, heeres Gold, go on; Be as a Plannetary plague, when Loue Will o're some high-Vic'd City, hang his poyson In the ficke ayre iletnot thy fword skip oner Pitty not honoor'd Age for his white Beard, He is an Vfurer. Strike me the counterfet Matron, It is her habite onely, that is honest, Her selfe's a Bawd. Les northe Virgins cheeke Make fost thy trenchant Sword : for those Milke pappes That through the window Barne bore at mens eyes, Are not within the Leafe of pitty writ, But set them down horrible Traitors. Spare not the Babe Whose dimpled smiles from Fooles exhaust their mercy; Thinke it a Bastard, whom the Oracle Hath doubtfully pronounced, the throat shall cut, And mince it lans remorle. Sweare against Obiects, Put Armour on thine eares, and on thine eyes, Whose proofe, nor yels of Mothers, Maides, nor Babes, Nor light of Priests in holy Vestments bleeding, Shall pierce a lot. There's Gold to pay thy Souldiers, Make large confusior: and thy futy spent,
Consounded be thy elfe. Speake not, be gone.

Ale. Hast thou Gold yet, He take the Gold thou giuest me, not all thy Counsell.

Tim. Doft thou or doft thou not, Heavens cutle vpon thee.

Buth. Give vs some Gold good Timm, hast $ more? Tim. Enough to make a Whore for sweare her Trade, And to make Whores, a Bawd. Hold vp you Sluts Your Aprons mountant; you are not Orhable, Although I know you'l (weare, tertibly fweare Into frong shudders, and to heavenly Agues Th'immortall Gods that beare you. Spare your Oathes: He trust to your Conditions, be whores still. And he whose pious breath seekes to convert you, Be strong in Whore, allure him, burne him vp, Let your close fire predominate his smoke, And be no turne-coats: yet may your paines fix months Be quite contrary, And Thatch Your poore thin Roofes with burthens of the dead, (Some that were hang'd) no matter: Weare them, betray with them; Whore ftill, Paint till a horse may myre vpon your face : A pox of wrinkles.

Both. Well, more Gold, what then?

hh z

Beleeuer

Beleeve't that wee'l do any thing for Gold. Tim. Consumptions source In hollow bones of man, Arike their fharpe shinnes. And marre mens spurring. Cracke the Lawyers voyce, That he may never more falle Title pleade, Nor found his Quillets shrilly: Hoace the Flamen, That scold'st against the quality of flesh, And not beleeves himselfe. Downe with the Nose, Downe with it flat, take the Bridge quite away Of him, that his particular to forefee Smels from the generall weale. Make curld pate Ruffians And let the unscarr'd Braggetts of the Watte Dettue some paine from you. Plague all, That your Activity may defeate and quell The soutle of all Ete Aion. There's more Gold. Do you damne others, and let this damne you, And ditches grave you all. Both. More counsell with more Money, bounteous

Tim. More whore, more Mischeese first, I have giuen you earnest

Alc. Strike up the Drum towardes Athens, farewell Timon: if I thrine well, lle visit thee agains.

7 im. Ist hope well, le neuer see thee more.

Alc. I neuer did thee harme

Tim. Yes, thou spok it well of me.

Alc. Call'ff thou that harme?

Tim. Mendayly finde it. Get thee away, And take thy Beagles with thee.

Alc. We but offend him firike. Excur! Tim. That Nature being licke of mans unkindnelle Should yet be hungry : Common Mother, thou Whose wombe vnmeasureable, and infinite brest Teemes and feeds all . whose selfesame Mettle Whereof thy proud Childe (arrogant man) is puft, Engenders the blacke Toad, and Adder blew, The gilded News, and eyeleffe venom'd Worme, With all th'abhorred Births below Crifpe Heaven, Whereon Hyperions quickning fire doch thine: Yeeld him, who all the humane Sonnes do hate, From foorth thy plenteous bosome, one poore roote . Enfeare thy Fertile and Conceptious wombe, Let it no more bring out ingratefull man. Goe great with Tygets, Dragons, Wolues, and Beates, Teeme with new Monsters, whom thy vpward face Hath to the Marbled Mansion all above Neuer presented. O,a Root, deare thankes. Dry up thy Marrowes, Vines, and Plough-torne Leas, Whereof ingratefull man with Licourish draughts And Morfels Vnctious, greafes his pure minde, That from it all Confideration flippes .

More man? Plague, plague.

Ape. I was directed hither. Men report, Thou dost affect my Manners, and dost vice them.

Tim. Tis then, because thou do not keepe a dogge Whom! would imitate. Consumption earth thee.

Ape. This is in thee a Nature but infected, A poore vinmanly Melancholly sprung From change of future. Why this Spade? this place? This Slaue-like Habit, and these lookes of Care? Thy Flatterers yet weare Silke, drinke Wine, lye soft, Hugge their diseased Persumes, and have forgot That ever Timor was. Shame not these Woods, By putting on the cunning of a Carper. Be thou a Flatterer now, and seeke to thrive

By that which ha's vindone thee, hindge thy knee,
And let his very breath whom thou'it observe
Blow off thy Cap: praise his most victors straine,
And call it excellent: thou wast told thus:
Thou gau'st thine cares (like Tapsters, that had welcom)
To Knaues, and all approachers: Tis most sust
That thou turne Rascall, had st thou wealth againe,
Rascals should have's. Do not assume my likenesse.

Tim. Wete llike thee, I'de throw away my felfe.

Ape. I nou haft cast away thy selfe, being like thy selfe.

Ape. I nou haft cast away thy selfe, being like thy self.

A Madman so long, now a Foole: what think's I hat the bleake ayre, thy boysterous Chamberlaine Will put thy shirt on warme? Will these moyst I rees, That have out-lived the Eagle, page thy heeles And skip when thou point's out? Will the cold brooke Candied with Ice, Cawdle thy Morning taste. To cure thy o're-oights surfer? Call the Greatures, Whose naked Natures live in all the spight Of wrekefull Heaven, whose bare vinhoused Trunkes. To the conflicting Elements exposed.

Answer meete Nature: bid them flatter thee.

O thou shalt finde.

Tim. A Foole of thee: depart.

Ape. I loue thee better now, then ere I did.

Tim. I hate thee worfe.

Apr. Why?

Tm. Thou flatter'f mifery.

Ape. I flatter not, but lay thou art a Cayriffe.

Tim. Why do'ft thou feeke me out?

Ape Tovex thee.

Tim. Alwayes a Villaines Office, or a Fooles. Dost please thy selfe in't ?

Ape. 1.

7im. What, a Knaue 100?

Ape. It thou did'st put this sowre cold habit on To calligate thy pride, 'twere well: but thou Dost it enforcedly: Thou dst Courtier be againe Wert thou oot Beggar: willing misery Out-lives: incertaine pompe, is crown'd before it The one is filling still, neuer compleat: The other, at high wish: best state Contentiesse, Hatha distracted and most wretched heing, Worse then the worst, Content.
Thou should'st desite to dye, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath, that is more miserable. Thou are a Slave, whom Foreunes tender arme With favour never claspt: but bred a Dogge. Had'it thou like vs from our first swarn proceeded, The (weet degrees that this breefe world affords, To fuch as may the palliue drugges of it Freely command'A : thou would'It have plung'd thy fell In generall Riot, melted downe thy youth In different beds of Luft, and never learn'd The Icie precepts of respect, but followed The Sugred game before thee. But my felfe, Who had the world as my Confectionarie, The mouthes, the tongues, the eyes, and beates of men At duty more then I could frame employment; That numberlesse vpon me stucke, as leaves Do on the Oake, have with one Winters brush Fell from their boughes, and left me open, bare, For every florme that blowes. I to beare this, That never knew but better, is some burthen Thy Nature, did commence in sufferance, Time Hach made thee hard in t. Why should's 5 hate Men? They never flatter'd thee. What hast thou given?

If thou wile curfe ; thy Father (that pooreragge) Must be thy subject; who in spight put stuffe To some shee-Begger, and compounded thee Poore Rogue, hereditary. Hence, be gone, If thou hadft not bene borne the worft of men, Thou hadst bene 2 Knaue and Flatterer.

Ape. Are thou proud yet! Tim. I, that I am not thee. Apr. I, that I was no ProdigalL Tim. I, that I am one now. Were all the wealth I have thut vp in thee, I'ld give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone t That the whole life of Athens were in this,

Thus would I eate it.

Ape. Heere, I will mend thy Feast. Tim. First mend thy company, take away thy selfe. Ape, So I shall mend mine owne, by'th'lacke of thine

Tim. 'Tis not well mended fo, it is but botcht;

If not, I would it were.

Ape. What would'st thou have to Athens? Tun. Thee thither in a whirlewind : if thou wilt,

Tell them there I have Gold , looke, fo I have. Ape. Heere is no vie for Gold.

Tim. The beft, and trueft :

For heere it sleepes, and do's no hyred barme.

Ape. Where lyeft a night 1 Timon ? Tim, Vnder that's aboue me.

Where feed'st thou 2-dayes Apemantus?

Ape, Where my stomacke sindes meate, or rather where I cate it.

Tim. Would poylon were obedient & knew my mind

Apr. Where would'A thou send it?

Tim. To sawce thy dishes.

Ape. The middle of Humanity thou neuer knewest, but the extremitle of both ends. When thou wast in thy Gilt, and thy Perfume, they mockt thee for too much Curiolitie: in thy Ragges thou know's none, but art despis'd for the contrary. There's a medler for thee, eate it.

Tim. On what I hate, I feed not.

Apr. Do'A hate a Medleri

Tim. I, though it looke like thee.

Ape. And th'hadft hated Medlers fooner, & should'st haue loued thy selfe better now. What man didd'st thou ever know vnthrift, that was beloved after his meanes? Tim. Who without those meanes thou talk'st of, didst thou ever know belou'd?

Ape. My selfe.

Tim. I vnderstand thee : thou had'it some meanes to keepe a Dogge.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou neerest ompare to thy Flatterera?

Tim. Women neerest, but men : men are the things themselves. What would'st thou do with the world A-Ape. Giueit the Bealts, to be rid of the men.

Ton Would'A thou have thy felfe fall in the confuion of men, and remaine a Beaft with the Beafts, Ape. I Timon.

Tim. Abeafly Amortion, which the Goddes graunt hee t'attaine to. If thou wert the Lyon, the Fox would eguile thee : If thou were the Lambe, the Foxe would ate thee : if thou wert the Pox, the Lion would saspect nee, when peraduenture thou were acrus'd by the Affe: fthou wert the Affe, thy dulneffe would torment thee; nd fill thou liu'dit but as a Breakefast to the Wolfe. If iou were the Wolfe, thy greedineffe would afflich thee, & oft thou should'ft hazard thy life for thy dinner. West thoughe Voicorne, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine owne felfe the conquest of thy fury. Wert thou a Beare, thou would'it be kill'd by the Horfe: were thou a Horse, thou would'st be seaz'd by the Leapard : wert thou a Leopard, thou wert Germane to the Lion, and the sportes of thy Kindred, were Jurors on thy life. All thy fafety were remotion, and thy defence ab fence. What Beaft could'st thou bee, that were not fubiect to a Beaft : and what a Beaft art thou already, that feeft not thy loffe in transformation.

Ape. If thou could'it please me With speaking to me, thou might'ft Haue hie vpon it heere.

The Commonwealth of Athens, is become A Forrest of Beafis.

7 m. How ha's the Asse broke the wall, that thou art out of the Citie.

Ape. Yonder comes a Poet and a Painter: The plague of Company light vpon thee : will feare to eatch it, and give way. When I know not what elfe to do, He fee thee againe.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee,

Thou shalt be welcome.

I had rather be a Beggets Dogge,

Then Apemania.

Ape. Thou art the Cap

Of all the Fooles alive.

Tim. Would thou wert cleane enough

To spit vpon.

Ape. A plague on thee,

Thou art too bad to curfe.

Tim. All Villaines

That do fland by thee, are pure.

Ape. There is no Leprolie,

But what thou speak'ft.

Tim. If I name thee, Ile beate thee;

But I should infect my hands.

Ape. I would my congue

Could for them off.

Tim. Away thou iffue of a mangie dogge,

Choller does kill me

That thou are alive, I fwoond to fee thee,

Ape. Would thou would'st butft. Tim. Away thou tedious Rogue, I am forry I shall lose a stone by thee.

Ape. Beaft. Tim. Slaue. Ape. Toad.

Tim. Rogue, Rogue, Rogue. I am ficke of this falle world, and will love nought But even the meere necessities vpon't:

Then Timen presently prepare thy graue:
Lye where the light Fome of the Sea may beate

Thy grave stone dayly, make thine Epitaph, That death in me, at others lives may laugh.

O thou sweete King-killer, and deare divorce Twixt natural! Sunne and fire : thou bright defiler of Himens purest bed, thou valiant Mars,

Thou ever, yong, fresh, loued, and delicate wooer, Whole blush doth thawe the confectated Snow

That lyes on Dians lap. Thou visible God,

That fouldrest close Impossibilities,

And mak'ft them kille; that speak'st with everie Tongue

'Tis kid.

I Is not this hee?

All. Where?

2 'Tis bis description.

3 He? I know him.

All. Save thee Turion.

Tun. Now Thecues. All. Soldiers, not Theeues.

Tim. Both too, and womens Sonnes. All. We are not Theeues, but men

That much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat: Why should you want? Behold, the Earth hath Rootes: Within this Mile breake forth a hundred Springs: The Oakes beare Mall, the Briars Scarlet Heps, The bountcous Hulwife Nature, on each bush, Layes her full Meffe before you. Want? why Want?

We cannot liue on Graffe, on Berries, Water,

As Beafts, and Birds, and Fishes

Ti. Noron the Beafts themselves, the Birds & Fishes, You must eate men. Yet thankes I must you con, That you are Theeues profest: that you worke not In holser shapes: For there is boundlesse Thest In limited Professions. Rascall Theeves Hecre's Gold Go, sucke the subtle blood o'th'Grape, Till the high Feauor feeth your blood to froth, And so scape hanging. Trust not the Physician, His Antidotes are poyson, and he slayes Moethen you Rob: Take wealth, and lines together, Do Villame do, fince you protest to doo't. Like Workemen, Ile example you with Theeuery: The Sunnes a Theefe, and with his great attraction Robbes the vaste Sea. The Moones an arrant Theefe. And her pale fire, the fnatches from the Sunne. The Seas a Theele, whose liquid Surge, resolues The Moone into Salt teares. The Earth's a Theele, That feeds and breeds by a composture stolar From gen'tall excrement : each thing's a Theese. The Lawes, your curbe and whip, in their rough power

Ha's vncheck'd Theft. Love not your feluci, away, Rob one another, there's more Gold, cut threates, All that you meete are Theenes : to Athens go, Breake open hoppes, nothing can you Reale But Theeues do loofe it . Reale leffe, for this I give you, And Gold confound you howforte i Amen.

Emeribe Steward to Timon.

Stow. Oh you Gods ! Is you'd despis'd and rumous man my Lord? Full of decay and fayling? Oh Monument And wonder of good deeds, eailly beflow'd! What an alteration of Honor has despirate want made? What vilder thing vpon the earth, then Friends, Who can bring Noblest mindes, to basest ends. How rarely does it meete with this times guife, When man was wishe to love his Enemies: Grant I may euer loue, and rather woo Those that would mischeese me, then those that doo. Has caught me in his eye, I will prefent my hone Il griefe vnto him; and as my Lord, fill ferue him with my life. My deerest Master.

Tim. Away : what art thou?

Siew. Haue you forgot me, Sir?

Tim. Why doft aske that ? I have forgot all men. Then, if thou grunt'ft, thiart a man.

I have forgot thee.

Siev. An honest poore scruant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not : I neuer had honeft man about me, I all I kept were Knaues, to serue in meate to Villaines.

Sie. The Gods are witnesse,

Neu'r did poore Steward weare a trutr greefe For his vindone Lord, then mine eyes for you,

Tum. What, dost thon weepe? Come neerer, then I lone thee Because thou are a woman, and disclaim's Flinty mankinde: whose eyes do neuer give, But thorow Luft and Laughter : pittle's Oceping:

Strange times y weepe with laughing, not with weeping, Stew. I begge of you to know me, good my Lord, T'accept my greefe, and whil's this poore wealth lasts,

To entertaine me as your Steward full. Tim. Had I a Steward So true, fo iuft, and now fo comfortable?

It almost turnes my dangerous Nature wilde. Let me behold thy face: Surely, this man

Was borne of woman.

Forgiue my generall, and exceptleffe rathoesse You perpetuall sober Gods. I doproclaime One honest man : Mistake me not, but one : No more I pray, and hee's a Steward How faine would I have hated all mankinde, And thou redeem'it thy felfe. But all Gue thee, I fell with Curfes.

Me thinkes thou are more boneft now, then wife: For, by oppreffing and betraying mee,

(For I must ever doubt, though ne're so sure)
Is not thy kindnesse subtle, covetous,
If not a Vsuring kindnesse, and as rich men deale Gulfts,
Expecting in returne twenty for one?

Stew. No my most worthy Master, in whose brest

Doubt, and suspect (alas) are plac'd too late:
You should have sear'd false times, when you did Feast.
Suspect still comes, where an estate is least.
That which I show, Heaven knowes, is meetely Loue,
Dutie, and Zeale, to your varnatched minde.

Care of your Food and Living, and belease it.
My most Honour'd Lord,

For any benefit that points to mee,

Either in hope, or present, I'de exchange
For this one wish, that you had power and wealth
To require me, by making rich your selfe,
Tim. Looke thee, 'tisso: thou singly honest man,

Heere take: the Gods out of my miferie
Ha's fent thee Treasure. Go, live rich and happy.
But thus condition'd: Thou shalt build from men:
Hate all, curse all, shew Charity to none,
But let the famisht slesh slide from the Bone,
Ere thou relecue the Begger. Give to dogges
What thou denyest to men. Let Prisons (wallow 'em,
Debts wither 'em to nothing, be men like blasted woods
And may Diseases licke up their false bloods,

And so farewell, and thriue.

Tim. Ene lo lit as I lay. And for thy fiction. Why thy Verse swels with Ruffe so fine and smooth, That thou art even Naturall in thine Att. But for all this (my honest Natur'd friends) I must needs say you have a little fault, Marry tis not monftrous in you, neither wifh I

You take much paines to mend. Borb. Befrech your Honour

To make it knowne to vs.

Tim. You'l take it ill. Both. Most thankefully, my Lord.

Timon. Will you indeed? Both. Doubt it not worthy Lord.

Tim. There's neuer a one of you but trulls a Knade,

That mightily deceives you. Both. Do we, my Lord?

Tim. I, and you heare him cogge, See him dissemble,

Know his groffe patchery, loue him, feedehim, Keepe in your bosome, yet remaine affur'd That he's a made-vp-Villaine

Pain. I know none such, my Lord.

Poet. Nor 1.

Tunon. Looke you, I loue you well, He give you Gold Rid me these Villaines from your companies; Hang them, or stab them, drowne them in a draught Confound them by some course, and come to me, Ile grue you Gold enough.

Bosh. Name them my Lord, let's know them.

Tim. You that way, and you this: But two in Company: Eacli man a part, all fingle, and alone, Yet an arch Villaine keepes him company: If where thou art, two Villaines shall not be, Come not neere him. If thou would'it hat recide But where one Villaine is, then him abandon. Hence, packe, there's Gold, you came for Gold ye flaves. You have worke for me; there's payment, thence,

You are an Alcumift, make Gold of that: Out Raicall dogges.

Enier Steward, and two Senators

Stew. It is vaine that you would speake with Times: For he is let lo onely to himselfe, That nothing but himfelfe, which lookes like man, Is friendly with him.

1 Sen. Bring vs to his Caue. It is our part and promise to th'Athenians To Speake with Timon.

2. Sen. At all times alike Men are not full the same : 'twas Time and Greesee

That fram'd him thus. Time with his fairer band, Offering the Fortunes of his former dayes, The furiner man may make him: bring vi to him And chanc'd it as it may. Siew. Heere is his Cave: Peace and content be heere. Lord Timen, Trasm, Looke out, and Speake to Friends. Th'Atheriens By two of their most reverend Senate greet dec: Speake to them Noble Timen.

Enter Timon out of hu Case.

Tim. Thou Sunne that comforts butne. Speake and be hang'd : For each true word, a bliffer, and each falfe Be as a Cantherizing to the root o'th' Tongue, Consuming it with speaking,

1 Worthy Trmon Tim. Of none but fuch as you, And you of Tonos.

The Senators of Athens, greet thee Tomas. Tim. I thanke them, And would fend them backe the plague,

Could I but catch it for them, 1 Oforget

What we are forry for our felves in thee: The Senators, with one confent of loue, Intreate thee backe to Athens, who have thought On speciall Dignities, which vacantlye For thy best vie and wearing.

2 They confesse

Toward thee, forgetfulneffe too general! große t Which now the publike Body, which doch Adome Play the re-canter, feeling in it felfe A lacke of Timons ayde, hath fince withall Of it owne fall, restraining ayde to Timeon, And lend forth vs, to make their fortowed render, Together, with a recompence more fruitfull Then their offence can weigh downe by the Dramme, I even such heapes and summes of Loue and Wealth, As shall to thee blot out, what wrongs were theirs, And write in thee the figures of their love, Euer to read them thine,

Tim. You witch me in it; Surprize me to the very brinke of teares; Lend me a Fooles heart, and a womans eyes, And He beweepe these comforts, worthy Senators.

I Therefore so please thee to returne with vs. And of our Athens, thine and ours to take The Captainship, thou shalt be met with thankes, Allowed with absolute power, and thy good name Live with Authoritie: fo soone we shall drive backe Of Alcibiades thispproaches wild, Who like a Bore too Guage, doth toot vp His Countries peace.

& And Shakes his threatning Sword Against the walles of Aibens.

1 Therefore Times

Exercise

Tim. Well fir, I will : therefore I will fir thus If Alcobiades kill my Countrymen, Let Alcibiades know this of Times, That Troom cares not. But ifhe facke faire Athens, And take our goodly aged men by th' Beards, Giuing our holy Virgini to the Staine Of contumelious, beaftly, mad-brain'd warre: Then lethim know, and cell him Timor speakes it, In pitty of our aged, and our youth,
I connot choose but tell him that I care not, And let him tak't at worft ; For their Knines care not. While you have throats to answer. Por my selfe, There's not a whitele, in th'unruly Campe, But I do prize it at my loue, before The reperends Throatin Athens. So I icaue you To the protection of the prosperous Gods, As Theeues to Keepers.

Stew. Stay not, all's in vaine.
Tim. Why I was writing of my Epitaph, It will be scene to morrow. My long sicknesse Of Health, and Living, now begins to mend, And nothing brings me all things. Go, live fill, Be Alcibiades your plague; you his, And laft fo long enough.

We speake in vaine.

Tim. But yet Houe my Country, and am not One that reloy ces in the common wracke, As common bruite doth put it.

t That's well spake,

Tim. Commend me to my louing Countreymen. 1 These words become your lippes as they passe thorow them.

2 And enter in our cares, like great Triumphers

In their applieding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them, And tell them, that to eafethem of their greefes, Their feares of Hostile Strokes, their Aches losses, Their pangs of Loue, with other incident throwes That Natures fragile Vessell doth sustaine In lifes vncertaine voyage, I will fome kindnes do them, He teach them to preuent wilde Aicibiades wrath.

1 like this well, he will returne againe. Tim. I have a Tree which growes heere in my Close, That mine owne vic inuites me to cut downe, And thortly must I fellic. Tell my Friends, Tell Athens, in the lequeuce of degree. From high to low throughout, that who so please To ftop Affiiction, let him take his hafte; Come hither ere my Tree hath felt the Axe, And hang himselfe. I pray you do my greeting,

Stow. Trouble him no further, thus you still shall Finde him.

Tim. Come not to me againe, but fay to Athens, Timm hath made his everlasting Mansion Vpon the Beached Verge of the falt Flood, Who once a day with his emboffed Froth-The tutbulent Surge shall couer; thither come, And let my grave-stone be your Oracle: Lippes, let foure words go by, and Language end : What is amisse, Plague and Infection mend. Graves onely be mens workes, and Death their gaine; Sunne, hide thy Beames, Timon hath done his Raigne. Exit Timon.

His discontents are voremoveably coupled to Nature.

2 Out hope in him is dead: let vs returne, And firsine what other meanes is left vnto vs In our deere perill.

A It requires swift foot.

Eavens.

Enter two other Senators with a Messenger.

! Thou hast painfully discouet'd rare his Files As full as thy report?

Mef. I have spoke the least.

Besides his expedition promises present approach. 2 We fland much hazard, if they bring not Timm. Mef. I met & Corrier, one mine pacient Priend, Whom though in generall pare we were oppos'd, Yes our old love made a particular force, And made vs speake like Friends. This man was riding From Alcibiades to Timons Cauc, With Letters of intreaty, which imported His Fellowship i'th'cause against your City, In part for his fake mon'd.

Enter the other Senators.

1 Heere come our Brothers.

3 No talke of Timon, nothing of him expect, The Enemies Drumme is the dust: In, and prepare,
Doth chooke the ayre with dust: In, and prepare,
Excused The Enemies Drumme is heard, and fearefull feouring

Enter a Souldier in the Woods ficking Timm. Sol. By all description this should be the place. Whose heere? Speake hoz. No answer? What is this? Tymon is dead, who hath out-freight his fpan, Some Beaft reade this; There do's not live a Man. Dead fure, and this his Grave, what's on this Tomb, I cannot read : the Charracter lle take with wax. Our Captaine hath in every Figure skill; An ag'd Interpreter, though yong in dayes: Before proud Athens hee's fet downe by this, Whole fall the marke of his Ambition is, Exit, Trumpers found. Enter Alcibiades with bis Powers before Athens.

Ale. Sound to this Coward, and lesciulous Towne, Our terrible approach.

Sounds a Parly.

The Senators appeare upon the wals. Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time With all Licentrous measure, making your willes The scope of lustice. Till now, my selfe and such As fleps within the finadow of your power Haue wander'd with our trauerst Armes, and breath'd Our sufferance vain'y : Now the time is flush, When crouching (farrow in the bearer frong Cries (of it felfe) no more: Now breathleffe wrong. Shall fit and pant in your great Chaires of eafe, And purse Insolence shall breake his winde With feate and horrid flight

1. Sen, Noble, and young; When thy first greefes were but a meere conceit, Ere thou had'lt power, or we had cause of seare, We sent to thee, to give thy rages Balme, To wipe out our Ingratitude, with Loues Aboue their quantitie.

2 So did we wooe Transformed Timen, to our Cittles love By humble Mellsge, and by promist meanes s We were not all vikinde, nor all deferue The common stroke of warre.

1 These walles of ours, Were not erected by their hands, from whom You have receyu'd your greefe: Not are they such, That these great Towres, Trophees, & Schools shold fall For private faults in them.

2 Not are they living

Who

Who were the motives that you fift went out, (Shame that they wanted, cunning in excelle) Hach broke their hearts. March, Noble Lord, Into our City with thy Banners spred, By decimation and a tythed death; If thy Revenges bunger for that Food Which Nature losthes, take thou the destin'd tenth, And by the bazard of the spotted dye, Let dye the spotted.

I All have not offended:
For those that were, it is not square to take
On those that are, Revenge: Crimes, like Lands
Are not inherited, then deete Countryman.
Bring in thy rankes, but leave without thy tage,
Spare thy Athenian Cradle, and those Kin
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended, like a Shepheard,
Approach the Fold, and cull thinsected forth,
But kill not altogether.

2 What thou will, Thou rather shall inforce it with thy smile, Then hew too't, with thy Sword.

a Set but thy foot
Against our rampyr'd gates, and they shall opt:
So thou wilt fend thy gentle heart before,
To say thou't enter Friendly.
2 Throw thy Glove,

2 Throw thy Glove,
Or any Token of thine Honour elfe,
That thou wilt yfe the warres as thy redreffe,
And not as our Coofusion: All thy Powers
Shall make their harbour in our Towne, till wee
Have feel'd thy full desire.

Alc. Then there's my Glove, Defend and open your vncharged Ports, Those Enemies of Timons, and mine owns Whom you your selves thall set out for reproofe,
Fall and no more; and to actone your searce
With my more Noble meaning, not a man
Shall passe his quarter, or offend the steame
Of Regular Justice in your Citries bounds,
But thas be remedied to your publique Lawes
At heaviest answer.

Both. Tis most Nobly spoken. Ale Descend, and keepe your words. Enter a Messeger.

Mef. My Noble Generall, Times is dead, Entomb'd vpoo the very hemme o'th'Sea, And on his Gravestone, this Insculpture which With was I brought away: whose soft impression interprets for my poore ignorance.

Alcibrades rendes the Epitaph. Heere lies a wretched Coarfe, of wrotched Soule bereft. Sork not my name A Plague confumo you mucked Cairifs left. Herrelyel Timon, who alive, all living men ded bate, Pafe by and curfe thy fill, but pafe and flag non bere thy gase. These well expresse in thee thy latter spirite: Though shou abhorrd in vs our humane griefes, Scornd'fl our Braines flow, and those our droplers, which From niggard Nature fall ; yet Rich Conceis Taught thee to make vall Neptune weepe for aye On thy low Grave, on faults forginen. Dead In Noble Trom, of whose Memorie Heereafter mote. Bring me into your Citie, And I will vie the Olive, with my Sword: Make wat breed peace; make peace fimt war, make each Prescribe to other, as each others Leach. Let our Drummes ftrike. Exeunt.

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDIE OF IVLIVS CÆSAR.

Alus Primus. Scana Prima.

Enter Flanies, Murelin, and certaine Conscioners cour the Stage.

Flavins.

Ence : home you idle Crestures, get you home; Is this a Holiday ? What, know you not (Being Mechanicall) you ought nor walke Vpon a labouring day, without the figne Of your Profession? Speake, what Trade art thou? Co. Why Sir, a Carpenter,

Mer. Where is thy Leather Apron, and thy Kule? What doft thou with thy best Apparrell on?

You fir, what Trade are you?

Cobl. Truely Sir, in respect of a fine Workman, I am but as you would fay, a Cobler.

Mar. But what Trade are thou? Answer me directly. Cob. A Trade Sir, that I hope I may vie, with a fate Conscience, which is indeed Sir, a Mender of bad soules

Fla. What Trade thou knaue? Thou naughty knaue, what Trade?

Cobl. Nay I befeech you Sir, be not out with mer yet if you be our Sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What mean it thou by that? Mend mee, thou fawcy Fellow?

Cob. Why fur, Cobble you.

Fla. Thou art a Coblet, art thou?
Cob. Truly fir, all that I live by, is with the Aule: I meddle with no Tradelmans matters, nor womens matters; but withal I am indeed Sir, a Surgeon to old shoces: when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as euer trod vpon Neata Leather, have gone vpon my handy-worke.

Fla. But wherefore art not in thy Shop to day?

Why do'ft shou leade these men about the ffrees?

Cob. Truly lir, to weare out their shooes, taget my selfe into more worke. But indeede fir, we make Holyday to fee Cefer, and to reioyce in his Triumph.

Mur. Wherefore reioyce?

What Conquest brings he home ! What Triburaries follow him to Rome, To grace in Captine bonds his Chariot Wheeles? You Blockes, you francs, you worfe then fenfleffe things: O you hard hearts, you cruell men of Rome, Knew you not Pompey many a time and oft?
Have you climb'd up to Walles and Battlements, To Towres and Windowes? Yes, to Chimney tops, Your Infants in your Armes, and there have face The live-long day, with patient expectation,

To fee great Pempey passe the streets of Rome : And when you faw his Charior but appeare, Haue you not made an Vniverfall shout, That Tyber trembled underneath her bankes To heare the replication of your founds, Made in her Conceue Shores? And do you now put on your best attyre? And do you now cull one a Holyday And do you now strew Flowers in his way, That comes in Triumph over Pompeyes blood?

Runne to your houses, fall vpon your knees, Pray to the Gods to intermit the plague That needs must light on this Ingratitude.

Ela. Go.go, good Countrymen, and for this fault Assemble all the poore men of your fort; Draw them to Tyber bankes, and weepe your terres Into the Chamell, till the lowest streams Do kille the most exalted Shores of all.

Exerni all the Commoners.

See where their baselt mettle be not mou'd, They vanish tongue-tyed in their guiltinesse: Go you downe that way towards the Capitoll, This way will I : Disrobe the Images. If you do fing e them deckt with Ceremonies.

War. X sy we do fo?
You know it is the Feest of Lupercall.

Fla. It is no matter, let no Images Be hung with Cofar Trophees : He about, And drive away the Vulgar from the fireets; So do you too, where you perceive them thicke. These growing Feathers, pluckt from Cefers wing, Will make him flye an ordinary pitch, Who elfe would foare about the view of men, And keepe vs all in scruile fearefulnesse.

Enter Cafar, Antony for the Course, Calphurnia, Portla, Decino, Cicero, Brusso, Cassion, Caska, a Soorb ageraster them Mureline and Flans

Caf Calphornia.

Cark. Peace ho, Cofor speakes.

Caf. Calpharnia.

Cap. Heere my Lord.
Caf. Stand you directly in Antonia's way, When he doch run his course. Automb,

Ans. Cafer, my Lord.

Cas. Forget not in your speed Assonia, To touch Capharma: for our Elders say,

The

The Barren couched in this holy chace, Shake off their sterrile curse.

Ant. I shall remember,

When Cafar fayes, Do this; it is perform'd.

Caf Set on, and leave no Ceremony oue.

Sooth. Cafar.

Caf. Ha? Who calles !

(ak Bid every noyle be failt: peace yet agained Caf. Who wit in the preffe, that calles on me? I heare a Tongue shriller then all the Musicke

Cry, Cafar: Speake. Cafar is turn'd to heare. South. Bewere the Ides of March.

Caf. What man is that?

Br. A Sooth-fayer bids you beware the Ides of March Cef. Set him before me, let me fee his face.

Cass. Fellow, come from the throng, look vpon Caser.
Cass. What layst thou to me now? Speak once againe.
South. Beware the ldes of March.

Caf. He is a Drezmer, let ve leave him: Paste.

Source. Exeunt. Manet Brut & Cass.

Caffi. Will you go fee the order of the course?

Brut. Not I. Cassi. I pray you do.

Brut. I am not Gamesom: I do lacke some pare.
Of that quicke Spirit that is in Autony:

Let me not hinder Coffin your delires; Ile leaue you.

Cafi. Brutus, 1 do observe you now of late:I have not from your eyes, that gentlenesse
And shew of Love, 28 I was wont to have:
You beare too stubborne, and too strange a hand
Over your Friend, that loves you.

Bru. Cuffius.

Be not deceru'd: If I have veyl'd my looke,
I turne the trouble of my Countenance
Meerely vpon my felfe. Vexed I am
Of late, with passions of some difference,
Conceptions onely proper to my felfe,
Which give some soyle (perhaps) to my Behaviours:
But let not therefore my good Friends be greeu'd
(Among which number Cassim be you one)
Not construct any further my neglect,
Then that poore Brains with himselse at warre,
Forgets the shewes of Love to other men

Cass. Then Brune, I have much mistook your passion, By meaner whereof, this Brest of mine hath buried Thoughts of great value, worthy Cogitations.
Tell me good Brune, Can you see your face?

Bruw. No Cassins:

For the eye fees not it felfe but by reflection,

By some other things.

Cassum. 'Tis iust,
And it is very much lamented Brutus,
That you have no such Mirrors, as will turne
Yout hidden worthinesse into your eye,
That you might see your shadow:
I have heard,

Where many of the best respect in Rome, (Except immortall Cefer) speaking of Brians, And groaning underneath this Ages youke, Haue wish'd, that Noble Brians had his eyes.

Brs. Into what dangers, would you Leade me Caffille ! That you would have me feeke into my felfe,

For that which is not in me?

Caf. Therefore good Bruins, be prepar'd to heare.

And fince you know, you cannot fee your felie So well as by Reflection; I your Glaffe, Will modefuly discouer to your felse. That of your felse, which you yet know not of. And be not lealous on me, gentle Bruew: Were I a common Laughter, or did vie To false with ordinary Oatlier my love To every new Protester: if you know, That I do sawre on then, and laugge them heed, And after scandall them: Or if you know, That I professemy selfe in Banquetting To all the Rout, then hold me dangerous.

Flourish, and Shows.

Bre. What meaner this Showting ? I do feare, the People choose Cofer? Forther King

Celli. 1, do you feareit?

Then must I thinke you would not base it so.

Bru. I would not Cassim, yet I love him well:
But wherefore do you hold me herre so long?
What is it, that you would impart to me?
If it be ought toward the generall good,
Set Honor in one we, and Death ith other

If it be ought toward the generall good, Set Honor in onceye, and Death ith other, And I will looke on both indifferently: For let the Gods fo speed mee, as I love

The name of Honor, more then I feare death. Caffe. I know that vertug to be in you Brum. As well as I do know your outward fauour. Well, Honor is the subject of my Story : I cannot rell, what you and other men Thinke of this life . Bu: for my lingle felfe, I had as liefe not be, as live to be In awe of fuch a Thing, as I my felfe. I was borne free as Cefar. To were you, We both have fed as well, and we can both Endure the Winters cold, as well as hee. For once, vpon a Rawe and Gustie day, The troubled Tyber, chafing with her Shores, Cafar faide to me, Dar'st thou Cassing now Leape in with me into this angry Flood, And fwim to yonder Point? V pon the word, Accourred as I was, I plunged in And bad him follow: fo indeed he did. The Torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it With lufty Sinewes, throwing it afide, And stemming it with hearts of Controverfie. But ere we could arrive the Point propos'd, Cofo cride, Helpe me Coffin, or I finke. I (as Ema, our great Ancefor, Did from the Flames of Troy, vpon his shoulder The old Anchyfes beare) fo, from the waves of Tyber Did I the tyred Cofor : And this Man, Is now become a God, and Caffou is A wretched Creature, and must bend his body, If Cafer carelelly but nod on him. He had a Feauer when he was in Spaine. And when the Fit was on him, I did marke How he did shake : Tis true, this God did shake, His Cowstd lippes did from their colour five, And that same Eye, whose bend doth awe the World, Did loose his Lustre: I did heare him grone: I, and that Tongue of his, that bad the Romans Marke him, and write his Speeches in their Bookes, Alas, it cried, Give me some danke Tilinum,

As a ficke Girle : Ye Gods, it doth amaze me, A man of fuch a feeble remper should So get the flart of the Maiesticke world, And beare the Palme alone.

Flourist. Showt Bru. Another generall (hout?

I do beleeue, that their applaules are For forme new Honors, that are heap'd on Cafar

Cass. Why man, he doth bestride the narrow world Like a Coloffus, and we petty men Walke under his huge legges, and peepe about To finde out selves dishonourable Graves. Men at sometime, are Masters of their Fates. The fault (deere Brutse) is not in our Starres, But in our Schuer, that we are underlings. Brus and Cefar: What should be in that Cefar? Why should that name be sounded more then yours Write them together: Yours, is as faire a Name: Sound them, it doth become the mouth aswell: Weigh them, it is as heavy : Consure with 'em, Brutes will flatt a Spirit as soone as Cafar. Now in the names of all the Gods at once, Vpon what meate doth this our Cefar feede, That he is growne fo great? Age, thou art tham'd. Rome, thou haft lost the breed of Noble Bloods. When went there by an Age, fince the great Flood, But it was fam'd with more then with boe man? When could they say (till now) that talk'd of Rome, That her wide Walkes incompast but one man? Now is it Rome indeed, and Roome cnough When there is in it but one onely man. Olyou and I, have heard our Fathers fay, There was a Brutus once, that would have brook'd Th'eremall Divell to keepe his State in Rome, As easily as a King.

Bru. That you do loue me, I am nothing lealous: What you would worke me roo, I have some ayme: How I have thought of this, and of these times I shall recount heereafter. Forthis present, I would not fo (with love I might intreat you) Be any further moou'd: What you have faid. I will confider: what you have to fay I will with patience heare, and finde a time Both meete to heare, and answer fuch high things. Till then, my Noble Friend, chew vpon this: Brum had rather be a Villager, Then to repute himselfe a Sonne of Rome Vnder these hard Conditions, as this time

Is like to lay vpon vs.

Caffi. I am glad that my weake words Have frucke but thus much thew of fire from Britis.

Enter Cafar and his Traine.

Brv. The Games are done, And Cefer is returning. Cassi As they passe by, Plucke Carkaby the Sleeve, And he will (after his fowre fashion) tell you What hath proceeded worthy note to day. Bru. I will do fo: but looke you Cassus, The angry spot doth glow on Cefar brow, And all the rest, looke like a chidden Traine; Calphurnia's Cheeke is pale, and Cicero

Lookes with fuch Fetret, and fuch fiery eyes

As we have feene him in the Capitoll

Being crost in Conference, by some Senators. Caffi. Caska will tell vs what the matter is.

Caf. Amonio.

Ant. Cefar

Caf. Let me haue men about me, that are fat. Sleeke-headed men, and fuch as fleepe a-nights : Yond Caffus has a leane and hungry looke, He thinkes too much : fuch men are dangerous.

Aut. Feare him not Cefar, he's not dangerous,

He is a Noble Roman, and well given.

Cef. Would he were fatter; But I feare him not . Yet if my name were lyable to feare, I do not know the man I should auoyd So soone as that spare Cassius. He reades much, He is a great Observer, and he lookes Quite through the Deeds of men. He loues no Playes, As thou dost Amony . he heares no Musicke; Seldome he smiles, and smiles in such a fort As if he mock'd himselfe, and scorn'd his spirit That could be mou'd to smile at any thing. Such men as he, be never at hearts eafe, Whiles they behold a greater then themselues, And therefore are they very dangerous. I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd. Then what I feare : for alwayes I am Cefar. Come on my right hand, for this eare is deafe, And tell me truely, what thou think'st of him, Sennit Exouns Cafar and his Trame.

Cask. You pul'd me by the cloake, would you speake with me?

Bru. I Caske, tell vs what hath chanc'd to day That Cefar lookes to fad

Cask, Why you were with him, were you not? Bru. Ishould not then aske Caska what had chance

Cask. Why there was a Crowne offer'd him; & being offer'd him, he put it by with the backe of his hand thus, and then the people fell a shouting.

Bre. What was the second noyse for?

Cask Why for that too.

Casse. They shouted thrice: what was the last cry for?

Cask, Why for that too.

Bru. Was the Crowne offer'd him thrice?

Cast. I mate was't, and hee put it by thrice, euerie time gentler than other; and at every putting by, mine honest Neighbors showted

Cass. Who offer thim the Crowne?
Cask, Why Antony.
Bru Tell vs the manner of it, gentle Caska.

Caska. I can as well bee hang'd as tell the manner of it: It was meere Foolerie, I did not marke it. I fawe Marke Autony offer him a Growne, yet 'twas not a Crowne neyther, 'twas one of these Coronets: and as I told you, hee put it by once: but for all that, to my thinking, he would faine have bad it. Then hee offered it to him againe: then bee put it by againe: but to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time; hee put it the third time by, and still as hee refus'dit, the rabblement howered, and clapp'd their chopt hands, and threw uppe their (weatie Night-cappes, and vesered such a deale of slinking breath, because Cafar refus'd the Crowne, that it had (almost) chooked Cafar: for hee swoonded, and fell downe at it: And for mine owne part, I durfinet laugh, for feare of opening my Lippes, and receyuing the bad Coffe But loft I pray you: what, did Cafer [wound? Cat He fell downe in the Market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechlelle.

Brus. The very like he hash the Falling Schwesses.
Cass. No. Case hash it note but you and I,
And honest Caska, we have the Falling sicknesses.

Cat I know not what you meane by that, but I am fure Cafer fell downe. If the tag-ragge people did noe elap 'nim, and hille him, according as he pleas'd, and difpleas'd them, as they wie to doe the Players in the Theaire, I am no true man.

Brut. What faid he, when he came voto himfelfe?

Cut Marry, before he fell downe, when he perceiu'd the common Heard was glad he refus'd the Crowne, he pluckt me ope his Doubles, and offer'd them his Throat to cut: and I had beene a man of any Occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might goe to Hell among the Rogues, and to hee fell. When he came to himfelfe agains, hee faid, If hee had done, or laid any thing smille, he delie'd their Worthips to thinke It was his infirmitie. Three or foure Wenches where I Rood, cryed, Alaste good Soule, and forgave him with all their hearts: But there's no heed to be taken of theme if Cafar had stab'd their Mothers, they would have done no lesse.

Brut. And after that, he came thus fad away.

Cash. I. Cass. Did Coero say any thing?

Cak. I.he Spoke Greeke.

Calli. To what effect?

Cark Nay, and I tell you that. Ile ne're looke you i'th' face againe. But those that understood him, smil'd at one another, and shooke their heads: but for mine owne part, it was Greeke to me. I could tell you more newes too: Marrelus and Flaving, for pulling Scatffes off Cafors Images, are put to filence. Fare you well. There was more Foolerie yet, if I could remember it.

Cafe. Will you suppe with me to Night, Carket

Cat. No, I am promis'd forth.

Caffin Will you Dine with me to morrow?

Cark I, if I be alive, and your minde hold, and your Dinner worth the eating.

Caffe. Good, I will expect you.

Cask Doe so: farewell both. Exit.

Brut. What a blunt sellow is this growne to be?

He was quick Mettle, when he went to Schools.

Cast So is he now, in execution Of any bold, or Noble Enterprize, How-ever he puts on this tardie forme. This Rudeneffe is a Sawce to his good Wit, Which gives men fromacke to difgeft his words With better Appetite.

Brut. And foit is t For this time I will leave you: To morrow, if you please to speake with me, I will come home to you: or if you will, Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Caffi. I will doe fo: till then, thinke of the World.

Exu Brutas. Well Bruth, thou art Noble: yet I fee,

Thy Honorable Mettle may be wrought Promehat it is dilpos'd: therefore it is meet, That Noble mindes keepe ever with their likes: For who fo firme, that cannot be seduc'd? Cefar doth beare me hard, but he loves Brum.

If I were Brutes no weend he were Caffin, He should not humor me. I will this Night, In feuerall Hands in at his Windowes throw. As if they came from fourrall Citizens, Writings, all tending to the great opinion.
That Rome holds of his Name: wherein obscurely Cafari Ambirion shall be glanced at And after this, let Cafer feat him fure, For wee will shake him, or worse dayes endure.

> Thursder, and Lightning. Enses Cally and CKETO.

Cic. Good even, Catar brought you Cafer horned Why are you breathleffe, and why flare you fo?

Cak. Are not you moud, when all the fway of Earth Shakes, like a thing vontime? O Cirera, I have feene Tempests, when the scolding Winds Have tiu'd the knottie Oaker, and I have feene Th'ambitious Ocean (well, and rage, and foame, To be exalted with the threatning Clouds: But never till to Night, never till now, Did I goethrough : Tempeft-dropping-fire, Eyther there is a Civill firife in Heaven Or elfe the World, too fawcse with the Gods, Incenses them to send destruction.

Cie. Why, law you any thing more wonderfell? Cart. A common flave, you know him well by light, Held up his left Hand, which did flame and burne Like twentie Torches loyn'd; and yet his Hand, Not sensible of fire remain'd vnscorch'd. Befides, I ha'not fince put vp my Sword, Against the Capitall I met a Lyon, Who glaz'd vpon me, and were furly by, Without annoying me. And there were drawne Vpon a beape, a hundred gastly Women. Transformed with their feare, who swore, they far? Men; all infire, walke up and downe the freetes. And yesterday, the Bird of Night did fit, Euen at Noone-day, vpon the Market place, Howling, and shreeking. When these Prodigies Doe so conjoynely meet, let not men say. Thele are their Reasons, they are Naturall: For I belowe, they are portentous things Vnto the Clymate, that they point vpon.

Cie. Indeed, it is a strange disposed time But men may construe things after their fashion, Cleane from the purpose of the things theinselves. Comes Cafer to the Capital to morruw?

Cast He doth: for he did bid Anianus Send word to you, he would be there to morrow.

Cic. Good-night then, Cuka This disturbed Skie is not to walke in. Exis CHETCH Cask Farewell Carro.

Enter Callina.

Caffi. Who's there?

Cat. A Romane.

Coffi. Care by your Voyce

Cark, Your Eare u good. Caffin, what Night is thir?

Caffe Avery pleating Night to honest men.

Who euer knew the Heavens menace fo?

Cafe. Who ever knew the Heavens menace for Caffe. Those that have knowne the Earth so full of faults.

For

For my part, I have walk'd about the freeza, Submitting me vnto the perillous Night; And thus unbraced, Cuka, as you fee, Haue bar'd my Bolome to the Thunder-flone: And when the croffe blew Lightning form'd to open The Breft of Heaven, I did present my selfe Even mathe syme, and very flash of ir.

Cark But wherefore did you so much tempt the Hea It is the part of men, to feare and tremble, When the most mightie Gods, by tokens send Such dreadfull Heraulds, to aftonish va.

Caffi. You are dull, Casha And those sparkes of Life, that should be in a Roman, You doe want, or elle you vie noc. You looke pale, and gaze, and put on feate, And call your felfe in wonder, To fee the strange impatience of the Heavens: But if you would confider the true coule, Why all these Fires, why all these gliding Gholts, Why Birds and Beafts, from qualitie and kinde, Why Old men, Fooles, and Children calculate, Why all these things change from their Ordinance, Their Natures, and pre-formed Faculties, To monstrous qualitie; why you shall finde, That Heaven hath infus'd them with these Spirits, To make them Instruments of feare, and warning, Vnto fome monfirous State. Now could I (Casks) name to thee a man, Most like this dreadfull Night, That Thunders, Lightens, opens Graves, and toares, As doth the Lyon in the Capitall: A man no mightier then thy felfe, or me, In personall action; yet prodigious growne, And fearefull, as these strange cruptions are.

Cast. Tis Cafar that you meane s

Is it not, Calling?

Offic. Let it be who it is: for Romans now Haue Thewes, and Limbes, like to their Anceflors; But woe the while, out Fathers mindes are dead, And we are gouern'd with our Mothers (pirits, Our yoake, and sufferance, thew vs Worsanith.

Cark, Indeed, they fay, the Senators to morrow Meane to establish Cefer as a King : And he shall weare his Crowne by Sea, and Land,

In every place, faue here in Italy .

Casti I know where I will werre this Dagger then; Coffin from Bondage will deliver Caffins: Therein, yee Gods, you make the weake most frong; Therein, yee Goda, you Tyrants doe defeat. Nor Stome Tower, nor Walls of beaten Braffe, Nor syre leffe Dungeon, nor frong Linkes of Iron, Can be recentive to the strength of spirit: But Life being wearie of these worldly Barres, Neuer lacks power to dismisse it selfe, If I know this know all the World befides, That pure of Tyrannie that I doe beare, I can shake off as pleasure

Cart. So can 1:

So enery Band-man in his owne hand beares The power to cancell his Capilvitie.

Call And why should Cafer be a Tyrane then? Poore man, I know he would not be a Wolfe, But that he fees the Romans are but Sheepe : He were no Lyon, were not Romans Hindes Those that with baste will make a mightie fire, Beginst with weake Strawes, Whattrash is Rome? What Rubbish, and what Offall? when it serues For the base matter, to Illuminate So vile a thing as Cafar. But ob Griefe, Where hast thou led me? I (perhaps) speake this Before a willing Bond-man: then I know My answere must be made. But I am arm'd, And dangers are to me indifferent.

Cask. You speake to Caska, and to such a man, That is no flearing Tell-tale. Hold, my Hand: Be factious for redrelle of all these Griefes, And I will fet this foot of mune as farre,

As who goes farthell.

Cafe. There's a Bargaine made. Now know you, Casta, I have mou'd already Some certains of the Noblest minded Romans To vader-goe, with me, an Enterprize, Of Honorable dangerous consequence; And I doe know by this, they flay for me In Pompeyer Porch : for now this feacefull Night, There is no furre, on walking in the streetes; And the Complexion of the Element Is Fauors, like the Worke we have in band, Most bloodie, fierie, and most terrible.

Enter Cinna.

Cabe. Stand close a while, for heere comes one in hafte.

Caffe Tis Cinna, I doe know him by his Gate, He is a friend. Cinna, where hafte you fo? Coma. To finde out you: Who's that, Merelless Cymber?

Caffi. No, te is Carta, one incorporate To our Atrempts. Am I not flay'd for, Cima? Cuna. I am glad on't.

What a fearefull Night is this?

There's two or three of vs have feene ftrange lighes.

Caffi Am i not flay'd for ? tell me. Cuena. Yes, you are. O Caffins, If you could but winne the Noble Brune To our party-

Coffi. Be you content. Good Comarcake this Paper, And looke you lay it in the Pretors Chayre, Where Brutter my but finde it : and throw this In at his Window; fee this up with Waxe V pon old Bruem Statue: all this done, Repaire to Pempeyes Porch, where you first finde vo. Is Decime Bruthi and Trebenius there?

Conna. All, but Messilia Cymber, and hee's gone To iceke you at your house: Well, I will his. And so bestow these Papers as you bad me.

Caffi. That done, repayte to Pompeyer Theater,

Came Caska, you and I will yet, ere day, See Brusse at his house : three parts of him ls ours alreadie, and the man entire Vpon the next encounter, yeelds him outs.

Cark, O,he fits high mall the Peoples hearts a And that which would appeare Offence in vs, His Countenance, like nichest Alchymie, Will change to Vertue, and to Worthinesse.

Caffi. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him, You have right well conceited: let vs goe, For it is after Mid-night, and ere day We will awake him, and be fure of him.

Actus Secundus.

Timer Benezu to bu Orchard

Brut. What Lucins, hoe? I connot, by the progrette of the Starres, Give guelle how occre to day - Lacim, I fay? I would it were my fault to fleepe fo foundly. When Lucan, when ? swake, I fay: what Lucas ? Enter Lucina

Luc. Call'd you my Lord? Brut. Get me a Tapot in my Study, Lucina:

When it is lighted, come and call me here. Luc. I will, my Lord. Brut, It must be by his death : and for my part, I know no personall cause, to spurne at him. But for the generall. He would be crown'd: How that might change his nature, there's the question? It is the bright day, that brings forth the Adder, And that craues warre walking: Crowne him that, And then I graunt we put a Sting in him, That at his will he may doe danger with. Th'abuse of Greatnesse, when it dis-ioynes Remorfe from Power: And to speake truth of Cefer. I have not knowne, when his Affections (way'd More then his Reason. But 'tis a common proofe, That Lowlyneffe is young Ambitions Ladder, Whereto the Climber vpward turnes his Face But when he once attaines the spmost Round, Hethen voto the Ladder turnes his Backe, Lookes in the Clouds, scorning the base degrees By which he did afcend: fo Cofar may; Then least he may, preuent. And fince the Quarrell Will beare no colour, for the thing he is, Fashion it thus; that what he is augmented, Would runne to thele, and thele extremities: And therefore thinks him as a Serpents egge, Which hatch'd, would as his kinde grow milchieuous;

Enter Lucine.

Luc. The Taper burneth in your Closer, Sir: Scarching the Window for a Plint, I found This Paper, thus feal'd vp, and I am fure It did not lye there when I went to Bed.

Gines bim the Letter Brat. Get you to Bed againe, it is not day : Is not to morrow (Boy) the first of March?

Luc. Iknow not, Sit.

And kill him in the thell.

Brin. Looke in the Calender, and bring me word.

Luc. I will, Sir. Exit.

Brut. The exhalations, whizzing in the agre, Give so much light, that I may reade by them.

Opens the Letter, and reades. Brutus thou fleep'ft; awake, and fee thy fetfe: Shall Rome Orc. Speake . firike, redresse Brutus, thou fleep'ft: awake.

Such instigations have beene often dropt, Where I have tooke them vp: Shall Rome, cre. Thus must I piece it ou: 1 Shall Rome stand under one mans awe? What Rome?

My Ancestors did from the streetes of Rome The Tarquin drive, when he was call'da King. Speake, freke, redreffe. Am I entreated

To speake, and Atthe? O Rome, I make thee promise, If the redresse will follow, thou receivest Thy full Petition at the hand of Brunns. Enter Lucian.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fisteene dayes. Knocky muhm.

Bru. The good. Go to the Gate, some body knoths Since Caffus fust did wher me against Cafer. I have not slept. Betweene the acting of a dreadfull thing. And the first motion, all the Interem 18 Like a Phantasmayor a hideous Dreame :

The General and the mortal lestruments Are then in councell; and the flate of a man, Like to a little Kingdome, faffers then The nature of an lufurredion.

Exter Luciso.

Luc. Sa, tis your Brother Caffin at the Doore, Who doth defite to fee you.

Brut. Is he alone?

Luc. No, Sir, there are moe with him.

Brut. Doe you know them?

Luc. No, Sir, their Hats are plocks about their Eares, And halfe their Faces buried in their Cloakes, That by no meanes I may discouer them, By any marke of fauour.

Brut. Let'em enter : They are the Faction. O Conspiracie, Sham it chou to shew thy dang'rous Brow by Night. When eaills are most free? Other, by day Where wilt thou finde a Caneme darke enough, To maske thy monfrous Vilage? Seek none Confpiracie, Hide it in Smiles, and Affabilitie: For if thou path thy native femblance on, Not Erebu it felfe were dimme enough, To hide thee from preuention.

> Enter the Confirmers, Coffine, Casha, Desine, Cinna, Metelin, and Trebonins.

Caff. I thinke we are too bold vpon your Reft: Good morrow Brusu, doe we trouble you?

Brus. I have beene up this howte, awake all Night: Know I these men, that come along with you?

Caff. Yes, every man of them; and no man here But honors you: and every one doth wift, You had but that opinion of your felie, Which enery Noble Roman beares of you. This is Trebonism.

Brut. He is welcome hither. Caf. This, Decim Brains.

Brut. He is welcome coo.

Caf. This, Casta; this, Coma; and this, Merekan

Bru. They are all welcome.

What watchfull Cares doe interpole themselves Betwixe your Eyes, and Night?

The whifeer Caf. Shall I entreat a word? Decime. Here lyes the East : doch not the Day breake heere?

Cak. No.

Cin. Opardon, Sir, it doth; and yon grey Lines, That free the Clouds, are Messengers of Day.

Cark. You shall confesse, that you are both decenu'd: Heere, as I point my Sword, the Sunne arifes, Which is a great way growing on the South,

Weigh-

Weighing the youthfull Season of the years, Some two moneths hence, up higher toward the North Hefirst presents his fire, and the high East Stands as the Capitoll, directly heere.

Bru. Glue me your hands all ouer, one by one. Caf. And let vs Iwerre our Resolution. Brut. No, not an Oath : If not the Face of men, The fufferance of our Soules, the times Abule; If thefe be Motives weake, breake off betimes, And every man hence, to his idle bed: So let high-fighted-Tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by Lottery. But if thefe
(As I am fure they do) beare hire enough
To kindle Cowards, and to steele with valour The melting Spirits of women. Then Countrymen, What needs we any spurre, but our owne cause To pricke ve so redresse? What other Bond, Then feeret Romans, that have spoke the word, And will not palter? And what other Oath, Then Honesty to Honesty ingag'd, That this shall be, or we will fall for it. Sweare Priests and Cowards, and men Cautelous Old feeble Carrions, and such suffering Soules That welcome wrongs: Vnto bad causes, sweare Such Crestures as men doubt, but do not stains The even vertue of our Enterprize, Nor th'insuppressive Mettle of our Spirits, To thinke, that or our Caule, or our Performance Did neede an Oath. When every drop of blood That every Roman beares, and Nobly beares Is guilty of a fenerall Baftardie, If he do breake the fmall oft Perticle Of any promise that hath past from him.

Caf. But what of Carero? Shall we found him? I thinke he will fland very flrong with vs.

Cask, Let vs not leave him out.
Cym. No,by no meanes.
Metel. Olet vs have him, for his Silver haires Will purchase vs a good opinion: And buy mens voyces, to commend our deeds: It shall be sayd, his judgement rul'd our hands, Ouryouths, and wildenesse, shall no whit appeare, But all be buried in his Grauity.

Bru. Oname him not; let vs not breake with bim,

For he will never follow any thing That off inmen begin.

Caf. Then leave him our Cust, Indeed, he is not fit.

Decise. Shall no man else be touche, but onely Cafer ? Caf. Decises well veg'd: I thinke it is not meet, Marke Amony, fo well below'd of Cafer, Should out-line Cefar, we shall finde of him A shrew'd Contriner. And you know, his meanes If he improve them, may well fretch to farre As to sanoy vs all: which to prevent.

Lei Amony and Cofar fall together Bru. Our course will seeme too bloody, Caine Cassius, To cut the Head off, and then hacke the Limbes s Like Wrath in death, and Enuy afterwards: Fo: Autony, is but a Limbe of Cafar. Let's be Sacrificers, but not Butchers Caim : We all stand up against the spirit of Cafar, And in the Spirit of men, there is no blood: O that we then could come by Cafari Spirit, And not dilmember Cafar ! But (alas) Cafarmust bleed for it. And gentle Friends,

Let's kill him Boldly, but not Wrathfully: Let's carue him, as a Dish fit for the Gods, Not hew him as a Carkaile fit for Hounds: And let our Hearts, as Subtle Masters do, Stirre vp their Seruants to an acte of Rage, And after freme to chide 'em. This fliall make Our purpose Necessary, and not Enuious. Which to appearing to the common eyes. We shall be call'd Purgers, not Murderers. And for Marke Antony, thinke not of him: For he can do no more then Cafari Atme, When Cafars head is off. Caf. Yet I feate him,

For in the Ingrafted love he beares to Cafer. Bru. Alas, good Cafine, do not thinke ofhim: If he love Cefar, all that he can do Is to himselfes take thought, and dye for Cafar, And that were much he should : for he is given To sports, to wildenesse, and much company.

Treb. There is no feare in him; let him not dye, For he will live, and laugh at this hecreafter.

Clocke Brikes. Brs. Peace, count the Clocke.

Caf. The Clocke hath flricken three. Ties. 'Tie time to part. Coff Butitis doubtfull get, Whether Cafer will come forth to day, or no: For he is Superflitious growns of late, Quite from the maine Opinion he held once, Of Fantalie, of Dreames, and Ceremonies: It may be, these apparant Prodigies, The vnaccustom'd Terror of this night, And the perswafion of his Augurers, May hold him from the Capitoll to day.

Decina. Neuer feare that : If he be fo refolu'd. I can ore-fway him : For he loues to heare, That Vnicornes may be betray'd with Trees, And Beares with Glasses, Elephants with Holes, Lyons with Toyles, and men with Flatterers. But, when I tell him, he hates Flatterers, He layer, he does; being then most flettered.

Let me worke :

For I can give his hun our the true bent; And I will bring him othe Capitoll.

Caf. Nay, we will all of vs, be there to fetch him Bru. By the eight house, is that the vetermoth Cin. Be that the vttermost, and faile not then.

Ma. Calses Lizarius doth beare Cafar hard, Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey; I wonder none of you have thought of him

Bru. Now good Maellus go along by him: He loues me well, and I have given him Reasons, Send him but hisher, and He fashion him.

Caf. The morning comes vpon's: Wee'l leave you Brusie,

And rriends disperse your selves; but all remember What you have faid, and thew your felues erue Romant.

Bru, Good Gentlemen, looke fresh and merrily, Let not our lookes put on our purpoles, Bur beare ir as our Roman Actors do, With vnryr'd Spirits, and formall Confrancie, Exems. And lo good morrow to you every one.

Mana Bruthe.

Boy : Lucius : Fastafleepe ? It is no matter, Enjoy the hony-heavy-Dew of Slumber . Thou halt no Figures, not no Fantalies,

Which

Which bufie care drawes, in the braines of men ; Therefore thou fleep'A fo found.

Enter Persia.

Por Brutas, my Lotd.

Bru. Parties What meane you? wherfore rife you now? It is not for your health, thus to commit

Your weake condition, to the taw cold mothing.

Par. Nor for yours neither. Y have ungently British Stole from my bed: and yellernight at Supper You lodainly arole, and walk'd about, Muhing, and fighing, with your stones a-croffer And when I ask'd you what the matter was, You fisr'd vpon me, with vngentle lookes. I vrg'd you further, then you fcratch'd your head, And too impatiently flampt with your foote : Yet I infifted, yet you answet'd not, But with an angry waster of your hand Gaue figne for me to leave you: So I did, Fearing to strengthen that impatience Which feem'd too much inkindled; and withall, Hoping it was but an effect of Humor, Which iometime bath his houre with every man. It will not let you cate, not talke, nor fleepe; And could it worke fo much vpon your shape, As at hath much preuzyl'd on your Condition, I Chould not know you Bratus. Deate my Lord, Make me acquainted with your cause of greefe. Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Bram is wife, and were he not in health, He would embrace the meanes to come by it.

Bru. Why lo I do: good Pertia go to bed.
Per. Is Brutan ficke? And is it Physicall To walke unbraced, and fucke up the humours Of the danke Morning? What, is Braw licke? And will he steale out of his wholfome bed To dare the vile contagion of the Night? And tempt the Rhewmy, and vnpurged Ayre, To adde voto hit licknelle? No my Brutus, You have some licke Offence within your minde, Which by the Right and Vertue of my place Lought to know of: And vpon my knees, I charme you, by my once commended Beauty, By all your vowes of Loue, and that great Vow Which did incorporate and make vs one, That you vnfold to me, your felfe; your halfe Why you are heavy: and what men to night Have had refort to you: for heere have beene Some fixe or fenen, who did hide their faces Euen from darkneffe.

Brs. Kneele not gentle Portia.

Per. I should not neede, if you were gentle Brutm. Within the Bond of Marriage, tell me Brsum, Is it excepted, I should know no Secrets That appertaine to you? Am I your Selfe, But as it were in fors, or limitation? To keepe with you at Meales, comfort your Bed, And talke to you fometimes? Dwell I but in the Suburbs Of your good pleasure? If it be no more, Portia is Briens Harlos, not his Wife, Brs. You are my true and honourable Wife,

As deere tome, as are the ruddy droppes

That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret, I graunt lam a Woman; but withall, A Woman that Lord Bruss tooke to Wife;

I graunt I am a Woman; but withall,

A Woman well reported : Carda Daughter Thinke you, I am no flronger then my Sex Being to Father'd, and to Husbanded? Tell me your Counfels, I will not disclose 'em: I have made flrong proofe of my Cooffancie, Gruing my felfe a voluntary wound Heere, in the Thigh: Can I beare that with patience, And not my Husbands Secress? Bru. Oye Gods!

Render me worthy of this Noble Wife. Knacks. Harke, harke, one knockes : Portra go in a while, And by and by thy bosome shall partake The fecrets of my Heart. All my engagements, I will confirme to thee,

All the Charractery of my fad browes:

Leave me with hall.

Enter Lucim and Ligarim.

Lucisa, who's that knockes. Lac. Heere is a ficke man that would fpeak with you. Bru. Caise Ligoriu, that Merellin Spake of. Boy, stand aside. Caim Ligarius, how?

Cai. Vouchfafe good morrow from a feeble tongue, Brs. O what a time have you chole out brace Cains

To weare a Kerchiefe? Would you were not licke. Car. I am not ficke, if Brutus have in hand Any exploit worthy the name of Honor

Bru. Such an explose have I to hand Lyons, Had you a healthfull care to heare of it,

Cas By all the Gods that Romans bow before, I heere discard my sicknesse. Soule of Rome, Brave Sonne, deriu'd from Honourable Loines, Thou like an Exorcist, hast consur'd vp My mortified Spine. Now bid me runne, And I will strive with things impossible, Yes get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A peece of worke, That will make licke men whole.

Cas. But are not some whole, ther we must make ficke? Bra. That well we also. What it is my Come, I shall vasold to ther, as we are going,

To whom it must be done. Cas. Set on your foote,

And with a heart new-fit'd, I follow you, To do I know not what : but it suffices h That Bruins leads me on.

Bru, Follow me then.

Exil Portia.

Thunder & Lightning. Enter latins Cafer in bis Night-grown.

Cafer. Nor Heaven, nor Earth, Have beene at peace to night : Thrice bath Calphornia, in her fleepe cryed out, Helpe, ho: They murther Cafer. Who's within? Enter & Sermant.

Ser. My Lord Caf. Go bid the Priests do present Sacrifice, And bring me their opinions of Succelle. Ser. I will my Lord.

Esser Calpbarnia.

Cal. What mean you Cafer? Think you to walk forth? You shall not stirre out of your house to day.

Ces. Cesar shall forth; the things that threaten'd me,

Ne're look'd but on my backe : When they shall fee The face of Cafar, they are vanished.

Calp.

Est

Calp. Cafar: I never flood on Geremonies,
Yet now they fright me: There is one within,
Befides the things that we have heard and feene,
Recounts most hotrid fights feene by the Watch.
A Lionnesse have yawn'd, and yeelded up their dead;
Fierce fiery Watriouts fight upon the Clouds
In Rankes and Squadrons, and right forme of Watre
Which drizel'd blood yoon the Capitoll:
The noise of Battell huttled in the Ayre:
Horstes do neigh, and dying men did grone,
And Ghosts did shraeke and squale about the streets.
O Casar, these things are beyond all vie,
And I do seare them.

Caf. What can be alloyded
Whose end is purposed by the mighty Gods?
Yet Casar shall go sorth: for these Predictions
Are nother world in generall, as so Casar.

Calji. When Beggers dye, there are no Cornets feen,
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of Princes
Cap. Cowards dye many times before their deaths,
The valiant never tafte of death but once:
Of all the Wonders that I yet have heard,
It feemes to me most fittings that men should feare,

Seeing that death, a necessary end Will come, when it will come. Enter a Seruant,

What fay the Augurers?

Ser. They would not have you to fire forth to day. Plucking the introlles of an Offering forth, They could not finde a heart within the beaft.

Caf. The Gods do this in shame of Cowardice: Cafar should be a Beast without a heart. If he should stay at home to day for seares. No Cafar shall not; Danger knowes sull well. That Cafar is more danger rous then he, We heare two Lyons litter'd in one day, And I the elder and more terrible, And Cafar shall go foorth.

Calp. Alas my Lord,
You wifedome is confum'd inconfidence;
Do not go forth to day: Call it my feare,
That keepes you in the house, and not your owne.
Wee'l send Mark Antony to the Schare house,
And he shall say, you are not well to day;
Let me you my knee, prevaile in this.

Cef. Mark Autony thell tay I am not well.
And for thy humor, I will thay at home.

Enter Decimi.

Heere's Decim Brunn he shall tell them so.

Dec. Cefer, all liaile: Good morrow worthy Cefer, I come to fetch you to the Senate house.

Cef. And you are come in very happy time,

To beare my greeting to the Schators,
And tell them, that I will not come to day:
Cannor, is false; and that I dare not, false;
I will not come to day, tell them so Decimo.

Calp. Say he is ficke.

Caf. Shall Cafar fend a Lye?

Have I in Conquest stretcht mine Arme so farre,
To be afear d to tell Gray-beards the truth:

Drois Most mighty Cafer will not come.

Drois Most mighty Cafer let me know some cause,
Lest I be laught at when I rell them so.

Cef. The cause is in my Will, I will not come,

That is enough to fatisfie the Senate.

But for your private fatisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know,
Calpharnia heere my wise, stayes me at home:
She dreampt to night, she saw my Statue,
Which like a Fountaine, with an hundred spours
Did run pure blood: and many lusty Romans
Game smiling, at did bathe their hands in it:
And these does she apply, for warnings and portents,
And euils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg'd, that I will stay at home to day.
Deci. This Dream; is all amisse interpreted,

Deci. This Dreame is all amille interpreted, It was a vision, faire and fortunate:
Your Statue spouring blood in many pipes, In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
Signifies, that from you great Rome shall sucke Reuning blood, and that great men shall presse For Tinetures, Staines, Reliques, and Cognifance.
This by Lalpharma's Dreame is signified.

Cef. And this way have you well expounded it, 'Deci. I have, when you have heard what I can by? And know it now, the Senate have concluded To give this day, a Crowne to mighty Cefer. If you shall fend them word you will not come, If you shall fend them word you will not come. Their mindes may change. Besides, it were a mocke Api to be render'd, for some one to by, Breake up the Schate, till another time: When Cefer wife shall meete with better Dreames. If Cefer hide himselfe, shall they not whisper Loe Cefer is affeald?

Pardon me Cefer for my deere deere love To your proceeding, bids me tell you this;

And reason to my love is liable.

(of How soulish do your lears seems now Calpharnia?

I am ashamed I did yeeld to them.

Give me my Robe, for I will go.

Enter Bruine, Ligarius, Merelus, Caska, Trebousus, Cynna, and Publius.

And looke where Publish is come to fetch me

Pub, Gondinorrow Cefer.

Cef. Welcome Publim.
What Brining are you filtered to earely too?
Good morrow Carka Caises Ligarism.

Cefor was ne re to much your enemy, As that tame Ague which hath made you leane. What is't a Clocke?

Brn. Cafar, 'cis Arucken eight.

Cef. I thanke you for your paines and custelie.

Enter Antony.

See, Antom that Reuels long a-nights
Is notwithflanding up. Good morrow Amony.

Ant So to most Noble Cafar

Cef. Bid them prepare within:

I am too blame to be thus waited for.
Now Cynna, now Metellia: what Trobusius.
I have an houres talke in flore for yout
Remember that you call on me to day s
Be neere me, that I may remember you.

Treb Cafer I will and to neere will I be,
That your best Friends shall wish I had beene surther,
Cafe Good Friends go in, and caste forms wine with me

And we (like Friends) will fireight way go cogether,

Bru. That every like is not the farne, O Cefar,

The heart of Bruss earner to thinke yoon.

The heart of Brusse earnes to thinke vpon.

Enter Arternadorus.

Cafar, beware of Brusse, cake beede of Cafetus; come no

our re

were Carta, bour an ope to Cyma, trust not Trobonius, make well Sandles Cymber, Docus Brutus loves thee not : Thou haft wrong'd Carus Ligarius. There is but one minde in all these men, and it is born against Cosar Il thou beest not Im-mortall, looks about you: Security gives way to Conspirate The mighty Gods defend thee.

Thy Louer, Ariemalorus.

Home will I fland, till Cafar paffe along, And as a Suco: will I gure him this: My heart laments, that Vertue cannot live Our of the teeth of Emulation If thou reade this, O Cafe, thou mayeft liag If pot, the Fates with Traitors do continue. Exa Enter Parties and Lucius.

Por. I prythee Boy run to the Senate-house, Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone. Why docA thou flay?

Lie. To know my errand Madam.

Per. I would have had thee there and heere agen Ere I can tell thee what thou should'th do there: O Constancie, be strong upon my side; Set a liuge Mountaine 'tweene my Heart and Tongue. I have a mans minde, but a womans might t Here hard it is for women to keepe counsell. Art thou heere yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do? Run to the Capitoll, and nothing elfe? And fo returne to you, and nothing elfe?

Par. Yes, bring me word Boy, if thy Lord look well, For he went fickly forth: and take good note

What Cafar doth, what Sutors presse to him. Hearke Boy, what noy fe is that?

Luc. Theare none Madam.

Por Prythee liften well: I heard a bussling Rumor like a Frag,

And the winde brings it from the Capitoll.

Luc. Sooth Madam, I heare nothing. Enter the South fager.

Per. Come hither Fellow, which way half choo bio? Scoth. At mine owne boule, good Lady.

Per. Whatis't a clocke?

Sooth. About the ninth houre Lady. Por. Is Cafer yet gone to the Capitoll?

South. Madam not yet, I go to take my fland.

To fee him palle on to the Capitoll,

Por. Thou half some suite to Cafer, half thou not? South. That I have Lady, if it will please Cafor In be lo good co Cafer, as to beare me :-

I hall befeech him to befriend himfelfe. Por. Why know's thou any harme's intended towards him? Soorb. None that I know will be, Much that I feare niey chance : Good morrow to you : heere the street is narrow t The throng that followes Cofer at the heeles, Of Senators, of Praziors, common Sutors, Will crowd a feeble man (almost) to death. He get me to a place more voyd, and there Speake to great Cofar as he comes along. Por. I must go in:

Exa

Aye me. How weake a thing The heart of woman is? O Bruta, The Heavens speede thee in thine enterprize. Sure the Boy heard me : Bruin hatha fuite That Cafar will not grant, O, I grow faint t Run Lucius, and commend me to my Lord,

Say I am merry; Come to me againe And bring me word what he doth fay to thee.

Adus Tertius.

Enter Cafer, Brutus, Coffen, Casto, Decini, Metellus, Tye bonces, Cynna, Amony Legidus. Artimedoras, Pub. lows and the South ager

Caf The Ides of Match are come South. I Cafer, but not gone. An Haile Cefe : Read this Scedule.

Decl Trebomu doth defire you to ore read (At your best leyfure) this his humble fuite,

An. O Cefer, reade mine heft : for mine's a feite Thatitouches Cafor neeter. Read it great Cafor.

Cef. What souches vs our felfe, shall be last feru'd. Art. Delay nor Cafer, read it inftantly.

Caf What, is the fellow mad?
Pub Sirra, give place.

Caffi. What, vrge you your Petitions in the firer ! Come to the Capitoll.

Popil I with your enterprize to day may thrive.

Coffi. What enterprize Popilim?

Popil. Fare you well.

Bru What laid Populling Love?

Caffi He wisht to day our enterprize might thrine : I feare our purpole is discourted.

Bru. Looke how te makes to Cefer: matke him Caffi. Cata be sodaine, tor we feare prevention. Bruim what shall be done? If this be knowne, Caffin or Cafar neuer shall tutne backe. For I will flay my felfe.

Brn. Caffin beconstant:

Popilise Leas (peakes not of our porpoles, For looke he smiles, and Cafer doch not change

Caffi Trebonen knowes his time: for look you arm a He drawer Mark Antony out of the way.

Deci. Where is Merellus Comber, let him go,

And presently preferre his fuite to Cafar. Brw. He is addreit : preife neere, and fecond him

Cim. Carta, you are the first that reares your band.

Cef. Are we all ready? What is now amille, That Cefer and his Senace must redresse?

Merel. Most high, most mighty, and most pulless Cafe

Merellin Comber thrower before thy Sears An humble heart.

Caf. I must prevent thee Cymber: These couclings and these lowly courtener Might fire the blood of ordinary men, And come pre-Ordinance, and firft Decree Into the lane of Children. Be not fond. To thinke that Cafer beares fuch Rebell blood That will be thaw'd from the true quality With that which melteth Fooles, I meane fweet words, Low-crooked-curthes, and bale Spaniell fawning Thy Brother by decree is banished If thou doest bend, and pray, and sawne for him,

I spurme thee like a Curre out of my way : Know, Cafar doth not wrong, not without cruft Will he be farished

Metells there no voyce more worthy then any own

To found more sweetly in great Cafar ease, For the repealing of my banish'd Brother? Bru. I kisse thy hand, but not in stattery Cafar:

Defiting thee, that Publism Cymber may
Have an immediate freedome of repeale.

Caf. What British?

Caffi. Pardon Cafar: Cafar pardon:
As lowe as to thy foote doth Caffine fall,
To begge infranchifement for Publica Cymber.

I could be well mou'd, if I were as you, If I could pray to moone, Prayers would moone me : But I am constant as the Northerne Starre, Of whose true fixt, and testing quality, There is no fellow in the Firmanient. The Skies are painted with vonumbred sparkes, They are all Fire, and every one doth thine : But, there's but one in all doth hold hisplace. So, in the World; Tis furnish'd well with Men, And Men are Flesh and Blood, and apprehensue; Yet in the number, I do know but One That vnaffayleable holds on his Ranke, Veshak'd of Motion; and that I am be, Let me a little thew it, cuen in this: That I was constant Cymber Stould be banish'd, And constant do remaine to keepe him fo.

Cuma. O Cafar.
Caf. Hence: Wilethoulife up Olympus?
Deckus, Great Cafar.
Caf. Doch not Bruss bootleffe kneele?

Cef. Doth not Brut w bootlesse kneele? Cak. Speake hands sorme.

Cef. Et Tu Brusti ____ Then fall Cefar.

Cin. Liberty, Freedome; Tyranny is dead, Run hence, proclaime, cry it about the Streets. Caffi. Some to the common Pulpits, and cry out Liberty, Freedome, and Enfranchisement.

Brw. People and Senators, be not affrighted t

Fly not, fland fill: Ambitions debt is paid.

Cask, Go to the Pulpit Brutus.

Dec. And Cassim too. Bru. Where's Publim?

Cin. Fieere, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Mer. Standfast together, least some Friend of Cafara

Should chance

Erm. Talke not of flanding. Publish good cheere, There is no harme intended to your person, Not to no Roman else: so tell them Publish.

Caffi. And leave vs Publius, leaft that the people Rushing on vs, should do your Age some mischiese.

Bru. Do so, and let no man abide this deede.

But we the Doers.

Enter Trebonism.

Caff. Where is Ansony? Trob. Fled to his Houleamaz'd: Men, Wives, and Children, Aare, cry out, and run, As it were Doomesday.

Bru. Fates, we will know your pleafures: That we shall dye we know, 'tis but the time And drawing dayes out, that men sand vpon.

Cask. Why he that cuts off twenty yeares of life, Cuts off formany yeares of fearing death.

Brs. Grant that, and then is Death a Benefit:
So are we Cefars Friends, that have abridg'd
His time of fearing death. Stoope Romans, Roope,
And let vs bathe out hands in Cafars blood
Vp to the Elbowes, and befine are our Swords:

Then walke we forth, even to the Market place, And waving our ted Weapons o're our heads, Let's all cry Peace, Freedome, and Liberty.

Caff., Stoop then, and wash. How many Ages hence Shall this our lofty Scene be acted ouer,

In State vnborne, and Accents yet vnknowne?

Bris. How many times shall Cafar bleed in sport,

The same of Participal Rasia has a long.

That now on Pompeyes Basis Iye along, No worthier then the dust?

Caffi. So oft 2s that shall be, So often shall the knot of vs becall'd, The Men shas gave their Country liberty.

Dec. What, shall we forth? Cass. I every man away.

Brutus shall leade, and we will grace his heeles With the most boldest, and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Seruent.

Brn. Soft, who comes heere? A friend of Ancomes. Ser. Thus Bruene did my Mafter bid me kneese; Thus did Mark Amony bid me fall downe, And being proftrate, thus he bad me fay Bruim is Noble, Wife, Valiant, and Honell ; Cafar was Mighry, Bold, Royall, and Louing: -Say, I loue Brus, and I honour him; Say, I fear'd Cafar, honout'd him, and lou'd him. If Brutin will vouchfafe, that Ansony May fafely come to him, and be refolu'd How Cefar hath deferu'd to lye in death, Mark Antony, shall not love Cafar dead So well as Brutte living; but will follow The Fortunes and Affayres of Noble Brutus. Thorough the hazards of this vncrod State, With all true Faith. So fayes my Master Antony.

Bru. Thy Master is a Wise and Valiant Romane,

Bru. Thy Mafter is a Wife and Valiant Rome I neuer thought him worfe: Tell him, so please him come vinothis place He shall be satisfied, and he my Koner.

He shall be satisfied: and by my Honor Depart vntouch'd.

Ser. He fetch him presently.

Exa Servant.

Bru. 1 know that we shall have him viell to Friend.

Cass. 1 wish we may: But yet have 1 a minds

That feares him much : and my misgiuing still Falles shrewdly to the purpose.

Enter Antony.

Bra. But heere cones Amony: Welcome Mark Antony.

Am. Omighty Cafar! Dolt thou lye fo lowe? Are all thy Conquests, Glories, Triumphez, Spoiles, Shrunke to this little Measure? Fare thee well. I know not Gentlemen what you intend, Who elfe must be let blood, who elfe is ranke If I my felfe, there is no house fo fit As Cafars deaths houre; nor no instrument Of halfe that worth, as those your Swords; made rich With the most Noble blood of all this World. I do befeech yee, if you beare me hard, Now, whil'it your purpled hands do reeke and imcake, Fulfill your pleasure. Live a thousand yeares, I shall not finde my selfe so apt to dye. No place will please me so, no meane of death. As heere by Celar, and by you cut off, The Choice and Master Spirits of this Age.

Bru. O Antony! Begge not your death of vs:
Though now we must appeare bloody and cruell,
As by our hands, and this our prefent Acte
You fee we do: Yet fee you but our hands,

And

And this, the bleeding bufineffe they havedore: Our hearts you fee not, they are pligifull i And pitty to the generall wrong of Rome, As fire drives out fire, la pitty, pitty Hath done this deed on Cafer. For your part. To you, our Swords have leaden points Marke Anteny: Our Armes in Grength of malice, and our Herets Of Brothers temper, do receiue you in, With all kindeloue, good thoughts, and reverence.

Caffe Your voyce shall be as strong as any mans,

In the disposing of new Dignities

Brn. Onely be patient, till we have appeared The Multitude, beside themselves with feare, And then, we will deliver you the caufe, Why I, that did love Cafar when I ftrooke him,

Haue thus proceeded.

Am. I doubt not of your Wiledome. Let exchrman render me his bloody hand. First Aterem Brune will I shake with you; Next Carse Caffues do I take your hand; Now Decrus Bruins yours; now yours Merellas, Yours Cmna; and my valiant Casta yours Though last, not least in love, yours good Tribonius, Gentlemen all: Alas, what shall I say, My credit now stands on such suppery ground, That one of two bad wayes you must concert me, Eirlier a Coward, or a Flatterer. That I did love thee Cafar D'un true: If then thy Spirit looke vpon us how, Shall senot greeue thee deerer then thy death, To fee thy Amony making his peace, Shaking the bloody fingnes of thy Foes? Most Noble, in the presence of thy Coarse, Had I as many eyes, as thou half wounds, Weeping as rall as they fireame forth thy blood, It would become me better, then to close Integrates of Friendship with thine enemies. Pardon me Iulius, heere was't thou bay'd brave Hart, ricere did'fethou fall, and heere thy Hunters frand Sign'd in thy Spoyle, and Crimfon'd in thy Lethee. O World thou wast the Forrest to this Hart, And this indeed, O World, the Hart of thee. How like a Deere, froken by many Princes, Dost thou heere lye?

Caffs. Mark Antony. Ans. Pardon me Canu Caffun: The Enemies of Cafar, shall say this: Then, In a Friend, it is cold Modefile.

Caffs. I blame you not for praising Cafar fo But what compact means you to have with vi? Will you be prick'd in number of our Friends, Or Chall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I tooke your hands, but was indeed Sway'd from the point, by looking downe on Cafar. Friends am I with you all, and love you all, Vpon this hope, that you shall give me Reasons, Why, and wherein, Cafar was dangerous.

Bru Os elle were this a launge Spectacle: Our Reasons are so full of good regard, That were you Antony, the Sonne of Cafer,

Am. That's all I feeke, And ammoreover futor, that I may Produce his body to the Market-place, And in the Pulpir as becomes a Friend, Speake in the Order of his FuneralL Bru You Shall Marte Aniony. Caffe Brum, s word with you: You know not what you do; Do not confent That Antony (peake in his Funerall. Know you how much the people may be mou'd By that which he will viter.

Brm By your pardon: I will my selfe into the Pulpit firA. And thew the reason of our Casas death. What Amon shall speake, I will protest He speakes by leave, and by permission: And that we are contented Cafer shall Have all true Rites, and lawfull Ceremonies, It shall aduantage more, then do vs wrong.

Coffi. I know not what may fall, I like it not. Bru Mark Aniony, heere toke you Cafor body: You shall not in your Funerall speech blame vs, Put speake all good you can devile of Cajar. And fay you doo't by our permission a Elfe shall you not have any hand at all About his Funerall. And you shall speake In the fame Pulpit whereto I am going, After my speech is ended.

Ani Beillo: I do delire no more.

> Ern. Prepare the body then, and follow vs. Extent Mones Antony.

O pardon me, thou bleeding peece of Earth: That I am methe and gentle with these Butchers.
Thou art the Ruines of the Nobless man That ever lived in the Tide of Times. Woe to the hand that fhed this costly Blood. Ouer thy wounds, now do I Prophehe, (Which like dumbe mouther do ope their Ruby lips, To begge the voyce and viterance of my Tongue) A Cutle shall light upon the limbes of men; Domesticke Fury, and fieree Civil Strife, Shall cumber all the parts of Italy: Blood and destruction shall be fo in vie, And dreadfull Objects fo familiat, That Mothers shall but smile, when they behold Their Infancs quarrered with the hands of Warre. All piccy chook'd with custome of fell deeds, And Cafers Spirit ranging for Revenge With Are by his fide, come hot from Hell, Shall in these Confines, with a Monarker voyce, Cry hauocke, and let flip the Dogges of Warre, That this foule deede, shall smell about the earth With Carrioo men, groaning for Buriall. Enter Octavio's Sernant.

You feene Olissim Cefer, do you not? Ser. 1 do Marke Antony.

Ans. Cafer did write for him to come to Rome. Ser. He did receive his Letters, and is comming, And bid me fay to you by word of mouth-OCEST!

Ans. Thy heart is bigge: getthee a-part and weepe: Palsion I fee is catching from mine eyes, Sceing those Beads of forrow frand in thine, Began to water. Is thy Master comming?

Ser. He lies to night within feuen Leagues of Rome Ant. Post backe with speede, And tell him what hath chanc'd:

Heere is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome, No Rome of fafety for Ochanis vet, Hie hence, and rell him fo. Yet flay a-while,

The

Spir

Thou shalt not backe, till I have borne this course Into the Market piece: There shall I try In my Oracion, now the People take The cruell issue of these bloody men, According to the which, thou shalt disrourse To yong Octanina, of the flace of things. Lend me your hand.

RECORES

Enter Brutus and goes into the Pulpit, and Cafius, with the Plebetans.

Ple. We will be fatisfied : let vs be fatisfied, Zra. Then follow nie, and give me Audience friends, Caffus go you into the other freete, And part the Numbers : Those that will heare me speake, let em flay heere; Those that will follow Coffus, go with him, And publike Reasons shall be rendred Of Cafars death.

1.Ple. I will heare Bratus speake.

2. I will heare Caffin, and compare their Rezions, When scuerally we heare them rendred.

3. The Noble Bruttes is ascended: Silence.

Tru. Be patient till the laft.

Romans, Countrey-men, and Louers, heare mee for my caufe, and be filent, that you may heare Beleeue me for mine Honor, and have respect to mine Honor, that you msy beleeve. Centure me in your Wisedom, and awake your Senfes, that you may the better ludge. If there bec any in this Assembly, any deere Friend of Cafers, to him I fay, that Brutte love to Cefar, was no leffe then his If then, that Friend demand, why Brains tole against Ca-fer, this is my answer: Not that I lou'd Cafer less, but that I lou'd Rome more. Had you rather Cafar were liuing, and dye all Slaves; then that Cefor were dead, to five all Free-men? As Cafar lou'd mee, I weepe for him; as he was Fortunate, I resoyce at it; as he was Valiant, I honour him : But, as he was Ambitious, I flew him. There is Testes, for his Love . log, for his Fortune : Honor, for his Valour; and Death, for his Ambition. Who is lieere To bate, that would be a Bondinan? If any, ipeak, for him have I offended. Who is heere to rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, ipeak, for him have I offended Who is heere to vile, that will not love his Countrey? If any, Speake, for him have I offended. I paule for a Reply. ML None Brutus, none.

Brutw. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cefar, then you shall do to Brown. The Queftion of his death, is inroll'd in the Capitall: his Glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enfors'd, for which he fuffered death.

Enser Mark Antony, with Cafar: body.

Heere comes his Body, mourn'd by Marke Antony, who though he had do hand in his death, shall receive the beocht of his dying, a place in the Comonwealth, as which of you fiall not. With this I depart, that as I flewe my bell Lover for the good of Rome, I have the fame Dagger for my felfe, when it shall please my Country to need my death.

All Line Bruter,line, live.

1. Bring him with Trlumph home voto his house.

2. Gioc han a Staruz with his Anceftors.

3. Lei him be Cafer.

4 Celor better parts,

Shall be Crown'd in Brutus.

Wee'l bring him to his House With Showes and Clamors.

Bru. My Country-men.

2. Peece, filence, Brutu Speaker.

r. Peace ho.

Brs. Good Countrymen, let me depart alone, And (for my lake) flay heere with Antony ; Do grace to Cafers Corpes, and grace his Speech Tending to Cafari Glories, which Marke Anrony (By our permission) is allow'd to make. I do intreat you, not a man depart, Saue I alone, till Antomy have spoke.

1 Stay ho, and let vs heare Mark Amony.

3 Let him go vp into the publike Chaire. Wee'l heare him : Noble Antony go vp.

Am. For Brum fake, I am beholding to you.

4 What does he say of Brusust

He layes for Brasas fake He findes himfelfe beholding to vs all.

4 'Twere best he speake no harme of British heere?

This Cafar was a Tyrant.

3 Nay that's certaine:

We are bleft that Rome is rid of him.

2 Peace, Ict vs heare what Amony can fay.

Ant. You gentle Romans.

All. Peace hoe, let vs heare him.

An. Friends, Romans, Countrymen, lend me your ears I come to bury (afar, not to praise him: The cuill that men do, lives after them. The good is oft enterred with their bones, So let it be with Cafar. The Noble Bruise. Hath told you Cafer was Ambitious If it were to, it was a greeuous Fault, And greeuously hath Cafer answer'd it. Heere, under leave of Brusus, and the reft (For Brutus is an Honourable man, So are they all; all Honourable min) Come I to speake in Cafers Funerall. Hewas my Friend, faithfull, and just to me; But Bruens layes, he was Ambicious, And Brutus is an Honourable man. He hath brought many Captives home to Rome, Whole Ranlomes, did the general Coffers fills Did this in Cafar leene Ambitious? When that the poore have cry'de, Calor hath went: Ambition should be made of sterner stuffe, Yet Bruins layes, he was Ambitious: And Brains is an Honourable man. You all did fee, that on the Lupercall, I thrice presented him a Kingly Crowne, Which he did thrice refuse. Was this Ambirlan? Yet Bruss fayes, he was Ambitious: And fure he is an Honourable man. I speake not to disprooue what Brians spoke, But heere I am, to fpeake what I do know; You all did love him once, not without cause, What cause with-holds you then, to mourne for him? O Indgement! thou are fled to brutish Bealts, And Men have loft their Reason. Beare with me, My heart is in the Coffin there with Cafar,

1 Me thinkes there is much reason in his sayings.

2 If thou confider rightly of the matter,

And I must pawle, till it coine backe to me,

Cefor ha's had great wrong. (his place. Ha's bee Malters ? I feare there will a worle come in 4 Marke 11

4. Mark'd ye his words? he would not take & Crown, Therefore 'tis certaine, he was not Ambitious

1. If it be found fo, fome will deere abide ic

2. Poore foule, his eyes are red as fire with weeping. 3. There's not a Nobler man in Rome then Assany.

4. Now marke him, he begins againe to Ipeake.

Am. But yesterday, the word of Casar migh

Have stood against the World: Now lies he there, And none lo poore to do him reverence. O Maisters ! If I were dispos'd to flitte Your hearts and mindes to Mutiny and Rage, I should do Brus wrong, and Coffin wrong : Who (you all know) are Honourable men. I will not do them wrong : I rather choose To wrong the dead, so wrong my felfe and you, Then I will wrong such Honourable men. But heere's a Parchment, with the Scale of Calar, I found it in his Closset, 'tis his Will: Let but the Commons heare this Teffament: (Which pardon me) I do not meane to reade, And they would go and kille dead Cafari wounds And dip their Napluns in his Sacred Blood; Yes, begge a haire of him for Memory, And dying, mention it within their Willes, Bequeathing it as a rich Legacie Voto their iffue.

. Wee'l heare the Will, reade it Marte Autory. All. The Will, the Will; we will heare Cafari Will

Ant. Haue patience gentle Friends, I must not readit. It is not meete you know how Cafar lou'd you: You are not Wood, you are not Stones, but men: And being men, hearing the Will of Cafer, It will inflame you, it will make you mad; 'Tis good you know not that you are his Heires, For if you should, O what would come of it?

4 Read the Will, weel heare it Astory : You shall reade vs the Will, Cafars Will.

AH. Will you be Patient? Will you flay a-while? I have o're- thot my felfe to tell you of it. I feare I wrong the Honourable men, Whose Daggers have Stabb'd Celer: I do seare it,

4 They were Traitors : Honourable men?

All The Will, the Testament.

2 They were Villaines, Murderers: the Will, read the Will.

Am. You will compell me then to read the Will: Then make a Ring about the Cutper of Cafar, And let me fhew you him that made the Will: Shall I descend? And will you give me lezue!

All. Come downe.

2 Descend.

3 You shall haue leaue.

4 A Ring, frand round.

1 Stand from the Hearfe, frand from the Body.

1 Roome for Aniony, most Noble Aniony. An. Nay pressenot lo vpon me, stand farre off.

All. Standbacke: roome, beare backe,

Ast. If you have teares, prepare to shed them now. You all do know this Mantle, I remember The first time ever Cafar put it on, Twas on a Summer's Evening in his Tent. That day he overcame the Norway Looke, in this place ran Caffins Dagger through : See what a rent the entious Cake made; Through this, the wel-beloved Brenz fabb'd, And as he pluck'd his curfed Steele away :

Marke how the blood of Cofor followed it As rushing out of doores, to be resolu'd If Brusw to unkindely knock dor no: For Bruem, as you know, was Cafer Angel. ludge, O you Gods, how decrely Cafer loud him: This was the most unkindest cut of all For when the Noble Cafer faw him Asb. Ingratitude, more strong then Trantors armes, Quite vanquish'd him : then burst his Mighty heart, And in his Mande, muffling up hie face, Even at the Base of Pempeyer Statue (Which all the while ran blood) great Caser fell. O what a fall was there, my Countrymen? Then I, and you, and all of vs fell downe. Whil'A bloody Treason Aourist'd over vs. Onow you weepe, and I perceiue you feele The dint of pirty: Thele are gracious droppes Kinde Soules, what weepe you, when you but behold Our Cafar, Vesture wounded ? Lookeyou heere, Heere is Himselse, mart'd as you see with Trainors.
I. O pitteour spectacle!

2. O Noble Cefer 1 3. O wofull day!

4. OTraitors, Villaines!

1. O most bloody fight

2. We will be reveng'd : Revenge About, seeke, burne, fire, kill, flay,

Let not a Traitor live. Am. Stay Country-men

1. Peace there heare the Noble Anten,

3. Weel heare him, weel follow him, weel dy with Aur. Good Friends, weet Friends, let me not flitte

To fuch a fodaine Flood of Mutiny They that have done this Deede, are honourable. What private greefes they have, alas I know oos, That made them do it: They are Wise, and Honourable, And will no doubt with Restons answer you. come not (Friends) to steale away your hearts, I am no Orator, as Brutte it; But (as you know me all) a plaine blunt man That love my Friend, and that they know full well, That gave me publike leave to speake of him: For I have neyther writ nor words, nor worth, Action, nor Vecerance, nor the power of Speech, To fliste mens Blood. I onely speake right on s I tell you that, which you your felues do know, Shew you sweet Cafer wounds, poor poor dum mouths And bid them speake for me : But were I Brutm, And Brusse Antony, there were an Antony Would ruffle vp your Spirits, and put a Tongue In every Wound of Cefer, that should move The stones of Rome, to rife and Mussny.

All. Wee'l Mutiny.

1 Wee'l bume the house of Brum.

3 Away then, come, feeke the Conspirators. Ast. Yet heare me Countrymen, yet heare me speake

All. Peace hoe, heare Asian, most Noble Among. Ans. Why Friends, you go to do you know not what I

Wherein hath Cafe thus deferu'd your loues? Alas you know not, I must tell you then : You have forgot the Will I rold you of.

All. Most true the Will, let's stay and heare the Wil. Am. Heere is the Will, and vinder Cafar Sealer

To every Roman Citizen he gives, To every feuerall man, feuenty frue Drachmaes.

2 Pie

2 Ple. Most Noble Cafar, weel revenge his death.

3 Ple. O Royall Cefor.

Au. Heare me with patience.

All. Peace boe

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his Walker, His private Arbors, and new-planted Orchards, On this fide Tyber, he hath left them you, And to your beyres for euer : common pleasures To walke abroad, and recreate your felses. Heere was a Cafar when comes such another?

1.Ple. Neuer, neuer 1 come, away, away: Weel burne his body in the holy place, And with the Brands fire the Traitors houses.

Take up the body.

2.Pls. Go feich fire.

3.Pls. Plackedowne Benches.

4.Ple, Plucke dovrne Formes, Windowes, 207 thing. Exit Plebeians.

Ant. Now let it worke : Milcheefe thou art 2-foot, Take thou what course thou wilt. How now Fellow?

Enter Sermant.

Ser. Sir, Ollavisu is already come to Rome.

Am. Where is bee?

Ser. He and Lepiden are at Cefars boufe.
Am. And thither will I straight, to visit him:

He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry, And in this mood will give vs any thing.

Ser. I beard him fay, Bratos and Caffan Are rid like Madmen through the Gates of Rome. Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people How I had mound them. Bring me to Old anims, Exerm

Enter Cama the Poet, and after bim the Plebeians.

Chana. I dreame to night, that I did feaft with Cafar, And things voluckily charge my Fancalie : I have no will to wander foorth of doores, Yet fomething leads me foorth.

1. What is your name?
2. Whether are you going?

3. Where do you dwell?

4. Are you a married man, or a Batchellor?

2. Answer every man directly.

1. I,and breefely. 4. I, and wifely

3. I,and truly, you were beft.

Cin. What is my name? Whether am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a unctried man, or a Batchellour? Then to answer every man, directly and breefely, wisely and truly : wifely I say, I am a Batchellor.

'a That's as much as to fay, they are fooles that marrie i you'l beare me a bang for that I feare : proceede direaly.

Cima. Directly I am going to Cefar Fowerall.

1. As a Friend, or an Enemy?

Ciona. As a friend.

2. That matter is answered directly,

- For your dwelling : breefely.

Ciana. Breefely I dwell by the Capitoll.

Your name fir, truly.

Cinna. Truly , my name is Cima.

t. Teare him to peeces, hee's a Conspirator. Ciana. I am Coma the Poet, I am Coma the Poet,

4. Teare hum for his bad verses, teare him for his bad

Can I amunt Church the Conspirator.

4. It is no matter, his name's Coma, plucke but his name out of his heart, and turne him going.

. Teare him, tear him; Come Brands hoe, Firebrands: to Branes, to Caffins, burne all. Some to Decisis House, and lome to Cake's; lome to Ligaria: Away, go. Exemut all the Plebesant.

Actus Quartus.

Emer Amony Oliantus, and Lapidus.

Ant. These many then shall die, their names are priche Olla. Your Brother too must dye consent you Lepident Lep. I do consent.

Otta. Pricke him downe Amony

Lep Vpon condition Publish shall not lise,

Who is your Sifters forme, Marke Amony. Am. He shall not hue; looke, with a spot I dam him, But Lepidie, go you to Cafari house: Fetch the Will hither, and we shall determine

How to cut off lome charge in Legacies.

Lop. What? Shall I findeyou heere? Octa. Otheere, or et the Capitoll.

Exit Lepider Am. This is a flight vomentable man

Meet to be fent on Errands : it it fit The three-fold World divided, he footld fond One of the three to shate it !

Offe. So you thought him.

And tooke his voyce who should be pricks to dye In our blacke Sentence and Profesiption.

Ant. Odenim, I have seene more dayes then you. And though we lay thefe Honours on this man, To eafe our felues of divers fland'rous loads. He shall but beare them, as the Asia beares Gold, To groane and fwet voder the Bufine Es. Either led or driven, as we point the way : And having brought our Tresfure, where we will, Then take we downe his Load, and curne him of (Like to the empty Affe) to thake his esses, And graze in Compons.
Olda. You may () your will:

But hee's a tried, and valiant Souldier.

Am. So is my Horse Octamins, and for that I do appolor him store of Provender. It is a Creature that I teach to fight, To winde, to stop, to roo directly on: His corporal Motion, govern'd by my Spirit, And In tome taffe, is Lepides but so: He most be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth: A barren spirited Fellow; one that feeds On Obiects, Arts, and Imitations. Which out of vie, and stal'de by other men Begin his fathion. Do not talke of him, But as a property : and now Officeing, Liften great things. Brutan and Caffins Are levying Powers; We must straight make head: Therefore let our Alliance be combin'd. Our best Friends made, our meanes stretche, And let vs prefently go fit in Councell, How covert matters may be best disclos'd, And open Perils fureft answered.

Olia Let vs do fo : for we are at the fake,

110

And bayed about with many Enemies, And some that smile have in their hearts I feare Millions of Mischeeles.

Exeunt

Drum. Enter Brutus, Lucilleus, and the Army. Teterine and Pendariu moete them.

Bru. Stand ho.

Lucil. Give the word ho, and Stand. Bru. What now Lucillies, is Cassum neere? Lucil. He is at hand, and Pindarus is come

To do you falutation from his Master.

Bru. He greets me well. Your Master Pordarus In his owne change, or by ill Officers, Hath given me some worthy cause to wish Things done, vndone : But if he be at hand I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt

But that my Noble Master will appeare

Such as he is, full of regard, and Honour.

Brn. He is not doubted. A word Lucilian How he receiu'd you: let me be refolu'd.

Lucil. With courtefie, and with respect enough, But not with fuch familiar inftances, Nor with fuch free and friendly Conference

As he hath vs'd of old.

Brw. Thou hast describ'd A hot Friend, cooling : Ever note Lucillim, When Loue begins to licken and decay It vieth an enforced Ceremony There are no trickes, in plaine and simple Faith: Bur hollow men, like Horfes hot at hand, Make gallant shew, and promise of their Mettle :

But when they should endure the bloody Sputte, They fall their Crests, and like deceitfull lades Sinke in the Triall. Comes his Army on?

Lucil. They meane this night in Sardis to be quarter'd:

The greater part, the Horse to generall Are come with Caffins.

Enter Cassius and his Powers

Bru. Hearke, he is arriu'd : March gently on to meete him.

Caffi. Stand ho.

Bru. Stand ho, speake the word along.

Stand. Scand.

Stand.

Caste. Most Noble Brother, you have done me wrong. Bru. Iudge me you Gods; wrong I mine Enemies?
And ifnot lo, how should I wrong a Brother.

Cassi. Brutus, this fober forme of yours, hides wrongs,

And when you do them-

Brut. Cassius, be content. Speake your greefes fofily, I do know you well. Before the eyes of both our Armies heere

(Which should perceive nothing but Love from vs) Let vs not wrangle. Bid them move away: Then in my Tent Cassiss enlarge your Greefes,

And I will give you Audience.

Casti. Pindarus.

Bid our Commanders leade their Charges off

A little from this ground.

Bru. Lucilliu, do you the like, and let no man Come to our Tent, till we have done our Conference. Let Lucine and Titinine guard our doore

Manes Brutus and Castins.

Caffe. That you have wrong'd me, doth appear in this You have condemn'd, and noted Lucius Pella For taking Bribes heere of the Sardians; Wherein my Letters, praying on his lide, Because I knew the man was slighted off.

Brn. You wrong'd your felfe to write in fach a cafe Caffi. In such a time as this, it is not meet

That every nice offence should beare his Comment. Bru. Let me tell you Cassus, you your selfe. Are much condemn'd to have an itching Palme, To fell, and Mart your Offices for Gold To Vndeseruers.

Cassi. 1, an etching Palme? You know that you are Bruses that speakes this, Or by the Gods, this speech were else your laft.

Bru. The name of Caffun Honors this correction, And Chafticement doth therefore hide his head.

Caffi. Chasticement?

Bru. Remember March, the Ides of March remeber Did not great / who bleede for Iuftice fake? What Villaine routh'd his body, that did flab, And not for Juffice? What? Shall out of Vs. That strucke the Formost man of all this World, But for supporting Robbers : shall we now, Contaminate our fingers, with bale Bribes? And fell the mighty space of our large Honors For so much trash, as may be grasped thus? I had rather be a Dogge, and bay the Moone. Then fuch a Roman

Caffi. Bruim, baite not me. Ile not indure it : you forget your felle To hedge me in. I am a Souldier. 1, Older in practice, Abler then your selfe To make Conditions

Bru. Gotoo: you are not Caffim.

Colle 1 am

Bru. I lay, you ate not.

Caffe. Vrge me no more, I shall forget my feife: Haue minde vpon your health: Tempt me no farther.

Brn. Away flight man. Caffe Is't poffible?

Bra Heare me, for I will speake.

Must I give way, and roome to your rash Choller? Shall I be frighted, when a Madman flates!

Cass. Oye Gods, ye Gods, Must I endure all this? Bru. All this? I more : Free till your proud hart break. Go shew your Slaves how Chollericke you are, And make your Bondmen tremble. Must I bouge? Muft I observe you? Muft I ftand and crouch Vnder your Teftie Humour ? By the Gods, You shall digest the Venom of your Spleene Though it do Splir you. For from this day forth, He vie you for my Mirth, yeafor my Laughter

When you are Waspish Coffi. Is it come to this !

Bru. You fay, you are a better Souldier: Let it appeare fo; make your vaunting true, And it shall please me well. For mine owne part,

I shall be glad to learne of Noble men. Caff. You wrong me every way: You wrong me Brains:
I faide, an Elder Souldier, not a Better.

Did I fay Better !

Brn. If you did, I care not. Caff. When Cafar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd Brus. Peace, peace, you durft not fo have tempted him

Cess. I durst not.

Cassi. What durft not tempt him? Bra. For your life you durst not.

Cassi. Do not prefume too much vpon my Loue,

I onay do that I shall be forey for.

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for. There is no terror Caffins in your threats: For I am Arm'd to strong in Honesty That they passe by me, as the idle winde, Which I respect not. I did send to you For certaine summes of Gold, which you deny'd me, For I can raise no money by vile meanes: By Heauen, I had rather Coine my Heart, And drop my blood for Drachmaes, then to wring From the hard hands of Peazants, their vile trash By any indirection. I did fend To you for Gold to pay my Legions, Which you deny'd me : was that done like Caffau? Should I have answer'd Caims Caffins fo?

When Mercus Brutus growes to Courtous, To locke such Rascall Counters from his Friends,

Be ready Gods with all your Thunder-bolts, Dash him to peeces.

Caffi. I deny'd you not.

Brs. You did.

Cassi. I did not. Hewas but a Foole That brought my answer back. Brutes hath rhi'd my hart:

A Friend should beare his Friends infirmities; But Brutus makes mine greater then they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practice them on me Cassi. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults.

Caffe. A friendly eye could never fee such faules. Bru. A Flatterers would not, though they do appeare

As huge as high Olympus.

Coffi. Come Aniony, and yong Ollanins come, Revenge your sclues alone on Cassius, For Caffess 13 2-weary of the World : Hated by one he loves, brau'd by his Brother, Check'd like a bondman, all his faules obseru'd, Set in a Note-booke, learu'd, and con'd by roate To cast into my Teeth. O I could weepe My Spirit from mine eyes. There is my Dagger, And heere my naked Breaft: Within, a Heart Deeret then Pluto's Mine, Richer then Gold: D'that thou bee'ft a Roman, take it foorth. I that deny'd thee Gold, will give my Heart ? Strike as thou did'ft at Cafar : For I know. When thou did'A hace him worft, & loued'A him better Then ever thou loved's Cassus

Brw. Sheath your Dagger Be angry when you will, it shall have scope : Do what you will, Dishonor, shall be Humour, O Cassius, you are yoaked with a Lambe That carries Anger, as the Flint beares fire, Who much inforced, thewes a haftie Sparke,

And straite is cold agen.

Cass. Hath Cassins liu d To be but Mirth and Laughter to his Brutus.
When greefe and blood ill temper'd, vexeth him?

When I spoke that, I was ill remper'd too.s Coffi. Do you consesse so much? Giue me yout hand.

Bru. And my hears too. Coffi. O Brains!

Bru. What's the matter?

Caffi. Haue not you loue enough to beare with me, When that rash humour which my Mother gave me Makes me forgetfull.

Bru, Yes Cassius, and from henceforth When you are oner-earnest with your Branes, Hee'l thinke your Mother chides, and leave you fo.

Enter a Poet,

Poer. Let me go in to see the Generals, There is some grudge betweene 'em, 'tis not meete They be alone.

Lucil. You hall not come to them,

Poet. Nothing but death shall stay me. Caf. How now? What's the matter?

Poet. For shame you Generals; what do you meene? Loue, and be Friends, as two fuch men should bee, For I have feene more yeeres I'me fure then yee.

Caf. Ha, ha, how vildely doth this Cynicke rime?
Bru Get you hence firm: Sawcy fellow, hence.

Cof. Beare with him Brutus, 'eis his fathlon,

Brat. He know his humor, when he knowes his time: What should the Warres do with these ligging Fooles? Companion, hence.

Caf. Away, away be gone.

Bru, Lucidius and Titinius bid the Commanders Prepare to lodge their Companies co night,

Caf. And come your felues, & bring Meffals with you Immediately to vs.

Bru. Lucius, abowle of Wine.

Caf. I did not thinke you could have bin fo angry.

Bru. O Caffins , I am licke of many greefes,

Caf. Of your Philosophy you make no vie, If you give place to accidentall euils.

Brus. No man beares forrow better. Partia is dead.

Caf. Hat Portist

Bru. She is dead.

Caf. How scap'd I killing, when I crost you so? O insupportable, and touching loffe! Vpon what ficknesse ?

Bru. Impatient of my obsence.

And greefe, that yong Olicaises with Mark Antony Have made themselves so frong : For with her death That cyclings came. With this the fell diftract, And (her Attendages absent) [wallow'd fite.

Caf. Anddy'd()?

Brw. Euen fo.

Caf. Oyeimmortall Gods!

Enter Boy with Wine and Tapers. Brm. Speak no more of her Giuc me a bowl of wine, In this I bury all vokindnesse Cafrins. Dringes Caf. My heart is thirsty for that Noble pledge. Fill Lucius, till the Wincore-swell the Cup:

I cannot drinke too much of Brutes love.

Enter Taining and Me Talas

Brutus. Come in Titinius: Welcome good Messals: Novi fit we close about this Taper heere, And call in question our necessities.

Caff. Portia, art thou gode?
Bru. No more I pray you. Meffala, I have heere received Lessers, That young Offaulus, and Marke Among Come downe vpon vs with a mighty power, Bending their Expedition toward Philippi.

Mef.

Meff. My felfe hane Letters of the felfe-fame Tenute. Bru With what Addition,

M. That by profeription, and billes of Outlarie, Ollanus, Aniony, and Lopeliu.

Have put to death, an nundred Senators.

Bru. Therein our Letters do not well agree : Mine Speake of Scuenty Senators, that dy'de

By their proferiptions, Cierco being one. Caffi. Cicero one?

Meffa Cuero is dead, and by that order of profeription Had you your Letters from your wife, my Lord?

Bru. No Melala

Mella. Nor nothing in your Letters writ of her? Bru. Nothing Milala.

Melfa. That me thinkes is fittange.

Bru. Why aske you?

Heare you ought ofher, in yours?

Mella. Nomy Lord

Bru. Now as you are a Roman tell me true. Messa. Then like a Roman, beare the truth I tell,

For certaine the is dead, and by ftrange manner.

B-s. Why farewell Portia. We must die Messala.

With medicating that the must dye once,

I have the patience to endure it now

Mella Euen so great men, great losses shold indure. Caffi. I have as much of this in Art as you

But yet my Nature could not beare it fo.

Bru. Well, to our worke alive What do you thinke

Of marching to Philippi presently. Caffi I do not thinke it good.

Brw. Your reason?

Cull This it is

Tis better that the Enemie feeke vs, So Chall he waste his meanes, weary his Souldiers, Doing himselfe offence, whil'ft we lying still, Are full of rest, desence, and nimblenesse

Brw. Good reasons must of force give place to better

The people 'twixt Philipps, and this ground

Do stand but to a forc'd affection.

For they have grug'd vs Contribution.

The Enemy, marching along by them, By them shall make a fuller number vp,

Come on refresht, new added, and encourag'd:

From which advantage shall we cut him off

If at Philipps we do face him there,

These people at our backe

Caffi. Heate me good Brothe:

Bru. Vnder your pardon. You must note beside, That we have tride the vtmost of our Friends :

Out Legions are brim full, our cause is tipe.

The Enemy encreaseth every day,

We at the height, are readie to decline

There is a Tide in the affayres of men,

Which taken at the Flood, leades on to Fortune

Omitted, all the voyage of their life,

Is bound in Shallowes, and in Miseries

On fuch a full Sea are we now a-float,

And we must take the cuttent when it serues,

Or loofe our Ventures

, Cast Then with your will go on : weel along

Our selves, and meet them at Philipps

Brn. The deepe of night is crept vpon our talke, And Nature must obey Necessitie,

Whichwe will niggard with a little reft:

There is no more to fay

Caffi, No more, good night,

Early to motrow will we tile, and hence.

Enter Lucius

Brn. Lucius my Gowne. farewell good Megala, Good night Tillnim: Noble Noble Caffing,

Good night, and good repore.

Caffi. Omy deere Brother : This was an ill beginning of the night:

Neuer come such division tweene our fouler .

Let it Dot Bruius.

Exter Lucius with the Cowne

Brn. Every thing is well. Caffe Goodnight my Lord.

Bru. Goodnight good Brother

Tit. Meffa. Good night Lord Pratia.

Brn. Farwell enery one.
Giue me the Gowne. Where is thy Instrument?

Luc. Heere in the Tent.

Bru. What, thou speak it drowfilg?

Poore koaue I blame theenot, thou art ore-watch'd.

Call Claudso, and some other of my men,

He have them fleepe on Cultions in my Tent. Luc. Varrus, and Claudio.

Enter Varru: and Claudio.

Var. Cals my Lord?

Bru. I pray you his, lye in my Tent and Seepe,

It may be I shall raise you by and by

On businesse to my Brother Cassus.

Var. Soplease you, we will stand,

And watch your pleafure.

Bru. I will it not have it fo: Lye downe good firs, It may be I shall other wife bethinke me.

Looke Lucius, heere's the booke I lought for lo

I put it in the pocket of my Gowoc.

Luc. I was sure your Lordship did not give it me. Bru. Beare with me good Boy, I am much forgetfull.

Canst thou hold up thy heavie eyes a-whale, And touch thy Inftrument a ftraine or two

Luc. I my Lord, an't please you.

Bru. It does my Boy:

I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing,

Luc. It is my duty Sir

Brut. I should not vige thy duty past thy might,

I know yong bloods looke for a time of reft

Luc. I have flept my Lord already.

Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt scepe againe: I will not hold thee long. If I do live,

I will be good to thee.

Musicke, and a Song.

This is a fleepy Tune : O Murd'rous flumbler! Layest thou thy Leaden Mace vpon my Boy, That playes thee Mulicke ? Gentle knaue good night: I will not do thee fo much wrong to wake thee: If thou do'ft nod, thou break'ft thy Instrument, Ile take it from thee, and (good Boy) good night

Let me see, let me see: is not the Lesse turn'd downe

Where I left reading! Heere it is I thinke. Enter the Ghaft of Cafar.

How ill this Taper burnes. Ha I Who comes heere? I thinke it is the weakenesse of mine eyes

That shapes this monstrous Apparition. It comes upon me : Art thou any thing?

Art thou some God, some Angell, or some Divell, That mak it my blood cold, and my haure to stare?

Speake to me, what thou art. Gloft Thy euill Spirit Brusie ?

Bru. Why com'st thou?

Ghost. In tell thee thou shalt fee me at Philipps. Brus. Well ; then I shall fee thee againe?

Ghoff. I at Philopps.

Briss. Why I will fee thee at Philipps then: Now I have taken heart, thou vanishest. Ill Spirit, I would hold more talke with thee. Boy, Lucau, Varrus, Claudio, Sirs : Awake:

Luc. The strings my Lord, are false. Bru. He thinkes he still is at his Infrument.

Lac. My Lord.

Brs. Did'ft thou dreame Luciu, that thou so cryeds

Luc. My Lord, I donot know that I did cry.

Bru. Yes that thou did'st : Did'st thou see any thing? Luc. Nothing my Lord.

Bru. Sleepe againe Lucius: Sirra Chaudio, Fellow, Thou: Awake.

Var. My Lord.

Class. My Lord.

Brs. Why did you fo cry out firs, in your sleepe?

Both. Did we my Lord?

Brw. I : faw you any thing? Var. No my Lord, I saw nothing.

Class. Nor I my Lord.

Bru. Go, and commend me to my Brother Coffus : Bid him fet on his Powres betimes before, And we will follow.

Besh. It shall be done my Lord.

Except

Adus Quentus.

Enter Oliening, Antony and their Army. Olds. Now Antoxy, our hopes are answered, You faid the Enemy would not come downe, But keepe the Hilles and vpper Regions: It proues not fo : their battailes are at hand, They meane to warne vs at Philippi heere: Answering before we do demand of them. Art. Tut I sm in their bosomes, and I know Wherefore they do it: They could be content To visit other places, and come downe With fearefull brauery: thinking by this face To faften in our thoughts that they have Courage; But'tis not lo.

Enter a Meffenger. Mef. Prepare you Generals The Enemy comes on in gallant shew: Their bloody figne of Battell is hung out, And fomething to be done immediately Am. Offaum, lesde your Battaile loftly on Vpon the left hand of the even Field.

Oda. Vpon the right hand I keepe thou the left. Ant. Why do you croffe me in this exigent. Olla. I do not crosse you : but I will do sa March.

Drum. Exter Bruthe, Cassing & ibour Army. Brs. They stand, and would have parley. Cafi. Standfast Titmou, we must out and talke. Otta. Mark Antony, shall we give signe of Bartalle? Ant. No Cafer, we will answer on their Charge.

Make forth, the Generals would have some words. OH. Stirre noceatill the Signall. Bru. Words before blowes: 15 it fo Countrymen? Ola Not that we love words better, as you do. Brz, Good words are better then bad ftrokes Ollania

An. In your bad ftrokes Bruw, you give good words Witnesse the hole you made in Cafars heart, Crying long live, Hade Cafar.

Cassi. Autory,

The posture of your blowes are yet vnknowne; But for your words, they rob the Hibla Bees, And leave them Hony-leffe.

Ant. Not finglesse too. Brw. Oyes, and foundlesse too . For you have folne their buzzing Among,

And very wifely threat before you fling.

Ant. Villains t you did not fo, when your vile daggers Hackt one another in the sides of Cafer:

You shew'd your teethes like Apes, And fawn'd like Hounds,

And bow'd like Bondmen, kiffing Cafers feete; Whil'st damned Caska, like a Curre, behinde Strooke Cafar on the necke. O you Flatterers.

Caffe Flatterers! Now Brucus thanke your felfe, This tongue had not offended fo to day,

If Caffus might have rul'd

Ofta. Come, come, the cause. If arguing make vs swet, The proofe of it will turne to redder drops : Looke, I draw a Sword againft Conspirators, When thinke you that the Sword goes vp againe? Neuer till Cefars three and there wounds Be well aveng'd; of till another Cala Have added flaughter to the Sword of Traitors.

Brut. Cafar, thou canst not dye by Traitors bands, Vnlesse thou bring thehem with thee.

Offa. So I hope:

I was not borne to dye on Zrut m Sword.

Brn. O ifthou wet't the Nobleft of thy Straine, Yong-man, thou could'A not dye more honourable.

Cassi. A pecuish School-boy, worshles of such Hanor loyn d with a Masker, and a Reueller.

Aur. Old Caffin Rill.

Oita. Come Antony: 2way: Defiance Traitors hurle we in your teeth. If you dare fight to day, come to the Field; If not, when you have stomackes

Exit Ollasius, Amony, and Army Caffi Whynowblow winde, swell Billow,

And (wimme Barke: The Storme is vp, and all is on the hazard.

Bru Ho Lucillia, hearke, a word with you. Lucilius and Melala frand forth.

Luc My Lord. Caffe Mcfala.

Messa. What sayes my Generall?

Caffi. Mefala, this is my Birth-day : as this very day Was Cuffin borne. Give me thy hand Meffala: Be thou my witnesse, that against my will (As Pompo was) am I compell'd to fee V pon one Battell all our Liberties You know, that I held Epicurus frong, And his Opinion . Now I change my minde, And partly credit things that do prelage.

Comming from Sardu, on our former Enligne Two mighty Eagles fell, and there they pearch'd, Gorging and feeding from our Soldiers hands,

Who

Who to Philoppi heere conforted vs 1 This Morning are they fled away, and gone, And in their fleeds, do Rauens, Crowes, and Kites Fly ore our heads, and downward looke on vs As we were lickely prey; their fhadowes feeme A Canopy most fatall, under which Our Aring lies, ready to give vp the Ghoft Aleffa. Beleeuenot fo.

Casti. I but beleeue it partly For I am fresh of spirit, and resolu'd To meete all perils, very constantly.

Bru. Even lo Lucillins. Cass. Nowmost Noble Brains, The Gods to day Aand friendly, that we may Louers in peace, leade on our dayes to age. But fince the affayres of men refts full incertaine, Let's reason with the worst that may befall. If we do lose this Battaile, then is this The very last time we shall speake together i What are you then determined to do ?

Brn. Even by the tyle of that Philosophy, By which I did blame Cato, for the death Which he did give himselfe, I know not how But I do finde it Cowardly, and vile, For feare of what might fall, fo to present The time of life, arming my felfe with patience, To ftay the prouidence of some high Powers, That governe vs below.

Cassi. Then, if we loofe this Battaile, You are contented to be led in Triumph Thorow the fireets of Rome

Bru. No Cassim, no : Thinke not thou Noble Romane, That ever Braiss will go bound to Rome, He beares too great a minde. But this same day Must end that worke, the Ides of March begun. And whether we shall meete againe, I know not : Therefore our everlasting farewell take : For ever, and for ever, farewell Caffus, If we do meete againe, why we shall smile; If nor, why then this parting was well made.

Caffi. For euer, and for euer, farewell Bruim: If we do meete againe, wee'l finile indeede; If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made.

Brs. Why then leade on. O that a man might know The end of this dayes businesse, ere it come : But it sufficeth, that the day will end, And then the end is knowne. Come ho, away. Exercit.

Ester Bruths and Messala. Alarum.

Brn. Ride, ride Messala, ride and give these Billes Vato the Legions, on the other fide. Lood Alarum.

Let them fet on at once : for I perceiue But cold demeanor in Ollawio's wing : And fodaine push gives them the overthrow: Ride, tide Me Jala, let them all come downe.

Enter Caffin and Tairins.

Cassi. Olooke Tuinim, looke, the Villaines Aye: My selse have to mine owne turn'd Enemy: This Enfigne heere of mine was ruming backe, I flew the Coward, and did take it from him. Trin. O Coffun, Brutus gave the word wo early,

Who bouing fome advantage on OU and Tooke it too eagerly : his Soldiers fell to footle, Whil'A we by Amony are all inclosed.

Enter Pundavan.

Prod Fly further off my Lord : flye further off, Mark Amor is in your Tents my Lord: Flye therefore Noble Coffee, flye force off. Caffi. This Hill is farre enough. Looke, lack Tames Are those my Tents where I perceive the fire? Tu. They are, my Lord. Caffe Titmins, if thou loveft me, Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurres in him, Till he have brought thee vp to yonder Trooper And heere againe, that I may reft affur'd Whether youd Troopes, are Friend or Enemy. Tit. I will be heere againe, even with a thought Exn.

Caffe Go Pindarus, get higher on that bill, My fight was ever thicke: regard Tumin And tell me what thou not'st about the Field. This day I breathed first, Time is come round, And where I did begin, there shall I end, My life is run his compaffe. Sirra, what newes?

Pind. Above. Omy Lord. Costi Whatnewes?

Pind. Tumiau is enclosed round about With Horsemen, that make to him on the Spirite, Yet he spurres on. Now they are almost on him: Now Trimine. Now fome light: Ohe lights too. Hee's tane. Shows .

And hearke, they shout for ioy, Caffi. Come downe, behold no more: O Coward that I am, to live fo long. To fee my best Friend tane before my face. Enser Pindarius

Come hither firesh : In Parthia did I take thee Prisoner, And then I fwore thee, fauing of thy life, That whatfoener I did bid thee do. Thou should'stattempt it. Come now keepe thine oath, Now be a Free-man, and with this good Sword That ran through Cafars bowels, learth this bosome, Stand not to answer: Heere, take thou the Hilts, And when my face is cover'd, as 'cisnow, Guide thou the Sword -- Cafar, thou are revene d, Euen with the Sword that kill'd thee.

Pin. So, Iam free, Yet would not so have beene Durst I have done my will. O Coffine. Farre from this Country Pindarus Shall tuo. Where never Roman shall take note of him-

Enter Titimus and McGala. Mefa. It is but change, Tremus : for Ollans Is overthrowne by Noble Bruns power, As Cassius Legions are by Amony.

Tum. These tydings will well comfort Ceffies. Mefa. Where did you lesue him.

Tina. All disconsolate,

With Pindaru his Bondman, on this Hill. Mila Is not that he that lyes vpon the ground? Titin. He lies not like the Lining. O my heart! Messa. Is not that hee?

Tum. No, this was he megala, But Casim is no more. O ferting Sunne:

As in thy red Rayes thou doeft finke to night;

So in his red blood Cafsten day is fee. The Sunne of Rome is let. Our day is gone, Clowds, Dewes, and Dangers come; our deeds are done: Miferuft of my successe hath done this deed.

Moffa Midruft of good fuccelle hath done this deed Obatefull Error, Melancholies Childe: Why do'ft thou thew to the apt thoughts of men The things that are not? O Error loone conceyu'd, Thou never com'it vnto a happy byrth, But kil'st the Mother that engendred thee.

Ta. What Pindarus? Where are thous Pindarus?

Mela. Seeke him Trimm, whill I go to meet The Noble Brusas, thrusting this report Into his eares; I may fay thrusting it: For piercing Steele, and Darts intenomed, Shall be as welcome to the eares of Bratau,

As tydings of this fight.

Th. Hye you Messala, And I will feeke for Products the while : Why did'ft thou fend me forth brave Cafines? Did I not meet thy Friends, and did not they Put on my Browes this wreath of Victorie, And bid me give it thee? Did'A thou not heare their Alas, thou halt misconstrued every thing. But hold thee, take this Garland on thy Brow, Thy Brians bid me give it thee, and I Will do his bidding. Branas, come apace, And fee how I regarded Caiss Cafsuas : By your leave Gods: This is a Romans part, Dies Come Cafinis Sword, and finde Toronsu hare.

> Alarum. Enter Brutus, Meffala, youg Cato, Strato, Volumniai, and Lucillius.

Bru. Where, where Melala, doth his body lye? Mela. Loc yonder, and Titimus mourning ic.

Bru. Tuinius face is vpward.

Caro Heis flaine

Brw. O lulou Celar, thou art mighty yet, Thy Spirit walkes abroad, and turnes our Swords In our owne proper Entrailes, Low Alarenss.

Cato. Brave Titinina,

Looke where he have not crown'd dead Cafins. Bra. Are yet two Romans hung fuch as these? The last of all the Romans, far thee well It is impossible, that ever Rome Should breed thy fellow Friends I owe mo testes To this dead man, then you shall feeme pay. I shall finde time, Cafiini: I shall finde time. Come therefore, and to Therfur fend his body, Ilis Funerals shall not be in our Campe, Leaft it discomfort vs. Lucillius come And come yong Caro, let vs to the Field, Labin and Flanie let our Battailes on : Tis three a clocke, and Romans yet ere night, Exemi Alarum. Enter Brutus, Meffala, Cato, Lucilleus, and Flamus.

Bru. Yet Country-men . O yet. hold wp your heads. Care What Baffard doth not? Who will go with me? I will proclaime my name about the Field. I am the Sonne of Marcus Case, hoe. A Poe to Tyranis, and my Countries Friend. lam the Soune of Mercus Cate, hoe

Enter Souldiers and fight. And | am Brutas, Marcus Brutas, 1,

We shall try Fortune in a second fight,

Brans my Countries Friend : Know me for Brusse. Luc. O youg and Noble Cate, art thou downe? Why now thou dyest, as brauely as Titioius, And may it be honour'd, being Case's Sonne.

Sold. Yeeld, or thou dyeft.

Lac. Onely I yeeld to dye:

There is fo much, that thou wilt kill me ftraight: Kill Brutar, and be honour'd in his death. Sold. We must not : a Noble Prisoner, Enter Actory.

2. Sold. Roome hoe : tell Antown, Bratus is tane. 1 Sold He telt thee newes. Heere comes the Generall, Bresses is time, Brusses is take my Lord.

Aur Where is hee?

Luc Safe Autory, Bruses is fale enough: I dare affure thee, that no Enemy Shall ever take alive the Noble Brutas : The Gods defend him from to great a thame, When you do finde him, or alive, or dead, He will be found like Brutus, like himselfe.

Am. This is not Bratus friend, but I affere you, A prize no lesse in worth; keepe this man fale, Give him all kindnesse. I had rather have Such men my Friends, then Enemies. Go on, And fee where Brutus be alive or dead. And bring vs word, ento Ollaums Tent: How every thing is chanc'd > Emer Brutes, Dardanses, Clau, Strato. and Volzanasse.

Brat. Come poere remaines of friends, reft on this

Clas. Statilies thew'd the Torch-light, but my Lord He came not backe: he is or tane, or flaine.

Brus. Six thee downe, Chines . Staying is the word, It is a deed in fashion. Hearke thee, Clums Clit. What I, my Lord? No, not for all the World.

Brut. Peace then, no words. Chr. He rather kill iny felfe.

Brut Heatke thee, Dardonius.

Dard Shall I doe such a deed?

Clis. O Dardenns

Dard. O Clita

Cin. What ill request did Brewer make to thee? Dad. To kill him Chiza: looke he medicates.

Cin. Now is that Noble Vessell full of griefe,

That it runner ouer even at his eyes.

Brut. Come hither, good Velammine, lift a word.

Volum. What fayes my Lord? Brut. Why this, Volumnia:

The Ghost of Cefar hath appear'd to me Two severall times by Night: at Sardis, once; And this last Night, here in Philippi fields:

I know my houre is come Volum. Not lo, my Lord.

Brut Nay, 1 am fure it is, Volumniss. Thou feelt the World, Volumnias, how it goes, Our Enemies haue bear vs to the Pit: Low Alartens. It is more worthy, to leape in our felues, Then tarry till they push vs. Good Voluminian, Thou know'ft, that we two went to Schoole together: Even for that our love of old, I prethee Hold thou my Sword Hiles, whileft I rusne on it.

Val. That's not an Office for a friend, my Lord. Alarum Ital.

Cla. Fly;

Cly Fly, flye my Lord, there it no tarrying heere.

Bru. Farewell to you, and you, and you Voluments.

Strate, thou half bin all this while afleepe:
Farewell to thee, to Strate, Countrymen:
My heart doth toy, that yet in all my life,
I found no man, but he was true to me.
I shall have glory by this looking day
More then Ollamin and Marke Anton,
By this vile Conquest shall attaine vinto
So fare you well at once, for British tongue
Hath almost ended his lives History
Night hangs upon mine eyes, my Bones would rest.
That have but labour'd, to attaine this houre.

Alarum Crywithin, Flye, flye, flye, flye.
Cly Fly my Lord, flye.
Bru. Hence: I will follow.
I prythee Strate, flay thou by thy Lord,
Thou art a Fellow of a good respect:
Thy life hath had some imatch of Honor in rt,
Hold then my Sword, and turne away thy face,
While I do run vpon it. Wilt thou Strate?

Stra. Gine me yout hand first. Face you well my Lord.

Bru Facewell good Strate. — Cafar, now be still I kill d not thee with halfe so good a will.

Dyrs.

Alarano, Retreat Enter Amony, Octavino, Messalo, Lucillus, and the Army. Octa. What man is that i Messa My Masters man strate, where in thy Masters Stra. Free from the Bondage you are in Messala, The Conquerors can but make a fire of him. For Ernim onely ouercame himselfe, And no man elle hath Honor by his death.

Lucil. So Ernim should be found. I thank thee Ernim That thou hast provid Lucilim saying true.

Oda. All that set u'd Brutin, I will entertains them.

Fellow, wile thou beflow thy time with me?

Stra. 1, if Meffala will preferre me to you.

Olla. Do fo, good Meffala.

CMeffa. How deed my Maffac (med.)

CMefa. How dyed my Mafter Strate?

Stra. I held the Sword, and he did run on it.

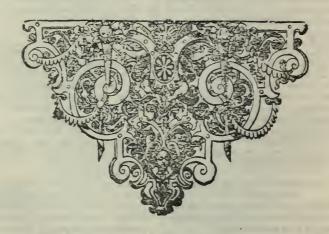

Mefa. Ollowing then take him to follow thee,

That did the latest feruice to my Mafter

Ant. This was the Nobleff Roman of them all:
All the Conspirators saue onely hee,
Did that they did, in enuy of great Case.
He, onely in a generall honest thought,
And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle, and the Elements
So mixt in him, that Nature might stand up,
And say to all the world; This was a man.

Oda. According to his Vertue, let ye vie him Withall Respect, and Rices of Buriall. Within my Tent his bones to night shall ly. Most like a Souldier ordered Honourably: So call the Field to rest, and let's away, To part the gloties of this happy day.

FINIS.

ETRAGEDIE MACBETH.

Altus Primus. Scana Prima.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter three Witches.

Hen shall we three meet againe? In Thunder, Lightning, or in Raine? 2. When the Hurley-burley's done, When the Battaile's loft, and wonne. 3. That, will be ere the fet of Sunne.
T Where the place?

2. Vpon the Heath.

3. There to meet with Machet

I come, Gray-Malkm.

All. Padock calls anon: faire is foule, and foule is faire, Houer through the fogge and filthie ayre.

Scena Secunda.

Alarum within. Enter King Malcome, Donal-baine, Lenox, with attendants, meeting a bleeding Captaine.

Ring. What bloody man is that? he can report, As feemeth by his plight, of the Reuolt The newest state

Mul. This is the Serieant. Who like a good and hardie Souldier fought Gainst my Caprinitie : Haile braue friend; Say to the King, the knowledge of the Broyle, As thou didft leave it.

Cap. Doubtfull it Rood, As two fpent Swimmers, that doe cling together. And chooke their Art. The mercileffe Macdonwald (Worthic to be a Rebell, for to that The multiplying Villanies of Nature Doe Iwarme vpon him) from the Westerne Isles Of Kernes and Gallowgroffes is supply'd, And Fortune on his damned Quarry (miling, Shew'd like a Rebells Where: but all's too weake; For brane Macheth (well hee defenues that Name) Disdayning Fortune, with his brandisht Steele, Which smoak'd with bloody execution (Like Valours Minion) caru'd out his passage, Till hee fac'd the Staue : Which neu'r shooke hands, not bad farwell to him, Till he voleam'd him from the Naue toth' Chops, And fix'd his Head vpon our Battlements.

King Ovaliant Coufin, worthy Gentleman. Cap. As whence the Sunne gins his reflection. Shipwracking Stormes, and direfull Thunders So from that Spring, whence comfort feem'd to come, Discomfort swells: Marke King of Scotland, marke, No fooner Juffice had, with Valout arm'd, Compell'd these skipping Kernes to trust their heeles. But the Norweyan Lord, surveying vantage, With furbushe Aimes, and new supplyes of men, Began a feeth affault.

King. Dismay'd not this our Captaines, Macheth and Banquob?

Cap. Yes, as Sparrowes, Eagles; Or the Hore the Lyon : If I fay footh, I must report they were As Cannons ouer-charg'd with double Cracks, So they doubly redoubled flroakes upon the Foe: Except they means to bathe in recking Wounds, Or memorize another Golgotha, I cannot tell but I am faint, My Gashes cry for helpe.

King. So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds, They linack of Honor both: Goeger him Surgeons Enter Rosse and Angus.

Who comes here? Mal. The worthy Thane of Rolle.

Lenox. What a haste lookes through his eyes? So should be looke, that sectoes to speake things strange.

Roffe Gnd lauc the King.

King. Whence can'ft thou, worthy Thane!

Rolfe. From Fiffe, great King, Where the Norweyan Banners flowt the Skie,

And fanne our people cold. Normay himselfe, with terrible numbers. Affilted by that most disloyall Traytor, The Thanc of Cawdor, began a difmall Conflict, Till that Bellona's Bridegroome, lapt in proofe, Confronted him with felfe-compatifons, Point against Point, rebellious Arme gainst Arme, Curbing his lauish spirit . and to conclude,

The Victorie fell on va.

The Tragedie of Macbeth.

King. No more that Thom of Cawdor shall deceive Out Bosome interest : Goe pronounce his present death, And with his former Title great Macheth.

Rolle Me le loc it done

King. What he hash loft, Noble Machet hash wonne.

Scena Tertia.

Thunder, Enter the three Wusbes.

1. Where halt thou beene, Sifter ?

2. Killing Swine.

3. Sifter, where thou?

I. A Saylors Wife had Chestnuts in her Lappe, And mounche, & mounche, and mounche :

Giue me, quoth I.

Aroynt thee, Witch, the rumpe-fed Ronyon cryes. Her Husband's to Aleppo gone, Master o'th' Tiger: But in a Syne Ile thither fayle, And like a Rat without a tayle, 13 doe, lle doe, and lle doc. 2. Ile giue thee a Winde.

1. Th'art kinde.

3. And I another.

1. I my selfe have all the other, And the very Ports they blow, All the Quarters that they know, I'th' Ship-mans Card. He dreyne him drie as Hay: Sleepe shall neyther Night nor Day Hang vpon his Pent-bouse Lid : He shall live a man forbid : Weatie Seu'nights, nine times nine, Shall he dwindle, peake, and pine : Though his Barke cannot be loft, Yet it shall be Tempest-soft. Looke what I have.

2. Shew me, shew me.

1. Here I haue a Pilots Thumbe,

Wrackt, as homeward he did come.

3. A Drumme, a Drumme:

Macheth doth come.

All. The weyward Sisters, band in band, Pofters of the Sea and Land, Thus doe goe, about, about, Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine, And thrice againe, to make vp nine. Peace, the Charme's wound vp.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Mach. So foule and faire a day I have not feene. Banquo. How farre is't call'd to Sorts? What are thefe, So wither'd, and so wilde in their attyre, That looke not like th'Inhabitants o'th'Earth, And yet are on't > Live you, or are you aught That man may question? you seeme to understand me, By each at once her choppie finger laying Vpon her skinnie Lips: you should be Women, And yet your Beards forbid me to interprete That you zee fo.

Mac. Speake if you can : what are you? 1. All haile Macberb, haile to thre Thorn of Clamis

2. All haile Marberb, haile to thee Thome of Candon.

3. All haile Macheth, that thate be King hereafter Bang. Good Sir, why doe you fisit, and ferme to leave

Things that doe found fo faire ? i'th' name of truth Are ye fantafticall, or that indeed Which outwardly ye show? My Noble Pariner You greet with present Grace, and great prediction

That he feemes wrapt withall to me you speake not. If you can looke into the Seedes of Time, And Gy, which Graine will grow, and which will soc, Speake then to me, who neyther begge, nor feare Your favors, nor your hate.

1. Hayle.

2. Hayle.

3. Hayle.

Leffer then Macheth, and greater.

Of Noble having, and of Royall hope.

2 Not so happy, yet much happyer.
3. Thou shalr get Kings, though thou be none:

So all haile Macberh, and Banqua

1. Banque, and Macbeth, all haile. Mach. Stay you imperfed Speakers, tell me mote By Sinelli death, I know I am There of Glamis. But how, of Cawdot? the There of Cawdor lives A prosperous Gentleman : And to be King Stands not within the prospect of beleefe, No more then to be Cawdor. Say from whence You owe this strange Intelligence, or why Vpon this blafted Heath you Rop our way With fuch Proplictique gretting?

Speake, I charge you Witches vomb.

Bang. The Earth hath bubbles, as the Water ha's,
And these are of them: whither are they vanish'd?

Mach. Into the Ayre, and what feem d corporall, Melted, as breath into the Winde.

Would they had stay'd

Drum withon,

Bang Were luch things here, 25 we doe speake about? Orhane we eaten on the infane Root,

That takes the Reason Prisoner i

Mach. Your Children shall be Kings.

Bang. You Mall be King

Mach And Thane of Cawdor 100 went it not fo? Bang. Toth' felfe-same tune and words, who's here?

Enter Roffe and Angua.

Roffe. The King hath happily received, Macheth, The newes of thy successe, and when he reades Thy personall Venture in the Rebels fight, His Wonders and his Prayles doe contend. Which should be thine, or his: filenc'd with that, In viewing o're the telt o'th'felfe-fame day. He findes thee to the flout Norweyan Rankes, Nothing afeard of what thy felfe didft make Strange Images of death, as thick as Tale Can post with post, and every one did beare Thy prayles in his Kingdomes great defence, And powr'd them downe before him.

Ang. Wee are fent, To give thee from out Royall Mafter thanks, Onely to harrold thee toto his fight, Not pay thee.

Roffe. And for an earnest of a greater Honor, He bad me, from him, call thee Thome of Cawdor In which addition, have must worthy Thurs, Bung. What, can the Deuill Speake true?

Mach. The Thane of Cawdor lives:
Why doe you dresse me in borrowed Robes?
Ang. Who was the Thane, lives yet,

But under heavie Indgement beares that Life.
Which he describes to loose.
Whether he was combin'd with those of Norway,
Or did lyne the Rebell with hidden helpe,

Or did lyne the Rebel! with hidden helpe,
And vantage; or that with both he labour'd
In his Countreyes wracke, I know not
But Treasons Capitall, confess'd, and prou'd,
Haue ouerthrowne him.

Mach. Glamys, and Thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behinde. Thankes for your paines,
Doe you not hope your Children shall be Kings,
When those that gaue the Thane of Cawdor to me,
Promis'd no lesse to them.

Bunq. That truffed home,
Might yet enkindle you vnto the Crowne,
Beides the Thane of Cawdor. But 'tis fit ange:
And oftentimes, to winne vs to our harme,
The Inftuments of Darkneffe tell vs Truths,
Winne vs with honeft Trifles, so betray's
In deepeft confequence.

Coufins, a word, I pray you.

Afacb. Two Truths are rold,
As happy Prologues to the (welling A&

Ashappy Prologues to the Iwelling A& Of the Imperiall Theame. I thanke you Gentlemen. This Iupernaturall folliciting

Cannot be ill; cannot be good

If ill? why hath it given me earnest of successe,
Commencing ma Truth? I am Thank of Cawdota

If good? why doe I yeeld to that suggestion,
Whote hornd Image doth unfixe my Heire,
And make my seated Heart knock at my Ribbes,
Against the vie of Nature? Present Feares

Are lesse then horrible Imaginings

My Thought, whose Murther yet is but fantasticall, Shakes so my single state of Man, That Function is smother d in surmise,

And nothing is, but what is not

Rawq Looke how our Partner's rape.

Math. If Chance will have me King,

Why Chance may Crowne me, Without my firre

Rang New Honors come vpon him Like our strange Garments, cleave not to their mould, But with the aid of vse

Mach. Come what come may,
Time, and the Houre, runs through the roughest Day.

Banq Worthy Macbeth, wee stay vpon your ley

Mach Gine me yout fauour.
My dull Braine was wrong ht with things forgotten
Kinde Gentlemen, yout paines are regisfred,
Where every day I turne the Leafe,
To reade them.

Let vs roward the King: thinke vpon What hath chane'd: and at more time, The foreim having weigh'd it, let vs speake Our free Hearts each to other.

Bany. Very gladly.
Afach. Till then enough:
Come friends.

Excans.

Scena Quarta.

Flourism. Enter King, Lenox, Malcolme, Donalbaine, and Assendants.

Rmy. Is execution done on Cawdor?
Or not those in Commission yet return'd?

Mal. My Liege, they are not yet come back.
But I have spoke with one that saw him die:
Who did report, that very frankly hee
Confes's his Treasons, implor'd your Highnesse Pardon.
And set forth a deepe Repentance:
Nothing in his Life became him,
Like the leaving it. Hee dy'de,
As ove that had beene studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
As 'twere a carelesse Trifle.

King. There's no Art.
To finde the Mindes conftruction in the Face:
He was a Gentleman, on whom i built
An absolute Trust

Enter Macheth, Banquo, Rosse, and Angus.
O worthyest Cousin,
The sinne of my ingratitude even now
Was heavise on me. Thou art so farre before,
That swiftest Wing of Recompence is slow,
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst lesse deserved,
That the proportion both of thanks, and payment,
Might have been mine: onely I have left to say,
More is thy due, then more then all can pay.

Mach The feruice, and the loyaltie I owe, In doing it, payes it felfe.
Your lighnesse part, is to receive our Duties:
And our Duties are to your Throne, and State,
Children, and Servants; which doe but what they should,
By doing every thing safe toward your Love
And Honor.

King. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo,
That hast no leste deserving must be knowne
No leste to have done so: Let me enfold thee,
And hold thee to my Heart.

Bang There if I grow, The Harueft is your owne

For in my way it lyes. Starres hide your fites, Let not Light fee my black and deepe defires: The Eye winke at the Hand; yet let that bee, Which the Eye feates, when it is done to fee.

Ring. True, worthy Banque: he is full to valiant,
And in his commendations, I am fed:
It is a Banquet to me. Let's after him,
Whose care is gone before, to bid vs welcome:
It is a possible Kinsman. Flourish. Exercise.

Scena Quinta.

Ensor Odscholbs Wife alone with a Letter.

Lady. They meet me in the day of successe: and I have learn'd by the perfect of report, they have more at them. then mortall knowledge. When I burnt in defire to question them further, they made themselves Apre, mto which they vanish'd. Whiles I flood raps in the wonder of it, came Missines from the King, who all-based me Thane of Cawdor, by which Trile before, these weyward Sesters salmed me, and reserved me to the comming on of time, with haile King that shall be. This besse I thought good to deliver thee (my dearest Partner of Greatneffe) that thou might'st not loofe the dues of recogning by being senorans of what Greatnesse is promised thee. Lay it to the bears, and farcined. Glamys thou art, and Cawder, and shalt be What thou are promis'd: yet doe I feare thy Nature, It is too full o'th' Milke of humane kindnesse, To earth the neerest way. Thou would'st be great, Art not without Ambition, but without The illnesse should attend it. What thou would's highly, That would'A thou holily: would'th not play faile, And yet would's wrongly winne. Thould'It have, great Glamys, that which cryes, Thus thou must doe, if thou have it; And that which rather thou do'ft feate to doe, Then wishest should be vadane. High thee hither, That I may powre my Spirits in thine Ease, And chaffife with the valour of my Tongue All that impelides thee from the Golden Round, Which Fate and Metaphyficall ayde doth feeme To have thee crown'd withall. Enser Mc Cenger. What is your tidings?

Mef. The King comes here to Night.
Lady. Thou it mad to fay it.
Is not thy Master with him? who, wer't fo,
Would have inform'd for preparation.

Mef. So please you, it is true: our Thore is comming:
One of my fellowes had the speed of him;
Who almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Then would make up his Mcsage.

Lady. Give him tending,
He brings great newes.

The Raven himselfe is hoorte.
That croakes the fasall entrance of Dancan
Vinder my Battlemenes. Come you Spirits,
That tend on mortall thoughts, wifex me here,
And fill me from the Crowno to the Toc, rep-full
Of direft Crueltie: make thick my blood,
Stop vp th'accesse, and passage to Remorie,
That no compunctious visitings of Nature

Shake roy fell purpole, nor keepe peace betweene Th'effe A, and hit. Come to my Womans Brefts, And take my Milke for Gall, you mutch'ting Ministers, Where-euer, in your fightlesse substances, You walt on Natures Mischiefe. Come thick Night, And pall thee in the dunness smoke of Hell, That my keene Knise see not the Wound it makes, Nor Heanen peepe through the Blanket of the darke, To cry, hold hold,

Great Glamys, worthy Cawdor,

Greater then both, by the all-haile hereaster,
Thy Letters have transported me beyond
This Ignoram present, and I feele now

The future in the inflant.

Mach. My dearest Loue,
Dincen comes here to Night.

Lady. And when goes hence!
Mach. To morrow, as he purposes.

Lady. O never,
Shall Sunne that Morrow see.

Your Face, my Thannis 23 a Booke, where men

May reade stronge matters, to begoile the time.
Looke like the time, beare welcome in your Eye,
Your Hand, your Tengue: looke like th'innocent flower,
But he the Serpent under't. He that's comming,
Must be prouided for: and you shall put
This Nights great Businesse into my dispatch,
Which shall to all our Nights, and Dayes to come,
Giue solely sourraigne sway, and Matterdome.

Mech. We will speake further,
Lady. Onely looke up cleare:
To alter factor, ever is to feare:
Leave all the rest to me.

Hoboyes, and Torches. Ever King, Malcolome, Donalbarne, Banque, Lenex, Maccient, Reste, Angue, and Asserdants.

King. This Castle hath a pleasant seat, The ayre nimbly and sweetly recommends it selfs. Vinto our gentle sences.

Bang. This Guelt of Summer,
The Temple-haunting Batlet does approue,
By his loued Manfoury, that the Heavens breath
Smells wooingly here: no lutty frieze,
Buttrice, nor Coigne of Vantage, but this Bird
Hath made his pendant Bed, and pacteant Cradle,
Where they must breed, and haunt: I have observed
The ayre is delicate.

Enter Lady.

Ring. See, fee, our honor'd Hoftefie:
The Loue that followes vs, formetime is our trouble,
Which fill we thanke as Loue. Herein I seach you,
How you shall bid God-cyld vs for your paines,
And thanke vs for your trouble,

Lady. Ail our feruice,
In Every point twice done, and then done double,
Were poore, and fingle Businesse, to contend
Against those Honors deepe, and broad,
Wherewith your Maiestie loades our House:
For those of old, and the late Dignities,
Heap'd up to them, we rest your Ermites.

King. Where's the Thancof Cawdor?
We courft him at the heeles, and had a purpose
To be his Purueyor: But he rides well,
And his great Loue (sharpe as his Spurre) hath holp him
To his home before vs: Faire and Noble Hostesse
We are your goest to night,
La. Your Scruants ever,

La. Your Servants cuer, Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs in compt, To make their Audit at your Highnesse pleasure, Still to returne your owne.

King. Give me your hand:
Conductine to mine Hoft we love him highly,
And shall continue, our Graces towards him.
By your leave Hostesse.

Which thou effects it the Ornament of Life, And live a Coward in thine owne Effects? Letting I dare not, wait apon I would, Like the poore Cat i'th'Addage. Math. Prythee peace:

Mach. Prythee peace:
I date do all that may become a man,
Who dates no more, is none.

La. What Beast was tethen
That made you breeke shis enterprize to me?
When you durft do it, then you were a man?
And to be more then what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor piace
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
They have made themselves, and that their fitnesse now
Do's vnmake you. I have given Sucke, and know
How tender 'tis to so so the Babe that milkes me,
I would, while it was smyling in my Face.
Have pluckt my Nipple from his Bonelesse Gummes,
And dasht the Braines out, had I so swore
As you have done to this.

Mach. If we should saile? Lady, We faile?

But ferew your courage to the flicking place,
And wee'le not fayle: when Duncan is affecpe,
(Whereto the rather shall his dayes hard lourney Soundly inuite him) his two Chamberlaines
Will I with Wine, and Wassell, so conunce,
That Memone, the Warder of the Braine,
Shall be a Fume, and the Receit of Reason
A Lymbeck onely: when in Swinish sleepe,
Their drenched Natures lyes as in a Death,
What cannot you and I performe vpon
Th'ynguated Duncan? What not put vpon
His spungie Officers? who shall beare the guilt
Of our great quell.

Mach. Bring forth Men-Children onely a Forthy vindeanted Mettle flootld compose Nothing but Males. Will it not be received, When we have mark'd with blood those sleepie two Of his owne Chamber, and vs'd their very Daggess That they have don't?

Lady. Who dates receive it other,
As we shall make our Grieses and Clamor fore,
Vpon his Death?

Mach. I am fet led, and bend vp
Each corporal! Agent to this terrible Feat.
Away, and mock the time with fairest show,
False Face must hide what the false Heart doth know.

A heavie Summons lyes like Lead vpon me, And yet I would not fleepe: Mercifull Powers, restraine in me the cursed thoughts That Nature gives way to in repole.

Enter Muchesh, and a Servant with a Torch.

Give me my Sword : who's there?

Mach. A Friend.

Bang. What Sir, not yet at reff? the King's a bed He hath beene in vnufuall Pleafure, And lent forth great Largeffe to your Offices. This Diamond he greetes your Wife withall, By the name of most kind Hostelle, And thus up in measurelesse content.

Mac. Being unprepar'd, Our will became the feruant to defect, Which elfe should free hane wrought

Bang. All's well

I dreamt loft Night of the three weyward Sifters.

To you they have shew'd some truth. Mub. I thinke not of them

Yet when we can entreat an house to ferue, We would spend it in some words vpon that Businesse If you would graunt the time.

Bang. At your kind'st leysure. Mach. If you fhall cleave to my confens,

When 'tis, it shall make Honor for you. Bang. So I lose none, In seeking to augment it, but still keepe

My Bosome franchis'd, and Allegeance cleare, I shall be counsail'd.

La. That which hath made the drunk, hath made me bold: What liath quench'd them, hath given me fire. Hearke, peace: it was the Owle that shrick d. The facall Bell-man, which gives the ftern'if good-night. He is about it, the Doores are open. And the furfeted Groomes doe mock their charge With Snores. I have drugg'd their Poffets, That Death and Nature doe contend about them,

Whether they liue, or dye. Enter Macberb

Mach Who's there? what hoa? Lady. Alack, I am afraid they have awak'd, And tis not done: th'attempt, and not the deed, Confounds vs: hearke: I lay dehen Daggers ready, He could not miffe em Hadhe not refembled My Father as he flept, I had doo't.

My Husband? Mach. I have done the deed:

Didft thou not heare a noyfe? Lady. I heard the Owle schreame, and the Crickers cry.

Did not you speake? Mach. When? Lady Now.

Mach. As I descended?

Lady. I.

Mach. Hearke, who lyes itb' second Chamber?

Lady. Donalbaine. Muc. This is a forry fight.

Lady. A foolish thought, co say a forry night. Mach. There's one did laugh in's fleepe,

And one cry'd Murther, that they did wake each other: I stood, and heard them: But they did say their Prayers, And addrest them agains to sleepe.

Lady. There are two lodg'd together.

Macb. One cry'd God bleffe vs, and Amen the other, As they had seene me with their Hanginans handa: Listning their feare, I could not say Amen, When they did fay God bleffe vs

Lady. Confider it not so deepely

Mac. But wherefore could not I pronounce Amen? I had most need of Blesting, and Amen fluck in my throat

Lady. These deeds must not be thought After thefe wayes: fo, it will make vs mad.

Mach Methought I heard a voyce cry, Sleep no more: Macbeth does murther Sleepe, the innocent Sleepe, Sleepe that knits up the rauel'd Sleeve of Care, The death of each dayes Life, fore Labors Bath, Balme of hurt Mindes, great Natures second Course, Chiefe nourither in Life's Feast

Lady What doe you meane?

Mach Still it cry'd, Sleepe no more to all the House: Glamu hath murther'd Sieepe, and therefore Candor Shall fleepe no more: Macheth fhall fleepe no more.

Lady. Who was it, that thus cry'd? why worthy Those You doe vabend your Noble frength, to thinke So braine-lickly of things: Goe get fome Water,

And wash this filthie Witnesse from your Hand, Why did you bring these Daggers from the place? They must lye there: goe carry them, and smeare The sleepie Groomes with blood.

Mach. Ile goe no more: I am afraid, to thinke what I have done t Looke on't againe, I dare not.

Lady. Infirme of purpose:
Give me the Daggers: the sleeping, and the dead,
Are but as Pictures: 'is the Eye of Child-hood,
That searce a painted Devill. If he doe bleed,
The guild the Faces of the Groomes withall,
For it must seem their Guilt.

Exit.

Knocke within.

Mach. Whence is that knocking?
How is't with me, when every noyle appalls me?
What Hands are here? hah: they plock out mine Eyes.
Will all great Noptomes Ocean wash this blood
Cleane from my Hand? nosthis my Hand will rather
The multitudinous Seas incarnardine,
Making the Greene one, Red.

Enter Lady.

Lady. My Hands are of your colour: but I shame
To weare a Heart so white, Knocky.
I heare a knocking at the South entry:
Retyre we to our Chamber:
A little Water cleares vs of this deed.
How easie is it then? your Constancie
Hath lest you vnattended. Knocke.
Hearke, more knocking.
Get on your Night-Gowne, least occasion call vs.
And shew vs to be Warchers: be not lost
So poorely in your thoughts.

So poorely in your thoughts.

Knocking within. Forter. Here's a knocking indeede : if a man were Porter of Hell Gate, hee should have old turning the Key. Knock. Knock, Knock, Knock. Who's there i'th' name of Belzebub? Here's a Fanner, that hang'd himselfe on th'expectation of Plentle: Come in time, have Napkins enow about you, here you'le (west for't. Knock Knock, knock, Who's here in th'other Deuils Name? Falth here's an Equinocator, that could sweare in both the Scales against eyther Scale, who committed Treason enough for Gods take, yet could not equivocate to Heauen : oh come io, Equipocator. Knock. Knock, Knock, Who's there? Paith here's an English Taylor come hither, for stesling out of a French Hose: Come in Taylor, here you may roft your Goole. Knock. Knock, Knock, Never at quiet : What are you? but this place is too cold for Hell. Ile Deudl-Porterit no further: I had thought to have let in some of all Professions, that goe the Primtole way to theuerlasting Bonfire. Knock, Anon, won, I pray you remember the Porter. Enter Macduff, and Lencx.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to Bed, That you doe lye so late?

Pore. Faith Sir, we were carowing till the fecond Cock: And Drinke, Sir, is a great propoker of three things.

Med. What three things does Drinke effectally

Port. Marry, Sir, Nose-painting, Sleepe, and Vrine. Lecherie, Sir, it prouokes, and vnprouokes it prouokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore much Drinke may be said to be an Equiuocator with Lecheric; it makes him, and it marres him; it lets him on, and it takes him off; it perswades him, and dis-hearters him; makes him stand too, and not stand too; in conclusion, equiuocates him in a sleepe, and giving him the Lye, leaves him.

Macd. I believe, Drinke gave thee the Lye Isft Night.
Port. That it did, Sir, it he very Throat on me: but I requited him for his Lye, and (I thinke) being too Grong for him, though he rooke vp my Legges sometime, yet I made a Shift to cast hum.

Enter Macberhi

Macd. Is thy Master stirring?
Our knocking ha's awak'd him: here he comes.

Lenox. Good morrow, Noble Sir. Mach. Good morrow both.

Macd. Is the King stirring, worthy Thans?

Mach. Not yet.

Macd. He did command me to call timely on him, I have almost slipt the houre.

Ma 6. Ile bring you to him.

Macd, I know this is a joyfull trouble to you: But yet 'tis one,

Macb. The labour we delight in, Physicks paine:

This is the Doore.

Macd. He make so bold to call, for tis my limited

Service. Exit Macdaffe. Lenox. Goes the King hence to day?

Mach. He does the did appoint for Lenox. The Night ha's been varuly: Where we lay, our Chimneys were blowne downe, And (as they lay) lam ntings heard i'th'Ayre; Strange Schreemes of Death,

And Prophecying, with Accents terrible,
Of dyre Combustion, and confus'd Euents,

New hatch'd toth' wofull time.
The obfeure Bird clamor'd the line-long Night.
Some fay, the Earth was feuorous,
And did thake.

Mach. 'Twas a rough Night.

Lenex. My young remembrance cannot paralell
A fellow to it.

Emer Macduff.

Mard. O horror, horror, horror,
Tongue nor Heart cannot conceiue, nor name thee.

Much, and Lenex. What's the matter?

Macd. Confusion now hath made his Mafter-peeces
Most facilities one Must her hath broke one

Most facrilegious Marther hath broke ope The Lords anounted Temple, and Role thence The Life o'th' Building, Mach. What is't you say, the Life? Lenox. Meane you his Maiestie?

Macd. Approach the Chamber, and destroy your fight With a new Gorgon. Doe not bid me speake:

mm 3

See,

S:e, and then speake your selves: awake, awake,
Exeum Macbeib and Lenox.

Ring the Alarum Bell: Murther, and Treason,
Barque, and Denalbaine: Malcolme awake,
Shake off this Downey Reepe, Deaths counterfeit,
And looke on Death it selfe: vp, vp, and see
The great Doomes Image: Malcolme, Barque,
As from your Graues rite vp, and walke like Sprights,
To countenance this horror. Ring the Bell.

Bell rings. Erier Lady.

Lady. What's the Bulinesse?

That such a hideous Trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the House? speake, speake.

Macd. O gentle Lady,

'Tis not for you to heare what I can speake:
The repetition in a Womans eare,

Enter Banque.

O Banque, Banque, Our Royall Master's murcher'd
Lady. Wee, alas:

What, in our House?

Ban. Too cruell, any where.

Dezre Duff, I prythee contradict thy felfe, And fay, it is not fo.

Would murther as it fell.

Enter Macbeth, Lenox, and Rosse.

Macb. Had I but dy'd an houre before this chance, I had liu'd a bleffed time: for from this infant, There's nothing ferious in Mortalitie: All is but Toyes: Renowne and Grace is dead, The Wine of Life is drawne, and the metre Lees Is left this Vault, to brag of.

Enter Malcolne and Donalbaine.

Donal. What is amisse?

Macb. You are, and doe not know't:
The Spring, the Head, the Fountaine of your Blood
Is stopt, the very Source of it is stopt.

Macd. Your Royall Father's murther'd.

Mal. Oh, by whom?

Lenox. Those of his Chamber, as it seem'd, had don't;
Their Hands and Faces were all badg'd with blood,
So were their Daggers, which wawip'd, we found
Vpon their Pillowes: they star'd, and were distracted,
No mans Life was to be trusted with them,

Macb. O, yet I doe repent me of my furie.

Macd. Wherefore did you so?

Mash. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temp'rate, & furious,
Loyall, and Neutrall, in a moment? No man:
Th'expedition of my violent Loue
Out. run the pawset, Reason. Here lay Duncan,
His Silver skinne, lac'd with his Golden Blood,
And his gash'd Staba, look'd like a Breach in Nature,
For Runes wastfull entrance: there the Murtherers,
Seeep'd in the Colours of their Trade; their Daggers
Vnmannerly breech'd with gore: who could refraine,
That had a heart to loue; and in that heart,
Courage, to make's loue knowne?

Than I did kill them.

Loar. Helpe me hence, hoa.

Mad. Looke to the Lady.

Mal. Why doe we hold our tongues,

That thosi may clayme this argument for ours?

Donal. What thould be spoken here,

May rush, and seize va? Let's away,
Our Teares are not yet brew'd.

Mal. Not our strong Sorsow
Voon the foot of Motion.

Bang. Looke to the Lady:
And when we have our naked Frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure; let vs meet,
And question this most bloody piece of worke,
To know it surcher. Feares and scruples shake vs:
In the great Hand of God I stand, and thence,

Against the vadivale d pretence, I fight
Of Treasonous Malice.

Macd. And so doe I.

All. So all.

Mach. Let's briefely put on manly readine Te, And meet i'th' Hall together.

All. Well contented. Exems.

Male. What will you doe?

Let's not confort with them:

To thew an wrifelt Sorrow, is an Office

Which the falle man do'a cafe.

He to England.

Ile to England,

Don. To Ireland, 1:
Our seperated fortune shall keepe vs both the safer:
Where we are, there's Daggers in mens Smiles;
The neere in blood, the neerer bloody.

Male. This murtherous Shaft that's thot,
Hath not yet lighted: and our fafelt way,
Is to awoud the ayme. Therefore to Horfe,
And let vs not be daintie of leave-taking,
But thift away: there's warraor in that Theft,
Which steales it felfe, when there's no mercie left.

Old man. Threefcore and ten I can remember well, Within the Volume of which Time, I have feene Houres dreadfull, and things strange: but this fore Night Hath trifled former knowings.

Rose. Ha good Father,
Thou seeft the Heauens, as troubled with mans AA,
Threatens his bloody Stage: byth Clock tis Day,
And yet darke Night strangles the trauailing Lampe:
Is't Nights predominance, or the Dayes shame,
That Darknesse does the face of Earth intombe,
When living Light should kiffe it?

Cld mor. 'Tis vnnstutall, Euen like the deed that's done: On Tuesday last, A Faulcon towring in her pride of place, Was by a Mowling Owle hawkt at, and kill'd.

Beauteous, and swift, the Minions of their Race,
Turn'd wilde in nature, broke their stalls, slong out,
Contending 'gainst Obedience, as they would Make Warre with Mankinde.

Old man. 'I is faid, they ease each other. Boffe. They did so: To th'amazement of mine eyes that look'd vpon't. Enter Macduffe.

Heere comes the good Macduffe. How goes the world Sir, now? Macd. Why see you not?

Roff. Is't known who did this more then bloody deed? Macd. Those that Macberb hath flaine.

Roff. Alas the day,

What good could they pretend?
Macd. They were fubborned,

Malcolme, and Donalbaine the Kings two Sonnes Are stolne away and fled, which puts vpon them Suspicion of the deed.

Roffe. Gainft Nature ftill,

Thriftleffe Ambition, that will rauen vp Thine owne lives meanes: Then 'tis most like,

The Soueraignty will fall upon Macheb.

Macd. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone

To be invested.

Rose. Where is Duncans body? Macd. Carried to Colmekill, The Sacred Store-house of his Predecestors, And Guardian of their Bones.

Roffe. Will you to Scone? Macd. No Colin, lle to Fife. Roffe Well, I will thuber.

Macd. Well may you fee things wel done there: A dieu Least our old Robes fit easier chen our new.

Mach. To night we hold a folerme Supper fir, And He request your presence

Bang. Let your Highnesse

Command spon me, to the which my duties Are with a most indissoluble tye Por ever knic

Mach Ride you this afternoone? Bon. 1, my good Lord.

Macb We should have else desir'd your good advice (Which fill hath been both grave, and profperous) In this dayer Councell: but wee'le take to motrow. Is't farre you ride?

Ban. As farre, my Lord, as will fill up the time 'Twizt this, and Supper. Goe not my Horse the better, I must become a borrower of the Night, For a darke house, or twaine.

Mach. Faile not our Feaft. Ban. My Lord, I will not.

Mach. We heare our bloody Cozens are bestow'd In England, and in Ireland, not confessing Their cruell Parricide, filling their hearers With strange invention. But of that to morrow, When there withall, we shall have cause of State, Craving vs toyntly. Hee you to Hotle: Adieu, till you returne at Night. Goes Fleance with you?

Ban. I, my good Lord: our time does call vpon's Mach I wish your Horses swift, and fure of thot : And fo I doe commend you to their backs. Exit Banque. Farwell. Let every man be mafter of his time, Till feuen at Night, to make focietie The (weeter welcome: We will keepe our selfe till Supper time slone While then, God be with you. Exeuns Lords. Sirrha, a word with you : Attendihole men Our pleasure?

Sernant. They are, my Lord, without the Palloc. Gace.

Mach. Bring them before vs. Exit Sergen:. To be thus, is nothing, but to be fafely thus ; Our fearer in Rangio flicke deepe. And in his Royaltie of Nature reignes that Which would be fear'd. Tis much he dares, And to that dauntleffe temper of his Minde He hath a Wisdome, that doth guide his Valour. Toact in lafetie. There is none but he, Whole being I doe feare . and under him, My Genieris rebuk'd, anit is faid Mark Anthonies was by Cafar. He chid the Sifters, When first they put the Name of King vpon me, And bad them speake to him. Then Prophet-like, They hayl'd him Father to a Line of Kings Vpon my Head (ley plac'd a fruitlesse Crowne, And put a barren Scepter in my Gripe, Thence to be wrenche with an vnlineall Hand, No Sonne of mine succeeding : if 't be so, For Banque's Issue have I fil'd my Minde, For them, the gracious Dimem have I murther'd. Put Rancours in the Vessell of my Peace Onely for them, and mine eternali I ewell Given to the common Enemie of Man. To make them Kings, the Seedes of Benque King: . Rather then fo, come Fate into the Lyft, And champion me to th'veterance. Who's there?

Enter Servant, and two Muriberers.

Now goe to the Doore, and flay there till we call

Was it not yesterday we spoke together? Marth. It was to please your Highnesse. Mach. Well then, Now have you confider'd of my speeches:

Know,

Know, that it was he, in the times past,
Which held you so vnder fortune,
Which you thought had been our innocent selfe,
This I made goodso you, in our last conference,
Past in probation with you:
How you were borne in hand, how crost:
The Instruments: who wrought with them:
And all things esse, that might
To halfe a Soule, and to a Notion craz'd, Say, Thus did Zangno.

1. Murth. You made it knowne to vs.

Mach. I did for
And went further, which is now
Our point of fecond meeting.
Doe you finde your patience fo predominant,
In your nature, that you can let this goe?
Are you so Gospell'd, to pray for this good man,
And for his I sue, whose heavie hand
Hath bow'd you to the Grave, and begger'd
Yours for ever?

2. Murth. We are men, my Liege. Mach. I, in the Catalogue ye goe for men, As Hounds, and Greyhounds, Muogrels, Spaniels, Curres, Showghes, Water-Rugs, and Demy-Wolues are clips All by the Name of Dogges: the valued file Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle, The House-keeper, the Hunter, every one According to the gift, which bounteous Nature Hath in him clos'd: whereby he does receive Particular addition, from the Bill, That writes them all alike: and so of men. Now, if you have a station in the file, Not i'th' worst ranke of Machood, sy'r, And I will pur chat Bulinelle in your Bolomes, Whose execution takes your Enemie off, Grapples you to the heart; and love of vs, Who weare our Health but fickly in his Life, Which in his Death were perfect.

2. Marth. I am one, my Liege, Whom the vile Blower and Buffers of the World Hath so incens'd, that I am recklesse what I doe, To spight the World.

1. Morth. And I another,
So weare with Difafters, rugg'd with Fortune,
That I would fet my Life on any Chance,
To mend it, or be rid on't,

Mach. Both of you know Banque was your Enemie.
Merth. True, ony Lord

Mach. So is be mine: and in fach bloody diffance,
That every minute of his being, thrusts
Against my neer st of Life: and though I could
With bare-sac d powersweepe him from my sight,
And bid my will amough it; yet I must not,
For certaine friends that are both his, and mine,
Whose loues I may not drop, but wayle his fall,
Who I my selfe struck downe: and thence it is,
That I to your afficance doe make loue,
Masking the Businesse from the common Eye,
For fundry weightie Reasons.

2. Marth. We shall, my Lord, Performe what you command vs.

Acch. Your Spirits thine through you.
Within this boure, at most,
I will aduste you where to plant your felues,
Acquaint you with the perfect Spy o'th' time,

The moment on t, for't must be done to Night,
And fomething from the Pallacer alwayes thought,
That I require a clearenesse; and with him.
To leave no Rubs not Botches in the Worke:
Flews, his Sonne, that keepea him companie,
Whose abtence is no lesse materiall to me,
Then is his Fathers, must embrace the sare
Of that darke houre, resolve your selves apart,
Ile come to you anon.
Murch. We are resolved, my Lord.

Murch. We are refolu'd, my Lord.
Mach He call upon you firaight: abide within,
It is concluded. Banque, thy Soules flight,
If it finds Heauto, must finde it out to Night. Execute.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Macberbs Laty, and a Serven.

Lady. Is Rangue gone from Court?

Servant. I, Madaine, but returnes againe to Night.

Lady. Say to the King, I would attend his leylure,
For a few words.

Sernant. Madame, I will.

Lady. Nought's had, all's spent.

Where our desire is got without content to this safet, to be that which we desired,

Then by destruction dwell in doubtfull in y.

Enter Masheth.

How now, my Lord, why doe you keepe alone?
Of fortych Fancies your Companions making,
Ving those Thoughts, which should indeed have dy'd
With them they thinke on: things without all remedie
Should be without regard; what's done, is done,

Mach We have forch dithe Snake, not kill'dit.
Shee'le close, and be liet felfe, whileft our poore Mallice
Remaines in danger of her former Tooth.
But let the frame of things dif-roynt,
Both the Worlds suffer,
Ere we will cate our Meale in feare, and sleepe
In the affliction of these terrible Dreames,
That shake vs Nightly: Better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gayne our peace, have fent to peace,
Then on the torture of the Minde to lye.
In testlesse extalice.

Duncane is in his Grave.
After Lifes fitfull Feuer, he fleepes well,
Treason has some his worft: nor Steele, nor Poyson,
Mallice domeflique, fortaine Leuie, nothing,
Can rouch him further.

Lady. Come on Gende my Lord, fleeke o're your ragged Lookes, Be bright and louisl among your Guests to Night.

Mach. So shall I Love, and so I pray be you:
Let your remembrance apply to Banque,
Present hir, Eminence, both with Eye and Tongue:
Vnsafe the while, that wee must lave
Our Honors in these flattering streames,
And make our Faces Vizards to our Hearts,
Disguising what they are.
Lady. You must leave this.

Lady. You must leave this.

Mach. O, full of Scorpions is my Minde, deare Wife:
Thou know's, that Banque and his Flears lives.

Lad But

Lady. But in them, Natures Copple's not eterne. Mach. There's comfort yet, they are affaileable, Then be thou locund: cre the Dat hath flowne His Cloyfter'd flight, ere to black Heccas fumnions The shard-borne Becele, with his drowfie hums, Hathring Nights yawning Peale, There shall be done a deed of dreadfull note.

Lody. What's to be done? Mach Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest Chuck Till thou applaud the deed: Come, feeling Night, Skarfe vp the tender Eye of pittifull Day, And with thy bloodie and invilible Hand Cancell and teare to pieces that great Bond, Which keepes me pale. Light thickens, And the Crow makes Wing toth' Rookie Wood: Good things of Day begin to droope, and drowle. Whiles Nights black Agents to their Prey's doe rowfe. Thou maruell' (a at my words: but hold thee still, Things bad begun, make firong themsclues by ill: So prythee goe with me

Scena Tertia.

Enter three Muriberers.

But who did bid thee toyne with vs?

2. He needes not our mistrust, fince he delivers Our Offices, and what we have to doe, To the direction juft

1 Then fland with vs

The West yet glimmers with some streakes of Day. Now spurres the lated Traveller apace. To gayne the timely time, end neere approches The fubiect of our Watch

3. Hearke, I heare Horfes.

Bangno within. Give vs a Light there, hos.

2. Then tis hee:

The rest, that are within the note of expectation, Alreadie are i'th'Court

1. His Horles goe about,

3. Almost a mile : but he does viually, So all men doe, from hence toth Pallace Gate Make it their Walke,

Enter Banque and Fleans with a Torib.

2. A Light, a Light

'Tis hec.

1. Stand too't.

Ban. It will be Rayne to Night.

1. Let it come downe.

Ban. O, Trecherie! Flyc good Fleams, flye, flye, flye, Thou may 'it revenge. O Slave !

5. Who did (trike out the Light?
5. Was't not the way?

3. There's but one downe: the Sonne Is fled.
2. We have lost

Best halfe of our Affaire.

1. Well, let's away, and say how much is done.

Scana Quarta.

Banquet prepar d. Enter Macbeth, Lady, Roffe, Leno, Lords, and Assendants

Mach. You know your owne degrees, fir downe: At first and last, the hearty welcome.

Lords. Thankes to your Maicity.

Mach. Our felfe will mingle with Society. And play the humble Hoft . Our Hoftesse keepes her State, but in best time We will require her welcome.

La. Pronounce it for me Sir, to all our Friends, For my heart speakes, they are welcome.

Enter first Mursberer.

Mach. See they encounter thee with their harts thanks Both fides are even : heere Ile fit i'th'mid'ft, Be large in mirth, anon wee'l drinke a Meafure The Table round. There's blood vpon thy face. Mar. 'Tis Banquo's then.

Mach. Tis better thee without, then he within.

is he dispatch'd ?

Mur. My Lord his throat is cut, that I did for him Mac. Thou are the best o'th'Cut-throats, Yet hee's good that did the like for Flears: If thou did'ft it, thou are the Non-pareill

Mur. Molt Royall Sur Fleans is scap'd.

Mach. Then comes my Fit againe : I had elle beene perfect; Whole as the Marble, founded as the Rocke, As broad, and generall, as the cafing Ayrer But now I am cabin'd, crib'd, confin'd, bound in To fawcy doubts, and feares. But Banque's fate?

Mur. I, my good Lord : fale in a dirch he bides, With twenty trenched gashes on his head;

The least a Death to Nature.

Mach. Thankes for that: There the growne Sepent lyes, the worme that's fled Hath Nature that in .ime will Venom breed, No teeth for th'prefent. Get thee gone, to morrow Wee'l heare our schues againe. Exis Murderer

Lady. My Royall Lord, You do not give the Cheere, the Feast is fold That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a making : Tis given, with welcome: to feede were best at home:

From thence, the fawce to meate is Ceremony, Meeting were bare without it

Enserthe Ghoft of Banquo, and fir in Macheths place.

Mach. Sweet Remembrancer: Now good digeflion waite on Appetite, A...d health on both Lenox. May't please your Highnesse sir. Marb. Here had we now our Countries Honor, roofd, Were the grac'd person of our Banque present Who, may I rather challenge for wnkindnesse,

Then pitty for Mischance.

Roffe. His absence (Sir) Layes blame vpon his promise. Pleas't your Highnesse To grace vs with your Royall Company?

Mcab

Mad. The Table's full.

Lonax. Heere is a place referu'd Sir,

Mach. Where?

Lenox. Heere my good Lord. What is't that mouse your Highnesse!

Mach. Which of you have done this?

Lords. What, my good Lord?

Mach. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake

Thy goary lockes at me.

Roffe. Gentlemen nie, his Highnesse is not well. Lady. Sie worthy Friends: my Lord is often thus, And hath beene from his youth. Pray you keepe Seat. The fit is momentary, vpon a thought He will againe be well. If much you note him You shall offend him, and extend his Passion, Feed, and regard him not. Are you a man?

Mach. I, and a bold one, that dare looke on that

Which might appall the Diuell.

La O proper stuffe :

This is the very painting of your feare: This is the Ayre-drawne-Dagger which you faid Led you to Duncan. O, these flawes and flarts (Impostors to true feare) would well become A womans flory, at a Winters fire Authoriz'd by her Grandem : shame it selfe, Why do you make such faces? When all's done You looke but on a floole.

Mach. Prythee fee there : Behold, looke, loe, how fay you: Why what care I, if thou canft nod, speake too. If Charnell bouses, and our Graves must fend Those that we bury, backe; our Monuments Shall be the Mawes of Kyres.

La. What? quite vnosann'd in folly. Mach. If I fland heere, I faw him.

La. Fie for Chame.

Macb. Blood hath bene shed ere now, i'th'olden time Ere humane Statute purg'd the gentle Weale: I, and fince too, Murthers have bene perform'd Too terrible for the eare. The times has bene, That when the Braines were out, the man would dye, And there an end: But now they rife agains With twenty mortall murthers on their crownes, And push vs from our stooles. This is more strange Then fuch a murcher is.

La. My worthy Lord Your Noble Friends do lacke you.

Mach. I do forger.

Do not muse at me my most worthy Friends, I have a Arange infirmity, which is nothing To those that know me. Come, love and health to all, Then He sit downe : Giue me some Wine, fill full : Encer Gooft.

I drinke to th'generall ioy o'th'whole Table. And to our deere Friend Banque, whom we mille: Would he were heere: to all, and him we thirst, And all to all.

Lads. Our duties, and the pledge.

Alac. Auant, & quit my fight, let the earth hide thee: Thy bones are matrowleffe, thy blood is cold: Thou half no speculation in those eyes Which thou doll glare with.

La. Thinke of this good Peeres: But as a thing of Custome: 'Tisno other, Oarly it spoyles the pleasure of the time. Mach. What man dare, I dare:

Approach thou like the rugged Ruman Beare, The arm'd Rhinoceros, or th'Hirem Tiger, Take any shape but that, and my firme Nerves Shall neuer tremble. Or be alitte againe, And dereme to the Defert with thy Sword : If trembling I inhabit then, protest mee The Baby of a Girle. Hence horrible thadow, Vareall mock'ry bence. Why so, being gone l am a man againe: pray you fit full.
La. You have displaced the mirth,

Broke the good meeting, with most admir'd disorder.

Mach. Can such things be, And ouercome vs like a Summers Clowd, Without our speciali wonder? You make me strange Euch to the disposition that I owe, When now I thinke you can behold fach fights, And keepe the natural! Rubie of your Cheekes, When mine is blanch'd with feare.

Rosse. What fights, my Lord? La. I pray you speake not: he growes worse & worse Question enrages him : at once, goodnight. Stand not vpon the order of your going,

Bur go at once.

Len. Good night, and better bealth Attend his Maiefly.

La. A kinde goodeight to all.

Mach It will baue blood they fay: Eris Lad Blood will have Blood:

Stones have beene knowne to moue, & Trees to fpeake : Augures, and underflood Relations, have By Maggot Pyes, & Choughes, & Rockes brought forth The secret firms of Blood. What is the night?

La. Almost at oddes with morning, which is which.

Mach. How tay it thou that Machef denies his person At our great bidding.

La: Did you fend to him Sir?

Mach. I heare it by the way : But I will fend: There's not a one of them but in his house I keepe a Seruant Feed. I will to morrow (And betimes I will) to the weyard Sifters. More shall they speake: for now I am bent to know By the worst meanes, the worst, for mine owne good, All causes shall give way. I am in blood Stepr in fo farre, that should I wade no more, Returning were as tedious as go ore: Strange things I have in head, that will to hand, Which must be acted, ere they may be scand

La. You lacke the season of all Natures, sleepe. Mach. Come, wee'l to sleepe: My strange & self-ebule Is the initiate feare, that wants hard vie: We are yet but yong indeed. Exerns.

Scena Quinta.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting Heces.

Why how now Here, you looke angerly? Hec. Haue I not reason (Beldems) 23 you are? Sawcy, and ouer-bold, how did you dare To Trade, and Trefficke with Maches, In Riddles, and Affaires of death;

And I the Miffris of your Charmes, The close contriuer of all harmes, Was neuer call'd to beare my part, Or hew the glory of our Art And which is worfe, all you have done Hath bene but for a wayward Sonne, Spightfull, and wrathfull, who (as others do) Loues for his owne ends, not for you. But make amends now: Get you gon, And at the pit of Acheron Meete me i'th'Morning: thither he Will come, to know his Destinie, Your Vessels, and your Spels provide. Your Charmes, and every thing belide a I am for th'Ayre: This night Ile spend Vnto a dismail, and a Fatall end. Great bufineffe must be wrought ere Noone. Vpon the Corner of the Moone There hangs a vap'rous drop, profound, He catch it ere it come to ground; And that diffill'd by Magicke flights, Shall raife such Artificiall Sprights, As by the frength of their illusion, Shall draw him on to his Confusion. He shall spurne Fate, scorne Death, and beare His hopes boue Wisedome, Grace, and Feare: And you all know, Security Is Mortals cheefest Enemie.

Mulicke, and a Song. Hearke, I am call'd : my little Spirit fee Sits in a Foggy cloud, and flayes for me.

Sing within. Come away, come away, &c. 1 Come, let's make half, thee'l loone be Backe againe.

Execut.

Scana Sexta.

Enter Lenax, and enosber Lord.

Lenex. My former Speeches, Haue but hit your Thoughts Which can interpret farther : Onely I fav Things have bin Arangel botne. The gracious Descent Was pittied of Macberb : marry he was dead : And the right valiant Banque walk'd too late, Whom you may fay (if t please you) Fleass kill'd, For Fleans fled : Men must not walke too lare. Who cannot want the thought, how monfirous It was for Malcolme, and for Donalbane To kill their gracious Father ? Damned Fact, How it did greeue Macbeth ? Did he not fraight In pious rage, the two delinquents ceare, That were the Slaues of drinke, and thralles of fleepe? Was not that Nobly done? I, and wifely too: For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive To heare the men deny's. So that I fay, He ha's borne all things well, and I do thinke, That had be Dimeans Sonues under his Key,
(As, and't please Heaven he shall not) they should finde What 'twere to kill a Father : So should Fleans. Bet peace; for from broad words, and confe be fayl'd His presence at the Tyrants Feast, I heare Atachefe lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell

Where he beltowes bimfelfe?

Lord. The Sonnes of Duneaue
(From whom this Tyrant holds the due of Birth)
Lives in the English Court, and is receyv'd
Of the most Prous Edward, with such grace,
That the maleuolence of Forune, nothing
Takes from his high respect. Thither Adactiff
Is gone, to pray the Holy King, whon his and
To wake Northumberland, and warlike Seyward,
That by the helpe of these (with him above)
To ratifie the Worke) we may againe
Give to our Tables meate, sleepe to our Nights r
Free from our Feasts, and Banquets bloody knives;
Do saithfull Homage, and receive free Honoss,
All which we pine for now. And this repore
Hath so exasperate their King, that hee
Prepares for some attempt of Warre.

Len. Sent he to Macduffe?

Lord. He did: and with an abfolute Sir, not I The clowdy Messenger turnes me his backe, And hums; as who should say, you's rue the time That clogges me with this Answer.

Levor. And that well might Aduile him to a Caution, chold what distance
His wisedome can provide. Some holy Angell
Flye to the Court of England, and vnfold
His Message ere he come, that a swift blessing
May some returne to this our suffering Country,
Vnder a hand accurs d.

Lord. He fend my Prayers with him.

Mach. How now you lecret, black, & midnight High? What is't you do?

All. A deed without a name.

Mach. I coniure you, by that which you Professe, (Howere you come to know it) answer me: Though you vneye the Windes, and let them fight Against the Churches: Though the yesty Waves Confound and I wallow Nauigation vp:
Though bladed Comebe lodg'd, & Trees blown downe, Though Castles topple on their Warders heads ; Though Pallaces, and Pyramids do Slope Their heads to their Foundations: Though the treasure Of Natures Germaine, tumble altogether, Euen till destruction ficken; Answer me To what I aske you.

y Speake. 2 Demand.

Weel answer.

I Say, if th'hadft rather heare it from our mouthes, Or from our Masters.

Mach. Call'em : let me fee'em.

Lenox. No indeed my Lord. Mach. Infected be the Ayre whereon they ride, And damn'd all those that trust them. I did heare

The gallopping of Horse. Who was't came by?

Len. Tis two or three my Lord, that bring you word : Meduff is fied to England.

Macs. Fled to England? Len. I, my good Lord.

Mach. Time, thou anticipae'A my dread exploits: The flighty purpose neuer is o're-tooke

Valeffe the deed go with it. From this moment, The very firftlings of my heart shall be

The firstlings of my hand. And even now To Crown my thoughts with Acts: be it thought & done:

The Castle of Macduff, I will surprize. Scize vpon Fife; give to th'edge o'th Sword His Wife, his Babes, and all unfortunate Soules

That trace him in his Line. No boalting like a Foolo, This deed Ile do, before this purpose coole,

But no more fights. Where are thele Gentlemen? Come bring me where they are.

Scena Secunda.

Enser Macduffes Wife, her Son, and Roffe.

Wife. What had he done, to make him fly the Land? Roffe. You must have patience Madam.

Wife. He had none :

His flight was madneffe: when our Actions do not, Our feares do make vs Traitors,

Roffe. You know not

Whether it was his wisedome, or his feare.

Defe. Wisedom? to lezue his wife, to leave his Babes, His Mantion, and his Titles, in a place From whence himfelfe do's flye? He loues vs not, He wants the naturali touch. For the poore Wren (The most diminitive of Birds) will fight, Her yong ones in her Nell, against the Owle:

All is the Feare, and nothing is the Love; As little is the Wiledome, where the flight

Sorun es against all reason.

Rolle. My decreft Cooz, I pray you schoole cour selfe. But for your Husband, He is Noble, Wife, Indictous, and best knowes The fits o'th' Sesson. I dare not speake much further, But cruell are the times, when we are Traitors And do not know our felues: when we hold Ramor From what we feare, yet know not what we feare, But floate vpon a wilde and violent Sea Each way, and moue. I take my leave of you: Shall not be long but Ile be heere againe: Things at the worlt will ceafe, or elfe climbe vpward, To what they were before. My pretty Cofine, Elesting vpon you.

And yet hee's Father-leffe.

Reste. I am so much a Foole, should I stay longer It would be my disgrace, and your discomfore, I cake my leaue at once. Exis Rolle. Wife. Sirra, your Fathers dead,

And what will you do now? How will you line ?

Son. As Birds do Mother.

Lefs. What with Wormes, and Flyes?

Son. With what I get I meane, and io do they.

Wife. Poore Bird,

Thou'dftneuer Feare the Net, nor Lime,

The Pitfall, nor the Gin.

Son. Why should I Mother? Poore Birds they are not fet for :

My Father is not dead for all your laying.

Wife. Yes, he is dead :

How wile thou do for a Father?

Sm. Nay how will you do for a Husband? Wife. Why I can buy met wenty at any Market.

Son. Then you'l by em to fellagaine. wife. Thou speak'st withall thy wit;

And yet I'faith with wit enough for thee. Son. Was my Father a Trantor, Mother &

Wife. I, that he was Son. What is a Traitor?

Wife. Why one that Iweares, and Iyes.

Son. And be all Traitors, that do fo.

Wife. Euery one that do's fo, is a Traitor, And must be hang'd.

Son. And must they all be hang'd, that swear and lye?

Wife. Euery one. Son. Who must hang them?

Wife. Why, the honest men.
Sen. Then the Liars and Swearers are Pools: for there. are Lyars and Swearers enow, to beate the honest men, and hang vp them.

Wife. Now God helpe thee, poore Mankie:

But how wilt thou do for a Father?

Son. If he were dead, youl'd weepe for him : if you would not, it were a good figne, that I should quickely baue a new Father.

Wife. Poore pratler, how thou calk's?

Enter a Messenger. Mef. Bleffe you faire Dame : I am not to you known, Though in your state of Honor I am perfect; I doubt fome danger do's approach you neerely.
If you will take a omely mans aduice, Be not found heere: Hence with your little ones To fright you thus. Me thinkes I am too louage: To do worse to you were fell Cruelty,

Which is too nie your person. Heaven preserue you, I dare abide no longer. Exis Messenger

Wife. Whether should I flye? I haue done no harme. But I remember now I am in this earthly world: where to do harme ls often laudable, to do good sometime Accounted dangerous folly. Why then (alas) Do I put up that womanly defence, To say I have done no harme?

What are these faces?

Enter Murtherers.

Mer. Where is your Husband? Wfe. I hope in no place so vulanctified, Where such as thou may's finde him.

Mur. He's a Traitor.

Son. Thou ly'ft thou shagge-ear'd Villaine.

Mur. What you Egge? Yong fry of Treachery

Son. He ha's kill'd me Mother, Run away I pray you.

Exit crying Marther

Scans Tertis.

Exter Malcolms and Macdeffe.

Mul. Let va feeke out fome defolate shade, & there Weepe out fad bosomes empty.

Macd. Let vs rather
Hold fast the mortall Sword: and like good men.
Bestride our downfall Birthdome t each new Morne,
New Widdowes howle, new Orphanacry, new forowes
Strike heasten on the face, that it refounds
As if it selt with Scotland, and yell'dout
Like Syllable of Dolour.

Mal. What I beleeve, lle waile;
What know, beleeve; and what I can redresse,
As I shall finde the time to friend t I wil.
What you have spoke, it may be so perchance.
This Tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues,
Was once thought honess: you have lou'd him well,
He hath not touch'd you yet. I am yong, but something
You may discerne of him through me, and wisedome
To offer vp a weake, poore innocent Lambe
T'appease an angry God.

Macd, I am not treacherous. Male. But Macberbis.

Macd. I have loft my Hopes.

A good and vertuous Nature may recoy to
In an Imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardout
That which you are, my thoughts cannot transpose;
Angels are bright still, though the brightest sell.
Though all things soule, would wear the brows of grace
Yet Grace must still looke so.

Male. Perchance even there
Where I did finde my doubts.
Why in that rawnelle left you Wife, and Childe?
Those precious Motives, those strong know of Leve,
Without leave-taking. I prav you,
Let not my lealouses, be your Dishonors,
But mine owne Safeties: you may be rightly just,

What ever I shall thinke.

Macd Bieed, bleed poore Country,
Great Tyrrany, lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodnesse dare not check thee: wear y thy wrongs,
The Title, is affear'd. Far thee well Lord,
I would not be the Villaine that thou think's,
For the whole Space that's in the Tyrants Graspe,
And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Benot offended:
Ispeake not as in absolute seare of you:
I thinke our Country linkes beneath the yoake,
It weepes, it bleeds, and each new day a gass
Is added to her wounds. I thinke withall,
There would be hands vplifted in my right:
And heere from gracious England have I offer
Of goodly thousands. But for all this,
When I shall treade vpon the Tyrants head,
Or weare it on my Sword; yet my poore Country)
Shall have more vices then it had before,
More suffer, and more sundry wayes then energ!
By him that shall succeede.

Mad. What should be be?

Mad. It is my selfe I meane; in whom I know
All the particulars of Vice so grafted,

That viben they shall be open'd, blacke Machet Will seeme as pure as Snow, and the poore State Effective him as a Lambe, being compar d With my confinelesse harmes.

Macd. Not in the Legious Ofbored Hell, can come a Divell more dame'd In euila, to top Macheth.

Mal. 1 grant him Bloody,
Luxurious, Auaricious, Falle, Decelifull,
Sodaine, Malicious, smacking of every sinne
That has a mame. But there's no bottome, oone
In my Voloptuousnesse: Your Wives, your Daughters,
Your Matrons, and your Maides, could not fill vp
The Cesterne of my Lust, and my Defire
All continent Impediments would ore-beares
That did oppose my will. Better Marberb,
Then such an one to reigne.

Macd. Boundlesse intemperance
In Neture is a Tyranny: It hash beene
Th'untimely emptying of the happy Throne,
And fall of many Kings. But scare not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may
Conucy your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seeme cold. The time you may so hoodwinke
We have willing Dames enough: there cannot be
That Vulture in you, to devoure so many
As will to Greatnesse dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclinde.

Mal With this, there growes
In my most ill-compos d Affection, such
A stanchlesse Augrice, that were I King,
I should cut off the Nobles for their Lands,
Desire his lewels, and this others House,
And my more-hauing, would be as a Sawce
To make me hunger more, that I should forge
Quartels vniust against the Good and Loyall,
Destroying them for wealth.

Destroying them for wealth.

Macd. This Avarice
flickes deeper: growes with more pernicious roote
Then Summer-seeming Luft: and it hath bia
The Sword of our flave Kings: yet do not feare, Scotland hath Foyfous, to fill up your will
Of your meere Owne. All these are portable,
With other Graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none. The King-becoming Graces, As Iustice, Verity, Temp'rance, Stablenesse, Bounty, Perseuerance, Mercy, Lowlinesse, Deuotion, Parience, Courage, Fortitude, I have no tellish of them, but abound In the division of each several Crime, Acting it many wayes. Nay, had I powre, I should Poure the sweet Milke of Concord, into Hall, V prote the vniversall peace, consound All vnity on earth.

Macd. O Scotland, Scotland.
Mal. If fuch a one be fit to governe, speake:
I am as I have spoken.

Mas. Fit to govern? No not to line. O Natio milerable! With an vniitled Tyrant, bloody Sceptred. When shalt thou see thy wholsome dayes againe? Since that the truest issue of thy Throne By his owne Interdiction stands accust, And do's blassphemen his breed? Thy Royall Father Was a most Sainted-King; the Queene that bore thee, Offmer you her knees, then on her feet, Dy'de every day the liu'd. Fare thee well,

These

These Euils thou repeat P vpon thy selle, Hath banish'd me from Scotland. O my Breft, Thy hope ends heere.

Mal. Macduff, this Noble pallion Childe of integrity, bath from my foule Wip'd ine blacke Scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts To thy good Truth, and Honor. Dwellish Macbeil, By many of these traines, bath sought to win me Into his power : and modest Wiledome pluckes me From ouer-credulous halt: but God aboue Deale betweene threand me; For even now I put my felle to thy Direction, and Vnspeake mine owne detraction. Heere abiura The taints, and blames I laide upon my telte, For strangers to my Nature. I am yet Vinknowne to Woman, neuer was fortworne, Scarfely have coucted what was mine owne. At no time broke my Faith, would not betta y The Deuill to his Fellow, and delight No lesse in truth then life. My first false speaking Was this vpon my felfe. What I am truly Is thine, and my poore Countries to command: Whither indeed, before they heere approach Old Seyward with ten thousand warlike men Already at a point, was letting foorth: Now wee'l together, and the chance of goodnesse Be like our warranted Quarrell. Why are you frient?

Macd Such welcome, and viwelcom things at once Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doller.

Mal. Well, more anon. Comes the King forth

I pray you?

Dalt, I Sit: there are a crew of wretched Soules That flay his Cure : their malady conunces The great affay of Art. But at his touch. Such (anctiry hath Heaven given his hand, They prefently amend.

Mal. I thanke you Doctor. Macd. What's the Disease he meanes?

Mal. Tis call'd the Euill.

A mon myraculous worke in this good King, Which often fince my heere remaine in England, I have feene him do: How he folicites heaven Himselse best knowes: but strangely visited people All swolne and Vicerous, pittifull to the eye, , The meete dispaire of Surgery, he cures, Hanging a golden stampe about their neckes, Put on with holy Prayers, and tis spoken To the succeeding Royalty he leaves The healing Benediction. With this strange vertue. He hath a heavenly grift of Prophelie, And fundry Bleffings hang about his Throne, That speake him full of Grace, Enter Roffe.

Macd. See who comes heere.

Male. My Countryman: but yet I know him not Meed. My ener gentle Cozen, welcome hither.

Male. 1 know himnow. Good God betimes remove

The meanes that makes vs Strangers.

Roffe. Sit, Amen.

Macd. Stands Scotland where it did ! Rosse. Alas poore Countrey, Almost affraid to know it selse. It cannot Be call'd our Mother, but our Graue; where nothing

But who knowes nothing, is once seene to smile: Where fighes, and grownes, and thricks that rent the ayre Are made, not mark'd: Where violent forcow fremes A Moderne extafie: The Deedmans knell, Is there scarse ask'd for who, and good mens lives Expire before the Flowers in their Caps, Dying, or ere they ficken. Macd. Oh Relation; too nice, and yet too true.

Male. What's the newest griefe?

Rosse. That of an houres age, doth histe the speaker, Each minute teemes a new one.

Mucd. How do's my Wifel

Roffe. Why well.

Macd. And all my Children?

Rosse. Well too.

Moed. The Tyrant ha's not batter'd at their peace? Roffe. No, they were wel at peace, when I did leave 'em Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech : How gos't? Roffe. When I came hither to transport the Tydings

Which I have heavily borne, there can a Rumour Of many worthy Fellowes, that were out, Which was to my beleefe witness the rather, For that I faw the Tyrants Power a-foot Now is the time of helpe, your eye in Scotland Would create Soldiours, make our women fight, To doffe their dire distresses.

Male. Bee't their comfort

We are comming thither : Gracious England hath Lent vs good Seyward, and ten thousand men,

An older, and a better Souldier, none That Christendome gives out.

Reffe. Would I could answer This comfort with the like. But I have words That would be howl'd out in the defert syre,

Where hearing should not latch them.

Macd. What concerne they,

The generall cause, or is it a Fee-griefe Due to some fingle brest?

Roffe. No minde that's honeA But in it shares some woe, though the maine part Pertaines 10 you alone.

Macd. If it be mine

Keepe it not from me, quickly let me have it.

Roffe. Let not your eares dispile my tongue for ever, Which shall possesse them with the heaviest found That ever yet they he rd.

Maed. Humh: I weffe at it.

Rosse. Your Caftle is surpriz'd: your Wife, and Babes Savagely flaughter'd: To relate the manner

Were on the Quarry of these murrher'd Deere To adde the death of you.

Male. Mercifull Heaven:

What man, no're pull your hat vpon your browes: Giue forrow words; the griefe that do's not speake, Whispers the o're-fraught heart, and bids it breake.

Macd. My Children 100?

Ro. Wife, Children, Serwants, all that could be found. Macd. And I must be from thence? My wife kil'd too? Rosse. I have laid.

Male. Be comforted.

Let's make vs Med'cines of our great Revenge, To cure this deadly greefe.

Macd. He ha's no Children. All my pretty ones? Did you lay All? Oh Hell-Kite! All?

What, All my pretty Chickens, and their Damme

At one fell (woope? Male. Dispute it like a man. Macd, I shall do io:

But

The Tragedie of Macbeth.

But I must also feele it as a man; I camor but remember such things were
That were most precious to me. Did heaven looke on,
And would not take their part? Sinfull Macdaff,
They were all stooke for thee 1N aught that I am,
Not for their owne denierits, but for mne
Fell slaughter on their soules: Heaven rest them now.

M.M. Be this the Whetitone of your (word, let griefe Convert to anger: blunt nor the heart, enrage it

Macd. O I could play the woman with mine eyes, And Braggart with my tongue. But gentle Heavens, Cut thort all intermission: Front to Front, Bring thou this Fiend of Scotland, and my selfe Within my Swords sength set him, if he seape Heaven forgive him too.

Mal. This time goes manly:
Come go we to the King, our Power is ready,
Our lacke is nothing but our leave. Macheth
Is ripe for shaking, and the Powres aboue
Put on their instruments: Receive what cheere you may,
The Night Is long, that never findes the Day. Exeunt

Adus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Doller of Physicke, and a Paying Gentlewoman.

Dod. I have too Nights watch'd with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it sheelast walk'd?

Gent. Since his Maichy went into the Field, I have feene her rife from her bed, throw her Night-Gown yppon her, volocke her Cloffet, take foorth paper, foldest, write vpon't, read it, afterwards Sealest, and against ceture to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleepe.

Doll. A great perturbation in Nature, to receyue at once the benefit of fleep, and do the effects of watching. In this flumbry agreation, besides her walking, and other actual performances, what (at any time) have you heard here.

Gent. That Sir, which I will not report after her.

Doll. You may to me, and its most niest you should.

Gome. Neither to you, not any one, having no witnesse to confirme my speech.

Enter Lady, with a Taper.

Lo you, heere she comes: This is her very grise, and vpon my life fast assept: observe her, stand close.

Dos. How came the by that light?

Cers. Why is flood by her: the ha's light by her continually, 'ris her command.

Dott, You see her eyes are open. Gent. I but their sense are shut. Dott. What is it she do's now? Looke how the rubbes her hands.

Gent. It is an accuitom'd action with her, to feeme thus washing her hands: I have knowns her continue in this a quarter of an houre.

Lad. Yetheere's a spot.

Dell. Heark, the speaks, I will fet downs what comes from her, to satisfie my comembrance the more throughy.

La Out damned (por: out I (ay, One: Two: Why then 'tis time to doo't: Hell Is marky. Fye, my Lord, fie, a Souldier, and affeas'd? what need we feare? who knowes it, when none can call our powre to accompt: yet who would have thought the olde man to have had fo much blood in him.

Del Do vou marke that?

What will these bands nere be cleane? No more o'that my Lord, no more o'that: you marre all with this starting.

Delt. Go too, go too 1

You have knowne what you should not.

Gens. She ha's spoke what shee should not, I am sure of that: Heaven knowes what she ha's knowns.

La. Heere's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand Oh, oh, oh

Doll. What a fight a there? The hart is forely charg'd, Genz. I would not have fuch a heart in my bosone, for the dignity of the wholebody.

Doll Well, well, well.

Gent. Pray God it be fit.

Dell. This difesters beyond my prodife : yet I have knowne those which have walkt in their sleep, who have dyed holily in their beds.

Lad. Wash your hands, put on your Night-Gowne, looke not so pale: I red you yet 23 aine E angue's buried; he cannot come out on's grave.

Doct. Euen (o?

Lady. To bed, to bed: there's knocking at the gate of Come, come, come, come, give me your hand: What's done, cannot be vndone. To bed, to bed, to bed.

D.D. Will the go now to bed?

Gent, Ditectly.

Doll. Foule whilp'rings are abroad: vanaturall deeds
Do breed vanaturall troubles: infected mindes
To their deafe pillowes will discharge their Secrets:
Moreneeds she the Dittine, then the Physician:
God, God forgue vs. sil. Looke after her,
Remoue from her the meanes of all annoyance,
And still keepe eyes vpon her: So goodnight,
My minde she ha's mated, and amaz'd my fight.
I thinke, but dare not speake.

Gent. Good night good Dollor.

Exens.

Scena Secunda.

Drum and Colours. Enter Mentelb, Carbnes, Angus, Lenox, Soldiers.

Ment. The English powre is neere, led on by Malcolm, His Vinkle Seyward, and the good Macding.
Reuenges burne in them: for their deere causes
Would to the bleeding, and the grim Alarme
Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Neere Byrnan wood

Shall we well meet them, that way are they comming

Cath. Who knowes if Donalbane be with his brother? Len. For certaine Sir, he is not: I have a File

Of all the Gentry; there is Sepward: Sonne, And many virtuffe youths, that even now Protest their first of Manhood.

Meat. What do's the Tyrant.

Cab. Great Dunfinanche ftrongly Portifies: Some say hee's mad: Others, that leffer hate him, Do call it valiant Fury, but for certaine

Aug. Now do's he feele His fecret Murthers sticking ou his hands, Now minutely Revolts upbraid his Faith-breach t Those he commands, move onely in command, Nothing in love : Now do's he feele his Title Hang loofe about him, like a Grants Robe Vpon a dwarfish Theefe.

Mon. Who then shall blame His pefter'd Senfes to recoyle, and frart. When all that is within him, do's condemne

It felfe, for being thete.

Cash. Well, march we on, To give Obedience, where 'tis truly ow'd: Meet we the Med'cine of the fickly Weale, And with him poure we in our Countries purge, Each drop of vs.

Lenex. Or fo much se it needes, To dew the Soueraigne Flower, and drowne the Weeds: Make we our March to words Birnan. Execut marching.

Scana Tertia.

Enter Macbeth, Doller, and Astendante.

Mach. Bring me no more Reports, let them flye all: Till Byrnane wood remoue to Dunfinane, I cannot taint with Feate. What's the Boy Malcolme? Was he not borne of woman ? The Spirits that know All mortail Confequences, have pronounc'd me thus: Feare not Macbeth, no man that's borne of woman Shall ere have power vpon thee. Then fly falle Thanes, And mingle with the English Epicines, The minde I (wey by, and the beart I beare, Shall never fagge with doubt, nor flake with feare. Enter Sermont.

The divell damne thee blacke, thou cream-fac'd Loone: Where got'ft thou that Goofe-looke.

There is ten thouland-

Mack. Geefe Villame? Sor. Souldiers Sir.

Mach. Go pricke thy face, and over red thy feare Thou Lilly-liver'd Boy. What Soldiers, Pasch? Death of thy Soule, those Linzen theekes of thine Are Counfailers to feare. What Soldiers Whay-face?

Ser. The English Porce, so please you. Mach. Take thy face hance. Seyens, I am fick at hart,

When I behold : Soyrow, I lay, this puth Will cheere me ever, or dif-este me now. I baue hu'd long coough. my way of life Is faine into the Seare, the yellow Leafe, And that which should accompany Old-Age,
As Honor, Loue, Obedience, Troopes of Friends, I must not looke to have : but in their fleed, Curles, not loved but deepe, Mouth-honor, breath Which the poore heart would faine deny, and dare not.

Enter Segton. Ser. What's your gracious pleasure? Mab. What Newes more? Ser. All is confirm'd my Lord, which was reported. Merd. He fight, till from my bones, my flesh be backt

Give me my Armor.

Soys. The not needed yet.

Mach. He put it on:

Send out moe Horles, skirre the Country round, Hang those that talke of Feare. Give me mine Armor :

How do's your Patient, Doctor? Doct. Nor fo ficke my Lord,

As the is troubled with thicke-comming Fancies That keepe her from her reft.

Mash. Cure of that :

Can'fe thou not Minister to a mitide difeas'd, Placke from the Memory 2 rooted Sorrow, Raze out the written troubles of the Braine, And with fome fweet Oblivious Antidoto Cleanfe the stufft bosome, of that perillous susse Which weighes vpon the heart?
Dod. Therein the Patient

Must minister to bimselfe. Mach. Throw Phylicke to the Dogs, Henontofit. Come, put mine Armour on : give me my Staffe : Segrow, fend out : Doctor, the Thanes five from me: Come fir, disparch. If thou could'st Doctor, cast The Water of my Land, finde her Diferse, And purge it to a found and priftine Health, I would applaud thee to the very Eccho That should applaud againe. Pull't off I fay, What Rabarb, Cyme, or what Purgative drugge Would scowre these English hence : hear'st of them? Doil. I my good Lord : your Royall Preparation Makes vs heare fomething.

Mach. Bring it after me: I will not be affraid of Death and Bane, Till Birnane Forrest come to Dunsinane.

Doct. Were I from Dunfinane away, and cleere. Profit againe should hardly draw me beere.

Scena Quarta.

Dress and Colours. Est . OHalcolme, Seyward, Muchaffe Say ands Some, Morterio, Cathans, Augus, and Soldiers Marching.

Male. Cofins, I hope the dayes are necre at hand That Chambers will be fale.

Ment. We doubt to nothing.
Svew. What wood is this before vs?

Ment. The wood of Birnane,
Male, Let every Souldier how him downe a Bough,
And bear't before him, thereby finall we shadow The numbers of our Hoaft, and make discovery Erre in report of vs.

Sold. It (hall be done.

Syw. We learne no other, but the confident Tyrent Keepes still in Dunfinane, and will indure

Out fetting downe befor t.

Male. Tis his maine hope:

For where there is aduantage to be ginen, Both more and leffe have given him the Revolt, And nene ferne with him, but constrained things, Whole hearts are ablent too.

Macd. Let out iust Censures Attend the true event, and put we on

Scena Quinta.

Emer Macbeth, Seyton, & Souldiers, with Drum and Colours.

Mach. Hang our our Banners on the outward walls, The Cry is still, they come: our Castles strength Will laugh a Siedge to scorne: Heere let them lye, Till Famine and the Ague eate them vp: Were they not forc'd with those that should be ours, We might have met them darefull, beard to beard, And beate them backward home. What is that noyle?

A Cry within of Women.

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good Lord. Mach. I have almost forgot the taste of Feares: The time ha's beene, my fences would have cool'd To heare a Night-shricke, and my Fell of haire Would at a difmall Treatife rowze, and flitte As life were in't. I have supt sull with horrors, Direnesse familiar to my slaughterous thoughts Cannot once start me. Wherefore was that cry?

Sep. The Queene (my Lord) is dead.

Mach. She should have dy'de heereafter ; There would have beene a time for fuch a word: To morrow, and to morrow, and to morrow, Creepes in this petty pace from day to day, To the last Syllable of Recorded time And all our yesterdayes, have lighted Fooles The way to dusty death. Out, out, breefe Candle, Life's but a walking Shadow, a poore Player, That firuts and frets his houre vpon the Stage, And then is heard no more. It is a Tale Told by an Ideor, full of found and fury Enter a Vieffenger. Signifying nothing. Thou com's to vie thy Tongue: thy Story quickly.

Mef. Gracious my Lord,
I should report that which I say I saw,

But know not how to doo't.

Mach. Well, fay fir.

Mef. As I did ftand my watch vpon the Hill I look'd toward Byrnane, and anon me thought The Wood began to moue.

Mach. Lyar, and Slaue.

Mef. Let me endure your wrath, ift benot fo : Within this three Mile may you fee it comming. I lay, a mouing Groue.

Mach. If thou speak'Afhlie, Vpon the next Tree shall thou hang alise Till Famine cling thee: If thy speech be sooth, I care not if thou dolt for me as much. I pull in Resolution, and begin To doubt th' Equipocation of the Fiend, That lies like truth. Feare not, till Byrasne Wood Do come to Dunfinane, and now a Wood Druman and Colours. Emer Malcolme, Soynord, Macdoffe, and their Army, wub Boughes.

Md. Now neere enough: Your leavy Skreenes throw downe, And shew like those you are I You (worthy Vakle) Shall with my Cofin your right Noble Some Leade our heft Battell. Worthy Marduffe, and wee Shall take vpon's what elfe remaines to do, According to out order.

Sej. Fare you well: Do we but finde the Tyrants power to night, Let vs be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macd. Make all our Trumpers Tpeak, give the all breach Thole clamorous Harbingers of Blood, & Death Exens Alarmens communed.

Scena Septima.

Enter Marbeib.

Mach. They have tied me to a stake, I can por flye, But Beare like I must fight the course. What's he That was not borne of Woman? Such a one Am I to feare, or none.

Enter young Seyward.

T. Ser. What is thy name :

Mach. Thou'lt be affraid to heate it. T. Sey. No: though thou call'it thy lefe a hoter rame

Then any is in hell.

Mach. My name's Morbeth. T. So. The divell himselfe could not pronounce a Tale More hatefull to mine eare.

Mach. No: not more fearefull.

T.Sq. Thou lyeft abhorred Tyrant, with my Sword He proue the lye thou fpeak ft.

Fight, and young Seyward flame. Mach. Thou was't borne of woman; But Swords I fmile at, Weapons laugh to fcome, . Brandish'd by manthat's of a Woman borne.

Alarums. Enter Macaufe Macd. That way the noise is: Tyrant shew thy face If thou beeft flaine, and with no flroake of mine My Wife and Childrens Ghofts will haunt me ftill: I cannot firike at wretched Kernes, whose armes Are hyr'd to beare their Staves ; either thou Marbert, Or elic my Sword with an unbattered edge I theath againe undeeded. There thou should'A be, By this great clatter, one of greatest note Seeme Seemes bruited. Let me finde him Fortune, And more I begge not.

Alerens.

Enter Makeolme and Somand

Sey. This way my Lord, the Castles gently rendred: The Tyrants people, on both sides do fight, The Noble Thanco do brauely in the Warre, The day almost it felse professes yours, And little is to do.

Male. We have met with Foes That ftrike befide vs.

Sey. Enter Sir, the Castle. Exernt. Enter Macbeth.

Mach. Why should I play the Roman Fonle, and dye On mine owne fword? whiles I fee lives, the gafhes Do better vpoo them.

Enter Macduffe.

Macd. Torne Hell-hound, turne. Mach. Of all men else I have avoyded thee: But get thee backe, my foule is too much charg'd

With blood of thine already. Macd. I have no words,

My voice is in my Sword, thou bloodier Villaine Then tearmes can give thee out. Fight: Alarum

Mach. Thou loofest labour, As easie may it thou the intrenchant Ayre With thy keene Sword impresse, as make me bleed: Let fall thy blade on vulnerable Crests, I beare a charmed Life, which must not yeeld To one of woman borne, Macd. Dispaire thy Charme, And let the Angell whom thou fall haft feru'd Tell thee, Macdaffe was from his Mothers womb Vatimely ript.

Mach. Accurled be that tongue that tels mee fo ; For it hath Cow'd my betier part of man: And be thele Ingling Frends no more beleeu'd, That palter with vs in a double sence,
That keepe the word of promise to our eare, And breake it to our hope. He not fight with the& Macd. Then yeeld thee Coward, And live to be the shew, and gaze o'th'time. Wee'lhaue thee, as our torer Monsters are Painted vpon a pole, and under-west, Heere may you fee the Tyrant.

Much. I will not yeeld

To kille the ground before young Malcolmes feet, And to be baited with the Rabbles cuife. Though Byrnane wood be come to Dunfinane, And thou oppos'd, being of no woman borne, Yet I will try the last. Before my body, I throw my warlike Shield: Lay on Mucdeffe, And damn'd be him, that first cries hold, enough.

Exeunt fighting. Alarmot.

Enter Fighting, and Macbeth Raine.

Retreat and Flourib. Bater with Drumme and Colours, Malcoin, Seguerd, Rosse, Thanes, & Soldiers. Mal. I would the Friends we misse, were safe arriv'd. Sey. Some must go off: and yet by these I fee,

So great a day as this is cheapely bought.

Mal. Macdiffe is milling, and your Noble Sonne. Roffe Your fon my Lord, ha's paid a souldiers debt, He onely liu'd but till he was a man, The which no sooner had his Proviesse confirm'd

In the voshrinking station where he fought. But like a man he dy'de.

Sey. Then he is dead?

Rose.I, and brought off the field: your cause of fortow Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then It hath no end.

Ser. Had he his hures before? Roffe. I, on the Front.

Sg. Why then, Gods Soldier be he: Had I as many Sonnes, as I have haires, I would not with them to a fairer death: And to his Knell is knoll'd.

Mal. Hee's worth more forrow, And that He spend for him.

Sey. He's worth no more, They say he parted well, and paid his score,

And fo God be with him. Here comes newer comfort. Enter Macdaffe; with Macheths head.

Macd. Haile King, for so thou art. Behold where Hands Th' V furpers curfed head: the time is free: I fee thee compast with thy Kingdomes Pearle, That speake my falutation in their minds : Whose voyces I desire alowd with mine.

Haile King of Scotland.

All. Haile King of Scotland. Flourish. Mal. We shall not spend a large expence of time, Before we reckon with your feuerall loues, And make vs even with you. My Thanes and Kinfmen Henceforth be Earles, the first that ever Scotland In such an Honor n m'd; What's more to do, Which would be planted newly with the time, As calling home our exil'd Friends abroad, That fled the Snates of watchfull Tyranny, Producing forth the cruell Minister: Of this dead Butcher, and his Fiend-like Queene; Who(as 'tis thought) by felfe and violent hands, Tooke off her life. This and what needfull elfe That call's vpon vs, by the Grace of Grace, We will performe in measure, cime, and place:

So thankes to all at once, and to each one,

Whom we inuite, to see vs Crown'd at Scone. Flourish. Excunt Orangs.

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDIE OF

HAMLET, Prince of Denmarke.

Adus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Barnardo and Francisco swo Continels.

Barnardo.

Ho's chere? Fran. Nay answer me : Stand & vasold

Bor. Long live the King. From. Barnardo?

From. You come most carefully vpon your houre. Ear. Tis now frook twelve, get thee to bed Francisco. Fran. For chis releefe much thankes: 'Tis butter cold, And I am ficke at heart.

Barn. Haue you had quie; Guard?

Fren. Not a Moule firring.
Bare. Well, goodnight. If you do meet Horain and Marselles, the Rivals of my Watch, bid them make half. Enter Horain and Marcellus.

From. I thinke I heare them. Stand: who's there?

Her. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And Leige-mento the Dane.

Fren. Giue you good night.
Mer. O ferwel honest Soldier, who hat a relieu'd you? Fra. Barnarde ha's my place: give you goodnight.

Exu Fran.

Mar. Holla Barnarda.

Bar. Say, what is Horato there?

Har. A prece of him.
Bar. Welcome Horain, welcome good Marcelin. Mar. What, ha's this thing appear'd againe to night.

Bar. I have feene nothing.

Mar. Herainfaies. tis but our Fantafie, And will not let beleefe take hold of him Touching this dreaded fight, twice feene of vs, Therefore I have intreated him along Wich vs, to watch the minutes of this Night, That if agains this Apparition come, Hemay approve out eyes, and speake to it.

Hor. Tush, sush, 'twill not appeare.

Bar. Sit downe a while,

And let vs once againe affaile your exres, That are so fortified against our Story, What we two Nights have seene.

Hor. Well, fit we downe,

And let vs heare Banardo speake of this.

Born. Laft night of all, When youd frame Starre that's Westward from the Pole Had made his confe t'illume that part of Heaven

Where now it burnes, Marcalha and my Selfe,

The Bell then besting one.

Mr. Peace, breake thee of: Enter the Good Looke where it comes againe.

Burn. In the same figure, like the King that's dead. Mar. Thou art a Scholler; Speake to it Horan.

Barn. Looker it not like the King? Marke it Horasa. Hora. Moft like: It harrowes me with fear & woode.

Barn. It would be spoke too.

May. Question at Horara, Her, What art thou that vsurp st this time of night, Together with that Faire and Warlike forme In which the Maiefly of buried Dermarke Did sometimes march: By Heauen I charge thee speake.

Mer. It is offended.

Barn. See,it ftalkes away.

Her. Stay: speake; speake: I Charge thee, speake. Exis the Gooft.

Mar. Tis gone, and will not answer Barn. How now Heratio? You tremble & look pale :

Is not this something more then Pantase? What shinke you on't?

Her. Before my God, I might not this beleeue Without the fensible and true auouch Of mine owne eyes.

Mar. Isit not like the King?

Her. As thou art to thy felfe, Such was the very Armour he bad on, When th'Ambitions Norwey combatted: So frown'd he once, when in an angry parte He Imot the fledded Pollax on the Ice. Tir ftrange.

Mer. Thus rwice before, and just et this dead houre, With Marriall Stalke, hath he gone by our Watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not : But in the groffe and scope of my Opinion, This boades some strange erruption to out Se ue.

Mar. Good now fit downe, & tell me he that known Why this fame fired and most observant Watch, So nightly toyles the fubied of the Land, And why fuch dayly Cast of Brazon Cannon And Forraigne Mart for Implements of warre: Why fuch imprefie of Ship-wrighes, whose fore Taske Do's not divide the Sundsy from the weeke, What might be toward, that this sweary hast Doth make the Night ioyn - Labouter with the day : Who is't that can informe m

Her. That can L.

At least the whisper goes so : Our last King, Whole Image even but now appear'd to vs, Was (as you know) by Fortinbras of Notway, (Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate Pride) Dar'd to the Combate. In which, our Valiant Hamler, (For fo this fide of our knowne world effeem'd him) Did flay this Fortinbras : who by a Seal'd Compact, Well ratified by Law, and Heraldrie Did forfeite (with his life) all those his Lands Which he stood feiz'd on, to the Conqueror t Against the which, a Moity competent
Was gaged by our King: which had return'd To the Inheritance of Fortinbras, Had he bin Vanquisher, as by the same Cou'nant And carriage of the Atticle deligne, His fell to Hamlet. Now hr, young Fortinbras. Of vnimproued Mettle, hot and full, Hath in the skirts of Norway, heere and there, Shark'd vp a Lift of Landleffe Resolutes, For Foode and Diet, to some Enterprize That hath a stomacke in't : which is no other (And it doth well appeare voto our State)
But to recouer of vs by strong hand Andtermes Compulfative, those foresaid Lands So by his Father loft: and this (I take it) Is the maine Motive of our Preparations, The Sourle of this our Watch, and the cheefe head Of this post-hast, and Romage in the Land.

Enter Ghost againe,

But foft, behold: Loe, where it comes againe:

Ile crosse it, though it blost me. Stey Illusion:

If thou hast any found, or vsc of Voyce,

Speake to-me. If there be any good thing to be done,

That may to thee do ease, and grace to me; speak to me.

If thou art privy to thy Countries Fate

(Which happily foreknowing may awoyd) Oh speake,

Or, if thou hast vp-hoorded in thy life

Extorted Treasure in the wombe of Earth,

(For which, they say, you Spirits oft walke in death)

Speake of it. Stay, and speake. Stop it Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my Partizan?
Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Barn. Tis heere. Hor. Tis heere.

Mar. Tis gone. Exit Gboft.

We do it wrong, being so Maiesticall
To offer it the shew of Violence,
For it is as the Ayre, juvulnerable,
And our vaine blowes, malicious Mockery.

Bern. It was about to speake, when the Cocke crew.

Hor. And then it started, like a guilty thing
Vpon a searfull Summons. I haucheard,
The Cocke that is the Trumpet to the day,
Doth with his losty and shrill-sounding Throate
Awake the God of Day: and at his warning,
Whether in Sea, or Fire, in Earth, or Ayre,
Th'extrauagant, and erring Spirit, hyes
To his Consine. And of the truth heerein,
This present Obiest made probation.

Mar. It feded on the crowing of the Cocke,
Some fayes, that ever 'gainst that Season comes Wherein our Saviours Birth is celebrated,
The Bird of Dawning singeth all night long:
And then (they say) no Spirit can walke abroad,
The nights are wholsome, then no Planets strike,
No Faiery talkes, nor Witch hath power to Charme:

So hallow'd, and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part beleeve it.

But looke, the Motne in Ruster mantle clad,
Walkes o'te the dew of you high Easterne Hill,
Breake we our Watch vp, and by my aduice
Let vs impart what we have seene to night
Vnto yong Hamles. For vpon my life,
This Spirit dumbe to vs, will speake to him:
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our Loues, fitting our Duty?

Mor. Let do't I pray, and I this morning know

Where we shall finde him most conveniencity. E.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Clandius King of Denmarke, Garriude the Queene, Hamlet, Polonius, Lacrtes, and bis Sister Ophelia, Lords Attendant 2

King. Though yet of Hamlet our deere Brothers death The memory be greene : and that it vs befitted To beare our hearts in greefe, and our whole Kingdome To be contracted in one brow of woe: Yet fo farre hath Difcretion fought with Nature, That we with wifest fortow thinke on him. Together with remembrance of our felues. Therefore our sometimes Sifter, now our Queen, Th'Imperiall loyatteffe of this warlike State. Have we, as twere, with a defeated toy, With one Aufpicious, and one Dropping eye, With mirth in Funerall, and with Dirge in Marriage, In equall Scale weighing Delight and Dole Taken to Wife; nor have we heerein bart'd Your better Wifedomes, which have freely gone With this affaire along, for all our Thankes Now followes, that you know young Fortintres, Holding a weake supposall of our worth; Or thinking by out late deere Brothers death, Our State to be distoynt, and out of Frame, Colleagued with the dreame of his Advantages He hath not fayl'd to peffer vs with Meffage, Importing the furretider of those Lands Loft by his Father: with all Bonds of Law To our most valiant Brother. So much for him.

Enter Voltemand and Cornelius.

Enter Voltemand and Cornelius.

Now for our felfe, and for this time of meeting
Thus much the businesses. We have heere writ
To Norway, Vinele of young Fortinbrus,
Who Impotent and Bedrid, scarsely heares
Of this his Nephewes purpose, to suppresse
His surther gate heerein. In that the Leuies,
The Lists, and full proportions are all made
Out of his subject: and we heere dispatch
You good Cornelius, and you Voltemand,
For bearing of this greeting to old Norway.
Giving to you no further personall power
To businesses with the King, more then the scope
Of these dilated Articles allow.

Farewell and let your hast commend your duty.

Volt. In that, and all things, will we show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing, heartily farewell.

Exit Voltemand and Cornelium

And now Larres, what's the newes with you?

You

You told vs of some suite. What is't Lacres?
You cannot speake of Reason to the Dane,
And loose your voyce. What would'st thou beg Lacress,
That shall not be my Offer, not thy Asking?
The Head is not more Native to the Hears,
The Hand more lost umentall to the Mouth,
Than is the Throne of Denmark to thy Father.
What would'st thou have Lacres?

Lace. Dread my Lord,
Your leane and fauour to returne to France,
From whence, though willingly I came to Denmarke
To shew my duty in your Corenation,
Yet now I must confest, that duty done.
My thoughts and wishes bend agains towards France,
And how them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Hate you your Fathers leade? What layes Pollonium?

Pol. He hath my Lords

I do befeech you give him leave to go.

King. Take thy faire houre Lacress, time be thine, And thy best graces spend it at thy will:

But now my Cosin Hamlet, and my Sonne?

Ham. A little more then kin, and lesse then kinde.

King. How is it that the Clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so my Lord, Lamtoo much ith Sun.

Queen. Good Hamler caft thy nightly colour off, And let thine eye looke like a Friend on Denmarke. Do not for cuer with thy veyled lids Secke for thy Noble Father in the duf; Thou know 'f' 'tis common, all that hues must dye, Passing through Nature, to Eternity.

Ham. I Madam, it is common.

Queen. If icbe;

Why feemes it so particular with thee.

Ham. Seemes Madam? Nay, it is: I know not Seemes:
'Tis not alone my Taky Cloake (good Mother)
Nor Customary suites of solemne Blacke,
Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the frustfall Riner in the Eye.
Nor the deiested haulour of the Visage,
Together with all Formes, Moods, siewes of Griese,

That can denote me truly. These indeed Seeme,, For they are actions that a man might play: But I have that Within, which passeth show; These, but the Trappings, and the Suites of woe

These, but the Trappings, and the Suites of woe King. Tis sweet and commendable
In your Nature Hamlet,
To give these mourting duties to your Father:
But you must know, your Father lost a Father,
That Father lost, lost his, and the Surviver bound
In filial Obligation, for some terme
To do obsequeous Sotrow. But to persever
In obstinate Condolement, is a course
Os impious stubbornnesse. Tis youngally greese,
It shewes a will most incorrect to Heaven,
A Heatt vnfortissed, a Minde impatient,
An Vnderstanding simple, and suschool'd:
For, what we know must be, and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sence,
Why should we in our pecuish Opposition
Take it to heatt? Fve, it is a fault to Heaven,
A fault against the Dead, a fault to Nature,
To Reason most absurd, whose common Theasne
Is death of Fathers, and who still hath cried,

From the first Coarse, till he that dyed to day, This must be so. We pray you throw to earth This vnpreusyling woe, and thinke of va
As of a Father; For let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our Throne,
And with no lesse Nobility of Love,
Then that which deerest Father beares his Sonne,
Do I impact towards you. For your intent to going backe to Schoole in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our defire:
And we beseeth you, bend you to remaine
bleereln the cheere and comfort of our eye,
Our cheeses in Countier Cosmand our Sonne.

24. Let not thy Mother lofe her Prayers Harukt: I prythee flay with ve, go not to Wittenberg

Ham. I thall in all my best Chey you Madem.

King. Why 'tis a louing and a faire Reply.

Be as our felfe in Denmarke. Madam come,
This gentle and vafore'd accord of Hamler.

Sits fmiling to my heart; in grace whereef,
No incoud health that Denmarke drinkes to day,
But the great Cannon to the Clowds shalltell,
And the Kings Rouce, the Heavens shall brutte againe, Respeaking carthly Thunder. Come away.

Exeum.

Olanes Homler. Ham. On that this too too fulid Flesh, would melt, Thaw, and resolve it selfe into a Dew: Or that the Eucelasting had not fire His Cannon gainst Selfe-Naughter. O God, O God! How werry, stale, flet, and veprofitable Seemes to me all the vies of this world? Fie on't? Oh fie, fie, 'tis an vnweeded Garden That growes to Seed : Things rank, and groffe in Nature Possesses meercly. That it Chould come to this : But two months dead : Nay, not fo much; not two, So excellent a King, that was to this Experiento a Satyre: lo louing to my Mother, That he might not beseene the windes of heares Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and Earth Must I remember : why she would hang on him, As if encrease of Appetite had growne By what it fed on ; and yet within a month? Let me not thinke on't : Frailty, thy name is woman. Alittle Month, or exethole shopes were old, With which she followed my poore Fathers body Like Niebe, all teares. Why she, even she. (O Heaven I A beaft that wants discourse of Reason Would have mourn'd longer) married with mine Vakle, My Fathers Brother: but no more like my Father, Then I to Hercules, Within a Moneth? Ere yet the falt of most votighteous Teares Had left the flushing of her gauled eyes, She married. O most wicked speed to post With fuch dexterity to Incestuous sheets: It is not, nor it cannot come to good. But breake my heart, for I must bold my tongue.

Ener Harais, Torond, and Marcelles.

Hor. Faile to your Lotdfhip.

Ham. I am glad to fee you well:

Hor air, or I do forget my felfe.

Hor. The fame my Lord,

And your poore Servant ever.

Hom. Sir my good friend,

Ile change that name with you:

And what make you from Wittenberg Horner?

Mar.

Marcelles.

Mur. My good Lord.

Ham. I am very glad to fee you: good euen Sir.

But what in faith make you from Wittemberge?
Hor. A truant disposition, good my Lord. Ham. I would not have your Enciny fay for Nor thall you doe mine eare that violence, To make it truffer of your owne report

Against your selfe. I know you are no Truent :
But what is your affaire in Elfenour? Wee'l teach you to drinke deepe, ere you depart.

Her. My Lord, I came to see your Fathers Funerall. Ham. I pray thee doe not mock me (fellow Student

I thinke it was to fee my Mothers Wedding. Hor. Indeed my Lord, it followed hard vpon-Ham. Thrift, thrift Horatio : the Funerall Bakt-meats

Hor. Oh where my Lord?

Ham. In my minds eye (Haraio)

Ear. I sawhim once; he was a goodly King. Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all: I shall not look upon his like againe.

Hor. My I ord, I thinke I faw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw? Who!

Her. My Lord, the King your Father. Ham. The King my Father.

Hor. Sesson your admiration for a while With an attent eare; till I may deliuer Vpon the witnesse of these Gendemen, This matuell to you,

Ham. For Heavens love let me heare.

Hor. Two nights together, had these Gendemen
(Marcellus and Barnardo) on their Watch.

In the dead walt and middle of the night Beene thus encountred. A figure like your Father, Arm'd at all points exactly, Cap a Pe, Appeares before them, and with followne march Goes flow and flately: By them thrice he walkt, By their opprest and feare-surprized eyes, Within his Truncheons lengths whilft they beltil'd Almost to Ielly with the Act of feare, Stand dumbe and speake nor to bim. This to me In dreadfull secrecie impart they did,

And I with them the third Night kept the Watch, Whereas they had deliver'd both in time, Forme of the thing; each word made true and good, The Apparition comes. I knew your Father:

These hands are not more like. Ham. But where was this?

Mar. My Lord vpon the platforme where we warcht Ham. Did you not spesketoit?

Hor. My Lord, I did;

But aufwere made it none: yet once me thought It lifted vp it head, and did addresse It selfe to motion, like as it would speake: But even then, the Morning Cocke crew lowd; And at the found it thrunke in halt away, And vanisht from our light.

Ham. Tis very Arange.

Hor. As I doe live my honourd Lord 'ris true: And we did thinke it wnt downe in our duty To ler you know of it.

Ham, Indeed, indeed Sirs; but this troubles me

Hold you the watch to Nignts

Bab. We doe my Lord.

Ham. Arm'd, fay you? Both. Arm'd, my Lord. Ham. From top to toe?

Boeb. My Lord, from head to foote.

Haw. Then faw you not his face? Har. Oyes, my Lord, he wore his Benner up.

Ham. Whet, lookt he frowningly?

Hor. A countenance more in forrow then in anger. Ram. Pale, or red?

Hor. Nay very pale. Ham. And fixthis eyes vpon you?

Hor. Most constantly

Ham. I would I had beene chere.

Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.

Ham. Very like, very like: flaid it long? Hor. While one with moderate hall might sell a ben-

Scena Tertia.

Emer Larries and Orbelia.

Last. My necessare unback't; Fastweil: And Sifter, as the Winds give Beacht, And Convoy is sufficient; doe not deepe, But let me heare from you.

Opbel. Doe you doubt that?

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his fancers, Hold it a falhion and a toy in Bload;

A Violet in the youth of Primy Nature; Froward, not permanent; Iweer not lasting The suppliance of a minute? No more.

Opbel. No more but lo. Laer. Thinke it no more,

For nature creffant does not grow alone, In thewes and Bulke: but as his Temple waves. The inward fervice of the Minde and Soule Growes wide withall. Perhaps he loues you now.

And now no foyle nor cautell doth beforerch The vertue of his feare : but you must feare

His greatneffe weigh'd, his will is not his ownes For hee bimielfe is lubied to his Birth . Hee may not, as rouallued persons doe, Carue for himselfe; for, on his choyce depends The fanchry and health of the weole State. And therefore must his choyce be circumscrib'd Vinto the suyce and yeelding of that Body, Whereof he is the Head. Then if he layes he loues you, It fits your wiledome so farre to beleeve it; As he in his peculiar Sect and force May give his laying deed: which is an further, Then the maine voyce of Denmarke goes withall Then weigh what loffe your Honour may fultaine, If with too credent eare you lift his Songs; Or lofe your Heart; or your chaft Treasure open To his vnmaftred importunity. Feare it Opbelia, feare it my deare Sifter, And keepe within the reare of your Affection; Out of the thot and danger of Defire. The chariest Maid is Prodigall enough. If the vnmaske her beauty to the Moone : Vertue it selfe scapes not calumnious stroakes, The Canker Galls, the Infants of the Spring Too ofe before the buttons be disclos'd, And in the Morne and liquid dew of Youth, Contagious blastments are most imminent. Be wary then, best safety lies in feare; Youth to it felfe rebels, though none elfe neere. Ophe. I shall th'effect of this good Lesson keepe, As watchmen to my heart: but good my Brother

As watchmen to my heart: but good my Brother
Doe not as fome vngracious Pastors doe,
Shew me the steepe and thorny way to Heanen;
Whilst like a puft and recklesse Libertine
Himselse, the Primtose path of dalliance treads,
And reaks not his owne reade.

Lao. Oh, feare me not.

Enter Polonim.

I flay too long; but here my Father comes:
A double bleffing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pries. Yet heere Larrers P. boord, about for Thome, The winde fits in the faselder of your faile, And you are staid for there : my blessing with you; And these few Precepts in thy memory, See thou Character. Give thy thoughts no tongue, Nor any enproportion'd thought his Ad: Be thou familiar; but by no meanes velgar: The friends thou halt, and their adoption tride, Grapple them to thy Soule, with hoopes of Steele ? But doe not dull thy palme, with entertainment Of each vinhatch't, vinfledg'd Courade. Beware Of entrance to a quarrell: but being in Bear's that th'opposed may beware of thee. Give every man thine eare; but few thy voyce: Take each mans censure; but reserve thy judgement : Costly thy habir as thy purse can buy ; But not exprest in sancie; rich, stor gawdie: For the Apparell oft proclaimes the man. And they in France of the belt ranck and fizzion, Are of a most select and generous cheff in that Neither a borro wer, nor a lender be; For lone oft lofes both it felfe and friend: And borrowing duls the edge of Husbandry. This about all; to thine un e felfe be true. And it mu ffollow, as the Night the Day, Thou can't not then be falle to any man.

rarewell: my Bielling featon this in thee. Lacr. Most humbly doe I take my leave, my Lord Polow. The time indices you, goe, your feruants tend Larr. Farewell Ophelia, and remember well What I have faid to you. Ophe. I is in my memory lockt. And you your felle fball keepe the key of it. Polon. What if Opbelia he hath faid to you? Opbe. So please you forthing touching the L Harder Palon. Marry, well bethought: Tis told one be hath very oft of late Given private time to you and you your lelfe Haue of your audience beene most free and bounteous. If it be fo, as fo tis par on mer And that in way of caution: I must tell you, You doe not understand your selfe so cleerely, As it behouss my Dangliter, and your Honour. What is betweene you, give me vp the troth? Opbe He hath my Lord of late, made many tenders Of his affection to me. Polon. Affection, puh. You freske like & greene Girle, Vnsifted in such perillous Circumstance Doe you beleeve his renders, as you call them? Ophe. I do not know, my Lord, what I should thinke. Polon. Marry lie teach you; thinke your felfe a Baby. That you have tane his tenders for true pay,
Which are not starling. Tender your selfe more dearly; Or not to crack the winde of the poote Phrase, Rozming it thus, you'l tender me a foole. Opbe. My Lord, he hash importun'd me with love, In honourable fathion. Palor. I, fashion you may call it, go too, go too. Ophe. And hash given countenance to his speech, My Lord, with all the sowes of Heaven. Polon. 1. Springes to catch Woodcocks I doe know When the Bloud burnes, how Prodigail the Soule Gives the tongue vowes: thefe blazer Daughter, Giving more light then heater extind to both. Euen in their promile, as it is a making; You must not take for fire. For this time Daughter, Be somewhat scanter of your Maiden presence; Set your entreatments at a higher rate, Then a command to parley. For Lord Hamler, Beleeve fo much in him that he is young, And with a larger tether may he walke, Then may be given you. In few, Ophelia, Doe not believe his vower; for they are Broakers, Not of the eye, which their Investments show: But meere implorators of vaholy Suces, Breathing like sanchified and pious bonds, The better to beguile. Inu is for all. I would not, in plaine tearmes, from this time forth, Haue you lo stander any moment leisure, As to give words or talke with the Lord Hamles a Looke ton't, Icharge your come your wayes. Opbe. I shall obey my Lord. Enter Bambet Horatio, Marcellee. Ham. The Ayre bites shrewdly: is it very cald? Hor. It is a nipping and an eager ayre. Ham. What hower now?
Hor. I thinke it lacks of twelve. Mer. No, it is Prooke.

Har. Indeed ! heard it not: then it drawes neere the

What

Wherein the Spirit beld his wont to walke.

What does this meane my Lord?

Ham. The King doth wake to night, and takes his Keepes walfels and the fwaggering vpfpring reeles, And as he dreines his draughts of Renish downe, The kettle Drum and Trumpet thus bray out

The trlumph of his Pledge.

Horas. Is it a custome?

Ham. I marry ift;

And to my mind, though I am native heete, And to the manner borne: It is a Custome More honour'd in the breach, then the observance,

Enter Ghoft.

Hor. Looke my Lord, it comes. Ham. Angels and Ministers of Grace defend vs: Be thou a Spirit of health, or Goblin damn'd, Bring with thee ayres from Heaven, or bialls from Hell Bethy events wicked or charitable Thou com'fi in fuch a questionable shape That I will speake to thee. He cail thee Hamlet, King, Father, Royall Dane : Oh, oh, answer me, Let me not burit in Ignorance; buttell Why thy Canoniz'd bones Hearfed in death, Haue built their cerments; why the Sepulcher Wherein we faw thee quietly enorn'd, Hath op'd his ponderous and Marble lawes, To call thee vp againe? What may this meane? That thou deed Coarfe againe in compleat fleele, Resistes thus the glimples of the Moone Making Night hidious? And we fooles of Nature, So horridly to thake our disposition, With thoughts beyond thee; reaches of our Soules, Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we doe?

Choft beckens Hamles.

Hor It beckens you to goe away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire

To you alone.

Mar. Looke with what courteous action It wasts you to a more removed ground:

But doe not goe with it.

Her. No by no meaner.

Ham. It will not speake: then will I follow it.

Her. Doenot my Lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the feare? I doe not fee my life at a pins fee; And for my Soule, what can it doe to that? Being a thing immortall as it selfe; It waves me forth againe; lle follow it.

Hor. What if it tempt you toward the Floud my Lord? Or to the dreadfull Sonner of the Cliffe, That beetles o're his base into the Sea, And there assumes some other horelble forme, Which might deprive your Soueraignty of Reason, And draw you into madnesse thinke of it?

Ham. It wasts me still : goe on, lle follow thee.

Mar. You shall not goe my Lord. Ham. Hold off your hand.

Hor. Be rul'd, you thall not goe.

Hom. My fate cries out,
And makes each petty Artire in this body,
As hardy as the Nemian Lions nerue:
Still am I cal'd? Vnhand me Gentlemen:
By Heau'n, lle make a Ghoft of him that lets mer
I say away, goe on, lle follow thee.

Exens: Ghost & Hamles.

Hor He waxes desperate with imagination.

Mar. Let's sollow: 'tis not fit thus to obey him.

Hor. Have after, to what iffue will this come?

Mar. Something is totten in the State of Denmarke Hor. Heaven will direct it.

Mar. Ney let's follow him.

Émer Choft and Hamles. (ther. Ham Where will thou lead me? speak; lle go no fur-Gho. Marke me

Ham. I will,

Gho. My hower is almost come.

When I to fulphurous and to menting Flames Muft render vp my felfe.

Ham. Alas poore Ghost.

Gho. Pitty me not, but lend thy ferrous hearing To what I shall vafold.

Ham. Speake, I am bound to heare.

Gbo. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt beare.

Ham. What?

Gha. I am thy Fathers Spirit, Doom'd for a certaine terme to walke the night; And for the day confin'd to fast in Fiers,

Till the foule crimes done in my dayes of Nature Areburnt and purg'd away? But that I amforbid

To tell the secrets of my Prison-House;
I could a Tale unfold, whose lightest word

Would harrow up thy foule, freeze thy young blood, Make thy two eyes like Statres, flats from their Spheres, Thy knotty end combined locks to part,

And each particular haire to fland an end, Like Quilles vpon the fretfull Porpentine:

But this eternall blason must not be To eares of sless and bloud; list Hamler, oh list, If thou didst ever thy deare Father love.

Ham. Oh Heauen!

Gho. Revenge his foule and most vanatural! Murrher. Ham. Murther?

Gbost. Murther most foule, as in the best it is; But this most foule, strange, and vinaturall.

Ham. Hall, hall me to know it, That with wings as fwife

As meditation or the thoughts of Love,

May sweepe to my Revenge.

Choft. I finde thee apt,
And duller shoul A thou be then the far weede
That rots it felfe in ease, on Lethe Wharfe,
Would'A thou not stirre in this. Now Hamlet heare:

It's giuen out, that fleeping in mine Orchard,
A Serpent stung me: so the whole care of Denmarke,
Is by a forged processe of my death

Rankly abus'd: But know thou Noble youth, The Serpent that did fling thy Fathers life,

Now weares his Crowne.

Ham. O my Propheticke foule: mine Vncle? Gbof. I that inceftuous, that adulterate Beaft With witcheraft of his wits, hath Traitorous goifes. Oh wicked Wit, and Gifes, that have the power So to feduce? Won to this fhamefull Lust The will of my most feeming vertuous Oneene: Oh Hamlet, what a falling off was there, From me, whose love was of that dignity, That it went hand in hand, even with the Vow I made to her in Marriage; and to decline Vpon a wretch, whose Naturall gifts were poore To those of mine. But Vertue, as it never wil be moved. Though Lewdnesse court it in a shape of Heaven: So Lust, though to a radiant Angell link'd, Will sate it selfe in a Celestiallbed, & prey on Garbage.

00

But loft, me thinkes lient the Mornings Ayre; Briefe let me be : Sleeping within mine Orchard, My custome alwayes in the afternoone; Vpon my secure hower thy Vncle Role With luyer of curfed Hebenon in a Violl, And in the Porches of mine eares did poure The leaperous Distilment, whose effect Holds such an enmity with bloud of Man, That swift as Quick-filuer, it courses through The natural Gates and Allies of the Body; And with a fodsine vigour it doth posfer And curd, like Aygre droppings into Milke, The thin and wholsome blood: so did it mine; And a most instant Tetter bak'd about, Mast Lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust, All my smooth Body. Thus was 1, fleeping, by a Brothers hand, Of Life, of Crowne, and Queenc at once dispatche; Cut off even in the Blossomes of my Sinne, Vnhouzzled, disappointed, vnnaneld, No reckoning made, but fent to my account With all my impersections on my head; Ch horrible, Oh horrible, most horrible: If thou hast nature in thee beare it not; Let not the Royall Bed of Denmarke be A Couch for Luxury and damaed Incest. But how foeuer thou pursuest this Act, Taint not thy mind; nor let thy Soule contrine Against thy Mother ought; leave her to heaven, And to those Thornes that in her bosome lodge, To pricke and fling ber. Fare thee well at once; The Glow-worme howes the Matine to he neere, And gins to pale his vneffectuall Fire: Adue, 2 due, Hamlet: remember me. Exit.

Hom Oh all you host of Heauen! Oh Earth what els? And shall I couple Hell? Oh fie: hold my heart;

And you my finnewes, grow not inflore Old; But beare me stiffely vp: Remember thee? I, thou poore Ghoft, while memory holds a feare In this dillracted Globe: Remember thee? Yes, from the Table of my Memory, He wipe away all triviall fond Records, All fawes of Bookes, all formes, all prefures past, That youth and observation coppied there; And thy Commandment all alone shall little Within the Booke and Volume of my Braine, Vomint with baser matter; yes, yes, by Heauen: Ohmost pernicious woman! Oh Villaine, Villaine, smiling damned Villaine! My Tables, my Tables; meet it is I fet it downe, That one may fmile, and fmile and be a Villaine; At leaft I'm fure it may be fo in Denmarke ; So Vnekle there you are: now to my word; It is; Adue, Adue, Remember me: I haue fworn't.

Hor & Mar. within. My Lord, my Lord. Exter Horatio and Marcellus.

Mar. Lord Hamlet.

Hor. Heaven fecure him,

Mar. So be it.

Har. Illo, ho,ho, my Lord.

Ham. Hillo, ho,ho,boy; come bird, come.

Mar. Howist't my Noble Lord?

Har. Whee newes, my Lord?

Ham. Oh wonderfull!

Hor. Good my Lord tell it.

Ham. No you'l reuesleit.

Her. Not I, my Lord, by Heanen. Mar. Norl, my Lord. (think le? Ham. How say you then, would heart of man once But you'l be fecret? Both. I, by Head'o, my Lord. Ham. There's perc a villance dwelling in all Depostrke But hee's an arrant knaue. Her. There needs no Ghoft my Lord, come from the Graue, to tell va this. Hom. Why right, you are i'th' right; And fo, without more circumstance at all, I hold it fit that we fliake liands, and parts You, as your bufines and defiter fhall point you: For every man ha's businesse and defire, Such as it is a and for mine owne poore part, Looke you, He goe pray. Hor. These are but wild and hurling words, my Lord. Ham. I'm forry they offend you heartily : Yes faith heartily. Hor. There's no offence my Lord. Ham. Yez, by Saint Parricke, but there is my Lord, And much offence too, touching this Vision beere: It is an honest Ghost, that let aic tell you: For your defire to know what is betweene ve, O'remafter's as you may. And now good friends, As you are Friends, Schollers and Soldiers, Giue me one poore request. Hor. What is't my Lord? we will. Ham Neuer make known what you have feen to night. Barb. My Lord, we will not. Ham Nay, but swear't. Her, Infaith my Lord, not L. Mer. Nor I my Lord: in faith. Ham. Vpon inv fword. Aftercell. We have fworm my Lord already. Ham Indeed, vpon my (word Indeed. Gha. Sweare. Ghaft cries under the Stage. Ham. Ah ha boy, sayest theu fo. Att thou there truepenny? Come one you here this fellow in the fellere oge Consent to sweare. Her. Propole the Oath my Lord. Ham. Neuer to speake of this that you have feene. Sweate by my fword. Gho. Sweare. Ham. Hic & vbiquet Then wee'l fhift for grownd, Come hither Gentlemen,

Come hither Gentlemen,
And lay your hands againe voon my fword,
Neuer to speake of this that you have heard:
Sweare by my Sword.

Cho. Sweate.

Ham. Wellfaid old Mole, ean'st worke ith ground so
A worthy Proper, once more remove good friends.

Hor. Ohday and night; but this is wondrous strange.

Hom. And therefore as a firanger give it welcome. There are more things in Heaven and Earth, Howin, Then are dream's of in our Philosophy Butcome, Here as before, never so helpe you mercy. How firange or odde so ere I beare my selfe; (As I perchance heereafter shall thinke meet To pur an Anticke disposition on:)

That you at such time seeing me, never shall With Armes encombred thus, or thus, head shake; Or by pronouncing of some doubtfull Phrase; As well, we know, or we could and if we would, Or if we list to speake 3 or there be and if there might, Or such ambiguous giving out to note,

That you know ought of me; this not to doe. So grace and mercy at your most neede helpe you :

Ghoft. Sweare.

Ham. Reft, reft perturbed Spirit: fo Gentlemen, With all my love I doe commend me to you; And what so poore a man as Hamler is, May doe t'expresse his loue and friending to you, Godwilling thall not lacke: let ve goe in together, And fill your fingers on your lippes I pray, The time is out of toynt: Oh curled fpight, That ever I was borne to let it right, Exempt. Nay, come let's goe rogether.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Poloning, and Reynoldo.

Polon. Give him his money, and these notes Reynoldo Reynol I will my Lord.

Polon. You shall doe maruels wifely: good Regnoldo, Before you vilite him you make inquiry

Of his behaulour.

Roynol. My Lord, I did intendit. Folon. Marry, well said; Very well faid. Looke you Sir, Enquire me first what Danskers are in Paris; And how, and who; what meanes; and where they keepe: What company, at what expence : and finding By this encompaffement and drift of question, That they doe know my sonne: Come you more necres Then your particular demands will touch it, Takeyou as twere some distant knowledge of him, And thus I know his father and his friends, And in part him. Doc you marke this Reynolde?

Reynol. I, very well my Lord Polon. And in part him, but you may fay not well, But if t be hee I meane, hees very wilde; Addicted so and so; and there put on him What forgeries you please: marry, none for ranke, As may dishonour him; take heed of that ; But Sir, such wanton, wild, and viuall slips, As are Companions noted and most knowne

To youth and liberty.

Reynol. As & ming my Lord. Polon. 1, or drinking, fencing, swearing, Quarelling, drabbing. You may goe so farre. Reynol. My Lord that would dishonour him-Palon. Faith no, as you may feafon it in the charge; You must not put another scandall on him, That hee is open to Incontinencie; That's not my meaning: but breath his faults fo quaintly, That they may feeme the taints of liberty; The flash and out-breake of a fiery minde,

A fauagenes in vnreclaim'd bloud of generall affault. Regnol. But my good Lord.

Polon. Wherefore thould you doe this? Reynol. I my Lord, I would know that. Polon. Marry Sir, hecre's my drift, And I belieue it is a fetch of warrant: You laying these slight sulleyes on my Sonne. As 'twere a thing a little foil'd i'th' working: (found, Marke you your party in converse; him you would Hauing cuer feene. In the prenominate crimes,

The youth you breath of guiley, be affor'd He clofes with you in this confequence. Good fir, or fo, or friend, or Gentleman. According to the Phrase and the Addition, Of man and Country.

Reynol. Very good my Lord. Polon. And then Sir does he this? He does: what was labout to fay? I was about to fay fomthing: where did I leave? Reynol. At closes in the confequence:

At friend, or fo, and Gentleman

Polon. A: clotes in the consequence, I marry, He closes with you thus. I know the Gentleman, I faw him yesterday, or tother day; Or then or then, with such and such; and as you tay, There was he gaming, there o'retooke in's Rouse, There falling out at Tennis; or perchance, I faw him enter fuch a house of faile; Videlicet, a Brothell, or fo forth. See you now; Your bair of falshood, takes this Cape of truth : And thus due we of wifedome and of reach With windleffes, and with affaies of Bias. By indirections finde directions out: So by my former Lecture and advice Shall you my Sonnesyou have me, have you not?

Resnol. My Lord I have. Polon. God buy you; fare you well.

Reynol. Good my Lord.

Polon. Observe his inclination in your selfe.

Reynel, I shall my Lord. Polon. And let him plye his Musicke Reynol Well, my Lord

Enter Ophelia.

Polon Farewell: How now Ophelia. what's the matter?

Opbe. Alas my Lord, I have beene so affrighted. Polon. With what, in the name of Heaven?

Ophe. My Lord, as I was fowing in my Chamber, Lord Hamler with his doublet all vibrac'd, No hat vpon his head, his flockings foul'd, Vugartred, and downe gived to his Anckle, Pale as his thirt, his knees knocking each other, And with a lor te fo pitious in purport, As if he had been loofed out of hell,

To speake of horrors: he comes beforeme.

Polon. Mad for thy Loue? Ophe. My Lord, I doe not know: but truly I do feare ic.

Polon. What faid he? Ophe. He tooke me by the wrift, and held me hard; Then goes he to the length of all his arme; And with his other hand thus o're his brow, He fals to fuch perufall of my face. As he would draw it, Long staid he lo, At last, a little shaking of mine Arme: And thrice his head thus waving vp and downe;

He rais'd a figh, fo pictious and profound, That It did sceme to shatter all his bulke, And end his being. That done, he less me goe, And with his head over his shoulders turn'd, He feem'd to finde his way without his eyes, For out adores he went without their helpe;

And to the last, bended their light on me Polon. Goewithme, I will goe feeke the King, This is the very extafic of Love, Whole violent property foredoes it felfe,

And leads the will to desperate Vndertakings, As oft as any pattion under Heaven, That does afflict our Natures. I am forte

What have you given him any hard words of late?

Opho Normy good Lord; but as you did command,
I did repell his Letters, and deny de

His accesse to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad. I am forrie that with better speed and ludgement I had not quoted him. I feare he did but trifle, And means to wracke thee : but beforew my lealoufie : It feemes it is as proper to our Age, To cast beyond our lelues in our Opinions, As it is common for the yonger fort To lacke discretion. Come, go we to the King, This must be knowne, who being kept close might move More greefe to hide, then hate to vtter loue.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Kong, Queene, Rofinerane, and Guilden. Arme Cumalys.

King. Welcome deere Rofinerance and Guildensterne. Moreouer, that we much did long to fee you, The neede we have to vie you, did prouoke Our haftie lending. Something have you heard Of Hamlets transformation: so I call it, Since not th'exterior, nor the inward man Resembles that it was. What it should bee More then his Fathers death, that thus hath put him So much from th'vnderstanding of himselfe, I cannot deeme of. I intreat you both, That being of fo young dayes brought up with him . And fince to Neighbour'd to his youth, and humour, That you vouchlafe your rest heere in our Court Some little times to by your Companies To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather So much as from Occasions you may gleane, That open'd hes within our remedie.

Qu. Good Gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you. And lure I am, two men there are not living, To whom he more adheres. If it will pleafe you To shew vs so much Gentrie, and good will, As to expend your time with vs a-while, Por the supply and profit of our Hope, Your Vifitation shall receive such thankes

As fits a Kings remembrance.

Resus. Both your Maicities Might by the Soueraigne power you have of vs, Put your dread pleasures, more into Command Then to Entreatie.

Gud. We both obey,

And here give vp our selves, in the full bent, To lay our Services freely at your feete, To be commanded.

King. Thankes Rosinerance, and gentle Guildensterne. Qu. Thankes Guildensterno and gentle Rosinerance. And I befeech you instantly to visit My too much changed Sonne.

Go some of ye, And bring the Gentlemen where Hanket is.

Guil. Heavens make our prefence and our practifes Pleasant and helpfull to him.

Queens. Amen.

Enter Polonius.

Pal. Th'Ambassadors from Norwey, my good Lord, Are loyfully return'd.

King. Thou fill hall bin the Father of good Newes Pol. Have I, my Lord ! Affore you, my good Liege, I hold my dutie, as I hold my Soule, Both to my God, one to my gracious King : And I do thinke, or elfe this brane of mine Hunts not the trade of Policie, fo fute As I have vs'd to do: that I have found The very coule of Humbers Lunacie.

King Oh speake of that, that I do long to houre. Pol Gwe first admittance to th'Ambassadors, My Newes shall be the Newes to that great Feest.

King. Thy felfe do grace to them, and bring them in. He tels me my (weet Queene, that he hath found The head and fourle of all your Sonnes diftemper.

Qu. I doubt it is no other, but the maine, His Fathers death, and our o're-hafty Marriage.

Enter Polonius, Volsumand, and Cornelius.

Kmg. Well, we thall fift him. Welcome good Frends: Say V drumand, what from our Brother Norwey!

Volr. Most faire returne of Greetings, and Defires. V pon our hill, he feat out to suppresse His Nephewes Leuies, which to him appear d To be a preparation gainfithe Poleak: But better look'd into he truly found It was against your Highnesse, whereat greened,] That to his Sicknesse, Age, and Imposence Was falfely borne in hand, fends our Arrefts On Fortinbras, which he (in breefe) obeyes, Receives rebuke from Norwey: and in fipe, Makes Vow before his Vnkle, neuer more To give th'affay of Atmes against your Maiestie. Whereon old Norwey, ouercome with ioy, Gives him three thousand Crownes in Annuall Fee, And his Commission to imploy those Soldiers So leuied as before, against the Poleak : With an intreaty heerein further shewne, That it might please you to give quiet passe Through your Dominions, for his Enterprize, On such regards of safety and allowance, As therein are let downe.

King. It likes vs well: And at our more confider'd time wee'l read, Answer, and thinke upon this Bufinesse. Meane time we thanke you, for your well-tooke Labour. Go to your rest, at night wee'l Feast together. Most welcome home. Exit Amba

Pal. This bufineffe is very well ended My Liege and Madam, to expostulate What Maiestie should be, what Ducie is, Why day is day; night, night; and time is time. Were nothing bur to waste Night, Day and Time, Therefore, lince Breuitie is the Soule of Wit, And redioulnesse, the limber and outward flourishes, I will be breefe. Your Noble Some is mad: Mad call lit: for to define true Madnesse, What is't, but to be nothing elfe but mad. But let that go.

Qu. More matter, with leffe Are. Pol. Madam. I (weare I vie no Art at all : That he is mad, 'tis true: 'Tis true 'tis pittie, And pittie it is true : A foolish figure, But farewell it : for I will vie no Art.

Mad

Mad let vs grant him then: and now remaines That we finde out the cause of this effed, Or rather fay, the cause of this defect; For this effect defective, comes by cause, Thus it remaines, and the remainder thus. Perpend, I have a daughter : have, whil'ft fine is mine, Who in her Dutic and Obedience, marke, Hath given me this: now gather, and furmife. The Letter.

To the Celeftsall, and my Soules Idoll, the most beoutified O-

That's an ill Phrase, a vilde Phrase, beautified is a vilde Phrase: but you shall heare these in her excellent white bosome, thele.

Qu. Came this from Hamles to her.

Pal. Good Madam flav awhile, I will be faithfull. Doubt thou, the Starres are fire,

Doubs, that the Sunne doth mone:

Doubt Truth to be a Lier,

But never Doubt . I love .

O deere Ophelia, I am ill at thefe Numbers: I have not Art to reckon my grones; but that I low then best, ob most Best beleoue u. Adieu.

These sucremore most doors Lady while this Machine is to him, Hamler

This in Obedience hath my daughter thew'd me : And more about hath his foliciting, As they fell out by Time, by Meanes, and Place, All given co mine care.

King. But how hath the recein'd his Love? Pol. What do you thinke of me?

King. As of a man, faithfull and Honourable.

Pal. I wold faine proue fo. But what might you think? When I had feene this hot love on the wing. As I perceived it, I must tell you that Before my Daughter told me, what might you Or my deere Maiestie your Queene heere, think, If I had playd the Deske or Table-booke, Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumbe, Or look'd vpon this Loue, with idle light, What might you thinke ? No, I went round to worke, And (my yong Mistris) thus I did bespeake Lord Hamlet 15 8 Prince out of thy Statte, This must not be: and then, I Precepts gave her, That she should locke her selfe from his Resort, Admit no Messengers, receive no Tokens: Which done, the tooke the Fruites of my Advice, And he repulsed. A ... ort Tale to make, Fell into a Sadnelle, then into a Falt, Thence to 2 Watch, thence into a Weaknesse, Thence to a Lightnesse, and by this declension Into the Madnelle whereon now he tauesa

Kmg. Do you thinke 'tis this?

And all we waile for

Qu. It may be very likely.

Pol. Hath there bene such a time, I de fain know that,

That I have possitively said, 'tis so, When it prou'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.
Pol. Take this from this; if this be otherwise, If Circumstances leade me, I will finde Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeede Within the Center.

Ring. How may we try it further? He walkes foure houres together, heere In the Lobby.

Que. So he ha's indeed. Pol. At fuch a time 11c loofe my Daughter to him, Beyou and I behinde an Arras then,

Marke the encounter : If he love ber not, And be not from his reason faine thereon; Let me be no Affiftant fora State, And keepe a Farme and Carters.

King. We will try it.

Enter Hamlet reading on a Booke.

Qu. But looke where fadly the poore wretch

Comes reading. Pol. Away I do befeech you, both away,

He boord him presently. Exu King & Queen. Oh give me lezue. How does my good Lord Hamlet? Ham. Well, God-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my Lord?

Ham. Excellent, excellent well : y'are a Filhmonger. Pol. Not I my Lord.

Ham. Then I would you were so bonest a man.

Pol. Honest, my Lord?

Ham. I fir, to be beneft as this world goes, is to bee one man pick'd out of two thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my Lord.

Ham. For if the Sun breed Magots in a dead dogge, being a good kiffing Carrion-Haue you a daughter?

Pel. I have my Lord.

Ham. Let her not walke i'th Sunne 1 Conception is a blessing, but not as your daughter may conceive. Friend looke too't.

Pol. How fay you by that? Still harping on my daughrer: yet he knew me not at first; he said I was a Fishmonger: he is farre gone, farre gone : and truly in my youth, I suffred much extreamity for love: very necre this. He speake to him againe. What do you read my Lord?

Ham. Words, words, words

Pel What is the matter, my Lord?

Hom. Betweene who?

Pol. I meane the matter you meane, my Lord.

Ham. Slanders Sir : for the Saryricall flaue faies here, that old men have gr.y Beards; that their faces are wrinkled ; their eyes purging thicke Amber, or Plum-Tiec Gumme : and that they have a plentifull locke of Wit, together with weake Hammes. All which Sir, though I most powerfully, and potently believe; yet I holde it not Honestie to have it thus fee downe: For you your felfe Sir, should be old as I am, if like a Crab you could go backward.

Pol, Though this be madnesse, Yet there is Method in't: will you walke

Out of the agre my Lord? Ham. Into my Grave?

Pol. Indeed that is out o'th' Ayre: How pregnant (fometimes) his Replies are A happinesse,

That often Madnesse hits on, Which Reason and Sanitie could not So prosperously be deliner'd of.

I will leave him, And fodamely contriue the meanes of meeting

Betweene him, and my daughter My Honourable Lord, I will most humbly Take my leave of you.

00 3

Ham. You cannot Sir take from me any thing, that I will more willingly part withall, except my life, my Polon. Fare you well my Lord. Hem. Thele redious old fooles.

Polon. You goe to seeke my Lord Hamler; there

Enter Rosincran and Guildensterne;

Rofin. God faue you Sir. Guild. Minchonour'd Lord? Rofin. My most deare Lord?

Ham. My excellent good friends? How do'll thou Guildensternet Oh, Refinerane; good Lads: How doe ye boin?

Rofin. As the indifferent Children of the earth.

Gauld. Happy, in that we are not over-bappy : on Fortunes Cap, we are not the very Button.

Ham. Nor the Soales of her Shoo?

Rope Neither my Lord.

Ilers. Then you live about her waste, or in the middle of her fauour?

Guil. Faith, her privates, we.

Isam. In the fecret parts of Fortune? Oh, most true ! fne is a Strumper. What's the newer?

Rofin. None my Lord; but that the World's growne honeft.

Ham. Then is Doomelday neere: But your newes is nos true. Let me question more in particular : what have you my good friends, deferued at the hands of Fortune, that the lends you to Prilon hither?

Guil Prison my Lord? Ham. Denmark's a Prifon. Rosso. Then is the Worldone.

Elas. A goodly one, in which there are many Conflass, Wards, and Dungeons; Demante being one o'th'

Roffe. We thinke not fo my Lord.

Ham. Why then'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it fo: to me it is Refus. Why then your Ambition makes it one: 'tis too narrow for your minde.

Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count my felfe a King of infinite space; were it not that I have bad dreames.

Gud. Which dreames indeed are Ambition : for the very substance of the Ambitious, is meetely the shadow of a Dreame.

Ham. A dreame it selfe is but a thadow.
Rosin. Truely, and I hold Ambition of so eyry and light a quality, that it is but a shadowes shadow.

Ham, Then are our Beggers bodies; and our Monarchs and out-firetche Hetoes the Beggers Shadowes: shall wee to th' Court: for, by my fey I cannot rea-

Both. Weel wait vpon you.

Ham. No such matter. I will not fort you with the rest of my teruants: for to speake to you like an bonest man: I am most dreadfully extended; but in the beazen way of friendfhip, What make you at Elfontoor?

Rofin. To vifit you my Lord, no other occasion. Ham. Begger that I am I am even poore in thankes; but I thanke you: and fure deare friends my thanks are too deare a halfepeny; were you not fent for? Is it your owne inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, deale tufly with me I come, come inay speake Cuil. What should we say my Lord !

Ham, Why any thing. But to the purpole; you were fent for; and there is a kinde coolesion in your looker which your modeflies have not craft enough to my lor, I know the good King & Queene have fent for you.

Rofin. To what end my Lord?

Ham. That you must teach me . but let mee consure you by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonracy of our youth, by the Obligation of our ever-preferred lour, and by what more deare, a better propoler could charge you withall; be even and direct with me, whether you were fent for or no.

Rosa. What say you?

Ham. Nay then I have an eye of you; if you love me hold not off.

Gad. My Lord, we were feet for.

Ham. I will tell you why , fo fnall my anticipation prevent your discovery of your secricie to the King and Queene:moult no seather, I have of late, but wherefore I know not, loft all my mirth, lorgone all custome of exercife; and indeed, it goes to heavenly with my disposist on; that this goodly frame the Earth, feemes to not a flersill Promontory; this most excellent Canopy the Ayre, look you, this brane ore-hanging, this Maiefficall Roofe, fretted with golden fire: why, it appeares no other thing to mee, then a foule and pettilene congregation of va pours. What a piece of worke is a man! how Noble in Reason? how infinite in faculty? in some and moving how expresse and admirable? in Action, how like an Angel? in apprehension, how like a God? the beauty of the world, the Parragon of Animals; and yet to me, what is this Quintessence of Duft? Man delights por me; po, nor Woman neither; though by your finding you feeme to lay lo.

Rosus My Lord, there was no such stuffe in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, when I faid, Man delights not me?

Rofin. To thinke, my Lord, if you delight pot in Man, what Lenton entertainment the Players shall receive from you: wee coated them on the way, and hither are they comming to offer you Service.

Ham. He that playes the King shall be welcome; his Maiesty shall have Tribute of mee; the adventurous Knight shal vie his Foyle and Target: the Louer shall not high graun, the humorous man shall end his part in peace: the Clowne shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickled a'th' fere: and the Lady shall say her minde freely; or the blanke Verse shall halt for t: what Players are they?

Rofin. Euen tholeyou were wont to take delighe in the Tragedians of the City.

Ham. How chances it they travaile? their residence both in reputation and profit was better both Rofin. I thinke their Inhibition comes by the meanes of the late Innouation?

Ham. Doe they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the City? Are they fo follow'd?

Rofin. No indeed, they are not.

Hom How comes it? doe they grow rufy?

Rofin. Nay, their indezuour keepes in the wonted pace; But there is Sir an agrie of Children, tittle Yeses, that crye out on the top of question; and are most tyrancically clep't fort: these are now the fashiou, and so be-ratled the common Stages (so they call them) that many wearing Rapiers, are afraide of Goole-quils, and dare scarse come thicher.

Ham. What are they Children? Who maintains 'em? How are they escoted? Will they purtue the Quality no longer then they can fing? Will they not fay afterwards if they should grove themselves to common Players (as it is like most iftheir meanes are no beiter) their Writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their owne Succession.

Rosen. Faith there ha's bene much to do on both sides: and the Nation holds it no finne, to tarre them to Controughfie. There was for a while, no mony bid for argument, valetie the Poet and the Player went to Cuffes in the Question.

Ham. Is's possible?

Guild. Oh there ha's beene much throwing about of Braines.

Ham, Dothe Boyes carry it away?

Ross. I that they do my Lord Hercules & his load too. Ham. It is not strange : for mine Vnckle is King of Denmarke, and those that would make mowes at him while my Father lived; give twenty, forty, an hundred Ducates a prece, for his picture in Little. There is fornething in this more then Naturall, if Philosophie could finde it out.

Flourash for the Players.

Gud There are the Players.

Hom. Gentlemen, you are welcom to Elfonower: your hands, come: The sppurtenance of Welcome, is Fathion and Ceremony Let me comply with you in the Garbe, left my extent to the Players (which I tell you must shew fairely outward) should more appeare like entertainment then yours. You are welcome : but my Vnckle Father, and Aunt Mother are deceiu'd. '.

Guil. In what my deere Lord?

Ham. Iam but mad North, North-West: when the Winde is Southerly, I know a Hawke from a Handlaw. Enter Polonius.

Pel. Well be with you Gentlemen.

Ham. Heatke you Guelden forne, and you too: at each eare a hearer : that great Baby you fee there, is not yet out of his swathing clouts.

Refin, Happily he's the second time come to them: for they fay, an old man is twice a childe.

Ham. I will Prophesie. Hee comes to tell me of the Players. Mark it, you lay right Sir : for a Monday mormng twas fo indeed.

Pol. My Lord, I have Newes to tell you. Ham. My Lord, I have Newes to tell you.

When Rollins an Actor in Rome

Pol. The Actors are comehitner my Lord.

Ham. Buzze, buzze.
Pol. Vpon mine Honor.
Ham. Then con each Ador on his Affe-

Pelon. The best Actors in the world, either for Tragedie, Comedie, Historie, Pastorall: Pastoricall-Comicall-Historicall-Pastorall: Tragicall-Historicall: Tragicall-Comicall-Hittoricall-Pastorall : Scene indivible, or Poem volimited. Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plauras too light, for the law of Writ, and the Liberty. Thefe are the onely men.

Ham. O lophia ludge of Israel, what a Treasure had'st

thou?

Pol. What a Treasure had he, my Lord? Ham. Why one faire Daughter, and no more, The which he loued passing well. Pol. Still on my Daughter.

Ham. Am I not i'th'right old Iephra?
Polon. If you call me Iephra my Lord, I haue a daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay that followes not.

Polen What followes then, my Lord?

He. Why, As by lot, God wot : and then you know, It came to palle, as most like it was: The first rowe of the Pors Chanfen will thew you more. For looke where my Abridgements come.

Enter fours or five Players.

Y'are welcome Maiters, welcome all. I am glad to fee thee well: Welcome good Friends. O my olde Friend? Thy face is valians linee I faw thee last : Com'A thou to beard me in Denmarke? What, my yong Lady and Mi-Aris? Byrlady your Ladiship is neerer Heaven their when I saw you last, by the altitude of a Choppine. Pray God your voice like a peece of vncurrant Gold be not crack'd within the ring. Masters, you are all welcome: wee'le'ne to't like French Faulconers, flie at any thing we fee: wee'l haue a Speech firaight. Comegiue vs a tait of your quahty : come, a paffionate speech.

1. Play. What speech, my Lord?

Ham. Theard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never Acted . or if it was, not about once, for the Play 1 remember pleas'd not the Million, 'twis Causarie to the Generall: but it was (as I receiu'dis, and others, whose iudgement in fuch matters, cried in the top of mine) an excellent Play; well digested in the Stænes, set downe with as much modellie, as cunning. I remember one faid there was no Sallets in the lines, to make the matter favoury; nor no matter in the phrase, that might indite the Author of affectation, but cal'd it an honest merhod. One cheefe Sperch in it, I cheefely lou'd, 'iwas Aneas Tale to Dide, and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Preams flaughter. If it live in your memory, begin at this Line, let me see, let me see : The rugged Parthe like th' Hyrcausan Beaft. It is not so : it begins with Pyrthus The rugged Pyrrhu, he whose Sable Armes Blacke as his purpose, did the night resemble When he lay couched in the Ominous Horfe, Hath now this dread and blacke Complexion freat'd With Heraldry my c dismall: Head to soote Now is he to take Geulles, horridly Trick'd With blood of Fathers, Mothers, Daughters, Sonnes, Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets, That lend a tyrannous, and damned light To their vilde Murthers, roafted in wrath and fire, And thus o're-fized with coagulate gore, VVith eyes like Carouncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old Grandfire Prians feekes.

Pol. Fore God, my Lord, well spoken, with good accent, and good discretion.

1. Player. Anon he findes him, Striking too short at Greekes. His anticke Sword, Rebellious to his Arme, lyes where it falles Repugnant to command : vnequall match, Pyrrhu at Priam drives, in Rage Stikes wide : But with the whife and winde of his fell Sword, Th'vanerued Father fals. Then senselesse illium, Seeming to feele his blow, with flaming top Stoopes to his Bace, and with a hideous crash Takes Prisoner Pyrrhus ezre. For loc, his Sword Which was declining on the Milkie head Of Reuerend Priam, feem'd i'th' Ayre to flicke :

Exmus.

So as a painted Tyrant Pyrrhm flood, And like a Newtrall to his will and matter, did nothing. But as we often fee against some florme, A silence in the Heavens, the Racke fland still, The bold winder speechlesse, and the Orbe below As hush as death: Anon the dreadfull Thunder Doth rend the Region. So after Byrbm paufe, A ro wied Vengeance lets bim new 2-worke, And neuer did the Cyclops hammers fall On Mars his Armours, forg'd for proofe Eterne, With leffe remorfe then Pyrrbus bleeding fword Now falles on Priam.

Out, out, thou Strumpet-Fortune, all you Gode, In general! Synod take away her power: Breake all the Spokes and Fallies from her wheele, And boule the round Naue downe the hill of Heaven, As low as to the Frends.

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to'th Barbars, with your beard. Prythee fay on: He's for a ligge, or a tale of Baudry, or hee Deepes. Say on; come to Recube.

1. Play. But who, O who, had feen the inobled Queen,

Ham. The inobled Queene?

Pol That's good: Inobled Queene is good. 1. Play. Ruo bare-foot vp and downe,

Threatning the flame

With Biffon Rheume: A clout about that head, Where late the Diadem wood, and for a Robe About her lanke and all ore-teamed Loines, A blanket in th'Alarum offeare caught vp. Who this had seene, with tongue in Venome fleep'd. 'Gainst Fortunes State, would Treason have pronounc'd? But if the Gods themselves did see her then, When the law Pyrrhus make malicious sport In mincing with his Sword her Husbands limbes, The infant Burft of Clamour that the made (Valeffe things mortall move them not at all) Would have made milche the Burning eyes of Heaven, And passion in the Gods.

Pol. Looke where he ha's not turn'd his colour, and ha's teares in's eyes. Pray you no more.

Ham. 'I is well, Ile haue thee speake out the test. soone. Good my Lord, will you see the Players wel beflow'd. Doye heare, let them be well vs'd: for they are the Abstracts and breefe Chronicles of the time. After your death, you were better have a bad Epitaph, then their ill report while you lived.

Pol. My Lord, I will vie them according to their de-

Ham. Gods bodykins man, better. Vie everletnen after his defart, and who should scape whipping: vie them after your own Honor and Dignity. The leffe they descrue, the more merit is in your bountie. Take them

Pol. Come firs. Ham. Follow him Friends:wee'l heare a play to mortow. Dost thou heare me old Friend, can you play the murches of Gonzago?

Play. I my Lord.

Ham. Wee'lhe't to morrow night. You could for a need fluily a speech of some dosen or sixteene lines, which I would let downe, and infert in'& Could ye not?

Play. I my Lord.

Ham. Very well. Follow that Lord, and looke you mock him not. My good Friends, lle leaue you ul sight you are welcome to Eifenewer?

Mares Hamles Ham. 1 fo, God buy'ye . Now I are alone. Oh what a Rogue and Pefant flaue am 1? Is it not monfirous that this Player heere, But in a Fixion, in a dreame of Pallion, Could force his foule fo to his whole conceit, That from her working, all his visage warro'd; Teares in his eyes, distraction in's Aspect, A broken voyce, and his whole Function fairing With Formes, to his Concent? And all for nothing? For Hecubat

What's Heenda to him, or he to Heenba,

Rufe. Good my Lord.

That he should weepe for her? What would be doe, Had he the Motive and the Cue for passion That I have? He would drowner be Stage with teares, And cleave the generall eare with horrid speech: Make mad the guilty, and apale the free, Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed, The very faculty of Eyes and Eares Yet I, A dull and muddy-mesled Rascall, peake Like John a-dreames, unpregnant of my cause, And can fay nothing : No, not for a King, Vpon whose property, and most deere life, A damn'd defeate was made. Am I a Coward? Who calles me Villaine f breakes my pate a-croffe? Pluckes off my Beard, and blowes it in my face! I weakes me by th Nose! gives me the Lye i'th Throate, As deepe as to the Lungs? Who does me this? Ha? Why I should take it : for it cannot be, But I am Pigeon-Liver'd, and lacke Gall To make Oppression bitter, or ere this, I should have facted all the Region Kites With this Slaves Offall, bloudy , a Bawdy villsine, Remoiseleste, Treacherous, Letcherous, kindles villaine! Oh Vengeance! Who? What an Asse am I? I sure, this is most brane,

That I, the Sonne of the Deere murthered, Prompted to my Revenge by Heaven, and Hell, Must (like a Whore) vnpacke my heart with words, And fall a Corfing like a very Drab, A Scullion? Fye vpon't: Foh. About my Braine. I have heard, that guilty Creatures fitting at a Play, Haue by the very cunning of the Scoene, Bene frooke fo to the foule, that prefently They have proclaim'd their Malefactions. For Murther, though it have no congue, will speake With most myraculous Organ, Ile have thate Players, Play fomething like the murder of my Father, Before mine Vnkle. He observe his lookes, He rent him to the quicke t Ifhe but blench I know my course. The Spirit that I have scene May be the Divell, and the Divel hath power T'affume a pleafing shape, yea and perhaps Out of my Weaknesse, and my Melancholly, As he is very potent with fuch Spirits, Abuses me to dampe me. He have grounds More Relative then this: The Play's the thing, Exit. Wherein Ile catch the Conscience of the King.

> Enter King, Querne, Policius, Ophelia, Roformer, Guildenftern, and Lords.

King. And can you by so drift of circumftance Get from him why he puts on this Confunoa: Grating to battlely all his dayes of quiet

With

With turbulent and dangerous Lunacy.

Rofin. He does confesse he feeles himselfe diftracted, But from what cause he will by no meanes speake

Call. Not do we finde him forward to be founded, But with a crafty Madneffe keepes aloofe: When we would bring him on to fome Confession Of his true flate.

Qm. Did he receive you well?

Rofin. Most like a Gentleman.

Guild. But with anuch forcing of his disposition. Rosin. Niggard of question, but of our demands

Most free in his reply

2. Didyou affay him to any passime? Rosin. Madam, it so fell out, that certaine Players We ore-wrought on the way : of thefe we told him, And there did feeme in him a kinde of toy To heare of it. They are about the Court, And (at I thinke) they have already order This night to play before him.
Pol. Tis most true:

And he befeech'd me to intreate your Maiesties

To heare, and fee the matter.

King. With all my heart, and it doth much content me To heare him to inclin'd. Good Gentlemen, Give him a further edge, and drive his purpole on To chese delighes.

Rofm. We shall my Lord.

Exempt.

Kung. Sweet Gertrade leave vs too, For we have closely fent for Hamlet hither, That he, as 'twere by accident, may there Affront Opbelia. Her Father, and my selfe (lawful espials) Will so bestow our selves, that seeing voscene We may of their encounter frankely judge, And gather by him, as he is behaued, If the th'affliction of his love, or no. That thus he fuffers for.

Quy I shall obey you, And for your part Ophelia, I do wish That your good Beauties be the happy cause Of Hamlers wildenesse: so shall I hope your Vertues Will bring him to his wonted way againe, To both your Honors.

Ophe. Madam, I wish it may.

Pol Ophelia, walke you heere. Gracious so please ye We will bestow our selves: Reade on this booke, That thew of fuch a exercise may colour Your lonelinesse. We are of too blame in this, 'Tis too much prou'd, that with Deuotions vilage, And pious Action, we do lurge o're The diueli himselfe.

Kmg. Oh'us true: How Imarc a lash that speech doch give my Conscience ? The Harlors Cheeke beautied with plaist'ring Art Is not more vgly to the thing that helpes it, Then is my deede, to my most painted word. Ob heause burthen!

Pol 1 heare him comming, let's withdraw my Lord.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the Question : Whether in Nobler in the minde to luffer The Slings and Arrowes of outragious Fortune, Or to take Armes against a Sea of troubles, And by opposing end them . to dye, to sleepe No more; and by a fleepe, to fay we end The Heart-ake, and the thousand Naturall shockes

That Flesh is heyre too? Tis a consummation Denoutly to be wish'd. To dye to sleepe, To sleepe, perchance to Dreame; I, there's the rub, For in that fleepe of death, what dreames may come, When we have shufflel'd off this morrall coile, Must give vs pawle. There's the respect That makes Calarmry of lo long life For who would beare the Whips and Scornes of time, The Oppressors wrong, the poore mans Contumely, The pangs of disprized Love, the Lawer delay. The infolence of Office, and the Spurnes That patient merit of the vnworthy takes. When he himselfe might his Quietre make With a bare Bodkin? Who would thefe Fardles beare To grunt and (weat under a weary life, But that the dreed of something after death. The vndiscouered Countrey, from whose Borne No Traveller returnes, Purels the will And makes vs rather beare those illes we have. Then flye to others that we know not of. Thus Conscience does make Cowards of vs all, And thus the Nature hew of Resolution Is ficklied o're, with the pale cast of Thought. And enterprizes of great pith and moment, With this regard their Currants rurne away And loofe the name of Action. Soft you now, The faire Opbeliat Nimph, in thy Orizons Be all my finnes remembred. Ophe. Good my Lord.

How does your Honor for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thanke you . well, well, well. Ophe. My Lord. I have Remembrances of yours, That I have longed long to re-deliver. I pray you now, receive there

Hem. No, no, I neuer gaue you ought. Ophe. My hoaor'd Lord, I know tight well you did, And with them words of so sweet breath composid, As made the things more rich, then perfume lest: Take these againe, for to the Noble minde Rich gifts wax poore, when givers prove vakinde. There my Lord.

How. Ha, ha: Are you honeft?

Opte. My I a d. Ham Are you faire?

Opbe. What meanes your Lordship?

Ham That if you be honest and faire, your Honesty should admit no discourse to your Beautie.

Opbe. Could Beautie my Lord, have better Comerce

then your Honestie?

Ham. I trulie : for the power of Beautie, will sooner transforme Honestie from what it is, to a Bawd, then the force of Hopethe can transface Beautie ioto his likeneffe. This was sometime a Paradox, but now the time gives it proofe. I did loue you once.

Opbe. Indeed my Lord, you made me believe fo. Ham. You should not have beleeved me. For verroe cannot so innocculate out old Rocke, but we shall relish of it. I loued you not.

Ophe. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a Nunnerte Why would's thou be a breeder of Sinners ? I am my felle indifferens honest, but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better my Mother had not borne me. I am very prowd, ree uengefull, Ambitious, with more offences at my becke, then I have thoughts to put them in imagination, to give them shape, or time to acte them in. What should fuch Fellower as I do, crawling betweene Heaven and Earth. We are arram Knaues all, believe none of vs. Goe thy wayes to a Numery. Where's your Father?

Opbe. At home, my Lord.

Ham. Let the doores be thut spon him, that he may play the Foole no way, but in's owne house. Farewell.

Ophe. O helpe him, you sweet Heavens.

Ham. If thou doeft Marry, He give thee this Plague for thy Downe. Be thou as chaft as Ice, as pure as Snow, thou halt not escape Calumny. Get thee to a Nunnery. Go, Farewell. Or If thou wilt needs Marry, marry a sool: for Wife men know well enough, what monters you make of them. To a Nunnery go, and quickly too. Farwell.

Opbe. O heavenly Powers, reflore bims

Him. I have heard of your pratlings too wel enough. God has given you one pace, and you make your lefte another: you gidge, you amble, and you lifpe, and olchname Gods creatures, and make your Wantonneffe, your Ignorance. Go too, lie no more on t, it hath made me mad. I fay, we will have no more Matriages. Those that are married already, all but one shall live, the rest shall keep as they are. To a Nunnery, go.

Exit Hamlet

Ophe. O what a Noble minde is heere o're-throwine? The Courtiers, Soldiers, Schollers. Eye, tongue, sword, Th'expectansie and Rose of the faire State. The glasse of Fashion, and the mould of Forme. Th'observ'd of all Observers, quite, quite downe. Haue I of Ladies most detect and wretched, That fuck'd the Honie of his Musicke Vowes: Now see that Noble, and most Soversigne Reason, Like sweet Bels rangled out of tune, and harsh, That symmatch'd Forme and Feature of blowne youth, Blassed with extasse. Oh woe is me, T'have seene what I have seene: see what I see.

Enter King, and Polonius.

King. Loue? His affections do not that way rend,
Not what he spake, though it lack d Forme a little.
Was not like Madnesse. There's something in his soule?
O're which his Melancholly sis on brood,
And I do doubt the hatch, and the disclose
Will be some danger, which to prevent have in quicke determination
Thus secret downe. He shall with speed to England
For the demand of our neglected Tribute:
Haply the Seas and Countries different
With variable Obiects, shall expell
This something setted matter in his heart
Whereon his Braines shill bearing, puts him thus
From fashion of himselse. What thinke you on'the

Pol. It shall do well. But yet do I beleeue The Origin and Commencement of this greese Sprung from neglected loue. How now Ophelia? You neede not tell vs., what Lord Hämler saide, We heard it all. My Lord, do as you please, But if you hold it fit after the Play, Let his Queene Mother all alone jutreat him To shew his Greeses: let her be round with him, And Ile be plac'd so, please you in the eare Of all their Conference. If the finde him not, To England send him: Or confine him where You: wisedome best shall thinke.

Korg. . It (hall be lo: Madnelle in great Ones, must not viwatch'd go. Enter Hambet pad two or three of the Flagers.

Ham. Speake the Speech I gray you, as I pionounc'd it to you trippingly on the Tengue: But if you mouth it, as many of your Players do, I had as hoe the Town-Cryer had spoke my Lines. Nor do not saw the Ayie too much your hand thus, but vse all gently; for in the verie Torrent, Tempest, and (as I may say) the Whirle-winde of Passion, you must acquire and beget a Temperance that may give it Smoothnesse. Olt offends mee to the Soule, to see a robustious Pery-wig-pated Fellow, teare a Passion to tarrers, to verie ragges, to split the easter of the Groundlings; who (for the most part) are capeable of nothing, but inexplicable dumbe shewes, & noise: I could have such a Fellow whipt for o're-doing Termagant: it out. Harod, Harod, Pray you avoid it.

Player. I warrent your Honor.

Ham. Be not too tame neyther : but let your owne Diferetion be your Tutor. Sute the Action to the Word, the Word to the Action, with this special observance: That you ore-stop not the modestie of Nature; for any thing to over-done, is fro the purpose of Playing, whole end both 21 the first and now, was and is, so hold as 'twes the Mirrout up to Nature; to thew Vertue her owne Feature, Scorne her owne Image, and the verie Age and Bodie of the Time, his forme and preffure. Now, this ouer-done, or come rardie off, though it make the vinkilfull laugh, cannot but make the fudicious greeve; The censure of the which One, must in your allowance o'reway a whole Theater of Others. Oh, there bee Players that I have feene Play, and heard others praise, and that highly (not to speake it prophanely) that neyther having the accent of Christians, nor the gate of Christian, Pagan, or Norman, have so Arutted and bellowed, that I have thought some of Natures louerney-men had made men, and not made them well, they imitated Humanity fo abhominably

Play. I hope we have reform d that indifferently with

Ham. Oreformest alsogether. And let those that play your Clownes, speake no more them is set downe for them. For there be of them, that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantitie of harron Speciators to laugh too, though in the meane time, some necessary Question of the Play be then to be considered: that's Villanous, & set themselves a most pittiful Ambition in the Poole that view it. Go make you readie.

Exit Player.

Enter Polonina, Rosinerance and Guildensterne.

How now my Lord, Will the King heare this peece of Worke?

Pol And the Queene too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the Players make hait. Exit Polunia.

Will you two helpe to hasten them?

Both. We will my Lord.

nv Lord. Exempl.
Enter Horatio.

Ham. What hoz, Horasio?

Hora. Heere sweet Lord, at your Service,

Ham Horatto, thou art cene as suff a man

As ere my Conversation coap'd withall

Hora. Only deere Lord.

Ham. Nay do not thinke I fiatter:

For what advancement may I hope from thee, That no Revennew haft, but thy good spirits

To feed & cloath thee. Why shold the poor be flatter'd? No, let the Candred tongue, like abfurd pompe, And crooke the pregnant Hindges of the knee, Where thrift may follow faining ? Doft thou heare, Since my deere Soule was Mistris of my choyle, And could of men diffinguish, her election Hath seal'd thee for her selfe. For thou hast bene As one in fuffering all, that fuffets nothing. A man that Fortunes buffets, and Rewards Hath 'tane with equal Thankes. And bleft are those, Whole Blood and Judgement are fo well co-mingled, That they are not a Pipe for Fortunes finger, To found what stop she please. Give me that man, That is not Passions Slave, and I will weare him In my hearts Core: 1, in my Heart of heart, As I do thee. Something too much of this. There is a Play to night before the King, One Scoene of it comes neere the Circumstance Which I have rold thee, of my Fathers death. I prythee, when thou fee'ft that Att a-foot, Fuen with the verie Comment of my Soule Observe mine Vakle : If his occulted guilt, Do not it felfe vnkennell in one speech, It is a damped Ghost that we have seene : And my Imaginations are as foule As Vulcans Stythe. Giue him needfull note, For I mine eyes will rluet to his Face : And after we will both out judgements joyne, To centure of his feeming. Hora. Well my Lord.

If he steale ought the whil'st this Play is Playing, And scape detecting, I will pay the Thelt. Enser King, Queene. Polonius, Ophelia, Rosincranoe, Guildenfterne, and other Lords attendant, with bis Guard carrying Torches. Danish March. Sound a Flowrifb.

Ham. They are comming to the Play : I must be idle Get you a place.

King. How fares our Cofin Hamles?

Ham. Excellent Ifaith, of the Camelions dish : I eate the Ayre promise-cramm'd, you cannot feed Capons so. King. I have nothing with this answer Hamlet, these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine. Now my Lord, you plaid once

Ham. Ladie, Shall I lye in your Lap? Opie. No my Lord.

Han. I mesne, my Head vpon your Lap?

Ophe. Imy Lord.

Ham. Do you thinke I meant Country matters?

Ophe. I thinke nothing, my Lord.

Ham, That's a faire thought to ly between Malds legs Ophe. What is my Lord?

Ham. Nothing.
Ophs. You are merrie, my Lord?

Ham. Who 1? Opbe. I my Lord.

Ham. Oh God, your onely ligge-maker: what should a man do, but be merrie. For looke you how cheerefully my Mother lookes, and my Father dyed within's two Houres Opbe. Nay, 'tis twice two monerhs, my Lord.

Ham. So long? Nay then let the Divel weare blacke, for Ile haue a fuite of Sables. Oh Heauensl dye two moneths ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope, a great mans Memorie, may out-live his life halfe a yeare. But byrlady he must builde Churches then: orelie shall he fuffer not thinking on, with the Hoby-horde, whole Epitaph is, For o, For o, the Hoby-horse is forgot Hoboges play. The dismbe show enters.

Enter a Rong and Queene, very lowingly; the Queene embra-cing him. She kneeles, and makes them of Protestation unio him. He takes her up, and decloses bis bead upon ber neck. Layes him downe upon a Banke of Flowers She seeing hims a-sleeps, leaves him. Anon comes in a Fellow, takes off his Crowne, keffes it, and poweres por fon in she Kings cares, and Exas. The Queene returnes, findes the King dead, and makes paffionate Allion. The Possoner, with some two or three Mutes comes in agame, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away : The Porforer Wooss the Queene with Gifts, she seemes loath and onwilling awhile, but in the end, accepts his love.

Ophe. What meanes this, my Lord?

Ham. Marry this is Miching Malicho, that meanes Mischeefe.

Ophe. Belike this shew imports the Argument of the Play?

Ham. We shall know by these Fellowes: the Players cannot keepe counfell, they I tell all.

Ophe. Will they rell vs what this shew meant?

Ham. I, or any shew that you'l shew him. Bee not you asham'd to shew, hee'l not shame to tell you what it

Ophe. You are naught, you are naught, lle marke the Play

Emer Prologue. For vs, and for our Tragedie, Heere flooping to your Clemencie: We begge your bearing Patientlie.

Ham. Is this a Prologue, or the Poefie of a Ring? Ophe. 'Tis briefe my Lord.

Ham. As Womans love,

Enter King and his Queene. King. Full thirtie times hath Phoebus Cart gon round, Neptunes falt Wash, and Tellas Orbed ground: And thirtie dozen Moones with borrowed theene, About the World baue times twelue thirties beene, Since loue our hearts, and Hymen did our hands Vnice comunall, in most facred Bands.

Bap. So many journies may the Same and Moone Make va againe count o're, ere lone be done. But woe is me, you are so ficke of late, So fatte from cheere, and from your forme flate, That I diffruit you: yet though I diffruit, Discomfort you (my Lord) it nothing miss t For womens Frare and Loue, holds quamitie,

In welther ought, or in extremity: Now what my love is proofe hath made you know,

And as my Loue is fiz d, my Feere is fo. King. Faith I must leave thee Loue, and shortly too: My operant Powers my Functions leave to do:

And thou shale live in this faire world behinde, Honour'd, belou'd, and haply, one as kinde.

For Husband Shale thou Bap. Oh confound the reft:

Such Loue, must needs be Treason in my breft: In second Husband, les me be accurit, None wed the fecond, but who kill'd the firfts

Ham. Wormwood, Wormwood.
Bapt. The instances that second Marriage move, Are base respects of Thrift, but none of Loue. A second time, I kill my Husband dead, When second Husband kisses me in Bed

King. I do beleeue you. Think what now you speak : But what we do determine, oft we breake: Purpose is but the slave to Memorie, Of violent Birth, but poore validities Which now like Fruite varipe flickes on the Tree, But fall vnfhak en, when they mellow bee. Most necessary 'cis, that we forget To pay our felues, what to our felues is debt: What to our felues in passion we propole, The passion ending, dorn the purpose lose The violence of other Greefe or loy, Their owne ennectors with themselves defroy: Where Joy most Reuels, Greefe doth most lament; Greefe loyes, Loy greeues on slender accident, This world is not for aye, nor tis not frange That even our Loves (hould with our Fortunes change. For 'is a question left vi yetto prove, Whether Loue lead Fortune, or elle Fortune Loue. The great man downe, you marke his favourites flies, The poore aduanc'd, makes Friends of Enemier: And hitherto doth Love on Fortune tend For who not needs, shall never lacke a Frend: And who in want a hollow Friend doth try, Directly seasons him his Enemie. But orderly to end, where I begun, Our Willes and Fates do fo contrary run, That our Devices fill are overthrowne, Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our owne. So thinke thou wilt no fecond Husband wed But die thy thoughts, when thy first Lord is dead

Bap. Nor Earth to give me food, nor Heaven light, Sport and repole locke from me day and night: Each opposite that blankes the face of 10y, Meet what I would have well, and it defiroy: Both heere, and hence, purlue me lasting strife, If once a Widdow, euer I be Wife.

Ham. If the thould breake it now.

King. 'Tis deepely (wome: Sweet, leave me heere a while,

My spirits grow dull, and faine I would beguile The tedious day with fleepe.

Qu. Sleepe rocke thy Braine, Sleeper And neuer come mischance betweene vs twaine. Ezn

Ham. Madam, how like you this Play? Qu. The Lady protests to much me thinkes.

Ham. Oh but shee'l keepe her word.

Kmg. Have you heard the Argument, is there no Of-

Hen. No, no, they do but self, poylon in ieft, no Offence i'th'world

King. What do you call the Play?
Ham. The Moufe-trap, Marry how? Tropically. This Play is the Image of a murde: done in Vienna: Go zago is the Dukesneme, his wife Bequife : you firs! fee anon: tiss knaus in peece of worke - Bur what othat? Your Maiefrie, and wee that have free fouler, it touches vs not : let the gall'd tade winchtons withers are vnrung. Enter Lucienm.

This is one Lucions nephew so the King.

Ophr. You are a good Chorus, my Lord. Ham. I could interpret betweene you and your love, of I could fee the Puppers dallying.

Enter Rolingrance and Guildensterne.

Ham. Oh, ha? Come fome Musick. Come & Recorders For if the King like not the Comedie. Why then belike helikes it not perdie.

Come some Musicke.

Guild. Good my Lord, vouchfale me a word with you

Ham. Sir, a whole History.

Guild. The King, fir. Ham. I fir, what of him?

Cuild. Is in his retyrement, maruellous diftemper'd.

Ham. With drinke Sir ?

Guild. No my Lord, rather with choller.

Ham. Your wisedome should shew it selfe more rither, to fignifie this to his Doctor. for for me to put him to his Purgation, would perhaps plundge him into farre more Choller.

Guild. Good my Lord pur your discourse into some frame, and flart not so wildely from my affayre.

Ham. I am tame Sir, pronounce.

Guild. The Queene your Mother, in most great affi-Aton of fpirit, hath fent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.
Caild. Nay, good my Lord, this courtefie is not of the right breed. It it shall please you to make me a wholsome answer, I will doe your Mothers command ment : if not, your pardon, and my returne shall bee the end of my Bufineffe.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.
Guild What, my Lord?

Ham. Make you a wholfome answere: my wits diseas'd. But fir, such answers as I can make, you shal command : or rather you lay, my Mother : therfore no more but to the matter. My Mother you fay.

Rosin. Then thus she sayes: your behaulor hath stroke her into amazement, and admiration.

Ham. Oh wonderfull Sonne, that can so astonish a Mother. But is there no fequell at the heeles of this Mothers admiration?

Rofin. She defires to speake with you in her Closses, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our Mother. Haue you any further Trade with vs?
Rosin. My Lord, you once didloue me.

Ham. So Ido fill, by thefe pickers and fealers.

Rosen. Good my Lord, what is your cause of diffemper? You do freely barre the doore of your owne Libertie, if you deny your greefes to your Friend.

Ham. Sir I lacke Advancement.

Rolin. How can that be, when you have the voyce of the King himselfe, for your Succession in Denmarke

Ham. I, but while the graffe growes, the Prouerbe is fomething musty.

Enter one with a Recorder.

O the Recorder. Let me see, to withdraw with you, why do you go about to recover the winde of mee, as if you would drive me into a toyle?

Guild. Omy Lord, if my Dutie be too bold, my love is too vomannerly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play vpon this Pipe?

Guild. My Lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.
Guild. Beleeue me, I cannot.

Ham. I do heseech you.

Guild: I know no touch of it, my Lord.

Ham. Tisas easie as lying : gouerne these Ventiges with your finger and thumbe, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most excellent Musicke. Looke you, the fe are the stoppes.

Guild. But these cannot I command to any vtterance of hermony. I leave not the skill.

Ham. Why looke you now, how vnworthy a thing you make of me; you would play vpon mee; you would feeme to know my stops: you would pluck out the heart of my Mysterie; you would found mee from my lovrest Note, to the top of my Compasse; and there is much Muficke, excellent Voice, in this little Organe, yet cannot you make it. Why do you thinke, that I am easier to bee plaid on, then a Pipe? Call me what Instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play vpon me. God blesse you Sir.

Enter Polonius.

Polon. My Lord; the Queene would speak with you. and presently.

Ham. Do you fee that Clowd? that's almost in shape

like a Camell

Polon. By th'Misse, and it's like a Camell indeed.

Ham. Methinkes it is like a Weazell. Polon. It is back'd like a Weazell.

Ham. Orlikea Whale! Polon. Verielike a Whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my Mother, by and by : They foole me to the top of my bent.

I will come by and by.

Polon. I will fay fo. Exit Hain. By and by, is easily said. Leaue me Friends:

Tis now the verie witching time of night, When Churchyards yawne, and Hell it felfe breaths out Contegion to this world. Now could I drink hot blood.

And do such birter businesse as the day

Would quake to looke on. Soft now, to my Mother: Oh Heart, loofe not thy Nature; let not ever Enter King Rofincrance and Guildensterne. King. I like him not, nor flands is fale with ys. To let his madnesse range. Therefore prepare you, I your Commission will forthwish disparch, And he to England Itall along with you: The termes of out : flate, may not endure Hazard fo dangerous as doth hourely grow Out of his Lunacies.

Guild. We will our felues provide: Most holie and Religious seare it is To keepe those many many bodies safe That live and feede upon your Maicftie.

Rofin. The Angle And peculiar life is bound With all the Brength and Armour of the minde, To keepe it selfe from noyance i but much more, That Spirit, vpon whose spirit depends and rests The lives of many, the cease of Maiestie Dies not alone; but like a Gulfe doth draw What's neere it, with it. It is a massie wheele Fixt on the Somnet of the highest Mount, To whose huge Spoakes, ten thousand lesser things Are mortiz'd and adioyn'd: which when it falles, Each small annexment, pettie consequence Attends the boystrous Ruine. Neueralone Did the King fighe, but with a generall grone,

King. Arme you, I pray you to this speedie Voyage; For we will Fetters put vponthis feare,

Which now goes too free-footed.

King. Thankes deere my Lord.
Oh my offence is ranke, it finels to heaten, It hath the primall eldeft curse vpon't, A Brothers murther. Pray can I not. Though inclination be as tharpe as will: My stronger guilt, defeats my strong incent, And like a man to double bufineffe bound, I stand in paule where I shall first begin, And both neglect; what if this curfed hand Were thicker then it selfe with Brothers blood, Is there not Raine enough in the fweet Heavens To wash it white as Snow? Whereto serves mercy, But to confront the vilage of Offence? And what's in Prayer, but clus two-fold force, To be fore-stalled ere we come to fall, Or pardon'd being downe? Then He looke up, My fault is past. But oh, what forme of Prayer Can ferue my turne? Forgiue me my foule Murther: That cannot be, fince I am full poffeft Of those effects for which I did the Murther. My Crowne, mine owne Ambitton, and my Queene: May one be pardon'd, and retaine th'offence? In the corrupted currants of this world, Offences gilded hand may houe by Iuflice, And oft tis feene, the wicked prize it felfe Buyes out the Law; but tis not lo aboue, There is no fouffling, there the Action lyes In his true Nature, and we our selves compell'd Even to the teeth and forchead of our faults, To give in evidence. What then? What refts? Try what Repentance can. What can it not? Yet what can it, when one cannot repent? Oh wretched Raie! Oh bosome, blacke as death! Oh limed foule, that ftrugling to he free, Att more ingag'd: Helpe Angels, make affay:
Bow stubborne knees, and heart with strings of Steele, Be foft as finewes of the new-borne Babe, All may be well.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I do it par, now he is praying, And now I le doo't, and fo he goes to Heauen, And fo am I treueng'd: that would be fearn'd, A Villaine killes my Father, and for that I his foule Sonne, do this fame Villaine fend To heauen. Ham. Now Mother, what's the matter?

Qr. Hamler, thou bast thy Father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my Father much offended.

Qa. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you question with an idle tongue.

Qa. Why how now Bamler?

2s. Why how now Remer!

Ham. Whats the matter now?

2a. Have you for got me!

Ham. No by the Rood, not fo:

You are the Queene, your Husband: Brozhers wife, But would you were not so. You are my Mother.

Qu. Nay, then lle fee those to you that can speake.

Hum. Come, come, and six you downe, you shall not boudge:

You go not till I let you vp a glaffe, Where you may lee the imnost part of you?

Qu. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not mutcher me? Helpe, helpe, hoa.

Pol. Oh I am flaine.

Küles Polon isu
Qu. Oh me, what hast thou done?

Ham. Nay I know not, is at the King?
Qu. Oh what a rash, and bloody deed is this?
Ham. A bloody deed, almost as bad good Mother,

As kill a King, and marrie with his Brother.

Qu. As kill a King?

Hom. I Lady, 'twas my word.

Ham. I Lady, 'twas my word.
Thou wretched, tath, intruding foole brewell,
I tooke thee for thy Betters, take thy Forume,
Thou find's to be too bushe, is force danger.
Leaue wringing of your hands, peace, fit you downe,
And let me wring your heart, for so I shell
If it be made of penetrable stuffe;
If damned Custome have not braz'd it so,
That it is proofe and bulwarke against Sense.

Qa.What have I done, that thou dar'll wag tny tong. In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an Act
Thet blurres the grace and blush of Modeslie,
Cals Vertue Hypocrite, takes off the Rose
From the faire forehead of an innocent love,
And makes a blister there. Makes marriage yowes
As falle as Dicers Oathes. Oh such a deed,

Δe

Astrom the body of Contraction plucker
The very foule, and sweete Religion makes
A rapsidic of words. Heavens face doth glow,
Yea this solidity and compound masse,
With tristfull vitage as against the doome,
Is thought-ficke at the act.

Qu. Aye me; what act, that roares followd, & thunders in the Index.

Ham. Looke heere vpon this Picture, and on this, The counterfet presentment of two Brothers 1 See what a grace was feated on his Brow. Hyperions curles, the front of love himselfe, An eye like Mars, to threaten or command A Station, like the Herald Mercurie New lighted on a heaven kiffing hill: A Combination, and a forme indeed, Where every God did feeme to fer his Scale, To give the world affurance of a man. This was your Husband. Looke you now what followes. Heere is your Husband, like a Mildew'd care Blasting his wholsom breath. Have you eyes? Could you on this faire Mountaine leave to feed, And batten on this Moore? Ha? Have you eyes? You cannot call it Loue : For at your age, The hey-day to the blood is tame, it's hunible, And waites upon the ludgement : and what ludgement Would step from this, to this? What divel was t, That thus bath coulend you at hoodman-blinde? O Shame! where is thy Blush? Rebellious Hell. If thou canst mutine in a Matrons bones, To flaming youth, let Vertue be as waxe. And melt in her owne fire. Proclaime no shame, When the compulinc Ardure gives the charge, Since Frost it selfe, as actively doth butne, As Reason panders Will.

Qu. O Hamlet, speake no more.
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soule,
And there I see such blacke and grained spors,

As will not leave their Tinch.

Ham. Nay, but to live
In the ranke freat of an enfeamed bed,
Stew'd in Corruption; honying and making lone
Over the nafty Stye.

Qu. Oh speake to me, no more, These words like Daggers enter in mine eares.

No more sweet Hamler

Ham. A Murderer, and a Villaine:
A Slaue, that is not twentieth patt the tythe
Of your precedent Lord. A vice of Kings,
A Cutpurfe of the Empire and the Rule.
That from a fielfe, the precious Diadem fole,
And put it in his Pocket.

Qu. No more.

Enter Choft.

Ham. A King of threads and patches.

Sauc me; and hour o're me with your wings

You heatenly Guards. What would you gracious figure?

La. Alas he's mad

Ham. Do you not come your tardy Sonne to chide, That laps't in Time and Passion, lets go by Thimportant acting of your dread command? Oh say.

Gboff. Do not forget; this Visitation
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
But looke, Amazement on thy Mother sits;
O step betweene her, and her fighting Soule,
Concert in weakest bodies, strongest workes.

Speake to her Hamler.

Ham. How is it with you Lady?

Qu. Alas, how is 't with you?

That you bend your eye on vacancie,
And with their corporall syre do hold discourse.

Forth at your eyes, your spirits wildely peepe,
And as the sleeping Soldiours in th'Alarme,
Your bedded haire, like life in excrements,
Start vp, and stand an end. Oh gentle Sonne,
Vpon the heate and slame of thy distempet
Sprinkle coole patience. Whereon do you looke?

Ham. On him, on him: look you how pale he glares, His forme and cause conion d, preaching to stones, Would make them capeable. Do not looke vpon rine, Least with this pitteous action you convert My sterne effects: then what I have to do, Will want true colour; teares perchance for blood.

Ham. Nor did you nothing here?

Qu. Nothing at all, yet all that is I fee
Ham. Nor did you nothing heare?

Qu. No, nothing but our felues.

Harr. Why look you there: looke how it fleals away: My Father in his habite, as he lived.

Looke where he goes even now out at the Portall. Exis.

Qu. This is the very toyinge of your Braine,
This bodileffe Creation extalic is very cunning in.

Ham. Extahel My Pulse as yours doth temperately keepe time. And makes as healthfull Mulicke. It is not madaeffe That I have vitered; bring me to the Teff And I the matter will re-word which madneffe Would gamboil from. Mother, for love of Grace, Lay not o flattering Vnction to your foule, That not your trespasse, but my madnesse speakes: It will but skin and stime the Vicerous place, Whil'stranke Corruption mining all within, Infects vnscene. Confesse your selfe to Heaven, Repent what spaft, auoyd what is to come, And do not spred the Compost or the Weedes, To make them ranke. Forgive me this my Vertue. For in the facuelle of this purfic times, Vertue it felfe, (. Vice must pardon begge, Yea courb, and woe, for leave to do him good. 2e. Oh Hamlet,

Thou haft cleft my heart in twaine.

Ham. O throw away the worfer part of it,
And line the purer with the other halfe.
Good night, but go not to mine Vokles bed,
Assume a Vertue, if you have it not, refraine to night;
And that shall lend a kinde of easinesse.
To the next abstinence. Once more goodnight,
And when you are desirous to be blest
Ile blessing begge of you. For this same Lord,
I do repent: but heaven bath pleas'd it so,
To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their Scourge and Minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gave him: so againe.good night.
I must be cruell, onely to be kinde;
Thus bad begins, and worse remaines behinde.

Qu. What shall I do?

Ham. Northis by no meanes that I bid you do:
Let the blunt King tempt you againe to bed,
Pinch Wanton on your cheeke, call you his Mouse,
And let him for a paire of reechie kisses,

PP 3

Or padling in your necke with his darne'd Fingers, Make you to tavell all the matter out, That I effentially am not in madnelle.

But made in craft. 'Twere good you let him know, For who that's but a Queene, faire, fober, wife, Would from a Paddocke, from a Bat, a Gibbe, Such deere concernings hide. Who would do fa, No in despight of Sense and Secrecie, Vnpegge the Basket on the boules top 1 Let the Birds flye, and like the famous Ape To try Conclusions in the Basket, creepe And breake your owne necke downe.

Qu. Be thou affur'd, if words be made of breath,

And breath oflife : I have no life to breath

What thou halt faide to me.

Han. I must to England, you know that?
Qu. Alacke I had forgot: The so concluded on. Hom. This men shall be me packing ! He lugge the Guts into the Neighbor roome, Mother goodnight. Indeede this Counsellor Is now most still, most fecret, and most grave, Who was in life, a foolish prating Knaue. Come fir, to draw toward an end with you.

Good night Mother. Exit Hamlet tugging in Polonius.

Emer King.

King. There's matters in these fighes. These profound heaves You must translate : Tis fit we understand them. Where is your Sonne?

Qu. Ah my good Lord, what have I feene to night?

King. What Gertrude? How do's Hander?
Qu. Mad as the Seas, and winde, when both consend Which is the Mightier, in his lawlelle hi Behinde the Arras, hearing something stirre, He whips his Rapier out, and cries a Rat, a Rat, And in his brainish apprehension killes The volcene good old man.

King. Oh heavy deed: It had bin so with ve had we beene there: His Liberty is full of threats to all, To you your felfe, to vs, to every one. Alas, how shall this bloody deede be answered? le will be laide to vs. whole prouidence Should have kept thors, reftrain'd, and out of haunt, This mad youg man. But so much was our love, We would not understand what was most fig. But like the Owner of a foule difeafe, To keepe it from divulging, let's it feede Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Qw. To draw apare the body he hath kild, O're whom his very madneffe like fome Oase Among a Minerall of Mettels bale

Shewes it felle pure. He weepes for what is doze. King. Oh Gerrands, come away: The Sun no fooner shall the Mountaines touch, But we will fhip him hence, and this viide deed, We must with all our Majesty and Skill Both countensace, and excute. Enter Rof & Gold. Ho Guilden Gern : Friends both go loyne you with lome further syde: Howier in madneffe hach Polente fiaine,

And from his Mother Cloffers hath he drag'd him. Go leeke him out, speake faire, and bring the body Into the Chappell. I pray you half in this. Exus Come Gorrad, wee't call up our wifeh friends,

To let them know both what we means to do, And what's varimely done. Oh come away, My foule is full of discord and dismay.

Esser Harries.

Ham. Safely flowed.

Gemlemen wieben. Hamlet, Lord Pamlet. Hom. What notife? Who cals on Homke?

Oh heere they come. Enter Rof. and Cuilden flores. Ro. What have you done my Lord with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with duft, wherero 'ils Kinne. Rofin Tell va where tis, that we may take it thence,

And beare it to the Chappell. Ham. Do not beleeve ic.

Rofon Beleeve what?

Ham That I can keepe your counfell, and not mine owne. Belides, to be demanded of a Spundge, what replication should be made by the Sonne of a King.

Rofin. Take you me for a Spundge, my Lord? Hom. I fr, that lokes up the Kings Countenance, bis Rewards, his Authorities (but fuch Officers do the King beft service in the end . He keepes them like an Ape in the corner of his isw, first mouth'd to be left swallowed, when he needes what you have glean'd, it is but fqueezing you, and Spundge you shall be dry againe.

Rofin. I underfland you not my Lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: a knowsh speech sheepes in a foolish cure.

Rofie. My Lord, you must tell vs where the body is and po with vs to the King.

Ham The body is with the King, but the King is not with the body. The King is a thing -

Guild. A thing my Lord?

Ham. Of nothing : bring me to him, hide Fox, and all

Encer King. King. I have lent to feeke him, and to find the bodie : How dangeroes is it that this man goes looks Yet must not we put the strong Law on him i Hee's loved of the diffracted mulitude, Who like not in their ludgement, but their eyes: And where 'tis fo, th'Offenders scourge is weigh'd But neerer the offence : to beare all fmooth, and even, This lodaine lending him away, must learne Deliberate paule, diseases desperate growne, By desperate appliance are relected. Ornot at all. How now? What hath befalme?

Rofin. Where the dead body is bellow'd my Lord, We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?
Rojin. Without my Lord, guarded to know your pleafure.

King. Bring him before vs. Rofin. Hos, Guildenfternei Bring in my Lord.

Enter Harrist and Guilden Corne. Ring. Now Hamler, where's Polantee? Ham. At Suppet.

King. At Supper? Where?

Ham Not where he eats, but where he is eaten, a cortaine convocation of wormes are e'ne at him. Your worm is your onely Emperor for dies. We fat all creatures elle to fat ve, and we for our felfe for Magots. Your fat King, and your leane Begger is but variable feruice to diffee, but to one Table that's thoond.

King. What dost thou meane by this?

Fran, 1

Ham. Nothing but to shew you how a King may go a Progresse through the guts of a Begger.

King. Where is Polonius.

Ham. In heaven, send thicher to see. If your Messenger finde himnor there, feeke him i'th other place your felfe: but indeed, if you finde him not this moneth, you (hall note him as you go vp the staires into the Lobby. King. Go feeke him there.

Ham. He will flay till ye come.

K. Hamlet, this deed of thine, for thine especial safety Which we do tender, as we deerely greeue For that which thou half done, must lend thee hence With hene Quicknesse. Therefore prepare thy selfe, The Barke is readie, and the winde at helpe, Th' Associates tend, and every thing at bent For England.

Ham. For England? Kmg. 1 Hamler.

Ilam, Good.

King. So is st, if thou knew'st our purposes. Ham. I fee a Cherube that fee's him: but come, for England. Farewell deere Mother.

King. Thy louing Father Hamler.

Hamlet. My Mother: Father and Mother is man and wife: man & wife is one fielh, and fo my mother. Come,

King. Follow him at foote, Tempt him with speed aboord : Delay it not, Ile haue him hence to night. Away, for every thing is Seal'd and done That else leanes on th'Affaire pray you make haft. And England, if my love thou holdst at ought, As my great power thereof may give thee fonfe, Since yet chy Cicatrice lookes raw and red After the Danish Sword, and thy free awe Payes homage to vs; thou mail not coldly fet Our Soucraigne Processe, which imports at full By Letters conjuring to that effect The present death of Hamlet. Do it England. For like the Hecticke in my blood be rages, And thou must cure me: Till I know tis done, How ere my happes, my loyes were ne're begun.

Enter Fortinbras with an Armse. For. Go Captaine, from me greet the Danish King, Tell him that by his license, Forimbras Claimes the conveyance of a promis'd March Ouer his Kingdome. You know the Rendeuous: If that his Maiesty would ought with vs, We shall expresse our dutie in his eye, And let him know fo.

Cap. I will doo't, my Lord.

For. Go fefely on. Enter Queens and Herato.

Da I will not speake with her.

Hor. She is importunate, indeed distract, her moode will needs be pittied.

Exit.

Qu. What would she have?
Hr. She speakes much of her Father; saies she herres There's crickes i'th'world, and hems, and beats her heart, Spurnes enviously at Strawes, speakes things in doubt, That carry but halfe sense: Het speech is nothing, Yet the vnfhaped vle of it doth moue The hearers to Collection; they syme at it, And botch the words up fit to their owne thoughts .. Which as her winkes, and nods, and geftures yeeld them, Indeed would make one thinke there would be thought, Though nothing fure, yet much vnhappily.

Qu. Twere good the were spoken with, For the may threw dangerous coniectures in ill breeding minds. Let her come in. To my licke foule(as finnes true Nature 15) Each toy scemes Prologue, to some great amisse. So full of Artleffe icalousie is guile, It spill's it selfe, in fearing to be spile.

Enter Ophelia distrolted. Opbe, Where is the besuteous Maiesty of Denmark.

24 How now Ophelial

Opbe. How Should I your true love know from another one? By hu Cockle has and staffe, and his Sandal Shoone.

Qu. Alas (weet Lady: what imports this Song? Ophe. Say you? Nay pray you marke. He is dead and gone Lary, he is dead and gone, As his head a graffe-greene Tirfe, as his beeles a flone.

Enter King.

Qu Nay but Opholia. Opbe Pray you marke.

Whichis Shrow'd as the Mountains Snow.

Q. Alas looke heere my Lord. Opbo. Larded with sweet flowers : Which bewept to the grave did not go, With true-low powers.

King. How do ye, pretty Lady?

Ophe. Well, God dil'd you. They fay the Owle was Bakers daughter. Lord, weeknow what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your Table.

King. Concert vpon her Father

Ophe Pray you let's haue no words of this. but when they aske you what it meanes, say you this : To morrow is S. Valentines dez all in the morning beisme, . And I a Maid at your Window to be your Valentme Then up be rofe to don'd his clothes to dapt the chamber dore Let in the Maid, that out a Maid, never departed more.

King . Pretty Ophelia.

Ophe. Indeed la? without an oath lle make an end ont.

By gis, and by S. (burity. Alacke, and fie for thame : Yong meny al doo't, if they come too't, By Cocke hey are soo blasses Quoil she before you turnbled me. You promis'd me to Wed Soworld I hadme by gonder Sunne, And show hadfl nos come to my bed

King. How long hath the bin this? Opbe. I hope all will be well. We most bee patient, but I cannot choose but weepe, to thinke they should lay him i'th'cold ground : My brother shall knowe of it. and so I thanke you for your good counsell. Come, my Coach : Goodnight Ladies : Goodnight sweet Ladies : Goodnight.goodnight.

King. Follow her close, Give her good watch I pray you: Oh this is the poyfon of deepe greefe, it springs All from her Fathers death. Oh Gerrade, Certrode, When forrowes comes, they come not fingle fpies, But in Battalines. First, ber Father flaine, Next your Sonne gone, and he most violent Author Of his owne full remove: the people muddled, Thicke and vinwholfome in their thoughts, and whifpers For good Polonius death; and we have done but greenly In hugger mugger to interre him. Poore Ophelia Divided from her felfe, and herfaire judgement

Without the which we are Pictures, or meete Beafts. Last, and as much containing as all these, Het Brother Is in fecret come from France, Keepes on his wonder, keepes himselfe in clouds, And wants not Buzzer: to infect bis eare With pestilent Speecher of his Fathers death, Where in necessitie of marter Beggard, Will nothing flicke our persons to Arraigne In care and care. O my decre Certrale, this, Like to a murdering Peece in many places. A Noise withus. Gives me superfluous death.

Enter a Messenger. Qu. Alacke, what noyle is this? King. Where are my Switzers?

Letthem guard the doore. What is the matter?

Mef. Saue your felfe, my Lord. The Ocean (over-peering of his Lift) Eates not the Flats with more imputious hafte Then young Leeries, in a Riotous head, Ore-beares your Officers, the rabble call him Lord, And as the world were now but to begin, Antiquity forgot, Custome not knowne, The Ratifiers and props of every word They cry choose we? Larres shall be King. Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds, Laertes shall be King, Laertes King. Qu. How cheerefully on the false Traile they cry,

Oh this is Counter you falle Danish Dogges.

Noisewithin. Enter Lacries.

King. The doores are broke.

Laer. Where is the King, firs? Stand you all without.

All. No, let's come in.

Lacr. I pray you give me leave.

Lair. I thanke you: Keepe the doore. Oh thou vilde King, give me my Father-

Qu. Calmely good Laerres.

Laer. That drop of blood, that calmes

Proclaimes me Baftard :

Cries Cuckold to my Father, brands the Harlot Euen heere betweene the chafte vnsmitched brow Of my true Mother.

King. What is the cause Leerner, That thy Rebellion lookes so Gyant-like? Let him go Gertrude : Do not feare our person : There's fuch Divinity doth hedge a King, That Treason can but peepe to what it would, Acts little of his will. Tell me Laertes, Why thou art thus Incens? Let him go Gertrade. Speakeman.

Laer. Where's my Father? King, Dead.

Que But not by him.

King. Lethim demand his fill.

Lacr. How came he dead? He not be luggel'd with. To hell Allegeance: Vowes, to the blackest divell. Conscience and Grace, to the profoundest Piz I dare Dammarion: to this point I frand, That both the worlds I give to negligence, Let come what comes : onely Ile be reueng'd Most throughly for my Father.

King. Who finall flay you? And for my meanes, He husband them fo well, They shall go farre with little.

King. Good Larrers If you defire to know the certaintie Of your deere Fathers death, if writ in your revenge. That Soop-flake you will draw both Friend and Foe, Winner and Loofer.

Larr. None but his Enemies. Kmg. Will you know them then,

La. To his good Friends, thus wide lie ope my Armes And like the kinde Life-rend'ring Politician, Repast them with my blood.

King. Why now you speake Like a good Childe, and a true Gentleman. That I am guiltleffe of your Fathers death, And am most fensible in greefe for it, It shall as levell to your ludgement pierce As day do's to your eye

A noise within. Let her come m. Enter Ophelia.

Laer. How now? what noise is that? Oh heate drie vp my Braines, teares seuen times salt, Burne out the Sence and Vertue of mine eye. By Heaven, thy madnesse shall be payed by waight, Till our Scale curnes the beame. Oh Role of May, Deere Maid, kinde Sifter, fwcet Opbelia: Oh Heauens, is't possible, s yong Maids with, Should be as mortall as an old mans life? Nature is fine in Loue, and where tis fine, It fends fome precious inflance of it felle After the thing it loues.

Ophe. They bore him bare fac'd on the Beer, Hey non nony nony beg meny :

And on hu graze raines many atears,

Fare you well my Done.

Lacr. Had'st thou thy wits, and did'st perswade Reuenge, it could not move thus.

Opbe. You must fing downe a downe, and you rail him a-downe-a. Oh, how the wheele becomes it? It is the falle Steward that Aole bis mallers daughter.

Laer. This nothings more then matter.

Ophe. There's Rosemary, that's for Remembraunce. Pray love temeniber : and there is Paconcies, that's for Thoughts.

Lacr. A document in madnesse, thoughts & remembrance fitted.

Ophe. There's Fennell for you, and Columbines: ther's Rew for you, and heere's some for me. Wee may call it Herbe-Grace a Sundaies: Oh you must weere your Rew with a difference. There's a Daylie, I would give you fome Violets, but they wither'd all when my Father dyed: They fay, he made a good end;

For boung freet Robin is all my top.

Lore. Thought, and Affiliction, Passion, Hell it feise:

She turnes to Favour, and to pretthesse.
Ophe. And will be not come ogarae, And will be not come agame :

No no be is dead, so to thy Death-bed, He neuer wil come agains.

His Board as white as Snow, All Flamen was bis Pole

He u gone, he is gone, and we cast away mone, Gramere, on his Soule.

And of all Christian Soules, I pray God.

God buy ye. Exercit Ophelia Laer. Do you fee this, you Gods?

Ring. Larres, I must common with your greefe. Or you deny me right: go but spart,

Excust

Make choice of whom your wifelt Friends you will, And they shall heare and judge twist you and me; If by direct or by Colarerall hand They finde vs touch'd, we will our Kingdome give, Our Crowne, our Life, and all that we call Ours To you in fatisfaction. But if not, Be you content to lend your patience to vs, And we shall loyntly labour with your soule To give it due content, Lacr. Let this be so: His meanes of death his obscure buriall; Mo Trophee, Sword, nor Hatchment o're his bones, No Noble rice, nor formall oftentation, Cry to be heard, as "twere from Heaven to Earth, That I must call in question.

King. So you shall: And where th'offence is, let the great Axe fall I pray you go with me.

Enter Horatio, with an Attendant.

Hora. What are they that would speake with me? Ser. Saylors fir, they fay they have Letters for you. Hor. Let them come in,

I do not know from what part of the world I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamler. Emer Saylor.

Say. God bleffe you Sir. Har. Let him bleffe thee too.

Say. Hee shall Sir, and't please him. There's a Letter for you Sir: It comes from th' Ambassadours that was bound for England, if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Reads the Letter.

HOratio, When thouse base overlook'd this give theso Fellowes some meanes to the King: They have Letters for him. See we were two dayes old at Soa, a Pyrate of very Warlicke appointment gaue us Chace. Finding our selves too Row of Saile, we put on a compelled Valour. In the Grapple, I boorded them . On the instant they got cleare of our Shippe, so I alone became their Prisoner. They have deals with meo, like Threuer of Mercy, but they knew what they did. I am to doe a good turne for them. Let the King have the Letters I have fent, and reparte thou. I me with as much haft as thou wouldest fire death I nave words to freake in your care, will make thee dambe, yet are they much too light for the bore of the Matter. These good Fellower will bring thee where I am. Rolincrance and Guildensterne, bold theer course for England. Of them I bane much so sell shee, Farewell.

He that show knowest thine, Hamlet,

Come, I will give you way for these your Letters, And do't the speedier, that you may direct me Exit. To him from whom you brought them.

Enter Kong and Lacrees.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance scal, And you must put me in your beart for Friend, Sith you have heard, and with a knowing care, That he which hath your Noble Father flaine, Pursued my life.

Eaer. It well appeares. But tell me, Why you proceeded not against these feates, so crimefull, and so Capitall in Nature, As by your Safety, Wiledome, all things elfe,

King. O for two special Reasons, Which may to you (perhaps) feeme anich vafinaowed. And yet to me they are frong. The Queen his Mother, Lives almost by his lookes : and for my felfe, My Vertue or my Plague, be it either which. She's fo conjunctive to my life and foule; That as the Starre moves not but in his Sphere, I could not but by her. The other Morine, Why to a publike count I might not go,

You mainly were ffin'd vp?

Is the great love the generall gender beare him, Who dipping all his Faults in their affection, Would like the Spring that turneth Wood to Stone, Convert his Gyues to Graces. So that my Arrowes Too flightly timbred for lo loud a Winde, Would have reverted to my Bow againe, And not where I had arm'd them.

Laer. And so have I a Noble Father loft, A Sister driven into desperate tearmes, Who was (if praises may go backe againe) Stood Challenger on mount of all the Age For her perfections. But my reuenge will come.

King. Breake not your Deepes for that, You must not thinke That we are made of fluffe, fo flat, and dull, That we can let our Beard be shooke with danger, And thinke it passime. You shortly shall heare more, I lou'd your Father, and we love our Selfe, And that I hope will teach you to imagine .-

Enter a Meffenger.

Hownow? What Newes? Mef. Letters my Lord from Hamlet. This to your Maiesty : this to the Queene.

King. From Hamlet? Who brought them? Mef. Saylors my Lord they fay, I faw them not : They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them. Kmg. Laertes you shall heare them :

Exu Messenger High and Mighty, you shall know I am for naked on your Kingdome. To morrow shall I begge leave to see your Kingly Eyes. When I hall (first asking your Pardon shereunso) recount sh'Occasions of my sodaine and more stronge recurne.

What (hould this meane? Are all the reft come backe? Or is it some abuse? Or no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

Kin. 'Tis Hamlers Character, naked and in a Poftscript here he sayes alone: Can you aduise me ?

Laer. I'm lost in it my Lord; but let him come, It warmes the very ficknesse in my heart, That I shall live and tell him to his teeth; Thus diddeft thou.

Km. If it be so Laerter, as how should it be so t How otherwise will you berul'd by me?

Laer. Iffo you'l not o'resule me to a peace. Kin. To thine owne peace: if he be now return'd, As checking at his Voyage, and that he meanes No more to undertake it; I will worke him To an exployt now ripe in my Device, Vnder the which he shall not choose but fall; And for his death no winde of blame shall breath, But even his Mother shall vncharge the practice, And call it accident: Some two Monthes hence Here was a Gendeman of Normandy I'ue feene my felfe, and feru'd against the French, And they ran well on Horsebacke, but this Gallant

Fied

Had witchcrast in't; he grew into his Seat, And to fuch wondrous doing brought his Horfe, As had he beene encorps't and demy-Natur'd With the brave Beaft, so farre he past my thought, That I in forgery of thapes and trickes, Come short of what he did.

Luer. A Norman was't?

Kin. A Norman.

Lar. Vpon my life Lamound. Kin. The very fame.

Laer. I know him well, he is the Brooch indeed, And Jemme of all our Nation.

Kin. Heemad confession of you, And gaue you fuch a Masterly report, For Art and exercise in your defence; And for your Rapier most especially. That he cryed out, t'would be a fight indeed, If one could match you Sir. This report of his Did Hamlet so envenom with his Enuy, That he could nothing doe but wish and begge, Your sodaine comming ore to play with him; Now our of this.

Laer. Why out of this, my Lord? Kin Lacries was your Father deare to you? Or are you like the painting of a forrow, A face without a heart?

Laer. Why aske you this?

Kin. Not that I thinke you did not love your Father, Butthat I know Loue is began by Time: And that I fee in passages of proofe, Time qualifies the sparke and fire of it : Hamlet comes backe: what would you undertake, To show your selfe your Fathers sonne indeed, More then in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i'th' Church. Kin. No place indeed should murder Sancturize; Revenge should have no bounds: but good Laerces Will you doe this, keepe close within your Chamber, Hamlet return'd, shall know you are come home: Wee'l put on those shall praise your excellence, And let a double varnish on the fame The Frenchman gaue you, bring you in fine together, And wager on your heads, he being remisse, Moft generous, and free from all contriving Will not peruse the Foiles? So that with ease, Or with a little shuffling, you may choose A Sword vnbaited, and in a paffe of practice, Requit him for your Father.

Laer. I will doo't,
And for that purpose He annoint my Sword: I bought an Vnction of a Mountebanke So mortall, I but dipt a knife in it, Where it drawes blood, no Cataplasme so rare, Collected from all Simples that have Vertue Vnder the Moone, can faue the thing from death, That is but scratche withall: He touch my point, With this contagion, that if I gall him flightly, I t may be death.

Kin Let's further thinke of this, Weigh what convenience both of time and meanes May fit vs to our shape, if this should faile; And that our drift looke through our bad performance, *Twere better not affaid; therefore this Proie& Should have a backe or fecond, that might hold, If this should blass in proofe: Soft, let me ses Wee'l make a folemne wager on your commings,

I hat: when in your motion you are hot and dry, As make your bowts more violent to the end, And that he cals for drinke; Ile haue prepar'dhim A Challice for the nonce; whereon but lipping, If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck, Our purpose may hold there; how sweet Queene.

Enter Queens.

Queen. One woe doth tread ypon anothers heele, So fast they'l follow: your Sister's drown'd Lacrees. Laer. Drown'd 1 O where?

Queen. There is a Willow growes affant a Brooke, That shewes his hore leaves in the glaffie flreznie: There with fantaflicke Garlands did she come, Of Crow-flowers, Nettles, Dayfies, and long Purples, That liberall Shepheards give a groffer name; But our cold Maids doe Dead Mens Fingers call them: There on the pendant boughes, her Coronet weeds Clambring to hang; an envious fliver broke, When downe the weedy Trophies, and her felfe, Fell in the weeping Brooke, her cloathes fpred wide, And Mermaid-like, a while they bore her vp. Which time she chaunted snatches of old tunes, As one incapable of her owne distresse, Or like a creature Native, and indued Vnto that Element: but long it could not be, Till that her garments, heavy with her drinke, Pul'd the poore wretch from her melodious buy. To muddy death.

Laer. Alasthen, is she drown'd? Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou poore Ophelia, And therefore I forbid my teares: but yet It is our tricke, Nature her custome holds, Let shame fay what it will; when these are gone The woman will be our: Adue my Lord, I haut a speech of fire, that faine would blaze, But that this folly doubts ir.

Kin. Let's follow, Gerirnde: How much I had to doe to calme his rage? Now feare I this will give it flart againe; Therefore let's follow.

Enter two Clownes.

Clown. Is the to bee buried in Christian buriall, that wilfully feekes her owne faluation?

Other. I tell thee the is, and therefore make her Grave firaight, the Crowner hath fate on ber, and finds it Chri-

Clo. How can that be, valeffe the drowned her felfe in her owne defence?

Other. Why tis found fo.

Clo. It must be Se offendendo, it cannot bee elle: for heere lies the point; If I drowne my felfe wittingly, it argues an Act: and an Act hath three branches. It is an Act to doe and to performe; argall the drown'd her felfe wittingly.

Other. Nay but heare you Goodman Deluer.

Clown. Give me leave; heere lies the water; good: heere flands the man; good: If the man goe to this water and drowne himsele; it is will he nill he, be goes; marke you that? But if the water come to him & drowne him; hee drownes not himselfe. Argall, hee that is not guilty of his owne death, shortens not his owne life.

Other. But is this law? Cho. I marry is't, Crowners Quest Law.

Other. Will you ha the truth on't, if this had not beene a Gentlewoman, shee should have beene buried out of Christian Buriall.

Clo. Why therethou fay'A. And themore pitty that great folke should have countenance in this world to drowne or hang themselves, more then their even Christian. Come, my Spades there is no ancient Genelemen, but Gardiners, Ditchers and Grave-makers; they hold vp Adems Profession.

Other. Was he a Gendeman?

Clo. He was the first that euer bore Armes.

Other. Why he had none.

Clo. What, ar't a Heathen? how dost thou underftand the Scripture? the Scripture fayes Adam dig'd; could lice digge without Armes? He put another quefron to thee; if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confeffe thy felfe-

Olber. Go too.

Clo. What is he that builds stronger then either the Mason, the Shipwright, or the Carpenter !

Other. The Gallowes makers for that Frame outlines a shouland Teoants.

Clo. I like thy wit well in good faith, the Gallowes does well; but how does it well? it does well to those that doe ill: now, thou dost ill to say the Gallowes is built Aronger then the Church: Argall, the Gallowes may doe well to thee. Too't againe, Come.

Other. Who builds stronger then a Mason, a Ship-

wright, or a Carpenter?

Clo. I, tell me thar, and vnyoake.

Other. Marry, now I can tell.

No. Too'L

Orber. Maffe, I cannot tell.

Enser Hamles and Horasio a fare off.

Clo. Cudgell thy braines no more about it; for your dull Affe will not mend his pace with beating, and when you are ask't this question next, say a Grave-maker: the Houses that he makes, lasts till Doomesday: go, get thec to Trugbas, fetch me a stoupe of Liquor.

Sengs. In youth when I did love, did love, me chought is was very facete : To constalt O the some for a my behove,

O me thought there was nothing meete. Ham. Ha's this rellow no feeling of his businesse, that he fings at Grave-making?

Hor. Custome hath made it in hims property of es.

Ham. Tis ee'n lo; the hand of little Imployment hath the daintier fenfe.

Clowns fings. Bu Age with hes stealing stops bash caught me in his clatch : And bash Ihopped me intill the Land. . as if I bad never beene such.

Ham. That Scull had a tongue in it, and could fing once: how the knaue lowles it to th' grownd, as if it were Caines law-bone, that did the first murther: It might be the Pateof a Polititian which this Affe o're Of. Eces: one that could circumvent God, might it not?

Her. It might, my Lord.

Ham. Or of a Courtier, which could fay, Good Morrow fiveer Lord: how doll thou, good Lord? this might be my Lord fuch a one, that prais'd my Lord fuch a ones Horse, when he meant to begge it; might it not?

Hor. I, my Lord.

Ham. Why ee'n fo: and now my Lady Wormes, Chapleffe, and knockt about the Mazard with a Sextons Spade, herre's fine Revolution, if wee had the tricke to fee't. Did these bones coft no more the breeding, but to play at Loggets with 'em? mine ake to thinke > Clowne sings. A Pickhaxe and a Spade, a Spade for and a shrowding-Sheere: O a Put of Clay for so be made, for fuch a Gueft is meete.

Ham. There's another: why might nor that bee the Scull of of a Lawyer? where be his Quiddits now? his Quillets? his Cafes? his Tenures, and his Tricks? why doe's he fuffer this rude knaue now to knocke him about the Sconce with a dirty Shouell, and will not tell him of his Action of Battery? hum. This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of Land, with his Statutes, his Recognizances, his Fines, his double Vouchers, his Recoucties: Is this the fine of his Fines, and the recovery of his Recoueries, to have his fine Pate full of fine Dire? will his Vouchers youch him no more of his Purchases, and double ones too, then the length and breadth of a paire of Indentures? the very Conveyances of his Lands will hardly lye in this Boxe; and must the Inheritor himselfe haue no more? ha?

Hor. Not a lot more, my Lord.

Ham. Is not Parchment made of Sheep-skinnes?

Hor. I my Lord, and of Calue-skinnes too.

Ham. They are Sheepe and Calves that feek out affurance in that. I will speake to this fellow: whose Grave's this Sir ?

Clo. Mine Sir:

O a Pit of Clay for to be made, for such a Guift is meete

Ham, Ithinke ir be thine indeed: for thou lieft in't. Clo. You lye out on't Sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I doe not lye in't; and yet it ir mine.

Ham. Thou doft lye in't, to be in't and lay 'tis thine : tis for the dead, not for the quicke, therefore thou lyeft.

Clo. Tis a qui cke lye Sir, 't will a way agoine from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou digge it for ?

Clo. For no man Sir,

Ham. What woman then?

Clo For none perther.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

Clo. One that was a woman Sir; but reft her Soule, Thee's dead.

Hom. How absolute the knaue is? wee must speake by the Carde, or equinocation will vadoe vs : by the Lord Horario, thefe three years I have taken note of it, the Age is growne so picked, that the toe of the Pefant comes so neere the heeles of our Courties, hee galls his Kibe. How long haff thou been a Grane-maker?

Clo. Of all the dayes ith yeare, I came too't that day that our last King Hamles o'recame Forthibras,

Ham. How long is that fince?

Ch. Cannot you tell that? every foole can tell that : It was the very day, that young Hamlet was borne, hee that was mad, and fent into England.

Ham. I marry, why was he fent into England? Clo. Why, because he was mad; hee shall recouer his wits there; or if he do not, it's no great matter there.

278

Ham Why?

Clo. Twill not be feene in him there the men are as mad as he.

Nom. How came he mad? Cla. Very strangely they say Ham. How frangely i

Clo. Faith e'ene with loofing his wits.

Ham. Vpon what ground i

Co. Why heere in Denmarke: I have bin fixeteene heere, man and Boy thirty yeares.

Ham. How long will a man lie 'ith' earth ere he ros? Clo. Ifaith, if he be not rotten before he die (as we have many pocky Coarles now adaies, that will fearce hold the laying in) he will last you some eight yeare, or nine yeare. A Tanner will last you nine year e.

Ham. Why he, more then another?

Clo. Why fir, his hide is so tan'd with his Trade, that he will keepe out water a great while. And your water, is a fore Decayer of your horson dead body. Heres a Scull now: this Scul, has laine in the earth three & twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it ?

Clo. A whorefor inad Fellowes le was;

Whose doe you thinke it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

Clo. A pestlence on him for a mad Rogue, a pou'rds Flaggon of Renish on my head once. This same Scull Sir, this fame Scull fir, was Toricke Scull, the Kings lefter.

Ham. This? Clos E'ene that.

Ham. Let me see. Alas poore Yorick, I knew him Horasio, a fellow of infinite Ieft; of most excellent fancy, he hath borne me on his backe a thousand times: And how abhotred my Imagination is, my gorge rifes at it. Heere hung those lipps, that I have kiff I know not how oft.
VVhere be your libes now? Your Gambals? Your Songs? Your flashes of Metriment that were wont to fer the Table on a Rorej No one now to mock your own Iceting ? Quite chopfaine ? Now get you to my Ladies Chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thicke, to this favour the must come. Make her laugh at that: prythee Horatio tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that my Lord?

Hum. Dost thou thinke Alexander lookt o'this fa-

Hor. E'ene lo.

Han. And smelt so > Puh. Hor. E'enclo, my Lord.

Ham. To what base vies we may returne Horatio. Why may not Imagination trace the Noble dust of A.

lexarder, till he find it Ropping a bunghole.

Har. Twere to confider : to curiously to confider fo. Ham, No faith, not aiot. But to follow him thether with modeflie enough, & likelichood to lead it; as thus. Alexander died : Alexander was buried : Alexander returneth into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make Lome, and why of that Lome (whereto he was converted, might they not Ropp a Beere-barrell? Imperiall Cafur, dead and turn'd to clay. Might flop a hole to keepe the winde away. Oh, that that earth, which kept the world in awe. Should patch a Wall, t'expell the winters flaw.

> Enter King . Queene, Laertes, and a Coffin, with Lords attendant .

The Queenc, the Courtiers. Who is that they follow,

But fost, but fost, aside; heere comes the King.

And with such maimed rives ? This doth betoken, The Coarle they follow, did with disperate hand, Fore do it owne life; 'twas fome Efizic. Couch we a while, and mark

Lacr. What Cerimony elfe?

Ham. That is Lacrees, a very Noble youth: Marke, Lar. What Cerimony elfe!

Prieft. Her Obsequies have bin as farre inlarg'd. As we have warrantis, her death was doubtfull, And but that great Command, o're-Iwaies the order, She should in ground vnsanstified have lodg'd, Till the last Trumpet. For charitable praier, Shardes, Flints, and Peebles, should be thro wire on her, Yet heere she is allowed her Virgin Rites, Her Maiden frewments, and the bringing home Of Bell and Buriall.

Laer. Must there no more be done? Prief. No more be done:

We fliould prophane the feruice of the dead, To sing sage Requiem, and such rust to her As to peace-parted Soules.

Lacr. Lay her i'th' carth,

And from her faire and vapolluted flesh, May Violets spring. I tell thee (churlish Priest)
A Ministring Angell shall my Sister be, When thou lieft howling!

Ham. What, the faire Ophelia?

Queene. Sweets, to the Iweet farewell I hop'd thou should'st have bin my Hamlets wife ; I thought thy Bride-bed to have deckt (fweet Maid) And not t'have strew'd thy Grave.

Laer. Oh tertible woer, Fall ten times trebble, on that curied head Whole wicked deed, thy most Ingenious lence Depriu'd thee of. Hold off the earth a while, Till I have caught her once more in mine armes:

Leaps in the grave. Now pile your duft, vpon the quicke, and dead, Till of this flat a Mountaine you have made, To o're top old Pelion, or the skyish head

Ofblew Olympus. Ham. What is he, whose griefes Beares such an Emphasis? whose phrase of Sorrow

Conjure the wandring Starres, and makes them Rand Like wonder-wounded hearers ? This is L

Hamlet the Dane.

I.aer. The deuill take thy foule. Ham. Thou prefft not well, I prythee take thy fingers from my throat; Sir though I am not Spleenative, and rath, Yet have I something in me dangerous, Which let thy wifenesse feare Away thy hand.

King. Pluck them sfunder. Qu. Hamlet, Hamlet

Gen. Good my Lord be quiet.

Ham. Why I will fight with him vppon this Theme.

Vntill my eielids will no longer wag.

Qa. Ohmy Sonne, what Theame?

Ham. Ilou'd Ophelia; fortie thousand Brothers Could not (with all there quantitie of Loue) Make vp my summe. What wilt thou do for her?

King. Oh he is mad Larres, Qu. For love of God forbeare him.

Ham. Come show me what thou'lt doe. Woo't weepe ! Woo't fight? Woo't teare thy felfe? Woot drinke up Efile, eate a Crocodile?

Exil.

Ile doo't. Dost thou come heere to whine;
To outface me with leaping in her Graue?
Be buried quicke with her, and so will I.
And if thou prate of Mountaines; let them throw
Millions of Akers on vs; till our ground
Sindging his pate against the burning Zone,
Make Of a like a wart. Nay, and thous throuth,
Ile rant as well as thou.

Kin. This is meere Madneffe: And thus awhile the fit will worke on him: Anon as patient as the female Doue, When that her golden Cuplet are disclos'd; His flerge will fit dropping.

His filence will fit drooping. Ham. Heare you Sir:

What is the reason that you vie me thus?
I loud' you ever; but it is no matter:
Let Hercules himselfe doewhat he may,
The Cat will Mew, and Dogge will have his day.

Kin. I pray you good Horatio wait vpon him, Strengthen you patience is our last nights speech, Wee'l put the matter to the present push:
Good Gerinde set some watch over your Sonne,
This Grave shall have a living Monument:
An house of quiet shortly shall we see;
Till then, in patience our proceeding be.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this Sir; now let me see the other, You doe remember all the Circumstance.

Hor. Remember it my Lord?

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kinde of fighting,
That would not let me fleepe; me thought I lay
Worfe then the mutines in the Bilboes, rafhly,
(And praife be rafinefle for it) let vs know,
Out indiferetion fornetimes ferues vs well,
When our deare plots do paule, and that fhould teach vs,
There's a Diuinity that fhapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor. That is most certaine.

Ham. Vp from my Cabin
My sea-gowne scarst about me in the darke,
Grop'd I to finde out them; had my defire,
Finger'd their Packet, and in fine, withdrew
To mine owne roome againe, making so bold,
(My feares forgetting manners) to vnseale
Their grand Commission, where I found Haratio,
Ohroyall knauery: An exad command,
Larded with many seuerall forts of reason;
Importing Denmarks health, and Englands 200,
With hoo, such Bugges and Goblins in my life,
That on the supervize no leasure bated,
No not to stay the grinding of the Axe,
My head shoud be struck off.

Her. Ist possible?

Ham. Here's the Commission, read it at more seysure: But wilt thou heare me how I did proceed?

Hor. I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with Villaines, Ete I could make a Prologue to my braines, They had begun the Play. I fate me downe, Deuis'd a new Conimilion, wrote it faire, I once did hold it as our Statifts doe, A basenesse write faire; and laboured much How to forget that learning: but Sirnow, It did me Yeomans service: wilt thou know The effects of what I wrote?

Hor. I, good my Lord.

Ham. An earnest Conjuration from the King, As England was his faithfull Tributary, As love betweene them, as the Palme should flourish, As Peace should faill her wheaten Garland weare, And shad a Comma 'tweene their amities, And many such like Assis of great charge, That on the view and know of these Contents, Without debatement surther, more or lesse, He should the bearers put to sodaine death, Not shriving time allowed.

Hor. How was this feal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was Heaven ordinate; I had my fathers Signet in my Purse, Which was the Modell of that Danish Seale: Folded the Writ vp in forme of the other, Subscrib'd it, gav't th' impression, plac't it safely. The changeling never knowne: Now, the next day Was our Sea Fight, and what to this was sement, Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildensterne and Rosinerance, go too't.

Ham. Why man, they did make love to this imployment
They are not neere my Conscience; their debate
Doth by their owne infinuation grow:
'Tis dangerous, when the baser nature comes
Betweene the passe, and fell incensed points
Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a King is this?

Ham. Does it nor, thinkft thee, stand me now upon He that hath kil'd my King, and whor'd my Mother, Popt in betweene th'election and my hopes, Throwne out his Angle for my proper life, And with such coozenage; is't not perfect conscience, To quir him with this arme? And is't not to be damn'd To let this Canker of our nature come.

Hor. It must be shortly knowne to him from England What is the iffue of the businesse there.

Ham. It will be short,

The interim's mine, and a mans life's no more
Then to say one: but I am very forry good Horasio,
That to Lasties I forgot my selse;
For by the image of ay Cause, I see
The Portraiture of his; I se count his fauours:
But sure the brauery of his griefe did put me
Into a Towring passion.

Hor. Peace, who comes heere?

Enter young Of ticke. (marke.

Ofr. Your Lordship is right welcome back to DenHam, I humbly thank you Sir, dost know this watershie?
Hor. No my good Lord.

Han. Thy state is the more gracious; for 'tis a vice to know him: he hath much Land, and fertile; let a Beast be Lord of Beasts, and his Crib shall stand at the Kings Mcse; 'tis a Chowgh; but as I saw spacious in the possession of dirt.

Off. Sweet Lord, if your friendship were at leyfure, I should impart a thing to you from his Maiesty.

Ham. I will receive it with all diligence of spiritsput your Bonet to his right vse, its for the head.

Of. I thanke your Lordship, tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe mee'tis very cold, the winde is Northerly.

Off. It is indifferent cold my Lord indeed.

Ham. Mee thinkes it is very foultry, and hot for my Complexion.

Olescho

Ofr. Exceedingly, my Lord, It is very foultry, as 'twere I cannot tell how : but my Lord, his Maicfly bad me fignifie to you, that he ha's laid a great wager ou your bead: Sir, this is the matter.

Ham. I beseech you remember.

Ofr. Nay, in good faith, for mine case in good faith: Sir, you are not ignorant of what excellence Larrier is at his weapon.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Ofr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons; but well.

Of. The fir King ha's wag'd with him fix Barbary Hor. fes. againft the which he impon'd as I take it, fixe French Rapiers and Poniards, with their affignes, as Girdle, Hangers or fo: three of the Carriages infalth are very deare to fancy, very responsiue to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberall conceit.

Ham. What call you the Carriages?

Ofr. The Carriages Sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would bee more Germaine to the matter: If we could carry Cannon by our fides; I would it might be Hangers till then; but on fixe Barbary Horfes against fixe French Swords: their Assignes, and three liberall conceited Carriages, that's the French but against the Danish; why is this impon'd as you call it?

Ofr. The King Sir, hath laid that in a dozen paffes betweene you and him, hee shall not exceed you three hits; He hath one twelve for mine, and that would come to imediatetryall, if your Lordship would vouchsafe the Answere.

Ham. Howif Ianswere no?

Ofr. I meane my Lord, the opposition of your person in tryall.

Ham. Sir, I will walke heere in the Hall; if it please his Maiestie, 'tis the beathing time of day with me; let the Foyles bee brought, the Gentleman willing, and the King hold his purpole; I will win for him if I can: if not, He gaine nothing but my shame, and the odde hits.

Ofr. Shall I redeliver you ee'n fo? Ham. To this effect Sir, after what flourish your na-

Ofr. I commend my duty to your Lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours; hee does well to commend it himselfe, there are no tongues else for's tongue.

Hor. This Lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did Complie with his Dugge before hee fuck't it: thus had he and mine more of the same Beaux that I know the droffie age dotes on; only got the tune of the time, and outward habite of encounter, 2 kinde of yesty collection, which carries them through & through the most fond and winnowed opinions; and doe but blow them to their tryalls: the Bubbles are out

Hor. You will lose this wager, my Lord.

Ham. I doe not thinke so, fince he went into France, I have beene in continuall practice; I shall winne at the oddes : but thou wouldest not thinke howall heere about my heart: but it is no matter,

Her. Ney, good my Lord.

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kinde of gain-giuing as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your minde diflike any thing obey. I will forestall their repaire hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defie Augury; there's a speciall Providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come: if it beenet to come, it will beenow: if it be not now, yer it will come; the readmeffe is all, fince no man ha's ought of what he leaves. What is't to leave be-

Enter King, Queens, Learnes and Lords, wah other Asses. dants with Foyles, and Governless, a Table and Flagons of Wine on 11.

Kin. Come Hamler, come, and take this hand from me. Ham. Give me your pardon Sir, I've done you wrong, But pardon't as you are a Gentleman. This presence knowes, And you must needs have heard how I am punishe With fore diffraction? What I have done

That might your nature honour, and exception Roughly awake, I heere proclaime was modneste : Was t Hamlet wrong'd Lacries? Never Hamlet.
If Hamlet from himselfe be cane away: And when he's not himselfe, do's wrong Lacres, Then Hamles does it not, Hemles denies it : Who does it then? His Madneffe? If t be fo, Hamlet is of the Faction that is wrong'd, His madnesse is poore Hamlets Energy. Sir, in this Audience, Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd enill, Free me lo farre in your most generous thoughts, That I have shot mine Arrow o're the house, And hurr my Mother.

Leer. I sm satisfied in Nature, Whose motive in this case should flime me most To my Revenge. But 10 my termes of Honor I sand aloofe, and will no reconcilement, Till by some elder Masters of knowne Honor, I have a voyce, and president of peace To keepe my name vngorg'd. But till that time, I do receive your offer'd love like love, And wil not wrong it.

Ham. I do embrace it freely, And will this Brothers wager frankely play. Give vs the Foyles: Come on.

Leer. Come one for me.

Ham. Hebe your foile Laertes, in mine ignorance, Your Skill shall like a Starre i'th'darkest night, Stickeftery offindeede.

Laer. You mocke me Sir. Ham. No by this hand,

King. Give them the Foyles yong Ofricke, Coulen Hamlet, you know the wager.

Ham. Verie well my Lord,

Your Grace hath laide the oddes ath weaker fide.

King. I do not feare it, I have leene you both:

But since he is better'd, we have therefore oddes.

Leer. This is too heavy, Let me see another.

Hom. This likes me well,

These Foyles have all a length. Properto play.

Ofricke. I my good Lord. Kmg. Set me the Stopes of wine vpon that Table: If Hanlet give the first, or second hit, Or quit in answer of the third exchange,

Let all the Battlements their Ordinance fire, The King shal drinke to Hamlets better breath And in the Cup an vition Ihal he throw Richer then that, which foure successive Kings In Denmarkes Crowne have worne,

Glut

Give me the Cups, And let the Kettle to the Trumpets speake, The Trumpet to the Cannoneer without, The Cannons to the Heavens, the Heaven to Earth, Now the King drinkes to Hamber. Come, begin, And you the Judges beare a wary eye.

Ham. Come on fir, Laer. Come on fir.

Ham. One.

They play.

Play.

Laer. No.

Ham. ludgement.

Of. A hit, a very palpable his

Lacr. Well: againe.

King. Stay, give me drinke. Hamler, this Pearle is thine,

Here's to thy health. Give him the cup.

Trumpets found, and hot goes off. Ham. Ileplay this bout first, fet by a-while.

Come: Another hit; what lay you?

Laer. Atouch, a touch, I do confesse.

King. Our Sonne shall win,

20, He's fat, and scant of breath.

Heere's a Napkin, rub thy browes, The Queene Carowles to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good Madam.

King. Gertrude, do not drinke. Qu. I will my Lord;

I pray you pardonme.

King. It is the poyfon'd Cup, it is too late. Ham. I dare not drinke yet Madam,

Qu. Come, let me wipe thy face. Laer. My Lord, Ile hit him now.

King. I do not thinke't.

Laer. And yet'tis almost 'gainst my conscience.

Ham. Come for the third. Laerces, you but dally,

I pray you paffe with your best violence, I am affear'd you make a wanton of me.

Lair. Say you fo? Come on. Of. Nothing neither way. Laer. Haue at you now,

In scuffing they change Rapiers.

King. Part them, they are incens'd.

Ham. Nay come, againe. Ofr. Looke to the Queene there hoa.

Hor. They bleed on sch fides, How is t my Lord? Ofr. How is't Laurent?

Lacr. Why as a Woodcocke Tomine Sprindge, Ofricke,

I am luftly kill'd with mine owne Treacherie.

Ham. How does the Queene? King. She founds to fee them bleede. Qu. No, no, the drinke, the drinke.

Oh my deere Hamlet, the drinke, the drinke, Lampoyson'd

Ham. Oh Villany! How? Let the doore be lock'd. Treacherie, feeke it out.

Laer. It is heere Hamles. Hamlet . thou art fisine, No Medicine in the world can do thee good. In thee, there is not halfe an house of life; The Treacherous Instrument is in thy hand. Vnbated and envenom'd: the foule practife fath turn'd it selfe on me. Loe, heere I lye, Veuer to tife againe: Thy Mothers poylon'd: I can no more, the King, the King's too blame, Ham. The point envenom'd too. Then venome to thy worke. Hurts the King.

All. Treason, Treason.

King. O yet defend me Friende, I am but hure.

Ham. Heerethou incestuous, murdrous, Damned Dane,

Drinke off this Potion : Is thy Vnion heere?

Follow my Mother. Laer. He is iuftly feru'd. King Dyes

It is a poylon temp'red by himselfe:

Exchange for givenesse with me, Noble Hamler; Mine and my Fathers death come not upon thee,

Nor thine on me.

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it, I follow thee. I am dead Horatio, wretched Queene adiew. You that looke pale, and tremble at this chance, That are but Mutes or audience to this acte: Had I but time (as this fell Sergeant death Is frick'd in his Arreft) oh I could tell you. But let it be: Horatio, I am dead, Thou liu'st, report me and my causes right To the vn latisfied.

Hor. Neuer beleeue it. I am more an Antike Roman then a Dane: Heere's yet some Liquorlest.

Ham. At th'att a man, give me the Cup. Let go, by Heaven 1le haue't.

Oh good Horatio, what a wounded name, (Things standing thus voknowne) shall live behind me-If thou did'it ever hold me in thy heart,

Absent thee from selicitie awhile And in this harsh world draw thy breath in paine, To tell my Storie.

March afacre off, and shout weehin. What was like noyfels this?

Enter Ofricke.

Ofr. Yong Fortinbres, with conquest come fro Poland Toth'Amballadors of England gives this warlike velly. Ham. Oldye Horaso:

The potent poyfon quite ore-crowes my spirit, I cannot live to heare the Newes from England, But I do prophesie th'election lights On Fortinbras, he ha's my dying voyce,

So tell him with the occurrents more and leffe, Which have folicited. The rest is silence. O,0,0,0, Dyes

Hora. Now cracke a Noble heart: Goodnight Sweet Prince, And flights of Angels fing thee to thy selt, Why do's the Drumme come hither?

Enter Fortinbras and English Ambassador, with Drumme, Colours, and Assendants.

Fortin. Where is this fight? Hor. What is it ye would fee ;

If ought of wae, or wonder, ceale your fearch.

For. His quarry cries on hauocke. Ch proud death, What feast is toward in thing eternal! Cell.

That Refiner area and Guidenferne are dead:
Where should we have our chankes to Har. Not from his mouth,
Had it th'abilitie of life to thanke you:
He never gave command'ment for their death.
But since so iumper you this bloodie question,
You from the Polake warres, and you from England
Are here artived. Give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view,
And let me speake to th'yet vinknowing world,
How these things came about. So shall you heare
Of carnall, bloodie, and vinarurall acts,
Ofaces dentall iudgements, casuall stugenters
Of death's put on by cunning, and forcid cause,
And in this vipshot, purposes mistooke,
Falne on the Inventors heads. All this can I

TRAGEDIE KING LEAR.

e Adus Primus. Sciena Prima.

Enter Kent, Gloncester, and Edmond.

Thought the King had more affected the Duke of Albany, then Cornwall, Glon. It did alwayes feeme fo to vs : But now in the division of the Kingdome, it sppeares not which of the Dukes hee valewes most, for qualities are so weigh'd, that corrolity in nerther, can make choise of eithers moity. Kent. Is not this your Son, my Lord?

Glow. His breeding Sir, hath bin at my charge. I have so often blush'd to acknowledge him, that now I am

Kent. I cannot conceiue you.

Glon. Sir, this yong Fellowes mother could; wherevpon the grew round womb'd, and had indeede (Sir) a Sonne for her Cradle, ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault i

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the Isfue of it, being fo proper.

Glou. But I have a Sonne, Sir, by order of Law, some yeere elder then this; who, yet is no deerer in my account, though this Knaue came somthing sawcily to the world before he was fent for : yet was his Mother fayre, there was good sport at his making, and the horson must be acknowledged. Doe you know this Noble Gentleman, Edmond?

Edm. No, my Lord.

Glou. My Lord of Kent:

Remember him heereafter, as my Honourable Friend.

Fdm. My services to your Lordship.

Kens. I must loue you, and suc to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I fhall study deserving.

Clou. He hath bin out nine yeares, and away he chall againe. The King is comming.

Sounes. Efter King Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Goverill, Regan, Cordelia, and attendants.

Lear. Attend the Lords of France & Burgundy, Gloster. Glou. 1 (hall, my Lord. Lear. Meane sime we shal expresse our darker purpose.

Give me the Map there. Know, that we have divided In three our Kingdome and tis our fast intent, To shake all Cares and Businesse from our Age, Conferring them on yenger Arengths, while we Vnbutthen'd crawle toward death. Out for of Corneal, And you out no leffe louing Sonne of Albany,

We have this houre a constant will to publish Our daughters scuerall Dowers, that turure strife May be prevented now. The Princes, France & Burgandy, Great Rivals in our yongest daughters love, Long in our Court, have made their amorous foiourne, And heere are to be answer'd. Tell me my daughters (Since now we will diveft vs both of Rule, Interest of Territory, Cares of State) Which of you shall we say doth love vs most, That we, our largest bountie may extend Where Nature doth with merit challenge. Concrett, Our eldest borne, speake first. Gon, Sir, I loue you more then word can weild 9 mater, Decrer then eye-fight, space, and libertie,

Beyond what can be valewed, rich or rare, No lesse then life, with grace, health, beauty, honor: As much as Childe ere lou'd, or Father found. A loue that makes breath poore, and speech unable, Beyond all manner of so much I loue you.

Cor. What shall Cordelia speake? Love, and be filent. Lear. Of all these bounds even from this Line, to this, With shadowie Forrests, and with Champains rich'd With plenteous Rivers, and wide-skitted Meades We make thee Lady. To thine and Albaner issues
Be this perpetuall. Y that sayes our second Daughter?
Our deerest Regan, wife of Cernwall?

Reg. 1 am made of that felfe-mettle 25 my Sifter, And prize me at her worth. In my true heart, I finde the names my very deede of loue: Orely the comes too thort, that I professe My felfe an enemy to all other loyes, Which the most precious square of sense professes, And finde I am alone felicitate In your deere Highnesse love.

Cor. Then poore Cordelia, And yet not lo. fince I am fure my loue's

More ponderous then my tongue. Lear. To thee, and thine hereditaric ever, Remaine this ample third of our faire Kingdomea No lesse in space, validitie, and pleasure Then that conferr'd on Gonerall. Now our Joy, Although our last and least : to whose yong love, The Vines of France, and Milke of Burgundie, Striue to be intereft. What can you fay, to draw A third, more opilent then your Sifters? Speake.

Cor. Nothing my Lord. Lear. Nothing?

Cor.

The Tragedie of King Lear.

Cor. Nothing.

icar. Nothing will come of nothing speake against Cor. Vnhappie that I am, I cannot heaue

My heart into my mouth, I loue your Maiefly According to my bond, no more nor lelle.

Lear. How, how Cordelia' Mend your speech a little, Least you may matte your Fortunes.

Car. Good my Lord, You have begot me, bred me, lou'd me, I returne those duties backe as are right fit, Obey you, Love you, and most Honous you. Why have my Sifters Husbands, if they fay They love you all ? Happily when I shall wed. That Lord, whole hand must take my plight, shall carry Halfe my love with him, halfe my Care, and Dutie, Sure I shall never marry like my Sifters, Lear But goes thy heart with this?

Cor. I my good Lord.

Lear. So young, and so vntender?

Cor. So young my Lord, and true.

Lear. Let it be fo, thy truth then be thy dowre: For by the Gered radience of the Sunne, The mileties of Heccat and the night: By all the operation of the Orbes, From whom we do exist, and cease to be, Heere I disclaime all my Paternall care, Propinquity and property of blood, And as a firanger to my heart and me. Hold thee from this for euer. The barbarous Scythian, Or he that makes his generation meffes To gorge his appetite, shall to my before Be as well neighbour'd, pittied, and relecu'd, As thou my fometime Daughter.

Kens Good my Liege. Lear. Peace Kent,

Come not betweene the Dragon and his wrath, I lou'd her most, and thought to fer my rest On her kind nurfery. Hence and avoid my light : So be my graue my peace, as here I give Her Fathers hears from her; call France, who flirres? Call Burgundy Cornwall and Albanie, With my two Daughters Dowres, digeft the third, Let prido which the cals plainnesse, marry her : I doe invett you toyntly with my power, Prelieminence, and all the large effects That troope with Maicsty Our selfe by Monthly course, With referuation of an hundred Knights, By you to be fuftain'd, fhallour abode Make with you by due turne, onely we shall recaine The name, and all th'addition to a King : the Sway, Revennew, Execution of the rest, Beloved Sonnes be yours, which to confirme, This Coronet part betweene you.

Kent. Royall Lear, Whom I have ever honor'd as my King, Lou'd as my Father, as my Master follow'd, As my great Patron thought on in my praiers.

Le. The bow is bent & drawne, make from the shaft. Kent. Let it fall rather, though the forke inuade The region of my heart, be Kent vnmannerly, When Lear is mad, what wouldest thou do old man? Think'st thou that dutie shall have dread to speake, When power to flattery bowes? To plainnelle honour's bound, When Maiesty falls to folly, referue thy state, And in thy best consideration checke

This hideous tafinefle, answere my bie, my wadgement: Thy yongest Daughter do's not love thee leaft, Not are those empty hearted, whole low founds Reserbe no hollownesse.

Lear. Kens, on thy life no more.

Kent. My life I neuer held but as pawne To wage against thine enemies nere seare to loofe it, Thy lafety being motive. Lear. Out of my light.

Rem. See better Lear, and let me fill terrains The true blanke of thine eie.

Kew. Nowby Apollo, Lent. Nowby Apollo, King Thou swear. A thy Gods in vaine.

Lear. O Vallall | Mileream. Alb. Car. Deare Six forbeare.

Kent. Kill thy Physition, and thy fee bestow Vpon the foule difeafe, renoke thy guift, Or whil'ft I can vent clamour from my throate, He tell thee thou doft cuill

Lea. Heare me retreant, on thine allegeance heare me; That thou haft fought to make vs breake our vowes, Which we durft neuer yet; and with ftrain d pride, To come betwize our fentences, and our power. Which, nor our nature, nor our place can beare; Our potencie made good, take thy reward. Fine dayes we do allot thee for provision, To shield thee from disafters of the world, And on the fixt to turne thy hated backe V pon our kingdome; if on the tenth day following, Thy banish trunke be found in our Dominions, The moment is thy death, away. By Imprier, This shall not be reuok'd,

Rear Fare thee well King, fish thus thou wils appeare Freedome lives hence, and banishment is here; The Gods to their deere shelter take thee Maid, That juffly think ft, and haft most rightly faid : And your large speeches, may your deeds approve, That good effects may fpring from words of love: Thus Kent, O Princes, bids you all adem, Hee'l shape his old course, in a Country new. Ezu.

> Flourish. Enser Glofter with France, and Burgurdy, Assendams.

Cor Heere's France and Burgundy, my Noble Lord Lear. My Lord of Bugundic, We first addresse roward you, who with this King Hath rivald for our Daugheer; what in the least Will you require in present Dower with her, Or cease your quell of Love?

Bur. Most Royall Maiesty, I crave no more then hath your Highnesse offer'd, Nor will you tender leffe?

Lear. Right Noble Burgandy, When the was deare to vs, we did hold her fo, But now her price is fallen: Sir, there the stands, If ought within that little feeming fubflance, Or all of it with our displeasure piec'd, And nothing more may firly like your Grace, Shee's chere, and the is yours.

Bur. I know no answer. Lear. Will you with those infirmities she owes, Vnfriended, new adopted to our bate. Dow'rd with our curie, and Branger'd with our oath, Take bet ordeque het.

Bur. Par-

Bur. Pardon me Royali Sir,

Election makes not vp in fuch conditions.

Le. Then leave her fir, for by the powre that made me, I tell you all her wealth. For you great King, I would not from your love make such a stray To match you where I hate, therefore befeech you T'auert your liking a more worthier way, Then on a wretch whom Nature is asham'd

Almost t'acknowledge hers. Fr4. This is most strange, That the whom even but now, was your object. The argument of your praise, balme of your age, The best, the deerest, should in this trice of time Commit a thing to monstrous, to dismantle So many folds of fauout: fure her offence Must be of such vnnaturall degree, That monsters it: Or your fore-voucht affection Fall into taint, which to beleeue of her

Must be a faith that reason without miracle

Should never plant in me.
Cor. I yet beseech your Maiesty. If for I want that glib and oylie Art, To speake and purpose not, since what I will intend, He do't before I speake, that you make knowne It is no vicious blot, murcher, or foulenesse, No vnchaste action or dishonoured step That hath depriu'd me of your Grace and fauour, But even for want of that, for which I am richer, A still soliciting eye, and such a tongue, That I am glad I have not, though not to have it, Hath loft me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou had'ft .

Not beene borne, then not t haue pleas'd me better. Fra. Isit but this ? A tardinesse in natute,

Which often leaves the history vnspoke That it intends to do : my Lord of Burgundy, What fay you to the Lady? Loue's not loue When it is mingled with regards, that stands Aloofe from th'intire point, will you have her?

She is herselfe a Dowrie.

Bur. RoyallKing, Give but that portion which your felfe propos'd, And here I take Cordelas by the hand, Dutchelle of Burgundie.

Lear. Nothing, I have sworne, I am firme. Bur. I am forry then you have so lost a Father, That you must look husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundie, Since that respect and Fortunes are his love,

I shall not be his wife.

Fra. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich being poore, Most choise forsaken, and most lou'd despis'd, Thee and thy vertues here I feize vpon, Be it lawfull I rake vp what's cast away. Gods, Gods! 'Tis ftrange, that from their cold'ft neglect My Love should kindle to enflam'd respect Thy dowrelesse Daughter King, throwne to my chance. Is Queene of vs. of ours, and our faire France: Not all the Dukes of watrish Burgundy Can buy this vnpriz'd precious Maid of me. Bid them farewell Cordelia, though vokinde, Thou loofest here a better where to finde.

Lear. Thou haft her France, let her be thine, for we Haue no such Daughter, nor shall ever see That face of hera againe, therfore be gone, Without our Grace, our Loue, out Benizon:

Come Noble Burgundie, Flourisb. Fra. Bid farwell to your Sifters.

Cor. The lewels of our Father, with wash'deie s Cordelia leaues you, I know you what you are, And like a Sifter am most loth to call Your faults as they are named. Loue well our Father: To your professed bosomes I commit him, But yet alas, flood I within his Grace, I would prefer him to a better place, So farewell to you both.

Regn. Presente not vs our dutie.

Be to content your Lord, who hath receiu'd you At Fortunes almes, you have obedience scanted, And well are worth the want that you have wanted,

Cor. Time shall vnfold what plighted cunning hides, Who couces faules, at last with shame derides:

Well may you prosper.
Fra. Come my faire Cordelia. Exit France and Cor. Gon. Sifter, it is not little I haueto fay, Of what most neerely apperraines to vs both,

I thinke our Pather will hence to night. (with vs. Reg. That's most certaine, and with you: next moneth Gon. You see how full of changes his age is, the obfernation we have made of it hath beene little; he alwaies lou'd our Sifter most, and with what poore judgement he hath now cast her off, appeares too groffely.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age, yet he hath euer but slenderly knowne himselse.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath bin but rash, then must we looke from his age, to receive not alone the impersections of long ingrassed condition, but therewithall the viruly way-wardnesse, that infirme and cholericke yeares bring with them.

Reg. Such vnconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kents banishment.

Gon. There is further complement of leave-taking betweene France and him, pray you let vs fit together, if our Father carry authority with fuch disposition as he beares, this laft furrender of his will but offend vs.

Reg. We shall further thinke of it.

Gon. We must do something, and ith' heate. Exeunt.

Love cooles, friendship salls off. Brothers diuide. In Cities, mutinies; in Countries, difcord; in Pallaces, Treason; and the Bond crack'd, 'twixt Sonne and Father. This villaine of mine comes under the prediction; there's Son against Father, the King fals from byas of Nature, there's Father against Childe. We have seene the hest of our time. Machinarions, hollownesse, treacherie, and all ruinous diforders follow vs difquierly to our Graues. Find out this Villain, Edmond, it shall lofe thee pothing, do it carefully ; and the Noble & true-harted Kent banish'd; his offence, bonesty. Tis ftrange. Exit Bast. This is the excellent soppery of the world, that when we are licke in fortune, often the furfers of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our disasters, the Sun, the Moone, and Starres, as if we were villaines on necessitie, Fooles by heavenly compulsion, Knaues, Theeves, and Treachers by Sphericall predominance. Drunkerds, Lyars, and Adulterers by an inforc'd ebedience of Planacary influence; and all that we are cuill in, by a; diune throsting on. Sie. I am none of thele my Lord,

I befeech your pardon.

Low. Do you bandy lookes with me, you Rascall?

Sre. He not be ftrucken my Lord,

Rose. Nor tript ocither, you bale Foot-ball plater.

Lew. I thanke thee fellow.

Thou feru'st me, and He love thee.

Rout. Come sir, arife, away, lle teach you differences: away, away, if you will measure your lubbers length againe, carry, but away, goe too, have you wisedome, so.

Lear. Now my friendly knaue I thanke thee, there's earcest of thy service.

Enter Foole,

Parle. Let me hire him roo, here's my Coxcombe. Lear. How dow my pretty knaue, how dost thou?

Foole. Sirrah, you were best take my Coxcombe.

Lear. Why my Boy !

Foole. Why? for taking ones part that's out of favour, nay, & thou canft not foule as the wind fits, thou'lt caich colde thortly, there take my Coxcombes why this fellow ha's banish'd rwo on's Daughters, and did the third a bleifing against his will, if thou follow him, thou mult areds weare my Coxcombe. How now Nunckle? would I had two Coxcombes and two Daughters.

Lear. Why my Boy?

Fool If I gave them all my living, I'ld keepe my Coxcombes my (elfe, there's mine, beg another of thy Daughters.

Lear. Take heed Sirrah, the whip. whipe out, when the Lady Brach may frend by thefre and flinke.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me. Foole. Sitha, lie ceach thee a speech

Lear. Do.

Foole. Marke it Nuncle: Have more then thou showest Speake leffe then thou knoweft, Lend leffe then thou owest. Ride more then thou goeft, Learne more then thou trowell, Set leffe then thou throwest; Leaue thy drinke and thy whore, And keepe in a dore, And thou shalt have more, Then two tens to a fcore.

Kent. This is nothing Foole.

Foole. Then 'tis like the breath of an vafeed Lawyer, you gave me nothing for't, can you make no vie of nothing Nuncle?

Lear. Why no Boy,

Nothing can be made out of nothing,

Foole. Prythee tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to, he will not beleeue a Foole.

Lear. A bitter Poole.

Foole. Do'st thou know the difference my Boy, betweene a bltter Foole, and a sweet one.

Low, No Lad, reach me.

Foole. Nunckie, give me an egge, and The give thee two Crownes.

Law. What two Crownes shall they be ?

Fools. Why after I have cur the eggel'th'middle and eate up the meate, the two Crowner of the egges when thos clouest thy Crownes i'th' middle, and gau'st away both parts, thou boar'A thine Affe on thy backe o're the dure, thou had'ft little wit in thy bald crowne, when thou gau'ft thy golden one away; if I speake like my selse to Fooles had nere lette grace in a yeere, For wilconen are growne foppilla,

And know not how their with to weere, Their manners are fo spifh.

U. When were you wont to be fo fall of Songs firrah? Poole. I have vied it Nunckle, ere fince thou mad'it thy Daughters thy Mothers, for when thou gau'fl them the rod, and put'll downe thing owne breeches, then they For sodaine loy did weepe,

And I for fortow fung,

That fach a King should play bo-peepe,

And goe the Foole among

Pry'thy Nunckle keepe a Schoolemafter that can teach thy Poole to lie, I would faine learne to lie, Leer. And you lie firrab, weel have you whipe.

Foole. I marvell what kin thou and thy daughters are they't have me whipt for speaking true: thou'lt have me whips for lying, and sometimes I am whips for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o'thing then a foole, and yet I would not be thee Nunckle, thou hall pared thy wit o'both fides, and left nothing i'th'middle; beere comes one o'the parings.

Enter Contril.

Law. How now Daughter? What makes that Fronder on? You are too much of late i'th' frowne.

Foole. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadft no need to care for her frowning, now thou are an O without a figure, I am better then thou art now, I am a Foole, chou are nothing. Yes for looch I will hold my rongue, lo your face bids me, though you lay nothing. Mum, mum, he that keepes nor craft, not crum, Weary of all, shall want fome. That's a sheal'd Pescod.

Gon. Not only Sir this, your all-ly cear'd Foole, But other of your infolent recinne
Do hourely Carpe and Quarrell, breaking forth In ranke, and (not to be endur'd) riots Sir. I had rhought by making this well knowne vato you, To have found a fafe redreffe, but now grow fearefull By what your felfe too late have spoke and done, That you proted this course, and put it on By your allowance, which if you hould, the fank Would not scape censure not the redreffes fleepe, Which in the tender of a wholefome weale, Might in their working do you that offence, Which elle were shame, that then necessitie

Will call different proceeding.
Foole. For you know Nuackle, the Hedge Sparrow fed the Cuckoo fo long, that it's had it head bit off by it young, so out went the Candle, and we were left darkling

Lear. Are you our Daughrer? Gon. I would you would make vie of your good wile (Whereof I know you are fraught), and put away Thefe dispositions, which of late transport you From what you rightly are.

Foods. May

Excis.

Poole. May not an Asse know, when the Care drawes the Hotle ?

Whoop Jugge I love thee.

Lear. Do's any heere know me?

This is not Lear:

Do's Lear walke thus? Speake thus? Where are his ejes? Either his Notion weakens, his Discernings Are Lethargied. Ha! Waking ? Tis not lo? Who is it that can tell me who I am?

Foole. Lears Shadow.

Lear. Your name, faire Gentlewoman? Gon. This admiration Sir, is much o'th'fauous Of other your new prankes. I do beseech you To vnderstand my purposes aright: As you are Old, and Reverend, should be Wise. Heere do you keepe a hundred Knights and Squites, Men fo diforder'd, fo debosh'd, and bold, That this our Court infected with their manners, Shewes like a riotous Inne; Epicurisme and Lust Makes it more like a Tauerne, or a Brothell, Then a grac'd Pallace. The shame it felfe doth speake For iustant remedy. Be then defir'd By her, that elfe will take the thing fhe begges, A little to disquantity your Traine, And the remainders that shall full depend, To be such men as may before your Age, Which know themselves, and you. Lear. Darkneffe, and Diuels.

Saddle my horses : call my Traine rogether. Degenerate Baftard, He not trouble thee; Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You frike my people, and your disorder'd rable, mak: Seruants of their Betters.

Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents 1 Is it your will, speake Sir ? Prepare my Horses. Ingratitude! thou Marble-hearted Fiend, More hideous when thou shew's thee in a Child, Then the Sea-monster.

Alb. Pray Sir be patient. Lear. Detested Kite, thou lyest. My Traine are men of choice, and rarest pares, That all particulars of dutie know. And in the most exact regard, support The worships of their name. O most small fault, How vgly did of thou in Cordelia Thew? Which like an Engine, wrencht my frame of Nature From the fixt place: drew from my heart all loue, And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear! Beate at this gate that let thy Folly in, And thy deere Iudgement out. Go,go,my people.

Alb My Lord, I am guiltleffe, as I am ignorant

Of what hath moved you

Lear. It may be so, my Lord. Heare Nature, heare deere Goddelle, heare: Suspend thy purpose, if thou did'A intend To make this Creature fruitfull: Into her Wombe convey flirrility, Drie vp in her the Organs of increase, And from her derogate body, neuer fpring A Babe to honor her. If the must teeme, Crease her childe of Spleene, that it may live And be arhwart disnatur'd corment to her. Let it frampe wrinkles in her brow of youth, With cadent Teares fret Channels in her checker, Turne all her Mothers paines, and benefits To laughter, and contempt: That the may feele, How tharper then a Serpents tooth it is, To have a thankleffe Childe, Away, zway.

Alb. Novi Gods that weadore, Whereof comes this?

Gon. Neuer afflict your felfe to know more of it : But let his disposition have that scope As docage gives iz

Enter Lear,

Lear. What fiftie of my Followers as a slap? Within a fortnight?

Alb. What's the matter, Sir?

Lear. He tell thee: Life and death, I am asham'd

That thou half power to shake my manhood thus, That these hot teares, which breake from me personce

Should make thee worth them, Blaftes and Fogges vpon thee :

Th'vntented woundings of a Fathers curfe Pierce euerie sense about thee. Old fond eyes, Beweepe this cause againe, He plucke ye out, And cast you with the waters that you loofe

To temper Clay. Had Let it be fo.

I have another daughter, Who I am fure is kinde and comfortable : When the shall heare this of thee, with her nailes Shee'lfleathy Woluish visage. Thou shalt finde, That He resume the shape which thou dost thinke

I have cast off for ever.

Gon. Do you marke that? Alb. I cannot be so partial! Gonerill,

To the great loue I beare you.

Gon. Pray you content. What Ofwald, hoa? You Sir, more Knaue then Foole, after your Master.

Foole. Nunkle Lear, Nunkle Lear, Tarry, take the Foole with thee: A Fox, when one has eaught her, And fuch a Daughter, Should fure to the Slaughter. If my Cap would buy a Halter

So the Foole foll wes after. Gon. This man hath had good Counfell,

A hundred Knights?

'Tis politike, and fafe to let him keepe At point a hundred Knights: yes, that on everie dreame, Each buz, each fancie, each complaint, dislike, He may enguard his dotage with their powres, And hold our lives in mercy. Ofwald, I fay.

Alb. Well, you may feare too farre. Gon. Saser then truft too farre: Let me fill take away the harmes I feare, Not seare still to be taken. I know his heart, What he hath veter'd I have writ my Sifter: If the fustaine him, and his hundred Knights When I have shew'd th'vnfitnesse.

Enser Steward.

How now Ofwald?

What have you writ that Letter to my Sister? Siew. I Madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse, Informe her full of my particular feare, And thereto adde fuch reasons of your owne, As may compactit more. Get you gone,

And hasten your returne; no, no, my Lord, This milky gentleneffe, and course of yours Though I condemne not, yet vnder pardon Your are much more at task for want of wisedome,

Then praised for harmefull mildnesse.

Alb. How farte your eies may pierce I cannot tell; Striuing to better, oft we marre what's well-

Gon. Nay then Alb. Well, well, the uent.

Exeure

Scena Quinta.

Enter Lear, Kent, Gentleman, and Foole.

Lear. Go you before to Glofter with these Letters; acquaint my Daughter no further with any thing you know, then comes from her demand out of the Letter, if your Dilligence be not speedy, I shall be there afore

Kent. I will not sleepe my Lord, till I haue delivered your Letter.

Foole. If a mans braines were in's heeles, wert not in danger of kybes?

Lear. I Boy.

Foole. Then I prythec be merry, thy wit shall not go

Lear. Ha, ha, ha.

Fool. Shalt fee thy other Daughter will vie thee kindly, for though the's as like this, as a Crabbe's like an Apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. What can'ft tell Boy ?

Foole. She will tafte as like this as, a Crabbe do's to a Crab: thou canst tell why ones note stands i'th'middle on's face?

Foole. Why to keepe ones eyes of either fide's nofe, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong.

Foole. Can'ft tell how an Oyster makes his shell?

Foole. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a Snaile ha's a house.

Lear. Why?
Fools. Why to put's head in, not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his hornes without a cafe.

Lear. I will forget my Nature, fo kind a Father ! Be my Horffes ready?

Foole. Thy Asses are gone about 'em; the reason why the feuen Starres are no mo then feuen, is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight.

Foole. Yes indeed, thou would'st make a good Foole. Lear. To tak't againe perforce; Monster Ingratitude! Foole. If thou wert my Foole Nunckle, Il'd haue thee beaten for being old before thy time-

Lear, How's that?

Foole. Thou shouldst not have bin old, till thou hadst bin wise.

Lear. Olet me not be mad, not mad sweet Heaven: keepe me in temper, I would not be mad. How now are the Horses ready :

Gens. Ready my Lord. Lear. Come Boy.

Fool, She that's a Maid now, or laugha at my departure Shall not be a Mald long, unleffe things be cut fhorter.

Actus Secundus, Scena Prima.

Enter Baft and pard Curren Severally.

Baft, Szurthee Curan.

Cur. And your Sir, I have bin With your Father, and given him notlee That the Duke of Cornwall, and Regan his Duchesse Will behere with him this night.

Bast. How comes that?

Cur. Nay I know not, you have heard of the newes a broad, I meane the vihisper'd ones, for they are yet but ear -kiffing arguments.

Bast. Norl: pray you what are they?

Car. Have you heard of no likely Warres toward, Twixt the Dukes of Cornwall, and Aibany?

Bast. No: a word.

Cur. You may do then in time.

Fare you well Sir.

Bast. The Duke be here to night ? The better best, This weaves it selfe perforce into my businesse, My Father hath fet guard to take my Brother, And I have one thing of a questie question Which I must ad, Briefenesse, and Fortune worke. Enter Edgar.

Brother, a word, difcend, Brother I fay, My Father watches: O Sir, By this place, Intelligence is given where you are hid; You have now the good advantage of the night, Have you not spoken gaiast the Dake of Cornewall Hee's comming hither, now i'th' night, i'th' hafte, And Regan with him, have you nothing faid Vpon his partie gainst the Duke of Albang? Aduile your felfe.

Edg. I am fure on't, not a word.

Baft. I hearemy Father comming, pardon ma Incunning, I must draw my Sword vpen you: Draw, seeme to defend your felfe, Now quit you well, Yeeld, come before my Father, light hoz, bere, Fly Brother, Torches, Torches, fo farewell.

Exit Edgar.

Some blood drawne on me, would be get opinion Of my more fierce endeauour. Ihaue feene druakards Do more then this in sport; Father, Father, Stop, stop, no helpe?

Enter Glofter and Servents wish Terches.

Glo. Now Edmund, where's the villaine? Baft. Here flood he in the dark, his sharpe Sword out. Mumbling of wicked charmes, conjuring the Moone To fland auspicious Mistris.

Glo. But where is he?

Bast. Looke Sir. I bleed.
Clo. Where is the villaine, Edmund?

Baft. Fled this way Sir, when by no meanes he could. Glo. Pursue him, ho. go after. By no meanes, what?

Baft. Perswade me to the murther of your Lordship.

But that I told him the revenging Gods, 'Gainst Paricides did all the thunder bend, Spoke with how manifold, and strong aBond The Child was bound to'th' Father; Sir in fine, Seeing how lothly opposite I food To his vnnaturall purpose, in fell motion With his prepared Sword, he charges home My vnprouided body, latch'd mine arme; And when he law my best alarum'd spirits Bold in the quarrels right, rouz'd to th'encounter, Or whether gasted by the noyse I made, Full sodainely he fled.

Gloft. Lethim fly farre: Not in this Land shall be remaine vncaught And found; dispatch, the Noble Duke my Master, My worthy Arch and Patron comes to night, By his authoritie I will proclaime it, That he which finds him shall deserve our thankes, Bringing the murderous Coward to the stake: He that conceales him death.

Baft. When I disswaded him from his intent, And found him pight to doe it, with curst speech I threaten'd to discouer him; he replied, Thou vnpossessing Bastard, dost thou thinke, If I would fland against thee, would the reposall Ofany trust, vertue, or worth in thee Make thy words faith'd ? No, what should I denie. (As this I would, though thou didft produce My very Character) I'ld turne it all To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practise t And thou must make a dullard of the world, If they not thought the profits of my death Were very pregnant and potential spirits
To make thee seeke it. Tucket within.

Clo. Oftrange and fastned Villaine, Would he deny his Letter, said he? Harke, the Dukes Trumpets, I know not wher be comes; All Ports I le barre, the villaine shall not scape, The Duke must grant me that : besides, his picture I will fend farre and neere, that all the kingdome May have due note of him, and of my land, (Loyall and naturall Boy) He worke the meanes

To make thee capable.

Enter Cornewall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now my Noble friend, fince I came hither Which I can call but now,) I baue heard strangenesse. Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short

Which can pursue th'offender; how dost my Lord ?

Glo. O Madam, my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd. Reg. What, did my Fathers Godsonne seeke your life? He whom my Father nam'd, your Edgar?

Glo. O Lady, Lady, shame would have it hid. Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous Knights

That tended vpon my Father?

Glo I know not Madam, 'tis too bad, too bad. Baft. Yes Madam, he was of that confort.
Reg. No maruaile then, though he were ill affected,

'Tis they have put him on the old mans death, To have th'expence and wast of his Revenues: I have this prefent evening from my Sifter Beene well inform'd of them, and with fuch cautions, That if they come to foiourne at my house, Ile not be there.

Cor. Not I, affure thee Regan;

Edmund, I heare that you have thevene yout Father A Child-like Office,

Bast. It was my duty Sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practise, and receiu'd This hurt you fee, firtuing to apprehend him.

Cor. Ishepurfued?

Glo. I my good Lord.
Cor. Ifhe be taken, he shall never more Be fear'd of doing harme, make your owne purpole, How in my strength you please: for you Edmund, Whose vertue and obedience doth this infant So much commend it felfe, you shall be ours, Nature's of fuch deepe truft, we shall much need? You we first seize on.

Zaft. I shall serve you Sir truely, how ever else.

Glo. For him I thanke your Grace.

Cor. You know not why we came to visit you? Reg. Thus out of feafon, thredding darke ey'd night,

Occasions Noble Glost er of some prize, Wherein we must have vse of your aduise. Our Father he hath writ, fo hath our Sifter, Of differences, which I best though it fit To answere from our home : the severall Messengers From hence attend dispatch, our good old Friend, Lay comforts to your bosome, and bestow Your needfull counsaile to our businesses, Which craues the instant vse.

Glo. I serue you Madam, Your Graces are right welcome.

Exeant. Flourab.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Kent, and Steward Severally.

Stem. Good dawning to thee Friend, art of this boule?

Kent. 1.
Stew. Where may we fet our horses?
Kent. I'thing yee.

Stew. Prydiec, if thou lou'ft me, tell me,

Kent. I loue thee not.

Sre. Why then I care not for thee.

Kens. If I had thee in Lipsbury Pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Sie. Why do'ft thou vie methus? I know thee not.

Kens. Fellow I know thee.

Sre. What do'ft thou know me for?

Kent. AKnaue, a Rascall, an eater of broken meates, a base, proud, shallow, beggerly, three-sorted-hundred pound, filthy woofted-flocking knaue, a Lilly-livered, action-taking, whorefon glaffe-gazing super-serviceable finicall Rogue, one Trunke-inheiting flaue. one that would'it be a Baud in way of good feruice, and art nothing but the composition of a Knaue, Begger, Coward, Pandar, and the Sonne and Heire of a Mungtill Bitch, one whom I will beate into clamours whining, if thou deny'st the least fillable of thy addition.

Stem. Why, what a monstrous Fellow art thou, thus to raile on one, that is neither knowne of thee, nor Kent. What a brazen-fac'd Varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me ? Is it two dayes since I tript up thy heeles, and beate thee before the King? Draw your ogue.

for though It be night, yet the Moone Mines, He make a lop oth' Moonshine of you, you whoreson Cullyenly Barber-monger, draw.

Stor. Away, I have nothing to do with thee.

Kem. Draw you Rascall, you come with Letters 2gainst the King, and take Vanitie the puppers part, against the Royaltie of her Father : draw you Rogue, or Ile so carbonado your shanks, draw you Rascall, come your waies.

Ste. Helpe, ho, murther, helpe.

Kom. Strike you flaue : fland rogue, fland you neat flaue, frike.

Stew. Helpe hoa, murther, murther.

Enter East and, Cornewall, Regan, Gloster, Servants.

Baft. How now, what a the matter ? Part.

Kem. With you goodman Boy, if you please, come, He flesh ye, come on yong Master.

Gla. Weapons? Armes? what's the matter here? Cor. Keepe peace voon your lives, he dies that Arikes againe, what Is the matter?

Reg. The Messengers from our Sister, and the King Cor. What is your difference, speake?

Stew. I am scarce in breath my Lord.

Kent. No Maruell, you have so bestir'd your valour, you cowardly Rascall, nature disclaimes in thee:a Taylor

Cor. Thou art a strange fellow, a Taylor make a man? Kone. A Taylor Sir, a Stone-cutter, or a Painter, could not have made him so ill, though they had bin but two

Cor. Speake yet, how grew your quarrell?

Ste. This ancient Ruffian Sir, whole life I have spar'd at fute of his gray-board.

Kent. Thou whoreson Zed, thou vnnecessary letter: nig Lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this vaboulted villaine into morter, and daube the wall of a Takes with him. Spare my gray-beard, you wagtaile?

Cor. Peace firrain,

You beafly knaue, know you no reuerence? Kent. Yes Sir, but anger hath a priviledge.

Cor. Why art thou angrie?

Kent. That fuch a flaue as this should weare a Sword Who we ares no honesty : fuch smiling rogues as these, Like Rats oft bite the holy cords atwaine. Which are t'intrince, t'vnloofe; fmooth every paffion That in the natures of their Lords rebell, Being oile to fire, snow to the colder moodes Revenge, affirme, and turne their Halcion beakes With every gall, and varly of their Mafters, Knowing naught (like dogges) but following: A plague vpon your Epilepticke visage, Smoile you my speeches, as I were a Foole? Goole, if I had you vpon Sorum Plaine, I'ld drive ye cackling home to Camelot, Corn. What att thou mad old Fellow?

Gloft. How fell you out, fay that?

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy,

Then I, and fuch a knaue. Corn. Why do'ft thou call him Knaue? What is his fault?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Cor. No more perchance do's mine, nor his, nor hers: Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plaine,

I have seene better faces in my time,

Then fisads on any shoulder that I for Before me, at this inflant.

Com. This is some Fellow,

Who having beene praised for bluntoeffe, doth affect A faucy roughnes, and confirmines the gart Quite from his Nature. He cannot flatter he, An honest mind and plaine, he must speake truth, And they will take it fo, if not, hee's plaine. These kind of Knaues I know, which in this plainnesse Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends, Then twenty filly ducking observants,

That ftreuch their duties nicely. Kent. Sir in good faith, in fincere verity, Vnder th'allowance of your great asped, Whose influence like the wreath of radient fire

On flicking Phabus front.

Corn. What mean'fl by this?

Kent. To go out of my dislect, which you discommend fo much; Iknow Sir, I am no flatterer, he that beguild you in a plaine accent, was a plaine Knaue, which for my part I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me too't.

Corn. What was th'offence you gave him?

Sie. I neuer grue him any: It pleas'd the King his Mafter very late To frike at me vpon his misconfirution, When he compact, and flattering his displessore Tript me behind: being downe, infulted, rail'd, And put vpon bim fuch a deale of Man That worthied him, got praises of the King, For him attempting, who was felfe-fubdued, And in the fleshment of this dead exploit,

Drew on me here againe.

Kem. None of these Rogues, and Cowards

But Aix is there Foole.

Corn. Fetch forth the Stocks? You stubborne ancient Knaue, you reverent Brigart, Wee'l teach you.

Kent. Sir, lam too old to learne: Call not your Stocks for me, I ferue the King. On whose imployment I was sent to you, You shall doe small respects, show too bold malice Against the Grace, and Person of my Master, Stocking his Messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the Stocks;

As I have life and Honour, there shall he six till Noone. Reg. Till nooner till night my Lord, and all night too.
Kent. Why Madam, if I were your Fathers dog,

You should not vie me fo.

Reg. Sir, being his Knaue, I will. Stocks brought out. Cor. This is a Fellow of the selfe same colour, Our Sister speakes of. Come, bring away the Stocks.

Glo. Let me beseech your Grace, not to do so, The King his Mafter, needs must take it ill That he lo flightly valued in his Meffenger, Should have him thus restrained.

Car. He answere that.

Reg. My Sifter may recieue it much more worsie, To have her Gentleman abus'd, affaulted,

Com. Come my Lord, away. Exit.

Glo. I am forry for thee friend, 'tis the Duke pleafure, Whole disposition all the world well knowes

Will not be rub'd nor stopt, Ile entrest for thec. Kent. Pray do not Sir, I have watch'd and travail'd hard, Some time Ishall sleepe out, the rest Ile whifile.

A good mans fortune may grow out at hecles:

Give

Give you good morrow.

Glo. The Duke's too blamein this,

Twill be ill teken.

Kem. Good King, that must approve the common law, Thou out of Heavens benediction com'th

To the warme Sun.

Approach thou Beacon to this yader Globe, That by thy comfortable Beames I may Peruse this Letter. Nothing almost sees miracles Bucmilerie. I know 'tis from Cordelia, Who hath most forcunately beene inform'd Of my obscured course. And shall finde time From this enormous State, feeking to give Loffes their remedies . All weary and o're-watch'd, Take vancage heavie eyes, not to behold This shamefull lodging. Fortune goodnight, Smile once more, turne thy wheele.

Enter Edger.

Edg. I heard my felfe proclaim'd, And by the happy hollow of a Tree, Escap'd the hunt. No Port is free, no place Thee guard, and most vousall vigilance Do's not accend my taking. Whiles I may scape I will preserve myselfe: and am bethought To take the basest, and most poorest shape That cuer penury in contempt of man, Brought occre to beaft; my face He grime with filth, Blanket my loines, elfe all my haires in knots, And with presented nakednesse out-face The Windes, and perfecutions of the skie; The Country gives me proofe, and prefident Of Bedlam beggers, who with roaring voices, Strike in their num'd and mortified Armes, Pins, Wodden-prickes, Nayles, Sprigs of Rosemarie 1 And with this horrible object from low Farmes, Poore pelting Villag s, Sheeps-Coates, and Milles, Sometimes with Lunaticke bans, sometime with Pralers Inforce their charmie: poore Turlygod, poore Tom, That's Comething yet : Edgar I nothing am.

Boter Lear Foole, and Gentleman.

Lea. Tis strange that they should so depart from home, And not fend backe my Mellengers.

Gent. As I learn'd,

The night before, there was no purpole in them Of this remoue.

Kent. Hailero thee Noble Master.

Lear. Ha? Mak'ft thousbis shame shy pastime?

Kent. No my Lord.

Foole. Hah, ha, he weares Cruell Garters Horses ore cide by the heads. Dogges and Beares, by thinecke, Mankies by th'loynes, and Men by th'legs: when a man ouerlustic at legs, then he weares wodden nether-stocks. Lear. What's he,

That hath fo much thy place mistooke

To let thechcere?

Kon. It is both he and the, Your Son, and Daughter

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lew. No I fay.

Kens. I fav yea.

Lear. By lupiter I sweare no.

Kent. By inuo, I Iweste L. Lear. They durft not do't:

They could not, would not do't: 'the worfe then murther. To do voon respect such violent outrage: Resolue me wish all modest haste, which way

Thou might'st deferue, or they impose this visge,

Comming from vs.

Kont. My Lord, when at their home I did commend your Highnesse Letters to them, Ere I was risen from the place, that thewed My datie kneeling, came there a recking Pofte, Stew'd in his hafte, halfe breathleffe, painting forth Prom Gonerill his Miftris, Calucations; Deliver'd Letters spight of intermission, Which presently they read; on those contents They summon'd up their meiney straight tooke Horse, Commanded me to follow, and attend The leifure of their answer, gaue me cold lookes, And meeting heere the other Meffenger, Whose welcome I perceiu'd had poison'd mine, Being the very fellow which of late D. splaid so sawcily against your Highnesse, Hauing more man then wit about me, drew; He rais'd the house, with loud and coward cries, Your Sonne and Daughter found this trespalle worth The Chame which heere it fuffers.

Foole. Winters not gon yet, if the wil'd Geele fly that Fathers that weare rags, do make their Children blind, But Fathers that beare bags, shall see their children kind. Portune that arrant whore, nere turns the key toth' poore. But for all this thousehalt have as many Dolors for thy Daughcers, as thou canft tell in a yeare.

Lear. Oh how this Mother I wels up toward my heart! Historica passio, downe thou climing fortow, Thy Elements below where is this Daughter?

Kent. Wirh the Earle Sit, here within. Lear. Follow me not fly here.

Gen. Made you no more offence,

But what you speake of?

Kent. None:

How chance the the King comes with fo fmall a number? Foole. And the hadft beene fet i'th' Stockes for that question, thoud'it well deferu'd it.

Kent. Why Foole?
Foole Wee'l fee thee to schoole to an Ant, to teach thee ther's no labouring i'th' winter. All that follow their noies, are led by their eyes. but blinde men, and there's not a note among twenty, but can feedl him that's flinking; let go thy hold, when a great wheele runs downe a hill, least it breake thy necke with following. But the great one that goes voward, let him drawthee after : when a wileman gives thee better counfell give me mine againe, I would hause none but knaues follow it, finces Foole gives it,

That Sir, which ferues and feekes for gaine, And followes but for forme; Will packe, when it begins to raine. And leave thee in the storme. But I will tarry, the Foole will flay, And let the wifeman flie :

The knaue cornes Foole that runnes away, The Fook no knaue perdie.

Enter Lear, and Glofter: Kens. Where learn'd you this Foole? Foole. Not i'th' Stocks Foole.

Lear. Good morrow to you both. Corn. Haile to your Grace. Rent bore for at liberty. Reg. I am glad to fee your Highnesse.

Lour Regar, I thinke your are . I know what reason I baue to thinke so, if thou should it not be glad, I would disarce me from thy Mother Tombe, Sepulchring an Adultresse. O are you free? Some other time for that. Beloved Regar, Thy Sifters naught: oh Regan, the hath tied Sharpe-tooth'd vnkindnesse, like a vulture heere, I can scarce speake to thee , thou It not beleene With how deprau'd a quality. Oh Regan.

Reg I pray you Sir, take patience, I have hope You leffe know how to value her defert

Then the to fcant her dutie. Lear. Say? How is that?

Horse Suttered his Hoy.

Reg. I cannot thinke my Sifter in the least Would faile her Obligation. If Sir perchance She have restrained the Riots of your Followres, Tis on fuch ground, and to fuch wholesome and. As cleares her from all blame.

Law. My curies on ber.

Roy, O Str, you are old, Nature in you flands on the very Verge Of his confine : you should be rul'd, and led By some discretion, that discernes your state Better then you your felfe : therefore I pray you, That to our Sifter, you do make returne, Say you have wrong'd her.

Lear. Aske her forgiuenesse? Do you but marke how this becomes the house? Deere daughter, I confesse that I am old; Age is unrecellary: on my knees I begge, That you'l vouchtafe me Rayment, Bedland Food.

Rig. Good Sir, no more : thele ere unfightly trickes :

Returne you to my Sister. Lear. Neuer Regan: She hath abated me of halfe my Traine; Look'd blacke vpon me, ftrooke me with her Topgue Most Serpent-like, vpon the very Heart. All the flor'd Vengeonces of Heaven, fall On her ingratefull top : firthe her youg bones You taking Ayres, with Lameneffe.

Le. You nimble Lightnings, darr your blinding flames Into her scornfull eyes: Infect ber Beauty, You Fen-fuck'd Fogges, drawne by the powrfull Summe To fall, and blifter.

Reg. O the bleft Gods !

So will you wish on me, when the rash moode is en, Lew. No Regen, thou shalt never have my our fe. Thy tender-hefted Nature shall not give Thee o're to harshnesse: Her eyes are sierce, but thise Do comfort, and not burne. Tis not in thee To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my Traine, To bandy hasty words, to scant my fizes, And in conclusion, to oppose the bolt Againft my comming in. Thou better know ? The Offices of Nature, bond of Childhood, Effects of Curefie, dues of Gracitude: Thy halfe o'th Kingdome halt thounor forgoe, Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good Sir, 10'th'purpole. Tucket misters. Lear. Who put my man i'th'Stockes? Enter Stewards

Corn. What Trumpet's that ?:

Reg. Iknow't, my Sisters : this approves her Letter, That the would foone be heere. Is your Lady come? Lear. This is a Slave, whose easie borrowed pride Dwels in the fickly grace of her be follower.

Our Varlet, from my fight

Cars. What meanes your Grace? Enter Generill.

Les. Who Hockt my Servant? Regar, I have good hope Thou did'ft not know on't. Who comes here O Heavens! If you do love old men; if your fweet fway Allow Obedience; if you your felues are old, Make it your cause: Send downe, and take my pert. Art not asham'd to looke vpon this Beard? O Regan, will you take her by the hand?

Gon. Why not by th'hand Sir! How have I offended? All's not offence that indiference findes,

And dotage terms to.

Low. O fides, you are too tough!
Will you yet hold?

How came my man ith Stockes?

Com. I fee him there, Sit : but his owne Diforders

Deferu'd much lesse aduancement.

Lear. You? Did you?
Reg. I prayyou Pather being weake, seeme so. If till the expiration of your Moneth You will recurne and loiourne with my Sifter, Dismissing halfeyour traine, come then to me, I am now from home, and out of that provision Which shall be needfull for your enterralnement.

Lear. Returne to ber? and fifty men dismils'd? No, rather labiure all roofes, and chuse To wage against the comity oth ayre, To be a Comrade with the Wolfe, and Owle, Necessities sharpe pinch. Returns with her i Why the hot-bloodied France, that dowerleffe tooke Our yongest borne, I could as well be brought To knee his Throne, and Squire-like penfion beg, To keepe base life a foote; returne with her? Perswade me rather to be saue and sumpter To this detelted groome.

Gon. At your choice Sir.
Lear. I prythce Daughter do not make me mad, I will not trouble thee my Child: farewell: Wee'l no more meete, no more fee one another. But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my Daughter, Or rather a disease that's in my flesh, Which I must needs call mine. Thou are a Byle, A plague fore, or imboffed Carbuncle In my corrupted blobd. But Ile not chide thee, Let shame come when it will, I do not call it, I do not bid the Thunder-bearer shoote. Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jone, Mend when thou can'A, be better at thy leifure, I can be patient, I can flay with Regan, I and my hundred Knights.

Reg. Not altogether fo, I look thot for you yet, not am provided For your fit welcome, give eare Sirto my Sifter, For those that mingle reason with your pession; Must be content to thinke you old, and fo, But The knowes what he doe's.

Lear. Is this weil spoken?

Reg. I dare abouch it Sir, what fifty Followers? Is it not well? What should you need of more? Yea, of fo many? Sith that both charge and danger, Speake'gainft lo great a number? How in one house Should many people, under two commands Hold amity? Tis hard, almost impossible.

Con. Why might not you my Lord, receive steendance From those that she cals Servants, or from mine?

Reg. Why not my Lord?
If then they chanc'd to flacke ye, We could comptroll them; If you will come to me, (For now I spie a danger) I entreate you To bring but fine and twentie, to no more Will I give place or notice.

Lear. I gaue you all.
Reg. And in good time you gave it. Lear. Medeyoumy Guardians, my Deposicaties, But kept a referuation to be followed With such a number? What, must I come to you With five and twenty? Rogan, said you so?

Reg. And speak't againe my Lord, no more with me, Led. Those wicked Creatures yet do look wel favor'd When others are more wicked, not being the worst Stands in fome ranke of praise, He go with thee, Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty.

And thou art twice her Love. Gon. Heare memy Lord; What need you five and twenty ? Ten? Or five? To follow in a house, where twice so many Haue a command to rend you?

Reg. What need one I
Lear. O reason not the need : our based Beggers Are in the poorest thing supersuous. Allow not Nature, more then Nature needs: Mans life is cheape as Beaftes. Thou are a Lady; If onely to go warrne were gorgeous, Why Nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear it. Which scarcely keepes thee warme, but for true need: You Heavens, give me that patience, patience I need, You feeme heere (you Gods) a poore old man, As full of griefe as age, wretched in both, Ifit be you that flirres these Daughters hearts Against their Father, soole me not so much, To beare it tamely: touch me with Noble anger, And let not womens weapons, water drops, Staine my mans cheekes. No you vnnaturall Hags, I will have such revenges on you both, That all the world fail--I will do fuch things, What they are yet, I know not, but they shalle The terrors of the earth? you thinke Ile weepe, No, He not weepe, I have full cause of weeping.

Storme and Tempest. Bur this heart shall break into a hundred thousand flawes Or ere He weepe; O Foole, I shall go mad.

Corn. Let vs withdraw, twill be a Scoeme.

Reg. This house is little, the old man and s people,

Cannot be well bestow'd. Con. Tis his owne blame hath put himselse fr om rest,

And must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, He receive him gladly, But not one follower.

Gow. Soam I purpos d. Where is my Lord of Glofter?

Enter Glofter.

Cora. Followed the old man forth, he is return'd. Glo. The King is in high rage. Corn. Whether is he going?
Clo. He cals to Horle, but will I know not whether.

Com. 'Tis best o give him way, he leads himselfe. Gan. My Lord, entrease him by no meanes to flay. Gla Alacke the night comes on, and the high winder Kens But who is with him? Gent. None but the Foole, who labouts to cut left His heart-flrooke interies.

Ken. Sir, I do know you, And dare upon the warrant of my note Commend a deere thing to you. There is dsuifion (Although as yet the face of it is cover'd With mutuall curning) twixt Albany, and Cornwall: Who have, as who have not, that their great Statres Thron'd and fet high; Seruants, who feeme no lette, Which are to France the Spies and Speculations Intelligent of our State. What hath bin feene, Either in Inuffer, and packings of the Dukes Or the hard Reine which both of them hath borne Against the old kinde King; or something deeper, Whereof (perchance) thele are but furnishings.

Gent. I will talke further with you.

Kent. No, do not:

For confirmation that I am much more Then my out-wall; open this Purfe, and take What it containes. If you shall see Cordsha, (As feare not but you shall) fnew her this Risg. And the will tell you who that Fellow is That yet you do not know. Fye on this Storme, I will go feeke the King.

Cent. Glue me your hand, Haue you no more to fay?

Kans. Few words, but to effect more then all yet; That when we have found the King, in which your pain That way, He this : He that first lights on him, Hollathe other. Essum.

For there was never yet frite woman, but thee made mouches in a glasse.

Einer Kent.

Lear. No,I will be the patterne of all positnee, I will fay nothing.

Kent. Who's there?

Poole. Marry here's Grace, and a Codpiece, that's a Wiseman, and a Fool ..

Ken. Alas Sir ase you here? Things that love night, Loue not such nights as these: The wrathfull Skies Gallow the very wanderers of the darke And make them keepe their Cauer: Since I was man, Such theers of Fire, fuch burks of horrid Thunder, Such groanes of rosting Winde, and Raine, I never Remember to have heard. Mant Nature carriot carry Th'affliction, nor the feare.

Lear. Let the great Goddes

Lew. Thou think'fl tis much that this contentions Inuades vs to the skinfo : 'tis to thee, But where the greater malady is fixt, The leffer is scarce felt. Thou de thun a Beare, But if they flight lay toward the roaring Sea, Thou'dst meete the Beare Vih' mouth, when the mind's The bodies delicate: the tempest in my mind, Doth from my fonces take all feeling elfe. Saue what beates there, Filliall ingratitude, Is it not as this mouth should teare this hand For lifting food too't r But I will punish home;

To four me out? Poure on, I will endure: In fuch a night as this? O Regan, Goneral, Your old kind Father, whole franke heart game all. O that way madueffe lies, let me foun that; No more of that,

Kent. Good my Lord enter here,

Lear. Prythee go in thy felfe, feeke thing owne eafe. This tempes will not give me leave to ponder On things would hart me more, but lle goein, In Boy, go first. You houselesse pouertie, Nay get thee in; He pray, and then He fleepe. Poore naked wretches, where so ere you are That bide the pelting of this pittileffe florme, How shall your House-lesse heads, and vnfed fides, Your lop'd, and window'd raggednesse defend you From fealons such as these? O i have tane Too little care of this : Take Physicke, Pompe, Expose thy selfe to feelewhat wretches feele, That thou mail hake the leperflux to them. And thew the Heavens more info.

Enter Edger, and Foole.

Edg. Fathom, and halfe, Fathom and halfe; poore Tom-Foole. Come not in heere Nuncle, here's a spirit, helpe me, helpe me.

Rem. Give me thy hand, who's there?

Foole. Aspirice, aspirize, he sayes his name's poore Tom.

Kent. What are thou that dost grumble there i'th' flraw? Come forth.

Edg Away, the foule Fiend followes me, through the sharpe Hauthorne blow the windes. Humb, goe to thy bed and warme thee.

Lear. Did'il thou give all to thy Daughters? And art thou come to this!

Edgar. Who gives any thing to poore Tim? Whom the foule frend hath led though Fire, and through Flame, through Sword, and Whirle Poole, o're Bog, and Quagmire, that hath laid Kniver under his Pillow, and Haliers in his Pue, fet Rass-bane by his Porredge, made him Proud of heart, to tide on a Bay trotting Horle, out four Incht Bridges, to ourse his owne shadow for a Traitor. Bliffe thy five Wiss, Tomsa cold. O do, de, do, de, do de, bliffe thee from Whirle-Windes, Starre-blaffing, and taking, do poore Tom some charitie, whom the foule Fiend vexes. There could I have him now, and there, and there Storme A.D. ag as be, and there.

Lear. Ha's his Daughters brought him to this paffe? Could'A thou fane nothing? Would'A thou give 'em all?

Foole. Nay, he referu'd a Blanker, elle we had bin all Gram'd.

Les. Now all the plagues that in the pendulous syre Hang fated o're mens faults, light on thy Daughters, Kens. He hath no Danghters Sir.

Low. Death Traitor, nothing could have fubdu'd To luch a lownesse, but his vokind Daughters. (Nature Is it the fathion, that discarded Fathers Should have thus little mercy on their flesh: Iudicious punishment, 'twasthis flesh begot Those Pelicane Daughters.

Edg. Pillicock fat on Pillicock Hill, alow: alow, loo, loo. Foole. This cold night will turne vs all to Pooles, and Madmen.

Edgar. Take heed o'th'foole Fiend, obey thy Parents, keepe thy words Iustice, fweare not, commit not, with mans fworne Spoule; feenouthy Sweet-heart on proud array. Tom's a cold.

Lear. What half thou bin?

Eag. A Serulagman? Proud in heart, and minde; trust curl'd my haire, wore Gloues in my cap; seru'd the Lust of my Mistris heart, and did the acte of darkenesse with her. Swore as many Oathes, as I spake words, & broke them in the sweet face of Heaven. One, that slept in the contriuing of Luft, and wak'd to dock. Winelou'd I deerely, Dice deerely; and in Woman, out-Paremour'd the Turke. Falle of heart, light of eare, bloody of hand Hog in floth, Foxe in Acalth, Wolfe in greedineffe, Dog in madnes, Lyon in prey. Let not the creaking of thooes, Nor the rullling of Silkes, betray thy poore beart to woman. Keepe thy foote out of Brothels, thy hand out of Plackets, thy pen from Lenders Bookes, and defye the foule Fiend. Still through the Hauthorne blowes the cold winde: Sayes fuum, mun, nonny, Dolphin my Boy, Boy Sefey : let bim trot by. Storme Still.

Lear. Thou wert better in a Grave, then to answere with thy vncouer'd body, this extremitie of the Skies. Is man no more then this? Consider him well. Thou ow'il the Worme no Silke; the Beaft, no Hide; the Sheepe, no Wooll, the Cat, no perfume. Ha? Here's three on's are fophisticated. Thou are the thing it telfe; vnaccommodated man, is no more but such a poore, bare, forked Animall as thou art. Off, off you Leadings : Come, vn-

Enter Gloncester, with a Terch.

Foole. Prythee Nunckie be contented, 'tis a naughtie night to swimme in. Now a little fire in a wilde Field, were like an old Letchers heart, a small spark, all the rest on's body, cold : Looke, heere comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foule Flibbertigibbet; hee begins at Curfew, and walkes at first Cocke : Hee gives the Web and the Pin, squints the eye, and makes the Hare-lippe; Mildewes the white Wheate, and hurts the poore Creatute of earth.

Swithold footed thrice the old,

He met the Night-Mare, and her nine-fold; Bid her a-light, and her troth-plight,

And atoynt thee Witch, aroynt thee.

Kent. How fares your Grace? Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you feeke? Clou. What are you there ? Your Names?

Edg. Poore Tom, that cates the swimming Frog, the Toad, the Tod-pole, the wall-Neut, and the water : that in the furie of his heart, when the foule Fiend rages, cats Cow-dung for Sallets; swallowes the old Rat, and the ditch-Dogge; drinkes the green Mantle of the standing Poole: who is whipt from Tything to Tything, and stockt, punish d, and imprison d: who hath three Suites to his backe, fixe thirts to his body :

Horle to ride, and wespon to weare s But Mice, and Rais, and fuch small Deare, Have bin Toms food, for seven long yeare:

Beware my Follower. Peace Smulkin, peace thou Fiend. Class What, hath your Grace no better company i Edg. The Prince of Darkenelle Is a Gentleman. Modo he's call'd, and Mahn, Glow. Our fiesh and blood, my Lord, is growne so vilde, that it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Ponte Tom's a cold.

Gloss Coin with me; my duty cannot fuffer

Tobey in all your daughters hard commands; Though their Inlandion be to bette my decres, And let this Tyrannous night take hold vpon you, Yet have I ventured to come feeke you out, And bring you where both fire, and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talke with this Philosopher,

What Is the cause of Thunder?

Kent. Good my Lord take his offer, Go into th'house.

Lear. Ile talke a word with this fame lemed Theban: What is your fludy?

Edg. How to prevent the Fiend, and to kill Vermine.

Lear. Let me aske you one word in primite. Kent. Importune him once more to go my Lord, His wits begin t'vnsettle.

Glou. Canst thou blame him? Simmo fill His Daughters feeke his death: Ah, that good Kent, He faid it would be thus : poore banish'd men ; Thou fayeft the King growes mad, He tell thee Friend I am almost mad my seife. I had a Sonne, Now out-law'd from my blood : he fought my life

But lately : very late : I lou'd him (Friend) No Father his Sonne deerer : true to tell thee, The greefe hach craz'd my wits. What a night's this?

I do befeech your grace.

Lear. O cry you mercy, Sir: Noble Philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a cold.

Glow. In fellow there, into th'Houel; keep ther warm.

Lear. Come, let's in all. Kent. This way, my Lord.

Lear. With him; I will keepe still with my Philosopher.

Kent. Good my Lord, sooth him: Let him take the Fellow.

Glow. Take him you on.

Kem. Sirra, come on : go along with vs.

Lear. Come, good Athenian. Glon. No words, no words, hush.

Edg. Childe Rowland to the darke Tower came,

His word was still, he, foh, and fomme, I fmell the blood of a Brittish man

Enter Cornwall, and Edmund.

Carn. I will have my revenge, ere I depart his house. Baft. How my Lord, I may be cenfored, that Nature thus gives way to Loyaltie, something feares mee to thinke of.

Cormo. I now perceiue, it was not altogether your Brothers euill disposition made him seeke his death : but a prouoking merit fet a-worke by a reprouable badnelle in himfelfe.

Bast. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be suft? This is the Letter which hee spooke of; which approves him an intelligent partie to the advantages of France O Heavens ! that this Treason were not; or not I the detector.

Corn. Co with me to the Dutchesse.

Baft. If the matter of this Paper be certain, you have mighty businesse in hand.

Com

Com. True or falle, it hath made thee Earle of Gloucefter : fecke out where thy Father is, that hee may bee ready for our apprehension.

Baft. If I finde him comforting the King, it will stuffe his suspition more fully. I will perseuer in my course of Loyalty, though the conflict be fore betweene that, and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee: and thou shalt finde a deere Father in my love.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Keut, and Gloucester.

Clow. Heere is better then the open ayre, take it thank fully: I will peece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the powre of his wits, have given way to his impatience: the Gods reward your kinduesse.

Enter Lear, Edgar, and Foole.

Edg. Fraterresso cals me, and tells me Nero is an Ang ler in the Lake of Darknesse: pray Innocent, and beware the foule Fiend.

Foole. Prythee Nunkle tell me, whether a madman be a Gentleman, or a Yeoman.

Lear. A King, a King.

Foole. No, he's a Yeoman, that ha's a Gentleman to his Sonne: for hee's a mad Yeoman that fees his Sonne a Gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits

Come hizzing in vpon 'em.

Edg. Bleffe thy five wits.

Kent. O pitty : Sir, where is the patience now That you so oft have boasted to retaine?

Edg. My teares begin to take his part lo much,

They marre my counterfetting. Lear. The little dogges, and all;

Trey, Blanch, and Sweet-heart : fee, they barke at me. Edg. Tom, will throw his head at them: Auaunt you

Curres, be thy mouth or blacke or white:

Tooth that poylons if it bite:

Mastiffe, Grey-hound, Mongrill, Grim,

Hound or Spaniell, Brache, or Hym: Or Bobtaile tight, or Troudle taile.

Tom will make him weepe and waile,

For with throwing thus my head; Dogs leapt the hatch, and all are fled.

Do, de, de, de: lese: Come, march to Wakes and Fayres, And Market Townes: poore Tom thy horne is dry,

Lear Thenlet them Anatomize Regan : See what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in Nature that make these hard-hearts. You sir, I entertaine for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your gatments. You will fay they are Perfian; but let them bee chang'd.

Enter Gloffer.

Kent. Now good my Lord, lye heere, and rest awhile. Lear. Makeno noise, makeno noise, draw the Cur-taines : fo, fo, wee'l go to Supper i'th' morning. Foole. And Ile go to bed at noone.

Glou. Come hither Friend:

Where is the King my Master? Kent. Here Sir, but trouble him not, his wits are gon.

Clou. Good friend, I prythee take him in thy armes; I have ore-heard a plot of death vpon him:

There is a Litter ready, lay him io't, And drive toward Dover friend, where thou shalt meete

Both welcome, and protection. Take up thy Master, If thou should'st dally halfe an house, his life With thine, and all that offer to defend him, Stand in affured loffe. Take vp, take vp.

And follow me, that will to fome provision Giue thee quicke conduct. Come, come, away. Exeun:

Scena Septima.

Emer Cornwall, Regan, Gonerill, Baffard, and Servants.

Can. Poste speedily to my Lord your husband, shew him this Letter, the Army of France is landed: feeke out the Traitor Glouster.

Reg. Hang him instantly. Gon. Plucke out his eyes

Corn. Leaughim to my displeasure. Edmond, keepe you our Sifter company: the revenges wee are bound to take uppon your Traitorous Father, are not fit for your beholding. Aduice the Duke where you are going, to a most festivate preparation : we are bound to the like. Our Postes shall beswift, and intelligent betwirt vs. well deere Sifter, farewell my Lord of Gloufter.

Enter Steward.

How now? Where's the King! Store. My Lord of Glouster hath convey'd him hence

Some five or fix and thirty of his Knights Hot Questrifts after him, met him at gate,

Who, with some other of the Lords, dependants, Are gone with him toward Douct; where they boaft

To have well armed Friends.

Corn. Get horses for your Mistris.

Gon. Farewell sweet Lord, and Sifter.

Corn. Edmundf rewell: go feek the Traitor Gloffer, Pinnion him like. Theefe, bring him before vs: Though well we may not passe vpon his life

Without the forme of Juffice: yet our power Shall do a curt'fie to our wrath, which men

May blame, but not comptroll.

Enter Gloucester, and Serwants.

Who's there? the Traitor? Reg. Ingratefull Fox, 'tis he.

Corn. Binde fast his corky armes.

Glow. What meanes your Graces?

Good my Friends confider you are my Ghests:

Do me no soule play, Friends. Corn. Binde him I fay

Reg. Hard, hard : O filthy Traitor.

Glow. Vnmercifull Lady, as you are, I'me none,

Corn. To this Chaire binde him,

Villaine, thou shalt finde.

Glow. By the kinde Gods, 'tis most ignobly done

To plucke me by the Beard.

Reg. So white, and fuch a Traitor?

Glon. Naughty Ladic. Thete haires which thou dost rauish from my chin Will quicken and accuse thee. I am your Hoft, With Robbers hands, my hospitable favours

You

You hould not ruffe thus. What will you do? Corn. Come Sir,

What Letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple answer'd, for we know the truth. Corn. And what confederacie have you with the Traitors, late footed in the Kingdome?

Keg. To whole hands

You have fent the Lunaticke King: Speake. Glow. I have a Letter gueffingly let downe Which came from one that's of a newtrall heart, And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Gunning.

Reg. And folic, Corn. Where half thou fent the King? Clou. To Douer. Reg. Wherefore to Douer?

Was't thou not charg'd at perill.

Corn. Wherefore to Douet? Lethimanswer that.

Glow. I am tyed to th'Stake, And I must stand the Course.

Reg Wherefore to Douer?

Glow Because I would not see thy cruell Nailes Plucke out his poore old eyes: northy fierce Sifier, In his Annoinced Helh, flicke boarish phangs. The Sez, with fuch a forme as his bare head, In Hell-blacke-night indut'd, would have buoy'd vp And quench'd the Stelled fires:

Yet poore old heart, he holpe the Heauens to raine. If Wolves had at thy Gate how!'d that flerne time, Thou should'ft have faid, good Porter turne the Key. All Cruels else subscribe : but I shall fee

The winged Vengeonce overtake fuch Children. Con. See t snalt thou never. Fellowes hold & Chaire, Vpon these eyes of thine, lle set my foote.

Glon. Hethat will thinke to live, till he be old, Gine me some helpe. __O cruell! O you Gods.

Reg One fide will mocke another: Th'other too.

Corn If you fee vengeance Sern Hold your hand, my Lord: I have feru'd you ever fince I was a Childe.

But better service baue I never done you,

Then now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dogge! If you did weare a beard vpon your chin, Ild fbake it on this quarrell. What do you meane? Corm. My Villaine?

Seru. Nay then come on, and take the chance of anger. Reg. Give me thy Sword. A pezant stand up thus?

Ser Oh I am flaine: my Lord, you baue one eye left To fee tome mischese on him. Oh.

(ern. Lest is see more, prevent it; Out vilde gelly:

Where is thy luster now?

Glow. All darke and comfortleffe? Where's my Sonne Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparkes of Nature

To que this horrid : ce.

Rag. Out treacherous Villaine, Thou call'st on him, that hates thee. It was he That made the overture of thy Treasons to vs: Who is too good to pitty thee

Gloss. Omy Follies! then Edgar was abus'd, Kinde Gods, forgiue me that, and prosper him

Reg. Gothrust him out at gates, and let him smell His way to Douer. Exit wish Gloufter. How is't my Lord? How looke you?

Corn. I have received a hurt . Follow me Lady; Turne out that eyeleffe Villaine : throw this Slave Vpon the Dunghill : Regan, I bleed space, Vintimely comes this hurt. Give me your arr . Exercit.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Yet better thus, and knowne to be contema'd, Then full contemn'd and flatter'd, to be worff The lowest, and most desected thing of Fortune, Stands fill in esperance, lives not in feare: The lamentable change is from the beft, The worst returnes to laughter. Welcome then, Thou vnsubstantiall agre that I embrace: The Wretch that thou half blowne vnto the worlt, Owes nothing to thy blaffs.

Enter Clauster, and an Oldman.
But who comes heere? My Father poorely led? World, World, O world i But that thy firange mutations make vs hate thee,

Life would not yeelde to age.

Oldm. Omy good Lord, I have bene your Terrant, And your Fathers Tenant, thefe fourescore yeares.

Clou. Away, get thee away : good Friend be gone, Thy comforts can do me no good at all,

Thee, they may hare,
Oldm. You cannot fee your way. Gloz. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes t I stumbled when I saw. Full oft 'tis seene, Our meanes secure vs, and our meere defects Prove our Commodities. Oh deere Sonne Edgar. The food of thy abused Fathers wrath:

Might I but live to fee thee in my touch, I'ld fay I had eyes againe.

Oldm. How now? who's there? Edg. O Gods! Who is't can lay I am at the worst?

I am worfe then ere I was .-Old. Tis poore made Tom.

Edg And worle I may be yet: the worlt is not,

So long as we can fay this is the work Oldm. Fellow, where goeft e

Glow. Is it a Beggar-man? Oldm. Madman, and beggar too.

Glow. He has some reason, else he could not bez. I'th'last nights storme, I such a fellow saw; Which made me thinke a Man, a Worme. My Sonne

Came then into my minde, and yet my minde Was then scarle Friends with him.

I have heard more fince:

As Flies to wanton Boyes, are we to th'Gods,

They kill vs for their fport. Edg. How should this be?

Bad is the Trade that must play Foole to forrow, Ang'ring it felle, and others. Bleffe thee Mafter.

Glow. Is that the naked Fellow? Oldm. I,my Lord.

Glow Get thee away : If for my fake Thou will ore-take vs hence a mile or twaine I'th'way toward Douer, do it for ancient loue, And being some covering for this raked Soule, Which Ile intreate to leade me.

Old. Alacke fir, he is mad

Glos

Glau. 'Tis the times plague, When Madmen leade the blinde: Does I bid thez, or rather do thy pleasure: Aboue the rest, be gone.

Oldm. He bring him the best Parrell that I have Come on't, what will.

Glou. Sirrah, naked fellow.

Edg. Poore Tom's a cold. I cannot daub it further. Gloss. Come hither fellow.

Edg. And yet I must:

Bleffe thy fweete eyes, they bleede. Glass. Know'ft thou the way to Douer?

Edg. Both ftyle, and gate; Horleway, and foot-path: poore Tom hath bin fearr'd out of his good wits. Bleffe thee good mans fonne, from the foule Fiend.

Glow. Here take this purfe, whom the heau'ns plagues Haue humbled to all frokes: that I am wretched Makes thee the happier: Heauens deale so Rill: Let the superflucus, and Lust-dieted man, That flaues your ordinance, that will not fee Because he do's not feele, feele your powre quickly : So distribution should vadoo excesse, Andeach man have enough. Doft thou know Dove??

Edg. 1 Master.
Gloss. There is a Cliffe, whose high and bending head Lookes fearfully in the confined Deepe: Bring me but to the very brimme of it, And He repayre the milery thou do'ff beare With fomething rich about me : from that place, I shall no leading neede.

Edg. Give me thy arme, Poore Tom shall leade thee

Scena Secunda.

Enter Gen vill, Basturd, and Stomard. Gen. Welcome my Lord. I meruell our mild husband Not met vs on the way. Now, where's your Maffer?

Stew. Madam within, but never man fo chang'd: I told him of the Army that was Landed: He smil'd at it. I told him you were comming, His answer was, the worse. Of Glosters Treachery, And of the loyall Service of his Sonne When I inform'd him, then he call'd me Sot, And told me I had turn'd the wrong fide out : What most he should distike, seemes pleasant to him; What like, offenfiue

Gon. Then shall you go no further, It is the Cowish terror of his spirit That dares not vndertake : Hee'l not feele wrongs Which tye him to an answer: our wishes on the way May proue effects. Backe Edward to my Stother, Haften his Musters, and conduct his powres. I must change names at home, and give the Distasse Intomy Husbands hands. This truffie Servant Shall paffe betweene va : ere long you are like to heare (If you date venture in your owne behalfe)
A Mistresses command. Weare this; sparespeech, Decline your head. This kille, if it durft speake Would firetch thy Spirits vp into the ayees Conceive, and fare thee well.

Baft. Yours in the rankes of death.

Oh, the difference of man, and man, To thee a Womans feruices are due, My Feole viurpes my body. Stew. Madam, here come's my Lord. Enser Albany.

Gon. I have beene worth the whiftle, Alb. Oh Gonerill,

You are not worth the dust which the tude winde Blowes in your face.

Gon. Milke-Liver'd man, That bear'st a cheeke for blowes, a head for wrongs, Who halt not in thy browes an eye-difcerning Thine Honor, from thy fuffering,

Alb. See thy felfe diucil: Proper deformitie seemes not in the Fiend So horrid as in woman.

Gon. Oh vaine Foole.

Enter a Meffenger. Mef. Oh my good Lord, the Duke of Cornwals dead, Slaine by his Servant, going to put out The other eye of Glouffer.

Alb. Glousters eyes.

Mef. A Servan: that he bred, thrill'd with remorfe, Oppos'd against the act : bending his Sword To his great Mafter, who, threat-enrag'd Flew on him, and among 'ft them fell'd him dead, But not without that harmefull stroke, which fince Hath pluckt him after.

Alb. This shewes you are about You Inflices, that thefe our neather crimes So speedily can venge. But (O poore Glouster) Lott he his other eye?

Mes. Both, both, my Lord. This Leter Madam, craues a speedy answer: Tis from your Sifter.

Gan. One way I like this well, But being widdow, and my Glouster with her, May all thebuilding in my fancie plucke Vpon my hatefull life. Another way The Newes is not fo tart. He read, and answer.

Alb. Where was his Sonne, When they did take his eyes?

Mef. Come with my Lady hither.

Alb. He is not leere.

Mef. Nomy good Lord, I met him backe againe. Alb. Knowes he the wickednesse?

Mef. Imy good Lord: twas he inform'd against him And quit the house on purpose, that their punishment Might have the freer course.

Alb. Glouster, I live

To thanke thee for the love thou shew'ds the King, And to revenge thine eyes. Come hither Friend, Excunz. Tell me what more thou know's:

Scena Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Cordelia, Gentlemen, and Souldiours.

Cor. Alacke, 'tis he: why he was met even now As mad as the vext Sea, finging alowd. Crown'd with ranke Fenitar, and furrow weeds, With Hardokes, Hemlocke, Nettles, Cuckoo flowres, Darnell, and all the idle weeder that grow In our fulfaining Corns. A Centery fend forth; Search every Acte in the high-growne field, And bring him to our eye. What can mans wisedome In the refloring his bereaved Sense; he that helpes him, Take all my outward worth.

Gent. There is meanes Madam: Our foster Nurse of Nature, is repose, The which he lackes : that to provoke in him Are many Simples operative, whose power Will close the eye of Anguilh.

Cord, All bleft Secrees, All you unpublish'd Vertues of the earth Spring with my teares; be aydant, and cemediate In the Goodmans defires : feeke, feeke for him, Leaft his vngouern'd rage, dissolve the life That wants the meanes to leade it. Enico Mc Tonger.

Mef. Newes Madam,

The Brittish Powres are marching hitherward. Cor. Tis knowne hefore. Our preparation flands In expectation of them. O deere Father, It is thy businesse that I go about: Therfore great France My mourning, and importun'd reares hath pittled . No blowne Ambition doth our Armes incice, But love, deere love, and our ag'd Fathers Rite: Excunt. Soone may I heare, and fee him

Scena Quarta.

Enter Regan, and Scoward. Reg. But are my Brothers Powres fet forth?

Siem. I Madam,

Reg. Himfelfe in person there? Stew. Madam with much ado: Your Sifter is the better Souldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your Lord at home? Stew. No Madam.

Reg. What might import my Sifters Letter to him? Store I knew not, Lady.

Reg. Faith he is poasted hence on serious marter: It was great ignorance, Glousters eyes being out To let him live. Where he arrives, he moves All hearts against vs : Edmund, Ithinke is gone In pitty of his milery, to dispatch His nighted life: Moreover to defery

The litength o'th' Enemy Stor. I must needs ofter him, Madam, with my Letter. Rog. Our trooperfet forth to morrow, flay with vas

The wayes are dangerous. Stew. I may not Madam:

My Lady charg'd my dutie in this busines. Reg. Why mould the write to Edmand? Might not you transport her purpoles by word? Belike, Somethings, I know not what I le love thee much Let me vnfeale the Letter.

Siew. Madam, I had rather-Reg. I know your Lady do's not love her Husband, I am fure of that : and at her lare being heere, She gave frange Ellads, and most speaking lookes To Noble Edmand. I know you are of her bosome.

Stew. 1, Madam?

Reg. I speake in vaderfinding : Yare: I know't. Therefore I do adulle you take this note ! My Lord is dead : Edmend, and I have talk'd, And more convenient is he for my hand Then for your Ladies : You may gether more : If you do finde him, pray you give him this; And when your Miffris heares thus much from you, pray defire her call her wisedome to her. So face you well: If you do chance to heare of that blinde Traitor, Preferment fals on him, that curt him off Siew. Would I could meet Madem, I should shew What party I do follow. Roy. Fate thee well Exerm

Scena Quinta.

Enter Gloucefter, and Edgar.

Glow. When shall I come to th'top of that same hill? Edg. You do climbe vp it now. Look how we labor. Close. Methinkes the ground is eeuen.

Edg. Horrible Reepe.

Hearke, do you heare the Seaf

Glow. No truly.

Edg. Why then your other Senses grow impersed. By your eyes anguish.

Gless. So may it be indeed. Me thinkes thy voyce is alter'd, and thou speak'? In better phrase, and matter then thou did It.

Edg. Y'are much decesu'd : In nothing am Lebeng'd But in my Garments.

Glon. Me thinkes y'are better spoken.

Edg. Come on Sir, Heere's the place: fland fill: how fearefull And dizie tis, to east ones eyes so low, The Crowes and Choughes, that wing the midway ayre Shew scarle lo grosse as Beerles. Halfe way downe Hangs one that gathers Sampire: dreadfall Trade: Me thinkes he seemes no bigger then his head. The Fishermen, that walk'd vpon the beach Appeare like Mice: and yond rall Anchoring Barke, Diminish'd to her Cocke : her Cocke, 2 Buoy Almost too small for fight. The murmuring Sarge, That on th'unnumbred idle Pebble chases Cannot be heard fo high. He looke no more, Least my braine turne, and the deficient fight Topple downe headlong.

Clos Set me where you fland. Edg. Give me your hand:

You are now within a foote of th'extreme Verge: For all beneath the Moone would I not leape vpright.

Glou. Let go my hand. Heere Friend's another purse : in it, a lewell Well worth a poore mans taking. Fayries, and Gods Prosper it with thee. Gothou further off, Bid me farewell, and let me heare thee going.

Edg. Now fare ye well, good Sir.

Gloss. With all my heart.

Edg. Why I do triffethus with his dispaire, Is done to cure it.

Glow. Oyou mighty Gods! This world I do renounce, and in your fights

Shake

Shake patiently my great affliction off r It I could beare it longer, and not fall To quarrell with your great opposelesse willer, My southe, and loathed part of Nature should Burne it selse out. If Edgar line, O blesse him: Now Fellow, face thee well.

Edg. Godo Sir, farewell: And yet I know not how conceit may rob The Treasury of life, when life it f: Ife Yeelds to the Theft. Had he bin where he thought, By this had thought bln paft. Aliue, or dead? Hoa, you Sir : Friend, heare you Sir, speake: Thus might he paile indeed : yet he reviues.

What are you Sir?

Glau. Away, and let me dye.
Edg. Had's thou beene ought But Gozemore, Feathers, Ayre, (So many fathome downe precipitating) Thou'ds shiver'd like an Egge : but thou do's breath t Haft heavy substance, bleed'it not, speak'st, are sound, Ten Masts at each, make not the atritude Which thou half perpendicularly fell, Thy life's a Myracle. Speake yet againe. Glon. But haue I faine, or no?

Edg. From the dread Somnet of this Chalkie Bourne Looke vp'a height, the shrill-gorg'd Larke so farre Cannor be seene, or heard: Do but looke vo.

Glow Alacke, I have no eyes : Is wretcheduelle depriu'd that benefit To end it felle by death? Twas yet some comfor-When mifery could beguile the Tyrants rage, And fruffrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arme. Vp, for How is't? Feele you your Legger? You stand. Glor. Too well, too well.
Edg. This is about all strangenesse,

Vpon the crowne o'th'Cliffe. What thing was that Which parted from you?

Gloss. A poore voforsunate Beggar.

Edg. As I dood neere below, me thought his eyes Were two full Moones: he had a thouland Nofes, Homes wealk'd, and waved like the enraged Sea: It was some Fiend: Therefore thou happy Father, Thinke that the cleered Gods, who make them Honors Of mens Impossibilities, baue preserved thez.

Glos. I do remember now ; henceforth He beare Affliction, till it do cry out it felfe Enough, enough, and dye. That thing you speake of, I tooke it for a men : often twould fay

The Fiend, the Fiend, he led me to that place. Edgar. Beare free and patient thoughts.

Enser Lear.

But who comes heere? The lefer fenfe will ne're accommodate His Mafter thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for crying. I am the King himselfe.

Edg. Othouside-piercing fight! Lear. Nature's about Art, in that respect. Ther's your Presse-money. That fellow handles his bow, like a Crowkeeper: draw mee a Cloathiers yard. Looke, looke, a Moule: peace, peace, this poece of coafted Cheefe will doo't. There's my Gaundet, He proue it on a Gyant. Bring up the browne Biles. O well flowne Bird! i'th' clout, i'th'clout : Hewgh, Gine the word.

Ede. Sweet Marlorum,

Glou. I know that voice.

Law. Ha | Gonerill with a white beard? They flatter d me like a Dogge, and told mee I had the white hayres in my Beard, ere the blacke ones were there. To fay 1, and no, to every thing that I faid: I, and no too, was no good Divinity. When the raine came to wet me once, and the winde to make me chatter: when the Thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I fmelt 'em out. Go too, they are not men o'their words; they told me, I was every thing i'Tis a Lye, I am not Agu-ptoofe.
Glow. The tricke of that voyce, I do well temember.

Is't not the King?

Lear. I, every inch a King. When I do stare, see how the Subject quaker. I pardon that mans life. What was thy cause? Adultery? thou shalt not dye 1 dye for Adultery? No, the Wren goes too't, and the small gilded Fly Do's letcher in my light. Let Copulation thrive: For Glousters battard Son was kinder to bis Father, Then my Daughters got 'tweene the lawfull fheets. Too't Luxury pell-mell, for I lacke Souldiers.

Behold yond simpring Dame, whose face betweene her Forkes preliges Snow; that minces Vertue, & do's shake the head to heare of pleasures name. The Fitchew, not the foyled Horse goes too't with a more notous appetite . Downe from the waste they are Centaurer, though Women all aboue : buc to the Girdle do the Gods inhe rit, beneath is all the Fiends. There's hell, there's darkenes, there is the fulphurous pit; burning, scalding ftench, consumption: Fye, sie, fie; pah, pah : Giue mezn Ounce of Civer; good Apothecary sweetenmy immagination: There's money for thee.

Glou. O let me kisse that hand. Lear. Let me wipe it fust,

It smelles of Mortality.

Glou. O rum'd peece of Nature, this great world Shall so weare out to naught. Do'ft thou know me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough: dost thou squing at me? No, doethy worst blinde Cupid, He not loue. Reade thou this challenge, marke but the penning

Glon. Were all ay Letters Sunnes, I could not fee. Edg. I would not take this from report,

It is, and my heart breakes at it.

Lear. Read.

Glass. Wher with the Cescos syes?

Lear. Oh ho, sre you there with me? No cies in your head, nor no mony in your purse? Your eyes are in a heamy cafe, your purfe in a light, yet you fee how this world goes.

Glou. I fee it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may fee how this world goes, with no eyes. Looke with thine cares i See how yond Iuftice railes vpon yond simple theefe. Hearke in thine care: Change places, and handy-dandy, which is the lustice, which is the theefe a Thou hast seeme o Farmers degge barke at a Begget?

Glon. 1 Sir.

Lear. And the Creature run from the Curithere thou might's behold the great image of Authoritie, a Dogg's obey'd in Office. Thou, Rascall Beadle, hold thy bloody hand: why dost thou lass that Whore? Strip thy owne backe, thou hotly lusts to vie ber in that kind, for which thou whip'st her. The Vince hangs the Cozener. The rough tatter'd closthes great Vices do appeare: Robes, and Fure'd gownes hide all. Place finnes with Gold, and the frong Lance of luftice, hurtleffe breakes : Arme ti in ragges, a Pigmies Ataw do's pierce it. None do's offend, none. I fay none, lle able em; take that of me my Friend, who have the power to feale th'acculers lips. Get thee glaffe-eyes, and like a feuruy Politicion, feeme to fee the things thou doft not. Now, now, now, now. Pull off my Bootes : herder, harder, fo.

Edg. O metter, and impertmency mixt,

Reason in Madnesse.

Lear. If thou wilt weepe my Fortunes, take my eyes, I know thee well enough, thy name is Gloufter; Thou must be notions; we came crying bithers Thou know's, the first time that we smell the Ayre We wawle, and cry. I will preach to thee: Marke, Glou. Alacke, alacke the day.

Lear. When we are borne, we cry that we are come To this great flage of Fooler. This a good blocker It were a delicate fratagem to fhoo A Troope of Horle with Feli : Ile put'r in proofe, And when I have Rolne vpon thele Son in Lawes, Then kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Oh herre he is : lay hand vpon him, Sir,

Your most decre Daughter _____ Lear. No rescue? What, a Prisoner? I am even

The Naturall Foole of Forsune. Vie me well. You shall have ransome. Let me have Surgrons, I am cut to'th'Braines.

Gent. You shall have any thing Lear. No Seconds? All my lelle? Why, this would make a man, a man of Salt

To vie his eyes for Garden water-pots. I wil die brauely, Like a smugge Bridegroome. What? I will be Iourall : Come, come, I am a King, Mafters, know you that?

Gent. You are a Royall one and we obey you. Lear. Then there's life in't. Come, and you get it, You shall get it by running : Sa, fa, fa, fa.

Goor. A fight most prittfull in the meanest wretch, Paft speaking of in a King. Thou haft a Daughter Who redeemes Nature from the generall curle Which twaine have brought her to.

Edg. Haile gentle Sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you : what's your will?

Edg. Do you heare ought (Sir) of a Barrell toward Genr. Moft fure, and vulgar:

Every one heares that, which can diftinguish found.

Edg. But by your favour: How neere's the other Atmy?

Cem. Neere, and on speedy foot : the maine descry Stands on the hoursly thought.

Edg. I thanke you Sir, that's all,
Gene. Though that the Queen on special cause is here Her Army is mou'd on

Edg. I thanke you Sir

Glan. You ever gentle Gods, take my breath from me, Let not my worfer Spirit tempt me againe

To dye before you please.

Fdg. Well pray you Father. Glon. Now good fir, what are you?

Eeg. A most poore man; made tame to Fortunes blows Who, by the Art of knowne, and feeling forrowes, Am pregnant to good pitty. Gineme your hand, He leade you to lome biding .

Gias. Hesseie thankes :

The bouncie, and the benezon of bleauen To book, and book

Inin Sirvard

Sim. A proclaim'd prize . mon happie That eyeleste head of thine, was first fram'd flesh To raise my fortunes. Thou old, valappy Traitor, Breefely thy felfe remember : the Sword is out Thee niul defleoy thee.

Gloss. Now less thy friendly hand

Put firength enough too't.

Sten. Wherefore, bold Pezant,

Dar'A thou support a publish'd Traster? Hence, Leaft that th'infection of his fortune take Like hold on thee. Let go his some Ede Chillnor largo Zit. Without vurther 'cafion.

Serv. Lergo Slave, or thou dy M.

Edg. Good Gentleman goe your gate, and let poure volkepaffe: and chud ha' bin zwaggerd out of my life, 'twould not ha bin 20 long as 'tis, by a vorteight. Nay, come not neere th'old man : keepe our che vor ye, or tee try whither your Coffard, or my Ballow be the harder; chill be plaine with you.

Stew. Out Dunghill.

Edg. Chill picke your reeth Zir: come, no matter von your toynes.

Stew. Slave thou half flaine me: Villam, take my purfe, If ever thou will thrive, bury my bodie, And give the Letters which thou find it about me, To Edmand Earle of Gloufter : feeke him out Vpon the English party. Oh votimely death, death

Edg. I know thee well. A serusceable Villane, As dureous to the vices of thy Milters, As badnoile would defire

Glow. What, is he dead? Edg. Sit you downe Father : reft you Let's fee thefe Pockers; the Latters that he speakes of May be my Friends: hee's dead; I am onely forry He had no other Deathsman. Let vs fee: Leaue gentle waxe, and manners : blame vs not To know our enemies mindes, we rip their hearts, Their Papers is more lawfull.

Reads the Letter.

Et our reciprocal vower be remembred. Tou have mank L opportunities: o cut him off: if your will went not sure and place will be fruitfully offer d. There is nothing done, if he resume the Conqueror, then am I the Profoner and bes bed so Gaole, from the loashed warmed whereof, deteres one, and fepply the place for your Labour.

Tear (Wife, so I would say) affelinnate Serums. Goetill,

Ohindinguish'd space of Womans will A plot upon her vertuous Husbands life, And the exchange my Brocher: heere in the fands Thez He rake vp, the poste valancasied Of murtherous Letchers : and in the mature time, With this vogracious paper Arike the fight Of the death-practis'd Duke: for him 'ns well, That of the death, and bufineffe, I cantell.

Glos. The King is mad: How fife is my vilde fense That I frand vp, and have ingenious feeling Of my huge Sorrowes? Better I were diffred, So should my thoughts be sever'd from my greefes, Drum dare of.

And wees, by wrong imaginations leafs

The knowledge of themselves.

Edg. Give me your hand:

Farre off executinkes I beare the beaten Drucame.

Come Father, lie bestow you with a Friend.

Ensure.

Scæna Septima.

Enter Cardolia, Kent and Genelenson.

Cor. O theu good Kons, How shall I live and worke To match thy goodnesse? My life will be too short, And every measure faile me.

Kort. To be acknowledg'd Madamis ore-pai'd, All my reports go with the modest truth, Nor more, not clipt, but so.

Cor. Be bettet futted,

These weedes are memories of those worser houres: I prythee put them off.

Kont. Pardon deere Madam,

Yet to be knowne shortens my made intent, My boone I make it, that you know me not, Till time, and I, thinke meet.

Cor. Then be't formy good Lord:

How do's the King !

Car. O you kind Gods!

Cure this great breach in his abused Nature. Th'vntun'd and jarring senses, O winde vp, Of this childe-changed Father.

Geet. So please your Maiesty,

That we may wake the King, he hath flept long?

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceede
I'th'sway of your owne will: is he array d?

Emer Leer on a chare carried by Sermants

Gem. I Madam: in the heavinesse of steepe, We put fresh garments on him.

Be by good Madam when we do awake him, I doubt of his Temperance.

Cor. O my deere Father, restauration hang Thy medicine on my lippes, and feethis kiffe Repaire those violent harmes, that my two Sisters Have in thy Reverence made.

Rem. Kind and deere Princesse.

Cor. Had you not bin their Father, these white slakes
Did challenge pitry of them. Was this a face
To be oppos'd against the letring windes?
Mine Enemies dogge, though be had bit me.
Should have stood that night against my fire,
Andwas't thou saine (poore Father)
To houell thee with Swineand Rogues forlowne,
In short, and musty straw? Alacke, alacke,
Tis wonder that thy life and wits, at once
Had not concluded all. He wakes, speake to him.

Cen. Madam do you, 'tis fittefl.

Cor. How does my Royall Lord?

How fares your Maiefly?

Lear. You do me wrong to take me out o'th' grave, Thou art a Soule in bliffe, but I am bound Vpon a wheele of fire, that mine owne tenes Do fail'd, like nælten Lead.

Car. Sir, do you know me?

Lear. You are a spirit I know, where did you dye?

Cor. Still, Rull, fatte wide.

Let him alone a while.

Laur. Where have I bin? Where am I? Faire day light?

I am mightily abus'd; I should eu'n dye with pitty
To see another thus. I know not what to say:
I will not sweare these are my bands: let's see,
I feele this pin pricke, would I were effur'd
Of my condition.

Cor. O looke vpon me Sit, And hold your hand in benediction o're me,

You must not kneele.

Lear. Pray do not mocke me: I am a very foolish fond old man, Foorescore and vpward,

Not an house more, nor lesse:
And to deale plainely,
I feare I am not in my perfect mind.
Me thinkes I should know you, and know this man,
Yet I am doubtfull: For I am mainely ignorant
What place this issand all the skill I have Remembers not these garments: nor I know noe
Where I did lodge last night. Do not langue same,
For (as I am a man) I thinke this Lady

To be my childe Cordelia.

Cor. And so I sm: I sm.

Lear. Be your teares wet?
Yes faith: I pray weepenot,
If you hauepoyson for me,I will drinke it:
I know you do not loue me, for your Sisters
Haue (as I do remember) done me wrong.
You haue some cause, they houenot.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your owne kingdome Sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Gent. Be comforted good Madam, the greet rage You fee is kill'd y nimidefire him to go in, Trouble him no more till further fetling.

Cor. Wilt please your Highnesse walke?

Lear. You must be are with me: Pray you oow forget, and forgine, 1 am old and foolish.

Adus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter with Drimme and Colours, Edmund, Regan.
Gentlemen, and Souldiers.

Bast. Know of the Duke is his tast purpose hold, Or whether since he is advised by oughe To change the rourse, he's full of alteration, And selfer eprousing, bring his contains pleasure.

Reg. Our Sifters men is corrainely miscarried.
Best. Tis to be doubted Madam.

Rog. Now Sweet Lord,

Baft. In honour'd Love.

Reg. But have you never found my Perothers way, To the fore-fended place?

Baft. No by mine honour, Madam.

Reg I never shall endure her, deere my Lord Benor familiat with her.

Baf. Festenot, the and the Doke her hasband.

Enter with Dram and Colours, Alberry, General, Soldsers.

Alb. Our very louing Sifter, well be-men: Sir, this I heard, the King is come to his Daughter With others, whom the rigout of our State Forc'd to cry out.

Regan. Why is this reasond?
Gone. Combine together gainft the Enemie: For these domesticke and particular broiles, Are not the question heere.

Alb. Let's then determine with th'ancient of warre On our proceeding.

Reg. Sifter you'le go with vs?

Gon. No.

Rey. 'Tis most consenient, pray go with vs. Gon. Oh ho, I know the Riddle, I will goe.

Exsure both the Armies.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. If ere your Grace had speech with man so poore, Heare me one word.

Alb. Ile ouertake you, spezke.

Edg. Before you fight the Battaile, ope this Letter: If you have vactory les the Trumper found For him that brought its wretched though I seeme, I can produce a Champion, that will prouc What is an ouched there. If you miscarry, Your bufinesse of the world hath fo an end, And machination ceases. Fortune loves you.

Sib. Stay till I have read the Letter.

Esq. I was forbidit:

When time shall serve let but the Herald cry, And He appeare againe.

Alb. Why farethee well, I will o're-looke thy paper

Enter Edmund.

Baff. The Enemy's in view, draw vp your powers, Heere is the gueffe of their true flrength and Forces, By dilligent discourre, but your haft

Is now veg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the time

Baft. To both these Sifters have I sworne my loue. Each icalous of the other, as the flung Are of the Adder. Which of them shall I take? Both? One? Or nelther? Neither can be enloy'd If both remaine alive: To take the Wiodow, Exelperates, makes mad her Sifter Compiles And hardly shall I carry out my Ede, Her husband being aline. Now then, wee'l vie His countenance for the Battaile, which being done, Let her who would be rid of him, devile His speedy taking off. As for the mercie Which he intends to Lear and to Cordelia, The Battaile done, and they within out power, Shall never fee his pardon : for my frace, Stands on me to defend, soi tordebate.

Alaram wether Enter with Drumme and Colours, Lear, Cordelise, and Souldiers puer the Stage, and Exture.

Enter Edgar, and Gloffer.

Edg. Heere Father, take the Shadow of this Tree For your good hoaft : pray that the right may thrive : If ever I recurre to you againe, He bring you comfort.

Gla Grace go with you Sir.

Exa. Alarum and Retreat waben. Enter Edger.

Egdar. Away old man, give me thy hand, away : King Lew hath loft, he and his Daughter tane, Give me thy hand . Come on.

Glo. No further Sir, a man may rot cuenheere.

Edg. What in ill thoughts againe ? Men muft endure

Their going hence, even as their comming hither, Ripenette is all come on.

Glo. And that's true too.

Exercit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter in conquest wah Drum and Colours Edmund, Lea, and Cordelia, as prisoners, Souldeers, Capeaune.

Baft. Some Officers take them away: good guard, Vntill their greater pleafures firft be knowne That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the firft,

Who with best meaning have incurred the worst: For thee oppressed King I am cast downe, My selfe could else our-fromne false Fortunes fromne. Shall we not see these Daughters, and these Sifters?

Lear. No, no no no come let's away to priton, We two alone will fing like Birds ith Cage: When thou doft aske me bleffing, He kneele downe And aske of thee for giveneffe: So wee'llive, And pray, and fing, and tell old tales, and laugh At gilded Butterflies : and heere (poore Rogues) Talke of Court newes, and wee'l talke with them too, Who loofes, and who wins; who's in, who's our, And take vpon's the mystery of things, As if we were Gods (pies : And weel weare out In a wall'd prison, packs and leas of great ones, That ebbe and flow by th Moone. Baff. Take them away.

Lear. Vpon fuch factifices my Cordelis, The Gods themselves throw Incense. Haue I cought thee? He that parts vs, shall bring a Brand from Heauen, And fire ve hence, like Foxest wipe thine eyes, The good yeares thall demoure them, flesh and fell,

Ere

Exit.

Ere they shall make vs weepe?

Weele fee e'm staru'd first i come.

Bist. Come hither Captaine, heatke.

Take thou this note, go follow them to prison,
One step I have advanc'd thee, if thou do it
As this instructs thee, thou do st make thy way
To Noble Fortunes: know thou this, that men
Are as the time is; to be tender minded
Do's not become a Sword, thy great imploymens
Will not beare question either say thou'lt do't,
Or thrive by other meanes.

Capr. He do't my Lord.

Boff. About it, and write happy, when th'hast done, Marke I say initantly, and carry it so As I have set it downe.

Exit Captains.

Flourish. Enter Albany, Gonerill, Regan, Soldiers.

Als. Sir, you have thew'd to day your valient Arsine
And Fortune led you well: you have the Captives
Who were the opposites of this dayes Arife:
I dorequire them of you so to to them,
As we shall find their merites, and our safety
May equally determine.
Baft. Sir, I thought it fir,

To fend the old and miferable King to fome recention, Whose age had Charmes in it, whose Title more, To plucke the common bosome on his side, And turne our imprest Launces in our sies. Which do command them. With him I fent the Queen: My reason all the same, and they are ready. To morrow, or at further space, tappeare. Where you shall hold your Session.

Alt. Sir, by your patience, I hold you but a fubiect of this VV arre,

Not as a Brother.

Reg. That's as we lift to grace him.
Methinkes our pleafure might have bin demanded
Ere you had fpoke for Garce. He led our Powers,
Bore the Commission of my place and person,
The which immediacie may well stand vp,
And call it selfe your Brother.

Gon. Not so hot:

In his owne grace he doth exalt himselfe, More then in your addition.

Reg. In my rights,

By me inuested, he compeeres the best.

Alb. That were the most, if he should husband you, Reg. Iesters do of proue Prophets.

Gon. Hola, hola,

That eye that told you fo, look'd but a fquint.

Rega. Lady I am not well, elfe I should answere From a full flowing stomack. Generall, Take thou my Souldiers, prisonere, patrimony, Dispose of them, of me, the walls is thine: Witness the world, that I create thee heere My Lord, and Master.

Gon. Meane you to enioy him?

Alb. The let alone lies not in your good will.

Baft. Nor in thine Lord.

Aib. Halfe-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the Drum firike, and prove my title thine.
Alb. Stay yet, heare reason: Edmand, I arrest thee
Oncapitall Treason; and in thy arrest,

This guilded Serpent : for your claime faire Sifters, I bare it in the interest of my wife, 'Tis she is sub-contracted to this Lord, And I her husband contradict your Banes. If you will marry, make your loues to me, My Lady is baspoke.

Gen. An enterlude.

Alb. Thou art armed Glefer,
Let the Trmpet found:
If none appears to proue vpon thy perfon,
Thy heynous, manifeft, and many Treafons,
There is my pledge: He make it on thy heart
Ere Itafte bread, thou art in nothing leffe
Then I have heere proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Sicke, O ficke.

Gon. If not, lle nere truft medicine.

Baft. There's my exchange, what in the world hes
That names me Traitor, villain-like he lies,
Call by the Trumpet: he that dares approach;
On him, on you, who not, I will maintaine
My truth and honor firmely.

Enter a Herald.

Alb. A Herald, ho.
Trust to thy single vertue, for thy Souldiers
All leuied in my name, have in my name
Tooke their discharge.

Regan. My fickneffe growes upon me.

Alb. She is not well, consey her to my Tent.

Come hisher Herald, let the Trumper found,

And read out this.

A Tumper founds.

Herald reads,

F any man of qualities or degree, within the lifts of the Arnoy, will maintaine upon Edmund, supposed Earle of Closter, that he is a manifold Traitor, let him appeare by the third sound of the Trumpet: he whold in his defence. I Trumper

Her. Againe. Her. Againe. 2 Trumpet.
3 Trumpet.

Trumpe: answers withm.

Enter Edgar armed.

Alb. Aske him his purpoles, why he appeares Vpon this Call of Trumpet.

Her. What are you?

Your name, your quality, and why you answer

This present Summons

Edg. Know my name is lost By Treasons tooth: bare-gnawne, and Canker-bit, Yet am I Noble as the Aduersary

I come to cope.

Alb. Which is that Adverfary?

Edg. What's he that speakes for Edmand Earle of Glo. Bast. Himselfe, what saist thou to him to (see?

Edg. Draw thy Sword.

That if my speech offend a Noble heart,
Thy arms may do thee Iustice, heere is mine:
Behold it is my priviledge,
The priviledge of mine Honours,
My ozth, and my profession. I protest,
Maugre thy strength, place, youth, and eminence,
Despise thy victor-Sword, and fire new Forume,
Thy valot, and thy heart, thou art a Traitor:
False to thy Gods, thy Brother, and thy Father,
Conspirant gainst this high illustrous Prince,

And from thextremest vpward of thy head, To the discent and dust below thy soote,

11:

A most Toad-spotted Traitor. Say thou no, This Sword, this arme, and my belt spirits are bent To proue vpon thy heart, whereto I speake, Thou lyeft.

Baft. In wisedome I should aske thy name, But fince thy out-fide lookes fo faire and Warlike, And that thy tongue (some say) of breeding breather, What sale, and neely I might well delay, By rule of Knight-hood, I distains and spurner Backe do I toffe thefe Treasons to thy head, With the hell-hated Lye, ore-whelme thy heart, Which for they yet glance by, and fearely bruife, This Sword of mine shall give them infrant way, Where they shall rest for euer, Trumpers speake.

Alb. Sauchim, sauchim. Alexans. Fights.

By th'law of Warre, thou wast not bound to answer An vaknowne opposite: thou are not vanquish'd,

But cozend, and beguild.

Alb. Shut your mouth Dame, Or with this paper shall I stop it . hold Sir, Thou worfe then any name, reade thine owne euill: No tearing Lady, I perceive you know it.

Gon. Say ift do, the Lawer are mine not thine, Who can araigne me for's? Ezit.

Alb. Most monstrous! O, know's thou this paper?

Bast. Ackeme not what I know.

Alb. Go aster her, she's desperate, gouerne her.

Baft. What you have charg'd me with,

That have I done, And more, much more, the time will bring it out. Tis paft, and fo am I : But what are thou That hast this Fortune on me? If thou'tt Noble.

I do forgiue thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity: I am no leffe in blood then thou art Edmond, If more, the more th'hast wrong'd me. My name is Edgar and thy Fathers Sonne. The Gods are suft, and of our pleafant vices Make instruments to plague vs: The darke and vitious place where thee he got Cost him his eyes.

Baft. Th'halt spoken right, tis true, The Wheele is come full circle, I ans heere.

Alb. Methought thy very gate did prophelie ARoyall Nobleneile: i must embrace thee, Let forrow split my heart, if evet I Did hate thee, or thy Father.

Edg. Worthy Prince I know't.
Alb. Where home you hid your feife?

How have you knowne the miferies of your Father? Edg. By nurling them my Lord. Lift a breefe tale, And when 'tis told, O that my heart would burft. The bloody proclamation to escape That follow'd me loneere, (O our lives sweetnesie, That we the paine of death would housely dye, Ratherthen die at once)taught me to chift Into a mad-mans regs, t'assume a semblance That very Dogges disdain'd : and in this habit Met I my Father with his bleeding Rings, Their precious Stones new lost became his guide, Led him, begg'd for him, sau'd him from dispeire. Neuer(O fault) reveal'd my selfe voto him, Vntill some halfe houre past when I was arm'd, Not fire, though hoping of this good fuccesse, I ask'd his bleshing, and from first to last Told him our pilgrimage. But his flaw'd heart (Alacke too weake the conflict to support) (Alacke too weare the Carlion, soy and greefe, Burft fmilingly.

Balt. This speech of yours hath mould me. And shall perchance do good, but speake you on, You looke as you had something more to say.

All. If there be more, more wofull, hold it in, For I am almost ready to distoluc, Heating of this.

Enter a Gentlemer.

Gen. Helpe, helpe: Ohelpe. Edg. What kinde of helpe?

Alb. Speake man.

Edg. What meanes this bloody Knife? Gen. 'Its hot, it smoothes, it came euro from the beart -O The's dead

Alb. Who dead? Speake man.

Gen. Your Lady Sir, your Lady; and her Sifter By her is poylon'd: the confesses ic.

Baft. I was contracted to them both, all three Now marry in an inflant.

Edg Here comes Kens.

Enter Kent.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead; Coveril and Legans bodies brong he out.

This sudgement of the Heavens that makes va tremble. Touches vs not with pitty. O,18 this he? The time will not allow the complement Which very manners viges.

Kest, Iam come

To bid my King and Mafter ave good night.

Alb. Great thing of visorgot, Speake Edmund, where's the King land where's Cordelia?

Seelt thou this obied Kent? Kent. Alacke, why thus?
Baff Yet Edmand was belou'd: The one the other poison'd for my lake,

And after flew herfelfe Alb. Even forcover their faces.

Baft. Ipant for life : some good I meane to do Despight of mine owne Nature. Quickly send, (Be briefe in it) to'th Caffle, for my Writ Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia: Nay, send in time.

Alb. Ren, run, O run.
Edg. To who my Lord? Who ha's the Office: Send thy token of represue.

Ball. Well thought on, take my Sword, Give it the Captaine.

Edg. Hast thee for thy life.

Bast. He hath Commillion from thy Wife and me, To hang Cordelia in the prilon, and To lay the blame vpop her owne dispaire, That fine for-did her felfe.

All The Gods defend her, beare him hence a while.

Enter Lear with Cordelia in bis armes. Lear. Howle, howle, howle: O your are men of stones, Had I yout tongues and eyes, I'd vie them fo, That Heavens vault should crack : she's gone for ever. I know when one is dead and when one lives She's dead as earth : Lend me a Looking-glaffe,

16

If that her breath will mist or staine the stone, Why then the lines.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end? Edg. Or image of that horror. Alb. Fall and ceofe.

Lear. This feather stire, the lines: if it be fo, It is a chance which do's redeeme all forrowes That ever I have fele.

Kent. Omy good Mafter.

Lear. Prythce sway.
Edg. Tis Noble Kom your Friend.

Lear. A plague vpon you Murderors, Traitors all, I might have fau'd her, now the's gone for ever : Corexlia Cordelia, Ray a little. Ha: What is't thou failt? Her voice was ever foft, Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman. I kill'd the Slave that was a hanging thee. Cent. Tis true (my Lords)he did.

I have feene the day, with my good biring Faulchion I would have made him skip : I am old now, And thele same crosses spoile me. Who are you? Mine eyes are not o'th'beft, He tell you fraight.

Kent. If Fortune brag of two, the lou'd and hated,

One of them we behold

Leer. This is a dull fight, are you not Kent?

Kent. The same . your Seruant Kent,

Where is your Servant Cains ?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that, He'le finke and quickly too, he's dead and rotten. Kent. No my good Lord, I am the very man.

Lear. He see that straight.

Kens. That from your first of difference and decay, Haue follow'd your sad steps.

Lear. Your are welcome hither.

Rem. Norno man else

All's cheerleffe, darke, and deadly, Your eldest Daughters haue fore-done themselves, And desperately ste dead

Lear, I fo I thinke.

Alb. Heknowes not what he faies, and vaine is it

That we present vs to him.

Euter a Messenger.

Edg. Very bootlesse.

Meff. Edmind is dead my Lord.

All. That's but a trifle heere : You Lords and Noble Friends, know our intent, What comfort to this great decay may come. Shall be applied. For ve we will refigne. During the life of this old Maiefty To him our absolute power, you to your rights, With boote, and fuch addition 23 your Honours Haue more then merited. All Friends shall Tafte the wager of their vertue, and all Foes The cup of their deferuings . O fee, fee.

Lew. And my poore Foole is hang'd: no, no, no life? Why should a Dog, a Horse, a Rat have life, And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come no more, Never, neuer, neuer, neuer, neuer.

Pray you ando this Botton. Thanke you Sir. Do you lee this? Looke on her? Looke her lips, Looke there, looke there. He dis.

Edg. He faints, my Lord, my Lord. Kem. Breake heart, I prythee breake.

Edg. Looke up my Lord

Kent. Vex not his ghoft, O let him paffe, he hates him. That would spon the wracke of this tough world Stretch him out longer.

Edg. He is gon indeed.

Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur'd fo long, He bur vsurpt his life.

Alb. Beare them from hence, our present bufinesse Is generall woe: Friends of my foule, you twaine, Rule in this Realme, and the gor'd state sustaine.

Kent. I have a journey Sir , Thorsly to go, My Master calls me, I must por say no.

Edg The weight of this lad time we must obey, Speake what we feele, not what we ought to fay : The oldest hath borne most, we that are young, Shall never fee so much, nor live so long.

Exeunt with a dead March.

For-footh, a great Arithmacician, One Michael Coffio, a Florentine, (A Fellow simost damo din a faire Wife) That never fet a Squadron in the Field, Nor the devision of a Bettaile knowes More then a Spinster. Valeffe the Bookish Theoricke: Wherein the Tongued Contols can propose As Masterly as he. Meere practe (without practise) Is all his Souldiership. But he (Sir) had the clean And I (of whom his cies had forme the proofe Ac Rhodes, at Ciprus, and on others grounds Chriffen'd, and Heathen) mult be be-leed, and calm'd By Debitor, and Creditor. This Counter-cafter, He (in good time) must his Lieutenant be, And I (bleffe the marke) his Mooreships Austient.

Red. By hezuen, I rather would have bin his hangman. lago. Why, there's no remedie. Tis the cutile of Service; Preferment goes by Letter, and affection, And not by old gradation, where each fecond Stood Heire to th'first. Now Sir, beindge your selle, Whether I in any just terme are Atho'd To loue the Moore?

Red, I would not follow him then. logo. O Sir content you. I follow him to ferue my turne vpon him. We cannot all be Masters, nor all Masters

Connor be truely follow'd. You shall marke Many a dutious and knee-crooking knaue; That (doring on his owne oblequious bondage) Weares out his time, much like his Maft ers Affe, For naught but Prouender, & when he's old Calheer'd. Whip me fech honest kasues. Others there are Who crym'd in Formes, and vileges of Dutie, Keepe yet their hearts attending on themselves, And throwing but shower of Service on their Lords Doe well thrive by them. And when they have lin'd their Coates Doe themselves Homage. These Fellowes have some soule, And luch a one do I professemy selfe. For (Sir) It is as fure as you are Rodorigo, Were I the Mocte, I would not be lago: In following him, I follow but my feile. Heaven is my ludge, not I for love and dutle, But feeming to, for my peculiar end: For when my outward Aduon doth demonstrate The native act, and figure of my heart In Complement externe, 'us not long after But I will weare my heart vpon my fleeve For Dawes to peckeat; I am not what I em-

Red. What a fall Fortune do's the Thicks-Eps owe If he can carry't thus?

Isgo. Call vp her Father: Rowle him, make after him, poyfon his delight, Proclaime him in the Success. Inconfe her kindmen, And though he in a ferrile Clymate dwell, Plague him with Fliestchough that his loy be loy, Yet throw fuch chances of vexation on't, As it may be ofe some colour.

Redo. Heere is her Fathers house, le call aloud. lago. Doe, with like timerous accent, and dire yell, As when (by Night and Negligence) the Fire Is spied in populus Citties

Redo. What hos: Brabentie, Siginor Brabantie, hos. lago. Awake: what hoz, Brahamen: Theeues, Theoues. Looke to your house, your daughter, and your Bags, Theenes, Threnes.

Bre. Aboue. When is the reason of this terrible

Summons? What is the matter there?

Rado. Signior is all your Familie within? Lage. Are your Doores lock'd?
Dos. Why? Wherefore ask you this?
Lage. Sir, y'ere rob'd, for theme put on your Gowne.

Your heart is burff, you have lost halfe your foule Euen now, now, very now, an old blacke Ram Is tupping your white Ewe. Arife, arife, Awake the morning Cit. Izens with the Bell, Or elfe the deuill will make a Grand-fire of you. Axife I fay.

Bro. Whet, have you lost your wits !

Rod. Most reuerend Signior, do you know my volce?

Bra. Not 1: what are you? Rod. My name is Rodorigo.

Bre. The worffer welcome: I baue charg'd thee not to haunt about my doores: In honest plainenesse thou hast heard me say, My Daughter is not for thee. And now in madnesse (Being full of Supper, and distempting draughtes) Vpon malitious knauerie, dost thou come

To ftart my quiet.

Rod. Sir, Sir, Sir.

Bra. But thou must needs be fure, My spirits and my place have in their power To make this bitter to thee.

Rodo, Patience good Sir.
Bra. What tell'it thou me of Robbing? This is Venice: my house is not a Grange.

Rodo. Most grave Brabancio.

In simple and pure foule, I come to you

la. Sir : you are one of those that will not serue God, if the deuill bid you. Because we come to do you service, and you thinke we are Ruffians, you'le have your Daughter couer'd with a Barbary horse, you'le have your Nephewes neigh to you, you'le have Coursers for Cozena: and Genners for Germainer.

Bra What prophane wretch art thou?

Is. I am one Sir, that comes to tell you, your Daughter and the Moore, are making the Beaft with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a Villaine.

Ingo. You are a Senator.
Bra. This thou that answere. I know thee Rodrigo. Red. Sir, I will answere any thing. But I beseech you

If t be your pleasure, and most wife consent, (Aspertiy i find it is) that your faire Daughter, At this odde Euen and dull watch o'th night Transported with no worse nor better guard, But with a knsue of common hire, a Gundelier, To the groffe claspes of a Lascivious Moore: If this be knowne to you, and your Allowance, We then have done you bold, and faucie wrongs. But if you know not this, my Manners tell me, We have your wrong rebuke. Do not beleeve That from the sence of all Civilitie, I thus would play and trifle with your Reuerence. Your Daughter (if you have not given her leave) I say againe, hath made a groffe revolt, Tying her Dutie, Beautie, Wit, and Fortunes In an extrauagant, and wheeling Stranger, Of here, and euery where : ftraight fatisfie yout (clie. If the be in her Chamber, or your house, Let loofe on me the Justice of the State

For thus deluding you. Bra. Strike on the Tinder, hos: Give me a Taper : call vp all my people, This Accident is not vallke my dreame, Beleefe of it oppresses me alreadie.

Light, I say, light.

lag. Farewell: for I must leave you. It feemes not meete, not wholefome to my place Ems.

Tobe producted, (as if I ftay, I fhall,) Against the Moore, For I do know the State, (How ever this may gall him wath some checke) Cannot with fafetie cast-him. For he's embark'd With fuch loud reason to the Cyptus Warres, (Which even now stands in Act) that for their foules Another of his Fadome, they have none, To lead their Bufineffe. In which regard, Though I do hate him as I do hell apines, Yet, for necessitie of present life, I mutt show out a Flag, and figne of Loue, (Which is indeed but figne) that you shal furely find him Lead to the Sagitary the raifed Search: And there will I be with him. So farewell, Enter Brabancio, with Servants and Torches.

Bra. It is too true an evill. Gone she is, And what's to come of my despiled time, Is naught but bitternesse. Now Redorigo, Where didft thou see her? (On vnhappie Girle) With the Moore faift thou? (Who would be a Father?)
How didft thou know twas the? (Oh the deceaues me Pail thought:) what faid the to you? Get moe Tapers: Raifeall my Kindred. Are they married thinke you?

Rodo. Trucly I thinke they are.

Bra. Oh Heaven: how got the out?

Oh treason of the blood.

Fathers, from hence trust not your Daughters minds By what you fee them ad. Is there not Charmes, By which the propertie of Youth, and Maidhood May be abus'd ? Haue you not read Rodorigo, Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes Sir: I have Indeed.

Bra. Call up my Brother: oh would you had had her. Some one way, some another. Doe you know Where we may apprehend her, and the Moore?

Rod I thinke I can discouer him, if you please To get good Guard, and go along with me.

Bra. Pray you lead on. At every house He call, (I may command at moft) get Wespons (hoa)
And taile lome special Officers of might: Ou good Rodrigo, will deserve your paines.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, lago, Attendants, with Torches.

Ia. Though in the trade of Warre I have flaine men, Yet do I hold it very fluffe o'th'conscience To do no contriu'd Murder: Ilsche Iniquicie S ometime to do me feruice. Nine, or ten times I had thought t'haue verk'd him hete vnder the Ribbes.

Othello. 'Tis better as it is. Ingo. Nay but he prated, And spoke such scuruy, and prouoking termes Against your Honor, that with the little godlinesse I have I did full hard forbeare bim. But I pray you Sir, Are you fast married? Be affur'd of this, That the Magnifico is much belou'd. And hath in his effect a voice potentiall As double as the Dukes : He will divorce you. Or put vpon you, what reftraint or greeuance,

The Law (with all his might, to enforce it on) Will give him Cable.

Othel. Lethim do his fpight; My Seruices, which I have done the Signorie Shall out-tongue his Complaints. The yet to know, Which when I know, that boatting is an Henour, I shall promulgate. I fetch my life and being, From Men of Royall Seige. And my demerites May (peake (vnbonnetted) to as proud a Fortune As this that I have reach'd. For know lago, But that I love the gentle Desdemona, I would not my vahoused free condition Put Into Circumscription, and Confine, For the Seas worth. But looke, what Lights come youd?

Enter Cassio, wish Torches.

Tago. Those are the ratied Father, and his Friends:

You viere best go in.
Othel. Not I: I must be found. My Parts, my Title, and my perfect Soule Shell manifelt me rightly. Is it they? lago. By lanes, I thinke no.

Orbel. The Servants of the Dukes? And my Lieutenant?

The goodnesse of the Night vpon you (Friends) What is the Newes?

Cassio. The Duke do's greet you (Generall) And he requires your hafte, Post-haste appearance,

Enen on the instant. Qibello. What is the matter, thinke you? Casso. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine a It is a businesse of some heave. The Gallies Haue fent a dozen lequent Mellengers This very night, at one anothers heeles: And many of the Confuls, rais'd and mer, Are at the Dukes already. You have bin horly call'd for, When being not at your Lodging to be found, The Senate hath fent about three feuerall Quefts, To fearch you out.
Orbel. Tis well I am found by you:

I will but spend a word here in the house,

And goe with you.

Caffio. Aunciant, what makes he heere? Tago. Faith, he to night hath boarded a Land Carral. If it proue lawfull prize, he's made for euer.

Casso. I do not understand.
Ingo. He's married.

Caffio. To who?

lago. Marry to -- Come Captaine, will you go?

Orbel. Have with you.

Coffe. Here come sanother Troope to feeke for you.

Enter Brobentso, Rodorigo, with Officers and Torches.

lago. It is Brabantio: Generall beaduis'd, He comes to bad incent.

Orbello. Holla, fand there.

Rodo. Signior, it is the Moore.

Bro. Downe with him, Theefe.
1000. You, Rodorigoel Crne Sir, I am for you.

Oibe. Keepe vp your bright Swords, for the dew will rust them. Good Signier, you shall more command with yeares, then with your Weapons.

Bra. Oh thou foule Theefe,

Where haft thou flow'd my Daughter ? Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchaunted her For Me exterre roe to all things o fleme, (If the in Chaines of Magick we're not bound) Whether a Maid, fo tender, Faire, and Happie, So opposite to Marriage, that The Thun'd The wealthy curled Deareling of our Nation, Would ever have (c'encurre a generali mocke) Run from her Guzzdageco che sootic bosome, Of fuch a thing as thou: to feare, not to delight ludge me the world, if the not groffe in fenfe, That thou hast practised on her with foule Chairnes, Abus'd her delicate Youth, with Drugs or Minerals, That weakens Motion. He have't disputed on, Tis probable, and palpable to thinking; I therefore apprehend and do attach thoe. For an abuser of the World, a practifez Of Arts inhibited, and out of warrant; Lay hold upon him, if he do reful Subdue him, at his perilL

Orbe. Hold your hands Both you of my inclining, and the reft.

Were it my Cue to fight, I should have knowne it
Without a Prompter. Whether will you that I goe To answere this your charge?

Bra. To Prilon, till fit time Of La w, and course of direct Session Call thre to answer.

Othe. What it do obey? How may the Duke be therewith farish'd, Whose Messengers are heere about my side, Vpon some present businesse of the State,

To bring me to him.

Officer Tistrue most worthy Signior,
The Dukes in Councell, and your Nobleseife,

I am fure is fent for.

Bra How? The Duke in Counfell? In this time of the night & Bring him aways Mine's not an idle Caufe. The Duke himfelfe, Or any of my Brothers of the State, Cannot but feele this wrong, as 'twere their owne: For if fuch Actions may have peffage free, Bond-flaues, and Pagans shall our Scaresmen be. Scana Tertia.

Enter Duke, Senatori and Officers.

Duke. There's no composition in this News, That gives thein Credite.

1. Sen. Indeed, they are disproportioned; My Letters lay, a Hundred and I cuen Gallies.

Duks. And mine a Hundred forcie 2. Sena. And mine two Hundred: But though they iumpe not on a luft accompt, (As in these Cales where the syme reports, Tis oft with difference) yet do they all confirme

A Turkish Fleece, and bearing up to Cyprus. Duke. Nay it is possible enough to judgement: I do not so secure me in the Error,

But the maine Article I do approue In festefull fenfe.

Saylor wation. What hose what hose what hose Enser SayLor.

Officer A

Officer. A Mellenger from the Gallies. Duke. Now? What's the bufinesse?

Sailer. The Turkish Preparation makes for Rhodes, So was I bid report here to the State. By Signior Angelo.

Date. How fay you by this change?

1. Sen. This cannot be By no affay of reason. Tis a Pageant To keepe vs in falle goze, when we consider Thimportancie of Cyprus to the Tucke; And let our selves againe but vinderstand, That as it more concernes the Turke then Rhodes, So may he with more facile question beare it. For that it flands not in fuch Warrelike brace, But altogether lackes th'abilities That Rhodes is dress'd in. If we make thought of this, We must not thinke the Turke is fo vnskillfull, To leave that lately, which concernes him first, Neglecting an accempt of eafe, and gaine To wake, and wage a danger profitlesse.

Duko. Nay in all confidence he's not for Rhodes. Officer. Here is more Newes.

Enter a Meffenger.

Moffen, The Ottamues, Reveren'd. and Gracious, Sceering with due course toward the lie of Rhodes, Haue there injoynted them with an after Fleete.

1. Sen. I, fo I thought : how many, as you gueffe? Meff. Of thirtie Saile : and now they do re- ftem Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance Their purpoles toward Cyprus. Signior Montane. Your truftie and most Valiant Servitour, With his free dutie, recommends you thus, And prayes you to beleeve him.

Duke. 'Tis certaine then for Cyprus: Marcus Lucacos is not he in Towne?

s. Sm. He's now in Florence. Dule. Write from vs, To him, Poft, Post-hafte, dispacch.

1. Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the Valiant Moore.

Exter Brabantio, Othello, Caffio, Iago, Redorego, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must fireight employ you, Against the general Enemy Ottoman. I did not fee you: welcome gentle Signior, We lack't your Counfaile, and your helpe to night.

Bra. So did I yours : Good your Grace pardon me. Neither my place, nor ought I heard of businesse Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the generall care Takehold on me. For my perticular griefe Is of to flood-gate, and ore-bearing Nature, That it engluts, and swallowes other forrowes, And it is ftill it felfe.

Duke. Why? What's the matter?

Bra. My Daughter: oh my Daughter!

Sen. Dead? Era. I, to me.

She is abus'd, stolne from me, and corrupted By Spels, and Medicines, bought of Mountebanks; For Nature, so prepostrously to erre. (Being not deficient, blind, or lame of lenfe,) Sans witch-craft could not.

Duke. Who ere he be, that in this foule proceeding Hath thus beguil'd your Daughter of her leffe,

And you ofher, the bloodie Booke of Law, You shall your selfe read, in the bitter letter, After your owne fenfe : yes, though our proper Son Stood in your Action.

Bra. Humbly I thanke your Grece, Here is the man; this Moore, whom now it fremes Your special Mandate, for the State affaires Hath hither brought.

All We are verielorry for i.

Duke. What in your owne part, can you fay to this?

Bra. Nothing, but this is lo.

Oshe. Most Potent, Grave, and Reveren'd Signiors, My very Noble, and approu'd good Masters; That I have tane away this old mans Daughter, It is most true : true I have married her: The verie head, and front of my offending, Hath this extent; no more. Rude am I, in my speech. And little blels'd with the loft phrale of Peace; For fince these Armes of mine, had seven yeares pith, Till now, some oine Moones wasted, they have void Their deerest alion, in the Tented Field : And little of this great world can I speake, More then percaines to Feats of Broiles, and Battaile, And therefore little shall I grace my cause, In speaking for my felfe. Yet, (by your gratious patience) I will a round vn-varnish'd uTale deliver. Of my whole course of Loue What Drugges, what Charmes, What Conturation, and what mighty Magicke, (For fuch proceeding I am charg'd withall) I won his Daughter.

Bra A Maiden, neuer bold: Of Spirit fo fill, and quier, that her Motion Bluth'd at her felfe, and the, in spight of Nature, Of Yeares, of Country, Credite, every thing To fall in Loue, with what the fear'd to looke on; It is a judgement main'd, and most imperfect. That will confesse Perfedion so could erre Against all rules of Nature, and must be driven To find our practifes of cunning hell Why this should be. I therefore youch againe, That with some Mixtures, powtefull o're the blood, Or with some Dram, (conjur'd to this effect) He wrought vp on her.

To vouch this, is no proofe, Without more wider, and more over Teft Then these thin habits and poore likely-hoods Of moderne feeming, do prefer against him.

Sen. But Orbello, Speake. Did you, by indirect, and forced courfes Subdue, and poylon this yong Maides affections? Or came it by requelt, and fuch faire question As soule, to soule affordeth?

Othel. I do befeech you, Send for the Lady to the Sagitary. And let her speake of me before her Father; If you do finde me foule, in herreport, The Truff, the Office, I do hold of you, Not onely take away, but let your Sentence Even fall yoon my life. Duke. Fetch Desdemone hither.

Oibe. Aunciant, conduct them: You belt know the place. And tell the come, as truely as to heauen, I do confesse the vices of my blood, So suftly to your Grave cares, Ile prefent

How

How I did thrive in this falte Ladies love, And the in mine.

Duke Say it Othello.
Othe. Her Father lou'd me, oft inuited me: Still question'd me the Storie of my life, From yeare to yeare: the Battaile, Sieges, Fortune, That I have past. I ran it through, even from my boyith dates, Toth'very moment that he bad me tell it. Wherein I spoke of most disastrous chances: Of moving Accidents by Flood and Field,
Of haire-breadth fcapes i th'imminent deadly breatly Ofbeing taken by the Infolent Foe, And fold to flaucty. Of my redemption thence, And portance in my Travellours historie. Wherein of Antars valt, and Delart: Idle, Rough Quarries, Rocks, Hills, whole head touch heaven, It was my hint to speake. Such was my Processe, And of the Canibals that each others eare, The Antroportages, and men whose heads Grew beneath their shoulders, These things to beare, Would Desdemona seriously incline But still the house Affaires would draw her hence Which ever as the could with hafte dispatch, She'l'd come againe, and with a greedie eare Devoure vp my discourse. Which I observing. Tocke once a pliant boure, and found good meanes To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart, That I would all my Pilgrimage dilate, Whereof by parcels the had something heard, But not inflinctively : I did confent, And often did beguile her ofher teares, When I did speake of some distressefull stroke That my youth suffer'd: My Storie being done, She gave me for my paines a world of killes: She lwore in faith twas strange: twas passing strange, 'Twas pittifull: 'twas wondrons pittifull. She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd That Heaven had made het fuch a man. She thank'd me, And bad me, if I had a Friend that lou'd her, I Chould but teach him how to rell my Story, And that would wood her. Vpon this hint I spake, She lou'd me for the dangers I had pall, And I lou'd her, that the did pitty them. This onely is the witch-craft I have vs'd

Enter Desdemona, lago, Attendents.

Duke. I thinke this tale would win my Daughter too, Good Braba tio, take up this mangled matter at the best: Men do their broken Weapons rather vie, Then their bare hands.

Bro. I pray you heare her speake? If the confesse that the was halfethe woocr, Destruction on my head, if my bad blame Light on the man. Come hither gentle Miltris, Do you perceiue in all this Noble Companie,

Here comes the Ladie : Let her witnesse it

Where most you owe obedience? Def. My Noble Father, I do perceive heere a divided dutie. To you I am bound for life, and education: Mylife and education both do learne me, How to respect you. You are the Lord of duty, I am hitherto your Daughter. But heere's my Husband; And formuch dutie, as my Mother fnew'd

To you, preferring you before her Father: Somuch I challenge, that I may professe Due to the Moore iny Lord

Bra. God be with you: I have done. Pleele it your Grace, on to the State Affaiters had rather to adopt a Child, then get it. Come hirber Moore; I here do give thee that with all my heart, Which but thou hast already with all my heart I would keepe from thee. For your lake (lewell) I am glad at foule, I have no other Child, Por thy escape would reach me Tirrinie

To hang clogges on them. I have done my Lord. Dube. Let me speake like your selfe :

And lay a Sentence, Which as a grife, or frep may belpe these Louers. When ternedies are palt, the griefes are ended By feeing the worst, which late on bopes depended. To mourne a Mischeese that is past and gon, Is the next way to draw new mischiese on. What cannot be presented, when Fortune takes: Patience, her Injury a mock'ry makes. The rob'd that smiles, steales something from the Thiefe, He robs himselfe, that spends a bootelelle griefe.

Era. So let the Turke of Cyprus vs beguile, We loofe it not fo long as we can faile. He beares the Sentence well, that nothing beares, But the free comfort which from thence he heares. But he beares both the Sentence, and the forrow, That to pay griefe must of poore Patience borrow. Thefe Sentences, to Sugar, or to Gall, Being Groug on both fides, are Equinocall. But words are words, I never yet did heare That the bruized heart was pierc'd through the eares. I humbly befeech you proceed to th' Affaires of State.

Duke The Turke with a most mighty Preparation makes for Cyprus: Orbello, the Fortitude of the place is best knowne to you. And though we have there a Substitute of most allowed sufficiencie; yet opinion, amore souerzigne Mistis of Effects, throwes a more safer voice on your you must therefore be content to subbet the glosse of your new Fortunes, with this more flubborne, and boyftrous expedition.

Othe. The Tirant Cultome, moft Grave Senators, Hath made the flinty and Steele Coach of Warre My thrice driven bed of Downe. I do 2 goize A Naturall and prompt Alecertie, I finde in hardnesse: and do undertake This present Warres against the Ottomiess. Moß bumbly therefore bending to your Scate, I crave fit disposition for my Wife, Duereference of Place, and Exhibition, With such Accomodation and before As levels with her breeding.

Duke. Why at her Fathersi Bra. I will not have it fo. Othe. Nor I.

Def. Nor would I there teride, To put my Father in impatient thoughts By being in his eye. Most Greatous Duke, To my vnfolding, lend your prosperous care, And let me finde a Charter in your voice

T'affift my simplenesse.

Duke. What would you Desdemona?

Dest. That I love the Moore, to live with him, My downe-light violence, and flortne of Fortunes,
May

May trumper to the world. My hear e's subdu'd Euen to the very quality of my Lord;
I saw Otbello's visage in his mind,
And to his Honours and his valiant parts.
Did I my soule and Fortunes confectate.
So that (decre Lords) if I be left behind
A Moth of Peace, and he go to the Warre,
The Rites for why I loue him, are bereft me:
And I a heavie interim shall support
By his deere absence. Let me go with him.

Othe. Let her have your voice.
Vouch with me Heaven, I therefore begit not
To pleafe the pallate of my Appetite:
Not to comply with heat the yong affects
In my defunct, and proper fatisfaction.
But to be free, and bounteous to her minde:
And Heaven defend your good fooles, that you thinke
I will your ferious and great businesse feant
When she is with me. No, when light wing d Toyes
Offeather'd Capid, seele with wanton dulnesse
My speculatine, and offic'd Instrument:
That my Disports corrupt, and taint my businesse:
Let House-wives make a Skillet of my Helme,
And all indigne, and base adversities,
Make head against my Estimation.

Duke. Be it as you shall presently determine, Either for her stay or going: th'Affaire cries hast: And speed must answer it.

Sen. You must away to night, Othe. With all niy heart.

Duke. At time i'th morning, here wee'l meete againe.
Orhello, leaue fome Officer behind
And he shall our Commission bring to you:
And such things else of qualitie and respect

As doth import you,
Othe. So please your Grace, my Ancient,
A man he is of honesty and trust:
To his conveyance I assigne my wise,
With what else needfull, your good Grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be fo: Good night to cuery one. And Noble Signios. If Vertue no delighted Beautie lacke,

Your Son-in-law is fatte more Fatte then Blacke.

Sen. Adieu braue Moore, vie Desdemona well.

Bra. Looke to her (Moore) if thou hast cies to see:

She ha's deceiu'd her Father, and may thee.

Othe. My life vpon her faith. Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must leave to thee:
I prythee let thy wife attend on her,
And bring them after in the best advantage.
Come Desdemona, I have but an houre
Of Love, of wordly matter, and direction
To spend with thee. We must obey the thetime. Ext.

Rod. lago.
Lago. What faift thou Noble heart?
Rod. What will I do, think if thou?
Lago. Why go to bed and fleepe.
Rod. I will incontinently drowne my felfe.

lago. If thou doift, I shall never love thee after. Why thou filly Gentleman?

Rod. It is fillynesse to live, when to live is torment: and then have we a prescription to dye, when death is our Physicion.

lago. Oh villanous: I have look'd vpon the world for foure times feven yeares, and fince I could dillinguith betwixta Benefit, and an Iniurie: I neuer found man that knew how to lone himfelfe. Etc I would fay, I would drowne my felfe for the loue of a Gynney Hen, I would change my Humanity with a Baboone.

Rod. What should I do? I contesse it is my shame to be so fond, but it is not in my vertue to amend it.

lago. Vertue? A figge, 'tisin our felues that we are thus, or thus. Our Bodies are our Gardens, to the which, our Wills are Gardiners. So that if we will plant Nettels, or fowe Lettice: Set Hifope, and weede vp Time: Supplie it with one gender of Hearbes, or diftract it with many: either to have it fterrill with ideneffe, or manured with Industry, why the power, and Corrigeable authoritie of this lies in our Wills. If the braine of our lines had not one Scale of Reason, to poize another of Sensualitie, the blood, and basenesse of our Natures would conduct its to most prepositious Conclusions. But we have Reason to coole our raging Motions, our carnall Stings, or vibitted Lusts: whereof I take this, that you call Loue, to be a Sec, or Seyen.

Rod It cannot be.

lago. It is meetly a Lust of the blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: drawne thy felfe? Drown Cats, and blind Puppies. I have profest me thy Friend, and I confesse me knit to thy deserving, with Cables of perdurable roughnesse. I could neuer better steed thee then now. Put Money in thy purse: follow thou the Warres, defeate thy fauour, with an viurp'd Beard. I fay put Money in thy purse. It cannot be long that Desdemona should continue her love to the Moore. Put Money in thy purse: nor he his to her. It was a violent Commencement in her, and thou shalt see an answerable Sequestration, put but Money in thy purse. These Moores are changeable in their wils : fill thy purse with Money. The Food that to him now is as lushious as Locustes, shalbe to him shortly, as bitter as Coloquintida. She must change for youth : when she is sated with his body the will find the errors of her choice. Therefore, put Money in thy purse. If thou will needs damne thy selfe, do it a more delicate way then drowning. Make all the Money thou canft : If Sanctimonie, and a fraile vow; betwixt an erring Barbarian, and super-subtle Venetian be not too hard for my witts, and all the Tribe of hell, thou Thalt enjoy her : therefore make Money : a pox of drowning thy selfe, it is cleane out of the way. Seeke thou rather to be hang'd in Compassing thy ioy, then to be drown'd, and go without her.

Rodo. Wilt thou be fast to my bopes, if I depend on the iffue?

lago. Thou are fure of me: Go make Money: I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee againe, and againe, I hate the Moore. My cause is hearted; thine hath no less reason. Let us be consumctive in our revenge, against him. If thou canst Cuckold him, thou dost thy selfe a pleasure, nie a sport. There are many Events in the Wombe of Time, which wilbe delivered. Traverse, go, provide thy Money. We will have more of this to morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meete I'th'morning?

Jago. At my Lodging.

Rod. Ile be with thee betimes.

lago. Go too, sarewell. Do youheare Rodorigo?
Rod. He sell all my Land.
Exit.

lago. Thus do I ever make my Foole, my purse :

But for my Sport, and Profit : I have the Moore, And it is thought abroad, that 'twice my fincers She ha's done my Office. I know not if t be tree, But I, for meere fulpicion in that kinde, Will do, as if for Surety. He holds one well, The bester shall my purpose worke on him i Caffie's a proper man: Let me lee nore, To get his Place, and to plume 7p my will In double Knauery. How? How? Let's fee. After fome time, to abufe Othele's cares, That he is too familiar with his wafe: He hath a person, and a smooth dispose To be suspected : from'd to make weinen falls. The Moore is of a free, and open Nature, That thinkes men honest, that but seeme to be so, And will as tenderly be lead by th Nole As Affes are:

I haue't : it is engendred : Hell, and Night. Must bring this monstrous Birth, to the worlds light

Adus Secundus. Scens Prima.

ENE Ment aro and two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the Cape, can you difcerne at Seal 1 Gent. Nothing at all, it is a high wrought Flood: I cannot 'twixt the Heaven, and the Maine, Defery a Saile.

Mors. Me thinks, the wind hath spoke aloud at Land, A fuller blaft ne're shooke our Battlements : If it hath ruffiand so vpon the Sea, What ribbes of Oake, when Mountaines melt on them, Can hold the Morries. What shall we heare of this?

2 A Segregation of the Turkish Ficet: For do but flaud upon the Foaming Shore, The chidden Billow scemes to pelt the Clowds, The winde-fhak'd-Surge, with high & monftrous Maine Seemes to cast water on the burning Beare, And quench the Guards of th'ever-fixed Poles I never did like mollefrauen view On the enchafed Flood.

Men. If that the Turkish Fleere Be not enshelter'd, and embay'd, they are drown'd, It is impossible to beare it out.

Enter a Gentlemen.

9 Newes Laddes: out warres are done: The desperace Tempest hath so bang'd the Turkes, That their delignement halts. A Noble Thip of Venice, Fiath feene a greenous wracke and fufferance On most part of their Fleet.
Mon. How? Is this true?

3 The Ship is heere put in: A Verserella, Michael Caffio Lieurenant to the warlike Moore, Ochello, Is come on Shote . the Moore himselfe at Sea, And is in full Commission heere for Cypeus.

Mee. I am glad on't : Tis a worthy Gouernous.

3 But this same Casso, though he speake of comfort, Touching the Turkish losse, yet he lookes fadly, And praye the Moore be fale; for they were parted With fowle and violent Tempelt.

Men. Pray Heavens he be :

For I have foru'd him, and the mon commands Like a full Soldier. Let's to the Sea-fide (102) As well to see the Vessell that's come in As to throw-out our eyes for brove Orbino Even till we make the Maine, and th'Erral! blew, An indiffund rugard.

Gom. Come, lux s do fo; For every Minute is expectancie Of more Arrivance.

Emer Coffee Coffe. Thankes you, the values of the wastite like, That fo approoue the Moore: Oh let the Hesuess Give him desence againft the Elements, For I have loft him on a dangerous Sea.

Mon. Is he well ship'd? Caffie. His Barke is flourly Timber'd, and his Pyloz

Of verie expert, and approu'd Allowance; Therefore my hope's (not furferted to death) Stand in bold Cure.

Wabin. A Saile, a Saile, a Saile.

Gent. The Towne is empty; on the brow o'th Ten Stand rankes of People, and they cry, a Saile.

Casin. My hopes do shape him for the Governor. Cone. They do discharge their Shot of Courtehe, Our Friends, at least.

Caffe. I pray you Sir, go forth. And give vs truth who 'tis that is arrived. Gon. I Phall. Ext

Mon. But good Lieutenant, is your Generall win'd? Caffe. Moft fortonateiy : he hath archieu'd a Merd That patagons defemption, and wilde Fame -One that excels the quickes of Blazoning pens, And in th'effentiall Vesture of Creation, Do's tyre the Ingeniuer.

Ever Gentleman.

How now? Who ha's put in?

Gent. Tis one lago, Auncient to the Generall.
Coffin. Ha's had most favourable, and happie speed: Tempefts themselves, high Seas, and howling windes, The gutter'd-Rockes, and Congregated Sands Traitors enfleep'd, to enclogge the guildelle Keeles As having sence of Beautie, do omit Their mortall Natures, letting go lafely by The Divine Dofterman

Mon. What is the? Casson. She that I spake of. Our great Captains Captaint, Left to the conduct of the bold logs, Whole footing heere anticipates our thoughts, A Senights speed. Great love, Othelia guard, And fwell his Saile with thine owne powrefull breath, That he may bleffe this Bay with his will Ship, Make loues quicke pants in Desdemonas Armes, Give renew'd fire to our extincted Spirits.

Enter Desdenona, lago, Padrigo, and vientia Oh behold, The Riches of the Ship is come on thore: You men of Cyprus, let her have your knees. Haile to thee Ladie : and the grace of Heanen, Before, behinde thee, and onevery hand Enwheelethes round.

Def. I thanks you, Valient Caffe, What tydings can you rell of my Lord?

Cafio.

Caf. He is not yet arriv'd, norknow I ought But that he's well, and will be shortly heere.

Def. Oh, but I feare:

How loft you company?

Casso. The great Contention of Sea, and Skies Parted our fellowship. But hearke, a Saile.

Within. A Saile, a Saile.

Gent. They give this greeting to the Cittadell: This likewise is a Friend.

Cassio. See for the Newes:

Good Ancient, you are welcome. Welcome Mistris: Let it not gaule your patience (good lago)

That I extend my Monners. 'Tis my breeding, That gives me this bold shew of Curtesie. Iego. Sir, would the give you fomuch of her lippes,

As of her tongue The oft bestowes on me, You would have enough.

Def. Alas: she ha's no speech. Iago. Infaith too much:

I finde it fill, when I have leave to fleepe. Marry before your Ladyship, I grant, She puts het tongue alittle in her heart, And chides with thinking.

Æmil. You have little cause to say so.

lago. Come on, come on : you are Pictures out of doore: Bells in your Parlours: Wilde-Cars in your Kitchens : Saints in your Injuries : Diuels being offended : Players in your Huswiferie, and Huswines in your Beds.

Def. Oh, fie vpon thee, Slanderer.

lago. Nay,it is true : or elle I am a Turke, You rise to play, and go to bed to worke. Æmil. You shall not write my praise.

lago. No, lee me not.

Delde. What would'st write of me, if thou should'st praise me?

lago. Oh, gentle Lady, do not put me too, t,

For I am nothing, if not Criticall. Def. Come on, affay.

There's one gone to the Harbout?

lage. I Madam. Def. I am not merry : but I do beguile

The thing I am, by feeming otherwise, Come, how would'st thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it, but indeed my invention comes from my pate, as Birdlyme do's from Freeze, it pluckes out Braines and all But my Muse labours, and thus she

If she be faire, and wise: fairenesse and wit, The ones for ofe, the other vieth it.

Def. Well prais'd:

How if she be Blacke and Witty?

lago. If she be blacke, and thereto have a wis, She'le find a white, that shall her blacknesse fir.

Def. Worle, and worle.

Emil. How if Faire, and Foolish? lago. She never yet was foolish that was faire,

For even her folly helps her to an heire. Defde. These are old fond Paradoxes, to make Fooles laugh i'th Alchouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's Foule, and Foolish.

lago. There s none so foule and foolish shereunto,

Eut do's furle prants, which faire, and wife-ones do.

Defde. Oh heavy ignorance: thou praifeft the worst best. But what praife could'st thou bestow on a descrwing woman indeed? One, that in the authorithy of her merie, did juffly put on the vouch of very malice it

Def. To do what? lago. To suckle Fooles, and chronicle small Beere.

Desde. Oh most lame and impotent conclusion. Do not learne of him Emilia, though he be thy husband. How say you (Cassio) is he not a most prophane, and liberall Counsailor?

Caffio. He speakes home (Madam) you may rellish him more in the Souldier, then in the Scholler.

lago. He takes her by the palme: I, well faid, whif-per. With as little a web as this, will I enfinare as great a Fly as Cassio. I smile upon her, do: I will give thee in thine owne Courtship. You say true, 'tis so indeed. If such tricks as these strip you out of your Lieutenan-trie, it had beene better you had not kis'd your three singers so oft, which now againe you are most apt to play the Sir, in. Very good : well kiss'd, and excellent Curtsie: tis so indeed. Yet againe, your singers to your lippes? Would they were Cluster-pipes for your

The Moore I know his Trumpet.

Coffie 'Tis truely fo. Def. Let's meete him, and recieue him. Cassio. Loe, where he comes.

Enter O:hello, and Attendants.

Oth O,my faire Warriour. Def. My deere Ochello.

Othe. It gives me wonder great, as my content

To fee you heere & fore me. Oh my Soules loy:

If after every Tempest, come such Calmes, May the windes blow, till they have waken'd death: And let the labouring Barke climbe hills of Seas Olympus high : and duck againe as low, Ashell's from Hesuen. If it were now to dye, Twere now to be most happy. For I searc, My Soule hath her content so absolute, That not another comfort like to this,

Succeedes in ynknowne Fate. Def. The Heavens forbid But that our Louds

And Comforts should encrease Euen as our dayes do grow.

Othe. Amento that (fweet Powers) I cannot speake enough of this content, It stoppes me heere : it is too much of ioy, And this and this the greatest discords be That ere our hearts shall make.

lago. Oh you are well tun'd now : But Ile fet downe the peggs that make this Musicke, as honest as I am.

O:he.

Othe. Come let vs to the Cassie.

Newes (Friends) our Warres are done:

The Turkes are drown'd.

How do's my old Acquaintance of this Isle?

(Hony) you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus.

I have found great love among st them. Oh my Sweets

I prattle out of sshiron, and I donce

In mine owne comforts. I prythee, good lago,

Go to the Bay, and dissimbarke my Costers:

Bring thou the Master to the Cittadell,

He is a good one, and his worthynesse

Do's challenge much respect. Come Destamona,

Once more well met at Cyprus.

Exis Othello and Descenda.

Ingo. Do thou meet me presently at the Herbour.
Come thicker, is thou be'st Valiant, (as they say base men being in Love, have then a Nobilitie in their Natures, more then is nature to them) list-me; the Lieucenant to night watcher on the Court of Guard. First, I must tell thee this: Descanda, is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him? Why, 'tis not possible.

lago. Lay thy finger thus: and let thy foule be in-Hructed. Marke me with what violence the first lou'd the Moore, but for bragging, and telling het fanrafticalities. To loue him fill for prating, let not thy discreet heart thinke it. Her eye must be fed. And what delight shall the haucto looke on the divell? When the Blood is made dull with the Act of Sport, there should be a game to enflame it, and to give Satiety a fresh appetite. Looelinesse in favour, simpathy in yeares, Menners, and Beauties: all which the Moore is defective in. Now for want of these requir'd Conueniences, her gelicare tendernesse wil finde it selfe abus'd, begin to heave the, gorge, disrellish and abhorre the Moore, very Nature wil inftruct her in it, and compell her to fore fecond choice. Now Sir, this granted (as it is a most pregnant and vnforc'd polition) who frands lo eminent in the deg re of this Forune, as Casso do's : a knaue very voluble no further conscionable, then in putting on the meere forme of Civil, and Humaine feeming, for the better compaffe of his falt, and most hidden loose Affection? Why none, why none: A flipper, and fubile knaue, a finder of occafion : that he's an eye can flampe, and counterfeit Aduantages, though true Advantage neuer present it felfe. A divelish knave: besides, the knave is handlome, young : and hath all those requities in him, that folly and greene mindes looke after. A pestilent complete knaue, and the women bath found him already.

Rodo. I cannot beleeue that in her, she's full of most bleis'd condition.

Tago. Blefs'd figges-end. The Wine the drinkes is made of grapes. If thee had beene blefs'd, thee would never have lou'd the Moore: Blefs'd pudding. Didft thou not fee her paddle with the palme of his hand? Didft not marke that?

Rod. Yes, that I did : but that was but currefie, lago. Leacherie by this hand: an Index, and observe prologue to the History of Lust and soule Thoughts. They met so neere with their lippes, that their breathes embrac'd together. Villanous thoughts Rodongo, when these mutabilities so marthall the way, hard at hand comes the Master, and maine exercise, thincorporate conclusion: Pish. But Sir, be you rul'd by me. I have Brought you from Venice. Watch you to night: for the Command, Ile lay't upon you. Cassio knowes you not: Ilenot be farre from you. Do you sinde some ocestion to anger Collie, either by speaking too loud, or taining his discipline, or from what other courte you please, which the time shall more favorably minister.

Rod. Well.

lago. Sir, he's roth, and very fodaine in Choller: and happely may firske at you, provoke him that he may : for even out of that will I cause these of Cypros to Mutiny. Whose qualification shall come into no true costic againe, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter tourney to your defires, by the meaner a shall then have to present them. And the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperitie.

Rade. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opporcunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meete me by and by at the Cittadell. I must feach his Necessaties a Shore. Fate-well.

Rodo. Adieu.

lago. That Caffio loues her, I do well beleeu's : That the loves him, 'tis apr, and of great Credite. The Moore (how beit that I endute him not) Is of a constant, louing Noble Nature, And I derethinke, he'le prove to Desdemona A most deere husband. Now I do love her too, Not out of absolute Luft, (though peraduenture I fland accomptant for as great a fin) But pariely led to dyetmy Revenge, For that I do suspect the lustie Moore Hath leap'd into my Seate. The thought whereof. Doth (like a poylonous Minerall) gnawmy Inwardes: And nothing can, or shall content my Soule Till I am ecuen'd with him, wife, for wife. Or fayling fo, yet that I put the Moore, Acleast into a lelouzie so frong That judgement cannot cure. Which thing to do. If this poore Trash of Venice, whom I trace For his quicke hunting, fland the putting oo, He have out Michael Cafes on the hip, Abuse him to the Moote, in the right garbe (For I feare Coffie with my Night-Cape 100) Make the Moore thanke me, love me, and reward me, For making him egregiously an Asle, And practifing voon his peace, and quiet, Even to madneffe. 'Tis heere: but yet confus'd, Knaueries plaine face, is neuer scene, till vi'd. Erz

Enter Orbello, Desdemona Cassio, and Attendants. Othe. Good Michael, looke you to the guard to night. Let's teach our selves that Honourable ftop, Not to out-sport discretion.

Caf. lago, hath direction what to do. But not withstanding with my personall eye

Will Hooke to't.

Othe. lago, is most honest:

Michael, goodnight. To morrow with your earliest, Let me haue speech with you. Come my deere Loue, The purchase made, the fruites are to ensue, That profit's yet to come 'tweene me, and you. Goodnight.

Enter lago.

Caf. Welcome lago: we must to the Watch.

lago. Nor this houre Lieutenant : tis not yet ten oth clocke. Our Generall cast vs thus earely for the love of his Desdemons: Who, let vs not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her : and the is sport for loue

Caf. She's a most exquisite Lady.

lago. And He warrant her, full of Game.

Caf. Indeed thes a most fresh anddelicate creature.

lago. What an eye The ha's?

Methinkes it founds a parley to prouocation.

Caf. An inviting eye:

And yet me thinkes right modell. lago. And when the speakes,

Is it not an Alarum to Loue?

Caf. She is indeed perfection. Ingo. Well : happinesse to their Sheetes. Come Lieutenant, I have a flope of Wine, and neere without are a brace of Cyprus Gallants, that would faine have a meafure to the health of blacke Othello. Cas. Not to night, good lago. I have very poore, and unhappie Braines for drinking. I could well with Curtefie would invent some other Custome of enter-lago. Oh, they are our Friends: but one Cup, Ile drinke for you.

Caffio. I have drunke but one Cup to night, and that was craftily qualified too : and behold what inouation it makes heere. I am infortunate in the infirmity, and dare not taske my weakeneffe with any more.

Ingo. What man? Tis a night of Reuels, the Gallants defire it.

Caf. Where are they?
Lago. Heere, at the doore: I pray you call them in.
Caf. Hedo't, but it diffikes me.

Jaga. If I can fasten but one Cup vpon him With that which he hath drunke to night alreadie, He'l be as full of Quarrell, and offence As my yong Mistris dogge. Now my ficke Foole Rodorigo Whom Love hath turn'd almost the wrong side out, To Desdemona hath to night Carrows'd. Potations, pottle-deepe; and he's to watch. Three elfe of Cyprus, Noble (welling Spirites,

(That hold their Honours in a wary distance, the very Elements of this Warrelike Ille) Have I to night fluster'd with flowing Cups,

And they Watch too.

Now mongst this Flocke of drunkards Am I put to our Cassio in some Action That may offend the Isle. But here they come.

Enter Caffio Montano and Gentlemen. If Consequence do but approve my dreame, My Boate failes freely, both with winde and Streame.

Caf. Fore heaven, they have given me a rowfe already. Mon. Good-faith a litle one : not paft a pint, as I am a lago. Some Wine hoz.

And les me the Connakin clinke, clinke:

And let me the Cannaken clinke.

A Souldiers aman: Ob, mans life's but a fpan. Why then ket a Souldser drinke.

Some Wine Boyes.

Caf. Fore Heaven: an excellent Song.

Iago. I learn'dit in England: where indeedthey are most porent in Potting. Your Dane, your Germaine, and your swag-belly'd Hollander, (drinke hoa) are nothing to your English.

Cassis. Is your Englishmen so exquisite in his drinlago. Why, he drinkes you with facillitie, your Dane dead drunke. He sweates not to overthrow your Almaine. He gives your Hollander a vomit, ete the next Pottle can be fill'd.

Caf. To the health of our Generall.

Mon. 1 am for it Lieuxenant : and Ile do you Iustice.

Iago Oh sweet England.

King Stephen was and-a worthy Peere, His Breeches cost bim but a Crowne.

He beld them Six pence all to deere, With that he cal d the Tailor Lowne 2

He was a wight of bigh Renowne, And thou art bus of low degree :

'Tis Prida that pulls the Country downe,

And take thy awld Cloaks about thes. Some Wine hos.

Cassio. Why this is a more exquisite Song then the other lago. Will you heare't againe?

Caf. No: for I hold him to be vnworthy of his Place, that do's those (ungs. Well : heav'ns above all : and there be soules must be saved, and there be soules must not be faued.

lago. It's true, good Lieutenant.

Caf. For mine owne part, no offence to the Generall, nor any man of qualitie: I hope to be faued.

lago. And so do I too Lieutenant.

Cassio. I: (but by your leave) not before me. The I leurenant is to be saued before the Ancient. Let's haue no more of this: let's to our Affaires. Forgiue vs our finoes: Gentlemen let's looke to our bufinesse. Do not thinke Gentlemen, I am drunke: this is my Ancient, this is my right hand, and this is my left. I am not drunke now : I can fland well enough, and I speake well enough.

Gent. Excellent well. Caf. Why very well then: you must not thinke then, that I am drunke.

Monta. To th' Platforme (Masters) come, let's set the

Will shake this I fland.

Mont. Bur is he often thus?

Lago. Tis enermore his prologue to his fleepe, He'le watch the Horologe a double Set, If Drinke rocke not his Cradle.

Moze. It were well
The Generall were put in mind of it:
Perhaps he fees it not, or his good nature
Prizes the vertue that appeares in Caffa,
And lookes not on his evills; is not this true?

Enter Rodorigo.

Iago. How now Rodorigo?

I pray you after the Lieutenant, go.

Mon. And 'tis great picty, that the Noble Moore Should hazard such a Place, as his owne Second With one of an ingraft Infirmitie, It were an honest Action, to say so To the Moore.

lage. Not I, for this faire I fland,
I do love Caffie well: and would do much
To cure him of this evill. But hearke, what noise?

Enter Caffio pursuing Rodorigo.

Caf. You Roque: you Rascall.

Man. What's the matter Licutemant?

Caf. A Knaue touch me my dutte? He beate the Knaue into a Twiggen-Bottle.

Rad. Besteme?
Caf. Doft thou prace, Rogue?
Mon. Nay, good Lieutenant:
I pray you Sir, hold your hand.

Casso Let me go(Sir)
Or He knocke you o're the Mazafe.
Come, Come, come : you're drunke.

Caffu. Drunke?

Nay good Lieutenant. Alas Gentieinen:
Helpe hoa. Lieutenant. Sy Montana:
Helpe Mafters. Hecre's a goodly Watch indeed.
Who's that which rings the Bell: Diablo, hoa:
The Towne will nie. Fie, fie Lieutenant,
You'le be asham'd for euer.

Enter Othello, and Attendants

Orbe. What is the matter heere?

Mon. I bleed fill, I am hurt to th'death. He dies.

Orbe. Hold for your lives.

lag. Hold hoa: Lieutenant, Sir Montano, Gentlemen: Haae you forgot all place of fense and dutie? Hold. The Generall speaks to you: hold for shame.

Oth. Why how now hos? From whence attech this? Are we turn'd Turkes? and to our selves do that Which Heanen hath sorbid the Ottanistes For Christian shame, put by this barbarous Brawles Hethat stirs next, to cartle for his owne rage, Holds his sould light: He dies upon his Motion, Silence that dreadfull Bell, it frights the Isle, From her propriety. What is the matter, Masters? Honest lago that lookes dead with greeting, Speake: who began this? On thy love I charge thee?

I ago, I do not know: Friends all, but now, suen now.
In Quarter, and in termes like Bride, and Groome
Deuefling them for Bed: and then, but now:

Tis monstrous: Inge. who began't?

Man. If partially Affin'd, or league in office, Thou dost deliver more, or lesse then I ruch. Thou are no Souldier.

lage. Touch me not so neere, Lhad rather have this tongue out from my mouth, Then it should do offence to Michael Caffe. Yet I perswade my selfe, to speake the truth Shall nothing wrong him. This it is Generall: Montano and my felfe being in speech, There comes a Fellow, crying out for helpe, And Caffu following him with determin'd Sword To execute vpon hun. Sir, this Gentlemen, Steppes in to Caffio, and entreats his paules My leife, the crying Fellow did purlue, Least by hisclamour (as it so fell out) The Towns might fall in fright. He, (swift of foors) Our-ran my purpole : and I return'd then rather For that I heard the clinke, and fall of Swords, And Caffe high in oath : Which till to night I nere might lay before. When I came backe (For this was briefs) I found them close together At blow, and thrust, even as againe they were When you your felfe did part chem. More of this matter cannot I report. But Men are Men: The best sometimes forget, Though Caffio did some little wrong to him, As men in rage firike those that with them beft, Yet surely Cassio. I beleeve receiu'd From him that fled, fome strange Indignitie, Which patience could not paffe.

Othe. Iknew Iago Thy honeftic, and love doth mince this matter, Making it light to Coffio: Caffio, I love thee, But neuer more be Officer of mine.

Enter Desdemona astended.

Looke if my gentle Loue be not tais'd vp : He make thee an example.

Def. What is the matter (Deere?)
Oshe. All's well, Sweeting:

Come away to bed. Sir for your hutts, My felfe will be your Surgeon. Lead him off: lago, looke with care about the Towne,

And filence thosewhom this vil'd brawle distracted. Come Defdemona, 'tis the Soldiers life,

To have their Balmy flumbers wak'd with frife. Exit. lago. What ere you hurt Lieutenant?

Caf. I, pastall Surgery.

Iago. Marry Heaven forbid.

Caf. Reputation, Reputation, Reputation: Oh I have loft my Reputation. I have loft the immortall part of myselfe, and what remaines is bestiall. My Reputation, lago, my Reputation.

lago. As I am an honest man I had thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more sence in that then In Reputation. Reputation is an idle, and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving. You have lost no Reputation at all, vnlesse you repute your selfe such a Loser. What man, there are more wayes to recouer the Generall againe. You are but now cast in his moode, (a punishment more in policie, then in malice) even fo as one would beate his offencelesse dogge, to affright an Imperious Lyon. Sue to him againe, and he's yours.

Caf. I will cather sue to be despised, then to deceive lo good a Commander, with fo flight, fo drunken, and fo indiscreet an Officer. Drunke? And speake Parrat? And fquabble? Swagger? Sweare? And discourse Fustian with ones owne shadow? Oh thou invisible spirit of Wine, if thou hast no neme to be knowne by, let vs call thee Divell.

lago. What was he that you follow'd with your Sword ? What had he done to you?

Caf. Iknownot. lago. Is't possible?

Caf. I remember a masse of things, but nothing di-shinetly: a Quarrell, but nothing wherefore. Oh, that men should put an Enemie in their mouthes, to steale away their Braines? that we should with ioy, pleasance, reuell and applause, transforme our selves into Beasts.

Iago. Why? But you are now well enough: how came you thus recovered?

Caf. It hath pleas'd the divell drunkennesse, to give place to the diuell wrath, one vnperfectnesse, shewes me another to make mefrankly despife my selfe.

lago. Come, you are too seuerea Moraller. As the Time, the Place, & the Condition of this Country flands I could hartily wish this had not befalne; but since it is, as it is, mend it for your owne good.

Caf. I will aske him for my Place againe, he shall tell me, I am a drunkard : had I as many mouthes as Hydra, fuch an answer would stop them all. To be now a fenfible man, by and by a Foole, and presently a Beast. Oh ftrange! Every inordinate cup is vnbles'd, and the Ingredient is a diuell, lago. Corne; good wine, is a good familiar Creature, if it be well vs'd exclaime no more against it. And good Lieutenant, I thinke, you thinke I loue Caffic. I have well approved it, Sir. I drunke?

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunke at a time man. I tell you what you shall do: Our General's Wife, is now the Generall. I may lay lo, in this respect, for that he hath devoted, and given vp himselfe to the Contemplation, marke; and devotement of her parts and Graces. Confesse your selfe freely to her: Importune her helpe to put you in your place againe. She is of so free, so kinde, so apt, so blessed a disposition. she holds it a vice in her goodnesse, not to do more then she is requested. This broken joynt betweene you, and her husband, entrest her to splinter. And my Fortunes against any lay worth naming, this cracke of your Love, shall grow stonger, then it was before. Casso. You advise me well.

lago. I protest in the sinceritie of Loue, and honest kindnesse.

Caffio, I thinke it freely 1 and betimes in the morning, I will befeech the vertuous Defdemena to undertake for me: I am desperate of my Fortunes if they check me.

lago. You are in the right: good night Licutenant, l must to the Watch.

Cassio. Good night, honest lago.

Exis Castio.

lago. And what's he then. That faies I play the Villaine? When this adulfe is free I give, and hones, Proball to thinking, and indeed the course To win the Moore againe. For 'tis most easie Th'inclyning Desdemona to Subdue In any honest Suite. She's fram'd as fruitefull As the free Elements. And then for her To win the Moore, were to renownce his Baptisme, All Seales, and Simbols of redeemed fin: His Soule is fo enfetter'd to her Loue That she may make, vnmake, do what she lift, Euen as het Appetite If all play the God, With his weake Fund on. How am I then a Villaine, To Counsell Cassio to this paralell course, Directly to his good? Divinitie of hell, When divels will the blackest finnes put on, They do luggest at first with heavenly shewes, As I do now. For whiles this honest Foole Plies Desdemona, to repaire his Fortune, And the for him, pleades strongly to the Moote, the powre this pestilence into his eare: That the repeales him, for her bodies Luft' And by how much she striues to do him good, She shall vado her Credite with the Moore. So will I turne her vertue into pitch, And out of her owne goodnesse make the Net, That shall en-mash them all. How now Rodorigo?

Enter Rodorigo.

Redorigo. I do follow heere in the Chace, not like a Hound that hunts, but one that filles up the Crie. My Money is almost spent; I have his to night exceedingly well Cudgell'd: And I thinke the iffue t t 3 will bee, I shall have so much experience for my paines; And fo, with no money at all, and a little more Wit, te-turne againe to Venice.

Lago. How poore are they that have not Pstience? What wound did ever heale but by degrees? Thou know'll we worke by Wit, and not by Witchereft And Wit depends on dilatory time : Dos't not go well? Coffie hath beaten thee, And thou by that fmall hurr hath casheer'd Casso: Though other things grow faire against the Sua, Yet Fruites that bloffome first, will first be ripe t Content thy felfe, a-while. Introth is Morning; Pleasure, and Action, make the houres seeme short. Retire thee, go where thou art Billited : Away, I fay, thou shalt know more hecreafter : Exis Rodorigo. Nay get thee gone. Two things are to be done: My Wife must move for Caffe to her Mistris: He fet het on my felfe, a while, to draw the Moor spare, And bring him lumpe, when he may Caffie finde Soliciting his wife: I, that's the way Dull not Denice, by coldnelle, and delay.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Caffie, Musitians, and Clowne.

Caffe. Masters, play heere, I wil content your paines, Something that's briefe: and bld, goodmotrow General. Clo. Why Masters, have your Instruments bin in Naples, that they fpeake i'th' Nofe thus?

Muss. How Sir? how?

Clo. Are thefe I pray you, winds Infiruments? 2duf. I marry are they fir.

Clo. Oh, thereby hange a tale.

Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, fir?
Clow. Merry fir, by many a winde Infrument that I know. But Masters, heere's money for you ; and the Generall to likes your Musick, that he defires you for loues fake to make no more noise with it.

75 of. Well Sir, we will not.

Cla If you have any Mulicke that may not be heard, too't againe. But (as they fay) to heare Musicke, the Generall do's not greatly care.

Muf. We have none such, sir.

Clow. Then put vp your Pipes in your bagge, for Ile away. Go, vanish into ayre, away.

Exis Mu.

Coffie Doft thou heare me, mine honefteriend? Cle. No, I heare not your honest Friend:

heare you.

Cossio. Prythee keepe up thy Quillets, ther's a poore peece of Gold for thee: if the Gentlewoman that attends the Generall be firring, tell her, there's one Caffie entreats her a little fauout of Speech. Wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is fliering fir: if the will flirre hither, I shall feeme to notifie ento her. Exit Clo.

Enter lago.

In happy time, lago.

You have not bin a-bed then?

Caffie. Why no : the day had broke before we parted. I have made bold (tage) to fend in to your wife : My suite to her is, that the will to vertuous Desalemone Procure me forme accesse.

Jogo. Ile send her to you prefently : And He douise a meane to draw the Moore Out of the way, that your converse and bulinette May be more free.

Caffe. I humbly thanks you for's I never knew

A Florentine more kinde, and honeft.

Eran Endu.

Amil. Goodmorrow(good Lieutenent) I am forria For your displeasure : but all will fore be well. The Generall and his wife are talking of it, And the speakes for you flourly. The Moore replies, That he you hurt is of great Fame in Cypros And great Affinitie: and that in wholfome Wifedome He might not but refule you. But he prorefts he loves you And needs no other Suitor, but his likings

To bring you in againe, Coffie. Yet I befeech you, If you thinke fit, or that it may be done, Give me advantage of some breefe Discourse

With Destamon alone.

Emil. Pray you come in a I will bestow you where you shall have time To speake your bosome freely.

Coffis. I am rouch bound to you.

Scana Secunda.

Enter Orbelle, lage and Gentlemen.

Orbe. These Letters give (lage) to the Pylot,
And by him do my duties to the Senate: That done, I will be walking on the Workes, Repaire there to mee.

logo. Well, my good Lord, He doo's.
Orb. This Fortification (Gentlemen) shall we fee't? Gent. Well waite vpon your Lordinip.

Scana Tertia.

Enter Desdermona, Cosso, and Amilia. Def. Be thou affor'd (good Caffo) I will do All my abilities in thy behalfe. Emil. Good Madam do:

I warrant it greeues my Husband, As if the cause were his.

Def. Oh that's an boneft Fellow, Do not doub! Caffe But I will have my Lord, and you againe As friendly ss you were.

Casso. Bountoous Madam, What ever shall become of Michael Caffin, He's neuer any thing but your true Servant

Def. I know't: I thanke you: you do loue my Lord: You have knowne him long, and be you well affer'd He shall in strangeresse stand no farther off,

Then in a politique distance.

Casia.. I, but Lady, That policie may either last folong, Or feede vpon fuch nice and waterish diet, Or breede it selfe so out of Circomstances, That I being absent, and my place supply'd, My Generall will forget my Loue, and Service.

Des. Do pot doubethat i before Emilia bere,

Exis Coffu.

I give three warrant of thy place. Affure thee, If I do vow a friendship, lie persorme it To the last Article. My Lord shall never rest. He watch him tame, and talke him out of patience; His Bed shall sceme a Schoole, his Board a Shrift, Ile intermingle every thing he do's
With Coffee's faite: Therefore be merry Coffee,
For thy Solicitor shall rather dye, Then give thy cause away.

Enter Othelie, and I ago. Anil. Madem, hecre comes my Lord. Caffio. Madam, Ile take my leane. Def. Why flay, and heate me speake.
Casso. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease,

Vafit for mine owne purpoles.

Dof. Well, do your discretion. lage. Hah? I like not that.

Olbel. What doft thou lay?

lage. Nothing my Lord; or if—I know not what. Orbit. Was not that Caffe parted from my write? lage. Caffe my Lord! No fure, I cannot thinke it That he would freale away fo guilty-like,

Seeing your comming.

Oth. I do beleeve twas he. Def. How now my Lord? I have bin talking with a Suitor heere, A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't you meane? Def. Why your Lieutenant Ceffio: Good my Lord, If I have any grace, or po ver to moue you, His present reconciliation take.

For if he be not one, that truly loves you, That erres in Ignorance, and not in Cunning, I have no judgement in an honest face. I prythee call him backe.

Oth. Went be hence now? Def. I footh, so humbled,

That he hath left part of his greefe with mee To fuffer with him. Good Love, call him backe.

Othel. Not now (Sweet Desdesson) some other time. Def. But shall't be shortly?

Oth. The fooner (Sweet) for you. Def. Shall't be to night, at Supper?
Orb. No, nortonight.
Def. To morrow Dinner then?
Orb. I shall not dine at home:

I meete the Captaines at the Cittadell.

Def. Why then to morrow night, on Tuelday morne, On Tuelday noone, or night; on Wenlday Morne. I prythee name the time, but let it not Exceed three dayes. Infaith hee's penitent : And yet his Trefpaffe, in our common reason (Saue that they say the warres must make example) Out of her best, is not almost a fault Pencurre a private checke. When shall be come? Tell me Othelle. I wonder in my Soule What you would aske me, that I hould deny, Or fland to mam'ring on? What? Michael Caffie, That came a woing with you? and so many a time (When I have spoke of you dispraisingly)

To bring him in? Trust me, I could do much.

Out. Prythee no more: Let him come when he will: I will deny thee nothing.

Def. Why, this is not a Boone :

Hath tane your pare, to have fo much to do

Tis as I should entrease you weare your Gloves, Or feede on nourishing dishes, or keepe you warme, Or fue to you, to do a peculiar profit
To your owne person. Nay, when I have a suite Wherein I meane to touch your Love indeed. It shall be full of porze, and difficult waight, And festefull to be granted. Oth. I will deny thee nothing.

Whereon, I do befeech thee, grant me this, To leave me but a little to my felfe.

Def. Shall I deny you? No: farewell my Lord.
Oth. Farewell my Defdersona, lle come to thee strait. Def. Amilia come; be as your Pancies teach you: What ere you be, I am obedient.

Oth. Excellent wretch: Perdition catch my Soule But I do love thee : and when I love thee not, Chaos is come againe.

lage. My Noble Lord.

Oib. What doft thou lay, lago?

lege. Did Michael Caffie

When he woo'd my Lady, know of your love? Oth. He did, from first to last :

Why doll thou aske?

lago. But for a fatisfaction of my Thought, No further harme.

Oth Why of thy thought, lago?

lago. I did not thinke he had bin acquainted with hir.

Oib. Oyes, and went betweene vs very oft.

lago, Indeed?

Oth. Indeed? I indeed. Discern'll thou ought in that? Is he not hones?

lago. Honeft, my Lorde

Orb. Honest! I. Honest.

lego. My Lord, for ought I know. Oib. What do'ft thou thinke?

lego. Thinke, my Lord? Och. Thinke, my Lord? Alas, thou ecchost me; As if there were fome MonRer in thy thought Too hideous to be shewne. Thou dost mean something: I heard thee fay eug inow, thou lik'ft not that, When Cafiro left m) wife. What didd ft not like? And when I told thee, he was of my Counfaile, Of my whole course of wooing; thou cried'st, Indeede? And didd'it contract, and purse thy brow together, As if chou then hadd'ft thut up in thy Braine Some hornble Conceite. If thou do'Aloue me, Shew me thy thought.

lago. My Lord, you know I love you.

Oib. I shinke thou do'ft : And for I know thou're full of Loue, and Honeflie, And weigh'ft thy words before thou giu'ft them breath, Therefore these stops of thine, fright me the more: For such things in a falle disloyall Knaue Are trickes of Custome: but in a man that's lust, They're close dilations, working from the heart, That Passion cannot rule.

lago. For Michael Cafiro, I dare be sworne, I thinke that he is honest Orb. I thinke fo too.

lago. Men (hould be what they feeme,

Or those that be not, would they might seeme none.

Oth. Certaine, men should be what they seeme. lago. Why then I thinke Cafilo's an honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this? I prythee speake to me, as to thy thinkings,

As thou doft ruminate, and give thy work of thoughts

The worst of words.

Ingo Good my Lord pardon me, Though I am bound to cuery Acte of dutie, I am not bound to that : All Slaues arefree: Veterniy Thoughts? Why fay, they are vild, and falce? As where's that Palace, whereinto foule things Sometimes intrude not? Who ha's that brean fo pure, Wherein viicleanly Apprehentions Keepe Leeres, and Law-dayes, and in Seffions fit With medications lawfull ?

Och. Thou do'th conspire against thy Friend (logo) If thou but think'ft him wrong'd, and mak'ft his care lugo. I do befeech you. Though I perchance am vicious in my guelle (As I confesse it is my Natures plague To spy into Abuses, and of my lealouse Shapes faults that are not) that your wisedome From one, that to imperfedly concerts, Would take no notice, nor build your selfe a trouble Out of his feattering, and unfore observance: It were not for your quiet, not your good, Nor formy Manhood, Honesty, and Wisedome, To let you know my thoughts.

A Rranger to thy Thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou meane?

lago. Good name in Man, & woman (deere my Lord) Is the immediate lewell of their Soules; Who steales my puric. steales trash: Tis fomething, nothing; Twas mine, itis his, and has bin flaue to thousands. But he that filches from me my good Name, Robs me of that, which not enriches him,

And makes me poore indeed. Oth. He know thy Thoughts.

Iseo. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand, Not shall not, whil'st 'tis in my custodie.

01b. Ha?

lago. Oh, beware my Lord, of iealoufie, It is the greene-ey'd Monster, which doth mocke The meate it feeds on. That Cuckold lives in bliffe, Who certaine of his Face, loves not his wronger: But oh, what damned minutes tels he ore, Who dotes, yet doubts : Suspects, yet soundly loves?

Oth. O miserie.

Jago Poore, and Content, is rich, and rich enough. But Riches finelesse, is as poore as Winter, To him that ever feares he shall be poore : Good Heaven, the Soules of all my Tribe defend From lealouse.

Orb. Why? why is this? Think's thou, I'ld make a Life of Tealoufie; To follow still the changes of the Moone With fresh suspicions? No : to be once in doubt, Is to be refolu'd : Exchange me for a Goat When I shall turne the businesse of my Soule To fuch exufflicate, and blow'd Surmifes, Matching thy inference. Tis not to make me lealious, To fay my wife is faire, feeds well, loues company, Is free of Speech, Sings, Playes, and Dances a Where Vertue is, these are more vertuous. Nor from mine owne weake merites, will I draw The smallest feare, or doubt of her tenolt, For the had eyes, and chose me. No lago, ile fee before I doubt; when I doubt, proue; And on the proofe, there is no more but this, Away at once with Loue, or Iraioufie.

is. I am glad of this; For now I shall have tersion To shew the Love and Duty that I beare you With franker spirit. Therefore (as I am bound) Recouse it from me. I speake not yet of proofe: Looke to your wife, observe her well with Cafin, Weate your eyes, thus: not lealious, nor Secure: I would not have your free, and Noble Nature, Out of selfe. Bounty, be abus'd : Locke too't: know our Country disposition well: In Venice, they do let Heauen fee the pranker They date not show their Husbands. Their beft Conference, Is not to leave't vindone, but kept viknowne.

Oth. Dorthousay so?

lago. She did deceiue her Father, marrying you, And when the feem'd to thake, and feate your lookes, She lou'd them most.

Och. And so shedid

loge. Why go too then: Shee that so young could give out such a Seeming To scele her Fathers eyes vp, close as Oake, He chought twas Witchcraft. But I am much too blame! I humbly do befeech you of your parden For the much louing you.

Oib. I am bound to thee for ever.

lago. I fee this hath a little dash'd your Spirics :

Oib. Noraiot, notaiot

lago. Trust me, l fezre it has: I hope you will confider what is spoke Comes from your Loue, But I do let, y'ere moou'd: I am to pray you, not to ftraine my speech To groffer iffues, nor to larger reach, Then to Suspition.

Oth. I will not,

lega, Should you do fo (my Lord)
My speech should fall into such vilde successe, Which my Thoughts aym'd not Coffie's my worthy Friend: My Lord. I fee y'are mou'd.

Oth. No not much mou'd: I do not thinke but Defdemona's honest.

lago. Long live the for And long live you to thinke fo.

Orb. And yet how Nature erring from it lelfe.

lago. I, there's the point : As (to be bold with you) Not to affect many proposed Matches Of her owne Clime, Complexion, and Degree, Whereto we fee in all things, Nature tends: Foh, one may smel in such, a will most ranke, Foule dilproportions. Thoughts vanaturally Bu: (pardon me) I do not in pofition Distinctly speake of her, though I may feare Her will, recoyling to her better indgement, May tal to match you with her Country formes, And happily repent

Oth. Farewell.farewell: If more thou dost perceive, let me know more: Set on thy wife to observe.

Lezue me Ingo.

Ingo. Mv Lord, I take my leaue.

Othel. Why did I marry? This honest Creature (doubtlesse)

Sees, and knowes more, much more then he vnfolds.

lago. My Lord, I would I might intrest your Honor To scan this thing no farther : Leave it so strue, Although ris fit that Coffie have his Place; For fure he filles it up with great Ability; Yet if you please, to him off a-while: You shall by that perceive him, and his meanes: Note if your Lady Arsine bis Entertainment With any strong, or vehement importunitie, Much will be feene in that : In the meane time, Let me be thought too busie in my feares, (As worthy cause I have to scare I am) And hold her free, I do befeech your Honor.

Oth. Feare not my government. lago. I once more take my leave.
Oth. This Fellow's of exceeding honesty. Exit. And knowes all Quantities with a learn'd Spirit Of burnane dealings. If I do proue her Haggard, Though that her Jeffes were my deere heart-lirings, I'ld whistle her off, and let her downe the winde To prey at Fortune. Haply, for I am blacke, And have not those fost parts of Conversation That Chamberers have : Or for I am declin'd Into the vale of yeares (yet that's nos much) Shee's gone. I am abus'd, and my releefe Must be to loath her. Oh Curse of Marriage! That we can call thefe delicate Creatures ours, And not their Appetites? I had rather be a Toad, And live vpon the vapour or a Dungeon, Then keepe a corner in the thing I loue For others vies. Yet 'tis the plague to Great ones, Prerogatiu'd are they leffe then the Bale, Tis oestiny vnshunnable, like death: Euen then, this forked plague is Fated to vs, When we do quicken. Looke where the comes:

Ester Desdemona and Æmilia.

If she be salse, Heaven mock dit selse: He nor beleene't.

Def. How now, my deere Othello? Your dinner, and the generous Islanders By you invited, do attend your prefence.

Oth. I am too blame.

Def. Why do you speake so faintly? Are you not well?

Orb. I have a paine upon my Forehead, heere.
Def. Why that's with watching, 'twill away againe. Let me but binde it hard, within this houre It will be well.

O.b. Your Napkin is too little ? Enie. Let it alone: Come, lle go in with you.

Def. I am very forry that you are not well. Æmil. I am glad I have found this Napkin: This was her first remembrance from the Moore, My wayward Husband hath a hundred times Woo'd me to steale it. But she so loues the Token, (For he conjur'd her, the should ever keepe it) That the referues it evermore about her, To kille, and talke too. Ile have the worke tane out, And giu't lago: what he will do with it Heaven knowes, not I: I nothing, but to pleafe his Fantalie.

Enter lago. lago. How now? What do you heere alone? Emil. Do not you chide t I have a thing for you.

lago. You have a thing for me? It is a common thing -Amil. Hah?

Igo. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. Oh, is that all? What will you glue me now For that same Handkerchiefe.

Isgo. What Handkerchlefe? Entil. What Handkerchiefe? Why that the Moore first gave to Defdemena, That which to often you did bid me steale.

lago. Haft flolne it from her? Emil. No: but the let it drop by negligence, And to th'aduantage, I bring heere, took't vp: Looke, heere 'tis.

so earnest to have me filch it?

lago. Why, what is that to you?

Emil. If it be not for fome purpose of import, Giu't me againe. Poore Lady, shee'l run mad When the Thall lacke it.

lago. Be not acknowne on't: I haue vie for it. Go, leaue me. Exit Emil I will in Coffic's Lodging loofe this Nopkin, And let him finde it. Trifles light as ayre, Are to the lealious, confirmations flrong, As proofes of holy Writ. This may do something. The Moore already changes with my poyfon: Dangerous conceites, are in their Natures poylons, Which at the first are scarfe found to distaste: But with a little acte vpon the blood, Burne like the Mines of Sulphure, I did fay fo.

Enter Othello. Lookewhere he comes : Nor Poppy, nor Mandragora, Nor all the drowfie Syrrups of the world Shall ever medicine thee to that fweete fleepe Which thou owd'A yesterday.

Otb. Ha, ha, faile to mee?

lago. Why how now Generall' No more of that.
Oth. Auant, be gone: Thou hast fet me on the Racke:
I fweare tis bettel. to be much abus'd, Then but to know't a little.

Ingo. How nove, my Lord? Oth. What sense had I, in her stolne houres of Lust? I faw't not, thought it not : ir harm'd not me : I slept the next night well, fed well, was free, and merrie. I found not Caffio's kiffes on her Lippes : He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stolne Let him not know't, and he's not robb'd at all.

Lago. I am forry to heare this? Oib. I had beene happy, if the general! Campe, Pyoners and all, had tasted her sweet Body, So I bad nothing knowne. Oh now, for ever Farewell the Tranquill minde; forewell Content; Farewell the plumed Troopes, and the bigge Wartes, That makes Ambition, Vertue! Oh farewell, Farewell the neighing Steed, and the shrill Trumpe, The Spirit-stirring Drum, th'Eare-piercing Fife, The Royall Banner, and all Qualitie Pride, Pompe, and Circumftance of glorious Warres And O you mortall Engines, whose rude throates Th'immortall Ioues dread Clamours, counterfet, Farewell: Othelle's Occupation's gone.

Isea. Is's possible my Lord? Oth. Villaine, be fure thou proue my Loue a Whore; Be sure of it: Give me the Occular proofe, Or Or by the worth of mine eternal! Soule, Thou had'ft bin bester have bin borne a Dog Then answer my wak'd wrath.

lago. la'i come to this?

Oib. Make me to fee't: or (at the leaft) fo proue it, That the probation beare no Hindge, nor Loope. To hang a doubt on : Or woe voon thy life.

Oib. If thou doft flander her, and tortune me, Neuer pray more: Abandon all remorfe On Horrors head, Horrors accumulate: Do deeds to make Heauen weepe, all Earth amaz'd; For nothing caust thou to damnation adde, Greater then that, lago. O Grace! O Heaven forgive me! Are you a Man? Haue you a Soule? or Sense? God buy you : take mine Office. Oh wretched Foole, That lou'll to make thine Honefly, a Vice! Oh monstrous world! Take note, take note (O World) To be direct and honeft, is not fale. I thanke you for this profit, and from hence Ile loue no Friend, fith Loue breeds fuch offence.

Och. Nay flay : thou should'st be bonest. lago. I should be wife; for HoneRie's a Foole,

And looses that it workes for, Orb. By the World,

I thinke my Wife be honest, and thinke she is not : I thinke that thou art just, and thinke thou art not : Dehaue some proofe. My name that was as fresh As Dies Vilage, is now begrim'd and blacke As mine owne face. If there be Cords, or Knives, Poylon, or Fire, or luffocating Areames, He not indure it. Would I were latis fied.

lago. I fee you are eaten vp with Paffion: I do repent ine, that I put it to you. You would be fatisfied?

Oth. Would? Nay, and I will.

Jago. And may : but how! How fatisfied, my Lord Would you the super-vision grossely gape on? Behold her top'd?

Orb. Death, and damnation. Oh! Lago. Ie were a tedious difficulty, I thinke, To bring them to that Profped : Damne them then, If ever mortall eyes do fee them boulfter More then their owne. What then? How then? What shall I fay? Where's Satisfaction? It is impossible you should see this, Were they as prime as Goztes, as hot as Monkeyes, As falt as Wolves in pride, and Fooles as groffe As Ignorance, made drunke. But yet ,1 fay, If imputation, and strong circumstances, Which leade directly to the doore of Truth, Will give you fatisfaction, you might have'r.
Oth. Give me a living reason the's disloyeth.

Jago. I do not like the Office. But fith I am entred in this cause so farre (Prick'd 100's by foolish Honesty, and Loue) I will go on. I lay with Caffe lately, And being troubled with a raging tooth, I could not sleepe. There are a kinde of men, So loofe of Soule, that in their fleepes will mutter Their Affayres: one of this kinde is Caffie: In Sleepe I heard him fay, Sweet Desdemona, Let vs be wary, let vs hide our Loues, And then (Sir) would be gripe, and wring my band: Cry, oh sweet Creature: then kiffe me hard,

As if he plucks up killes by the rootes, That grew upon my lippes, laid his Leg or emy Thigh, And ligh, and kille, and then cry curled Fate, That gave thee to the Moore.

Orb. O monfirous! monfirous!

lage. Nay, this was but his Dreame.
Oth. But this denoted a forc-gone conclusion,
'Tis a threw'd doubt, though it be but a Dreame.

laga. And this may helpe to thicken other proofer, That do demonstrate thinly.

Orb. He teare her all to peeces.

lago. Nay yet be wise; yet we see nothing done, She may be honest yet: Tell me but this, Haue you not sometimes seene a Handkerchiefe Spotted with Strawberries, in your wrotes hand?

Orb. I gaue her fuch a one: 'twas my first gift. lago. I know not that : but fuch a Handkerchiefe (I am fure it was your wives) did I to day See Cassio wipe his Beard with.

Oib. Ifit be that.

lage. If it be that, or any, it was hers. It speakes against her with the other proofes.

Othel. O that the Slave had forty thousand lives . One is too poore, too weake for my revenge. Now do I fee tis true. Looke beere lago, All my fond love thus do I blow to Heaven. 'Tir gooe, Atise blacke vengeance, from the hollow hell. Yeeld up (O Loue) thy Crowne, and bearted Throne To tyrannous Hate. Swell bosome with thy fraught, For tis of Africkes tongues.

lago. Yei be content.
Oib. Oh blood, blood, blood.

lago. Patience I say : your minde may change. Orb. Neuer laze. Like to the Ponticke Sea,

Whose Icie Current, and compulsive course, Neu'r keepes tetyring ebbe, but keepes due on To the Proponticke, and the Hellespont: Euen fo my bloody thoughts, with violent pace Shall neu'r looke backe, neu'r ebbe to humble Lone, Till that a capeable, and wide Revenge Swallow them up. Now by yond Marble Heaven, In the due reverence of a Sacred vow,

I heere engage my words.

lago. Do not rife yet : Witnesse you ever-burning Lights above, You Elements, that clip vs tound about, Witnesse that heere lago doth give vp The execution of his wit, hands, heart, To wrong'd Osbello's Service. Let him command, And to obey shall be in me remorse, What bloody bufineffe ever.

Oth. I greet thy lone, Not with vaine thanks, but with acceptance bounteous, And will spon the inftant put thee too't. Within these three dayes let me heare thee say,

That Caffie's not alive. Icro. My Friend in desd : Tis done at your Request.

Butlet her live. Oib. Damne her lewde Minx: O damne her, damne her. Come go with me a-part, I will withdraw To furnish me with some swift meanes of death

For the faire Divell Now are thou my Lieutenant logo. I am your owne for euer.

Exeum. Scena

Scana Quarta.

Enter Deschemona, Amilia and Clown.

Def. Do you know Sitrah, where Lieutenant Caffio lyes?

Claw. I date not fay he lies any where.

Def. Why man?

Clo. He's a Soldier, and for me to fay a Souldier lyes, 'tis ftabbing.

Def. Go too: where lodges he?

Clo. To rell you where he lodges, is to tel you where

Def. Can any thing be made of this !

Ch. I know not where he lodges, and for mee to deuife a lodging, and fay he fies heere, or he lies there, were to lye in mine owne throat.

Def. Can you enquire him out? and be edified by rebott }

Clo. I will Catechize the world for him, that is, make Queftions and by them answer.

Def. Seeke him bidde him come hither . tell him, 1 have moou'd my Lord on his behalfe, and hope all will

Clo. To do this, is within the compaffe of mans Wit. and therefore I will attempt the doing it.

Def. Where should I loofe the Handkerchiefe, Amilia?

Amus I know not Madara

Def Beleeve me, I had rather have loft my purfa Pull of Cruzadoes. And but my Noble Moore Is crue of minde, and made of no fuch balenelle, As icalious Creatures are, it were enough To put him to ill thinking.

Æmil Is he not iealious?

Who, he? I thinke the Sun where he was borne, Def Drew all fuch humors from him.

Emd. Looke where he comes.

Enter Othello.

Def. I will not leave him now, till Cassio be Call'd to him. How is t with you, my Lord?

Oth. Well my good Lady. Oh hardnes to distemble: How do you, Deflumona?

Def. Well, my good Lord.

Oth. Give me your hand.

This hand is moift my Lady.

Def It hathfelt no age, not knowne no forrow.

Orb. This argues fruitfulnesse, and liberall heats a Hos, hos, and moyer. This hand of yours requires A lequelter from Liberty : Falling, and Prayer, Much Caffigation, Exercise devout For heere's a yong, and Iweating Divell heere That commonly rebels: Tis a good hand, A franke one.

Def. You may (indeed) fay fo:

For twasthat hand that gaue away my heart.

Oth. A liberall hand. The hearts of old, gaue hands But our new Heraldry is hands, not hearts.

Def. I cannot speake of this i Come, now your promise.
Oth What promise Chucke?

Def. I have lent to bid Caffe come speake with you.

Oib. I have a falt and forry Rhewme offends me:

Lend mo thy Handkerchiefe.

Def. Heere my Lord.
Oth That which I go

That which I gave you.

Def. I have it not about me.

Oth Not?

Def No indeed, my Lord.
Oth. That's a fault t That Handkerchiefe

Did an Ægyptian to my Mother give: She was a Charmer, and could almost read

The thoughts of people. She told her, while the kept it. T would make her Amiable, and Subdue my Facher

Intirely to her love . But if the loft it. Or made a Guift of it, my Fathers eye

Should hold her loathed, and his Spirite should hunt After new Fancles. She dying, gaue it me,

And bid me (when my Fate would have me Wird) To give it her. I did fo; and take heede on't, Make it a Darling, like your preclous eye

To loofe's, or give's away, were fuch perdition, As nothing elfe could match.

Def. 1st possible?
Orb. 'Tistrue There's Magicke in the web of it: A Sybill that had numbeed in the world The Sun to courle, two hundred compaffes, In her Prophetricke furie fow'd the Worke: The Wormes were hallowed, that did breede the Silke, And it was dyde in Mummey, which the Skilfull Conferu'd of Maidens hearts.

Def. Indeed ? is't true ?

Oib. Most veritable, therefore looke too't well.

Def. Then would to Heaven, that I had never feene ?

Orh. Ha? wherefore?

Why do you speake so startingly and rash?

Def Why do you fpeake to startingly and rain Orb Is't lest? Is't gon? Speak, is tout o'th'way?

Def. Bleffe vs. Osb. Say you?

Def. It is not loft, but what and if it were?

Oib. How !

Def. I fay it is not lost.

Oib. Feicht, ki me fee't.

Def. Why folcan : but I will not now : This is a tricke to put me from my fuite,

Pray you les Caffio be receiu'd againe. Och. Fetch me the Handkerchiefe, Myminde mil-giues.

Def . Come, come: you'l neuer meete a more lufficient maa.

Oib. The Handkerchiefe.

Def A man that all his time

Hash founded his good Fortunes on your love; Shar'd dangers with you.

Oth. The Handkerchiefe.

Def. Infooth, you are soo blame. Oth. Away.

Emil. Is not this man jealious?

Def. I neu'r faw this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this Handkerchikee, I am most vnhappy in the losse of it.

Amil. 'Tis not a yeare or two fhewes vs a man: They are all but Stomackes, and we all but Food, They eate vs hongerly, and when they are full They belch vs.

Enter I ago, and Coffw.

Looke you, Callicand my Husband.

logo. There is no other way : 'sis the mult doot: And loetine happinesse i go, and importune her.

Def.

Exx Othello.

Def. How now (good Cafe) what's the newes with you?

Casso. Madam, my former suite. I do befeeth you, That by your vertuous meanes, I may againe Exist, and be a member of his love.
Whom I, with all the Office of my heart lourely honour, I would not be delayd. If my offence, be of such mortall kinde,
That nor my Service past, nor present Sorrowes.
Nor purpos'd meric in futurity.
Can ransome me into his love againe,
But to know so, must be my benefit:
So shall I cloath me in a forc'd content.
And thut my selfe vp is some other coasse.
To Portuoes Almes.

Def. Alas (thrice-gentle Caffie)
My Advocation is not now in Tune;
My Lord, is not my Lord; nor should I know him,
Were he in Fanour, as in Humour alter'd.
So helpe me every spirit sancasted,
As I have spoken for you all my best,
And stood within the blanke of his displeasure
For my free speech. You must awhile be pacient:
What I can do, I will: and more I will Then for my selfe, I dare. Let that suffice you.

Lago. Is my Lord angry?

Emd. He went hence but now:

And certainly in ftrange vnquietneffe.

Myo. Can be be sogry? I have feene the Cannon When it hath blowne his Rankes into the Ayre, And like the Dwell from his very Arme Puff't his owne Brother: And is he angry? Something of moment then: I will go meet him, There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry.

Def. I per thee do so. Something fure of State, Either from Venice, or some valuateh'd practise Made demonstrable heere in Cyprus, to him, Heth pudled his cleare Spirit: and in such cases, Mens Natures wrangle with inferiour things, Though great ones are their obiect. "Tis even so. For let our singer are, and it endues. Our other healthfull members, even to a sense Of paice. Nay, we must thinke men are not Gods, Nor of them looke for such observancie. As sits the Bridail. Bestieve me much. Emilia, I was (valuandsome Warrior, as 1 am). Armigning his valuadnesse with my soule: But now I finde, I had suborn'd the Witnesse, And he's Indited falsely.

End. Prey heaven it bee State matters, as you thinke, and no Conception, Nor no Jealious Toy, concerning you.

Def Alar the day, I never gave him cause.

Emd. But lealious soules will not be answer'd so;
They are not ever iealious for the cause,
But iealious, for they're iealious itss bionster
Beget apon it selfe, borne on it selfe.

Def. Heaven keepe the Monster from Otheld; mind. Emd. Lady, Amen.

Def I will go feeke him. Caffe, walke hear about:

If I doe finde him fit, He mone your fuite,

And looke to effect it to my vitermost.

Caf. I humbly thanke your Ladythip.

Buen. Saur you Friend Coffe.)

Caffe. What make you from bome? How w't with you, my most faire Beare ?

Indeed ((weer Love) I was comming to your house.

Bam. And I was going to your Lodging, Cass.

What? keeps a weeke away? Seven dayes, and Nights?

Eight score eight houses? And Lovers absent howres

More tedious then the Diall, dight score times?

Oh weary reckining.

Casso. Pardon me, Dianca:
I have this while with leaden thoughts beene preft,
But I shall in a more continuate time
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Biance
Take me this worke cut.

Bunca. Oh Caffu, whence come this? This is forme Token from a newer Friend, To the felt-Ablence: now I feele a Cause: 1s't come to this? Well, well.

Caffe. Go too, woman:
Throw your vilde gelles in the Diucls teeth,
From whence you have them. You are realious now,
That this is from some Mistru, some remembrance;
No, in good troth Busica.

Baco. Why, who's usit?
Caffe. I know not ocuher:
I found it in my Chamber:
I like the worke well; Ere it be demended
(As like enough it will) I would have it coppied a
Take it, and doo't, and leave me for this time.
Baco. Leave you? Wherefore?

Coffic. I do attend heere on the Generall,
And thinker no addition nor my with
To have him fee me women'd.

Bion. Why, I ptay you?

Caffo. No that I lose you not.

Bion. But that you do not love me.

I pray you bring me on the way a little,

And lay, if I shall fee you foone at caght?

Caffee. Tis but a little way that I can bring you, For I attend beere: But lie fee you soone.

Bian. 'Tis very good . I must be circumstanc'd.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Error Orbello, and logo.

Iaga. Will you thinks for Oth. Thinks for lago? Iago. What, to kille in prinate? Orb. An visuthoriz'd kiffe?

lago. Or to be naked with her Friend in bed,

An house, or more, not meaning any harme?

Oth. Naked in bed (lago) and not meane harme?

It is hypocrific against the Dinell:

They that meane vertuously, and yet do so,
The Divell their vertue tempts, and they tempt Heaven.

lago. If they do nothing, the a Venial slip:

Sut if I give my wife a Handkerchiefe.
Orb. What then?

I ago. Why then tis hers (my Lord) and being bers,
She may (I thinke) before to any man,
Och. She is Procedurelle of her henor too:

May the give that?

Zago.

lego. Her honor is an Effence that's not feene, They have it very oft, that have it not.

But for the Handkerchiefe.

Oths. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it: Thou faidft (oh, it comes ore my memorie, As doth the Rauen o're the infectious house: Boading to all) he had my Handkerchiefe. lago. I : what of thet?

Orbe. That's notfo good now.

lag. What if I had faid, I had feene him do you wrong! Or heard him fay (29 Knaues be fuch abroad,

Who having by their owne importunate fuit, Or voluntary dotage of fome Mistris, Convinced or supply'd them, cannot chuse

But they must blab.)

Oth. Hath he faid any thing?

lago. He bath (my Lord)but be you well affur'd, No more then he'le vn-sweare.

Oth. What hath he faid?

lago. Why, that he did : I know not what he did.

Oche, What? What?

lago. Lye.
Oth. With her?

logo. With her Won her , what you will.

Other. Lye with her? Iye on her? We say lye on her, when they be-lye-her. Lye with her: that's fullome: Handkerchiefe: Confessions: Handkerchiefe. To confesse, and be hang'd for his labour. First, to be hang'd, and then to confesse: I tremble at it. Nature would not inuest her selfe in such shadowing passion, without some Instruction. It is not words that shakes me thus, (pish) Nofes, Eares, and Lippes : 18's possible. Confesse? Handkerchiefe? O diuell. Falls in a Traumes.

lago. Worke on, My Medicine workes. Thus eredulous Fooles are caught, And many worthy, and chast Dames even thus, (All guiltleffe) meere reproach i what hos ? My Lord? My Lord, I say : Othello

Emer Caffio.

How now Casso?
Cas. What's the matter?

lago: My Lord is falneinto an Epilepfie, This is his second Fit: he had one yesterday.

Caf. Rub him about the Temples.

lago. The Lethargie must have his quyer course: If not, he foames at mouth : and by and by Breakes out to lausge madnesse. Looke, he stirres: Do you withdraw your selfe a little while, He will recouer straight: when he is gone, would on great occasion, speake with you.

How is it Generall? Have you not hurt your head? Oibe. Dost thou mocke me?

lego. I mocke you not, by Heaven: Would you would beare your Fortune like a Man.

Orbe. A Horned man's a Monflet, and a Beaft.

lage. Ther's many a Beaft then in a populous Cirty, And many a ciuill Monster.

Othe. Did he confesse it?

lago. Good Sir, be a man: Thinke cuery bearded fellow that's but yoak'd

May draw with you. There's Millions now alive, That nightly lye in those vnproper beds,

Which they dare (weare peculiar. Your case is better. Oh, 'ris the spight of hell the Fiends Arch-mock,

To lip a wanton in a fecure Cowch;

And to suppose her chaft. No let me know, And knowing what I am, I know what the shallbe.

Oth. Oh, thou art wife : tis certaine. lago. Stand you a while apart, Confine your felfe but in a patient Lift, Whil'st you were heere, o're-whelmed with your griefe (A passion most resulting such a man) Callio came hither. I shifted him away, And layd good fcufes upon your Extafie, Badhim anon returne : and heere speake with me, The which he promis'd. Do but encaue your selfe. And marke the Fleeres, the Gybes, and notable Scomes That dwell in every Region of his face. For I will make him tell the Tale anew; Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when He hath, and is againe to cope your wife. I fay, but marke his gesture marry Patience, Or I shall say y'are all in all in Spicene, And nothing of a man.

Othe. Do'ft thou heare, lage, I will be found most cunning in my Patiences Bur (do'ft thou heare) most bloody.

lago. That's not amiffe, But yet keepe time in all : will you withdraw? Now will I question Casso of Beanca, A Hulwife, that by felling her delires Buyes her selfe Bread, and Cloach It is a Creature That dotes on Casso, (as 'tis the Strumpets plague To be-guile many, and be be-guil'd by one) He, when he heares of her, cannot restraine From the excelle of Laughter. Heere he comes.

Enter Callio.

As he shall smile, Ochello shall go mad: And his vnbookish I elousie must conferue Poore Cassio's (miles, gestures, and light behaviours Quite in the wrong. How do you Lieutenant?

Caf. The worler, hat you give me the addition,

Whose want euen killes me.

lago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on's; Now, if this Suit lay in Bianca's dowre, How quickely (hould you speed?

Caf. Alas poore Cairiffe

Oth. Looke how he laughes already. lago. I neuer knew woman loue man fo.

Caf. Alas poore Rogue, I thinke indeed the loues me Oth. Now he denies it faintly: and laughes it out.

lago. Do you heare Cassio?

Oth. Now he importunes him To tell no're: go too, well faid, well faid.

logo. She gives it out, that you shall marry her. Do you intend it?

Caf. Ho, ha, ha.

Orb. Do ye triumph, Romaine? do you triumph?

Caf. I marry. What ? A customer sprythee beare Some Charitic to my wit, do not thinke it

So vnwholesome. Ha, ha, ha.

Oth. So, fo, fo, fo: they laugh, that winnes. lago. Why the cry goes, that you marry her.

Caf. Prythee fay true.

Jago. I am a very Villaine elfe.
Och. Have you (coar'd me? Well.

Caf. This is the Monkeys owne giving out a She is perswaded I will marry her

Out of her owne love & flattery, not out of my promise. Othe.

Oib. Ingo becomes me t now he begins the flory Cassu. She was beere even now: The haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking on the Seabanke with certaine Venetians, and thither comes the Bauble, and falls me thus about my neck.

Oib. Crying oh deere Caffe, as it were: his resture im-

Caffe. So hangs, and lolls, and weepes vpon me.

So shakes, and pulls me. Ha,ha,ha.

Orb. Now he cells how the plucke him to my Chamber : oh, I fee that note of yours, but not that dogge, I shall throw it to.

Caffie. Well, I most leave her companie. Ingo. Before me : looke where the comes.

Eater Bianca.

Caf. 'Tis such another Fitchew: marry a perfum'd one? What do you meane by this haunting of me?

Blan. Let the diuell, and his dam haunt you : what did you meane by that same Handkerchiese, you gaue me euen now? I was a fine Foole to take ic: I must cake out the worke? A likely piece of worke, that you thould finde it in your Chamber, and know not who left it there. This is some Minxes token, & I must take out the worker There, give it your Hobbey-horle, whereloeuer you had italle take out no worke on t.

Cassio. How now, my sweete Bianca?

How now? How now?

Oibe. By Heauen, that hould be my Handkerchiefe. Bias. If you'le come to supper to night you may, if you will nor, come when you are next prepar'd for. Exu lage. After her rafter her. Caf. I must, shee'l rayle in the streets else.

lege. Will you sup there?

Casso. Yes, I intend so.
Iago. Well, I may chance to see you: for I would ve-Ty faine speake with you.

Cas Prythee come: will you?

lago. Go too : fay no more.
Oth. How shall I murther him, lago.

Iago. Did you perceiue how he laugh'd at his vice?

Oib. Oh, lago

lege. And did you fee the Handkerchiefe?

Oib. Wasthat mine?

lago. Yours by this hand: and to fee how he prizes the foolish woman your wife: she gaue it him, and he hash giu'n it his whore.

Orb. I would have him nine yeeres a killing: A fine woman, a faire woman, a fweete woman?

lage. Nay, you must forget that.

Othello. I, let her rot and petith, and be domn'd to night, for the thall not live. No, my heart is turn'd to stone: I strike ir, and it hurts my hand. Oh, the world hathnot a sweeter Creatore: the might lye by an Emperour's fide, and command him Taskes.

lage. Nay, that's not your way.

Othe. Hang her, I do but say what she is : so delicate with her Needle: an admirable Musician. Oh she will fing the Sauageneffe out of a Beare : of fo high and plenteous wit, and invention?

Iogo. She's the worfe for all this. Othe. Oh, a thousand, a thousand times:

And then of fo gentle a condition?

Isgo. I too gentle.
Othe. Nay that's certaine:

But yet the pitty of it, lago: oh lago, the pitty of it lago. If you are lo fond over her iniquine give her pattent to offend, for if it touch not you at comes neere

Oib. I will chop her Into Melles : Cuckold me?

lage. Oh, 'ris foule in her. Oib. With mine Officer?

lage. That's fouler.

Orbe. Get me some poyson, lage, this night. He not expostulate with her , less her body and beautie vnotouide my mind againe : this night lago.

legs. Do it not with poylon, strangle ber in her bed,

Even the bed the hath contaminated.

Osb. Good, good:

The lustice of it pleases : very good.

lago. And for Caffie, let me be bis vadertaker : You shall heare more by midnight.

Enter Lodonico, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Oche. Excellent good: What Trumpet is that sme?

Ingo. I warrant something from Venice, Tis Lodosuco this, comes from the Duke.

See, your wife's with him.

Ledo. Saue you worthy Generall. Oibe. With all my heart Sir.

Led. The Duke, and the Senators of Venice greet you.

Orbe. I kille the Inftrument of their pleasures.

Def. And what's the newes, good cozen Lodonico? lago. 1 am very glad to fee you Signior:

Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thanke you: bow do's Lieutenan: Caffe?

lage. Lines Sir,

Def. Cozen, there's falne betweene him, & my Lord, An vokind breach: but you shall make all well.

Othe. Are you fure of that?

Def. My Lord?

Orbe. This faile you not to do, as you will -

Lod. He did not call : he's busie in the paper, Is there deuision 'twixt my Lord, and Caffin?

Def. A most vnhappy one: I would do much Tattone them for the loue I beare to Caffie.

Oth. Fire, and brimestone.

Def. My Lord, Oib. Areyou wise?

Def. What is he angrie?

Lod. May be th Letter mou'd him,

For as I chinke, they do command him home, Deputing Cafin in his Government.

Def. Trust me, 1 am glad on't.

Orbe. Indeed?

Def. My Lord?

Othe. I am glad to fee you mad.

Def. Why I weete Orbelle?

Oibe. Diuell.

Def. I haue not deseru'd this.

Led. My Lord, this would not be beleen'd in Venice, Though I should sweare I saw's, Tis very much,

Make her amends : The weepes.

Othe. Oh diuell, divell:

If that the Earth could teeme with womans teares, Each drop the falls, would proues Crocodile :

Out of my fight.

Def. I will not flay to offend you, Lot. Truely obedient Lady:

Idobeleech your Lordinip call her backe.

Orke, Miftris.

Def. My Lord

Othe. What would you with her, Sir? Lod. Who I, my Lord?

Othe. I, you did wish, that I would make her turne. Sir The can turne, and turne and yet go on And turne againe. And the can weepe, Sir, weepe And the's obedient : as you fay obedient Very obedient: proceed you in your teates Concerning this Sis, (oh well-painted passion) I am commanded home : get you away .
lle fend for you anon Sit I obey the Mandate, And will returne to Venice. Hence, august : Ceffio shall have my Place. And Sic, co night I do entreat, that we may sup together. You are welcome Sir to Cyptus.

Goates, and Monkeys. Exit.

Lod. Is this the Noble Moore, whom our full Senace Call all in all sufficient ? Is this the Nature Whom Pellion could not shake? Whole solid vertue The thor of Accident, nor dare of Chance Could neither graze, nor pierce?

lago. He is much changin; Lod. Are his wits lafe? Is he not light of Braine? lago. He's that he is : I may not breath my confure. What he might besif what he might, he is not, I would to heaven he were.

Lod. What? Strike his wife?

lago. 'Faith that was not fo well: yet would I knew That stroke would prove the worst.

Led. Is it his vie?

Ot did the Letters, worke vpon his blood,

And new create his fault?

Icgo. Alas, alas:

It is not bonestie in me to speake What I have feene, and knowne. You shall observe him, And his owne courses will deonte him so, That I may lave my speech : do but go after

And marke how he continues.

Lad. I am forry that I am deceiu'd in him.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Otholls and Emilia.

Orbo. You have feene nothing then! Emil. Not ever heard : nor ever did suspect. Orbe. Yes, you have feene Caffo, and the together. Ami. But then I saw no harme : and then I heard, Each (yillable that breath made up betweene them. Othe. What Did they never whilper?

Emil. Never my Lord. Orbe. Nor fend you out o'th'way?

Emil. Neuer

Othe. To fetch her Fan, her Gloues, her Mask, nor no-Envil. Neuer my Lord.

Orte. That's Arange.

Amil. I durft(my Lord) to wager, The is honeft: Lay downe my Soule at fake : If you thinke other, Remoue your thought. It doth abuse your bosome: If any wretch have put this in your head, Let Heaven requit it with the Serpents curse,

For if the be not honest chaste and true, There's no man happy. The purest of their Wives Is foule as Slander.

Othe. Bid her come hither : go. She faics enough : yet the's a fimple Baud That cannot fay as much. This is a fubrile Whore: A Closler Lockeand Key of Villanous Secress, And yet the le kneele, and pray : I have feene her do't.

Enter Defdemona and Amilia.

Def. My Lord, what is your will? Othe. Pray you Chucke come hisher.

Def. What is your pleafure?
Och. Let me lee your eyes: looke in my face.

Def. What hot rible Fancie's this?
Othe Some of yout Function Mistris:

Leave Practeants slone, and thu t the doore: Cough, or cry hem; if any bod ycome :

Your Mystery, your Mystery May dispatch, Exis & mi

Def. Vpon my knee, what doth your speech import? I vnderstand a Fury in your words...

Othe. Why? What att thou?

Def. Your wife my Lord; your true and loyall wife.

Oibello Come sweare it : damne thy selfe, least being like one of Heaven, the divells themselves should feare to ceaze thee. Therefore be double damn'd, sweare thou art honest.

Def. Heaven doth truely know it.

Orbe. Heaven truely knowes, that thou are falle as hell.

Def. To whom my Lord? With whom? How am I false?

Othe Ah Defdemon, away, away, away.

Def. Alas the heavy day: why do you weepe? Am I the motive of thefe teares my Lord? If happely you my Father do suspect, An Instrument of this your calling backe, Lay not your blame on me: if you have lost him, I have lost him too.

Othe. Hadit pleas'd Heaven, To try me with Affliction, had they rain'd All kind of Sores, and Shames on my bare-head: Steep'd me in povertie to the very lippes. Given to Captiunie, me, and my vemost hopes, I should have found in some place of my Soule A drop of patience. But alas, to make me The fixed Figure for the time of Scorne, To point his flow, and moving finger at. Yet could I beare that too, well, very well : But there where I have garnerd up my heart, Where either I must live, or beare no life, The Fountaine from the which my currant runnes, Or else dries vp : to be discarded thence, Or keepe it as a Cefterne, for foule Toades To knot and gender in. Turne thy completion there a Patience, thou young and Role-lip'd Cherubin,

I heere looke grim as hell, Def. I hope my Noble Lord esteemes me honess. Othe. Oh I, as Sommer Flyes are in the Shambles, That quicken even with blowing. Oh thou weed : Who are to louely faire, and finell'it to fweere, That the Sense akes at thee,

Would thou had'ft never bin borne.

Def. Alas, what ignorant fin have I committed ? Othe, Was this faire Paper ? This most goodly Booke Made to write Whote vpon? What committed,

Committed? Oh, thou publicke Commoner,
I thould make very Forges of my cheekes,
That would to Cynders burne vp Modestie,
Did I but speake thy deedes. What commited?
Heauen stoppes the Nose at st, and the Moone winks:
The baudy winde that kisses all st meetes,
Is hush'd within the hollow Myne of Earth
And will not hear't. What committed?
Def. By Heauen you do me wrong.

Orf. By Heaven you do me wrong.
Orbe. Are not you a Strumpet?
Def. No, 22 I am a Christian.

If to preserve this vessell for my Lord, From any other soule valuefull touch Be not to be a Strumper, I am none.

Orbe. What, nor a Whore? Def. No, as I shall be sau'd.

Othe. 1s't possible?
Des. Oh Heauen forgine vs.

Oibe. I cry you mercy then.
I tooke you for that cunning Whore of Venice,
That married with Oibelle. You Mistris,

Enter Amilia.

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keepes the gate of hell. You, you: I you,
We have done our course: there's money for your paines:
I pray you turne the key, and keepe out counsaile. Exit.

Æmil. Alas, what do's this Gentleman conceiue?
How do you Madam? how do you my good Lady?

Def. Faith, halfe a sleepe. Emi. Good Madam, What's the matter with my Lord?

Def. With who?

Emil. Why with my Lord, Madam? Def. Who is thy Lord?

Def. Who is thy Lord?

Emil.* He that is youts, sweet Lady

Def. I have none: do not talke to me. Emilia,

I cannot weepe : nor answeres have I none,

But what should go by water. Prychee to night,

Lay on my bed my wedding sheetes, temember, And call thy husband hither.

Exis.

Def. 'Tis meete I should be vs'd so: very meete.

How have I bin behau'd, that he might sticke

The small'st opinion on my least misvie?

Ingo. What is yout pleasure Madam?

How is't with you?

Def. I cannot tell: those that do teach yong Babes
Do it with gentle meanes, and case taskes
He might have child me so: for in good faith
I am a Child to chiding.

lago. What is the matter Lady?

Emil. Alas (lago) my Lord hath so bewh

Æmil. Alas(Iago)my Lord hath so bewhor'd her, Throwne such dispight, and heavy termes vpon her That true hearts cannot beare it.

Def. Am I that name, lago?
Iago. What name, (faite Lady?)

Def. Such as the faid my Lord did fay I was.

Æmil. He call'd her whore :a Begger in his drinke a
Could not have laid fuch termes upon his Callet.

Iago. Why did he fo?

Def. I do not know: I am fure I am none fuch

Jago. Do not weepe, do not weepe: alas the day.

Emil. Hath the forfooke fo many Noble Matches?

Her Father? And her Country ? And her Friends?

To be call'd Whore? Would it not make one weepe?

Def. It is my wretched Fortune.

140. Bestiew him fort:

How comes this Tricke vpon him? Def. Nay, Heasen doth know.

Em. I will be hang'd, if fome eternal! Villaine, Some busic and infinuating Rogue, Some cogging, cozening Slaue, to get fome Office,

Haue not deuis'd this Slander: I will be hang'd elle.

Jago. Fie, there is no such man: it is impossible,
Dof. If any such there be, Heaven pardon him.

And hell gnaw his bones.
Why should he call her Whore!

Who keepes her companie? What Place? What Time? What Forme?What liklyhood?

The Moore's abus'd by some most villanous Knaue, Some basenororious Knaue, some seuruy Fellow Oh Heauens, that such companions thou'd'st vasold, And put in euery honest hand a whip

To hash the Rascalls naked through the world, Euen from the East to th' West.

lage. Speake withm doore.

Emil. Oh fie voon them: fome fuch Squite be wa That turn'd your wit, the fearny-fide without, And made you to suspect me with the Moore, lage. You are a Foole: go too. Def. Alas lage,

What shall I do to win my Lord againe?
Good Friend, go to him: for by this light of Heauen,
I know not how I lost bim. Heere I kneele:
If ere my will did trespasse gains his Loue,
Either in discourse of thought, or a Quasil deed,
Or that mine Eyes, mine Eares, or any Sence
Delighted them: or any other Forme.
Or that I do not yet, and euer did,
Andeuer will, (though be do shake me off
To beggerly divorcement) Loue him decrely,
Comfort sortweare me. Vnkindoesse may do much,
And his vnkindnesse may defeat my life,
But never taynt my Loue. I cannot say Whore,
It do's abhorre me now I speake the word,
To do the AA, that might the addition earne,

Not the worlds Masse of vanitie could make me.

Lago. I pray you be content: 'tis but his humour:

The businesse of the State do's him offence.

Def. If 'twere no other.

lage. It is but so, I warrant,

Hearke how these Instruments summon to supper: The Messengers of Venice staics the meate, Go in, and weepe not: all things shall be well.

Exeum Defdemona and Emilia.

Enter Rodorigo.

How nov: Rodorigo? Rod. I do not finde

That thou deal'st instly with me.

Rodors. Euery day thou dasts me with some denise lago, and rather, as it seemes to me now, keep'ft from me all conveniencie, then soppliest me with the least advantage of hope: I will indeed no longer endure it. Nor am I yet perswaded to put vp in peace, what already I have soolishly suffred.

Isgo. Will you heare me Rodorigo?

Rodori

Rodori. I have heard too much : and your words and Performanc es are no kin together.

lage. You charge me most vniustly.
Rede. With naught but truth: I have wasted my selfe out of my meanes. The lewels you have had from me to deliner Desdemona, would halte have corrupted a Votarist. You have cold me she hath recenu'd them, and return'd me expectations and comforts of fodaine respect, and acquaintance, but I finde none.

lago. Well, go too : very well.
Rod. Very well, go too : I cannot go too, (man) nor tis not very well. Nay I think it is scuruy : and begin to finde my felfe fopt in it.

lage. Very well.
Redor. I tell you, 'ds not very well: I will make my selse knowne to Desdemona. If the will returne me my lewels, I will give ouer my Suit, and repent my vnlawfull solicitation. If not, assure your selfe, I will seeke satisfaction of you.

lago. You have faid now.
Rodo, I sand faid nothing but what I protest intend-ment of doing.

logo. Why, now I fee there's mettle in thee: and even from this inftant do build on thee a better opinion then ever before; give me thy hand Rodorigo Thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet I protest I have dealt most directly in thy Affaire.

Rod. It hath not appeer'd.

lago. I grant indeed it hath not appeer'd : and your suspition is not without wit and judgement. But Rodorigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to beleeve now then ever (I meane purpole, Courage, and Valour) this night thew it. If thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with Treacherle, and deuise Engines for my life.

Rod. Well: what is it? Is it within, reason and com-paffe ?

lago. Sir, there is especiall Commission come from Venice to depute Coffio in Orbello's place.

Rod. Is that true? Why then Otheilo and Desdemona returne againe to Venice.

Lago. Oh no the goes into Mauritania and taketh away with him the faire Desdemona, vnlesse his abode be lingted heere by some arcident. Wherein none can be fo determinate, as the temouing of Caffio.

Rod. How do you meane remouing him?

lago. Why, by making him uncapable of Orbello's place : knocking out his braines.

Rad. And that you would have me to do.

lago. 1: if you dare do your selfe a profit, and a right. He sups to night with a Harlotry; and thither will I go to him. He knowes not yet of his Honourable Forcuse, if you will watch his going thence (which I will fashion to fall our betweene twelve and one) you may take him at your pleasure. I will be neere to second your Attempt, and he shall fall betweene vs. Come, stand not amaz'd acit, but go along with me: I will shew you such a necessitie in his deatn, that you shall thinke your selfe bound to put it on him. It is now high supper time: and the night growes to wast.

Rod. I will heare further reason for this. lago. And you shalbe facisfi'd.

Excums.

Scens Tertia.

Enter Oibello, Lodousco, Desdemona Amilia, and Atendams.

Lod. I do befeech you Sir, trouble your felfe no further. Oth. Oh pardon me: 'twill do me good to walke. Lodowi. Madam, goodnight : I humbly thanke your Ladyibip.

Def. Your Honour is most welcome.
Oth. Will you walke Sir? Oh Defdemona.

Def. My Lord.

Othello. Get you to bed on th'instant, I will be return'd forthwith: dismisse your Attendant there : loak't

Def. I will my Lord.

Am. How goes it now? He lookes gentler then be did Def. He faies he will returne incontincut,

And hatk commanded me to go to bed,

And bid me to difiniffe you.

Emi. Dilmiffe me?

Def. It was his hidding : therefore good Emillo Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu. We must not now displease him.

Emil. I. would you had neuer feene him.

Def. So would not 1: my love doth to approve That even his Aubbornesse, his checks, his frownes, (Prythee vn-pin me)have grace and fanour.

Æmi. I have laid those Sheetes you bad me on the be Def. All's one: good Father, how foolish are our miads. If I do die before, prythee shrow'd me In one of thefe fame Sheems.

A.mil. Come, come : you talke,

Def. My Mother had a Maid call'd Barbarie, She was in love : and he the lou'd prou'd mad, And did forfake her. She had a Song of Willough, An old thing twas ; but it express'd her Fortune, And the dy'd finging it. That Song to night, Will not go from my mind : Theue much to do, But to go hang my head all at one lide And fing it like poore Brabaries prythee dispatch.

Emi. Shall I go fetch your Night-gowne?

Def. No, vn - pin me here, This Lodonico is a proper man. Æmil. A very handsome m ...

Def. He speakes well.

Emil. I know a Lady in Venicewould have wall'd barefont to Palestine for a couch of his nether lip. Def. The poore Soule far finging, by a Sicamour tree.

Sing all a greene Willough: Her hand on her bosome her head on her knee,

Sing Willough Willough wellough. The frelb streames ran by ber, and murmur'd her meanes Singly illough, Jrc.

Her fats teares fell from her and formed the stenes, Sing Wellough, Ge. (Lay by thefe) willough, Willough. (Prythee high thee : he'le come zoen)

Sing all a greene Willough must be my Garland. Let no body blame him bis scorne I approus. (Nay that's not next. Harke, who is't that knocks?

Emil. It's the wind.

Def. I call day Love false Love : but what faid he then? Sing Willough, orc. If I court mo women you'le couch with mo men.

So gettnee gone, good alghes wine eyes do itch. Doth that boade weeping?

Amil, 'I is neyther heere, nor there

Def. I have heard it said so. O these Men, these meal Do'ft thou in conscience thinke (tell me Linkie) That there be women do abuse their husbands

In fuch groffe kinde?

Emil. There be some such, no question. Def. Would'A thou do fuch a deed for all the world?

Aml. Why, would not you? Def. No. by this Heavenly light.

Emil. Nor I peither, by this Heavenly light: I might doo't as well i'th'darke.

Def. Would'ft thou do fach a deed for al the world? Amil. The world's a huge thing :

It is a great price, for a small vice.

Def. Introth, I thinke thou would'st not.

Emil Introth I thinke I should, and vadoo't when I had done. Marry, I would not doe fuch a thing for a loyne Ring, nor for measures of Lawne, nor for Gownes, Petticoats, nor Caps, nor any petry exhibition. But for all the whole world: wby, who would not make her husbanda Cuchold, to make bim a Monarch/I should venture Purgatory for't.

Def. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong

For the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i'th'world; and having the world for your labour, 'ris a wrong in your owne world, and you might quickly make it right.

Def. I do not thinke there is any fuch woman. Emil. Yes, a dozen : and as many to'th'vantage, 20 would fore the world they plaid for But I do thinke it is their Husbands faults If Wives do fall: (Say, that they flacke their duties, And power our Treasures into forraigne laps; Or elle breake out in peeuish Icaloufics, Throwing restraint upon vs: Or say they strike vs, Or scant our former having in despight) Why we have gelles : and though we have fome Grace, Yet have we some Revenge. Let Husbands know, Their wives have fenfelike them: They fee, and fmell, And have their Palats both for Iweet, and Iowre, As Husbands haue. What is it that they do, When they change vs for others? Is it Sport? I thinke it is : and doth Affection breed it? I thinke it doth. Is't Frailty that thus erres? It is fo too. And have not we Affections? Defires for Sport? and Frailty, as men have? Then let them yfe vs well: elfe let them know, The illes we do, their illes instruct vs fo.

Def. Goodnight, goodnight: Heaven me fuch vies fend, Not to picke bad, from bad; but by bad, mend. Exercit

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter lago , and Rodorigo, I avo. Heere, frand bebinde this Barke, Straight will be come: Weare thy good Rapiet bare, and put it home: Quicke, quicke, feare nothing; He be at thy Elbor, It makes vs, or it marres vs, thinke on that, And fixe most fame thy Resolution.

Rad. Be neere at hand, I may miscasry in't.

Heere, at thy hand: Be bold, & take thy fland Red. I have no great devotion to the deed,

And yet he hath given me facisfying Reasons ; Tis but a man gone. Forth my Sword; he dies.

logo. I have rub of this your Quet almost to the scale, And he growes angry. Now, whether he kill Coffie, Or Callu birn, or each do kill the other, Every way makes my gaioe. Live Roderigo, He calles me to a sefitution large Of Gold , and lewels , that I bob'd from him, As Guifes to Desdersone. It must not be : If Caffio do remaine, He hach a dayly beauty in his life,

That makes me vgly : and belides, the Moore May enfold me to him : there fland lin much perill : No, be must dye. Bus fo, I heard him comming. Enter Caffio

Rod. I know his gate, 'sis be : Villaine thou dyeft. Caf. That thrust had beene mine coomy rodeed, But that my Coate is better then thou know'st: I will make proofe of thine.

Rod. Oh, I am flaine.

Caffe. I am maym'd for ever : Helpe hos: Murther, murther. Enter Oibello.

Oib. The voyce of Coffin, lago keepes his word.

Red. O Villaine that I am.

Oth, It is even lo.

Caf. Oh helpe hoz : Light. : Surgeon.

Oib. Tis he : O braue lage, honest, and iuft, That half such Noble fense of thy Friends wrong, Thou teachest me. Munion, your deere lyes dead, And your vnbleft Fate highes: Strumper I come: For of my heart, those Charmes thine Eyes, are blotted Thy Bed luft-frain'd, shall with Lufts blood bee spoued. Exit Othello.

Enter Lodonico and Graine.

Caf. What hoa? no Watch? No passage? Murther, Murther.

Gra. Tis some mischance, the voyce is very direfull

Caf Oh helpe.

Lodo. Hearke.

Red. Oh wretched Villaine.

Lod. Two or three groane. Tis heavy night; These may be counterfetts: Let's think't vnsale To come into the cry, without more belpe.

Red. Nobody come : then shall I bleed to death Enter lago.

Lod. Hearke.

Gra Here's one comes in his shirt, with Light, and Wespoos.

lago. Who's there?

Who's noyle is this that cries on musther?

Lode. We do not know.

Iaga, Do not you heare a cry?
Caf. Heere, heere: for heaven fake helpe me.

Jago. What's the matter?
Gra. This is Otbello's Ancient, 25 I take it.

Lodo. The same indeede, a very valiant Fellow. lage. What are you heere, that cry fo greenously?

Cof. lago, Oh I am [poyl'd, vodone by Villzines: Give me some helpe.

lago. O mee, Lieutensht! What Villaines have done this?

Cof. I thinke that one of them is hecreabout,

And

And connot make away.

Lege. Ob creacherous Villaines :

What are you there? Come to, and give fome helpe, Red. Chelpe methore.

Coffie. That's oncofthern.

lage. Oh murd'rous Shaue! O Villaine!
Rod. Odarnn'd lage! O inhumane Dogge!

logo. Kill men i'th'darke?

Where be thefe bloody Theeves?

How files is this Towne? Hos, murther, morther. What may you be? Are you of good, or eaill?

Led. As you finall prove vs, praise vs.

Iaga Signior Lodousco? Lod. He Sir.

lago. I cry you mercy : here's Coffe hurt by Villaines.

Gra. Caffio?

lago. How is't Brother?

Caf. My Legge is cut in two. logo. Marry hasaen forbid :

Light Gentlemen, He binde it with my thire. Enter Biavea.

Tian. What is the matter hoa? Who is't that cry'd logo. Who is't that cry'd? Biss. Ob my deere Caffio,

My Sweet Caffie : On Caffie, Caffie, Caffie.

laga. O notable Strumpet. Caffu, may you suspect Who they thould be, that have thus mangled you?

Caf. No.

Gra. I am forry to finde you thus;

I have beene to feeke you.

logo. Lend me a Garter. So: - Oh for a Chaire

To beare him eafily hence.

Bian. Alas he faires Ch Caffio, Caffio, Caffio. logo. Geotlemen all, I do susped this Trash

Tobe a party in this Injurie.

Patience awhile, good Coffie. Come, come; Lend me a Light 1 know we this face, or no? Alas my Friend, and my deere Countryman Radarigo? No : Yes fure : Yes, 'the Raderigo.

Gra. What, of Venice?

lago. Euen he Sir: Did you know him?

Gra. Know him? 1.

lago. Signior Graumo? I cry your gentle pardon : These bloody accidents must excuse my Manners, That fo neglected you.

Gra. I am glad to fee you.

Lega. How do you Casso? Oh.a Chaire, a Chaire.

Cra. Rodorigo? logo. He, he, tis he:

In that's well faid, the Chaire.

ome good man beare him carefully from hence, le fetch the Generall's Sorgeon. For you Miffris, ame you your labour. He that lies flatne heere (Caffio) Vas my deere friend. What malice was between you? Caf. None to the world : not do I know the man?

lago, What looke you pale? Oh beare him o'th' Ayre, ay you good Gentlemen. Looke you pale, Miftris? a you perceine the gastnesse of her eye?

sy, if you stare, we shall heare more anon, chold her well: I pray you looke you har i

by you see Gentlemen? Nay, guiltinesse will speake hough tongues were out of vie.

Amil. Alas, what is the matter !

That is the outer, Husband? lago. Caffio hath beere bin fet on in the darke

Roderigo, and Fellowes that are scap'd:

He's almost Calne, and Rodorizo quite dead.

Amil. Alas good Gentlemen: alas good Cafrie.

Go know of Coffe where he lups to night

Whee, do you hake at that?

Biss. He supt et my bouse, but I therefore shake not.

Amil. Oh fie vpon thee Strumper.
Bisn. I am no Strumper, but of life as honest, As you that thus abuse me.

As Il Fie vpon thee. Logo. Kinde Gentlemen :

Let's go see poore Cassio dreft.

Come Mistris, you must tel's another Tale.

Lavilia, run you to the Cittadell,

And tell my Lord and Lady, what hash happ'd : Will you go on afore ! This is the night

That either makes me, or foredoes me quight.

Scana Secunda.

Enter Othello, and Desidemona in ber bed.

Oth. It is the Caule, it is the Caule (my Soule) Let me not name it to you, you chaste Starres, It is the Cause. Yet He not shed her blood, Nor scarre that whiter skin of hers, then Snow, And Imooth as Monumentall Alablasters Yet fine must dye, elle shee'l betray more men : Put out the Light, and then put out the Light's If I quench thee, thou flaming Minister, I can againe thy former light restore, Should I repent me. But once put out thy Light, Thou cunning & Parterne of excelling Nature, I know not where is that Prometbaan heate That conthy Light re-Lime. When I have pluck'd thy Role, I cannot glue it vitall growth againe, It needs must wither. He smell thee on the Tree. Oh Balmy breath, that doft almost perswade lustice to breake her Sword. One more, one more Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee, And love thee after. One more, and that's the last. So (weet, was no're to fatall. I must weepe, But they are crueil Teares: This forrow's heattenly, It Arikes, where it doth love. She wakes.

Def. Who's there i Othello?

Othe! Desdemona

Def. Will you come to bed, my Lerd? Orb. Have you pray'd to night, Defdeman?

Def. I my Lord.

Oth. If you bethinke your felfe of any Crime Voreconcil'd as yet to Heauth, and Grace, Solicite for it ftraight.

Def. Alacke, my Lord,

What may you meane by that?
Orb. Well, do it, and be breefe, I will welke by a

I would not kill thy unprepared Spirit,
No, Heavens fore-fend) I would not kill thy Souls.

Def. Talke you of killing ? Och. 1.1 do.

Def. Then Hessen have mercy on mee.

Oth. Amen, with all my heart.

Def. If you say, I hope you will not kill me. Oth, Humh.

Def. And yet I feare you : for you're fatall then When your eyes rowle fo.

Why I should feare, I know not.

Since guiltinesse I know not : But yet I feele I feare.

Och. Thinke on thy finnes.

Def They are Loues I beare to you. Och. I and for that thou dy'ft.

Def. That death's vnnaturall, that kills for louing.

Alas, why gnaw you fo your nether-lip?

Some bloody passion shakes your very Frame:

Thefe are portents: but yet I hope, l liope,

They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be fill.

Def. I will fo: What's the matter?

Oib. That Handkerchiefe

Which I so lou'd, and gaue thee, thou gau'ft to Caffie. Def. No by my Life, and Soule : send for the man, And aske him.

Oth. Sweet Soule, take heed take heed of Periory, Thou art on thy death-bed.

Def. 1. but not yet to dye.

Orb. Presently.

Therefore confesse thee freely of thy finne:

For to deny each Article with Oath,

Cannot remoue, nor choake the strong Conception That I do grone withall. Thou art to dye.

Def. O Heaven have mercy on me.
Orb. I (ay, Amen.
Def. And have you mercy too. I never did Offend you in my life; neuer lou'd Caffio, But with such generall warrantie of Heauen, As I might loue. I neuer gave him Token.

Oth. By Heaven I faw my Handkerchiefe in's hand. O periut'd woman, thou do'ft flone my heart, And makes me call, what I intend to do, A Murcher, which I thought a Sacrifice.

I saw the Handkerchiefe. Def. He found it then :

I never gaue it him: Send, for him hither:

Let him confesses truth

Oth. He hath confest.

Def. What, my Lord?

Oth. That he hath vs'd thee.

Def. How? vnlawfully?

Oth. 1.

Def. He will not fay fo.

Oib. No: his mouth is flopp'd:

Honest lage hath 'tane order for't.

Def. Oh, my feare interprets. What is he dead? Oth. Had all his haires bin lives, my great Revenge

Had stomacke for them all.

Def. Alas, he is berray'd, and I vndone.

Oth. Out Strumpet: weep'ft thou for him to my face?

Def. O banish me, my Lord, but kill me not.

Och. Downe Strumper

Def. Kill me to morrow, let me live to night, Oth. Nay, if you drive.
Def. But halfe an houre.

Orb. Being done, there is no pawfe

Def. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late. Smothers her.

Emilia at the doore. Amil. My Lord, my Lord? What hoa? My Lord, my Lord.

Orh. What noise is this? Not dead?not yet quite dead? I that am cruell, am yet meterfull,

I would not have thee linger in thy paine?

Emil milhim. What host my Lord, my Lord?

Oth. Who's there?

Amil. Oh good my Lord, I would speake a word

Oib. Yes 1 Tis Emilia: by and by. Shec's dead. Tis like the comes to speake of Coffie's death. The noise was high. Hah, no more mooning?

Still as the Grave. Shall the come in? Wer's good? I thinke the stirres againe. No, what's best to do? If the come in, theal fure speake to my wife :

My wife, my wife: what wife? I have no wife. Oh insupportable! Oh heavy houre!

Methinkes, it should be now a huge Eclipse Of Sunne, and Moone; and that th'affrighted Globe Did yawne at Alteration.

Emd. I do befeech you

That I may speake with you. Oh good my Lord. Och. I had forgot thee : oh come in Emilie. Soft, by and by, let me the Curtaines draw.

Where art thou? What's the matter with thee now?

Enter Amilia. Emil. Oh my good Lord, yonders foule Murthers

Oib. What? now?

Emil. But now, my Lord.

Oth. It is the very error of the Moone, She comes more neerer Earth then she was wont, And makes men mad.

Amil Cassis, my Lord, hath kill'd

A young Venetian, call'd Redoriga Oth. Rodorigo kill'd? and Caffokill'd?

Emil No. Coffie is not kill'd.

Oib. Not Coffie kill'd? Then Murther's out of tune, And (weet Reuenge growes harfin.

Def. Ofallely, fallely murder'd. Emil. Alas! what cry is that !

Oth. That? What?

Emil. Out, and alas, that was my Ladies voice. Helpe, helpe hos, helpe. Oh Ladie speake againe, Sweet Desdemona, oh sweet Mistis, speake.

Def. A guiltlesse death, I dye. · Emil. Oh who hath done this deed?

Def No body: 1 my felfe, farewell:

Commend me to my kinde Lord: oh farewell. Oth. Why, how should she be murdred?

Emil. Alas: who knowes?

Oth You heare her fag her felfe, it was not I. Eml. She faid fo: I muft needs report the truth.

Oth. She's like a Liar gone to burning hell, 'Twas I that kill'd her.

Emil. Oh the more Angell the, and you the black Orb. She turn'd to folly: and the was a whore.

Amil. Thou do'ft bely her, and thou art a divell. Orb. She was falle as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to say

That the was falle. Oh the was heavenly true. Oth. Caffe did top her: Askthy husband elle. O. I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell:

But that I did proceed spool inft grounds To this extremity. Thy Husband knew it all.

Æmil. My Husband?

Och. Thy Husband.

Emil. That the was falle to Wedlocke? Oth. I, with Caffio : had she bin true, If Heaven would make me fuch snother world,

Of one entyre and perfect Chrysolite, I'ld not have fold her for it

Emil. My Husband?

Oth. I, 'twas he that told meon her first, An honest man he is, and hates the flime

That flickes on filthy deeds.

Emil. My Husband?

Oth. What needs this itterance, Woman?

I Say, thy Husband. Loul. Oh Mifteis,

Villany hath made mockes with loue:

My Husband fay the was falfe?

Oth. He Woman;

Ifay thy Husband , Do'ft understand the word? My Friend, thy Husband; honest, honest lago.

Æmil. If he say so, may his pernicious Soule Rot halfe a graine a day: he lyes to the heart, She was too fond of her most filthy Bargaine.

Otb. Hah?

Emil. Do thy worst:

This deede of thine is no more worthy Hezuen, Then thou was's worthy her.

Oth. Peace, you were best

Amit. Thou halt not halfe that powre to do me harm, As I have to behurt. Oh Gull, oh dolr,

As ignorant as durt : thou half done a deed (I care not for thy Sword) He make thee known, Though I lost twenty lines. Helpe, helpe, hoz, helpe: The Moore hath kill'd my Mistris. Murther, murther, Enter Montano, Gratiano, and lago.

Mon. What is the matter? How now General!? Emil. Oh, are you come, lago: you have done well, That men must lay their Murthers on your necke.

Gra. What is the matter?

Emil. Disproue this Villsine, if thou bee'ft a man : He fayes, thou told'ft him that his wife was falfe: I know thou did'A not : thou'tt not fuch a Villain. Speake, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought,

And told no more

Then what he found himselfe was apt, and true.

Emil. But did you euer tell him, She was false?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a Lye an odious damned Lye: Vpon my Soule, a Lye; a wicked Lye.

Shee falle with Caffio?

Did you say with Cassio?

lago. With Cassio, Mistris? Go too, charme your tongue.

Emil. I will not charme my Tongue;

I am bound to speake,

My Mistris heere lyes murthered in her bed.

All. Oh Heavens, soresend.

Emil. And your reports haue set the Murder on. Orhello. Nay state not Masters,

It is true indeede.

Gra. 'Tis a strange Truth. Mant. Omonstrous Acte. Emil. Villeny, villany, villany: I thinke vpon't, I thinke: I smet't: O Villany: I thought fo then : Ile kill my felfe for greefe. O villany! villany!

lago. What, are you mad?

I charge you get you home,
Emil. Good Gentlemen, let me haue leaue to speake: Tis proper I obey him; but not now: Perchance lago, I will ne're go home.

Oth Oh, oh, oh.

Emil. Nay, lay thee downe, and toare ; For thou half kill'd the sweetest innocent, That ere did lift vp eye.

Oth. Oh the was fowle!

I scarfe did know you Vnkle, there lies your Neece. Whose breath (indeed) these hands have newly Ropp'd: I know this acte shewes horrible and grim.

Gra. Poore Desdemon : I am glad thy Father's dead,

Thy March was mortall to him: and pure greefe Shore his old thred in twaine. Did he live now, This fight would make him do a desperate turne: Yea, curse his better Angell from his side,

And fall to Reprobance.

Oth. Tis pittifull : but yet lago knowes That the with Caffio, hath the Act of thame; A thousand times committed. Caffie confest st, And the did gratifie his amorous workes With that Recognizance and pledge of Loue Which I first gaue her: I saw it in his hand: It was a Handkerchiefe, an Antique Token My Father gaue my Mother.

Emil. Oh Heauen! oh heauenly Powres lago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'T will out, 't will out. I peace?
No,1 will speake as liberall as the North; Let Heaven, and Men, and Divels, let them all, All, all, crie shame against me, yet Ile speake.

lago. Be wise, and get you home.

Emil. I will noc.

Gra. Fye, your Sword vpon a Woman-

Emil. Oh thou dull Moore,

That Handkerchiefe thou speak's of I found by Fortune, and did give my Husband: For often, with a folemne earneffnesse,

(More then indeed belong'd to fuch a Trifle)

He begg'd of me, to fleale't.

Iago. Villanous Whore, Emil. She give it Cassio? No, 2las I found it, And I did giu't my Husband.

lago, filth, thou lyeft.

Emil. By Heauen I do not, I do not Gentlemen: Oh murd'rous Coxcombe, what should such a Foole Do with fo good a wife?

Orb. Are there no stones in Heauen, But what ferues for the Thunder?

Precious Villaine.

Gra. The woman falles: Sure he hath kill'd his Wife,

Emil. I,I: ohlay me by my Mistris fide. Gra. Hee's gone, but his wife's kill'd.

Mon. Tis a notorious Villams take you this weapon Which I have recover'd from the Moore: Come guard the doore without, let him not paffe, But kill bim rather. He after that same villaine, For 'tis a damned Slave.

Exis. Osh.

Cib. I am not vallant neither : But every Punie whipfter gets my Sword. But why should Honor out-live Honesty? Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy Song boad Lady? Hearke, canst thou heare me? I will play the Swan, And dye in Musicke : Willough, Willough, Willough.
Moore, she was chaste: She lou'd thee, cruell Moore, So come iny Soule to bliffe, 2s I speake true: So speaking as I thinke, alas, I dye

Orb. I have another weapon in this Chamber, It was a Sword of Spaine, the Ice brookes temper: Oh heere it is: Vnkle I must come forth.

Gra. If thou attempt it, it will coft thee deere; Thou hait no wespon, and perforce must fuffer.

Oth. Looke in vpon me then, and speake with me. Ornaked as I am I will affault thee.

Gra. What is the matter? O:hel. Behold, I have a weapon: A better neuer did it selse sustaine Vpon a Soldiers Thigh. I have feene the day, That with this little Arme, and this good Sword, I have made my way through more impediments Then twenty times your ftop. But (oh vaine boaft) Who can controll his Fate? Tis not fo now. Be not affraid, though you do fee me wespon'd: Heere is my journies end, heere is my butt And verie Sea-marke of my vemoft Saile. Do you go backe dismaid? 'Tis a loss feare: Man but a Rush against Othello's brest, And he retires. Where should OtheRogo? Now: how dost thou looke now? Oh ill-Starr'd wench, Pale as thy Smocke: when we shall meete at compt, This looke of thine will hurle my Soule from Hicsuen, And Fiends will fnatch at it. Cold, cold, my Girle? Euch like thy Chastity. O cursed, cursed Slave! Whip me ye Diuels, From the possession of this Heavenly fight: Blow me about in windes, roalt me in Sulphure, Wash me in steepe-downe gulfes of Liquid fire

> Enter Lodonico, Cassio, Montano, and Ingo, wish Officers.

Oh Desdemon! dead Desdemon : dead. Oh,oh!

Lad. Where is this rash, and most vusorrunare man? Oth. That's he that was Othello: heere I am. Lod. Where is that Viper?

Bring the Villaine forth. Oth. Hook down towards his feet; but that's a Fable, If that thou bee'st a Divell, I cannot kill thee.

Lod. Wrench his Sword from him. lago. I bleed Sir, but not kill'd.

Othel. I am not forry neither, 1l'd haue thee liue : For in my leufe, tis happinelle to die.

Led. Oh thou Othello, that was once fo good, Falne in the practile of a cutled Slaue,

What shall be saide to thee.

Oth. Why any thing: An honourable Murderer, if you will a For nought I did in hate, but all in Honour.

Led This wretch hath part confest his Villany:

Did you and he confent in Caffio's death.

Oth. 1. Caf. Decre Generall, I neuer gaue you canfe. Oth. Too beleeve it, and I aske your pardon: Will you, I pray, demand that demy-Divell.

Why he hath thus enfort'd my Soule and Body. lag. Demand me nothing I what you know, you know, From this time forth, I neuer will speake word.

Lod. What? not to pray? Gra Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir,
You shall understand what hath befoline, Which, as I thinke, you know not) beere is a Letter Found in the pocket of the flaine Rodorigo, And hecreanother, the one of them imports The death of Casso, to be vndertooke

By Rodorigo.
Oth. O Villaine!

Cassio. Most Heathenish, and most grosse. Lod Now, heere's another discontented paper Found in his pocket too : and this it feemes Rodorigo meant t'have fent this damned villaine: But that (belike) lago in the interim Came in, and fatis h'd him.

Oth. Oh thou pernitious Cairific; How came you (Caffe) by that Handkerchiefe

That was my wives?

Caffio. I found it in my Chamber: And he himfelfe confest is but even now, That there he dropt it for a special purpole, Which wrought to his defire

Othel. O Foole, soole, soole! Caffio. There is belides, in Rodorigo's Letter, How he vpbraides lago, that he made him Brave me vpon the Watch: whereon it came That I was cast : and even but now he spake (After long feeming dead) lago hurt him, lago let him on,

Lad. You must forfake this roome, and go with va: Your Power, and your Command is taken off, And Caffie rules in Cyprus. For this Slave, If there be any cunning Crueltie, That can torment him much, and hold him long, It shall be his. You shall close Prisoner reft, Till that the Nature of your fault be knowne To the Venetian State. Come, bring away.

Oth. Soft you; 2 word or two before you goe : I have done the State some service, and they know to No more of that. I pray you in your Letters, When you shall these valuckie deeds relate, Speake of me, as I am. Nothing extenuate, Not set downe ought in malice. Then must you speake, Of one that lou'd not wifely, but too well: Of one, not easily lealious, but being wrought, Perplexed in the extreame: Of one, whose hand (Like the base Indean) threw a Pearle away Richer then all his Tribe: Of one, whose subdo'd Eyes, Albeit vn-vled to the melting moode, Drops seares as fast as the Arabian Trees Their Medicinable gumme. Set you downe this: And say besides, that in Aleppo once, Where a malignant, and a Turbond-Turke Beato a Venetian, and traduc'd the State, I tooke by th'throat the circumcifed Dogge, And imoate him, thus.

Lod. Oh bloody period. Gra. All that is spoke, is marr'd.

Oth. I kift thet, ere I kill'd thes: No way but this, Killing my felfe, to dye vpon a kiffe. Caffio. Cal. This did I feare, but thought he had no wespon: For he was great of heart.

Lod. Oh Sparton Dogge:
More fell then Auguith, Hunger, or the Sea:
Looke on the Tragicke Loading of this bed:
This is thy worke:
The Obiect poylons Sight,

Let it be hid. Gratian, keepe the house,
And seize vpon she Fortunes of the Moore,
For they succeede on you. To you, Lord Governor,
Remaines the Censure of this hellish villaine:
The Time, the Place, the Torture, oh inforce it:
My selfe will straight aboord, and to the Scate,
This heavie Act, with heavie heart relate,

Executive.

THETRAGEDIEOF

Anthonie, and Cleopatra.

Adus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enser Demetrius and Philo.

Philo.

Ay, but this dotage of our Generals
Ore-flowes the measure: those his goodly eyes
That o're the Files and Musters of the Warre,
Haue glow'd like plated Mars:

Now bend, now turne
The Office and Deuotion of their view
Vpon a Tawny Front. His Captaines heart,
Which in the fouffles of great Fights hath buth
The Buckles on his breft, reneages all temper,
And is become the Bellowes and the Fan
To coole a Gypfies Luft.

Flowish. Enter Authory, Cleopatra, her Ladies, the Traine, with Euruschs farming her

Looke where they come:
Take but good note, and you shall see in him
(The triple Pillar of the world) transform'd
Into a Strumpets Foole. Behold and see.

Cleo. If it be Loue indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. There's beggery in the love that can be reckon'd

Cleo. He fet a bourne how farre to be belou'd.

Ant. Then must thou needes finde out new Heaven, new Earth.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Newes (my good Lord) from Rome.

Ant. Grates me, the summe, Cleo. Nay heare them Anthony.

Fulsia perchance is sngsy: Or who knowes,
If the icarse-bearded Casar have not sent
His powerfull Mandate to you, Do this, or this;
Take in that Kingdome, and Infranchise that:
Perform's, or else we damne thee.

Ant. How, my Love?

Cles. Petchance? Nay, and most like:
You must not stay heere longer, your dismission
Is come from Cafar, therefore heare it Anthony.
Where's Fuluias Processes (Cafars I would say) both?
Call in the Messengers: As I am Egypts Queene,
Thou blushest Anthony, and that blood of thine
Is Cafars homager: else so thy cheeke payes shame,
When shrill-tongu'd Fuluia scolds. The Messengers.

Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt, and the wide Arch Of the raing'd Empire fall: Heere is my space, Kingdomes are clay: Our dungie earth alike Feeds Beaft as Man; the Nobleneffe of life Is to do thus: when such a mutuall pure, And such a twaine can doo't, in which I binde One paine of punishment, the world to weete We stand up Peerelesse.

Cles. Excellent falshood:

Why did he marry Fulnia, and not love her? He seeme the Foole I am not. Authory will be himselse.

Am. But flirt'd by Cleopatra.

Now for the love of Love, and her foft houres,
Let's not confound the time with Conference harfis;
There's not a minote of our lives (hould flretch
Without fome pleafure now. What sport to night?

Clee. Heare the Ambastadors.

Ant. Fye wrangling Queene:
Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weepe: who every passion sully strives
To make it selfe (in Thee) faire, and admir'd.
No Messenger but thine, and all alone, to night
Wee's wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come my Queene,
Last night you did defire it. Speake not to vs.

Execute with the Trans.

Dem. Is Cafer with Anthonous prized to flight?

Philo. Sit fornetimes when he is not Anthony.

He comes too fhort of that great Property

Which still should go with Anthony.

Dem. I am full forry, that hee approves the common Lyar, who thus speakes of him at Rome; but I will hope of better deeds to morrow. Rest you happy.

Exempt

Enter Enoberbue, Lemprius, a Sombfayer, Ranninu, Lucillous, Chermian, Ires, Merdian the Euruch, and Alexas.

Char. L. Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the Southsayer that you prais'd so to'th' Queene? Oh that I knewe this Husband, which you say, must change his Hornes with Garlands.

Alex. Soothsayer.

Sooth. Your will? Char. Is this the Man? Is't you fir that know things!

Sooth. In Natures infinite booke of Secrecie, a little I can read.

Alex. Shew him your hand.

Eneb. Bring in the Banker quickly: Wine enough.

Cleopa

Exeunt.

Cleepatra's health to drinke.

Char. Good fir, give me good Forwne.

South. I make not, but forefee.

Cher. Pray then, foresce me one. South. You shall be yet farre fairer then you ree.

Char. He meanes in flesh.

Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid.

Alex. Vex not his prescience, be attentiue.

Char. Hush.

Sooth. You shall be more belouing, then beloued.

Char. I had rather heate my Liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hearchim,

Cher. Good now some excellent Fortune: Let mee be married to three Kings in a forenoone, and Widdow them all: Let me have a Childe at fifty, to whom Herode of Icwry may do Homage. Finde me to marrie me with Ollasius Cajar, and companion me with my Mistris.

Sooth. You shall out-live the Lady whom you seruc. Cher. Oh excellent, I loue long life better then Figs.

South. You have teene and proved a fairer former fortune, then that which is to approach. Char. Then belike my Children shall have no names:

Prythee how many Boyes and Wenches must I have. Sooth. If every of your withes had a wombe, & foretell cuery with, a Million.

Char. Our Foole, I forgive thee for a Witch.

Alex. You thinke none but your sheets are privile to your wishes.

Char. Nay come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. Wee'l know all our Fortunes.

Enob. Mine, and most of our Fortunes to night, shall be drunke to bed.

Iras. There's a Palme prefages Chastity, if nothing els. Char. E'ne as the o're-flowing Nylus presageth Fa-

Iras. Go you wilde Bedfellow, you cannot Soothfay. Cho. Nay, if an oyly Palme bee not a fruitfull Prog-noffication, I cannot feratch mine eare. Prythee tel her but a worky day Fortune, South. Your Fortunes are alike.

Iras But how, but how, give me particulars.

Sooth. I haue faid.

Iras Am I not an inch of Fortune better then fhe? Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better then I: where would you choose it.

Iras. Not in my Husbands nofe.

Char. Our worfer thoughts Heavens mend.

Alexas Come, his Fortune, his Fortune. Oh let him mary a woman that cannot go, for cet Ifis, I befeech thee, and let her dye roo, and give him a worle, and let worle follow worfe, till the worft of all follow him laughing to his grave. fifty-fold a Cuckold. Good Ifis heare me this Prayer, though thou denie me a matter of more waight: good ifis I beleech thee.

Iras. Amen, deere Goddesse, heare that prayer of the people. For, as it is a heart-breaking to fee a handsome man loofe Wiu'd, foit is a deadly forrow, to beholde a foule Knaue vneuckolded : Therefore decre Ifis keep de-carum, and Fortune him accordingly.

Char. Amen.

Alex Lonow, ific lay in their hands to make mee a Cuckold, they would make themselves Whores, but they'ld doo's.

Enter Cleopatra. Ench. Hulh, heere comes Anthony. Char. Nothe, the Queene

Clee. Saue you, my Lord.

Emob. No Lady.

Clas. Washe not heere? Chas. No Madam.

Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirch, but on the sodaine

A Romane thought hath stooke him.

Enobarbus?

Enob. Madam.

Cleo. Seeke him, and bring him hicher: wher's Alexias?

Alex. Heere at your service.

My Lord approaches.

Enter Anthony, with a Moffenger.

Cleo. We will not looke vpon him:

Go with vs. Meffen. Fuluiathy Wife,

First came into the Field.

Ant. Against my Brother Lucieu?

Meffen. 1 : but loone that Warre had end. And the times state

Made friends of them, loynting their force gainst Cafar Whose better issue in the warte from Italy,

Vpon the first encounter draue them.

Ant. Well, what worst.

Meff. The Nature of bad newes infects the Teller.
Ant. When it concernes the Foole or Coward: On.

Things that are paft, are done, with me. 'Tis thus, Who tels me true, though in his Tale lye death,

I heare him as he flatter'd. Mef. Labienus (this is fliffe-newes)

Hath with his Paithian Force

Extended Afia: from Euphrates his conquering

Banner Shooke, from Syria to Lydia,

/.nd to lonia, whil'll.

Aut. Anthony thou would'A fay.

Mef. Ohmy Lord.

Ant. Speake to me home,

Mince not the generall tongue, name Cleopatra as the is call'd in Rome:

Raile thou in Fuluia's phrase, and taunt my faults With such full License, as both Truth and Malice

Have power to viter. Oh then we bring forth weeds, When our quicke windes lye still, and our illes told vs

Is as our earing : fare thee well awhlle. Mef. At your Noble pleasure. Exit Maffenger

Enter another Messenger.

Ant. From Scicion how the newes? Speake there 1 . Mef. The man from Scicion,

Is there such an one?

2. Mef. He flayes vpon your will.

Aut. Ler him appeare:

These strong Egyptian Fetters I must breake, Or loofe my felfe in dotage.

Enter another Moffenger with a Letter.

What are you?

3. Mef. Fulnia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where dyed fhe.

Mef In Scicion, her length of ficknesse,

With what else more serious,

Importeth thee to know, this beares.

Anho. Forbeste me

There's a great Spirit gone, thus did I desire it: What our contempts doth often hutle from vs,

We wish it ours againe. The prefent pleafure,
By revolution lowring, does become
The opposite of it felle: the's good being gon,
The hand could pluck ther backe, this thou'd her on.
I must from this enchanting Queens breake off,
Ten thou and harmes, more then the illes I know
My idlenesse doth here.

Enter Enobarbas.

How now Enobarbus.

Eno. What's your pleasure, Sir ? Antb. I must with haste from hence.

Em. Why then we kill all our Women. We fee how mortall an unkindnesse is to them. If they suffer our departure death's the word.

Ant. I muft be gone.

Eno. Vnder a compelling an occasion, let women die. It were pitty to cast them away for nothing, though betweene them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Chapatra catching but the least noyse of this, dies instantly: I have seene her dye twenty times uppose farre poorer moment: I do think there is mettle in death, which committs some louing afte upon her, she hach such a celerity in dying.

Arr. She is cunning past mans thought.

Eno. Alacke Sirno, her pathons are made of nothing but the finest part of pure Loue. We cannot call her winds and waters, fighes and teares: They are greater stormes and Tempests then Almanackes can report. This cannot be cunning in her; if it be, the makes a showre of Raine as well as loue.

AN. Woold I had never feene her.

Eno. Oh fir, you had then left volcene a wonderfull peece of worke, which not to have beene bleft withall, would have differedited your Trausile.

Ant. Fuluea Is dead.

Eno. Sit.

Ant. Felais is dead.

Eno. Fulnia?

Ans. Dead.

Eno. Why fit, give the Gods a thankefull Sacrifice: when it pleafeth their Derties to take the wife of a man from him, it shewes to man the Tailors of the easth: comforting therein, that when olde Robes are wome out, there are members to make new. If there were no more Women but Fulkia, then had you indeede a cut, and the case to be lamented: This greefe is crown'd with Consolation, your old Smocke brings foorth a new Petticoate, and indeed the teares live in an Onion, that should water this forrow.

Ant. The basinesse she hath broached in the State,

Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the businesse you have broach'd heere cannot be wishout you, especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant No more light Answeres

Let our Officers

Have notice what we purpose. I shall breake
The cause of our Expedience to the Queene,
And get her love to part. For not alone
The death of Fusica, with more orgent touches
Do strongly speake to vs: but the Letters too
Of many our contribing Friends in Rome,
Petition vs at home. Sexua Pompeisa
Have given the dare to Cefar, and commands
The Empire of the Ses. Our shipperty people,
Whose Love is never link d to the deserner.

Till his deferts are past, begin to throw Pampy the great, and all his Dispetties. Vpon his Sonne, who high in Name and Power, Higher then both in Blood and Life, shands up. Por the maine Soulder. Whose quality going on, The sides o'th'world may danger. Much is breeding. Which like the Coursers heirs, bath yet bot life, And not a Serprice poyson. Say our pleasure, To such whose places vader us, require. Our quicke temous from bence, Enob. I shall doo't.

Emer Chopatra, Charmin, Alexandri Iras.

Cleo, Where is he?

Char. I did not fee bim fince.

Cloo. See where he is,

Whose with him, what he does:
I did not send you. If you hade him sad,
Say I am dauncing: If in Myrth, report
That I am sodaine sicke. Quicke, and returne.

Cha. Madam, me thinkes if you did love him deerly.

You do not hold the method, to enforce
The like from hun-

Cles What should I do, I do not?

Ch. lo each thing give him way, croffe him in nothing.

Cles. Thou teachest like a foolesthe way to lote him Ches. I empt him not so too farre. I wish forbeste,

In time we have that which we often fezre.

But heare comes Anthony.

Cleo. I am ficke, and fullen.

An I am forty to give breathing to my purpole.
Cho. Helpe me away deere Charmen, I shallfall,

It cannot be thus long, the fides of Nature Will not fulfaine it.

Ant. Now my deerest Queene.

Cles. Pray you fland farther from coce.

Ant. What's the matter?

Cleo. I know by the fame eyether's force good new What fayes the married woman you may goe? Would the had never given you leave to come. Let her not fay 'tis I that keepe you heere, I have no power upon you: Here you are.

Ant. The Gods best know.

cles. Oh never was there Queene So mightily betrayed: yet at the first I law the Treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra

Cleo. Why should I thinke you can be mine, & cue, (Though you in (wearing thake the Throaned Gods)

Who have beene falle to Falsa?

Riotous madnesse,

To be entangled with those mouth-made vower,

Which breake themselves in swearing.

Ant. Most weet Queene.

Cleo. Nay pray you leeke no colour for your going. But bid farewell, and goe:

When you fued staying,

Then was the time for words: No going then, Erernity was in our Lippes, and Eyes, Bille in our browes bent: none out parts so poore, But was a race of Heaven. They are so fish, Or thou the greatest Souldier of the world, Art turn'd the greatest Lyat.

Az: . How now Lady?

Cles

Cleo. I would I had thy inches, thou fhould'A know There were a heart in Egypt.

Ast. Heare me Queene : The flrong necessity of Time. commands
Our Services e-while: but my full heart Remaines in vie with you. Our Italy, Shines o're with civill Swords; Sexus Pompeins Makes his approaches to the Port ofRome, Equality of two Domesticke powers, Breed Gropulous faction: The hated growne to strength Are newly growne to Loue: The condemn'd Pompey, Rich in his Fathers Honor, creepes apace Into the hearts of fuch, as have not thrived Vpon the present frate, whose Numbers threaten, And quietnelle growne licke of rell, would purge By any desperate change: My more particular, And that which most with you should lafe my going, Is Fulniar death.

Cle. Though age from fully could not give me freedom It does from childiffinesse. Can Foliais dye?

Ass. She's dead my Queene. Looke heere, and at thy Soucrargne ley fure read The Garboyles the awak do at the laft, best, See when, and where shee died.

Clee. O moft faife Loue! Where be the Secred Violles thou hould'A fill With forrowfull water ? Now I fee, I fee, In Falsies death, how mine recein'd shall be

Aus. Quarrell no more, but bee prepar'd to know The purpoles I beare: which are, or ceale, As you hall give th'advice. By the fire That quickens Nylus flime, I go from hence Thy Souldier, Serv int making Peace or Waste, As thou affects.

Cleo. Cut my Lace, Charmies come, But let it be, I am quickly ill, and well,

So Anthony loues.

Am. My precious Queene forbeare, And glue true evidence to his Loue, which fands An honourable Triall.

Cleo. So Fuluia told me. I prychee turne aside, and weepe for her, Then bid adiew to me, and fay the teares Belong to Egypt. Good now, plsy one Scene Of excellent diffembling, and let it looks Like perfect Honor.

Ant. You'l hear my blood no more? Cles. You can do better yet a but this is meetly.

Ans. Now by Sword.

Cles. And Target. Still he mends. But this is not the best. Looke prythee Charmens, How this Herculean Roman do's become The carriage of his chafe,

Ant. He leave you Lady.

Cleo. Courteous Lord, one word: Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it : Sir, you and I have lou'd, but there's not it: That you know well, fomething it is I would: Oh, my Oblivion is a very Anthony,

And I am all forgotten.

Ant. Bot that your Royalty Holds Idlenesse your subject, I should take you For Idlenesse it selfe.

Cleo Tis swearing Labour. To beare such Idlenesse so neere the heart As Cleopara this. But Sir, forgive me, Since my becommings kill me, when they do not Eye well to you. Your Honor calles you hence. Therefore be desfe to my vapittied Folly, And all the Gods go with you. Vpon your Sword Sie Lawrell victory, and smooth successe Be frew'd before your feete.

Ans. Let vs go.

Come : Our separation so abides and sies, That thou reciding heere, goes yet with mee; And I hence fleeting, heere remaine with thee.

Euter Ollewisu reading a Latter, Lepidus, and their Trains.

Caf. You may fee Lepider, and henceforth know, It is not Cefars Naturall vice, to have One great Competitor. From Alexandria This is the newes: He fifther, drinker, and waftes The Lampes of night in revell: Is not more manlific Then Cleopatra: nor the Queene of Poslemy
More Womanly then he. Hardly gave audience Or vouchsafe to thinke he had Partners. You Shall finde there a man, who is th'abilitacts of all fanits. That all men follow.

Lop. I must not thinke There are, cuils enow to darken all his goodnesse: His faults in him, feeme as the Spots of Heaven, Morefierie by nights Blacknesse; Heredirarie, Rather then purchaste: wifat he cannot change, Then what he chooses.

Cef. You are too indulgent. Let's graunt le is not Amisse to tumble on the bed of Prolomy, To give a Kingdome for a Mirch, to fit And keepe the turne of Tipling with a Sleve, To reele the freets at noone, and frand the Buffet With knaues that finels of fweate: Say this become him (As his composure must be rare indeed, Whom these things cannot blemish) yet must Anthony No way excuse his foyles, when we do beste So great waight in his lightnesse. If he fill'd His vacancie with his Voluptuoulnelle, Full furfecs, and the drinelle of his bones, Call on him for't. But to confound fuch time, Thet drummes him from his sport, and speakes as lowd As his owne State, and ours, 'tis to be chid: As we rate Boyes, who being mature in knowledge, Pawne their experience to their present pleasure, And so rebell to judgement.

Enter a Meffenger.

Lap. Heere's more newes. Most. Thy biddings have beene done, &t everie houre
Most Nobie Cefar, that thou have report
How 'us abroad. Pompey is strong at Ses,
And it appeares, he is below'd of those
That only have feard Cefar: to the Ports The discontents repaire, and mens reports Giue him much wrong'd. Cef. I should have knowne no leffe,

It hash bin saught vs from the primaliflate That be which is was wishe, vatill he weres And the ebb'd man, Ne're lou'd, till ne're worth love, Comes fear'd, by being lack'd. This common bodie, Like to & Vagabond Flagge vpon the Streame.

Goes too, and backe, lacking the varrying syde

To rot it felfe with motion.

Mef. Cafer I bring thee word. Menacrases and Menas famous Pyrates Makes the Sea ferue them, which they care and would With keeles of every kinde. Many hot intodes They make in Italy, the Borders Maritime Lacke blood to thinke on't, and flush youth revols No Vesscil can peepe forth : but 'cis as soone Taken as scene : for Pompejer name fitikes more Then could his Warie relifted.

Cafar. Anthony, Leave thy lascinious Vassailes. When thou once Was beaten from Medena, where thou flew'it Hirfins, and Paufa Confuls, at thy heele Did Famine follow, whom thou fought'fl againft, (Though daintily brought vp) with patience more Then Sauages could fuffer. Thou did it drinke The stale of Horses, and the gilded Puddle Which Beafts would cough at. Thy pallat the did daine The roughest Berry, on the rudest Hedge. Yea, like the Stagge, when Snow the Pasture sheets, The barkes of Trees thou brows'd. On the Alpes, le is reported thou did'A cate Arange fielh, Which some did dye to looke on : And all this (It wounds thine Honor that I speake it now) Was horne so like a Soldiour, that thy cheeke So much as lank'd not.

Lep. Tis pitty of him.
Caf. Let his shames quickely Drive him to Rome, 'tis time we twaine Did shew our sclues i'th' Field, and to that end Assemble me immediace counsell, Pompey Thrives in our Idlenesse.

Lep. To morrow Cafer, I shall be furnishe to informe you rightly Both what by Sea and Land I can be able To front this prefent time.

Cef. Til which encounter, it is my busines too. Farwell Lep. Farwell my Lord, what you hal know mean time Of firres abroad, I shall befeech you Sir

To let me be partaker. Cefar. Doubt not fit, I knew it for my Bond. Exercit Enter Cleopatra, Charman, Iras, & Mardian.

Cleo. Charmian.

Char. Madam.

Cleo. Ha, ha, give me to drinke Mandragors. Char. Why Madam? Cleo. That I might sleepe out this great gap of time: My Anthony is away.

Char. You thinke of him too much.

Cleo. O'tis Tresson,

Char. Madam, I wust net fo. Clea. Thou, Eunuch Mardian

Mar. What's your Highnesse pleasure? Cleo. Not now to heate thee sing. I take no pleasure In ought an Eunuch ha's: Tis well for thee, That being voleminar'd, thy freer thoughts May not flye forth of Egypt. Hast thou Affections?
Mar. Yes gracious Madam.

Cleo. Indeed?

Mar. Not in deed Madam, for I can do nothing But what in deede is honest to be done: Yet have I fierce Affections, and thinke What Venus did with Mars.

Cles. Oh Charmion:

Where think's thou he is now? Stands he, or fits he?

Or does he walker Or is he on his Horse? Oh liappy horse to beare the weight of Anthony! Do brauely Horfe, for wor's thou whom thou mueu'D. The demy Acts of this Earth, the Arme And Burganet of men. Hee's speaking now, Or murmiring, where's my Serpent of old Nyle. (For to he cals me.) Now I feede my felfe With most delicious poylon Thinks on me That am with Photbus amorous pinches blacke, And wrinkled deepe in time. Broad-fronted Cafer, When thou was theer about the ground, I was A morfell for a Monarke and great Pompey Would fished and make his eyes grow in my brow, There would be anchor his Aspectand dye With looking on his life.

Emer Alexas from Cafer.

Alex. Sourraigne of Egypt, haile Cleo. How much valike art thou Marke Anthony? Yet comming from him, that great Med'cine hatb With his Tind gilded thee.

How goes it with my brave Marke Anthonis?

Alex. Last thing he did (deere Qu enc)

He kift the laft of many doubled kiffes This Orient Pearle. His speech flickes in my beare. Cleo. Mine eare must plucke it thence.

Alex Good Friend, quoch he: Say the firme Roman to great Egypt lends This treasure of an Oyster: at whose foote To mend the petry present, I will peece Her opulent Throne, with Kingdomes. All the Esft, (Say thou) thail call her Miffris. So he nodded, And loberly did mount an Arme-gaunt Steede, Who neigh'd so hye, that what I would have spoke, Was beaftly dumbe by him.

Clea. What was he fad, or merry?

Alex. Like to the time o'th'yeare, between fextremes Of hot and cold, he was nor fad nor metrie.

Cleo. Oh well divided disposition: Note him, Note him good Charmer it is the man; but note him. He was not fad, for he would shine on those That make their lookes by his. He was not merrie, Which feem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay In Egypt with his loy, but betweene both.
Oh heavenly mingle! Bee'll thou lad, or merrie, The violence of either thee becomes, So do's it no mans elfe. Met'ft thou my Posts?

Alex. I Madam, ewenty feuerall Mellengers.

Why do you fend to thicker

Cleo. Who's borne that day, when I forget to feed to Anthonie, shall dye a Begger. Inke and paper Chamean. Welcome my good Alexas. Did I Charmier, euer loue Cefer so?

Char. Oh that brave Cafar!
Cleo. Be chook'd with fuch another Emphass, Say the brave Anthony.

Char. The valiant Cafar. Ciso. By Ifis, I will give thee bloody teeth, If thou with Cafar Parago nagaine: My man of men.

Char. By your most gracious pardon,

I fing but after you.

Cleo. My Sallad dayes,

When I was greene in indgement, cold in blood, To fay, as I faide then. But come, away, Ger me Inke and Paper,

Hec

he shall have every day a severall greeting, or lie vopeople Egypt.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas, in warlike manner

Pom. If the great Gods be infishey shall affift The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know worthy Pompey, that what they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are futors to their Throne, decayes

she thing we fue for.

Mene. We ignorant of our selves, Begge often our owne harmes, which the wife Powres Deny vs for our good : To finde we profit

By looking of our Prayers. Pom. I shall do well:

The people love me, and the Sea is mine; My powers are Creffent, and my Auguring hope Sayes it will come to'th'full. Marke Anthony In Egypt fits at dinner, and will make No warres without doores. Cafar gets money where He looses hearts: Lepidus flatters both, Of both is flatter'd : but he neither loues, Nor either cares for him.

Mene. Cafar and Lipulm are in the field,

A mighty frength they carry Powe. Where have you this? 'Tis falle Mene, From Silvius, Sit

Pom. He dreames: I know they are in Rome together Looking for Anthony : but all the charmet of Loue, Salt Cleopatra Soften thy wand lip, Let Witcheraftioyne with Beauty, Lust with both, Tye vp the Libertine in a field of Feasts, Keepe his Braine fuming. Epicurean Cookes, Sharpen with cloylesse fawee his Appetite, That fleepe and feeding may protogue his Honour, Euen till a Lechied dulneffe-

Enter Varrius.

How now Varreus ?

Var. This is most certaine, that I shall deliver: Marke Anthony is every houre in Rome Expected. Since he went from Egypt, 'tis A space for farther Travaile.

Pom. I could have given lesse matter A better eare. Mena, I did not thinke This amorous Surfetter would have donn'd his Helme For fuch a percy Warre: His Souldiership Is twice the other twaine : But let ve reare The higher our Opinion, that our firring Can from the lap of Egypts Widdow, plucke The accre Luft-wearled Ambany.

Mene. I cannot hope, Cafor and Ambony (hall well greet together; His Wifethat's dead, did trefpalles to Cafar, His Brother wan'd vpon him, although I thinke

Not mou'd by Anthony Pom. I know not Menas, How leffer Enmities may give way to greater, Were't not that we stand up against them all:
Twer pregnant they should square between themselves, For they have entertained cause enough To draw their fwords : but how the fcare of vs May Ciment their divisions, and binde vp The petty difference, we yet not know Bee't as our Gods will have't; it onely stands Our lives vpon, to vie our strongest hands Come Menas.

Enter Enoberbus and Lepedin

Lep. Good Embarbus, 'tis a worthy deed And thall become you well, to intrest your Captaine To fost and gentle speech.

Enob. I shall intrest him

To answer like himselfe : if Cefor move him, Les Authory looke over Cafars head, And speake as lowd as Mars. By Jupiter, Were I the wearet of Anthonio's Beard, I would not shaue's to day.

Lep. Tienoc a time for private flomacking.

Eno. Every time scrues for the matter that is then borne in't.

Lep. But small co greater matters muft give way.

Eno. Not if the fmall come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion : but pray you stirre No Embers up. Heere comes the Noble Anthony. Enter Anthony and Ventidius.

Eno. And yonder Cofo

Enter Cefar, Mecenas, and Agrippa Ast. If we compose well heere, to Parchia: Heathe Ventilin

Cafar. Ido not know Mecena, aske Agrippa. La Noble Friends:

That which combin'd ve was most great, and let not A leaner action rend vs. What's amille, May it be gently heard. When we debate Our triutall difference loud, we do commit Murther in healing wounds. Then Noble Partners, The rather for I carnellly befeech, Touch you the fowrest points with sweetest tearnes, Nor curstnesse grow to th'matter.

Ant. 'Tis spoken well: Were we before our Armies, and to fight, Flourisb. I (hould do thus.

Caf. Welcometo Rome.

Anc. Thanke you.

Caf. Sic. Ant, Sit fit.

Caf. Nay then.

Ant. Hearne, you take things ill, which are not fo:

Or being, concerne you not.

Cel. I must be laught at, if or for nothing, or a little, I Should fay my felfe offended, and with you Chiefely i'th'world. More laught at, that I should Once name you derogately : when to found your name It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt Cafar, what was to you?
Caf. No more then my reciding heere at Rome Might be to you in Egypt : yet if you there Did practife on my State, your being in Egypt Might be my question.

Ant. Howintend you, pradis'd?

Cef. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent, By what did heere befall me. Your Wife and Brother Made warres vpon me, and their contestation Was Theame for you, you were the word of warre.

Ans. You do mistake your bufines, my Brother never Did vrge me in his Act: I did inquire it, And have my Learning from some true reports That drew their fwords with you, did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours, And make the warres alike against my stomacke, Hauing alike your cause. Of this, my Letters Before did fatisfie you. If you'l parch a quarrell, As matter whole you have to make it with,

Exempt.

It must not be with this,

Caf. You praise your felfe, by laying defects of ludgo ment to met but you patcht vp your extuits.

Anth, Not so, not so: I know you could not lacke. I am certaine on's Very necessity of this thought, that I Your Parener in the cause gainst which he fought, Could not with gracefull eyes attend those Warres Which fronted mine owne peace. As for my wife, I would you had her spirit, in such another, The third oth world is yours , which with a Snaffle, You may pace calie, but not fach a wife

Brobar. Would we had all fuch wives, that the men might go to Warres with the women.

Arah. So much vnourbable, her Garbolles (Cefor) Made out of her impatience: which not wanted Shrodenesse of policie to : I greening grant, Did you too much disquier, for that youmuft, But fay I could not helpe it?

Cafar. I wrote to you, when rioting in Alexandria you

Did pocket up my Letters : and with taunts Did gibe my Missie out of sudience.

Art. Sir, he fell vpon me, ere admitted, then: Three Kings I had newly feafted, and did wans Of what I was i'th'morning but next day I rold him of my felfe, which was as much As to have askt him pardon. Let this Fellow Be nothing of our strife: if we contend Our ofour question wipe him.

Cafer. You have broken the Article of your oath, which you shall never have tonger to charge me with.

Lep. Soft Cafar.

Aw. No Lepidur, let him speake, The Honour is Sacred which he ralks on now, Supposing that I lackt it : but on Cafer, The Article of my oath,

Cafar. To lend me Armes, and side when I requir'd them, the which you both denied.

Amb. Negleded tather: And then when poyloned houres had bound me vp From mine owne knowledge, as neerely as I may, lle play the penitent to you. But mine honefly, Shall not make poore my greatnesse, not my power Worke without it. Truth is, that Fulusa, To have me out of Egypt, made Warres heere, For which my felfe, the ignorant motive, do farre aske pardon, as belits mine Honour To floope in such a case.

Lep. 'Tis Noble spoken. Mess. If it might please you, to enforce no furthe The griefes betweene ye: to forget them quite, Were to remember : that the present neede, Speakes to attone you.

Lap. Worthily spoken Mocenes.

Enoter. Or if you borrow one anothers Loue for the inflent, you may when you heare no more words of Pompey teturne it againe: you shall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing elfe to do.
Auth. Thou art a Souldier, onely fpeake no more.

Enob. That trueth should be filent, I had almost forgot. Auth. You wrong this presence, therefore speake no more,

Ench. Gotoo then: your Confiderate Rome. Cafer. I do not much diffike the matter, but The manner of his speech : for't cannot be,

We shall remaine in friendship, our conditions So distring in their acts. Yet if I knew, What Hoope should hold ve staunch from edge to edge Arb'world : I would perfue it.

Agri. Give me lesve Cufar.

Cafer. Speake Agrapa.
Agri. Thou best a Sifter by the Monthers fide, admir'd Ollantal Great Offert Authory's DOW a widdower.

Cafer Say not lay Agripped Clapute heard you you proofe were well deferued of rathoelle.

Anch. I am normarryed Cafer: let me beere Agrippe further speake.

Agri. To hold you in perperual amitie. To make you Brothtes, and to knit your hearts. With an vn-Sipping knot take Anchory, Ollouis to his wife I whose beauty claimes No worse a hasband then the best of men : whose Vertue, and whose generall graces, speake That which none elic can viter. By this marriage, All little Ielousies which now seeme great, And all great feares, which now import their dangers, Would then be nothing. Truth's would be tales, Where now halfe tales be truth's : her love to both, Would each to other, and all loues to both Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke, For 'tis a Rudied not a present thought, By duty ruminated.

Amb. Will Cafer Speake? Cafer. Not till he heates how Anthony is touch; With what is spoke already,

Amb. What power is in Agrapa, If I would say Agrape, beitle, To make this good?

Cafar. The power of Cafar, And his power, vnto Olamo, Amh. May I never

(To this good purpose, that so fairely shewes) Dreame of impediment : let me have thy hand Further this act of Grace: and from this house, The heart of Brothers governe in our Loues, And Iway our great Defignes.

Cafer. There's my hands A Sifter I bequeath you, whom no Brother Did ever love so deerely. Let her line To loyne our kingdomes, and our hearts, and never Flie off our Loues againe.

Lipi. Happily, Amen.

Ant. I did not think to draw my Sword 'gainst Pompy, For he hath laid strange courtefies, and great Of late vpon me. I must thanke him onely, Leaft my remembrance, suffer ill report : At heele of that, defie him.

Lepi. Time cals vpon's, Oivs mast Pompey presently be lought, Or elfe he feekes out vs

Ant. Where lies he?

Cafar. About the Mount-Mesons. Anth. What is his Arength by land?

Cafar. Great, and encreating: But by Sea he is an absolute Mafter.

Anth. So is the Fame, Would we had spoke together. Haft we for it, Yet ere we put our felues in Armes, dispatch we The bufinesse we have talks of.

Cafar. With most gladaelle, And do invice you to my Sifters view,

Whe

Whether thraight He lead you.

Amb. Let vs Lepides not lacke your companie.
Lep. Noble Ausborg, not lickeneffe should detaine

Flourish. Exit owner.

Manet Enobabus , Agrippa, Mocenas. Alec. Welcome from Ægypt Sir.

Eno. Halfe the heart of Cafar, worthy Mecena. My hon ourable Friend Agrippa.

Agric. Good Encharbus.

Mece. We have cause to be glad, that matters are so well difgefted : you ftaid well by'cin Egypt.

Enob. 1 Sir, we did sleepe day out of countensunce :

and made the night light with drinking.

Mece. Eight Wilde-Boares rofted whole at a breakfast : and but twelve persons there. Is this true?

Eno. This was but as a Flye by an Eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of Feast, which worthily deferned noting.

Meces et. She's a most triumphant Lady, if report be fquare to her.

Enob. When the first met Marke Aubory, the ports vp his heart vpon the River of Sidnis.

Agri. There the appror'd indeed : or my reportet deuis'd well for her.

Eno. I will tell you, The Barge the fat io, like a burnishe Throne Burnt on the water : the Poope was beaten Gold, Purple the Sailes : and so perfumed that The Windes were Loue-licke. With them the Owers were Silver, Which to the tune of Flutes kept stroke, and made The water which they beate, to follow fafter; As amorous of their strokes. For her owne persoo, It beggerd all discription, she did lye In her Pavillion, cloth of Gold, of Tiffue, O're-picturing that Venns, where we fee The fancie out-worke Nature. On each fide her, Stood preny Dimpled Boyes, like smiling Cupids, With divers coulour'd Fannes whose winde did seeme, To glove the delicate checkes which they did coole, And what they undid did.

Agrip Oh rate for Authory. Ero. Her Gentlewoman, like the Nereides, So many Mer-maides tended her i'th'eyes, And made their bends adornings. At the Helme. A feeming Mer-maide fleeres: The Silken Tackle, Swell with the touches of those Flower-foft hands, That yarely frame the office. From the Barge A frange invisible perfume hits the fense Of the adiacent Whatfes. The Citty cast Her people out vpon her : and Anthony Enthron'd ith Market-place, did fit alone, Whisling to th'ayre I which but for vacancie. Had gone to gaze on Cleopater too, And made a gap in Nature.

Agri. Rare Egiptian.
Eso. Vpon her landing, Anthony Sent to her, Inuited her to Supper: the replyed, It should be better, he became her guest: Which the entreated, our Courteous Asthony Whom here the word of no woman hard speake, Being barber'deentimes o're goes to the Feaft; And for his ordinary, paies his beart, For what his eyes este onely. Agri. Royali Weach:

She made great Cafar lay his Sword to bed, He ploughed her, and the cropt

Eno. I faw her once Hop forty Paces through the publicke fireete, And having loft her breath, the spoke, and panted, That fhe did make defect, perfection, And breathlesse powre breath forth.

Mace. Now Authory, must leave her otterly.

Eno. Neuer he will not : Age cannos wither her, nor cuftome stale Her infinite variety : other women cloy

The appetites they feede, but the makes hongry, Where most the farisfies. For vildest things Become themselves in her, that the holy Priests Bleffe her, when the is Riggish.

Mice If Beauty, Wisedome, Modesty, can sett le The heart of Anthony :Ollania is

A bleffed Lottery to him.

Agrip. Let vs go. Good Enobarbiu, make your felfe my gueft, whilft you abide heere.

Eso. Humbly Sir I thanke you.

Emer Anthony, Cafer, Offania betweene them.

Aub. The world, and my great office, will Sometimes deuide me from your bosome.

Oda. All which time, before the Gods my knee shall bowe my prayers to them for you. Anth. Goodnight Sir. My Ottawia Read not my blemishes in the worlds report : I have not kept my fquare, but that to come Shall all be done byth Rule : good night deere Lady: Good night Sir.

Cafar. Goodnight.

Enter Soublaier. Anis. Now firsh: you do wish your felfe in Egypt? Soub. Would I had never come from thence, nor you chither.

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Soorb. I fee it in my motion shaue it not in my tongue,

Bue yet hie you to Egyptagaine Ante. Say to me, whole Fortunes shall rife higher Cafars or mine?

Sees. Cafars. Therefore (ch Anthony) flay no: by his fide Thy Dzmon that thy spirit which keepes thee sis Noble, Couragious, high vnmatchable, Where Cefars is not. But neere him, thy Angell Becomes a feare : sebeing o're-powr'd, therefore Make space enough betweeneyou.

Anib. Speake this no more.
Soub. To none but thee no more but: when to thee, If thou dost play with him at any game, Thon art fure to loofe: And of that Naturall lucke, He bears thee gainst the oddes. Thy Luster thickens.

When he shines by : I say againe, thy spirit Is all affraid to governe thee neere him:

Buche alway 'ris Noble.

Anb. Get thee gone : Say to Vertigina I would speake with him. Exit. He shall to Parthis, be it Art or hap, He hach spoken true. The very Diec obey him, And in our sports my better cunning faints, Vnder his chance, if we draw lots he speeds, His Cocks do winne the Battaile, still of mine, When it is all to naught : and his Quailes ever Bezte mine (in hoops) at odd's. Enter Cleopater, Charmion, Iras, and Alexas. Cles. Give me same Musicke: Mosicke, moody foode of vs that trade in Loue, Omner. The Muficke, hos.

Enser Mardian the Enmeth.

Cla Letitalone, let's to Billards: come Charmian. Char. My arme is fore, best play with Mardian. Cloops. As well a woman with an Eunuch plaide, as with a woman. Come you'le play with me Six? Mardi. As well as I can Madam.

Ciro. And when goodsvill is shewed,

Though'c come to fhort The Actormay pleade pardon. He none now, Give me mine Angle, weele co'th'River there My Musicke playing farre off. I will bettay Tawny fine fishes, my bended booke shall pierce Their flimy lawes . and as I draw them vp. He thinke them every one an Authory,

And say, an hay are caught.

Char Twas merry when you wager'd on your Angling, when your diver did hang a falt filb on his booke which he with feruencie drew vp.

Cho. That time? Ohtimes: Haught him out of patience: and that night Haught him into patience, and next mome, Bre the ninth houre . I drunke him to his bed : Then put my Tires and Mantles on him, whilft I wore his Sword Phillippan. Oh from Italie, Enter a Mellenger. Ramme thoustry fruitefull tidings in mine cares, That long time have bin batren.

Charf. Madam, Madain.

Clue. Authoryo's dead.
If thou fay fo Villaine, thou kil Itthy Mistris: But well and free if thou so yould him.

There is Gold, and heere

My blewest vaines to kiffe: a hand that Kings Have lipt, and trembled killing.

Mef. First Madam, he is well. Cleo Why there's more Gold.

But firsh marke, we vie

To lay, the dead are well: bring it to that, The Gold I give thee, will I melt and powr Downe thy ill vetering throate.

Mef. Good Wadam heare me.

Cleo. Well, go tool will: Burthere's no goodnesse in thy face if Amboy Be free and healthfullife care a fauour To trumper fuch good tidings. If not well. Thou shoulds come like a Furit crown'd with Saakes, Not like a formall man.

Mef. Wilt please you heare me?

Cles. I have a mind to firike thee ere thou speak fe Yet if thou lay Anthony lives, 'the well, Or friends with Cafer, or not Captine to him. He let thee in a shower of Gold, and haile Rich Pearles vpon thez.

Mof. Madamite's well. Cloo. Well land. Mef. And Friends with Cafe.

Clee. Th'art an honest man-

Mef. Cafer, and he, are greater Friends then over,

Cles. Make thee a Fortune from me.

Mel. But yet Madem.

Cho. I do not like but yet, it does alsy The good precedence, he vpon but yet, Bur yet is as a laylor to bring fourth Some monstrous Malefactor. Prychee Friend. Powie out the packe of matter to mine care, The good and bad together : he's friends with Cafe, In flate of heal th thou failt, and thou failt, free.

Mef. Free Madem, no: I made no such report,

He's bound voto Ollema.

Cleo. For what good turne?
Mef. For the best turne ith bed.

Cleo. I am pale Charmon.

Mef. Madam, he's matried to Office.

Cles. The most intedious Pestilence vpon thee. Sirates how downe.

Ales. Good Madam patience.

Cleo. What fay. you? Series biss. Hence horrible Villaine or He sporne thine eyes Like balls before me : He rahaire thy head, Shahales tim up and down.

Thou strak be whipe with Wyer, and stew'd in brine, Smarting in lingring pickle.

Mef. Gracious Madam,

I that do bring the newes, made not the match.

Cles. Say its not for Province I will give thee.

And make thy Fortunes proud: the blow thou had's Shall make thy peace, for moving me to rage, And I will boot thee with what guift belide

Thy modefic can begge.

Mef. He's married Madem.

Cles. Rogue, thou hash lie'd too long.

Draw a keife. Mef. Nay then He runne.

What meane you Madem, I have made no fault. Exit. Cher. Good Madam keepe your selfe within your selfe, The man is imposent.

Cles. Some Imocents sespenot the thanderboit: Melt Egypt into Nyle: and kindly creatures Turne all to Serpents. Call the flaue agains, Though I am mad, I will not byte him : Call?

Char. He is a feared to come. Cleo. I will not burt him,

These hands do lacke Nobility, that they strike A meaner then my felfe; fince I my felfe Have given my felfe the cause Come hither Siz.

Though it be honeft, it is sever good To bring bad newes ; give to a gratious Methage

An hoft of tongues, but let ill tydings tell Themselves, when they be feld

Mef. I have done my ducy. Cles. Is he married?

I cannot hate thee worfer then I do.

If thou againe fay yes.
Mef. He's married Madam. Clev. The Gods confound thee,

Dost thou hold there still?

Mef. Should I lye Madame? Cleo. Oh, I would thou didft:

So halfe my Egypt were submerg'd and made A Cesterne for scal'd Snakes. Go get thee hence, Had'ft thou Nariffer in thy face to me,

Thou would's appeare most vgly: He is married? Mef. I crave your Highnesse pardon.

Cleo. He is married?

Mef. Take no offence, that I would not offend you, To punnish me for what you make me do

Seemes much vnequall, he's married to Ollawia. Cleo. Oh that his fault should make a knaue of thee, That art not what th'art fure of. Ger chee hence, The Marchandize which thou hast brought from Rome Are all too deere for me:

Lye they upon thy hand, and be undone by em.

Char. Good your Highnesse patience. Cieo. In prayling Anthony, I have disprais d Cafar.

Char. Many times Madam

Cles, I am paid for't now: lead me from hence, I faint, oh Iras, Charmian; 'tis no matter. Go to the Fellow, good Alexas bid him Report the feature of Ollania: her yeares, Her inclination, let him not leave out The colour of her haire. Bring me word quickly, Let him for ever go, let him not Charmian, Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon, The other wayes a Mars. Bid you Alexa Bring me word, how call theis: pitty me Charmion, But do not speake to me. Lead me to my Chamber

Flourish. Enter Pompey, at one doore with Drum and Trumpet: at another Cefar, Lepidous, Anthony, Enobarbus, Mecenas, Agrippa, Menas with Souldsers Marching Pom. Your Holtages I have, to have you mine t

And we shall talke before we fight.

Cafar. Most meete that first we come to words,

And therefore have we

Our written purposes before vs sent, Which if thou halt considered, let vsknow, If twill tye vp thy discontented Sword, And carry backe to Cicclie much tall youth, That else must perish heere.

Pom. To you all three, The Senators alone of this great world, Chiefe Factors for the Gods. I do not know, Wherefore my Father should revengers want, Having a Sonne and Friends, fince Julius Cafer, Who at Phillippi the good Brus wghosted; There law you labouring for him. What was't That mou'd pale Cassius to conspire? And what Made all-hopor'd, honest, Romaine Brunu, With the arm'd rest, Courtiers of beautious freedome, To drench the Capitoll, but that they would Haue one man but a man, and that his it Hath made me rigge my Nauie. At whole burthen, The anger'd Ocean fomes, with which I meant

To scourge thingratitude, that despightfull Rome Cast on my Noble Pather.

Cafar. Take your time.

Ant. Thou can'il not feare vs Pompey with thy failes Weele speake with thee at Sea. At land thou know's How much we do o're-count thee.

Pom. At Land indeed

Thou doft orecount me of my Fatherrs house: But fince the Cuckoo buildes not for himfelfe, Remaine in't as thou mailt. Lepi. Bepleas'd totall vs.

(For this is from the present how you take)

The offers we have fent you. Cafar. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entrested too, Buc waigh what it is worth imbrac'd

Cefar. And what may follow to try a larger Fortune

Pom. You have made me offer Of Cicelie, Sardinia: and I must Rid all the Sea of Pirars. Then, to fend

Measures of Wheate to Rome: this greed vpon, To part with vnhackt edges, and beare backe Our Targes undinced.

Omnes. That's our offer.

Pom. Know then I came before you heere,

A man prepar'd

Totake this offer, But Make Arthon, Put me to some impatience though I loose The praise of it by telling. You must know When Cafar and your Brother were at blowes, Your Mother came to Cicelie, and did finde Het welcome Friendly.

Ant. I have heard it Pompey.

And am well studied for a liberall thanks,

Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have yout hand : I did not thinke Sir, to have mer you heere,

Ans. The beds i'th East are loft, and thanks to you, That cal'd me timeliet then my purpose hither: For I have gained by't.

Cafar. Since I faw you last, ther's a change vpon you.

Pom. Well, I knownor,

What counts haifh Fotune cast's vpon my face, But in my bosome shall she never come, To make my heart her vallaile.

Lop. Well met heere.

Poro. I hope so Lepidsu, thus we are agreed : I craue our composion may be written And feal'd betweene vs.

Cafar. That's the next to do.

Pom. Weele feaft each other, ere we part, and lett's Draw lors who shall begin.

Ans. That will I Pompey.

Pompey. No Anthony take the lot : but first or lan. your fine Egyption cookerie shall have the fame, I have heard that Iulius Cafar, grew far with feathing there.

Anth. You have heard much.

Poin. I bave faire meaning Sir. Ant. And faire words to them.

Pom. Then so much have I heard, And I have beard Appolodorus carried-

Eno. No more that ; he did fo.

Pom. What I pray you?

Ene. A certaine Queene to Cefer in a Matris. Pom. I know thee now, how far It thou Souldier?

Eno. Well, and well am like to do, for I perceive

Foure Feaffs are roward.

Pom Les me shake thy hand.

I never haved thee: I have feene thee fight, When I have enused thy behautour.

Eneb. Sir, I neuer lou'd you much, but I ha'prais'd ye, When you have well deferu'd ten times as niuch, As I have faid you did.

Pom. Inioy thy plainnesse, It nothing ill becomes thee r Aboordmy Gally, I invite you all. Will you leade Lords?

All. Show a the way, fir.

Pom. Come. Manet Enob & Menas Exempt. Asen. Thy Father Pompey would ne're have made this Treaty. You, and I have knowne fir. Enob. Ar Sea, I thinke.

Men. We have Sir. Enob. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by Land.

Enob. I will praise any man that will praise me, thogh It cannot be denied what I have done by Land.

Mm. Not what I have done by water.

Enob. Yes forme-thing you can deny for your owne (afery: you have bin a great Theefe by Ses.

Men. And you by Land.

Enob. There I deny my Land fervice: but give mee your hand Mena, if our eyes had authority, heere they might take two Theeues kiffing.

Men. All mens faces are true, what somere their hands are.

Enob. But there is neuer a fayte Woman, ha's a true Face.

Men. No flander, they fleale hearts.

Enob. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am forry it is turn'd to a Drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his Fortune.

Enob. If he do, fure he cannot weep't backe againe. Men. Y'haue said Sir, we look'd not for Marke An.

thony heere, pray you, is he married to Clopura? Enob. Cafar Sifter is call'd Ostania.

Men. True Sir, she was the wife of Caim Marcellus.

Eneb. But the is now the wife of Marcus Anthonius.

Men. Pray'ye fir.

Enob. 'Tis true.

Men. Then is Cafer and he, for ever knit together. Encb. If I were bound to Divine of this ynity, I wold not Prophefie fo.

Men. I thinke the policy of that purpose, made more in the Marriage, then the love of the parties.

Enob. I thinke fo too. But you shall finde the band that feemes to tye their friendship together, will bee the very strangler of their Amity : Ottamia is of a holy, cold, and fill conversation,

Men. Who would not have his wife fo?

Eno. Nothethat himfelfe is not fo : which is Marke Anthony: he will to his Egyptian dish againe: then shall the lighes of Ollania blow the fire up in Cafar, and (as I faid before) that which is the firength of their Araity, shall proue the immediate Author of their variance. Anthony will vie his affection where it is. Hee married but his occasion heere.

Men. And thus it may be. Come Sir, will you shoord?

I have a health for you.

Enob. I shall take it fir : we have vs'd our Throsts in Egypt.

Men. Come, let's away,

Exempl.

Musiche player. Enter two or three Sermance with a Banker.

1 Heere they'l be man: fome o'th'their Planes are rooted already, the least winder th'world wil blow them downe.

2 Lepida is high Contord.

1 They have made him drinke Almes drinke.

3 As they pinch one another by the disposition, bee cries out, no more; reconciles them to his entrestie, and himselfe to'th'drinke.

But it railes the greater warre betweene him & his discretion,

2 Why this it is to have a name in great mens Fellowship: I had as live have a Reede that will doe meno service, as a Partizan I could not heave.

2 To be call'd into a huge Sphere, and not to be feene to move in the to the holes where eyes should bee, which pittifully disafter the cheekes,

A Small founded. Enter Cafar, Anthony, Powpey, Lapidous, Agriffa, Merenas, Enobarbus, Menes, with other Captames.

Ant. Thur do they Sit: they take the flow o'th Nyle By certaine scales i'th'Pyramid: they know By th'height, the lownesse, or the meane : If dearth Or Foizon follow. The higher Nilus (wels, The more it promises : as it ebbes, the Seedsman V pon the flime and Ooze Catters his graine, And shortly comes to Haruest.

Lip. Y'haue strange Serpents there?

Anib. 1 Lepidus.

Lip. Your Serpent of Egypt, is bred now of your mud by the operation of your Sun : so is your Crocodile,

Ant. They are fo.

Pom. Sit, and some Wine: A health to Lyides.

Lep. lamnot fo well as I should be:

But Ile ne're out.

Enob. Not till you have flept: I feare me you'l bee in Lep. Nay certainly, I have heard the Prolomics Pyramins are very goodly things : without contradiction I have heard that.

Menas. Pempey, 2 word.

Pomp. Say in mine eare, what is't.
Men. For lake thy feate I do beleech thee Captaine, And heare me speake a word.

Pom. Forbeare metill anon. Whifers in's Eare.

This Wine for Lepides.

Lep. What manner o'thing is your Crocodile? Ant. It is (hap'd fir like it selfe, and it is as broad as it hath bredth; It is just so high as it is, and moones with it owne organs. It lives by that which nourishethit, and the Elements once out of it, le Transmigrates

Lop. What colour is it of? Ant. Ofit owne colour too.

Lap. 'Tisa Atrange Serpent.

Ant. 'Tis lo, and the teares of it are wet. Caf. Will this description fatisfie him?

Ant. With the Health that Pompey gives him, elfe be is a very Epicure.

Pomp. Go hang sir, hang : tell me of that? Away:
Doss I bid you. Where's this Cup I call'd for?

Men. If for the fake of Merit thou will heare mee

Rife

Rife from thy stoole.

Pom. I thinke th'art mad : the matter?

Men. I have ever held my cap of so thy Fortunes.
Pers. Thou half feru'd me with much faith: what's elfe to fay? Be jolly Lords.

And. These Quicke fands Lepidus.

Keepe off, them for you finke,

Men. Wilt thou be Lord of all the world?

Men. Wilt thou be Lord of the whole world? Thar's twice.

Pom. How should that be #

Mer. But entertaine it, and though thou thinke me poore, I am the man will give thee all the world.

Pen. Haft thou drunke well.

Men. No Pompey, I have kept me from the cup, Thou art if thou do! It be, the earthly love! What ete the Ocean pales, or skie inclippes, Isthme, if thou wilt ha's.

Pom. Show me which way,

Men. These three World-Sharers, these Competitors Are in thy restell. Let me cut the Cable, And when we are pur off, fall to their throates 1

All there is thine. Pom. Ah, this thou shoulds have done, And not have spoke on't. In me 'tis villante, In thee,'t had bin good fervice : thou must know, Tis not my profit that does lead mine Honout: Mine Honour it. Repent that ere thy tongue, Hath to berraide thine ace. Being done vinknowne, I should have found it afterwards well done,

But must condemne it now : defist, and drinke. Men. For this, He never follow

Thy paul'd Fortunes more, Who feekes and will not take, when once 'tis offer'd. Shall never finde it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidiu Ans. Beare him ashore, He pledge it for him Pompey

Eno Heere's to thee Menoco Men, Enobarbus, vielcome. Pom. Fill till the cup be hid.

Ene. There's a ftrong Fellow Menas.

Mon. Why?

Em. A beares the third part of the world man i feeft

Men. The chird part, then he is drunk: would it were all, that it might go on wheeles.

Eno. Drinke thou i encrease the Reeles.

Mm Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian Feaft.

Am. It ripen's towards it : ftrike the Vessells hoa.

Cafar. I could well forbeat't, it's monstrous labour when I wash my braine, and it grow fouler.

Am, Bea Child o'th'time.

Cafar. Postelle it, Ile make answer : but I had rather fast from all, soure dayes, then drinke so much in one.

Enob. Hamy brave Emperour, shall we daunce now the Egyptian Backenals, and celebrate our drinke?

Pom. Let's ha't good Souldier. Am. Come, let's all take bands,

Till that the conquering Wine hath fleep't our fense, In foft and delicate Lethe

Eno. All take hands ;

Make battery to our eares with the loud Muficke,

The while, ile place you, then the Boy thall ling, The holding every man shall beace as loud, As his firong fides can volly Mufiche Playes. Enobarbus places them band in band. The Song.

Come thes Monarch of the Vine. Plumpse Bacchus, with punke eyne: In thy Fattes our Cares be drown'd, Wish thy Grapes our bairerte Crown'de Cup vs Hill the world go round, Cap us still the world go round, Cafar. What would you more? Pempey goodnight. Good Brother Let me request you of our graver bufinesse Frownes at this letitie. Gentle Lords let's part, You fee we have burnt our cheekes. Strong Enabarbe Is weaker then the Wine, and mine owne tongne Spleer's what it speakes: the wilde disguise bath almost Antickt vs all. What needs more words? goodnight. Good Ambony your hand.

Pom. He try you on the shore, Auth. And shall Strigues your hand.

Pom Oh Ambony, you have my Father hoples But what, we are Friends?

Come downe into the Boate.

Ene Take heed you fall not Menas. Henot on fhore, No to my Cabin: these Drummes, These Trumpets, Fluces: what Les Neptune heare, we bid aloud fare well To these great Fellowes. Sound and be hang'd, sound out. Sound a Flour if web Drummes.

Ener. Hoo fairs a there's my Cap. Men. Hoz, Noble Capraine, come.

Enter Ventidisus as it were in triumph, the dead body of Pacorue borne before birs.

Exerunt. Enter Agrapa at one doore, Eucharbus as another.

Agri. What art the Brothers parted? Eno. They have dispatche with Pompey, he is gone, The other three are Scaling. Oftmus weepes To part from Rome: Cafar Is lad, and Lepidus Since Pompey's least, as Monas saies, is troubled With the Greene-Sicknesse.

Agri. Tica Noble Lepidne.

Ens. A very fine one: oh, how he loves Cafe. Agri. Nay but how decrely he adores Mark Ambery.

Ene. Cafer? why he's the Inpiter of men. Ant. What's Ambony, the God of lupiter?

Eno. Spake you of Cafer ? How, the non-pareill? Aeri. Oh Anthony, oh thou Arabian Bird!

Ene Would you praile Cafar, lay Cafango no further. Ar Indeed he plied them both with excellent praifes

Eso. But he loues Cafer beft, yet be foues Anthony: Hoo Hearts, Tongues, Figure, Seribes, Berds, Poets, cannot Thinka speake, cast, write, ling, number: boo, His love to Anthony. But as for Cafer, Kneele downe, kneele downe, and wonder. Agri. Both he loves.

Eso. They are his Shards, and he their Beetle, for

This is to horse : Adieu Noble Agrippa. Agrs. Good Fortune worthy Souldier, and farewell.

Enter Cafar, Ambony, Lepideu, and Olivania, Antho. No further Str.

Cafar. You take from me a great part of my felfe: Vle me well in't. Sister, prone such a wife As my thoughts make thee, and as my fartheft Band Shall palle on thy approofe: most Noble Authory, Let not the peece of Vertue which is fet Betwixt vs, 25 the Cyment of our love To keepe it builded, be the Ramme to batter The Fortreffe ofit: for better might we Have lou'd without this meane, if onboth parts This be not cherisht,

Ant. Make me not offended, in your diftruft.

Cafer, I have faid.
Ant. You shall not finde,

Though you be therein curious, the left cause For what you feeme to feare, fo the Gods keepe you, And make the hearts of Romaines seure your ends: We will heere part.

Cafar. Farewell my deereft Sifter fare thee well, The Elements be kind to thee, and make Thy spirits all of comfort : farethee well.

Oils. My Noble Brother.

Asth. The Aprill's in her eyes, it is Lones foring, And thefe the showers to bring it on t be cheerfull.

Olla. Sie, looke well to my Husbands houle : and . Cafer. What Ollows ?

Oda. He tell you lu your care.

Ant. Her songue will not obey her heart, nor can Her beart informe her tougue,

The Swannes downe fearher

That stands upon the Swell at the of full Tides And neither way inclines.

Eno. Will Cale weope? Agr. Hehs's a cloud in's face.

Eno. He were the worle for that, were he a Horle lo is he being a man

Agri. Why Enobarbus!

When Anthony found I when Cafer dead, He cried almost to rosring : And he wept, When at Phillippi he found Zrut we flaine

Eno. That yeare indeed, he was troubled with a rume. What willingly be did confound, he was I'd, Beleru't till I weepe too. Cafer. No sweet Ollawa.

You shall heare from me full : the time shall not

Our-go my thinking on you.

Mer. Come Sir, come, He wraftle with you in my firength of lose, Looke beere I have you, thus I, let Lou go,

And give you to the Gods

Cefar. Adieu be happy.

Alex. Halfe afeard to come. Cho. Go 100, go 100 : Come hither Sir.

Enter the Meffenger as before.

Alex. Good Marchie: Hered of lucy dare mot looke rpon you, but when you are well place'd.

Clea. That Hereds head, He have: but how? When Ambany is gooe, through whom I might command it; Come thou neere.

Mef. Most gratious Maiefile. Cles. Did'fi thou behold Offeria?

Mes I dread Queene.

Cleo. Where!

Mef. Madamin Rome, I looks her In the face and faw her led betweene her Brother, and Make Leiberj.

Cho. Is fhe astall as me? Mef. She is not Madam.

Cleo. Didft bearcher (peake? Is the shrill tongu dor low?

Mef. Madam I heard her speake she is low voice Cles. That's not fa good : he cannor like her long.

Cher. Like ber ? Oh Ifit : 'cis impossible. Cles. I shinke to Charmean dull of roogue, & dwarfish

What Maletlie is in her gate, remember If crethou look'ft on Maichie.

Mef. She creepes: her motion, & her fraion are as one She shewes a body, rather then a life,

A Statue, then a Breather,

Clee. Is this certaine? Mef. Or I have no observance.

Cha. Three in Egypt cannot make better note.

Clos. He's very knowing, I do percent's, There's nothing in her yet.

The

The Fellow ha's good judgement.

Char. Excellent.

Cleo. Gueffe at her yeares, I prythee. Meff. Madam, the was a widdow. Cleo. Widdow? Charman, hearke. Mef. And I do thinke she's thirtie.

Cle. Bear'fethou her face in mind? is'clong or round? Meff. Round, euen to faultineffe.

Cleo. For the most part too, they are fuolish that are Co. Her haire what colour?

Meff. Browne Madam: and her forehead

As low as the would with it.

Cleo. There's Gold for thee, Thou must not take my former sharpenesse ill, I will employ thee backe againe : I finde thee Moft fit for bufineffe. Go, make thee ready, Our Letters are prepar'd.

Cho. A proper man. Cho. Indeed he is fo: I repent me much That so I harried him. Why, me think's by him, This Creature's no fuch thing.

Char. Nothing Madam.
Cleo. The man hath scene some Maiesty, and should know

Char. Hath he seeme Maiestie? Isis else desend: and ferving you to long.

Cleopa. I have one thing more to aske him yet good Charmion: but 'tis no matter, thou shalt bring bin to me where I will write; all may be well enough. Exexput.

Char. I warrant you Madam. Enter Anthony and Oltakia.

Ant. Nay, nay Oltania, not onely that, That were excusable, that and thousands more Of femblable import, but he hath wag'd New Warres gainst Pompey. Made his will, and read it, To publicke eare, spoke scantly of me, When perforce he could not

But pay me tearmes of Honour: cold and fickly He vented then most narrow measure:lentme, When the best hint was given him : he not look't,

Or did it from his teeth.

Octani. Oh my good Lord, Beleeve not all, or if you must beleeve, Stomacke not all. A more vnhappie Lady, If this deuision chance, ne're flood betweene Praying for both parts: The good Gods wil mocke me prefently, When I shall pray: Oh blesse my Lord, and Husband, Vndo that prayer, by crying out as loud, Ch bleffe my Brother. Husband winne, winne Brother, Prayes, and distroyes the prayer, no midway Twixt these extreames at all.

Ant. Gentle Ottavia, Let your best love draw to that point which seeks Best to preserve it: if I loose mine Honour, I loofe my felfe:better I were not yours Then your so branchlesse. But as you requested, Your selfe shall go between's, the meane time Lady, He raife the preparation of a Warre Shall staine your Brother, make your soonest hast, So your defires are yours.

Off. Thanks to my Lord, The love of power make me most weake, most weake, You reconciler: Warres 'twixt you twaine would be, As if the world should cleave, and that slains men Should soader up the Rift.

Anch. When It appeares to you where this begins, Turne your displeasure that way, for our Jules Can never be so equall, that your leve Can equally moue with them. Proude yourgoing, Choose your owne company, and command what cost Your heart he's mind too. Execut.

Enter Enobarbes and Eres.

Eno. How now Friend Eros? Eros. Ther's strange Newes come Sir. Eno. What man?

Ero. Cofar & Lepidus have made warres upon Pompey.

Eno. This is old, what is the successe?

Eros. Cafar having made vie of him in the warres gamft Pompey: presently denied him rivality, would not let him partake in the glory of the action, and not refling here, accuses him of Letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey. V poo his owne appeale feizes him, so the poore third is vp, till death enlarge his Confine.

Eno. Then would thou hadft a paire of chapsn o more, and throw betweene them all the food thou haff, they'le grinde the other. Where's Anthony?

Eros. He's walking in the garden thus, and spurnes The rush that lies before him. Cries Foole Lepidsa, And threats the throate of that his Officer, That murdred Pompey.

Ens. Our great Nauies rig'd.

Eros. For Italy and Cafer, more Domitics, My Lord defices you presently : my Newes I might have rold heareafter.

Eno. Twillbe naught, but let it be:bring me to Anthony. Eros. Come Sir.

Enter Agrippa, Mecenas, and Cafar. Caf. Contemning Rome he ha's done all this, & more In Alexandria: heere's the manner of't: I'th' Market place on a Tribunall filuer'd, Cleopaira and himselfe in Chaires of Gold Were publikely enthron'd : at the feet, fat Cafarion whom they call my Fathers Sonne, And all the vnlawfull iffuc, that their Luft Since then hath made betweene them. Vnto her, He gave the stablishment of Egypt, made her Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, absolute Queene.

Mece. This in the publike eye?

Cefar. I'ch'common shew place, where they exercise, His Sonnes hither proclaimed the King of Kings, Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia He gaue to Alexander. To Prolomy he affign'd, Syria, Silicia, and Phoeneria: The In th'abiliments of the Goddesse Isis That day appeer'd, and oft before gaue audience, As tis reported fo.

Mere. Let Rome be thus inform'd.
Agri. Who queozie with his infolence already,

Will their good thoughts call from him.

Cafar. The people knowes it, And have now received his acculations.

Agri. Who does he accuse?

Cafar. Cafar, and that having in Cicilie

Sexum Pompetus spoil'd, we had not rated him
His pareo'th'Isle. Then does he say, he lent nue Some shipping vnrestor'd. Lastly, he frees That Lepides of the Triumpherate, should be depos'd, And being that, we detaine all his Revenue.

Agri. Sir, this should be answered.

Cofor, 'Tis done already, and the Meffenger gone: I have told him Lapidus was growne too cruell, уу

That he his high Authority abus'd, And did deferue his change : for what I have cooquer'd, I grant him part : but then in his Armenla, And other of his conquer'd Kingdoms, I demand the like

Mec. Hee'l never yeeld to that.

Caf. Nor muft not then be yeelded to in this. Enter Oldanie wal ber Traine.

Oda. Haile Cafar, and my L. heile most deere Cafar. Cefer. That ever I should call thee Cast-away.
Offe. You have not call'd me fo, nor have you cause.

Caf. Why baue you flola upon vs thus you come not Like Cafers Sifter, The wife of Anthony Should have an Army for so Viher, and The neighes of Horfe to tell of her approach, Long ere the did appeare. The trees by th'way Should have borne men, and expectation fainted, Longing for what it had not. Nay, the duft Should have afcended to the Roofe of Heaven, Rais'd by your populous Troopes: But you are come A Market maid to Rome, and have prevented The oftentation of our love; which left vnfhewne. Is often left valou'd : we should have met you By Sea, and Land, Supplying enery Stage With an augmented greeting.

Offa. Good my Lord, To come thus was I not confirain'd, but did it On my free-will. My Lord Marke Ambony, Hearing that you prepar'd for Warre, acquainted My greened eare withall; whereon I begg'd His pardon for recume.

Caf. Which foone he granted, Being an abstract eweene his Lust, and him.

Olfa Do not fay formy Lord. Caf. I have eyes vpon him.

And his affaires come to me on the wind: wher is he now? Olla My Lord, in Athens.

Cafar. No my most wronged Sister, Cleopara Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his Empire Vp to a Whore, who now are leaving The Kings o'th'earth for Warre. He hath affembled, Bochus the King of Lybia, Architesus Of Cappadocia, Philadelphos King Of Paphlagonia: the Thracian King Adullas, King Manches of Arabia, King of Pont, Hered of Icwry, Mithridates King Of Comagent, Polemen and America, The Kings of Mede, and Licosnia, With a more larger Lift of Scepters.

Olla. Ayeme most wrerched, That have my heart parced betwixt two Friends, That does afflict each other. (breaking forth

Caf. Welcom hither : your Letters did with-holde our Till we perceiu'd both how you were wrong led, And we in negligent danger : cheere your heart, Be you not troubled with the time, which drives O're your content, these strong necessities, But let determin'd things to destinie Hold vnbewayl'd their way. Welcome to Rome, Nothing more decre to me. You are abus'd Beyond the marke of thought: and the high Gods To do you luffice, makes his Ministers Ofve, and those that love you. Best of comfort, Agrip. Welcome Lady. And euer welcom to vs.

Mec. Welcome deere Madam, Each heart in Rome does love and pitty you, Onely th adulterous Ambery, most large

In his abbominations, tornes you off, And gines his potent Regiment to a Trull That noyfes It against vs.

Olla. Is it fo fit!
Caf. Most corrainer Sister welcome: pray you Be ever knowne to patience. My deer A Sifter. Exempl Emer Chepara pod Ensbarbin.

Cles. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cles. Thou half forespoke my being to these warres, And fay'A It it not fit.

Zm. Well: in it, is it.

Clee. If not, denounc'd against vs, why should not we be there in person.

Enob. Well, I could reply: if wee should ferae with Horse and Mares rogether, the Horse were meerly lost the Mares would beare a Soldiour and his Horse.

Cho. What is't you lay !

Enob. Your presence needs must puzle Ambon, Take from his beart, take from his Braine, from's turbe, What should not then be spar'd. He is already Traduc'd for Leuity, and 'us faid in Rome, That Photmes an Eucuch, and your Maides Mannage this warre.

Che. Slake Rome, and their tongues see That speake against vs. A Charge we bearei'th'Warre, And as the president of my Kingdome will Appeare there for a man. Speake not against it, I will not flay behinde.

Ener Ambony and Comides. Ene. Nay I have done, here comes the Emperor. Aut. Is it not strange Camidius,

That from Tarrentum, and Brandulium, He could so quickly eat the Ionian Sea, And take in Troine. You have heard on't (Sweet?)

Che. Celerity is neuer more somit'd, Then by the negligent.

Am. A good reboke, Which might have well becom'd the best of men To tount at flacknesse. Camidius, wee Will fight with him by Sea.

Cleo. By Sea, what elfe? Cam. Why will my Lord, do fo? Ast. For that he dares vs too't.

Exob. So bath my Lord, dar'd him to fingle fight. Cam. 1, and to wage this Barrell at Pharlalia, Where Cafar fought with Pompey. But thefe offers

Which ferue not for his vantage, he shakes off, And fo should you.

Eneb. Your Shippes are not well mann'd, Your Marriners are Muliters, Reapers people Ingroft by fwift Impreffe. In Cafari Fleete, Are those, that often have grinft rompey fought, Their shippes are yare, yours heavy no disgrace Shall fall you for tefufing him at Sea,

Being prepar'd for Land.
Ant. By Sea, by Sea.

Eze, Most worthy Sir, you therein throw away The absolute Soldierthip you have by Land. Diffrad your Armie, which doth most consist Of Warre-markt-footmen, leave vnexecuted Your owne renowned knowledge, quite forgoe The way which promifes a Gurance, and Give vp your felfe meerly to chance and liszard. From firme Securitie.

Aut. He fight at Sea.

Clee. I have fixty Sailes, Cefar none better.

Ant. Our over-plus of shipping will we burne,
And with the rest full mann'd, from th'head of Action
Beate th'approaching Cefar. But if we faile.
We then can doo't at Land.

Enter a Messager.
Thy Businesse?

Mef. The Newes is true, my Lord, he is descried,

Cafar ha's taken Toryne.

Ant. Can he be there in person? Tis impossible
Strange, that his power should be. Camidius.
Out nineteene Legions shou shalt hold by Land,
And our twelve thousand Hotse. Wee'l to our Ship,
Away my Thetis.

Enter a Soldiour.

How now worthy Souldier?

Soul. On Noble Emperor, do not fight by Sea,
Trust not to rotten plankes: Do you missoubt
This Sword, and these my Wounds; letth Egyptians
And the Phenicians go a ducking: wee
Haue vs d to conquer standing on the eartus
And fighting soot to soot.

Ant. Well, well, 2way. exit Ant. Clear Enob. Soul. By Hercules I thinke I am i'th'right.

Cam. Souldier thou att: but his whole action grower
Not in the power on't: so our Leaders leade,
And we are Womens men.

Soul. You keepe by Land the Legions and the Horse whole, do you not?

Ven. Marcus Octavius, Marcus lufteus, Publicols, and Celius, are for Sea: But we keepe whole by Land. This speede of Cafars Carries beyond beleefe.

Soul. While he was yet in Rome
His power went out in fuch diffractions.

As beguilde all Spies.

Cam. Who's his Lieutenant, heare you?

Soul They fay, one Towns.

Cam. Well, I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mef. The Emperor cals Camulus.
Cam. With Newes the times with Labour,
And throwes forth each minute, fome.

Enter Cafar with his Army, marching.

Caf. Towns?
Tow. My Lotd.

Cef. Strike not by Land,
Keepe whole, prouoke not Battaile
Till we have done at Sea. Do not exceede
The Prescript of this Scroule: Our fortune lyes
Vpon this jumpe.

Enter Anthony, and Enobarbus.

Ant Set we our Squadrons on yond fide o'th'Hill.

In eye of Cafars battaile, from which place
We may the number of the Ships behold,

And so proceed accordingly.

Camidius Marchesh wish his Land Army one way over the frage, and Tourns the Lientenant of Cafar the other way: After their going in, is heard the noise of a Sea fight. Alarum. Enter Enobarbus and Scarus.

Eno. Naught, naught, al naught, I can behold no longer: Thantoniad, the Egyptian Admirall, With all their fixty flye, and turne the Rudder: To fee't, mine eyes are blafted.

Enter Scarring.

See. Gods, & Goddeffes, all the whol fynod of them!

Sour. The greater Cantle of the world, is lost With very ignorance, we have kist away Kingdomes, and Provinces.

Eno. How appeares the Fight?

Sear. On our fide, like the Token'd Peffilence, Where death is fure. You ribaudred Nagge of Egypt, (Whom Leprofic o're-take) i'th'midft o'th'fight, When vantage like a payre of Twinnes appear'd Both as the fame, or rather ours the elder; (The Breeze vpon her) like a Cow in Inne, Hoifts Sailes, and flyes.

Eno. That I beheld s Mine eyes did ficken at the fight, and could not Indure a further view.

Sear. She once being looft,
The Noble ruine of her Magicke, Anthony,
Claps on his Sea-wing, and (like a doting Mallard)
Leaving the Fight in heighth, flyes after her:
I neuer faw an Action of fuch shame;
Experience, Man-hood, Honor, ne'te before,
Did violate so it selse.

Enob. Alacke, alacke.

Enter Camidias.

Cam. Our Fortune on the Sea is our of breath, And finkes most lamentably. Had our Generall Bin what he knew himselfe, it had gone well: Oh his ha's given example for our flight, Most grossely by his owne.

Enob. 1, are you thereabouts? Why then goodnight indeede.

excernit

exis.

Cam. Toward Peloponuesus are they fled.
Scar. 'Tis easie toot.

And there I will attend what further comes.

Camid. To Cafar will I render My Legions and my Horfe, fixe Kings alreadie Shew me the way of yeelding.

Eno. He yet follow

The wounded chance of Anthony, though my reason Sits in the winde against nice.

Enter Ambony with Assendants.

Am. Hearke, the Land bids me tread no more vpon't,
It is as ham'd to be ate me. Friends, come hither,
I am so lated in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever. I have a shippe,
Laden with Gold, take that, divide it sliye,
And make your peace with Cefar.

Omnes. Fly? Not wee.

Ant. I have fled my felfe, and have instructed cowards
To runne, and shew their shoulders. Friends be gone,
I have my selfe resolu'd opon a course,
Which has no neede of you. Be gone,
My Treasure's in the Harbour. Take it: Oh,
I follow'd that I blush to looke vpon,
My very haires do mutiny: for the white
Reproue the browne for rashnesse, and they them
For seare, and doting. Friends be gone, you shall Have Letters from me to some Friends, that will Sweepe your way for you. Pray you looke not sad,
Nor make replyes of loathnesse, take the hine
Which my dispaire proclaimes. Let them be left
Which leaves it selfe, to the Sea-side straight way;
I will possesse you of that ship and Treasure.

Leaue

Leave me, I pray a little : pray you now, Nay do fo : for indeede I have loft command,

Therefore I pray you, Ile fee you by and by. Sindown Enter Clespair a led by Charman and Eros.

Eras. Nay gentle Madam, to him, comfort him.

Char. Do, why, what ellet

Clee. Let me fit downe : Oh Ime.

Ant. No no no no no no. Eras. See you heere, Sie?

Char. Madam. Iras. Madam, oh good Empresse.

Eras. Sir,fir.

Ant. Yes my Lord, yet; he at Philippl kept His fword e'ne like a dancer, while I frooke The leane and wrinkled Cassius, and twas I That the mad Bruws ended: he slone Desk on Lleutenantry, and no procise had In the bysue fquites of Warre; yet now : no matter-

Cleo. Ah Rand by.

Eres. The Queene my Lord, the Queene. Iras. Go to him, Madam, speake to him, Hoe's vaqualited with very frame. Cleo. Well then, fuffaine me: Oh.

Eres. Most Noble Six arise, the Queene approaches. Her head's declin'd, and death will ceale her, but Your comfort makes the releve.

Ant. I have offended Reputation,

A most vanoble swerning. Eroc. Sir, the Queene.

Ant. Oh whether hast thou lead me Egypt, fee How I convey my fhame, out of thise eyes, By looking backe what I have left behinde Stroy'd in dishonor.

Cles. Oh my Lord, my Lord, Forgine my fearfull fayles, I little thought

You would have followed.

Ans. Egypt, thou knew'st too well, My heart was to thy Rodder tyed by th'firings, And thou should'ff stowe me after. O're my spirit The full supremacie thou knew'a, and that Thy becke, might from the bidding of the Gods Command mee.

Cles. Oh my pardon. Ans. Now I must

To the young man fend humble Treaties, dodge And palcer in the faifts of lowner, who With halfe the bulke o'th'world plaid as I pleas'd, Making, and marring Portones. You did know How much you were my Conqueror, and that My Sword, made weake by my affection, would Obey it on all cause.

Cleo. Pardon, pardon.

Am Fall not a teare I fay, one of them rates All that is wome and loft : Give me a kiffe, Even this repayes me. We feet our Schoolemafter, is a come backe? Love I am full of Lead: forme Wine Within there, and our Viands: Fortune knowes, We forme ber most, when most the offers blower. Execut

Enter Cafar, Agrippa, and Dollabello, with others.

Caf. Let him appeare that's come from Anthony. Know you him.

Dolla Cafar, els his Schoolemafter. An argumens that he is pluckt, when hicher He fends to poore & Pinnion of his Wing, Which had Tuperfluous Kings for Mellengers, Not many Moones gone by, Enter Arrhafeder from Ambony.

Cofo. Approach, and speake.

Amb. Such as I am, I come from Asthony : I was of late as petry to his ends. As is the Morne-dew on the Mertle leafe To his grand Sea.
Caf. Bee't fo, declace thine office.

Amb. Lord of his Forumes he falures thee, and Requires to live in Egypt, which not granted He Leffons his Requests, and to thee lues To let him breath betweene the Heavens and Earth A private man in Athens: this for him. Next, Cloparadoes confesse thy Greatnesse, Submits her to thy might, and of thee cranes The Circle of the Prolomies for her heyres, Now hazarded to thy Grace.

Caf. For Ambory,
I have no eares to his request. The Queene,
Of Audience, nor Delire shall faile, so thee From Egypt drive her all-difgraced Friend, Ortake his life there. This if thee performe, She shall not sue vnheard. So to them both.

Amb. Fortune pursue thee.

Caf. Bring him through the Bands: To try thy Eloquence, now 'ris time, dispatch, From Ambeny winne Clesperta, promise And in our Name, what the requires, adde more From thine invention, offers. Women are not In their best Fortunes strong; but went will periore The ne're touch'd Vestall. Try thy cupping Thidia, Make thine owne Edict for thy paines, which we Will answer at a Law,

Thid. Cafe, 1 go.

Cefer. Observe how Anthony becomes his flaw, And what thou think it his very schion speakes In every power that moones. Thid. Cafer, I Shall.

Enter Cleopara, Enobarbus, Charmian, & Iras. Clee. What shall we do, Ensburbu ?

Ene. Thinke, and dye.

Cles. Is Ambory, or wein fault for this?

Eno. Anthony onely, that would make his will Lord of his Reason. What though you fied, From that great face of Warre, whose severall ranges Frighted each other? Why should be follow? The itch of his Affection should not then Haue nickt his Captain-ship, at such a point, When halfe to halfe the world oppos'd, he being The meered question? Twas a shame no lesse Then was his losse, to course your flying Flagges, And leave his Navy gazing.

Cloo. Prythee peace.

Enter the Ambassador poith Ambers. Ans. Is that his answer? Am. The Queene shall then have courte he,

So the will yeeld vs vp. Am. He sayes fo.

Antho. Let her know'r. To the Boy Cafar fend this rixled head, and he will fill thy wishes to the brunne, With Principalities.

Clee. That head my Lord?

Ans.

Ans . To him againe, tell him he weeres the Role Of youth vpoa him: from which, the world should note Someting particular. His Coine, Ships, Legions, May he > Gowards, whose Ministers would preusile Vnder the fervice of a Childe, as foone Agrith'Command of Cafar I dare him cherefore To lay his gay Compartions a-part, Andan firm me declin'd, Sword against Sword, Our felues alone : lle write it : Follow me. Eno Yes like enough : hye battel'd Cafer will Vnftatehis happinelle, and be Stag'd to'th'fhew Against a Sworder. I fee mens ludgements are Aparcellof their Fortunes, and things outward Dadraw the inward quality after them To liver all slike, that he foould dreame, Knowing all measures, the full Cafer will

His ludgement too. Enter a Sermant.

Ser. A Mellengerfrom Cafer Clee. What no more Ceremony ? See my Women, Against the blowne Rose may they stop their nose, That kneel'd vinto the Buds. Admit him sit.

Answer his emptimelle; Cefer thou halt subdu de

Ene. Mine honesty, and I, beginne to square. The Loyalty well held to Fooles, does make Our Faith meere folly: yet he that can endure To follow with Allegeance a false Lord, Does conquer him that did his Master conquer, And earnes a place i'th'Story. Enter Thedias.

Ciro. Cafars will. Tord. Heare it apart.

Cles. None but Friends : fay boldly.

Thid. So haply are they Friends to Anthony. Enob. He needs as many (Sir) as Cefar ha's, Orneeds not vs. If Cefar please, our Master Will leape to be his Friend : For vs you know.

Whole he is, we are, and shat is Cafart. ThidSo. Thus then thou most renown'd, Cafar intreats, Not to confider in what case thou stand'st Further then he is Cafare.

Cleo. Go on right Royall.

Thid. He knowes that you embrace not Anthony As you did love, but as you feared him.

Cleo. Oh.

Thid. The scarre's vpon your Honor, therefore he Does pitty, as confirmed blemishes, Notas deserved

Cleo. Heira God.

And knowes what is most right. Mine Honour Was not yeelded, but conquer'd meerely,

Eno. To be fure of that, I will aske Anthony Sir, fir, thou art fo leakie That we must leave thee to thy finking, for Thy deerest quit thee. Exis Euob. Thid Shall I say to Cafer.

What you require of him tfor he partly begges To be desir'd to give. It much would please him, That of his Fortunes you hould make a flaffe To leane upon. But it would warme his spirits To heare from me you had left Anthony,

And put your selle under his shrowd, the vowersal Land-Clee. What's yout name? Third. My name is Thidias.

Cleo. Moft kinde Mellenger, Say to great Cafar this in disputation, I kisse his conqu'ring hand : Tell him, I am prompt Toley my Crowne st's feete, and there to kneele. Tell him, from his all-obeying breath, I hears The doome of Egypt

Thid. The your Richlest course : Wifedonie and Fortune combatting rogether, If that the former dare but what it can, No chance may shake it. Gine me grace to lay My ducie on your hand.

Clas. Your Cafars Pather ofc, (When he hath mus'd of taking kingdomes in) Bestow'd his lips on that voworthy place. As it ram'd killes.

Enter Authory and Enoburbus. Ant. Favoured By Jove that thunders. What are thou Thid, One that but performes (Fellow? The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest To have command obey'd.

Ene You will be whipt.

Ant. Approch there : sh you Kite. Now Gods & divels uthority melts from me of late. When I cried hos, Like Boyes vnto a mulle, Kings would flore forth, And cry, your will, Haueyou no cares?
I am Authory yet. Take hence this lack, and whip him. Enter a Serumite Eno. Tis better playing with a Lions whelpe. Then with an old one dying.

Ans. Moone and Starres. Whip him: wer t twenty of the greatest Tribucaries That do acknowledge Cafer, should I finds them So fawcy with the hand of the heere, what's her name Since the was Cleopatra? Whip him Fellowers Till like a Boy you fee him crindge his face. And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.

Thid. Marke Anthony. Ant. Tugge him sway : being whipe Bring him againe, the lacke of Cafers Shall Beare vs an arrant to him. Exeant with Thillies. You were halfe blafted ete I knew you : Ha? Have I my pillow left unprest in Rome, Forborne the getting of a lawfull Race, And by a lein of women, to be abus'd By one that lookes on Feeders?

Cleo. Good my Lord.

Ane. You have beene a boggeler etter, But when we in our victousnesse grow hard Oh milery on't) the wife Gods feele our eyes In our owne filth, drop our cleare judgements, make vs Adore our errors, laugh at's while we frux To our confusion.

Cleo. Oh, ist come to this?

Am. I found you as a Morfell, cold vpon Dead Cesars Trencher: Nay, you were a fragment Of Gneius Pompeyer, befides what hotter houres Varegistred in vulgar Fartte, you have Luxuiously pickt out. For I am sere, Though you can guesse what Temperance should be, You know not what it is.

Cloo. Wherefore is this?

(lord.

Ant. To let a Fellow that will take rewards, And lay, God quit you, be familler with My play-fellow, your hand; this Kingly Seele, And plighter of high hearts. Othat I were Vpon the hill of Bafon to out-roare The horned Heard, for I have lauge caule, And to proclaime it citilly, were like

A halrer'd necke, which do's the Hangman thanke, For being yare about him. Is be whipe ? Enter a Serman wat I bideas.

Ser. Soundly, my Lord.

Ant. Cried her end begg'd a Pardon !

Ser. He did sake fauour.

Ant. If that thy Father line, let him repent Thou was't not made his daughter, and be thou fortie To follow Cafar la his Triumph, fince Thou haft bin whipt. For following him, benceforth The white hand of a Lady Feater thee, Shake thou to looke on't. Get thee backe to Cafer, Tell him thy entertainment: looke thou fay He makes me angry with him. For he feemes Proud and difdainfull, barping on what I am, Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry, And at this time most easie 'tis to doo't: When my good Starres, that were my former guides Haue empty lese their Orbes, and that their Fires Into th'Abisme of bell. If he mislike, My speech, and what is done, tell him he has Hiparchus, my enfranched Bondman, whom He may at plcafure whip, or hang, or torture, As he (hall like to quit me. Vige it thou : Hence with thy Stripes, be gone. Exit Toid.

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Aur. Alacke our Terrene Moone is now Eclip !. And it portends alone the fail of Ambony.

Clee. I must stay his time?
Aut. To flatter Cafer, would you mingle eyes

With one that tyes his points

Cleo. Not know me yet? Act. Cold-bearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah (Deere) if I be fo, From my cold heart let Heaven ingender haile, And poylon it in the fourfe, and the first stone Drop in my necke : as it determines fo Diffolue my life, the next Calarian Imile, Till by degrees the memory of my wombe, Together with my brane Egyptians of. By the discandering of this pelleted storme Lye graneleffe, till the Flies and Gnats of Nyle

Haue buried them for prey. Are. I am fatisfied:

Cofor fets downe in Alexandria, where I will oppose his Fate. Our force by Land, Hath Nobly held, out feuer'd Nauie 100 Have knit againe, and Fleete, threatning moft Sea-like. Where haft thou bio my heart? Doft thou heare Lady? If from the Field I shall returne once more To kille thefe Lips, I will appeare in Blood, I, and my Sword, will earne our Chronicle, There's hope in't yet.

Cleo. That's my braue Lord.

Ant. I will be trebble-finewed, hearted, breath'd, And fight maliciously: for when mine houses Were nice and lucky, men did ransome lives Of me for selfs: But now, He let my teeth And fend to darkenesse all that stop me. Come, Let's have one other gawdy night: Call to me All my fad Captaines, fill our Bowles once more: Ler's mocke the midnight Bell.

Cleo. 1 isroy Birth-day, I had thought thaugheld it poore. But fince my Lord Is Anthony againe, I will be Chopatra.

Ant. We will yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his Noble Captaloes to my Lord. Am. Dolo, wee'l speake to them, And to night He force The Wine peepe through their learnes. Come on (my Queene) There's fap in't yet. The next time I do highe Ile make ceach lone me . for I will contend Even with his pestilent Syt w.

Eno. Now hee'l out-stare the Lighening, to be furious Is to be frighted out of feare, and in that moode The Done will pecke the Effridge; and I for full A diminution in our Captaines braine, Reflores his heart; when valous prayes so reston, It eates the Sword it fighte with: I will feeke Some way to lease him.

Euter Cafer, Agrippa, & Mercene will bis Array, Cafa reading a Letter.

Case. He calles me Boy, and chides as he had power To beate me out of Egypt. My Mellenger He hash whips with Rods, dares me to personal Combas. Cefar to Authory: let the old Ruffish know, I have many other wayes to dye : meane time] Laugh et his Challenge.

Mice. Cofar muft thinke.

When one to great begins to rage, bee's hunted Even to falling. Gine him no breath, but now Make boote of his diffraction i Neuer anger Made good guard for it felfe.

Cef. Let our best heads know, That to morrow, the last of many Batteiles We meane to fight. Within our Files there are, Of those that seru'd Marke Anthony but late, Enough to fetch him in. See it done, And Feaft the Army, we have flore to doo't, And they have eated'd the wafte. Poore Anthony. Execut

Agt. Why (hould he not?

Em. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune, He is twenty men to one,

Ant. To morrow Soldier, By Sea and Land lle fight: or I will line, Or bathe my dying Honor in the blood Shall make it live againe. Woo't thou fight well.

Eno. Ile firike, and ay; Take all. Am. Well faid, come on :

Call forth my Houshold Servents, lets to night

Be bounteous arour Meale. Give me thy hand, Thou hast bin rightly bonest, so hast thou, Thou, and thou, and thou : you have feru'd me well, And Kings have beene your fellowes.

Cleo. What toesnes this?

Eno. Tis one of those odde tricks which Grow thoon Our of the minde.

Am. And thou are honeft too: I with I could be made to many men, And all of you dept vp together, to An Asbony : that I might do you fernice, So good as you have done.

Execut.

Omnes. The Gods forbid

Am. Well, my good Fellowes, walt on me to night: Scant not my Cups, and make as much of me As when mine Empire was your Fellow too, And fuffer'd my command.

Clea. What does he meane?
Eno. To make his Followers weeper

Ant. Tend me to night; May be, it is the period of your duty, Haply you hall not fee me more, or if, A mangled shadow. Perchance to morrow, You'l ferue another Master. Hooke on you As one that takes his leave. Mine honest Friends, I turne you not away, but like a Master Married to your good scruice, flay till death : Tend me to night two houres, I aske no more, And the Gods yeeld you for't.

Eno. What meane you (Sir) To give them this discomfort? Looke they weepe, And I an Affe, am Onyon- /'d; for fhame, Transforme va not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho.ho: Now the Witch take me, if I meant it thos. Grace grow where shoir drops fall (my bearry Priends) You take me io too dolorous a fenle, For I spake to you for your comfort, did desire you To burne this night with Torches: Know (my hearts) I hope well of to morrow, and will leade you, Where rather He exped victorious life,

Then death, and Honor. Let's to Supper, come, And drowne confideration.

Euter a Company of Soldiours.

1. Sol. Brother, goodnight: to morrow is the day. 3.Sd. It will determine one way : Fare you well. Heard you of nothing ftrange about the ftreets.

1 Nothing : what newes ?

3 Belike tis but a Rumous, good night to you.

1 Well für, good night.

They meete other Soldiers.

3 Souldiers, have carefull Warch.

1 And you a Goodnight, goodnight.

Enter Anthony, and Scarren wounded.

Scar. Omy brave Emperor, this is fought indeed, Had we done fo at first, we had droven them home With clow tsabout their heads! Far of.

Ane. Thou bleed ft apace.
Scar. I had a wound heere that was like a T, But now'tis mede an H.

Ant. They do tetyte. Scer. Wee'l best'em into Bench-boles, I baue yet Roome for fix fcosches mase.

Enter Eros.

Eros. They are beaten Sir, and our advantage ferres

For a faire victory.

Sear. Let vs score their backes,

And fratch 'em vp, as we take Hates behinde, Tir sport to maul a Runner.

Ant. I will reward thee

Once for thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold For thy good valour. Come thee on Scar, Ilehaltafter.

> Alexum. Enter Anthony agains in a Meren. Scarrus, wuhoshers.

EXECUTE

Ant. We have beate him to his Campe: Runne one Before, & let the Queen know of our guefts: to mottow Before the Sun finall fee's, wee'l foil the blood That ha's to day escap'd. I thanke you all, For doughty handed are you, and have fought Not as you feru'd the Caufe, but as't had beene Each mans like mine : you have shewne all Hellers. Enter the Citty, elip your Wives, your Friends, Tell them your feats, whil'A they with 10 yfull reares Wash the congealement from your wounds, and kisse The Honour d-gashes whole.

Emer Clespatta

Giue me thy hand, To this great Faiery, lle commend thy acts, Make her thankes bieffe thee. Oh thou day o'th'world, Chaine mine arm'd necke, leape thou, Attyre and all Through proofe of Harneffe to my heart, and there Ride on the pants triumphing.

Cleo. Lord of Lords. Oh infinite Vertue, comm'il thou fmiling from

The worlds great fnare vneaught. Ant. Mine Nightingale,

We have beste them to their Beds. What Gyrle, though gray

Exit

Do fomthing mingle with our yonger brown, yet ha we A Braine that nouri lines our Nerves, and can Get gole for gole of youth. Behold this man, Commend vnto his Lippes thy faucuting hand, Kiffe it my Warriour : He hath fought to day, As if a God in hate of Mankinde, had Destroyed in such a shape.

Cleo. Ile give thee Friend An Armour all of Gold: it was a Kings. Ant. He has deferu'diz, were it Carbunkled Likeholy Phæbus Carre. Give me thy hand, Through Alexandria make a jolly March, Beare our hack: Targets, like the men that owethem. Had our great Pallace the capacity To Campethis hoaft, we all would fup together, And drinke Carowies to the next dayes Face

Which

Which promifes Royall perill. Trumpetters
With brazen dinne blast you the Cittles care,
Make mingle with our ratling Taboutines,
That heaven and earth may strike their founds together,
Applauding our approach.

Execute.

Enter a Centerie, and his Company, Enobarbus followes.

Cent. If we be not released within this houre, We must return to th' Court of Guard: the night Is shiny, and they say, we shall embattaile By'th' second houre i'th' Morne.

1. Watch. This last day was a shrew'd one too's.

Enob. Oh beare me witnesse night.

2 What man is this?

& Stand dole, and lift him.

Enob. Be witnesset o me (O thou blessed Moone) When men revolted shall vpon Record Beare hatefull memory: porte Enobarbus did Before thy face repent.

Cent. Enobarbus?
2 Peace: Hearke further.

Enob. Oh Soueralgne Mistris of true Melancholly.
The poylonous dampe of night dispunge vpon me,
That Life, a very Rebell to my will,
May hang no longer on me. Throw my hears
Against the slint and hardnesse of my tault,
Which being dried with greese, will breake to powder,
And simsh all foule thoughts. Oh Anthony,
Nobler then my teuolt is Infamous,
For give me in thine owne particular,
But let the world ranke me in Register
A Master leaver, and a sugitive:
Oh Anthony! Oh Anthony!

1 Let's speake to him.

Cent. Let's heare him, for the things he speakes May concerne Cafar.

2 Let's do so, but he sleepes.

Cent. Swoonds rather, for so bad a Prayer as his Was never yet for sleepe.

I Gowetohim.

2 Awake fir, awake, speake to vs.

1 Heare you fir?

Cons. The hand of death hath raught him.

Drummes af arre off.

Hearke the Drummes demurely wake the fleepers: Let ye be re him to'th'Court of Guard: he is of note: Our houre is fully out.

2 Come on then, he may recouer yet.

exceson t

Emer Anthony and Scarres with their Army.

Aut. Their preparation is to day by Sea,
We pleasethem not by Land.

Sear, For both, my Lord.

Ant. I would they'ld fight i'th'Fire, or i'th' Ayre,
Wee'ld fight there too. But this it is, our Foote
Vpon the hilles adiopning to the Citty
Chall flay with vs. Order for Sea is given,
They have put forth the Haven:
Where their appointment we may beft discover,
And looke on their endevour.

Enter Cafor, and his Army.

Caf. But being charg'd, we will be fill by Land,
Which as I tak't we shall, for his best force
Is forth to Man his Gallies. To the Vales,

And hold our best advantage.

Alarum afarre off, as at a Sea-sighs. Enter Anthony, and Scarrus.

Ant. Yet they are not joyn'd:
Where yon'd Pine does frand, I shall discouer all.
Ile bring thee word straight, how 'ris like to go. exit

Scar. Swallowes have built In Cleopatra's Sailes their nests. The Auguries Sap, they know not, they cannot tell, looke grimly. And dare not speake their knowledge. Anthony, Is valiant, and deiccted, and by starts His stetted Fortunes give him hope and seare Of what he hus, and has not.

Exter Anthony.

Ant. Allisloft : This fowle Egyptian hath bettayed me: My Fleete liath yeelded to the Foe, and yonder They cast their Caps vp, and Carowie together Like Friends long loft. Triple-turn'd Whore, 'cis thou Haft fold me to this Nouice, and my heart Makes onely Warres on thee. Bid them all flye: For when I am reveng'd vpon my Charme, I have done all. Bid them all flye, be gone. Oh Sunne, thy vprife shall I see no more, Fortune, and Anthony part heere, even heere Do we shake hands? All come to this? The hearts That pannelled me at heeles, to whom I gave Their wishes, do dif-Candie, melt their sweets On blofforning Cefer : And this Pine is barkt, That ouer-top'd them all. Betray'd I am. Oh this falle Soule of Egypt ! this grave Charme, Whole eye beck'd forth my Wars, & cal'd them home: Whose Bosome was my Crowner, my chiefe end, Like a right Gypfie, hath at fast and loofe Beguil'd me, to the very heart of losse. What Eros, Eros?

Enter Cheopatra.

Ah, thou Spell! Augunt. Clee. Why is my Lord entag'd against his Loue?
Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving, And blemith Cefors Triumph, Let him take thee, And hoist thee vp to the shouting Plebeians, Follow his Chariot, like the greatest spot Ofall thy Sex. Most Monster-like be shewns For poor's Diminitiues, for Dolts, and les. Patient Ollmia, plough thy vifage up With her prepared nailes. exis Cleopetro. Tis well th'art gone, If it be well to hue. But better'twere Thou fell'st into my furie, for one death Might have prevented many. Eros, hoa? The thirt of Neffes is vponme, teach me Alcider, thou mine Ancestor, thy rage. Let me lodge Licas on the hornes o'th' Moone, And with those hands that graspe the heaviest Club, Subdue my worthiest selfe: The Witch shall die, To the young Roman Boy she hath sold me, and I fall

Enter Cleopaira, Charmian, Iras, Mardian

Enter Mardian. Oh thy vilde Lady, the has rob'd me of my Sword. Mar. No Ambony,

My Mistris lou'd thee, and her Fortunes mingled With thine intirely.

Ant. Hence fawcy Euruch peace, she hath bettaid me,

And shall dye the death.

Mar. Death of one person, can be paide but once, And that the ha's discharg'd. What thou would'ft do Is done voto thy hand : the last she spake Was Anthony, most Noble Action Then in the midd'ft a teating grone did breake The name of Ambony : it was divided Betweene her heart, and lips: The rendred life Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead then?

Mar. Dead.

Ant. Vnaume Eres, the long dayes taske is done, And we must sleepe: That shouldepart It hence fafe Does pay thy bour richly : Go. exis Mardian. Off, plueke off, The leven-fold shield of Aiax cannot keepe The battery from my heart. Oh cleave my fides. Heart, once be stronger then thy Continent, Cracke thy fraile Cale. Apace Eros, apace; No more a Soldier : bruifed preces go, You have bin Nobly borne. From me awhile. exit Eras I will o're-take thee Chopatra, and Weepe for my pardon. So it must be, for now All length is Torture: fince the Torch is out, Lye downe and firsy no farther. Now all labour

Matter what it does : yes, very force eneargles It felfe with frength: Seale then, and all is done. Erost I come my Queenc, Eros? Stay for me, Where Soules do couch on Flowers, weel hand in hand, And with our fprightly Port make the Ghofter gazes Dide, and her Enew that I want Troopes, And all the haunt be ours. Come Eras, Eras Erner Eros.

Gros. What would my Loid? Am. Since Cleoparadyed,

I have liu'd in such dishonour, that the Gods Detell my balenelle. I, that with my Sword, Quarter'd the World, and o're greene Neptunes backe With Ships, made Cities; condemne my felle, to lacke The Courage of a Woman, leffe Noble minde Then the which by her death, our Cafar telles I am Conqueror of my felle. Thou are I wome Eras. That when the exigent should come, which now is come indeed: When I should see behinde me To ineuitable profecution of difgrace and horror, That on my command, thou then would'it kill me. Doo't, the time is come : Thou firik'st not me, 'In Cafar thou defeat'A. Put colour in thy Chocke.

Eros. The Gods with-hold me. Shall I do that which all the Parthian Darts, (Though Enemy) lost syme, and could not. Ant. Eros, Would'st thou be window'd in great Rome, and see Thy Master thus with pleacht Armes, bending downe His corrigible necke, his face lubdu'de To penetrative thame; whil'it the wheel'd leate Of Fortunate Cafar drawne before him, branded His Balenetle that enfued.

Erer. I would not fee's

Am. Come then: for with a wound I must be and Draw that thy honest Sword, which thou hast wome Most vsefull for thy Country.

Eres. Oh fir, pardon me.

Ast. When I did make thee free, fwor I gnot then To do this when I bad thee ! Do it at once, Or thy precedent Services are all But accidents vnpurpes'd, Draw, and come.

Eras. Turne from me then that Noble counterance,

Wherein the worthip of the whole world lyes.

Am. Loe thre.

Eros. My Sword is drawne. Ans. Then let it do at once The thing why thou hast drawne it.

Eros. My deere Mafter,

My Capraine, and my Emperor. Let me say Before I firike this bloody ftroke, Farwell. Am. 'Tis faid man, and farewell.

Eros. Fareweil great Chiefe. Shall I firike now? Killes benfelfe. Am. NOW Eros.

Eras. Why there then:

Thus I do escape the fortow of Annonies death. Ant. Thrice-Nabler thea my felfe, Thou teachest me: Oh valiant Eros, what I should, and thou could's not, my Queene and Erm Have by their brave instruction got voon me A Noblearsse in Record. But I will bee A Bride-groome in my death, and run intoo't As to a Lovers bed. Comether, and Erus, Thy Mafter dies thy Scholler; to do thus Hearnt of thee How, not dead? Not dead? The Guard, how? The greatest Prince of hworld, The Noblest: and do now not basely dye, Not Cowardly put off my Helmet to My Countreymen. A Roman, by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my Spirit is going, I can no more,

Cleo. Nobleft of men, woo't dye? Hast thou no care of me, shall I abide In this dull world, which in thy absence is No better then a Stye? Oh fee my women t The Crowneo'th'earth doth melt. My Lord? Oh wither'd is the Gerland of the Warre,

The Souldiers pole is falne: young Boyes and Gyrles Are level now with men : The odder is gone, And there is nothing left remerkeable Beneath the visiting Moone.

Char. Oh quiernelle, Lody.

Irm. She's dead too, our Souersigne.

Char. Lady.

Iras. Madam.

Char. Oh Madam, Madam, Madam.

Iras. Royall Egypt : Empresse.

Char. Peace, peace, Iras.

Cho, No more but in a Woman, and commanded By fuch poore passion, as the Mald thet Milker, And doe's the meanest chares. It were for me, To throw my Scepter at the iniurious Gods, To tell them that this World did equall theyes, Till they had stolne our fewell. All's but usught: Patience is fortish, and impatience does Become a Dogge that's mad: Then is it finne, To rush into the fectet honse of death, Ere death dare come to vs. How do you Women! What, what good cheere? Why how now Chamiles? My Noble Gyrles? Ah Women, women! Locke Our Lampe is spent, it's out. Good firs, take heart Wee'l bury him : And then, what's brave, what's Noble, Let's doo't after the high Roman fashion, And make death proud to take vs. Come, away, This case of that huge Spirit now is cold. Ah Women, Women ! Come, we have no Friend But Refolution, and the breefest end. Exeuns, bearing of Authonies bedy.

> Enter Cefar, Agrippa Dollabella, Menas, with bis Counsell of Warre.

Cafar . Go to him Dollabella, bid him yeeld, Being fo fruftrate, tell him, He mockes the pawles that he makes.

Dol. Cefar, I shall

Enter Decretas was the fourd of Anthony. Caf. Wherefore is that? And what are thou that dar'ft

Appeare thus to vs?

Deef I am call'd Desretas, Marke Ambeny I seru'd, who best was worthie Best to be seru'd: whil'it he stood vp, and spoke He was my Master, and I wore my life To spend vpon his haters. If thou please To take me to thee, as I was to him, Ile be to Cefar : if y pleafest not, I yeild thee vp my life. Cafar. Whatis't thou fay's?

Der. Ilay (Oh Cafar) Anthony is deed. Cefar. The breaking of so great a thing, should make A greater cracke. The round World Should have shooke Lyons into civil streets,

And Cittizens to their dennes. The death of Anthony

Is not a fingle doome, in the name lay A moity of the world

Dec. He is dead Cafar, Not by a publike minister of Iustice, Nor by a hyred Knife, but that felfe-hand Which writhis Honor in the Acts it did, Hath with the Courage which the heart did lead it, Splitted the heart. This is his Sword, I robb'd his wound of it: behold it stain'd With his most Noble blood.

Cef. Looke you sad Friends,

The Gods rebuke me, but it is Tydings To wash the eyes of Kings. Dol. And Arangeitis,

That Notice must compell vi to lament Our most persisted deeds.

Mor. His taints and Honours, wag'd equal with him. Dola. A Racer Spirit neuer

Did feere humanity : but you Godt will give ve Some faults to make vimen. Cafar is touch d.

Mer. When fuch a spacious Mirror set before him, He needes must see him selfe.

Cafer. Oh exalbony, I have followed thee to this, but we do launch. Diseases in our Bodies. I must perforce Haue shewne to thee such a declining day, Or looke on thine: we could not fall together, In the whole world. But yet let me lament With teares as Soueraigne as the blood of hearts That thou my Brother, my Competitor, In top of all defigne; my Matein Empire, Friend and Companion in the front of Warre, The Arme of mine owne Body, and the Heart Where mine his thoughts did kindle; that out Startes Vnreconciliable, snould divide our equalseste to this. Heare me good Friends, But I will tell you at some meeter Season, The bulinefie of this man lookes out of him,

Wee'l heare him what he sayes.

Exter on Egyptues.

Whence are you?

Egyp. A poote Egyptian yet, the Queen my militis Confin d in all, the has her Monument Of thy intents, desires, infruction. That the preparedly may frame her felfe To'th'way thee's forc'd too.

Cefer. Bidher have good heart, She soone shall know of vs, by some of ours, How honourable, and how kindely Wee Determine for her. For Cafar cannor leauero be engentle Agypt. So the Gods preserve thee. Cas. Come hither Precideius. Go and say We purpose her no shame : giue her what comforts The quality of ber pation thall require; Least in her greatnesse, by sume morta'l stroke She do desezte vs. For her life in Rome, Would be eternall in our Triumph: Go, And with your speedieft, bring vs what the layer, And how you finde of her.

Pro. Cefar I shall. Exit Proculeins. Ces. Gallun, go you along : where's Dolabella, to second Preculeius

All. Dolabella.

Cef. Let him alone : for I temember now How hee's imployd : he shall in time be ready. Go with me to my Tent, where you shali see How hardly I was drawne into this Warre, How calme and gentle I proceeded ftill In all my Writings. Go with me, and fee What I can shew in this.

Exempt.

Enter Cleopasta, Charmien, Itu, and Mardian-

Cles. My defolstion does begin to make A better life : Tis paltry to be Cafar : Not being Fortune, hee's but Fortunes knape, A minister of her will: and it is great

To do that thing that ends all wher deeds, Which shackles accedents, and bolts up change; Which fleepes, and never paliases more the dung, The beggers Nurle, and Cafars Enter Proculoius

Pro- Cefar fends greeting to the Qupene of Egypt, And bids thee fludy on what faire demands Thou mean'it to have him great thes.

Cleo. What's thy name? Pro. My name is Procukius.

Cleo. Anthony Did tell me of you, bad me trust you, but I do not greatly eare to be deceiu'd That have no vie for fruiting. If your Mafter Would have a Quecce his begger, you must tell him, Thus Maielly to keepe decorate, multa No leffe begge then a Kingdome: If he please To give me conquer'd Egypt for my Sonne, He gives the so much of mine owne, as t Will threele to him with thankes, Pro. Bo of good cheere:

Y'are falne into a Princely hand, feare nothing, Make your full reference freely to my Lord, Who is fo full of Grace, that it flower over On all shat neede. Let mereport to him Your (weet dependacle, and you fhell finde A Conqueror that will pray in ayde for kindnesse,

Where he for grace is itneel'd too.

Cleo. Pray you tell him, I am his Fortunes Vaffall, and I fend him The Greatnesse he has got. I hourely learne A Doarine of Obedience, and would gladly Looke him i'th' Face.

Pro. This Ile report (deere Lady) Have comfort, for Iknow your plight is pittled Ofhim that caus'd it.

Pro. You fee how easily the may be furpriz'd:

Guard her till Cafm come. Iras. Royall Queene.

Char. Oh Cleopare, thou are taken Queene, Cleo. Quicke, quicke, good hands,

Pro. Hold worthy Lady, hold:

Doenot your felfe such wrong, who are in this Releeu'd, but not betruid.

Cles. What of death too that rids our dogs of languish Pro. Cleopetra, do not abule my Makers bounty, by Th'undoing of your felfe: Let the World fee His Nebleneffe well acted, which your death Will neuer let come forth.

Cleo. Where are thou Death?

Come hither come; Come, come, and takes Queene Worth many Babes and Beggers.

Pro. Oh temperance Lady.

Cleo. Sir, I will eate no meate. De not drinke fir, If idle talke will once be necessary He not sleepe neither. This mortall house He raine, Do Cafar what he can. Knowlie, that I Will not waite pinnion'd at your Masters Court, Nor once be chastic'd wish the sober eye Of doll Offania. Shall they hoyd me up, And shew me to the showing Varloterie Ofcenturing Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt. Be gentle grave voto me, rother on Nylus inudda Lay me farke-nak'd, and let the water-Flies Blow me inco sbhorning; rather make My Countries high pyramides my Gibber,

And hang me vp in Chaines!

Pro. You do extend

These thoughts of horror further then you shall Finde cause in Cafer.

Enter Dolabola.

Dol. Prosuleiue, What thou ball done, thy Maffer Cafar knowes.

And he hach fent for thee : for the Queene, He take her to my Guard, Pro. So Dolabella,

It shall contout me best : Be genvle to bee, To Cafar I will speake, what you fast pirate, If you I imploy me to him. Exit Propulsian

Cleo, Say, I would dye,.
Dol: Moh Noble Empresse, you have heard of one.

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dal. Afforedly you know me.

Cleo. No matter fir, what I have heard or knowne: You laugh when Boyes or Women tell their Dreames, Ls't not your tricke?

Del. I voderstandnet, Madam.

Cleo I dreampt there was an Emperor Anthony, Oh fuch another fleepe, that I might fee Eue fuch another man.

Dol. If it might please ye.

Cleo. His face was as the Head'ne, and therein flucke A Sunne and Moone, which kept their course, & lighted The little o'th'earth.

Dol. Most Soueraigne Creature.

Cleo. His legges beltrid the Ocean, his rear'd arme Crested the world: His vayce was propertied As all the timed Spheres, and that to Friends: But when he meant to qualte, and thake the Orbe, He was as racting Thunder. For his Bouncy, There was no winter in't. An Anthony it was, That grew the more by resping: His delights Were Dolphin-like, they show'd his backe chose The Element they liv'd in : In his Livery Walk'd Crowner and Crowners: Realms & Islands were As plates dropt from his pocket.

Dol. Choparra.

Clea. Thinke you there was, or might be fuch amon As this I dreampt of?

Dol. Gentle Madam, no. Clas. You Lye up to the hearing of the Gods: But if there be, nor cuer were one fuch It's past the sizo of dreaming: Nature wants stuffe To vie strange formes with fancie, yet t'imagina An Anthony were Natures peece, gainst Fancie, Condemning shadowes quite.

Del. Heare me, good Madam: Yourlosse is as your lesse, great; and you ware is As answering to the weight, would imight never Ore-take pussu'de successe: But I do seels By the rebound of yours, a greefe that fuites My very heart at roote.

Cleo, I thanke you fir: Know you what Cafar meanes to do with me? Del. Lom leath to rell you what, I would you knew.

Clev. Neypray you fir.

Dol. Though he be Honourable,

Cleo. Hea'lleade me then in Triumph. Del. Madamhe will I know's. Einer Proculeicus, Calir, Gallan, Beccenas, and orbers of bus Traine.

All. Make way there Cafar.

Cal. Which is the Queens of Egypt. Dd. It is the Emperor Madara. Cleo, knowlss.

Color. Arlie, you shall not kneele:

I pray you rife, nie Egypt.

Clos Sir, the Gods will have to thus, My Master and my Lord I must obey Cafar. Take to you no hard thoughts, The Record of what miuries you did vs,

Though written in our flesh, we shall esmember

As things but done by chance. Clee. Sole Six o'th' World,

I cannot proit & roine owne caule fo well To make it cleare, but do confesse I have Bene laden with like frailties, which before Haue often sham'd our Sex.

Cafar. Cleopaira knovi, We will extenuate rather theu inforce: If you apply your felfe to our intents, Which towards you are most gentle, you shell finde A benefit in this change: but if you feeke To lay on me & Cruelty, by taking Authories course, you shall bereaue your selfe Ofmy good purpoles, and put your children To that destruction which He guard them from. If thereon you celye. He take my leave.

Cleo. And may through all the world: tis yours, & we your Soutcheons, and your fignes of Conquert (hall

Mang in what place you please. Here my good Lord. Cafor. You shall aduste me in all for Cleoparta. Clov. This is the breese : of Money, Plate, & Lewels I am possest of, 'is exactly valewed,

Not petry things admitted. Where's Selenem?

Selsu. Heere Madam.

Cire. This is my Treasurer, let him speake (my Lord) Vpon his perili, that I have referu'd

Tomy felfenothing. Speake the truth Seleucas. Selen. Madam, I had rather feele my lippes,

Then to my perill speake that which is not. Clas. What have I kept backe.

Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known

Cafar. Nay blush not Cleopatra, I approue Your Wilcdome in the deede.

Cino. Sec Cefar: Oh behold, How pompe is followed: Mine will now be yours. And should we shift estates, yours would be mine The ingratitude of this Seleneus, does Euen make me wilde. Oh Slave, of no more truft Then love that's hyr'd? What goeft thou backe, & shale Go backe I warrant thee: but He catch thine eyes Though they had wings. Slave, Soule-leffe, Villain, Dog.

O rarely bale!

Cafar. Good Queene, let vs intreat you. Cleo. O Cafar, what a wounding shame is this, That thou vouchfafing heere to vifit me, Doing the Honour of thy Lordlinesse To one fo meeke, that mine owne Seruant fhould Parcell the lumme of my difgraces, by Addition of his Enuy. Say (good Cafar) That Home Lady trifles have referu'd, Immoment toyes, things of fuch Dignitie As we greet moderne Friends withall, and fay Some Noblertoken I haue kept apan For Livin and Olimin, to induce
Their mediation, must I be ynfolded
With one that I have bred: The Gods! it finites me Beneath the fall I have. Prythee go bense,

Or I shall show the Cypders of my foir to Through th' Albies of my chance: Wer'cabou a man, Thou would'st have mercy on me.

Cafar. Forbette Selavene.

Cleo, Be it known, that we the greatest are mil-thoghe For things thee others do : and when we fall, We enforce others merits, in our meme Aretherefore to be pittied.

Cafer. Chapera,

Not what you have referred, nor what acknowledg'd Put we ith Roll of Conquest: Aili beet yours, Bestow it at your pleasure, and be ceue Cefers no Merchant, to make prize with you Of things that Merchants fold. Therefore be cheer'd, Make not your thoughts your prison: No detre Queen, For we istend to to dispose you, as Your felfe shall give vs counsell: Feede, and seepe Our care and pitty it fo much vpon you, That we remaine your Friend, and so adieu.

Cleo. My Matter, and my Lord.

Cafar. Not lo: Adies. Exeuns Cafar, and bus Trume. Cles. He words me Gyrles, he words me,

That I thould not be Noble to my letie Bus hearke thee Charmian.

Iras. Finish good Lady, the bright day is doce, And we are for the darke.

Cleo. Hyoth eagaine, I have spoke already, and it is provided, Goput it to the bafte.

Char. Madam, I will.

Emer Dolabela.

Dal. Where's the Queene? Char. Behold fir. Cleo. Dolateka

Del. Madam, as thereto (wome, by your command (Which my lone makes Religion to obey) I tell you this: Cefar through Syria Intends his journey, and within three dayes, You with your Children will be fend before, Make your best vie of this. I have perform'd Your pleasure, and my promise.

Cles. Dalabelia, I shall remaine your debtes.

Del. I your Serusnt:

Adieu good Queene, I must attend on Cefer. Cleo. Farewell, and thankes. Now Iro, what think's thou?

Thou, an Egyptian Pupper shall be shewne In Rome aswell as I: Mechanicke Slaues With greazie Aprons, Rules, and Hammers shall Vplife vs to the view. In their thicke breathes, Ranke of groffe dyet, shall we be enclowded.

And fore'd to drinke their vapour Irac. The Gods forbid.

Cleo. Nay, tis most certaine Iras: sawrie Lictors Will catch at vs like Strumpers, and scald Rimers Ballada vs out a Tune. The quieke Comedians Extemporally will stage vs, and present Our Alexandrico Revels : Anthroj Shall be brought drunken forth, and I final! fee Some squeaking Cleeperra Boy my greatnesse 1'ch'podure of a Whore.

Iras. O the good Gods! Cles. Nay that's certaine.

Iras. Henoverfoote? for Lam fore mine Nailes Are Bronger then mine eyes.

Exi

Cles. Why that's the way to foole their preparation, And to conquer their most absurd interes. Enter Charman,

Now Charmian. Shew me my Women like a Queene : Go ferch My best Attyres. I am againe for Cidrus, To meete Marke Anthony, Sirra Iras, go (Now Noble Charmian, wee'l dispatch indeede,) And when thou hast done this chare, He give thee leave To play till Doomelday : bring our Crowne, and all, A noise within.

Wherefore's this noise?

Enter a Guardsman.

Cardf. Heere is a rurall Fellow, That will not be deny de your Highnesse presence, He brings you Figges.

Cleo. Let him come in. What poore an Instrument

Exil Guardsman.

May do a Noble deede : he brings me liberry : My Resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing Of weman in me : Now from head to foole I am Marble constant : now the seeting Moone No Planet is of mine.

Enter Guardsman, and Clowne.

Guards. This is the man.

Cleo, Auoid, and leave him. Exit Guardsman. Hast thou the pretty worme of Nylus there, That killes and paines not?

Clow. Truly I have him : but I would not be the partie that should defire you to touch him, for his byting is immortall : those that doe dye of it, doe seldome or neper recouer.

Cleo. Remember's thou any that have dyed on't?

Clow. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer then yellerday, a very honest woman, but something given to lye, as a woman should not do, but in the way of honesty, how she dyed of the by-ting of it, what pains she selt: Truely, the makes a verie good report o'th'worme ; but he that wil beleeve all that they fay, thall never be faued by halfe that they do: but this is nioft falliable, the Worme's an odde Worme.

Clev. Get thee hence, farewell.

Clove. I wish you all toy of the Worme. Cleo. Fatewell.

Clow You must thinke this (looke you,) that the Worme will do his kinde.

Cleo. 1, 1, farewell.

Clow. Looke you, the Worme is not to beetrufted, but in the keeping of wife people : for indeede, there is no goodnesse in the Worme.

Cico. Take thou no care, it shall be heeded.

Clow. Very good: give it nothing I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Clow. You must not think I am so simple, but I know that the divell himselfe will not eate a woman: I know, that a woman is a dish for the Gods, if the divell dresse her not. But truly, thefefame whotfon divels doe the Gods great harme in their women; for in cuery tenne that they make, the divels marre five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone, farewell.

Clow. Yes for footh: I wish you toy o'th'worm. Exit

Cleo. Give me my Robe, put on my Crowne, I have Immortall longings in me. Now no more The myce of Egypts Grape thall moyft this lip. Yare, yare, good Iras; quicke: Me thinkes I heare

Anthony call: I fee him rowfe himfelfe To praise my Noble Act. I heare him mock The lucke of Cafar, which the Gods gove men To excuse their after wrath, Husband, I come: Now to that name, my Courage procemy Title. I am Fire, and Ayre; my other Elements
I give to bafer life. So, have you done? Come then, and take the last warmth of my Lippes. Farewell kinde Charmian, Iras, long farewell. Haue I the Aspicke in my lippes? Dost fall? If thou, and Nature can fo gently part, The ftroke of death is as a Lovers pinch, Which hurts, and is defir'd. Doft thou lye fill? If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world, It is not worth lesue-taking.

Cher. Dissolue thicke clowd, & Raine, that I may say

The Gods themselves do weepe.

Cleo. This proves me base : If the first meete the Curled Anthony, Hee'l make demand of her, and spend that kiffe Which is my heaven to have. Come thou mortal wretch, With thy sharpe teeth this knot intrinsicate, Of life at once vntye: Poore venomous Foole, Be angry, and dispatch. Oh could'st thou speake, That I might heare thee call great Cafar Affe, vnpolicied, Char. Oh Easterne Starre.

Cleo. Peace, peace : Dost thou not see my Baby at my breaft. That fuckes the Nurse asseepe.

Char. O breake! O breake! Cleo. As sweet as Balme, as soft as Ayre, as gentle. O Anthony! Nay I will take thee too.

What should I stay. Char. In this wilde World & So fare thee well: Now boast thee Death, in thy possession lyes A Laste unparalell'd. Downie Windowes cloze, And golden Phoebus neuer be beheld Of eyes againe to Royall: your Crownesaway,

He mend it, and then play Enter the Guardruftling in, and Dolabelle. 1 Guard. Where's the Queene? Char. Speake fofuly, wake her not.

Cafar hath sent

Char, Too flow a Messenger.

Oh come apare, dispatch, I partly feele thee.

1 Approach hoz, All's not well : Cafar's beguild.

2 There's Dolabella fent from Cafar: call him.

What worke is heere Charman?

Is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a Princeffe Descended of so many Royall Kings Ah Souldier. Charmsan dyes

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it heere? 2. Gnard. All dead. Dol. Cefar, thy thoughts Touch their effects in this: Thy felfe are comming To see perform'd the dreaded A& which thou So fought'ft to hinder.

Enter Cafar and all bis Traine, marching.

All. A way there, a way for Cafar.

The Tragedie of Anthony and Cleopatra.

Dol. Oh fir, you are too fure an Auguster.

That you did feare, is done. Cefar. Braneft at the laft,

She levell'd at our purpoies, and being Royall Twoke her owne way: the manner of their deaths, I do not fee them bleede.

Dol. Who was last with them?

r Guard. A simple Countryman, that broght hir Figs: This was his Backet.

Casir. Poylon'd then.
3. Guard. Ob Casir:

This Charmion liu'd but now, the flood and spake:
If ound her trumming up the Diadem;
On her dead Mistris tremblingly the stood,
And on the sodaine dropt.

Cefer. Oh Noble weekencile:
If they had fwallow'd popfon, 'twould appeare
By externall fwelling: but the lookes like fleepe,
As the would catch another Anabony
In her flrong toyle of Grace.

Dol. Herre on her breft, There is a vent of Bloud, and fomething blowne. The like is on her Arme.

1. Guard. This is an Afpickes traile, And these Figge-leaves have slime upon them, such As th'Aspicke leaves upon the Caues of Nyle. Casar. Most probable

That so she dyed: for her Physician tels thee
She hath pursu'de Conclusions insinte
Ofeasse wayes to dye. Take up her bed,
And heare her Women from the Monument;
She shall be bursed by her Anchorg.
No Graue upon the earth shall clip in it
A payre so famous: high events as these Strike those that make them: and their Story is No leffe in putty, then his Glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our Army shall
In solemne show, attend this Fenerall,
And then to Rome. Come Delabella, see
High Order, in this great Solmemnity.

Exture come

FINIS.

THETRAGEDIEOF CYMBELINE.

Actus Primus. Scana Prima.

Enter two Gentleman.

1. Gent.

Ou do not meet a man but Frownes. Our bloods no more obey the Headens Then our Courtiers: Still seeme, as do's the Kings.

Gent. But what's the matter? 1. His daughter, and the here of's kingdome (whom He purpos'd to his wives fole Sonne, a Widdow That late be married) hath refert 'd het felfe Vnto a poore, but worthy Gentleman. She's wedded, Her Husband banish'd; she imprison'd, all Is outward forrow, though I thinke the King

Be touch'd at very heart. 2 Nonebut the King?

I He that hath lofther too : fo is the Queene, That most defir'd the Match. But not a Courtier, Although they weate their faces to the bent Of the Kings lookes, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowle at.

2 And why fo?

He that hath mis'd the Princeste, is a thing Too bad, for bad report : and he that hath her, I meane, that married her, alacke good man, And therefore banish'd) is a Creature, such, As to feeke through the Regions of the Earth For one, his like; there would be fomething failing In him, that should compare. I do not thinke, so faire an Outward, and fuch fluffe Within Endowes a man, but hee.

You speake him farre.

I do extend him (Sir) within himfelfe, Crush him together, rather then vnfold dis measure duly.

2 What's his name, and Birth?

I Cannot delue him to the roote : His Father Was call'd Sicilian, who did to yne his Honor Igainst the Romanes, with Cassibulan, But had his Titles by Tonantiss, whom He feru'd with Glory, and admir'd Successe: io gzin'd the Sur-addition, Laonains. and had (besides this Gentleman in question) wo other Sonnes, who in the Warres o'th'time)y'de with their Swords in hand. For which, their Father Then old, and fond of offue, tooke fuch forrow That he quit Being ; and his gentle Lady Bigge of this Gentleman (our Theame) deceast As he was borne. The King he takes the Babe To his protection, cala him Posthumus Leonaires, Breedes him, and makes him of his Bed-chamber, Puts to him all the Learnings that his time Could make him the receiver of, which he tooke As we do ayre, fast as 'twas ministred, And in's Spring, became a Haruel Liu'd in Court (Which tere it is to do) most prais'd, most fou'd, A sample to the yongest : to th'more Mature, A glaffe that feated them : and to the graver, A Childe that guided Dotards. To his Miftris, (For whom he now is banish'd) her owne price Proclaimes how she esteem'd him; and his Versue By her electió may be truly read, what kind of man heis. 2 I honor hitn, even out of your report.

But pray you tell me, is the fole childe to'th'King?

1 His onely childe: He had two Sonnes (if this be worth your hearing, Marke it) the eldeft of them, at three yeares old I'th'Iwathing cloathes, the other from their Nursery Were flolne, and to this house, no gheffe in knowledge Which way they went.

2 How long is this ago!

1 Some twenty yeares.
2 That a Kings Children should be so convey'd, So flackely guarded, and the fearch to flow That could not trace them.

Howloere, 'tis Arange,

Or that the negligence may well be laugh'dat: Yet is it true Sir

2 I do well beleeue you.

1 We must forbeare. Heere comes the Gentleman, The Queene, and Princesse. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Queene, Postbamus, and Imogers.

Qn. No, be affur'd you shall not finde me(Daughter) After the flander of mon Step-Mothers, Euill-ey'd vnto you. You're my Prisoner, but Your Gaoler shall deliver you the keyes

Than

That locke vp your restraint. Pot you Posthumu, So foone as I can win th'offended King. I will be knowne your Advocate: marry yet The fire of Rage is in him, and 'twere good You lean'd voto his Sentence, with what patience Your wisedome may informe you.

Post. Please your Highnesse, I will from hence to day.

2n. You know the perill: He fetch a turne about the Garden, pittying The panga of barr'd Affections, though the King

Hath charg'd you should not speake together. Exi Can tickle where the wounds? My deereft Husband, I fomething feare my Fathers wrath, but nothing (Alwayes referu'd my holy dusy) what His rage can do on me. You must be gone, And I hall heere shide the hourely thot Of angry eyes : not comforted to live, But that there is this Iewell in the world, That I may fee againe.

Post. My Queene, my Mistris: O Lady, weepe no more, least I giue cause To be suspected of more tendemesse Then dorh become a man. I will remaine The loyall'ft husband, that did ete plight troth. My refidence in Rome, at one Filorio's, Who, to my Father was a Friend, to me Knowne but by Letter; thither write (my Queene) And with mine eyes, Ile drinke the words you lend, Though Inke be made of Gall.

Enter Queene.

On. Be briefe, I pray your If the King come, I shall incurre, I know nor How much of his displeasure: yet Ile moue him To walke this way : I neuer do him wrong, But he do's buy my Injuries, to be Friends: Payes deere for my offences.

Poft. Should we betaking leave As long a terme as yet we have to live, The loathnesse to depart, would grow: Adieu.

Imo. Pray whatis's?

Tack. Some dozen Romanes of vs, and your Lord (The best Feather of our wing) have mingled summes To buy a Present for the Emperor:
Which I (the Factor for the rest) have done In France: 'tis Plate of rare deute, and Iewels Of rich, and exquists forme, their valewes great, And I am something curious, being strange To have them in safe Rowage: May it please you To take them in protection.

Imo. Willingly:
And pawne mine Honor for their fafety, fince
My Lord hath interest in them, I will keepe them
In my Bed-chamber.

Incb. They are in a Trunke
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To fend them to you, onely for this night:
I must aboord to morrow.

Imo. O no, no.

Tach. Ye Ibefeech: or I shall short my word By lengthining my returne. From Gallia, I crost the Seas on purpose, and on promise To see your Grace.

Imo. I chanke you for your paines :

But not away to morrow.

Inh. O I must Madam.

Therefore I shall befeech you, if you please
To greet your Lord with writing, doo't to night,
I have out-stood my time, which is material!

To'th' tender of our Present.

Imo. I will write:
Send your Trunke to me, it shall fafe be kepe,
And truely yeelded you; you're very welcome. Exact lach. He was expected then,

But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet,

Sparkles this Stone as it was wont, or is tnot Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I have lost it,

I should have lost the worth of it in Gold,

Ile make a journey twice as fatre, enjoy

A second night of such sweet shortnesse, which

Was mine in Britaine, for the Ring is wonne.

Post. The Stones too hard to come by.

lach. Not a whit, Your Lady being so easy.

Foft. Make note Sir

Your loffe, you: Sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue Friends.

lach. Good Sir, we must

If you keepe Couenant: had I not brought
The knowledge of your Mistris home, I grant
We were to question farther; but I now
Professeny selfethe winner of her Honor,
Together with your Ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you having proceeded but
By both your willes.

Poft. If you can mak't apparant
That you have tafted her in Bed; my hand,
And Ring is yours. If not, the foule opinion
You had ofher pure Honour, gaines, or loofes,
Your Swerd, or mine, or Masterlesse leave both
To who shall finde them.

Iath. Sir, my Circumftances
Being so nere the Truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe; whose strength
I will confirme with oath, which I doubt not

You

You'l give me leave to spare, when you shall finde Youncede it not.

Post. Proceed.

Poft. This is a thing

Which you might from Relation like wife reape,

Being, as it is, much spoke of.

lach. The Roofe o'th Chamber, With golden Cherubins is fretted. Her Andirons (I had forgot them) were two winking Cupids Of Silver, each on one foote standing, nicely Depending on their Brands.

Poft. This is her Honor :

Let it be granted you have seene all this (and praise Be given to your remembrance) the description Of what is in her Chamber, nothing faues

The wager you have laid.

lacb. Then if you can Bepale, I begge but leave to ayre this lewell 1 See, And now 'tis vp againe : it must be married To that your Diamond, He keepe them.

Post. loue .. Once more let me behold it : Is it that lach. Sir (I thanke her) that She stript It from her Arme : I see her yet : Her pretty Action, did out-fell her guife, And yet enrich'd it too: she gaue it me, And laid, the priz'd it once.

Poft. May be, she pluck'd it off

To fend it me.

lach. She writes fo to you? doth thee?

Poft. Ono,no, ris true. Heere, take this too, It is a Bafiliske vnto mine eye, Killes me to looke on't: Let there be no Honor, Where there is Beauty: Truth, where femblance: Loue, Where there's another man. The Vowes of Women, Of no more bondage be, to where they are made, Then they are to their Vertues, which is nothing ! O,aboue measure false.

Phil. Haue patience Sir, And take your Ring againe, 'tis not yet wonne. It may be probable the loft it : or

Who knowes if one her women, being corrupted Hath folne it from her.

Post. Very true,

And fo I hope he came by't : backe my Ring. Render to me some corporall signe about her More enident then this: for this was stolne.

Iach. By Jupicer, I had it from her Arme. Poft. Hearkeyou, he sweares: by supreer he sweares Tistrue, nay keepe the Ring; 'ristrue Tam fure She would not loofe it ther Attendants are All sworne, and honourable: they indue'd to seale it? Imo. How now Pifanio?

Pif. Madam, beere is a Letter from my Lord.

Inso. Who, thy Lord? That is my Lord Leanates?

Oh, learn'd indeed were that Aftronomer

That knew the Starrea, as I his Characters,
Heel'd lay the Future open. You good Gods,
Let what is heere contain'd, tellifli of Loue,
Ofmy Lords health, of his content: yet not
That we two are afunder, let that grieue him;
Some griefes are medeinable, that is one of them,
For it doth physicke Loue, of his content,
All but in that. Good Wax, thy leaue: bleft be
You Bees that make these Lockes of counsale. Louers,
And men in dangerous Bondes pray not alike,
Though Forseytours you cast in prisor, yet
You classe young Cipids Tables: good Newes Gods.

I Vitice and your Fathers wrath (should be take me in his Domins on could not be so cruell to me, as you: (ch the deereit of Creatures) would encoure me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria at Milford-Hauen: what your owne Lone, willout of this aduise you, follow. So be wishes you all happiness, that remaines logalite his Vew, and your encreasing in Lone.

Leonatus Posthumus.

Oh for a Horse with wings: Hear'st thou Pisanio? He is at Milford-Hauen: Read, and tell me How fatre 'tis thither. If one of meane affaires May plad it in a weeke, why may not I Glide thither in a day? Then true Pifanio, Who long'ft like me, to fee thy Lord; who long'ft (Ohler me bate) but not like me : yet long'it But in a fainter kinde. Oh nor like me : For mine's beyond, beyond : fay, and speake thicke (Loves Counfailor thould fill the bores of hearing, To th'smothering of the Sense) how farreit is To this same bleffed Milford. And by'th'way Tell me how Wales was made to happy, as ! Tinherite fuch a Haven. But first of all How we may steale from hence: and for the gap That we shall make in Time, from our hence-going, And our returne, to excuse: but first, how ger hence. Why should excuse be borne or ere begot? Weele talke of that heereafter, Prythee speake, How meny store of Miles may we well rid

Twixt hours, and houre?

Pif. One fore twint Sun, and Sun,
Madam's enough for you: and too much too.

Impo. Why, one that rode to's Excution Man,
Could neuer go fo flow: I have heard of Riding wagers
Where Horfes have bin nimbler then the Sands
That run ith'Clocks behalfe. But this is Fooltie,
Go, bid my Woman faigne a Sickneffe, fay
She'le home to her Father; and provide me prefently
A Riding Suit: No costlier then would fit
A Franklins Huswife.

Fifa. Madam, you're best consider.

Imp. I see before me (Man) nor heere, not heere;

Nor what ensues but have a Fog in them

That I cannot looke through. Away, I prythee,

Do as I bid thee: There's no more to say:

Accessible is none but Milford way.

That though his Actions were not visible, yet
Report should tender him housely to your eare,
As truely as he mooves.

Imo. Oh for fuch meanes, Though perill to my modeffie, not death on't

I would addenture.

Pif. Well then, heere's the point:
You must forget to be a Woman: change
Command, into obedience. Feare, and Nicenesse
(The Handmaides of all Women, or more truely Woman it pretty selse) into a waggish courage,
Ready in gybes, quicke-answer'd, sweie, and
As quarrellous as the Wezzell: Nay, you must Forget that rarest Treasure of your Cheeke, Exposing it (but of the harder heart,

Alacks

Alacke no remedy) to the greedy touch Of common-kiffing Tuas: and forget Your laboursome and dainty Trimines, wherein

You made great fund angry.
Ime. Nay be breefe? I fee into thy end, and am almost A man already.

Pif. Firft, make your felfe but like one, Fore-rhinking this. You Poledore have prou'd best Woodman, and Are Mafter of the Featt : Cadwall, and I Will play the Cooke, and Servant, 'tis our match: The fweat of industry would dry, and dye But for the end it workes too. Come, our stomackes Will make what's homely, sauoury: Westinesse Can snore upon the Flint, when restie Sloth Findes the Downe-pillow hard. Now peace be beere, Poore house, that keep'st thy selfe.

Gui. I am throughly weary.

Arm. I am weake with toyle, yet firong in appetite. Gui. There is cold meat i'th Cave, we'l brouz on that Whil'ft what we have kill'd, be Cook'd.

Bal. Stay, come not in a But that it estes our vistualles, I should thinke Heere were a Faiery.

Gui. What's the matter, Sit? Bel. By Iupiter an Angell : or if not An earthly Paragon. Behold Diumenelle No elder then a Boy.

Enter Imogen.

Imo. Good mafters harme me not : Before I enter'd heere, I call'd, and thought To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took: good troth I have stolne nought, wor would not, though I had found Gold frew'dith'Floore. Heere's money for my Meate, I would have left it on the Boord, so soone As I had made my Meale; and parted With Pray'rs for the Provider. Gun Money? Youth.

Aru. All Gold and Silver rather turne to durt, As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those Who wathip durry Gods.

Imo. I fee you're angry: Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Haue dyed, had I not made it.

Bel. Whether bound?

Imo. To Milford-Hauen. Bel. What's your name?

Imo, Fidele Sir : I haue a Kinsman, who Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford, To whom being going, almost spent with hunger, I am falne in this offence.

Bel. Prythee (faire youth) Thinke vs no Churles : not measure out good mindes By this rude place we line in. Well encounter'd, 'Tis almost night, you shall have better cheere Ere you depart; and thankes to flay, and eate it: Boyes, bid him welcome.

Gus. Were you a woman, youth, I should woo hard, but be your Groome in honesty: I bid for you, as I do buy.

Arui. Ile make't my Comfort He is a man, Ile love him as my Brocher: And fuch a welcome as I'ld gius to him

(After long ablence) fuch is yours. Most welcome i Be (prightly, for you fall mongh Friends,

If Brothers : would it had bin to, that they Had bin my Fathers Sonnes, then had my prize Bin leffe, and to more equal ballafting To thee Posthumus.

Armi Or I, what ere is be, What paine it cost, what danger : Gods!

Bel. Hearke Boyes. Ime. Great men

That had a Court no bigger then this Caue, That did attend themselves, and had the vertue Which i beir owne Conscience seal'd them ilaying by That nothing-guift of differing Multitudes Could not out-peere these twaine. Pardon me Gods, I'ld change my fexe to be Companion with them, Since Leonarmi falle.

Bel. It Shall be so:

Boyes wee'l go dreffe our Hunz. Faire yourh come in; Discourse is heavy, fasting: when we have supp'd Wee'l mannerly demand thee of thy Story. So farre as thou wilt speake it.

Gm. Pray draw neere. Arus. The Night to'th'Owle, And Motne to th' Larke leffe welcome. Ime. Thankes Sir that made the Taylor, not be fit too? The rather (fauling reverence of the Word) for the faide a Womans fitnesse comes by fits: therein I must play the Workman, I date Speakeit to my felfe, for it is not Vainglotie for a man, and his Glaffe, to confer in his owne Chamber; I meane, the Lines of my body are as well drawne as his; no lelle young, more frong, not beneath him in Fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in Birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkeable in single oppositions; yet this imperseverant Thing loves him in my despight. What Mortalitie is? Possumu, thy head (which now is growing uppon thy Moulders) shall within this house be off, thy Mistris inforced, thy Garments cut to peeces before thy face : and all this done, sputne her home to her Father, who may (happily)be a little angry for my forough vlage: but my Mother having power of his testinesse, shall turne all into my commendations. My Horse is tyed up sale, out Sword, and to a fore purpole: Fortune put them into my hand: This is the very description of their meeting place and the Fellow dares not deceive me.

Enter Belarius, Guiderins, Arusragias, and Imogen from the Cane.

Bel. You are not well : Remaine heere in the Caue, Wee'l come to you after Hunting.

Aria. Brother, flay heere : Are we not Brothers?

bmo. So man and man should be, But Clay and Clay, differs in dignitie, Whole dust Is both alike. I am very sicke,

Gui. Go you to Hunting, He abide with him. Imo. So licke I am not, yet I am not well:

But not fo Citizen a wanton, as

To feemeto dye, ere ficke . So pleafe you, leque me, Sticke to your Journall courfe the breach of Custome, Is breach of all. I amill, but your being by me Cannot amend me. Society, is no comfort To one not fociable : I am not very ficke, Since I can reason of it: pray you trust me heere, He rob none but my felfe, and let me dye

Gw. Houe thee . I have spoke it, How much the quantity, the waight as much,

As I do love my Father. Bel. What? How? how?

Smaling to poorely.

Arus. If it be finne to fay fo (Sis) I yoake mee In my good Brothers fault: I know not why floue this youth, and I have heard you fay, Loue's reason's, without reason. The Beere at doore, And a demand who is't shall dye, I'ld fay My Father, not this yourh.

Arui. Thus did he auswer me : yet said heereaster,

I might know more.

Bel. To'th'Field, to'th'Field: Wee I leave you for this time, go in, and tell.

Arms. Wee'l not be long away. Bal. Pray be not ficke,

For you must be our Huswife.

Imo. Well, or ill. I am bound to you.

Bel. And shal't be ever.

This youth, how ere distrest, appeares he hath had

Good Ancestors. Arm. How Angell-like he fings?

Gui. But his neate Cookerie? Arms. He cut out Rootes in Chartacters And fawe'ft our Brothes, as Iuno had bin ficke,

And he her Dieter.

Arui. Nobly he yoakes A fmiling, with a figh; as if the fighe Was that it was, for not being fuch a Smile i The Smile, mocking the Sigh, that it would flye From lo divine a Temple, to commix

With windes, that Saylots calle at.

Gui. Idonote,

That greefe and patience rooted in them both. Mingle their spurres together.

Arus. Grow patient

And let the flinking. Elder (Greefe) vntwine His perishing roote, with the encreasing Vine.

Bel. It is great morning. Come away: Who's there? Enter Cloten.

Clo. I cannot finde those Runnagates, that Villaine Hath mock'd me. lamfaint.

Bel. Those Runnagates?

Meanes he not vs? I parely know him, 'tis Closen, the Sonne o'th' Queene. I feare some Ambush:

I faw him not these many yeares, and yet I know 'tishe: We are held as Out-Lawes: Hence.

Gui. He is but one : you, and my Brother fearch What Companies are neere: pray you away, Let me alone with him.

Clas Soft, what are you

That flye me thus? Some villaine-Mountainers? I have heard offuch. What Slave art thou!

Gus A thing

More flauish did I ne're, then answering

A Slave without a knocke.

Cler. Thou are a Robbet.

A Law-breaker, a Villaine i yeeld thee Theele. Gm. To who? to ther ? What art thou? Haue not I

An arme as bigge as thine? A heart, as bigge s Thy words I grant are bigger : for I weare not My Dagger in my mouth. Say what thouart .

Why I should yeeld to thee? Clos. Thou Villeine base, Know it me not by my Closches? Bai. No, northy Taylor, Rafcall :

Who is thy Grandfather ? He made those closthes, Which (so it feemes) make thee.

Cle. Thou precious Varles, My Taylor made them not

Gui. Hence then, and thanke The man that gave them thee. Thou art some Foole, I am louth to beate thee.

Clos. Thou iniurious Theefe, Heare but my name, and tremble.

Con. What's thy name? Clo. Chem, thou Villaine.

Gui. Cloten, thou double Villaine be thy name, I cannot tremble at it, were it Toad, or Adder, Spider, 'I would moue me looner.

Clos. To thy further feare, Ney, to thy meere Confusion, thou shalt know Iam Sonne to'th'Queene.

Gui. I am forry for't : not feeming

So worthy es thy Birth. Clat. Art not aleard?

Gui. Those that I reverence, those I feare: the Wiles At Fooles I laugh mot feare them.

Clor. Dye the death: When I have flaine thee with my proper band, He follow those that even now fled hence: And on the Gates of Lude-Towns fet your heads: Yeeld Ruflicke Mountaineer. Fight and Execut.

Enter Bolaries and Arwarages.

Bel. No Companie's abroad? Arui. None in the world : you did mistake him sure.

Bel I cannot tell : Long is it fince I faw him, But Time hath nothing blurt'd those lines of Fauous Which then he wore: the fratches in his voice, And burft of speaking were as his: I am absolute Twas very Cloten.

Arni. In this place we left them; I wish my Brother make good time with bim, You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarle made vp, I meane to man; he had not apprehenfion Of rosting terrors : For defect of judgement Is oft the caule of Feare.

Enter Guiderins.

But fee thy Brother.

Gui. This Cloten was a Foole, an empty purle, There was no money in't: Not Hercales Could have knock'd out his Braines, for he had none : Yet I not doing this, the Foole had borne My head, as I do his.

Bel. What hatt thou done?

Gui. I am perfect what : cut off one Clotens head, Some to the Queene (after his owne report) Who call'd me Traitor, Mountaineer, and Iwose With his owne fingle hand heel'd take vs in, Displace our heads, where (thanks the Gods) they grow And let them on Luds. Towne.

Bei. We are all vindone.
Gui. Why, worthy Father, what have we to look, But that he swore to take, our Lives ? the Law Proteds not vs, then why should we be tender, To let an arrogant peece of flesh threatys? Play Judge, and Executioner, all himfelfe?

For we do feare the Law. What company Discover you abroad?

Bd. No single soule Can we fet eye on : but in all safe reason

He must have some Attendants. Though his Honor Was nothing but mutation, I, and that Promone bad thing to worfe : Not Frenzie, Not absolute madnesse could so farre have raid To bring him heere alone : although perhaps Is may be heard at Court, that furh as wee Caue heere, hunt heere, are Out-lawes, and in time May make some stronger head, the which he hearing (As it is like him) might brezke out, and sweare Heel'd ferch vs in, yet is a not probable To come alone, either he fo undertaking,

Or they lo suffering : then on good ground we leave, If we do feare this Body bath a taile More perillous then the head, Arui. Let Ordinance Come as the Gods fore-fay it : howfore, My Brother hath done well.

Bel I had no minde

To hunt this day: The Boy Fideles fickere fle Did make my way long forth.

Gu. With his owne Sword, Which he did wave against my throat, I have tane His head from him: He throw't into the Creeke Behinde our Rocke, and let It to the Ses, And tell the Fishes, hee's the Queenes Sonne, Claren, That's all I reake.

Bd. I feare 'twill be reveng'd: Would (Polidore) thou had'ft not done't: though valour Becomes thee well enough.

Arms Would I had done't: So the Revenge alone purfu'de ree: Polidore 1 loue thee brotherly, but enuy much Thou haft robb'd me of this deed: I would Resenges That possible firength might meet, wold feek vs through And put vs to our answer.

Bel. Well, 'us done: Wee'l hunt no more to day, nor feeke for danger , Where there's no profit. I prythee to our Rocke, You and Fidele play the Cookes: He flay Till hafty Polidere returne, and bring him To dinner presently.

Arm. Poore ficke Fidele. He willingly to him, to gaine his colour, Il'd lee a parish of such Clotens blood, And praise my selfe for charity.

Bel. Oh thou Goddeffe, Thou divine Nature; thou thy felfe thou blazon Il In these two Princely Boyes: they are as gentle As Zephires blowing below the Violet, Not wagging his fweet head; and yet, as rough (Their Royall blood enchafd) as the rud it winde, That by the top doth take the Mountaine Pine, And make him stoope to th'Vale. Tis wonder That an invisible inftinet should frame them To Royalty voleam'd, Honor vocaught, Ciuility not feene from other : valour That wildely growes in them, but yeelds a crop As if it had beene low'd : yet flill it's ftrange What Claters being beere to us pertends, Or what his death will bring vs.

Emer Guideren. Gis. Where's my Brother?

Exit.

I have fent Clotens Clot-pole downe the freame, In Embassie to his Mother; his Bodie's hostage For his returne. Soleran Mafick.

Tel. My ingenuous Infirument, Hearke Polidore) it founds : but what occasion Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Heatke.

Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence euen now.

Gui. What does he meane? Since death of my deer's Mother

It did not tpeake before. Alt folemne things Should answer solemne Accidents. The matter? Triumphes for nothing, and lamenting Toyes, Isiollity for Apes, and greefe for Boyes. Is Cadwall mad?

Enter Aruiragus, with Invogen dead, bearing her in his Armes.

Bel. Looke, heere he comes, And brings the dire occasion in his Armes. Of what we blame him for.

Arus. The Bird is dead

That we have made so much on. I had rather Haue skipt from lixteene yeares of Age, to fixty : To have turn'd my leaping time into a Crutch, Then have feene this.

Gui. Oh sweetest, fayrest Lilly : My Brother weares theonot the one halfe fo well, As when thou grew if thy felfe.

Bel. Oh Melancholly

Who cuer yet could found thy bottome? Finde The Ooze, to thew what Coast thy fluggish care Might'ft eafilest harbour in. Thou blessed thing, love knowes what man thou might It have made but I, Thou dyed's a most rare Boy, of Melancholly How found you him?

Arus. Statke, as you lee: Thus fmiling, as some Fly had tickled sumber, Not as deaths dare, being laugh'd at a his right Checke Reposing on a Cushion.

Arui. O'ch'floore:

His armes thus leagu'd, I thought he flept, and put My clowted Brogues from off my feete, whole rudeneffe Answer'd my steps too lowd.

Gus. Why, he but fleepes :

If he be gone, hee'l make his Graue, a Bed: With female Fayries will his Tombe be haunted.

And Wormes will not come to thee.

Arus. Withfayrest Flowers Whil'A Sommer lasts, and I live heere, Fidele, He sweeten thy fad graue: thou shalt not lacke The Flower that's like thy face. Pale-Primrofe, not The azur'd Hare-bell, like thy Veines : no, nor The leafe of Eglantine, whom not to flander, Out-Iweetned not thy breath: the Raddocke would With Charitable bill (Oh bill fore fhaming Those rich-lest-heyres, that let their Fathers lye Without a Monument) bring thee all this, Yea, and furr'd Mosse besides. Armi. Say, where shall's lay him?

Gui. By good Europhile, our Mother. Arui. Bee't lo:

And let vs (Polidore) though now our voyces Have got the mannish cracke, fing him to'th'ground As once to our Mother : vie like note, and words, Saue that Euriphile, must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwall,

I cannot fing : He weepe, and word it with thee : For Notes of forrow, out of tune, are worfe Then Priests, and Phanes that lye.

Arus. Wee'l speake it then.

Bel. Great greeses I see med'cine the lesse: For Clatan Is quite forgot, He was a Queenes Sonne, Boyes, And though he came our Enemy, remember He was paid for that: though meane, and mighty roteing Together haue one dust, yet Reuerence (That Angell of the world) doth make distinction Ofplace tweene high, and low. Our Foe was Princely, And though you tooke his life, as being out Foe, Yet bury him, as a Prince.

Gui. Pray you fetch him hither, Therfires body is as good as Aiax, When neyther are alive.

Arui. If you'l go fetch him, Vee'l fay our Song the whil'ft: Brother begin. Gui. Nay Cadwall, we must lay his head to the East.

My Father hath a reason for't.

Arui. Tistiue. Gus. Come on then, and remove him. Arus. So, begin.

Enter Belarius with the body of Claten.

Cas. We have done our oblequies :

Come lay him downe.

Bel. Heere's a few Flowres, but 'bout midnight more: The hearbes that have on them cold dew o'thinght Are firewings fit'A for Graves: vpon their Faces. You were as Flowres, now wither d: euen so These Herbelets shall, which we vpon you strew. Come on away, apart vpon our knees: The ground that gave them first, ha's them againe : Their pleasures here are past, so are their paine.

Imogen arakus. Yes Sir, to Milford-Hauen, which is the way? I chanke you : by youd buffe? pray how farre thether ! 'Ods pitukins : can it be like mile yet? I have gone all night : Faith, lle lye downe, and fleepe. But fort; no Bedfellow? Oh Gods, and Goddelles ! Thefe Flowresure like the pleafurer of the World; This bloody man the care on't. I hope I dreame ! For fo I thought I was a Caue-keeper, And Cooke to honest Creatures. But 'tis not for 'Twas but a bolt of ootbing, fhot at nothing, Which the Braine makes of Fumes. Our very eyes, Are sometimes like our ludgements, blinde. Good faith I tremble still with feare : but if there be Yet left in Heaven, as small a drop of pittie As a Wrenseye; fear'd Gods, a part of it. Bel Lervsfromit.

Arm. What pleasure Sir, we finde in life, to locke is From Action, and Aduenture.

Gui. Nay, what hope Haue we in hiding vs? This way the Romaines Must. or for Britaines flay vs or receive vs For barbarous and vnoscurall Revolus During their vie, and flay vs after.

Wee'l higher to the Mountaines, there secure v. To the Kings party there's no going: newneffe Of Classes death (we being not knowne, not muffer'd Among the Bands) may drive vs to a render Where we have liu'd; and so extort from's that Which we have done, whole answer would be death Drawne on with Torture,

Ga. This is (Sir) a doubt In such a time, nothing becomming you, Nor latisfying vs.

Armi. It is not likely, That when they heare their Roman horses neigh, Behold their quarter'd Pires; have both their eyes And cares to cloyd importantly as now, That they will wafte their time vpon our gote, To know from whence we are,

Bel. Oh, I am knowne Of many in the Army : Many yeeres (Though Closen then but young) you fee, not wore him From my remembrance. And befides, the King Heth not deferu'd my Service, nor your Loues, Who finde in my Exile, the want of Breeding The certainty of this heard life, aye hopeleffe To have the courtefie your Cradle promis'd, But to be still hot Summers Tenlings, and The thrinking Slaves of Winter.

Gui. Then be fo, Better to ceafe to be. Pray Sir, to'th'Army I, and my Brother are not knowne; your felfe So out of thought, and thereto fo ore-growne, Cannot be question'd.

Arms. By this Sunne that shines He thicker: What thing is't, that I never Did see man dye, scatte euer look'd on blood, But that of Coward Hares, hot Goats, and Venison? Neuer beftrid a Horfe faue one, that had A Riderlike my felfe, who ne're wore Rowell Not Iron on his heele? I am alham'd To looke vpon the holy Sunne, to have The benefit of his bleft Beames, remaining So long a poore vnknowne.

GAL By heavens lle go, If you will bleffe me Sir, and grue me leave, Herake the better care: but if you will not, The hazard therefore due fall on me, by The hands of Romaines.

Arm. So fay I, Amen. Bei. No reason I (since of your lines you set) So dight a valewation) (hould referre My crack'd one to more care. Have with you Boyest If in your Country warres you chance to dye, That is my Bed too (Lads) and there He lye Lead, lead; the time feems long, their blood thinks footh
Till is flye out, and thew them Princes borne.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Poftbumu alone. Poft. Yes bloody cloth, lie keep thee t for I am with Thou should'st be colour'd thus. You married ones, If each of you should take this course, how many Must murther Wives much better then themselves b.b b 1

For wrying bue a little? Oh Pifanio, Eucry good Servant do's not all Commands: No Bond, but to do last ones. Gods, if you Should have tane vengeance on my faults, I neuer Had liu'd to put on this: fo had you laucd The noble Imegen, to repent, and throoke Me (wretch) more worth your Vengeance. But alacke, You fnatch some hence for little faults; that's love To have them fall no more 1 you forne permit To fecond illes with illes, each elder worfe, And make them dread it, to the doors thrift. But Imogen is your ovine, do your best willes, And make me ble to obey. I am brought hither Among th'Italian Gentry, and to fight Against my Ladies Kingdome: Tis enough That (Britaine) I have kill'd thy Mistris: Peace. He give no wound to thee: therefore good Heavens, Heare patiently my purpole. Hedifrobe mo Of these Italian weedes, and fuitemy selfe As do's a Britaine Pezant : lo lle fight Against the part I come with to lledye For thee (O Imozen) even for whom my life Is every breath, a death : and thus, wnknowne, Pittied, nor hated, to the face of perill My selfe Ile dedicate. Let me make men know More valour in me, then my habits show. Gods, put the strength o'th' Leve at in me : To Chamethe guize o'th'world, I will begin, The fashion leffe without, and more within-Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lucius, lachimo, and the Romane Army at one decre: and the Britaine Army as another : Leonaius Pofthumus following lake a poore Souldier. They march over, and goe ous. Then enter agains in Skirmifb lachemo and Postonmus: be vanguisherb and disarmerb lachime, and then leases bian.

loc The heavinesse and guilt within my bosome, Takes oft my menhood: I have belyed a Lady, The Princefle of this Country; and the syre on't Revengingly enfeebles me, or could this Carle, A very drudge of Natures, have fubdu'de me In my profession? Knighthoods, and Honors borne As I weare mine) are titles but of fcorne. If that thy Gentry (Britaine) go before This Lowe, as he exceeds our Lords, the oddes Is, that we scarle are men, and you are Goddes. The Battaile continues, the Brisaines fly, Cymbeline is taken: I benemer to bis refene, Bellatins, Guiderens, and Arniragus.

Bel. Stand, stand, we have th'advantage of the ground, The Lane is guarded : Nothing rowts vs, but The villany of our feares, Gui. Arus. Stand, fland, and fight.

Enter Postburnus, and seconds the Britaines. They Resour Cymbeline, and Exeunt. Then enter Lucisis, Ischimo, and Imogen. Luc. Away boy from the Troopes, and faue thy felfe: For friends kil friends, and the disorder's such

As warre were hood-wink d. Inc. Tir their fresh supplies.
Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely : or betimes

Let's re-inforce, or fly.

Scena Tertia.

Freunt

Enter Poftburnou, and a Britaine Lord. Lor. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand? Poft. I did.

Though you it seemes come from the Fliers?

Post. No blame be to you Sir, for all was loft, But that the Heavens fought: the King himselfe Of his wings destitute, the Army broken, And but the backes of Britaines feene; all flying Through a strait Lane, the Enemy full-hearted, Lolling the Tongue with flaught'ring : having worke More plentifull, then Tooles to doo't : ftrooke do wne Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling Meerely through feare, that the ftrait paffe was damm'd With deadmen, hurt behinde, and Cowards living To dye with length ned fhame.

Lo. Where was this Lane? Post. Close by the battell, ditch'd, & wall'd with turph, Which gave aduantage to an ancient Sold.our (Anhonest one I warrant) who deferu'd So long a breeding, as his white beard came to, In doing this for's Country. Athware the Lane, He, with two ftriplings (Lads more like to run The Country bale, then to commit luch flaughter, With faces fit for Maskes, or rather fayrer Then those for preservation cas'd, or shame) Made good the passage, cryed to those that Red. Our Britaines hearts dye flying, not our men To darknesse steere soules that five backwards; stand, Or we are Romanes, and will grue you that Like beafts, which you foun beaftly, and may fave But to looke backe in fromne : Stand, frand, Thefe three, Three thousand confident, in access many: For three performers are the File, when all The rest do nothing. With this word stand, stand, Accomodated by the Place; more Charming With their owne Nobleneffe, which could have turn'd A Distaffe, to a Lance, guilded pale lookes; Part shame, part spirit renew'd, that some turn'd coward But by example (Oh a finne in Warre, Damn'd in the first beginners) gan to looke The way that they did, and to grinlike Lyons Vponthe Piker o'th Hunters. Then begance A ftop i'th'Chaler; a Retyre: Anon A Rowt, confusion thicke: forthwith they fige Chickens, the way which they flopt Eagles: Slaves The strides the Victors made: and now our Cowards Like Fragments in hard Voyages became The life o'th'need: having found the backe doore open Of the vinguarded hearts: heavens, how they wound, Same fisine before fome dying; some their Friends Ore-borne i'th'former wave, ten chac'd by one, Are now each one the flaughter-man of swenty:

Those that would dye, or ere relist, are growne

The mortall bugs o'th' Field.

Lord. This was strange chance: A parrow Lane, an old man, and two Boyes. Post. Nay, do not wonder at it : you are made Rather to wonder at the things you heare, Then to worke any. Will you Rime vpon't, And vent it for a Mock'rie? Heere is one: "Two Boyes, an Oldman (swice a Boy) a Lane, "Prefern dibe Britames, was the Romanes bane.

Lord. Nay, be not angry Sir. Post. Lacke, to what end? Who dares not fland his Foe, He be his Friend r For if hee'l do, as he is made to doo, I know hee'l quickly flye my friendship too.

You have put me into Rime.

Lord. Farewell, you're angry.

Paff. Still going? This is a Lord: Oh Noble milery
To be ith Field, and aske what newes of me: To day, how many would have given their Honours To have fau'd their Carkaffes ? Tooke hacle to doo't, And yet dyed too. Lin mine owne woe charm'd Could not finde death, where I did heare him groome, Nor feels him where he firooks. Being an vgly Monfter, Tis firange he hides him in frosh Cops, fold Beds, Sweet words; or hath meetinaliters then we Thes draw his knines o'th' War. Well I will finde him: For being most a Fanourer to the Britisine, No more a Britaine, I bauerefem'd againe The part I came in. Fight I will no more, But yeeld me to the verieft Hinde, that fhoil Once touch my shoulder. Great the strugbter is Herre made by th'Romane; great the Answer bo Beitalnes nauft take. For me, my Ranfome's death, On eigher fide I come to spend my breath; Which newther heere Ila keepe, nor bearcagen, But end it by forme meanes for Imagen. Euser two Captaines, and Soldiers.

z Great Iupiter be prais'd, Lucaus is raken, Tis thought the old man, and his fonnes, were Angels.

2 There was a fourth man, in a filly habit,

That gave th' Afront with them.

3 So tis reported 1

But none of 'em can be found. Stend, who's there?

Post. A Rossian,
Viho had not now beene drouging beere, if Seconds

Had answer'd hise.

2 Lay hands on bim : a Dogge, A legge of Rome thall not returne to tell What Crows have pecke them here: he brags his fernice As if he were of note; being him to'th'King. Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderous, Arutragus Fifanio, and Romane Captimes. The Captaines profens Polibumus to Cymbeline who deliver i him over to a Geoler.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Postlinmus, and Gaoler. Gar. You inall not now be foline, You have lockes vpon you: So graze, as you finde Pafrare. E.G. I, or a flomacke.

Poll. Most welcome bondage; for thousers a way (I thinke) to liberty: yet am I berter

Thou one that's beke o'th'Gows, fines be had rather Grosne fo In perpecuity, then be cur'd By'th'fure Phyfirian, Death; who is the key T'vobarte thefe Lockes. My Confrience, thou are fetter'd More then my thanks, & wrifts: you good Gods give me The penitent Inftrument to picke that Bolt, Then tree for ever. Is't enough I am forry? So Children temporall Fathers do appeales Gods are more full of mercy. Must 1 repent, I cannot do it better then in Gyues, Desir'd, more then confirmin'd, to satisfie If of my Freedome 'ris the maine part, take No fincter render of me, then my All. I know you are more clement then vilde men. Who of their broken Debtors take a third, A fixt, a tenth, letting them thrive agains On their abatement; that's not my defire. For Imogens deere life, take mine, and though 'Tis not fo deere, yet 'tis a life; you coyn'd ic, Tweene man, and man, they waigh not every flampe a Though light, take Preces for the figures fake. (You sather) mine being yours : and so great Powrer, If you will take this Audit, take this life, And cancell these cold Bonds. Oh Imegen, He speake to thee in filence.

Solomne Musicke. Enter (es in an Apparation) Sicilius Lecnames, Fasher to Posthamus, an old montestyred like a warriour, leading in his band on ancient Marron (bis welland) Maher to Postinumus) with Musiche before them. Then: after other Mufiche followes the two young Leonati (Brone bers to Followins) with wounds as they died in the wars. They circle Post browns round as be lies slieping.

Sicil. No more than Thunder-Mafter thew thy spight, on Mortall Flies:

With Mars fall out with here chide, that thy Adulteries Rates, and Revenges.

Hath my poors Boy done ought but well, whole face I never faw :

I dy'de whil'ft in the Wombe he flaide. according Natures Law.

Whole Futher then (as men report, thou Orphones Futher art)

Thou frould'it have bis, and fleeder him. from this earth-rexing fmare.

Offarb. Lucino lens not me her ayde,

but tooke me in my Thrower, That from me was Posthamus sipe, came crying mang'A his Foca.

A thing of picty.
Skel. Great Nature like his Ancellede, moulded the fluffe fo foire:

That hed feru'd the praise o'th'World,

as great Sictisms heyre.

To taint his Nobler hart & braine, with needlefficioloufy, And to become the geeke and fcome o'th'others vilany? 2 Bre. For this, from fuller Seats we came,

our Parents, and vs twaine,

That friking in our Countries cause, fell brauely, and were flaine,

Our Fealty, & Temantine tight, with Honor to malntaine. 3 Bro. Like hardiment Pofthumus hath to Cymbeline perform'd:

Then Iupiter, King of Gods, why haft I thus adiouen'd The Graces for his Merits duc, being all to dolors com'd?

Sick. Thy Christall window ope; looke, looke out, no longer exercise

Vpon a valiant Race, thy harsh, and potentiniuries :
Moth. Since (Iupiter) our Son is good, take off his miseries.

Siell Peepe through thy Marble Mansion, helpe, or we poore Ghosts will cry

Toth fhining Synod of the rest, against thy Deity. Brochers. Helpe (lupiter) or we appeale, and from thy inflice flye.

Sieil. He came in Thunder, his Celestiall breath Was sulphurous to smell : the holy Eagle Stoop'd, as to foote vs: his Afornsion i More sweet then our bleft Fields : his Royall Bird Primes the immortall wing, and cloyes his Beake,

As when his God is pleas'd,

All. Thankes Iupiter. Sie. The Marble Pauement clozes, he is enter'd His radiant Roofe: Away, and to be bleft Let vs with care performe his great beheft.

Poft. Sleepe, thou hast bin a Grandfire, and begot A Father to me : and thou haft created A Mother, and two Brothers. But (oh fcome) Gone, they went hence so soone as they were borne: And so I am awake. Poore Wretches, that depend On Greatnesse, Fauour; Dreame as I have done, Wake, and finde nothing. But (alas) I swcrue: Many Dreame not to finde neither deserve, And yet are steep'd in Fauours; so am I That have this Golden chance, and knowner why: What Fayeries haunt this ground? A Book? Oh rate one, Be not, as is our fangled world, a Garment Nobler then that it covers. Let thy effects So follow, to be most valike our Courtiers, As good, as promise.

Reades.

Enter Gaoler.

Can. Come Sir, are you ready for death? Poft. Ouer-roafted rather : ready long ago. Gao. Hanging is the word, Sir, il you bee readic for that, you are well Cook'd.

Poft. So if I prove a good repatt to the Spectators, the dish payes the shot

Cao. A heavy reckoning for you Sir. But the comfort is you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more Taueme Bils, which are often the ladnesse of parting, as the procuring of mirch: you come in faint for want of meate, departreeling with too much drinke: lorrie that you have payed too much, and forry that you are payed too much : Purle and Braine, both empry : the Brain the heavier, for being too light; the Purfe too light, being drawne of heavinesse. Oh, of this contradiction you shall now be quit: Oh the charity of a penny Cord, it summes vp thousands in a trice : you have no true Debitor, and Creditor but it : of what's past, is, and to come, the difcharge: your necke(Sis)is Pen, Booke, and Counters; fo the Acquittance followes, Post. I am merrier to dye, then thou art to live.

Gao. Indeed Sir, he that fleepes, feeler not the Tooth-Ache: but a man that were to sleepe your sleepe, and a Hangman to helpe him to bed, I think he would change places with his Officer: for, look you Sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Poft. Yes indeed do I, fellow.
Goo. Your death has eyes in's head then: I have not feene him so pictur'd : you must either bee directed by fome that take vpon them to know, or to take vpon your selfe that which I amfure you do not know . or jump the after-enquiry on your owne perill: and how you shall speed in your iournies end, I thinke you'l never tetarne to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, Fellow, there are none want eyes, to direct them the way I am going, but such as winke, and will not vie them.

Gas. What an infinite mocke is this, that a man frold have the best vie of eyes, to see the way of blindnesse: I am fure hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Melfenger. Mef. Knocke off his Manacles, bring your Priloner so the King.

Poft. Thou bring's good newes, I am call'd to bee made free.

Gao. Ile be hang'd then.

Poff. Thou shalt be then freet then a Gaoler; no bolts for the dead.

Gas. Vnleffe a man would marry a Gallowes, & beget yong Gibbets, I neuer faw one so prone; yet on my Conscience, there are verier Knaues desire to liue, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too that dye against their willes; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one minde, and one minde good: O there were desolation of Gaolers and Galowses: I speake against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in L. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cymbeline, Bellarius, Guiderius, Aruiragus, Pifanio, and Lords.

Cym. Stand by my fide you, whom the Gods baue made Preferuers of my Throne: woe is my heart,
That the poore Souldier that fo richly fought,
Whose ragges, sham'd gilded Armes, whose naked brest
Stept before Targes of proofe, cannot be found.
He shall be happy that can finde him, if
Our Grace can make him so.

Bot. I never faw
Such Noble fury in so poore a Thing;
Such precious deeds, in one that promist nought

But beggery, and poore lookes.

Cym. No tydings of him?

Pifa. He hath bin fearch'd among the dead, & living; But no trace of him.

Cym. To my greefe, I am
The heyre of his Reward, which I will adde
To you (the Lluer, Heart, and Braine of Britaine)
By whom (I grant) the liues. 'Tis now the time
To aske of whence you are. Report it.
Bel. Sir,

In Cambria are we borne, and Gentlemen:
Further to boall, were neyther true, nor modell,
Valesse I adde, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees:
Arile my Knights o'th Battell, I create you
Companions to our perfon, and will fit you
With Dignities becomming your effates.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.
There's businesse in these faces: why so sadly
Greet you our Victory 7 you looke like Romaines,
And not o'th'Court of Britaine.

Corn. Hayle great King,
To fowre your happineffe, I must report
The Queene is dead.

The Queene is dead.

Cym. Who worse then a Physitian

Would this report become? But I consider,

By Med'cine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will selzethe Doctor too. How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life, Which (being cruell to the world) concluded Most cruell to her selfe. What she consest, I will report, so please you. These her Women Can trip me, if I erre, who with wet cheekes Were present when she simish'd.

Cym. Prythee lay.
Cor. First, she confest the neuer lou'd you: onely
Affected Greatnesse got by you: not you:
Married your Royalty, was wife to your place:

Abhorr'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this: And but the spoke it dying, I would not Beleeue her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Corn. Your daughter, whom the bore in hand to love With fuch Integrity, the did confesse Was as a Scorpion to her fight, whose life (But that her flight prevented it) she had Tane off by poyson.

Cym. O most delicate Fiend!
Who is t can reade a Woman? Is there mote?

Corn. More Sir, and worfe. She did confesse she had For you a mortal! Minerall, which being tooke, Should by the minute feede on life, and ling'ring, By inches waste you. In which time, the purpos'd By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to Orecome you with her shew; and in time (When she had fitted you with her craste, to worke Her Sonne into th'adoption of the Crowne! But sayling of her end by his strange absence, Grew shamelesse desperate, open'd (in despish of Heauen, and Men) her purposes: repented. The euils she hatch'd, were not essetted: so Disparing, dyed.

Cym. Heard you all this, her Women? La. We did, so please your Highnesse.

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for the was beautifull:
Mine eares that heare her flattery, not my heart,
That thought her like her feeming. It had beene vicious
To have miftrufted her: yet (Oh my Daughter)
That it was folly in me, thou may ft fay,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all.
Enter Lucsus, Jachmo, and other Roman prifoners,

Leonatus behind, and Imogen.
Thou commits not Caiw now for Tribute, that
The Britaines have racid out, though with the loss
Of many a bold one; whose Kinshen have made suite
That their good soules may be appeared, with slaughter
Of you their Captines, which our selfe have granted,

So thinke of your estate.

Luc Consider Sir, the chance of Warre, the day
Was yours by accident: had it gone with vs,

We should not when the blood was cool have threatend Our Prisoners with the Sword. But since the Gods Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives May be call'd ransome, let be come: Sufficeth, A Roman, with a Romans heart can suffer:

Assystus lives to thinke on't: and so much For my peculiar care. This one thing onely I will entreate, my Boy (a Britaine borne)

Let him be ransom'd: Neuer Master had A Page so kinde, so disteous, diligent, So tender over his occasions, true, So seate, so Nurse-like: let his vertue joyne With my request, which He make bold your Highnesse Cannot deny; he hath done no Britaine harme, Though he have served a Roman. Savehim (Sir)

And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seenehim:
His favour is familiar to me: Boy,
Thou hast look'd thy selfe into my grace,
And art mine owne. I know not why, wherefore,
To say, live boy: netrethanke thy Master, live;
And aske of Cymbeline what Boone thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty, and thy slate, sle give it:

Yes

Yea, though thou do demand a Prisoner The Noblest same.

Im. I hambly thanke your Highnesse.

Luc. I do not bid thee begge my life, good Lad, And yet I know thou wile,

Ime. No, no, alacke,

There's other worke in hand: I fee a thing Bitter to me, as death ; your life, good Mafter, Muft shuffle for it selfe.

Luc. The Boy disdelnes me,

He leaves me, scomes me : briefely dye their ioyes, That place them on the truth of Gyrles, and Boyes.

Wlry stands he so perpleze?

Cym. What would'ft thou Boy? I love thee more, and more a thinke more and more What's best to aske. Know'st him thou look'st onlipeak Wile hauchim line? Is he thy Kin? thy Friend?

Imo. Heisa Romane, no more kin to me, Then I to your Highnesse, who being born your vallaile

Am fomething necres Cym, Wherefere ey'ft him fo?

Imo. He tell you (Sir) in private, if you pleafe

To give me hearing.

Cym. I, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name? Inno. Fedele Sir.

Cym. Thou're my good youth : my Page He be thy Mafter: walke with me: speake freely. Bel. Is not this Boy reusu'd from death?

Arid. One Sand another Not more resembles that sweet Rosse Lad:

Who dyed, and was Fulele: what thinke you ? Gw. The fame dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace, see further : he eyes vs not, forbeare

Creatures may be alike : were't he, I am fute He would have spoke tovs.

Gai. But we fee him dead. Be! Be filent : let's fee further.

Pifa. It is my Mifters :

Since the is living, let the time run on,

To good, or bad.

Cym. Come, Rand thou by our fide. Make thy demand alowd. Sir, Rep you forth, Giae answer to this Boy, and do it freely, Or by our Greatnelle, and the grace of it (Which is our Honor) bitter torture fail Winnow the truth from falshood. One speake to him.

Ime. My boone is that this Gentleman may render

Of whom he had this Ring.

Post. What's that to him?

Cym. That Diamond vpon your Finger, lay How came it yours?

Isch. Thou'lt torture me co leaue vnspoken, that Which to be spoke, wou'd torture thee.

Com. How? me?

lach. I am glad to be conffrain'd to veter that Which tormenes me to conceale. By Villany I got this Ring; 'twas Leanains lewell, Whom thou did'ft benifh : and which more may greeve Asit dath me : a Nobler Sir, ne'te liu'd Twix: sky and ground. Walt thou heare more my Lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this. lach. That Paragon, thy daughter.

For whom my heart drops blood, and my falle spirits Quaileto remember. Giue me leave, I faint.

Cym. My Daughter?what of hir?Renew thy firength

I had rather thou fhould ft line, while Nature will, Then dye ere I heare more : ftrive men, and speake.

Iach. Vpon a time, vnboppy was the clocke That flroake the houre tit was in Rome, accurft The Manson where I 'twas at a Feast, oh would Our Vianels had bin poyfon'd (or at least Those which I heav'd to head:) the good Postbumus, (What should I says he was too good to be Where ill men were, and was the best of all Among Atherar's of good one.) fitting fadly, Hearing vs praise our Loues of Italy For Beauty, that made batren the swell'd boaft Of him that best could speake : for Feature, laming The Shrine of Venu, or ftraight-pight Minerua, Postures, beyond breefe Nature. For Condition, A shop of all the qualities, that man Loues woman for, besides that hooke of Wiung, Farrenelle, which strikes the eye.

Cym. Istand on fire. Come to the matter lach. All too foone I shall,

Vnleffe thou would'ft greene quickly. This Pofitiment Most like a Noble Lord, in love, and one That had a Royall Lover, tooke his hint, And (not dispraising whom we praised, therein He was as calme as vertue) he began His Misteis picture, which, by his congue, being made, And then a minde put in't, either our bragges Were crak'd of Kitchin-Trulles, or his description Prou'd vs vnfpesking fottes.

Cym. Nay, ney, to thipurpole. Jach. Your daughters Chaftery, (there it beginnes) He spake ofher, as Dian had hot dreames, And the 2lone, were cold: Whereat, I wretch Made scruple of his praise, and wager'd with him Peeces of Gold, gainst this, which then he wore Vpon his honour'd finger) to attaine In suite the place of's bed, and winne this Ring By hers, and mine Adoltery : he (muc Knight) No leffer of her Honour confident Then I did truly finde her, stakes this Ring, And would so, had it beene a Carbuncle Of Phoebus Wheele; and might fo fefely, had it Bin all the worth of's Carre. Away to Britaine Poste I in this designe : Well may you (Sir) Remember me at Court, where I was caught Of your chaste Daughter, the wide difference Twist Amorous, and Villanous. Being thus quench'd Of hope, not longing; mine Italian braine, Gan in your duller Britaine operare Most vildely: for my vantage excellent.
And to be breefe, my practife so preuayl'd
That I return'd with simular proofe enough, To make the Noble Lemma med, By wounding his beleefe in her Renowne, With Tokens thus, and thus a werring notes Of Chamber-hanging, Pictures, this ber Bracelet (Oh cuaning how I got) nay some markes Offecret on her person, that he could not Bat thinks her boad of Chastity quies crack'd, I having tame the forfeyt. Wherewon, Me thinkes I fee him now.

Post. ! so thou do'it. Italian Fiend. Ayeme, most credulous Fooie, Egregious murtherer, Theele, any thing That's due to all the Villaines past in being To come. Oh give me Cord, or knife, or poylon,

Some vpright Iusticer. Thou King, fend out For Torturors ingenious: it is I That all th'abhorred things o'th'earth amend By being worse then they. I am Postburnes, That kill'd thy Daughter : Villain-like, I lye, That caus'd a leffer villaine then my felfe, A sacrilegious Theefe to doo't. The Temple Of Versue was the; yea, and the her felfe. Spie, and throw stones, cast myre upon me, le: The dogges o'th'ftreet to bay me : every villaine Be call'd Postbumus Leonarno, and Be villany leffe then 'twas. Oh Imogen! My Queene, my life, my wife: oh Imogen, Imogen, Imogen.

Imo. Peace my Lord, heare, heare. Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou fcornfull Page, there lye thy part. Pif. Oh Gentlemen, helpe, Mine and your Mistris: Oh my Lord Posthamue, You ne're kill'd Imogen till now : helpe, helpe, Mine honour'd Lady.

Cym. Does the world go round? Pofth. How comes their flaggers on mee?

Pifa. Wakemy Miftris.

Cym. If this be fo, the Gods do meane to frike me To death, with mortall joy

Pifa. How fares my Mistris? Ime. Oh get thee from my fight. Thou gan'it me poy fon : dangerous Fellow hence, Breath not where Princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen. Pifa. Lady, the Gods throw stones of sulpher on me, if That box I gaue you, was not thought by mee A precious thing, I had it from the Queene.

Cym. New matter fill.
Imo. It poylon'd me. Corn. Oh Gods!

Heft out one thing which the Queene confest, Which must approve thee honest. If Pafenio Have (faid the) given his Mistris that Confection Which I gave him for Cordiall, the is feru'd, As I would ferue a Rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?
Cern. The Queene (Sir) very oft importan'd me To temper poylons for her, still pretending The fatisfaction of her knowledge, onely In killing Creatures vilde, as Cats and Dogges Of no effectue. I dreading, that her purpole Was of more danger, did compound for her A certainestuffe, which being tane, would cease The present powre of life, but in short time, All Offices of Nature, should againe

Do their due Functions. Haue you tane of it? Imo. Mostlikeldid, for I was dead. Bel. My Boyer, there was out erros.

Cui. This is fure Fidele.

Ime. Why did you throw your wedded Lady fro you? Thinke that you are vpon a Rocke, and now Throw me againe.

Poft. Hang there like fruite, my foule.

Till the Treedye.

Cym. Hownow, my Flesh? my Childe? What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this A&? Wilt thou not speake to me?

Imo. Your bleffing, Sir.
Bel. Though you did leuethis youth, I blame ye nor,

You had a motive for't.

Cym. My teares that fall Proue holy-water on thee; Imogen, Thy Mothers dead

imo. I am forry for't, my Lord.

Cym. Oh, the was naught; and long of her it was That we meet heere fo ftrangely : but her Sonne Is good, we know not how, nor where.

Pifa. My Lord, Now feare is from me, ile speake troth. Lord Cloten Vpon my Ladies missing, came to me

With his Sword drawne, foam'd at the mouth, and fwore

If I discouer'd not which way she was gone. It was my instant death. By accident, I had a feigned Letter of my Masters

Then in my pocker, which directed him

To feeke her on the Mountaines neere to Milford, Where in a frenzie, in my Mastera Garments (Which he inforc'd from me) away he postes With vnchaste purpose, and with oath to violate My Ladies honor, what became of him,

I further know not.

Gm. Let me end the Story : I flew him there. Cym. Marry, the Gods forefend.

I would not thy good deeds, should from my lips Plucke a hard sentence : Prythee valiant youth Deny't againe.

Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a Prince.

Gui. A most incivill one. The wrongs he did mee Were nothing Prince-like; for he did prouoke me! With Language that would make me spurne the Sea, If it could so roare to me. I cut off's head, And am right glad he is not standing heere To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am forrow for thee: By thine owne tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our Law : Thou'rt dead.

Imo. That headlesse man I thought had bin my Lord Cym. Binde the Offender,

And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, Sir King. This man is better then the man he flew, As well descended as thy solfe, and hath More of thee merited, then a Band of Closens Had ever scarre for. Let his Armes alone, They were not borne for bondage.

Cym. Why old Soldier: Wilt thou vadoo the worth thou art vapayd for By tasting of our wrath? How of descent

As good as we?

Armi. In that he spake too farre.

Cym. And thou shalt dye for't. Bel. We will dye all three,

But I will proue that two one's are as good As I have given out him. My Sonnes, I must Formine owne part, vnfold a dangerous speech.

Though haply well for you.

Arm. Your danger's ours. Guid. And our good his, Bel. Haue at it then, by leave

Thou hadd'ft (great King) a Subice, who Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? He is a banish'd Traisce. Bel. He it is, that hath Affum'd this age: indeed a banish'd man,

I know not how, a Traitor. Cym. Take him hence, The whole world (hall not face him.

Bel. Nottoo hor; First pay me for the Norfing of thy Sannes, And let it be conficate all, lo foone

As I have receyu'd it.

Cyne. Nuring of my Sonnes? Bel. I ara too blunt, and fawcy : beere's my knee : Ere I arife, I will preferre my Sonnes, Then spare not the old Fother. Mighty Sir. Theferwo young Gentlemen that call me Father, And chinks they are my Sonnes, are none of mine, They are the your of your Loyacs, my Liege, And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How?my Iffue.

Bel. So fure as you, your Fathers : I (old Megas) Am that Belirus, whom you formerime banish'd: Your pleasure was my occre offence, my publishmens It felfe, and all my Tresfon the fuffer'd Was all the harme I did. These gentle Princes (For such, and so they are) these twenty years Hane I train'd vp; those Arts they have, as I Could put into them. My breeding was (Sir) Asyour Highnelle knowes : Their Nurle Europhile (Whom for the Thefe I wedded) Role thefe Children Vpon my Banishment : I moon'd her too't, Hauing receyu'd the punishment before For that which I did then Beaten for Loyaltie, Excited me to Treason. Their deere loffe, The more of you twas felt, the more it thap'd Vnto my end of stealing them. But gracious Sir, Heere are your Sonnes againe, and I must loose Two of the sweet's Companions in the World. The benediction of these covering Heavens Fall on their heads like dew, for they are worthing To in-lay Heaven with Starres.

Cym. Thou weep'ft, and speak'ft : The Service that you three have done, is more Vnlike, then this thou tell'A. I lou my Children, If thele be they, I know not how to with

A payre of worthier Sonnes.

Bet. Bepless'dawhile ; This Gentleman, whom I call Polidore, Most worthy Prince, as yours, is true Guiderius? This Gentleman, my Cadwall, Aruiragus. Your yonger Princely Son, he Sir, was laps In a most curious Mantle, wrought by th'band Of his Queene Mother, which for more probation I can with exfe produce.

Cym. Guidernes had V pon his necke a Mole, a languine Sterre, It was a marke of wonder.

Bel. This is he,

Who hath vpoo him full that natural! flampes It was wife Natures end, in the donation To be his euidencenow.

Cym. Oh, what sm !

A Mother to the byrth of three? Nere Mother Reioye'd deliverance more : Bleft, pray you be, That after this Arange Azering from your Orbes, You may reigne in them now : Oh Imagen, Thou hast lost by this a Kingdome.

Ima. No,my Lord: I haue got two Worlds by't. Oh my gentle Brothers, Have we thus met? Oh never fay heereafter

But I am truch fpeaker. You call'd fat Brother When I was but your Sliter: I you Brothers, When we were to in feed, Cym. Did you ere merce? Arui. I my good Lord.

Continew'd so, vntill we thought he dyed. Com. By the Queenes Dramme the (wallow'd.

Cym. O rare inftind!

When shall I heare all through? This herce abridgment, Hath to it Citcumstantiall branches, which Distinction should be richin. Where? how the'd you? And when came you to ferue our Romane Captive? How parted with your Brother? How first met them? Why fled you from the Court? And whether thele! And your three motives to the Bettaile? with I know not how much more should be demanded, And all the other by-dependances

From chance to chance ? But not the Time, not Place Will fetue our long Interrogatories. See, Pofibumus Anchors vpon Imogen;

And the (like harmlesse Lightning) thrower her eye On him: her Brothers, Me ther Master bluing Each object with a loy : the Counter-change Is severally in all. Let's quie this ground, And Imoake the Temple with our Sacrifices.

Thou art my Brother, so weed hold thee ever.

Imo. You are my Father too, and did release the t

To see this gracious season.

Cym. All ore-roy'd

Sauethefe in bonds, let them be loyfull too, For they shall taste our Comfore.

Ime. My good Mafter, I will yet do you ferrice.

Lue. Happy beyou.

Cym. The forlorne Souldier, that no Nobly fought He would have well becom'd this place, and grac'd The thankings of a King. Poft. Ism Sie

The Souldier that did company these three 'n poore befeeming : 't was a firment for The purpose I then follow'd. Thes I was he, Speake lachesse, I had you downe, and might Have made you finish.

lach. I am downe againe : But now my besuit Conscience linkes my knee, As then your force did. Take that life, befeech you Which I so often owe : but your Ring first, And beere the Bracelet of the trueff Princeffe That ever fwore her Faith.

Post. Kneele not to me :

The powre that I have on you, is to spare you: The melice sowards you, to forgine you. Line And deale with others better.

Cym. Nobly deom'd Wee'l learne our Freeneffe of a Sonno-in-Law: Pardon's the word to all.

Armi. You holpe vs Sir,

As you did means indeed to be our Brother,

Loy'd are we, that you are,

Poft. Your Servant Princes, Good my Lord of Rotal Call forth your Scoth-fayer: As I flept, me thought Great Jupiter vpon his Eagle backd Appear'd to me, with other sprightly shewes Of mine owne Kindred. When I wak d, I found This Labell on my bosome; whose containing Is to from lenle in hardnesse, that I can Make

Make no Collection of it. Let him thew His skill in the conftruction.

Luc. Philarmonus.

South. Heere, my good Lord.

Luc Read, and declare the meaning.

Reades.

When as a Lyons whelpe shall to himselfe unknown without seeking finde, and bee embraced by a peece of tender Agre: And when from a frately Cedar shall be lopt branches, which being dead many years, shall after renine, bee connection the old Stocke, and freshly grow, then shall Posthimmus end his misteries, Brutaine be fortunate, and showish in Peace and Plentie.

Thou Leonates are the Lyons Whelpe,
The fit and apt Construction of thy name
Being Leonates, doth import so much:
The peece of render Ayre, thy vertuous Daughter,
Which we call Mollin Aer, and Mollis Aer
We tettine it Mulier; which Mulier I dinine
Is this most constant Wise, who even now
Answeing the Letter of the Oracle,
Viknowne to you unsought, were clipt about
With this most tender Aire.

Cym. This listh fome feeming.
South. The lofty Cedar, Royall Cymbeline
Perforates thee: And thy lopt Branches, point
Thy two Sonnes forth: who by Belarius stoine
For many yeares thought dead, are now retitud
To the Marestreke Cedar ioyn'd; whose Issue

Promises Britaine, Peace and Plenty.

Cym. Well,

My Peace we will begin: And Caius Lucius Alrhough the Victor, we submit to Cafar, And to the Romane Empire; promising To pay our wonted Tribute, from the which We were diffwaded by our wicked Queene, Whom beauens in Justice both on her, and hers, Haue laid most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the Powres aboue, do tune The harmony of this Peace: the Vision Which I made knowne to Lucrus ete the stroke Of yet this scatse-cold-Battasle, at this instant Is full accomplished. For the Romaine Eagle From South to West, on wing soaring alost Lessen'd her selfe, and in the Beames o'th Sun So vanished; which fore-shew'd our Princely Eagle Th'Imperiall Casar, should againe voite His Fauour, with the Radiant Cymbeline, Which shines here in the West.

Cym. Laud we the Gods,
And let our crooked Smoakes climbe to their Nostrila
From our blest Akars. Publish we this Peace
To all our Subjects. Set we forward: Let
A Roman, and a Brittish Ensigne wage
Friendly together: so through Ludi-Town match,
And in the Temple of great suppres
Our Peace wee' ratific: Seale it with Feasts.
Set on there: Neuer was a Warre did cesse
(Ere bloodie hands were wash'd) with such a Peace.
