N footh I know not why I am fo fad,
It wearies me, you fay it wearies you;
But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
What fluffe its made of, whereof it is borne,
I am to learne: and fuch a want-wit fadnes makes of mee.

That I have much adoe to know my felfe.

Salarino. Your minde is tolling on the Ocean, There where your Argolies with portlie fayle Like Signiors and rich Burgars on the flood, Or as it were the Pageants of the sea, Doe over-peere the petty traffiquers That curfie to them do them reuerence As they flie by them with theyr wouen wings. Salanio. Beleeue mee sir, had I such venture forth, The better part of my affections would Be with my hopes abroade. I should be still Plucking the graffe to know where fits the wind. Piring in Maps for ports, and peers and rodes: And eucry object that might make me feare Mis-fortune to my ventures, out of doubt Would make me fad. Salar. My wind cooling my broth, vould blow me to an ague when I thought vohat harme a winde too great might doe at fea. I should not see the sandie howre-glasse runne But I should thinke of shallowes and of states, And see my wealthy Andrew docks in sand Enter Portia with her wayting woman Nerrilla.

Portia. By my troth Nerrissa, my little body is awearie of this great world.

Ner. You would be sweet Madam, if your miseries were in the fame aboundance as your good fortunes are: and yet for ought I fee, they are as ficke that furfeite with too much, as they that starue with nothing; it is no meane happines therfore to be seated in the meane, superfluitie comes sooner by white haires, but competencie liues longer.

Portia. Good fentences, and well pronounc'd.

Ner. They would be better if well followed.

Portia. If to do were as easie as to know what were good to do, Chappels had beene Churches, and poore mens cottages Princes Pallaces, it is a good divine that followes his owne instructions, I can easier teach twentie what were good to be done, then to be one of the twentie to follow mine owne teaching: the braine may deuise lawes for the blood, but a hote temper leapes ore a colde decree, such a hare is madnes the youth, to skippe ore the meshes of good countaile the cripple; but this reasoning is not in the fashion to choose mee a husband, ô mee the word choose, I may neyther choose who I would, nor refuse who I dislike, so is the will of a lyuing daughter curbd by the will of a deade father: is it not harde Nerrissa, Nerrissa, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none.

Ner. Your Father was euer vertuous, and holy men at theyr death haue good inspirations, therefore the lottrie that he hath demised in these three chests of gold, silver, and leade, whereof who chooses his meaning chooses you, will no doubt neuer be chosen by any rightlie, but one who you shall rightly loue: But what warmth is there in your affection towardes any of these Princelie futers that are already come?

Por. I pray thee ouer-name them, and as thou namest them, I will describe them, and according to my description leuell at my affection.

Ner. First there is the Neopolitane Prince.

Por. I thats a colt indeede, for he doth nothing but talke of his horse, & he makes it a great appropriation to his owne good parts that he can shoo him himselfe: I am much afeard my Ladie his mother plaid falle with a Smyth.

Ner. Than is there the Countie Palentine.

Por. Hee doth nothing but frowne (as who should say, & you will not have me, choose, he heares merry tales and smiles not, I feare hee will prooue the weeping Phylosopher when hee growes old, beeing so full of vnmannerly sadnes in his youth.) I had rather be married to a deaths head with a bone in his mouth, then to eyther of these: God defend me from these two.

Ner. How fay you by the French Lord, Mounsier Le Boune? Por. God made him, and therefore let him passe for a man, in truth I knowe it is a finne to be a mocker, but liee, why hee hath a horse better then the Neopolitans, a better bad habite of frowning then the Count Palentine, he is every man in no man, if a Traffell fing, he falls straight a capring, he will fence with his owne shadow. If I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands: if hee would despise me, I would forgive him, for if he love me to madnes, I shall never requite him,

Ner. What say you then to Fauconbridge, the young Barron of England?

Por. You know I say nothing to him, for hee understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latine, French, nor Italian, & you will come into the Court and fweare that I have a poore pennie-В.

Nerrisa. What thinke you of the Scottish Lorde his neighbour?

Portia. That hee hath a neyghbourlie charitie in him, for hee borrowed a boxe of the eare of the Englishman, and swore hee would pay him againe when he was able: I think the Frenchman became his furetie, and feald under for another.

Ner. How like you the young Germaine, the Duke of Saxonies nephew?

Por. Very vildlie in the morning when hee is fober, and most vildly in the afternoone when he is drunke: when he is best, he is a little worse then a man, & when he is worst he is little better then a beast, and the worst fall that euer fell, I hope I shall make shift to goe without him.

Ner. Yfhee shoulde offer to choose, and choose the right Casket, you should refuse to performe your Fathers will, if you should refuse to accept him.

Portia. Therefore for feare of the worst, I pray thee set a deepe glaffe of Reynishe vvine on the contrarie Casket, for if the deuill be within, and that temptation without, I know hee will choose it. I will doe any thing Nerrissa ere I will be married to a spunge.

Fathers imposition, depending on the Caskets.

The comicall Historie of Battha. Madam, I goe with all convenient speede.

Portia Come on Nerrissa, I have worke in hand
That you yet know not of; weele see our husbands before they thinke of vs?

Nerrissa. Shall they fee vs?

Portia. They shall Nerrisa: but in such a habite, that they shall thinke we are accomplished with that we lacke; Ile hold thee any wager when we are both accoutered like young men, ile proue the prettier fellow of the two, and weare my dagger with the brauer grace, and speake betweene the change of man and boy, with a reede voyce, and turne two minfing steps into a manly stride; and speake of frayes like a fine bragging youth: and tell quaint lyes how honorable Ladies fought my loue, which I denying, they fell sicke and dyed. I could not doe withall: then ile repent, and wish for all that, that I had not killd them; And twenty of these punie lies ile tell, that men shall sweare I have discontinued schoole aboue a twelue-moneth: I have within my minde a thouland raw tricks of thefe bragging lacks, which I will practife.

Nerriff. Why, shall we turne to men?

Portia. Fie, what a question's that, if thou wert nere a lewd interpreter:
But come, ile tell thee all my my whole deuice when I am in my coach, which stayes for vs at the Parke gate; and therefore hast away, for we must measure twenty miles to day

Peffica. That were a kind of baftard hope in deede, so the sinner of my mother should be visited upon me.	16
Clowne. Truly then I feare you are damnd both by father and mother: thus when I shun Scilla your father, I fall into Caribdis your mother; well, you are gone both wayes.	20
Iessica. I shall be sau'd by my husband, he hath made me a Chri-
