LIFE AND
RICHARD THE SECOND.

With new Additions of the Parliament Scene, and the Deposing of King Richard.

As it hath beene acted by the Kings Majesties
Servants, at the Globe.

By William Shakespeare.

The Life and Death of King Richard the second.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter King Richard, John a Gaunt, with other Nobles, and Attendants.

King Richard

Ld John of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaster,
Hast thou according to thy oath and band,
Brought hither Henry Hereford, thy bold son?
Here to make good, the boysterous late appeale
Which then our leasure would not let vs heare,
Against the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Mowbray?

Gaunt. I haue my Liege.

King. Tell me moreover, hast thou sounded him,
If he appeale the Duke on ancient malice,
Or worthily as a good subiect should,
On some knowne ground of treachery in him.

Gaunt. As neere as I could sift him on that argument,
On some apparant danger seene in him,
Aym'd at your highnesse, no inueterate malice.

King. Then call them to our presence face to face,
And frowning brow to brow, our selues will heare
Th' accuser, and the accused, freely speake;
High stomack'd are they both, and full of ire
In rage, deafe as the sea; hasty as fire.

of Richard the second.

I.i.

These termes of treason, doubly downe his throat.
 Setting aside his high bloods royalty,
 And let him be no kinsman to my Liege,
 I doe defie him, and I spit at him,
 Call him a slanderous Coward, and a Villaine:
 Which to maintaine, I would allow him oddes,
 And meet him, were I tide to runne a foote,
 Even to the frozen ridges of the Alpes,
 Or any other ground inhabitable,
 Where ever English man durst set his foote.
 Meane time, let this defend my royalty,
 By all my hopes most falsely doth he lye.

68

Bul. Pale trembling Coward, there I throw my gage,
 Disclaiming here the kindred of the King,
 And lay aside my high bloods royalty,
 Which feare, not reverence makes me to execept,
 If guilty dread have left thee so much strength,
 As to take up mine honours pawne, then stoope,
 By that, and all therights of Knighthood else,
 Will I make good against thee arme to arme,
 What I have spoken, or thou canst devise.

76

Mow. I take it up, and by that sword I sweare,
 Which gently layd my Knighthood on my shoulder,
 Ile answer thee in any faire degree,
 Or Chivalrous designe of Knightly tryall:
 And when I mount, alive may I not light,
 If I be traytor, or unjustly fight.

King. What doth our Cosin lay to Mowbrayes charge?
 It must be great that can inherite us,
 So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Bul. Looke what I sayd my life shall prove it true,
 That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand Nobles,
 In name of lendings for your highnesse Souldiers,
 The which he hath detain'd for lewd employments,
 Like a false Traytor, and iniurious Villaine.
 Besides I say, and will in battell prove,
 Or here or elsewhere to the furthest Verge
 That ever was survey'd by English eye,

The Life and Death

† That all the treasons of these eightene yeares
 36 Complotted and contrived in this Land,
 Fetcht from false Mowbray their first head and spring.
 Further I say and further will maintaine
 Vpon his bad life, to make all this good,
 100 That he did plot the Duke of Glosters death,
 Suggest his soone beleewing adversaries,
 And consequently like a Traytor Coward,
 Sluc'd out his innocent soule through streames of blood:
 104 Which blood, like sacrificing Abels cryes,
 (Even from the tonguelesse cavernes of the earth)

To me for Iustice, and rough chastisement:
 And by the glorious worth of my descent,
 108 This arme shall doe it, or this life be spent

King. How high a pitch his resolution soares;
Thomas of Norfolk, what sayest thou to this?

112 Mow. Oh let my soveraigne turne away his face,
 And bid his eares a little while be deafe,
 Till I have told this slander of his blood,
 How God and good men hate so fowle a lyer.

King. Mowbray, impartiall are our eyes and eares,

† 116 Were he our brother, nay, our Kingdomes heire,

† As he is but our fathers brothers sonne;

Now by my Scepters awe, I make a vow,
 Such neighbour-neereneesse to our sacred blood,

120 Should nothing priviledge him, nor partialize

† The unstooping firmeneesse of our upright soule.

He is our subiect (Mowbray) so art thou,

Free speech and fearelesse, I to thee allow.

124 Mow. Then Bullingbrookes as low as to thy heart,

Through the false passage of thy throat; thoulyest:

Three parts of that receipt I had for Callice,

Disburst I to his Highnesse souldiers:

128 The other part reserv'd I by consent,

For that my soveraigne Liege was in my debt,

Vpon remainder of a deare account,

Since last I went to France to fetch his Queene:

132 Now swallow downe that Iye-For Glosters death,

of Richard the second.

Li.

I flew him not ; but (to mine owne disgrace)
Neglected my sworne duty in that case :
For you my Noble Lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my foe,
Once I did lay an ambush for your life,
A trespasse that doth vex my grieved soule:
But ere I last receiv'd the Sacrament,
I did confesse it, and exactly begg'd
Your Graces pardon, and I hope I had it.
This is my fault: as for the rest appeal'd,
It issues from the rancour of a villaine,
A recreant, and most degenerate Traytor,
Which in my selfe I boldly will defend,
And enterchangeably hurle downe my gage,
Vpon this overweening Traitors foot,
To prove my selfe a loyall Gentleman,
Even in the best blood chamber'd in his bosome.
In haste whereof most heartily I pray
Your Highnesse to assigne our tryall day.

King. Wrath kindled Genlemen be rul'd by me:

Let's purge this choller without letting blood:

This we prescribe, though no Physition.

Deepe malice makes too deepe incision.

Forget, forgive, conclude, and be agreed,

Our Doctors say, this is no time to bleed.

Good Vncle, let this end where it begun,

Wee'l calme the Duke of Norfolke, you your sonne.

Gaunt. To be a make-peace shall become my age,
Throw downe (my sonne) the Duke of Norfolkes gage.

King. And Norfolke, throw downe his.

Gaunt. When Harry when? Obedience bids,
Obedience bids, I should not bid agen.

King. Norfolke, throw downe, we bid; there is no boote.

Mow. My selfe I throw (dread Sovereigne) at thy foot,
My life thou shalt command, but not my shame,
The one my duty owes, but my faire name
Despight of death that lives upon my grave
To darke dishonours use, thou shalt not have.

I am

Li.

The Life and Death

I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffel'd here,
 Pierc'd to the soule with slander's venom'd speare:
 The which no Balme can cure, but his heart blood
 Which breath'd this poyson.

King. Rage must be withstood :

Give me his gage: Lyons make Leopards tame.

Mow. Yea, but not change his spots: take but my shame,

And I resigne my gage. My deare, deare Lord,

The purest treasure mortall times afford,

Is spotlesse reputation : that away,

Men are but gilded loame, or painted clay.

A jewell in a ten-times barr'd up Chest,

Is a bold spirit in a loyall brest.

Mine honour is my life ; both grow in one :

Take honour from me, and my life is done.

Then (deare my Liege) mine honour let me try,

In that I live, and for that will I dye.

King. Cofin throw downe your gage,

Doe you begin.

Bul. Oh heaven defend my soule from such foule sinne.

Shall I seeme Crest-falne in my fathers fight,

Or with pale beggar-seare impeach my height

Before this out-dar'd dastard? Ere my tongue,

Shall wound mine honour with such feeble wrong ;

Or sound so base a parle : my teeth shall tear

The slavish motive of recanting feare,

And spit it bleeding in this high disgrace,

Where shame doth harbour, even in Mowbrayes face.

Exit Gaunt.

King. We were not borne to sue, but to command,

Which since we cannot doe to make you friends,

Be ready, (as your lives shall answer it)

At Cowntree, upon Saint Lamberts day :

There shall your Swords and Lances arbitrate

The swelling difference of your setled hate :

Since we cannot atone you, you shall see

Iustice designe the Victors Chivalry.

Lord Marshall, command our Officers at Armes,

Be

of Richard the second.

Be ready to direct these home, Alarmes.

Exeunt:

Li.

Scena Secunda.

I.ii.

Enter Gaunt, and Dutchesse of Glocester.

Gaunt. Alas, the part I had in Glosters blood,
Doth more solícite me than your exclames,
To stirre against the butchers of his life.
But since correction lyeth in those hands
Which made the fault that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrell to the will of Heauen,
Who when they see the houres ripe on earth,
Will raigne hot vengeance on offenders heads.

Dut. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spurre?
Hath love in thy old blood no liuing fire?

Edwards seven sonnes (whereof thy selfe art one)
Where are seven vialles of his sacred blood.

Or seuen faire branches springing from one roote:

Some of those seuen are dried by natures course,
Some of those branches by the destinies cut:

But Thomas, my deare Lord, my life, my Gloster,
One Viall full of Edwards sacred blood,

One flourishing branch of his most Royall roote

Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;

Is hackt downe, and his summerleaves all vaded

By Enuies hand, and Murders bloody Axe.

Ah Gaunt? His blood was thine, that bed, that wombe,

That mettall, that selfe-mould that fashion'd thee,

Made him a man: and though thou liu'st and breath'st;

Yet art thou slaine in him: thou dost consent

In some large measure to thy Fathers death,

In that thou see'st thy wretched brother dy,

Who was the modell of thy Fathers life,

Call it not patience (Gaunt) it is despaire,

In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd

The Life and Death

Thou shew'st the naked pathway to thy life,
 Teaching sterne murder how to butcher thee:
 That which in meane men we intitle patience
 Is pale cold cowardise in noble breasts :
 What shall I say, to safegard thine owne life,
 The best way is to venge my Glosters death.

Gaunt. Heavens is the quarrell : for Heavens substitute
 His Deputy annoynted in his sight,
 Hath caus'd his death , the which if wrongfully
 Let heaven revenge : for I may neuer lift
 An angry arme against his Minister.

Dut. Where then (alas) may I complaine my selfe?

Gan. To heaven the widdowes Champion to defence.

Dut. Why then I will : farewell old Gaunt.
 Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold
 Our Cosin Hereford , and sell Mowbray fight:
 O sit my husbands wrongs on Herefords speare,
 That it may enter butcher Mowbrayes breast :
 Or if misfortune misse the first carriere,
 Be Mowbrayes sinnes so heavy in his bosome,
 That they may breake his foaming coursers backe,
 And throw the Rider headlong in the Lists,
 A Caytiff recreant to my Cosin Hereford.
 Farewell old Gaunt, thy sometimes brothers wife
 With her companion Greefe, must end her life.

Gau. Sister fare well ; I must to Couentry,
 As much good stay with thee , as go with me.

Dut. Yet one word more Greefe, boundeth where it
 Not with the empty hollownesse, but weight. (falls,
 I take my leaue before I haue begun,
 For sorrow ends not : when it seemeth done.
 Commend me to my brother Edward Yorke.
 Loe, this is all : nay yet depart not so,
 Though this be all , do nor so quickly goe,
 I shall remember more. Bid him, Oh, what ?
 With all good speed at Pleshie visite me.
 Alacke, and what shall good old Yorke there see
 But empty lodgings, and unfurnish'd walles,

of Richard the second.

Lii

Vn-peopl'd Offices, untroden stones?
And what heare there for welcome, but my groanes?
Therefore commend me, let him not come there,
To seeke out sorrow, that dwels every where:
Desolate, desolate will I hence and dye,
The last leave of thee, takes my weeping eye. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Liii

Enter Marshall, and Aumerle.

Mar. My L. Aumerle, is Harry Hereford arriv'd?

Aum. Yea, at all poynts, and longs to enter in,

Mar. The Duke of Norfolk, sprightly and bold,
Stayes but the summons of the Appellants Trumpet.

Au. Why then the Champions, are prepar'd, and stay
For nothing but his Maiesties approach.

Flourish.

Enter King, Gaunt, Bushy, Bagot, Greene, and others: Then Mowbray in Armor, and Harrold.

Rich. Marshall, demand of yonder Champion
The cause of his arrivall here in Armes,
Aske him his name, and orderly proceed
To sweare him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. In Gods Name, and the Kings, say who thou art,
And why thou com'st, thus Knightly clad in Armes?
Against what man thou com'st, and what's thy quarrell.
Speake truly, on thy Knighthood, and thine oath,
As so defend thee heaven, and thy valour.

Mow. My name is Tho. Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk,
Who hither come engaged by my oath
(Which heaven defend a Knight should violate)
Both to defend my loyalty and truth,
To God, my King, and his succeeding issue,
Against the Duke of Hereford, that appeales me.

The Life and Death

And by the grace of God and this mine arme,
 To proue him (in defending of my selfe)
 A traytor to my God, my King, and me,
 And as I truely fight, defend me heaven.

Tucket. Enter Hereford, and Harold.

Rich. Marshall: aske yonder Knight in Armes,
 Both who he is, and why he commeth hither,
 Thus placed in habiliments of warre:
 And formally according to our Law
 Depose him in the iustice of his cause. (ther

Mar. What isthy name, and wherefore com'st thou hi-
 Before King Richard in his Royall Lists?
 Against whom com'st thou? and what's thy quarrell?
 Speake like a true Knight, so defend thee Heaven.

Bul. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
 Am I: who ready here doe stand in Armes,
 To prove by heavens grace, and my bodies valour,
 In Lists, on Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolk,
 That he's a Traytor foule and dangerous,
 To God of heaven, King Richard, and to me,
 And as I truely fight, defend me heaven.

Mar. On paine of death, no person be so bold,
 Or daring hardy as to touch the Lists,
 Except the Marshall, and such Officers
 Appoynted to direct these faire designes.

Bul. Lord Marshall, let me kisse my Soueraignes hand,
 And bow my knee before his Maiesty:
 For Mowbray and my selfe are like two men,
 That vow a long and weary pilgrimage,
 Then let vs take a ceremonious leaue
 And loving farewell of our severall friends.

Mar. The Appealant in all duty greets your Highnes,
 And craves to kisse your hand, and take his leave.

Rich. We will descend, and sold him in our armes.
 Cousin of Hereford as thy cause is iust,
 So be thy fortune in this royall fight:
 Farewell, my blood, which if to day thou shead,

Lament

of Richard the second.

Lament we may, but not reuenge thee dead.

Bul. Oh let no Noble eye prophane a teare
For me, if I be goar'd with Mowbrayes speare:
As confident, as is the Falcons flight
Against a Bird, doe I with Mowbray fight.
My loving Lord, I take my leave of you,
Of you (my Noble Cosin) Lord Aumerle ;
Not sicke, although I have to doe with death,
But lusty, young, and chearely drawing breath.
Loe, as at English Feasts, so I regret
The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet.
Oh thou the earthy author of my blood,
Whose youthfull spirit in me regenerate,
Doth with a two-fold vigor lift me up
To reach at victory above my head,
Adde prooffe unto mine Armour with thy prayers,
And with thy blessings Steele my Lances-poynt;
That it may enter Mowbrayes waxen Coate,
And furbish new the name of John a Gaunt,
Even in the lusty haviour of his sonne.

Gaunt. Heaven in thy good cause make thee prosp'rous,
Be swift like lightning in the execution,
And let thy blowes doubly redoubled,
Fall like amazing thunder on the Caske
Of thy amaz'd pernicious enemy.

Rouze up thy youthfull blood, be valiant and live.

Bul. Mine innocence, and S. George to thrive.

Mow. How ever Heaven or fortune cast my lot,
There lives, or dyes, true to King Richards Throne,
Aloyall, iust, and upright Gentleman:
Never did Captiue with a freer heart,
Cast off his chaines of bondage, and embrace
His golden uncontroll'd enfranchisement,
More than my dancing soule doth celebrate
This Feast of Battle, with mine adversary.
Most mighty Liege, and my companion Peeres,
Take from my mouth, the wish of happy yeares,
As gentle, and as jocond, as to jest,

Goe I to fight : Truth, hath a quiet breast.

Rich. Farewell, my Lord, securely I espie
Vertue with valour, couched in thine eye :
Order the tryall Marshall, and begin.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby
Receive thy Lance, and heaven defend thy right.

Bul. Strong as a Towre in hope, I cry, Amen.

104

Mar. Goe beare this Lance to Thomas D. of Norfolk,

108

1 Har. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Stands here for God, his Sovereigne, and himsele,
On paine to be found false and recreant,
To prove the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray,
A Traytor to his God, his King, and him,
And dares him to set forwards to the fight.

2. Har. Here standeth Tho. Mowbray Duke of Norfolk
On paine to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himsele, and to approve
Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his Sovereigne, and to him disloyall:
Couragiously, and with a freedesire,
Attending but the signall to begin. A charge sounded.

116

Mar. Sound Trumpets, and set forward Combatants.
Stay, the King hath throwne his Warder downe.

Rich. Let them lay by their Helmets and their Speares,
And both returne backe to their Chaires againe :
Withdraw with us, and let the Trumpets sound,
While we returne these Dukes, what we decree,
A long flourish.

Draw neere and list
What with our councell we have done.
For that our Kingdomes earth should not be soyled
With that deare blood which it hath fostered,
And for our eyes doe hate the dire aspect
Of civill wounds plough'd up with neyghbours swords,
Which so rouz'd up with boystrous untun'd drummes,
With harsh resounding Trumpets dreadfull bray,
And grating shocke of wrathfull yron Armes,
Might from our quiet Confines fright faire Peace,

128

of Richard the second.

I.iii.

And make us wade even in our kindreds blood :
Therefore, we banish you our Territories.
You Cousin Hereford, upon paine of death,
Till twice five Summers have enrich'd our fields,
Shall not regret our faire Dominions,
But tread the stranger paths of banishment.

Bul. Your will be done : this must my comfort be,
That Sunne that warmes you here shall shine on me :
And those his golden beames to you here lent,
Shall poynt on me, and gilde my banishment.

Rich. Norfolk: for thee remaines a heavier doome.
Which I with some unwillingnesse pronounce,
The slye slow houres shall not determinate
The datelesse limit of thy deare exile :
The hopelesse word, of never to returne,
Breathe against thee, upon paine of life.

Mow. A heavy sentence my most Soveraigne Liege,
And all unlook'd for from your Highnesse mouth :
A deerer merit, not so deepe a maime,
As to be cast forth in the common ayre
Have I deserved at your Highnesse hands.
The Language I have learn'd these forty yeares
(My native English) now I must forgoe,
And now my tongues use is to me no more,
Then an unstringed Vyoll, or a Harpe,
Or like a cunning Instrument cas'd up,
Or being open, put into his hands
That knowes no touch to tune the harmony.
Within my mouth you have engaol'd my tongue
Doubly purcullist with my teeth and lips,
And dull, unfeeling, barren ignorance,
Is made my gaoler to attend on me:
I am too old to fawne upon a Nurse,
To farre in yeares to be a pupill now :
What is thy sentence then, but speechlesse death,
Which robs my tongue from breatheing native breath ?

Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate,
After our sentence, plaining comes too late-

(Our part therein we banish with your selves)

You never shall (so helpe you Truth and Heaven)

And I from heaven banish'd, as from hence :
But what thou art, heaven, thou, and I doe know,

Save backe to England, all the worlds my way.

Rich. Vncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy grieved heart: thy sad aspect,

Pluck'd foure away: sixe frozen Winters spent,
Returne with welcome home from banishment.

Fourë lagging Winters, and fourë wanton Springs
End in a word, such is the breath of Kings.

Gann. I thanke my Liege, that in regard of me
He shortens fourë yeares of my sonnes exile :
But little vantage shall I reape thereby.
For ere these sixe yeares that he hath to spend
Can change the Moones, and bring their times about,
My oyle-dride Lampe, and time-bewasted light
Shall be extinct with age, and endlesse night :
My inch of Taper, will be burnt, and done,
And blindfold death, not let me see my sonne.

222

Rich. Why Vncle, thou hast many yeares to live.

Gann. But not a minute (King) that thou canst give ;
Shorten my dayes thou canst with sudden sorrow,
And plucke nights from me, but not lend a morrow :
Thou canst helpe time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage :
Thy word is currant with him, for my death,
But dead, thy kingdome cannot buy my breath.

Rich. Thy sonne is banish'd upon good aduice
Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gave,
Why at our iustice seem'st thou thento lowre?

Gann. Things sweet to tast, prove in digestion sowre :
You urg'd me as a Iudge, but I had rather
You would have bid me argue like a Father.
Alas, I look'd when some of you should say,
I was too strict to make mine owne away :
But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue,
Against my will, to do my selfe this wrong.

Rich. Cofin farewell: and Vncle bid him so:
Six yeares we banish him, and he shall go.

From where you do remaine, let paper show.

The precious Iewell of thy home returne.

267 Bul. Oh who can hold a fire in his hand
294

By thinking on the frosty Caucasus ?

Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,

By bare imagination of a feast ?

298 Or wallow naked in December snow

By thinking on phantasticke Summers heate ?

Oh no, the apprehension of the good

Giues but the greater feeling to the worse :

302 Fell sorrowes tooth, doth ever rankle more

Then when it bites, but lanceth not the sore.

Gau. Come, come (my sonne) Ile bring thee on thy way
Had I thy youth, and cause, I would not stay.

306 Bul. Then Englands ground farewell; sweet soyle adieu,

My Mother, and my Nurse, which beares me yet :

Where ere I wander, boast of this I can,

Though banish'd, yet a true-borne Englishman.

Liv.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter King, Aumerle, Greene, and Bago.

Rich. We did observe. Cofin Aumerle,
How farre brought you high Hereford on his way.

Aum-

of Richard the second.

Aum. I brought high Hereford (if you call him so)
But to the next high way, and there I left him.

Rich. And say, what store of parting teares were shed?

Aum. Faith none by me: except the Northeast wind
Which then blew bitterly against our face,
Awak'd the sleepey rheume, and so by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a teare.

Rich. What said our Cofin when you parted with him?

An. Farewell: & for my heart disdain'd that my tongue
Should so prophane the word, that taught me craft
To counterfeite oppression of such griefe,
That word seem'd buried in my sorrowes grave.
Marry, would the word farewell, had lengthen'd houres,
And added yeeres to his short banishment,
He should have had a volume of Farewels,
But since it would not, he had none of me.

Rich. He is our Cofin (Cofin) but 'tis doubt,
When time shall call him home from banishment,
Whether our kinsman come to see his friends,
Our selfe, and Bushy, Bagot here and Greene
Observ'd his Courtship to the common people:
How he did seeme to dive into their hearts,
With humble, and familiar courtesie,
What reverence he did throw away on slaves;
Wooing poore Craftsmen, with the craft of smiles,
And patient under-bearing of his Fortune,
As 'twere to banish their affects with him.
Off goes his bonnet to an Oyfter-wench,
A brace of Dray-men bid God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee,
With thanks my Countrimen, my Loving friends,
As were our England in reuersion his,
And he our subjects next degree in hope.

Gr. VVell, he is gone, and with him goe these thoughts
Now for the Rebels, which stand out in Ireland,
Expedient mannage must be made my Liege
Ere further leysure, yeeld the further meanes
For their aduantage, and your highnesse losse.

Liv.The Life and Death

Rich. We will our selfe in person to this warre,
 And for our Coffers, with too great a Court,
 And liberall Largeesse, are growne somewhat light,
 We are enforc'd to farme our royall Realme,
 The reueneue whereof shall furnish us
 For our affaires in hand : if they come short.
 Our substitutes at home shall have Blancke-charters :
 Whereto, when they shall know what men are rich,
 They shall subscribe them for large summes of Gold,
 And send them after to supply our wants :
 For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter Bushy.

Bushy, what newes ?

Bu. Old John a Gaunt is very sicke my Lord,
 Sodainely taken, and hath sent post haste
 To entreat your Maiesty to visite him.

Rich. Where lyes he ?

Bu. At Ely-house.

Rich. Now put it (heaven) in his Physitians mind,
 To helpe him to his grave immediately :
 The linning of his coffers shall make Coates
 To decke our Souldiers for these Irish warres.
 Come Gentlemen, let's all go visit him :
 Pray heaven we may make haste, and come too late, Exit.

IIi.Actus Secundus, Scæna Prima.

Enter Gaunt feake, with the Duke of Torke.

Gau. Will the King come, that I may breath my last
 In wholsome counsell to his unstayd youth ?

Tor. Vex not your selfe, nor strive not with your breath
 For all in vaine comes counsell to his eare

Gau. Oh but (they say) the tongues of dying men
 Inforce attention, like deepe harmony;

Where

of Richard the second.

Where words are scarce, they are seldome spent in vaine,
 For they breath truth, that breath their words in paine.
 He that no more must say, is listen'd more
 Then they whom youth and ease have taught to glose,
 More are mens ends mark'd, then their lives before,
 The setting Sunne, and musicke is the close
 As the last taste of sweetes, is sweetest last,
 Writ in remembrance, more then things long past :
 Though Richard my lives counsell would not heare,
 My deaths sad tale, may yet un-deafe his eare.

Tor. No, it is stopt with other flatt'ring sounds
 As prayes of his state: then there are found
 Lacivious Meeters, to whose venome sound
 The open eares of youth doth alwaies listen.
 Report of fashions in proud Italy,
 Whose manners still our tardy apish Nation
 Limpes after in base imitation.

Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,
 So it be new, there's no respect how vile,
 That is not quickly buzz'd into their eares ?
 That all too late comes counsell to be heard,
 Where will doth mutiny with wits regard :
 Direct not him, whose way himselfe will chose,
 Tis breath thou lackst, and that breath wilt thou loose

Gauw. Me thinkes I am a Prophet new inspir'd,
 And thus expiring doe foretell of him,
 His rash fierce blaze of Ryot cannot last,
 For violent fires soone burne out themselves ;
 Small shoures last long, but sodaine stormes are short,
 He tyres betimes, that spurs too fast betimes ;
 With eager feeding food doth choake the feeder ;
 Light vanity, insatiate cormorant,
 Consuming meanes soone preyes upon it selfe.
 This royall Throne of Kings, this Sceptred Isle,
 This earth of Majesty, this seate of Mars,
 This other Eden, demy Paradise,
 This Fortres built by nature for her selfe,
 Against infection, and the hand of warre:

The Life and Death

This happy breed of men, this little world,
 This precious stone set in the silver Sea,
 VVhich serves it in the office of a wall,
 48 Or as a Moate defensiuē to a house,
 Against the enuy of lesse happier Lands,
 This blessed plot, this Earth this Realme, this England,
 This Nurse, this teeming wombe of Royall Kings,
 52 Fear'd by their breed, and famous for their birth,
 Renowned for their deeds, as farre from home,
 For Christian service and true Chivalry,
 As is the sepulcher in stubborne Iury
 56 Of the worlds ransome, blessed Maries sonne.
 This Land of such deare soules, this deare deare Land,
 Deare for her reputation through the world,
 Is now Leas'd out (I dye pronouncing it)
 60 Like to a Tenement, or pelting Farme.
 England bound in with the triumphant Sea,
 VVhose rocky shore beates backe the envious sledge
 Of wauy Neptune, is now bound in with shame,
 64 VVith Inky blottes; and rotten Parchment bonds.
 That England that was wont to conquer others,
 Hath made a shamefull conquest of it selfe.
 † Ah, would the scandall vanish with my life,
 68 How happy then were my ensuing death ?

Enter King, Queene, Annerle, Bushy, Greene, Bagot, Ros, and Willoughby.

Tor. The King is come, deale mildly with his youth,
 For young hot Coalts, being rag'd, doe rage the more.

Qu. How fares our noble Vncle, Lancaster ?

72 Ri. VVhat comfort man ? How ist with aged Gaunt ?

Ga. Oh how that name befits my composition :

Old Gaunt indeed, and gaunt in being old :
 76 VVithin me grieve hath kept a teadious fast,
 And who abstaines from meate, that is not gaunt :
 For sleeping England long time have I watcht
 VVatching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt :
 The pleasure that some Fathers feed upon,

of Richard the second.

Is my strict fast, I meane my Childrens lookes,
 And therein fasting, hast thou made me gaunt :
 Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
 VVhose hollow wombe inherits nought but bones.

Rich. Can sicke men play so nicely with their names ?

Gau. No, misery makes sport to mocke it selfe :
 Since thou dost seeke to kill my name in me,
 I mocke my name (great King) to flatter thee.

Ric. Should dying men flatter those that live ?

Gau. No, no, man living flatter those that dye.

Ric. Thou now a dying, sayst thou flatter st me.

Gau. O no, thou dyest, though I the sicker be.

Rich. I am in health I breathe, I see thee ill.

Gau. Now he that made me, knowes I see thee ill :

Ill in my selfe to see, and in thee, seeing ill,
 Thy death-bed is no lesser then the Land,
 VVherein thou lyest in reputation sicke,
 And thou too carelesse patient as thou art.
 Commit'st thy annoynted body to the cure
 Of those Physitions, that first wounded thee :
 A thousand flatterers sit within thy Crowne,
 VVhose compasse is no bigger then thy hand,
 And yet engaged in so small a Verge,
 The waste is no whit lesser then thy Land,
 Oh had thy Grandfir with a Prophets eye,
 Seene how his sonnes sonne, should destroy his sonnes,
 From forth thy reach he would have layd thy shame,
 Deposing thee before thou wert posselt,
 VVhich art posselt now to depose thy selfe,
 Why (Cofin) were thou Regent of the world,
 It were a shame to let this Land by lease :
 But for thy world enioying but this Land,
 Is it not more then shame, to shame it so ?
 Landlord of England art thou, and not King :
 Thy state of Law, is bondslave to the Law,
 And ———

Rich. And thou, a lunaticke leane-witted foole,
 Presuming on an Agues priviledge.

Dar' st

The Life and Death

Dar'st with thy frozen admonition
 Make pale our cheek, chafing the Royall blood
 With fury, from his native residence?
 Now by my Seates right Royall Maiesty,
 Wert thou not brother to great Edwards sonne,
 This tongue that runnes so roundly in thy head,
 Should runne thy head from thy unreverent shoulders.

Gau. Oh spare me not, my brother Edwards sonne,
 For that I was his father Edwards sonne :
 That blood already (like the Pellican)
 Thou hast tapt out, and drunkenly carows'd.
 My brother Glocester, plaine well meaning soule,
 (Whom faire befall in heaven 'mongst happy soules)
 May be a president, and witnesse good,
 That thou respect'st not spilling Edwards blood :
 Ioyne with the present sicknesse that I have,
 And thy unkindnesse be like crooked age,
 To crop at once a too-long wither'd flowre.
 Live in thy shame, but dye not shame with thee,
 These words hereafter, thy tormentors be.
 Convey me to my bed, then to my grave.

Love they to live, that love and honour have. Exit,

Rich. And let them dye, that age and sullens have,
 For both hast thou, and both become the grave.

Tor. I doe beseech your Maiesty impute his words
 To wayward ficklinesse, and age in him :
 He loves you on my life, and holds you deare
 As Harry Duke of Hereford, were he here.

Rich. Right, you say true : as Herefords love, so his ;
 As theirs, so mine : and all be as it is.

Enter Northumberland.

Nor. My Liege, old Gauunt commends him to your Maiesty.

Rich. What sayes he ?

Nor. Nay nothing, all is sayd :
 His tongue is now a stringlesse instrument.
 Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent.

Tor.

of Richard the second.

IIi

Yor. Be Yorke the next, that must be bankrupt so,
Though death be poore, it ends a mortall wo.

Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he,
His time is spent, our pilgrimage must be :
So much for that. Now for our Irish warres,
We must supplant those rough rug-headed Kernes,
Which live like venom, where no venom else
But onely they have priviledge to live.

And for these great affaires do aske some charge
Towards our assistance, we doe seize to us
The plate, coyne, and revennews, and moveables,
Whereof our Vncle Gaunt did stand posselt,

Yor. How long shall I be patient ? Oh how long
Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong ?

Not Glosters death, nor Herefords banishment,
Nor Gaunts rebukes, nor Englands private wrongs,
Nor the prevention of poore Bullingbrooke,
About his marriage, nor my owne disgrace

168

Have ever made me lowre my patient cheeke,
Or bend one wrinkle on my soveraignes face :
I am the last of noble Edwards sonnes,
Of whom thy father Prince of Wales was first :

In warres was never Lyon rag'd more fierce :
In peace, was never gentle Lambe more mild,
Then was that young and Princely Gentleman :
His face thou hast, for even so look'd he

Accomplish'd with the number of thy howers :
But when he frown'd, it was against the French,
And not against his friends : his noble hand
Did win what he did spend : and spent not that
Which his triumphant fathers hand had won :
His hands were guilty of no kindreds blood,

But bloody with the enemies of his kinne :
Oh Richard, Yorke is too farre gone with griefe,
Or else he never would compare betweene.

184

Rich. Why Vncle,
What's the matter ?

Yor. Oh my Liege, pardon me if you please, if not

D

I

The Life and Death

188 I pleas'd not to be pardon'd, am content with all:
 Seeke you to seize, and gripe into your hands
 The Royalties and Rightes of banish'd Hereford?
 192 Is not Gaunt dead? and doth not Hereford live?
 Was not Gaunt just? and is not Harry true?
 Did not the one deserve to have an heyre?
 Is not his heyre a well-deserving sonne?
 Take Hereford's rights away, and take from time
 196 His Charters, and his custom rie rights:
 Let not to morrow then insue to day,
 Be not thy selfe. For how art thou a King
 But by faire sequence and succession?
 200 Now afore God, God forbid I say true,
 If you doe wrongfully seize Hereford's right,
 Call in his Letters Patents that he hath
 By his Atturneyes generall, to sue
 204 His Livery, and deny his offer'd homage,
 You plucke a thousand dangers on your head,
 You loose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
 And pricke my tender patience to those thoughts
 208 Which honor and allegiance cannot thinke.

Ric. Thinke what you will: we seile into our hands,
 His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.

212 Yor. Ile not be by the while: My Leige farewell,
 What will ensue hercof, there's none can tell,
 But by bad courses may be understood.

That their events can never fall out good.

Exit.

Rich. Goe Busbie to the Earle of Wiltshire streight,
 216 Bid him repaire to us to Ely House,

To see this businesse: to morrow next

We will for Ireland, and 'tis time, I trow:

And we create in absence of our selfe

220 Our Vnckle Yorke, Lord Governer of England:

For he is just, and alwayes lov'd us well.

Come on our Queene, to morrow must we part,

Be merry, for our time of stay is short.

Flourish.

Manet North Willoughby, and Ross.

224 Nor. Well Lords, the Duke of Lancaster is dead.

Ross.

of Richard the second.

Ross. And living too, for now his forme is Duke.

Will. Barely in title, not in revennew.

Nor. Richly in both, if justice had her right.

Ross. My heart is great : but it must breake with silence
Eer't be disburthen'd, with a liberall tongue.

Nor. Nay speake thy mind & let him ne'r speake more
That speakes thy words againe to doe thee harme.

Wil. Tends that thou'dst speake to th' D. of Hereford ?
If it be so, out with it boldly man :

Quicke is mine eare to heare of good towards him.

Ross. No good at all that I can doe for him,

Vnlesse you call it good to pity him,

Bereft and gelded of his patrimony.

Nor. Now afore heaven, 'ts shame such wrongs are borne,

In him a royall Prince, and many moe
Of noble blood in this declining Land ;
The King is not himselfe, but basely led
By flatterers, and what they will informe
Meerely in hate 'gainst any of us all :
That will the King severely prosecute :

'Gainst us, our lives, our children, and our heires.

Ross. The Commons hath he pill'd with grievous taxes
And quite lost their hearts : the Nobles hath he fin'd
For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.

Wil. And daily new exactions are devis'd,
As blankes, benevolences, and I wot not what :
But what o' Gods name doth become of this ?

Nor. Warres hath not wasted it, for warr'd he hath not,
But basely yeelded upon comprimize,
That which his Ancestors atchieu'd with blowes :
More hath he spent in peace, then they in warres.

Ross. The Earle of Wiltshire hath the Realme in farme.

Wil. The King's growne bankrupt like a broken man.

Nor. Reproach, and desolution hangeth over him.

Ross. He hath not money for these Irish warres :
(His burthenous taxations notwithstanding)
But by the robbing of the banish'd Duke.

The Life and Death

Nor. His noble Kinsman, most degenerate King:

But Lords, we heare this fearefull tempest sing

264 Yet seeke no shelter to avoyd the storme:

We see the winde sit sore upon our sailes,

And yet we strike not, but securely perish,

268 Ros. We see the uery wracke that we must suffer,

And unavoyded is the danger now

For suffering so the causes of our wracke.

† Nor. Not so; even through the hollow eyes of death,

272 I spie life peering: but I dare not say,

How neere the tidings of our comfort is.

Wil. Nay, let us share thy thoughts, as thou dost ours.

Ros. Be confident to speake Northumberland,

276 We three, are but thy selfe, and speaking so,

Thy words are but as thoughts, therefore be bold.

Nor. Then thus: I have from Port le Blan

A Bay in Britaine, receiv'd intelligence,

† That Harry Duke of Hereford, Raynald Lord Cobham,

281 That late broke from the Duke of Exeter,

His brother Archbishop, late of Canterbury,

284 Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Rainston,

Sir John Norbery, Sir Robert Waterton, and Francis Quaint,

All these well furnish'd by the Duke of Brittaine,

With eight tall ships, three thousand men of warre

288 Are making hither with all due expedience,

And shortly meane to touch our Northerne shore:

Perhaps they had ere this, but that they stay

The first departing of the King for Ireland.

If then we shall shake off our slavish yoake,

† 292 Iumpe out our drooping Countries broken wing,

Redeeme from broken pawne, the blemish'd Crowne,

† Wipe off the dust that hides the Scepters gilt,

And make high Majesty look like it selfe,

296 Away with me in poste to Ravenspurgh,

But if you faint, as fearing to doe so,

Stay and be secret and my selfe will goe.

Ros. To horse, to horse, urge doubts to them that feare.

300 Wil. Hold out my horse, and I will first be there, Exen.

Scena

of Richard the second.

II.ii.

Scena Sæcunda.

Enter Queene, Busby, and Bagor.

Busb. Madam, your Majesty is too much sad,
You promis'd when you parted with the King,
To lay aside selfe-harming heaviness,
And entertaine a cheerefull disposition.

Q. To please the King, I did: to please my selfe
I cannot doe it: yet I know no cause
Why I should welcome such a guest as griefe,
Save bidding farewell to so sweet a guest
As my sweet Richard, yet againe me thinkes
Some unborne sorrow ripe in fortunes wombe
Is comming towards me, and my inward soule
With nothing trembles, at something it grieves,
More than with parting from my Lord the King.

Busb. Each substance of a griefe had twenty shadows
Which shewes like griefe it selfe, but is not so:
For sorrowes eye glazed with blinding teares,
Divides one thing intire, to many objects
Like perspectives, which rightly gaz'd upon
Shew nothing but confusion, ey'd awry,
Distinguisht forme: so your sweet Maiesty
Looking awry upon your Lords departure,
Find shapes of griefe, more then himselfe to waile,
Which look'd on as it is, is nought but shadowes
Of what it is not, then thrice-gracious Queene,
More then your Lords departure weepe not, more's not
Or if it be, tis with false sorrowes eye, (scene;
Which for things true, weepe things imaginary.

Q. It may be so, but yet my inward soule
Perswades me it is otherwise how ere it be,
I cannot but be sad: so heavy sad.

The Life and Death

As though onthinking on no thought I thinke,
Makes me with heavy nothing faint and shrinke.

Bush. 'Tis nothing but conceit (my gracious Lady.)

Qu. 'Tis nothing lesse : conceit is still deriu'd
From some fore father greefe, mine is not so,

For nothing hath begot my something grieffe,

Orsomething, hath the nothing that I grieve,

'Tis in reversion that I doe possesse,

But what it is, that is not yet knowne, what

I cannot name, 'tis namelesse woe I wot. Enter Green.

Gree. Heaven save your Majesty, and well met Gentle.

I hope the King is not yet shipt for Ireland. (men;

Qu. Why hop'st thou so? 'Tis better hope he is:

For his designs crave haste, good hope,

Then wherefore dost thou hope he is not shipt?

Gree. That he our hope, might have retyr'd his power,

And driven into despaire an enemies hope,

Who strongly hath set footing in this Land,

The banish'd Bullingbrooke repeales himselfe,

And with up-lifted Armes is safe arriu'd

At Rauenspurg.

Qu. Now God in heaven forbid.

Gree. O Maddam 'tis too true: and that is worse,

The L. Northumberland, his young sonne, Henry Percy,

The Lords of Rosse, Beaumont, and Willoughby.

With all their powerfull friends are fled to him.

Bush. Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland

And the rest of the revolted faction, Traytors?

Gree. We have : whereupon the Earle of Worcester

Hath broke his staffe, resign'd his Stewardship, (brook)

And all the household seruants fled with him to Bullem.

Qu. So Greene, thou art the Midwife of my woe,

And Bullingbrooke my sorrowes dismall heyre :

Now hath my soule brought forth her prodigy,

And I a gasping new delivered mother,

Haue woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow ioyn'd.

Bush. Despaire not Madam.

Qu. Who shall hinder me?

I will

of Richard the second.

I will despaire, and be at enmity
With couzening hope; he is a flatterer,
A Parasite, a keeper backe of death,
Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,
Which false hopes linger in extremity.

Enter Yorke.

Gree. Here comes the Duke of Yorke.

Qu. With signes of warre about his aged necke,
Oh full of carefull businesse are his lookes:
Vncle, for heavens sake speake comfortable words.

Yor. Comfort's in Heaven, and we are on the earth.
Where nothing lives but crosses, care, and griefe:
Your husband he is gone to save farre off,
Whilst others come to make his loofe at home:
Here am I left to underprop his Land,
Who weake with age, cannot support my selfe:
Now comes his sicke houre that his surfeit made,
Now shall he try his friends that flattered him.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. My Lord, your some was gone before I came.

Yor. He was: why so, goe all which way it will:
The Nobles they are fled, the Commons they are cold,
And will I feare revolt on Herefords side.
Sirra, get thee to Plashy to my sister Gloster,
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound,
Hold, take my Ring.

Ser. My Lord, I had forgot
To tell your Lordship, to day I came by, and call'd there,
But I shall grieve you to report the rest.

Yor. What is't knave?

Ser. An houre before I came, the Dutcheffe di'de.

To. Heaven for his mercy, what a tide of woes
Come rushing on this wofull Land at once?
I know not what to doe: I would to heaven
(So my vntruth hath not provok'd him to it)
The King had cut off my head with my brothers.
What, are there postes dispatcht for Ireland?
How shall we doe for money for these warres?

Come sifter (Cofin I would fay) pray pardon me.
Goe fellow, get thee home, provide fome Carts,
And bring away the Armour that is there.

108

Gentlemen, will you muster men?

If I know how, or which way to order these affaires
Thus disorderly thrust into my hands.

Never beleeeve me. Both are my kinsmen,
Th'one is my Sovereaigne, whom both my oath
† And duty bids defend: the other againe

Is my kinsman, whom the King hath wrong'd,
Whom conscience, and my kindred bids to right,

Well, somewhat we must doe: Come Cofin,
Ile dispose of you, Gentlemen, goe muster up your men,
And meet me presently at Barkley Castle:

† I should to Plashy too, but time will not permit,
All is uneven, and every thing is left at six and seven. Ex.

Bush. The wind sits faire for newes to goe to Ireland,
But none returns: for us to levy power
Proportionable to th'enemy, is all impossible.

128

Gree. Besides our neereneesse to the King in love,
Is neere the hate of those love not the King.

Bag. And that's the wavering Commons, for their love
Lies in their purses, and who so empties them,
By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

Because we have beene ever neere the King.

The Earle of Wiltshire is already there.

Bush. Thither will I with you, for little office

Will the hatefull Commons performe for us,

Except like Curres, to teare us all in pieces:

140

Will you goe along with us?

Farewell, if hearts presages be not vaine,
We three here part, that nev'r shall meete againe.

Bul. How farr is it my Lord to Barkley now?

Nor. Beleeve me noble Lord,

I am a stranger here in Glostershire.

These high wide hills, and rough uneven wayes;
Drawes out our miles, and makes them wearysome:

And yet our faire discourse hath beene as Sugar,
Making the hard way sweet and delectable:

But I bethinke me, what a weary way
From Ravenspurgh to Cottshold will be found,

In Rosse and Willoughby, wanting your company

Which I protest hath very much beguild

The tediousnesse, and proesse of my travell;

But theirs is sweetned with the hope to have

The present benefit that I possesse:

And hope to joy, is little lesse in joy,

Then hope enjoy'd: By this, the weary Lords

Shall make their way seeme short, as mine hath done,

By sight of what I have, your Noble company,

Bul. Of much lesse valew is my company

Then your good words: but who comes here?

Enter H. Percy.

Sent from my brother Worcester: whence soever,

Harry how fares your Vncle?

24

Percy. I had thought, my Lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

Nor. Why is he not with the Queene?

Percy. No, my good Lord, he hath forsooke the Court, Broken his Staffe of Office, and disperst The Household of the King.

Nor. What was his reason?

He was not so resolv'd, when we last spake together.

32

Percy. Because your Lordship was proclaimed Traytor. But he, my Lord, is gone to Ravenspurgh, To offer service to the Duke of Hereford, And sent me over by Barkely, to discover What power the Duke of Yorke had levied there, Then with direction to repaire to Ravenspurgh.

36

Nor. Have you forgot the Duke of Hereford (Boy?)

Percy. No, my good Lord; for that is not forgot Which ne're I did remember: to my knowledge, I never in my life did looke on him.

40

Nor. Then learne to know him now: this is the Duke.

44

Percy. My gracious Lord, I tender you my service, Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young, Which elder dayes shall ripen, and confirme To more approved service and desert.

48

Bul I thanke thee gentle Percy, and be sure I count my selfe in nothing else so happy, As in a soule remembring my good friends: And as my fortune ripens with my love, It shall be still thy true loves recompence, My heart this covenant makes, my hand thus seales it.

52

Nor. How farre is it to Barkley? and what stirre Keepes good old Torke there, with his men of warre?

56

Percy. There stands the Castle, by yond tuft of Trees, Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard, And in it are the Lords of Torke, Barkely, and Seymor, None else of Name, and noble estimate.

Enter Rosse, and Willoughby.

Nor. Here comes the Lords of Rosse, and Willoughby, Bloody

of Richard the second.

Bloody with spurring, fiery red with hast.

Bul. Welcome my Lords, I wot your love pursues
A banisht Traytor; all my Treasury
Is yet but unfelt thanks, which more enrich'd,
Shall be your love, and labours recompence.

Rof. Your presence makes vs rich, most Noble Lord.

Wil. And farre surmounts our labour to attaine it,

Bul. Evermore thanks, th' Exchequer of the poore,
Which till my infant-fortune comes to yeares,
Stands for my bounty : but who comes here?

Enter Barkely.

Nor. It is my Lord of Barkely as I guesse.

Bark. My Lord of Hereford, my message is to you.

Bul. My Lord, my answer is to Lancaster,
And I am come to seeke that name in England,
And I must find that Title in your Towne,
Before I make reply to ought you say.

Bark. Mistake me not, my Lord, 'tis not my meaning
To raze one title of your honour out.

To you, my Lord, I come (what Lord you will)

From the most glorious of this Land,

The Duke of York, to know what pricks you on

To take advantage of the absent time,

And fright our native peace with selfe-borne Armes.

Enter Yorke.

Bul. I shall not need transport my words by you,
Here comes his Grace in person. My Noble Vncle.

Yor. Shew me thy humble Heart, and not thy Knee,
Whose duty is deceivable and false,

Bul. My gracious Vncle.

Yor. Tut, tut, Grace me no Grace, nor Vncle me,

I am no Traytors Vncle; and that word Grace,

In an ungracious mouth, is but prophane.

Why haue these banish'd, and forbidden Legges,

Dar'd once to touch the dust of Englands Ground?

But more then why, why haue they dar'd to march

So many miles upon her peacefull Bosome,

Frighting her pale fac'd Villages with Warre,

II.iii.

The Life and Death

And ostentation of despised Armes?
 96 Com't thou because th' anoynted King is hence?
 Why foolish Boy, the King is left behind,
 And in my loyall Bosome lyes his power.
 Were I but now the Lord of such hot youth,
 100 As when braue Gaunt thy Father, and thy selfe,
 Rescued the blacke Prince, that young Mars of men,
 From forth the Rankes of many thousand French:
 Oh then, how quickly should this Arme of mine,
 † 104 Now prisoner to the Plashy, chastise thee,
 And minister correction to thy fault.

Bul. My gracious Vncle, let me know my fault,
 On what condition stands it, and wherein?

108 Tor. Even in condition of the worst degree,
 In grosse Rebellion, and detested Treason:
 Thou art a banish'd man, and here art come
 Before th' expiration of thy time,
 112 In braving Armes against thy Sovereigne.

Bul. As I was banish'd, I was banish'd Hereford,
 But as a I come, I come for Lancaster.

116 And noble Vncle, I beseech your Grace
 Looke on my wrongs with an indifferent eye:
 You are my Father, for me thinkes in you
 I see old Gaunt alive. Oh then my Father,
 Will you permit, that I shall stand condemn'd
 120 A wandring Vagabond, my Rights and Royalties
 Pluckt from my armes perforce, and given away
 To upstart unthrifts? Wherefore was I borne?

124 If that my Cousin King, be King of England,
 It must be granted, I am Duke of Lancaster.
 You have a sonne, Aumerle, my Noble Kinsman,
 Had you first died, and he bin thus trod downe,
 He should have found his Vncle Gaunt a father,
 128 To rowze his wrongs, and chase them to the bay.

I am denyde to sue my Livery here,
 And yet my Letters Pattens give me leave;
 My fathers goods are all distraynd, and sold
 † 132 And these, and all amisse imployd.

What

of Richard the second.

What would you have me doe? I am a subiect,
 And challenge Law, Attorneyes are denyd me,
 And therefore personally I lay my claime
 To mine inheritance of free Descent.

Nor. The Noble Duke hath beene too much abus'd.

Ref. It stands your Grace upon to doe him right,
Wil. Base men by his endowments are made great.

Tor. My Lords of England, let me tell you this,
 I have had feeling of my Cofins wrongs,
 And labour'd all I could to doe him right :
 But in this kind, to come in braving Armes,
 Be his owne Carver, and cut out his way,
 To find out Right with wrongs, it may not be ;
 And you that doe abeit him in this kind,
 Cherish Rebellion, and are Rebels all.

Tor. The Noble Duke hath sworne his comming is
 But for his owne, and for the right of that,
 We all have strongly sworne to give him ayd,
 And let him nev'r see joy, that breaks that oath.

Tor. Well, well, I see the issue of these Armes,
 I cannot mend it, I must needs confesse,
 Because my power is weake, and all ill left :
 But if I could, by him that gave me life,
 I would attach you all, and make you stoope
 Vnto the Sovereigne mercy of the King.
 But since I cannot, be it knowne to you,
 I doe remaine as Neuter. So fare you well,
 Vnlesse you please to enter in the Castle,
 And there repose you for this Night.

Bul. An offer Vncle, that we will accept:
 But we must winne your Grace to goe with us
 To Bristol Castle, which they say is held
 By Bushie, Bagot, and their Complices,
 The Caterpillers of the Commonwealth,
 Which I have sworne to weede, and pluke away.

Tor. It may be I will goe with you, but yet ile pawse,
 For I am loth to breake our Countreies Lawes :
 Not Friends, nor Foes, to me welcome you are,

II. iii.

The Life and Death

Things past redresse, are now with me past care. Exeunt

II. iv.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Salisbury and a Captaine.

Capt. My Lord of Salisbury, we have stayd ten dayes,
And hardly kept our Countrymen together,
And yet we heare no tidings from the King:
Therefore we will disperse our selves: farewell.

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welchman,
The King reposeth all his confidence in thee.

Capt. Tis thought the King is dead, we will not stay;
The Bay-trees in our Country all are wither'd,
The Meteors fright the fixed Starres of Heaven;
The pale-fac'd Moone lookes bloody on the Earth,
And leane-lookt Prophets whisper fearefull change;
Rich men looke sad, and Ruffians dance and leape,
The one in feare, to lose what they enjoy,
The other to enjoy by Rage, and Warre:
These signes fore-run the death of Kings.
Farewell, our Countrymen are gone and fled,
As well assur'd Richard their King is dead. Exit.

Sal. Ah Richard, with eyes of heauy mind,
I see thy Glory, like a shooting Starre,
Fall to the bale Earth, from the Firmament:
Thy Sunne sets weeping in the lowly West.
Witnessing stormes to come, woe, and unrest:
Thy friends are fled, to waite upon thy foes,
And crossely to thy good, all fortune goes. Exit.

Actus

of Richard the second.

III.i.

Actus Tertius, Scæna Prima.

Enter Bullingbrooke, Torke, Northumberland, Rosse, Percy, Willoughby; with Bushy and Greene, prisoners.

Bul. Bring forth these men :

Bushy and Greene, I will not vex your soules,
(Since presently your soules must part your bodies)
VVith two much urging your pernicious liues,
For twere no Charity : yet to wash your blood
From off my hands, here in the view of men,
I will unfold some causes of your deaths,
You have mis-led a Prince, a royall King,
A happy Gentleman in Blood, and Lineaments,
By you unhappied, and disfigur'd cleane:
You have in manner with your sinfull houres
Made a Divorce betwixt his Queene and him,
Broke the Possession of a Royall Bed,
And stayn'd the beauty of a faire Queenes Cheekes,
VVith teares drawne from her eyes, with your foule
My selfe a Prince, by fortune of my birth, (wrongs.
Neere to the King in Blood, and neere in love,
Till you did make him mis-interpret me,
Have stoopt my necke under your iniuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in forraigne Clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment;
VVhile you have fed upon my Seignories,
Dis-park'd my Parkes, and sell'd my Forrest woods;
From mine owne windowes torne my Household Coat,
Raz'd out my Imprese leaving me no signe,
Save mens opinions, and my living blood,
To shew the world I am a Gentleman.
This, and much more, much more then twicte all this,

Con-

III.i*The Life and Death*

Condemnes you to the death: see them delivered over
To execution, and the hand of death.

Bush. More welcome is the stroke of death to me,
Then Bullingbrooke to England.

Gree. My comfort is, that Heaven will take onr soules,
And plague iniustice with the paines of hell.

Bul. My Lord Northumberland, see them dispatch'd:

Vncle, you say the Queene is at your House,
For Heavens sake, fairely let her be intreated,
Tell her, I send to her my kind commends,

Take speciall care my greetings be deliver'd,

Tor. A Gentleman of mine, I have dispatch'd
VVith Letters of your loue to her at large.

Bul. Thankes gentle Vncle: come Lords away,

To fight with Gendours, and his Complices;

A while to worke, and after holliday. Exunt

III.ii*Scæna Secunda.*

Drums, Flourish, and Colours.

Enter Richard, Aumerle, Carlile, and Souldiers.

Rich. Barkloughly Castle call you this at hand?

Au. Yea, my Lord: how brooks your Grace the ayre,
After your late tossing on the breaking Seas?

Rich. Needs must I like it well, I weepe for ioy
To stand upon my Kingdome once againe.

Deare Earth, I doe salute thee with my hand,
Though Rebels wound thee with their Horses hooves:

As a long parted Mother with her Child,
Playes fondly with her teares, and smiles in meeting,

So weeping, smiling, greet I thee the Earth,

And doe thee favour with my Royall hands,

Feed not thy Soveraignes Foe, my gentle Earth,
Nor with thy sweetes comfort his ravenous sence:

But

of Richard the second.

III. ii.

But let thy Spiders that sucke up thy venome,
And heavy-gated Toade lye in their way;
Doing annoyance to the treacherous feete,
Which with usurping steps doe trample thee.
Yield stinging Nettles to mine Enemies;
And when they from thy bosome plucke a Flower,
Guard it I prethee with a lurking adder,
Whose doubletongue may with a mortall touch
Throw death upon thy Soveraignes Enemies.
Mocke not my fencelesse Conjuratiō: Lords;
This earth shall have a feeling, and these Stones
Prove armed Souldiers, ere her native King
Shall falter under fowle Rebellious Armes.

Car. Feare not my Lord, that power that made you King
Hath power to keepe you King, in spight of all.

Aum. He meanes, my Lord, that we are too remisse,
Whilest Bullingbrooke through their security,
Growes strong and great, in substance and in friends.

Rich. Discomfortable Cofin, knowest thou not,
That when the searching Eye of Heaven is hid
Behinde the Globe, that lights the lower world,
Then theeves and Robbers raunge abroad unseene,
In Murders and in out-rage bloody here:
But when from under this Terrestriall Ball
He fires the proud tops of the Easterne Pines,
And darts his Lightning through ev'ry guilty hole,
Then Murders, Treasons, and detested sinnes
(The Cloake of Night being pluckt from off their backs)
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves.
So when this Thiefe, this Traytor Bullingbrooke,
Who all this while hath reuell'd in the Night,
Shall see us rising in our Throne, the East,
His Treasons will sit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of day;
But selfe-affrighted, tremble at his sinne.
Not all the water in the rough rude Sea
Can wash the Balme from an anoynted King;
The breath of worldly men cannot depose

III.ii*The Life and Death*

The Deputy elected by the Lord :
 For every man that Bullingbrooke hath prest,
 To lift shrewd Steele against our Golden Crowne,
 Heaven for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
 A glorious Angell: then if Angels fight,
 Weake men must fall, for Heaven still guards the right.

Enter Salisbury.

Welcome my Lord, how farre off lyes your power ?

Salisb. Nor neere, nor farther off, my gracious Lord,
 Then this weake arme; discomfort guides my tongue.
 And bids me speake of nothing but despaire:

One day to late, I feare (my Noble Lord)

Hath clouded all my happy dayes on Earth :

Oh call backe Yester day, bid time returne,

And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting men :

To day, to day, unhappie day too late

Orethrowes thy loyes, Friends, Fortune, and thy State.

For all the VVelch-men hearing thou wert dead,

Are gone to Bullingbrooke, disperst, and fled.

Aum. Comfort my Liege, why lookes your Grace so pale ?

Rich. But now the blood of twentie thousand Men

Did triumph in my face, and they are fled,

And till so much blood thither come againe,

Have I not reason to looke pale, and dead ?

All soules that will be safe, flye from my side,

Fortime hath set a blot upon my pride.

Aum. Comfort my Liege, remember who you are.

Rich. I had forgot my selfe. Am I not King ?

Awake thou sluggard Majesty, thou sleepest :

Is not the Kings Name forty thousand Names ?

Arme, arme my Name : a puny subiect strikes

At thy great glory, Looke not to the ground,

Ye Favorites of a King : are we not high ?

High be our thoughts : I know my Vncle Torke

Hath Power enough to serve our turne,

But who comes here ?

Enter Scroope.

Scroope. More health and happinesse betide my Liege,

Then

of Richard the second.

III.ii.

Then can my care-tun'd tongue deliver him.

Rich. Mine eare is open, and my heart prepar'd:
The worst is worldly losse, thou canst unfold:
Say, Is my Kingdome lost? why 'twas my Care:
And what losse is it to be rid of Care?

Strives Bullingbrooke to be as great as we?
Greater he shall not be: If he serve God,
Wee'l serve him too; and be his Fellow so.
Revolt our subjects? That we cannot mend,
They breake their Faith to God as well as us:
Cry Woe, Destruction, Ruine, Losse, Decay,
The worst is Death, and death will have his day.

Scroope Glad am I, that your Highnesse is so arm'd
To beare the tidings of Calamity.

Like an unseasonable stormy day,
Which make the silver Rivers drowne their Shores,
As if the world were all dissolv'd to teares:
So high, above his Limits, swells the Rage
Of Bullingbrooke, covering your fearefull Land
With hard bright Steele, and hearts harder then Steele:
White Beares have arm'd their thin and hairelesse Scalps
Against thy Majesty, and boyes with womens voyces,
Strive to speake bigge, and clap their female joynts
In stiffe unwieldy Armes: against thy Crowne
Thy very Beadsmen learne to bend their bowes
Of double fatall Eugh: against thy state
Yea Distaffe-VVomen manage rusty Bills:
Against thy Seat both young and old rebell,
And all goes worse then I have power to tell.

Rich. Too well, too well thou tell'st a Tale so ill.
VVhere is the Earle of Wiltshire? where is Bagot?
VVhat is become of Bushy? where is Greene?
That they have let the dangerous Enemy
Measure our Confinnes with such peacefull steps?
If we prevaile, their hands shall pay for it.
I warrant they haue made peace with Bullingbrooke.

Scroope. Peace have they made with him indeede (my Lord.)

III.ii.

The Life and Death

Rich, Oh Villaines, Vipers, damn'd without redemption,
 Dogs, easily won to fawne on any man,
 Snakes in my heart blood warm'd, that sting my heart,
 132 Three Iudasses, each one thrice worse then Indas,
 Would they make peace? terrible Hell make warre,
 Vpon their spotted soules for this Offence.

Scroope, Sweet love (I see) changing his property,
 136 Turnes to the sowrest, and most deadly hate:
 Againe uncurse their soules: their peace is made
 With Heads, and not with hands: those whom you curse
 Have felt the worst of deaths destroying hand,
 140 And lye full low, grav'd in the hollow ground.

Ann. Is Busby, Greene, and the Earle of Wiltshire dead
Scroope. Yea, all of them at Bristow lost their heads.

Ann. Where is the Duke my Father with his Power:

144 Rich. No matter where, of comfort no man speake:
 Let's talke of Graves, of Wormes, and Epitaphs,
 Make dust our Paper, and with Rainy Eyes
 Write sorrow in the bosome of the Earth.

148 Let's chuse Executors, and talke of Wills:
 And yet not so; for what can we bequeath,
 Save our depos'd bodies to the ground?

Our Lands, our lives, and all are Bullingbrookes,
 152 And nothing can we call our owne, but Death,
 And that small modell of the barren Earth,
 Which serves as paste, and cover to our bones:

For Heavens sake let us sit upon the ground,
 156 And tell sad stories of the death of Kings.
 How some have beene depos'd, some slaine in warre,
 Some haunted by the Ghosts they have depos'd,
 Some poyson'd by their Wives, some sleeping kill'd,
 160 All murder'd. For within the hollow Crowne
 That rounds the mortall temples of a King,
 Keepest Death his Court, and there the Antique sits
 Scoffing his state, and grinning at his pompe,
 164 Allowing him a breath, a little Scene,

To Monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with lookes,
 Infusing him with selfe and vaine conceit,

As

of Richard the second.

III.ii.

As if this Flesh, which walls about our Life,
 VVere Brasse impregnable: and humor'd thus,
 Comes at the last, and with a little Pinne
 Boares through his Castle VValls, and farewell King
 Cover your heads, and mocke not flesh and, blood
 VVith solemne Reverence: throw away Respect,
 Tradition, forme, and Ceremonious duty,
 For you have but mistooke me all this while:
 I live with bread like you, feelee VVant,
 Taste Griefe, need Friends: subjected thus,
 How can you say to me, I am a King?

172

176

Carl. My Lord; wise men ne're waile their present woes,
 But presently prevent the wayes to waile:
 To feare the Foe, since feare oppresseth strength,
 Gives in your weakenesse, strength unto your Foe;
 Feare, and be slaine, no worse can come to fight,
 And fight and die, is death destroying death.
 VVhere fearing dying, payes death servile breath.

183

Aum. My Father hath a Power, enquire of him,
 And learne to make a Body of a Limbe.

Rich. Thou chid'st me well: proud Bullingbrocke I come
 To change blowes with thee, for our day of Doome;
 This Ague-fit of feare is over-blowne,
 An easie taske it is to win our owne.

188

Say Scroope, where lies our Vncle with his Power?
 Speake sweetly man, although thy lookes be sowre.

192

Scroope. Men iudge by the complexion of the skie
 The state and inclination of the day,
 So may you by my dull and heavy Eye:

196

My tongue hath but a heavier Tale to say:
 I play the torturer, by small and small
 To lengthen out the worst, that must be spoken,
 Your Vncle Torke is joynd with Bullingbrooke,
 And all your Northerne Castles yeilded up,
 And all your southerne Gentlemen in Armes
 Vpon his Faction.

200

Rich. Thou hast sayd enough.
 Beshrew thee Cofin, which didst lead me forth

204

III.ii*The Life and Death*

Of that sweet way I was in, to dispaire :
 What say you now? what comfort have we now?
 By heaven Ile hate him everlastingly,
 That bids me be of comfort any more.
 Goe to Flint Castle, there Ile pine away,
 A King, Woes slave, shall Kingly Woe obey:
 That power I have, discharge, and let 'em goe
 To eare the Land, that hath some hope to grow
 For I have none. Let no man speake againe
 To alter this, for counsaile is but vaine.

Aum. My Liege, one word.

Rich. He does me double wrong,
 That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue,
 Discharge my followers: let them hence away,
 From Richards Night, to Bullingbrookes faire Day. Exeu.

III.iii*Scæna Tertia.*

Enter with Drum and Colour's, Bullingbrooke, Torke, Northumberland, Attendants.

Bul. So that by this intelligence we learne
 The Welchmen are dispers'd, and Salisbury
 Is gone to meete the King, who lately landed
 With some few private friends, upon this Coast.

Nor. The news is very faire and good my Lord,
Richard not farre from hence, hath hid his head.

Tor. It would besee me the Lord Northumberland,
 To say King Richard: a lacke the heavy day,
 When such a sacred King should hide his head.

Nor. Your Grace mistakes: onely to be brieft,
 Left I this Title out.

Tor. The time hath beene,
 Would you have beene so brieft with him, he would
 Have beene so brieft with you, to shorten you,
 For taking so the head; your whole heads length.

Bul.

of Richard the second.

III. iii.

Bul. Mistake not (Vncle) farther than you should.
For. Take not (good Cofin) farther than you should,
 Least you mistake, the heavens are ore your head.
Bul. I know it (Vncle) and oppose not my selfe
 Against their will-But who comes here?

Enter Percy.

Welcome Harry : what, will not this Castle yeeld ?

Per. The Castle royally is mann'd, my Lord,
 Against thy entrance.

Bul. Royally ? Why, it contaynes no King ?

Per. Yes (my good Lord)

It doth containe a King: King Richard lyes
 Within the limits of yond Lime and Stone,
 And with him the Lord Aumerle, Lord Salisbury
 Sir Stephen Scroope, besides a Cleargy man
 Of holy reverence : who, I cannot learne.

Nor. Oh, belike it is the Bishop of Carlile.

Bul. Noble Lord,

Goe to the rude Ribs of that ancient Castle,
 Through Brazen Trumpet send the breath of Parle
 Into his ruin'd Bares, and thus deliver :
Henry Bullingbrooke upon his knees doth kisse
 King Richards hand, and sends allegiance
 And true fayth of heart to his royall Person: hither come
 Even at his feete, to lay my armes and power
 Provided, that my Banishment repeal'd,
 And Lands restor'd againe, be freely granted :
 If not, ile use th'advantage of my power,
 And lay the summers dust with showers of blood
 Rayn'd from the wounds of slaughter'd Englishmen;
 The which, how farre off from the mind of Bullingbrooke
 It is, such Crimson Tempest should bedrench
 The fresh greene Lap of faire King Richards Land
 My stooping duty tenderly shall shew.
 Goe signifie as much, while here we march
 Vpon the Grassie Carpet of this plaine
 Let's march without the noyse of threatning Drum,
 That from this Castels tatter'd Battelments

III.iii.The Life and Death

Our faire Appoyntments may be well perus'd
 Me thinkes King Richard and my selfe should meete.
 With no lesse terror then the Elements
 Of Fire and Water, when their thundering smoake
 At meeting teares the cloudy cheekes of Heaven:
 Be he the fire, Ile be the yeilding Water;
 The rage be his, while on the Earth I raine
 My Waters on the Earth, and not on him.
 March on, and marke King Richard how he lookes.

*Parle without, and answer within: then a Flourish.
 Enter on the Walls, Richard, Carlile, Aumerle, Scroop, Salisbury.*

See, see, King Richard doth himselfe appeare
 As doth the blushing discontented Sunne,
 From out the fiery Portall of the East.
 When he perceives the envious clouds are bent
 To dimme his glory, and to staine the tract
 Of his bright passage to the Occident.

Tor. Yet lookes he like a King: behold his Eye
 (As bright as is the Eagles) lightens forth
 Controlling Majesty: alacke, alacke, for woe,
 That any harme should staine so faire a show.

Rich. We are amaz'd, and thus long have we stood
 To watch the fearefull bending of thy Knee,
 Because we thought our selfe thy lawfull King:
 And if we be, how dare thy ioyns forget
 To pay the awfull duty of our presence?
 If we be not, shew us the hand of God,
 That hath dismis'd us from our Stewardship,
 For well we know no hand of blood and bone
 Can gripe the sacred handle of our Scepter,
 Vnlesse he doe prophane, steale or usurpe.
 And though you thinke, that all as you have done,
 Have torne their soules, by turning them from us,
 And we are barren, and bereft of friends:
 Yet know, my master, God Omnipotent,
 Is mustring in his Clouds, in our behalfe,
 Armies of Pestilence, and they shall strike

Your

of Richard the second.

Your Children yet unborne, and unbegot,
That list your Vassall hands against my head,
And threat the glory of my precious Crowne.
Tell Bullingbrooke, for yond me thinkes he is,
That every stride he makes upon my Land,
Is dangerous Treason: he is come to ope
The purple Testament of bleeding Warre;
But ere the Crowne he lookes for, live in peace,
Ten thousand bloody crownes of Mothers Sonnes
Shall ill become the flower of Englands face,
Change the complexion of her Maide-pale Peace
To Scarlet indignation, and bedew
Her pastors Grasse with faythfull English blood.

Nor. The King of Heaven forbid our Lord the King
Should so with civill and uncivill Armes
Be rusht upon: Thy thrice-noble Cousin,
Harry Bullingbrooke, doth humbly kisse thy hand,
And by the honourable Tombe he swears,
That stands upon your Royall Grandfathers Bones,
And by the royalties of both your bloods.
(Currents that spring from one most gracious head)
And by the buried hand of Warlike Gaunt,
And by the worth and honour of himselfe,
Comprizing all that may be sworne, or sayd,
His coming hither hath no farther scope,
Then for his Lineall Royalties, and to begge
Infranchisement-immediate on his knees:
Which on thy Royall party granted once,
His glittering Armes he will commend to rust,
His barbed Steeds to stables, and his heart
To faythfull service of your Maiesty:
This swears he as he is a Prince, is just,
And as I am a Gentleman I credit him.

Rich. Northumberland, say thus: The King returnes,
His Noble Cousin is right welcome hither,
And all the number of his faire demands
Shall be accomplish'd without contradiction:
With all the gracious utterance thou hast,

The Life and Death

Speake to his gentle hearing kind commend.
 VVe doe debase our selfe (Coffin) doe we not,
 128 To looke so poorely , and to speake so faire ?
 Shall we call backe Northumberland and send
 Defiance to the Traytor and so die ?

Aum. No, good my Lord, let's fight with gentle words,
 132 Till time lend friends, and friends their hopefull Swords.

Rich. Oh God, oh God, that ere this tongue of mine,
 That layd the sentence of dread Banishment
 On yond proud man, should take it of againe
 136 VVith words of sooth : O that I were as great
 As is my Griefe, or lesser than my Name,
 Or that I could forget what I have beene,
 Or not remember what I must be now :
 140 Swell'st thou proud heart ? Ile giue thee scope to beate,
 Since foes have scope to beate both thee and me.

Au. Northumberland comes backe from Bullingbrooke.

Rich. VVhat must the King doe now ? must he submit?
 144 The King shall doe it : Must he he depos'd ?
 The King shall be contented : Must he lose
 The Name of King ? o' Gods Name let it goe.
 Ile give my Iewels for a set of beades,
 148 My gorgeous Pallace, for a Hermitage,
 My gay Apparrell, for an Almes-mans Gowne,
 My figur'd Goblets, for a Dish of Wood,
 My Scepter for a Palmers walking Staffe,
 152 My Subjects, for a payre of carved Saints,
 And my large Kingdome, for a little Grave,
 A little little Grave, an obscure Grave.

Or Ile be buried in the Kings high-way,
 156 Some way of common Trade, where Subjects see
 May howrely trample on their Soveraignes Head :
 For on my heart they tread now, whilst I live ;
 And buried once, why not upon my Head ?

Aumerle, thou weep'st (my tender-hearted Coffin)
 160 VVe'll make foule Weather with despised Teares :
 Our sighs, and they, shall lodge the Summer Corne,
 And make a Dearth in this revolting Land.

of Richard the second.

III. iii.

Or shall we play the wantons, with our woes,
And make some pretty match with shedding teares?
As thus: to drop them still upon one place,
Till they have fretted us a paire of Graves,
VVithin the Earth: and therein layd, there lies
Two Kinsmen digg'd their Graves with weeping Eyes?
VVould not this ill, doe well? well, well, I see
Italke but idly, and you mocke at me.

Most mighty Prince, my Lord Northumberland,
VVhat sayes King Bullingbrooke? will his Majesty
Give Richard leave to live, till Richard die?

You make a legge and Bullingbrooke sayes I,

Nor. My Lord, in the base Court he doth attend
To speake with you, may it please you to come downe.

Rich. Downe, downe I come, like glist'ring Phaeton,
Wanting the manage of unruly Iades.

In the base Court? base Court where Kings grow base,
To come at Traytors calls, and doe them grace. (King,

In the base Court come downe: downe Court, downe
For Night-Owles shriek, where mounting Larks should

Bul. What sayes his Majesty? (sing.)

Nor. Sorrow and griefe of heart
Makes him speake fondly, like a franticke man:
Yet he is come.

Bul. Stand all apart,
And shew faire duty to his Maiesty.
My gracious Lord.

Rich. Faire Cofin,
You debase your Princely knee,
To make the base earth proud with kissing it.
Me rather had, my heart might feele your love,
Than my unpleas'd Eye see your courtesie.
Vp Cofin, up, your Heart is up, I know,
Thus high at least, although your knee below.

Bul. My gracious Lord, I come but for mine owne.

Rich. Your owne is yours, and I am yours, and all.

Bul. So farre be mine, (my most redoubted Lord,)
As my true service shall deserue your love.

III.iii.

The Life and Death

Rich. Well you deserv'd:
 They well deservue to have,
 That know the strong'st, and surest way to get,
 202 Vncle give me your hand: nay, dry your eyes,
 Teares shew their love but want their remedies.
 Cofin I am too young to be your Father,
 206 Though you are old enough to be my Heire.
 What you will have, Ile give, and willing too,
 For doe we must, what force will have us doe.
 Set on towards London:
 Cofin, is it so?

Bul. Yea, my good Lord.

Rich. Then I must not say no, Flourish, Exeunt.

III.iv.

Scæna Quinta.

Enter Queene and two Ladies.

Qu. What sport shall we devise here in this Garden,
 To drive away the heavy thought of Care?

La. Madam, we'll play at Bowles.

4 Qu. 'Twill make me thinke the world is full of Rubs,
 And that my fortune runnes against the Byas.

La. Madam, we'll Dance.

8 Qu. My legges can keepe no measure in Delight,
 When my poore heart no measure keeps in Griefe.
 Therefore no Dancing (Girle) some other sport.

La. Madam, we'll tell Tales.

Qu. Of sorrow, or of griefe?

La. Of eyther Madam.

12 Qu. Of neyther Girle.
 For if of ioy, being altogether wanting,
 It doth remember me the more of sorrow:
 Or if of griefe, being altogether had,
 16 It addes more sorrow to my want of ioy:
 For what I have, I need not to repeat;

And

of Richard the second.

And what I want, it bootes not to complaine.

La. Madam, Ile sing.

Qu. 'Tis well that thou hast cause ;

But thou should'st please me better, would'st thou weepe.

La. I could weepe, Madam, would it doe you good.

Qu. And I could sing, would weeping doe me good,
And never borrow any Teare of thee.

Enter a Gardiner, and two Servants.

But stay, heere come the Gardiners.

Let's step into the shadow of these Trees.

My wretchednesse, unto a Row of Pinnes,

They'll talke of state : for every one doth so,

Against a change, Woe is fore-runne with woe.

Gard. Goe binde thou up yond dangling Apricocks.

VVhich like unruly Children, make their Syre

Stoupe with oppression of their prodigall weight ;

Give some supportance to the bending twigges.

Goe thou, and like an Executioner

Cut off the heads of too fast growing sprays.

That looke too lofty in our Common-wealth:

All must be even, in our Governement.

You thus imploy'd, I will goe root away

The noysome weedes, that without profit sucke

The Soyles fertility from wholesome flowers.

Ser. Why should we, in the compasse of a Pale,

Keepe Law and Forme, and due Proportion,

Shewing as in a Modell our firme state ?

When our Sea-walled Garden, (the whole Land)

Is full of Weedes, her fairest Flowers choakt up,

Her Fruit-trees all unpruin'd, her Hedges ruin'd,

Her Knots disorder'd, and her wholesome Hearbes

Swarming with Caterpillers.

Gard. Hold thy peace.

He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd Spring,

Hath now himselfe met with the Fall of Lease.

The Weedes that his broad-spreading Leaves did shelter,

That seem'd, in eating him, to hold him up,

Are pull'd up, Root, and all, by Bullingbrooke ;

III.IV.

The Life and Death

I meane the Earle of Wiltshire, Busby, Greene,

Ser. What are they dead ?

Gard. They are,

And Bullingbrooke hath seiz'd the wastefull King.

What pittie is it, that he hath not trim'd

And drest his Land, as we this Garden, at time of yeare ;

And wound the Barke, the skin of our Fruite-trees,

Least being over-proud with Sap and Blood,

With too much riches it confound it selfe ?

Had he done so to great and growing men,

They might have liv'd to beare, and he to taste

Their fruits of duty. All superfluous branches

We lop away, that bearing boughes may live:

Had he done so, himselfe had borne the Crowne,

Which waste and idle houres, hath quite throwne downe.

Ser. VVhat thinke you the King shall be depos'd ?

Gard. Deprest he is already, and depos'd

'Tis doubted he will be. Letters came last night

To a deare friend of the Duke of Torke,

That tell blacke tidings.

Qu. Oh I am prest to death, through want of speaking:

Thou old Adams likenesse, set to dresse this Garden:

How dares thy harsh tongue sound this unpleasing

What Eve, what serpent hath suggested thee, (newes ?

To make a second fall of cursed man ?

Why do'st thou say King Richard is depos'd ?

Dar'st thou, (thou little better thing then earth)

Divine his downefall ? Say where, when, and how

Came'st thou by this ill tydings ? Speake thou wretch.

Gard. Pardon me Madam. Little joy have I

To breath these newes ; yet what I say, is true ;

King Richard, he is in the mighty hold

Of Bullingbrooke, their fortunes both are weigh'd :

In your Lords Scale, is nothing but himselfe,

And some few vanities, that make him light :

But in the Ballance of great Bullingbrooke,

Besides himselfe, are all the English Peeres,

And with that oddes he weighes King Richard downe.

Post

of Richard the second.

III.iv.

Post you to London, and you'll finde it so,
I speake no more, then every one doth know.

Qu. Nimble mischance, that art so light of foote,
Doth not thy Embassage belong to me?

And am I last that know it? Oh thou think'st

To serue me last, that I may longest keepe

Thy sorrow in my breast. Come Ladies goe,

To meet at London, London's King in woe.

What, was I borne to this? that my sad looke

Should grace the Triumph of great Bullingbrooke!

Gard'ner, for telling me this newes of woe.

I would the Plants thou graft'st may never grow. Exit.

Gard. Poore Queene, so that thy state might be no

I would my skill were subiect to thy curse: (worse,

Here did she drop a teare, here in this place

He set a Banke of Rew, (sowre Herbe of Grace:)

Rue, ev'n for ruth, here shortly shall be scene,

In the remembrance of a weeping Queene.

Exit.

Actus Quartus, Scæna Prima.

IV.i.

Enter as to the Parliament, Bullingbrooke, Aumerle, Northumberland, Percy, Fitz-Water, Surrey, Carlile, Abbot of Westminster. Herault, Officers, and Bagot.

Bul. Call forth Bagot.

Now Bagot, freely speake thy mind,

What thou dost know of Noble Glosters death,

Who wrought it with the King, and who perform'd

The bloody Office of his timetesse end,

Bag. Then set before my face the Lord Aumerle.

Bul. Cosin, stand forth and looke upon that man.

Bag. My Lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue

Scornes to unsay what it hath once deliver'd.

In that dead time, when Glosters death was plotted,

I

IV.i.

The Life and Death

I heard you say, Is not my arme of length,
 That reacheth from the restfull English Court
 As farre as Callis, to my Vncles head ?
 Amongst much other talke, that very time,
 I heard you say, that you had rather refuse
 The offer of an hundred thousand Crownes.
 Then Bullingbrookes returne to England; adding withall,
 How blest this Land would be, in this your Cosins death.

Aum. Princes and Noble Lords :

What answer shall I make to this base man :
 Shall I so much dishonour my faire starres,
 On equall termes to give him chastisement ?
 Eyther I must, or have mine honour spoyl'd
 With th' Attendour of his slanderous lips,
 There is my Gage, the manuell seale of death
 That markes thee out for hell. Thou lyeest,
 And will maintaine what thou hast sayd, is false,
 In thy hearts blood, though being all too base,
 To staine the temper of my Knightly sword.

Bul. Bagot forbear, thou shalt not take it up.

Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the best
 In all this presence, that hath moovd me so.

Fitz. If that thy valour stand on sympathies :
 There is my Gage, Aumerle, in Gage to thine :
 By that faire sunne, that shewes me where thou stand'st,
 I heard thee say, (and vantlyngly thou spak'st it)
 That thou wer't cause of Noble Glosters death.
 If thou deniest it, twenty times thou lyeest,
 And I will turne thy falsehood to thy heart,
 Where it was forged, with my Rapiers poynnt.

Aum. Thou dar'st not (Coward) live to see the day.

Fitz. Now by my Soule, I would it were this houre.

Aum. Fitzwater thou art damn'd to hell for this.

Per. e. Aumerle, thou lyeest: his honour is as true
 In this appeale, as thou art all uniuert:
 And that thou art so, there I throw my Gage
 To prove it on thee, to th' extreamest poynnt
 Of mortall breathing. Seize it if thou dar'st.

Aum.

of Richard the second.

Aum. And if I doe not, may my hands rot off,
And never brandish more revengefull Steele,
Over the glittering Helme of my Foe.

Sur. My Lord Fitzwater :
I doe remember well, the very time
Aumerle, and you did talke.

Fitz. My Lord,
Tis very true : You were in presencethen ;
And you can witness with me, this is true.

Sur. As false, by heaven,
As heaven it selfe is true.

Fitz. Surry, thou lye'st,
Sur. Dishonourable Boy ;
That lye shall lye so heauy on my sword,
That it shall render Vengeance and Revenge,
Till thou the Lye-giver and that lye, doe lye
In earth as quiet, as thy Fathers Scull.

In prooffe whereof, there is mine Honours pawne,
Engage it to the Tryall, if thou dar'st.

Fitz. How fondly dost thou spurte a forward Horse?
If I dare eate, or drinke, or breath, or live,
I dare meete Surry in a Wildernesse,
And spit upon him, whilst I say he lies,
And lies, and lies: there is my bond of Faith,
To tie thee to my strong Correction.
As I intended to thrive in this new world,
Aumerle is guilty of my true appeale.

Besides, I heard the banish'd Norfolke say,
That thou Aumerle didst send two of thy men,
To execute the Noble Duke at Callis.

Aum. Some honest Christian trust me with a Gage,
That Norfolke lies, here doe I throw downe this,
If he may be repeal'd, to try his honour.

Bul. These differences shall all rest under Gage,
Till Norfolke be repeal'd : repeal'd he shall be ;
(And though mine Enemy) restor'd againe
To all his Lands and Seigniories: when hee's return'd,
Against Aumerle we will inforce his Tryall.

The Life and Death

Car. That honourable day shall ne're be seene.

Many a time hath banish'd Norfolke fought
For Iesu Christ, in glorious Christian field
Streaming the Ensigne of the Christian Crosse
Against blacke Pagans, Turkes, and Saracens:
And toyl'd with workes of warre, retyr'd himsele
To Italy, and there at Venice gave

His Body to that pleasant Countries Earth,
And his pure soule unto his Captaine Christ,
Vnder whose Colours he had fought so long.

Bul. Why Bishop, is Norforke dead?

Carl. As sure as I live my Lord.

Bul. Sweet peace conduct his sweet soule
To the Bosome of good old Abraham.
Lords Appealants, your differences shall all rest under Till we assigne you to your dayes of Tryall. (gage,

Enter Torke.

Torke. Great Duke of Lancaster, I come to thee
From Plume-pluckt Richard, who with willing soule
Adopts thee Heire, and his high Scepter yeelds
To the possession of thy Royall Hand.
Ascend his Throne, descending now from him,
And long live Henry, of that Name the Fourth.

Bul. In Gods Name, Ile ascend the Regall throne,

Carl. Mary, Heaven forbid.

VVorst in this Royall Presence may I speake,
Yet best befeeming me to speake the truth.
Would God, that any in this Noble Presence
Were enough Noble to be upright Iudge
Of Noble Richard; then true Noblenesse would
Learne him forbearance from so foule a Wrong.
What subject can give sentence on his King?
And who sits here, that is not Richards subject?
Theeves are not judg'd, but they are by to heare
Although apparant guilt be seene in them:
And shall the figure of Gods Majesty,
His Captaine, steward, Deputy elect,
Anoynted, Crown'd and planted many yeares.

of Richard the second.

IV.i.

Be judg'd by subjects, and inferior breath,
 And he himselfe not present? Oh, forbid, it God,
 That in a Christian Climate, soules refine
 Should shew so heynous, blacke, obscene a deed.
 I speake to subjects, and a subject speakes,
 Stir'd up by Heaven, thus boldly for his King.
 My Lord of Hereford here, whom you call King,
 Is a soule Traytor to prowd Herefords King.
 And if you Crowne him, let me prophecy,
 The blood of English shall manure the ground,
 And future ages groane for his foule A&.
 Peace shall goe sleepe with Turkes and Infidels,
 And in this Seat of Peace, tumultuous Warres
 Shall Kinne with Kinne, and Kinde with Kinde confound,
 Disorder, Horror, Feare, and Mutiny
 Shall here inhabite and this Land be call'd
 The field of Golgotha, and dead mens sculls.
 Oh, if you reare this House against this House
 It will the wofullest Division prove,
 That ever fell upon this cursed Earth.
 Prevent it, resist it, let it not be so,
 Least Child, Childs Children cry against you, VVoe.

North. Well have you argu'd Sir: and for your paines.

Of Capitall Treason we arrest you here.

My Lord of Westminster, be it your charge,

To keepe him safely, till his day of Tryall.

May it please you, Lords, to grant the Commons Suit?

Bull. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view

He may surrender: so we shall proceede

VVithout suspition.

Yor. I will be his Conduct.

Exit.

Bull. Lords, you that here are under our Arrest,

Procure your Sureties for your Dayes of Answer:

Little are we beholding to your Love,

And little look'd for at your helping Hands:

Enter Richard and Yorke.

Rich. Alack, why am I sent for to a King,
 Before I have shooke off the Regall thoughts

H 2

Where.

The Life and Death

164 Wherewith I reign'd ? I hardly yet have learn'd
 To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my Knee.
 Give Sorrow leave a while, to returne me
 168 To this submission. Yet I will remember
 The favors of these men: were they not mine?
 Did they not sometime cry, All hayle to me?
 So *Iud*ardid to Christ: but he in twelve,
 Found truth in all, but one; I, in twelve thousand, none.
 172 God save the King: will no man say, Amen?
 Am I both Priest and Clarke? well then, Amen.
 God save the King, although I be not he:
 And yet Amen, if Heaven doe thinke him me.
 176 To doe what service, am I sent for hither?
Tor. To doe that office of thine owne good will,
 VWhich tyred Majesty did make thee offer:
 The Resignation of thy State and Crowne
 180 To Henry Bullingbrooke.

Rich. Give me the Crown. Here Cofin, seize the Crown:
 Here Cofin, on this side my Hand, on that side thine.
 184 Now is this Golden Crowne like a deepe Well,
 That owest two Buckets, filling one another,
 The emptier ever dancing in the ayre,
 The other downe, unseene, and full of Water:
 188 That Bucket downe, and full of Teares am I,
 Drinking my Griefes, whilst you mount up on high.

Bul. I thought you had beene willing to resigne.

Rich. My Crowne I am, but still my Griefes are mine:
 192 You may my Glories and my State depose,
 But not my Griefes; still am I King of those.

Bul. Part of your Cares you give me with your Crown.

Rich. Your Cares set up, doe not pluck my Cares down.
 196 My Care, is losse of Care, by old Care done,
 Your Care, is gaine of Care, by new Care wonne:
 The Cares I giue, I have, though given away,
 They tend the Crowne, yet still with me they stay:

Bul. Are you contented to resigne the Crowne?

Rich. I no; no, I: for I must nothing be:
 200 Therefore no, no, for I resigne to thee.

Now,

of Richard the second.

IV.i.

Now, marke me how I will undoe my selfe.
 I give this heauy weight from off my Head,
 And this unwieldy Scepter from my hand,
 The pride of Kingly sway from out my heart.
 With mine owne Teares I wash away my blame,
 With mine owne hands I give away my Crowne.
 With mine owne Tongue deny my sacred State,
 With mine owne breath releafe all dutious Oathes :
 All pompe and Maiesty I doe forswear:
 My Mannors, Rents, Reuenews, I forgoe;
 My Acts, Decrees, and Statutes I deny :
 God pardon all Oathes that are broke to me,
 God keepe all vowes unbroke are made to thee.
 Make me, that nothing haue, with nothing griev'd,
 And thou withall pleas'd, that hast all atchiev'd,
 Long mayst thou live in Richards Seat to sit,
 And soone lie Richard in an earthy pit.
 God save King Henry, un-king'd Richard sayes,
 And send him many yeares of sunne-shine dayes.
 What more remains ?

Nor. No more: but that you read
 These Accufations, and these grievous Crymes,
 Committed by your person, and your followers
 Against the state, and profit of this Land :
 That by confessing them, the soules of men
 May deeme, that you are worthily depos'd.

Rich. Must I doe so? and must I rayell out
 My weav'd up follies? Gentle Northumberland,
 If thy Offences were upon Record,
 Would it not shame thee in so faire a troupe,
 To reade a Lecture of them? If thou would'st,
 There should'st thou find one haynous Article
 Containing the deposing of a King,
 And cracking the strong warrant of an Oath,
 Mark'd with a Blot, damn'd in the booke of Heaven.
 Nay, all of you that stand and looke upon me,
 Whil'st that my wretchednesse doth bait my selfe,
 Though some of you, with Pilate wash your hands,

IV.i.

The Life and Death

Shewing an outward pittie : yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my lowre Crosse,
And Water cannot wash away your sinne.

Nor. My Lord dispatch, read o're these Articles.

Rich. Mine eyes are full of teares, I cannot see :
And yet salt-water blindes them not so much,
But they can see a sort of Traytors here.

Nay, if I turne mine eyes upon my selfe,
I finde my selfe a Traytor with the rest
For I have given here my soules consent,
T' undecke the pompous body of a King;
Made glory base, a soveraigne, a slave ;

Proud Maiesty, a subiect ; State, a Pefant,

Nor. My Lord.

Rich. No Lord of thine, thou haught-insulting man ;
No, nor no mans Lord ; I have no Name, no Title ;

No, not that Name was given me at the Font,
But 'tis usurpt: alacke the heavy day,
That I have worne so many Winters out,
And know not now, what Name to call my selfe.

Oh, that I were a mockery, King of Snow,
Standing before the sunne of Bullingbrooke,
To melt my selfe away in Water-drops:
Good King, great King, and yet not greatly good,
And if my word be sterling yet in England,
Let it command a mirror hither straight,
That it may shew me what a face I have,
Since it is Bankrupt of his Maiesty.

Bul. Goe some of you, and fetch a Looking Glasse.

Nor. Read o're this Paper, while the Glasse doth come.

Rich. Fiend, thou torments me ere I come to Hell.

Bul. Vrge it no more my Lord Northumberland.

Nor. The Commons will not then be satisfy'd.

Rich. They shall be satisfy'd : ile reade enough,
When I doe see the very Booke indeed,
Where all my sinnes are writ, and that's my selfe.

Enter one with a Glasse.

Give me that Glasse, and therein will I reade.

No

of Richard the second.

No deeper wrinkles yet ? hath sorrow stricke
 So many blowes upon this face of mine,
 And made no deeper wounds ? Oh flattering Glasse,
 Like to my followers in prosperity,
 Thou do st beguile me. Was this face the face
 That every day, under his household Roofe,
 Did keepe ten thousand men ? was this the face,
 That like the sunne did make beholders winke ?
 Is this the face, which fac'd so many follyes,
 That was at last out-fac'd by Bullingbrooke ?
 A brittle glory shineth in this face,
 As brittle as the Glory, is the face,
 For there it is, crackt in an hundred shivers.
 Marke silent King, the Morall of this sport,
 How soone my sorrow hath destroy'd my face.
Bul. The shadow of your sorrow hath destroy'd
 The shadow of your face.

Rich. Say that againe.

The shadow of my sorrow: ha, lets see,
 'Tis very true, my griefe lyes all within,
 And these externall manners of laments,
 Are meere shadows to the unseene griefe,
 That swells with silence in the tortur'd soule:
 There lies the substance: and I thanke thee King
 For thy great bounty, that not onely giv'st
 Me cause to waile, but teachest me the way
 How to lament the cause. He begge one boone,
 And then be gone, and trouble you no more.
 Shall I obtaine it ?

Bul. Name it, faire Cofin.

Rich. Faire Cofin ? I am greater than a King:
 For when I was a King, my flatterers
 Were then my subiects, being now a subiect,
 I have a King here to my flatterer:
 Being so great, I have no need to begge.

Bul. Yet aske.

Rich. And shall I have ?

Bul. You shall.

Rich.

IV.i.

The Life and Death

Rich. Then give me leave to goe.

Bul. Whither?

Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your fights.

316 Bul. Goe some of you convey him to the Tower.

Rich. Oh good: convey: Conveyers are you all,
That rise thus nimble by a true Kings fall.

320 Bul. On wednesday next, we solemnly set downe
Our Coronation; Lords prepare your selves. Exeunt.

Abbot. A wofull Pageant haue we here beheld.

Carl. The woe's to come, the children yet un-borne,
Shall feele this day as sharpe to them as thorne.

324 Aum. You holy clergy-men, is there no plot
To rid the Realme of this pernicious blot?

328 Abbot. Before I freely speake my minde herein,
You shall not onely take the Sacrament,
To bury mine intents, but also to effect
What ever I shall happen to devise.

I see your browes are full of discontent,
Your heart of sorrow, and your eyes of teares,
332 Come home with me to supper, ile lay a plot
Shall shew us all a merry day. Exeunt.

V.i.

Actus Quintus, Scæna Prima.

Enter Queene, and Ladies.

Qu. This way the King will come: this is the way
To Julius Cæsars ill-erected Tower:

4 To whose flint bosome, my condemned Lord
Is doom'd a Prisoner, by proud Ballingbrooke.
Here let us rest, if this rebellious Earth
Have any resting for her true Kings Queene.

Enter Richard and Gard.

8 But soft, but see, or rather doe not see,
My faire Rose wither: yet looke up; behold.
That you in pittie may dissolve to dew,

And

of Richard the second.

V.i.

And wash him fresh againe with true-love teares.
Ah thou the modell where old Troy did stand,
Thou map of honour, thou King Richards Tombe,
And not King Richard: thou most beauteous Inne,
Why should hard-favor'd griefe be lodg'd in thee,
When triumph is become an Ale-house guest?

Rich. Ioyne not with griefe, faire Woman, doe not so,
To make my end too sudden; learne good soule,
To thinke our former State a happy dreame,
From which awak'd, the truth of what we are,
Shewes us but this. I am sworne Brother (sweet)
To grim necessity; and he and I
Will keepe a League till Death. High thee to France,
And Cloyster thee in some Religious house:
Our holy lives must win a new worlds Crowne,
Which our prophane houres here have stricken downe.

Qu. What, is my Richard both in shape and mind
Transform'd, and weaken'd? Hath Bullingbrooke
Depos'd thine Intellect? hath he beene in thy heart?
The Lyon dying thrusteth forth his paw,
And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o're-powr'd: and wilt thou, Pupil-like,
Take thy Correction mildly, kisse the Rodde,
And fawne on rage with base humility,
Which art a Lyon, and a King of Beasts?

Rich. A King of beasts indeed, if aught but beasts,
I had beene still a happy King of Men.
Good (sometime Queene) prepare thee hence for France:
Thinke I am dead, and that even heare thou tak'st,
As from my death-bed, my last living leave.
In winters teadious night sit by the fire
With good old folkes, and let them tell thee tales
Of woefull ages, long agoe betide:
And ere thou bid goodnight, to quit their griefe,
Tell thou the lamentable fall of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their beds:
For why? the sencelesse Brands will sympathize

North. My Lord, the mind of Bullingbrooke is chang'd.
You must to Pomsret, not unto the Tower.
And Madam, there is order ta'ne for you :
VVith all swift speed, you must away to France.

56

Rich. Northumberland, thou Ladder wherewithall
The mounting Bullingbrooke ascends my Throne,
The time shall not be many houres of age,
More than it is, ere foule sinne, gathering head,
Shall breake into corruption : thou shalt thinke,

Though he deuide the Realme, and give thee halfe,
It is too little, helping him to all :
He shall thinke, that thou which know'st the way
To plant unrightfull Kings, wilt know againe.
Being ne're so little urg'd, another way,
To plucke him headlong from th' usurped Throne.
The Love of wicked friends converts to Feare ;
That Feare, to Hate ; and Hate turnes one or both,
To worthy Danger, and deserved Death.

North. My guilt be on my Head, and there an end :
Take leave, and part, for you must part forthwith.

Rich. Doubly divorce'd ? (bad men) ye violate
A two-fold Marriage ; 'twixt my Crowne, and me,
And then betwixt me, and my marryed VVife.
Let me un-kisse the Oath 'twixt thee and me ;
And yet not so, for with a kisse 'twas made
Part us Northumberland : I, towards the North,
Where shivering Cold and Sicknesse pineth the Clyme :
My Queene to France : from whence, set forth in pompe,
She came adorned hither like sweet may ;
Sent backe Hollow may, or short ft of day.

Qu. And must we be divided ? must we part ?

Rich. I, hand from hand (my Love) and heart fro heart.

Goe, count thy way with sighes, I, mine with Groanes.

Qu. So longest way shall have the longest moanes.

Rich. Twice for one slep ile groane, the way being short,
And piece the way out with a heavy heart.

Come, come, in woing sorrow let's be brieft,
Since wedding it, there is such length in griefe:
One kisse shall stop our mouthes, and doubly part;
Thus give I mine, and thus thus take I thy heart.

Qu. Give me mine owne againe: 'twere no good part,
To take on me to keepe, and kill thy heart.
So, now I have mine owne againe, be gone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groane.

Rich. We make woe wanton with this fond delay:
Once more adieu; the rest let sorrow say.

Enter Yorke and his Dutchesse.

Dut. My Lord, you told me you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you breake the story off,
Of our two Cofins comming into London.

Yor. Where did I leave?

Dut. At that sad stoppe, my Lord.
Where rude misgovern'd hands, from windowes tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on King Richards head.

Yor. Then, as I sayd, the Duke (great Bullingbrooke),
Mounted upon a hot and fiery Steed,
Which his aspiring Rider seem'd to know,
With slow, but stately pace, kept on his course:
While all tongues cri'd, God save thee Bullingbrooke,
You would have thought the very windowes spake,

The Life and Death

So many greedy lookes of young and old,
Through Callements darted their desiring eyes .

16 Vpon his visage ; and that all the walles
With painted Imagery had sayd at once,
Iesu preserve thee, welcome Bullingbrooke.
Whil'st he , from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed , lower then his proud Steeds necke,
20 Bespake them thus : I thanke you Countri-men ;
And thus still doing, thus he past along.

Dutch. Alas poore Richard, where rides he the whilst?

Torke. As in a Theater, the eyes of men
24 After a well grac'd Actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious .
Even so, or with much more contempt, mens eyes
28 Did scowle on Richard ; no man cride, God save him;
No joyfull tongue gave him his welcome home,
But dust was throwne upon his sacred head,
Which with such gentle sorrow he shooke off,
32 His face still combating with teares and smiles
(The badges of his griefe and patience)
That had not God (for some strong purpose) steel'd
The hearts of men, they must perforce have melted,
36 And Barbarisme it selfe have pittied him.
But Heaven hath a hand in these events,
To whose high will we bound our calme contents,
To Bullingbrooke , are we sworne Subjects now,
40 Whose State, and Honour, I for aye allow.

Enter Aumerle.

Dut. Heere comes my sonne Aumerle.

Tor. Aumerle that was,
But that is lost, for being Richards Friend.
And Madam, you must call him Rutland now;
44 I am in Parliament pledge for his truth,
And lasting fealty in the new-made King.

That strew the greene lap of the new-come Spring ?

Ann. I do beseech your Grace to pardon me,
It is a matter of small consequence,
VVhich for some reasons I would not have seene.

Tor. VVhich for some reasons sir, I meane to see:
I feare, I feare.

Dut. VVhat should you feare?
'Tis nothing but some Bond, that he is entred into
For gay apparrell against the Triumph.

Tor. Bound to himselfe? what doth he with a bond
That he is bound to? wife, you are a foole.
Boy, let me see the writing.

Ann. I doe beseech you pardon me, I may not shew it.

Tor. I will be satisfied, let me see't I say: Snatches it.
Treason, foule treason, villaine, traytor, slave.

Dut. VVhat's the matter, my Lord?

Tor. Hoa, who's within there; saddle my horse,
Heaven for his mercy what treachery is here?

Dut. Why, what is't my Lord?

Tor. Give me my boots, I say; Saddle my horse:
Now by my honour, my life, my troth.
I will appeach the villaine.

Dut. What is the matter?

Tor. Peace foolish woman.

Dut. I will not peace, what is the matter sonne?

Ann. Good mother be content, it is no more
Then my poore life must answer.

Dut. Thy life answer?

Enter Servant with Boots.

84 Tor. Bring my Boots, I will unto the King.

Dut. Strike him Aumerle. Poore boy, thou art amaz'd,
Hence Villaine, never more come in my sight.

Tor. Give me my Boots I say.

88 Dut. Why Torke, what wilt thou doe?

Wilt thou not hide the trespassse of thine owne?

Have we more sonnes? Or are we like to have?

Is not my teeming date drunke up with time?

92 And wilt thou plucke my faire sonne from mine Age,

And rob me of a happy mothers name?

Is he not like thee? is he not thine owne?

† Tor. Thou fond and mad woman,

96 Wilt thou conceale this darke conspiracy?

A dozen of them here have tane the Sacrament,

And enterchangeably set downe their hands

To kill the King at Oxford.

Dut. He shall be none:

100 Wee'l keepe him here: then what is that to him:

Tor. Away fond woman: were he twenty times my sonne, I would appeach him.

Dut. Hadst thou groan'd for him, as I have done,
Thou wouldest be more pittifull:

104 But now I know thy minde; thou dost suspect

That I have beene disloyall to thy bed,

And that he is a bastard, not thy sonne:

Sweet Torke, sweet husband, be not of that mind:

108 He is as like thee, as a man may be,

Not like to me, nor any of my Kin,

And yet I love him.

Tor. Make way, unruly woman. Exit.

112 Dut. After Aumerle. Mount thee upon his Horse,

Spurre post, and get before him to the King,

And beg thy pardon, ere he doe accuse thee,

He not be long behinde: though I be old,

Bul. Can no man tell of my unthrifty sonne?
'Tis full three monthes since I did see him last.
If any plague hang over us, 'tis he:
I would to heaven (my Lords) he might be found,

And weare it as a favour, and with that

I hate the murtherer, love him murthered.
The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neyther my good word, nor Princely favour.
VVith Caine goe wander through the shade of night,
And never shew thy head by day, nor light.

48

Lords, I protest my soule is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkle me, and make me grow,
Come mourne with me, for that I doe lament,
And put on sullen blacke incontinent:
He make a voyage to the Holy-land.

52

To wash this blood off from my guilty hand
March sadly after, grace my mourning here,
In weeping after this untimely beere.

Exeunt.

FINIS.
