To the Reader.

This Figure, that thou here seest put,
It was for gentle Shakespeare cut;
Wherein the Graver had a strife
With Nature, to out-doe the Life :
O, could he but have drawn his Wit
As well in Brasse, as he has hit
His Face ; the Print would then surpasse
All, that was ever writ in Brasse.
But since he cannot, Reader, look
Not on his Picture, but his Book.

To the most Noble and Incomparable pair of Brethren, WILLIAM Earl of Pembroke, &c. Lord Chamberlain to the Kings most Excellent Majestie;

And PHILIP Earl of Montgomery, &c. Gentleman to His Majesties Bed-Chamber. Both Knights of the most Noble Order of the Garter, and our singular good LORDS.

Right Honourable,

 Hilst we study to be thankful in our particular, for the many favours we have received from your LL, we are faln upon the ill fortune, to mingle two the most diverse things that can be, fear, and rashnesse in the enterprise, and fear of the succeſſe. For, when we value the places your H.H. ſuſtain, we cannot but know their dignity greater, than to deſcend to the reading of theſe trifles: and, while we name them trifles, we have depriv'd our ſelves of the defence of our Dedication. But ſince your L.L. have been pleas'd to think theſe trifles ſomething heretofore, and have proſecuted both them, and their Authour living, with ſo much favour: we hope, (that they out-living him, and he not having the fate, common with ſome, to be Executor to his own writings) you will uſe the ſame indulgence toward them, you have done unto their parent. There is a great diſference, whether any Book chooſe his Patrones, or find them: This hath done both. For, ſo much were your L. L. likings of the ſeveral parts, when they were acted, as before they were published, the Volume ask'd to be yours. We have but collected them, and done an office to the dead, to procure his Orphanes, Guardians; without ambition either of self-profit, or fame: only to keep the memory of so worthy a Friend and Fellow alive, as was our Shakespeare, by humble offer of his Playes, to your most Noble Patronage. Wherein, as we have justly observed, no man to come near your L. L. but with a kind of religious address; it hath been the height of our care, who are the Presenters, to make the Present worthy of your H. H. by the Perfection. But, there we must also crave our abilities to be considered, my Lords. We cannot goe beyond our own powers. Countrey hands reach forth Milk, Cream, Fruits, or what they have: and many Nations (we have heard) that had not Gummes and Incense, obtained their requests with a leavened Cake; It was no fault to approach their gods, by what means they could: And the most, though meanest of things, are made precious, when they are dedicated to Temples. In that name therefore, we most humbly consecrate to your H. H. these remains of your servant Shakespeare; that what delight is in them, may be ever your L. L. the reputation his, and the faults ours, if any be committed by a pair so careful to shew their gratitude both to the living, and the dead, as is

To the great variety of Readers.

From the most able, to him that can but spell. There you are number'd, VVe had rather you were weigh'd. Especially, when the fate of all Books depends upon your capacities: and not of your heads alone, but of your Purfes. VVell, it is now publick, and you will stand for your privileges, we know: to read, and censure. Doe so, but buy it first; that doth best commend a Book, the Stationer sayes. Then, how odde soever your brains be, or your wisdomes, make your silence the same, and spare not. Iudge your six-penny worth, your shillings worth, your five shillings worth at a time, or higher, so you rise to the just rates, and welcome. But, whatever you do, Buy, Censure will not drive a Trade, nor make the Jack goe. And though you be a Magistrate of Wit, and sit on the Stage at Black-Fryers, or the Cock-pit, to arraign Playes daily, know, these Playes have had their trial already, and stood out all Appeals; and do now come forth quitted rather by a Decree of Court, then any purchas'd Letters of Commendation.

It had been a thing, we confesse, worthy to have been wished, that the Author himself had liv'd to have set forth, and overseen his own Writings; But since it hath been ordain'd otherwise wife, and he by death departed from that right, we pray you do not envy his Friends, the office of their care, and pain, to have collected and publish'd them; & so to have publish'd them, as where (before) you were abus'd with divers stoln, and surreptitious Copies, maimed and deformed by the frauds & stealths of injurious Impostors, that expos'd them: even those, are now offer'd to your view cured, and perfect of their limbs; and all the rest, absolute in their numbers as he conceived them. Who, as he was a happy imitator of Nature, was a most gentle expresser of it. His mind and hand went together: And what he thought, he uttered with that easiness, that we have scarce received from him a blot in his Papers. But it is not our Province, who only gather his Works, and give them you to praise him. It is yours that read him. And there we hope, to your divers capacities, you will find enough, both to draw, and hold you: for his wit can no more lie hid, then it could be lost. Read him, therefore; and again, & again: And if then you do not like him, surely you are in some manifest danger, not to understand him. And so we leave you to other of his Friends, who, if you need, can be your guides: if you need them not, you can lead your selves, and others. And such Readers we wish him.

AN E P I T A P H

On the admirable Dramatick Poet,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

WHat need my Shakespeare for his honour'd bones,

The labour of an Age, in piled stones,
Or that his hallow'd Reliques should be hid
Under a Starre-ypointing Pyramid?

Dear Son of Memory, great Heir of Fame, VVhat need'st thou such dull witnesse of thy Name?

Thou in our wonder and astonishment
Hast built thy self a lasting Monument:
For whilst to th'shame of slow-endeavouring
Art

Thy easie numbers flow, and that each part,
Hath from the leaves of thy unvalued Book,
Those Delphick Lines with deep Impression took

Then thou our fancy of her self bereaving, Dost make us Marble with too much conceiving,

And so Sepulcher'd in such pomp dost lie,
That Kings for such a Tomb would wish to die

Upon the Lines and Life of the Famous Scenick Poet Mr. VV. Shakespeare.

THose hands, which you so clapt, goe now and wring

You Britaines brave; for done are Shakespeares dayes:

His dayes are done, that made the dainty Playes, VVhich made the Globe of Heav'n and Earth to ring.

Dry'd is that Vein, dry'd is the Thespian Spring, Turn'd all to tears, and Phæbus Clouds his Rayes:

That Corps, that Coffin now bestick those Bays,
VVhich crown'd him Poet first, then Poets King.
If Tragedies might any Prologue have,
All those he made, would scarce make one to this:

VVhere Fame, now that he gone is to the Grave, (Deaths publick Tying-house) the Nuncius is.

For though his Line of Life went soon about,
The Life yet of his Lines shall never out.

To the Memory of the deceased Authour
Mr. VVILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

SHakespeare, at length thy pious Fellows give
The World thy Works: thy Works, by which, out-live
Thy Tomb, thy Name must: when that stone is rent
And Time dissolves thy Stratford Monument,
Here we alive shall view thee still. This Book,
When Brass and Marble fade, shall make thee look
Fresh to all Ages: when Posteritie
Shall loathe what's new; think all is prodigie
That is not Shakespear's; ev'ry Line, each Verse
Here shall revive, redeem thee from thy Herse.
Nor Fire, nor cankring Age, as Naso said,
Of his, thy wit-fraught Book shall once invade.
Nor shall I e're believe, or think thee dead
(Though mist) until our bankrout Stage be sped
(Impossible) with some new strain t' out-do
Passions of Juliet, and her Romeo;
Or till I hear a Scene more nobly take,
Than when thy halfe-sword parlying Yeomans spake
Till these, till any of thy Volumes rest
Shall with more fire, more feeling be exprest,
Be sure, our Shakespeare, thou canst never die,
But crown'd with Lawrell, live eternally.

Upon the Effigies of my worthy Friend, the Author Mr. W. Shakespeare, and his Works.

Spectator, this Lifes Shadow is; to see
The truer Image and a livelier he Turn Reader. But, observe his Comick vain,
Laugh, and proceed next to a Tragick strain,
Then weep; So when thou find'st two contraries,
Two different passions from thy rapt soul rise,
Say, (who alone effect such wonders could)
Rare Shakespeare to the life thou dost behold.

To the Memory of Mr. W. Shakespeare.

WE wonder (Shakespeare) that thou went'st so soon
From the *W*orlds-Stage, to the Graves-Tyringroom.

We thought thee dead, but this thy Printed worth,
Tells thy Spectators, that thou went'st but forth
To enter with applause. An Actors Art,
Can dye, and live, to act a second Part.
That's but an Exit of Mortality;
This, a Re-entrance to a Plaudite.

J. M.

To the Memory of my beloved the Authour
Mr. VVILLIAM SHAKESPEARE;
And what he hath left us.

DO draw no envy (Shakespeare) on thy Name,
Am I thus ample to thy Book, and Fame:
While I confesse thy writings to be such,
As neither Man, nor Muse can praise too much.
'Tis true, and all mens suffrage. But these ways
Were not the paths I meant unto thy praise:
For seeliest Ignorance on these may light,
Which, when it sounds at best, but ecchoes right;
Or blind Affection, which doth ne're advance
The truth, but gropes, and urgeth all by chance;
Or crafty malice, might pretend this praise,
And think to ruine, where it seem'd to raise.
These are, as some infamous Baud, or Whore, [more?
Should praise a Matron. What could hurt her
But thou art prooffe against them, and indeed
Above th'ill fortune of them, or the need.
I therefore will begin. Soul of the Age!
The applause! delight! the wonder of our Stage.
My Shakespeare rise; I will not lodge thee by Chaucer, or Spenser, or bid Beaumont lie
A little further, to make thee a room:
Thou art a Monument without a Tomb,
And art alive still, while thy Book doth live,
And we have wits to read, and praise to give.

*That I not mix thee so, my brain excuses;
I mean with great, but disproportion'd Muses:
For if I thought my judgement were of years,
I should commit thee surely with thy Peers,
And tell how far thou didst our Lily out-shine,
Or sporting Kid, or Marlow's mighty Line.
And though thou hadst small Latine & less Greek,
From thence to honour thee, I would not seek
For names; but call forth thund'ring Æschylus,
Euripides, and Sophocles to us,
Paccuvius, Accius, him of Cordova dead,
To live again, to hear thy Buskin tread,
And shake a Stage: Or, when thy Socks were on,
Leave thee alone for the comparison
Of all, that insolent Greece, or haughty Rome
Sent forth, or since did from their ashes come.
Triumph, my Britain, thou hast one to show,
To whom all Scenes of Europe homage owe.
He was not of an age, but for all time!
And all the Muses, still were in their prime,
When like Apollo he came forth to warm
Our ears, or like a Mercury to charm!
Nature her self was proud of his designs,
And joy'd to wear the dressing of his Lines!
Which were so richly spun, and woven so fit,
As, since, she will vouchsafe no other wit.
The merry Greek, tart Aristophanes,
Neat Terence, witty Plautus, now not please;
But*

But antiquated, and deserted lie
As they were not of Natures family.
Yet must I not give Nature all: Thy Art,
My gentle Shakespeare must enjoy a part.
For though the Poet's matter Nature be,
His Art doth give the Fashion. And, that he,
Who casts to write a living line, must sweat,
(Such as thine are) and strike the second heat
Upon the Muses Anvile: turn the same,
(And himself with it) that he thinks to frame;
Or for the Lawrel, he may gain a scorn,
For a good Poet's made, as well as born.
And such wert thou. Look how the Fathers face Lives in his Issue, even so the race
Of Shakespear's mind, and manners brightly shines
In his well torned, and true filed lines:
In each of which, he seems to shake a Lance,
As brandish't at the eyes of Ignorance.
Sweet Swan of Avon! what a sight it were
To see thee in our water yet appear,
And make those flights upon the Banks of Thames,
That so did take Eliza, and our Iames!
But stay, I see thee in the Hemisphere
Advanc'd, and made a Constellation there!
Shine forth, thou Starre of Poets, and with rage,
Or influence, chide, or chear the drooping Stage,
Which, since thy flight from hence, hath mourn'd like
And despairs day, but for thy Volumes light. [night;

On worthy Mr. SHAKESPEARE, and his Poems.

A Mind reflecting ages past, whose clear
And equal surface can make things appear Distant a Thousand years, and represent
Them in their lively colours just extent.
To out-run hasty Time, retrace the Fates,
Rowle back the Heavens, blow ope the Iron Gates
Of Death and Lethe, where (confused) lie
Great heaps of ruinous Mortality.
In that deep duskie dungeon to discern
A Royal Ghost from Churles; By art to learn
The Physiognomie of shades, and give Them suddain birth, wondring how oft they live.
What story coldly tells, what Poets fain
At second hand, and picture without brain
Senselesse and soulelesse shows. To give a Stage
(Ample and true with life) voice, action, age,
As Plato's year, and new Scene of the world
Them unto us, or us to them had hurl'd.
To raise our ancient Soveraignes from their Herse
Make Kings his Subjects, by exchanging verse.
Enlive their pale trunks, that the present age
Joyes in their joy, and trembles at their rage:
Yet so to temper passion, that our ears
Take pleasure in their pain; And eyes in tears
Both weep and smile, fearful at plots so sad,

Then

Then laughing at our fear; abus'd, and glad
To be abus'd, affected with that truth
VVhich we perceive is false; pleas'd in that ruth
At which we start; and by elaborate play
Tortur'd and tickled; by a crab-like way
Time past made pastime, and in ugly sort
Disgorging up his ravaine for our sport-----

-----VVhile the Plebeian Imp from lofty throne, Creates and rules a world, and works upon
Mankind by secret engines; Now to move
A chilling pity, then a rigorous love:
To strike up and stroak down, both joy and ire;
To steer th'affections; and by heavenly fire
Mould us anew. Stolln from our selves-----

This and much more which cannot be exprest,
But by himself, his tongue and his own breast, [brain
VVas Shakespeares freehold, which his cunning
Improv'd by favour of the nine-fold train.

The Buskin'd Muse, the Comick Queen, the grand
And lowder tone of Clio; nimble hand,
And nimbler foot of the melodious pair,
The Silver voiced Lady; the most fair
Calliope, whose speaking silence daunts.
And she whose praise the heavenly body chaunts.

These jointly woo'd him, envying one another
(Obey'd by all as Spouse, but lov'd as brother)
And wrought a curious robe of fable grave,
Fresh green, and pleasant yellow, red most brave,
And

And constant blew, rich purple, guiltless white,
The lowly Ruffet, and the Scarlet bright;
Branch't and embroydered like the painted Spring
Each leafe match'd with a Flower, and each string
Of golden wire, each line of silk; there run
Italian works whose thred the Sisters spun;
And there did sing, or seem to sing, the choice
Birds of a foreign note and various voice.
Here hangs a mossey Rock; there playes a faire
But chiding Fountain purled: Not the aire,
Nor Clouds, nor Thunder, but were living drawn
Not out of common Tiffany or Lawn.
But fine materials, which the Muses know
And onely know the Countries where they grow.

*Now when they could no longer him enjoy
In mortal garments pent; Death may destroy
They say his body, but his Verse shall live
And more then Nature takes, our hands shall give.
In a lesse Volume, but more strongly bound [crown'd
Shakespeare shall breathe and speak, with Laurel
Which never fades. Fed with Ambrosian meat
In a well-lined vesture rich and neat [it,
So with this Robe they cloathe him, bid him wear
For time shall never stain, nor envy tear it.*

The friendly admirer of his Endowments,

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

*A tempestuous noise of Thunder and Lightning heard :
Enter Ship-master, and a Boteswain.*

Master.

Ote-swain.

Botesf. Here Master : What cheere ?

Maſt. Good : Speak to th' Mariners : fall too't, yarely, or we run our ſelves a-groud, beſtirre, beſtirre. Exit.

Enter Mariners.

Botesf. Hey my hearts, cheerely, cheerely my hearts :
yare, yare : Take in the top-fail : Tend to th' Maſters whiſtle : Blow till thou buſt thy wind, if room enough.

Enter Alonſo, Sebastian, Anthonio, Ferdinando, Gonzalo, and others.

Alon. Good Bote-swain have care : where's the Maſter ? Play the men.

Botesf. I pray now keep below.

Anth. Where is the Maſter, Boſon ?

Botesf. Doe you not hear him ? you marre our labour,
Keep your Cabins : you doe aſſiſt the ſtorm.

Gonz. Nay, good be patient.

Botesf. When the Sea is : hence, what cares theſe roa-rers for the name of King ? to Cabine ; ſilence : trouble us not.

Gonz. Good, yet remember whom thou haſt aboard.

Botesf. None that I more love then my ſelf. You are a Counſellour, if you can command theſe Elements to ſi-lence, and work the peace of the preſent, we will not hand a rope more, uſe your authority : If you cannot, give thanks you have liv'd ſo long, and make your ſelf ready in your Cabine for the miſchance of the hour, if it ſo hap. Cheerely good hearts : out of our way I ſay.

Exit.

Gon. I have great comfort from this fellow : me thinks he hath no drowning mark upon him, his complexion is perfect Gallows : ſtand faſt good Fate to his hanging, make the rope of his deſtiny our Cable, for our own doth little advantage : If he be not born to be hang'd, our caſe is miſerable.

Exit.

Enter Boteswain.

Botesf. Down with the top-Maſt : yare, lower, lower, bring her to Try with Main-courſe. A plague-----
A cry within. Enter Sebastian, Anthonio & Gonzalo.
upon this howling : they are lower then the weather, or our office : yet again ? What do you here ? Shall we give o're and drown, have you a mind to ſink ?

Sebas. A pox o' your throat, you bawling, blaſphe-mous, incharitable Dog.

Botesf. Work you then.

Anth. Hang cur, hang, you whoreſon insolent Noyſe-maker ; we are leſſe afraid to be drown'd then thou art.

Gonz. I'll warrant him for drowning, though the Ship were no ſtronger then a Nut-shell, and as leaky as an unſtanch'd wench.

Botesf. Lay her a hold, a hold, ſet her two courſes off to Sea again, lay her off.

Enter Mariners wet,

Mar. All loſt, to prayers, to prayers, all loſt.

Botesf. What muſt our mouths be cold ?

Gon. The King, and Prince, at prayers, let's aſſiſt them, for our caſe is as theirs.

Sebas. I'm out of patience.

An. We are meerly cheated of our lives by drunkards,
This wide-chopt-raſcall, would thou might'ſt lie drowning the waſhing of ten Tides.

Gonz. Hee'll be hang'd yet,
Though every drop of water ſware againſt it,
And gape at wid'ſt to glut him. A confused noiſe within.
Mercy on us.

We ſplit, we ſplit, Farewell my wife, and children,
Farewell brother : we ſplit, we ſplit, we ſplit.

Anth. Let's all ſink with King.

Seb. Let's take leave of him.

Exit.

Gonz. Now would I give a thouſand furlongs of Sea for an Acre of barren ground : Long heath, Brown firrs, any thing ; the wills above be done, but I would ſain die a dry death.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Proſpero and Miranda.

Mira. If by your Art (my deareſt father) you have Put the wild waters in this Rore ; allay them :
The ſkie it ſeems would pour down ſtinking pitch,
But that the Sea, mounting to th' welkins cheek,
Daſhes the fire out. Oh ! I have ſuffered
With thoſe that I ſaw ſuffer : A brave Veſſel

(Who

(Who had no doubt some noble creature in her)
Dash'd all to pieces : Oh the cry did knock
Against my very heart : poor souls, they perish'd.
Had I been any God of power, I would Have sunk the Sea within the Earth, or ere
It should the good Ship so have swallow'd, and
The fraughting Souls within her.

Prof. Be collected,

No more amazement : Tell your piteous heart,
There's no harm done.

Mira. O wo, the day.

Prof. No harm.

I have done nothing, but in care of thee
(Of thee my dear one ; thee my daughter) who Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing
Of whence I am : nor that I am more better
Then Prospero, Master of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater Father.

Mira. More to know

Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Prof. 'Tis time

I should inform thee farther : Lend thy hand
And pluck my Magick garment from me : So,
Lye there my Art : wipe thou thine eyes, have comfort,
The direfull spectacle of the wrack, which touch'd
The very virtue of compassion in thee,
I have with such compassion in mine Art
So safely ordered, that there is no soul,
No not so much perdition as an hair
Betide to any creature in the vessell
Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sink :
Sit down, for thou must now know farther.

Mira. You have often

Begun to tell me what I am, but stopt,
And left me to the bootlesse Inquisition,
Concluding, stay : not yet.

Prof. The hour's now come,

The very minute bids thee ope thine ear,
Obey, and be attentive. Canst thou remember
A time before we came unto this Cell ?
I doe not think thou canst, for then thou was't not
Out three years old.

Mira. Certainly Sir, I can.

Prof. By what ? by any other house ; or person ?
Of any thing the Image, tell me, that Hath kept with thy remembrance.

Mira. 'Tis farre off.

And rather like a dream, then an assurance
That my remembrance warrants : Had I not Four, or five women once, that tended me ?

Prof. Thou hadst ; and more Miranda : But how is it
That this lives in thy mind ? What see'st thou else
In the dark backward and Abyfine of Time ?
If thou remembre'st ought ere thou cam'st here,
How thou cam'st here thou may'st.

Mira. But that I doe not.

Prof. Twelve year since (Miranda) twelve year since,
Thy Father was the Duke of Millain, and
A Prince of Power.

Mira. Sir, are not you my Father ?

Prof. Thy Mother was a piece of virtue, and
She said thou wast my Daughter ; and thy Father
Was Duke of Millain, and his onely heir :
And Princeesse ; no worfe Issued.

Mira. O the heavens,

What foul play had we, that we came from thence ?

Or blessed was't we did ?

Prof. Both, both my Girl.

By foul play (as thou sayest) were we heaved thence,
But blessedly holp hither.

Mira. O my heart bleeds

To think o'th' teene that I have turn'd you to,
Which is from my remembrance : please you, farther ;

Prof. My Brother and thy Uncle, call'd Antonio :
I pray thee mark me, that a Brother should Be so perfidious : he, whom next thy self
Of all the world I lov'd, and to him put
The mannage of my state, as at that time,
Through all the signories it was the first,
And Prospero the prime Duke, being so reputed
In dignity ; and for the Liberall Arts,
Without a parallell ; those being all my study.
The Government I cast upon my Brother,
And to my state grew stranger, being transported
And rapt in secret studies, thy false Uncle
(Doe'st thou attend ?)

Mira. Sir, most heedfully.

Prof. Being once perfected how to grant suits,
How to deny them : whom t'advance, and whom
To trash for over-topping ; new created
The creatures that were mine, I say, or chang'd 'em,
Or else new form'd 'em ; having both the key,
Of Officer, and office, set all hearts o'th' state
To what tune pleas'd his ear, that now he was
The Ivy which had hid my princely Trunk,
And suck't my verdure out on't : Thou attend'st not ?

Mira. O good Sir, I doe.

Prof. I pray thee mark me :

I thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
To closeness, and the bettering of my mind
With that, which but by being retired
Ore-priz'd all popular rate : in my false Brother
Awak'd an evil nature, and my trust,
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falshood in it's contrary, as great
As my trust was, which had indeed no limit,
A confidence sans bound. He being thus Lorded
Not onely with what my revenue yielded,
But what my power might else exact. Like one,
Who having into truth, by telling of it,
Made such a sinner of his Memory
To credit his own lie, he did believe
He was indeed the Duke, out o'th' Substitution
And executing th' outward face of Royalty
With all prerogative : hence his Ambition growing :
Do'st thou hear ?

Mira. Your tale, Sir, would cure deafnesse.

Prof. To have no Schreen between this part he plaid,
And him he plaid it for, he needs will be Absolute Millain, Me (poor man) my Library
Was Dukedome large enough : of temporall royalties
He thinks me now incapable. Confederates
(So drie he was for Sway) with King of Naples
To give him annuall tribute, doe him homage,
Subject his Coronet to his Crown, and bend
The Dukedome yet unbowed (alas poor Millain)
To much ignoble stooping.

Mira. Oh the Heavens.

Prof. Mark his condition, and th'event, then tell me
If this might be a Brother.

Mira. I should sin

To think but Nobly of my Grand-mother,

Good wombes have born bad sons.

Pro. Now the condition.

This King of Naples being an Enemy
To me inveterate, hearkens my brothers suit,
Which was, That he in lieu o'th' premises,
Of homage, and I know not how much Tribute,
Should presently extirpate me and mine
Out of the Dukedome, and confer fair Millain
With all the honours, on my brother : Whereon
A treacherous Army levied, one mid-night
Fated to th' purpose, did Anthonio open
The gates of Millain, and ith' dead of darknesse
The Ministers for th' purpose hurried thence Me, and thy crying self.

Mir. Alack, for pity :

I not remembring how I cri'd out then
Will cry it o're again : it is a hint
That wrings mine eyes too't

Pro. Hear a little further,

And then I'll bring thee to the present businesse
Which now's upon's without the which, this story
Were most impertinent.

Mir. Wherefore did they not
That hour destroy us?

Pro. Well demanded, wench :

My tale provokes that question : Dear, they durst not,
So dear the love my people bore me : nor set
A mark so bloody on the businesse ; but
With colours fairer, painted their foul ends.
In few, they hurried us aboard a Bark,
Bore us some Leagues to Sea, where they prepared
A rotten carkasse of a Butt, not rigg'd,
Nor tackle, nor sail, nor mast, the very rats
Instinctively have quit it : There they hoist us
To cry to th' Sea, that roar'd to us ; to sigh
To th' Winds, whose pity sighing back again
Did us but loving wrong.

Mir. Alack, what trouble
Was I then to you ?

Pro. O, a Cherubin

Thou wast that did preserve me ; Thou didst smile,
Infused with a fortitude from heaven,
When I have deck't the Sea with drops full salt,
Under my burthen groan'd, which rais'd in me
An undergoing stomach, to bear up Against what should ensue.

Mir. How came we ashore ?

Pro. By providence divine,
Some food, we had, and some fresh-water, that
A noble Neapolitan Gonzalo,
Out of his Charity, (who being then appointed Master of this design) did give us, with Rich garments, linnens, stuffs, and necessaries
Which since have steeded much, so of his gentlenesse
Knowing I lov'd my Books, he furnish'd me
From mine own Library, with volumes, that I prize above my Dukedome.

Mir. Would I might
But ever see that man.

Pro. Now I arise,

Sit still, and hear the last of our Sea-sorrow :
Here in this Island we arriv'd, and here
Have I, thy School-master, made thee more profit
Than other Princeesse can, that have more time
For vainer hours ; and Tutors, not so carefull.

Mir. Heavens thank you for't. And now I pray you Sir,

For still 'tis beating in my mind ; your reason
For raising this Sea-storm ?

Pro. Know thus far forth ;

By accident most strange, bountifull Fortune
(Now my dear Lady) hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore : And by my prescience
I find my Zenith doth depend upon
A most auspicious star, whose influence
If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop : Here cease more questions,
Thou art inclin'd to sleep : 'tis a good dulnesse,
And give it way : I know thou canst not chuse ;
Come away, Servant, come ; I am ready now, Approach my Ariel. Come. Enter Ariel.

Ari. All hail, great Master, grave Sir hail I come
To answer thy best pleasure ; be it to fly,
To swim, to dive into the fire : to ride
On the curl'd clouds : to thy strong bidding, task
Ariel, and all his Quality.

Pro. Hast thou, Spirit,

Perform'd to point, the Tempest that I bad thee.

Ar. To every Article.

I boarded the Kings ship : now on the Beak,
Now in the Waste, the Deck, in every Cabin,
I flam'd amazement, sometimes I'd divide
And burn in many places ; on the top-mast,
The Yards and Bore-sprit, would I flame distinctly,
Then meet, and joyn. Joves Lightning, the precursors
O'th' dreadfull Thunder-claps more momentarie
And sight out-running were not ; the fire and cracks
Of sulphurous roaring, the most mighty Neptune
Seem to besiege, and make his bold waves tremble, Yea, his dead Trident shake.

Pro. My brave Spirit,

Who was so firm, so constant, that this coy
Would not infect his reason ?

Ar. Not a soul

But felt a Feaver of the madde, and plaid
Some tricks of desperation ; all but Mariners
Plung'd in the foaming bryne, and quit the vessell ;
Then all a fire with me the Kings son Ferdinand
With hair up-staring (then like reeds, not hair)
Was the first man that leapt ; cri'd hell is empty,
And all the Devils are here.

Pro. Why that's my spirit :

But was not this nigh shore ?

Ar. Close by, my Master.

Pro. But are they (Ariel) safe ?

Ar. Not a hair perished :

On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher then before : and as thou badst me,
In troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the Isle :
The Kings son have I landed by himself,
Whom I left cooling of the Aire with sighs,
In an odde Angle of the Isle, and sitting,
His arms in this sad knot.

Pro. Of the Kings ship,

The Mariners, say how thou hast dispos'd,
And all the rest o'th' Fleet ?

Ar. Safely in harbour

Is the Kings ship, in the deep Nook, where once
Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still-veit Bermoothes, there shee's hid ;
The Mariners all under hatches stowed,
Who, with a Charm joyn'd to their suffered labour
I have left asleep : and for the rest o'th' Fleet

(Which I dispers'd) they all have met again,
And are upon the Mediterranean Flote
Bound sadly home for Naples,
Supposing that they saw the Kings ship wrackt,
And his great person perish.

Pro. Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is perform'd; but there's more work:
What is the time o'th' day?

Ar. Past the mid season.

Pro. At least two Glasses: the time 'twixt six and now
Must by us both be spent most preciously.

Ar. Is there more toyl? Since thou dost give me pains,
Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd me.

Pro. How now? moodie?
Which is't thou canst demand?

Ar. My Liberty.

Pro. Before the time be out? no more:

Ar. I prethee,
Remember I have done thee worthy service,
Told thee no lyes, made thee no mistakings, serv'd
Without or grudge, or grumblings; thou didst promise
To bate me a full year.

Pro. Dost thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee? Ar. No.

Pro. Thou dost: & thinkest it much to tread the Ooze
Of the salt deep;
To run upon the sharp wind of the North,
To doe me businesse in the veins o' th' earth
When it is bak'd with frost.

Ar. I doe not Sir.

Pro. Thou liest, malignant Thing: hast thou forgot
The fowl Witch Sycorax, who with Age and Envy
Was grown into a Hoop? hast thou forgot her?

Ar. No Sir.

Pro. Thou hast: where was she born? speak: tell me:

Ar. Sir, in Argier.

Pro. Oh, was she so: I must
Once in a moneth recount what thou hast bin,
Which thou forgetst. This damn'd Witch Sycorax
For mischiefs manifold, and forceries terrible
To enter humane hearing, from Argier
Thou know'st was banish'd: for one thing she did
They would not take her life: Is not this true? Ar. I Sir.

Pro. This blew ey'd hag, was hither brought with
And here was left by th' Saylor; thou my slave, (child,
As thou report'st thy self, was then her servant,
And, for thou wast a Spirit too delicate
To act her earthy and abhord commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee,
By help of her more potent ministers,
And in her most unmittigable rage,
Into a cloven Pyne: within which rift
Imprison'd, thou did'st painfully remain
A dozen years: within which space she di'd,
And left thee there: Where thou didst vent thy groans
As fast as Mill-wheels strike: Then was this Island (Save for the Sun that he did littour here.
A freckell'd whelp, hag-born) not honour'd with
A humane shape.

Ar. Yes: Caliban her son.

Pro. Dull thing, I say so: he, that Caliban
Whom now I keep in service, thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in; thy groans
Did make Woolves howl, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry Beares; it was a torment

To lay upon the damn'd, which Sycorax
Could not again undo: it was mine Art,
When I arriv'd, and heard thee, that made gape
The Pyne, and let thee out.

Ar. I thank thee Master.

Pro. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an Oak
And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till
Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters.

Ar. Pardon, Master.

I will be correspondent to command
And doe my spriting gently.

Pro. Do so: and after two dayes
I will discharge thee.

Ar. That's my noble Master:

What shall I doe? say what? what shall I doe?

Pro. Go make thy self like to a Nymph o'th' Sea,
Be subject to no sight but thine, and mine: invisible
To every eye-ball else: go take this shape
And hither come in't: go: hence
With diligence.

Pro. Awake, dear heart awake, thou hast slept well, Awake. Exit.

Mar. The strangeness of your story, put Heaviness in me.

Pro. Shake it off: Come on,
We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never Yields us kind answer.

Mir. 'Tis a villain Sir, I doe not love to look on.

Pro. But as 'tis

We cannot misse him: he do's make our fire,
Fetch in our wood, and serves Offices
That profit us: What hoa: slave: Caliban:
Thou Earth thou: speak.

Cal. within. There's wood enough within.

Pro. Come forth I say, there's other businesse for thee:
Come thou Tortoys, when? *Enter Ariel like a water-
Fine apparition: my quaint Ariel, Nymph.*
Heark in thine ear.

Ar. My Lord, it shall be done. Exit.

Pro. Thou poisonous slave, got by the Devil himself Upon thy wicked Dam; come forth. Enter Caliban.

Cal. As wicked dew, as ere my Mother brush'd
With Ravens feather from unwholsome Fen,
Drop on you both: A South-west blow on yee,
And blister you all o're.

Pro. For this be sure, to night thou shalt have cramps,
Side-stitches, that shall pen thy breath up, Urchins
Shall for that vast of night, that they may work
All exercise on thee: thou shalt be pinch'd
As thick as honny-combe, each pinch more stinging
Then Bees that made'em.

Gal. I must eat my dinner:
This Island's mine by Sycorax my Mother,
Which thou tak'st from me: when thou can'st first
Thou stroak'st me, & made much of me: would'st give me
Water with berries in't: and teach me how
To name the bigger Light, and how the lesse,
That burn by day and night: and then I loved thee,
And shewed thee all the qualities o'th' Isle,
The fresh Springs, Brine-pits; barren place and fertill,
Cuts'd be I that I did so: All the Charms
Of Sycorax: Toads, Beetles, Bats light on you:
For I am all the Subjects that you have,
Which first was mine own King: and here you sty-me
In this hard Rock, whiles you doe keep from me
The rest o'th' Island.

Pro.

Pro. Thou most lying slave,
Whom stripes may move, not kindness: I have us'd thee
(Filt' as thou art) with humane care, and lodg'd thee
In mine own Cell, till thou didst seek to violate
The honour of my child.

Cal. Oh ho, oh ho, would't had been done:
Thou didst prevent me, I had peopel'd else
This Isle with Calibans.

Mir. Abhorred Slave,
Which any print of goodness will not take,
Being capable of all ill: I pittied thee,
Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each hour
One thing or other: when thou didst not (Savage)
Know thine own meaning; but wouldst gabble, like
A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes
With words that made them known: But thy vild race
(Tho thou didst learn) had that int't, which good natures
Could not abide to be with; therefore wast thou
Deservedly confin'd into this Rock, who hadst
Deserv'd more than a prison.

Cal. You taught me Language, and my profit on't
Is, I know how to curse: the red-plague rid you
For learning me your language.

Pro. Hag-seed hence:
Fetch us in Fewel, and be quick thou'rt best
To answer other business: thrug'st thou (Malice)
If thou neglect'st, or dost unwillingly
What I command, Ile rack thee with old cramp's,
Fill all thy bones with Aches, make thee rore,
That beasts shall tremble at thy dyn.

Cal. No, 'pray thee.
I must obey, his Art is of such pow'r,
It would controll my Dam's god Setebos,
And make a vassalle of him.

Pro. So slave, hence.
Enter Ferdinand and Ariel, invisible playing & singing.

Ariel's Song. Come unto these yellow sands, and then take hands:
Curst'sied when you have, and kist
the wild waves' whist:

Foot it featly here and there, and sweet Sprights bear the burthen. Burthen dispersedly.

Hark, hark, bough-wawgh: the watch-Dogs bark, bough-wawgh.

Ar. Hark, hark, I hear the strain of strutting Chanticleer, cry cockadiddle-dowe.

Fer. Where should this Musick be? I'th aire, or th'earth?
It sounds no more: and sure it waits upon
Some god 'oth' Island, sitting on a bank,
Weeping again the King my Fathers wrack.
This Musick crept by me upon the Waters,
Allaying both their fury, and my passion
With it's sweet ayre: thence I have follow'd it (Or it hath drawn me rather) but 'tis gone.
No, it begins again.

Ariel's Song. Full fadom five thy Father lies,
Of his bones are Corrall made:
Those are pearl's that were his eyes,
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a Sea-change
Into something rich, and strange:
Sea-Nymphs hourly ring his knell.
Burthen: ding dong.

Hark now I hear them, ding-dong bell.

Fer. The Ditty do's remember my drown'd father,
This is no mortal business, nor no sound

That the earth owes: I hear it now above me.

Pro. The fringed Curtains of thine eye advance,
And say what thou see'st yond.

Mir. What is't a spirit?
Lord, how it look's about: Believe me sir,
It carries a brave forme. But 'tis a spirit,

Pro. No wench, it eats, and sleeps, and hath such senses
As we have; such. This Gallant which thou see'st
Was in the wrack: and but hee's something stain'd
With grief (that's beauties canker) thou might'st call him
A goodly person: he hath lost his fellowes,
And strays about to finde'em

Mir. I might call him
A thing divine, for nothing natural
I ever saw so Noble.

Pro. It goes on I see
As my soul prompts it: Spirit, fine spirit, I'll free thee
Within two dayes for this.

Fer. Most sure the god desse
On whom these ayres attend. Vouchsafe my pray'r
May know, if you remain upon this Island,
And that you will some good instruction give
How I may bear me here: my prime request
(Which I do last pronounce) is (O you wonder)
If you be Maid, or no?

Mir. No wonder sir,
But certainly a Maid.

Fer. My Language? Heavens:
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.

Pro. How? the best?
What wer't thou if the King of Naples heard thee?

Fer. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders
To hear Thee speak of Naples: he do's hear me,
And that he do's, I weep: my self am Naples,
Who, with mine eyes (never since at ebbe) beheld
The King my Father wrack't.

Mir. Alack, for mercy:

Fer. Yes faith, and all his Lords, the Duke of Millain
And his brave son, being twain.

Pro. The Duke of Millain
And his more braver daughter, could controll thee,
If now 'twere fit to do't: At the first sight
They have chang'd eyes: Dilicate Ariel,
Ile set thee free for this. A word good Sir,
I fear you have done your self some wrong: A word,

Mir. Why speaks my father so urgently? This Is the third man that ere I saw: the first
That ere I sigh'd for: pittie move my father
To be enclin'd my way.

Fer. O, if a Virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, Ile make you
The Queen of Naples.

Pro. Soft Sir, one word more.
They are both in eithers pow'rs: But this swift business
I must uneasy make, least too light winning
Make the prize light. One word more: I charge thee
That thou attend me: Thou do'st here usurpe
The name thou ow'st not, and hast put thy self
Upon this Island, as a spye, to win it
From me, the Lord on't

Fer. No, as I am a man.

Mir. Ther's nothing ill, can dwell in such a Temple.
If the ill-spirit have so fair a house,
Good things will strive to dwell with't.

Pro. Follow me.

Prof. Speak not you for him : he's a Traitour : come,
I'll manacle thy neck and feet together :
Sea water shalt thou drink : thy food shall be
The fresh-brook Mussels, wither'd roots, and husks
Wherein the Acorn cradled. Follow.

Fer. No,
I will resist such entertainment, till
Mine enemy ha's more pow'r.

He draws, and is charmed from moving.

Mira. O dear Father;
Make not too rash a triall of him, for
He's gentle, and not fearfull.

Prof. What I say,
My foot my Tutor ? Put thy sword up Traitour,
Who makes a shew, but dar'st not strike : thy conscience
Is possesst with guilt : Come from thy ward,
For I can hear disparin thee with this stick,
And make thy weapon drop.

Mir. Beseech you Father.

Pro. Hence : hang not on my garments.

Mir. Sir, have pity,
I'll be his surety.

Pro. Silence : One word more
Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee : What,
An advocate for an Impostor ? Hush :
Thou think'st there is no more such shapes as he,
(Having seen but him and Caliban :) Foolish wench,
To th' most of men, this is a Caliban,
And they to him are Angels.

Mir. My affections
Are then most humble : I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.

Pro. Come on, obey :
Thy Nerves are in their infancy again,
And have no vigour in them.

Fer. So they are :
My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up :
My Fathers losse, the weakness which I feel,
The wrack of all my friends, nor this mans threats,
To whom I am subdu'd, are but light to me,
Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this Maid : all corners else o'th' Earth
Let liberty make use of : space enough
Have I in such a prison.

Pro. It works : Come on.
Thou hast done well, fine Ariell : follow me.
Hark what thou else shalt doe me.

Mir. Be of comfort,
My Father's of a better nature (Sir)
Then he appears by speech : this is unwonted
Which now came from him.

Pro. Thou shalt be as free
As mountain winds, but then exactly doe
All points of my command.

Ar. To th' syllable.

Pro. Come follow : speak not for him, Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, and others.

Gonz. Beseech you Sir, be merry : you have cause,
(So have we all) of joy ; for our escape

Is much beyond our losse ; our hint of woe
Is common, every day, some Sailors Wife,
The Masters of some Merchant, and the Merchant
Have just our Theam of woe : But for the miracle,
(I mean our preservation) few in millions
Can speak like us : then wisely (good Sir) weigh
Our sorrow, with our comfort.

Alonf. Prethee peace.

Seb. He receives comfort like cold porridge.

Ant. The Visitor will not give him o're so.

Seb. Look, he's winding up the Watch of his wit,
By and by it will strike.

Gon. Sir.

Seb. On : Tell.

Gon. When every grief is entertain'd,
That's offer'd comes to th' entertainer.

Seb. A dollor.

Gon. Dolour comes to him indeed, you have spoken truer then you purpos'd.

Seb. You have taken it wiselier then I meant you should.

Gon. Therefore my Lord.

Ant. Fie, what a spend-thrift is he of his tongue.

Alon. I prethee spare.

Gon. Well, I have done : But yet

Seb. He will be talking.

Ant. Which, of he, or Adrian, for a good wager,
First begins to crow ?

Seb. The old Cock.

Ant. The Cockrell.

Seb. Done : The wager ?

Ant. A laughter.

Seb. A match.

Adr. Though this Island seem to be desert.

Seb. Ha, ha, ha.

Ant. So : you'r paid.

Adr. Uninhabitable, and almost inaccessible.

Seb. Yet.

Adr. Yet.

Ant. He could not mis's't.

Adr. It must needs be of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance.

Ant. Temperance was a delicate wench.

Seb. I, and a subtle, as he most learnedly deliver'd.

Adr. The aire breathes upon us here most sweetly.

Seb. As if it had Lungs, and rotten ones.

Ant. Or, as 'twere perfum'd by a Fen.

Gon. Here is every thing advantageous to life.

Ant. True, save means to liye.

Seb. Of that there's none, or little.

Gon. How lush and lusty the grass looks ?

How green ?

Ant. The ground indeed is tawny.

Seb. With an eye of green in't.

Ant. He misses not much.

Seb. No : he doth but mistake the truth totally.

Gon. But the rarity of it is, which is indeed almost beyond credit.

Seb. As many voucht rarities are.

Gon. That our Garments being (as they were) drencht in the Sea, hold notwithstanding their freshnesse and glosses, being rather new dy'd then stain'd with salt water.

Ant. If but one of his pockets could speak, would it not say he lies ?

Seb. I, or very falsely pocket up his report.

Gon.

Gon. Methinks our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Affrick, at the marriage of the Kings fair daughter Claribel to the King of Tunis.

Seb. 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our return.

Adri. Tunis was never grac'd before with such a Paragon to their Queen.

Gon. Nor since Widow Dido's time.

Ant. Widow? a pox o' that: how came that Widow in? Widow Dido!

Seb. What if he had said Widower Aeneas too? Good Lord, how you take it?

Adri. Widow Dido said you? You make me study of that: She was of Carthage, not of Tunis.

Gon. This Tunis Sir was Carthage.

Adri. Carthage? Gon. I assure you Carthage.

Ant. His word is more then the miraculous Harp.

Seb. He hath rais'd the wall, and houses too.

Ant. What impossible matter will he make easie next?

Seb. I think he will carry this Island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an Apple.

Ant. And sowing the kernels of it in the Sea, bring forth more Islands.

Gon. I, Ant. Why in good time.

Gon. Sir, we were talking, that our garments seem now as fresh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now Queen.

Ant. And the rarest that ere came there.

Seb. Bate (I beseech you) Widow Dido.

Ant. O Widow Dido? I, Widow Dido.

Gon. Is not my Doublet Sir as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean in a sort.

Ant. That sort was well fish'd for.

Gon. When I wore it at your daughters marriage.

Alon. You cram these words into mine ears, against the stomach of my sense: would I had never Married my daughter there: For coming thence My son is lost; and (in my rate) she too, Who is so far from Italy removed, I ne're again shall see her: O thou mine heir Of Naples and of Millain, what strange fish Hath made his meal on thee?

Fran. Sir he may live.

I saw him beat the surges under him,
And ride upon their backs; he trod the water
Whose enmity he flung aside: and brest
The surge most swollen that met him: his bold head
'Bove the contentious waves he kept and oared.
Himself with his good armes in lusty stroke
To th' shore; that ore his wave-worn basis bowed
As stooping to relieve him: I not doubt
He came alive to Land.

Alon. No, no, he's gone.

Seb. Sir you may thank your self for this great losse,
That would not blesse our Europe with your daughter,
But rather lose her to an African.
Where she at least, is banish'd from your eye,
Who hath cause to wet the grief on't.

Alon. Prethee peace.

Seb. You were kneel'd too; and importun'd otherwise
By all of us: and the fair soul her self Waigh'd between loathnesse, and obedience, at Which end o'th' beam should bow: we have lost your
I fear for ever: Millain and Naples have (son,
Mo Widows in them of this businesse making,
Then we bring men to comfort them:

The fault's your own.

Alon. So is the deer'st o'th' losse.

Gon. My Lord Sebastian,

The truth you speak doth lack some gentlenesse,
And time to speak it in: you rub the sore,
When you should bring the plaister.

Seb. Very well. Ant. And most Chirurgeonly.

Gon. It is foul weather in us all, good Sir,
When you are cloudy.

Seb. Foul weather? Ant. Very foul

Gon. Had I plantation of this Isle my Lord.

Ant. He'd sow't with Nettle-seed.

Seb. Or Docks, or Mallows.

Gon. And were the King on't, what would I doe?

Seb. Scape being drunk, for want of Wine.

Gon. I'th' Commonwealth I would (by contraries)
Execute all things: For no kind of Traffick
Would I admit: No name of Magistrate:
Letters should not be known: Riches, poverty,
And use of service, none: Contract, Succession,
Born, bound of Land, Tith, Vineyard none:
No use of Metall, Corn, or Wine, or Oyl:
No occupation, all men idle, all:
And women too, but innocent and pure:
No Sovereignty.

Seb. Yet he would be King on't.

Ant. The latter end of his Common-wealth forgets the beginning.

Gon. All things in common Nature should produce
Without sweat or endeavour: Treason, felony,
Sword, Pike, Knife, Gun, or need of any Engine
Would I not have: but Nature should bring forth
Of it's own kind, all foyzon; all abundance
To feed my innocent people.

Seb. No marrying 'mong his Subjects?

Ant. None (man) all idle; Whores and Knaves,

Gon. I would with such perfection govern Sir:
T' excell' the Golden Age.

Seb. 'Save his Majesty. Ant. Long live Gonzalo.

Gon. And doe you marke me, Sir? (me.

Alon. Prethee no more: thou dost talk nothing to

Gon. I doe well believe your Highnesse, and did it to minister occasion to these Gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble Lungs, that they alwayes use to laugh at nothing.

Ant. 'Twas you we laugh'd at.

Gon. Who, in this kind of merry fooling am nothing to you: so you may continue, and laugh at nothing still.

Ant. What a blow was there given?

Seb. And it had not faln flat-long.

Gon. You are Gentlemen of a brave metal: you would lift the Moon out of her sphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without changing.

Enter Ariell playing solemn Musick;

Seb. We would so, and then go a Bat-fowling.

Ant. Nay good my Lord, be not angry.

Gon. No I warrant you, I will not adventure my discretion so weakly: Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy.

Ant. Go sleep and hear us.

Alon. What, all so soon asleep? I wish mine eyes
Would (with themselves) shut up my thoughts,
I find they are inclin'd to doe so.

Seb. Please you Sir,

Doe not omit the heavy offer of it:

It seldome visits sorrow, when it doth, it is a Comforter

Ant.

Ant. We two my Lord, will guard your person,
While you take your rest, and watch your safety.

Alon. Thank you : Wondrous heavy.

Seb. What a strange drowsiness possesses them ?

Ant. It is the quality o' th' Clymate.

Seb. Why.

Doth it not then our eye-lids sinke ? I finde
Not my self dispos'd to sleep :

Ant. Nor I, my spirits are nimble :

They fell together all, as by conf^gt
They dropt, as by a Thunder-stroke : what might :
Worthy Sebastian ? O, what might ? no more
And yet, me thinks I see it in thy face,
What thou should'st be : th' occasion speak's thee, and
My strong imagination see's a Crown
Dropping upon thy head.

Seb. What ? art thou waking ?

Ant. Do you not hear me speak ?

Seb. I do, and surely

It is a sleepy Language, and thou speak'st
Out of thy sleep : What is it thou didst say ?
This is a strange repose, to be asleep
With eyes wide open : standing, speaking, moving :
And yet so fast asleep.

Ant. Noble Sebastian,

Thou let'st thy fortune sleep : die rather : wink'st
Whiles thou art waking.

Seb. Thou do'st snore distinctly,

There's meaning in thy snores.

Ant. I am more serious then my custome : you Must be so too, if heed me : which to doe,
Trebbles thee o're.

Seb. Well : I am standing water.

Ant. I'll teach you how to flow.

Seb. Do so : to ebbe,
Hereditary Sloth instructs me.

Ant. O !

If you but knew how you the purpose cherish
Whiles thus you mock it : how in stripping it
You more invest it : ebbing men, indeed
(Most often) doe so near the bottom run
By their own fear, or sloth.

Seb. Prethee say on,
The setting of thine eye, and cheek proclaim
A matter from thee : and a birth, indeed,
Which throwes thee much to yield.

Ant. Thus Sir :

Although this Lord of weak remembrance ; this
Who shall be of as little memory
When he is earth'd, hath here almost perswaded
(For he's a Spirit of perswasion, onely Professes to perswade) the King his son's alive,
'Tis as impossible that he's undrown'd,
As he that sleeps here, swims.

Seb. I have no hope,
That he's undrown'd.

Ant. O, out of that no hope,
What great hope have you ? No hope that way : Is Another way, so high a hope, that even Ambition cannot pierce a wink beyond,
But doubt discovery there. Will you grant with me
That Ferdinand is drown'd ?

Seb. He's gone.

Ant. Then tell me who's the next heir of Naples ?

Seb. Claribell.

Ant. She that is Queen of Tunis : she that dwells

Ten leagues beyond mans life : she that from Naples
Can have no note, unlesse the Sun were post :
The Man i'th Moon's too slow, till new-born chinnes
Be rough, and Razor-able : She that from whom
We all were sea-swallow'd, though some cast again,
And by that destiny to perform an act,
Whereof, what's past in prologue ; what to come
In yours, and my discharge.

Seb. What stuffe is this ? How lay you ?

'Tis true, my brother's daughter's Queen of Tunis,
So is the heir of Naples, twixt which Regions
There is some space.

Ant. A space. whose ev'ry cubit
Seems to cry out, how shall that Claribell
Measure us back by Naples ? keep in Tunis.
And let Sebastian wake. Say, this were death
That now hath seiz'd them, why they were no worse
Then now they are : There be that can rule Naples
As well as he that sleeps : Lords, that can prate
As amply, and unnecessarily
As this Gonzalo : I my self could make
A Chough of as deep chat : O, that you bore
The mind that I do ; what a sleep were this
For your advancement ! Doe you understand me ?

Seb. Me thinks I doe.

Ant. And how do's your content
Tender your own good fortune ?

Seb. I remember

You did supplant your Brother Prospero.

Ant. True :

And look how well my Garments sit upon me,
Much feater then before : My Brother's servants
Were then my fellows, now they are my men.

Seb. But for your conscience.

Ant. I Sir : where lies that ? If 'twere a kybe
I would put me to my slipper : But I feel not
This Deity in my bosome : Twenty consciences
That stand 'twixt me, and Millain, candied be they,
And melt ere they molest : Here lies your Brother,
No better then the earth he lies upon,
If he were that which now he's like (that's dead)
Whom I with this obedient steel (three inches of it)
Can lay to bed for ever : whiles you doing thus,
To the perpetuall wink for aye might put
This ancient morfell : this Sir Prudence, who Should not upbraid our course : for all the rest
They'l take suggestion, as a Cat laps milk,
They'l tell the clock, to any business that
We say befits the hour.

Seb. Thy case, dear Friend
Shall be my president : As thou got'st Millain,
I'll come by Naples : Draw thy sword, one stroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou payest,
And I the King shall love thee.

Ant. Draw together :

And when I rear my hand, doe you the like
To fall it on Gonzalo.

Seb. O, but one word,

Enter Ariell with Musick and Song.

Ariel. My Master through his Art foresees the danger
That you (his friend) are in, and lends me forth
(For else his project dies) to keep them living.

Sings in Gonzalo's ear.

while you here do snoring lie,
Open-ey'd Conspiracie
His time doth take :

*If of Life you keep a care,
Shake of slumber and beware.
Awake, awake.*

Ant. Then let us both be sudden.

Gon. Now, good Angels preserve the King.

Alo. Why how now ho; awake? why are you drawn?
Wherefore this ghastly looking?

Gon. What's the matter?

Seb. Whiles we stood here securing your repose,
(Even now) we heard a hollow burst of bellowing
Like Bulls, or rather Lyons, did't not wake you?
It strook mine ear most terribly.

Alo. I heard nothing.

Ant. O, 'twas a din to fright a Monster's ear;
To make an earthquake: sure it was the roare
Of a whole herd of Lyons.

Alo. Heard you this Gonzalo?

Gon. Upon mine honour, Sir, I heard a humming,
(And that a strange one too) which did awake me:
I shak'd you Sir, and cri'd: as mine eyes open'd,
I saw their weapons drawn: there was a noyse,
That's verily: 'tis best we stand upon our guard;
Or that we quit this place: let's draw our weapons.

Alo. Lead off this ground, and let's make further search
For my poor son.

Gon. Heavens keep him from these Beasts:
For he is sure i'th Island.

Alo. Lead away.

Ar. Prospero, my Lord, shall know what I have done.
So (King) go safely on to seek thy Son. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Caliban, with a burthen of wood (a noyse of Thunder heard.)

Cal. All the infections that the Sun sucks up
From Bogs, Fens, Flats, on Prosper fall, and make him
By ynn-meal a disease: his Spirits hear me,
And yet I needs must curse. But they'll not pinch,
Fright me with Urchin-shewes, pinch me i'th mire,
Nor lead me like a fire-brand, in the dark
Out of my way, unless he bid'em; but
For every trifle, are they set upon me,
Sometime like Apes, that mow and chatter at me,
And after bite me: then like Hedg-hogs, which Lie tumbling in my barefoot way, and mount
Their pricks at my foot-fall: sometime am I
All wound with Adders, who with cloven tongues
Do hisse me into madness: Lo, now Lo, Enter.
Here comes a Spirit of his, and to torment me, Trinculo.
For bringing wood in slowly: I'll fall flat,
Perchance he will not mind me.

Tri. Here's neither bush, nor shrub to bear off any weather at all: and another storm brewing, I hear it sing i'th wind: yond same black cloud, yond huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would shed his liquor; if it should thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: yond same cloud cannot chuse but fall by pailfulls. What have we here, a man, or a fish? dead or alive? a fish, he smells like a fish: a very ancient and fish-like smell: a kind of, not of the newest poor John: a strange fish: were I in England now (as once I was) and had but this fish painted; not a holy-day fool there but would give a piece of silver:

there, would this monster, make a man: any strange beast there, makes a man: when they will not give a doit to relieve a lame Beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian: Leg'd like a man; and his Fins like Armes; warm o' my troth: I doe now let loose my opinion; hold it no longer; this is no fish, but an Island, that hath lately suffered by a Thunderbolt: Alas, the storm is come again: my best way is to creep under his Gaberdine: there is no other shelter hereabout:
Misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows: I will here throwd till the dregs of the storm be past.

Enter Stephano singing.

Ste. I shall no more to sea to sea, here shall I dye ashore.
This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a mans
Funerall: well, here's my comfort. Drinks.

Sings. The Master, the Swabber, the Boat-swain & I;
The Gunner, and his Mate,
Lov'd Mall, Meg, and Marrian, and Margery,
But none of us car'd for Kate,
For she had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a Sailour go hang:
She lov'd not the savour of Tar nor of Pitch,
Yet a Taylor might scratch her where ere she did itch.
Then to Sea Boys, and let her go hang.

This is a scurvy tune too:

But here's my comfort. drinks.

Cal. Doe not torment me: oh.

Ste. What's the matter?

Have we Devils here?

Do you put tricks upon's with Salvages, and Men of Inde?
ha? I have not scap'd drowning, to be asfeard now of your four legs: for it hath bin said: as proper a man as ever went on four legs, cannot make him give ground:
and it shall be said so again, while Stephano breathes at nostrils.

Cal. The Spirit torments me: oh.

Ste. This is some monster of the Isle, with four legs:
who hath got (as I take it) an ague: where the Devil should he learn our language? I will give him some relief if it be but for that: if I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a Pre-sient for any Emperour that ever trod on Neats-Leather.

Cal. Doe not torment me 'prethee: I'll bring my wood home faster.

Ste. He's in his fit now; and do's not talk after the wisest; he shall taste of my Bottle: if he have never drunk Wine afore, it will go near to remove his Fit:
if I can recover him, and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him; he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

Cal. Thou dost me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon,
I know it by thy trembling: Now Prosper works upon thee.

Ste. Come on your wayes: open your mouth: here is that which will give language to you Cal; open your mouth; this will shake your shaking, I can tell you, and that soundly: you cannot tell who's your friend; open your chaps again.

Tri. I should know that voyce:

It should be,-----

But

But he is drown'd ; and these are Devils ; O defend me.

Ste. Four legs and two voyces ; a most delicate Monster : his forward voyce now is to speak of his friend ; his backward voyce, is to utter foul speeches, and to detract : if all the Wine in my Bottle will recover him, I will help his Ague : Come : Amen, I will poure some in thy other mouth.

Tri. Stephano.

Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me ? Mercy, mercy : This is a Devil and no Monster : I will leave him, I have no long Spoon,

Tri. Stephano : if thou bee'st Stephano, touch me, and speak to me : for I am Trinculo ; be not afraid, thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou bee'st Trinculo : come forth : I'll pull thee by the lesser legs : if any be Trinculo's legs these are they : Thou art very Trinculo indeed : how cam'st thou to be the siege of this Moon-calf ? Can he vent Trinculo's !

Tri. I took him to be kill'd with a thunder-stroke ; but art thou not drown'd Stephano : I hope now thou art not drown'd : Is the storm over-blown ? I hid me under the dead Moon-Calfes Gaberdine, for fear of the Storm : And art thou living Stephano ? O Stephano, two Neapolitanes escap'd ?

Ste. Prethee doe not turn me about, my stomach is not constant.

Cal. These be fine things, and if they be not sprights : that's a brave god, and bears Celestiall liquor : I will kneel to him.

Ste. How did'st thou scape ?

How cam'st thou hither ?

Swear by this Bottle how thou cam'st hither : I escap'd upon a But of Sack, which the Saylor heaved o're-board, by this Bottle which I made of the Bark of a Tree, with mine own hands, since I was cast ashore.

Cal. I'll swear upon that Bottle, to be thy true Subject, for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here : swear then how thou escap'd'st.

Tri. Sworn ashore (man) like a Duck ; I can swim like a Duck i'll be sworn.

Ste. Here, kisse the Book.

Though thou canst swim like a Duck, thou art made like a Goose.

Tri. O Stephano, has't any more of this ?

Ste. The whole But (man) my Cellar is in a rock by th' Sea side, where my wine is hid :

How now Moon-Calf, how do's thine Ague ?

Cal. Has't thou not dropt from heaven ?

Ste. Out o'th Moon I doe assure thee. I was the Man ith' Moon when time was.

Cal. I have seen thee in her : and I doe adore thee : My Mistressse shew'd me thee, and thy Dog, and thy Bush.

Ste. Come swear to that : kisse the Book : I will furnish it anon with the new contents : Swear.

Tri. By this good light, this is a very shallow Monster : I afraid of him ? a very shallow Monster : The Man ith' Moon ?

A most poor credulous Monster :

Well drawn Monster, in good sooth.

Cal. I'll shew thee every fertill ynh o'th' Isle : and I will kisse thy foot : I prethee be my god.

Tri. By this light, a most perfidious, and drunken Monster, when's god's asleep hee'll rob his Bottle.

Cal. I'll kisse thy foot. I'll swear my self thy Subject.

Ste. Come on then : down and swear.

Tri. I shall laugh my self to death at this puppy-headed Monster : a most scurvie Monster : I could find in my heart to beat him.

Ste. Come, kisse.

Tri. But that the poor Monster's in drink : An abominable Monster.

Cal. I'll shew thee the best Springs : I'll pluck thee Berries : I'll fish for thee ; and get thee wood enough. A plague upon the Tyrant that I serve ; I'll bear him no more Sticks, but follow thee, thou wondrous man.

Tri. A most ridiculous Monster, to make a wonder of a poor drunkard.

Cal. I prethee let me bring thee where Crabs grow ; and I with my long nayles will dig thee pig-nuts ; shew thee a Jay's nest, and instruct thee how to snare the nimble Marmazet : I'll bring thee to clustring Philbirts, and sometimes I'll get thee young Scamels from the Rock : Wilt thou go with me ?

Cal. I prethee now lead the way without any more talking. Trinculo, the King, and all our company else being drown'd, we will inherit here : Here ; bear my Bottle : Fellow Trinculo ; we'll fill him by and by again :

Caliban sings drunkenly.

Farewell Master ; farewell, farewell.

Tri. A howling Monster : a drunken Monster.

Cal. No more dams I'll make for fish,
Nor fetch in firing, at requiring,
Nor scrape trenchering, nor wash dish,
Ban' ban', Cacalyban

Has a new Master, get a new Man,
Freedom, high-day, high-day freedom, freedom high-day freedom.

Ste. O brave Monster, lead the way.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Ferdinand (bearing a Log.)

Fer. There be some sports are painfull ; and their labour Delight in them set off : Some kinds of baseness Are nobly undergon ; and most poor matters Point to rich ends : this my mean Task Would be as heavy to me, as odious, but The Mistressse which I serve, quickens what's dead, And makes my labours pleasures : O she is Ten times more gentle, then her Father's crabbed ; And he's compo'd of harshness, I must remove Some thousands of these Logs ; and pile them up, Upon a sore injunction ; my sweet Mistressse Weeps when she sees me work, and says, such baseness Had never like Executor : I forget : But these sweet thoughts, doe even refresh my labours, Most busie least, when I doe it.

Mir. Alas, now pray you.

Enter Miranda and Prospero.

Work not so hard : I would the lightning had Burnt up those Logs that thou art enjoyned to pile : Pray set it down, and rest you : when this burns I will weep for having wearied you : my Father Is hard at study, pray now rest your self,

He's

Hee's safe for these three hours.

Fer. O most dear Mistresse,
The Sun will set before I shall discharge
What I must strive to doe.

Mer. If you'll sit down
I'll bear your Logs the while : pray give me that,
I'll carry it to the pile.

Fer. No precious Creature,
I had rather crack my sinews, break my back,
Then you should such dishonor undergoe,
While I sit lazy by.

Mir. It would become me.
As well as it do's you ; and I should do it
With much more ease : for my good will is to it,
And yours it is against.

Pro. Poor worm thou art infected,
This visitation shews it.

Mir. You look wearily.

Fer. No, noble Mistress, 'tis fresh morning with me.
When you are by at night : I do beseech you
Chiefly, that I might set it in my prayers,
What is your name ?

Mir. Miranda. O my Father,
I have broke your heft to say so.

Fer. Admir'd Miranda,
Indeed the top of Admiration, worth
What's dearest to the world : full many a Lady
I have ey'd with best regard, and many a time
Th'harmony of their tongues hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent ear : for several virtues
Have I lik'd several women, never any
With so full soul, but some defect in her
Did quarrell with the noblest grace she ow'd,
And put it to the foyle. But you, O you,
So perfect, and so peerlesse, are created
Of every Creatures best.

Mir. I doe not know
One of my sex ; no womans face remember,
Save from my glasse, mine own : Nor have I seen
More that I may call men, then you good friend,
And my dear Father : how features are abroad
I am skillese of ; but my modesty
(The jewell in my dower) I would not wish
Any Companion in the world but you :
Nor can imagination form a shape,
Besides your self, to like of : but I prattle
Something too wildly, and my Fathers precepts
I therein doe forget.

Fer. I am, in my condition
A Prince (Miranda) I doe think a King
(I would not so) and would no more endure
This wooden slavery, then to suffer
The flesh-flie blow my mouth : hear my soul speak.
The very instant that I saw you did
My heart flie to your service, there resides
To make me slave to it, and for your sake
Am I this patient Log-man.

Mir. Do you love me ?

Fer. O heaven ; O earth, bear witness to this sound,
And crown what I professe with kind event
If I speak true : if hollowly, invert
What best is boaded me, to mischief : I,
Beyond all limit of what else i'th' world
Do love, prize, honour you.

Mir. I am a fool
To weep at what I am glad of.

Pro. Fair encounter

Of two most rare affections : heavens rain grace
On that which breeds between'em.

Fer. Wherefore weep you ?

Mir. At mine unworthinesse that dare not offer
What I desire to give, and much lesse take
What I shall die to want : But this is trifling,
And all the more it seekt to hide it self,
The bigger bulk it shews. Hence bathfull cunning,
And prompt me plain and holy innocence.
I am your wife if you will marry me ;
If not, I'll die your maid : to be your fellow
You may denie me ; but I'll be your servant
Whether you will or no.

Fer. My Mistresse (dearest)
And I thus humble ever.

Mir. My Husband then ?

Fer. I, with a heart so willing
As bondage ere of freedome : here's my hand.

Mir. And mine, with my heart in't ; and now farewell
Till half an hour hence.

Fer. A thousand, thousand.

Exeunt.

Pro. So glad of this as they I cannot be,
Who are surpriz'd with all ; but my rejoycing
At nothing can be more : I'll to my book,
For yet ere supper time must I perform
Much businesse appertaining.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo.

Ste. Tell not me, when the But is out we will drink water, not a drop, before ; therefore bear up, and board
'em Servant Monster, drink to me.

Trin. Servant Monster ? the folly of this Island, they say there's but five upon this Isle ; we are three of them, if th'other two be brain'd like us, the State totters.

Ste. Drink servant Monster when I bid thee, thy eyes are almost set in thy heart.

Trin. Where should they be set else ? he were a brave
Monster indeed if they were set in his tail.

Ste. My man-Monster hath drown'd his tongue in Sack : for my part the Sea cannot drown me, I swam ere
I could recover the shore, five and thirty Leagues, off and on ; by this light thou shalt be my Lieutenant Monster, or my Standard.

Trin. Your Lieutenant if you list, hee's no standard.

Ste. Wee'll not run Monsieur Monster.

Trin. Nor go neither : but you'll lye like dogs, and yet say nothing neither.

Ste. Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good Moon-calf.

Cal. How does thy honour ? Let me lick thy shoe :
I'll not serve him, he is not valiant.

Trin. Thou liest most ignorant Monster, I am in case to juggle a Constable : why, thou debosh'd Fish thou, was there ever man a Coward, that hath drunk so much Sack as I to day ? wilt thou tell me a monstrous lye, being but half a Fish and half a Monster ?

Cal. Loe, how he mocks me, wilt thou let him my Lord ?

Trin

Trin. Lord, quoth he? that a Monster should be such a Naturall?

Cal. Loe, loe again: bite him to death I prethee.

Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head: If you prove a mutineer, the next Tree: the poor Monster's my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity.

Cal. I thank my noble Lord: Wilt thou be pleas'd once again to hearken to the suit I made to thee?

Ste. Marry will I: kneel and repeat it, I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter Ariell invisible.

Cal. As I told thee before, I am subject to a Tyrant, A Sorcerer that by his cunning hath cheated me Of the Island.

Ariell. Thou lyest.

Cal. Thou lyest, thou jesting Monkey thou: I would my valiant Master would destroy thee; I doe not lye.

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in's tale, By this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.

Trin. Why, I said nothing.

Ste. Mum then, and no more: proceed.

Cal. I say by Sorcery he got this Isle From me, he got it. If thy Greatnesse will. Revenge it on him, (for I know thou dar'st) But this thing dare not.

Ste. That's most certain.

Cal. Thou shalt be Lord of it, and I'll serve thee.

Ste. How now shall this be compass'd? Canst thou bring me to the party?

Cal. Yea, yea, my Lord, I'll yield him thee asleep, Where thou maist knock a nail into his head.

Ariell. Thou liest, thou canst not.

Cal. What a py'de Ninnie's this? Thou scurvy patch: I doe beseech thy Greatnesse give him blows; And take his Bottle from him: When that's gone, He shall drink nought but brine, for I'll not shew him, Where the quick Freshes are.

Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger: Interrupt the Monster one word further, and by this hand, I'll turn my mercy out o' doors, and make a Stock-fish of thee.

Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing: I'll go no further off.

Ste. Didst thou not say he lyed?

Ariell. Thou lyest.

Ste. Doe I so? Take you that, As you like this, give me the lye another time.

Trin. I did not give the lye; Out o' your wits and hearing too?

A pox o' your Bottle, this can Sack and drinking doe: A murrain on your Monster, and the Devil take your fingers.

Cal. Ha, ha, ha.

Ste. Now forward with your Tale: prethee stand further off.

Cal. Beat him enough: after a little time I'll beat him too.

Ste. Stand further: Come proceed.

Cal. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a custome with him I'th afternoon to sleep: there thou maist brain him, Having first seiz'd his Books: Or with a Log Batter his skull, or paunch him with a Stake, Or cut his wezand with thy Knife. Remember. First to possesse his Books; for without them

Hee's but a Sot, as I am; nor hath not One Spirit to command: they all doe hate him As rootedly as I. Burn but his Books, He ha's brave Utensils (for so he calls them) Which when he has a house, hee'll deck withall. And that most deeply to consider, is The beauty of his Daughter: he himself Calls her a non-parcil: I never saw a woman But onely Sycorax my Dam, and she; But she as far surpasseth Sycorax, As great'st do's least.

Ste. Is it so brave a Lais?

Cal. I Lord, she will become thy bed, I warrant, And bring thee forth brave brood.

Ste. Monster, I will kill this man: his Daughter and I will be King and Queen, save our Graces: and Trinculo and thy self shall be Vice-royes: Dost thou like the plot Trinculo?

Trin. Excellent.

Ste. Give me thy hand, I am sorry I beat thee: But while thou liv'st keep a good tongue in thy head.

Cal. Within this half hour will he be asleep, Wilt thou destroy him then?

Ste. I on mine honour.

Ariell. This will I tell my Master.

Cal. Thou mak'st me merry: I am full of pleasure Let us be jocond. Will you troul the Catch You taught me but whileare?

Ste. At thy request Monster, I will doe reason, And reason: Come on Trinculo, let us sing.

Sings.

Flout'em and court'em: and skowt'em, and flout'em, Thought is free.

Cal. That's not the tune.

Ariell plays the tune on a Tabor and Pipe.

Ste. What is this same?

Trin. This is the tune of our Catch, plaid by the picture of No-body.

Ste. If thou beest a man, shew thy self in thy likeness: If thou beest a devil, tak't as thou list.

Trin. O forgive me my sins.

Ste. He that dies pays all debts: I defie thee, Mercy upon us.

Cal. Art thou affeard?

Ste. No Monster, not I.

Cal. Be not affeard, the Isle is full of noyses, Sounds, and sweet aires, that give delight and hurt not: Sometimes a thousand twangling Instruments Will hum about mine ears: and sometimes voyces, That if I then had wak'd after long sleep, Will make me sleep again; and then in dreaming The clouds me thought would open, and shew riches Ready to drop upon me, that when I wak'd I cri'd to dream again.

Ste. This will prove a brave Kingdome to me, Where I shall have my musick for nothing.

Cal. When Prospero is destroy'd.

Ste. That shall be by and by: I remember the story.

Trin. The sound is going away. Let's follow it, and after doe our work.

Ste. Lead Monster, Wee'll follow: I would I could see his Taborer. He layes it on.

Trin. Wilt come? I'll follow Stephano.

*Exeunt.
Scene*

Scena Tertia.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, &c.

Gon. By'r lakin, I can go no further, Sir,
My old bones ake : here's a maze trod indeed
Through forth-rights and Meanders : by your patience,
I needs must rest me.

Alo. Old Lord, I cannot blame thee,
Who am my selfe attach'd with wearinesse
To th'dulling of my spirits : sit down, and rest :
Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it
No longer for my flatterers : he is drown'd
Whom thus we stray to find, and the Sea mocks
Our frustrate search on land : well : let him go.

Ant. I am right glad, that he's so out of hope :
Doe not for one repulse forgo the purpose
That you resolv'd t'effect.

Seb. The next advantage will we take throughly.

Ant. Let it be to night,
For now they are oppress'd with travell, they Will not, nor cannot use such vigilance
As when they are fresh.

Solemn and strange Musick; and Prosper on the top (invisible.) Enter severall strange shapes, bringing in a Banquet; and dance about it with gentle actions of salutations, & inviting the King, &c. to eat, they depart.

Seb. I say to night : no more.

Al. What harmony is this ? my good friends, hark.

Gon. Marvellous sweet Musick.

Alo. Give us kind keepers, heavens : what were these ?

Seb. A living Drollery : now I will believe
That there are Unicorns : that in Arabia
There is one Tree, the Phoenix throne, one Phoenix
At this hour reigning there.

Ant. I'll believe both :

And what do's else want credit, come to me,
And I'll be sworn 'tis true : Travellours ne're did lye,
Though fools at home condemn 'em.

Gon. If in Naples

I should report this now, would they believe me ?

If I should say I saw such Islanders.

(For certes, these are people of the Island)

Who though they are of monstrous shape, yet note

Their manners are more gentle, kind then of

Our humane generation you shall find

Many, nay almost any.

Pro. Honest Lord,

Thou hast said well : for some of you there present,
Are worse then Devils.

Alo. I cannot too much muse
Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound expressing
(Although they want the use of tongue) a kind
Of excellent dumb discourse.

Pro. Praise in departing.

Fra. They vanish'd strangely.

Seb. No matter, since (macks.)
They have left their Viands behind ; for we have sto-
Wilt please you taste of what is here ?

Alo. Not I.

(Boyes)

Gonz. Faith Sir, you need not fear : when we were
Who would believe that there were Mountayneers,
Dew-lapt, like Bulls, whose throats had hanging at'em
Wallets of flesh ? or that there were such men

Whole heads stood in their breasts ? which now we find
Each putter out of five for one, will bring us
Good warrant of.

Alo. I will stand to, and feed,
Although my last, no matter, since I feel
The best is past : brother, my Lord, the Duke,
Stand too, and doe as we.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter Ariell (like a Harpy) claps his wings upon the Table, and with a quaint device the Banquet vanishes.

Ar. You are three men of sin, whom destiny
That hath to instrument this lower world,
And what is in't : the never surfeited Sea,
Hath caus'd to belch up you ; and on this Island,
Where man doth not inhabit, you 'mongst men,
Being most unfit to live : I have made you mad ;
And even with such like valour, men hang, and drown
Their proper selves : you fools, I and my fellows
Are ministers of Fate, the Elements
Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well
Wound the loud winds, or with beinockt-at-Stabs
Kill the still closing waters, as diminish
One dowle that's in my plumbe : My fellow ministers
Are like-invulnerable : if you could hurt,
Your swords are now too massie for your strengths,
And will not be uplifted : but remember
(For that's my businesse to you) that you three
From Millain did supplant good Prospero,
Expos'd unto the Sea (which hath requit it)
Him, and his innocent child : for which foul deed,
The Powers, delaying (not forgetting) have Incens'd the Seas, and Shores ; yea, all the Creatures
Against your peace : Thee of thy Son, Alonso.
They have bereft ; and doe pronounce by me
Lingring perdition (worse then any death
Can be at once) shall step by step attend
You, and your wayes, whose wraths to guard you from,
Which here, in this most desolate Isle, else falls
Upon your heads, is nothing but hearts-sorrow,
And a clear life ensuing.

He vanishes in Thunder : then (to soft Musick.)

Enter the shapes again, and dance (with mocks and mowes) and carrying out the Table.

Pro. Bravely the figure of this Harpy, hast thou
Perform'd (my Ariel) a grace it had devouring :
Of my instruction, hast thou nothing bated
In what thou had'st to say : so with good life
And observation strange, my meaner ministers
Their severall kinds have done : my high charmes work,
And these (mine enemies) are all knit-up
In their distractions : they now are in my power ;
And in these fits, I leave them, while I visit
Young Ferdinand (whom they suppose is drown'd)
And his, and mine lov'd darling.

Gon. I'th name of something holy Sir, why stand you
In this strange stare ?

Alo. O, it is monstrous : monstrous !
Me thought the billows spoke, and told me of it,
The winds did sing it to me : and the Thunder
(That deep and dreadfull Organ-pipe) pronounc'd
The name of Prosper : it did bafe my Trespasse, Therefore my Son i'th Ooze is bedded ; and I'll seek him deeper then e're plummet sounded,
And with him there lie mudded.

Exit.

Seb. But one fiend at a time,
I'll fight their Legions o're

B

Ant.

Ant. I'll be thy second.

Exeunt.

Gon. All three of them are desperate : their great guilt (Like yoyson given to work a great time after)
Now gins to bite the spirits ; I doe beseech you
(That are of suppler joynts) follow them swiftly,
And hinder them from what this extasie
May now provoke them to.

Ad. Follow, I pray you.

Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Pro. If I have too austere punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends, for I
Have given you here, a third of mine own life,
Or that for which I live : who once again
I tender to thy hand : All thy vexations
Were but my trialls of thy love, and thou
Hast strangely stood the rest : here, afore heaven
I ratifie this my rich gift : O Ferdinand ,
Do not smile at me, that I boast her off,
For thou shalt find she will out-strip all praise
And make it halt, behind her.

Fer. I doe believe it
Against an Oracle.

Pro. Then, as my guest, and thine own acquisition
Worthily purchas'd, take my daughter :
If thou do'st break her Virgin-knot, before
All sanctimonious ceremonies may
With full and holy right be ministr'd ,
No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall
To make this Contract grow ; but barren hate,
Sower-ey'd disdain, and discord shall bestrew
The union of your bed, with weeds so loathly
That you shall hate it both : Therefore take heed,
As Hymens Lamps shall light you.

Fer. As I hope
For quiet dayes, fair Issue, and long life.
With such love, as 'tis now the murkiest den,
The most opportune place, the strong'st suggestion,
Our worser Genius can, shall never melt
Mine honour into lust, to take away
The edge of that dayes celebration,
When I shall think, or Phæbus feeds are founderd,
Or night kept chain'd below.

Pro. Fairly spoke ;
Sit then, and talk with her, she is thine own ;
What Ariell ; my industrious servant Ariel. Enter Ariel.

Ari. What would my potent master ? here I am.

Pro. Thou, and thy meaner fellows, your last service
Did worthily perform : and I must use you
In such another trick : go bring the rabble
(O're whom I give thee power) here, to this place :
Incite them to quick motion, for I must Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
Some vanity of mine Art : it is my promise,
And they expect it from me.

Ari. Presently ?

Pro. I : with a twincke.

Ari. Before you can say come, and go,
And breathe twice ; and cry, so, so :
Each one tripping on his Toe,
Will be here with mop, and mowe.
Doe you love me Master ? no ?

Pro. Dearly, my delicate Ariell : doe not approach
Till thou do'st hear me call.

Ari. Well : I conceive.

Exit.

Pro. Look thou be true : doe not give dalliance
Too much the reign : the strongest oathes, are straw
To th' fire ith' blood : be more abstemious,
Or else good night your vow.

Fer. I warrant you, Sir,
The white cold virgin Snow, upon my heart
Abates the ardour of my Liver.

Pro. Well.

Now come my Ariell, bring a Corolary,
Rather then want a spirit, appear, and perty. Soft Musick.
No tongue : all eyes : be silent.

Enter Iris.

Ir. Ceres, most bounteous Lady, the rich Leas
Of Wheat, Rye, Barley, Fetches, Oats, and Pease ;
Thy Turphy Mountains, where live nibbling Sheep,
And flat Medes thetch'd with Stover, them to keep :
Thy banks with pioned ; and twilled brims,
Which spungy April, at thy best betrimms ;
To make cold Nymphs chaste crowns ; and thy broom-
Whose shadow the dismissed Batchelor loves, (groves ;
Being lasse-lorn : thy pole-clipt vineyard :
And thy Sea-marge steril, and rocky-hard,
Where thou thy self do'st aire, the Queen o'th Skie,
Whose watry Arch, and messenger, am I,
Bids thee leave these, and with her sovereign grace, Juno
Here on this grasse-plot ; in this very place (descends.
To come, and sport : here Peacocks flye amain :
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain. Enter Ceres.

Cer. Hail, many coloured Messenger, that ne're
Do'st disobey the wife of Jupiter :
Who, with thy saffron wings, upon my flowers
Diffusest hony drops, refreshing showres,
And with each end of thy blew bow do'st crown
My bosky acres, and my unshrub'd downe,
Rich scarp to my proud earth : why hath thy Queen
Summond me hither, to this short grasse'd Green ?

Ir. A contract of true Love, to celebrate,
And some donation freely to estate
On the bleis'd Lovers.

Cer. Tell me heavenly Bow,
If Venus or her Son, as thou do'st know,
Doe now attend the Queen ? since they did plot
The means, that dusky Dis, my daughter got :
Her, and her blind Boyes scandal'd company,
I have forsworn.

Ir. Of her society
Be not afraid : I met her deity
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos : and her Son
Dove-drawn with her : here thought they to have done
Some wanton charm, upon this man and maid,
Whose vows are, that no bed-right shall be paid
Till Hymens Torch be lighted : but in vain,
Mars's hot Minion is return'd again,
Her waspish headed Son, has broke his arrows,
Swears he will shoot no more, but play with Sparrows,
And be a boy right out.

Cer. Highest Queen of State,
Great Juno comes, I know her by her gate.

Ju. How do's my bounteous sister ? go with me
To blesse this twain, that they may prosperous be,
And honor'd in their issue.

They Sing.

Ju. Honour, riches, marriage, blessing,
Long continuance, and encreasing,
Hourly joes, be still upon you,

Juno

*Juno sings her blessings on you.
Earths increase, and foyzon plenty,
Barns, and Garners, never empty.
Vines, with clustring bunches growing,
Plants, with goodly burthen bowing :
Spring come to you at the farthest,
In the very end of Harvest.
Scarcity and want shall shun you,
Ceres blessing so is on you.*

Fer. This is a most majestick vision; and Harmonious charmingly : may I be bold
To think these spirits ?

Pro. Spirits, which by mine Art
I have from all their confines call'd to enact
My present fancies.

Fer. Let me live here ever,
So rare a wondred father, and a wife,
Makes this place Paradise.

Pro. Sweet now, silence :
*Juno and Ceres whisper seriously ;
There's something else to doe : hush, and be mute
Or else our spell is marr'd.*

*Juno and Ceres whisper, and send Iris on employment.
Ir.* You Nymphs call'd Nayades of the windring brooks
With your sedg'd crowns, and ever-harmlesse looks,
Leave your crisp channells, and on this green-land
Answer your summons, Juno do's command
Come temperate Nymphs, and help to celebrate
A Contract of true Love : be not too late.

Enter certain Nymphs.
You Sun-burn'd Sicklemen of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow, and be merry,
Make holly-day : your Rye-straw Hats put on,
And these fresh Nymphs encounter every one
In Country footing.

Enter certain Reapers (properly habited :) they joyn with the Nymphs in a graceful dance, towards the end whereof, Prospero starts suddenly and speaks ; after which to a strange hollow and confused noyse, they heavily vanish.

Pro. I had forgot that foul conspiracy
Of the beast Caliban, and his confederates
Against my life : the minute of their plot
Is almost come : Well done, avoid : no more.

Fer. This is strange : your Father's in some passion
That works him strongly.

Mir. Never till this day
Saw I him touch'd with anger, so distemper'd.

Pro. You doe look (my Son) in a mov'd sort,
As if you were dismaid : be cheerfull Sir,
Our Revells now are ended : These our actors,
(As I foretold you) were all Spirits, and
Are melted into aire, into thin aire,
And like the baselesse fabrick of their vision,
The Clowd-capt Towers, the gorgeous Pallaces,
The solenm Temples, the great Globe it self,
Yea all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
And like this insubstantiall Pageant faded
Leave not a rack behind : we are such stufte
As dreames are made on : and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep : Sir, I am vext,
Bear with my weaknesse, my old brain is troubled :
Be not disturb'd with my infirmity,
If you be pleas'd; retire into my Cell,
And there repose ; a turn or two I'll walk
To still my beating mind.

Fer. Mir. We wish your peace.

Pro. Come with a thought ; I thank thee Ariell : come.
Enter Ariell.

Ari. Thy thoughts I cleave to, what's thy pleasure ?

Pro. Spirit : we must prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ari. I my Commander, when I presented Ceres
I thought to have told thee of it, but I fear'd
Least I might anger thee.

Pro. Say again, where didst thou leave these varlots ?

Ar. I told you Sir, they were red-hot with drinking,
So full of valour, that they smote the aire
For breathing in their faces : beat the ground
For kissing of their feet ; yet always bending
Towards their project : then I beat my Tabor,
At which like unback't Colts they prickt their eares,
Advanc'd their eye-lids, lifted up their noses
As they smelt musick, so I charm'd their eares
That Calf-like, they my lowing follow'd, through Tooth'd briars, sharp firzes, pricking gosse, and thorns,
Which entred their frail shins : at last I left them
I'th' filthy mantled pool beyond your Cell,
There dancing up to th' chins, that the foul Lake
O're-stunk their feet.

Pro. This was well done (my bird)
Thy shape invisible retain thou still :
The trumpery in my house, go bring it hither
For stale to catch these theeves. Ariell. I go, I go. Exit.

Pro. A devil, a born-devil, on whose nature
Nurture can never stick : on whom my pains
Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost,
And, as with age, his body uglier grows,
So his mind cankers : I will plague them all,
Even to roaring : Come, hang on them this line.

Enter Ariell, loaden with glistering apparell, &c. Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, all wet.

Cal. Pray you tread softly, that the blind Mole may not hear a foot fall : we now are near his Cell. (Fairy,

Ste. Monster, your Fairy, which you say is a harmlesse
Has done little better then plaid the Jack with us.

Trin. Monster, I doe smell all horse-pisse, at which
My nose is in great indignation.

Ste. So is mine. Doe you hear Monster : If I should Take a displeasure against you : Look you.

Trin. Thou wert but a lost Montter.

Cal. Good my Lord, give me thy favour stil,
Be patient, for the prize I'll bring thee to Shall hood-wink this mischance : therefore speak softly,
All's hush't as midnight yet.

Trin. I, but to lose our Bottles in the Poole.

Ste. There is not onely disgrace and dishonour in that (Monster) but an infinite losse.

Trin. That's more to me then my wetting :
Yet this is your harmlesse Fairy, Monster.

Ste. I will fetch off my Bottle,
Though I be o're eares for my labour.

Cal. Prethee (my King) be quiet. Seest thou here
This is the mouth o'th Cell : no noife, and enter :
Doe that good mischief, which may make this Island
Thine own for ever, and I thy Caliban
For aye thy foot-licker.

Ste. Give me thy hand,
I doe begin to have bloody thoughts.

Trin. O King Stephano, O Peer : O worthy Stephano,
Look what a wardrobe here is for thee.

Cal. Let it alone thou fool, it is but trash.

Tri. Oh, ho, Monster : we know what belongs to a frippery, O King Stephano.

Exit.

Ste. Put off that gown (Trinculo) by this hand I'll have that gown.

Tri. Thy grace shall have it. (mean

Cal. The dropie drown this fool, what doe you To doat thus on such luggage? let's alone And doe the murther first: if he awake, From toe to crown hee'll fill our skins with pinches, Make us strange stuffe.

Ste. Be you quiet (Monster) Mistris line, is not this my Jerkin? now is the Jerkin under the line: now Jerkin you are like to lose your hair, and prove a bald Jerkin.

Trin. Doe, doe; we steal by line and level, and't like your grace.

Ste. I thank thee for that jest: here's a garment for't: Wit shall not go unrewarded while I am King of this Country: Steal by line and levell, is an excellent passe of pate: there's another garment for't.

Tri. Monster, come put some Lime upon your fingers, and away with the rest.

Cal. I will have none on't: we shall lose our time, And all be turn'd to Barnacles, or to Apes With foreheads villanous low.

Ste. Monster, lay to your fingers: help to bear this away, where my hog'shead of wine is, or I'll turn you out of my Kingdome: go to, carry this.

Tri. And this.

Ste. I, and this.

A noise of Hunters heard. Enter divers spirits in shape of Dogs, and Hounds, hunting them about: Prospero and Ariell setting them on.

Pro. Hey Mountain, hey.

Ari. Silver: there it goes, Silver.

Pro. Fury, Fury: there Tyrant, there: hark, hark. Go, charge my Goblins that they grind their joynts With dry Convulsions, shorten up their sinews With aged Cramps, and more pinch-spotted make them, Then Pard, or Cat o' Mountain.

Ari. Hark, they rore.

Pro. Let them be hunted soundly: At this hour Lies at my mercy all mine enemies: Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou Shalt have the aire at freedome: for a little Follow, and doe me service.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Prospero (in his Magick Robes) and Ariell.

Pro. Now do's my Project gather to a head: My charmes crack not: my spirits obey, and time Goes upright with his carriage: how's the day?

Ar. On the sixth hour, at which time, my Lord You said our work should cease.

Pro. I did say so, When first I rais'd the Tempest: say my spirit, How fares the King, and's followers?

Ar. Confin'd together In the same fashion, as you gave in charge, Just as you left them, all prisoners Sir In the Line-grove which weather-fends your Cell, They cannot budge till you release: The King, His Brother, and yours, abide all three distracted, And the remainder mourning over them, Brim full of sorrow, and dismay: but chiefly

Him that you term'd, Sir, the good old Lord Gonzalo, His tears run down his beard like winters drops From caves of reeds: your charm so strongly works 'em That if you now beheld them, your affections Would become tender.

Pro. Do'st thou think so, spirit?

Ar. Mine would, Sir, were I humane.

Pro. And mine shall.

Hast thou (which art but aire) a touch, a feeling Of their afflictions, and shall not my self, One of their kind, that relish all as sharply Passion as they, be kindlier mov'd then thou art? Though with their high wrongs I am strook to th'quick, Yet, with my nobler reason, against my fury Doe I take part: the rarer action is In virtue, then in vengeance: they, being penitent, The sole drift of my purpose doth extend Not a frown further: Go, release them Ariell, My Charms I'll break, their senses I'll restore, And they shall be themselves.

Ar. I'll fetch them, Sir.

Exit.

Pro. Ye Elves of Hills, Brooks, standing-Lakes and And ye, that on the Sands with printless foot (Groves, Doe chase the ebbing Neptune, and doe flie him When he comes back: you demy-Puppets, that By Moon-shine doe the green sowre Ringlets make, Whereof the Ewe not bites: and you, whose pastime Is to make midnight-Mushromes, that rejoyce To hear the solemn Curfewe, by whose aid (Weak Masters though ye be) I have bedimn'd The noon-tide Sun, call'd forth the mutinous winds, And 'twixt the green Sea, and the azur'd vault Set roaring war: To the dread rattling Thunder Have I given fire, and lifted Jov's stout Oke With his own Bolt. The strong bas'd promontory Have I made shake, and by the spurs pluck't up The Pine, and Cedar. Graves at my command Have wak'd their sleepers, op'd, and let'em forth By my so potent Art. But this rough Magick I here abjure: and when I have requir'd Some heavenly Musick (which even now I doe) To work mine end upon their senses, that This airy charm is for, I'll break my staffe, Bury it certain fadomes in the earth, And deeper then did ever Plummet sound I'll drown my Book.

Solemn Musick.

Here enters Ariel before: Then Alonso with a frantick gesture, attended by Gonzalo. Sebastian and Antonio in like manner attended by Adrian and Francisco. They all enter the circle which Prospero had made, and there stand charm'd: which Prospero observing, speaks.

A solemn Aire, and the best comforter, To an unsetled fancy, Cure thy brains (Now uselesse) boil within thy skull: there stand, For you are Spell-stopt.

Holy Gonzalo, Honourable man, Mine eyes, even sociable to the shew of thine, Fall, fellowly drops: The charm dissolves apace, And as the morning steals upon the night (Melting the darknesse) so their rising senses Begin to chace the ignorant fumes that mantle Their clearer reason. O good Gonzalo, My true preserver, and a loyall Sir To him thou follow'st; I will pay thy graces Home both in word, and deed: Most cruelly

Didst

Didst thou Alonso, use me, and my daughter:
Thy Brother was a furtherer in the act,
Thou art pinch'd for't now Sebastian. Flesh; and blood,
You, Brother mine, that entertain'd ambition,
Expell'd remorse, and nature, whom, with Sebastian
(Whose inward pinches therefore are most strong)
Would here have kill'd your King: I doe forgive thee,
Unnaturall though thou art: their understanding
Begins to swell, and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shore
That now lies foul and muddy: not one of them
That yet looks on me, or would know me: Ariell,
Fetch me the Hat, and Rapier in my Cell,
I will discase me, and my self present
As I was sometime Millain: quickly spirit,
Thou shalt ere long be free.

Ariell sings, and helps to attire him.
Where the Bee sucks, there suck I,
In a Cowslips bell, I lie.
There I crouch when Owles do cry,
On the Bats back I doe flie
after Summer merrily.
Merrily, merrily, shall I live now,
Under the Blossom that hangs on the Bow.

Pro. Why that's my dainty Ariell: I shall misse thee,
But yet thou shalt have freedom: so, so, so.
To the Kings Ship, invisible as thou art,
There shalt thou find the Mariners asleep
Under the Hatches: the Master and the Boat-swain
Being awake, enforce them to this place;
And presently, I prethee.

Ari. I drink the aire before me, and return
Or ere your pulse twice beat. Exit.

Gon. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement
Inhabits here: some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearfull Countrey.

Pro. Behold Sir King
The wronged Duke of Millain, Prospero:
For more assurance that a living Prince
Do's now speak to thee, I embrace thy body,
And to thee, and thy Company, I bid
A hearty welcome.

Alo. Where thou be'st he or no,
Or some enchanted trifle to abuse me,
(As late I have been) I not know: thy Pulse
Beats as of flesh, and blood: and since I saw thee,
Th' affliction of my mind amends, with which
I fear a madnesse held me: this must crave
(And if this be at all) a most strange story.
Thy Dukedome I resign, and doe entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs: but how should Prospero
Be living, and be here?

Pro. First, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honour cannot
Be measur'd, or confin'd.

Gon. Whether this be,
Or be not, I'll not swear.

Pro. You doe yet taste
Some subtilties o'th' Isle, that will not let you Believe things certain: Welcome, my friends all,
But you, my brace of Lords, were I so minded
I here could pluck his Highnesse frown upon you
And justifie you Traitors: at this time
I will tell no tales.

Seb. The devil speaks in him:

Pro. No.

For you (most wicked Sir) whom to call Brother
Would even infect my mouth, I doe forgive
Thy rankest fault: all of them: and require
My Dukedom of thee, which, perforce I know
Thou must restore.

Alo. If thou beest Prospero,
Give us particulars of thy preservation,
How thou hast met us here. who three hours since
Were wrackt upon this shore? where I have lost (How sharp the point of this remembrance is)
My dear Son Ferdinand.

Pro. I am woe for't, Sir.

Alo. Irreparable is the losse, and patience
Sayes, it is past her cure.

Pro. I rather think
You have not sought her help, of whose soft graze
For the like losse, I have her sovereign aid,
And rest my self content.

Alo. You the like losse?

Pro. As great to me, as late, and insupportable
To make the dear losse, have I means much weaker
Then you may call to comfort you; for I
Have lost my daughter.

Alo. A daughter?
Oh heavens, that they were living both in Naples
The King and Queen there, that they were, I wish
My selfe were mudded in that oo-zy bed
Where my Son lies: when did you lose your daughter?

Pro. In this last Tempest. I perceive these Lords
At this encounter doe so much admire,
That they devour their reason, and scarce think
Their eye doe offices of truth: their words
Are naturall breath: but howsoever you have Been justified from your fences, know for certain
That I am Prospero, and that very Duke
Which was thrust forth of Millain, who most strangely
Upon this shore (where you were wrack't) was landed
To be the Lord on't: no more yet of this,
For 'tis a Chronicle of day by day,
Not a relation for a break-fast, nor Befitting this first meeting: Welcome, Sir;
This Cell's my Court: here have I few attendants,
And Subjects none abroad: pray you look in:
My Dukedome since you have given me again,
I will requite you with as good a thing,
At least bring forth a wonder, to content ye
As much, as me my Dukedome.

Here Prospero discovers Ferdinand and Miranda, playing at Chess.

Mir. Sweet Lord, you play me false.

Fer. No my dearest love,
I would not for the world. (wrangle,

Mir. Yes, for a score of Kingdomes, you should
And I would call it fair play.

Alo. If this prove
A vision of the Island, one dear Son
Shall I twice lose.

Seb. A most high miracle.

Fer. Though the Seas threaten they are mercifull,
I have curs'd them without cause.

Alo. Now all the blessings
Of a glad father, compass thee about:
Arise, and say how thou cam'st here.

Mir. O wonder!
How many goodly creatures are there here?
How beauteous mankind is? O brave new world

That has such people in't.

Pro. 'Tis new to thee.

(play ?

Alo. What is this Maid, with whom thou was't at Your eld'st acquaintance cannot be three houres :
Is she the goddess that hath seve'rd us,
And brought us thus together ?

Fer. Sir, she is mortall ;

But by immortall providence, she's mine ;
I chose her when I could not ask my Father
For his advise : nor thought I had one : She
Is Daughter to this famous Duke of Millain,
Of whom, so often I have heard renoun,
But never saw before : of whom I have Receiv'd a second life ; and second Father
This Lady makes him to me.

Alo. I am hers.

But O, how odly will it sound, that I
Must ask my child forgiveness ?

Pro. There Sir stop.

Let us not burthen our remembrances, with
A heaviness that's gone.

Gon. I have inly wept,
Or should have spoke ere this ; look down you gods
And on this couple drop a blessed crown ;
For it is you that have chalk'd forth the way
Which brought us hither.

Alo. I say Amen, Gonzalo.

Gon. Was Millain thrust from Millain, that his issue
Should become Kings of Naples ; O rejoyce
Beyond a common joy, and set it down
With gold on lasting Pillars : In one voyage
Did Claribell her Husband find at Tunis,
And Ferdinand her Brother, found a Wife,
Where he himself was lost : Prospero his Dukedom
In a poor Isle : and all of us, our selves,
When no man was his own.

Alo. Give me your hands :

Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart,
That doth not wish you joy.

Gon. Be it so, Amen.

Enter Ariell, with the Master and Boatswain amazedly following.

O look Sir, look, hear is more of us !
I prophesied, if a Gallows were on Land
This fellow could not drown : Now blasphemy,
That sweat'st grace ore-board, not an oath on shore,
Hast thou no mouth by Land ?
What is the newes ?

Boat. The best newes is, that we have safe found
Our King and company : The next : our Ship,
Which but three glasses since, we gave our split,
Is tyte, and yare, and bravely rig'd, as when We first put out to Sea.

Ar. Sir, all this service
Have I done since I went.

Pro. My tricksey spirit.

Alo. These are not naturall events, they strengthen
From strange to stranger : say, how came you hither ?

Bot. If I did think, Sir, I were well awake,
I'd strive to tell you : we were dead of sleep,
And (how we know not) all clapt under hatches,
Where, but even now, with strange and severall noises
Of roring, shrieking, howling, glingling chains,
And moe diversity of sounds, all horrible,
We were awak'd : straight way at liberty ;
Where we, in all our trim, freshly beheld

Our royall, good, and gallant Ship : our Master
Capring to eye her : on a trice, so please you,
Even in a dream, were we divided from them,
And were brought moping hither,

Ar. Was't well done ?

Pro. Bravely (my diligence) thou shalt be free.

Ar. This is as strange a Maze, as e're men trod
And there is in this businesse, more then nature
Was ever conduct of : some Oracle
Must rectifie our knowledge.

Pro. Sir, my Liege,

Do not infect your mind, with beating on
The strangeness of this businesse, at pickt seizure
(Which shall be shortly single) I'll resolve you,
(Which to you shall seem probable) of every
These happen'd accidents : till when, be cheerfull
And think of each thing well : Come hither spirit,
Set Caliban, and his companions free :

Untye the Spell : How fares my gracious Sir ?

There are yet missing of your Company
Some few odde Lads, that you remember not,

*Enter Ariell, driving in Caliban, Stephano, and

Ste. Every man shift for all the rest, and let
No man take care for him self ; for all is
But fortune : Coragio Bully-Monster, Coragio.

Tri. If these be true spies which I wear in my head,
Here's a goodly sight.

Cal. O Setebos, these be brave spirits indeed ;
How fine my Master is ? I am afraid
He will chastise me.

Seb. Ha, ha :

What things are these my Lord Antonio ?
Will money buy 'em ?

Ant. Very like : one of them

Is a plain Fish, and no doubt marketable,

Pro. Mark but the badges of these men, my Lords,
Then say if they be true : This mishapen knave ;
His Mother was a Witch, and one so strong
That could controul the Moon ; make flowes, and eb's,
And deal in her command, without her power ;
These three have robb'd me, and this demy-devil ;
(For he's a bastard one) had plotted with them
To take my life : two of these Fellows, you Must know, and own, this Thing of darknesse, I Acknowledge mine.

Cal. I shall be pinch'd to death.

Alo. Is not this Stephano, my drunken Butler ?

Seb. He is drunk now :

Where had he Wine ?

Alo. And Trinculo is reeling ripe : where should they Find this grand Liqueur that hath gilded 'em ?
How cam'st thou in this pickle ?

Tri. I have been in such a pickle since I saw you last,
That I fear me will never out of my bones :
I shall not fear flie-blowing.

Seb. Why how now Stephano ?

Ste. O touch me not, I am not Stephano, but a Cramp.

Pro. You'd be King o' th' Isle, Sirrha ?

Ste. I should have been a fore one then.

Alo. 'Tis a strange thing as e're I look'd on.

Pro. He is as disproportion'd in his manners
As in his shape : Go Sirrha, to my Cell,
Take with you your Companions : as you look
To have my pardon, trim it handsomly.

Cal. I that I will : and I'll be wise hereafter,

And

And seek for grace : what a thrice double Ass
Was I to take this drunkard for a god ?
And worship this dull fool ?

Pro. Go to, away. (sound it.)

Alc. Hence, and bestow your luggage where you

Seb. Or stole it rather.

Pro. Sir, I invite your Highness and your train,
To my poor Cell : where you shall take your rest
For this one night, which part of it, Ile waste
With such discourse, as I not doubt, shall make it
Goe quick away : The story of my life,
And the particular accidents, gone by Since I came to this Isle : And in the morne
Ile bring you to your ship, and so to Naples.

Where I have hope to see the Nuptials
Of these our dear-belov'd, solemnized,
And thence retire me to my Millain, where Every third thought shall be my grave.

Alc. I long

To hear the story of your life ; which must Take the ear strangely.

Pro. Ile deliver all,

And promise you calme Seas, auspicious gales,
And sail, so expeditious, that shall catch
Your Royal fleet far off : My Ariel (Chick)
That is thy charge : then to the Elements
Be free, and fare thou well : please you draw near.

Exeunt omnes.

EPILOGUE

spoken by Prosper.

Now now my Charm's are all ore-thrown,
And what strength I have's mine own,
Which is most faint : now 'tis true
I must be here confin'd by you,
Or sent to Naples : Let me not Since I have my Dukedome got,
And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell
In this bare Island, by your spell,
But release me from my bands
With the help of your good hands :
Gentle breath of yours, my Sailes
Must fill or else my project failes,
Which was to please : Now I want
Spirits to enforce : Arts to enchant,
And my ending is despaire,
Unless I be reliev'd by prayer,
Which pierces so, that it assaults
Mercy it self, and frees all faults.
As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your Indulgence set me free.

FINIS

T H E

Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Actus Primus, Scena Prima.

Valentine, Protheus, and Speed.

Valentine.

Ease to perswade, my loving Protheus ;
Home-keeping youth, have ever homely wits,
Wer't not affection chaines thy tender days,
To the sweet glances of thy honour'd Love,
I rather would entreat thy company,
To see the wonders of the world abroad,
Then (living dully sluggardiz'd at home)
Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness.
But since thou lov'st ; love still, and thrive therein,
Even as I would, when I to love begin.

Pro. Wilt thou be gone ? Sweet Valentine adieu.
Think on thy Protheus, when thou (haply) see'st
Some rare note-worthy object in thy travaile.
Wish me partaker in thy happiness,
When thou do'st meet good hap ; and in thy danger,
(If ever danger do environ thee)
Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers,
For I will be thy Bead's-man, Valentine.

Val. And on a Love-book pray for thy success ?

Pro. Upon some book I love, Ile pray for thee.

Val. That's on some shallow Story of deep love,
How young Leander crost the Hellepont.

Pro. That's a deep Story of a deeper love.
For he was more then over-shoos in love.

Val. 'Tis true ; for you are over-boots in love,
And yet you never swom the Hellepont.

Pro. Over the Boots ? nay give me not the Boots.

Val. No, I will not ; for it boots thee not

Pro. What ?

Val. To be in love, where score is bought with groans:
Coy lookes, with heart-sore sighes: one fading moments
With twenty watchfull, weary, tedious nights: (mirth,
If haply won, perhaps a hapless gain:
If lost, why then a grievous labour won;
How ever, but a folly bought with wit,
Or else a wit, by folly vanquished.

Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me fool.

Val. So, by your circumstance, I fear you'll prove.

Pro. 'Tis love you cavil at, I am not Love.

Val. Love is your Master, for he Masters you ;
And he that is so yoked by a fool,
Methinks should not be Cronickled for wise.

Pro. Yet Writers say ; as in the sweetest Bud,
The eating Canker dwels ; so eating Love
Inhabits in the finest wits of all.

Val. And Writers say ; as the most forward Bud

Is eaten by the Canker ere it blow,
Even so by Love, the young and tender wit
Is turn'd to folly, blasting in the Bud,
Loosing his verdure, even in the prime,
And all the fair effects of future hopes.
But wherefore waste I time to counsaile thee
That are a Votary to fond desire ?
Once more adieu : my Father at the Road
Expects my coming, there to see me ship'd.

Pro. And thither will I bring thee Valentine.

Val. Sweet Protheus, no : Now let us take our leave :
At Millain let me hear from thee by Letters
Of thy succels in love ; and what news else
Betideth here in absence of thy Friend :
And I likewise will visit thee with mine.

Pro. All happiness bechance to thee in Millain.

Val. As much to you at home : and so farewell. Exit.

Pro. He after honour hunts, I after Love ;
He leaves his friends to dignifie them more ;
I love my self, my friends, and all for love :
Thou Julia, thou hast metamorphos'd me :
Made me neglect my studies, lose my time ;
War with good counsaile ; set the world at nought ;
Made wit with musing, weak ; heart sick with thought.

Sp. Sir Protheus : 'save you : saw you my Master ?

Pro. But now he parted hence to embarke for Millain.

Sp. Twenty to one then, he is ship'd already,
And I have plaid the sheep in losing him.

Pro. Indeed a sheep doth very often stray,
And if the Shepheard be awhile away.

Sp. You conclude that my Master is a Shepheard then, and I a sheep ?

Pro. I doe.

Sp. Why then my hornes are his hornes, whether I wake or sleep.

Pro. A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.

Sp. This proves me still a sheep.

Pro. True ; and thy Master a shepheard.

Sp. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.

Pro. It shall go hard but Ile prove it by another.

Sp. The Shepheard seeks the sheep, and not the Sheep the shepheard ; but I seek my Master, and my Master seeks not me : therefore I am no sheep.

Pro. The Sheep for Fodder follow the Shepheard, the Shepheard for food follow's not the Sheep: thou for wages followest thy Master, thy Master for wages follow's not thee : therefore thou art a sheep.

Sp. Such a nother proof will make me cry Baâ.

Pro. But dost thou hear : gav'st thou my Letter to Julia ?

Sp. I

Sp. I Sir : I (a lost-Mutton) gave your Letter to her (a lac'd Mutton,) and she (a lac'd Mutton) gave me (a lost-Mutton) nothing for my labour.

Pro. Here's too small a Pasture for such store of Muttons.

Sp. If the ground be over-charg'd, you were best stick her.

Pro. Nay in that you are astray : 'twere best pound you.

Sp. Nay Sir, less then a pound shall serve me for carrying your letter.

Pro. You mistake ; I mean the Pound, a Pinfold.

Sp. From a pound to a pin ? fold it over and over, 'Tis three fold too little for carrying a letter to your Lover.

Pro. But what said she ?

Sp. I.

Pro. Nod-I, why that's Noddy.

Sp. You mistook, Sir, I said she did nod : And you ask me if she did nod, and I said I.

Pro. And that set together, is noddy.

Sp. Now you have taken the paines to set it together, take it for your paines.

Pro. No, no, you shall have it for bearing the Letter.

Sp. Well, I perceive I must be fain to bear with you.

Pro. Why sir, how do you bear with me ?

Sp. Marry sir, the Letter very orderly, Having nothing but the word noddy for my paines.

Pro. Beshrew me, but you have a quick wit.

Sp. And yet it cannot overtake your slow purse.

Pro. Come, come, open the matter in brief ; what said she ?

Sp. Open your purse, that the money and the matter may be both delivered.

Pro. Well sir : here is for your paines : what said she ?

Sp. Truly sir, I think you'll hardly win her.

Pro. Why? could'st thou perceive so much from her?

Sp. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her ; No, not so much as a Ducklet for delivering your letter : And being so hard to me, that brought your minde ; I fear shee'l prove as hard to you in telling her minde. Give her no token but stones, for shee's as hard as steel.

Pro. What said she, nothing ?

Sp. No, not so much as take this for thy paines : (me ; To rectifie your bounty, I thank you, you have Tettern'd In requital whereof, henceforth carry your letter your self ; And so sir, Ile commend you to my Master.

Pro. Go, go, be gone, to save your ship from wrack, Which cannot perish having thee aboard, Being destin'd to a dryer death on shore : I must go send some better Messenger, I fear my Julia would not deign my lines, Receiving them from such a worthless post.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. But say Lucetta (now are we alone) Would'st thou then counsaile me to fall in love ?

Luc. I Madam, so you stumble not unheedfully.

Jul. Of all the faire resort of Gentlemen, That every clay with par'le encounter me,

In thy opinion which is worthiest love ?

Luc. Please you repeat their names, Ile shew my mind, According to my shallow simple skill.

Jul. What think'st thou of the fair Sir Egliamor ?

Luc. As of a Knight, well-spoken, neat, and fine ; But were I you, he never should be mine.

Jul. What think'st thou of the rich Mercutio ?

Luc. Well of his wealth ; but of himself, so, so.

Jul. What think'st thou of the gentle Protheus ?

Luc. Lord, Lord : to see what folly reigns in us.

Jul. How now ? what means this passion at his name ?

Luc. Pardon dear Madam, 'tis a passing shame, That I (unworthy body as I am)

Should censure thus on lovely Gentlemen.

Jul. Why not on Protheus, as of all the rest ?

Luc. Then thus : of many good, I think him best.

Jul. Your reason ?

Luc. I have no other but a womans reason.

I think him so, because I think him so.

Jul. And would'st thou have me cast my love on him ?

Luc. I : if you thought your love not cast away.

Jul. Why he, of all the rest, hath never mov'd me.

Luc. Yet he, of all the rest, I think best loves ye.

Jul. His little speaking shews his love but small.

Luc. Fire thats closest kept, burns most of all.

Jul. They do not love, that do not shew their love.

Luc. Oh, they love least, that let men know their love.

Jul. I would I knew his minde.

Luc. Peruse this Paper Madam.

Jul. To Julia : say, from whom ?

Luc. That the Contents will shew.

Jul. Say, say : who gave it thee ?

Luc. Sir Valentines Page : & sent I think from Protheus.

He would have given it you, but I being in the way,

Did in your name receive it : pardon the fault I pray.

Jul. Now (by my modesty) a goodly Broker :

Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines ?

To whisper and conspire against my youth ?

Now trust me, 'tis an office of great worth,

And you an officer fit for the place.

There : take the Paper : see it be return'd,

Or else return no more into my sight.

Luc. To plead for love, deserves more see then hate.

Jul. Will ye be gone ?

Luc. That you may ruminate.

Exit.

Jul. And yet I would I had ore-look'd the Letter ;

It were a shame to call her back again,

And pray her to a fault, for which I chid her.

What 'fool is she, that knows I am a Maid,

And would not force the letter to my view ?

Since Maids in modesty, say No to that,

Which they would have the profferer construe, I.

Fie, fie ; how way-ward is this foolish love ;

That (like a testy Babe) will scratch the Nurse,

And presently, all humbled, kisse the Rod ?

How churlishly I chid Lucetta hence,

When willingly I would have had her here ?

How angrily I taught my brow to frown,

When inward joy enforc'd my heart to smile ?

My penance is, to call Lucetta back,

And ask remission for my folly past.

What hoe : Lucetta.

Luc. What would your Ladyship ?

Jul. Is't near dinner time ?

Luc. I would it were,

That you might kill your stomach on your meat,

And

And not upon your Maid.

Ju. What is't that you.

Took up so gingerly?

Lu. Nothing.

Ju. Why did'st thou stoop then?

Lu. To take a Paper up, that I let fall.

Ju. And is that Paper nothing?

Lu. Nothing concerning me.

Ju. Then let it lye, for those that it concerns.

Lu. Madam, it will not lye where it concerns,
Unless it have a false interpreter.

Ju. Some Love of yours hath writ to you in Rime.

Lu. That I might sing it (Madam) to a tune:

Give a note, your Ladiship can set.

Ju. As little by such toy's, as may be possible:

Best sing it to the tune of Light O Love,

Lu. It is too heavy for so light a tune.

Ju. Heavy? belike it hath some burthen then?

Lu. I: and melodious were it, would you sing it.

Ju. And why not you?

Lu. I cannot reach so high.

Ju. Lets see your song:

How now Minion?

Lu. Keep tune there still, so you will sing it out:
And yet methinks I do not like this tune.

Ju. You do not?

Lu. No (Madam) 'tis too sharp.

Ju. You (Minion) arr too sawcie.

Lu. Nay, now you are too flat;

And marre the concord, with too harsh a descant:
There wanteth but a Mean to fill your Song.

Ju. The Mean is drown'd with your unruly base.

Lu. Indeed I bid thee base for Protheus.

Ju. This babble shall not henceforth trouble me;
Here is a coile with protestation:

Goe, get you gone: and let the Papers lye:
You would be fingring them to anger me.

Lu. She makes it strange, but she would be best pleas'd
To be so angred with another Letter. Exit.

Ju. Nay, would I were so angred with the same:

Oh hatefull hands, to tear such loving words;

Injurious Wasps, to feed on such sweet honey,

And kill the Bees that yield it, with your stings;

Ile kiss each several Paper for amends:

Look, here is writ, kinde Julia: unkinde Julia,

As in revenge of thy ingratitude,

I throw thy name against the bruizing stones,

Trampling contemptuously on thy disdain.

And here is writ, Love-wounded Protheus.

Poor wounded name: my bosome, as a bed,

Shall lodge thee till thy wound be thoroughly heal'd;

And thus I searsh it with a soveraign kisse.

But twice, or thrice, was Protheus written down:

Be calm (good winde) blow not a word away,

Till I have found each letter in the Letter,

Except mine own name: That some whirle-wind bear

Unto a ragged, fearful, hanging Rock,

And throw it thence into the raging Sea.

Loe, here in one line is his name twice writ:

Poor forlorne Protheus, passionate Protheus:

To the sweet Julia: that Ile tear away:

And yet I will not, fith so pretily

He couples it, to his complaining names;

Thus will I fold them, one upon another;

Now kifs, embrace, contend, do what you will. Enter.

Lu. Madam: dinner is ready, and your father stayes.

Ju. Well, let us goe.

Lu. What, shall these Papers lie, like tell-tales here?

Ju. If you respect them; best to take them up.

Lu. Nay, I was taken up, for laying them down.
Yet here they shall not lye for catching cold.

Ju. I see you have a month's mind to them.

Lu. I (Madam) you may say what fights you see;
I see things too, although you judge I wink,

Ju. Come, come, wilt please you goe? Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Antonio Panthion and Protheus.

Ant. Tell me Panthion, what sad talk was that,
Wherewith my brother held you in the Cloyster?

Pan. 'Twas of his Nephew Protheus, your sonne.

Ant. Why? what of him?

Pan. He wondred that your Lordship
Would suffer him to spend his youth at home,
While other men of slender reputation
Put forth their Sonn's, to seek preferment out.
Some to the warres, to try their fortune there;
Some to discover Islands farre away:

Some, to the studious Universities.
For any, or for all these exercises,
He said, that Protheus, your son, was meet;
And did request me to importune you
To let him spend his time no more at home;
Which would be great impeachment to his age,
In having known no travail in his youth.

Ant. Nor need'st thou much importune me to that Whercon, this moneth I have been hammering.

I have consider'd well, his loss of time,
And now he cannot be a perfect man,
Not being tried, nor tutor'd in the world:
Experience is by industry achiev'd,
And perfected by the swift course of time:
Then tell me, whither were I best to send him?

Pan. I think your Lordship is not ignorant
How his Companion, youthfull Valentine, Attends the Emperour in his Royal Court.

Ant. I know it well.

Pan. 'Twere good, I think, your Lordship sent him (thither,
There shall he practise Tilts and Turnaments;
Hear sweet discourse, converse with Noblemen,
And be in eye of every exercise
Worthy his youth and nobleness of birth.

Ant. I like thy counsaile: well hast thou advis'd:
And that thou maist perceive how well I like it,
The execution of it shall make known;
Even with the speediest expedition,
I will dispatch him to the Emperours Court.

Pan. To morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonso,
With other Gentlemen of good esteem
Are journeying to salute the Emperour;
And to commend their service to his will.

Ant. Good company: with them shall Protheus goe:
And in good time, now will we break with him. Enter.

Pro. Sweet Love, sweet lines, sweet life, (Pro.
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart,
Here is her oath for love, her honours pawn:

O that our Fathers would applaud our Loves
To seal our happiness with their consents.
Oh heavenly Julia.

Ant. How now? What Letter are you reading there?

Pro. May't please your Lordship, 'tis a word or two
Of commendations sent from Valentine;
Deliver'd by a friend, that came from him.

Ant. Lend me the Letter: Let me see what news.

Pro. There is no news (my Lord) but that he writes
How happily he lives, how well belov'd,
And daily graced by the Emperour;
Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.

Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish?

Pro. As one relying on your Lordships will,
And not depending on his friendly wish.

Ant. My will is something sorted with his wish:
Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed;
For what I will, I will, and there's an end:
I am resolv'd that thou shalt spend some time
With Valentino in the Emperours Court:
What maintenance he from his friends receiv's,
Like exhibition thou shalt have from me,
To morrow be in readinesse to go,
Excuse it not: for I am peremptory.

Pro. My Lord I cannot be so soon provided,
Please you deliberate a day or two.

Ant. Look what thou want'st shall be sent after thee:
No more of stay: to morrow thou must go;
Come on Panthion; you shall be employ'd,
To hasten on his expedition.

Pro. Thus have I shunn'd the fire for fear of burning,
And drench'd me in the Sea, where I am drown'd,
I fear'd to shew my father Julia's Letter,
Least he should take exceptions to my Love,
And with the vantage of mine own excuse
Hath he excepted most against my Love.
Oh, how this spring of love resembleth
The uncertain glory of an Aprill day,
Which now shews all the beauty of the Sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away.

Enter.

Pan. Sir Protheus, your father call's for you,
He is in haste, therefore I pray you go.

Pro. Why this it is: my heart accords thereto,
And yet a thousand times it answer's no.

Exeunt. Finis.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Valentine, Speed, Silvia.

Speed. Sir, your Glove.

Valen. Not mine: my Gloves are on.

Sp. Why then this may be yours: for this is but one.

Val. Ha? Let me see: I, give it me, it's mine:
Sweet ornament, that decks a thing divine,
Ah Silvia, Silvia.

Speed. Madam Silvia: Madam Silvia.

Val. How now Sirrah?

Sp. She is not within hearing Sir.

Val. Why sir, who bad you call her?

Sp. Your worship sir, or else I mistook.

Val. Well: you'll still be too forward.

Sp. And yet I was last chidden for being too slow.

Val. Go to sir, tell me: do you know Madam Silvia?

Sp. She that your worship loves?

Val. Why, how know you that I am in love?

Sp. Marry by these special marks: first, you have learn'd (like sir Protheus) to wreath your armes like a Male-content: to relish a Love-Song, like a Robin-red-breast: to walke alone like one that had the Pestilence:
to sigh like a Schoole-boy that had lost his A. B. C. to weep like a young Wench that had lost her Grandam: to fast like one that takes dyet: to watch like one that fears robbing: to speak puling like a Begger at Hallowmasse:
You were wont when you laughed to crow like a Cock:
when you walk'd; to walk like one of the Lions: when you fasted, it was presently after dinner: when you look'd sadly, it was for want of money: And now you are Me- ramorphos'd with a Mistresse, that when I look on you, I can hardly think you my Master.

Val. Are all these things perceiv'd in me?

Sp. They are all perceiv'd without ye.

Val. Without me? they cannot.

Sp. Without you? nay, that's certain: for without you were so simple, none else would: but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you, and shine through you like the water in an Urinal: that not an eye that sees you, but is a Physitian to Comment on your Malady.

Val. But tell me: dost thou know my Lady Silvia?

Sp. She that you gaze on 'o, as she sits at supper?

Val. Hast thou observ'd that? even she I mean.

Sp. Why sir, I know her not.

Val. Dost thou know her by gazing on her, and yet know'st her not?

Sp. Is she not hard favour'd sir?

Val. Not so fair (boy) as well favour'd.

Sp. Sir, I know that well enough.

Val. What dost thou know?

Sp. That she is not so fair, as (of you) well favour'd?

Val. I mean that her beauty is exquisite,
But her favour infinite.

Sp. That's because the one is painted, and the other out of all count.

Val. How painted? and how out of count?

Sp. Marry sir, so painted to make her fair, that no man counts of her beauty.

Val. How esteem'st thou me? I account of her beauty.

Sp. You never saw her since she was deform'd.

Val. How long hath she been deform'd?

Sp. Ever since you lov'd her.

Val. I have lov'd her ever since I saw her,
And still I see her beautifull.

Sp. If you love her, you cannot see her.

Val. Why?

Sp. Because Love is blinde: O that you had mine eyes, or your own eyes had the lights they were wont to have, when you chid at Sir Protheus, for going un-garter'd.

Val. What should I see then?

Sp. Your own present folly, and her passing deformitie: for he, being in love, could not see to garter his Hose; and you, being in love, cannot see to put on your Hose.

Val. Belike (Boy) then you are in love, for last morning
You could not see to wipe my shooes.

Sp. True sir, I was in love with my bed, I thank you, you swing'd me for my love, which makes me the bolder

bolder to chide you for yours.

Val. In conclusion I stand affected to her:

Sp. I would you were set, so your affection would cease.

Val. Last night she enjoyn'd me,
To write some lines to one she loves.

Sp. And have you.

Val. I have.

Sp. Are they not lamely writ?

Val. No (Boy) but as well as I can do them:
Peace, here she comes.

Sp. Oh excellent Motion; Oh exceeding Puppet:
Now will he interpret to her.

Val. Madam and Mistris, a thousand good morrowes.

Sp. Oh, 'give ye-good-ev'n: here's a million of manners.

Sil. Sir Valentine, and servant, to you two thousand.

Sil. He should give her interest: and she gives it him.

Val. As you enjoyn'd me; I have writ your Letter
Unto the secret, nameless friend of yours:
Which I was much unwilling to proceed in,
But my duty to your Ladiship.

Sil. I thank you (gentle servant) 'tis very Clerkly done.

Val. Now trust me (Madam) it came hardly off:
For being ignorant to whom it goes,
I writ at random very doubtfully.

Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much pains?

Val. No (Madam,) so it steed you, I will write (Please you command) a thousand times as much:
And yet—

Sil. A pretty period: well: I guess the sequell;
And yet I will not name it: and yet I care not.
And yet, take this again: and yet I thank you:
Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.

Sp. And yet you will: and yet, another yet.

Val. What means your Ladiship?
Do you not like it?

Sil. Yes, yes: the lines are very quaintly writ,
But (since unwillingly) take them again:
Nay, take them.

Val. Madam, they are for you.

Sil. I, I: you writ them Sir at my request,
But I will none of them: they are for you:
I would have had them writ more movingly:

Val. Please you, I'll write your Ladiship another.

Sil. And when it's writ: for my sake read it over,
And if it please you, so: if not, why so.

Val. If it please me (Madam?) what then?

Sil. Why if it please you, take it for your labour;
And so good morrow servant. Exit.

Sp. Oh Jest unseen: inscrutable, invisible,
As a nose on a mans face, or a Weathercock on a Steeple:
My Master sues to her: and she hath taught her Sutor,
He being her Pupil, to become her Tutor.
Oh excellent devise, was there ever heard a better?
That my Master being Scribe,
To himself should write the Letter?

Val. How now sir?

What are you reasoning with your self?

Sp. Nay, I was riming: 'tis you that have the reason.

Val. To do what?

Sp. To be a spokes-man from Madam Silvia.

Val. To whom?

Sp. To your self: why, she woe's you by a figure.

Val. What figure?

Sp. By a Letter, I should say.

Val. Why she hath not writ to me?

Sp. What need she,

When she hath made you write to your self?
Why, do you not perceive the jest?

Val. No, believe me.

Sp. No believing you indeed Sir:
But did you perceive her earnest?

Val. She gave me none, except an angry word.

Sp. Why she hath given you a Letter.

Val. That's the Letter I writ to her friend.

Sp. And that Letter hath she deliver'd, & there's an end.

Val. I would it were no worse.

Sp. He warrant you 'tis as well:

For often have you writ to her: and she in modesty,
Or else for want of idle time, could not again reply,
Or fearing else some messenger, that might her mind discover

Her self hath taught her Love himself to write unto her
All this I speak in Print, for in Print I found it. (Lover
Why muse you sir, 'tis dinner time.

Val. I have din'd.

Sp. I, but hearken sir: though the Cameleon Love can feed on the aire, I am one that am nourish'd by my victuals: and would fain have meat: oh be not like your Mistress, be moved, be moved. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Protheus, Julia, Panthion.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia.

Jul. I must where is no remedy.

Pro. When possibly I can, I will return.

Jul. If you turn not: you will return the sooner:
Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's sake.

Pro. Why then wee'll make exchange;
Here, take you this.

Jul. And seal this bargain with a holy kisse.

Pro. Here is my hand, for my true constancie:
And when that hour ore-slips me in the day,
Wherein I sigh not (Julia) for thy sake,
The next ensuing hour, some foul mischance
Torment me for my Love's forgetfulness:
My father stayes my coming: answer not:
The Tide is now; nay, not thy tide of tears,
That tide will stay me longer then I should,
Julia farewell: what, gone without a word?
I, so true love should do: it cannot speak,
For truth hath better deeds than words to grace it.

Pan. Sir Protheus, you are staid for.

Pro. Goe, I come, I come:

Alas, this parting strikes poor Lovers dumb, Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Launce, Panthion.

Launce. Nay, 'twill be this hour ere I have done weeping: all the kind of thee Launces have this very fault: I have receiv'd my proportion, like the prodigious
sonne,

Son, and am going with Sir Protheus to the Imperialls Court : I think Crab my Dog, be the sowrest natured Dog that lives : My Mother weeping : my Father wailing : my Sister crying : our Maid howling : our Cat wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexity, yet did not this cruell-hearted Curre shed one tear : he is a stone, a very pibble-stone, and has no more pity in him then a Dog : a Jew would have wept to have seen our parting : why my Grandam having no eyes, look you, wept her self blind at my parting : nay, I'll show you the manner of it. This shooe is my father : no, this left shooe is my father ; no, no, this left shooe is my mother : nay, that cannot be so neither ; yes : it is so, it is so ; it hath the worser sole : this shooe with the hole in it, is my mother : and this my father : a veng'ance on't, there 'tis : Now sir, this staffe is my sister : for look you, she is as white as a lilly, and as small as a wand : this hat is Nan our maide : I am the dog : no, the dog is himself, and I am the dog : oh, the dog is me, and I am my self : I so, so : now come I to my Father ; Father, your blessing : now should not the shooe speak a word for weeping : now should I kisse my Father ; well, he weeps on : Now come I to my Mother : Oh that she could speak now, like a would-woman : well, I kisse her : why there 'tis ; here's my mothers breath up and down : Now come I to my sister ; marke the moan she makes : now the dogge all this while sheds not a tear : nor speakes a word : but see how I lay the dust with my tears.

Panth. Launce, away, away : a Board thy Masters is ship'd, and thou art to post after with oars ; what's the matter ? why weep'st thou man ? away asse, you'll loose the Tide, if you tarry any longer.

Laun. It is no matter if the tide were lost, for it is the unkindest Tide, that ever any man tyde.

Panth. What's the unkindest tide ?

Laun. Why, he that's tide here, Crab my dog.

Pan. Tut man : I mean thoult loose the floud, and in loosing the flood, loose thy voyage, and in loosing thy voyage, loose thy master, and in loosing thy Master, loose thy service, and in loosing thy service : -----why dost thou stop my mouth ?

Laun. For fear thou shouldst loose thy tongue.

Panth. Where should I loose my tongue ?

Laun. In thy Tale.

Panth. In thy Taile.

Laun. Loose the Tyde, and the voyage, and the Master, and the Service, and the tide : why man if the River were drie, I am able to fill it with my tears : if the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighes.

Panth. Come : come away man, I was sent to call thee.

Laun. Sir : call me what thou dar'st.

Pan. Wilt thou go.

Laun. Well, I will go.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, Speed, Duke, Protheus.

Sil. Servant.

Val. Mistress.

Sp. Master, Sir Thurio frowns on you.

Val. I boy it's for love.

Sp. Not of you.

Val. Of my Mistress then.

Sp. 'Twere good you knockt him.

Sil. Servant, yor are sad.

Val. Indeed, Madam, I seem so.

Thu. Seem you that you are not ?

Val. Hap'ly I do.

Thu. So do Counterfeits.

Val. So do you.

Thu. What seem I that I am not ?

Val. Wife.

Thu. What instance of the contrary ?

Val. Your folly.

Thu. And how quoad you my folly ?

Val. I quoad it in your Jerken.

Thu. My Jerken is a doublet.

Val. Well then, Ile double your folly.

Thu. How ?

Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio, do you change colour ?

Val. Give him leave, Madam, he is a kind of Camelion.

Thu. That hath more minde to feed on your blood, then live in your aire.

Val. You have said Sir.

Thu. I Sir, and done too for this time.

Val. I know it well sir, you alwayes endere you begin.

Sil. A fine volly of words, gentlemē, & quickly shot off.

Val. 'Tis indeed, Madam, we thank the giver.

Sil. Who is that Servant ?

Val. Your self (sweet Lady) for you gave the fire, Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your Ladiships looks, And spends what he borrows kindly in your company.

Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt.

Val. I know it well sir, you have an Exchequer of words, And I think, no other treasure to give your followers :

For it appears by their bare Liveries

That they live by your bare words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more :

Here comes my father.

Duke. Now, daughter, Silvia, you are hard beset.

Sir Valentine, your father is in good health,

What say you to a Letter from your friends

Of much good news ?

Val. My Lord I will be thankfull,

To any messenger from thence.

Duke. Know you Don Antonio, your Countreiman ?

Val. I, my good Lord, I know the Gentleman

To be of worth, and worthy estimation,

And not without desert so well reputed.

Duke. hath he not a Son ?

Val. I my good Lord, a Son ; that well deserves

The honoor, and regard of such a father.

Duke. You know him well ?

Val. I knew him as my self : for from our Infancie

We have convers't, and spent our hours together,

And though my self have been an idle Trewant,

Omitting the sweet benefit of time

To clothe mine age with Angel-like perfection ;

Yet hath Sir Protheus (for that's his name)

Made use, and fair advantage of his dayes :

His years but young, but his experience old :

His head unmellowed, but his judgement ripe ;

And in a word (for far behinde his worth Comes all the praises that I now bestow.)

C

He

He is compleat in feature, and in minde,
With all good grace, to grace a Gentleman.

Duk. Beshrew me sir, but if he make this good
He is as worthy for an Empress love,
As meet to be an Emperours Councillor:
Well, Sir: this gentleman is come to me.
With Commendation from great Potentates,
And here he means to spend his time a while,
I think 'tis no welcome news to you.

Val. Should I have wish'd a thing, it had been he.

Duk. Welcome him then according to his worth:

Silvia, I speak to you, and you Sir Thurio,
For Valentine, I need not cite him to it,
I will send him hither to you presently.

Val. This is the gentleman I told your Ladiship
Had come along with me, but that his Mistres
Did hold his eyes, lockt in her Christal looks.

Sil. Belike that now she hath enfranchis'd them
Upon some other pawne for fealty.

Val. Nay sure, I think she holds them prisoners still.

Sil. Nay then he should be blind; and being blind
How could he see his way to seek out you?

Val. Why Lady, Love hath twenty pair of eyes.

Thu. They say that love hath not an eye at all.

Val. To see such Lovers, Thurio, as your self,
Upon a homely object love can wink. Enter.

Sil. Hiv done, have done: here comes the gentleman.

Val. Welcome, deer Protheus: Mistris, I beseech you Confirm this welcome, with some special favour,

Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither,
If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from.

Val. Mistris, it is: sweet Lady, entertain him
To be my fellow-servant to your Ladiship.

Sil. Too low a Mistris for so high a servant.

Pro. Not so, sweet Lady, but too, mean a servant,
To have a look of such a worthy Mistris.

Val. Leave off discourse of disabilitie:
Sweet Lady, entertain him for your servant.

Pro. My dutie will I boast of, nothing else.

Sil. And dutie never yet did want his meed.
Servant, you are welcome to a worthless Mistris.

Pro. I'll die on him that saies so but your self.

Sil. That you are welcome?

Pro. That you are worthless. (you.

Thur. Madam, my Lord your father would speak with

Sil. I wait upon his pleasure: Come Sir Thurio,
Go with me: once more, new servant welcome;
I'll leave you to confer of home affairs,
When you have done, we look to hear from you.

Pro. Wee'll both attend upon your Ladiship.

Val. Now tell me how do all from whence you came?

Pro. Your friends are well, and have them much com-

Val. And how do yours? (mended.

Pro. I left them all in health.

Val. How does your Lady? and how thrives your love?

Pro. My tales of love were wont to weary you,
I know you joy not in a Love-discourse.

Val. I Protheus, but that life is alter'd now,
I have done penance for contemning Love,
Whose high emperious thoughts have punish'd me with bitter fasts, with penitentiall groans,
With nightly tears, and daily heart-sore sighs,
For in revenge of my contempt of love,
Love hath chac'd sleep from my enthralled eyes,
And made them watchers of mine own hearts sorrow.
O gentle Protheus, Lov's a mighty Lord,

And hath so humbled me, as I confess
There is no woe to his correction,
Nor to his service, no such joy on earth:
Now, no discourse, except it be of love:
Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep,
Upon the very naked name of love.

Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye:
Was this the Idoll, that you worship so?

Val. Even She; and is she not a heavenly Saint?

Pro. No; But she is an earthly Paragon.

Val. Call her divine.

Pro. I will not flatter her.

Val. O flatter me: for love delights in praise.

Pro. When I was sick, you gave me bitter pills,
And I must minister the like to you.

Val. Then speak the truth by her, if not divine,
Yet let her be a principalitie,
Sovereigne to all the Creatures on the earth.

Pro. Except my Mistris.

Val. Sweet: except not any,
Except thou wilt except against my Love.

Pro. Have I not reason to prefer mine own?

Val. And I will help thee to prefer her too;
She shall be dignified with this high honour,
To bear my Ladies train, least the base earth
Should from her vesture chance to steal a kiss,
And of so great a favour growing proud,
Disdain to root the Summer-swellling flower,
And make rough Winter everlastingly.

Pro. Why Valentine, what Bragadism is this?

Val. Pardon me (Protheus) all I can is nothing;
To her, whose worth makes other worthies nothing;
She is alone.

Pro. Then let her alone.

Val. Not for the world: why man, she is mine own,
And I as rich in having such a Jewell
As twenty Seas, if all their sand were pearle,
The water Nectar, and the Rock pure gold.
Forgive me, that I do not dream on thee,
Because thou seest me doat upon my love:
My foolish Rivall that her father likes
(Onely for his possessions are so huge)
Is gone with her along, and I must after,
For Love (thou know'st) is full of jealousy.

Pro. But she loves you? (hour,

Val. I, and we are betroathed: nay more, our marriage
With all the cunning manner of our flight
Determin'd off: how I must climbe her window,
The Ladder made of Cords, and all the means
Plotted, and 'greed on for my happiness.
Good Protheus, go with me to my chamber,
In these affaires to aid me with thy counsel.

Pro. Go on before: I shall enquire you forth:
I must unto the Road, to dis-embarque
Some necessaries; that I needs must use,
And then I'll presently attend you.

Val. Will you make haste?

Pro. I will.

Even as one heat, another heat expels,
Or as one nail by strength drives out another:
So the remembrance of my former Love
Is by a new object quite forgotten,
Is it mine then, or Valentine ans-praise?
Her true perfection, or my false transgression?
That makes me reasonless, to reason thus?
She is fair: and so is Julia that I love,

(The

(That I did love, for now my love is thaw'd,
Which like a waxen Image 'gainst a fire Bears no impression of the thing it was.)
Me thinks my zeal to Valentine is cold,
And that I love him not as I was wont:
O, but I love his Lady too- too much.
And that's the reason I love him so little.
How shall I doat on her with more advice,
That thus without advice begin to love her?
'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld,
And that hath dazl'd so my reasons light:
But when I look on her perfections,
There is no reason, but I shall be blinde.
If I can check my erring love, I will;
If not, to compass her I'll use my skill.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Speed and Launce.

Speed. Launce, by mine honesty welcome to Padua.

Laun. Forswear not thy self, sweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this alwaies, that a man is never undone till he be hang'd, nor never welcome to a place, till some certain shot be paid, and the Hostess say welcome.

Speed. Come-on you mad-cap: I'll to the Ale-house with you presently; where, for one shot of five pence, thou shalt have five thousand welcomes: But sirha, how did thy Master part with Madam Iulia?

Laun. Marry after they cloas'd in earnest, they parted very fairly in jest.

Sp. But shall she marry him?

Laun. No.

Sp. How then? shall he marry her?

Laun. No, neither.

Sp. What, are they broken?

Laun. No; they are both as whole as a fish.

Sp. Why then, how stands the matter with them?

Laun. Marry thus, when it stands well with him, it stands well with her.

Sp. What an ass art thou, I understand thee not.

Laun. What a block art thou, that thou can'st not? My staffe understands me.

Sp. What thou sai'st?

Laun. I, and what I do too: look thee, I'll but lean, and my staffe understands me.

Sp. It stands under thee indeed.

Laun. Why, stand-under: and understand is all one.

Sp. But tell me true, wil't be a match?

Laun. Ask my dog, if he say I: it will: if he say no, it will: if he shake his taile and say nothing, it will.

Sp. The conclusion is then, that it will.

Laun. Thou shalt never get such a secret from me, but by a parable.

Sp. 'Tis well that I get it so: but Launce, how sai'st thou that my master is become a notable Lover?

Laun. I never knew him otherwise.

Sp. Then how?

Laun. A notable Lubber: as thou reportest him to be.

Sp. Why, thou whorion Ass, thou mistak'st me.

Laun. Why Foole, I meant not thee, I meant: not thy Master.

Sp. I tell thee, my master, is become a hot Lover.

Laun. Why I tell thee, I care not, though he burn himself in Love. If thou wilt go with me to the Alehouse, so, if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Jew; and not worth the name of a Christian.

Sp. Why?

Laun. Because thou hast not so much charity in thee as to go to the Ale with a Christian: Wilt thou go?

Sp. At thy service.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Protheus solus.

Pro. To leave my Iulia; shall I be forsworn?
To love fair Silvia; shall I be forsworn?
To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworn.
And ev'n that Power which gave me first my oath
Provokes me to this three-fold perjury.
Love bad me swear, and Love bids me for-swear;
O sweet suggesting Love, if thou hast sin'd,
Teach me (thy tempted subject) to excuse it.
At first I did adore a twinkling Star,
But now I worship a celestial Sun:
Un-heedful vows may heedfully be broken,
And he wants wit, that wants resolved will,
To learn his wit, t'exchange the bad for better;
Fie, fie unreverend tongue to call her bad,
Whose sovereignty so oft thou hast preferd,
With twenty thousand soul-confirming oaths:
I cannot leave to love, and yet I do;
But there I leave to love, where I should love.
Iulia I loose, and Valentine I loose,
If I keep them, I needs must lose my self:
If I loose them, thus finde I but their loss,
For Valentine my self: for Iulia, Silvia.
I to my self am dearer then a friend,
For Love is still most precious in it self,
And Silvia (witness heaven that made her fair)
Shews Iulia but a swarthy Ethiopie.
I will forget that Iulia is alive,
Remembring that my love to her is dead.
And Valentine I'll hold an Enemy,
Aiming at Silvia as a sweeter friend.
I cannot now prove constant to my self,
Without some trechery us'd to Valentine.
This night he meaneth with a corded-ladder
To climbe celestial Silvia's chamber window;
My self in counsel his competitor.
Now presently I'll give her father notice
Of their disguising and pretended flight:
Who (all inrag'd) will banish Valentine:
For Thurio he intends shall wed his daughter,
But Valentine being gone, I'll quickly cross
By some sly trick, blunt Thurio's dull proceeding.
Love lend me wings, to make my purpose swift,
As thou hast lent me wit to plot his drift.

Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. Counsel, Lucetta, gentle girl assist me,
And even in kind love, I doe conjure thee,
Who art the Table wherein all my thoughts
Are visibly Character'd, and Engrav'd,
To lesson me, and tell me some good mean.
How with my honour I may undertake
A journey to my loving Protheus.

Luc. Alas, the way is wearisome and long.

Jul. A true devoted Pilgrim is not weary
To measure Kingdoms with his feeble steps,
Much lesse shall she that hath loves wings to flie,
And when the flight is made to one so dear,
Of such divine perfections as Sir Protheus.

Luc. Better forbear till Protheus make return.

Jul. Oh, know'st thou not, his looks are my souls food?
Pity the dearth that I have pined in,
By longing for that food so long a time.
Didst thou but know the inchly touch of Love,
Thou would'st as soon go kindle fire with snow
As seek to quench the fire of Love with words.

Luc. I doe not seek to quench your Loves hot fire,
But qualifie the fires extream rage,
Least it should burn above the bounds of reason.

Jul. The more thou dam'st it up, the more it burns:
The Current that with gentle murmur glides
(Thou know'st) being stop'd, impatiently doth rage:
But when his fair course is not hindered,
He makes sweet musick with th'enameld stones,
Giving a gentle kisseto every sedge
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage.
And so by many winding nooks he strays
With willing sport to the wild Ocean.
Then let me go, and hinder not my course:
I'll be as patient as a gentle stream,
And make a pastime of each weary step,
Till the last step have brought me to my Love,
And there I'll rest, as after much turmoil
A blessed soul doth in Elizium.

Luc. But in what habit will you go along?

Jul. Not like a woman, for I would prevent
The loose encounters of lascivious men:
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds
As may beseem some well reputed Page.

Luc. Why then your Ladiship must cut your hair.

Jul. No girl, I'll knit it up in silken strings,
With twenty od-conceited true-love knots:
To be fantastick, may become a yough
Of greater time then I shall show to be.

Luc. What fashion (Madam) shall I make your breeches?

Jul. That fits as well, as tell me (good my Lord)
What compasse will you wear your Farthingale?
Why even what fashion thou best likes (Lucetta.)

Luc. You must needs have them with a cod-piece (Ma-

Jul. Out, out, (Lucetta) that will be ill-favored. (dam)

Luc. A round hose (Madam) now's not worth a pin Unlessse you have a cod-piece to stick pins on.

Jul. Lucetta, as thou lov'st me let me have.
What thou think'st meet, and is most mannerly,
But tell me (wench) how will the world repute me
For undertaking so unstaied a journey?

I fear me it will make me scandaliz'd.

Luc. If you think so, then stay at home and go not.

Jul. Nay, that I will not.

Luc. Then never dream on Infamy, but go:
If Protheus like your journey when you come,
No matter who's displeas'd when you are gone:
I fear me he will scarce be pleas'd withall.

Jul. That is the least (Lucetta) of my fear:
A thousand oathes, an Ocean of his tears
And instances as infinite of Love,
Warrant me welcome to my Protheus.

Luc. All these are servants to deceitfull men.

Jul. Base men, that use them to so base effect;
But truer stars did govern Protheus birth,
His words are bonds, his oathes are oracles,
His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate,
His tears pure messengers, sent from his heart,
His heart as far from fraud, as heaven from earth.

Luc. Pray heaven he prove so when you come to him.

Jul. Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that wrong,
To bear a hard opinion of his truth:
Onely deserve my love, by loving him,
And presently go with me to my chamber
To take a note of what I stand in need of,
To furnish me upon my longing journey:
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,
My goods, my Lands, my reputation,
Onely in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence:
Come; answer not: but to it presently,
I am impatient of my tarriance.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Protheus, Valentine, Launce, Speed.

Duk. Sir Thurio, give us leave (I pray) awhile,
We have some secrets to confer about.

Now tell me Protheus, whats your will with me?

Pro. My gracious Lord, that which I would discover,
The law of friendship bids me to conceal,
But when I call to mind your gracious favours
Done to me (undeserving as I am)
My duty pricks me on to utter that
Which else no worldly good should draw from me:
Know (worthy Prince) Sir Valentine my friend
This night intends to steal away your daughter:
My self am one made privy to the plot.

I know you have determin'd to bestow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates;
And should she thus be stoln away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age.

Thus (for my duties sake) I rather chose
To crosse my friend in his intended drift,
Then (by concealing it) heap on your head
A pack of sorrows, which would presse you down
(Being unprepared) to your timelesse grave.

Duk. Protheus, I thank thee for thine honest care,
Which to requite, command me while I live.
This love of theirs, my self have often seen,
Happly when they have judg'd me fast asleep,
And oftentimes have purpos'd to forbid

Sir

Sir Valentine her company, and my Court.
But fearing least my jealous aime might erre,
And so (unworthily) disgrace the man
(A rashnesse that I ever yet have shun'd)
I gave him gentle looks, thereby to find
That which thy self hast now disclos'd to me.
And thou maist perceive my fear of this,
Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested,
I nightly lodge her in an upper Tower,
The key whereof my self have ever kept:
And thence she cannot be convey'd away.

Pro. Know (noble Lord) they have devis'd a mean
How he her Chamber window will ascend,
And with a Corded Ladder fetch her down:
For which, the youthfull Lover now is gone,
And this way comes he with it presently.
Where (if it please you) you may intercept him.
But (good my Lord) doe it so cunningly
That my discovery be not aimed at:
For, love of you, not hate unto my friend,
Hath made me publisher of this pretence.

Duke. Upon mine honour, he shall never know
That I had any light from thee of this.

Pro. Adieu, my Lord, Sir Valentine is coming. Enter.

Duk. Sir Valentine, whether away so fast?

Va. Please it your Grace, there is a Messenger
That stayes to bear my Letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.

Duk. Be they of much import?

Val. The tenure of them doth but signifie
My health, and happy being at your Court.

Duk. Nay then no matter: stay with me awhile,
I am to break with thee of some affairs
That touch me near: wherein thou must be secret
'Tis not unknown so thee, that I have sought
To match my friend Sir Thurio, to my daughter.

Val. I know it well (my Lord) and sure the Match
Were rich and honourable: besides, the gentleman
Is full of Virtue, Bounty, Worth, and Qualities
Beseeming such a Wife, as your fair daughter:
Cannot your Grace win her to fancy him?

Duk. No, trust me, She is peevish, sullen, froward,
Proud, disobedient, stubborn, lacking duty,
Neither regarding that she is my child,
Nor fearing me, as if I were her Father:
And may I say to thee, this pride of hers
(Upon advice) hath drawn my love from her,
And where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should have been cherish'd by her child-like duty,
I now am full resolv'd to take a wife,
And turn her out to who will take her in:
Then let her beauty be her wedding Dowre:
For me and my possessions she esteems not.

Val. What would your Grace have me to doe in this?

Duk. There is a Lady in Verona here
Whom I affect: but she is nice, and coy,
And nought esteems my aged eloquence.
Now therefore would I have thee to my Tutor
(For long agoe I have forgot to court;
Besides the fashion of the time is chang'd)
How, and which way I may bestow my self
To be regarded in her sun-bright eye.

Va. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words,
Dumb Jewels often in their silent kind
More then quick words, doe move a womans mind.

Duk. But she did scorn a present that I sent her,

Val. A woman sometimes scorns what well contents
(her.)
Send her another: never give her o're,
For scorn at first makes after-love the more.
If she do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more love in you.
If she doe chide, 'tis not to have you gone,
For why, the fools are mad, if left alone.
Take no repulse, whatever she doth say,
For, get you gone, she doth not mean away.
Flatter, and praise, commend, extoll their graces:
Though ne're so black, say they have Angels faces,
That man that hath a tongue, I say is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.

Duk. But she I mean, is promis'd by her friends
Unto a youthfull Gentleman of worth,
And kept severely from resort of men,
That no man hath access by day to her.

Val. Why then I would resort to her by night.

Duk. I, but the doors be lockt, and keys kept safe,
That no man hath recourse to her by night.

Val. What lets but one may enter at her Window?

Duk. Her Chamber is aloft far from the ground,
And built so shelving, that one cannot climbe it
Without apparent hazard of his life.

Val. Why then a Ladder quaintly made of Cords
To cast up, with a pair of anchoring hooks,
Would serve to scale another Hero's Tower,
So bold Leander would adventure it.

Duk. Now as thou art a Gentleman of blood
Advite me, where I may have such a Ladder.

Val. When would you use it? pray sir, tell me that.

Duk. This very night; for Love is like a child
That longs for every thing that he can come by.

Val. By seven a clock, I'll get you such a Ladder.

Duk. But hark thee: I will go to her alone,
How shall I best convey the Ladder thither?

Val. It will be light (my Lord) that you may bear it
Under a Cloak, that is of any length.

Duk. A Cloak as long as thine will serve the turn?

Val. I my good Lord.

Duk. Then let me see thy Cloak,
I'll get me one of such another length.

Val. Why any Cloak will serve the turn (my Lord)

Duk. How shall I fashion me to wear a Cloak?
I pray thee let me feel thy Cloak upon me.
What Letter is this same? what's here? to Silvia?
And here an Engine fit for my proceeding,
I'll be so bold to break the seal for once.

*My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly,
And slaves they are to me, that send them flying.
Oh, could their Master come, and go as lightly,
Himself would lodge, where (senselesse) they are lying.
My Herald Thoughts, in thy pure bosome rest them,
While I (their King) that chisler them imporsune.
Do curse the grace that with such grace hath blest them,
Because my selfe doe want my servants fortune.*

*I curse myself, for they are sent by me,
That they should harbour where their Lord would be.*

What's here? Silvia? this night I will infranchise thee.
'Tis so: and here's the Ladder for the purpose.
Why Phaeton (for thou art Merops son)
Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly Car?
And with thy daring folly burn the world?
Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine on thee?

To base Intruder, over-weening Slave,
Bestow thy fawning smiles on equall mates,
And think my patience, (more then thy desert)
Is privileged for thy departure hence.
Thank me for this, more then for all the favours
Which (all-too-much) I have bestowed on thee.
But if thou linger in my Territories
Longer then swiftest expedition
Will give thee time to leave our royall Court,
By heaven, my wrath shall far exceed the love
I ever bore my daughter, or thy self.
Be gone, I will not hear thy vain excuse,
But as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from hence. Exit.

Val. And why not death, rather then living torment?
To die, is to be banisht from my self,
And Silvia is my self: banish'd from her
Is self from self. A deadly banishment:
What light is light, if Silvia be not seen?
What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by?
Unlesse it be to think that she is by,
And feed upon the shadow of perfection.
Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no musick in the Nightingale.
Unlesse I look on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to look upon.
She is my essence, and I leave to be;
If I be not by her fair influence
Foster'd, illumin'd, cherish'd, kept alive.
I flie not death, to flie his deadly doom,
Tarry I here, I but attend on death,
But flie I hence, I flie away from life. Enter Pro. and

Pro. Run (boy) run, run, and seek him out. Launs.

Laus. Soa-hough, Soa-hough-----

Pro. What seest thou?

Laus. Him we go to find,
There's not an hair on's head, but 'tis a Valentine.

Pro. Valentine?

Va. No.

Pro. Who then? his Spirit?

Va. Neither.

Pro. What then?

Va. Nothing.

Laus. Can nothing speak? Master, shall I strike?

Pro. Whom would'st thou strike?

Laus. Nothing.

Pro. Villain, forbear.

Laus. Why Sir, I'll strike nothing: I pray you.

Pro. Sirrha, I say forbear? friend Valentine, a word.

Va. My Eares are stoppt, and cannot hear good news,
So much of bad already hath possesst them.

Pro. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine;
For they art harsh, untuneable, and bad.

Va. Is Silvia dead?

Pro. No, Valentine.

Va. No Valentine indeed, for sacred Silvia,
Hath she forsworn me?

Pro. No Valentine.

Va. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn me.
What is your newes?

Laus. Sir, there is a proclamation that you are vanished.

Pro. That thou art banish'd: oh that's the newes,
From hence, from Silvia, and from me thy friend.

Va. Oh, I have fed upon this woe already.
And now excess of it will make me surfer.

Doth Silvia know that I am banish'd?

Pro. I, I: and she hath offered to the doom

(Which unreverst stands in effectuell force)

A Sea of melting pearl, which some call teares.
Those at her Fathers churlish feet she tendred,
With them upon her knees, her humble self,
Wringing her hands; whose whitenesse so became them,
As if but now they waxed pale for woe:
But neither bended knees, pure hands held up,
Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding teares
Could penetrate her uncompassionate Sire;
But Valentine, if he be tane, must die.
Besides, her intercession chaf'd him so,
When she for thy repeal was suppliant,
That to close prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of bidding there.

Val. No more: unless the next word that thou speak'st
Have some malignant power upon my life:
If so: I pray thee breathe it in mine ear,
As ending Anthem of my endlesse dolour.

Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not help,
And study help for that which thou lament'st,
Time is the Nurse, and breeder of all good;
Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love:
Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life:
Hope is a lovers staffe, walk hence with that
And manage it, against despairing thoughts:
Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence,
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd
Even in the milk-white bosome of thy love.

The time now serves not to expostulate,
Come, I'll convey thee through the City-gate.
And ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concern thy love-affairs:
As thou lov'st Silvia (though not for thy self)
Regard thy danger, and along with me.

Va. I pray thee Launce, and if thou seest my Boy
Bid him make haste, and meet me at thee North-gate.

Pro. Go sirrha, find him out: Come Valentine.

Va. Oh my dear Silvia, haplesse Valentine. Exeunt.

Launce. I am but a fool, look you, and yet I have the wit to think my Master is a kind of a knave: but that's all one, if he be but one knave: He lives not now that knows me to be in love, yet I am in love, but a Teem of horse shall not pluck that from me: nor who 'tis I love; and yet 'tis a woman; but what woman, I will not tell my self: and yet 'tis a Milkmaid: yet 'tis not a maid:
for she hath had Gossips: yet 'tis a maid, for she is her Masters maid, and serves for wages. She hath more qualities then a Water-Spaniell, which is much in a bare Christian. Here is the Cate-log of her Condition. Inpri- mis, She can fetch and carry: why a horse can doe no more; nay, a horse cannot fetch, but onely carry, therefore is she better then a Jade. Item. She can milk, look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

Enter Speed.

Speed. How now Signior Launce? what newes with your Mastership?

La. With my Mastership? why, it is at Sea:

Sp. Well, your old vice still: mistake the word: what newes then in your paper?

La. The black'st newes that ever thou heard'st.

Sp. Why man? how black?

La. Why, as black as Ink.

Sp. Let me read them?

La. Fie on thee Jolt-head, thou canst not read.

Sp. Thou liest: I can.

La. I will try thee: tell me this: who begot thee?

Sp.

Sp. Marry, the son of my Grand-father.
 Sp. Oh illiterate loyterer; it was the son of thy Grand-mother: this proves that thou can'st not read.
 Sp. Come foole, come: try me in thy paper.
 La. There: and S. Nicholas be thy speed.
 Sp. Imprimis she can milk.
 La. I that she can.
 Sp. Item, she brews good Ale.
 La. And thereof comes the proverb: (blessing of your heart, you brew good Ale.)
 Sp. Item, she can sowe.
 La. That's as much as to say (Can she so)
 Sp. Item, she can knit.
 La. What need a man care for a stock with a wench, When she can knit him a stock?
 Sp. Item, she can wash and scour.
 La. A special vertue: for then she need not to be wash'd and scowr'd.
 Sp. Item she can spin.
 La. Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.
 Sp. Item, she hath many nameless vertues.
 La. That's as much as to say Bastard-vertues: that indeed know not their fathers, and therefore have no names.
 Sp. Here follows her vices.
 La. Close at the heels of her vertues:
 Sp. Item, she is not to be fasting in respect of her breath.
 La. Well, that fault may be mended with a breakfast: read on.
 Sp. Item, she hath a sweet mouth.
 Sp. That makes amends for her sowre breath.
 Sp. Item, she doth talke in her sleep.
 La. It's no matter for that; so she sleep not in her talke.
 Sp. Item, she is slow in words.
 La. Oh villanie! that set down among her vices! To be slow in words is a womans onely vertue: I pray the out with't, and place it for her chief vertue.
 Sp. Item, she is proud.
 La. Out with that too:
 It was Eves legacie, and cannot be tane from her,
 Sp. Item, she hath no teeth,
 La. I care not for that neither, because I love crusts.
 Sp. Item, she is curst.
 La. Well: the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.
 Sp. Item, she will often praise her liquor.
 La. If her liquor be good; she shall: if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.
 Sp. Item, she is too liberall.
 La. Of her tongue she cannot; for that's writ down she is slow of: of her purse, she shall not, for that I'll keep shut: Now, of another thing she may, and that cannot I help. Well, proceed.
 Sp. Item, she hath more hairs then wit, and more faults then hairs, and more wealth then faults.
 La. Stop there: I'll have her: she was mine, and not mine twice, or thrice in that Article: rehearse that once more.
 Sp. Item, she hath more hair then wit.
 La. More haire then wit: it may be I'll prove it: The cover of the salt, hides the salt, and therefore it is more then the salt; the haire that covers the wit, is more then the wit: for the greater hides the lesse: What's next?

Sp. And more faults then hairs.
 La. That's monstrous; oh that that were out.
 Sp. And more wealth then faults.
 La. Why that word makes the faults gracious: Well, I'll have her: and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible.
 Sp. What then?
 La. Why then, will I tell thee, that thy Master staies for thee at the North-gate.
 Sp. For me?
 La. For thee? I, who art thou? he hath staied for a better man then thee.
 Sp. And must I go to him?
 La. Thou must run to him; for thou hast staied so long that going will scarce serve the turn.
 Sp. Why did't not tell me sooner? 'pox on your love Letters.
 La. Now will he be swing'd for reading my Letter; An unmannerly slave, that will thrust himself into secrets: I'll eafter to rejoyce in the boyes correction. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Protheus.

Du. Sir Thurio, fear not, but that she will love you Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.
 Th. Since his exile she hath dispis'd me most, Forsworn my company,, and rail'd at me, That I am desperate of obtaining her:
 Du. This weak impress of love, is as a figure Trenched in ice, which with an hours heat Dissolves to water, and doth loose his forme. A little time will melt her frozen thoughts, And worthless Valentine shall be forgot.
 How now Sir Protheus, is your countreyman (According to our Proclamation) gone?
 Pro. Gon, my good Lord.
 Du. My daughter takes his going heavily?
 Pro. A little time (my Lord) will kill that grief.
 Du. So I believe: but Thurio thinks not so:
Protheus; the good conceit I hold of thee, (For thou hast shown some signe of good desert) Makes me the better to confer with thee.
 Pro. Longer then I prove loyal to your Grace, Let me not live, to look upon your Grace.
 Du. Thou know'st how willingly, I would effect The match between sir Thurio and my daughter?
 Pro. I do my Lord.
 Du. And also I do think, thou art not ignorant How she opposes her against my will?
 Pro. She did my Lord, when Valentine was here.
 Du. I, and perversly, she perseveres so: What might we do to make the girl forget The Love of Valentine, and love Sir Thurio?
 Pro. The best way is to slander Valentine, With falsehood, cowardize, and poor descent: Three things, that women highly hold in hate.
 Du. I, but she'll think, that it is spoken in hate.
 Pro. I, if his enemy deliver it.
 Therefore it must with circumstance be spoken By one, whome she esteems as his friend.
 Du. Then you must undertake to slander him.

Pro.

Pro. And that (my Lord) I shall be loath to do.
'Tis an ill office for a Gentleman,
Especially against his very friend.

Du. Where your good word cannot advantage him,
Your slander never can endamage him;
Therefore the office is indifferent:
Being intreated to it by your friend.

Pro. You have prevail'd (my Lord) if I can do it
By ought that I can speak in his dispraise,
She shall not long continue love to him:
But say, this weed her love from Valentine,
It follows not that she will love sir Thurio.

Th. Therefore as you unwind her love from him;
Least it should ravel, and be good to none,
You must provide to bottom it on me:
Which must be done, by praising me as much
As you in worth dispraise sir Valentine.

Du. And Prothens, we dare trust you in this kinde,
Because we know (on Valentines report)
You are already loves firm votary,
And cannot soone revolt, and change your minde.
Upon this warrant, shall you have access,
Where you, with Silvia may confer at large.
For she is lumpish, heavy, melancholly,
And (for your friends sake) will be glad of you;
Where you may temper her, by your perswasion,
To hate young Valentine, and love my friend.

Pro. As much as I can do, I will effect:
But you sir Thurio, are not sharp enough:
You must lay Lime, to tangle her desires
By wailfull Sonnets, whose composed Rimes
Should be full fraught with serviceable vows.

Du. I, much is the force of heaven-bred Poesie.

Pro. Say that upon the altar of her beauty
You sacrifice your tears, your sighes, your heart:
Write till your ink be dry; and with your tears
Moist it again: and frame some feeling line,
That may discover such integrity:
For Orpheus Lute was strung with Poets sinews,
Whose golden touch could soften Steele and Stones;
Make Tygers tame, and huge Leviathans
Forake unfounded deeps, and dance on Sands.
After your dire-lamenting Elegies,
Visit by night your Ladies chamber-window
With some sweet consort; To their Instruments
Tune a deploring dump: the nights dead silence
Will well become such sweet complaining grievance:
This, or else nothing, will inherit her.

Du. This discipline, shews thou hast been in love.

Th. And thy advice, this night, I'll put in practise:
Therefore sweet Prothens, my direction-giver,
Let us into the City presently
To sort some Gentlemen, well skill'd in Musick.
I have a Sonnet, that will serve the turn
To give the on-set to thy good advice.

Du. About it Gentlemen.

Pro. We'll wait upon your Grace, till after Supper,
And afterward determine our proceedings.

Du. Even now about it, I will pardon you, Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Valentine, Speede, and certain Out-laws.

1. Out-l. Fellows, stand fast: I see a passenger.

2. Out. If there be ten, shrink not, but down with 'em.

3. Out. Stand fir, and throw us that you have about 'ye.
If not: we'll make you fir, and rifle you.

Sp. Sir, we are undone; these are the Villains
That all the Travellers do fear so much.

Val. My friends.

1. Out. That's not so, fir: we are your enemies.

2. Out. Peace: we'll hear him.

3. Out. I by my beard will we: for he is a proper man.

Val. Then know that I have little to lose;

A man I am, cross'd with adversitie:
My riches, are these poor habiliments,
Of which, if you should here disfurnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I have.

2. Out. Whither travel you?

Val. To Verona.

1. Out. Whence came you?

Val. From Millain.

3. Out. Have you long sojourn'd there? (saide,

Val. Some sixteen moneths, and longer might have
If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.

1. Out. What, were you banish'd thence?

Val. I was.

2. Out. For what offence?

Val. For that which now torments me to rehearse;
I kil'd a man, whose death I much repent,
But yet I slew him manfully in fight,
Without false vantage, or base treachery.

1. Out. Why nere repent it, if it were done so;
But were you banish'd for so small a fault?

Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doom.

2. Out. Have you the tongues?

Val. My youthfull travel, therein made me happy,
Or else often had been miserable.

3. Out. By the bare scalpe of Robin hoods fat Fryer,
This fellow were a King, for our wild faction.

1. Out. We'll have him: Sirs, a word.

Sp. Master, be one of them:

It's an honourable kind of thievery.

Val. Peace villain.

2. Out. Tell us this: have you any things to take to?

Val. Nothing but my fortune.

3. Out. Know then, that some of us are Gentlemen,
Such as the furie of ungovern'd youth
I thrust from the company of awfull men.
My self was from Verona banished,
For practising to steal away a Lady,
An heir, and Neice allide unto the Duke.

2. Out. And I from Mantua, for a gentleman,
Who, in my moode, I flab'd unto the heart.

1. Out. And I, for such like petty crimes as these.
But to the purpose: for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawless lives;
And partly seeing you are beautifi'd
With goodly shape; and by your own report,
A Linguist, and a man of such perfection,
As we do in our quality much want.

2. Out. Indeed because you are a banish'd man,
There, above the rest, we parley to you:
Are you content to be our general?
To make a vertue of necessity,
And live as we do in the wilderness?

3. Out. What sai'st thou? wilt thou be of our consort?
Say I, and be the captain of us all:
We'll do thee homage, and be rul'd by thee,
Love thee as our Commander, and our King.

1. Out.

1. Out. But if thou scorne our curtesie, thou dyest.
 2. Out. Thou shalt not live, to brag what we have of-
Val. I take your offer, and will live with you, fer'd.
 Provided that you do no outrages
 On silly women, or poor passengers.
 3. Out. No, we detest such vile base practises.
 Come, go with us, we'll bring thee to our Crewes,
 And shew thee all the Treasure we have got;
 Which, with our selves, all rest at thy dispose. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Protheus, Thurio, Julia, Host, Musitian, Silvia.

Pro. Already have I been false to Valentine,
 And now I must be as unjust to Thurio,
 Under the colour of commending him,
 I have access my own love to prefer.
 But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy,
 To be corrupted with my worthless gifts;
 When I protest true loyaltie to her,
 She twits me with my falsehood to my friend;
 When to her beauty I commend my vows,
 She bids me think how I have been forsworn
 In breaking faith with Julia, whom I lov'd;
 And notwithstanding all her suddain quips,
 The least whereof would quell a lovers hope:
 Yet (Spaniel-like) the more she spurns my love,
 The more it grows, fawneth on her still;
 But here comes Thurio; now must we to her window,
 And give some evening Musick to her ear.
Th. How now, sir Protheus, are you crept before us?
Pro. I gentle Thurio, for you know that love
 Will creep in service, where it cannot go.
Thu. I, but I hope, Sir, that you love not here.
Pro. Sir, but I do: or else I would be hence.
Thu. Whom, Silvia?
Pro. I, Silvia, for your sake.
Thu. I thank you for your own: Now Gentlemen
 Let's turn; and too it lustily a while.
Ho. Now, my young guest; me thinks you'r allycholly:
 I pray you what is it?
Ju. Marry (niine Host) because I cannot be merry.
Ho. Come, we'll have you merry: I'll bring you where you shall hear Musick, and see the Gentleman that you ask'd for.
Ju. But I shall hear him speak.
Ho. I that you shall.
Ju. That will be Musick.
Ho. Haik, hark.
Ju. Is he among these?
Ho. I: but peace, let's hear'em.

Song. Who is Silvia? what is she?
That all our Swains commend her?
Holy, fair, and wise is she,
The heaven such grace did lend her,
that she might admired be.
Is she kinde as she is fair?
For beauty lives with kindnes,
Love doth to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness:

And being help'd, inhabits there.
Then to Silvia, let us sing,
That Silvia is excelling;
She excels each mortal thing
Upon the dull earth dwelling.
To her let us Garlands bring.

Ho. How now? are you sadder then you were before;
 How do you, man? the Musick likes you not.
Ju. You mistake: the Musitian likes me not.
Ho. Why, my pretty youth?
Ju. He plaies false (father.)
Ho. How, out of tune on the strings?
Ju. Not so: but yet
 So false that he grieves my very heart-strings.
Ho. You have a quick ear. (heart:
Ju. I, I would I were deaf: it makes me have a flow
Ho. I perceive you delight not in Musick.
Ju. Not a whit, when it jars so.
Ho. Hark what fine change is in the Musick.
Ju. I: that change is the sight.
Ho. You would have them alwaies play but one thing.
Ju. I would alwaies have one play but one thing.
 But Host, doth this Sir Protheus, that we talke on,
 Often resort unto this Gentlewoman?
Ho. I tell you what Lanuce his man told me,
 He lov'd her out of all nick.
Ju. Where is Lanuce?
Ho. Gone to seek his dog, which to morrow, by his Masters command, he must carry for a present to his Lady.
Ju. Peace, stand aside, the company parts.
Pro. Sir Thurio, fear not I will so plead,
 That you shall say, my cunning drift excels.
Th. Where meet we?
Pro. At Saint Gregories well.
Th. Farewell.
Pro. Madam: good ev'n to your Ladiship.
Sil. I thank you for your Musick (Gentlemen)
 Who is that that spake?
Pro. One (Lady) if you knew his pure hearts truth,
 You would quickly learn to know him by his voice.
Sil. Sir Protheus.
Pro. Sir Protheus (gentle Lady) and your Servant.
Sil. What's your will?
Pro. That I may compass yours.
Sil. You have your wish: my will is ever this,
 That presently you hie you home to bed:
 Thou subtle, perjur'd, false, disloyal man:
 Think'st thou I am so shallow, so conceitless,
 To be seduced by thy flattery.
 That has't deceiv'd so many with thy vows?
 Return, return, and make thy love amends:
 For me (by this pale queen of night I swear)
 I am so far from granting thy request,
 That I despise thee, for thy wrongfull suit;
 And by and by intend to chide my self,
 Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.
Pro. I grant (sweet love) that I did love a Lady,
 But she is dead.
Ju. 'Twere false, if I should speak it;
 For I am sure she is not buried.
Sil. Say that she be: yet Valentine thy friend
 Survives; to whom (thy self art witness)
 I am betroth'd; and art thou not asham'd
 To wrong him, with thy importunacy?

Pro.

Pro. I likewise hear that Valentine is dead.

Sil. And so suppose am I; for in his grave
Assure thy self, my love is buried.

Pro. Sweet Lady, let me rake it from the earth.

Sil. Go to thy Ladies grave and call her thence,
Or at the least, in hers, sepulchre thine.

Iul. He heard not that.

Pro. Madam: if your heart be so obdurate:
Vouchsafe me yet your Picture for my love,
The Picture that is hanging in your chamber:
To that I'll speak, to that I'll sigh and weep:
For since the substance of your perfect self
Is else devoted, I am but a shadow;
And to your shadow, will I make true love.

Iul. If 'twere a substance you would sure deceive it,
And make it but a shadow, as I am.

Sil. I am very loath to be your Idol Sir;
But, since your falsehood shall become you well
To worship shadows, and adore false shapes,
Send to me in the morning, and I'll send it:
And so, good rest.

Pro. As wretches have ore-night
That wait for execution in the morne.

Exeunt.

Iul. Host, will you go?

Ho. By my hallidome, I was fast asleep.

Iul. Pray you where lies Sir Protheus?

Ho. Marry at my house:
Trust me, I think 'tis almost day.

Iul. Not so: but it hath been the longest night
That ere I watch'd, and the most heaviest. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Eglamore, Silvia.

Eg. This is the hour that Madam Silvia
Entreated me to call, and know her minde:
That's some great matter she'd employ me in.
Madam, Madam.

Sil. Who calls?

Eg. Your servant, and your friend;
One that attends your Ladiships command.

Sil. Sir Eglamore, a thousand times good morrow,

Eg. As many (worthy Lady) to your self:
According to your Ladiships impose,
I am thus early come, to know what service.
It is your pleasure to command me in.

Sil. Oh Eglamore, thou art a Gentleman:
Think not I flatter (for I swear I do not)
Valiant, wife, remorse-full, well accomplish'd.
Thou art not ignorant what dear good will
I bear unto the banish'd Valentine:
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vain Thurio (whom my very soul abhor'd)
Thy self hast lov'd, and I have heard thee say
No grief did come so near thy heart,
As when thy Lady, and thy true-love di'de,
Upon whose Grave thou vow'dst pure chastitie;
Sir Eglamore: I would to Valentine
To Mantua, where I hear, he makes aboard;
And for the wayes are dangerous to pass,
I do desire thy worthy company,

Upon whose faith and honour, I repose.

Urge not my fathers anger (Eglamore)

But think upon my grief (a Ladies grief)

And on the justice of my flying hence,

To keep me from a most unholy match,

Which heaven and fortune still rewards with plagues.

I do desire thee, even from a heart

As full of sorrows, as the Sea of sands,

To bear me company and go with me:

If not, to hide what I have said to thee,

That I may venture to depart alone.

Eg. Madam, I pitty much your grievances,
Which, since I know they vertuously are plac'd,

I give consent to go along with you,

Wreaking as little what betideth me,

As much, I wish all good befortune you.

When will you go?

Sil. This evening coming.

Eg. Where shall I meet you?

Sil. At Frier Patricks Cell,

Where I intend holy confession.

Eg. I will not fail your Ladiship:

Good morrow (gentle Lady.)

Sil. Good morrow, kind Sir Eglamore. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Launce, Protheus, Iulia, Silvia.

Lau. When a mans servant shall play the Cur with him (look you) it goes hard: one that I brought up of a puppy: one that I sav'd from drowning, when three or four of his blinde brothers and sisters went to it: I have taught him (even as one would say precisely, thus I would teach a dog) I was sent to deliver him, as a present to Mistress Silvia, from my Master; and I came no sooner into the dyning-chamber, but he steps me to her Trencher, and steals her Capons-leg: O, 'tis a foule thing, when a Cur cannot keep himself in all companies: I would have (as one should say) one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit then he, take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily he had been hang'd for't: sure as I live he had suffer'd for't: you shall judge:
He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentleman-like-dogs, under the Dukes table: he had not been there (bless the marke) a pissing while, but all the chamber smelt him: out with the dog (saies one) what cur is that (saies another) whip him out (saies the third) hang him up (saies the Duke,) I having been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab; and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogges: friend (quoth I) you mean to whip the dog: I marry do I
(quoth he) you do him the more wrong (quoth I) 'twas
I did the thing you wot of: he makes me no more adoe, but whips me out of the chamber: how many Masters would do this for his servant? nay, I'll be sworne I have sat in the stocks for puddings he hath stoln, otherwise he had been executed: I have stood on the Pillorie for Geese he hath kil'd, otherwise he had suffered for't: thou think'st not of this now: nay, I remember the trick you serv'd me, when I took my leave of Madam Silvia: did not not I bid the still marke me, and do as I do; when did'st thou see me heave up my leg, and make water against a Gentlewomans farthingale; did'st thou ever see me doe such a trick?

Pro. Sebastian is thy name: I like thee well, And will inploy thee in some service presently.

Jul. In what you please, I'll do Sir what I can.

Pro. I hope thou wilt.

How now you whor-son pezant, Where have you been these two dayes loytering?

La. Marry Sir, I carried Mistris Silvia the dog you bad me.

Pro. And what sayes she to my little Jewel?

La. Marry she sayes your dog was a cur, and tells you currish thanks is good enough for such a present.

Pro. But she receiv'd my dog?

La. No indeed she did not;

Here have I brought him back again.

Pro. What, did'st thou offer her this from me?

La. I Sir, the other Squirrill was stoln from me By the hangmans boy in the market place, And then I offer'd her mine own, who is a dog As big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.

Pro. Go, get the hence, and find my dog again, Or ne're return again into my sight.

Away, I say: stayest thou to vex me here; A slave, that still an end, turn's me to shame.

Sebastian, I have entertained thee, Partly that I have need of such a youth, That can with some discretion do my busines: For 'tis no trusting to yond foolish Lowt: But chiefly, for thy face, and thy behaviour, Which (if my Augury deceive me not) Witness good bringing up, fortune, and truth: Therefore know thou, for this I entertain thee. Go presently and take this Ring with thee, Deliver it to Madam Silvia; She lov'd me well, deliver'd it to me.

Jul. It seems you lov'd not her, to leave her token: She is dead belike?

Pro. Not so: I think she lives.

Jul. Alas.

Pro. Why do'st thou cry alas?

Jul. I cannot choose but pity her.

Pro. Wherefore should'st thou pity her?

Jul. Because, methinks that she lov'd you as well As you do love your Lady Silvia:

She dreams on him, that has forgot her love; You doat on her, that cares not for your love. 'Tis pity Love should be so contrary:

And thinking on it, makes me cry alas.

Pro. Well: give her that Ring, and therewithall This Letter: that's her chamber: Tell my Lady, I claim the promise for her heavenly Picture: Your Message done, hye home unto my chamber, Where thou shalt find me sad, and solitarie.

Jul. How many women would do such a message?

Alas poor Protheus, thou hast entertain'd A Fox, to be the Shepherd of thy Lambs;

Alas, poor fool, why do I pity him

That with his very heart despiseth me?

Because he loves her, he despiseth me,

Because I love him, I must pity him.

This Ring I gave him, when he parted from me,

To bind him to remember my good will:

And now I am (unhappy Messenger)

To plead for that, which I would not obtain; To carry that, which I would have refus'd; To praise his faith which I would have disprais'd. I am my Masters true confirmed love, But cannot be true servant to my Master, Unless I prove false traitor to my self.

Yet will I wooe for him, but yet so coldly, Enter. As (heaven it knows) I would not have him speed. Silvia.

Gentlewoman, good day: I pray you be my mean To bring me where to speak with Madam Silvia.

Sil. What would you with her, if that I be she?

Jul. If you be she, I do intreat your patience To hear me speak the message I am sent on.

Sil. From whom?

Jul. From my Master, Sir Protheus, Madam.

Sil. Oh: he sends you for a Picture?

Jul. I, Madam.

Sil. Ursula, bring my Picture there, Go, give your Master this: tell him from me, One Julia, that his changing thoughts forgot, Would better fit his Chamber, then this Shadow.

Jul. Madam, please you peruse this Letter;

Pardon me (Madam) I have unadvis'd Deliver'd you a paper that I should not;

This is the Letter to your Ladiship.

Sil. I pray thee let me look on that again.

In. It may not be: good Madam pardon me.

Sil. There, hold:

I will not look upon your Masters lines: I know they are stufft with protestations, And full of new-found oaths, which he will break As easie as I do tear his paper.

In. Madam, he sends your Ladiship this Ring.

Si. The more shame for him, that he sends it me;

For I have heard him say a thousand times, His Julia gave it him, at his departure:

Though his false finger have prophan'd the Ring, Mine shall not do his Julia so much wrong.

In. She thanks you.

Si. What sai'st thou?

In. I thank you Madam, that you tender her: Poor Gentlewoman, my Master wrongs her much.

Si. Do'st thou know her?

In. Almost as well as I do know my self.

To think upon her woes, I do protest That I have wept a hundred several times.

Si. Belike she thinks that Protheus hath forsook her?

In. I think she doth: and that's her cause of sorrow.

Si. Is she not passing fair?

In. She hath been fairer (Madam) then she is, When she did think my Master lov'd her well;

She, in my judgement, was as fair as you.

But since she did neglect her looking glass,

And threw her Sun-expelling Masque away,

The air hath starv'd the roses in her cheeks;

And pinch'd the lilly-tincture of her face

That now she is become as black as I.

Sil. How tall was she?

In. About my stature: for at Pentecost, When all our Pageants of delight were plaid,

Our youth got me to play the womans part,

And I was trim'd in Madam Julia's gown,

Which served me as fit, by all mens judgements,

As if the garment had been made for me:

Therefore I know she is about my height;

And at that time I made her weep agoon,

For

For I did play a lamentable part.

(Madam) 'twas Ariadne, passioning
For Theseus perjury, and unjust flight;
which I so lively acted with my tears:

That my poor Mistress moved there withall,
Wept bitterly: and would I might be dead,
If I in thought felt not her very sorrow.

Sil. She is beholding to thee (gentle youth)
Alas, (poor Lady) desolate, and left;
I weep my self to think upon thy words:
Here youth: there is a purse; I give thee this
For thy sweet Mistress sake, because thou lov'st her.
Farewell.

Exit.

Jul. And she shall thank you for't, if ere you know
A virtuous gentlewoman, milde, and beautifull. (her.)
I hope my Masters suit will be but cold,
Since she respects my Mistress love so much.
Alas, how love can trifle with it self:
Here is her Picture: let me see, I think
If I had such a Tyre, this face of mine
Were full as lovely as is this of hers;
And yet the Painter flatter'd her a little,
Unless I flatter with my self too much.
Her hair is Aburne, mine is perfect Yellow;
If that be all the difference in his love,
I'll get me such a colour'd Perriwig:
Her eyes are grey as grass, and so are mine:
I, but her fore-head's low, and mine's as high:
What should it be that he respects in her,
But I can make respect in my self,
If this fond love, were not a blinded god?
Come shadow, come, and take this shadow up,
For 'tis thy rivall: O thou senseless forme.
Thou shalt be worship'd, kiss'd, lov'd, and ador'd;
And were there sense in this Idolatry,
My substance should be statue in thy stead.
I'll use thee kindly, for thy mistress sake
That us'd me so, : or else by Jove, I vow.
I should have scratch'd out your unseeing eyes;
To make my Master out of love with thee.

Exit.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Eglamore, Silvia.

Egl. The Sun begins to guild the Western skie,
And now it is about the very hour
That Silvia, at Fryer Patrick's Cell should meet me,
She will not fail; for Lovers break not hours,
Unless it be to come before their time,
So much they spur their expedition.
See where she comes: Lady a happy evening.

Sil. Amen, Amen: go on (good Eglamore)
Our at the Postern by the Abbey wall;
I fear I am attended by some Spies.

Egl. Fear not: the Forrest is not three leagues off,
If we recover that, we are sure enough. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Thurio, Prothem, Julia, Duke.

Th. Sir Prothem, what sayes Silvia to my suit?

Pro. Oh Sir, I find her milder then she was,
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.

Thu. What? that my leg is too long?

Pro. No, that it is too little. (der.)

Thu. I'll wear a Boot, to make it somewhat round.

Pro. But love will not be spurr'd to what it loath's.

Thu. What sayes she to my face?

Pro. She sayes it is a fair one.

Thu. Nay then the wonton lies: my face is black.

Pro. But Pearl's are fair; and the old saying is,
Black men are Pearl's, in beauteous Ladies eyes.

Thu. 'Tis true, such Pearl's as put out Ladies eyes.
For I had rather wink, then look on them.

Thu. How likes she my discourse?

Pro. Ill, when they talke of war.

But well, when I discourse of love and peace.

Jul. But better indeed, when you hold your peace.

Thu. What sayes she to my valour?

Pro. Oh Sir, she makes no doubt of that.

Jul. She needs not, when she knowes it cowardize.

Thu. What sayes she to my birth?

Pro. That you are well deriv'd.

Jul. True: from a Gentleman to a fool.

Thu. Considers she my possessions?

Pro. Oh I: and pitties them.

Thu. Wherefore?

Jul. That such an Ass should owe them.

Pro. That they are out by Lease.

Jul. Here comes the Duke.

Du. How now sir Prothem; how now Thurio?
Which of you say saw Sir Eglamore of late?

Thu. Not I.

Pro. Not I.

Du. Saw you my daughter?

Pro. Neither.

Du. Why then

She's fled unto the pezant, Valentine;

And Eglamore is in her companie.

'Tis true: for Frier Laurence met them both
As he, in penance wander'd through the Forrest:
Him he knew well: and guest that it was she,
But being mask'd, he was not sure of it.

Besides she did intend Confession,

At Patrick's Cell this even, and there she was not.

These likelihoods confirm her flight from hence;

Therefore I pray you stand not to discourse,

But mount you presently; and meet with me

Upon the rising of the Mountain foot

That leads toward Mantua, whither they are fled:

Dispatch (sweet Gentlemen) and follow me.

Thu. Why this it is, to be a peevish Girl,

That flies her fortune where it follows her:

I'll after; more to be reveng'd on Eglamore,

Then for the love of reck-less Silvia.

Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love

Then hate of Eglamore that goes with her.

Jul. And I will follow, more to cross that love
Then hate for Silvia, that is gone for love. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Silvia, Out-laws.

I. Out. Come, come be patient.

We

We must bring you to our Captain.

Sil. A thousand more mischances then this one
Have learn'd me how to brook this patiently.

2 Out. Come, bring her away.

1 Out. Where is the Gentleman that was with her.

3 Out. Being nimble footed, he hath out-run us.

But Moyse and Valerius follow him :

Go thou thither to the West end of the Wood,
There is our Captain : wee'll follow him that's fled,
The thicker is beset, he cannot scape.

1 Out. Come, I must bring you to our Captain's Cave.
Fear not : he bears an honourable mind,
And will not use a woman lawlessly.

Sil. O Valentine : this I endure for thee.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

*Enter Valentine, Protheus, Silvia, Julia, Duke.
Thurio, Our-lawes.*

Val. How use doth breed a habit in a man ?
This shadowy Desert, unfrequented woods,
I better brook then flourishing peopled townes :
Here can I sit alone, unseen of any,
And to the Nightingales complaining Notes ;
Tune my distresses, and record my woes.
O thou that dost inhabit in my breast,
Leave not the Mansion so long Tenantlesse,
Left growing ruinous, the building fall,
And leave no memory of what it was,
Repair me with thy presence, Silvia :
Thou Gentle Nymph, cherish thy forlorn Swain.
What hallowing, and what stirre is this to day ?
These are my mates, that make their wills their Law,
Have some unhappy passenger in chafe ;
They love me well, yet I have much to doe
To keep them from uncivil outrages.
Withdraw thee Valentine : who's this comes here ?

Pro. Madam, this service I have done for you,
(Though you respect not ought your servant doth)
To hazard life, and rescue you from him,
That would have forc'd your honour and your love,
Vouchsafe me for my meed, but one fair look :
(A smaller boon than this I cannot beg,
And lesse than this I am sure you cannot give.)

Val. How like a dream is this ? I see and hear :
Love, lend me patience to forbear a while.

Sil. O miserable unhappy that I am.

Pro. Unhappy were you (Madam) ere I came :
But by my coming I have made you happy.

Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most unhappy.

In. And me, when he approacheth to your presence.

Sil. Had I been seized by a hungry Lion,
I would have been a breakfast to the Beast,
Rather than have false Protheus rescue me :
O heaven be judge how I love Valentine,
Whose life's as tender to me as my soul,
And full as much (for more there cannot be)
I doe detest false perjur'd Protheus :
Therefore be gone, solicit me no more.

Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to death,
Would I not undergo for one colime look :
Oh, 'tis the curse in Love, and still approv'd,

When women cannot love, where they're beloy'd.

Sil. When Protheus cannot love, where he's beloy'd :
Read over Julia's heart, (thy first best Love)
For whose dear sake thou didst then rend thy faith
Into a thousand oathes ; and all those oathes,
Descended into perjury to deceive me,
Thou hast no faith left now, unlesse thou'dst two,
And that's far worse than none: better have none
Then plurall faith, which is too much by one :
Thou counterfeit to thy true friend.

Pro. In love,

Who respects friend ?

Sil. All men but Protheus.

Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words
Can no way change you to a milder form ;
I'll move you like a Soldier, at armes end,
And love you 'gainst the nature of love : force ye.

Sil. Oh heaven.

Pro. I'll force thee yield to my desire.

Val. Ruffian let go that rude uncivil touch,
Thou friend of an ill fashion.

Pro. Valentine !

Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love.
For such is a friend now : Though treacherous man,
Thou hast beguil'd my hopes ; nought but mine eye
Could have perswaded me : now I dare not say
I have one friend alive ; thou would'st disprove me:
Who should be trusted now, when ones right hand
Is perjured to the bosome ? Protheus,
I am sorry I must never trust thee more,
But count the world a stranger for thy sake :
The private wound is deepest : oh time, most accurst :
'Mongst all foes, that a friend should be the worst ?

Pro. My shame and guilt confounds me :
Forgive me Valentine : if hearty sorrow
Be a sufficient Ransome for offence,
I tender't here : I doe as truly suffer,
As ere I did commit.

Val. Then am I paid :
And once again, I doe receive thee honest ;
Who by repentance is not satisfied,
Is nor of heaven, nor earth ; for these are pleas'd :
By Penitence th'Eternal's wrath's appeas'd :
And that my love may appear plain and free,
All that was mine in Silvia, I give thee.

In. Oh me unhappy.

Pro. Look to the Boy.

Val. Why, Boy ?

Why Wag : how now ? what's the matter ? look up : speak.

In. O good Sir, my Master charg'd me to deliver a Ring to Madam Silvia : which (out of my neglect) was never

Pro. Where is that Ring, Boy ? (done.)

In. Here 'tis : this is it.

Pro. How ? let me see.

Why this is the Ring I gaveto Julia.

In. Oh, cry you mercy sir, I have mistook :
This is the Ring you sent to Silvia.

Pro. But how cam't thou by this Ring ? at my depart
I gave this unto Julia.

In. And Julia her self did give it me.
And Julia her self hath brought it hither.

Pro. How ? Julia ?

In. Behold her that gave aim to all thy oathes,
And entertain'd'em deeply in her heart.
How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the roo ?
Oh Protheus, let this habit make thee blush.

Be thou asham'd that I have took upon me,
Such an immodest rayment : if shame live
In a disguise of love ?

It is the lesser blot modesty finds,
Women to change their shapes, than men their minds.

Pro. Than men their minds ? 'tis true, oh heaven, were Man but constant, he were perfect ; that one errour
Fills him with faults : makes him run through all th' sins ;
Inconstancy falls off ere it begins :

What is in Silvia's face, but I may spie
More fresh in Julia's with a constant eye ?

Val. Come, come : a hand from either :
Let me be blest to make this happy close :

'Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.

Pro. Bear witness (heaven) I have my wish for ever.
Iul. And I mine.

Out-l. A prize, a prize, a prize.

Val. Forbear, forbear I say : it is my Lord the Duke.
Your grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd,
Banished Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine ?

Thu. Yonder is Silvia : and Silvia's mine.

Val. Thurio give back ; or else embrace thy death :
Come not within the measure of my wrath :
Doe not name Silvia thine : if once again,
Verona shall not hold thee : here she stands,
Take but possession of her, with a Touch :
I dare thee, but to breathe upon my Love.

Thur. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I :
I hold him but a fool that will endanger
His body, for a Girl that loves him not :
I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.

Duk. The more degenerate and base art thou,
To make such means for her as thou hast done,
And leave her on such slight conditions.

Now, by the honour of my Ancestry,
I doe applaud thy spirit Valentine,
And think thee worthy of an Empreffe love :
Know then, I here forget all former griefs,
Cancell all grudge, repeal the home again,
Plead a new state in thy arrival'd merit,
To which I thus subscribe : Sir Valentine,
Thou art a Gentleman and well deriv'd,
Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserv'd her.

Val. I thank your grace, the gift hath made me hap-
I now beseech you (for your Daughters sake) (py :
To grant one Boon that I shall aske of you.

Duke. I grant it for thine own what ere it be.

Val. These banish'd men, that I have kept withall,
Are men endu'd with worthy qualities :
Forgive them what they have committed here,
And let them be recall'd from their exile :
They are reform'd, civil, full of good,
And fit for great imployment (worthy Lord.)

Duk. Thou hast prevail'd, I pardon them and thee :
Dispose of them, as thou know'st their deserts.
Come, let us go, we will include all jars,
With Triumphs, Mirth, and all solemnity.

Val. And as we walk along, I dare be bold
With our discourse, to make your grace to smile.
What think you of this Page (my Lord ?)

Duk. I think the Boy hath grace in him, he blushes.

Val. I warrant you (my Lord) more grace than Boy.

Duk. What mean you by that saying ?

Val. Please you, I'll tell you as we passe along,
That you will wonder what hath fortun'd :
Come Protheus, 'tis your penance but to hear
The story of your Loves discovered.
That done, our day of marriage shall be yours,
One feast, one house, one mutuall happinesse. Exeunt.

Slender. In the County of Gloucester, Justice of Peace, and Shal. I (Cousin Slender) and Cust-alorum.

I, and Rato-lorum too ; and a Gentleman born (Master Parson) who writes himself Armigero, in any Bill, Warrant, Quittance, or Obligation, Armigero.

Shal. I that I do, and have done any tims these three hundred yeares.

Slender. All his Successors (gone before him) have don't : and all his Ancestors (that come after him) may : they may give the dozen white Luces in their Coat.

Shal. It is an old Coat.

Evans. The dozen white Lowfes doe become an old Coat well : it agrees well passant : it is a familiar beast to nian, and signifies Love.

Shal. The Luce is the fresh-fish, the salt-fish, is an old Coat.

Slender. I may quarter (Coz.)

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Evans. It is marrying indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Evans. Yes per-lady : if he has a quarter of your Coat, there is but three skirts for your self, in my simple conjectures : but that is all one : if Sir John Falstaffe have committed disparagements unto you, I am of the Church and will be glad to doe my benevolence, to make atonements and compremises between you.

Shal. The Council shall hear it, it is a Riot.

Duan. It is not meet the Council hear of a Riot : there is no fear of Got in a Riot : The Council (look you) shall desire to hear the fear of Got, and not to hear a Riot : take you viza-ments in that.

Shal. Ha ; o' my life, if I were young again, the sword should end it.

Evans. It is petter that friends is the sword, and end it : and there is also another device in my plain, which peradventure prings good discretions with it. There is Anne Page, which is daughter to Master Thomas Page, which is pretty virginity.

Slender. Mistresse Anne Page ? she has brown hair, and speaks like a woman.

Evans. It is that ferry person for all the orld, as just as you will desire, and seven hundred pounds of monies, and gold, & silver, is her Grand-fire upon his deaths-bed, (Got deliver to a joyful Resurrections) give, when she is able to overtake seventeen years old. It were a good motion, if we leave our pribbles and prabbles, and desire a marriage between Master Abraham, and Mistresse Anne Page.

Slender. Did her Grand-fire leave her seven hundred pound ?

Evans. I, and her Father is make her a petter penny.

Slender. I know the young Gentlewoman, she has good gifts.

Evans. Seven hundred pounds, and possibility is goot gifts.

Shal. Well let us see honest Mr. Page : is Falstaffe there ?

Evans. Shall I tell you a lie ? I doe despise a liar, as I doe despise one that is false, or as I despise one that is not true : the Knight Sir John is there, and I beseech you be ruled by your well-willers : I will peat the door for Master Page. What ho ? Got blesse your house here.

Mr. Page. Who's there ?

Evans. Here is got's plesing and your friend, and Justice Shallow, and here's young Master Slender : that peradventures shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

Mr. Page. I am glad to see your Worships well : I thank you for my Venison, Master Shallow.

Shal. Master Page, I am glad to see you : much good doe it your good heart : I with'd your Venison better, it was ill kill'd : how doth good Mistresse Page ? and I thank you alwayes with my heart, la : with my heart.

Mr. Page. Sir, I thank you.

Shal. Sir, I thank you : by yea and no I doe.

M. Page. I am glad to see you good Master Slender.

Slender. How do's your fallow Greyhound, Sir, I heard say he was out-run on Cotsale.

M. Pa. It could not be judg'd sir.

Slender. You'll not confesse, you'll not confesse.

Shal. That he will not, 'tis your fault, 'tis your fault : 'tis a good dog.

M. Page. A Cur sir.

Shal. Sir, he's a good Dog, and a fair Dog, can there be more said ? he is good, and fair. Is Sir John Falstaffe here ?

M. Page. Sir, he is within ; and I would I could doe a good office between you.

Evans. It is spoke as a Christians ought to speak,

Shal. He hath wrong'd me (Master Page.)

M. Page. Sir, he doth in some sort confesse it.

Shal. If it be confessed, it is not redressed ; is not that so (M. Page ?) he hath wrong'd me, indeed he hath, at a word he hath : believe me, Robert Shallow Esquire, saith he is wrong'd.

Ma. Pa. Here comes Sir John.

Fal. Now, Master Shallow, you'll complain of me to the King ?

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men, kill'd my Deer, and bro open my Lodge.

Fal. But not kiss'd your Keepers Daughter ?

Shal. Tut a pin : this shall be answer'd.

Fal. I will answer it straight, I have done all this : That is now answer'd Shal. The Council shall know this :

Fal. 'Twere better for you if it were known in counsell : you'll be laugh'd at.

Evans. Pauca verba ; (Sir John) good worts.

Fal. Good worts ? good Cabbage ; Slender, I broke your head : what matter have you against me ?

Slen. Marry Sir, I have matter in my head against you, and against your Cony-catching Rascals, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol.

Bar. You Barbury Cheese.

Slen. I, it is no matter.

Pist. How now, Mephistophilus ?

Slen. I, it is no matter.

Nym. Slice, I say, pauca, pauca : Slice, that's my humor.

Slen. Where's Simple my man ? can you tell, Cousin ?

Evans. Peace I pray you : now let us understand ; there is three Umpires in this matter, as I understand ; that is, Master Page (fidelicet Master Page) and there is my self, (fidelicet my self) and the three party is (lastly, and finally) mine Host of the Garter.

M. Pa. We three to hear it, and end it between them.

Evan. Ferry goo't, I will make a prief of it in my Note-book, and we will afterwards orke upon the cause, with as great discreetly as we can.

Fal. Pistol.

Pist. He heares with cares.

Evan. The Tevil and his Tam, what phrase is this he heares with ear ? why it is affectations.

Fal. Pistol, did you pick M. Slenders purse ?

Slen. I, by these gloves did he, or I would I might never come in mine own great chamber again else, of seven groats in Mill-sixpences, and two Edward Shovelboards, that cost me two shilling and two pence a piece, of Yead Miller : by these gloves.

Fal. Is this true Pistol ?

Evan. No, it is false, if it is a pick-purse.

Pist. Ha, thou Mountain Forreigner : Sir John, and Master mine, I combat challenge of this Latine Bilboe : word of denyall in thy labras here ; word of deniall, froth, and scum thou lyest.

Slen. By these gloves, then 'twas he.

Nym. Be avis'd sir, and passe good humours : I will say marry trap with you, if you run the nut-hooks humour on me, that is the very note of it.

Slen. By this Hat, then he in the red face had it : for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an Ass.

Fal. What say you Scarlet and John ?

Bar. Why sir (for my part) I say the Gentleman had drunk himself out of his five sentences.

Evans. It is his five fences : fie, what the ignorance is.

Bar. And being sap, sir, was (as they say) casheer'd : and so conclusions pass the Carreires.

Slen. I, you spake in Latine then too : but 'tis no matter : I'll ne're be drunk whilst I live again, but in honest, civil godly company for this trick : If I be drunk, I'll be drunk with those that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

Evan. So got-udge me, that is a virtuous mind.

Fal. You hear all these matters deny'd, Gentlemen you hear it.

M. Page. Nay daughter carry the Wine in, wee'll drink within.

Slen. Oh heaven : This is Mistress Anne Page.

M. Page. How now Mistress Ford ?

Fal. Mistress Ford, by my troth you are very well met : by your leave good Mistress.

M. Page. Wife, bid these Gentlemen welcome : come, we have a hot Venison Pasty to dinner ; Come gentlemen, I hope we shall drink down all unkindness.

Slen. I had rather then forty shillings I had my book of Songs and Sonnets here : How now Simple, where have you been ? I must wait on my self, must I ? you have not the book of Riddles about you, have you ?

Sim. Book of Riddles, why did you not lend it to Alice Short-cake upon Alhallowmas last ; a fortnight afore Michaelmas.

Shal. Come Coz, come Coz, we stay for you : a word with you Coz : marry this, Coz : there is as 'twere a tender, a kind of tender, made a far off by Sir Hugh here : doe you understand me ?

Slen. I Sir, you shall find me reasonable ; if it be so, I shall doe that is reason.

Shal. Nay, but understand me.

Slen. So I doe Sir.

Evan. Give ear to his motions ; (M. Slender) I will description the matter to you, if you be capacity of it.

Slen. Nay, I will doe as my Cousin Shallow says : I pray you pardon me, he's a Justice of Peace in his Countrey, simple though I stand here.

Evan. But that is not the question : the question is concerning your marriage.

Shal. I, there's the point Sir.

Evan. Marry is it : the very point of it, to M. An. Page.

Slen. Why if it be so ; I will marry her upon any reasonable demands.

Eva. But can you affection the 'o-man, let us command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips : for divers Philosophers hold, that the lips is parcell of the mouth : therefore precisely, can you marry your good will to the maid ?

Shal. Cousin Abraham Slender, can you love her ?

Slen. I hope sir, I will doe as it shall become one that would doe reason.

Evan. Nay got's Lords and his Ladies, you must speak possitable, if you can carry-her your desires towards her.

Shal. That you must :

Will you (upon good dowry) marry her ?

Slen. I will doe a greater thing then that, upon your request (Cousin) in any reason.

Shal. Nay, conceive me, conceive me, (sweet Coz :) what I doe is to pleasure you (Coz) can you love the Maid ?

Slen. I will marry her (Sir) at your request ; but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet Heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance, when we are married, and have more occasion to know one another : I hope upon familiarity will grow more content : but if you say marry-her, I will marry her, that I am freely dissolved, and dissolutely.

Evan.

Evans. It is a fery discretion answer : save the fall is in th'ord dissolately : the ort is (according to our meaning) resolutely : his meaning is good.

Sh. I, I think my Cousin meant well.

Sl. I, or else I would I might be hang' (la.)

Sh. Here comes fair Mistress Anne ; would I were young for your sake, Mistress Anne.

An. The dinner is on the Table, my Father desires your Worships company.

Sh. I will wait on him, (fair Mistress Anne.) (Grace.

Evans. Od's plessed will : I will not be absence at the

An. Will't please your Worship to come in, Sir ?

Sl. No, I thank you forsooth heartily ; I am very well.

An. The Dinner attends you sir.

Sl. I am not a-hungry, I thank you forsooth : go Sirrha, for all you are my man, go wait upon my Cousin Shallow : a Justice of Peace sometime may be beholding to his friend for a man ; I keep but three men and a Boy yet, till my Mother be dead : but what though, yet I live a poor Gentleman born.

An. I may not go in without your Worship ; they will not sit till you come.

Sl. I'faith, I'll eat nothing : I thank you as much as though I did.

An. I pray you sir walk in.

Sl. I had rather walk here (I thank you) I bruiz'd my shin th'other day, with playing at Sword and Dagger with a Master of Fence (three veneys for a dish of stew'd Prunes) and by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meat since. Why doe your dogs bark so ? be there Bears ich' Town ?

An. I think there are, Sir, I heard them talk'd of.

Sl. I love the sport well, but I shall as soon quarrell at it as any man in England : you are afraid if you see the Bear loose, are you not ?

An. I indeed Sir.

Sl. That's meat and drink to me now : I have seen Sackerson loose twenty times, and have taken him by the Chain : but (I warrant you) the women have so cri'd and shriekt at it, that it past : But women indeed cannot abide'em, they are very ill-favour'd rough things.

M. Pa. Come gentle M. Slender, come: we stay for you.

Sl. I'll eat nothing I thank you Sir.

M. Pa. By Cock and Pye you shall not choose Sir : come, come.

Sl. Nay, pray you lead the way.

M. Pa. Come on Sir.

Sl. Mistress Anne, your self shall go first.

An. Not I Sir, pray you keep on.

Sl. Truly I will not go first : truly-la : I will not doe you that wrong.

An. I pray you Sir.

Sl. I'll rather be unmannerly then troublesome : you doe your self wrong indeed-la. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Evans and Simple.

Evans. Go your wayes and ask of Doctor Caius house, which is the way; and there dwells one Mistress Quickly, which is in the manner of his Nurse; or his dry-Nurse; or his Cook ; or his Laundry ; his Washer, and his Ringer.

Sim. Well Sir.

Evans. Nay, it is petter yet : give her this letter ; for it is a 'oman that altogethers acquaintance with Mistress Page ; and the Letter is to desire, and require her to sollicite your Masters desires to Mistress Anne Page : I pray you be gone : I will make an end of my dinner ; there's Pippins and Cheese to come. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaffe, Host, Bardolfe, Nym, Pistol. Page.

Fal. Mine Host of the Garter ?

Ho. What sayes my Bully Rook ? speak Schollarly, and wisely.

Fal. Truly mine Host ; I must turn away some of my followers.

Ho. Discard, (Bully Hercules) casheer ; let them wag ; trot, trot.

Fal. I sit at ten pounds a week.

Ho. Thou'rt an Emperour (Cesar, Keisar and Phaexar) I will entertain Bardolfe : he will draw, he will tap, said I well (Bully Hector ?)

Fa. Doe so (good mine Host.)

Ho. I have spoke, let him follow : let me see thee froth and live : I am at a word : follow.

Fal. Bardolfe follow him, a Tapster is a good trade : an old Cloake makes a new Jerkin ; a wither'd Serving-man, a fresh Tapster, go, adieu.

Ba. It is a life that I have desir'd : I will thrive.

Pist. O base hungarian wight: wilt thou the Spigot weild

Ni. He was gotten in drink: is not the humor conceited.

Ba. I am glad I am so acquit of this Tinderbox : his Thefts were too open ; his filching was like an unskillfull Singer, he kept not time.

Ni. The good humour is to steal at a minutes rest.

Pist. Convey, the wife it call : Steal ? soh : a fico for the phrase.

Fa. Well sirs, I am almost out at heels.

Pist. Why then let Kibes ensue.

Fal. There is no remedy: I must conicatch, I must shift.

Pist. Young Ravens must have food.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this Town ?

Pist. I ken the wight, he is of substance good.

Fal. My honest Lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Pist. Two yards and more.

Fal. No quips now Pistol : (Indeed I am in the Waste two yards about : but I am now about no waste, I am about thrift :) briefly, I doe mean to make love to Ford's wife : I spie entertainment in her : she discourses : she carves : she gives the leere of invitation : I can construe the action of her familiar stile, and the hardest voice of her behaviour (to be english'd right) is, I am Sir John Falstaffes.

Pist. He hath studied her will ; and translated her will : out of honesty into English.

Ni. The Anchor is deep : will that humour passe ?

Fal. Now, the report goes, she has all the rule of her Husbands Purse : he hath a legend of Angels.

Pist. As many devils entertain : and to her Boy say I.

Ni. The humor rises : it is good: humor me the Angels.

Fal. I have writ me here a Letter to her; and here another to Pages wife, who even now gave me good eyes too : examin'd my part with most judicious illiads: sometimes the beam of her view, guided my foot: sometimes my portly belly.

Pist. Then did the Sun on Dung-hill shine.

Ni. I thank thee for that humour.

Fal. O she did so course o're my exteriours with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye, did seem to scorch me up like a burning-glasse : here's another Letter to her : She bears the Purse too : She is a Region in Guiana : all gold and bounty : I will be Cheaters to them both, and they shall be Exchequers to me : they shall be my East and West-Indies, and I will trade to them both : Go, bear thou this Letter to Mistress Page ; and thou this to Mistress Ford : we will thrive (Lads) we will thrive.

Pist. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become,
And by my side wear Steel ? then Lucifer take all.

Ni. I will run no base humour : here take the humour-Letter ; I will keep the haviour of reputation.

Fal. Hold Sirha, bear you these Letters rightly,
Sail like my Pinnacle to these golden shores.
Rogues, hence, avaunt, vanish like hail-stones ; go,
Trudge ; plod away oth' hoof, seek shelter, pack :
Falstaffe will learn the honour of the age,
French-thrift, you Rogues, my self, and skirted Page.

Pist. Let Vultures gripe thy guts ; for gourd, and Fullam holds : & high and low beguiles the rich and poor,
Tetter I'll have in Pouch when thou shalt lack,
Base Phrygian Turk.

Ni. I have operations,
Which be humours of revenge.

Pist. Wilt thou revenge ?

Ni. By Welkin and her Star.

Pist. With wit, or steel ?

Ni. With both the humours, I :

I will discusse the humour of this Love to Ford.

Pist. And I to Page shall eke unfold
How Falstaffe (Varlet vile)

His Dove will prove : his gold will hold,
And his soft couch defile.

Ni. My humour shall not cool : I will incense Ford to deal with poyson : I will possesse him with yellownesse, for the revolt of mine is dangerous : that is my true humour.

Pist. Thou art the Mars of *Male-content*s : I second thee : troop on. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Mistress Quickly, Simple, John Rugby, Doctor Caius, Fenton.

Qu. What, John Rugby, I pray thee go to the Cafe-ment, and see if you can see my Master, Master Doctor Caius comming : if he doe (I'faith) and find any body in the house, here will be an old abusing of Gods patience, and the Kings English.

Ru. I'll go watch.

Qu. Go, and we'll have a posset for't soon at night,
(in faith) at the latter end of a Sea-coale fire : An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withall : and I warrant you, no tell-tale, nor no breedbate : his worst fault is, that he is given to prayer ; he is something peevish that way : but no body but has his fault : but let that passe. Peter Simple you say your name is.

Si. I, for fault of a better.

Qu. And Master Slender's your Master ?

Si. I forsooth.

Qu. Doe's he not wear a great round Beard, like a Glovers pairing-knife ?

Si. No forsooth : he hath but a little wee-face ; with a little yellow Beard : a Cain-colour'd Beard.

Qu. A softly-sprited man, is he not ?

Si. I forsooth : but he is as tall a man of his hands, as any is between this and his head : he hath fought with a Warrener.

Qu. How say you : oh, I should remember him : doe's he not hold up his head (as it were?) and strut in his gate?

Si. Yes indeed doe's he.

Qu. Well, heaven send Anne Page no worse fortune :
Tell Master Parson Evans, I will doe what I can for your Master : Anne is a good girl, and I wish-----

Ru. Out alas : here comes my Master.

Qu. We shall all be shent : Run in here, good young man : go into this Closet : he will not stay long : what John Rugby ? John : what John I say ? go John, go enquire for my Master, I doubt he be not well, that he comes not home : (and downe, downe, adowne'a, &c.)

Ca. Vat is you sing ? I doe not like des toyes : pray you go and vetch in my Closet, unboyte'n verd ; a Box, a green-a Box : doe intend vat I speak ? a green-a Box.

Qu. I forsooth i'll fetch it you :
I am glad he went not in himself : if he had found the young man, he would have been horn mad.

Ca. Fe, fe, fe, fe, moi foi, il fait for ehando, Je man voi a le. Cours la grand affaires.

Qu. Is it this Sir ?

Ca. Ouy, mette le au mon pocket, de-peeche quickly :
Vere is dat knave Rugby ?

Qu. What John Rugby, John ?

Ru. Here Sir.

Ca. You are John Rugby, and you are Iack Rugby :
Come, take-a your Rapier, and come after my heel to the Court.

Ru. 'Tis ready sir, here in the Porch.

Ca. By my trot I tarry too long : od's-me : que ay je oublie : dere is some Simples in my Closet, dat I will not for the varld I shall leave behind.

Qu. Ay-me, he'll find the young man there, and be mad.

Ca. O Diable, Diable : vat is in my Closet ?
Villanie, La-roon : Rugby, my Rapier.

Qu. Good Master be content.

Ca. Wherefore should I be content-a ?

Qu. The young man is an honest man.

Ca. What shall de honest man doe in my Closet : dere is no honest man dat shall come in my Closet.

Qu. I beseech you be not so flegmatick : hear the truth of it. He came of an errand to me from Parson Hugh.

Ca. Vell.

Si. I forsooth, to desire her to-----

Qu. Peace, I pray you.

Ca. Peace-a-your-tongue, speak-a your Tale.

Si. To desire this honest Gentlewoman (your Maid) to speak a good word to Mistress Anne Page, for my Master in the way of marriage.

Qu. This is all indeed-la : but i'll ne're put my finger in the fire and need not.

Ca. Sir Hugh send-a-you ? Rugby, ballow me some Paper : tarry you a littell-a-while.

Qu.

Qui. I am glad he is so quiet : if he had been throughly moved, you should have heard him so loud, and so melancholly : but notwithstanding man, I'll do for your Master what good I can : and the very yea, and the no is, the French Doctor my Master, (I may call him my Master, looke you, for I keep his house ; and I wash, ring, brew, bake, scoure, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all my self.)

Sim. 'Tis a great charge to come under one bodics hand.

Qui. Are you a-vis'd o'that ? you shall find it a great charge : and to be up early, and down late : but notwithstanding, (to tell you in your ear, I would have no words of it) my Master himself is in love with Mistris Anne Page : but notwithstanding that I know Ans mind, that's neither here nor there.

Cai. You, Jack-Nape : givie-'a this Letter to Sir Hugh, by gar it is a shallenge : I will cut his troat in de Parke, and I will teach a scurvy Jack-a-nape Priest to meddle, or make :--- you may be gone : it is not good you tarry here : by gar I will cut all his two stones : by gar, he shall not have a stone to throw at his dog.

Qui. Alas : he speaks but for his friend.

Cai. It is no matter 'a ver dat : doe not you tell-a-me dat I shall have Anne Page for my self ? by gar, I will kill de Jack-Priest : and I have appointed mine Host of de Jarteer to measure our weapon : by gar, I will my self have Anne Page.

Qui. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well : We must give folks leave to prate : what the good-jer.

Cai. Rugby, come to the Court with me : by gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door : follow my heels, Rugby.

Qui. You shall have Anne-fools head of your own : No, I know Ans mind for that : that never a woman in Windsor knows more of Ans mind then I do, nor can do more then I do with her, I thank heaven.

Fenton. Who's within there, ho ?

Qui. Who's there ; I troa ? Come near the house I pray you.

Fen. How now (good woman) how dost thou ?

Qui. The better that it pleases your good Worship to aske ?

Fen. What news ? how do's pretty Mistris Anne ?

Qui. In truth Sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle, and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way, I praise heaven for it.

Fen. Shall I do any good thinkst thou ? shall I not loose my suit ?

Qui. Troth Sir, all is in his hands above : but notwithstanding (Master Fenton) I'll be sworne on a book she loves you : have not your Worship a wart above your eye ?

Fen. Yes marry have I, what of that ?

Qui. Well, thereby hangs a tale : good faith, it is such another Nan ; (but (I detest) an honest maid as ever oroke bread : we had an hours talke of that wart ; I shall never laugh but in that maids company : but : (indeed) she is given too much to Allicholly and musing, cut for you---well---go to---

Fen. Well : I shall see her to day : hold, there's money for thee : Let me have thy voyce in my behalf : if thou see'st her before me, commend me.---

Qui. Will I ? Ifaith that we will : And I will tell your Worship more of the Wart, the next time we have confidence, and of other woovers.

Fen. Well, farewell, I am in great haste now.

Qui. Farewell to your Worship : truly an honest Gentleman : but Anne loves him not : for I know Ans minde as well as another doe's : out upon't : what have I forgot ?

Exit.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Mistris Page, Mistris Ford, Master Page, Master Ford, Pistol, Nim, Quickly, Host, Shallon.

Mis. Page. What, have I scap'd Love-letters in the holly-day time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them ? let me see ?

Ask me no reason why I love you, for though love use reason for his precisian, he admits him not for his Counselor : you are not young, no more am I : go to then, there's sympathy : you are merry, so am I : ha, ha, then there's more sympathy : you love Sack, & so do I : would you desire better sympathy ? Let it suffice thee (Mistris Page) at the least if the Love of a Souldier can suffice, that I love thee ; I will not say pity me, 'tis not a Souldier-like phrase, but I say, love me : By me, thine own true Knight, by day or night : Or any kind of light, with all his might, For thee to fight.
John Falstaffe.

What a Herod of Fury is this ? O wicked, wicked world : One that is well nigh worn to pieces with age. To show himself a young Gallant ? what unwayed Behaviour hath this Flemish drunkard pickt (I'th' devils name) out of my conversation, that dares in this manner assay me ? why, he hath not been thrice in my Company : what should I say to him ? I was then frugall of my mirth : (heaven forgive me :) why I'll exhibit a Bill in the Parliament for the putting down of men : how shall I be reveng'd on him ? for reveng'd I will be ? as sure as his guts are made of puddings.

Mis. Ford. Mistris Page, trust me, I was going to your house.

Mis. Page. And trust me, I was coming to you : you look very ill.

Mis. Ford. Nay, I'll nere believe that ; I have to shew to the contrary.

Mis. Page. Faith but you do in my minde.

Mis. Ford. Well : I do then : yet I say, I could shew you to the contrary : O Mistris Page, give me some counsell.

Mis. Page. What's the matter, woman ?

Mis. Ford. O woman : if it were not for one trifling respect, I could come to such honour.

Mis. Page. Hang the trifle (woman) take the honour : what is it : dispencc with trifles : what is it ?

Mis. Ford. If I would but go to hell, for an eternall moment, or so : I could be knighted.

Mis. Page. What thouliest ? Sir Alice Ford ? these Knights will hack, and so thou shouldst not altar the article of thy Gentry.

Mis. Ford. We burn day-light, here, read, read : perceive how I might be knighted, I shall think the worfe of fat men, as long as I have an eye to make difference of mens liking ; and yet he would not sweare : praise praise womens modesty : and gave such orderly and well-behaved reproofe to all uncomelincis, that I would have sworn his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words : but they do no more adhere and keep place together, then the hundred Psalms to the tune of Green-sleeves : What tempest (I troa) threw this Whale, (with so many Tuns of oyle in his belly) a'shoar at Windsor ? How shall I be revenged on him ? I think the best way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his own greace : Did you ever hear the like ?

Mis. Page. Letter for letter ; but that the name of Page and Ford differs : to thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, here's the twin-brother of thy Letter : but let thine inherit first, for I protest mine never shall : I warrant he hath a thousand of these Letters, writ with blank-space for different names (sue more :) and these are of the second edition : he will print them out of doubt : for he cares not what he puts into the presse, when he would put us two : I had rather be a Giantesse, and lye under Mount Pelion : Well, I will find you twenty lascivious Turtles ere one chaste man.

Mis. Ford. Why this is the very same : the very hand : the very words : what doth he think of us ?

Mis. Page. Nay I know not : it makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own honesty : I'll entertain my self like one that I am not acquainted withall : for sure unlesse he know some strain in me, that I know not my self, he would never have boarded me in this fury.

Mis. Ford. Boarding, call you it ? I'll be sure to keep him above deck.

Mis. Page. So will I : if he come under my hatches, I'll never to Sea again : Let's be reveng'd on him, let's appoint him a meeting : give him a show of comfort in his Suit, and lead him on with a fine baited delay, till he hath pawn'd his horses to mine Host of the Garter.

Mis. Ford. Nay, I will consent to act any villany against him, that may not sully the charinesse of our honesty : oh that my husband saw this Letter : it would give eternal food to his jealousy.

Mis. Page. Why look where he comes : and my good man too : hee's as farre from jealousy (as I am from giving him cause, and that (I hope) is an unmeasurable distance.

Mis. Ford. You are the happier woman.

Mis. Page. Let's consult together against this greasie Knight : Come hither.

Ford. Well : I hope, it be not so.

Pist. Hope is a curtail-dog in some affairs : Sir John affects thy wife.

Ford. Why sir, thy wife is not young.

Pist. He woo's both high and low, both rich and poor, both young and old, one with another (Ford) he loves thy Gally-mawfry (Ford) perpend.

Ford. Love my wife ?

Pist. With liver burning hot : prevent : Or go thou like Sir Alecon with Ring-wood at thy heels : O, odious is the name.

Ford. What name Sir ?

Pist. The horn I say : Farewell : Take heed, have open eye, for thieves do foot by night. Take heed, ere summer comes, or Cuckoo-birds do sing. Away sir Corporall Nim :

Believe it (Page) he speaks sence.

Ford. I will be patient : I will find out this.

Nim. And this is true : I like not the humour of lying : he hath wronged me in some humours : I should have borne the humour'd Letter to her : but I have a sword : and it shall bite upon my necessity : he loves your wife : There's the short, and the long : My name is Corporall Nim : I speak it, and I avouch, 'tis true : my name is Nim : and Falstaffe loves your wife : adieu, I love not the humour of bread and cheefe : adieu.

Page. The humour of it (quoth'a ?) here's a fellow frights English out of his wits.

Ford. I will seek out Falstaffe.

Page. I never heard such a drawling affecting rogue.

Ford. If I do find it : well.

Page. I will not believe such a Cataian, though the Priest o'th' Town commended him for a true man.

Ford. 'Twas a good sensible fellow : well.

Page. How now Meg ?

Mis. Page. Whither goe you (George ?) hark you.

Mis. Ford. How now (sweet Frank) why art thou melancholly ?

Ford. I melancholly ? I am not melancholly : Get you home, goe.

Mis. Ford. Faith, thou hast some crochets in thy head. Now : will you go, Mistress Page.

Mis. Page. Have with you : you'll come to dinner George ? Look who comes yonder : she shall be our Messenger to this paltry Knight.

Mis. Ford. Trust me, I thought on her : she'll fit it.

Mis. Page. You are come to see my daughter Anne ?

Qui. I forsooth : and I pray how do's good Mistress Anne ?

Mis. Page. Goe in with us and see : we have an hours talke with you.

Page. How now Master Ford.

Ford. You heard what this knave told me, did you not ?

Page. Yes, and you heard what the other told me ?

Ford. Do you think there is truth in them ?

Page. Hang 'em slaves : I do not think the Knight would offer it, But these that accuse him in his intent towards our wives, are a yoke of his discarded men : very rogues, now they be out of service.

Ford. Were they his men ?

Page. Marry were they.

Ford. I like it never the better for that, Do's he lye at the Garter ?

Page. I marry do's he : if he should intend this voyage toward my wife, I would turn her loose to him ; and what he gets more of her, then sharpe words, let it lye on my head.

Ford. I do not misdoubt my wife : but I would be loath to turn them together : a man may be too confident : I would have nothing lye on my head : I cannot be thus satisfied.

Page. Look where my ranting-Host of the Garter comes : there is either liquor in his pate, or money in his purse, when he looks so merrily : How now mine Host ?

Host. How now Bully-Rooke : thou'rt a Gentleman Cavalerio Justice, I say.

Shal. I follow, (mine Host) I follow : Good-even, and twenty (good Master Page.) Master Page, will you go with us ; we have sport in hand.

Host. Tell him Cavalerio-Justice : tell him Bully-Rook.

Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought, between Sir Hugh the Welch-Priest, and Cain the French Doctor.

Ford. Good

Ford. Good mine Host o th' Garter: a word with you.

Host. What saist thou, my Bully-Rook?

Shal. Will you go with us to behold it? My merry Host hath had the measuring of their weapons; and (I think) hath appointed them contrary places: for (believe me) I hear the Parson is no Jester: hark, I will tell you what our sport shall be.

Host. Hast thou no suit against my Knight? my guest-Cavaleir?

Shal. None, I protest: but I'll give you a pottle of burn'd Sack, to give me recourse to him, and tell him my name is Broom: onely for a jest.

Host. My hand, (Bully:) thou shalt have egress and regress, (said I well?) and thy name shall be Broom. It is a merry Knight: will you go An-heirs?

Shal. Have with you mine Host.

Page. I have heard the French-man hath good skill in his Rapier.

Shal. Tut sir: I could have told you more: In these times you stand on distance: your Passes, Stoccado's, and I know not what: 'tis the heart (Master Page) 'tis here, 'tis here: I have seen the time, with my long-sword, I would have made you four tall fellows skip like Rats.

Host. Here boys, here: shall we wag?

Page. Have with you: I had rather hear them scold, then fight.

Ford. Though Page be a secure soole, and stands so firmly on his wives frailty; yet, I cannot put-off my opinion so easily: she was in his company at Pages house: and what they made there, I know not. Well, I will look further into't, and I have a disguise, to sound Falstaffe; if I find her honest, I lose not my labour: if she be otherwise, 'tis labour well bestowed.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Falstaffe, Pistol, Robin, Quickly, Bardolffe, Ford.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Pist. Why then the worlds mine Oyster, which I, with sword will open.

Fal. Not a penny: I have been content (Sir) you should lay my countenance to pawn: I have grated upon my good friends for three Repreevs for you, and your Coach-fellow Nim; or else you had look'd through the grate, like a Gemeny of Baboons: I am damn'd in hell, for swearing to Gentlemen my friends, you were good Souldiers, and tall-fellows. And when Mistress Briget lost the handle of her Fan, I took't upon mine honour thou hadst it not.

Pist. Didst thou not share? hadst thou not fifteen pence?

Fal. Reason, you rogue, reason: think'st thou I'll endanger my soul, gratis? at a word, hang no more about me, I am no gibbet for you: go, a short knife, and a throng, to your Mannor of Picket-hatch: go, you'll not bear a Letter for me you rogue? you stand upon your honour: why, (thou unconfinable baseness) it is as much as I can do to keep the term of my honour precise: I, I, I myself sometimes, leaving the fear of heaven on the left hand, and hiding mine honour in my necessity, am fain to shuffle: to hedge, and to lurch, and yet, you Rogue, will ensconce your rags; your Cat-a-Mountain-lookes, your red-lattice phrales, and your bold-beating-oaths, under the shelter of your honour? you will not do it? you?

Pist. I do relent: what would thou more of man?

Rob. Sir, here's a woman would speak with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

Qui. Give your worship good morrow.

Fal. Good-morrow, good-wife.

Qui. Not so and't please your worship.

Fal. Good maid then.

Qui. I'll be sworn,

As my mother was the first hour I was born.

Fal. I do believe the swearer; what with me:

Qui. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word, or two?

Fal. Two thousand (fair woman) and I'll vouchsafe thee the hearing.

Qui. There is one Mistress Ford, (Sir) I pray come a little nearer this wayes: I myself dwell with M. Doctor Caius.

Fal. Well, on; Mistress Ford, you say.

Qui. Your worship sayes very true; I pray your worship come a little nearer this wayes.

Fal. I warrant thee, no body hears: mine own people, mine own people.

Qui. Are they so? heaven blest them, and make them his servants.

Fal. Well; Mistress Ford, what of her?

Qui. Why, Sir; shee's a good creature; lord, lord, your Worship's a wanton: well, heaven forgive you, and all of us, I pray-----.

Fal. Mistress Ford; come, Mistress Ford.

Qui. Marry this is the short, and the long of it: you have brought her into such a Canaries, as 'tis wonderful: the best Courtier of them all (when the Court lay at Windsor) could never have brogght her to such a Canary: yet there has been Knights, and Lords, and Gentlemen, with their Coaches; I warrant you Coach after Coach, letter after letter, gift after gift, smelling so sweetly; all musk, and so rushling I warrant you, in silk and gold, and in such alligant termes, and in such wine and sugar of the best, and the fairest, that would have won any womans heart: and I warrant you they could never get an eye-wink of her: I had my self twenty Angels given me this morning, but I despise all Angels (in any such sort, as they say) but in the way of honesty: and I warrant you, they could never get her so much as sip on a cup with the proudest of them all, and yet there has been Earls: nay, (which is more) Pensioners, but I warrant you all is one with her.

Fal. But what sayes she to me? be brief my good shee-Mercury.

Qui. Marry, she hath receiv'd your Letter: for the which she thanks you a thousand times; and she gives you to notifie, that her husband will be absence from his house, between ten and eleven.

Fal. Ten, and eleven,

Qui. I, forsooth: and then you may come and see the picture (she sayes) that you wor of: Master Ford her husband will be from home: alas, the sweet woman leads an ill life with him: hee's a very jealousie-man; shee leads a very frampold life with him, (good heart.)

Fal. Ten, and eleven.

Woman

Woman, commend me to her, I will not fail her.

Qui. Why, you say well : But I have another messenger to your worship : Mistress Page hath her hearty commendations to you too : and let me tell you in your ear, she's as fartuous a civil modest wife, and one (I tell you) that will not misse you morning nor evening prayer, as any is in Windsor, who ere be the other : and she bad me tell your worship, that her husband is seldome from home, but she hopes there will come a time. I never knew a woman so doat upon a man ; surely I think you have charmes, la : yes in truth.

Fal. Not I, I assure thee ; setting the attraction of my good parts aside, I have no other charmes.

Qui. Blessing on your heart for't.

Fal. But I pray thee tell me this : has Ford's wife, and Pages wife acquainted each other, how they love me ?

Qui. That were a jest indeed : they have not so little grace I hope, that were a trick indeed : But Mistress Page would desire you to send her your little Page of all loves : her husband has a marvellous infection to the little Page : and truly Master Page is an honest man : never a wife in Windsor leads a better life then she do's : doe what she will, say what she will, take all, pay all, go to bed when she list, rise when she list, all is as she will : and truly she deserves it ; for if there be a kind woman in Windsor, she is one : you must send her your Page, no remedie.

Fal. Why, I will.

Qui. Nay, but do so then, and look you, he may come and go between you both : and in any case have a nay-word, that you may know one anothers mind, and the Boy never need to understand any thing ; for 'tis not good that children should know any wickedness : old folks you know, have discrecion, as they say, and know the world.

Fal. Fare thee-well, commend me to them both : there's my purse, I am yet thy debter : Boy, go along with this woman, this news distracts me.

Pist. This Punck is one of Cupids Carriers, Clap on more sails, pursue : up with your fights : Give fire : she is my prize, or Ocean whelm them all.

Fal. Saist thou so (old Jack) go thy wayes : I'll make more of thy old body then I have done : will they yet look after thee ? wilt thou after the expence of so much money, be now a gainer ? good body, I thank thee : let them say 'tis grossly done, so it be fairly done, no matter.

Bar. Sir John, there's one Master Broom below would fain speak with you, and be acquainted with you ; and hath sent your worship a mornings draught of Sack.

Fal. Broom is his name ?

Barst. I Sir.

Fal. Call him in : such Broomes are welcome to me, that ore'flows such liquor : ah, ah, Mistress Ford and Mistress Page, have I encompassed you ? go to, via.

Ford. 'Bless you sir.

Fal. And you sir : would you speak with me ?

Ford. I make bold, to presse, with so little preparation upon you.

Fal. You'r welcome, what's your will ? give us leave Drawer.

Ford. Sir, I am a Gentleman that have spent much, my name is Broom.

Fal. Good Master Broom, I desire more acquaintance of you.

Ford. Good Sir John, I sue for yours : not to charge you, for I must let you understand, I think my self in better plight for a Lender, then you are : the which hath something emboldned me to this unseason'd intrusion : for they say, if money goe before, all wayes doe lye open.

Fal. Money is a good Souldier (Sir) and will on.

Ford. Troth, and I have a bag of money here troubles me : if you will help to bear it (Sir John) take all, or halfe, for easing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deserve to be your Porter.

Ford. I will tell you sir, if you will give me the hearing.

Fal. Speak (good Master Broom) I shall be glad to be your servant.

Ford. Sir, I hear you are a Scholler : (I will be brief with you) and you have been a man long known to me, though I had never so good means as desire, to make my self acquainted with you. I shall discover a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine own imperfection : but (good Sir John) as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the Register of your own, that I may passe with a reproof the easier, sith you your self know how easie it is to be such an offender.

Fal. Very well Sir, proceed.

Ford. There is a Gentlewoman in this Town, her husbands name is Ford.

Fal. Well Sir.

Ford. I have long lov'd her, and I protest to you, bestowed much on her : followed her with a doating observance : Ingros'd opportunities to meet her : see'd every slight occasion that could but nigardly give me sight of her : not onely bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many, to know what she would have given : briefly, I have pursu'd her, as Love hath pursued me, which hath been on the wing of all occasions : but whatsoever I have merited, either in my minde, or in my means, meed I am sure I have received none, unless experience be a Jewel, that I have purchased at an infinite rate, and that hath taught me to say this.

" Love like a shadow flies, when substance Love pursues ;
" Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues.

Fal. Have you receiv'd no promise of satisfaction at her hands ?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Have you importun'd her to such a purpose ?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Of what quality was your love then ?

Ford. Like a fair house, built on another mans ground, so that I have lost my edifice, by mistaking the place, where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpose have you unfolded this to me ?

Ford. When I have told you that, I have told you all : Some say, that though she appear honest to me, yet in other places she enlargeth her mirth so far, that there is shrewd construction made of her. Now (Sir John) here is the heart of my purpose : you are a Gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authentick in your place and person, generally allow'd for your many war-like, court-like, and learned preparations.

Fal. O Sir.

Ford. Believe it, for you know it : there is money, spend it, spend it, spend more ; spend all I have ; onely give give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Fords wife: use your Art of wooing; win her to consent to you: if any man may, you may as soon as any.

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks you prescribe to your self very preposterously.

Ford. O, understand my drift: she dwels so securely on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not present it self: as she is too bright to be look'd against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand; my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves, I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage-vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too too strongly embattail'd against me: what say you too't, Sir John?

Fal. Master Broom, I will first make bold with your money: next give me your hand: and last, as I am a Gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Fords wife.

Ford. O good Sir.

Fal. I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money (Sir John) you shall want none.

Fal. Want no Mistress Ford (Master Broom) you shall want none: I shall be with her (I may tell you) by her own appointment, even as you came into me, her assistant, or go-between, parted from me: I say I shall be with her between ten and eleven: for at that time the jealous-rascally-knave her husband will be forth: come you to me at night, you shall know I speed.

Ford. I am blest in your acquaintance: do you know Ford Sir?

Fal. Hang him (poor Cuckoldly knave) I know him not: yet I wrong him to call him poor: They say the jealous wittolly-knave hath masses of money, for the which his wife seems to me well-favour'd. I will use her as the key of the Cuckold-rogues Coffer, and there's my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir, that you might avoid him, if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanicall-salt-butter rogue; I will stare him out of his wits: I will awe him with my cud-gell: it shall hang like a Meteor o're the Cuckolds horns: Master Broom, thou shalt know, I will predominate over the pezzant, and thou shalt lye with his wife. Come to me soon at night: Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his stile: thou (Master Broom) shalt know him for knave, and Cuckold. Come to me soon at night. Exit.

Ford. What a damn'd Epicurian-Rascal is this? my heart is ready to crack with inpatience: who saies this is improvident jealousy? my wife hath sent to him, the hour is fixt, the match is made: would any man have thought this? see the hell of having a false woman: my bed shall be abus'd, my Coffers ransack'd, my reputation gnawn at, and I shall not onely receive this villanous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abominable termes: and by him that does me this wrong: Termes, names: Amaimon sounds well: Lucifer, well: Barbasen, well: yee they are Devils additions, the names of fiends: But Cuckold, Wittoll, Cuckold? the Devill himself, hath not such a name. Page is an Ass, a secure Ass; he will trust his wife, he will not be jealous: I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, Parson Hugh the Welchman with my Cheese, an Irishman with my Aqua-vitæ-bottle, or a Thief to walke my ambling gelding, than my wife with her self. Then she plots, then she ruminates, then she devises: and what they think in their hearts they may effect; they will break their hearts but they will effect. Heaven be prais'd for my jealousy: eleven o'clock the hour, I will prevent this, detect my wife, be reveng'd on Falstaffe, and laugh at Page. I will about it, better three hours too soon, then a minute too late: fie, fie, fie: Cuckold, Cuckold, Cuckold. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Caius, Rugby, Shallow, Slender, Page, Host.

Caius. Jack Rugby.

Rug. Sir.

Caius. Vat is de clock, Jack?

Rug. 'Tis past the hour (Sir) that Sir Hugh promis'd to meet:

Cai. By gar, he has save his soul, dat he is no-come: he has pray his Pible well, dat he is no come: by gar (Jack Rugby) he is dead already, if he become.

Rug. He is wise Sir: he knew your worship would kill him if he came.

Cai. By gar, de herring is no dead, so as I will kill him: take your Rapier; (Jack) I will tell you how I will kill him.

Rug. Alas sir, I cannot fence.

Cai. Villany, take your Rapier.

Rug. Forbear: here's company.

Host. 'Bless thee, bully-Doctor.

Shal. 'Save you Mr. Doctor Caius.

Page. Now good Mr. Doctor.

Slender. 'Give you good-morrow, sir.

Caius. Vat be all you one, two, tree, four, come for.

Host. To see thee fight, to see thee foigne, to see thee traverse, to see thee here, to see thee there, to see thee passe thy puncto, thy stock, thy reverse, thy distance, thy montant: Is he dead, my Ethiopian? Is he dead, my Francisco? ha Bully? what sayes my Esculapius? my Gallen? my heart of Elder? ha? is he dead bully-Stale? is he dead?

Cai. By gar, he is de Coward-Jack-Priest of de world: he is not show his face.

Host. Thou art a Castalion-king-Urinal: Hector of Greece (my boy.)

Cai. I pray you bear witness, that me have stay, six or seven, two tree houres for him, and he is no-come.

Shal. He is the wiser man (Mr. Doctor) he is a curer of souls, and you a curer of bodies: if you should fight, you go against the hair of your professions: is it not true, Master Page?

Page. Master Shallow; you have your self been a great fighter, though now a man of peace.

Shal. Body-kins Mr. Page, though I now be old, and of peace; if I see a sword out, my finger itches to make one: though we are Justices, and Doctors, and Churchmen (Mr. Page) we have some salt of our youth in us, we are the sons of women (Mr. Page.)

Page. 'Tis true Mr. Shallow.

Shal. It will be found so, (Mr. Page) Mr. Doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home: I am sworn of the peace: you have shew'd your self a wise Physician, and sir Hugh hath shown himself a wise and patient Churchman: you must go with me, Mr. Doctor.

Host.

Host. Pardon, Guest-Justice ; a Mounseur Mockwater.

Cai. Mock-water ? vat is dat ?

Host. Mock-water , in our English tongue is Valour (Bully.)

Cai. By gar , then I have as much Mock-water as de Englishman : scui vy-Jack-dog-Priest : by gar, me vill cut his ears.

Host. He will Clapper-claw thee tightly (Bully.)

Cai. Clapper-de-claw ? vat is dat ?

Host. That is, he will make thee amends.

Cai. By gar , me do look he shall clapper-de-claw me, for by-gar, me vill have it.

Host. And I will provoke him to't, or let him wag.

Cai. Me tanck you for dat.

Host. And moreover , (Bully) but first, Mr. Guest , And Mr. Page, and eek Cavalerio Slender, go you through the Town to Frogmore, Page. Sir Hugh is there, is he ?

Host. He is there, see what humour he is in : and I will bring the Doctor about the Fields : will it do well ?

Shal. We will do it.

All. Adieu, good Mr. Doctor.

Cai. By gar , me vill kill de Priest, for he speak for a Jack-an-Ape to Anne Page.

Host. Let him di : sheath thy impatience : throw cold water on thy Choller : goe about the fields with me through Frogmore, I will bring thee where Mistris Anne Page is, at a Farme-house a Feasting : and thou shalt wooe her : Cride-game, said I well ?

Cai. By-gar , me danck you vor dat : by gar I love you : and I shall procure a you de good Guest : de Earl, de Knight , de Lords, de Gentlemen, my patients.

Host. For the which, I will be thy adversary toward Anne Page : said I well ?

Cai. By-gar, 'tis good : vell said.

Host. Let us wag then.

Come at my heels, Jack Rugby.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius, Scena Prima.

Enter Evans, Simple, Page, Shallow, Slender, Host, Caius, Rugby.

Evans. I pray you now , good Master Slenders, serving-man, and friend Simple by your name ; which way have you look'd for Master Caius , that calls himself Doctor of Phisick.

Sim. Marry Sir, the pitty-wary , the Park-ward ; every way : old Windsor way , and every way but the Town way.

Evans. I most feheemently desire you , you will also look that way.

Sim. I will fir.

Evans. 'Plefs my soul : how full of Chollars I am, and treimpling of minde : I shall be glad if he have deceived me : how melancholies I am ? I will knog his Urinals about his knaves costard , when I have good opportunities for the orke : 'Plefs my soul : To shallow Rivers to whose falls, melodious Birds sing Madrigalls : There will we make our Peds of Roses : and a thousand fragrant posies. To shallow. Mercy on me, I have a great disposition to cry.

Melodious birds sing Madrigall : ---When as I sat in Pabylon : and a thousand vagram Posies. To shallow, &c.

Sim. Yonder he is coming, this way, Sir Hugh.

Ev. Hee's welcome : To shallow Rivers, to whose falls : Heaven prosper the right : what weapons is he ?

Sim. No weapons, Sir : there comes my Master , Mr. Shallow ; and another Gentleman ; from Frogmore, over the stile, this way.

Evans. Pray you give me my gown , or else keep it in your armes.

Enter All.

Shal. How now Master Parson ? good morrow good Sir Hugh : keep a gamester from the dice , and a good Student from his book, and it is wonderfull.

Slender. Ah sweet Anne Page.

Page. 'Save you good Sir Hugh.

Evans. 'Plefs you from his mercy-fake, all of you.

Shal. What ? the Sword, and the word ?

Do you study them both, Mr. Parson ?

Page. And youthfull still, in your doublet and hose , this raw-rumatick day ?

Evans. There is reasons, and causes for it.

Page. We are come to you : to do a good office , Mr. Parson.

Evans. Fery well : what is it ?

Page. Yonder is a most reverend Gentleman ; who (be-like) having received wrong by some person , is at most odds with his own gravity and patience, that ever you saw.

Shal. I have lived fourscore years ; and upward : I never heard a man of his place, gravity, and learning, so wide of his own respect.

Evans. What is he ?

Page. I think you know him : Mr. Doctor Caius the renowned French Phisitian.

Evans. Got's-will, and his passion of my heart : I had as lief you would tell me of a mess of porridge.

Page. Why ?

Evans. He has no more knowledge in Hibocrates and Galen, and he is a knave besides : a cowardly knave , as you would desire to be acquainted withall.

Page. I warrant you, hee's the man should fight with him.

Slender. O sweet Anne Page.

Enter Caius.

Shal. It appears so by his weapons : keep them asunder : here comes Doctor Caius.

Page. Nay good Mr. Parson, keep in your weapon.

Shal. So do you, good Mr. Doctor.

Host. Disarm them, and let them question : let them keep their limbs whole, and hack our English.

Cai. I pray you let-a-me speak a word with your ear ; wherefore vill you not meet-a me ?

Evans. Pray you use your patience in good time.

Cai. By-gar, you are de Coward : de Jack dog : John Ape.

Evans. Pray you let us not be laughing-stocks to other mens humours : I desire you in friendship, and I will one way or other make you amends : I will knog your Urinal about your knaves Cogs-combe.

Cai. Diable, Jack Rugby, mine Host de Farter, have I not stay for him, to kill him ? have I not at de place I did appoint ?

Evans. As I am a Christians-soul , now look you : this is the place appointed , I'll be judgement by mine Host of the Garter.

Host. Peace , I say , Gallia , and Gaul, French, and Welch, Soul-Curer, and Body-Curer.

Cai.

Ca. I, dat is very good, excellant.

Host. Peace, I say : hear mine Host of the Garter, Am I politick ? am I subtle ? am I a Machivell ? Shall I loose my Doctor ? No, he gives me the Potions and the Motions. Shall I loose my Parson ? my Priest ? my Sir Hugh ? No, he gives me the Proverbs, and the No-verbs. Give me thy hand (Celestial) so : Boyes of Art, I have deceiv'd you both : I have directed you to wrong places : your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole, and let burn'd Sack be the issue : come, lay their swords to pawn : Follow me, Lad of peace, follow, follow, follow.

Shal. Trust me, a mad Host : follow Gentlemen, follow.

Slen. O sweet Anne Page.

Cai. Ha' do I perceive dat ? Have you make-a-de-for of us, ha, ha ?

Evan. This is well, he has made us his vlowting-flog : I desire you that we may be friends : and let us knog our prains together to be revenge on this same scall scurvey-cogging-companion the Host of the Garter.

Cai. By gar, with all my heart : he promise to bring me where is Anne Page : by gar he deceive me too.

Evan. Well, I will finite his noddles : pray you follow.

Scena Secunda.

Mist. Page, Robin, Ford, Page, Shallow, Slender, Host, Evans, Caius.

Mist. Page. Nay keep your way (little Gallant) you were wont to be a Follower, but now you are a Leader : whether had you rather lead mine eyes, or eye your masters heels ?

Rob. I had rather (forsooth) go before you like a man, then follow him like a dwarfe. (Courtier.)

Mi. Pa. O you are a flattering boy, now I see you'll be a Ford. Well met Mistress Page, whether go you.

Mi. Page. Truly Sir, to see your wife, is she at home ?

Ford. I, and as idle as she may hang together for want of company : I think if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

Mis. Pag. Be sure of that ; two other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty weather-cock ?

M. Page. I cannot tell what (the dickens) his name is my husband had him of, what do you call your Knights

Rob. Sir John Falstaffe. (name, sir, ha ?)

M. Pa. He, he, I can never hit on's name ; there is such a league between my goodman, and he : is your Wife at Ford. Indeed she is. (home indeed ?)

M. Pa. By your leave sir, I am sick till I see her.

Ford. Has Page any brains ? Hath he any eyes ? Hath he any thinking ? Sure they sleep, he hath no use of them : why this boy will carry a Letter twenty mile as easie, as a Canon will shoot point-blank twelve score : he pieces out his wives inclination : he gives her folly, motion and advantage : and now she's going to my wife, and Falstaffes boy with her : A man may hear this shower sing in the wind ; and Falstaffes boy with her : good plots, they are laid, and our revolted wives share damnation together. Well, I will take him, then torture my wife, pluck the borrowed vail of modesty from the so seeming Mist. Page, divulge Page himself for a secure and wilfull Acteon, and to these violent proceedings all my neighbours shall cry aie. The clock gives me my Qu, and my assurance bids me search, there I shall find Falstaffe : I shall be rather praised for this, then mock'd, for it is as positive, as the earth is firm, that Falstaffe is there : I will go.

Shal. Page, &c. Well met Mr. Ford.

Ford. Trust me, a good knot : I have good cheer at home, and I pray you all go with me.

Shal. I must excuse my self Mr. Ford.

Slen. And so must I Sir,

We have appointed to dine with Mistress Anne, And I would not break with her for more money Then I'll speak of.

Shal. We have linger'd about a match between Anne Page, and my Cousin Slender, and this day we shall have our answer.

Slender. I hope I have your good will father Page.

Page. You have Mr. Slender, I stand wholly for you, but my wife (Master Doctor) is for you altogether.

Cai. I be-gar, and de Maid is love-a-me : my nurth-a-Quickly tell me so much.

Host. What say you to young M. Fenton ? He capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth : he writes verses, he speaks holliday, he smells April and May, he will carry't, he will carry't, 'tis in his buttons, he will carry't.

Page. Not by my consent I promise you. The Gentleman is of no having, he kept company with the wild Prince, and Poinz : he is of too high a Region, he knows too much : no, he shall not knit a knot in his fortunes, with the finger of my substance : if he take her, let him take her simply : the wealth I have waits on my consent, and my consent goes not that way.

Ford. I beseech you heartily, some of you go home with me to dinner : besides your cheer you shall have sport, I will shew you a Monster : Mr. Doctor, you shall go, so shall you Mr. Page, and you Sir Hugh.

Shal. Well, fare you well :

We shall have the freer wooing at Mr. Pages.

Cai. Go home John Rugby, I come anon.

Host. Farewell my hearts, I will to my honest Knight Falstaffe, and drink Canary with him.

Ford. I think I shall drink in Pipe-wine first with him, I'll make him dance. Will you go, Gentles ?

All. Have with you, to see this Monster. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Mistress Ford, Mistress Page, Servants, Robin, Falstaffe, Ford, Page, Caius, Evans.

Mis. Ford. What John, what Robert.

Mis. Page. Quickly, quickly : Is the Buck-basket---

Mis. Ford. I warrant. What Robin I say.

Mis. Page. Come, come, come.

Mis. Ford. Here, set it down.

Mis. Pa. Give your men the charge, we must be brief.

M. Ford. Marry as I told you before (John and Robert) be ready here hard-by in the Brew-house, and when I suddenly call you, come forth, and (without any pause, or staggering) take this basket on your shoulders : that done, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the Whiffers in Datchet Mead, and there empty it in the muddy ditch, close by the Thames side.

M. Page. You will doe it ? (direction.)

M. Ford. I ha told them over and over, they lack no

Be gone, and come when you are call'd.

Mis. Page. Here comes little Robin. (with you?)

Mis. Ford. How now my Eyas-Musker, what news.

Rob. My M. Sir John is come in at your back door (Mis. Ford.) and requests your company.

Mis. Pa. You little Jack-a-lent, have you bin true to us?

Rob. I, I'll be sworn: my Master knows not of your being here: and hath threatned to put me into everlasting liberty, if I tell you of it: for he swears he'll turn me away.

Mis. Page. Thou'rt a good boy: this secrecy of thine shall be a Taylor to thee, and shall make thee a new doublet and hose. I'll go hide me.

Mis. Ford. Doe so: go tell thy Master, I am alone: Mistress Page, remember you your Qu.

Mis. Page. I warrant thee, if I doe not act it, hisse me.

Mis. Ford. Go to then: we'll use this unwholsome humidity, this grosse-watry Pumpion; we'll teach him to know Turtles from Jayes. Enter Fal.

Fal. Have I caught thee, my heavenly Jewell? Why now let me die, for I have liv'd long enough: This is the period of my ambition: O this blessed hour.

Mis. Ford. O sweet Sir John.

Fal. Mistress Ford, I cannot cog, I cannot prate (Mistress Ford) now shall I sin in my wish; I would thy Husband were dead, I'll speak it before the best Lord, I would make thee my Lady.

Mis. Ford. I your Lady Sir John? Alas, I should be a pittifull Lady.

Fal. Let the Court of France shew me such another: I see how thine eye would emulate the Diamond: Thou hast the right arched-beauty of the brow, that becomes the Ship-tyre, the Tyre-valiant, or any Tire of Venetian admittance.

Mis. Ford. A plain Kerchiffe, Sir John My brows become nothing else, nor that well neither.

Fal. Thou art a tyrant to say so: thou would'st make an absolute Courtier, and the firm fixure of thy foot would give an excellent motion to thy gate, in a semi-circled Farthingale. I see what thou wert if Fortune thy foe were not, Nature thy friend; Come, thou canst not hide it.

Mis. Ford. Believe me, there's no such thing in me.

Fal. What made me love thee? Let that perswade thee. There's something extraordinary in thee: Come, I cannot cog, and say thou art this and that, like a many of these lipping Haw-thorn buds, that come like women in mens apparell, and smell like Bucklers-berry in simplingtime: I cannot, but I love thee, none but thee; and thou deserv'st it.

Mis. Ford. Do not betray me Sir, I fear you love M. Page.

Fal. Thou might'st as well say, I love to walk by the Counter Gate, which is as hatefull to me, as the reck of a Lime-kill.

Mis. Ford. Well heaven knowes how I love you, and you shall one day find it.

Fal. Keep in that mind, I'll deserve it.

Mis. Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you doe, or else I could not be in that mind. Within.

Rob. Mistress Ford, Mistress Ford, here's Mistress Page at the door, swearing, and blowing, and looking wildely, and would needs speak with you presently.

Fal. She shall not see me, I will ensconce me behind the Arras.

M. Ford. Pray you doe so, she's a very tatling woman. What's the matter? how now? Enter Mis. Page.

Mis. Page. O Mistress Ford, what have you done? You'r sham'd, y'are overthrown, y'are undone for ever.

M. Ford. What's the matter, good Mistress Page?

M. Page. O well-a-day, Mistress Ford, having an honest man to your husband, to give him such cause of suspicion.

Mis. Ford. What cause of suspicion?

Mis. Page. What cause of suspicion? Out upon you: How am I mistook in you?

Mis. Ford. Why (alas) What's the matter?

Mis. Page. Your husbands comming hither (woman) with all the Officers in Windsor, to search for a Gentleman, that he sayes is here now in the house; by your consent to take an ill advantage of his absence: you are undone.

Mis. Ford. 'Tis not so, I hope.

Mis. Page. Pray heaven it be not so, that you have such a man here: but 'tis most certain your husband's comming, with half Windsor at his heels, to search for such a one, I come before to tell you: If you know your self clear, why I am glad of it: but if you have a friend here, convey, convey him out. Be not amaz'd, call all your senses to you, defend your reputation, or bid farewell to your good life for ever.

Mis. Ford. What shall I doe? There is a Gentleman my dear friend: and I fear not mine own shame so much, as his perill. I had rather then a thousand pound he were out of the house.

Mis. Page. For shame, never stand (you had rather, and you had rather:) your husband's here at hand, be-think you of some conveyance: in the house you cannot hide him. Oh, how have you deceiv'd me? Look, here is a basket, if he be of any reasonable stature, he may creep in here, and throw foul linnen upon him, as if it were going to bucking: Or it is whiting time, send him by your two men to Datchet-Meade.

Mis. Ford. He's too big to go in there: what shall I do?

Fal. Let me see't, let me see't, O let me see't:

I'll in, I'll in: Follow your friends counsell, I'll in.

Mis. Page. What Sir John Falstaffe, are these your Letters Knight?

Fal. I love thee, help me away: let me creep in here: I'll never-----

Mis. Page. Help to cover your Master (boy:) Call your men (Mistress Ford) You dissembling Knight.

Mis. Ford. What John, Robert, John; Go take up these cloathes here, quickly: Where's the Cowle-staffe? Look how you drumble? Carry them to the Landresse in Datchet-Mead: quickly, come.

Ford. 'Pray you come near: if I suspect without cause, Why then make sport at me, then let me be your jest, I deserve it: How now? Whether bear you this?

Ser. To the Landresse forsooth?

Mis. Ford. Why, what have you to doe whether they bear it? You were best meddle with buck-washing.

Ford. Buck? I would I could wash my self of the Buck: buck, buck, buck, I buck: I warrant you Buck, and of the season too; it shall appear.

Gentlemen, I have dream'd to night, I'll tell you my dream: here, here, here be my keyes, ascend wy Chambers, search, seek, find out: I'll warrant me'll unkennele the Fox. Let me stop this way first: so, now uncape.

Page. Good Master Ford, be contented: You wrong your self too much.

Ford. True (Master Page) up Gentlemen: you shall see sport anon: follow me Gentlemen.

Exit.

Evan. This is fery fantastick humours and jealousies.

Caius. By gar, 'tis no-the fashion of France ; it is not jealous in France.---- Exeunt.

Page. Nay follow him (Gentlemen) see the issue of his search.

Mis. Page. Is there not a double excellency in this?

Mis. Ford. I know not which pleases me better, that my Husband is deceived, or Sir John.

Mis. Page. What a taking was he in, when your husband ask't who was in the basket?

Mis. Ford. I am half afraid he will have need of washing: so throwing him into the water will doe him a benefit.

Mis. Page. Hang him dishonest rascal: I would all of the same strain, were in the same distress.

Mis. Ford. I think my husband hath some special suspicion of Falstaffe's being here: I never saw him so grosse in his jealousy till now.

Mis. Page. I will lay a plot to try that, and we will yet have more tricks with Falstaffe: his dissolute disease will scarce obey this medicine.

Mis. Ford. Shall we send that foolish Carrion, Mist. Quickly to him, and excuse his throwing into the water, and give him another hope, to betray him to another punishment?

Mis. Page. We'll doe it: let him be sent for to morrow by eight a clock to have amends. Enter All.

Ford. I cannot find him: may be the knave bragg'd of that he could not compass.

Mis. Page. Heard you that?

Mis. Ford. You use me well, Maist. Ford? doe you?

Ford. I, I, I doe so.

Mis. Page. Heaven make you better then your thoughts.

Ford. Amen.

Mis. Page. You doe your self mighty wrong (M. Ford)

Ford. I, I: I must bear it.

Evan. If there be any pody in the house, and in the chambers, and in the coffers, and in the presses: heaven forgive my sins.

Caius. By gar, nor I too: there is no-bodies.

Page. Fie, fie, M. Ford, are you not ashamed? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? I would not ha your distemper in this kind, for the wealth of Windsor castle

Ford. 'Tis my fault (M. Page) I suffer for it.

Evan. You suffer for a bad conscience: your wife is as honest a o'mans, as I will desires among five thousand, and five hundred too.

Cai. By gar, I see 'tis an honest woman.

Ford. Well, I promis'd you a dinner: come, come, walk in the Park, I pray you pardon me: I will hereafter make known to you why I have done this. Come wife, come Mis. Page, I pray you pardon me. Pray hartly pardon me.

Page. Let's go in Gentlemen, but (trust me) we'll mock him: I doe invite you to morrow morning to my house to breakfast: after we'll a Birding together, I have a fine Hawk for the bush. Shall it be so?

Ford. Any thing.

Evan. If there is one, I shall make two in the Company.

Cai. If there be one or two, I shall make-a the third.

Ford. Pray you go, M. Page.

Evan. I pray you now remembrance to morrow on the lowly knave, mine Host.

Cai. Dat is good by gar, with all my heart.

Evan. A lowly knave, to have his gibes, and his mockeries.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Fenton, Anne Page, Shallow, Slender, Quickly, Page, Mis. Page.

Fen. I see I cannot get thy Fathers love, Therefore no more, turn me to him (sweet Nan.)

Anne. Alas, how then?

Fen. Why thou must be thy self.

He doth object, I am too great of birth, And that my state being gall'd with my expence, I seek to heal it onely by his wealth.

Besides these, other bars he layes before me,

My Riots past, my wild Societies,

And tells me 'tis a thing impossible

I should love thee, but as a property.

Anne. May be he tells you true.

Fen. No, heaven so speed me in my time to come, Albeit I will confesse, thy Fathers wealth

Was the first motive that I woo'd the (Anne :)

Yet wooing thee, I found thee of more value

Then stamps in Gold, or summes in sealed bags:

And 'tis the very riches of thy self,

That now I aim at.

An. Gentle M. Fenton,

Yet seek my Fathers love, still seek it fir,

If opportunity and humblest suit

Cannot attain it, why then hark you hither.

Shal. Break their talk Mistresse Quickly,

My Kinsman shall speak for himself.

Slen. I'll make a shaft or a bolt on't, 'd'slid 'tis but Shal. Be not dismayd.

(venturing.

Slen. No, she shall not dismay me:

I care not for that, but I am affeard.

Qui. Hark ye, M. Slender would speak a word with you.

An. I come to him. This is my Fathers choice:

O, what a world of vilde ill-favour'd faults

Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year?

Qui. And how do's good Master Fenton?

Pray you a word with you.

Shal. She's coming: to her Coz.

O boy, thou hadst a Father.

Slen. I had a Father (M. An.) my Uncle can tell you good jests of him: pray you Uncle, tell M. An. the jest how my Father stole two Geese out of a Pen, good Uncle.

Shal. Mistresse Anne, my Cousin loves you.

Slen. I that I doe, as well as I love any woman in Glocestershire.

Shal. He will maintain you like a Gentlewoman.

Slen. I that I will, come cut and long-tail, under the degree of a Squire.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and fifty pounds Jointure, Anne. Good Master Shallow, let him wooe for himself.

Shal. Marry I thank you for it: I thank you for that; good comfort: she calls you (Coz) I'll leave you.

Anne. Now Master Slender.

Slen. Now good Mistresse Anne.

Anne. What is your will?

Slen. My will? Od's-heart-lings, that's a pretty jest indeed: I ne're made my Will yet, (I thank Heaven:) I am not such a sickly creature; I give Heaven praise.

E 2

Anne.

Anne. I mean (M. Slender) what would you with me?

Slender. Truly, for mine own part, I would little or nothing with you: your Father and my Uncle hath made motions: if it be my luck, so: if not happy man be his dole, they can tell you how things go, better then I can: you may ask your Father, here he comes.

Page. Now Master Slender; Love him daughter Anne. Why how now? What do's Master Fenton here? You wrong me Sir, thus still to haunt my house. I told you Sir, my daughter is dispos'd of.

Fenton. Nay Master Page, be not impatient.

Mistress Page. Good Master Fenton, come not to my child.

Page. She is no match for you.

Fenton. Sir, will you hear me?

Page. No, good Master Fenton.

Come Master Shallow: Come Son Slender, in; Knowing my mind, you wrong me, Master Fenton.

Qui. Speak to Mistress Page.

Fenton. Good Mistress Page, for that I love your daughter In such a righteous fashion as I doe, Perforce, against all checks, rebukes, and manners, I must advance the colours of my love, And not retire. Let me have your good will.

Anne. Good Mother, doe not marry me to yon fool.

Mistress Page. I mean it not, I seek you a better husband.

Qui. That's my Master, Master Doctor.

Anne. Alas I had rather be set quick i'th earth, And bowl'd to death with Turnips.

Mistress Page. Come, trouble not your self good Master Fenton, I will not be your friend, nor enemy: My daughter will, I question how she loves you, And as I find her, so am I affected: Till then, farewell Sir, she must needs go in, Her Father will be angry.

Fenton. Farewell gentle Mistress: farewell Nan.

Qui. This is my doing now: Nay, said I, will you cast away your child on a Fool, and a Physician? Look on Master Fenton, this is my doing.

Fenton. I thank thee: and I pray thee once to night; Give my sweet Nan this Ring: there's for thy pains. Exit.

Qui. Now heaven send thee good fortune, a kind heart he hath: a woman would run through fire and water for such a kind heart. But yet, I would my Master had Mistress Anne, or I would Master Slender had her: or (in sooth) I would Master Fenton had her; I will do what I can for them all three, for so I have promis'd, and I'll be as good as my word, but speciously for Master Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to Sir John Falstaffe from my two Mistresses: what a beast am I to slack it. Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Falstaffe, Bardolfe, Quickly, Ford.

Fal. Bardolfe I say.

Bar. Here Sir.

Fal. Go, fetch me a quart of Sack, put a tost in't. Have I liv'd to be carried in a Basket like a barrow of burchers Offall; and to be thrown in the Thames? Well, if I be serv'd such a another trick, I'll have my brains tane out and butter'd, and give them to a dog for a New-years gift. The rogues flighted me into the river with as little remorse, as they would have drown'd a blind bitches Puppies, fifteen i'th litter: and you may know by my size, that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking: if the bottom were as deep as hell, I should down. I had been drown'd, but that the shore was shelvy and shallow: a death that I abhorre: for the water swells a man; and what a thing should I have been, when I had been swell'd? I should have been a Mountain of Mummy.

Bar. Here's Mistress Quickly Sir, to speak with you.

Fal. Come, let me poure in som Sack to the Thames water: for my belly's as cold as if I had swallow'd snow-balls, for pills to cool the reins. Call her in.

Bar. Come in woman.

Enter Quickly.

Qui. By your leave: I cry you mercy?

Give your worship good morrow.

Fal. Take away these Challes:

Go, brew me a pottle of Sack finely.

Band. With Egges, Sir?

Fal. Simple of it self: I'll no Pullet-Sperme in my brewage. How now?

Qui. Marry Sir, I come to your worship from Mi. Ford.

Fal. Mistress Ford? I have had Ford enough: I was thrown into the Ford; I have my belly full of Ford.

Qui. Alas the day (good-heart) that was not her fault: she do's so take on with her men; they mistook their erection. (promise.)

Fal. So did I mine, to build upon a foolish Womans

Qui. Well, she laments sir for it, that it would yern your heart to see it: her husband goes this morning a birding; she desires you once more to come to her, between eight and nine: I must carry her word quickly, she'll make you amends I warrant you.

Fal. Well, I will visit her, tell her so; and bid her think what a man is: Let her consider his frailty, and then judge of my merit.

Qui. I will tell her.

Fal. Doe so. Between nine and ten saist thou?

Qui. Eight and nine Sir.

Fal. Well, be gone: I will not misse her.

Qui. Peace be with you Sir.

Exit.

Fal. I marvell I hear not of Master Broom: he sent me word to stay within: I like his money well.

Oh, here he comes.

Enter Ford.

Ford. Blesse you Sir.

Fal. Now Master Broom, you come to know what hath past between me and Fords wife.

Ford. That indeed (Sir John) is my business.

Fal. Master Broom I will not lie to you, I was at her house the hour she appointed me.

Ford. And sped you Sir?

Fal. Very ill-favour'dly Master Broom.

Ford. How Sir, did she change her determination?

Fal. No (M. Broom) but the peaking Cornuto her husband (M. Broom) dwelling in a continuall larum of jealousy, comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embrac'd, kis'd, protested, & (as it were) spoke the prologue of our Comedy: and at his heels, a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his distemper, and (forsooth) to search his house for his wives love.

Ford. What? While you were there?

Fal. While I was there.

Ford. And did he search for you, & could not find you?

Fal. You shall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one Mistress Page, gives intelligence of Fords approach: and in her invention, and Fords wives distraction, they convey'd me into a Buck-basket.

Ford.

Ford. A Buck-basket?

Fal. Yea : a Buck-basket : ram'd me in with foul Shirts and Smocks, Socks, foul Stockings, greasie Napkins, that (Master Broom) there was the rankest compound of villanous smell, that ever offended nostrill.

Ford. And how long lay you there ;

Fal. Nay, you shall hear (Master Broom) what I have suffered, to bring this woman to evil, for your good : Being thus cram'd in the basket, a couple of Fords Knaves, his hindes were call'd forth by their Mistris, to carry me in the name of foul Cloathes to Datchet-lane : they took me on their shoulders : met the jealous Knave their Master in the door ; who ask'd them once or twice what they had in their Basket ? I quak'd for fear, least the Lunatick Knave, would have search'd it : but Fate (ordaining he should be a Cuckold) held his hand : well, on went he for a search, and away went I for foul Cloathes : But mark the sequell (Master Broom) I suffered the pangs of three severall deaths : first, an intollerable fright, to be detected with a jealons rotten Bell-weather : next, to be compass'd like a good Bilbo in the circumference of a Peck, hilt to point, heel to head. And then to be stopt in like a strong distillation with stinking Cloathes, that fretted in their own grease : think of that, a man of my Kidney ; think of that that am as subject to heat as Butter : a man of continuall dissolution, and thaw : it was a miracle to scape suffocation. And in the height of this Bath (when I was more then halfe stew'd in grease (like a Dutch-dish) to be thrown into the Thames, and cool'd, glowing hot, in that serge like a Horseshoe ; think of that : hissing hot, think of that (Master Broom.)

Ford. In good sadnesse Sir, I am sorry, that for my sake you have suffered all this. My suit then is desperate : You'll undertake her no more ?

Fal. Master Broom : I will be thrown into Etna, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her thus ; her husband is this morning gone a birding : I have received from her another ambassie of meeting : 'twixt eight and nine is the hour (Master Broom.)

Ford. 'Tis past eight already Sir.

Fal. Is it ? I will then addresse me to my appointment : Come to me at your convenient leisure, and you shall know how I speed : and the conclusion shall be crowned with your enjoying her : adiew, you shall have her (Master Broom) Master Broom, you shall cuckold Ford.

Exit.

Ford. Hum : ha ? is this a vision ? is this a dream ? doe I sleep ? Master Ford awake, awake Master Ford ; there's a hole made in you best coat (Master Ford :) this 'tis to be married ; this 'tis to have Linnen and Buck-baskets : Well, I will proclaim my self what I am : I will now take the Leacher : he is at my house : he cannot scape me : 'tis impossible he should : he cannot creep into a halfe-penny purse, nor into a Pepper-box : But least the Devil that guides him, should aide him, I will search impossible places : though what I am, I cannot avoid ; yet to be what I would not, shall not make me tame : If I have horns, to make one mad, let the proverbe go with me, I'll be horn-mad.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Mistris Page, Quickly, William, Evans.

Mis. Page. Is he at M. Fords already think'st thou ?

Qui. Sure he is by this ; or will be presently ; but truly he is very couragious mad, about his throwing into the water. Mistris Ford desires you to come suddenly.

Mis. Page. I'll be with her by and by : I'll but bring my young man here to Schoole : look where his Master comes, 'tis a playing day I see : how now Sir Hugh, no Schoole to day ?

Eva. No : Master Slender is let the Boyes leave to play.

Qui. 'Blessing of his heart.

Mis. Page. Sir Hugh, my Husband sayes my Son profits nothing in the world at his Book : I pray you aske him some questions in his Accidence.

Eva. Come hither William ; hold up your head ; come.

Mis. Page. Come sirrha ; hold up your head ; answer your Master, be not afraid.

Evan. William, how many Numbers is in Nouns ?

Will. Two.

Qui. Truly, I thought there had been one Number more, because they say od's-Nouns.

Evan. Peace, your tatlings. What is (Fair) William ?

Will. Pulcher.

Qui. Poulcats ? there are fairer things then Poulcats, sure.

Evan. You are a very simplicity o'man : I pray you peace. What is (Lapis) William ?

Will. A Stone.

Evan. And what is a Stone (William ?)

Will. A Peeble.

Evan. No ; it is Lapis : I pray you remember in your prain.

Will. Lapis.

Evan. That is a good William : what is he (William) that do's lend Articles.

Will. Articles are borrowed of the Pronoun ; and be thus declined, Singulariter nominativo, hic, hac, hoc.

Eva. Nominativo hic, hag, hog : pray you mark : Genitivo hujus : Well, what is your Accusative case.

Will. Accusative hinc.

Evan. I pray you have your remembrance (child) Accusativo, hing, hang, hog.

Qui. Hang-hog, is Latine for Bacon, I warrant you.

Eva. Leave your prabbles (o'man) What is the Focative case (William ?)

Will. O, Vocativo, O

Evan. Remember Welliam, Focative, is caret.

Qui. And that's a good root.

Qui. O'man, forbear.

Mis. Page. Peace.

Evan. What is your Genitive case plurall (William ?)

Will. Genitive case ?

Evan. I.

Will. Genitive horum, harum, horum.

Qui. 'Vengeance of Ginyes case ; sic on her : never name her (child) if she be a whore.

Eva. For shame o'man.

Qui. You doe ill to teach the child such words : he teaches him to hic, and to hac ; which they'll doe fast enough of themselves, and to call horum ; sic upon you.

Evan. O'man, art thou Lunatic? Hast thou no understandings for thy Cases, and the numbers of the Genders? Thou art as foolish Christian creatures as I would desires.

Mis. Page. Prethee hold thy peace.

Evan. Shew me now (William) some declensions of your Pronouns.

Will. Forsooth, I have forgot.

Eva. It is Qui; que, quod; if you forget your Quies, your Ques, and your Quods, you must be preaches: Go your wayes and play, go.

M. Pa. He is a better Schollar then I thought he was.

Eva. He is a good sprag-memory: Farewell M. Pa.

Mis. Page. Adieu good Sir Hugh.

Get you home boy, Come we stay too long. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Falstaffe, Mis. Ford, Mis. Page, Servants, Ford, Page, Caius, Evans, Shallow.

Fal. Mistress Ford, your sorrow hath eaten up my sufferance; I see you are obsequious in your love, and I profess requitall to a hairs breadth, not onely Mistress Ford, in the simple office of love, but in all the accoustrement, complement, and ceremony of it: but are you sure of your husband now?

Mis. Ford. He's a birding (sweet sir John.)

Mis. Page. What ho, gossip Ford: what ho.

Mis. Ford. Step into th'chamber, Sir John. Enter.

Mis. Page. How now (sweet heart) who's at home besides your self?

Mis. Ford. Why none but mine own people.

Mis. Page. Indeed?

Mis. Ford. No certainly: speak louder.

Mis. Page. Truly, I am so glad you have no body here.

Mis. Ford. Why?

Mis. Page. Why woman, your husband is in his old lines again: he so takes on yonder with my husband, so rails against all married mankind; so curses all Eves daughters, of what complexion soever; and so buffets himself on the forehead: crying peere-out, peere-out, that any madnesse I ever yet beheld, seem'd but tame-nesse, civility, and patience to this his distemper he is in now: I am glad the fat Knight is not here.

Mis. Ford. Why do's he talk of him?

Mis. Page. Of none but him, and swears he was carried out the last time he search'd for him, in a Basket: Protests to my husband he is now here, and hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his suspicion: But I am glad the Knight is not here; now he shall see his own foolery.

Mis. Ford. How near is he Mistress Page?

Mis. Page. Hard by, at streets end, he will be here anon.

Mis. Ford. I am undone, the Knight is here.

Mis. Page. Why then you are utterly sham'd, and he's but a dead man. What a woman are you? away with him, away with him: Better shame then murder.

Mis. Ford. Which way should he go? How should I bestow him? Shall I put him into the basket again?

Fal. No, it'll come no more i'ch Basket: Enter. May I not go out ere he come?

Mis. Page. Alas: three of Master Fords brothers watch the door with Pistolls, that none shall issue out: otherwise you might slip away ere he came: But what make you here?

Fal. What shall I do? I'll creep up into the chimney.

Mis. Ford. There they alwayes use to discharge their Birding-pieces: creep into the Kill-hole.

Fal. Where is it?

Mis. Ford. He will seek there on my word: Neither Presse, Coffer, Chest, Trunk, Well, Vault, but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his Note: There is no hiding you in the house.

Fal. I'll go out then.

Mis. Ford. If you go out in your own semblance, you die Sir John, unlesse you go out disguis'd. How might we disguise him?

Mis. Page. Alas-the-day I know not, there is no womans Gown big enough for him: otherwise he might put on a Hat, a Muffler, a Kerchiffe, and so escape.

Fal. Good hearts devise something: any extremity, rather then a mischief.

Mis. Ford. My Maids Aunt, the fat woman of Brainford, has a Gown above.

Mis. Page. On my word it will serve him: she's as big as he is: and there's her thrum'd Hat, and her Muffler too: run up Sir John.

Mis. Ford. Go, go, sweet Sir John: Mistress Page and I will look some linnen for your head.

Mis. Page. Quick, quick, we'll come dresse you straight: put on the Gown the while. Exit.

Mis. Ford. I would my husband would meet him in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brainford: he swears she's a Witch, forbad her my house, and hath threatened to beat her.

Mis. Page. Heaven guide him to thy husbands cudgell: and the devil guide his cudgell afterwards.

Mis. Ford. But is my Husband coming?

Mis. Page. I in good sadnesse is he, and talks of the Basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence.

Mis. Ford. We'll try that; for I'll appoint my men to carry the basket again, to meet him at the door with it, as they did last time.

Mis. Page. Nay, but he'll be here presently: let's go dresse him like the Witch of Brainford.

Mis. Ford. I'll first direct my men, what they shall doe with the Basket: Go up, I'll bring linnen for him straight.

Mis. Page. Hang him dishonest Varket,

We cannot misuse him enough:

We'll leave a proof by that which we will doe,

Wives may be merry, and yet honest too:

We doe not act, that often jest and laugh,

'Tis old, but true, Still Swine eats all the draugh.

Mis. Ford. Go Sirs, take the Basket again on your shoulders: your Master is hard at door: if he bid you set it down, obey him: quickly, dispatch. Enter Ser.

1 Ser. Come, come, take it up.

2 Ser. Pray heaven it be not full of the Knight again.

1 Ser. I hope not, I had as lief bear so much Lead.

Ford. I, but if it prove true (Master Page) have you any way then to unfool me again? Set down the Basket villain: somebody call my wife: Youth in a Basket: Oh you Panderly Rascalls, there's a knot: a ging, a pack, a conspiracy against me: Now shall the devil be sham'd. What Wife I say: Come, come forth: behold what honest nest clothes you send for to bleaching.

Page. Why, this passes Mr. Ford : you are not to go loose any longer, you must be pinnion'd.

Evans. Why, this is Lunaticks : this is mad as a mad dog.

Shal. Indeed M. Ford, this is not well indeed.

Ford. So say I too sir, come hither Mistris Ford, Mistris Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the virtuous creature, that hath the jealous fool to her husband : I suspect without cause (Mistris) do I ?

Mis. Ford. Heaven be my witness you do, if you suspect me in any dishonesty.

Ford. Well said brazen-face, hold it out : Come forth firrah.

Page. This passes.

Mis. Ford. Are you not asham'd, let the cloathes alone.

Ford. I shall find you anon.

Evans. 'Tis unreasonable; will you take up your wives cloathes ? Come, away.

Ford. Empty the basket I say.

Mis. Ford. Why man, why ?

Ford. Master Page, as I am a man, there was one convey'd out of my house yesterday in this basket : why may not he be there again ? in my house I am sure he is : my intelligence is true, my jealousy is reasonable, pluck me out all the linnen.

Mis. Ford. If you find a man there, he shall die a Fleas death.

Page. Here's no man.

Shal. By my fidelity this is not well Mr. Ford : This wrongs you.

Evans. M. Ford, you must pray, and not follow the imaginations of your own heart : this is jealousies.

Ford. Well, hee's not here I seek for.

Page. No, nor no where else but in your brain.

Ford. Help to search my house this one time : if I find not what I seek, shew no colour of my extremity : Let me for ever be your Table-sport : Let them say of me as jealous as Ford, that search'd a hollow Wall-nut for his Wives Lemman. Satisfie me once more, once more search with me.

Mis. Ford. What hoa (Mistris Page) come you and the old Woman down : my husband will come into the Chamber.

Ford. Old woman ? what old woman's that ?

Mis. Ford. Why it is my Maids Aunt of Brainford.

Ford. A Witch, a Quean, an old cozening Quean : Have I not forbid her my house ? She comes of errands do's she ? We are simple men, we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of Fortune-telling. She works by Charms, by Spels, by th' Figure, and such dawbry, as this is, beyond our Element : we know nothing. Come down you Witch, you Hag you, come down I say.

Mis. Ford. Nay, good sweet husband, good Gentlemen, let him not strike the old Woman. Enter Fal.

Mis. Page. Come Mother Prat, Come give me your hand.

Ford. I'll Prat her : Out of my door you Witch, you Hag, you Baggage, you Poulcot, you Runnion, out, out : I'll conjure you, I'll Fortune-tell you. Exit Fal.

Mis. Page. Are you not asham'd ?

I think you have kill'd the poor woman.

Mis. Ford. Nay he will do it, 'tis a goodly credit for you.

Ford. Hang her Witch.

Evans. By yea, and no, I think the o'man is a Witch indeed : I like not when a o'man has a great peard ; I spie a great peard under his Muffler.

Ford. Will you follow Gentlemen, I beseech you follow : see but the issue of my jealousy : If I cry out thus upon no trail, never trust me when I open again.

Page. Let's obey his humour a little further :

Come Gentlemen.

Exeunt.

Mis. Page. Trust me he beat him most pitifully.

Mis. Ford. Nay by th' Mass that he did not : he beat him most unpitifully, me thought.

Mis. Page. I'll have the cudgell hallow'd, and hung o're the Altar, it hath done meritorious service.

Mis. Ford. What think you ? May we with the warrant of woman-hood, and the witness of a good conscience, pursue him with any further revenge ?

M. Page. The spirit of wantonnesse is sure scar'd out of him, if the Devil have him not in fee-simple, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, in the way of waste, attempt us again.

Mis. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we have served him ?

Mis. Page. Yes, by all means : if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husbands brain : if they can find in their hearts, the poor unvertuous fat Knight shall be any further afflicted, we two will still be the ministers.

Mis. Ford. I'll warrant they'll have him publicly sham'd, and me thinks there would be no period to the jest, should he not be publicly sham'd.

Mis. Page. Come to the Forge with it, then shape it : I would not have things coole. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Host and Bardolfe.

Bar. Sir, the Germane desires to have three of your horses : the Duke himself will be to-morrow at Court, and they are going to meet him.

Host. What Duke should that be comes so secretly ? I hear not of him in the Court : let me speak with the Gentlemen, they speak English.

Bar. Sir ? I'll call them to you.

Host. They shall have my horses, but I'll make them pay : I'll sawce them, they have had my houses a week at command : I have turn'd away my other guests, they must come off, I'll sawce them, come. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Page, Ford, Mistris Page, Mistris Ford, and Evans.

Evans. 'Tis one of the best discretions of a o'man as ever I did look upon.

Page. And did he send you both these Letters at an instant ?

Mis. Page. Within a quarter of an hour.

Ford. Pardon me (wife) henceforth do what thou wilt : I rather will suspect the Sun with gold, Then thee with wantonness ; Now doth thy honor stand

(In

(In him that was of late an Heretick)
As firm of faith.

Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well, no more :
Be not extream in submission, as in offence ,
But let our plot go forward : Let our Wives
Yet once again (to make us publick sport)
Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow ,
Where we may take him, and disgrace him for it.

Ford. There is no better way then that they spoke of.

Page. How ? to send him word they'll meet him in the Park at midnight ? Fie, fie, he'll never come.

Evan. You say he hath been thrown into the River :
and has been grievously peaten, as an old o'man : me thinks there should be terrours in him, that he should not come : Me thinks his flesh is punish'd, he shall have no desires.

Page. So think I too.

M. Ford. Devise but how you'll use him when he comes.
And let us two devise to bring him thither.

M. Page. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the Hunter (sometime a Keeper here in Windsor Forrest)
Doth all the Winter time at still of midnight
Walk round about an Oake, with great ragg'd horns,
And there he blasts the tree, and takes the Cattel,
And makes milch-kine yield blood, and shakes a chain
In a most hideous and dreadfull manner.
You have heard of such a spirit, and well you know
The superstitious idle-headed-Eld
Receiv'd, and did deliver to our age
This tale of Herne the Hunter for a truth.

Page. Why yet there want not many that doe fear
In deep of night to walk by this Hernes Oake :
But what of this ?

Mis. Ford. Marry this is our device,
That Falstaffe at that Oake shall meet with us.

Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come,
And in this shape when you have brought him thither,
What shall be done with him ? What is your plot ?

M. Page. That likewise have we thought upon, and Nan Page (my daughter) and my little Son, (thus :
And three or four more of their growth, we'll dresse
Like Urchins, Ouphes, and Fairies, green and white,
With rounds of waxen Tapers on their heads.
And Rattles in their hands ; upon a sudden,
As Falstaffe, she, and I, are newly met,
Let them from forth a Saw-pit rush at once
With some diffused song : Upon their sight
We two, in great amazednesse will flie :
Then let them all encircle him about,
And Fairy-like to pinch the unclean Knight ;
And aske him why that hour of Fairy Revell,
In their so sacred paths, he dares to tread
In shape prophane.

Ford. And till he tell the truth,
Let the supposed Fairies pinch him sound,
And burn him with their Tapers.

M. Pa. The truth being known,
We'll all present our selves ; dis-horn the spirit ,
And mock him home to Windsor.

Ford. The Children must
Be practis'd well to this, or they'll ne're doe't.

Evan. I will teach the children their behaviours : and I will be like a Jack-a-napes also, to burn the Knight with my Taber.

Ford. That will be excellent,
I'll go buy them vizards.

Mis. Page. My Nan shall be the Queen of all the Fairies, finely attired in a robe of white.

Page. That silk would I go buy, and in that time shall M. Slender steal my Nan away,
And marry her at Eaton : go, send to Falstaffe straight.

Ford. Nay, I'll to him again in name of Broom,
He'll tell me all his purpose : sure he'll come.

Mi. Pa. Fear not you that : Go get us properties
And tricking for your Fairies.

Evans. Let us about it,
It is admirable pleasures, and ferry honest knaveries.

Mis. Page. Go Mis. Ford,
Send quickly to Sir John, to know his mind :
I'll to the Doctor, he hath my good will,
And none but he to marry with Nan Page :
That Slender (though well landed) is an Ideot :
And he, my Husband best of all affects :
The Doctor is well moneyed, and his friends
Potent at Court : he, none but he shall have her,
Though twenty thousand worthier come to crave her.

Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Host, Simple, Falstaffe, Bardolfe, Evans, Caius, Quickly.

Host. What would'st thou have ? (Boor) what ? (thick skin) speak, breathe, discusse : brief, short, quick, snap.

Sim. Marry sir, I come to speak with Sir John Fal- staffe from M. Slender.

Host. There's his Chamber, his House, his Castle, his Standing-bed and Truckle-bed : 'tis painted about with the story of the Prodigall, fresh and new : go, knock and call : he'll speak like an Anthrophaginian unto thee :
Knock I say.

Sim. There's an old woman, a fat woman gone up into his Chamber : I'll be so bold as stay sir till she come down : I come to speak with her indeed.

Host. Ha ? a fat woman ? The Knight may be robb'd :
I'll call, Bully-Knight, Bully-Sir John : speak from thy Lungs Military : Art thou there ? It is thine Host, thine Ephesian calls.

Fal. How now, mine Host ?

Host. Here's a Bohemian-Tartar carries the comming down of thy fat woman : Let her descend (Bully) let her descend : my Chambers are honourable : Fie, privacy ? Fie.

Fal. There was (mine Host) an old fat woman even now with me, but she's gone.

Sim. Pray you sir, was't not the wife woman of Brainford ?

Fal. I marry was it (Mussel-shell) what would you with her ?

Sim. My Master (Sir) my Master Slender sent to her, seeing her go through the streets, to know (Sir) whether one Nim (Sir) that beguiled him of a chain, had the chain, or no.

Fal. I spake with the old woman about it.

Sim. And what sayes she, I pray Sir ?

Fal. Marry she sayes, that the very same man that be-guil'd Master Slender of his Chain, cozen'd him of it.

Simp. I would I could have spoken with the woman her

her selfe, I had other things to have spoken with her too, from him.

Fal. What are they? let us know.

Hof. I, come: quick.

Fal. I may not conceal them (sir.)

Hof. Conceal them, or thou di'st.

Sim. Why sir, they were nothing but about Mistris Anne Page, to know if it were my Masters fortune to have her or no.

Fal. 'Tis, 'tis his fortune.

Sim. What Sir.

Fal. To have her, or no: go; say the woman told me so.

Sim. May I be bold to say so sir?

Fal. I sir: like who more bold.

Sim. I thank your worship: I shall make my master glad with these tidings.

Hof. Thou art clarkly: thou art clarkly (Sir John) was there a wise woman with thee?

Fal. I, that there was (mine Hof) one that hath taught me more wit, then ever I learn'd before in my life: and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

Enter Bardolph.

Bar. Out alas (sir) cozonage: meer cozonage.

Hof. Where be my horses? speak well of them var-letto.

Bar. Run away with the cozoners: for so soon as I came beyond Eaton, they threw me of from behinde one of them in a flow of myre; and set spurres, and away; like three Germane-Devils; three Doctor Fausstufes.

Hof. They are gone but to meet the Duke (villaine) do not say they be fled: Germanes are honest men.

Enter Evans.

Evan. Where is mine Hof?

Hof. What is the matter sir?

Evan. Have a care of your entertainments: there is a friend of mine come to town, tells me there is three Cozen-Jermans, that has cozen'd all the Hofs of Readins, of Maidenhead; of Cole-Brooke, of horses and money: I tell you for good wil (look you) you are wise, and full of gibes, and vlouting-stocks: and 'tis not convenient you should be cozoned. Fare you well. Exit. Enter Caius.

Cai. Ver'is mine Hof de Jarteer?

Hof. Here (Master Doctor) in perplexity and doubtfull delemma.

Cai. I cannot tell vat is dat: but it is tell-a-me, dat you make a grand preparation for a Duke de Famany: by my trot: der is no Duke dat the Court is know, to come: I tell you for good will: adieu.

Exit.

Hof. Huy and cry (villane) goe: assist me Knight, I am undone: flye, run: hu and cry (villaine) I am undone

Exit.

Fal. I would all the world might be cozen'd, for I have been cozened and beaten too: if it should come to the ear of the Court, how I have been transform'd; and how my transformation hath been wash'd and cudgel'd, they would melt me out of my fat, drop by drop, and liquer Fishermens boots with me: I warrant they would whip me with their fine wits, till I were as crest-faln as a drid'd Pear: I never prosper'd, since I forswore my self at Primero: well, if my wind were but long enough; I would repent: Now? whence come you?

Enter Quickly.

Qui. From the two parties forsooth.

Fal. The Devill take one party, and his Dam the other: and so they shall be both veltow d; I have suffer'd more for their sakes; more than the villanous inconstancy of mans disposition is able to bear.

Qui. And have not they suffer'd? Yes, I warrant, speciously one of then; Mistris Ford (good heart) is beaten black and blew, that you cannot see a white spot about her.

Fal. What tell'st thou me of black and blew? I was beaten my self into all the colours of the Raip-bow; and I was like to be apprehended for the Witch of Brainford, but that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old Woman deliver'd me, the Knave Constable had set me ith' Stocks, ith' common Stocks for a Witch.

Qui. Sir, let me speak with you in your Chamber, you shall hear how things go, and (I warrant) to your content: here is a letter will say somewhat: (good hearts) what a-do here is to bring you together? Sure one of you do's not serve heaven well, that you are so cros'd,

Fal. Come up into my Chamber.

Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Fenton, Hof.

Hof. Master Fenton, talke not to me, my minde is heavy: I will give over all.

Fen. Yet hear me speak: assist me in my purpose, And (as I am a Gentleman) I'll give thee. A hundred pound in gold, more then your loss.

Hof. I will hear you (Master Fenton) and I will (at the least) keep your counsell.

Fen. From time to time, I have acquainted you With the dear love I bear to fair Anne Page, Who, mutually, hath answer'd my affection, (So far forth, as her self might be her chuser) Even to my wish; I have a letter from her

Of such contents, as you will wonder at;

The mirth whereof, so larded with my matter,

That neither singly can be manifested

Without the shew of both: sat Sir John Falstaffe

Hath a great Scene; the image of the jest

I'll shew you here at large (hark good mine Hof :)

To night at Hernes Oke, just 'twixt twelve and one,

Must my sweet Nan present the Fairie Queen:

The purpose why, is here: in which disguise

While other jests are something rank on foot,

Her father hath commanded her to slip

Away with Slender, and with him at Eaton

Immediately to marry: She hath consented: Now Sir,

Her mother, (even strong against that match

And firme for Doctor Caius) hath appointed

That he shall likewise shuffle her away,

While other sports are tasking of their mindes,

And at the Deanry, where a Priest attends

Straight marry her: to this her Mothers plot

She (seemingly obedient) likewise hath

Made promise to the Doctor: Now, thus it rests,

Her father means she shall be all in white;

And in that habit, when Slender sees his time

To take her by the hand, and bid her go,

She shall go with him: her Mother hath intended

(The better to devote her to the Doctor;

For they must all be mask'd and vizarded)

That

That quaint in green, she shall be loose enroab'd,
With Ribands-pendant, flaring 'bout her head;
And when the Doctor spies his vantage ripe,
To pinch her by the hand, and on that token,
The maid hath given consent to go with him.

Host. Which means she to deceive? Father, or Mother?

Fen. Both (my good Host) to go along with me,
And here it rests, that you'll procure the Vicar
To stay for me at Church, 'twixt twelve and one,
And in the lawfull name of marrying,
To give our hearts united ceremony.

Host. Well, husband your device; I'll to the Vicar,
Bring you the Maid, you shall not lack a Priest.

Fen. So shall I evermore be bound to thee;
Besides, I'll make a present recompence. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus, Scena Prima.

Enter Falstaffe, Quickly, and Ford.

Fal. Prethee no more prating: go, I'll hold, this is the third time: I hope good luck lies in odde numbers, Away, go, they say there is Divinity in odde numbers, either in Nativity, chance, or death: away.

Qui. I'll provide you a chain, and I'll do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

Fal. Away I say, time wears, hold up your head and nince. How now M. Broom? Master Broom, the matter will be known to night, or never. Be you in the Parke about midnight, at Hernes-Oake, and you shall see wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yesterday (Sir) as you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her (Master Broom) as you see, like a poor-old-man, But I came from her (Master Broom) like a poor-old-woman; that same Knave (Ford her husband) hath the finest mad Devil of jealousy in him (Master Broom) that ever govern'd Frenzie. I will tell you, he beat me grievously, in the shape of a woman: (for in the shape of a man (Master Broom) I fear not Goliath with a Weavers beam, (because I know also, life is a Shuttle) I am in haste, go along with me, I'll tell you all (Master Broom:) since I pluckt Geese, plaid Trewant and whipt Top, I knew not what 'twas to be beaten, till lately. Follow me I'll tell you strange things of this Knave Ford, on whom to night I will be revenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand. Follow, strange things in hand (Master Broom) follow. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Page, Shallow Slender.

Page. Come, come: wee'll couch i'th Castle-ditch, till we see the light of our Fairies. Remember son Slender, my daughter.

Slen. I forsooth, I have spoke with her, and we have a nay-word how to know one another. I come to her in white, and cry Mum; she cries Budget, and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: but what needs either your Mum, or her Budget? The white will decipher her well enough. It hath struck ten a'clock.

Page. The night is dark, Light and Spirits will become it well: Heaven prosper our sport. No man means evill but the Devill, and we shall know him by his horns. Let's away: follow me. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Mist. Page, Mist. Ford, Caius.

Mist. Page. Mr. Doctor, my daughter is in green, when you see your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the Deanry, and dispatch it quickly: goe before into the Park: we two must go together.

Cai. I know vat I have to do, adieu. Exit.

Mis. Page. Fare you well (sir) my husband will not rejoyce so much at the abuse of Falstaffe, as he will chafe at the Doctors marrying my daughter: But 'tis no matter; better a little chiding, then a great deal of heart-break.

Mis. Ford. Where is Nan now? and her troop of Fairies? and the Welch Devil Hernes.

Mis. Page. They are all couch'd in a pit hard by Hernes Oak, with obscur'd Lights; which at the very instant of Falstaffes and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

Mis. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze him.

Mis. Page. If he be not amaz'd he will be mock'd: If he be amaz'd, he will be mock'd.

Mis. Ford. Wee'll betray him finely.

Mis. Page. Against such Lewdsters, and their Lechery, Those that betray them do no trechery.

Mis. Ford. The hour draws on: to the Oak, to the Oake. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Evans and Fairies.

Evans. Trib, trib, Fairies: Come, and remember your parts: be pold (I pray you) follow me into the pit, and when I give the watch-ords: do as I bid you: come, come, trib, trib. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Falstaffe, Mistris Page, Mistris Ford, Evans, Anne Page, Fairies, Page, Ford, Quickly Slender, Fenton, Caius, Pistoll.

Fal. The Windsor Bell hath struck twelve: the Minute draws on: Now the hot-bloudied-god assist me: Remember Jove, thou wast a Bull for thy Europa, Love set on thy horns. O powerfull Love, that in some respects makes a Beast a Man: in some other, a Man, a Beast. You were also (Jupiter) a Swan, for the love of Leda: O omnipoomnipotent Love, how nere the God drew to the complexion of a Goose; a fault done first in the forme of a Beast, (O Jove, a beastly fault:) and then another fault, in the semblance of a Fowle, think on't (Jove) a fowle-fault. When gods have hot backs, what shall poor men doe? For me, I am here a Windsor Stag, and the fattest (I think) i'th Forreſt. Send me a coole rut-time (Jove) or who can blanie me to piſſe my Tallow? Who comes here? my Doe?

M. Ford. Sir John? Art thou there (my Deer?) My male-Deer?

Fal. My Doe with the black Scut? Let the skie rain Potatoes: let it thunder, to the tune of Green-sleeves, hail-kissing Cornfits, and snow Eringoes: Let there come a tempest of provocation, I will shelter me here.

M. Ford. Mistress Page is come with me (sweetheart.)

Fal. Divide me like a Brib'd-Buck, each a Haunch: I will keep my sides to my self, my shoulders for the fellow of this walke; and my hornes I bequeath your husbands. Am I a Woodman, ha? Speak I like Herne the Hunter? Why, now is Cupid a child of Conscience, he makes restitution. As I am a true spirit, welcome.

M. Page. Alas, what noyse?

M. Ford. Heaven forgive our sins.

Fal. What should this be?

M. Ford. M. Page. Away, away.

Fal. I think the Devil will not have me Hamn'd, Least the Oyle that's in me should set hell on fire; He would never else crosse me thus.

Enter Fairies.

Qui. Fairies, black, gray, green, and white, You Moon-shine Revellers, and shades of night. You Orphan heirs of fixed destiny, Attend your office, and your quality. Crier Hob-goblin, make the Fairy Oyes.

Pist. Elves, list your names: Silence you airy toys. Cricker, to Windsor Chimneys shalt thou leap: Where fires thou find'st unrak'd, and Hearths unswept, There pinch the Maids as blue as Bilbery, Our radiant Queen hates Sluts and sluttery.

Fal. They are Fairies, he that speaks to them shall die. I'll wink and couch: No man their works must eye.

Ev. Where's Bede? Go you, and where you find a Maid That ere she sleep has thrice her prayers said, Raise up the Organs of her fantasie, Sleep she as sound as careless infancy, But those as sleep and think not on their sins, Pinch them, armes, legs, backs, shoulders, sides and shins.

Qui. About, about: Search Windsor Castle (Elves) within, and out. Strew good luck (Ouphes) on every sacred room; That it may stand till the perpetuall doome, In state as wholesome, as in state 'tis fit, Worthy the Owner, and the Owner it. The several Chairs of Order, looke you scowre, With joyce of Balme; and every precious flowre, Each fair Instalmient, Coat and sev'ral Crest, With loyal Blazon evermore be blest. And Nightly-meadow-Fairies, looke you sing Like to the Garret-Compass in a Ring, Th'expressure that it bears: Green let it be, More fertile-fresh then all the field to see: And, Hony Soit Qui Mal-y-Panse, write In Emrold-tuffes, Flowers, purple, blue, and white, Like Saphire-pearle, and rich Embroiderie, Buckled below fair Knight-hoods bending knee; Fairies use Elowers for their Characterie, Away, disperse: But till 'tis one a clock, Our dance of custome round about the Oke Of Herne the Hunter, let us not forget.

Ev. Pray you lock hand in hand, your selves in order set: And twenty Glow-worms shall our Lant-horns be To guide our Measure round about the tree. But stay, I smell a man of middle earth.

Fal. Heavens defend me from that Welch Fairie, Lest he transforme me to a peece of Cheese.

Pist. Vilde worm, thou wast ore-look'd even in thy birth.

Qui. With triall-fire touch me his finger end: If he be chaste, the flame will back descend And turn him to no pain: but if he start, It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

Pist. A triall, come.

Evans. Come, will this wood take fire?

Fal. Oh, oh, oh.

Qui. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire. About him (Fairies) sing a scornfull Rime, And as you trip, still pinch him to your time.

The Song.

Fie on sinfull phantasie: Fie on Lust and Luxurie: Lust is but a bloudy fire, kindled with unchast desire.

Fed in heart whose flames aspire,

As thoughts do blow them higher and higher.

Pinch him (Fairies) mutually: pinch him for his Villanie.

Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him about,

Till Candles, and Star-light, and Moon-shine be out.

Page. Nay do not flye, I think I have watcht you now: Will none but Herne the Hunter serve your turn?

M. Page. I pray you come, hold up the jest no higher. Now (good Sir John) how like you Windsor Wives? See you these husbands? Do not these fair Okes Become the Forreſt better then the Town?

Ford. Now Sir, who's a Cuckold now?

Mr. Broom, Falstaff's a Knave, a Cuckoldly Knave, Here are his horns Master Broom: And Master Broom, he hath enjoyed nothing of Fords, but his buck-basket, his Cudgell, and twenty pounds of money, which must be paid to Mr. Broom, his horses are arrested for it, M. Broom.

M. Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck: we could never meet: I will never take you for my Love again, but I will alwayes count you my Deer.

Fal. I do begin to perceive that I am made an Ass.

Ford. I, and an Oxe to: both the proofes are extant.

Fal. And these are not Fairies:

I was three or four times in the thought they were not Fairies, and yet the guiltiness of my minde, the sodain surprize of my powers, drove the grossnesse of the folly into a receiv'd belief, in despite of the teeth of all rime and reason, that they were Fairies. See now how wit may be made a Jack-a-Lent, when 'tis upon ill intployment.

Evans. Sir John Falstaffe, serve Got, and leave your desires, and Fairies will not pinse you.

Ford. Well said Fairy Hugh.

Evans. And leave you your jealousies too, I pray you.

Ford.

Ford. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to wooe her in good English.

Fal. Have I laid my brain in the Sunne and dri'd it, that it wants matter to prevent so grosse ore-reaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welch Goat too? Shall I have a Coxcombe of Frize? 'Tis time I were choak'd with a piece of toasted Cheese.

Evans. Seefe is not good to give putter; your pelly is all putter.

Fal. Seefe and Putter? Have I liv'd to stand at the raunt of one that makes Fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of Lust and late-walking through the Realm.

Mist. Page. Why Sir John, do you think, though we would have thrust vertue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and have given our selves without scruple to Hell, that ever the Devil could have made you our delight?

Ford. What, a Hodge-pudding? A bag of Flax?

Mist. Page. A puffed man?

Page. Old, cold, wither'd, and of intollerable entrails?

Ford. And one that is as slanderous as Sathan?

Page. And as poor as Job.

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Evans. And given to Fornications, and to Taverns, and Sack, and Wine, and Metheglin, and to drinkings, and swearings, and staring? Pribbles and prabbles?

Fal. Well, I am your Theame: you have the start of me, I am dejected: I am not able to answer the Welch Flannel, Ignorance it self is a Plummet ore me, use me as you will.

Ford. Marry sir, wee'l bring you to Windsor to one Mr. Broome, that you have cozon'd of money, to whom you should have been a Pander: over and above that you have suffer'd, I think, to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerefull Knight, thou shalt eat a Possset to night at my house, where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee; Tell her Mr. Slender hath married her daughter.

Mist. Page. Doctors doubt that;
If Anne Page be my daughter, she is (by this) Doctor Cajus wife.

Enter Slender.

Slender. Whoa hoe, hoe, Father Page.

Page. Son? How now? How now son,
Have you dispatch'd?

Slender. Dispatch'd? Ile make the best in Glostershire know on't: would I were hang'd la, else.

Page. Of what, son?

Slender. I came yonder at Eaton to marry Mistris Anne Page, and shee's a great lubberly Boy. If it had not been ich' Church, I would have swing'd him, or he should have swing'd mee. If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never stir, and 'tis a Post-masters Boy.

Page. Upon my life then, you took the wrong..

Slender. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a Boy for a Girl: If I had been married to him, (for all he was in womans apparel) I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly,
Did not I tell you how you should know my daughter
By her garments?

Slender. I went to her in green, and cryed Mum, and she cry'd Budget, as Anne and I had appointed, and yet it was not Anne, but a Post-masters Boy.

Mist. Page. Good George be not angry, I knew of your purpose: turn'd my daughter into white, and indeed she is now with the Doctor at the Deanry, and there married.

Enter Cajus.

Cajus. Ver is Mistris Page: by gar I am cozon'd, I ha married one Garsoon, a Boe; oon Pefant, by gar. A Boy, it is not An Page, by gar, I am cozon'd.

M. Pa. Why? did you take her in white?

Cajus. I be gar, and 'tis a Boy: be gar, Ile raise all Windsor.

Ford. This is stranger: Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart misgives me, here comes M. Fenton.
How now M. Fenton?

An. Pardon good father, good my mother pardon.

Page. Now Mistris:

How chance you went not with M. Slender?

M. Pa. Why went you not with Mr. Doctor Maid?

Fen. You do amaze her: hear the truth of it,
You would have married her most shamefully,
Where there was no proportion held in love:

The truth is, she and I (long since contracted)

Are now so sure that nothing can dissolve us:

Th'offence is holy that she hath committed,

And this deceit loses the name of craft,

Of disobedience, or unduteous title,

Since therein she doth evitate and shun

A thousand irreligious cursed houres

Which forced marriage would have brought upon her.

Ford. Stand not amaz'd, here is no remedy:

In Love, the heavens themselves do guide the state,
Money buyes Lands, and wives are sold by fate.

Fal. I am glad, though you have tane a special stand to strike at me, that your Arrow hath glanc'd.

Page. Well, what remedy? Fenton, heaven give thee joy, what cannot be eschew'd, must be embrac'd.

Fal. When night-dogs runne, all sorts of Deere are chac'd.

M. Pa. Well, I will muse no further: M. Fenton,
Heaven give you many, many merry dayes:

Good husband, let us every one go home,

And laugh this sport ore by a countrey fire,

Sir John and all.

Ford. Let it be so (Sir John):

To Master Broome you yet shall hold your word,

For he, to night, shall lye with Mistris Ford. Exeunt.

F I N I S.

MEASURE

For Measure.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter Duke, Escalus, Lords.

Duke.

Escalus.

E sca. My Lord.

Duk. Of government, the properties to unfold,
Would seem in me t' affect speech and discourse.

Since I am put to know, that your own Science
Exceeds (in that) the lists of all advice
My strength can give you : Then no more remains
But that, to your sufficiency, as your worth is able,
And let them work : The nature of our people,
Our Cities institutions, and the Terms
For Common Justice, y' are as pregnant in
As Art, and practise hath enriched any
That we remember : There is our Commission,
From which, we would not have you warp ; call hither,
I say, bid come before us Angelo :
What figure of us think you, he will bear.
For you must know, we have with speciall soul
Elected him our absence to supply ;
Lent him our terror, drest him with our love,
And given his Depuration all the Organs
Of our own power : what think you of it ?

E sca. If any in Vienna be of worth
To undergoe such ample graee and honour,
It is Lord Angelo.

Enter Angelo.

Duke. Look where he comes.

Ang. Alwayes obedient to your Graces will,
I come to know your Graces pleasure.

Duke. Angelo :

There is a kinde of Character in thy life,
That to th' observer, doth thy history
Fully unfold : Thy self and thy belongings
Are not thine own so proper, as to waste
Thy self upon thy vertues ; they on thee :
Heaven doth with us, as we with Torches do,
Not light them for themselves : For if our vertues
Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike
As if we had them not : Spirits are not finely touch'd,
But to fine issues : nor Nature never lends
The smallest scruple of her excellence,
But like a thrifty goddesse, she determines
Her self the glory of a creditour,
Both thanks and use ; but I do bend my speech

To one that can my part in him advertise ;
Hold therefore Angelo :

In our remove, be thou at full, our self :
Mortality and Mercy in Vienna
Live in thy tongue and heart : Old Escalus
Though first in question, is thy secondary.
Take thy Commission.

Ang. Now good my Lord
Let there be some more test, made of my mettle,
Before so noble and so great a figure
Be stamp'd upon it.

Duk. No more evasion :
We have with a leaven'd, and prepared choyce
Proceeded to you ; therefore take your honours :
Our haste from hence is of so quick condition,
That it prefers it self, and leaves unquestion'd
Matters of needfull value : We shall write to you
As time, and our concernings shall importune,
How it goes with us, and do look to know
What doth befall you here. So fare you well :
To th' hopefull execution do I leave you,
Of your Commission.

Ang. Yet give leave (my Lord,)
That we may bring you something on the way.

Duke. My haste may not admit it,
Nor need you (on mine honour) have to do
With any scruple : your scope is as mine own,
So to inforce, or qualifie the Laws,
As to your soul seems good : Give me your hand,
He privily away : I love the people,
But do not like to stage me to their eyes :
Though it do well, I do not relish well
Their loud applause, and aves vehement :
Nor do I think the man of safe discretion
That do's affect it. Once more fare you well.

Ang. The heavens give safety to your purposes.

E sca. Lead forth and bring you back in happinesse.

Duke. I thank you, fare you well.

Exit.

E sca. I shall desire you, Sir, to give me leave
To have free speech with you ; and it concerns me
To look into the bottome of my place :
A power I have, but of what strength and nature,
I am not yet instructed.

Ang. 'Tis so with me : Let us with-draw together,
And we may soon our satisfaction have Touching that point.

E sca. He wait upon your honour.

Exeunt.

Scena

Scæna secunda.

Enter Lucio, and two other Gentlemen.

Luc. If the Duke, with the other Dukes, come not to composition with the King of Hungary, why then all the Dukes fall upon the King.

1 Gent. Heaven grant us its peace, but not the King of Hungaries.

2 Gent. Amen.

Luc. Thou conclud'st like the Sanctimonious Pyrat, that went to Sea with the ten Commandements, but scrap'd one out of the Table.

2 Gent. Thou shalt not steale?

Luc. I, that he raz'd.

1 Gent. Why? 'twas a Commandement to command the Captain and all the rest from their functions: they put forth to steale: There's not a Souldier of us all, that in the thanksgiving before meat, do relish the petition well that prays for peace.

2 Gent. I never heard any Souldier dislike it.

Luc. I believe thee: for I think thou never was't where Grace was said.

2 Gent. No? a dozen times at least.

1 Gent. What? in meeter?

Luc. In any proportion, or in any language.

1 Gent. I think, or in any Religion.

Luc. I, why not? Grace, is Grace, despite of all controversy: as for example; Thou thy self art a wicked villain, despite of all Grace.

1 Gent. Well: there went but a paire of sheers between us.

Luc. I grant: as there may between the Lists and the Velvet. Thou art the List.

1 Gent. And thou the Velvet; thou art good Velvet; thou'rt a three pil'd-piece I warrant thee: I had as lief be a List of an English Kersey, as be pil'd, as thou art pil'd, for a French Velvet. Do I speak feelingly now?

Luc. I think thou dost: and indeed with most painful feeling of thy speech: I will, out of thine own confession, learn to begin thy health; but whilst I live, forget to drink after thee.

1 Gent. I think I have done my self wrong, have I not?

2 Gent. Yes, that thou hast; whether thou art tainted, or free.

Enter Bawd.

Luc. Behold, behold, where Madam Mitigation comes. I have purchas'd as many diseases under her Roofe, As come to—

2 Gent. To what I pray?

Luc. Judge.

2 Gent. To three thousand Dollours a year.

1 Gent. I, and more.

Luc. A French crown more.

1 Gent. Thou art alwayes figuring diseases in me; but thou art full of error, I am sound.

Luc. Nay, not (as one would say) healthy: but so sound; as things that are hollow; thy bones are hollow; Impiety has made a feast of thee.

1 Gent. How now, which of your hips has the most profound Sciatica?

Bawd. Well, well: There's one yonder arrested, and carried to prison, was worth five thousand of you all.

2 Gent. Who's that I prethee?

Bawd. Marry fir, that's Claudio, Signior Claudio.

1 Gent. Claudio to prison? 'tis not so.

Bawd. Nay, but I know 'tis so: I saw him arrested; saw him carried away: and which is more, within these three dayes his head to be chopt off.

Luc. But, after all this fooling, I would not have it so: Art thou sure of this?

Bawd. I am too sure of it: and it is for getting Madam Julietta with child.

Luc. Believe me this may be: he promised to meet me two hours since, and he was ever precise in promise-keeping.

2 Gent. Besides you know, it draws something neere to the speech we had to such a purpose.

1 Gent. But most of all agreeing with the Proclamation.

Luc. Away, let's go learn the truth of it. Exeunt.

Bawd. Thus, what with the war; what with the swear, what with the gallows, and what with poverty, I am custome-shrunke. How now? what's the newes with you? Enter Clowne.

Clow. Yonder man is carried to prison.

Baw. Well: what has he done?

Clow. A woman.

Baw. But what's his offence?

Clow. Groping for Trowts, in a peculiar River.

Baw. What? is there a Maid with child by him?

Clow. No: but there's a woman with Maid by him: you have not heard of the Proclamation, have you?

Baw. What Proclamation, man?

Clow. All houses in the Suburbs of Vienna must be pluck'd down.

Baw. And what shall become of those in the Citie?

Clow. They shall stand for seed: they had gone down too, but that a wise Burger put in for them.

Baw. But shall all our houses of resort in the Suburbs be pull'd down?

Clow. To the ground Mistress.

Baw. Why here's a change indeed in the Commonwealth: what shall become of me?

Clow. Come: feare not you: good Counsellours lack no Clients: though you change your place, you need not change your Trade: He be your Tapster still; courage, there will be pitty taken on you; you that have worn your eyes almost out in the service, you will be considered.

Bawd. What's to do here, Thomas Tapster? let's withdraw.

Clow. Here comes Signior Claudio, led by the Provost to prison: and there's Madam Juliet. Exeunt.

Scæna tertia.

Enter Provost, Claudio, Juliet, Officers, Lucio, and two Gent.

Cla. Fellow, why dost thou show me thus to th'world? Beare me to prison, where I am committed.

Pro. I do it not in evill disposition, But from Angelo by speciall charge.

Cla. Thus can the demy-god (Authority) Make us pay down, for our offence, by waight The words of heaven; on whom it will, it will, On whom it will not (so) yet still tis just. (Straint.)

Luc. Why how now Claudio? whence comes this restraint?

Cla. From too-much liberty, (my Lucio) liberty, As surfer is the father of much fast, So every scope by the immoderate use Turnes to restraint: our Natures do pursue

Like

Like Rats that ravin down their proper Bane,
A thirstly evill, and when we drink, we die.

Luc. If I could speak so wisely, under an arrest, I would send for certain of my Creditors: and yet, to say the truth, I had as lief have the foppery of freedome, as the mortality of imprisonment: what's thy offence, Claudio?

Cla. What (but to speak of) would offend againe.

Luc. What is't murder?

Cla. No.

Luc. Lechery?

Cla. Call it so.

Pro. Away, sir, you must go.

Cla. One word, good friend:

Lucio, a word with you.

Luc. A hundred:

If they'l do you any good: Is Lechery so look'd after?

Cla. Thus stands it with me: upon a true contract
I got possession of Julietta's bed,
You know the Lady, she is fast my wife,
Save that we do the denunciation lack
Of outward Order. This we came not to,
Only for propagation of a Dowre
Remaining in the Coffer of her friends,
From whom we thought it meet to hide our Love
Till Time had made them for us. But it chances
The stealth of our most mutuall entertainment
With Character too grosse, is writ in Juliet.

Luc. With Childe, perhaps?

Cla. Unhappily, even so.

And the new Deputy, now for the Duke,
Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newnesse,
Or whether that the body publique, be
A horse whereon the Governour doth ride,
Who newly in the seat, that it may know
He can command; lets it strait feel the spur:
Whether the tyranny be in his place,
Or in his eminence that fills it up
I stagger in: But this new Governour
Awakes me all the enrolled penalties
Which have (like unscowr'd Armour) hung by th' wall
So long, that nineteen Zodiacks have gone round,
And none of them been worn; and for a name
Now puts the drowlie and neglected Act
Freshly on me: 'tis surely for a name.

Luc. I warrant it is: and thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders, that a Milk-maid, if she be in love, may figh it off: Send after the Duke and appeale to him.

Cla. I have done so, but he's not to be found.
I prethee (Lucio) do me this kinde service:
This day, my sister should the Cloyster enter,
And there receive her approbation.
Acquaint her with the danger of my state,
Implore her, in my voyce, that she make friends
To the strict Deputy: bid her self assay him,
I have great hope in that: for in her youth
There is a prone and speechlesse Dialect,
Such as move men: beside she hath prosperous Art
When she will play with reason, and discourse,
And well she can perswade.

Luc. I pray she may; as well for the encouragement of the like, which else would stand upon grievous imposition: as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be forry should be thus foolishly lost, at a game of Tick-tack:
He to her.

Cla. I thank you good friend Lucio.

Luc. Within two houres.

Cla. Come Officer, away.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Duke and Frier Thomas.

Duke. No: holy Father, throw away that thought,
Believe not that the dribbling dart of love
Can pierce a compleat bosome: why, I desire thee
To give me secret harbour, hath a purpose
More grave and wrinkled, than the aimes and ends
Of burning youth.

Fri. May your Grace speak of it.

Duke. My holy sir, none better knows than you
How I have ever lov'd the life remov'd
And held in idle price, to haunt assemblies
Where youth and cost, and witlesse bravery keeps.
I have delivered to Lord Angelo
(A man of stricture and firme abstinence)
My absolute power, and place here in Vienna,
And he supposes me travail'd to Poland,
(For so I have strew'd it in the common eare)
And so it is receiv'd: Now (pious sir)
You will demand of me, why I do this.

Fri. Gladly, my Lord.

Duke. We have strict Statutes, and most biting Laws,
(The needfull bits and curbs for head-strong weeds,) Which for this fourteen years, we have let slip,
Even like an ore-grown Lyon in a Cave
That goes not out to prey: Now, as fond Fathers,
Having bound up the threatening twigs of Birch,
Only to stick it in their childrens sight,
For error, not to use: in time the rod
More mock'd than fear'd: so our Decrees,
Dead to infliction, to themselves are dead,
And liberty plucks Justice by the nose;
The Baby beats the Nurse, and quite athwart
Goes all decorum.

Fri. It rested in your Grace

To unloose this tyde-up Justice, when you pleas'd:
And it in you more dreadfull would have seem'd
Than in Lord Angelo.

Duke. I do feare, too dreadfull:

Sith 'twas my fault to give the people scope,
'Twould be my tyranny to strike and gall them,
For what I bid them do: For we bid this be done
When evill deeds have their permissive passe,
And not the punishment: therefore indeed (my father)
I have on Angelo impos'd the office,
Who may in th'ambush of my name, strike home,
And yet, my nature never in the fight
To do in slander: And to behold his sway
I will, as 'twere a brother of your Order,
Visit both Prince and people: Therefore I prethee
Supply me with the habit, and instruct me
How I may formally in person beare
Like a true Frier: Moe reasons for this action
At your more leisure, shall I render you;
Only this one: Lord Angelo is precise,
Stands at a guard with Envie: scarce confesses
That his blood flowes: or that his appetite
Is more to bread than stone: hence shall we see
If power change purpose: what our Seemers be.

Exeunt.

Scena

Scæna Quinta.

Enter Isabell, and Francisca a Nun.Isa. And have you Nuns no farther priviledges?Nun. Are not these large enough?Isa. Yes truly; I speak not as desiring more,
But rather wishing a more strict restraint
Upon the Sisterhood, the Votarists of Saint Clare.Lucio within.Luc. Ho! peace be in this place.Isa. Who's that which calls?Nun. It is a mans voyce, gentle Isabella,
Turn you the key, and know his businesse of him;
You may; I may not: you are yet unsworn:
When you have vow'd, you must not speak with men,
But in the presence of the Prioress;
Then if you speak, you must not shew your face;
Or if you shew your face, you must not speak:
He calls again: I pray you answer him.Isa. Peace and prosperity: who is't that calls?Luc. Haile Virgin, (if you be) as those cheek-Roses
Proclaime you are no lesse: can you so steed me,
As bring me to the sight of Isabella,
A novice of this place, and the faire Sister
To her unhappy brother Claudio?Isa. Why her unhappy brother? Let me aske,
The rather for I now must make you know
I am that Isabella, and his Sister.Luc. Gentle and faire: your brother kindly greets you;
Not to be weary with you; he's in prison.Isa. Woe me; for what?Luc. For that, which if my self might be his Judge,
He should receive his punishment in thanks:
He hath got his friend with Childe.Isa. Sir, make me not your story.Luc. 'Tis true; I would not, though 'tis my familiar sin,
With Maids to seem the Lapwing, and to jest
Tongue, farre from heart: play with all Virgins so:
I hold you as a thing en-skied and fainted,
By your renouncement, an immortall spirit
And to be talk'd with in sincerity,
As with a Sainr.Isa. You do blaspheme the good, in mocking me.Luc. Do not believe it: fewnesse, and truth; 'tis thus
Your brother and his Lover have imbrac'd;
As those that feed, grow full: as blossoming Time
That from the seednesse, the bare fallow brings
To teeming foison: even so her plenteous wombe
Expresteth his full Tilth and Husbandry.Isa. Some one with child by him? my Cosen Juliet?Luc. Is she your Cosen?Isa. Adoptedly, as school-maids change their names
By vaine, though apt affection.Luc. She it is.Isa. Let him marry her.Luc. This is the point.The Duke is very strangely gone from hence;
Bore many Gentlemen (my self being one)
In hand, and hope of action: but we do learne,
By those that know the very Nerves of State,
His giving-out, were of an Infinite distance
From his true meane designe: upon his place,(And with full line of his authority)
Governs Lord Angelo; A man, whose blood
Is very snow-broth: one, who never feels
The wanton fings, and motions of the sense;
But doth rebare, and blunt his naturall edge
With profits of the minde: Study, and fast.
He (to give feare to use, and liberty,
Which have, for long, run-by the hideous Law,
As Myce by Lyons) hath pickt out an act,
Under whose heavy sense, your brothers life
Falls into forfeit: he arrests him on it,
And follows close the rigour of the Statute
To make him an example: all hope is gone,
Unlesse you have the grace, by your faire prayer
To soften Angelo: And that's my pith of businesse
*Twixt you, and your poor brother.Isa. Doth he so,
Seek his life?Luc. Has censur'd him already,
And as I heare, the Provost hath a warrant
For's execution.Isa. Alas: what poor
Abilitie's in me, to do him good?Luc. Assay the power you have.Isa. My power? alas, I doubt.Luc. Our doubts are traytors
And makes us lose the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt: Go to Lord Angelo,
And let him learn to know, when Maidens sue
Men give like gods: but when they weep and kneel,
All their petitions, are as truly theirs
As they themselves would owe them.Isa. Ile see what I can do.Luc. But speedily.Isa. I will about it strait;
No longer staying, but to give the Mother
Notice of my affaire: I humbly thank you:
Commend me to my brother: soon at night
Ile send him certain word of my successe.Luc. I take my leave of you.Isa. Good sir, adieu.Exeunt.Actus Secundus, Scæna Prima.Enter Angelo, Escalus, and servants, Justice.Ang. We must not make a scat-crow of the Law,
Setting it up to feare the Birds of prey,
And let it keep one shape, till custome make it
Their Pearch, and not their terrour.Esc. I, but yet
Let us be keen, and rather cut a little
Than fall, and bruise to death: alas, this Gentleman
Whom I would save, had a most noble father,
Let but your honour know
(Whom I believe to be most strait in vertue)
That in the working of your own affections,
Had Time co-heard with Place, or place with wishing,
Or that the resolute acting of our blood
Could have attain'd th'effect of your own purpose,
Whether you had not sometime in your life
Err'd in this point, which now you censure him,
And pull'd the Law upon you.Ang. 'Tis one thing to be tempted (Escalus)

Another

Another thing to fall : I not deny
 The Jury passing on the prisoners life
 May in the sworn-twelve have a thief, or two Guiltier than him they try ; what's open made to Justice,
 That Justice ceizes ; What knows the Laws
 That thieves do passe on thieves ? 'Tis very pregnant,
 The Jewel that we finde, we stoop, and take't,
 Because we see it ; but what we do not see,
 We tread upon, and never think of it.
 You may not so extenuate his offence,
 For I have had such faults ; but rather tell me
 When I, that censure him, do so offend,
 Let mine own Judgement pattern out my death,
 And nothing come in partiall. Sir, he must die.

Enter Provost.

Esc. Be it as your wisdom will.

Ang. Where is the Provost ?

Pro. Here if it like your Honour.

Ang. See that Claudio

Be executed by nine to morrow morning,
 Bring him his Confessor, let him be prepar'd ;
 For that's the utmost of his Pilgrimage.

Esc. Well : heaven forgive him ; and forgive us all :

Some rise by sinne, and some by vertue fall :

Some Run from brakes of Ice, and answer none,
 And some condemned for a fault alone.

Enter Elbow, Froth, Clowne, Officers.

Elb. Come, bring them away : if these be good people in a Common-weale, that do nothing but use their abufes in common houses, I know no law : bring them away.

Ang. How now sir, what's your name ? And what's the matter ?

Elb. If it please your honour, I am the poor Dukes Constable, and my name is Elbow ; I do leane upon Justice sir, and do bring in here before your good honour, two notorious Benefactors.

Ang. Benefactors ? Well : What Benefactors are they ?
 Are they not Malefactors ?

Elb. If it please your honour, I know not well what they are : But precise villaines they are, that I am sure of,
 and voyd of all prophanation in the world, that good Christians ought to have.

Esc. This comes off well : here's a wise Officer.

Ang. Go to : What quality are they of ? Elbow is your name ?

Why do't thou not speak Elbow ?

Clow. He cannot sir : he's out at Elbow.

Ang. What are you sir ?

Elb. He sir, a Tapster sir : parcell Bawd : one that serves a bad woman : whose house sir was (as they say) pluckt down in the Suburbs : and now she professes a hot-house ; which, I think is a very ill house too.

Esc. How know you that ?

Elb. My wife sir, whom I detest before heaven and your honour.

Esc. How ? thy wife ?

Elb. I sir : whom I thank heaven is an honest woman.

Esc. Do't thou detest her therefore ?

Elb. I say sir, I will detest my self also, as well as she that this house, if it be not a Bawds house, it is pittie of her life, for it is a naughty house.

Esc. How do't thou know that, Constable ?

Elb. Marry sir, by my wife, who, if she had been a woman Cardinally given, might have been accus'd in fornication, adultery, and all uncleannesse there.

Esc. By the womans means ?

Elb. I sir, by Mistris Over-dons means : but as she spit in his face, so she defid him.

Clow. Sir, if it please your honour, this is not so.

Elb. Prove it before these Varlers here, thou honourable man, prove it.

Esc. Do you hear how he misplaces ?

Clow. Sir, she came in great with child ; and longing (saying your honors reverence) for New'd Prewynes ; sir, we had but two in the house, which at that very instant time stood, as it were in a fruit dish, (a dish of some three pence ; your honors have seen such dishes) they are not China-dishes, but very good dishes.

Esc. Go too, go too : no matter for the dish sir.

Clow. No indeed sir not of a pin ; you are therein in the right : but, to the point : as I say, this Mistris Elbow, being (as I say) with child, and being great bellied, and longing
 (as I said) for Prewynes : and having no more in the dish
 (as I said) Master Froth here, this very man, having eaten the rest (as I said) and (as I say) paying for them very honelly : for, as you know Master Froth, I could not give you three pence again.

Fro. No indeed.

Clow. Very well : you being then (if you be remembred) cracking the stones of the foresaid Prewyns.

Fro. I, so I did indeed.

Clow. Why, very well : I telling you then (if you be remembred) that such a one, and such a one, were past cure of the thing you wot of, unlesse they kept very good dyer, as I told you.

Fro. All this is true.

Clow. Why very well then.

Esc. Come : you are a tedious fool : to the purpose :
 what was done to Elbow's wife, that he hath cause to complain of ? Come me to what was done to her.

Clow. Sir, your honour cannot come to that yet.

Esc. No sir, nor I mean it not.

Clow. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your Honours leave : And I beseech you, look into Master Froth here sir, a man of four-score pound a year ; whose Father dyed at Hallowmas : Was't not at Hallowmas Master Froth ?

Fro. All-hallond-Eve.

Clow. Why very well : I hope here be truths : he Sir, sitting (as I say) in a lower Chaire, Sir, 'twas in the bunch of Grapes, where indeed you have a delight to sit, have you not ?

Fro. I have so, because it is an open room, and good for Winter.

Clow. Why very well then : I hope here be truths.

Ang. This will last out a night in Russia,
 When nights are longest there : He take my leave,
 And leave you to the hearing of the cause ;
 Hoping you'll find good cause to whip them all. Exit.

Esc. I think no lesse : good morrow to your Lordship.
 Now sir, come on : What was done to Elbow's wife, once more ?

Clow. Once sir ? there was nothing done to her once.

Elb. I beseech you sir, ask him what this man did to my wife.

Clow. I beseech your honour, ask me.

Esc. Well sir, what did this Gentleman do to her ?

Clow. I beseech you sir, look in this Gentlemans face : good Master Froth look upon his honour ; 'tis for a good purpose ; doth your honour mark his face ?

Esc. I fir, very well.

Clo. Nay, I beseech you marke it well.

Esc. Well, I doe so.

Clo. Dorth your honour see any harme in his face?

Esc. Why no.

Clo. He be suppos'd upon a booke, his face is the worst thing about him: good then: if his face be the worst thing about him, how could Master Froth doe the Constables wise any harme? I would know that of your honour.

Esc. He's in the right (Constable) what say you to it?

Elb. First, and it like you, the house is a respected house; next, this is a respected fellow; and his Mistris is a respected woman.

Clo. By this hand fir, his wife is a more respected person then any of us all.

Elb. Varlet, thou lyest; thou lyest wicked Varlet: the time is yet to come that shee was ever respected with man, woman, or childe.

Clo. Sir, she was respected with him before he married with her.

Esc. Which is the wiser here; Justice, or Iniquity? Is this true?

Elb. O thou Caytiffe: O thou Varlet: O thou wicked Hannibal; I respected with her, before I was married to her? If ever I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your Worship thinke me the poore Dukes Officer: prove this, thou wicked Hannibal, or Ile have mine action of battery on thee.

Esc. If he tooke you a box 'oth'care, you might have your action of slander too.

Elb. Marry I thanke your good Worship for it: what is't your Worships pleasure I shall doe with this wicked Caytiffe?

Esc. Truly Officer, because he hath some offences in him, that thou wouldst discover, if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses, till thou know'st what they are.

Elb. Marry I thanke your Worship for it: Thou seest thou wicked Varlet now, what's come upon thee. Thou art to continue now thou Varlet, thou art to continue.

Esc. Where were you borne, friend?

Froth. Here in Vienna, Sir.

Esc. Are you of fourescore pounds a yeare?

Froth. Yes, and't please you fir.

Esc. So: what trade are you of, fir?

Clo. A Tapster, a poore Widdowes Tapster.

Esc. Your Mistris name?

Clo. Mistris Over-don.

Esc. Hath she had any more then one husband?

Clo. Nine, fir: Over-don by the last.

Esc. Nine? come hither to me, Master Froth; Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with Tapsters; they will draw you Master Froth, and you will hang them: get you gone, and let me heare no more of you.

Fro. I thanke your Worship: for mine owne parr, I never come into any roome in a Tap-house, but I am drawne in.

Esc. Well: no more of it Master Froth: farewell: Come you hither to me, M. Tapster: what's your name M. Tapster?

Clo. Pompey.

Esc. What else?

Clo. Bum, Sir.

Esc. Troth, and your Bum is the greatest thing about you, so that in the beaultiest sence, you are Pompey the great; Pompey, you are partly a Bawd, Pompey; howsoever you colour it being a Tapster, are you not? come, tell me true, it shall be the better for you.

Clo. Truly fir, I am a poore fellow that would live.

Esc. How would you live Pompey? by being a Bawd? what doe you thinke of the Trade Pompey? is it a lawfull Trade?

Clo. If the Law would allow it, fir.

Esc. But the Law will not allow it Pompey; nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Clo. Do's your Worship meane to geld and splay all the youth in the Citie?

Esc. No, Pompey.

Clo. Truly Sir, in my poore opinion they will too't then: if your Worship will take order for the Drabs and Knaves, you need not to feare the Bawds.

Esc. There are pretty orders beginning I can tell you: It is but heading and hanging.

Clo. If you head and hang all that offend that way but for ten yeare together; you'll be glad to give out a Commission for more heads: if this Law hold in Vienna ten yeares, Ile rent the fairest house in it after three pence a Bay: if you live to see this come to passe, say Pompey told you so.

Esc. Thanke you good Pompey; and in requitall of your Prophecie, harke you: I advise you let me not finde you before me againe upon any complaint whatsoever: no, not for dwelling where you doe: if I doe Pompey, I shall beat you to your Tent, and prove a shrewd Cesar to you: in plaine dealing Pompey, I shall have you whipt; so for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Clo. I thanke your Worship for your good counsell; but I shall follow it as the flesh and fortune shall better determine. Whip me? no, no, let Carman whip his Jade, The valiant heart's not whipt out of his Trade. Exit.

Esc. Come hither to me, Master Elbow: come hither Master Constable: how long have you been in this place of Constable?

Elb. Seven yeare and a halfe fir.

Esc. I thought by the readinesse in the office, you had continued in it some time: you say seaven yeares together.

Elb. And a halfe fir.

Esc. Alas, it hath been great paines to you: they doe you wrong to put you so oft upon't. Are there not men in your Ward sufficient to serve it?

Elb. Faith fir, few of any wit in such matters: as they are chosen, they are glad to choose me for them; I doe it for some peece of money, and goe through with all.

Esc. Looke you bring me in the names of some fixe or seven, the most sufficient of your Parish.

Elb. To your Worships house fir?

Esc. To my house: fare you well: what's a clocke, thinke you?

Just. Eleven, fir.

Esc. I pray you goe home to dinner with me.

Just. I humbly thanke you.

Esc. It grieves me for the death of Claudio, But there's no remedy.

Just. Lord Angelo is severe.

Esc. It is but needfull.

Mercy is not it selfe, that oft looks so, Pardon is still the nurse of second woe: But yet, poore Claudio; there is no remedy. Come Sir.

Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Secunda.

Enter Provost, Servant.

Ser. Hee's hearing of a Cause; he will come straight, I'll tell him of you.

Pro. Pray you do; Ile know
His pleasure, may be he will relent; alas
He hath but as offended in a dream,
All Sects, all Ages smack of this vice, and he
To dye for't?

Enter Angelo.

Ang. Now, what's the matter Provost?

Pro. Is it your will Claudio shall dye to morrow?

Ang. Did not I tell thee yea? hadst thou not order?
Why do'st thou ask again?

Pro. Left I might be too rash:
Under your good correction, I have seen
When after execution, Judgement hath Repented ore his doom.

Ang. Go to: let that be mine,
Do you your office, or give up your Place,
And you shall well be spar'd.

Pro. I crave your Honors pardon:
What shall be done sir, with the groaning Juliet?
Shee's very neer her houre.

Ang. Dispose of her
To some more fitter place: and that with speed.

Ser. Here is the sister of the man condemn'd,
Desires access to you.

Ang. Hath he a sister?

Pro. I my good Lord, a very vertuous maid,
And to be shortly of a Sister-hood,
If not already.

Ang. Well: let her be admitted,
See you the Fornicatresse be remov'd,
Let her have needfull, but not lavish means,
There shall be order for't.

Enter Lucio, and Isabella.

Pro. 'Save your Honor,

Ang. Stay a little while: y'are welcome: what's your Isab. I am a wofull Sutor to your Honor, (will?)

'Please but your Honor hear me.

Ang. Well: what's your suite?

Isab. There is a vice that most I do abhorre,
And most desire should meet the blow of justice;
For which I would not plead, but that I must,
For which I must not plead, but that I am
At warre, twixt will, and will not.

Ang. Well: the matter?

Isab. I have a brother is condemn'd to dye,
I do beseech you let it be his fault,
And not my brother.

Pro. Heaven give thee moving graces.

Ang. Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it,
Why every fault's condemn'd ere it be done:
Mine were the very Cipher of a Function
To fine the faults, whose fine stands in record,
And let go by the Actor.

Isab. Oh just, but severe law:

I had a brother then; heaven keep your honor.

Luc. Give 't not ere so: to him again, entreat him,
Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown,
You are too cold: if you should need a pin,

You could not with more tame a tongue desire it:
To him, I say.

Isab. Must he needs dye?

Ang. Maiden, no remedy.

Isab. Yes: I do think that you might pardon him,
And neither heaven, nor man grieve at the mercy.

Ang. I will not do't.

Isab. But can you if you would?

Ang. Look what I will not, that I cannot do.

Isab. But might you do't and do the world no wrong
If so your heart were touch'd with that remorse,
As mine is to him?

Ang. Hee's sentenc'd, tis too late.

Luc. You are too cold.

Isab. Too late? why so: I that do speak a word,
May call it back again: well, believe this
No ceremony that to great ones longs,
Not the Kings Crown; nor the deputed sword,
The Marshalls Truncheon, nor the Judges Robe
Become them with one half so good a grace
As mercy does: If he had been as you, and you as he,
You would have slept like him, but he like you
Would not have been so stern.

Ang. Pray you be gone.

Isab. I would to heaven I had your potency,
And you were Isabell: should it then be thus?
No: I would tell what 'twere to be a judge,
And what a prisoner.

Luc. I touch him: there's the veine.

Ang. Your brother is a forfeit of the Law,
And you but waste your words.

Isab. Alas, alas:

Why all the souls that were, were forfeit once,
And he that might the vantage best have took,
Found out the remedy: how would you be,
If he, which is the top of judgement, should
But judge you, as you are? Oh, think on that,
And mercy then will breathe within your lips
Like man new made.

Ang. Be you content, (faire Maid)

It is the Law, not I, condemn your brother,
Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son;
It should be thus with him: he must dye to morrow.

Isab. To morrow? oh, that's sudden,
Spare him, spare him:

Hee's not prepar'd for death; even for our kirchins
We kill the fowle of season: shall we serve heaven
With lesse respect then we do minister
To our grosse-selves? good, good my Lord, bethink you;
Who is it that hath di'd for this offence?
There's many have committed it.

Luc. I, well said.

Ang. The Law hath not been dead, though it hath slept
Those many had not dar'd to do that evil
If the first, that did th'Edict infringe
Had answer'd for his deed. Now 'tis awake,
Takes note of what is done, and like a Prophet
Looks in a glasse that shews what future evils
Either now, or by remissness, new conceiv'd,
And so in progress to be hatch'd, and born,
Are now to have no successive degrees,
But here they live to end.

Isab. Yet show some pitty.

Ang. I shew it most of all, when I shew Justice;
For then I pitty those I do not know,
Which a dismiss'd offence would after gaul

And

And do him tight; that answering one foul wrong
Lives not to act another. Be satisfied:

Your Brother dies to morrow; be content.

Isa. So you must be the first that gives this sentence,
And he, that suffers: Oh, it is excellent
To have a Giants strength: but it is tyrannous
To use it like a Giant.

Luc. That's well said.

Isab. Could great men thunder
As Jove himself do's, Jove would nere be quiet,
For every pelting petty Officer
Would use his heaven for thunder;
Nothing but thunder: Mercifull heaven,
Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt
Splitst the un-wedgable and gnarled Oke,
Then the soft Merril: O But man I proud man!
Drest in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
(His glassie Essence) like an angry Ape
Plays such phantastique tricks before high heaven,
As makes the Angels weep: who with our spleens
Would all themselves laugh mortall.

Luci. Oh, to him, to him wench: he will relent,
He's comming: I perceive'r.

Pro. Pray heaven she win him.

Isab. We cannot weigh our brother with our self,
Great men may jest with Saints: tis wit in them,
But in the lesse soul prophanation.

Luc. Thou'rt i' right (Gir'e) more o'that

Isab. That in the Captain's but a chollerick word,
Which in the Souldier is flat blasphemy.

Luc. Art advis'd o'that? more on'r.

Ang. Why do you put these sayings upon me?

Isab. Because Authority, though it erre like others,
Hath yet a kind of medicine in it self
That skins the vice o'th top; go to your bosom,
Knock there, and ask your heart what it doth know
That's like my brothers fault: if it confesse
A naturall guiltinesse, such as is his,
Let it not sound a thought upon your tongue
Against my brothers life.

Ang. She speaks, and 'tis such sence
That my sence breeds with it; fare you well.

Isab. Gentle my Lord, turn back.

Ang. I will bethink me: come again to morrow.

Isab. Hark, how he bribe you: good my Lord turn

Ang. How? bribe me? (back.)

Isa. I, with such gifts that heaven shall share with you.

Luc. You had mar'd all else.

Isab. Not with fond Sickles of the tested-gold,
Or stones, whose rate are either rich, or poore
As fancy values them: but with true prayers,
Th't shall be up at heaven, and enter there
Ere Sunne rise: prayers from preserved souls,
From fasting Maids, whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporall.

Ang. Well: come to me to morrow.

Luc. Go to: 'tis well; away.

Isab. Heaven keep your honor safe.

Ang. Amen.

For I am that way going to temptation,
Where prayers crosse.

Isab. At what houre to morrow,
Shall I attend your Lordship?

Ang. At any time 'fore-noone.

Isab. 'Save your Honor. Exeunt.

Ang. From thee: even from thy vertue.

What's this? What's this? is this her fault, or mine?
The Tempter, or the Tempted, who sins most? ha?

Not she: nor doth she tempt: but it is I,
That, lying by the Violet in the Sunne,
Doas the Carrion do's, not as the flowre,
Corrupt with vertuous season: Can it be,
That Modesty may more betray our sence
Then womans lightnesse? having waste ground enough,
Shall we desire to raze the Sanctuary
And pitch our evils there? oh fie, fie, fie:
What dost thou? or what art thou Angelo?
Dost thou desire her sowly, for those things
That make her good? oh, let her brother live:
Theeves for their robbery have authority,
When Judges steal themselves: what! do I love her,
That I desire to hear her speak again?
And feast upon her eyes? what is't I dream on?
Oh cunning enemy, that to catch a Saint,
With Saints dost bait thy hook: most dangerous
Is that temptation, that doth goad us on
To sin, in loving vertue: never could the Strumpet
With all her double vigor, Art, and Nature
Once stir my temper: but this vertuous Maid
Subdues me quite: Even till now
When men were fond, I smild, and wondred how. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Duke, and Provost.

Duk. Haile to you, Provost, so I think you are.

Pro. I am the Provost: what's your will, good Frier;

Duk. Bound by my charity, and my blest order;
I come to visit the afflicted spirits
Here in the prison: do me the common right
To let me see them: and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minister
To them accordingly.

Pro. I would do more then that, if more were needfull.

Enter Julier.

Look here comes one: a Gentlewoman of mine,
Who falling in the flaws of her own youth,
Hath blisterd her report: She is with child,
And he that got it, sentenc'd: a yong man,
More fit to do another such offence,
Then dye for this.

Duk. When must he dye?

Pro. As I do think to morrow.

I have provided for you, stay a while
And you shall be conducted.

Duk. Repent you (faire one) of the sin you carry?

Jul. I do; and bear the shame most patiently.

Duk. He teach you how you shall araign your conscience,
And try your penitence, if it be sound,
Or hollowly put on.

Jul. He gladly learne.

Duk. Love you the man that wrong'd you?

Jul. Yes, as I love the woman that wrong'd him.

Duk. So then it seems your most offencefull act
Was mutually committed.

Jul. Mutually.

Duk. Then was your sin of heavier kind than his.

Jul. I do confesse it, and repent it (Father.)

Duk. 'Tis

Duk. 'Tis meet so (daughter) but least you do repent
As that the sinne hath brought you to this shame,
Which sorrow is alwayes toward our selves, not heaven,
Showing we would not spare heaven, as we love it,
But as we stand in feare.

Jul. I do repent me, as it is an evill,
And take the shame with joy.

Duk. There rest:
Your partner (as I heare) must dye to morrow,
And I am going with instruction to him:
Grace go with you, Benedicite.

Jul. Must dye to morrow? oh injurious love
That respits me a life, whose very comfort
Is still a dying horror.

Pro. 'Tis pity of him.

Exit.

Exennt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Angelo.

An. When I would pray, and think, I think, and pray
To severall subjects: heaven hath my empty words,
Whilst my Invention, hearing nor my Tongue,
Anchors on Isabell: heaven in my mouth,
As if I did but only chew his name,
And in my heart: the strong and swelling evill
Of my conception: the state whereon I studied
Is like a good thing, being often read
Growne feard, and tedious: yea, my Gravity
Wherein (let no man heare me) I take pride,
Could I, with boote, change for an idle plume
Which the ayre beats for vaine: oh place! oh form!
How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit
Wrench awe from fools, and tye the wiser souls
To thy false seeming? Blood, thou art blood,
Let's write good Angell on the Devills horne,
'Tis not the devills Crest: how now? who's there?

Enter Servant.

Ser. One Isabell, a sifter, desires access to you,

Ang. Teach her the way: oh, heavens
Why doe's my blood thus muster to my heart,
Making both it unable for it self,
And dispossessing all my other parts
Of necessary fitnessse?

So play the foolish throngs with one that swoonds,
Come all to help him, and so stop the ayre
By which he should revive: and even so
The general subject to a wel-wisht King
Quit their own part, and in obsequious fondnesse
Crowd to his presence, where their untaught love
Must needs appeare offence: how now faire Maid?

Enter Isabella.

Isa. I am come to know your pleasure. (me,

An. That you might know it, would much better please
Then to demand what 'tis: your brother cannot live.

Isa. Even so: heaven keep your Honor.

An. Yet may he live a while: and it may be
As long as you, or I: yet he must dye.

Isab. Under your Sentence?

Ang. Yea.

Isab. When, I beseech you? that in his Reprieve
(Longer, or shorter) he may be so fitted
That, his soul sicken not.

Ang. Ha? fie, these filthy vices: It were as good

To pardon him, that hath from nature stolne
A man already made, as to remit
Their sawcy sweetnesse, that do coyne heavens Image
In stamps that are forbid: 'tis all as easie,
Falsely to take away a life true made,
As to put mettle in-restrained means
To make a false one.

Isab. 'Tis set down so in heaven, but not in earth.

Ang. Say you so: then I shall poze you quickly.
Which had you rather, that the most just Law
Now took your brothers life, and to redeem him
Give up your body to such sweet uncleannesse,
As she that he hath staid?

Isab. Sir, believe this,
I had rather give my body, than my soul.

Ang. I talk not of your soul: our compell'd sinnes
Stand more for number, than for accompt.

Isab. How say you?

Ang. Nay Ile not warrant that: for I can speak
Against the thing I say: Answer to this,
I (now the voyce of the recorded Law)
Pronounce a sentence on your brothers life,
Might there not be a charity in sinne,
To save this brothers life?

Isab. Please you to do't,
Ile take it as a perill to my soul,
It is no sinne at all, but charity.

Ang. Pleas'd you to do't, at perill of your soul
Were equall poize of sinne, and charity.

Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be sinne
Heaven let me beare it; you granting of my suit,
If that be sinne, Ile make it my Morne-prayer,
To have it added to the faults of mine,
And nothing of your answer.

Ang. Nay, but hear me.
Your sence pursues not mine: either you are ignorant,
Or seem so crafty; and that's not good.

Isab. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good,
But graciously to know I am no better.

Ang. Thus wisdom wishes to appear most bright,
When it doth tax it self: As these black Masques
Proclaime an en-shield beauty ten times louder
Than beauty could displayed: But mark me,
To be received plain, Ile speak more grosse:
Your brother is to dye.

Isab. So.

Ang. And his offence is so, as it appeares,
Accountant to the Law, upon that paine.

Isab. True.

Ang. Admit no other way to save his life
(As I subscribe not that, nor any other,
But in the losse of question) that you, his Sitter,
Finding your self desir'd of such a person,
Whose credit with the Judge, or own great place,
Could fetch your brother from the Mannacles
Of the all-building Law: and that there were
No earthly mean to save him, but that either
You must lay down the treasures of your body,
To this supposed, or else to let him suffer:
What would you do?

Isab. As much for my poor Brother, as my self;
That is: were I under the tearmes of death,
Th'impression of keen whips, I'd wear as Rubies,
And strip my self to death, as to a bed,
That longing have been sick for, ere I'd yeeld
My body up to shame.

Ang. Then

Ang. Then must your brother dye.

Isa. And 'twere the cheaper way :
Better it were a brother di'd at once,
Then that a sifter by redeeming him
Should dye for ever.

Ang. Were not you then as cruell as the Sentence,
That you have slander'd so ?

Isa. Ignominy in ranfome, and free pardon
Are of two houses : lawfull mercy,
Is nothing kin to foul redemption.

Ang. You seem'd of late to make the Law a tyrant,
And rather prov'd the sliding of your brother
A merriment, than a vice.

Isa. Oh pardon me my Lord, it oft fals out
To have, what we would have,
We speak not what we mean ;
I something do excuse the thing I hate,
For his advantage that I dearly love.

Ang. We are all fraile.

Isa. Else let my brother dye,
If not a feodary but only he
Owe, and succeed thy weaknesse.

Ang. Nay, women are fraile too.

Isa. I, as the glasses where they view themselves,
Which are as easie broke as they make formes :
Women ? Help heaven ; men their creation marre
In profiting by them : Nay, call us ten times fraile,
For we are soft, as our complexions are,
And credulous to false prints.

Ang. I think it well :

And from this testimony of your own sex
(Since I suppose we are made to be no stronger
Then faults may shake our frames) let me be bold ;
I do arrest your words ; Be that you are,
That is, a woman ; if you be more, you're none.
If you be one (as you are well exprest
By all externall warrants) shew it now,
By putting on the destin'd Livery.

Isa. I have no tongue but one ; gentle my Lord,
Let me entreat you speak the former language.

Ang. Plainly conceive I love you.

Isa. My brother did love Juliet.
And you tell me that he shall dye for't.

Ang. He shall not Isabell if you give me love.

Isa. I know your vertue hath a licence in't,
Which seems a little fouler than it is,
To pluck on others.

Ang. Believe me on mine Honor,
My words expresse my purpose.

Isa. Ha ? Little honor, to be much believ'd,
And most pernicious purpose : Seeming, seeming.
I will proclaime thee Angelo, look for't.
Signe me a present pardon for my brother,
Or with an out-streicht throate Ile tell the world aloud
What man thou art.

Ang. Who will believe thee Isabell ?
My unsoild name, th'aulterenesse of my life,
My vouch against you, and my place i'th State,
Will so your accusation over-weigh,
That you shall stifle in your own report,
And smell of calumny. I have begun,
And now I give my sensuall race, the reinie,
Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite,
Lay by all nicety, and prolixious blushes
That banish what they sue for : Redeem thy brother,
By yeelding up thy body to my will,

Or else he must not only dye the death,
But thy unkindnesse shall his death draw out
To lingring sufferance : Answer me to morrow,
Or by the affection that now guides me most,
Ile prove a Tyrant to him. As for you,
Say what you can, my false, ore-weighs your true: Exit.

Isa. To whom should I complain ? Did I tell this,
Who would believe me ? O perilous mouthes
That bear in them, one and the self-same tongue,
Either of condemnation, or approofe,
Bidding the Law make curfie to their will,
Hooking both right and wrong to th'appetite,
To follow as it draws. Ile to my brother,
Though he hath false by prompture of the blood,
Yet hath he in him such a mind of Honor,
That had he twenty heads to tender down
On twenty bloody blocks, hee'd yeeld them up,
Before his sifter should her body stoop
To such abhord pollution.
Then Isabell live chaste, and brother dye ;
" More than our Brother, is our Chastity.
Ile tell him yet of Angelo's request,
And fit his mind to death, for his souls rest. Exit.

Actus Tertius, Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Claudio, and Provost.

Duk. So then you hope of pardon from lord Angelo ?

Claudio. The miserable have no other medicine
But only hope : I have hope to live, and am prepar'd to dye.

Duke. Be absolute for death : either death or life
Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with life :
If I do loose thee, I do loose a thing
That none but fools would keep : a breath thou art,
Servile to all the skyie-influences,
That dost this habitation where thou keepst
Hourly afflict : Meerely, thou art deaths fool,
For him thou labourst by thy flight to shun,
And yet runst toward him still. Thou art not noble,
For all th'accommodations that thou bearest,
Are nurs'd by basenesse : Thou'rt by no means valiant,
For thou dost feare the soft and tender fork
Of a poor worm : thy best of rest is sleep,
And that thou oft provoakst, yet grossely fearst
Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thy self,
For thou exists on many a thousand graines
That issue out of dust. Happy thou art not,
For what thou hast nor, still thou striv'st to get,
And what thou hast, forgetst. Thou art not certain,
For thy complexion shifts to strange effects,
After the Moore : if thou art rich, thou'rt poor,
For like an Asse, whose back with Ingots bowes ;
Thou bearest thy heavy riches but a journey,
And death unloads thee : Friend hast thou none.
For thine own bowels which do call thee, fire
The meere effusion of thy proper loynes,
Do curse the Gout, Sarpego, and the Rheume
For ending thee no sooner. Thou hast not youth, nor age
But as it were an after-dinners sleep
Dreaming on both, for all thy blessed youth
Becomes as aged, and doth beg the almes
Of palsied-Eld : and when thou art old, and rich

Thou

Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty
To make thy riches pleasant : what's yet in this
That bears the name of life ? Yet in this life
Lye hid moe thousand deaths ; yet death we feare
That makes these oddes, all even.

Cla. I humbly thank you.
To sue to live, I find I seek to dye,
And seeking death, find life : Let it come on.

Enter Isabella.

Isab. What hoa ? Peace here ; Grace, and good company.

Pro. Who's there ? Come in, the wish deserves a welcome.

Duk. Dear sir, ere long Ile visit you again.

Cla. Most holy sir, I thank you.

Isa. My businesse is a word or two with Claudio.

Pro. And very welcome : look Signior, here's your sister.

Duk. Provost, a word with you.

Pro. As many as you please.

Duk. Bring them to speak, where I may be conceal'd, yet hear them. Exeunt.

Cla. Now sister, what's the comfort ?

Isa. Why,

As all comforts are : most good, most good indeed,
Lord Angelo having affaires to heaven
Intends you for his swift Ambassador,
Where you shall be an everlasting Leiger ;
Therefore your best appointment make with speed,
To Morrow you set on.

Cla. Is there no remedy ?

Isa. None but such remedy, as to save a head
To cleave a heart in twaine :

Cla. But is there any ?

Isa. Yes brother, you may live ;
There is a devillish mercy in the Judge,
If you't implore it, that will free your life,
But fetter you till death.

Cla. Perpetuall durance !

Isa. I jult, perpetuall durance, a restraint
Through all the worlds vastidity you had
To a determin'd scope.

Cla. But in what nature ?

Isab. In such a one, as you consenting too't,
Would bark your honor from that trunk you bear,
And leave you naked.

Cla. Let me know the point.

Isa. Oh, I do feare thee Claudio, and I quake,
Least thou a feavorous life shouldst entertain,
And six or seven winters more respect
Than a perpetuall honor. Dar'tt thou dye ?
The sence of death is most in apprehension,
And the poor Beetle that we tread upon
In corporall sufferance, finds a pang as great,
As when a Giant dyes.

Cla. Why give you me this shame ?
Think you I can a resolution fetch
From flowry rendernesse ? If I must dye,
I will encounter darknesse as a bride,
And hugge it in mine armes.

Isa. There spake my brother : there my fathers grave
Did utter forth a voyce. Yes, thou must dye :
Thou art too noble, to conserve a life
In base appliances. This outward fainted Deputy,
Whose setled visage, and deliberate word
Nips youth i'th head, and follies doth emmew

As Falcon doth the fowle : is yet a devill :
His filth within being cast, he would appear
A pond as deep as hell.

Cla. The Princely, Angelo ?

Isa. Oh 'tis the cunning Livery of hell,
The damned body to invelt, and cover
In Princely gardes ; dost thou think Claudio,
If I would yeeld him my virginity
Thou might'it be freed ?

Cla. Oh heavens, it cannot be.

Isa. Yes, he would giv't thee ; from this ranke offence
So to offend him still. This night's the time
That I should do what I abhorre to name,
Or else thou diest to morrow,

Cla. Thou shalt not do't.

Isa. O, were it but my life,
I'll throw it down for your deliverance
As frankly as a pin.

Cla. Thanks dear Isabell.

Isa. Be ready Claudio, for your death to morrow.

Cla. Yes. Has he affections in him.
That thus can make him bite the Law by th'nose,
When he would force it ? sure it is no sinne,
Or of the deadly seven it is the least,

Isa. Which is the least ?

Cla. If it were damnable, he being so wise,
Why would he for the momentary trick
Be perdurably fin'de ? Oh Isabell.

Isa. What sayes my brother ?

Cla. Death is a fearfull thing.

Isa. And shamed life, a hatefull.

Cla. I, but to dye, and go we know not where,
To lye in cold obstruction, and to rot,
This sensible warme motion, to become
A kneaded clod ; and the delighted spirit
To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside
In thrilling region of thick-ribbed Ice,
To be imprison'd in the viewlesse windes
And blown with restless violence round about
The pendant world : or to be worse than worst
Of those, that lawlesse and incertain thought,
Imagine howling, 'tis too horrible.
The weariest, and most loathed worldly life
That Age, Ache, penury, and imprisonment
Can lay on nature, is a Paradise
To what we feare of death.

Isa. Alas, alas.

Cla. Sweet Sister, let me live.

What sinne you do, to save a brothers life,
Nature dispenses with the deed so farre,
That it becomes a vertue.

Isa. Oh you beast !

Oh faithlesse Coward ! oh dishonest wretch,
Wilt thou be made a man, out of my vice ?
Is't not a kind of incest, to take life
From thine own sisters shame ? What should I think,
Heaven shield : my Mother plaid my Father faire :
For such a warped slip of wildernesse
Nere issu'd from his blood. Take my defiance,
Dye, perish : Might but my bending down
Reprieve thee from thy fate, it should proceed.
Ile pray a thousand prayers for thy death ;
No word to save thee.

Cla. Nay hear me Isabell.

Isa. Oh, fie, fie, fie,
Thy sinn's not accidentall, but a Trade ;

Mercy to thee would prove it self a Bawd,
'Tis best that thou diest quickly.

Cla. Oh hear me Isabella.

Duke steps in.

Duk. Vouchsafe a word, yong sister, but one word,

Isa. What is your Will?

Duk. Might you dispense with your leisure, I would by and by have some speech with you : the satisfaction I would require, is likewise your own benefit.

Isa. I have no superfluous leisure, my stay must be stolen out of other affaires : but I will attend you a while.

Duk. Son, I have over-heard what hath past between you and your sister. Angelo had never the purpose to corrupt her ; only he hath made an assay of her vertue, to practise his judgement with the disposition of natures. She (having the truth of honor in her) hath made him that gracious deniall, which he is most glad to receive : I am Confessor to Angelo, and I know this to be true, therefore prepare your self to death : do not satisfie your resolution with hopes that are fallible, to morrow you must dye, go to your knees, and make ready.

Cla. Let me ask my sister pardon, I am so out of love with life, that I will sue to be rid of it. Exit.

Duk. Hold you there : farewell : Provost, a word with you.

Pro. What's your will (father?)

Duk. That now you are come, you will be gone : leave me a while with the Maid, my mind promises with my habit, no losse shall touch her by my company.

Pro. In good time.

Exit.

Duk. The hand that hath made you faire, hath made you good : the goodnesse that is cheap in beauty, makes beauty brief in goodnesse ; but grace being the soul of your complexion, shall keep the body of it ever faire : the assault that Angelo hath made to you, Fortune hath conva'd to my understanding ; and but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I should wonder at Angelo : how will you do to content this Substitute, and to save your brother?

Isab. I am now going to resolve him : I had rather my brother dye by the Law, than my sonne should be unlawfully born. But (oh) how much is the good Duke deceiv'd in Angelo : if ever he return, and I can speak to him, I will open my lips in vaine, or discover his government.

Duk. That shall not be much amisse : yet as the matter now stands, he will avoyd your accusation : he made triall of you only. Therefore fasten your eare on my advisings, to the love I have in doing good ; a remedy presents it self. I do make my self beleve that you may most uprightously do a poor wronged Lady a merited benefit : redeem your brother from the angry Law ; do no staine to your own gracious person, and much please the absent Duke, if peradventure he shall ever returne to have hearing of this businesse.

Isab. Let me hear you speak farther ; I have spirit to do any thing that appears not foule in the truth of my spirit.

Duk. Vertue is bold, and goodnesse never fearfull : Have you not heard speak of Mariana the sister of Fredericke the great Souldier, who miscarried at Sea?

Isab. I have heard of the Lady, and good words went with her name !

Duk. She should this Angelo have married ; was affianced to her by oath, and the nuptial appointed : between which time of the contract, and limit of the solemnity, her brother Fredericke was wrackt at Sea, having in that perilhed vessell, the dowry of his siter : but mark how heavily this befell to the poor Gentlewoman, there she lost a noble and renowned brother, in his love toward her, ever most kind and naturall : with him the portion and sinew of her fortune, her marriage dowry : with both, her combynate-husband, this well seeming Angelo.

Isab. Can this be so? did Angelo so leave her?

Duk. Lest her in her teares, and dried not one of them with his comfort : swallowed his vows whole, pretending in her discoveries of dishonor : in few words bestow'd her on her own lamentation, which she yet wears for his sake : and he, a marble to her eares, is washed with them but relents not.

Isab. What a merit were it in death to take this poor maid from the world? what corruption in this life, that it will let this man live? But how out of this can she avale?

Duk. It is a rupture that you may easily heal : and the cure of it not only saves your brother, but keeps you from dishonor in doing it.

Isab. Shew me how (good father.)

Duk. This forenamed Maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection : his unjust unkindnesse (that in all reason should have quenched her love) hath (like an impediment in the Current) made it more violent and unruly : Go you to Angelo, answer his requiring with a plausible obedience, agree with his demands to the point : only referre your selfe to this advantage ; first, that your stay with him may not be long : that the time may have all shadow, and silence in it : and the place answer to convenience : this being granted in course, and now follows all : we shall advise this wronged Maid to steed up your appointment, go in your place : if the encounter acknowledge it selfe hereafter, it may compell him to her recompence ; and here, by this is your brother saved, your honor unrainted, the poor Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt Deputy scaled. The Maid will I frame, and make fit for his attempt : if you think well to carry this as you may, the doublenesse of the benefit defends the deceit from reproofe. What think you of it?

Isab. The image of it gives me content already, and I trust it will grow to a most prosperous perfection.

Duk. It lyes much in your holding up : haste you speedily to Angelo ; if for this night he intreat you to his bed, give him promise of satisfaction : I will presently to St. Lukes, there at the moated-Grange resides this dejected Mariana ; at that place call upon me, and dispatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.

Isa. I thank you for this comfort : fare you well good father. Exit.

Enter Elbow, Clowne, Officers.

El. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needs buy and sell men and women like beasts, we shall have all the world drink brown and white bastard.

Duk. Oh heavens, what stufte is here?

Clow. 'Twas never merry world since of two usuries the merriest was put downe, and the worser allow'd by order of Law ; a fur'd gowne to keep him warme ; and fur'd with Fox and Lamb-skins too, to signifie, that craft being richer than innocency, stands for the facing.

Elbow. Come your way Sir ; blesse you good father Frier.

Duk. And you good brother father : what offence hath this man made you, Sir?

Elb. Marry

Elb. Marry sir, he hath offended the Law; and Sir, we take him to be a Theefe too sir: for we have found upon him Sir, a strange Pick-lock, which we have sent to the Deputy.

Duk. Fye, firrah, a Bawd, a wicked bawd, The evill that thou causest to be done, That is thy means to live. Do thou but think What 'tis to cram a maw, or cloath a back From such a filthy vice: say to thy self, From their abominable and beastly touches I drink, I eat away my self, and live: Canst thou believe thy living is a life, So stinkingly depending? Go mend, go mend.

Clo. Indeed, it do's stink in some sort, Sir: But yet Sir I would prove—

Duk. Nay, if the devill have given thee proofes for sin Thou wilt prove his. Take him to prison Officer: Correction, and instruction must both work Ere this rude beast will profit.

Elb. He must before the Deputy Sir, he ha's given him warning: the Deputy cannot abide a Whore-ma-ster: if he be a Whore-monger, and comes before him, he were as good goe a mile on his errand.

Duk. That we were all, as some would seem to be Free from our faults, as faults from seeming free.

Enter Lucio.

Elb. His neck will come to your waist, a Cord sir.

Clo. I spy comfort, I cry baile: Here's a Gentleman, and a friend of mine.

Luc. How now noble Pompey? What, at the wheels of Caesar? Art thou led in triumph? What is there none of Pigmaliions Images newly made woman to be had now, for putting the hand in the pocket, and extracting clutch'd? What reply? Ha? What saist thou to this Tune, Mat-ter, and Method? Is't not drown'd i'th last raine? Ha? What saist thou Trot? Is the world as it was Man? Which is the way? Is it sad, and few words? Or how? The trick of it?

Duk. Still thus, and thus: Still worse?

Luc. How doth my dear Morsell? thy Mistris? Pro-cures she still? Ha?

Clo. Troth sir, she hath eaten up all her Beefe, and she is her self in the tub.

Luc. Why 'tis good: It is the right of it: it must be so. Ever your fresh Whore, and your powder'd Baud, an unshun'd consequence, it must be so. Art going to pri-son Pompey?

Clo. Yes faith sir.

Luc. Why 'tis not amisse Pompey: farewell: go say I sent thee thither: for debt Pompey? Or how?

Elb. For being a baud, for being a baud.

Luc. Well, then imprison him: If imprisonment be the due of a baud, why 'tis his right. Baud is he doubt-lesse, and of antiquity too: Baud born. Farewell good Pompey: Commend me to the prison Pompey, you will turn good husband now Pompey, you will keep the house.

Clo. I hope Sir, your good Worship will be my baile?

Luc. No indeed will I not Pompey, it is not the wear: I will pray (Pompey) to encrease your bondage if you take it not patiently: Why, your mettle is the more: Adieu trusty Pompey.

Blesse you Friar.

Duk. And you.

Luc. Do's Bridget paint still, Pompey? Ha?

Elb. Come your wayes sir, come.

Clo. You will not baile me then Sir?

Luc. Then Pompey, nor now: what news abroad Fri-er? What news?

Elb. Come your wayes sir, come.

Luc. Go to kennell (Pompey) go: What news Fryer of the Duke?

Exeunt.

Duke. I know none: can you tell me of any?

Luc. Some say he is with the Emperour of Russia: other some, he is in Rome: but where is he think you?

Duke. I know not where: but wheresoever, I wish him well.

Luc. It was a mad fantasticall trick of him to steal from the State, and usurp the beggery he was never born to: Lord Angelo Dukes it well in his absence: he puts transgression root.

Duke. He do's well in't.

Luc. A little more lenitie to Lechery would do no harm in him: Something too crabbed that way, Fryer.

Duke. It is too generall a vice, and severity must cure it.

Luc. Yes in good sooth, the vice is of a great kindred; it is well allied, but it is impossible to extirp it quite, Friar, till eating and drinking be put down. They say this Angelo was not made by Man and Woman, after this down-right way of Creation: is it true, think you?

Duke. How should he be made then?

Luc. Some report, a Sea-miid spawn'd him. Some, that he was begot between two Stock-fishes. But it is certain, that when he makes water, his Urine is con-geal'd ice, that I know to be true; and he is a motion generative, that's infallible.

Duk. You are pleasant sir, and speak apace.

Luc. Why, what a ruthless thing is this in him, for the rebellion of a Cod-piece, to take away the life of a man? Would the Duke that is absent have done this? Ere he would have hang'd a man for the getting a hun-dred Bastards, he would have paid for the Nursing a thousand. He had some feeling of the sport, he knew the service, and that instructed him to mercy.

Duk. I never heard the absent Duke much detected for Women, he was not inclin'd that way.

Luc. Oh, Sir, you are deceiv'd.

Duk. 'Tis not possible.

Luc. Who, not the Duke? Yes, your beggar of fifty: and his use was, to put a ducket in her Clack-dish; the Duke had Crochets in him. He would be drunk too, that let me inform you.

Duk. You do him wrong, surely.

Luc. Sir, I was an inward of his: a shy fellow was the Duke, and I believe I know the cause of his with-drawing.

Duke. What (I prethee) might be the cause?

Luc. No, pardon: 'Tis a secret must be lockt with-in the teeth and the lips: but this I can let you under-stand, the greater file of the subject held the Duke to be wise.

Duk. Wise? Why no question but he was.

Luc. A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow.

Duk. Either this is envy in you, folly, or mistaking: The very stream of his life, and the business he hath helmed, must upon a warranted need, give him a better bringings forth, and he shall appear to the envious, a Scholler, a Statesman, and a Souldier: therefore you speak unskillfully: or, if your knowledge be more, it is much darkned in your malice.

G

Luc.

Luc. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

Duk. Love talks with better knowledge, and knowledge with dear love.

Luc. Come Sir, I know what I know.

Duk. I can hardly believe that, since you know not what you speak. But if ever the Duke returne (as our prayers are he may) let me desire you to make your answer before him: if it be honest you have spoke, you have courage to maintain it; I am bound to call upon you, and I pray you your name?

Luc. Sir my name is Lucio, well known to the Duke.

Duk. He shall know you better Sir, if I may live to report you.

Luc. I feare you not.

Duk. O, you hope the Duke will returne no more: or you imagine me too unhurtfull an opposite: but indeed I can do you little harme: You'll for-swear this again?

Luc. He be hang'd first: Thou art deceiv'd in me Friar. But no more of this. Canst thou tell if Claudio dye to morrow, or no?

Duk. Why should he dye Sir?

Luc. Why? For filling a bottle with a Tun-dish: I would the Duke we talke of were return'd again: this ungentur'd Agent will un-people the Province with Continency. Sparrows must not build in his house-eeves, because they are lecherous: The Duke yet would have dark deeds darkly answered, he would never bring them to light: would he were return'd. Marry this Claudio is condemned for untrussing. Farewell good Friar, I prethee pray for me: The Duke (I say to thee againe) would eat Mutton on Fridayes. He's now past it, yet (and I say to thee) he would mouth with a beggar, though the smelt brown-bread and Garlick: say that I said so: Farewell.

Exit.

Duk. No might, nor greatpesse in mortality Can censure scape: Back-wounding calumny The whitest vertue strikes, What King so strong, Can tye the gall up in the slanderous tongue? But who comes here?

Enter Escalus, Provost, and Baud.

Esc. Go, away with her to prison.

Baud. Good my Lord be good to me, your Honor is accounted a mercifull man: good my Lord.

Esc. Double, and trebble admonition, and still forfeir in the same kind? This would make mercy swear and play the Tyrant.

Pro. A Baud of eleven years continuance, may it please your Honor.

Baud. My Lord, this is one Lucio's information against me, Mistris Kate Keep-downe was with child by him in the Dukes time, he promis'd her marriage: his Child is a year and a quarter old come Philip and Jacob: I have kept it my self; and see how he goes about to abuse me.

Esc. That fellow is a fellow of much License: Let him be call'd before us. Away with her to prison: Go to, no more words. Provost, my Brother Angelo will not be alter'd, Claudio must dye to morrow: Let him be furnish'd with Divines, and have all charitable preparation. If my brother wrought by my pittie, it should not be so with him.

Pro. So please you, this Friar hath been with him, and advis'd him for th'entertainment of death.

Esc. Good even, good father.

Duk. Blisse, and goodnesse on you.

Esc. Of whence are you?

Duk. Not of this Country, though my chance is now To use it for my time: I am a brother Of gracious Order, late come from the Sea, In speciall businesse from his Holinesse.

Esc. What newes abroad i'th World?

Duk. None, but that there is so great a Feavor on goodnesse, that the dissolution of it mult cure it. Novelty is only in request, and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of course, as it is vertuous to be constant in any undertaking. There is scarce truth enough alive to make Societies secure, but Security enough to make Fellowships accurst. Much upon this riddle runs the wisdom of the world: This newes is old enough, yet it is every dayes newes. I pray you Sir, of what disposition was the Duke?

Esc. One, that above all other strifes, Contended especially to know himself.

Duk. What pleasure was he given to?

Esc. Rather rejoycing to see another merry, than merry at any thing which profest to make him rejoyce. A Gentleman of all temperance. But leave him to his events, with a prayer they may prove prosperous; and let me desire to know, how you find Claudio prepar'd? I am made to understand, that you have lent him visitation.

Duk. He professes to have received no sinister measure from his Judge, but most willingly humbles himself to the determination of Justice: yet had he framed to himself (by the instruction of his frailty) many deceiving promises of life, which I (by my good leisure) have discredited to him, and now is he resolv'd to dye.

Esc. You have paid the heavens your Function, and the prisoner the very debt of your Calling. I have labour'd for the poor Gentleman, to the extremest shore of my modesty, but my Brother-Justice have I found so severe, that he hath forc'd me to tell him, he is indeed Justice.

Duk. If his own life, Answer the straitnesse of his proceeding, It shall become him well: wherein if he chance to faile, he hath sentenc'd himself.

Esc. I am going to visit the prisoner, Fare you well. Exit.

Duk. Peace be with you.

He who the sword of Heaven will beare,
Should be as holy, as severe:
Pattern in himself to know,
Grace to stand, and Vertue go:
More, nor lesse to others paying,
Then by self-offences weighing.
Shame to him, whose cruell striking,
Kils for faults of his own liking:
Twice trebble shame on Angelo,
To weed my vice, and let his grow.
Oh, what may Man within him hide,
Though Angell on the outward side?
How may likeness made in crimes,
Making practise on the Times,
To draw with idle Spiders strings
Most ponderous and substantiall things?
Craft against vice, I must apply.
With Angelo to night shall lye
His old betroathed (but despised):
So disguise shall by th'disguised
Pay with falshood, false exacting,
And performe an old contracting.

Exit.
Alas

Actus Quartus, Scena Prima.

Enter Mariana, and Boy singing.

Sono. Take, oh take those lips away, that so sweetly were forsworn,
 And those eyes : the break of day lights that do mislead the Morn;
 But my kisses bring again, bring again,
 Seals of love, but seal'd in vain, seal'd in vain.

Enter Duke.

Mari. Break off thy song, and halte thee quick away,
 Here comes a man of comfort, whose advise
 Hath often still'd my brawling discontent.
 I cry you mercy, Sir, and well could wish
 You had not found me here so musically.
 Let me excuse me, and believe me so,
 My mirth is much displeas'd, but pleas'd my wo.

Duke. 'Tis good : though Musick oft hath such a charm
 To make bad, good ; and good provoke to harm.
 I pray you tell me, hath any body enquir'd for me here to day ? much upon this time have I promis'd here to meet.

Mari. You have not been enquir'd after : I have sat here all day.

Enter Isabell.

Duke. I do constantly believe you : the time is come even now. I shall crave your forbearance a little, may be
 I will call upon you anon for some advantage to your self.

Mari. I am alwayes bound to you.

Exit.

Duke. Very well mer, and well come :
 What is the newes from this good Deputy ?

Isa. He hath a Garden circummur'd with Brick,
 Whose western side is with a Vineyard back't ;
 And to that Vineyard is a planched gate,
 That makes his opening with this bigger Key :
 This other doth command a little door,
 Which from the Vineyard to the Garden leads,
 There have I made my promise, upon the Heavy middle of the night, to call upon him.

Duke. But shall you on your knowledge find this way ?

Isa. I have ran a due and wary note upon't,
 With whispering, and most guilty diligence,
 In action all of precept, he did show me
 The way twice ore.

Duke. Are there no other tokens
 Between you'reed, concerning her observance ?

Isa. No : none but only a repair in' dark,
 And that I have possesst him, my most stay
 Can be but brief : for I have made him know,
 I have a Servant comes with me along,
 That stays upon me, whose perswasion is,
 I come about my brother,

Duke. 'Tis well born up.
 I have not yet made known to Mariana.

Enter Mariana.

A word of this : what hoa, within ; come forth,
 I pray you be acquainted with this Maid,
 She comes to do you good.

Isa. I do desire the like.

Duke. Do you perswade your self that I respect you ?

Mari. Good Fryer, I know you do, and have found it.

Duke. Take then this your companion by the hand,
 Who hath a story ready for your care :
 I shall attend your leisure, but make haste
 The vaporous night approaches.

Mari. Wilt please you walk aside ?

Exit.

Duke. Oh Place, and greatness : millions of false eyes
 Are stuck upon thee : volumes of report
 Run with these false, and most contrarious Quests
 Upon thy doings : thousand escapes of wit
 Make thee the father of their idle dream,
 And rack thee in their fancies. Welcome, how agreed ?

Enter Mariana, and Isabell.

Isa. She'll take the enterprize upon her, father,
 If you advise it.

Duke. It is not my consent,
 But my entreaty too.

Isa. Little have you to say
 When you depart from him, but soft and low,
 Remember now my brother,

Mar. Feare me not.

Duke. Nor gentle daughter, feare you not at all :
 He is your husband on a pre-contract :
 To bring you thus together 'tis no sinne,
 Sith that the Justice of your title to him
 Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let us go,
 Our Corn's to reap, for yet our Tithes to sow. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Provost, and Clown.

Pro. Come hither sirra ; can you cut off a mans head ?

Clo. If the man be a Bachelor Sir, I can :
 But if he be a married man, he's his wives head,
 And I can never cut off a womans head.

Pro. Come sir, leave me your snatches, and yeeld me a direct answer. To morrow morning are to dye Claudio, and Barnardine : here is in our prison a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper, if you will take it on you to assist him, it shall redeem you from your Gyves : if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment, and your deliverance with an unpittied whipping ;
 for you have been a notorious baud.

Clo. Sir, I have been an unlawfull baud, time out of mind, but yet I will be content to be a lawfull hangman :
 I would be glad to receive some instruction from my fellow partner.

Pro. What hoa, Abhorson : where's Abhorson there ?Enter Abhorson.

Abho. Do you call sir ?

Pro. Sirra, here's a fellow will help you to morrow in your execution : if you think it meet, compound with him by the year, and let him abide here with you, if nor, use him for the present, and dismiss him, he cannot plead his estimation with you : he hath been a Baud.

Abho. A Baud Sir ? fie upon him, he will discredit our myttery.

Pro. Go too Sir, you waigh equally ; a feather will turn the Scale. Exit.

Clo. Pray sir, by your good favour : for surely sir, a good favour you have, but that you have a hanging look :
 Do you call sir, your occupation a Myttery ?

Abbo. I, Sir, a Mystery.

Clo. Painting Sir, I have heard say, is a Mystery : and your Whores sit, being members of my occupation, using painting, do prove my Occupation, a Mystery : but what Mystery there should be in hanging, if I should be hang'd, I cannot imagine.

Abbo. Sir, it is a Mystery.

Clo. Proove.

Abbo. Every true mans apparrell fits your Theefe.

Clo. If it be too little for your Theefe, your true man thinks it big enough. If it be too big for your Theefe, your Theefe thinks it little enough : So every true mans apparrell fits your Theefe.

Enter Provost.

Pro. Are you agreed ?

Clo. Sir, I will serve him : For I do find your Hangman is a more penitent Trade than your Baud : he doth oftner ask forgiveness.

Pro. You sirra, provide your Block and your Axe to morrow, foure a clock.

Abbo. Come on (Baud) I will instruct thee in my Trade : follow.

Clo. I do desire to learne sir : and I hope, if you have occasion to use me for your own turne, you shall find me y^eare. For truly Sir, for your kindnesse, I owe you a good turne.

Exit.

Pro. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio : Th'one has my pittie ; not a jot the other, Being a Murtherer, though he were my brother.

Enter Claudio.

Look, here's the Warrant Claudio, for thy death, 'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to morrow Thou must be made immortall. Where's Barnardine ?

Cla. As fast lock'd up in sleep, as guiltlesse labour, When it lyes starkely in the Travellers bones. He will not awake.

Pro. Who can do good on him ?

Well, go, prepare your self. But hark, what noise ? Heaven give your spirits comfort : by, and by, I hope it is some pardon, or reprieve For the most gentle Claudio. Welcome father.

Enter Duke.

Duke. The best, and wholesomst spirits of the night, Invellop you, good Provost : who call'd here of late ?

Pro. Now since the Curphew rung.

Duk. Not Isabell.

Pro. No.

Duke. They will then er't be long.

Pro. What comfort is for Claudio ?

Duke. There's some in hope.

Pro. It is a bitter Deputy.

Duk. Not so, not so : his life is paralel'd Even with the stroke and line of his great Justice : He doth with holy abstinence subdue That in himself, which he spurres on his power To qualifie in others : were he meal'd with that Which he corrects, then were he tyrannous, But this being so, he's just. Now are they come. This is a gentle Provost, sildome when The steeld Gaoler is the friend of men : How now ? what noise ? That spirit's posselt with haste, That wounds th'unfisting Postern with these strokes.

Pro. There he must stay untill the Officer Arise to let him in : he is call'd up.

Duk. Have you no countermand for Claudio yet ?

But he must dye to morrow ?

Pro. None Sir, none.

Duk. As neer the dawning Provost, as it is, You shall hear more ere Morning.

Pro. Happily.

You something know : yet I believe there comes No countermand : no such example have we : Besides, upon the very siege of Justice, Lord Angelo hath to the publike eare, Profeest the contrary.

Enter a Messenger.

Duk. This is his Lords man.

Pro. And here comes Claudio's pardon.

Mess. My Lord hath sent you this note, And by me this further charge : That you swerve not from the smallest Article of it, Neither in time, matter, or other circumstance. Good morrow : for as I take it, it is almost day.

Pro. I shall obey him.

Duk. This is his Pardon purchas'd by such sinne, For which the Pardoner himself is in : Hence hath offence his quick celerity, When it is born in high Authority. When Vice makes Mercy ; Mercy's so extended, That for the faults love, is th'offender friended. Now Sir, what newes ?

Pro. I told you :

Lord Angelo (be-like) thinking me remisse In mine Office, awakens me With this unwonted putting on, methinks strangely : For he hath not us'd it before.

Duk. Pray you let's hear.

The Letter.

Whosoever you may hear to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by four of the clock, and in the afternoone Barnardine : For my better satisfaction, let me have Claudio's head sent me by five. Let this be duely performed with a thought that more depends on it, than we must yet deliver. Thus faile not to do your office, as you will answer it at your perill.

What say you to this Sir ?

Duke. What is that Barnardine, who is to be executed in th'afternoone ?

Pro. A Bohemian born : But here nurs'd up and bred, One that is a prisoner nine years'old.

Duk. How came it, that the absent Duke had not either deliver'd him to his liberry, or executed him ? I have heard it was ever his manner to do so.

Pro. His friends still wrought Reprieves for him : And indeed his fact till now in the government of Lord Angelo, came not to an undoubtfull proof.

Duk. It is now apparent ?

Pro. Most manifest, and not denied by himself.

Duk. Hath he born himself penitently in prison ? How seems he to be touch'd ?

Pro. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully, but as a drunken sleep, carelessse, wreaklesse, and fearlesse of what's past, present, or to come : insensible of mortality, and desperately mortall.

Duk. He wants advice.

Pro. He will hear none : he hath evermore had the liberry of the prison : give him leave to escape hence, he would not. Drunk many times a day, if not many dayes entirely drunk. We have very oft awak'd him, as if to carry him to execution, and shew'd him a seeming Warrant for it, it hath not moved him at all.

Duke.

Duk. More of him anon : There is written in your brow Provost, honesty and constancy : if I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me : but in the boldness of my cunning, I will lay my self in hazard : Claudio, whom here you have warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the Law, than Angelo who hath sentenc'd him. To make you understand this in a manifested effect, I crave but four dayes respite : for the which, you are to do me both a present, and a dangerous courtship.

Pro. Pray Sir, in what ?

Duk. In the delaying death.

Pro. Alack, how may I do it ? Having the hour limited, and an expresse command, under penalty, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo ? I may make my case as Claudio's, to crosse this in the smallest.

Duk. By the vow of mine Order, I warrant you, If my instructions may be your guide, Let this Barnardine be this morning executed, And his head born to Angelo.

Pro. Angelo hath seen them both, And will discover the favour.

Duk. Oh, death's a great disguiser, and you may adde to it ; Shave the head, and tye the beard, and say it was the desire of the penitent to be so bar'd before his death ; you know the course is common. If any thing fall to you upon this, more than thanks and good fortune, by the Saint whom I professe, I will plead against it with my life.

Pro. Pardon me, good father, it is against my oath.

Duk. Were you sworn to the Duke, or to the Deputy ?

Pro. To him, and to his Substitutes.

Duk. You will think you have made no offence, if the Duke avouch the justice of your dealing ?

Pro. But what likelihood is in that ?

Duk. Not a resemblance, but a certainty ; yet since I see you fearfull, that neither my coate, integrity, nor perswasion, can with ease attempt you, I will go further than I meant, to pluck all fears out of you. Look you Sir, here is the hand and Seale of the Duke : you know the Character I doubt not, and the Signet is not strange to you.

Pro. I know them both.

Duk. The Contents of this, is the return of the Duke ; you shall anon over-reade it at your pleasure : where you shall find within these two dayes, he will be here. This is a thing that Angelo knows not, for he this very day receives Letters of strange tenor, perchance of the Dukes death, perchance entering into some Monastery, but by chance nothing of what is writ. Look, th'unfolding Statre calls up the Shepherd ; put not your self into amazement, how these things should be ; all difficulties are but easie when they are known. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardine's head : I will give him a present shrike, and advise him for a better place. Yet you are amaz'd, but this shall absolutely resolve you : Come away, it is almost clear dawn.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clown.

Cl. I am as well acquainted here, as I was in our house of profession : one would think it were Mistress

Over-dons own house, for here be many of her old Customers. First, here's young Mr. Rash, he's in for a commodity of brown paper, and old Ginger, nine-score and seventeen pounds, of which he made five Marks ready money : marry then, Ginger was not much in request, for the old Women were all dead. Then is there here one Mr. Caper, at the suit of Master Three-Pile the Mercer, for some four suits of Peach-colour'd Satten, which now peaches him a beggar. Then have we here, young Dixy, and young Mr. Deep-vow, and Mr. Copper-spure, and Master Starve Lackey the Rapier and dagger man, and young Drop-heire that kild lusty Pudding, and Mr. Forth-light the Tilter, and brave Mr. Shooey the great Traveller, and wilde Halfe Canne that stabb'd Pors, and I think forty more, all great doers in our Trade, and are now for the Lords sake.

Enter Abhorson.

Abbo. Sirrha, bring Barnardine hither.

Cl. Master Barnardine, you must rise and be hang'd ; Master Barnardine.

Abh. What hoa Barnardine.

Barnardine within.

Bar. A pox o' your throats : who makes that noyse there ? What are you ?

Cl. Your friend Sir, the Hangman : You must be so good Sir to rise, and be put to death.

Bar. Away you Rogue, away, I am sleepey.

Abh. Tell him he must awake, And that quickly too.

Cl. Pray Master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleep afterwards.

Abh. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Cl. He is coming Sir, he is coming : I hear his Straw rustle.

Enter Barnardine.

Abh. Is the Axe upon the Block, Sirrha ?

Cl. Very ready Sir.

Bar. How now Abhorson ? What's the newes with you ?

Abh. Truly Sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers : for look you, the Warrant's come.

Bar. You Rogue, I have been drinking all night, I am not fittet for't.

Cl. Oh, the better Sir : for he that drinks all night and is hanged betimes in the morning, may sleep the sounder all the next day.

Enter Duke.

Abh. Look you Sir, here comes your ghostly father : do we jest now think you ?

Duk. Sir, induced by my charity, and hearing how hastily you are to depart, I am come to advise you, comfort you, and pray with you.

Bar. Friar, not I : I have been drinking hard all night, and I will have more time to prepare me, or they shall beat out my brains with billets : I will not consent to dye this day, that's certain.

Duk. Oh sir, you must : and therefore I beseech you look forward on the journey you shall go.

Bar. I swear I will not dye to day for any mans perswasion.

Duk. But hear you :

Bar. Not a word : if you have any thing to say to me, come to my Ward : for thence will not I to day.

Exit.

Enter Provost.

Duk. Unfit to live, or dye : oh gravell heart,

G 3

After

After him (Fellows) bring him to the block.

Pro. Now sir, how do you finde the prisoner?

Duk. A creature unpre-par'd, unmeet for death,
And to transport him in the minde he is,
Were damnable.

Pro. Here in the prison, father,
There died this morning of a cruell Feaver,
One Ragozine, a most notorious Pirate,
A man of Claudio's years: his beard, and head
Just of colour. What if we do omit
This Reprobate, till he were well enclin'd,
And satisfie the Deputy with the visage
Of Ragozine, more like to Claudio?

Duke. Oh, 'tis an accident that heaven provides:
Dispatch it presently, the houre draws on Prefix by Angelo: See this be done,
And sent according to command, whiles I
Perswade this rnde wretch willingly to dye.

Pro. This shall be done (good father) presently:
But Barnardine must dye this afternoone,
And how shall we continue Claudio,
To save me from the danger that might come,
If he were known alive?

Duke. Let this be done.
Put them in secret holds, both Barnardine and Claudio,
Ere twice the Sun hath made his journall greeting
To yond generation, you shall finde
Your safery manifested.

Pro. I am your free dependant.

Exit.

Duke. Quick, dispatch, and send the head to Angelo.
Now will I write Letters to Angelo,
(The Provost he shall bear them) whose contents
Shall witness to him I am neer at home:
And that by great injunctions I am bound
To enter publicly: him Ile desire
To meet me at the consecrated Fount,
A League below the City: and from thence,
By cold gradation, and weale-ballanc'd forme,
We shall proceed with Angelo.

Enter Provost.

Pro. Here is the head, Ile carry it my self.

Duke. Convenient is it: Make a swift return,
For I would commune with you of such things,
That want no eare but yours.

Pro. Ile make all speed.

Exit.

Isabell within.

Isa. Peace hoa, be here.

Duke. The tongue of Isabell. She's come to know,
If yet her brothers pardon be come hither:
But I will keep her ignorant of her good,
To make her heavenly comforts of despaire,
When it is least expected.

Enter Isabell.

Isa. Hoa, by your leave.

Duke. Good morning to you, faire, and gracious daughter.

Isa. The better given me by so holy a man,
Hath yet the Deputy sent my brothers pardon?

Duke. He hath releas'd him, Isabell, from the world,
His head is off, and sent to Angelo.

Isa. Nay, but it is not so.

Duke. It is no other.

Shew your wisdom daughter in your close patience.

Isa. Oh, I will to him, and pluck out his eyes.

Duke. You shall not be admitted to his sight.

Isa. Unhappy Claudio, wretched Isabell.

Injurious world, most damned Angelo.

Duke. This nor hurts him, nor profits you a jot.

Forbear it therefore, give your cause to heaven,
Mark what I say, which you shall find
By every syllable a faithfull verity.

The Duke comes home to morrow: nay dry your eyes,
One of our Covent, and his Confessor
Gives me this instance: Already he hath carried Notice to Escalus and Angelo,

Who do prepare to meet him at the gates, (dome,
There to give up their power: if you can pace your wif-
In that good path that I would wish it go,
And you shall have your bosome on this wretch,
Grace of the Duke, revenges to your heart,
And generall Honor.

Isa. I am directed by you.

Duke. This Letter then to Friar Peter give,
'Tis that he sent me of the Dukes return:
Say, by this token, I desire his company
At Mariana's house to night. Her cause, and yours
Ile perfect him withall, and he shall bring you
Before the Duke; and to the head of Angelo
Accuse him home and home. For my poor self,
I am combined by a sacred Vow,
And shall be absent. Wend you with this Letter:
Command these fretting waters from your eyes
With a light heart; trust not my holy Order
If I pervert your course: who's here?

Enter Luc.

Luc. Good 'even;
Fryer, where's the Provost?

Duke. Not within Sir.

Luc. Oh pretty Isabella, I am pale at mine heart, to see thine eyes so red: thou must be patient; I am faine to dine and sup with water and bran: I dare not for my head fill my belly. One fruitfull Meale would set me too't: but they say the Duke will be here to Morrow.
By my troth Isabell I lov'd thy brother, if the old fan-tasticall Duke of dark corners had been at home, he had lived.

Duke. Sir, the Duke is marvellous little beholding to your reports, but the best is, he lives not in them.

Luc. Friar, thou knowest not the Duke so well as I do: he's a better woodman than thou tak'st him for.

Duke. Well: you'll answer this one day. Fare ye well.

Luc. Nay tarry, Ile go along with thee.

I can tell thee pretty tales of the Duke.

Duke. You have told me too many of him already sir, if they be true: if not true, none were enough.

Luc. I was once before him for getting a Wench with child.

Duke. Did you such a thing?

Luc. Yes marry did I; but I was faine to forswear it,
They would else have married me to the rotten Medler.

Duke. Sir, your company is fairer than honest, rest you well.

Luc. By my troth Ile go with thee to the lanes end:
if bawdy talk offend you, we'll have very little of it: nay
Friar I am a kinde of a Burre, I shall sicken. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Angelo, and Escalus.

Esc. Every Letter he hath writ, hath disvouch'd other.

Ang.

Ang. In most uneven and distracted manner, his actions shew much like to madnesse, pray heaven his wisdom be not tainted: and why meet him at the gates and deliver our authorities there?

Esc. I guesse not.

Ang. And why should we proclaim it in an houre before his entring, that if any crave redresse of injustice, they should exhibite their petitions in the street?

Esc. He shews his reason for that: to have a dispatch of Complaints, and to deliver us from devices hereafter, which shall then have no power to stand against us.

Ang. Well: I beseech you let it be proclaimed betimes i'th morne, Ile call you at your house: give notice to such men of sort and suit as are to meet him.

Esc. I shall sir: fare you well.

Exit.

Ang. Good night.

This deed unshapes me quite, makes me unpregnant
And dull to all proceedings. A deflower'd Maide,
And by an eminent Body, that enforce'd
The Law against it? But that her tender shame
Will not proclaim against her Maiden losse,
How might she tongue me? yet reason dares her no,
For my Authority bears of a credent bulk,
That no particular scandall once can touch
But it confounds the breather. He should have liv'd,
Save that his riotous youth with dangerous sense,
Might in the times to come have ta'ne revenge
By so receiving a dishonour'd life,
With ransom of such shame: would yet he had liv'd.
Alack, when once our grace we have forgot,
Nothing goes right, we would, and we would not. Exit.

Scæna Quinta.

Enter Duke and Fryer Peter.

Duk. These Letters at fit time deliver me.
The Provost knows our purpose and our plot,
The matter being afoot, keep your instruction,
And hold you ever to our speciall drift,
Though sometimes you do blench from this to that
As cause doth minister: Go call at Flavia's house,
And tell him where I stay: give the like notice
To Valencius, Rowland, and to Cassius,
And bid them bring the Trumpets to the gate:
But send me Flavius first.

Peter. It shall be speeded well.

Enter Varrius.

Duke. I thank thee Varrius, thou hast made good hast,
Come, we will walk: There's other of our friends
Will greet us here anon: my gentle Varrius. Exeunt.

Scæna Sexta.

Enter Isabella and Mariana.

Isab. To speak so indirectly I am loath,
I would say the truth, but to accuse him so
That is your part, yet I am advis'd to do it,
He says, so vaile full purpose.

Mar. Be rul'd by him.

Isa. Besides, he tels me, that if peradventure
He speak against me on the adverse side,
I should not think it strange, for 'tis a Physick
That's bitter, to sweet end.

Enter Peter.

Mar. I would Fryer Peter.—

Isab. Oh peace, the Fryer is come.

Peter. Come I have found you out a stand most fit,
Where you may have such vantage on the Duke
He shall not passe you:

Twice have the Trumpets sounded.

The generous and gravest Citizens

Have hent the gates, and very neer upon

The Duke is entring:

Therefore hence away.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus, Scæna Prima.

Enter Duke, Varrius, Lords, Angelo, Escalus, Lucio, Citizens at severall doors.

Duke. My very worthy Cosen, fairly met,
Our old and faithfull friend, we are glad to see you.

Ang. Esc. Happy return be to your Royall Grace.

Duke. Many and hearty thinkings be to you both:
We have made enquiry of you, and we hear
Such goodnesse of your Justice, that our soul
Cannot but yeeld you forth to publike thanks
Forerunning more requitall.

Ang. You make my bonds still greater.

Du. Oh your desert speaks loud, and I should wrong
To lock it in the wards of covert bosome
When it deserves with Characters of Brasse
A fortified residence 'gainst the tooth of time,
And razure of oblivion: Give me your hand
And let the subiect see, to make them know
That outward curtesies would fain proclaim
Favours that keep within: Come Escalus,
You must walk by us on our other hand:
And good supporters are you,

Enter Peter and Isabella.

Peter. Now is your time
Speak loud, and kneel before him.

Isab. Justice, O Royall Duke, vaile your regard
Upon a wrong'd (I would faine have said a Maid)
Oh worthy Prince dishonour not your eye
By throwing it on any other object,
Till you have heard me, in my true complaint,
And given me Justice, Justice, Justice, Justice.

Duke. Relate your wrongs;

In what, by whom? be brief:

Here is Lord Angelo shall give you Justice,
Reveal your self to him.

Isab. Oh worthy Duke,
You bid me seek redemption of the Devill,
Hear me your self: for that which I must speak
Must either punish me, not being believ'd,
Or wring redresse from you:
Hear me: oh hear me, here.

Ang. My Lord, her wits, I feare me, are not firm:
She hath been a suitor to me, for her brother
Cut off by course of Justice.

Isab. By course of Justice?

Ang. And she will speak most bitterly.

Isab. Most

Isab. Most strange : but yet most truly will I speak,
That Angelo's forsworne, is it not strange?
That Angelo's a murderer, is't not strange?
That Angelo is an adulterous theefe,
An hypocrite, a virgin violator,
Is it not strange? and strange?

Du. Nay it is ten times strange?

Isa. It is not truer he is Angelo,
Than this is all as true, as it is strange;
Nay it is ten times true, for truth is truth
To th'end of reckoning.

Du. Away with her : poor soul
She speaks this, in th'infirmity of sense.

Isab. Oh Prince, I conjure thee, as thou beleev'st
There is another comfort, than this world,
That thou neglect me nor, with that opinion
That I am touch'd with madnesse : make not impossible
That which but seems unlike, 'tis not impossible
But one, the wickedst Caitiffe on the ground
May seem as shie, as grave, as just, as absolute :
As Angelo, even so may Angelo
In all his dressings, caracts, titles, formes,
Be an arch-villaine : Believe it, royall Prince,
If he be lesse, he's nothing, but he's more,
Had I more name for Badnesse.

Du. By mine honesty
If she be mad, as I believe no other,
Her madnesse hath the oddest frame of sense,
Such a dependency of thing on thing
As ere I heard in madnesse.

Isab. O gracious Duke
Harp not on that ; nor do nor banish reason,
For inequality, but let your reason serve
To make the truth appear, where it seems hid,
And hide the false seems true.

Duke. Many that are not mad
Have sure more lack of reason :
What would you say?

Isab. I am the sifter of one Claudio,
Condemn'd upon the act of Fornication
To lose his head, condemn'd by Angelo :
I, (in probation of a Sisterhood)
Was sent to by my brother ; one Lucio
As then the Messenger.

Luc. That's I, and't like your Grace :
I came to her from Claudio, and desir'd her
To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo :
For her poor brothers pardon.

Isab. That's he indeed.

Du. You were not bid so speak.

Luc. No, my good Lord,
Nor wish'd to hold my peace.

Du. I wish you now then,
Pray you take note of it : and when you have
A businesse for you self : pray heaven you then
Be perfect.

Luc. I warrant your honour.

Du. The warrant's for your self : take heed to't.

Isab. This Gentleman told somerhing of my Tase.

Luc. Right.

Du. It may be right, but you are i'th wrong
To speak before your time, proceed.

Isab. I went
To this pernicious Caitiff Deputy.

Du. That's somewhat madly spoken.

Isab. Pardon it.

The phraze is to the matter.

Du. Mended again : the matter : proceed.

Isab. In brief, to set the needlesse by :
How I perswaded, how I praid, and kneel'd,
How he refeld me, and how I replide
(For this was of much length) the vilde conclusion
I now begin with grieve and shame to utter.
He would not, but by gift of my chaste body
To his concupiscible intemperate lust
Release my brother ; and after much debarement,
My sisterly remorse, confutes mine honour,
And I did yeeld to him : But the next morne betimes,
His purpose sursetting, he sends a warrant
For my poor brothers head.

Du. This is most likely.

Isab. Oh that it were as like as it is true. (speak't,
Du. By heaven (fond wretch) thou know'st not what thou
Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour
In hatefull practise : first his Integrity
Stands without blemish : next it imports no reason,
That with such vehemency he should pursue
Faults proper to himself : if he had so offended
He would have weigh'd thy brother by himself,
And not have cut him off : some one hath set you on :
Confesse the truth, and say by whose advice,
Thou cam'st here to complain.

Isab. And is this all?
Then oh you blessed Ministers above,
Keep me in patience, and with ripened time
Unfold the evill which is here wrapt up
In countenance : heaven shield your Grace from wo,
As I thus wrong'd, hence unbeliev'd go.

Du. I know you'd fain be gone : An Officer :
To prison with her : Shall we thus permit
A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall,
On him so neer us ? This needs must be a practise ;
Who knew of your intent and coming hither?

Isab. One that I would were here, Fryer Lodowick.

Du. A ghostly Father belike :
Who knows that Lodowick?

Luc. My Lord, I know him, 'tis a meddling Fryer,
I do not like the man : had he been Lay, my Lord,
For certain words he spake against your Grace
In your retirement, I had swing'd him soundly.

Du. Words against me ? this 'a good Fryer belike
And to set on this wretched woman here
Against our Substitute : Let this Fryer be found.

Luc. But yesternight my Lord, she and that Fryer
I saw them at the prison : a sawcy Fryer,
A very scurvy fellow.

Peter. Blessed be your Royall Grace :
I have stood by my Lord, and I have heard
Your Royall eare abus'd : first hath this woman
Most wrongfully accus'd your Substitute,
Who is as free from touch, or soyle with her
As she from one ungot.

Du. We did believe no lesse.
Know you that Fryer Lodowick which she speaks of?

Peter. I know him for a man Divine and holy,
Not scurvy, nor a temporary medler
As he's reported by this Gentleman :
And on my trust, a man that never yet
Did (as he vouches) misreport your Grace.

Luc. My Lord, most villanously, believe it.

Peter. Well : he in time may come to clear himself ;
But at this instant he is sick, my Lord :

Of a strange Fever: upon his meere request
Being come to knowledge, that there was complaint
Intended against Lord Angelo, came I hither
To speak as from his mouth, what he doth know
Is true and false: and what he with his oath
And all probation will make up full cleare
Whensoever he is convented: First, for this woman,
To justifie this worthy Nobleman,
So vulgarly and personally accus'd,
Her shall you hear disproved to her eyes,
Till she herself confesse it.

Duke. Good Fryer let's hear it:
Do you not smile at this, Lord Angelo?
Oh heaven, the vanity of wretched fools.
Give us some seats, Come Cosen Angelo,
In this Ile be impartiall: be you Judge
Of your own Cause: Is this the Witnesse Fryer?

Enter Mariana.

First, let her shew her face, and after speak.

Mar. Pardon my Lord, I will not shew my face
Untill my husband bid me.

Duke. What, are you married?

Mar. No, my Lord.

Duke. Are you a Maid?

Mar. No, my Lord.

Duke. A Widdow then?

Mar. Neither my Lord.

Duke. Why are you nothing then: neither Maid, Widdow, nor Wife?

Luc. My Lord, she may be a Punk: for many of them, are neither Maid, Widdow, nor Wife.

Duke. Silence that fellow: I would he had some cause to prattle for himself.

Luc. Well my Lord.

Mar. My Lord, I do confesse I nere was married,
And I confesse besides, I am no Maid,
I have known my husband, yet my husband
Knowes not that ever he knew me.

Luc. He was drunk then, my Lord, it can be no better.

Duke. For the benefit of silence, would thou wert so too.

Luc. Well my Lord.

Duke. This is no Witnesse for Lord Angelo.

Mar. Now I come to't, my Lord.

She that accuses him of Fornication,
In self-same manner doth accuse my husband,
And charges him, my Lord, with such a time,
When Ile depose I had him in mine Armes
With all the effect of Love.

Ang. Charges she more than me?

Mar. Nor that I know.

Duke. No? you say your husband.

Mar. Why just my Lord, and that is Angelo,
Who thinks he knows, that he neere knew my body,
But knows, he thinks, that he knows Isabels.

Ang. This is a strange abuse: Let's see thy face.

Mar. My husband bids me, now I will unmask.
This is that face, thou cruell Angelo
Which once thou sworst, was worth the looking on:
This is the hand, which with a vow'd contract
Was fast belockt in thine: This is the body
That took away the match from Isabell,
And did supply thee at thy Garden-house
In her Imagin'd person.

Duke. Know you this woman?

Luc. Carnally she says.

Duke. Sirrha, no more.

Luc. Enough my Lord.

Arg. My Lord, I must confesse, I know this woman,
And five years since there was some speech of marriage
Betwixt my self and her: which was broke off,
Partly for that her promis'd proportions
Came short of Composition: but in chief
For that her reputation was dis-valued
In levity: Since which time of five years
I never spake with her, saw her, nor heard from her
Upon my faith and honour.

Mar. Noble Prince,
As there comes light from heaven, and words from breath,
As there is sense in truth, and truth in vertue,
I am affianced this mans wife, as strongly
As words could make up Vowes: And my good Lord,
But Tuesday night last gone, in's Garden-house
He knew me as a wife. As this is true,
Let me in safety raise me from my knees,
Or else for ever be confix'd here
A Marble Monument.

Ang. I did but smile till now.

Now, good my Lord, give me the scope of Justice,
My patience here is touch'd: I do perceive
These poor informall women, are no more
But instruments of some more mightier member
That sets them on. Let me have way, my Lord,
To finde this practise out.

Duke. I, with my heart,
And punish them to your height of pleasure.
Thou foolish Fryer, and thou pernicious woman
Compact with her that's gone: think't thou thy oaths,
Though they would swear down each particular Saint,
Were testimonies 'gainst his worth, and credit
That's seald in approbation? you, Lord Escalus,
Sit with my Cosen, lend him your kinde pains
To finde out this abuse, whence 'tis deriv'd.
There is another Fryer that set them on,
Let him be sent for.

Peter. Would he were here, my Lord, for he indeed
Hath set the women on to this complaint;
Your Provost knows the place where he abides,
And he may fetch him.

Duke. Go, do it instantly:

And you my Noble and well-warranted Cosen
Whom it concerns to hear this matter forth,
Do with your injuries as seems you best
In any chastisement; I for a while
Will leave you; but stirre not you till you have Well determin'd upon these Slanderers.

Exit.

Esc. My Lord, wee'll do it thoroughly: Signior Lucia, did not you say, you knew that Fryer Lodowick to be a dishonest person?

Luc. Cucullus non facit Monachum, honest in nothing but in his Cloaths, and one that hath spoke most villanous speeches of the Duke.

Esc. We shall intreat you to abide here till he come, and inforce them against him: we shall finde this Fryer a notable fellow.

Luc. As any in Vienna on my word.

Esc. Call that same Isabell here once againe, I would speak with her: pray you, my Lord, give me leave to question, you shall see how Ile handle her.

Luc. Not better than he, by her own report.

Esc. Say you?

Luc. Marry Sir, I think, if you handled her privately

She

She should sooner confesse, perchance publicly she'll be asham'd.

Enter Duke, Provost, Isabella.

Esc. I will go darkly to work with her.

Luc. That's the way : for women are light at midnight.

Esc. Come on Mistress, here's a Gentlewoman Denies all that you have said.

Luc. My Lord, here comes the Rascall I spoke of, Here with the Provost.

Esc. In very good time : speak not you to him, till we call upon you.

Luc. Mum.

Esc. Come sir, did you set these women on to slander Lord Angelo? they have confes'd you did.

Duke. 'Tis false.

Esc. How? know you where you are?

Duke. Respect to your great place ; and let the Devil Be sometime honour'd, for his burning throne. Where is the Duke? 'tis he should hear me speak.

Esc. The Duke's in us : and we will hear you speak, Look you speak justly.

Duke. Boldly at least. But oh poor souls, Come you to seek the Lamb here of the Fox? Good night to your redresse : is the Duke gone? Then is your cause gone too : The Duke's unjust, Thus to retort your manifest appeale, And put your tryall in the villaines mouth, Which here you come to accuse.

Luc. This is the Rascall : this is he I spoke of.

Esc. Why thou unreverend and unhallowed Fryer : Is't not enough thou hast suborn'd these women, To accuse this worthy man? but in foul mouth, And in the witnesse of his proper eate, To call him villaine; and then to glance from him, To th Duke himself, to tax him with Injustice? Take him hence; to th rack with him : we'll towze you Joynt by joynt, but we will know his purpose: What? unjust?

Duke. Be not so hot : the Duke dare No more stretch this finger of mine, than he Dare rack his own : his Subject am I not, Nor here Provinciall : My businesse in this State Made me a looker on here in Vienna, Where I have seen corruption boyl and bubble, Till it ore-run the Stew : Laws for all faults, But faults so countenanc'd, that the strong Statutes Stand like the forfeits in a Barbers shop, As much in mock, as mark.

Esc. Slander to th'State: Away with him to prison.

Ang. What can you vouch against him Signior Lucio? Is this the man that you did tell us of?

Luc. 'Tis he, my Lord : come hither goodman baldpate, do you know me?

Duke. I remember you sir by the sound of your voyce, I met you at the prison in the absence of the Duke?

Luc. Oh, did you so? and do you remember what you said of the Duke?

Duke. Most notably sir?

Luc. Do you so sir : And was the Duke a flesh-monger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duke. You must (sir) change persons with me, ere you make that my report : you indeed spoke so of him, and much more, much worse.

Luc. Oh thou damnable fellow : did not I pluck thee by the nose, for thy speeches?

Duke. I protest, I love the Duke as I love my self.

Ang. Hark how the villaine would close now, after his treasonable abuses.

Esc. Such a fellow is not to be talk'd withall : Away with him to prison : Where is the Provost? away with him to prison : lay bolts enough upon him : let him speak no more : away with those Giglets too, and with the other confederate companion.

Duke. Stay sir, stay a while.

Ang. What, resists he? help him Lucio.

Luc. Come sir, come sir, come sir : for sir, why you baldpated lying Rascall : you must be hooded must you? show your knaves visage with a pox to you : show your sheep-biring face, and be hang'd an houre : wilt not off?

Duke. Thou art the first knave that ere mad'st a Duke. First Provost, let me bayle these gentle three : Sneak not away sir, for the Fryer and you, Must have a word anon : lay hold on him.

Luc. This may prove worse than hanging.

Duke. What you have spoke, I pardon : sit you down. We'll borrow place of him ; Sir, by your leave : Ha'st thou or word or wit, or impudence, That yet can do thee office? If thou ha'st, Rely upon it, till my tale be heard, And hold no longer our.

Ang. Oh my dread Lord. I should be guiltier than my guiltinesse, To think I can be undiscernable, When I perceive your Grace, like power Divine, Hath look'd upon my passes. Then good Prince, No longer Session hold upon my shame, But let my tryall be mine own Confession : Immediate sentence then, and sequent death, Is all the grace I beg.

Duke. Come hither Mariana, Say : was't thou ever contracted to this woman?

Ang. I was my Lord.

Duke. Go take her hence, and marry her instantly. Do you the office (Fryer) which consummate, Return him here again : go with him Provost. Exit.

Esc. My Lord, I am more amaz'd at his dishonor, Than at the strangenesse of it.

Duke. Come hither Isabel, Your Fryer is now your Prince : As I was then Advertising, and holy to your businesse, (Not changing heart with habit) I am still, Attornied at your service.

Isab. Oh give me pardon That I, your vassaile, have imploy'd and pain'd, Your unknown Sovereignty.

Duke. You are pardon'd Isabel: And now dear Maid, be you as free to us. Your brothers death, I know, sits at your heart : And you may marvaile, why I obscur'd my self, Labouring to save his life ; and would not rather Make rash remonstrance of my hidden power, Then let him so be lost : Oh most kinde Maid, It was the swift celerity of his death, Which I did think with slower foot came on, That brain'd my purpose : but peace be with him, That life is better life past fearing death, Then that which lives to feare : make it your comfort,

So happy is your Brother.

Enter Angelo, Maria, Peter, Provost.

Isa. I do my Lord.

Duke. For this new-married man; approaching here,
Whose salt imagination yet hath wrong'd
Your well defended honour; you must pardon
For Mariana's sake: But as he adjudg'd your Brother,
Being criminall, in double violation
Of sacred chastitie, and of promise-breach,
Thereon dependant for your brothers life,
The very mercy of the Law cries out
Most audible, even from his proper tongue,
An Angelo for Claudio, death for death:
Haste still payes haste, and leasure answers leasure;
Like dorch quir like, and Measure still for Measure:
Then Angelo thy fault's thus manifested:
Which though thou wouldst deny, denies thee vantage.
We do condemn thee to the very Block
Where Claudio stoop'd to death, and with like haste Away with him.

Mar. Oh my most gracious Lord,
I hope you will not mock me with a husband?

Duke. It is your husband mock'd you with a husband,
Consenting to the safe-guard of your honour,
I thought your marriage fit: else Impuration,
For that he knew you, might reproach your life.
And choak your good to come: for his possessions,
Although by confiscation they are ours;
We do enstate, and widdow you withall,
To buy you a better husband.

Mar. Oh my dear Lord,
I crave no other, nor no better man.

Duke. Never crave him, we are definitive.

Mar. Gentle my Liege.

Duke. You do but lose your labour.
Away with him to death: Now sir, to you.

Mar. Oh my good Lord, sweet Isabel, take my part,
Lend me your knees, and all my life to come,
Ile lend you all my life to do you service.

Duke. Against all sense you do importune her,
Should she kneel down, in mercy of this fact,
Her brothers ghost his paved bed would break,
And take her hence in horror.

Mar. Isabel:

Sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me,
Hold up your hands, say nothing: I'll speak all.
They say best men are moulded out of faults,
And for the most, become much more the better
For being a little bad: So may my husband.
Oh Isabel: will you not lend a knee?

Duke. He dyes for Claudio's death.

Isab. Most bounteous Sir.

Look, if it please you, on this man condemn'd,
As if my brother liv'd: I partly think,
A due sincerity governed his deeds,
Till he did look on me: Since it is so,
Let him not dye: my brother had but Justice,
In that he did the thing for which he di'd.
For Angelo, his act did not ore-take his bad intent,
And must be buried but as an intent
That perish'd by the way: thoughts are no subjects
Inrents, but meerely thoughts.

Mar. Meerely my Lord.

Duke. Your suit's unprofitable: stand up I say:
I have bethought me of another fault.

Provost, how came it Claudio was beheaded

At an unusuall houre?

Pro. It was commanded so.

Duk. Had you a speciall warrant for the deed?

Pro. No my good Lord, it was by private message.

Duke. For which I do discharge you of your office,
Give up your keys,

Pro. Pardon me, Noble Lord.

I thought it was a fault, but knew it nor,
Yet did repent me after more advice,
For testimony whereof, one in the prison
That should by private order else have dy'd,
I have reserv'd alive.

Duke. What's he?

Pro. His name is Barnardine.

Duke. I wouldst thou hadst done so by Claudio:
Go fetch him hirher, let me look upon him.

Esc. I am sorry, one so learned, and so wise
As you, Lord Angelo, have still appear'd,
Should slip so grossly, both in the heat of blood
And lack of temper'd judgement afterward.

Ang. I am sorry, that such sorrow I procure,
And so deep sticks it in my penitent heart,
That I crave death more willingly than mercy,
'Tis my deserving, and I do intreat it.

Enter Barnardine and Provost, Claudio, Julietta.

Duke. Which is that Barnardine?

Pro. This my Lord.

Duke. There was a Fryer told me of this man,
Sirra, thou art said to have a stubborn soul,
That apprehends no further than this world,
And squar'lt thy life according: Thou'rt condemn'd,
But for those earthly faults, I quit them all,
I pray thee take this mercy to provide
For better times to come: Fryer, advise him,
I leave him to your hand. What muffled fellow's that?

Pro. This is another prisoner that I sav'd,
Who should have dy'd when Claudio lost his head,
As like almost to Claudio, as himself.

Duke. If he be like your brother, for his sake
Is he pardon'd, and for your lovely sake
Give me your hand, and say you will be mine,
He is my brother too: But fitter time for that:
By this Lord Angelo perceives hee's safe,
Metbinks I see a quickning in his eye:
Well Angelo, your evill quits you well.
Look that you love your wife: her worth, worth yours.
I finde an apt remission in my self:
And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon,
You Sirra, that knew me for a fool, a Coward,
One all of Luxurie, an Ass, a mad man:
Wherein have I so deserv'd of you
That you extoll me thus?

Luc. 'Faith my Lord, I spoke it but according to the trick: if you will hang me for it, you may: but I had rather it would please you, I might be whipt.

Duke. Whipt first sir, and hang'd after.
Proclaime it Provost round about the City:
If any woman wrong'd by this lew'd fellow
(As I have heard him swear himself there's one Whom he begot with childe) let her appear,
And he shall marry her: the nuptiall finish'd,
Let him be whipt'd and hang'd.

Luc. I beseech your Highnesse, do not marry me to a Whore: your Highnesse said even now, I made you a Duke, good my Lord do not recompence me, in making me a Cuckold.

Duke. Upon

Duke. Upon mine honor thou shalt marry her ;
Thy slanders I forgive, and therewithall
Remit thy other forfeits : take him to prison,
And see our pleasure herein executed.

Luc. Marrying a punk my Lord, is pressing to death,
Whipping and hanging.

Duk. Slandering a Prince deserves it.
She Claudio that you wrong'd, look you restore.
Joy to you Mariana, love her Angelo :
I have confes'd her , and I know her vertue.
Thanks good friend, Escalus, for thy much goodnesse,

There's more behind that is more gratefull,
Thanks Provost for thy care , and secrecy,
We shall imploy thee in a worthier place.
Forgive him Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Ragozine for Claudio's,
Th'offence pardons it self. Dear Isabell,
I have a motion much imports your good,
Whereto if you'll a willing care incline ;
What's mine is yours , and what is yours is mine,
So bring us to our Pallace, where wee'll show
What's yet behind, that's meet you all should know.

FINIS.

The Comedie of Errors.

Actus Primus, Scena Prima.

Enter the Duke of Ephesus, with the Merchant of Syracuse,
Faylor, and other attendants.

Merchant.

Roceed Salinus to procure my fall,
And by the doom of death end woes and all.
Duke. Merchant of Syracuse, plead no more.
I am not partiall to infringe our Lawes;

The enmitie and discord which of late
Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your Duke,
To Merchants our well-dealing Countermen,
Who wanting gilders to redeem their lives,
Have seal'd his rigorous statutes with their bloods,
Excludes all pittie from our threatening looks:
For since the mortall and intestine jarres
Twixt thy seditious Countermen and us,
It hath in solemn Synods been decreed,
Both by the Siracusians and our selves,
T'admit no traffick to our adverse Towns:
Nay more, if any born at Ephesus
Be seen at any Siracusan Marts and Faires:
Again, if any Siracusan born
Come to the Bay of Ephesus, he dies:
His goods confiscate to the Dukes dispose,
Unlesse a thousand marks be levied
To quit the penalty, and ransom him:
Thy substance valued at the highest rate,
Cannot amount unto a hundred Marks,
Therefore by Law thou art condemn'd to die.

Mer. Yet this my comfort, when your words are done,
My woes end likewise with the evening Sunne.

Duk. Well Siracusan; say in brief the cause
Why thou departedst from thy native home?
And for what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus?

Mer. A heavier task could not have been impos'd,
Then I to speak my grief unspeakable:
Yet that the world may witnesse, that my end
Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence,
He utter what my sorrow gives me leave.
In Syracusa was I born, and wed
Unto a woman, happy but for me;
And by me too, had not our hap been bad:
With her I liv'd in joy, our wealth increas'd
By prosperous voyages I often made
To Epidaurium, till my factors death:
And he great store of goods at random leaving,
Drew me from kinde embracements of my spouse;
From whom my absence was not six moneths old,
Before her self (almost at fainting under

The pleasing punishment that women bear)
Had made provision for her following me,
And soon, and safe arriv'd where I was:
There had she not been long, but she became
A joyfull mother of two goodly sonnes:
And, which was strange, the one so like the other,
As could not be distinguish'd but by names.
That very hour, and in the self-same Inne,
A poor mean woman was delivered
Of such a burthen, Male-twins both alike:
Those, for their parents were exceeding poor,
I bought, and brought up to attend my sonnes.
My wife, not meanly proud of two such boys,
Made daily motions for our home return:
Unwilling I agreed, alas, too soon we came aboard.
A league from Epidaurium had we say'd
Before the alwayes winde-obeying deep
Gave any tragick Instance of our harm:
But longer did we not retain much hope;
For what obscured light the heavens did grant,
Did but convey unto our fearfull minds
A doubtfull warrant of immediare death;
Which though my self would gladly have embrac'd,
Yet the incessant weeping of my wife,
Weeping before for what she saw must come.
And pitteous plainings of the pretty babes
That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
Fors't me to seek delays for them and me,
And this it was: (for other means was none)
The Sailors sought for safety by our boate,
And left the Ship then sinking-ripe to us.
My wife, more carefull for the latter born,
Had fastened him unto a small spare Mast,
Such as Sea-faring men provide for storms:
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whil'st I had been like heedfull of the other.
The children thus dispos'd, my wife and I,
Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fixt,
Fastned our selves at either end the Mast,
And floating straight, obedient to the streamie,
Was carried towards Corinth, as we thought.
At length the Sunne gazing upon the earth,
Dispers'd those vapours that offended us,
And by the benefit of his wish'd light
The Seas wax calme, and we discovered
Two Ships from farre, making main to us:
Of Corinth that, of Epidaurus this;
But ere they came, oh let me say no more,
Gather the sequell by that went before.

Duke. Nay forward old man, do not break off so,

H

For

For we may pittie, though not pardon thee.

Merch. Oh had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthily rearm'd the merciless to us :
For ere the Ships could meet by twice five leagues,
We were encountred by a mighty rock,
Which being violently born up upon,
Our helpfull Ship was splitted in the midst ;
So that in this unjust divorce of us,
Fortune had left to both of us alike,
What to delight in, what to sorrow for,
Her part, poor soul, seeming as burdened,
With lesser weight, but not with lesser woe,
Was carried with more speed before the winde,
And in our sight they three were taken up
By Fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length another Ship had seiz'd on us,
And knowing whom it was their hap to save,
Gave helpfull welcome to their Shipwrack guests,
And would have rest the Fishers of their prey,
Had not their Bark been very slow of sail ;
And therefore homeward did they bend their course
Thus have you heard me sever'd from my blisse,
That by misfortunes was my life prolong'd,
To tell sad stories of my own mishaps.

Duke. And for the sakes of them thou sorrowest for,
Do me the favour to dilate at full,
What hath befall of them and thee till now.

Merch. My yongest boy, and yet my eldest care,
At eighteen years became inquisitive
After his brother ; and importun'd me
That his attendant, (for his case was like,
Rest of his brother, but retain'd his name,)
Might bear him company in the quest of him :
Whom whilst I laboured of a love to see,
I hazarded the losse of whom I lov'd.
Five Summers have I spent in farthest Greene,
Roving clean through the bounds of Asia,
And coasting homeward, came to Ephesus :
Hopelesse to finde, yet loath to leave unsought
Or that, or any place that harbours men :
But here must end the story of my life,
And happy were I in my timely death,
Could all my travells warrant me they live.

Duke. Haplesse Egeon whom the fates have markt
To bear th'extremitie of dire mishap :
Now trust me, were it not against our Lawes,
Against my Crowne, my oath, my dignity,
Which Princes would, they may not disanull,
My soul should sue as advocate for thee :
But though thou art adjudged to the death,
And pass'd sentence may not be recal'd
But to our honours great disparagement :
Yet will I favour thee in what I can,
Therefore Merchant, Ile limit thee this day
To seek thy help by beneficiall help,
Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus,
Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the summe,
And live : if no, then thou art doom'd to die :
Jaylor take him to thy custodie.

Jaylor. I will my Lord.

Merch. Hopelesse and helplesse doth Egeon wend,
But to procrastinate his livelesse end. Exeunt.

Enter Antipholis, Erotus, a Merchant, and Dromio.

Mer. Therefore give out you are of Epidamium,
Lest that your goods too soon be confiscate :

This very day a Syracusan Merchant
Is apprehended for arrivall here,
And not being able to buy out his life,
According to the statute of the Town,
Dies ere the weary Sunne set in the West ;
There is your money that I had to keep.

Ant. Go bear it to the Centaure, where we host,
And stay there Dromio, till I come to thee ;
Till that Ile view the manners of the Town,
Within this hour it will be dinner time :
Peruse the tradors, gaze upon the buildings,
And then return and sleep within mine Inne,
For with long travaile I am stiffe and weary.
Get thee away.

Dro. Many a man would take you at your word,
And go indeed, having so good a means.

Exit Dromio.

Ant. A trusty villain sir, that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholly,
Lightens my humor with his merry jests :
What, will you walk with me about the Town,
And then go to the Inne and dine with me ?

E. Mer. I am invited sir to certain Merchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefit :
I crave your pardon, soon at five a clock,
Please you, Ile meet with you upon the Mart,
And afterward comfort you till bed time :
My present businesse calls me from you now.

Ant. Farewell till then : I will go loose my life,
And wander up and down to view the Citie.

E. Mer. Sir I commend you to your own content.

Exeunt.

Ant. He that commends me to my own content,
Commends me to the thing I cannot get :
I to the world am like a drop of water,
That in the Ocean seeks another drop,
Who falling there to finde his fellow forth,
(Unseen, inquisitive) confounds himself,
So I, to finde a Mother and a Brother,
Inquest of him (unhappie) loose my self.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.

Here comes the almanack of my true date :
What now ? How chance thou art return'd so soon,

E. Dro. Return'd so soon, rather approacht too late :
The Capon burnes, the Pig falls from the spit ;
The clock hath stricken twelve upon the bell :
My Mistris made it one upon my cheek :
She is so hot because the meat is cold :
The meat is cold because you come not home ;
You come not home, because you have no stomach :
You have no stomach, having broke your fast :
But we that know what 'tis to fast and pray,
Are penitent for your default to day.

Ant. Stop in your winde sir, tell me this I pray,
Where have you left the money that I gave you ?

E. Dro. Oh ? six pence that I had a wenfday last,
To pay the Sadler for my Mistris crupper :
The Sadler had it Sir, I kept it not.

Ant. I am not in a sportive humor now :
Tell me, and dally not, where is the money ?
We being strangers here, how dar'st thou truit
So great a charge from thine own custodie.

E. Dro. I pray you jest sir as you sit at dinner :
I from my Mistris come to you in post :
If I return I shall be post indeed.

For

For the will scour your fault upon my pate :
Methinks your maw, like mine, should be your cook,
And strike you home without a messenger.

Ant. Come Dromio, come, these jests are out of season,
Reserve them till a merrier houte than this.
Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee?

E. Dro. To me sir? why you give no gold to me?

Ant. Come on sir knave, have done your foolishness,
And tell me how thou hast dispos'd thy charge.

E. Dro. My charge was but to fetch you from the Mart
Home to your house, (the Phoenix sir) to dinner ;
My Mistris and her sister sties for you.

Ant. Now as I am a Christian answer me,
In what safe place you have bestow'd my money :
Or I shall break that merry sponce of yours
That stands on tricks, when I am undispos'd :
Where is the thousand Marks thou hadst of me?

E. Dro. I have some marks of yours upon my pate :
Some of my Mistris marks upon my shoulders :
But not a thousand marks between you both.
If I should pay your worship those again,
Perchance you will not bear them patiently.

Ant. Thy Mistris marks? what mistris slave hast thou?

E. Dro. Your worships wife, my mistris at the Phoenix ;
She that doth fast till you come home to dinner :
And prays that you will hie you home to dinner.

Ant. What wilt thou flout me thus unto my face
Being forbid? There take you that sir knave.

E. Dro. What mean you sir, for God sake hold your Nay, and you will nor sir, Ile rake my heels. (hands :

Exit Dromio Ep.

Ant. Upon my life by some device or other,
The villain is ore-wrought of all my money.
They say this Town is full of cosenage :
As nimble Juglers that deceive the eye :
Dark-working Sorcerers that change the minde :
Soul-killing Witches, that deforme the body :
Disguised Cheaters, prating Mounrebanks :
And many such like liberties of sinne :
If it prove so, I will be gone the sooner :
Ile to the Centaure to go seek this slave,
I greatly feare my money is not safe.

Exit.

Actus Secunda.

Enter Adriana, wife to Antipholis Sereptus, with Luciana her Sister.

Adr. Neither my husband nor the slave return'd,
That in such haste I sent to seek his Master?
Sure Luciana it is two a clock.

Luc. Perhaps some Merchant hath invited him,
And from the Mart he's somewhere gone to dinner :
Good Sister, Let us dine, and never fret ;
A man is Master of his libertie ;
Time is their Master, and when they see time,
They'll go or come ; if so, be patient Sister.

Adr. Why should their libertie than ours be more?

Luc. Because their businesse still lyes out adore.

Adr. Look when I serve him so, he takes it ill.

Luc. Oh, know he is the bridle of your will.

Adr. There's none but asses will be bridled so.

Luc. Why, headstrong liberty is last with woe :
There's nothing situate under heavens eye,
But hath his bound in earth, in sea, in skie.
The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowles
Are their males subjects, and at their controules :
Man more divine, the Master of all these,
Lord of the wide world, and wide watry seais,
Indued with intellectuall sence and soul,
Of more preheminance than fish and fowle.
Are masters to their females, and their Lords :
Then let your will attend on their accords.

Adri. This servitude makes you to keep unwed.

Luci. Not this but troubles of the marriage bed.

Adr. But were you wedded, you would bear some sway.

Luc. Ere I learn love, Ile practise to obey.

Adr. How if your husband start some other where?

Luc. Till he come home again, I would forbear.

Adr. Patience unmov'd, no marvell though she patise,
They can be meek, that have no other cause :

A wretched soul bruis'd with adversitie,
We bid be quiet when we hear it crie.

But were we burdned with like waight of pain,
As much, or more, we should our selves complain :

So thou that hast no unkinde mate to grieve thee,
With urging helplesse patience would relieve me ;

But if thou live to see like right berefr,
This fool-beg'd patience in thee will be lefr.

Luci. Well, I will marry one day but to trie :
Here comes your man, now is your husband nie.

Enter Dromio Eph.

Adr. Say, is your rardie master now at hand?

E. Dro. Nay he's at two hands with me, and that my two eares can witnesse.

Adr. Say, didst thou speak with him? knowst thou his minde?

E. Dro. I, I, he told his minde upon mine eare, Besheiw his hand, I scarce could understand it.

Luc. Spake he so doubtfully, thou couldst not feel his meaning.

E. Dro. Nay, he struck so plainly, I could too well feel his blows; and withall so doubtfully, that I could scarce understand them.

Adri. But say, I prethee, is he coming home?
It seems he hath great care to please his wife.

E. Dro. Why Mistrisse, sure my Master is horn mad.

Adri. Horn mad, thou villain?

E. Dro. I mean not Cuckold-mad,
But sure he is stark mad :

When I desir'd him to come home to dinner ;
He ask'd me for a 1000. marks in gold :
Tis dinner time, quoth I : my gold, quoth he :
Your meat doth burn, quoth I : my gold, quoth he :
Will you come, quoth I : my gold, quoth he ;
Where is the thousand marks I gave thee villain ?
The Pigge, quoth I, is burn'd : my gold, quoth he :
My mistrisse, sir, quoth I : hang up thy mistrisse ;
I know not thy mistrisse, out on my mistrisse.

Luc. Quoth who?

E. Dro. Quoth my Master, I know, quoth he, no house, no wife, no mistrisse : so that my arrant due unto my tongue, I thank him, I bare home upon my shoulders :
for in conclusion, he did beat me there.

Adr. Go back again thou slave, and fetch him home.

Dro. Go back again, and be new beaten home?
For Gods sake send some other messenger.

H 2

Adri. Back

Adri. Back slave, or I will break thy pate across.

Dro. And he will blesse that crosse with other beating:
Between you, I shall have a holy head.

Adri. Hence prating peasant, fetch thy master home.

Dro. Am I so round with you, as you with me,
That like a foot-ball you do spurn me thus:
You spurn me hence, and he will founn me hither,
If I last in this service, you must case me in leather. Exit.

Luci. Fie how impatience lowreth in your face:

Adri. His company must do his minions grace,
Whil'st I at home starve for a merry look:
Hath homely age th'alluring beauty took
From my poor cheek? then he hath wasted it.
Are my discourses dull? Barren my wit,
If voluble and sharp discourse be mar'd,
Unkindnesse blots it more than marble hard.
Do their gay vestments his affections bait?
That's not my fault, he's master of my state.
What ruines are in me that can be found,
By him not ruin'd? Then is he the ground
Of my defeatures. My decayed faire,
A sunny look of his, would soon repaire.
But (too unruly Deer,) he breaks the pale,
And feeds from home; poor I am but his stale.

Luci. Self-harming jealousy, fie beat it hence.

Ad. Unfeeling fools can with such wrongs dispence:
I know his eye doth homage other-where,
Or else, what lets it but he would be here?
Sister, you know he promised me a chain,
Would that alone, alone he would detain,
So he would keep faire quarter with his bed.
I see the Jewel best enamell'd
Will lose his beauty: yet the gold bides still
That others touch, and often touching will:
Since that my beauty cannot please his eye,
He weep (what's left) away and weeping die.

Luc. How many fond fools serve mad Jealousie?

Exeunt.

Enter Antipholus Erotes.

Ant. The gold I gave to Dromio is laid up
Safe at the Centaur, and the heedfull slave
Is wandred forth in care to seek me out
By computation and mine hosts report.
I could not speak with Dromio, since at first
I sent him from the Mart: see here he comes.

Enter Dromio Siracusan.

How now sir, is your merry humor alter'd?
As you love stroaks, so jest with me again:
You know no Centaur? you receiv'd no gold?
Your mistress sent to have me home to dinner?
My house was at the Phoenix? Wast thou mad,
That thus so madly thou didst answer me?

S. Dro. What answer sir? when spake I such a word?

E. Ant. Even now, even here, not half an houre since.

S. Dro. I did not see you since you sent me hence
Home to the Centaur with the gold you gave me?

Ant. Villain, thou didst deny the golds receipt,
And toldst me of a Mistress, and a dinner.
For which I hope thou feltest I was displeas'd.

S. Dro. I am glad to see you in this merry veine,
What means this jest, I pray you Master tell me?

Ant. Yea, dost thou jeer and flout me in the teeth?
Thinkst thou I jest? hold, take thou that, & that. Beats Dro.

S. Dro. Hold sir, for Gods sake, now your jest is earnest,

Upon what bargain do you give it me?

Antiph. Because that I familiarly sometimes
Do use you for my fool, and chat with you,
Your sawcinesse will jest upon my love,
And make a Common of my serious houres.
When the Sunne shines, let foolish gnats make sport,
But creep in crannies, when he hides his beames;
If you will jest with me, know my aspect,
And fashion your demeanor to my looks,
Or I will beat this method in your sconce.

S. Dro. Sconce call you it? so you would leave battering, I had rather have it a head, and you use these blows long, I must get a sconce for my head, and In-sconce it too, or else I shall seek my wit in my shoulders, but I pray sir, why am I beaten?

Ant. Dost thou not know?

S. Dro. Nothing sir, but that I am beaten.

Ant. Shall I tell you why?

S. Dro. I sir, and wherefore; for they say, every why hath a wherefore.

Ant. Why first for flouting me, and then wherefore, for urging it the second time to me.

S. Dro. Was there ever any man thus beaten out of season, when in the why and the wherefore, is neither time nor reason. Well sir, I thank you.

Ant. Thank me sir, for what?

S. Dro. Marry sir, for this something that you gave me for nothing.

Ant. He make you amends next, to give you nothing for something. But say sir, is it dinner time?

S. Dro. No sir, I think the meat wants that I have.

Ant. In good time sir, what's that?

S. Dro. Basting.

Ant. Well sir, then 'twill be dry.

S. Dro. If it be sir, I pray you eat not of it.

Ant. Your reason?

S. Dro. Left it make you chollerick, and purchase me another dry basting.

Ant. Well sir, learn to jest in good time; there's a time for all things.

S. Dro. I durst have denied that before you were so chollerick.

Ant. By what rule sir?

S. Dro. Marry sir, by a rule as plain as the plain bald pate of Father time himself.

Ant. Let's hear it.

S. Dro. There's no time for a man to recover his haire that grows bald by nature.

Ant. May he not do it by fine and recovery?

S. Dro. Yes, to pay a fine for a perewig, and recover the lost haire of another man.

Ant. Why, is Time such a niggard of haire, being (as it is) so plentifull an excrement?

S. Dro. Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts, and what he hath scanted them in haire, he hath given them in wit.

Ant. Why, but there's many a man hath more haire than wit.

S. Dro. Not a man of those but he hath the wit to lose his haire.

Ant. Why, thou didst conclude hairy men plain dealers without wit.

S. Dro. The plainer dealer, the sooner lost; yet he looseth it in a kind of jollitie.

Ant. For what reason?

S. Dro. For two, and sound ones too.

Ant. Nay

An. Nay not sound ones I pray you.

S. Dro. Sure ones then.

An. Nay, nor sure in a thing falling.

S. Dro. Certain ones then.

An. Name them.

S. Dro. The one to save the money that he spends in trying : the other, that at dinner they should not drop in his porrage.

An. You would all this time have prov'd, there is no time for all things.

S. Dro. Marry and did sir : namely, no time to recover haire lost by Nature.

An. But your reason was not substantiall, why there is no time to recover.

S. Dro. Thus I mend it : Time himself is bald, and therefore to the worlds end, will have bald followers.

An. I knew 'twould be a bald conclusion : but soft, who wasts us yonder ?

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adri. I, I, Antipholis, look strange and frowne,
Some other Mistresse hath some sweet aspects :
I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.

The time was once, when thou un-urg'd wouldst vow,
That never words were musick to thine eare,

That never object pleasing in thine eye,

That never touch well welcome to thy hand ;

That never meat sweet-favour'd in thy taste ;

Unlesse I spake, or look'd, or touch'd, or carv'd to thee.

How comes it now, (my Husband) oh how comes it,

That thou art then estranged from thy self ?

Thy self I call it, being strange to me :

That undividable Incorporate

Am better than thy deer selfs better part.

Ah do not tear away thy self from me ;

For know my love : as easie maist thou fall

A drop of water in the breaking gulse,

And take unmingled thence that drop again

Without addition or diminishing,

As take from me thy self, and not me too.

How dearly would it touch thee to the quick,

Shouldst thou hear I were licentious ?

And that this body consecrate to thee,

By Ruffian Lust should be contaminate ?

Wouldst thou not spit at me, and spurn at me,

And hurl the name of husband in my face,

And tear the stain'd skin of my Harlot brow,

And from my false hand cut the wedding ring,

And break it with a deep-divorcing vow ?

I know thou canst, and therefore see thou do it.

I am posselt with an adulterate blot,

My blood is mingled with the crime of lust :

For if we two be one, and thou play false,

I do digest the poyson of my flesh,

Being strumpeted by thy contagion.

Keep then faire league and truce with thy true bed,

I live distain'd ; thou undishonoured.

Antip. Plead you to me faire dame ? I know you not :

In Ephesus I am but two houres old,

As strange unto your town, as to your talk,

Who every word by all my wit being scan'd,

Wants wit in all, one word to understand.

Luci. Fie brother, how the world is chang'd with you :

When were you wont to use my sister thus ?

She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.

Ant. By Dromio ?

Drom. By me.

Adr. By thee, and thus thou didst return from him.
That he did buffet thee, and in his blows,
Denied my house for his, me for his wife.

Ant. Did you converse sir with this Gentlewoman :
What is the course and drift of your compact ?

S. Dro. I sir ? I never saw her till this time.

Ant. Villain thou liest, for even her very words,
Didst thou deliver to me on the Mart.

S. Dro. I never spake with her in all my life.

Ant. How can she thus then call us by our names ?
Unlesse it be by inspiration.

Adr. How ill agrees it with your gravitie,
To counterfeit thus grosely with your slave,
Abetting him to thwart me in my moode ;
Be it my wrong, you are from me exempt,
But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.

Come I will fasten on this sleeve of thine :

Thou art an Elme, my husband, I a Vine :

Whose weaknesse married to thy stronger state,

Makes me with thy strength to communicate :

If ought possesse thee from me, it is drosse,

Usurping Ivie, Brier, or idle Mosse,

Who all for want of pruning, with intrusion,

Infect thy Sap, and live on thy confusion.

Ant. To me she speaks, she moves me for her theame ;

What, was I married to her in my dreame ?

Or sleep I now, and think I hear all this ?

What error drives our eyes and eares amisse ?

Untill I know this sure uncertaintie,

Ile entertain the free'd fallacie.

Luc. Dromio, Go bid the servants spred for dinner.

S. Dro. Oh for my beads, I crosse me for a sinner.

This is the fairy land, oh spire of spite,

We talk with Goblins, Owles and Elves Sprights ;

If we obey them not, this will insue :

They'll suck our breath, or pinch us black and blew.

Luc. Why prat'st thou to thy self,

Dromio, thou Dromios snail, thou slug, thou sot.

S. Dro. I am transformed Master, am I not ?

Ant. I think thou art in minde, and so am I.

S. Dro. Nay Master, both in minde, and in my shape.

Ant. Thou hast thine own forme.

S. Dro. No, I am an Ape.

Luc. If thou art chang'd to ought, 'tis to an Asse.

S. Dro. 'Tis true she rides me, and I long for grasse.

'Tis so, I am an Asse, else it could never be,

But I should know her as well as she knows me.

Adr. Come, come, no longer will I be a fool,

To put the finger in the eye and weep ;

Whil'st man and master laughs my woes to scorn :

Come sir to dinner, Dromio keep the gate :

Husband Ile dine above with you to day,

And thrive you of a thousand idle pranks :

Sirra, if any ask you for your Master,

Say he dines forth, and let no creature enter :

Come sister, Dromio play the Porter well.

Ant. Am I in earth, in heaven, or in hell ?

Sleeping or waking, mad or well advis'd

Known unto these, and to my self disguis'd I

Ile say as they say, and persevere so

And in this mist at all adventures go.

S. Dro. Master, shall I be Porter at the gate ?

Adr. I, and let none enter, least I break your pate.

Luci. Come, come, Antipholus, we dine too late.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, his man Dromio, Angelo the Goldsmith, and Balhazar the Merchant.

E. Ant. Good signior Angelo you must excuse us all,
My wife is shrewish when I keep not houres,
Say that I lingerd with you at your shop
To see the making of her Carkaner,
And that to morrow you will bring it home.
But here's a villaine that would face me down
He met me on the Mart, and that I beat him,
And charg'd him with a thousand marks in gold,
And that I did deny my wife and house;
Thou drunkard thou, what didst thou mean by this?

E. Dro. Say what you will sir, but I know what I know,
That you beat me at the Mart I have your hand to show;
If the skin were parchmet, & the blows you gave were ink,
Your hand-writing would tell you what I think.

E. Ant. I think thou art an asse.

E. Dro. Marry so it doth appear
By the wrongs I suffer, and the blows I bear:
I should kick being kickt, and being at that passe,
You would keep from my heels, and beware of an asse.

E. An. Y'are sad signior Balhazar, pray God our cheer
May answer my good will, and your good welcom here.

Bal. I hold your dainties cheap sir, & your welcom deer.

E. Ant. Oh signior Balhazar, either at flesh or fish.
A table full of welcome, makes scarce one dainty dish.

Bal. Good meat sir is common that every churle affords.

Ant. And welcome more common, for that's nothing but words.

Bal. Small cheere and great welcome, makes a merry feast.

Ant. I, to a miggardly Host, and more sparing guest:
But though my cates be mean, take them in goodpart,
Better cheere may you have, but not with better hart.
But soft, my door is lockt; go bid them let us in.

E. Dro. Maud, Briget, Marian, Cissy, Gillian, Ginn.

S. Dro. Mome, Malt-horse, Capon, Coxcombe, Idi-or, Patch.

Either get thee from the door; or sit down at the hatch:
Dost thou conjure for wenches, that thou calst for such store,
When one is one too many, go get thee from the doore.

E. Dro. What patch is made our porter? my Master stays in the streer.

S. Dro. Let him walk from whence he came, lest he catch cold on's feet.

E. Ant. Who talks within there? ho, open the door.

S. Dro. Right sir, Ile tell you when, and you'll tell me wherefore.

Ant. Wherefore? for my dinner: I have not din'd to day.

S. Dro. Nor to day here you must nor, come again when you may.

Ant. What art thou that keep'st me out from the house I owe?

S. Dro. The Porter for this time Sir, and my name is Dromio.

E. Dro. O villaine, thou hast stolne both mine office and my name.

The one ne're got me credit, the other mickle blame:
If thou hadst bid Dromio to day in my place,

Thou wouldst have chang'd thy face for a name, or thy name for an asse.

Enter Luce.

Luc. What a coile is there Dromio? who are those at the gate?

E. Dro. Let my Master in Luce.

Luc. Faith no, he comes too late, and so tell your Master.

E. Dro. O Lord I must laugh, have at you with a Proverb.

Shall I set in my staffe.

Luc. Have at you with another, that's when? can you tell?

S. Dro. If thy name be called Luce, Luce thou hast an-swer'd him well.

Ant. Do you hear you minion, you'll let us in I hope?

Luce. I thought to have askt you.

S. Dro. And you said no.

E. Dro. So come help, well struck, there was blow for blow.

Ant. Thou baggage let me in.

Luce. Can you tell for whose sake?

E. Drom. Master, knock the door hard.

Luc. Let him knock till it ake.

Ant. You'll cry for this minion, if I beat the door down.

Luc. What needs all that, and a paire of stocks in the Town?

Enter Adriana.

Adr. Who is that at the door that keeps all this noise?

S. Dro. By my troth your Town is troubled with unruly boys.

Ant. Are you there Wife? you might have come before.

Adr. Your wife sir knave? go get you from the door.

E. Dro. If you went in paine Master, this knave would go sore.

Angelo. Here is neither cheer sir, nor welcome, we would faine have either.

Baltz. In debating which was best, we shall part with neither.

E. Dro. They stand at the Door, Master, bid them
we come hither.

Ant. There is something in the winde, that we cannot get in.

E. Dro. You would say so Master, if your garments were thin.

Your cake here is warme within: you stand here in the cold.

It would make a man as mad as a Buck to be so bought and sold.

Ant. Go fetch me something, Ile break ope the gate.

S. Dro. Break any breaking here, and Ile break your knaves pate.

E. Dro. A man may break a word with you sir, and words are but winde;

I and break it in your face, so he break it not behinde.

S. Dro. It seems thou want'st breaking, out upon thee hinde.

E. Dro. Heer's too much, out upon thee, I pray thee let me in.

S. Dro. I, when fowles have no feathers and fish have no fin.

Ant. Well, Ile break in: go borrow me a crow.

E. Dro. A crow without feather, Master mean you so;
For

For a fish without a fin, there's a fowle without a feather,
If a crow help us in sirra, wee'll pluck a crow together.

Ant. Go, get thee gon, fetch me an iron Crow.

Balth. Have patience fir, oh let it not be so,
Herein you warre against your reputation,
And draw within the compasse of suspect
Th' unviolated honour of your wife.

Once this your long experience of your wisdom,
Her sober vertue, years and modesty,
Plead on your part some cause to you unknown;
And doubt not fir, but she will well excuse
Why at this time the doors are made against you.
Be rul'd by me, depart in patience,
And let us to the Tyger all to dinner,
And about evening come your self alone,
To know the reason of this strange restraint:
If by strong hand you offer to break in
Now in the stirring passage of the day,
A vulgar comment will be made of it;
And that supposed by the common rowe
Against your yet ungalled estimation.
That may with foule intrusion enter in,
And dwell upon your grave when you are dead;
For slander lives upon succession;
For ever hou'd, where it once gets possession.

Ant. You have prevail'd, I will depart in quiet,
And in despite of mirth mean to be merry:
I know a wench of excellent discourse,
Pretty and witty; wilde, and yet too gentle;
There will we dine: this woman that I mean
My wife (but I protest without desert)
Hath oftentimes upbraided me withall:
To her will we to dinner, get you home
And fetch the chaine, by this I know 'tis made,
Bring it I pray you to the Porpentine,
For there's the house: That chain I will bestow
(Be it for nothing but to spight my wife)
Upon my hostesse there, good fir make haste:
Since mine own doors refuse to entertain me,
He knock else-where, to see if they'll disdain me.

Ang. He meet you at that place some houre fir hence.

Ant. Do so, this jest shall cost me some expence.

Exeunt.

Enter Luciana, with Antipholus of Siracusa.

Julia. And may it be that you have quite forgot
A husbands office? shall Antipholus
Even in the spring of Love, thy Love-springs rot?
Shall love in buildings grow so ruinate?
If you did wed my sister for her wealth,
Then for her wealths-sake use her with more kindnesse:
Or if you like elsewhere, do it by stealth,
Muffle your false love with some shew of blindness:
Let not my sister reade it in your eye:
Be not thy tongue thy own shames Orator:
Look sweet, speak faire, become disloyaltie:
Apparell vice like vertues harbinger:
Beare a faire pretence, though your heart be tainted,
Teach sinne the carriage of a holy Saint,
Be secret false: what need she be acquainted?
What simple thiefe brags of his own attaine?
'Tis double wrong to truant with your bed,
And let her reade it in thy looks at boord:
Shame hath a bastard fame, well mannaged,
Ill deeds are doubled with an evill word:
Alas poor women, make us not beleve
(Being compact of credit) that you love us,

Though others have the arme, shew us the sleeve:
We in your motion turne; and you may move us.
Then gentle brother get you in again;
Comfort my sister, cheere her, call her wife;
'Tis holy sport to be a little vain,
When the sweet breath of flattery conquers strife.

S. Ant. Sweet Mistress: what your name is else I know not;

Nor by what wonder you do bit of mine:
Lesse in your knowledge, and your grace you show not,
Then our earths wonder, more than earth divine.
Teach me deere creature how to think and speak:
Lay open to my earthy grosse conceit:
Smothered in errors, feeble, shadow, weak,
The foulded meaning of your words deceit;
Against my souls pure truth, why labour you,
To make it wander in an unknown field?
Are you a god? would you create me new?
Transforme me then, and to your powre Ile yeeld.
But if that I am I, then well I know,
Your weeping sister is no wife of mine,
Nor to her bed a homage do I owe:
Far more, far more, to you do I decline:
Oh traine me not sweet Mermaide with thy note
To drown me in thy sisters flood of teares:
Sing Siren for thy self, and I will dote:
Spred ore the silver waves thy golden haire;
And as a bed Ile take thee, and there lie:
And in that glorious supposition think,
He guins by death, that hath such means to die:
Let Love, being light, be drowned if she sinke.

Luc. What are you mad, that you do reason so?

Ant. Not mad, but mated, how I do not know.

Luc. It is a fault that springeth from your eye.

Ant. For gazing on your beames, faire Sun being by.

Luc. Gaze when you should, and that will cleere your sight.

Ant. As good to wink sweet love, as look on night.

Luc. Why call you me love? call my sister so.

Ant. Thy sisters sister.

Luc. That's my sister.

Ant. No: it is thy self, mine own selfs better part:

Mine eyes cleere eye, my deere hearts dearer heart,
My food, my fortune, and my sweet hopes aime;
My sole earths heaven, and my heavens claime.

Luc. All this my sister is, or else should be.

Ant. Call thy self sister sweet, for I am thee:
Thee will I love, and with thee lead my life;
Thou hast no husband yet, nor I no wife;
Give me thy hand.

Luc. Oh soft fir, hold you still:

He fetch my sister to get her good will.

Enter Dromio, Siracusia.

Ant. Why how now Dromio, where run'st thou so fast.

S. Dro. Do you know me fir? Am I Dromio? Am I your man? Am I my self?

Ant. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thy self.

Dro. I am an asse, I am a womans man, and besides my self.

Ant. What womans man? and how besides thy self?

Dro. Marry fir, besides my self, I am due to a woman:
One that claimes me, one that haunts me, one that will have me.

Ant. What

Ant. What claime layes she to thee?

Dro. Marry fir, such claime as you would lay to your horse, and she would have me as a beast; not that I being a beast she would have me, but that she being a very beastly creature lays claime to me.

Ant. What is she?

Dro. A very reverent body: I such a one, as a man may not speak of, without he say fir reverence: I have but leane luck in the match, and yet is she a wondrous fat marriage.

Ant. How dost thou mean a fat marriage?

Dro. Marry fir, she's the Kitchin wench, and all greafe, and I know not what use to put her too, but to make a Lamp of her, and run from her by her own light. I warrant, her ragges and the Tallow in them, will burne a Poland Winter: If she lives till doomefday, she'll burne a week longer than the whole World.

Ant. What complexion is she of?

Dro. Swart like my shooe, but her face nothing like so cleane kept: for why? she sweates a man may goe over-shoes in the grime of it.

Ant. That's a fault that water will mend.

Dro. No fir, 'tis in graine, Noahs flood could not do it.

Ant. What's her name?

Dro. Nell Sir: but her name is three quarters, that's an Ell and three quarters, will not measure her from hip to hip.

Ant. Then she beares some bredth?

Dro. No longer from head to foot, then from hip to hip: she is sphericall like a globe: I could find out Countries in her.

Ant. In what part of her body stands Ireland?

Dro. Marry fir in her buttockes, I found it out by the bogges.

Ant. Where Scotland?

Dro. I found it by the barrenesse, hard in the palme of the hand.

Ant. Where France?

Dro. In her forehead, arm'd and reverted, making warre against her haire.

Ant. Where England?

Dro. I look'd for the chalky Cliffes, but I could find no whitenesse in them. But I guesse, it stood in her chin by the salt rheume that ran between France, and it.

Ant. Where Spaine?

Dro. Faith I saw it not: but I felt it hot in her breath.

Ant. Where America, the Indies?

Dro. Oh fir, upon her nose, all ore embellished with Rubies, Carbuncles, Saphires, declining their rich Aspect to the hot breath of Spaine, who sent whole Armadoes of Carraets to be ballast at her nose.

Ant. Where stood Belgia, the Netherlands?

Dro. Oh fir, I did not look so low. To conclude, this drudge or Diviner layd claime to me, call'd me Dromio, swore I was assur'd to her, told me what privie marks I had about me, as the marks of my shoulder, the Mole in my neck, the great Wart on my left arme, that I amaz'd ran from her as a Witch. And I think, if my brest had not been made of faith, and my heart of steel, she had transform'd me to a Curtall dog, and made me turn i'th wheel.

Ant. Go hie thee presently, post to the rode, And if the winde blow any way from shore, I will not harbour in this Town to night. If any Bark put forth, come to the Marr,

Where I will walk till thou return to me:

If every one knows us, and we know none, 'Tis time I think to trudge, pack, and be gone.

Dro. As from a Bear a man would run for life, So flie I from her that would be my wife. Exit.

Ant. There's none but witches do inhabite here, And therefore 'tis hie time that I were hence: She that doth call me husband, even my soul Doth for a wife abhorre. But her faire sister Possess with such a gentle soveraigne grace, Of such enchanting presence and discourse, Hath almost made me Traytor to my self: But least my self be guilty to self-wrong, Ile stop mine eares against the Mermaids song.

Enter Angelo with the Chain.

Ang. M. Antipholis.

Ant. I that's my name.

Ang. I know it well fir, loe here's the Chain, I thought to have tane you at the Porperine, The Chain unfinished made me stay thus long.

Ant. What is your will that I shall do with this?

Ant. What please your self fir: I have made it for you.

Ant. Made it for me fir! I bespoke it not.

Ang. Not once, nor twice, but twentie times you have:

Go home with it, and please your Wife withall, And soon at supper time Ile visit you, And then receive my money for the Chain.

Ant. I pray you fir receive the money now, For fear you ne're see Chain, nor money more.

Ang. You are a merry man fir, fare you well. Exit.

Ant. What I should think of this, I cannot tell:

But this I think, there's no man is so vain, That would refuse so faire an offer'd Chain. I see a man here needs not live by shifts, When in the streets he meets such Golden gifts: Ile to the Marr, and there for Dromio stay, If any Ship put out, then strait away. Exit.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Merchant, Goldsmith, and an Officer.

Mer. You know since Pentecost the sum is due, And since I have not much importun'd you, Nor now I had not, but that I am bound To Persia, and want Gilders for my voyage: Therefore make present satisfaction, Or Ile attach you by this Officer.

Gold. Even just the sum that I do owe to you, Is growing to me by Antipholis, And in the instant that I met with you, He had of me a Chain: at five a clock I shall receive the money for the same: Pleaseth you walk with me down to his house, I will discharge my bond, and thank you too.

Enter Antipholis Ephes. Dromio from the Courtizans.

Offi. That labour may you save: See where he comes.

Ant. While I go to the Goldsmiths house, go thou

And

And buy a ropes end, that will I bestow
Among my wife, and their confederates,
For locking me out of my doors by day :
But soft I see the Goldsmith ; get thee gone,
Buy thou a rope and bring it home to me.

Dro. I buy a thousand pound a yeare, I buy a rope.

Exit Dromio.

Eph. Ant. A man is well help up that trusts to you,
I promised your presence, and the Chain,
But neither Chain nor Goldsmith came to me :
Belike you thought our love would last too long
If it were chain'd together : and therefore came not.

Gold. Saving your merry humor, here's the note
How much your Chain weighs to the utmost Raccar,
The fineness of the Gold, and chargefull fashion,
Which doth amount to three odde Duckets more
Then I stand debted to this Gentleman,
I pray you see him presently discharg'd,
For he is bound to Sea, and stays but for it.

Ant. I am not furnish'd with the present money :
Besides I have some business in the Town,
Good Signior take the stranger to my house,
And with you take the Chain, and bid my wife
Disburse the summe, on the receipt thereof,
Perchance I will be there as soon as you.

Gold. Then you will bring the Chain to her your self.

Ant. No, bear it with you, least I come not time enough.

Gold. Well sir, I will ? Have you the Chain about
you ?

Ant. And if I have not sir, I hope you have :
Or else you may return without your money.

Gold. Nay come I pray you sir, give me the Chain :
Both winde and tide stays for the Gentleman,
And I to blame have held him here too long.

Ant. Good Lord, you use this dalliance to excuse
Your breach of promise to the Porpentine,
I should have chid you for not bringing it,
But like a shrew you first begin to brawle.

Mer. The houre steals on, I pray you sir dispatch.

Gold. You hear how he importunes me, the Chain :

Ant. Why give it to my wife, and fetch your money.

Gold. Come, come, you know I gave it you even now Either send the Chain, or send me by some token.

Ant. Fie, now you run this humor out of breath,
Come where's the Chain, I pray you let me see it.

Mer. My business cannot brook this dalliance,
Good sir say, where you'll answer me, or no :
If not, Ile leave him to the Officer.

Ant. I answer you ? Why should I answer you ?

Gold. The money that you owe me for the Chain.

Ant. I owe you none till I receive the Chain.

Gold. You know I gave it you half an houre since.

Ant. You gave me none, you wrong me much to say so.

Gold. You wrong me sir in denying it :
Consider how it stands upon my credit.

Mer. Well Officer, arrest him at my suite,

Off. I do, and charge you in the Dukes name to obey me.

Gold. This touches me in reputation.
Either consent to pay the sum for me,
Or I attach you by this Officer.

Ant. Consent to pay that I never had :
Arrest me foolish fellow if thou dar'st.

Gold. Here is thy fee, arrest him, Officer
I would not spare my brother in this case,
If he should scorn me so apparantly.

Off. I do arrest you sir, you hear the suite.

Ant. I do obey thee, till I give thee baile.
But sirrah you shall buy this sport as deer,
As all the mettall in your shop will answer.

Gold. Sir, sir, I shall have Law in Ephesus.
To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter Dromio Sira. from the Bay.

Dro. Master, there's a Bark of Epidamium,
That stays but till her Owner comes aboard,
Then sir she bears away. Our fraughtage sir,
I have convey'd aboard, and I have brought
The Oyle, the Balsamum, and Aqua-vitæ.
The Ship is in her trim, the merry winde
Blows faire from land : they stay for nought at all,
But for their Owner, Master, and your self.

Ant. How now I a Madman ! Why thou peevish sheep,
What Ship of Epidamium stays for me ?

S. Dro. A Ship you sent me to, to hier wastage.

Ant. Thou drunken slave, I sent thee for a rope,
And told thee to what purpose and what end.

S. Dro. You sent me for a ropes end as soon,
You sent me to the Bay sir, for a Bark.

Ant. I will debate this matter at more leisure,
And teach your eares to list me with more heed :
To Adriana Villain hie thee Straight :

Give her this key, and tell her in the Desk

That's cover'd o're with Turkish Tapistry,

There is a purse of Duckets, let her send it :

Tell her, I am arrested in the streer,

And that shall baile me : hie thee slave, be gone,

On Officer to prison, till it come.

Exeunt.

S. Dro. To Adriana, that is where we din'd,
Where Donsabell did claime me for her husband,
She is too big I hope for me to compasse,
Thither I must, although against my will :
For servants must their Masters minds fulfill.

Exit.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adri. Ah Luciana, did he tempt thee so,
Might'st thou perceive austerely in his eye,
That he did plead in earnest, yea or no :
Look'd he or red or pale, or sad or merrily ?
What observation mad'st thou in this case ?
Of his hearts Meteors tilting in his face ?

Luc. First he denied you had in him no right.

Adri. He meant he did me none : the more my spight.

Luc. Then swore he that he was a stranger here.

Adri. And true he swore, though yet forsworne he were.

Luc. Then pleaded I for you.

Adri. And what said he ?

Luc. That love I begg'd for you, he begg'd of me.

Adri. With what perswasion did he tempt thy love ?

Luc. With words, that in an honest suit might move.
First, he did praise my beautie, then my speech.

Adri. Did'st speak him faire ?

Luc. Have patience I beseech.

Adri. I cannot, nor I will not hold me still,
My tongue, though not my heart, shall have his will.
He is deformed, crooked, old and sere,
Ill-fac'd, worse bodied, shapelesse every where :
Vicious, ungentle, foolish, blunt, unkinde,

Stigma.

Stigmaticall in making, worse the minde.

Luc. Who would be jealous then of such a one ?
No evill lost is wail'd, when it is gone.

Adr. Ah but I think him better than I say :
And yet would herein others eyes were worse :
Far from her nest the Lapwing cryes away ;
My heart prays for him, though my tongue do curse.

Enter S. Dromio.

Dro. Here, go : the desk, the purse, sweet now make haste.

Luc. How hast thou lost thy breath ?

S. Dro. By running fast.

Adr. Where is thy Master Dromio ? Is he well ?

S. Dro. No, he's in Tartar limbo, worse than hell :
A devill in an everlasting garment hath him ;
One whose hard heart is button'd up with steel :
A Feind, a Fairie, pirtileffe and ruffe :
A Wolfe, nay worse, a fellow all in buffe,
A back friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermands
The passages of allies, creeks, and narrow lands :
A hound that runs Counter, and yet draws drifoot well,
One that before the Judgement carries poor souls to hell.

Adr. Why man, what is the matter ?

S. Dro. I do not know the matter, he is rested on the case.

Adr. What is he arrested ? tell me at whose suite ?

S. Dro. I know not at whose suite he is arrested, well ;
but he's in a suite of buffe which rested him, that I can tell :
Will you send him Mistris redemption, the money in his desk ?

Adr. Go fetch it Sister : this I wonder at.

Exit Luciana.

That he unknown to me should be in debt :

Tell me, was he arested on a band ?

S. Dro. Not on a band, but on a stronger thing :
A chain, a chain, do you not hear it ring ?

Adria. What, the chain ?

S. Dro. No, no, the bell, 'tis time that I were gone :
It was two ere I left him, and now the clock strikes one.

Adr. The hours come back ! that did I never hear.

S. Dro. Oh yes, if any hour meet a Sergeant, a turns back for very fear.

Adri. As if time were in debt : how fondly do'st thou reason ?

S. Dro. Time is a very bankrout, and owes more than he's worth to season.

Nay, he's a thief too : have you not heard men say,
That time comes stealing on by night and day ?
If I be in debt and theif, and a Sergeant in the way,
Hath he not reason to turn back an hour in a day ?

Enter Luciana.

Luc. Go Dromio, there's the money, bear it straight,
And bring thy Master home immediately.
Come sister, I am prest down with conceit :
Conceit, my comfort and my injurie.

Exit.

Enter Antipholis Siracusan.

An. S. There's not a man I meet but doth salute me,
As if I were their well acquainted friend,
And every one doth call me by my name :
Some tender money to me, some invite me ;
Some other give me thanks for kindnesses ;
Some offer me Commodities to buy.
Even now a tailor call'd me in his shop,

And show'd me Silks that he had bought for me,
And therewithall took measure of my body.
Sure these are but imaginary wiles,
And Lapland Sorcerers inhabite here.

Enter Dromio, Sir.

S. Dro. Master, here's the gold you sent me for : what have you got the picture of old Adam new apparel'd ?

Ant. What gold is this ? What Adam do'st thou mean ?

S. Dro. Not that Adam that kept the Paradise : but that Adam that keeps the prison ; he that goes in the calves-skin, that was kil'd for the Prodigall : he that came behinde you sir, like an evill Angel, and bid you forsake your liberty.

Ant. I understand thee not.

S. Dro. No ? why 'tis a plain case : he that went like a Base Viole in a case of leather : the man sir, that when Gentlemen are tired gives them a sob, and rests them : he sir, that takes pity on decayed men, and gives them suits of durance : he that sets up his rest to do more exploits with his Mace, than a Moris Pike.

Ant. What 't thou mean'st an Officer ?

S. Dro. I Sir, the Serjeant of the Band : he that brings any man to answer it that breaks his Band : one that thinks a man alwayes going to bed, and saith, God give you good rest.

Ant. Well sir, there rest in your foolery :

Is there any Ship puts forth to night ? may we be gone ?

S. Dro. Why sir, I brought you word an houre since that the Bark Expedition put forth to night, and then, were you hindred by the Serjeant to carry for the Hoy Delay ; Here are the angels that you sent for to deliver you.

Ant. The fellow is distract, and so am I,
And here we wander in illusions :
Some blessed power deliver us from hence.

Enter a Curtizan.

Cur. Well mer, well mer, Master Antipholis :
I see sir, you have found the Goldsmith now :
Is that the Chain you promis'd me to day ?

Ant. Sathan avoide, I charge thee tempt me not.

S. Dro. Master, is this Mistris Sathan ?

Ant. It is the devill.

S. Dro. Nay, she is worse, she is the devils dam :
And here she comes in the habit of a light wench, and thereof comes that the wenches say God dam me, That's as much to say, God make me a light wench : It is written, they appeare to men like angels of light, light is an effect of fire, and fire will burne : ergo, light wenches will burne, come not neere her.

Cur. Your man and you are marveilous merry sir.
Will you go with me, wee'll mend our dinner here ?

S. Dro. Master, if you do, expect spoon-meate, or bespeak a long spoon.

Ant. Why Dromio ?

S. Dromio. Marry he must have a long spoon that must eat with the devill.

Ant. Avoid then fiend, what tel'st thou me of sup-
Thou art, (as you are all,) a forcereffe ? (ping ?
I conjure thee to leave me, and be gon.

Cur. Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner,
Or for my Diamond the chain you promis'd,
And Ile be gon sir, and not trouble you.

S. Dro. Some devils ask but the parings of ones naile, a rush, a haire, a drop of bloud, a pin, a nut, a cherry-stone: but she more covetous, would have a chain: Master be wise, and if you give it her, the devill will shake her Chain, and fright us with it.

Cur. I pray you sir, my Ring, or else the Chain, I hope you do not mean to cheat me so?

Ant. Avant thou witch: Come Dromio let us go.

S. Dro. Flie pride says the Pea-cock, Mist'ris that you know. Exeunt.

Cur. Now out of doubt Antipholus is mad. Else would he never so demean himself, A Ring he hath of mine worth fortie Duckets, And for the same he promis'd me a Chain; Both one and other he denies me now: The reason that I gather he is mad, (Besides this present instance of his rage,) Is a mad tale he told to day at dinner, Of his own doors being shut against his entrance, Belike his wife acquainted with his fits, On purpose shut the doors against his way. My way is now to hie home to his house, And tell his wife that being Lunatick, He rush'd into my house, and took perforce My Ring away. This course I fittest choose, For forty Duckets is too much to loose.

Exit.

Enter Antipholus Ephes. with a Jaylor.

An. Fear me not man, I will not break away, Ile give thee ere I leave thee so much money To warrant thee as I am rested for. My wife is in a wayward mood to day, And will not lightly trust the Messenger, That I should be attach'd in Ephesus, I tell you 'twill sound harshly in her eares.

Enter Dromio Eph. with a ropes end.

Here comes my Man, I think he brings the money. How now sir? Have you that I sent you for?

E. Dro. Here's that I warrant you will pay them all.

Ant. But where's the Money?

E. Dro. Why sir, I gave the Money for the Rope.

Ant. Five hundred Duckets villain for a rope?

E. Dro. Ile serve you sir five hundred at the rate.

Ant. To what end did I bid thee hie thee home?

E. Dro. To a ropes end sir, and to that end am I return'd.

Ant. And to that end sir, I will welcome you.

Off. Good sir be patient.

E. Dro. Nay 'tis for me to be patient, I am in adversity.

Off. Good now hold thy tongue.

E. Dro. Nay, rather perswade him to hold his hands.

Ant. Thou whorson senselesse Villain.

E. Dro. I would I were senselesse sir, that I might not feel your blows.

Ant. Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an Ass.

E. Dro. I am an Ass indeed, you may prove it by my long eares. I have served him from the hour of my Nativitie to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service but blows. When I am cold, he heats me with beating; when I am warme, he cools me with beating; I am wak'd with it when I sleep, rais'd with it when I sit, driven out of doors with it when I go from home, welcom'd home with it when I return, nay

I bear it on my shoulders, as a beggar woont her brat, and I think when he hath lam'd me, I shall begge with it from door to door.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtizan, and a School-master, called Pinch.

Ant. Come go along, my wife is comming yonder.

E. Dro. Mist'ris respite finem, respect your end, or rather the prophesie like the Parrot, beware the ropes end.

Ant. Wilt thou still talke?

Beats Dro.

Cur. How say you now? Is not your husband mad?

Adri. His incivility confirms no lesse:

Good Doctor Pinch, you are a Conjuror, Establish him in his true sence againe, And I will please you what you will demand.

Luc. Alas how fiery and how sharp he looks,

Cur. Mark, how he trembles in his extasie.

Pinch. Give me your hand, and let me feel your pulse.

Ant. There is my hand, and let it feel your care.

Pinch. I charge thee Satan, hous'd within this man To yeeld possession to my holy prayers, And to thy state of darknesse hie thee straight, I conjure thee by all the Saints in heaven.

Ant. Peace doting wizzard, peace; I am not mad,

Adr. Oh that thou wer't not, poor distressed soul.

Ant. You Minion you, are these your Customers? Did this companion with the saffron face Revell and feast it at my house to day, Whil'st upon me the guiltie doors were shut, And I denied to enter in my house.

Adr. O husband, God doth know you din'd at home, Where would you had remaind untill this time, Free from these slanders, and this open shame.

Ant. Din'd at home? Thou Villain, what sayest thou?

Dro. Sir sooth to say, you did not dine at home.

Ant. Were not my doors lockt up, and I shut out?

Dro. Perdie, your doors were lockt, and you shut out.

Ant. And did not she her self revile me there?

Dro. Sans Fable, she her self revil'd you there.

Ant. Did not her Kitchen maide raile, taunt, and scorne me?

Dro. Certis she did, the Kitchen vestall scorn'd you:

Ant. And did not I in rage depart from thence?

Dro. In veritie you did, my bones bear witness, That since have felt the vigor of his rage.

Adr. It's good to smooth him in these contraries?

Pinch. It is no shame, the fellow finds his veine, And yeelding to him, humors well his frensie.

Ant. Thou hast suborn'd the Goldsmith to arrest me.

Adr. Alas, I sent you Money to redeem you, By Dromio here, who came in hast for it.

Dro. Money by me? Heart and good will you might, But surely Master not a ragge of Money.

Ant. Wentst not thou to her for a purse of Duckets?

Adri. He came to me and I deliver'd it.

Luci. And I am witness with her that she did:

Dro. God and the Rope-maker bear me witness, That I was sent for nothing but a rope.

Pinch. Mist'ris, both Man and Master is posselt. I know it by their pale and deadly looks.

They

They must be bound and laid in some dark room.

Ant. Say wherefore didst thou lock me forth to day,
And why dost thou deny the bag of gold?

Adr. I did not gentle husband lock thee forth.

Dro. And gentle M. I receiv'd no gold:
But I confesse sir, that we were lock'd out.

Adr. Dissembling Villain, thou speak'st false in both.

Ant. Dissembling harlot, thou art false in ail,
And art confederate with a damned pack,
To make a loathsome abject scorn of me:
But with these nails Ile pluck out these false eyes,
That would behold in me this shamefull sport.

*Enter three or foure, and offer to binde him:
He strives.*

Adr. Oh binde him, binde him, let him not come neer me.

Pinch. More company, the fiend is strong within him.

Luc. Aye me poor man, how pale and wan he looks.

Ant. What, wilt you murder me, thou Jaylor thou?
I am thy prisoner, wilt thou suffer them to make a rescue?

Offi. Masters let him go: he is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.

Pinch. Go binde this man, for he is frantick too.

Adr. What wilt thou do, thou peevish Officer?
Hast thou delight to see a wretched man
Do outrage and displeasure to himself?

Offi. He is my prisoner, if I let him go,
The debt he owes will be requir'd of me.

Adr. I will discharge thee ere I go from thee,
Bear me forthwith unto his Creditor,
And knowing how the debt grows I will pay it.
Good Master Doctor see him safe convey'd.
Home to my house, oh most unhappy day.

Ant. Oh most unhappy strumper.

Dro. Master, I am here entred in bond for you.

Ant. Out on thee Villain, wherefore dost thou mad me?

Dro. Will you be bound for nothing, be mad good master, cry the devill.

Luc. God help poor souls, how idly do they talk.

Adr. Go bear him hence, sister go you with me:
Say now, whose suite is he arrested at?

Exeunt. Manet Offi. Adri. Luci. Courtizan.

Off. One Angelo a Goldsmith, do you know him?

Adr. I know the man: what is the summe he owes?

Off. Two hundred Duckers.

Adr. Say, how grows it due.

Off. Due for a Chain your husband had of him.

Adr. He did bespeak a Chain for me, but had it not.

Cour. When as your husband all in rage to day
Came to my house, and took away my Ring,
The Ring I saw upon his finger now,
Straight after did I meet him with a Chain,

Adr. It may be so, but I did never see it.
Come Jaylor, bring me where the Goldsmith is,
I long to know the truth hereof at large.

*Enter Antipholus Siracusan with his Rapier drawn,
and Dromio Sirac.*

Luc. God for thy mercy, they are loose again.

Adr. And come with naked swords,
Let's call more help to have them bound again.

Run all out.

Off. Away, they'll kill us.

Exeunt omnes, as fast as may be, frighted.

S. Ant. I see these Witches are affraid of swords.

S. Dro. She that would be your wife, now ran from you.

Ant. Come to the Centaure, fetch our stufte from thence:

I long that we were safe and sound aboard.

Dro. Faith stay here this night, they will surely do us no harm: you saw they spake us faire, give us gold:
me thinks they are such a gentle Nation, that but for the Mountain of mad flesh that claims mariage of me,
I could finde in my heart to stay here still, and turn Witch.

Ant. I will not stay to night for all the Town,
Therefore away, to get our stufte aboard. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scæna Prima.

Enter the Merchant and the Goldsmith.

Gold. I am sorry Sir that I have hindred you,
But I protest he had the Chain of me,
Though most dishonestly he did deny it.

Mer. How is the man esteem'd here in the Citie?

Gold. Of very reverent reputation sir,
Of credit infinite, highly belov'd.
Second to none that lives here in the Citie:
His word might bear my wealth at any time.

Mer. Speak softly, yonder as I think he walks.

Enter Antipholus and Dromio again.

Gold. 'Tis so: and that self-chain about his neck,
Which he forswore (most monstrously) to have.
Good sir draw neer to me, Ile speak to him:
Signior Antipholus, I wonder much
That you would put me to this shame and trouble.
And not without some scandall to your self,
With circumstance and oaths, so to deny
This chain, which now you wear so openly,
Beside the charge, the shame, imprisonment,
You have done wrong to this my honest friend,
Who but for staying on our Controversie,
Had hoisted sail, and put to sea to day:
This chain you had of me, can you deny it?

Ant. I think I had, I never did deny it.

Mer. Yes that you did sir, and forswore it too.

Ant. Who heard me to deny it or forswear it?

Mer. These eares of mine thou know'st did hear thee:
Fie on thee wretch, 'tis pittie that thou liv'st
To walk where any honest men resort.

Ant. Thou art a Villain to impeach me thus,
Ile prove mine honour, and mine honesty
Against thee presently, if thou dar'st stand:

Mer. I dare and do defie thee for a villain.

They draw. Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtizan, and others.

Adr. Hold, hurt him not for Gods sake, he is mad,
Some get within him, take his sword away:
Binde Dromio too, and bear them to my house.

S. Dro. Run master run, for Gods sake take a house,
This is some Priorie, in, or we are spoyl'd.

*Exeunt to the Priorie.
Enter*

Enter Lady Abbess.

Abb. Be quiet people, wherefore throng you hither?

Adr. To fetch my poor distracted husband hence;
Let us come in, that we may bind him fast,
And bear him home for his recovery.

Gold. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.

Mer. I am sorry now that I did draw on him.

Ab. How long hath this possession held the man?

Adr. This week he hath been heavy, sower, sad,
And much much different from the man he was:
But till this afternoon his passion
Ne're brake into extremity of rage.

Ab. Hath he not lost much wealth by wrack at Sea,
Buried some dear friend, hath not eise his eye
Stray'd his affection in unlawfull love,
A sin prevailing much in youthful men,
Who give their eyes the liberty of gazing.
Which of these sorrows is he subject to?

Adr. To none of these except it be the last,
Namely, some love that drew him oft from home.

Ab. You should for that have reprehended him.

Ad. Why so I did.

Ab. I, but not rough enough.

Ad. As roughly as my modesty would let me.

Ab. Haply in private.

Ad. And in assemblies too.

Ab. I, but not enough.

Ad. It was the copie of our conference.

In bed he slept not for my urging it,
At board he fed not for my urging it:
Alone, it was the subject of my Theam:
In company I often glanced it
Still did I tell him, it was vilde and bad.

Ab. And thereof came it that the man was mad.

The venomous clamours of a jealous woman,
Poysons more deadly then a mad dogs tooth.
It seems his sleeps were hindred by thy railing,
And thereof comes it that his head is light.
Thou sai'st his meat was saw'd with thy upbraidings,
Unquiet meals makes ill digestions,
Thereof the raging fire of feaver bred,
And what's a Feaver but a fit of Madnesse?
Thou say'st his sports were hindred by thy brawles.
Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth enſue
But muddy and dull melancholly,
Kinsman to grim and comfortlesse despair,
And at her heels a huge infectious troop
Of pale distemperatures, and foes to life?
In food, in sport, and life-preserving rest
To be disturb'd, would mad or man or beast:
The consequence is then, thy jealous fits
Have scar'd thy Husband from the use of wits.

Luc. She never reprehended him but mildly,
When he demean'd himself rough, rude, and wildely.
Why hear you those rebukes, and answer not?

Ad. She did berray me to my own reproof,
Good people enter and lay hold on him.

Ab. No, not a creature enters in my house.

Ad. Then let your servants bring my husband forth.

Ab. Neither: he took this place for sanctuary,
And it shall priviledge him from your hands,
Till I have brought him to his wits again,
Or lose my labour in assaying it.

Ad. I will attend my Husband, be his Nurse,

Diet his sicknesse, for it is my Office,
And will have no Attourney but my self,
And therefore let me have him home with me.

Ab. Be patient, for I will not let him stirre,
Till I have us'd the approved means I have,
With wholsome Sirrups, Drugs, and holy Prayers.
To make of him a formal man again:

It is a branch and parcell of mine oath,
A charitable duty of my order,
Therefore depart, and leave him here with me.

Ad. I will not hence, and leave my Husband here:
And ill it doth beseem your holinesse
To separate the Husband and the Wife.

Ab. Be quiet and depart, thou shalt not have him.

Luc. Complain unto the Duke of this indignity.

Ad. Come go, I will fall prostrate at his feet,
And never rise untill my tears and prayers
Have won his Grace to come in person hither,
And take perforce my husband from the Abbess. Exeunt

Enter Merchant and Goldsmith.

Mer. By this I think the Diall points at five:
Anon I'me sure the Duke himself in person
Comes this way to the Melancholly vale;
The place of death and sorry execution,
Behind the ditches of the Abbey here.

Gold. Upon what cause?

Mer. To see a reverend Syracusan Merchant,
Who put unluckily into this Bay
Against the Lawes and Statutes of this Town,
Beheaded publickly for his offence.

Gold. See where they come, we will behold his death.

Enter Adriana and Lucio.

Luc. Kneel to the Duke before he passe the Abbey.
Enter the Duke of Ephesus, and the Merchant of Syracuse bareheaded, with the Headsmen, and other Officers.

Duke. Yet once again proclaim it publickly,
If any friend will pay the summe for him,
He shall not die, so much we tender him.

Enter Adriana.

Adr. Justice most sacred Duke against the Abbess.

Duke. She is a virtuous and a reverend Lady,
It cannot be that she hath done thee wrong.

Ad. May it please your Grace, Antipholis my husband,
Whom I made Lord of me, and all I had,
(At your impotent Letters) this ill day,
A most outrageous fit of madnesse took him,
That desprately he hurried through the street,
With him his bondman, all as mad as he,
Doing displeasure to the Citizens,
By rushing in their houses: bearing thence Rings, Jewels, any thing his rage did like.
Once did I get him bound, and sent him home,
Whil'st to take order for the wrongs I went,
That here and there his fury had committed,
Anon, I wot not, by what strong escape
He broke from those that had the guard of him,
And with his mad attendant and himself,
Each one with irefull passion, with drawn Swords
Met us again, and madly bent on us,
Chac'd us away: till raising of more aid,
We came again to bind them: then they fled
Into this Abbey, whether we pursu'd them,
And here the Abbess shuts the gates on us,
And will not suffer us to fetch him out,
Nor send him forth that we may bear him thence.

Therefore most gracious Duke with thy command,
Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for help.

Duke. Long since thy husband serv'd me in my Wars,
And I to thee mgag'd a Princes word,
When thou did'st make him master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could.
Go some of you knock at the Abbey gate,
And bid the Lady Abbess come to me :
I will determine this before I stir.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. O Mistress, Mistress, shift and save your self,
My Master and his man are both broke loose,
Beaten the Maids a-row, and bound the Doctor,
Whose beard they have sing'd off with brands of fire,
And ever as it blaz'd, they threw on him
Great pails of pudled myre to quench the hair ;
My Mr. preaches patience to him, and the while
His man with Scissors nicks him like a fool :
And sure (unless you send some other present help)
Between them they will kill the Conjuror.

Ad. Peace fool, thy Master and his man are here,
And that is false thou dost report to us.

Mess. Mistress, upon my life I tell you true,
I have not breath'd almost since I did see it.
He cries for you, and vows if he can take you,
To scorch your face, and to disfigure you :

Cry within.

Hark, hark, I hear him-Mistress: flee, be gone.

Duke. Come, stand by me, fear nothing : guard with Halberds.

Ad. Ay me, it is my husband : witness you,
That he is borne about invisible,
Even now we hous'd him in the Abbey here,
And now he's there, past thought of humane reason.

Enter E. Antipholis, and E. Dromio of Ephesus.

E. Ant. Justice most gracious Duke, oh grant me Justice,
Even for the service that long since I did thee,
When I bestrid thee in the wars, and took Deep skars to save thy life ; even for the blood
That then I lost for thee, now grant me Justice.

Mer. Fat. Unless the fear of death doth make me dote, I see my son Antipholis and Dromio.

E. Ant. Justice (sweet Prince) against that woman
She whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife ; (there:
That hath abused and dishonoured me,
Even in the strength and height of injury :
Beyond imagination is the wrong
That She this day hath shameless thrown on me.

Duke. Discover how, and thou shalt find me just.

E. Ant. This day (great Duke) she shut the doors upon me.

Whilst she with Harlots feasted in my house.

Duke. A grievous fault : say woman didst thou so ?

Ad. No, my good Lord. My self, he, and my Sister,
To day did dine together : so befall my soul,
As this is false he burthens me withall.

Luc. Ne're may I look on day, nor sleep on night,
But she tells to your Highness simple truth.

Gold. O perjur'd woman ! They are both forsworn,
In this the Mad man justly chargeth them.

E. Ant. My Liege, I am advis'd what I say,
Neither disturb'd with the effect of Wine,
Nor heady-rash provok'd with raging ire,
Albeit my wrongs might make one wiser mad.

This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner ;
That Goldsmith there, were he not pack'd with her,
Could witness it : for he was with me then,
Who parted with me to go fetch a Chain,
Promising to bring it to the Porpentine,
Where Balthazar and I did dine together.
Our dinner done, and he not coming thither,
I went to seek him. In the street I met him,
And in his company that Gentleman.
There did this perjur'd Goldsmith swear me down,
That I this day from him receiv'd the Chain,
Which God he knows, I saw not. For the which,
He did arrest me with an Officer.

I did obey, and sent my Pefant home
For certain Duckets : he with none return'd.
Then fairly I bespoke the Officer
To go in person with me to my house.
By'th'way, we met my wife, her sister and a rabble more
Of vilde Confederates : Along with them
They brought one Pinch, a hungry lean-fac'd Villain ;
A meer Anatomy, a Mountebank,
A thred-bare Jugler, and a Fortune-teller,
A needy-hollow-ey'd-sharp-looking-wretch ;
A living dead man. This pernicious slave,
Forsooth took on him as a Conjuror :
And gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulse,
And with no-face (as t'were) out-facing me,
Cries out, I was posselt. Then altogether
They fell upon me, bound me, bore me thence,
And in a dark and dankish vault at home
There left me and my man, both bound together,
Till gnawing with my teeth my bonds asunder,
I gain'd my freedom ; and immediately
Ran hither to your Grace, whom I beseech
To give me ample satisfaction
For these deep shames, and great indignities.

Gold. My Lord, in truth, thus far I witness with him :
That he din'd not at home, but was lock'd out.

Duke. But had he such a Chain of thee, or no ?

Gold. He had my Lord, and when he ran in here,
These people saw the Chain about his neck.

Mer. Besides, I will be sworn these ears of mine,
Heard you confess you had the Chain of him ;
After you first forswore it on the Mart,
And thereupon I drew my sword on you :
And then you fled into this Abbey here,
From whence I think you are come by miracle.

E. Ant. I never came within these Abbey walls,
Nor ever didst thou draw thy sword on me :
I never saw the Chain, so help me heaven :
And this is false you burthen me withall.

Duke. Why what an intricate impeach is this ?
I think you all have drunk of Circes Cup :
If here you hous'd him, here he would have been.
If he were mad he would not plead so coldly :
You say he din'd at home, the Goldsmith here
Denies that saying. Sirra, what say you ?

E. Dro. Sir he din'd with her there, at the Porpentine.

Cur. He did, and from my finger snatch't that Ring.

E. Ant. 'Tis true (my Liege) this Ring I had of her.

Duke. Saw'st thou him enter at the Abbey here ?

Cur. As sure (my Liege) as I do see your Grace.

Duke. Why this is strange : Goe call the Abbess ther.

I think you are all mated, or stark mad.

Exit.

Enter one to the Abbess.

Fa. Most mighty Duke, vouchsafe me speake a word:
Haply I see a friend will save my life,
And pay the summe that may deliver me.

Duke. Speak freely Syracusau what thou wilt.

Fath. Is not your name sir call'd Antipholis?
And is not that your bond man Dromio?

E. Dro. Within this hour I was his bondman sir,
But he I thank him gnaw'd in two my cords,
Now am I Dromio, and his man unbound.

Fath. I am sure both of you remember me.

Dro. Our selves we doe remember sir by you:
For lately we were bound as you are now.
You are not Pinches Patient, are you Sir?

Father. Why look you strange on me? you know me well.

E. Ant. I never saw you in my life till now.

Fa. Oh! grief hath chang'd me since you saw me last,
And carefull hours with times deformed hand,
Have written strange defeatures in my face:
But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voyce?

Ant. Neither.

Fat. Dromio, nor thou.

Dro. No trust me sir, nor I.

Fat. I am sure thou dost?

E. Dromio. I sir, but I am sure I doe not, and whatsoever a man denies, you are now bound to believe him.

Fat. Not know my voyce! oh times extremity,
Hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poor tongue
In seven short yeares, that here my onely Son
Knowes not my feeble Key of untun'd cares?
Though now this grained face of mine be hid
In sap-consuming Winters drizled snow,
And all the Conduits of my blood froze up:
Yet hath my night of life some memory:
My winking lamps some fading glimmer left;
My dull deaf eares a little use to hear:
All these old witnesses, I cannot erre.
Tell me, thou art my Son Antipholis.

Ant. I never saw my Father in my life.

Fa. But seven yeares since, in Syracusa Boy,
Thou know'st we parted, but perhaps my Son,
Thou sham'st to acknowledge me in misery.

Ant. The Duke, and all that know me in the City,
Can witness with me that it is not so.
I ne're saw Syracusa in my life.

Duke. I tell thee Syracusau, twenty yeares
Have I been Patron to Antipholis,
During which time he ne're saw Syracusa:
I see thy age and dangers make thee dote.

*Enter the Abbess with Antipholis Syracusan,
and Dromio Sirac.*

Abbess. Most mighty Duke, behold a man much wrong'd.

All gather to see them.

Adr. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me.

Duke. One of these men is genius to the other:
And so of these which is the naturall man,
And which the spirit? who decipher them?

S. Dromio. I Sir am Dromio, command him away.

E. Dro. I Sir am Dromio, pray let me stay.

S. Ant. Egeon art thou not? or else his ghost.

S. Drom. Oh my old Master, who hath bound him here?

Abb. Who ever bound him, I will loose his bonds,
And gain a husband by his liberty:
Speak old Egeon, if thou be't the man
That had'st a Wife once call'd Emilia,
That bore thee at a burthen two fair Sons?
Oh if thou be't the same Egeon, speak:
And speak unto the same Emilia.

Duke. Why here begin this Morning story right:
These two Antipholis, these two so like,
And those two Dromio's, one in semblance:
Besides her urging of her wrack at Sea,
These are the Parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together.

Fat. If I dream not, thou art Emilia,
If thou art she, tell me, where is that Son
That floated with thee on the fatal raft.

Abb. By men of Epidamium, he, and I,
And the twin Dromio, all were taken up;
But by and by, rude Fishermen of Corinth
By force took Dromio and my Son from them,
And me they left with those of Epidamium.
What then became of them I cannot tell,
I, to this fortune that you see me in.

Duke. Antipholis thou cam'st from Corinth first

S. Ant. No sir, not I, I came from Syracuse.

Duke. Stay, stand apart, I know not which is which.

E. Ant. I came from Corinth my most gracious Lord.

E. Dro. And I with him.

E. Ant. Brought to this Town by that most famous Warriour,

Duke Menaphon, your most renowned Uncle.

Adr. Which of you two did dine with me to day?

S. Ant. I, gentle Mistress.

Adr. And are not you my husband?

E. Ant. No, I say nay to that.

S. Ant. And so doe I, yet did she call me so:
And this fair Gentlewoman here
Did call me Brother. What I told you then,
I hope I shall have leisure to make good,
If this be not a dream I see and hear.

Goldsmith. That is the Chain Sir, which you had of me.

S. Ant. I think it be Sir, I deny it not.

E. Ant. And you sir for this Chain arrested me.

Gold. I think I did Sir, I deny it not.

Adr. I sent you money Sir to be your bayle
By Dromio, but I think he brought it not.

E. Dro. No, none by me.

S. Ant. This purse of Duckets I receiv'd from you,
And Dromio my man did bring them me:
I see we still did meet each others man,
And I was tane for him, and he for me,
And thereupon these errours are arose.

E. Ant. These Duckets pawn I for my Father here.

Duk. It shall not need, thy Father hath his life.

Cur. Sir, I must have that Diamond from you.

E. Ant. There take it, and much thanks for my good cheer.

Abb. Renowned Duke, vouchsafe to take the pains
To go with us into the Abbey here,
And hear at large discoursed all our fortunes,
And all that are assembled in this place:
That by this sympathized one dayes error,
Have suffered wrong. Go, keep us company.

And we shall make full satisfaction.

Thirty three yeares have I been gone in travell
Of you my Sons, and till this present hour
My heavy burthens are delivered:

The Duke my Husband, and my children both,
And you the Kalenders of their Nativity,
Go to a Gossips feast, and go with me,
After so long grief such Nativity.

Duke. With all my heart I'll Gossip at this feast.

Exeunt omnes. Manner the two Dromio's and two Brothers.

S. Dro. Maist, shall I fetch your stufte from shipboord?

E. An. Dromio, what stufte of mine hast thou imbarck'd.

S. Dro. Your goods that lay at host fir in the Centaur.

S. Ant. He speaks to me, I am your Master Dromio.

Come go with us, we'll look to that anon,

Embrace thy Brother there, rejoyce with him. Exit.

S. Dro. There is a fat friend at your Masters house,
That kitchin'd me for you to day at dinner:

She now shall be my sister, not my wife.

E. D. Me thinks you are my glasse, and not my bro-
I see by you, I am a sweet-fac'd youth, (ther:
Will you walk in to see their Gossiping?

S. Dro. Not I Sir, you are my Elder.

E. Dro. That's a question, how shall I try it.

S. Dro. We'll draw Cuts for the Signiority, till then, lead thou first.

E. Dro. Nay then thus:

We came into the world like Brother and Brother:

And now let's go hand in hand, not one before another.

Exeunt.

F I N I S.

Much adoe about Nothing.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Leonato Governour of Messina, Innogen his wife, Hero his Daughter, and Beatrice his Neece, with a Messenger.

Leonato.

Learn in this Letter, that Don Peter of Arragon comes this night to Messina.

Mess. He is very near by this: he was not three Leagues off when I left him.

Leon. How many Gentlemen have you lost in this action?

Mess. But few of any sort, and none of name.

Leon. A victory is twice it self, when the achiever brings home full numbers: I find here that Don Peter hath bestowed much honour on a young Florentine called Claudio.

Mess. Much deserv'd on his part, and equally remembered by Don Pedro, he hath born himself beyond the promise of his age, doing in the figure of a Lamb the feats of a Lion, he hath indeed better bettered expectation, then you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leo. He hath an Uncle here in Messina will be very much glad of it.

Mess. I have already delivered him Letters, and there appears much joy in him, even so much, that joy could not shew it self modest enough, without a badge of bitterness.

Leo. Did he break out into teares?

Mess. In great measure.

Leo. A kind overflow of kindnesse: there are no faces truer, then those that are so wash'd, how much better is it to weep at joy, then to joy at weeping?

Beat. I pray you, is Signior Mountanto return'd from the Warrs, or no?

Mess. I know none of that name, Lady, there was none such in the Army of any sort.

Leo. What is he that you ask for Neece?

Hero. My Cousin means Signior Benedick of Padua.

Mess. O he's return'd, and as pleasant as ever he was.

Beat. He set up his Bills here in Messina, and challeng'd Cupid at the Flight: and my Uncles fool reading the Challenge, subscrib'd for Cupid, and challeng'd him at the Burbolt. I pray you, how many hath he kill'd and eaten in these Warrs? But how many hath he kill'd? for indeed, I promis'd to eat all of his killing.

Leon. 'Faith Neece, you taxe Signior Benedick too much, but he'll meet with you, I doubt it not.

Mess. He hath done good service Lady, in those wars.

Beat. You had musty victuall, and he hath holp to eat it: he's a very valiant Trencher-man, he hath an excellent stomach.

Mess. And a good Soldier too Lady.

Beat. And a good Soldier to a Lady. But what is he to a Lord?

Mess. A Lord to a Lord, a Man to a Man, stuf with all honourable virtues.

Beat. It is so indeed, he is no lesse then a stuf man: but for the stuffing well, we are all mortall.

Leon. You must not (sir) mistake my Neece, there is a kind of merry War betwixt Signior Benedick and her: they never meet, but there is a skirmish of wit between them.

Beat. Alas, he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict, four of his five wits went halting off, and now is the whole man govern'd with one: so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse. For it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be known a reasonable creature. Who is his Companion now? He hath every moneth a newsworn Brother.

Mess. Is't possible?

Beat. Very easily possible: he wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat, it ever changes with the next block.

Mess. I see (Lady) the Gentleman is not in your books.

Beat. No, and he were, I would burn my study. But I pray you who is his Companion? Is there no young squarer now, that will make a voyage with him to the Devil?

Mess. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beat. O Lord, he will hang upon him like a disease: he is sooner caught then the Pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio, if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound ere it be cur'd.

Mess. I will hold friends with you Lady.

Beat. Doe good friend.

Leo. You'l ne're run mad Neece.

Beat. No, not till a hot January.

Mess. Don Pedro is approach'd.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, Balthazar, and John the Bastard.

Pedro. Good Signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your Grace: for, trouble being gone, comfort should remain: but when you depart from me, sorrow abides, and happinesse takes his leave.

Pedro. You embrace your charge more willingly : I think this is your daughter.

Leo. Her Mother hath many times told me so.

Ben. Were you in doubt, that you askt her ?

Leo. Signior Benedick, no, for then were you a Child.

Pedro. You have it full Benedick, we may guesse by this, what you are, being a man, truly the Lady fathers her self : be happy, Lady, for you are like an honourable father.

Ben. If Signior Leonato be her Father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is.

Beat. I wonder that you will still be talking, Signior Benedick, no body marks you.

Ben. What my dear Lady Disdain I are you yet living ?

Beat. Is it possible Disdain should die, while she hath such meet food to feed it, as Signior Benedick ? Courtiesie it self must convert to Disdain, if you come in her presence.

Ben. Then is Courtiesie a turn-coat, but it is certain I am loved of all Ladies, onely you excepted : and I would I could find in my heart that I had not an hard heart, for truly I love none.

Beat. A dear happinesse to women, they would else have been troubled with a pernicious Sutor, I thank God and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that, I had rather hear my Dog bark at a Crow, then a man swear he loves me.

Ben. God keep your Ladiship still in that mind, so some Gentleman or other shall scape a Predestinate scratcht face.

Beat. Scratching could not make it worse, and 'twere such a face as yours were.

Ben. Well you are a rare Parrat-teacher.

Beat. A Bird of my tongue, is better then a Beast of yours.

Ben. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so good a continuer : but keep your way a God's name, I have done.

Beat. You alwayes end with a Jade's trick, I know you of old.

Pedro. This is the summe of all : Leonato, Signior Claudio, and Signior Benedick ; my dear friend Leonato hath invited you all, I tell you we shall stay here, at the least a moneth, and he heartily prays some occasion may detain us longer : I dare swear he is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

Leon. If you swear, my Lord, you shall not be forsworn, let me bid you welcome, my Lord, being reconciled to the Prince your Brother ; I owe you all duty.

John. I thank you, I am not of many words, but I thank you.

Leon. Please it your Grace lead on ?

Pedro. Your hand Leonato, we will go together.

Exeunt. Manet Benedick and Claudio.

Claudio. Benedick, didst thou note the daughter of Signior Leonato ?

Ben. I noted her not, but I look'd on her.

Claudio. Is she not a modest young Lady ?

Ben. Doe you question me as an honest man should doe, for my simple true judgement ? or would you have me speak after my custome, as being a professed tyrant to their sex ?

Claudio. No, I prethee speak in sober judgement.

Ben. Why I faith me thinks she's too low for an high praise, too brown for a fair praise, and too little for a great praise, onely this commendation I can afford her, that were she other then she is, she were unhandsome, and being no other but as she is, I doe not like her.

Claudio. Thou think'st I am in sport, I pray thee tell me truly how thou lik'st her.

Ben. Would you buy her, that you enquire after her ?

Claudio. Can the world buy such a Jewell ?

Ben. Yea, and a case to put it into, but speak you this with a sad brow ? Or doe you play the flouting Jack, to tell us Cupid is a good Hare-finder, and Vulcan a rare Carpenter : Come, in what Key shall a man take you to go in the Song.

Claudio. In mine eye, she is the sweetest Lady that ever I lookt on.

Ben. I can see yet without Spectacles, and I see no such matter : there's her Cousin, and she were not possest with a fury, exceeds her as much in beauty, as the first of May doth the last of December : but I hope you have no intent to turn husband have you ?

Claudio. I would scarce trust my self, though I had sworn the contrary, if Hero would be my wife.

Ben. Is't come to this ? in faith hath not the world one man, but he will wear his cap with suspicion ? shall I never see a Batchellor of threescore again ? goe to I faith, and thou wilt needs thrust thy neck into a yoke, wear the print of it, and sigh away Sundays : look, Don Pedro is returned to seek you.

Enter Don Pedro, John the Bastard.

Pedro. What secret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonato ?

Benedick. I would your Grace would constrain me to tell.

Pedro. I charge thee on thy allegiance.

Ben. You hear, Count Claudio, I can be 'secret as a dumb man, I would have you think so (but on my allegiance, mark you this, on my allegiance) he is in love, with whom ? now that is your Graces part : mark how short his answer is, with Hero, Leonato's short Daughter.

Claudio. If this were so, so were it uttered.

Ben. Like the old Tale, my Lord, it is not so, nor 'twas not so : but indeed, God forbid it should be so.

Claudio. If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

Pedro. Amen, if you love her, for the Lady is very well worthy.

Claudio. You speak this to fetch me in, my Lord.

Pedro. By my troth I speak my thought.

Claudio. And in faith, my Lord, I spoke mine.

Ben. And by my two faiths and troths, my Lord, I speak mine.

Claudio. That I love her, I feel.

Pedro. That she is worthy, I know.

Ben. That I neither feel how she should be loved, nor know how she should be worthy, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me, I will die in it at the stake.

Pedro. Thou wast ever an obstinate Heretick in the despight of beauty.

Claudio. And never could maintain his part, but in the force of his will.

Ben

Bene. That a woman conceived me, I thank her : that she brought me up, I likewise give her most humble thanks : but that I will have a rechate winded in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an invisible baldrick, all women shall pardon me : because I will not doe them the wrong to mistrust any, I will doe my self the right to trust none : and the fine is, (for the which I may goe the finer) I will live a Batchelor.

Pedro. I shall see thee ere I die, look pale with love.

Bene. With anger, with sicknesse, or with hunger, my Lord, not with love : prove that ever I loose more bloud with love, then I will get again with drinking, pick out mine eyes with a Ballet-makers penn, and hang me up at the door of a brothel-house for the signe of blind Cupid.

Pedro. Well, if ever thou dost fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a Cat, and shoot at me, and he that hit's me, let him be clapt on the shoulder, and call'd Adam.

Pedro. Well, as the time shall try : In time the savage Bull doth bear the yoke.

Bene. The savage bull may, but if ever the sensible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bulls horns, and set them in my forehead, and let me be vildely painted, and in such great Letters as they write, Here is good horse to hire : let them signifie under my signe, Here you may see Benedick the married man.

Clau. If this should ever happen, thou wouldst be horn mad.

Pedro. Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his Quiver in Venice, thou wilt quake for this shortly.

Bene. I look for an earth quake too then.

Pedro. Well, you will temporize with the hours, in the mean time, good Signior Benedick, repair to Leonato's, commend me to him, and tell him I will not fail him at supper, for indeed he hath made great preparation.

Bene. I have almost matter enough in me for such an Embassage, and so I commit you.

Clau. To the tuition of God. From my house, if I had it.

Pedro. The sixth of Iuly. Your loving friend, Benedick.

Bene. Nay mock not, mock not ; the body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but slightly basted on neither : ere you flout old ends any further, examine your conscience, and so I leave you.

Exit.

Clau. My Liege, your Highness now may do me good.

Pedro. My love is thine to teach, teach it but how, And thou shalt see how apt it is to learn Any hard Lesson, that may do thee good.

Clau. Hath Leonato any son my Lord ?

Pedro. No child but Hero, she's his onely heir. Dost thou affect her, Claudio ?

Clau. O my Lord, When you went onward on this ended action, I look'd upon her with a souldiers eye, That lik'd, but had a rougher task in hand, Than to drive liking to the name of love : But now I am return'd, and that war-thoughts Have left their places vacant : in their rooms Come thronged soft and delicate desires, All prompting me how fair young Hero is, Saying I lik'd her ere I went to wars.

Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover presently, And tire the hearer with a book of words : If thou dost love fair Hero, cherish it, And I will break with her : wast not to this end, That thou beganst to twist so fine a story ?

Clau. How sweetly do you minister to love, That know loves grief by his complexion ! But lest my liking might too sodain seem, I would have salv'd it with a longer treatise.

Pedro. What need the bridge much broader then the The fairest grant in the necessity : (floud?) Look what will serve, is fit : 'tis once, thou lovest, And I will fit thee with the remedy, I know we shall have revelling to night, I will assume thy part in some disguise, And tell fair Hero I am Claudio, And in her bosome I'll unclasp my heart, And take her hearing prisoner with the force And strong incounter of my amorous tale : Then after, to her father will I break, And the conclusion is, she shall be thine, In practise let us put it presently.

Exeunt.

Enter Leonato and an old man, brother to Leonato.

Leo. How now brother, where is my cosen your son : hath he provided this musick ?

Old. He is very busie about it, but brother, I can tell you news that you yet dream'd not of.

Leo. Are they good ?

Old. As the event stamps them, but they have a good cover : they shew well outward : the Prince and Count Claudio walking in a thick pleached alley in my orchard, were thus over-heard by a man of mine : the Prince discovered to Claudio that he loved my neece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance, and he found her accordant, he meant to take the present time by the top, and instantly breake with you of it.

Leo. Hath the fellow any wit, that told you this ?

Old. A good sharp fellow, I will send for him, and question him your self.

Leo. No, no : we will hold it as a dream, till it appear it self : but I will acquaint my daughter with all, that she may be the better prepared for answer, if peradventure this be true : go you and tell her of it : cosins, you know what you have to do, O I cry you mercy friend, go you with me and I will use your skill, good cosin have a care this busie time.

Exeunt.

Enter Sir John the Bastard, and Conrade his companion.

Con. What the good year my Lord, why are you thus out of measure sad ?

John. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds, therefore the sadness is without limit.

Con. You should hear reason.

John. And when I have heard it, what blessing bringeth it ?

Con. If not a present remedy, yet a patient sufferance.

John. I wonder that thou (being, as thou saist thou art, born under Saturn) goest about to apply a mortall medicine to a mortifying mischief : I cannot hide what I am : I must be sad when I have cause, and smile at no mans jests ; eat when I have stomach, and wait for no mans leisure : sleep when I am drowsie, and tend on no mans business ; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.

Con. Yea, but you must not make the full show of this till you may doe it without controulnient, you have of late late stood out against your brother, and he hath tane you newly into his grace, where it is impossible you should take root, but by the fair weather that you make your self, it is needfull that you frame the season for your own harvest.

John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge, then a rose in his grace, and it better fits my blood to be disdain'd of all, then to fashion a carriage to rob love from any: in this (though I cannot be said to be a flattering honest man) it must not be denied but I am a plain dealing villain, I am trusted with a muffell, and enfranchised with a clog, therefore I have decreed, not to sing in my cage: if I had my mouth, I would bite: if I had my liberty, I would do my liking: in the mean time, let me be that I am, and seek not to alter me.

Conr. Can you make no use of your discontent?

John. I will make all use of it for I use it onely. Who comes here? what news Borachio.

Enter Borachio.

Bora. I came yonder from a great supper, the Prince your brother is royally entertained by Leonato, and I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.

John. Will it serve for any Modell to build mischief on? What is he for a foole that betroth's himself to unquietness?

Bor. Marry it is your brothers right hand.

John. Who, the most exquisite Claudio?

Bor. Even he.

John. A proper Squier, and who, and who, which way looks he?

Bor. Marry on Hero, the daughter and Heir of Leonato.

John. A very forward March-chick, how come you to this?

Bor. Being entertain'd for a perfumer, as I was smoaking a musty room, comes me the Prince and Claudio, hand in hand in sad conference: I whipt behind the Arras, and there heard it agreed upon, that the Prince should wooe Hero for himself, and having obtain'd her, give her to Count Claudio.

John. Come, come, let us thither, this may prove food to my displeasure, that young start-up hath all the glory of my overthrow: if I can crosse him any way, I blesse my self every way; you are both sure, and will assist me?

Conr. To the death my Lord.

John. Let us to the great supper, their cheer is the greater that I subdued, would the Cook were of my mind: shall we go prove what's to be done?

Bor. We'll wait upon your Lordship.

Exeunt.

Pedro.

Actus Secundus.

Exeunt.

Claudio. Benedick, disher, his wife, Hero his daughter, and Leonato?

Ben. I noted her not, &

Claudio. Is she not a model? John here at supper?

Ben. Doe you question

doe, for my simple true judgment, a gentleman looks, I never can me speak after my custome, as'd an hour after. their sex?

ly disposition.

Beat. He were an excellent man that were made just in the mid-way between him and Benedicke, the one is too like an image and saies nothing, and the other too like my Ladies eldest son, evermore tatling.

Leon. Their half Signior Benedick's tongue in Count Johns mouth, and halfe Count Johns melancholly in Signior Benedick's face-----

Beat. With a good legge and a good foot unckle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would win any woman in the world, if he could get her good will.

Leon. By my troth Neece, thou wilt never get thee a husband, if thou be so shrewd of thy tongue.

Brot. Infaith she's too curst.

Beat. Too curst is more then curst, I shall lessen Gods sending that way: for it is said, God sends a curst Cow short horns, but to a Cow too curst he sends none.

Leon. So, by being too curst, God will send no horns.

Beat. Just, if he send me no husband, for the which blessing, I am at him upon my knees every morning and evening: Lord, I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face, I had rather lie in the woollen.

Leona. You may light upon a husband that hath no beard.

Beat. What should I doe with him? dresse him in my apparell, and make him my waiting-gentlewoman? he that hath a beard, is more then a youth: and he that hath no beard is lesse then a man: and he that is more then a youth, is not for me: and he that is less then a man, I am not for him: therefore I will even take six pence in earnest of the Bearherd and lead his Apes into hell.

Leon. Well then, go you into hell.

Beat. No, but to the gate, and there will the Devill meet me like an old Cuckold with horns on his head, and say, get you to heaven Beatrice, get you to heaven, here's no place for you maids, so deliver I up my Apes, and away to Saint Peter: for the heavens, he shews me where the Batchellers sit, and there live we as merry as the day is long.

Brot. Well neece, I trust you will be rul'd by your father.

Beat. Yes faith, it is my cosens duty to make curtsie, and say, as it please you: but yet for all that cosin, let him be a handsome fellow, or else make another curtsie, and say, father, as it pleases me.

Leon. Well neece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beat. Not till God make men of some other mettall then earth, would it not grieve a woman to be overmastered with a piece of valiant dust? to make account of her life to a clod of cold wayward marke? no uncle, I'll none: Adams sons are brethren, and truly I hold it a sin to match in my kined.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you, if the Prince do solicit you in that kind, you know your answer.

Beat. The fault will be in the musick, cosin, if you be not woo'd in good time: if the Prince be too important, tell him there is measure in every thing, and so dance out the answer, for hear me Hero, wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch jigge, a measure, and a cinquepace: the first suit is hot and hasty like a Scotch jigge (and full as fantastickall) the wedding mannerly modest, (as a measure) full of state and anchentry, and then comes repentance, and with his bad legs falls into the cinquepace faster and faster, till he sinks into his grave.

Leona.

Leon. Cofin you apprehend paffing fhrewdly.

Beatrice. I have a good eye uncle, I can fee a Church by day light.

Leon. The revellers are entring brother, make good room.

Enter Prince, Pedro, Claudio, Benedicke, and Balthazar, or dumb John, Maskers with a drum.

Pedro. Lady, will you walke about with your friend?

Hero. So you walk softly, and look sweetly, and say nothing, I am yours for the walke, and especially when I walke away.

Pedro. With me in your company.

Hero. I may say so when I please.

Pedro. And when please you to say so?

Hero. When I like your favour, for God defend the Lute should be like the case.

Pedro. My vifor is Philemons rooffe, within the houfe is love.

Hero. Why then your vifor should be thatcht.

Pedro. Speak low if you speak Love.

Bene. Well, I would you did like me.

Mask. So would not I for your own fake, for I have many ill qualities.

Bene. Which is one?

Mask. I say my prayers aloud.

Bene. I love you the better, the hearers may cry Amen.

Mas. God match me with a good dancer.

Balth. Amen.

Mas. And God keep him out of my fight when the dance is done: answer Clerk.

Balth. No more words, the Clerk is answered.

Urfula. I know you well enough, you are Signior Anthony.

Anth. At a word, I am not.

Urfula. I know you by the wagling of your head.

Anth. To tell you true, I counterfeited him.

Urfu. You could never doe him fo ill well, unless you were the very man: here's his dry hand up and down, you are he, you are he.

Anth. At a word, I am not.

Urfula. Come, come, doe you think I doe not know you by your excellent wit? can vertue hide it selfe? goe to, mummie, you are he, graces will appear, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Bene. No, you shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you tell me who you are?

Bene. Not now.

Beat. That I was disdainfull, and that I had my good wit out of the hundred merry tales: well, this was Signior Benedicke that said so.

Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure you know him well enough.

Bene. Not I, believe me.

Beat. Did he never make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you what is he?

Beat. Why is the Princes jester, a very dull foole, onely his gift is, in devising impossible flanders, none but Libertines delight in him, and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villany, for he both pleaseth men and angers them, and then they laugh at him, and beat him; I am sure he is in the Fleet, I would he had boarded me.

Bene. When I know the Gentleman, I'll tell him what you say.

Beat. Doe, doe, hee'l but break a comparifon or two on me, which peradventur (not markt, or not laugh'd at) strikes him into melancholly, and then there's a Partridge wing saved, for the foole will eat no supper that night. We must follow the Leaders.

Bene. In every good thing.

Bea. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning.

Exeant.

Musick for the dance.

John. Sure my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it: the Ladies follow her, and but one vifor remains.

Bora. And that is Claudio, I know him by his bearing.

John. Are not you Signior Benedicke?

Clau. You know me well, I am he.

John. Signior, you are very near my brother in his love, he is enamor'd on Hero, I pray you diffwade him from her, she is no equall for his birth: you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Clau. How know you he loves her?

John. I heard him swear his affection.

Bora. So did I too, and he swore he would marry her to night.

Ioh. Come, let us to the banquet. Exit. manet. Clau.

Clau. Thus answer I in name of Benedicke, But hear this ill news with the ears of Claudio:

'Tis certain so, the Prince woo's for himself:

Friendship is constant in all other things,

Save in the Office and affairs of love:

Therefore all hearts in love use their own tongues,

Let every eye negotiate for it selfe,

And trust no Agent: for beauty is a witch,

Against whose charmes, faith melteth into bloud:

This is an accident of hourly prooffe,

Which I mistrusted not. Farewell therefore Hero.

Enter Benedicke.

Bene. Count Claudio,

Clau. Yea the same.

Bene. Come, will you go with me?

Clau. Whither?

Bene. Even to the next Willow, about your own business, Count. What fashion will you were the Garland off? About your neck, like an Usurers chain? Or under your arme, like a Lieutenants scarfe? You must wear it one way, for the Prince hath got your Hero.

Clau. I wish him joy of her.

Bene. Why that's spoken like an honest Droyer, so they sell Bullocks: but did you think the Prince would have served you thus?

Clau. I pray you leave me.

Bene. Ho no! you strike like the blind-man, 'twas the boy that stole your meat, and you'll beat the post.

Clau. If it will not be, I'll leave you.

Exit.

Bene. Alas poor hurt soul, now will he creep into sedges: but that my Lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me: the Princes fool! Ha? it may be I goe under that title, because I am merry: yet but so I am apt to do my self wrong: I am not so reputed, it is the base (though bitter) disposition of Beatrice, that puts the word into her person, and so gives me out: well, ile be revenged as I may.

Enter the Prince.

Pedro. Now Signior, where's the Count, did you see him?

Ben.

Bene. Troth my Lord, I have played the part of Lady Fame, I found him here as melancholly as a Lodge in a Warren, I told him, and I think, told him true, that your grace had got the will of this young Lady, and I offered him my company to a willow tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to bind him a rod, as being worthy to be whipt.

Pedro. To be whipt, what's his fault?

Bene. The flat transgression of a School-boy, who being over-joyed with finding a birds nest, shews it his companion, and he steals it.

Pedro. Wilt thou make a trust, a transgression? the transgression is in the stealer.

Bene. Yet it had not been amiss the rod had been made, and the garland too, for the garland he might have worn himself, and the rod he might have bestowed on you, who (as I take it) have stoln his birds nest.

Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

Bene. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith you say honestly.

Pedro. The Lady Beatrice hath a quarrell to you, the Gentleman that danc'd with her, told her she is much wrong'd by you.

Bene. O she misus'd me past the indurance of a block: an oake but with one green leaf on it, would have answered her: my very visor began to assume life, and scold with her: she told me, not thinking I had been my self, that I was the Princes Jester, and that I was duller then a great thaw, hudling jest upon jest; with such impossible conveyance upon me, that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me: she speaks poyniards, and every word stabs me: if her breath were as terrible as terminations, there were no living near her, she would infect to the north star: I would not marry her, though she were indowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgressed, she would have made Hercules have turn'd spit, yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too: come, talk not of her, you shall find her in the infernall Ate in good apparell. I would to God some scholler would conjure her, for certainly while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell, as in a sanctuary, and people sin upon purpose, because they would goe thither, so indeed all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follows her.

Enter Claudio, and Beatrice, Leonato, Hero.

Pedro. Look here she comes.

Bene. Will your Grace command me any service to the worlds end? I will go on the slightest errand now to the Antipodes that you can devise to send me on: I will fetch you a tooth-picker now from the furthest inch of Asia: bring you the length of Prester Johns foot: fetch you a hair off the great Chams beard: doe you any embassage to the Pigmies, rather then hold three words conference with this Harpy: you have no employment for me?

Pedro. None, but to desire your good company.

Bene. O God sir, heres a dish I love not, I cannot indure this Ladies tongue. Exit.

Pedro. Come Lady, come, you have lost the heart of Signior Benedicke.

Beat. Indeed my Lord, he lent it me a while, and I gave him use for it, a double heart for a single one marry once before he won it of me, with false dice, therefore your Grace may well say I have lost it.

Pedro. You have put him down Lady, you have put him down.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, my Lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools: I have brought Count Claudio, whom you sent me to seek.

Pedro. Why how now Count, wherefore are you sad?

Clau. Not sad my Lord.

Pedro. How then? sick?

Clau. Neither, my Lord.

Beat. The Count is neither sad, nor sick, nor metry, nor well: but civill Count, civill as an Orange, and something of a jealous complexion.

Pedro. Ifaith Lady, I think your blazon to be true, though I besworn, if he be so, his conceit is false: here Claudio, I have wooed in thy name, and fair Hero is won, I have broke with her father, and his good will obtained, name the day of marriage, and God give thee joy.

Leona. Count, take of me my daughter, and with her my fortunes: his grace hath made the match, and all grace say, Amen to it.

Beat. Speak Count, 'tis your Qu.

Clau. Silence is the perfectest Herald of joy, I were but little happy if I could say, how much? Lady, as you are mine, I am yours, I give away my selfe for you, and doat upon the exchange.

Beat. Speak cosin, or (if you cannot) stop his mouth with a kiss, and let not him speak neither.

Pedro. Ifaith Lady you have a merry heart.

Beat. Yea my Lord I thank it, poore foole it keeps on the windy side of care, my cosin tells him in his eare that he is in my heart.

Clau. And so she doth cosin.

Beat. Good Lord for alliance: thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am sun-burn'd, I may sit in a corner and cry, heigh ho for a husband.

Pedro. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

Beat. I would rather have one of your fathers getting: hath your Grace ne're a brother like you? your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

Prince. Will you have me? Lady.

Beat. No, my Lord, unlesse I might have another for working-dayes, your Grace is too costly to wear every day: But I beseech your Grace pardon me, I was born to speak all mirth, and no matter.

Prince. Your silence most offends me, and to be merry, best becomes you, for out of question, you were born in a merry hour.

Beat. No sure my Lord, my mother cryed, but then there was a star danc'd, and under that I was borne: cosins God give you joy.

Leona. Neece, will you look to those things I told you of?

Beat. I cry you mercy Uncle, by your Graces pardon.

Exit Beatrice.

Prince. By my troth a pleasant spirited Lady.

Leon. There's little of the melancholly element in her my Lord, she is never sad, but when she sleeps, and not ever sad then: for I have heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamt of unhappiness, and wak't her self with laughing.

Pedro. She cannot indure to hear tell of a husband.

Leon. O, by no means, she mocks all her wooers out of suit.

Prince. She were an excellent wife for Benedicke.

Leona. O lord, my Lord, if they were but a week married, married, they would talk themselves mad.

Prince. Count Claudio, when mean you to goe to Church?

Claudio. To morrow my Lord, Time goes on crutches, till love have all his rites.

Leona. Not till monday, my dear son, which is hence a iust seven night, and a time too brief too, to have all things answer mind.

Prince. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing, but I warrant thee Claudio, the time shall not go dully by us, I will in the interims, undertake one of Hercules labours, which is, to bring Signior Benedicke and the Lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection, th' one with th' other, I would fain have it a match, and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction.

Leona. My Lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights watchings.

Claudio. And I my Lord.

Prince. And you too gentle Hero.

Hero. I will do any modest office, my Lord, to help my cosin to a good husband.

Prince. And Benedicke is not the unhopefullest husband that I know: thus farre can I praise him, he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirm'd honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cosin, that she shall fall in love with Benedicke, and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedicke, that in despite of his quick wit, and his queasie stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice: if we can do this, Cupid is no longer an Archer, his glory shall be ours, for we are the onely love-gods, go with me, and I will tell you my drift.

Exeunt.

Enter John and Borachio.

John. It is so, the Count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Borachio. Yea my Lord, but I can crosse it.

John. Any bar, any crosse, any impediment, will be medicinable to me, I am sick in displeasure to him, and whatsoever comes athwart his affection, ranges evenly with mine, how canst thou crosse this marriage?

Borachio. Not honestly my Lord, but so covertly, that no dishonesty shall appear in me.

John. Shew me briefly how.

Borachio. I think I told your Lordship a year since, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting gentlewoman to Hero.

John. I remember.

Borachio. I can at any unseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her Ladies chamber window.

John. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Borachio. The poyson of that lies in you to temper, goe you to the Prince your brother, spare not to tell him, that he hath wronged his Honor in marrying the renowned Claudio, whose estimation do you mightily hold up, to a contaminated stale, such a one as Hero.

John. What prooffe shall I make of that?

Borachio. Prooffe enough, to misuse the Prince, to vex Claudio, to undoe Hero, and kill Leonato, look you for any other issue?

John. Onely to despise them, I will endeavour any thing.

Borachio. Goe then, find me a meet houre, to draw on Pedro and the Count Claudio alone, tell them that you know that Hero loves me, intend a kind of zeal both to the Prince and Claudio (as in a love of your brothers honor who hath made this match) and his friends reputation, who is thus like to be cosen'd with the semblance of a maid, that you have discovered thus: they will scarcely believe this without triall: offer them instances which shall bear no lesse likelihood, than to see me at her chamber window, hear me call Margaret, Hero; hear Margaret terme me Claudio, and bring them to see this, the very night before the intended wedding, for in the mean time, I will fashion the matter, that Hero shall be absent, and there shall appear such seeming truths of Hero's disloyalty, that jealousy shall be call'd assurance, and all the preparation overthrown.

John. Grow this to what adverse issue it can, I will put it in practise: be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducats.

Borachio. Be thou constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me.

John. I will presently goe learn their day of marriage.

Exit.

Enter Benedicke alone.

Bene. Boy.

Boy. Signior.

Bene. In my chamber window lies a book, bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am here already sir.

Exit.

Bene. I know that, but I would have thee hence, and here again. I doe much wonder, that one man seeing how much another man is a fool, when he dedicates his behaviours to love, will after he hath laugh't at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his own scorn, by falling in love, and such a man is Claudio, I have known when there was no musick with him but the drum and the fife, and now had he rather hear the taber and the pipe: I have known when he would have walkt ten mile a foot, to see a good armor, and now will he lie ten nights awake carving the fashion of a new dublet: he was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose (like an honest man and a souldier) and now is he turn'd orthography, his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes: may I be so converted, and see with these eyes? I cannot tell, I think not: I will not be sworn, but love may transform me to an oyster, but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool: one woman is fair, yet I am well: another is wise, yet I am well: another virtuous, yet I am well: but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace: rich she shall be, that's certain: wise, or I'll none; virtuous, or I'll never cheapon her: fair, or I'll never look on her: milde, or come not near me: Noble, or not for an Angell: of good discourse: an excellent Musitian, and her hair shall be of what colour it please God, ha! the Prince and Monsieur Love, I will hide me in the Arbor.

Enter Prince, Leonato, Claudio, and Iack Wilson.

Prince. Come, shall we hear his this musick?

Claudio. Yea my good Lord: how still the evening is, As hush't on purpose to grace harmony.

Prince. See you where Benedicke hath hid himself?

Claudio. O very well my Lord: the musick ended, We'll fit the kid-fox with a penny worth.

Prince. Come Balthazar, we'll hear that song again.

Balthazar. O good my Lord, take not so bad a voyce, To slander musick any more then once.

Prince.

Prince. It is the witness still of excellency,
To put a strange face on his own perfection,
I pray thee sing, and let me wooe no more.

Balth. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing,
Since many a wooer doth commence his suit,
To her he thinks not worthy, yet he woo's,
Yet will he swear he loves.

Prince. Nay pray thee come,
Or if thou wilt hold longer argument,
Doe it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes,
There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

Prince. Why these are very crotchets that he speaks,
Note notes forsooth, and nothing.

Bene. Now divine airc, now is his soul ravish't, is it not strange that sheeps guts should hale souls out of mens bodies? well, a horse for my money when all's done.

The Song.

*Sigh no more Ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever,
One foot in Sea, and one on shore,
To one thing constant never:
Then sigh not so, but let them goe,
And be you blith and bonny,
Converting all your sounds of woe,
Into hey nony, nony.*

*Sing no more ditties, sing no more,
Of dumps so dull and heavy.
The fraud of men were ever so,
Since summer first was leavy,
Then sigh not so, &c.*

Prince. By my troth a good song.

Balth. And an ill singer my Lord.

Prince. Ha, no, no 'faith, thou sing'st well enough for a shift.

Bene. And he had been a dog that should have howl'd thus, they would have hang'd him, and I pray God his bad voyce bode no mischief, I had as lieve have heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it.

Prince. Yea marry, dost thou hear Balthazar? I pray thee get us some excellent musick: for to morrow night we would have it at the Lady Heroes chamber window.

Balth. The best I can my lord. Exit. Balthazar.

Prince. Doe so, farewell. Come hither Leonato, what was it you told me of to day, that your Niece Beatrice was in love with Signior Benedicke?

Claudio. O I, stalker on, stalker on, the foul fits. I did never think that Lady would have loved any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither, but most wonderfull, that she should so doat on Signior Benedicke, whom she hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to abhor.

Bene. Is't possible, sits the wind in that corner?

Leon. By my troth my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it, but that she loves him with an enraged affection, it is past the infinite of thought.

Prince. May be she doth but counterfeit.

Claudio. Faithlike enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit? there was never counterfeit of passion, came so neer the life of passion as she discovers it.

Prince. Why what effects of passion shews she?

Claudio. Bait the hook well, the fish will bite.

Leon. What effects my Lord? she will sit you, you heard my daughter tell you how.

Claudio. She did indeed.

Prin. How, how I pray you? you amaze me, I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection.

Leo. I would have sworn it had, my lord, especially against Benedicke.

Bene. I should think this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speaks it: knavery cannot sure hide himself in such reverence.

Claudio. He hath tane th' infection, hold it up.

Prince. Hath she made her affection known to Be-nedicke?

Leonato. No, and swears she never will, that's her torment.

Claudio. 'Tis true indeed, so your daughter sayes: shall
I, sayes she, that have so oft encountered him with scorn, write to him that I love him?

Leo. This saies she now when she is beginning to write to him, for shee'll be up twenty times a night, and there will she sit in her smock, till she have writ a sheet of paper: my daughter tells us all.

Cla. Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

Leon. O when she had writ it, and reading it over, she found Benedicke and Beatrice between the sheet.

Claudio. That.

Leon. O she tore the letter into a thousand halfpence, railed at her self, that she should be so immodest, to write to one that she knew would flout her: I measure him, saies she, by my own spirit, for I should flout him if he writ to me, yea though I love him, I should.

Claudio. Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sobs, beats her heart, tears her hair, pray's, curses, O
sweet Benedicke, God give me patience.

Leon. She doth indeed, my daughter saies so, and the extasie hath so much overborn her, that my daughter is sometime afraid she will doe a desperate out-rage to her self, it is very true.

Prince. It were good that Benedicke knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

Claudio. To what end? he would but make a sport of it, and torment the poor Lady worse.

Prin. And he should, it were an alms to hang him, she's an excellent sweet Lady, and (out of all suspicion,)
she is vertuous.

Claudio. And she is exceeding wise.

Prin. In every thing, but in loving Benedicke.

Leon. O my lord, wisdom and bloud combating in so tender a body, we have ten proofs to one, that bloud hath the victory, I am sorry for her, as I have just cause, being her Uncle, and her Guardian.

Prince. I would she had bestowed this dotage on me,
I would have daft all other respects, and made her half my self: I pray you tell Benedicke of it, and hear what he will say.

Leon. Were it good think you?

Cla. Hero thinks surely she will die, for she saies she will die, if he love her not, and she will die ere she make her love known, and she will die if he wooe her, rather then she will bate one breath of her accustomed crossness.

Prin. She doth well, if she should make tender of her love,

love, 'tis very possible he'll scorn it, for the man (as you know all) hath a contemptible spirit.

Clau. He is a very proper man.

Prin. He hath indeed a good outward happinesse.

Clau. 'Fore God, and in my mind verv wise.

Prin. He doth indeed shew some sparks that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

Prin. As Hector, I assure you, and in the managing of quarrels you may see he is wise, for either he avoids them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a Christian like fear.

Leon. If he do fear God, a must necessarily keep peace, if he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrell with fear and trembling.

Prin. And so will he do, for the man doth fear God, howsoever it seems not in him, by some large jeasts he will make: well I am sorry for your niece, shall we goe see Benedick, and tell him of her love?

Claud. Never tell him, my Lord, let her wear it out with good counsell.

Leon. Nay that's impossible, she may wear her heart out first,

Prin. Well, we will hear further of it by your daughter, let it coole the while, I love Benedick well, and I could wish he would modestly examine himself, to see how much he is unworthy to have so good a Lady.

Leon. My Lord, will you walk? dinner is ready.

Clau. If he do not doat on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation.

Prin. Let there be the same Net spred for her, and that must your daughter and her gentlewoman carry: the sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of anothers dotage, and no such matter, that's the Scene that I would see, which will be meerly a dumb shew: let us send her to call him into dinner.

Exeunt.

Ben. This can be no trick, the conference was sadly borne, they have the truth of this from Hero, they seem to pity the Lady: it seems her affections have the full bent: love me? why it must be requited: I hear how I am censur'd, they say I will bear my self proudly, If I perceive the love come from her: they say too, that she will rather die than give any sign of affection: I did never think to marry, I must not seem proud, happy are they that hear their detractions, and can put them to mending: they say the Lady is fair, 'tis a truth, I can bear them witness: and vertuous, 'tis so, I cannot reprove it: and wise, but for loving me, by my troth it is no addition to her wit, nor no great argument of her folly; for I will be horribly in love with her, I may chance have some odde quirks and remains of wit broken on me, because I have rail'd so long against marriage: but doth not the appetite alter? a man loves the meat in his youth, that he cannot indure in his age. Shall quips and sentences, and these paper bullets of the brain awe a man from the career of his humour? No, the world must be peopled. When I said I would die a batchelor, I did not think I should live till I were married: here comes Beatrice: by this day, she's a fair Lady, I doe spie some marks of love in her.

Enter Beatrice.

Beat. Against my will I am sent to bid you come into dinner.

Ben. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains.

Beat. I took no more pains for those thanks, then you take pains to thank me; if it had been painfull, I would not have come.

Ben. You take pleasure then in the message.

Beat. Yea just so much as you may take upon a knives point, and choak a daw withall: you have no stomach Signior, fare you well.

Exit.

Ben. Ha, against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner: there's a double meaning in that: I took no more pains for those thanks, then you took pains to thank me, that's as much as to say, any pains that I take for you is as easie as thanks: if I do not take pity of her I am a villain, if I do not love her I am a Jew, I will goe get her picture.

Exit.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Hero and two Gentlemen, Margaret, and Ursula.

Hero. Good Margaret run thee to the parlour, There shalt thou find my Cousin Beatrice, Proposing with the Prince and Claudio, Whisper her ear, and tell her I and Ursula Walk in the Orchard, and our whole discourse Is all of her, say that thou over-heardest us, And bid her steal into the pleached bower, Where hony-suckles ripened by the sun Forbid the sun to enter: like favourites, Made proud by Princes, that advance their pride Against that power that bred it, there will she hide her, To listen to our purpose, this is thy Office, Bear thee well in it, and leave us alone.

Marg. Ile make her come I warrant presently. Exit.

Hero. Now Ursula, when Beatrice doth come, As we do trace this alley up and down, Our talk must onely be of Benedick, When I do name him, let it be thy part, To praise him more then ever Man did merit, My talk to thee must be how Benedick Is sick in love with Beatrice: of this matter, Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made, That onely wounds by hear-say: now begin,

Enter Beatrice.

For look where Beatrice like a Lapwing runs Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

Urf. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish Cut with her golden oars the silver stream, And greedily devour the treacherous bait: So angle we for Beatrice, who even now, Is couched in the woodbine coverture, Fear you not my part of the Dialogue.

Her. Then goe we near her that her ear lose nothing, Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it: No truly Ursula, she is too disdainfull, I know her spirits are as coy and wild, As Haggards of the rock.

Urf. But are you sure, That Benedick loves Beatrice so intirely?

Her. So sayes the Prince, and my new trothed Lord.

Urf. And did they bid you tell her of it, Madam?

Her. They did intreat me to acquaint her or it, But I perswaded them, if they lov'd Benedick,

To wish him wrastle with affection,
And never to let Beatrice know of it.

Urf. Why did you so, doth not the Gentleman
Deserve as full, as fortunate a bed,
As ever Beatrice shall couch upon?

Hero. O God of love! I know he doth deserve,
As much as may be yielded to a man:
But nature never fram'd a womans heart,
Of prouder stuffe then that of Beatrice:
Disdain and Scorn ride sparkling in her eye,
Mis-prizing what they look on, and her wit
Values it self so highly, that to her
All matter else seems weak: she cannot love,
Nor take no shape nor project of affection;
'he is so self-indear'd.

Urf. Sure I think so,
And therefore certainly it were not good
She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.

Hero. Why you speak truth, I never yet saw man,
How wise, how noble, young, how rarely fear'd.
But she would spell him backward: if fairfac'd,
She would swear the gentleman should be her sister:
If black, why Nature drawing of an antick,
Made a foul blot: if tall, a lance ill-headed:
If low, an agot very vildly cut:
If speaking, why a vane blown with all winds,
If silent, why a block moved with none.
So turnes she every man the wrong side out,
And never gives to truth and Vertue, that
Which simplenesse and merit purchaseth.

Urf. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.

Hero. No, not to be so odde, and from all fashions,
As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable,
But who dare tell her so? if I should speak,
She would mock me into aire, O she would laugh me
Out of my self, presse me to death with wit,
Therefore let Benedick like covered fire,
Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly:
It were a bitter death, to die with mocks,
Which is as bad as die with tickling.

Urf. Yet tell her of it, hear what she will say.

Her. No, rather I will goe to Benedick,
And counsaile him to fight against his passion,
And truly Ile devise some honest slanders,
To stain my cofin with: one doth not know,
How much an ill word may imppoisn liking.

Urf. O doe not do your cofin such a wrong.
She cannot be so much without true judgement,
Having so swift and excellent a wit
As she is priz'd to have, as to refuse
So rare a Gentleman as signior Benedick,

Her. He is the only man of Italy,
Alwaies excepted, my dear Claudio.

Urf. I pray you be not angry with me, Madam,
Speaking my fancy: Signior Benedick,
For shape, for bearing argument and valour,
Goes formost in report through Italy.

Her. Indeed he hath an excellent good name.

Urf. His excellence did earn it ere he had it:
When are you married Madam?

Her. Why every day to morrow, come goe in,
Ile shew thee some attires, and have thy counsell,
Which is the best to furnish me to morrow.

Urf. She's tane I warrant you,
VVe have caught her Madam?

Hero. If it prove so, then loving goes by haps,

Some Cupids kills with arrows, some with traps. Exit.

Beat. What fire is in mine ears? can this be true?
Stand I condemn'd for pride and scorn so much?
Contempt, farewell, and maiden pride, adieu,
No glory lives behind the back of such,
And Benedick, love on, I will requite thee,
Taming my wild heart to thy loving hand:
If thou dost love, my kindnesse shall incite thee
To bind our loves up in a holy band.
For others say thou dost deserve, and I Believe it better then reportingly. Exit.

Enter Prince, Claudio, Benedick, and Leonato.

Prince. I doe but stay till your marriage be consummate, and then I go toward Arragen.

Claudio. Ile bring you thither my Lord, if you'll vouchsafe me.

Prince. Nay, that would be as great a foile in the new glosse of your marriage, as to shew a child his new coat and forbid him to wear it, I will onely be bold with Benedick for his company; for from the crown of his head, to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth, he hath twice or thrice cut Cupids bow-string, and the little hang-man dare not shoot at him, he hath a heart as sound as a bell, and the tongue is the clapper, for what his heart thinks,
his tongue speaks.

Ben. Gallants, I am not as I have bin.

Leo. So say I; methinks you are sadder.

Claudio. I hope he be in love.

Prince. Hang him truant, there's no true drop of blood in him to be truly toucht with love, if he be sad, he wants money.

Ben. I have the tooth-ach.

Prince. Draw it.

Ben. Hang it.

Claudio. You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards.

Prince. What? sigh for the tooth-ach.

Leon. Where is but a humour or a worm.

Ben. Well, every one cannot master a grief, but he that has it.

Claudio. Yet say I, he is in love.

Prince. There is no appearance of fancie in him, unlesse it be a fancy that he hath to strange disguises, as to be a Dutchman to day, a Frenchman to morrow: unlesse he have a fancy to this foolery, as it appears he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it to appear he is.

Claudio. If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signes, a brushes his hat a mornings;
What should that bode?

Prince. Hath any man seen him at the Barbers?

Claudio. No, but the Barbers man hath been seen with him, and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis balls.

Leon. Indeed he looks younger than he did, by the losse of a beard.

Prince. Nay a rubs himself with Civit, can you smell him out by that?

Claudio. That's as much as to say, the sweet youth's in love.

Prince. The greatest note of it is his melancholy.

Claudio. And when was he wont to wash his face?

Prince. Yea, or to paint himself? for the which I hear what they say of him.

Claudio. Nay, but his jesting spirit, which is now crept into a lute-string, and now govern'd by stops.

Prince.

Prin. Indeed that tells a heavy tale for him: conclude, he is in love.

Clau. Nay, but I know who loves him.

Prin. That would I know too, I warrant one that knows him not.

Clau. Yes, and his ill conditions, and in despite of all, dies for him.

Prin. She shall be buried with her face upwards.

Ben. Yes is this no charm for the tooth-ake, old signior, walk aside with me, I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby horses must not hear.

Prin. For my life to break with him about Beatrice.

Clau. 'Tis even so, Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice, and then the two Bears will not bite one another when they meet.

Enter John the Bastard.

Bast. My Lord and brother, God save you.

Prin. Good den brother.

Bast. If your leisure serv'd, I would speak with you.

Prin. In private?

Bast. If it please you, yet Count Claudio may hear, for what I would speak of, concerns him.

Prin. What's the matter?

Bast. Means your Lordship to be married to morrow?

Prin. You know he does.

Bast. I know not that when he knows what I know.

Clau. If there be any impediment, I pray you discover it.

Bast. You may think I love you not, let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me by that I now will manifest, for my brother (I think, he holds you well, and in dearness of heart) hath hope to effect your ensuing marriage: surely sure ill spent, and labour ill bestowed.

Prin. Why, what's the matter?

Bast. I came hither to tell you, and circumstances shortned, (for she hath been too long a talking of) the Lady is disloyal.

Clau. Who! Hero!

Bast. Even she, Leonato's Hero, your Hero, every mans Hero.

Clau. Disloyal?

Bast. The word is too good to paint out her wickedness, I could say she were worse, think you of a worse title, and I will fit her to it: wonder not till further warrant: goe but with me to night, you shall see her chamber window entred, even the night before her wedding day, if you love her, then to morrow wed her: but it would better fit your honour to change your mind.

Clau. May this be so?

Prin. I will not think it.

Bast. If you dare not trust that you see, confesse not that you know: if you will follow me, I will shew you enough, and when you have seen more, and heard more, proceed accordingly.

Clau. If I see any thing to night, why I should not marry her to morrow in the congregation, where I should wed, there will I shame her.

Prin. And as I wooed for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her.

Bast. I will disparage her no farther, till you are my witnesses, bear it coldly but till night, and let the issue shew it self.

Prin. O day untowardly turned?

Clau. O mischief strangely thwarting!

Bast. O plague right well prevented! so will you say, when you have seen the sequele.

Exeunt.

Enter Dogbery and his companion with the watch.

Dog. Are you good men and true?

Verg. Yea, or else it were pity but they should suffer salvation body and soul.

Dog. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the Princes watch.

Verg. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogbery.

Dog. First, who think you the most desartlesse man to be Constable?

Watch. 1. Hugh Ote-cake sir, or George Sea-cole, for they can write and reade.

Dog. Come hither neighbour Sea-coale, God hath blest you with a good name: to be a well-favoured man, is the gift of fortune, but to write and read, comes by Nature.

Watch. 2. Both which Master Constable

Dog. You have: I knew it would be your answer: well, for your favour sir, why, give God thanks, and make no boast of it, and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of such vanity; you are thought here to be the most senslesse and fit man for the Constable of the watch: therefore bear you the lantern: this is your charge: You shall comprehend all vagrom men, you are to bid any man stand in the Princes name.

Watch. 2. How if a will not stand?

Dog. Why then take no note of him, but let him go, and presently call the rest of the Watch together, and thank God you are ridde of a knave.

Verg. If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the Princes subjects.

Dog. True, and they are to meddle with none but the Princes subjects: you shall also make no noise in the streets: for, for the Watch to babble and talk, is most tollerable, and not to be indured.

Watch. We will rather sleep then talk, we know what belongs to a Watch.

Dog. Why you speak like an ancient and most quiet watchman, for I cannot see how sleeping should offend: only have a care that your bills be not stoln: well, you are to call at all the Ale-houses, and bid them that are drunk get them to bed.

Watch. How if they will not?

Dog. Why then let them alone till they are sober, if they make you not then the better answer, you may say, they are not the men you took them for.

Watch. Well sir.

Dog. If you meet a thief, you may suspect him; by vertue of your office, to be no true man: and for such kind of men, the lesse you meddle or make with them, why the more is for your honesty.

Watch. If we know him to be a thief, shall we not lay hands on him?

Dog. Truly by your office you may, but I think they that touch pitch will be defil'd: the most peaceable way for you, if you do take a thief, is, to let him shew himself what he is, and steal out of his company.

Verg. You have bin alwaies call'd a mercifull man partner.

Dog. Truly I would not hang a dog by my will, much more a man who hath any honesty in him.

Verges. If you hear a Child cry in the night, you must call to the Nurse, and bid her still it.

Watch. How if the Nurse be asleep and will not hear us?

Dog. Why then depart in peace, and let the Child wake her with crying, for the Ewe that will not hear her Lamb when it baes, will never answer a Calf when it bleats.

Verges. 'Tis very true.

Dog. This is the end of the charge: you Constable are to present the Princes own person, if you meet the Prince in the night, you may stay him.

Verges. Nay birlady that I think a cannot.

Dog. Five shillings to one on't with any man that knows the Statutes, he may stay him, marry not without the Prince be willing, for indeed the Watch ought to offend no man, and it is an offence to stay a man against his will.

Verges. Birlady I think it be so.

Dog. Ha, ah ha, well masters good night, and there be any matter of weight chances, call up me, keep your fellows counsells, and your own, and good night, come neighbour.

Watch. Well masters, we hear our charge, let us go sit here upon the Church bench till two, and then all to bed.

Dog. One word more, honest neighbours. I pray you watch about Signior Leonatoes door, for the wedding being there to morrow, there is a great coil to night, adieu, be vigilant I beseech you.

Exeunt.

Enter Borachio and Conrade.

Bor. What, Conrade?

Watch. Peace, sir not.

Bor. Conrade I say.

Con. Here man, I am at thy elbow.

Bor. Mals and my elbow itcht, I thought there would a scabbe follow.

Con. I will owe thee an answer for that, and now forward with thy tale.

Bor. Stand thee close then under this Pent-house, for it drizles rain, and I will, like a true drunkard, utter all to thee.

Watch. Some treason masters, yet stand close.

Bor. Therefore know, I have earned of Don John a thousand Ducates.

Con. Is it possible that any villany should be so dear?

Bor. Thou should'st rather aske if it were possible any villany should be so rich? for when rich villains have need of poor ones, poor ones may make what price they will.

Con. I wonder at it.

Bor. That shews thou art unconfirm'd, thou knowest that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloake, is nothing to a man.

Con. Yes, it is apparell.

Bor. I mean the fashion.

Con. Yes the fashion is the fashion.

Bor. Tush, I may as well say the fool's the fool, but see'st thou not what a deformed thief this fashion is?

Watch. I know that deformed, a has been a vile thief this seven yeares, a goes up and down like a Gentleman: I remember his name.

Bor. Did'st thou not hear some body?

Con. No, 'twas the vane on the house.

Bor. See'st thou not (I say) what a deformed thief this fashion is, how giddily a turns about all the Hot-blooms, between fourteen and five and thirty, sometimes fashioning them like Pharaoes soldiers in the rechie painting, sometimes like god Bell's priests in the old Church window, sometime like the shaven Hercules in the smircht worm-eaten tapestry, where his cod-piece seems as massie as his club.

Con. All this I see, and see that the fashion wears out more apparell then the man; but art not thou thy self giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?

Bor. Not so neither, but know that I have to night wooed Margaret the Lady Hero's gentlewoman, by the name of Hero; she leans nie out at her mistris chamber window, bids me a thousand times good night: I tell this tale vildly: I should first tell thee how the Prince Claudio and my Master planted, and placed, and possessed by my Master Don John, saw a far off in the Orchard this amiable encounter.

Con. And thought thy Margaret was Hero?

Bor. Two of them did, the Prince and Claudio, but the devil my Master knew she was Margaret, and partly by his oathes, which first posselt them, partly by the dark night which did deceive them, but chiefly, by my villany, which did confirm any slander that Don John had made, away went Claudio enraged, swore he would meet her as he was appointed next morning at the Temple, and there, before the whole Congregation shame her with what he saw o're night, and send her home again without a Husband.

Watch. 1. We charge you in the Princes name stand.

Watch. 2. Call up the right master Constable, we have here recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery that ever was known in a Common-wealth.

Watch. 1. And one Deformed is one of them, I know him, a weares a lock, Con. Masters, masters.

Watch. 2. You'll be made bring Deformed forth I warrant you.

Con. Masters, never speak, we charge you, let us obey you to go with us.

Bor. We are like to prove a goodly commodity, being taken up of these mens bills.

Con. A commodity in question I warrant you, come wee'll obey you.

Exeunt.

Enter Hero and Margaret, and Vrsula.

Hero. Good Vrsula wake my Cousin Beatrice, and desire her to rise.

Vrsu. I will Lady.

Hero. And bid her come hither.

Vrsu. Well.

Mar. Troth, I think your other rebato were better.

Hero. No pray thee good Meg I'll wear this.

Mar. By my troth's not so good, and I warrant your Cousin will say so.

Hero. My Cousin's a fool, and thou art another, i'll wear none but this.

Mar. I like the new tire within excellently, if the hair were a thought browner: and your Gown's a most rare fashion ifaith, I saw the Dutchesse of Millains Gown that they praise so.

Hero. O that exceeds they say.

Mar. By my troth's but a Night-Gown in respect of yours, cloth a gold and cuts, and lac'd with silver, set with pearls down-sleeves, side-sleeves, and skirts, round, underborn with a blewish tinsel, but for a fine quaint gracefull and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten on't.

Hero.

Hero. God give me joy to wear it, for my heart is exceeding heavie.

Marg. 'Twill be heavier soon, by the weight of a man.

Hero. Fie upon thee, art not asham'd?

Marg. Of what Lady? of speaking honourably? is not marriage honourable in a beggar? is not your Lord honourable without marriage? I think you would have me say, saving your reverence a husband: and bad thinking do not wiest true speaking, Ile offend no body, is there any harm in the heavier for a husband? none I think, and it be the right husband, and the right wife, otherwise 'tis light and not heavy, ask my Lady Beatrice else, here she comes.

Enter Beatrice.

Hero. Good morrow Coze.

Beat. Good morrow sweet Hero.

Hero. Why how now? do you speak in the sick tune?

Beat. I am out of all other tune me thinks.

Mar. Claps into Light a love, (that goes without a burdén,) do you sing it and Ile dance it.

Beat. Ye light alove with your heels, then if your husband have stables enough, you'll look he shall lack no barnes.

Mar. O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.

Beat. 'Tis almost five a clock cosin, 'tis time you were ready, by my troth I am exceeding ill, hey ho.

Mar. For a hawk, a horse, or a husband?

Beat. For the letter that begins them all, H.

Mar. Well, and you be not turn'd Turk, there's no more failing by the starre.

Beat. What means the fool trow?

Mar. Nothing I, but God send every one their hearts desire.

Hero. These gloves the Count sent me, they are an excellent perfume.

Beat. I am stufte cosin, I cannot smell.

Mar. A maid and stufte! there's a goodly catching of cold.

Beat. O God help me, God help me, how long have you profeft apprehension?

Mar. Ever since you left it, doth not my wit become me rarely?

Beat. It is not seen enough, you should wear it in your cap, by my troth I am sick.

Mar. Get you some of this distill'd carduus benedictus and lay it to your heart, it is the onely thing for a qualm.

Hero. There thou prickst her with a thissell.

Beat. Benedictus, why benedictus? you have some moral in this benedictus.

Mar. Moral? no by my troth, I have no moral meaning, I meant plain holy thissell, you may think perchance that I think you are in love, nay birlady I am not such a fool to think what I list, nor I list not to think what I can, nor indeed I cannot think, if I would think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love, or that you will be in love, or that you can be in love: yet Benedick was such another, and now is he become a man, he swore he would never marry, and yet now in despite of his heart he eates his meat without grudging, and how you may be converted I know not, but me thinks you look with your eyes as other women do.

Beat. What pace is this that thy tongue keeps.

Mar. Not a false gallop.

Enter Ursula.

Urs. Madam, withdraw, the Prince, the Count, signior Benedick, Don John, and all the gallants of the town are come to fetch you to Church.

Hero. Help to dresse me good coze, good Meg, good Ursula.

Enter Leonata, and the Constable and the Headborough.

Leonato. What would you with me, honest neighbour?

Const. Dog. Marry sir I would have some confidence with you, that decerns you nearly.

Leon. Brief I pray you, for you see it is a busie time with me.

Const. Dog. Marry this it is sir.

Headb. Yes in truth it is sir.

Leon. What is it my good friends?

Const. Dog. Goodman Verges sir speaks a little of the matter, an old man sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as, God help, I would desire they were, but infaith honest as the skin between his browes.

Headb. Yes I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no honestier then I.

Const. Dog. Comparisons are odorous, palabras, neighbour Verges.

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.

Const. Dog. It pleases your worship to say so, but we are the poor Dukes Officers, but truly for mine own part, if I were as tedious as a King, I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.

Leon. All thy tediousnesse on me, ah?

Const. Dog. Yea, and 'twere a thousand times more than 'tis, for I hear as good exclamation on your Worship as of any man in the City, and though I be but a poor man, I am glad to hear it.

Headb. And so am I.

Leon. I would fain know what you have to say.

Headb. Marry sir our watch to night, excepting your worships presence, have tane a couple of as arrant knaves, as any in Messina.

Const. Dog. A good old man sir, he will be talking as they say, when the age is in the wit is out, God help us, it is a world to see: well said yfaith neighbour Verges, well, God's a good man, and two men rides an horse one must ride behind, an honest soul yfaith sir, by my troth he is, as ever broke bread, but God is to be worshipt, all men are not alike, alas good neighbour.

Leon. Indeed neighbour he comes too short of you.

Const. Dog. Gifts that God gives.

Leon. I must leave you.

Const. Dog. One word sir, our watch sir have indeed comprehended two aspitious persons, and we would have them this morning examined before your worship.

Leon. Take their examination your self, and bring it me, I am now in great haste, as may appear unto you.

Const. It shall be suffigance. [exit.]

Leon. Drink some wine ere you goe: fare you well.

Mess. My Lord, they stay for you to give your daughter to her husband.

Leon. Ile wait upon them. I am ready.

Dough. Goe good partner, goe get you to Francis Seacoale, bid him bring his pen and inkhorn to the Goale: we are now to examine thosemen.

Verges. And we must doe it wisely.

Dough. We will spare for no wit I warrant you here's here's that shall drive some of them to a non-come, only get the learned writer to set down our excommunication, and meet me at the Jaile.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Prince, Bassard, Leonato, Frier, Claudio, Benedick, Hero, and Beatrice.

Leon. Come Frier Francis, be brief, onely to the plain form of marriage, and you shall recount their patticular duties afterwards.

Fran. You come hither my Lord to marry this Lady.

Clau. No.

Leon. To be married to her, Frier, you come to marry her.

Frier. Lady, you come hither to be married to this Count.

Hero. I doe.

Frier. If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be conioined, I charge you on your souls to utter it.

Clau. Know you any, Hero?

Hero. None my Lord.

Frier. Know you any, Count?

Leon. I dare make his answer, None.

Clau. O what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do!

Ben. How now! interjections? why then, some be of laughing, as ha, ha, he.

Clau. Stand thee by Frier: father, by your leave, Will you with free and unconstrained soul Give me this maid your daughter?

Leon. As freely son as God did give her me.

Clau. And what have I to give you back, whose worth May counterpoise this rich and precious gift?

Prin. Nothing, unlesse you render her again.

Clau. Sweet Prince, you learn me noble thankfulness: There Leonato, take her back again,

Give not this rotten Orange to your friend,
She's but the sign and semblance of her honour:
Behold how like a maid she blushes here!

O what authority and shew of truth
Can cunning sin cover it self withall
Comes not that bloud, as modest evidence,
To witnesse simple Vertue? would you not swear
All you that see her, that she were a maid,
By these exterior shews? But she is none:
She knows the heat of a luxurious bed:
Her blush is guiltinesse, not modestie.

Leon. What do you mean my Lord?

Clau. Not to be married,
Not knit my soul to an approved wanton.

Leon. Dear my Lord, if you in your own prooffe,
Have vanquisht the resistance of your youth,
And made defeat of her virginity.

(her;

Clau. I know what you would say: if I have known
You will say, she did imbrace me as a husband,
And to extenuate the forehead sin: No Leonato,
I never tempted her with word too large,
But as a brother to his sister, shewed
Bashfull sincerity and comely love.

Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you?

Clau. Out on thee seeming, I will write against it,
You seem to me as Diana in her Orb,
As chaste as is the bud ere it be blown:
But you are more intemperate in your bloud,
Than Venus, or those pampered animals,
That rage in savage sensuality.

Hero. Is my Lord well, that he doth speak so wide?

Leon. Sweet Prince why speak not you?

Prin. What should I speak?

I stand dishonour'd that have gone about,
To link my dear friend to a common stale.

Leon. Are these things spoken, or do I but dream?

Bast. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.

Ben. This looks not like a nuptial.

Hero. True! O God!

Clau. Leonato, stand I here?

Is this the Prince? is this the Princes brother?

Is this face Heroes? are our eyes our own?

Leon. All this is so, but what of this my Lord?

Clau. Let me but move one question to your daughter,
And by that fatherly and kindly power,
That you have in her, bid her answer truly.

Leon. I charge thee to do as thou art my child.

Hero. O God defend me, how am I beset,
What kind of catechizing call you this?

Leon. To make you answer truly to your name.

Hero. Is it not Hero? who can blot that name
With any just reproach?

Clau. Marry that can Hero,

Hero it self can blot out Heroes vertue.

What man was he, talkt with you yesternight,
Out at your window betwixt twelve and one?
Now if you are a maid answer to this.

Hero. I talkt with no man at that hour my Lord.

Prin. Why then you are no maiden. Leonato,
I am sorry you must hear: upon mine honour,
My self, my brother, and this grieved Count
Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night,
Talk with a ruffian at her chamber window,
Who hath indeed most like a liberal villain
Confest the vile encounters they have had
A thousand times in seeret.

John. Fie, fie, they are not to be named my Lord,
Not to be spoken of,

There is not chastity enough in language,
Without offence to utter them: thus pretty Lady
I am sorry for thy much misgovernment.

Clau. O Hero! what a Hero hadst thou been
If half thy outward graces had been placed
About thy thoughts and counsels of thy heart?
But fare thee well, most foul, most fair, farewell
Thou pure impiety, and impious purity,
For thee Ile lock up all the gates of Love,
And on my eye-lids shall Conjecture hang,
To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm,
And never shall it more be gracious.

Leon. Hath no mans dagger here a point for me?

Beat. Why how now cousin, wherefore sink you down?

Bast. Come, let us go: these things come thus to light,
Smother her spirits up.

Ben. How doth the Lady?

Beat. Dead I think, help uncle,

Hero. Why Hero, Uncle, Signior Benedick, Frier.

Leon. O Fate! take not away thy heavy hand,
Death is the fairest cover for her shame
That may be wisht for.

Beat. How

Beat. How now cosin Hero?

Fri. Have comfort Lady.

Leo. Dost thou look up?

Fri. Yea, wherefore should she not?

Leo. Wherefore? Why doth not every earthly thing
Cry shame upon her? Could she here deny
The story that is printed in her blood?
Do not live Hero, do not open thine eyes:
For did I think thou would'st not quickly die,
Thought I thy spirits were stronger than thy shame's
My self would on the rearward of reproaches
Strike at thy life. Grieved I, I had but one?
Chide I, for that at frugall Natures frame?
One too much by thee: why had I one?
Why ever was't thou lovely in my eyes?
Why had I not with charitable hand
Took up a beggar's issue at my gate's,
Who sinned thus, and mix'd with infamy,
I might have said, no part of it is mine:
This shame derive's it self from unknown loins,
But mine, and mine I lov'd, and mine I prais'd.
And mine that I was proud on, mine so much,
That I my self, was to my self not mine:
Valewing of her, why she, O she is fall'n
Into a pit of Ink, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her clean again,
And salt too little, which may season give
To her foul tainted flesh.

Ben. Sir, sir, be patient: for my part, I am so attired in wonder, I know not what to say.

Beat. O on my soul my cosin is belied.

Ben. Lady, were you her bedfellow last night?

Bea. No truly: not, although untill last night,
I have this twelvemonth been her bedfellow.

Leon. Confirm'd, confirm'd, O that is stronger made
Which was before barr'd up with ribs of iron.
Would the Prince lie, and Claudio would he lie
Who lov'd her so, that speaking of her foulness, Wash'd it with tears? Hence from her, let her die.

Fri. Hear me a little, for I have onely been silent so long, and given way unto this course of fortune, by noting of the Lady, I have mark'd
A thousand blushing apparitions,
To start into her face, a thousand innocent shame's,
In Angel whiteness bear away those blushes,
And in her eye there hath appear'd a fire
To burn the errors that these Princes hold
Against her maiden truth. Call me a fool,
Trust not my reading, nor my observations,
Which with experimentall seal doth warrant
The tenure of my book: trust not my age,
My reverence, calling, nor dignity,
If this sweet Lady lie not guiltless here,
Under some biting error.

Leon. Friar, it cannot be:
Thou seest that all the Grace that she hath left,
Is, that she will not adde to her damnation
A sin of perjury, she not denies it:
Why seek'st thou then to cover with excuse,
That which appears in proper nakedness?

Fri. Lady, what man is he you are accus'd of?

Hero. They know that do accuse me, I know none:
If I know more of any man alive
Then that which maiden modesty doth warrant,
Let all my sins lack mercy. O my Father,
Prove you that any man with me convers'd,

At hour's unmeet, or that I yesternight
Maintain'd the change of words with any creature,
Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.

Fri. There is some strange misprision in the Prince.

Ben. Two of them have the very bent of honor,
And if their wisdom's be mislaid in this:
The practise of it lives in John the bastard,
Whose spirits toiled in frame of villanies.

Leon. I know not: if they speak but truth of her,
These hands shall tear her: If they wrong her honor,
The proudest of them shall well hear it.
Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,
Nor age so eat up my invention,
Nor fortune made such havock of my means,
Nor my bad life rest me so much of friends,
But they shall finde, awak'd in such a kinde,
Both strength of limbe, and policie of minde,
Ability in means, and choise of friends,
To quit me of them thoroughly.

Fri. Pause a while,
And let my counsell sway you in this case,
Your daughter here the Princess (left for dead)
Let her a while be secretly kept in,
And publish it, that she is dead indeed:
Maintain a mourning ostentation,
And on your Families old monument,
Hang mournfull Epitaph's, and do all rites,
That appertain unto a buriall.

Leon. What shall become of this? What will this do?

Fri. Marry this well carried, shall on her behalfe,
Change slander to remorse, that is some good:
But not for that dream I on this strange course,
But on this travail look for greater birth:
She dying, as it must be so maintain'd,
Upon the instant that she was accus'd,
Shall be lamented, pittied, and excus'd
Of every hearer: for it so falls out,
That what we have, we prize not to the worth,
Whiles we enjoy it; but being lack'd and lost,
Why then we rack the value, then we finde
The vertue that possession would not shew us
Whiles it was ours; so will it fare with Claudio:
When he shall hear she dyed upon his words,
Th' Idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination.

And every lovely Organ of her life,
Shall come apparel'd in more precious habit:
More moving, delicate, and full of life,
Into the eye and prospect of his soul
Than when she liv'd indeed: then shall he mourn,
If ever Love had interest in his Liver,
And wish he had not so accus'd her:
No, though he thought his accusation true:
Let this be so, and doubt not but success
Will fashion the event in better shape
Then I can lay it down in likelihood.
But if all aim but this be level'd false,
The supposition of the Ladies death,
Will quench the wonder of her infamy.
And if it sort not well, you may conceal her,
As best befits her wounded reputation,
In some reclusive and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds and injuries.

Ben. Signior Leonato, let the Friar advise you,
And though you know my inwardness and love
Is very much unto the Prince and Claudio,

Yet, by mine honor, I will deal in this,
As secretly and justly, as your soul
Should with your body.

Leon. Being that I flow in grief,
The smallest twine may lead me.

Frier. 'Tis well consented, presently away,
For to strange sores, strangely they strain the cure,
Come Lady, die to live, this wedding day
Perhaps is but prolong'd, have patience & endure. Exit.

Bene. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while?

Beat. Yea, and I will weep a while longer.

Bene. I will not desire that.

Beat. You have no reason, I doe it freely.

Bene. Surely I do believe your fair cousin is wrong'd.

Beat. Ah, how much might the man deserve of me that would right her!

Bene. Is there any way to shew such friendship?

Beat. A very even way, but no such friend.

Bene. May a man doe it?

Beat. It is a mans office, but not yours.

Bene. I do love nothing in the world so well as you, is not that strange?

Beat. As strange as the thing I know not, it were as possible for me to say, I loved nothing so well as you, but believe me not, and yet I lie not, I confess nothing, nor
I deny nothing, I am sorry for my cousin.

Bene. By my sword Beatrice thou lov'st me.

Beat. Do not swear by it and eat it.

Bene. I will swear by it that you love me, and I will make him eat it that saies I love not you.

Beat. Will you not eat your word?

Bene. With no sauce that can be devised to it, I protest I love thee.

Beat. Why then God forgive me.

Bene. What offence sweet Beatrice?

Beat. You have stay'd me in a happy hour, I was about to protest I loved you.

Bene. And do it with all thy heart.

Beat. I love you with so much of my heart, that none is left to protest.

Bene. Come, bid me doe any thing for thee.

Beat. Kill Claudio.

Bene. Ha, not for the wide world.

Beat. You kill me to denie, farewell.

Bene. Tarry sweet Beatrice.

Beat. I am gone, though I am here, there is no love in you, nay I pray you let me go.

Bene. Beatrice.

Beat. In faith I will go.

Bene. We'll be friends first.

Beat. You dare easier be friends with me, than fight with mine enemy.

Bene. Is Claudio thine enemy?

Beat. Is a not approved in the height a villain, that hath slandered, scorned, dishonoured my kinswoman? O that I were a man! what, bear her in hand untill they come to take hands, and then with publick accusation, uncovered slander, unmittigated rancour? O God that I were a man? I would eat his heart in the market-place.

Bene. Hear me Beatrice.

Beat. Talke with a man out at a window, a proper saying.

Bene. Nay, but Beatrice.

Beat. Sweet Hero, she is wrong'd, she is slandered, she is undone.

Bene. Bet?

Beat. Princes and Counties! surely a princely testimony, a goodly Count-Comfect, a sweet Gallant surely, O that I were a man for his sake! or that I had any friend would be a man for my sake! But manhood is melted into curtesies, valour into complement, and men are onely turned into tongue, and trim ones too: he is now as valiant as Hercules, that onely tells a lie, and swears it:
I cannot be a man with wishing, therefore I will die a woman with grieving.

Bene. Tarry good Beatrice, by this hand I love thee.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way thou swearing by it.

Bene. Think you in your soul the Count Claudio hath wrong'd Hero?

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought, or a soul.

Bene. Enough. I am engag'd, I will challenge him, I will kiss your hand, and so leave you: by this hand Claudio shall render me dear account: as you hear of me, so think of me: go comfort your cousin, I must say she is dead, and so farewell. Exeunt.

Enter the Constables, Borachio, and the Town Clerk in gowns.

Keeper. Is our whole dissembly appear'd?

Cowley. O a stoole and cushion for the Sexton.

Sexton. Which be the Malefactors?

Andrew. Marry that am I, and my partner.

Cowley. Nay, that's certain, we have the exhibition to examine.

Sexton. But which are the offenders that are to be examined, let them come before Master Constable.

Kemp. Yea marry, let them come before me, what is your name friend?

Bor. Borachio.

Kemp. Pray write down Borachio. Yours sirra.

Conr. I am a Gentleman sir, and my name is Conrade.

Kemp. Write down Master gentleman Conrade: maisters, do you serve God: masters, it is proved already that you are little better then false knaves, and it will go near to be thought so shortly, how answer you for your selves?

Conr. Marry sir, we say we are none.

Kemp. A marvellous witty fellow I assure you, but I will go about with him: come you hither sirra, a word in your ear sir, I say to you, it is thought you are false knaves.

Bor. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Kemp. Well, stand aside, 'fore God they are both in a tale: have you writ down that they are none?

Sext. Master Constable, you go not the way to examine, you must call forth the watch that are their accusers.

Kemp. Yea marry, that's the esteest way, let the watch come forth: masters, I charge you in the Princes name, accuse these men.

Watch 1. This man said sir, that Don John the Princes brother was a villain.

Kemp. Write down, Prince John a villain: why this is flat perjury, to call a Princes brother villain.

Bor. Master Constable.

Kemp. Pray thee fellow peace, I do not like thy look, I promise thee.

Sexton. What heard you him say else?

Watch 2. Marry that he had received a thousand Dukats of Don John, for the accusing the Lady Hero wronfully. Kemp.

Kemp. Flat Burglarie as ever was committed.

Const. Yea by th' Masse that it is.

Sexton. What else fellow?

Watch. 1. And that Count Claudio did mean upon his words, to disgrace Hero before the whole assembly, and not marry her.

Kemp. O villain! thou wilt be condemn'd into everlasting redemption for this.

Sexton. What else?

Watch. This is all.

Sexton. And this is more masters then you can deny, Prince John is this morning secretly stoln away: Hero was in this manner accus'd, in this very manner refus'd, and upon the grief of this sodainly died: Master Constable, let these men be bound, and brought to Leonato; I will goe before, and shew him their examination.

Const. Come, let them be opinion'd.

Sext. Let them be in the hands of Coxcomb.

Kem. Gods my life, where's the Sexton? let him write down the Princes Officers Coxcomb: come, bind them; thou naughty varlet.

Couley. Away, you are an asse, you are an asse.

Kemp. Dost thou not suspect my place? dost thou not suspect my years? O that he were here to write me down an asse! but masters, remember that I am an asse: though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an asse: No thou villain, thou art full of piety as shall be prov'd upon thee by good witness, I am a wise fellow, and which is more, an officer, and which is more, a householder, and which is more, as pretty a piece of flesh as any in Messina, and one that knows the Law, goe to, and a rich fellow enough, go to, and a fellow that hath had losses, and one that hath two gowns, and every thing handsome about him, bring him away: O that I had been writ down an asse!

Exit.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Leonato and his brother.

Brother. If you goe on thus, you will kill your self, And 'tis not wisdom thus to second grief, Against your self.

Leon. I pray thee cease thy counsell, Which falls into mine ears as profitless, As water in a sieve: give not me counsell, Nor let no comfort else delight mine ear, But such a one whose wrongs doth sute with mine. Bring me a father that so lov'd his childe, Whose joy of her is over-whelm'd like mine. And bid him speak of patience, Measure his woe the length and breadth of mine, And let it answer every strain for strain, As thus for thus, and such a grief for such, In every lineament, branch, shape, and forme: If such a one will smile and stroke his beard, And hallow, wag, cry hem, when he should groan, Patch grief with proverbs, make misfortune drunk, With-candlewasters: bring him yet to me, And I of him will gather patience: But there is no such man, for brother, men Can counsell, and give comfort to that grief, Which they themselves not feel, but tasting it, Their counsell turns to passion, which before

Would give preceptiall medicine to rage, Fetter strong madnesse in a silken thred, Charme ache with ayre, and agonie with words. No, no, 'tis all men's office, to speak patience To those that wring under the load of sorrow: But no mans vertue nor sufficiencie To be so moral, when he shall endure The like himself: therefore give me no counsaile, My griefs cry louder then advertisement.

Broth. Therein do men from children nothing differ.

Leo. I pray thee peace, I will be flesh and blood, For there was never yet Philosopher, That could endure the tooth-ake patiently, How ever they have writ the stile of gods, And made a push at chance and sufferance.

Broth. Yet bend not all the harme upon your self, Make those that do offend you suffer too.

Leon. There thou speak'st reason, nay I will do so, My soul doth tell me, Hero is belied, And that shall Claudio know, so shall the Prince, And all of them that thus dishonour her.

Enter Prince and Claudio.

Bro. Here comes the Prince and Claudio hastily.

Prin. Good den, good den.

Clau. Good day to both of you.

Leon. Hear you my Lords?

Prin. We have some haste Leonato.

Leo. Some haste my Lord! well, fare you well my Lord, Are you so hasty now? well, all is one.

Prin. Nay, doe not quarrell with us, good old man.

Bro. If he could right himself with quarrelling, Some of us would lie low.

Clau. Who wrongs him?

Leon. Marry thou dost wrong me, thou dissembler thou: Nay, never lay thy hand upon thy sword, I fear thee not.

Clau. Marry bestrew my hand, If it should give your age such cause of fear, Infaith my hand meant nothing to my sword.

Leo. Tush, tush, man, never flee and jest at me, I speak not like a dotard, nor a fool, As under priviledge of age to brag, What I have done being young, or what would doe, Were I not old: know Claudio to thy head, Thou hast so wrong'd my innocent Child and me, That I am forc'd to lay my reverence by, And with grey hairs and bruise of many dayes, Doe challenge thee to triall of a man, I say thou hast beli'd mine innocent Child. Thy slander hath gone through and through her heart, And she lies buried with her ancestors: O in a tombe where never scandall slept, Save this of hers, fram'd by thy villany.

Clau. My villany?

Leon. Thine Claudio, thine I say.

Prin. You say not right old man.

Leon. My Lord, my Lord, I'll prove it on his body if he dare, Despight his nice fence, and his active practice, His May of youth, and bloom of lustyhood.

Clau. Away, I will not have to doe with you.

Leo. Canst thou so daffe me? thou hast kill'd my child, If thou kill'st me boy, thou shalt kill a man.

Bro. He shall kill two of us, and men indeed, But that's no matter, let him kill one first:

Win

Win me and wear me, let him answer me,
Come follow me boy, come sir boy: come follow me
Sir boy, I'll whip you from your foyning fence, Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.

Leon. Brother.

Bro. Content your selfe, God knows I lov'd my neeces;
And she is dead, slander'd to death by villains,
That dare as well answer a man indeed
As I dare take a serpent by the tongue.
Boyes, apes, braggarts, Jacks, milk-sops.

Leon. Brother Anthony.

Brot. Hold you content, what man? I know them, yea
And what they wey, even to the utmost scruple,
Scambling, out-facing, fashion-mongring boyes,
That lye, and cog, and flout, deprave, and slander,
Go antickly and show outward hidiousness,
And speak of halfe a dozen dangerous words,
How they might hurt their enemies, if they durst,
And this is all.

Leon. But brother Anthony.

Ant. Come, 'tis no matter,
Do not you meddle, let me deal in this.

Pri. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience,
My heart is sorry for your daughters death:
But on my honour she was charg'd with nothing
But was true, and very full of prooffe.

Leon. My Lord, my Lord.

Prince. I will not hear you.

Enter Benedicke.

Leon. No! come brother, away, I will be heard.

Exeunt ambo,

Bro. And shall, or some of us will smart for it.

Prin. See, see, here comes the man he went to seek.

Clau. Now Signior, what news?

Ben. Good day my Lord:

Prin. Welcome Signior, you are almost come to part almost a fray.

Clau. We had like to have had our two noses snap'd off with two old men without teeth.

Prin. Leonato and his brother, what think'st thou? had we fought, I doubt we should have been too young for them.

Ben. In false quarrell there is no true valour, I came to seek you both.

Clau. We have been up and down to seek thee, for we are high prooffe melancholly, and would fain have it beaten away, wilt thou use thy wit?

Ben. It is in my scabberd, shall I draw it?

Prin. Doeſt thou wear thy wit by thy side?

Clau. Never any did so, though very many have been beside their wit, I will bid thee draw, as we do the min-strells draw to pleasure us.

Prin. As I am an honest man he looks pale, art thou sick, or angry?

Clau. What? courage man: what though care kil'd a cat, thou hast mettle enough to kill care.

Ben. Sir, I shall meet your wit in the carere, and you charge it against me, I pray you choose another subject.

Clau. Nay then give him another staffe, this last was broke croſs.

Prin. By this light, he changes more and more, I think he be angry indeed.

Clau. If he be, he knows how to turn his girdle.

Ben. Shall I speak a word in your ear?

Clau. God bleſs me from a challenge.

Ben. You are a villain, I jest not, I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare:
do me right, or I will protect your cowardise: you have kill'd a sweet Lady, and her death shall fall heavy on you, let me hear from you.

Clau. Well, I will meet you, so I may have good cheer.

Prin. What, a feast?

Clau. I faith I thank him, he hath bid me to calves heads and a Capon, the which if I do not carve most curiously, say my knife's naught, shall I not finde a woodcock too?

Ben. Sir, your wit ambles well, goes easily.

Prin. I'll tell thee how Beatrice prais'd thy wit the other day: I said thou hadst a fine wit: true saies she, a fine little one: no said I, a great wit: right saies she, a great gross one: nay said I, a good wit: just said she, it hurts no body: nay said I, the gentleman is wise: certain said she, a wise gentleman: nay said I, he hath the tongues:
that I believe said she, for he swore a thing to me on munday night, which he forswore on tuesday morning:
there's a double tongue, there's two tongues: thus did shee an houre together trans-shape thy particular ver-tues, yet at last she concluded with a sigh, thou wast the proprest man in Italy.

Clau. For the which she wept heartily, and said shee car'd not.

Prin. Yea that she did, but yet for all that, and if she did not hate him deadly, she would love him dearly, the old man's daughter told us all.

Clau. All, all, and moreover, God saw him when he was hid in the garden.

Prin. But when shall we set the salvage Bulls hornes on the sensible Benedick's head?

Clau. Yea and text under-neath, heere dwells Benedick the married man.

Bene. Fare you well, Boy, you know my minde, I will leave you now to your gossip-like humor, you breake jest as braggards do their blades, which God be thanked hurt not: my Lord, for your many courtesies I thank you, I must discontinue your company, your brother the Bastard is fled from Messina: you have among you, kill'd a sweet and innocent Lady: for my Lord Lack-beard there, he and I shall meet, and till then peace be with him.

Prin. He is in earnest.

Clau. In most profound earnest, and I'll warrant you, for the love of Beatrice.

Prin. And hath challeng'd thee.

Clau. Most sincerely.

Prin. What a pretty thing man is, when he goes in his doublet and hose, and leaves off his wit.

Enter Constable, Constable, and Borachio.

Clau. He is then a Giant to an Ape, but then is an Ape a Doctor to such a man.

Prin. But soft you, let me see, pluck up my heart, and be sad, did he not say my brother was fled?

Const. Come you sir, if justice cannot tame you, she shall ne're weigh more reasons in her ballance, nay, and you be a cursing hypocrite once, you must be lookt to.

Prin. How now, two of my brothers men bound? Bo-rachio one.

Clau. Harken after their offence my Lord.

Prin. Officers, what offence have these men done:

Con. Marrie

Const. Marry sir, they have committed false report, moreover they have spoken untruths, secondarily they are slanders, sixt and lastly, they have belyed a Lady, thirdly, they have verified unjust things, and to conclude they are lying knaves.

Prin. First I ask thee what they have done, thirdly I ask thee what's their offence, sixt and lastly why they are committed, and to conclude, what you lay to their charge.

Claudio. Rightly reasoned, and in his own division, and by my troth there's one meaning well suted.

Prin. Whom have you offended maisters, that you are thus bound to your answer? this learned Constable is too cunning to be understood, what's your offence?

Bor. Sweet Prince, let me go no farther to mine answer: do you hear me, and let this Count kill me: I have deceived even your very eyes: what your wisdoms could not discover, these shallow fooles have brought to light, who in the night overheard me confessing to this man, how Don John your brother incensed me to slander the Lady Hero, how you were brought into the Orchard, and saw me court Margaret in Hero's garments, how you disgrac'd her when you should marry her: my villanie they have upon record, which I had rather seal with my death, then repeat over to my shame: the Lady is dead upon mine and my masters false accusation: and briefly, I desire nothing but the reward of a villain.

Prince. Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?

Claudio. I have drunk poison whiles he utter'd it.

Prin. But did my Brother set thee on to this?

Bor. Yea, and paid me rich for the practice of it.

Prin. He is compos'd of treachery.

And fled he is upon this villany.

Claudio. Sweet Hero, now thy image doth appear In the rare semblance that I lov'd it first.

Const. Come, bring away the plaintiffes, by this time our Sexton hath informed Signior Leonato of the matter: and maisters, do not forget to specifie when time and place shall serve, that I am an Ass.

Con. 2. Here, here comes maister Signior Leonato, and the Sexton too.

Enter Leonato.

Leon. Which is the villain? let me see his eyes, That when I note another man like him, I may avoid him: which of these is he?

Bor. If you would know your wronger, look on me.

Leon. Art thou, art thou the slave that with thy breath hast kild mine innocent childe?

Bor. Yea, even I alone.

Leon. No, not so villain, thou belist thy selfe; Here stand a pair of honourable men, A third is fled that had a hand in it: I thank you Princes for my daughters death, Record it with your high and worthy deeds, 'Twas bravely done; if you bethink you of it.

Claudio. I know not how to pray your patience, Yet I must speak, choose your revenge your selfe, Impose me to what penance your invention Can lay upon my sin, yet sinn'd I not, But in mistaking.

Prin. By my soul nor I, And yet to satisfie this good old man,

I would bend under my heavy waight, That hee'll enjoyn me too.

Leon. I cannot bid your daughter live, That were impossible; but I pray you both. Possess the people in Messina here, How innocent she died, and if your love Can labour ought in sad invention, Hang her an epitaph upoh her tombe, And sing it to her bones, sing it to night: To morrow morning come you to my house, And since you could not be my son in law, Be yet my Nephew: my brother hath a daughter, Almost the copie of my childe that's dead, And she alone is heir to both of us, Give her the right you should have giv'n her cosin, And so dies my revenge.

Claudio. O noble sir! Your overkindness doth wring tears from me, I do embrace your offer, and dispose For henceforth of poor Claudio.

Leon. To morrow then I will expect your coming; To night I take my leave: this naughty man Shall face to face be brought to Margaret, Who I believe was packt in all this wrong, Hired to it by your brother.

Bor. No by my soul she was not, Nor knew not what she did when she spoke to me, But alwayes hath been just and vertuous, In any thing that I do know by her.

Const. Moreover sir, which indeed is not under white and black, this plaintiffe here, the offender did call me asse, I beseech you let it be remembred in his punishment, and also the watch heard them talke of one Deformed, they say he wears a key in his ear and a lock hanging by it, and borrows money in Gods name, the which he hath us'd so long, and never paid, that now men grow hard-hearted and will lend nothing for Gods sake: pray you examine him upon that point.

Leon. I thank thee for thy care and honest pains.

Const. Your worship speaks like a most thankfull and reverend youth, and I praise God for you.

Leon. There's for thy pains.

Const. God save the foundation.

Leon. Goe, I discharge thee of thy prisoner, and I thank thee.

Const. I leave an arrant knave with your worship, which I beseech your worship to correct your selfe, for the example of others: God keepe your worship, I wish your worship well, God restore you to health, I humbly give you leave to depart, and if a merry meeting may be wish'd, God prohibite it: come neighbour.

Leon. Untill to morrow morning, Lords, farewell.

Exeunt.

Bor. Farewell my Lords, we look for you to morrow.

Prin. We will not fail.

Claudio. To night I'll mourn with Hero.

Leon. Bring you these fellows on, wee'll talke with Margaret, how her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow.

Exeunt.

Enter Benedick and Margaret.

Ben. Pray thee sweet Mistriss Margaret, deserve well at my hands, by helping me to the speech of Beatrice.

Mar. Will

Mar. Will you then write me a Sonnet in praise of my beauty?

Ben. In so high a stile Margaret, that no man living shall come over it, for in most comely truth thou deservest it.

Mar. To have no man come over me, why, shall I alwayes keep below stairs?

Ben. Thy wit is as quick as the grey-hounds mouth, it catches.

Mar. And yours, as blunt as the Fencers foils, which hit, but hurt not.

Ben. A most manly wit Margaret, it will not hurt a woman: and so I pray thee call Beatrice, I give thee the bucklers.

Mar. Give us the swords, we have bucklers of our own.

Ben. If you use them Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice, and they are dangerous weapons for Maids.

Mar. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who I think hath legs.

Exit Margaret.

Ben. And therefore will come. The god of love that sits above, and knows me, and knows me how pittifull I deserve; I mean in singing, but in loving, Leander the good swimmer, Troilus the first imployer of panders, and a whole booke full of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose names yet run smoothly in the even rode of a blank verse, why they were never so truly turned over as my poor self in love: marry I cannot shew it in rime, I have tried, I can finde out no rime to Ladie but badie, an innocents rime: for scorne, horne, a hard rime: for school, fool, a babling rime: very ominous endings, no, I was not born under a riming Planet, for I cannot wooe in festivall tearms:

Enter Beatrice.

Sweet Beatrice would'st thou come when I call'd thee?

Beat. Yea Signior, and depart when you bid me.

Ben. O stay but till then.

Beat. Then, is spoken: fare you well now, and yet ere I go, let me go with that I came, which is, with knowing what hath past between you and Claudio.

Ben. Onely foule words, and thereupon I will kisse thee.

Beat. Foul words and foule winde, and foule winde is but foul breath, and foul breath is noisome, therefore I will depart unkissed.

Ben. Thou hast frighted the word out of his right sence, so forcible is thy wit, but I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge, and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward, and I pray thee now tell me, for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in love with me?

Beat. For them all together, which maintain'd so politick a state of evill, that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them: but for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me?

Ben. Suffer love! a good epithite, I do suffer love indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spite of your heart I think, alas poor heart, if you spite it for my sake, I will spite it for yours, for I will never love that which my friend hates.

Bened. Thou and I are too wise to wooe peaceably.

Beat. It appears not in this confession, there's not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself.

Ben. An old, an old instance Beatrice, that liv'd in the time of good neighbours, if a man do not erect in this age his own tombe ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monuments, then the Bells ring, and the Widow weeps.

Beat. And how long is that think you?

Ben. Question, why an hour in clamour and a quarter in thewme, therefore is it most expedient for the wise, if Don worne (his conscience) finde no impsdiment to the contrary, to be the trumpet of his own vertues, as I am to my self so much for praising my self, who I my self will bear witness is praise worthy, and now tell me how doth your cosin?

Beat. Very ill.

Ben. And how do you?

Beat. Very ill too.

Enter Ursula.

Ben. Serve God, love me, and mend, there will I leave you too, for here comes one in haste.

Urs. Madam you must come to your Uncle, yonders old coile at home, it is proved my Lady Hero hath been falsly accus'd, the Prince and Claudio mightily abused, and Don John is the author of all, who is fled and gone: will you come presently?

Beat. Will you go hear this news Signior?

Ben. I will live in thy heart, die in thy lap; and be buried in thy eyes: and moreover, I will goe with thee to thy Uncles.

Exeunt.

Enter Claudio, Prince, and three or four with Tapers.

Claudio. Is this the monument of Leonato?

Lord. It is my Lord.

Epitaph.

Done to death by slanderous tongues,

Was the Hero that here lies:

Death in gnerdon of her wrongs,

Gives her fame which never dies:

So the life that died with shame,

Lives in death with glorious fame.

Hang thou there upon the tombe,

Praising her when I am dombe.

Claudio. Now musick sound and sing your solemne hymne.

Song.

Pardon goddess of the night,

Those that slew thy virgin knight,

For the which with songs of woe,

Round about her tombe they goe:

Midnight assist our moan,

Help us to sigh and gorau.

Heavily, heavily.

Graves yawn and yield your dead.

Till death be uttered,

Heavenly, heavenly.

(this right.)

Le. Now unto thy bones good night, yearly will I do

Prin. Good morrow masters, put your Torches out, The wolves have preyed, and look, the gentle day Before the wheels of Phæbus, round about Dapples the drowsie East with spots of grey: Thanks to you all, and leave us, fare you well.

Claudio. Good morrow masters, each his severall way

Prin. Come let us hence, and put on other weeds, And then to Leonato's we will go.

Claudio. And Hymen now with luckier issue speed;

Then

Then this tor whom we rendred up this woe. Exeunt.

Enter Leonato, Ben. Marg. Urs. Old man, Frier, Hero.

Frier. Did I not tell you she was innocent?

Leon. So are the Prince and Claudio who accus'd her,
Upon the errour that you heard debated.

But Margaret was in some fault for this;

Although against her will as it appears,

In the true course of all the question.

Old. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.

Ben. And so am I, being else by faith enforc'd.

To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.

Leon. Well daughter, and young Gentlemen all,

Withdraw into a Chamber by your selves,

And when I fend for you, come hither mask'd:

The Prince and Claudio promis'd by this hour

To visit me, you know your office Brother,

You must be father to your Brothers daughter,

And give her to young Claudio. Exeunt Ladies.

Old. Which I will doe with confirm'd countenance.

Ben. Frier, I must intreat your pains, I think.

Frier. To doe what Signior?

Ben. To bind me, or undoe me, one of them:

Signior Leonato, truth it is good Signior,

Your Neece regards me with an eye of favour.

Old. That eye my daughter lent her, 'tis most true.

Ben. And I doe with an eye of love requite her.

Leon. The sight whereof I think you had from me,

From Claudio and the Prince, but what's your will?

Ben. Your answer sir is Enigmatical,

But for my will, my will is, your good will

May stand with ours, this day to be conjoyn'd,

I'th state of honourable marriage,

In which good I shall desire your help.

Leon. My heart is with your liking.

Frier. And my help.

Enter Prince and Claudio with attendants.

Prin. Good morrow to this fair assembly.

Leon. Good morrow Prince, good morrow Claudio,

We here attend you, are you yet determin'd,

To day to marry with my brothers daughter?

Clau. He hold my mind were she an Ethiope.

Leon. Call her forth brother, heres the Frier ready.

Prin. Good morrow Benedick, why what's the matter?

That you have such a February face,

So full of frost, of storm, and cloudiness.

Clau. I think he thinks upon the savage bull:

Tush, fear not man, we'll tip thy hornes with gold,

And so all Europe shall rejoyce at thee,

As once Europa did at lusty Jove,

When he would play the noble beast in love.

Ben. Bull Jove sir, had an amiable low,

And some such strange bull leapt your fathers Cow,

And got a Calf in that same noble feat,

Much like to you, for you have just his bleat.

Enter brother, Hero, Beatrice, Margaret, Ursula.

Clau. For this I owe you: here comes other reckonings.

Which is the Lady I must seize upon?

Leon. This same is she, and I doe give you her.

Clau. Why then she's mine, sweet let me see your face.

Leon. No that you shall not, till you take her hand,

Before this Frier, and swear to marry her.

Clau. Give me your hand before this holy Frier,

I am your husband if you like of me.

Hero. And when I liv'd I was your other wife,

And when you lov'd, you were my other husband.

Clau. Another Hero?

Hero. Nothing certainer.

One Hero died, but I doe live,

And surely as I live, I am a maid.

Prin. The former Hero, Hero that is dead.

Leon. She died my Lord, but whiles her slander liv'd.

Frier. All this amazement can I qualifie,

When after that the holy rites are ended,

I'll tell thee largely of fair Hero's death:

Mean time let wonder seem familiar,

And to the chappell let us presently.

Ben. Soft and fair Frier, which is Beatrice?

Beat. I answer to that name, what is your will?

Ben. Doe not you love me?

Beat. Why, no more then reason.

Ben. Why then your Uncle, and the Prince, & Claudio, have been deceived, they swore you did.

Beat. Doe not you love me?

Ben. Troth no, no more then reason.

Beat. Why then my Cofin Margaret and Ursula
Are much deceiv'd, for they did swear you did.

Ben. They swore you were almost sick for me.

Beat. They swore you were well-nye dead for me

Ben. 'Tis no matter, then you do not love me?

Beat. No truly, but in friendly recompence.

Leon. Come Cofin, I am sure you love the gentleman.

Clau. And I'll be sworn upon't that he loves her,

For here's a paper written in his hand,

A halting sonnet of his own pure brain,

Fashioned to Beatrice.

Hero. And here's another,

Writ in thy cofins hand, stoln from her pocket,

Containing her affection unto Benedick.

Ben. A miracle, here's our own hands against our hearts: come I will have thee, but by this light I take thee for pitty.

Beat. I would not denie you, but by this good day, I yield upon great perswasion, and partly to save your life, for as I told, you were in a consumption.

Leon. Peace, I will stop your mouth.

Prin. How dost thou Benedick the married man?

Ben. I'll tell thee what Prince: a Colledge of witty-crackers cannot flout me out of my humour, dost thou think I care for a Satyre or an Epigram? no, if a man will be beaten with brains, a shall wear nothing handsome about him: in brief, since I do purpose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it: and therefore never flout at me, for what I have saide against it: for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion: for thy part Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee, but in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live un-bruis'd, and love my cofin.

Clau. I had well hoped thou would'st have denied Beatrice that I might have cudgel'd thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double dealer, which out of question thou wilt be, if my Cofin doe not looke exceeding narrowly to thee.

Ben. Come, come, we are friends, let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts, and our wives heels.

Leon. We'll have dancing afterwards.

Ben. First, of my word, therefore play musick. Prince, thou art sad, get thee a wife, get thee a wife, there is no staffe more reverend then one tip'd with horn. Enter Mess.

Messen. My Lord, your brother John is tane in flight.

And brought with armed men back to Messina.

Ben. Think not on him till to morrow, I'll devise thee brave punishments for him: strike up Pipers. Dance.

Love's Labour's lost.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Ferdinand King of Navarre, Biron, Longaville, and Dumaine.

Ferdinand.

Let Fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live registred upon our brazen Tombes,
And then grace us in the disgrace of death:
When spight of cormorant devouring Time,
Th'endeavour of this present breath may buy
That honour which shall bate his Sythes keen edge,
And make us heires of all eternitie.

Therefore brave Conquerors (for so you are)
That warre against your own affections,
And the huge Army of the worlds desires;
Our late Edict shall strongly stand in force,
Navarre shall be the wonder of the world.
Our Court shall be a little Academy,
Still and contemplative in living Art.
You three, Biron, Dumaine, and Longaville,
Have sworn for three years tearm to live with me,
My fellow Schollers, and to keep those statutes
That are recorded in this scedule here.

Your oathes are past, and now subscribe your names:
That his own hand may strike his honour down,
That violates the smallest branch herein:
If you are arm'd to doe, as sworn to doe,
Subsctibe to your deep oathes, and keep them too.

Long. I am resolv'd, 'tis but a three years fast:
The mind shall banquet, though the body pine,
Fat paunches have lean pates: and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bankerout the wits.

Dum. My loving Lord, Dumaine is mortified,
The grosser manner of these worlds delights,
He throws upon the grosse worlds baser slaves:
To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die,
With all these living in Philosophy.

Biron. I can but say their protestation over,
So much (dear Liege) I have already sworn,
That is, to live and study here three years.
But there are other strict observances:
As not to see a woman in that tearm,
Which I hope well is not enrolled there.
And one day in a week to touch no food:
And but one meal on every day beside:
The which I hope is not enrolled there.
And then to sleep but three hours in the night,
And not be seen to wink of all the day.
When I was wont to think no harm all night,
And make a dark night too of half the day:

Which I hope well is not enrolled there.

O, these are barren tasks, too hard to keep,
Not to see Ladies, study, fast, not sleep.

Ferd. Your oath is past to passe away from these.

Biron. Let me say no my Liege, and if you please,
I onely swore to study with your Grace,
And stay here in your Court for three years space.

Long. You swore to that Biron, and to the rest.

Bir. By yea and nay sir, then I swore in jest.
What is the end of study, let me know?

Ferd. Why that to know which else we should not know. (sense.)

Bir. Things hid and bard (you mean) from common

Ferd. I, that is studies god-like recompence.

Bir. Come on then, I will swear to study so,
To know the thing I am forbid to know:
As thus, to study where I well may dine,
When I to fast expressly am forbid.

Or study where to meet some Mistresse fine,
When Mistresses from common sense are hid.

Or having sworn too hard a keeping oath.

Study to break it, and not break my troth.

If studies gain be thus, and this be so,

Study knows that which yet it doth not know,
Swear me to this, and I will ne're say no.

Ferd. These be the stops that hinder study quite,
And train our intellects to vain delight.

Bir. Why? all delights are vain, and that most vain,
Which with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain,

As painfully to poar upon a book,

To seek the light of truth, while truth the while

Doth falsely blind the eye-sight of his look:

Light seeking light, doth light beguile:

So ere you find where light in darknesse lies,

Your light growes dark by losing of your eyes.

Study me how to please the eye indeed,

By fixing it upon a fairer eye,

Who dazling so, that eye shall be his heed,

And give him light that it was blinded by.

Study is like the heavens glorious Sunne,

That will not be deep search'd with sawcy looks:

Small have continual plodders ever wonne,

Save base authority from others Books.

These earthly Godfathers of heavens lights,

That give a name to every fixed starre,

Have no more profit of their shining nights,

Then those that walk, and wor not what they are,

Too much to know, isto know nought but fame:

And every Godfather can give a name.

Ferd. How well he's read, to reason against reading.

Dum.

Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding.

Long. He weeds the Corn, and still lets grow the weeding.

Bir. The Spring is near, when Green Geese are a breeding.

Dum. How follows that?

Bir. Fit in his place and time.

Dum. In reason nothing.

Bir. Something then in rime.

Long. Biron is like an envious sneaping Frost,
That bites the first born Infants of the Spring.

Bir. Well, say I am, why should proud Summer boast,
Before the Birds have any cause to sing?

Why should I joy in any abortive birth?

At Christmas I no more desire a Rose,

Than with a Snow in May's new fangled shows:

But like of each thing that in season grows,

So you to study now it is too late,

That were to climbe ore the house t' unlock the gate.

Ferd. Well, sit you out: goe home Biron: adue.

Bir. No my good Lord, I have sworn to stay with you.

And though I have for barbarisme spoke more,

Then for that Angel knowledge you can say,

Yet confident I'll keep what I have swore,

And bide the pennance of each three years day.

Give me the Paper, let me read the same,

And to the strict'st decrees I'll write my name.

Ferd. How well this yielding rescues thee from shame.

Bir. Item, That no woman shall come within a mile of my Court.

Hath this been proclaimed?

Long. Four dayes agoe.

Bir. Let's see the penalty.

On pain of loosing her tongue.

Who devis'd this penalty?

Long. Marry that did I.

Bir. Sweet Lord, and why?

Long. To fright them hence with that dread penalty:
A dangerous Law against gentility.

Item, If any man be seen to talk with a woman with in the term of three years, he shall endure such publick shame as the rest of the Court shall possibly devise.

Bir. This article my Liege your self must break,
For well you know here comes in Embassie
The French Kings daughter, with your self to speak;
A Maid of Grace and compleat Majesty,
About surrender up of Aquitaine
To her decrepit, sick, and bed-rid Father.

Therefore this Article is made in vain,
Or vainly comes the adinired Princessse hither.

Ferd. What say you Lords?

Why, this was quite forgot.

Bir. So study evermore is overshot,
While it doth study to have what it would,
It doth forget to do the thing it should:
And when it hath the thing it hunteth most,
'Tis won as Towns with fire; so won, so lost.

Ferd. We must of force dispence with this Decree,
She must lie here on meer necessity.

Bir. Necessity will make us all forsworn
Three thousand times within this three years space:
For every man with his affects is born,
Not by might mastered, but by special grace.
If I break faith, this word shall break for me,
I am forsworn on meer necessitie.

So to the Laws at large I write my name,
And he that breaks them in the least degree
Stands in attainder of eternal shame.

Suggestions are to others as to me:

But I believe although I seem so lorn,

I am the last that will last keep his oath.

But is there no quick recreation granted?

Ferd. I that there is, our Court you know is haunted
With a conceited Travellor of Spain,

A man in all the world new fashion planted,

That hath a mint of phrases in his brain:

One, whom the musick of his own vain tongue,

Doth ravish like enchanting harmony:

A man of complements, whom right and wrong

Have chose as umpire of their mutinie.

This child of fancie, that Armado hight,

For interim to our studies shall relate,

In high-born words the worth of many a Knight:

From tawny Spain lost in the worlds debate.

How you delight my Lords, I know not I.

But I protest I love to hear him lie,

And I will use him for my Minstrelsie.

Bir. Armado is a most illustrious wight,

A man of fire, new words, Fashions own Knight,

Long. Costard the swain, and he shall be our sport,

And so to studie, three years is but short.

Enter a Constable with Costard with a Letter.

Const. Which is the Dukes own person.

Bir. This fellow, What would'st?

Con. I my self reprehend his own person, for I am his Graces Tharborough: But I would see his own person in flesh and blood.

Bir. This is he.

Con. Signior Arme, Arme commends you:

There's villany abroad, this letter will tell you more.

Clow. Sir, the Contempts thereof are as touching me.

Ferd. A Letter from the magnificent Armado.

Bir. How low soever the matter, I hope in God for high words.

Long. A high hope for a low heaven, God grant us patience.

Bir. To hear, or forbear hearing.

Long. To hear meekly sir, and to laugh moderately, or to forbear both.

Bir. Well sir, be it as the stile shall give us cause to climb in the merrinesse.

Clow. The matter is to me sir, as concerning Faquesetta.
The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.

Bir. In what manner?

Clow. In manner and form, following sir all those three. I was seen with her in the Mannor house, sitting with her upon the Forme, and taken following her into the Parke: which put together, is in manner and form following. Now sir, for the Manner; is the manner of a man to speak to a Woman; for the Forme in some forme.

Bir. For the following sir.

Clow. As it shall follow in my correction, and God defend the right.

Ferd. Will you hear this Letter with attention?

Bir. As we would hear an Oracle.

Clow. Such is the simplicity of man to hearken after the flesh.

Ferd. Great Deputy, the Welkins Vicegerent, and sole dominator of Navarre, my souls earths God, and bodies fostering Patron:

Cost. Not a word of Costard yet.

Ferd. So it is.

Cost. It may be so: but if he say it is so, he is in telling true: but so.

Ferd. Peace,

Clow. Be to me, and every man that dares not fight:

Ferd. No words,

Clow. Of other mens secrets I beseech you.

Ferd. So it is, besieged with sable coloured melancholly, I did commend the black oppressing humour to the most wholesome Physick of thy health-giving ayre: And as I am a Gentleman, betook myself to walk: the time when? about the sixth hour, when Beasts most graze, Birds best peck, and men sit down to that nourishment which is called Supper: So much for the time when. Now for the ground which? which I mean I walk upon, it is ycleped, Thy Parke. Then for the place where, where I mean I did encounter that obscene and most preposterous event that draweth from my snow white Pen the Ebon-coloured Ink, which here thou viewest, beholdest, surveyest, or seest. But to the place where: it standeth North North-East and by East from the West corner of thy curious knotted Garden. There did I see that low spirited Swain, that base Minnow of thy mirth, (Clown. Me?) that unlettered small-knowing soul, (Clow. Me?) that shallow vassal (Clow. Still me?) which as I remember, hight Costard, (Clow. O me) sorted and consorted contrary to thy established proclaimed Edict & Continent Canon: Which with, O with, but with this I passion to say wherewith:

Clown. With a Wench.

Ferd. With a child of our Grandmother Eve, a female; or, for thy more understanding, a woman: him, I (as my ever esteemed duty pricks me on) have sent to thee, to receive the meed of punishment by the sweet Graces Officer Anthony Dull, a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, and estimation.

Ant. Me, an't shall please you? I am Anthony Dull.

Ferd. For Jaquenetta (so is the weaker vessel called) which I apprehended with the aforesaid Swain, I keep her as a vessell of thy Laws fury, and shall at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine in all complements of devoted and heart-burning heat of duty,

Don Adriana de Armado

Bir. This is not so well a I looked for, but the best that ever I heard.

Ferd. I the best for the worst. But sirra, What say you to this?

Clown. Sir I confesse the Wench.

Ferd. Did you hear the Proclamation?

Clown. I do confesse much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

Ferd. It was proclaimed a years imprisonment to be taken with a Wench.

Clown. I was taken with none sir, I was taken with a Damosell.

Ferd. Well, it was proclaimed Damosell.

Clow. This was no Damosel neither sir, she was a Virgin.

Ferd. It is so varied too, for it was proclaimed Virgin.

Clown. If it were, I deny her Virginity: I was taken with a Maid.

Ferd. This Maid will not serve your turn sir.

Clown. This Maid will serve my turn sir.

Ferd. Sir I will pronounce your sentence: You shall fast a week with Branne and Water.

Clown. I had rather pray a Moneth with Mutton and Porridge.

Ferd. And Don Armado shall be your Keeper.

My Lord Biron, see him deliver'd ore, And goe we Lords to put in practice that, Which each to other hath so strongly sworn. Exeunt.

Bir. Ile lay my head to any good mans Hat, These oathes and Lawes will prove an idle scorn. Sirra, come on.

Clown. I suffer for the truth sir: for true it is, I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true Girle, and therefore welcome the sowre cup of prosperity: affliction may one day smile again, and untill then sit down sorrow.

Enter Armado a Braggart, and Moth his Page.

Brag. Boy, What sign is it when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

Boy. A great sign sir, that he will look sad.

Brag. Why? sadnesse is one and the self-same thing, dear Imp.

Boy. No, no, O Lord sir, no,

Brag. How canst thou part sadnesse and melancholy, my tender Juvenal?

Boy. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough Signior.

Brag. Why tough Signior? Why tough Signior?

Boy. Why tender Juvenal? Why tender Juvenal?

Brag. I spoke it tender Juvenal, as a congruent epitheton, appertaining to thy young dayes, which we may nominate tender.

Boy. And I tough Signior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Brag. Pretty and apt.

Boy. How mean you sir, I pretty, and my saying apt? or I apt, and my saying pretty?

Brag. Thou pretty, because little.

Boy. Little pretty, because little: wherefore apt?

Brag. And therefore apt, because quick.

Boy. Speak you this in my praise Master?

Brag. In thy condigne praise.

Boy. I will praise an Eele with the same praise.

Brag. What? that an Eele is ingenuous.

Boy. That an Eele is quick.

Brag. I doe say thou art quick in answers. Thou heat'st my bloud.

Boy. I am answer'd sir.

Brag. I love not to be crost.

Boy. He speaks the clean contrary, crosses love not him.

Brag. I have promis'd to study 3 years with the Duke.

Boy. You may doe it in an hour sir.

Brag. Impossible.

Boy. How many is one thrice told?

Brag. I am ill at reckoning, it fits the spirit of a Tapster.

Boy. You are a Gentleman and a Gamster sir.

Brag. I confesse both, they are both the varnish of a compleat man.

Boy. Then I am sure you know how much the grosse summe of deus-ase amounts to.

Brag. It doth amount to one more then two.

Boy. Which the base vulgar call three. Bra. True.

Boy. Why sir is this such a piece of study? Now here's three studied, ere you'll thrice wink, and how easie it is to put years to the word three, and study three years in two words, the dancing horse will tell you.

Brag. A

Brag. A most fine figure.

Boy. To prove you a Cypher.

Brag. I will hereupon confesse I am in love and as it is base for a Souldier to love: so am I in love with a base Wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection, would deliver me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take Desire prisoner, and ransom him to any French Courtier for a new devis'd courtesie. I think scorn to sigh, ne thinks I should out-swear Cupid. Comfort me Boy, What great men have been in love?

Boy. Hercules, Master.

Brag. Most sweet Hercules: more authority dear Boy, name more; and sweet my child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Boy. Sampson, Master, he was a man of good carriage, great carriage: for he carried the Town Gates on his back like a Porter; and he was in love.

Brag. O well-knit Sampson, strong-joynted Sampson; I doe excell thee in my Rapier, as much as thou didst me in carrying Gates. I am in love too. Who was Sampson's Love my dear Moth?

Boy. A woman, Master.

Brag. Of what complexion?

Boy. Of all the four, or the three, or the two, or one of the four.

Brag. Tell me precisely of what complexion?

Boy. Of the Sea-water Green sir.

Brag. Is that one of the four complexions?

Boy. As I have read sir, and the best of them too.

Brag. Green indeed is the colour of Lovers: but to have a Love of that colour, me thinks Sampson had small reason for it. He surely affected her for her wit.

Boy. It was so sir, for she had a green wit.

Brag. My Love is most immaculate white and red.

Boy. Most immaculate thoughts Master, are mask'd under such colours.

Brag. Define, define, well educated infant.

Boy. My Fathers wit, and my Mothers tongue assist me.

Brag. Sweet invocation of a child, most pretty and patheticall.

Boy. If she be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne're be known:
For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,
And feares by pale white shown:
Then if she fear, or be to blame,
By this you shall not know,
For still her cheeks possesse the same,
Which native she doth owe:

A dangerous rime Master against the reason of white and red.

Brag. Is there not a Ballet Boy, of the King and the Beggar?

Boy. The world was very guilty of such a Ballet, some three ages since, but I think now 'tis not to be found: or if it were, it would neither serve for the writing, nor the tune.

Brag. I will have that subject newly writ o're, that I may example my digression by some mighty president. Boy, I doe love that Countrey Girl that I took in the Parke with the rationall Hind Costard: she deserves well.

Boy. To be whip'd: and yet a better Love then my Master.

Brag. Sing Boy, my spirit growes heavy in love.

Boy. And that's great marvell, loving a light Wench.

Brag. I say sing.

Boy. Forbear till this company be past.

Enter Clown, Constable, and Wench.

Const. Sir, the Dukes pleasure is, that you keep Costard safe, and you must let him take no delight, nor no penance, but he must fast three dayes a week: for this Damsell, I must keep her at the Park, she is allow'd for the Day-woman. Fare you well.

Exit.

Brag. I doe betray my self with blushing: Maid.

Maid. Man.

Brag. I will visit thee at the Lodge.

Maid. That's here by.

Brag. I know where it is situate.

Maid. Lord how wise you are!

Brag. I will tell thee wonders.

Maid. With that face?

Brag. I love thee.

Maid. So I heard you say.

Brag. And so farewell.

Maid. Fair weather after you.

Come Jacquetta, away.

Exeunt.

Brag. Villain, thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

Clow. Well sir, I hope when I doe it, I shall doe it on a full stomacke.

Brag. Thou shalt be heavily punished.

Clow. I am more bound to you then your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Con. Take away this Villain, shut him up.

Boy. Come you transgressing slave, away.

Clow. Let me not be pent up sir, I will be fast being loose.

Boy. No sir, that were fast and loose: thou shalt to prison.

Clow. Well, if ever I do see the merry dayes of desolation that I have seen, some shall see.

Boy. What shall some see?

Clow. Nay nothing, Master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be silent in their words, and therefore I will say nothing: I thank God, I have as little patience as another man, and therefore I can be quiet.

Exit.

Brag. I doe affect the very ground (which is base) where her shooe (which is baser) guided by her foot (which is basest) doth tread. I shall be forsworn (which is a great argument of falshood) if I love. And how can that be true love, which is falsly attempted? Love is a familiar, Love is a Devil. There is no evil Angell but Love, yet Sampson was so tempted, and he had an excellent strength: Yet was Solomon so seduced, and he had a very good wit. Cupids But-shaft is too hard for Hercules Club, and therefore too much oddes for a Spaniards Rapier: The first and second cause will not serve my turn: the Passado he respects not, the Duello he regards not; his disgrace is to be called Boy, but his glory is to subdue men. Adieu Valour, rust Rapier, bee still Drum, for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. Assist me some extemporall god of Rime, for I am sure I shall turn Sonnet. Devise Wit, write Pen, for I am for whole volumes in Folio.

Finis Actus Primi.

Actus Secundus.

Enter the Princesse of France, with three attending Ladies, and three Lords.

Boyet. Now Madam summon up your dearest spirits,
Consider whom the King your Father sends:
To whom he sends, and what's his Enbassie.
Your self, held precious in the worlds esteem,
To parlee with the sole inheritour
Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchlesse Navarre: the plea of no lesse weight
Than Aquitain, a Dowry for a Queen.
Be now as prodigall of all dear grace,
As Nature was in making Graces dear,
When she did starve the generall world beside,
And prodigally gave them all to you.

Prin. Good L. Boyet, my beauty though but mean,
Needs not the painted flourish of your praise:
Beauty is bought by judgement of the eye,
Not uttered by base sale of Chapmens tongues:
I am lesse proud to hear you tell my worth,
Than you much willing to be counted wise,
In spending thus your wit in praise of mine.
But now to task the tasker: good Boyet,
You are not ignorant, all-telling fame
Doth noyse abroad Navarre hath made a vow,
Till painfull study shall out-wear three yeares,
No woman may approach his silent Court:
Therefore to's seemeth it a needfull course,
Before we enter his forbidden Gates,
To know his pleasure, and in that behalfe
Bold of your worthinesse, we single you,
As our best moving fair Soliciter:
Tell him the Daughter of the King of France,
On serious businesse, craving quick dispatch,
Importunes personall conference with his Grace.
Hast, signifie so much, while we attend,
Like humble visag'd Sutors his high will.

Boyet. Proud of employment, willingly I go. Exit.

Prin. All pride is willing pride, and your's is so:
Who are the Votaries my loving Lords, that are vow-fellows with this virtuous Duke?

Lor. Longavile is one.

Prin. Know you the man?

Lad. I knew him Madam at a Marriage Feast,
Between L. Perigort, and the beauteous heir
Of Jaques Faulconbridge solemnized.
In Normandy saw I this Longavile,
A man of soveraign parts he is esteem'd:
Well fitted in the Arts, glorious in Armes:
Nothing becomes him ill that he would well.
The onely soul of his fair virtues glosse,
(If virtues glosse will stain with any soil,)
Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a will:
Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still wills,
It should none spare that come within his power.

Prin. Some merry mocking Lord, is't so?

Lad. 1. They say so most, that most his humours know.

Prin. Such short liv'd wits doe wither as they grow.
Who are the rest?

Lad. 2. The young Dumain, a well accomplish'd youth,

Of all that Virtue love, for Virtue loved.
Most power to doe most harm, least knowing ill:
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace though he had no wit.
I saw him at the Duke Alanzoes once,
And much too little of that good I saw,
Is my report to his great worthinesse.

Rosa. Another of these Students at that time,
Was there with him, as I have heard a truth.

Birone they call him but, a merrier man,
Within the limit of becomming mirth,
I never spent an hours talk withall.
His eye begets occasion for wit,
For every object that the one doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest.
Which his fair tongue (conceits Expofitor)
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged cares play Trewant at his Tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished.
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

Prin. God blesse my Ladies, are they all in love?
That every one her own hath garnished,
With such bedecking ornaments of praise.

Ma. Here comes Boyet.

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Now, what admittance Lord?

Boyet. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;
And he and his Competitors in oath,
Were all addrest to meet you gentle Lady
Before I came: Marry thus I have learnt,
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes here to besiege his Court,
Than seek a dispensation for his oath:
To let you enter his unpeopled house.

Enter Navar, Longavile, Dumain, and Birone.

Here comes Navarre.

Nav. Fair Princess, welcome to the Court of Navar.

Prin. Fair I give you back again, and welcome I have not yet: the roof of this Court is too high to be yours, and welcome to the wide fields, too base to be mine.

Nav. You shall be welcome Madam to my Court.

Prin. I will be welcome then, Conduct me thither.

Na. Hear me dear Lady, I have sworn an oath.

Prin. Our Lady help my Lord, he'll be forsworn.

Nav. Not for the world, fair Madam, by my will.

Prin. Why, will shall break it will, and nothing else.

Nav. Your Ladiship is ignorant what it is.

Prin. Were my Lord so, his ignorance were wise,
Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance.

I hear your Grace hath sworn out House-keeping:

'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath my Lord,

And sin to break it:

But pardon me, I am too sudden bold,

To teach a Teacher ill beseemeth me.

Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming,

And suddenly resolve me in my suit.

Nav. Madam, I will, if suddenly I may.

Prin. You will the sooner that I were away,

For you'll prove perjur'd if you make me stay.

Bir. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Rosa. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Bir.

Bir. I know you did,

Rosa. How needles was it then to ask the question ?

Bir. You must not be so quick.

Ros. 'Tis long of you that spur me with such questions.

Bir. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, 'twill tire.

Rosa. Not till it leave the Rider in the mire.

Bir. What time a day ?

Rosa. The houre that fools should ask.

Bir. Now fair befall your mask.

Rosa. Fair falls the face it covers.

Bir. And send you many lovers.

Rosa. Amen, so you be none.

Bir. Nay then will I be gone.

Fer. Madam, your father here doth intimate.

The paiment of a hundred thousand Crowns,
Being but th'one half of an intire sum,
Disburfed by my father in his wars,
But say that he, or we, as neither have Receiv'd that sum ; yet there remains unpaid
A hundred thousand more : in surety of the which,
One part of Aquitain is bound to us,
Although not valued to the moneys worth.
If then the King your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitain,
And hold fair friendship with his Majesty :
But that it seems he little purposeth,
For here he doth demand to have repaid,
An hundred thousand Crowns, and not demands
One paiment of a hundred thousand Crowns,
To have his tittle live in Aquitain.
Which we much rather had depart withall,
And have the money by our father lent,
Then Aquitain, so guelded as it is.
Dear Princess, were not his requests so far
From reasons yielding, your fair self should make
A yielding 'gainst some reason in my brest,
And go well satisfied to France again.

Prin. You do the King my Father too much wrong,
And wrong the reputation of your name,
In so unseeming to confesse receipt
Of that which hath so faithfully been paid.

Fer. I doe protest I never heard of it,
And if you prove it, I'll repay it back,
Or yield up Aquitain.

Prin. We arrest your word :
Boyet, you can produce acquittances
For such a sum, from speciall Officers, of Charls his Father.

Fer. Satisfie me so.

Boyet. So please your Grace, the packet is not come
Where that and other specialties are bound,
To morrow you shall have a sight of them.

Fer. It shall suffice me ; at which interview,
All liberall reason would I yield unto :
Mean time, receive such welcome at my hand,
As Honor, without breach of Honor may Make tender of, to thy true worthiness.
You may not come fair Princess in my gates,
But here without you shall be so receiv'd,
As you shall deem your self lodg'd in my heart,
Though so deni'd farther harbour in my house :
Your own good thoughts excuse me, and farewell,
To morrow we shall visit you again.

Prin. Sweet health and fair desires consort your grace.

Fer. Thy own wish, wish I thee, in every place. Exit.

Boy. Lady, I will commend you to my own heart.

La. Ro. Pray you doe my commendations,
I would be glad to see it.

Boy. I would you heard it grone.

La. Ro. Is the soul sick ?

Boy. Sick at the heart.

La. Ro. Alack let it bloud.

Boy. Would that doe it good ?

La. Ro. My Phisick sayes I.

Boy. Will you prick't with your eye.

La. Ro. No poynt, with my knife.

Boy. Now God save thy life.

La. Ro. And yours from long living.

Bir. I cannot stay thanksgiving.

Exit.

Enter Dumaine.

Dum. Sir, I pray you a word : what Lady is that same ?

Boy. The heir of Alanson, Rosaline her name.

Dum. A gallant Lady, Mounsier fare you well. Exit.

Enter Longaville.

Long. I beseech you a word : what is she in the white ?

Boy. A woman sometimes, if you saw her in the light.

Long. Perchance light in the light : I desire her name.

Boy. She hath but one for her self,

To desire that were a shame.

Lon. Pray you sir, whole daughter ?

Boy. Her mothers, I have heard.

Lon. Gods blessing a your beard.

Boy. Good sir be not offended.

She is an heir of Faulconbridge.

Long. Nay, my choller is ended :

She is a most sweet Lady.

Exit Long.

Boy. Not unlike sir, that may be.

Enter Birone.

Bir. What's her name in the Cap.

Boy. Katherine by good hap.

Bir. Is she wedded, or no.

Boy. To her will sir, or so.

Bir. You are welcome sir, adieu.

Boy. Farewell to me sir, and welcome to you. Exit.

La. Ma. That last is Birone, the merry mad-cap Lord.
Not a word with him, but a jest.

Boy. And every jest but a word.

Pri. It was well done of you to take him at his word.

Boy. I was as willing to grapple, as he was to boord.

Lad. Ma. Two hot Sheeps Mary ;

And wherefore not Ships ? (llps.)

Boy. No sheep (sweet Lamb) unlesse we feed on your

La. You sheep and I pasture : shall that finish the jest ?

Boy. So you grant pasture for me.

La. Not so gentle beast.

My Lips are no Common though severall they be.

Boy. Belonging to whom ?

La. To my fortunes and me.

Prin. Good wits will be jangling, but gentles agree.

This civil war of wits were much better used
On Navarre and his book-men, for here 't is abused.

Boy. If my observation (which very seldome lyes
By the hearts still rhetorick, disclosed with eyes)
Deceive me not now, Navarre is infected.

Prin. With what ?

Boy. With that which we Lovers intitle affected.

Prin. Your reason.

Boy. Why all his his behaviours doe make their retire,
To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire.
His heart like an Agot with your print impressed,

Proud

Proud with his forme, in his eye pride expressed :
 His tongue all impatient to speak and not see,
 Did stumble with haste in his eye-sight to be,
 All senses to that sence did make their repair,
 To feel onely looking on fairest of fair :
 Me thought all his senses were lock'd in his eye,
 As Jewels in Christall for some Prince to buy: (glast,
 Who tending their own worth from whence they were
 Did point out to buy them along as you past.
 His faces own margent did coat such amazes,
 That all eyes saw his eyes enchanted with gazes.
 I'll give you Aquitain, and all that is his,
 And you give him for my sake, but one loving kiss.
Prin. Come to our Pavillion, Boyer is disposed.
Boy. But to speak that in words, which his eye hath
 I onely have made a moun of his eye, (disclos'd,
 By adding a tongue, which I know will not lye.
Lad. Ro. Thou art an old Love-monger, and speakest skillfully.
Lad. Ma. He is Cupids Grandfather, and learns news
 of him.
Lad. 2. Then was Venus like her mother, for her father is but grim.
Boy. Doe you hear my mad wenches?
Lad. 1. No.
Boy. What then, doe you see?
Lad. 2. I, our way to be gone.
Boy. You are too hard for me. Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertia.

Enter Braggart, and Boy.
 Song.

Brag. Warble childe, make passionate my sence of hearing.

Boy. Concolinell.-----

Brag. Sweet Ayer, goe tenderesse of years: take this Key, give enlargement to the swain, bring him festinately hither: I must imploy him in a letter to my Love.

Boy. Will you win your love with a French braule?

Brag. How meanest thou, brauling in French?

Boy. No my compleat master, but to jigge off a tune at the tongues end, canary to it with the feet, humour it with turning up your eye: sigh a note and sing a note, sometime through the throat: if you swallowed love with singing, love sometime through the nose, as if you snuft up love by smelling love, with your hat penthouselike o're the shop of your eyes, with your armes crost on your thinbelly doublet (like a Rabbet on a spit) or your hands in your pocket, like a man after the old painting, and keep not too long in one tune, but a snip and away:
 these are complements, these are humours, these betray nice wenches that would be betraid without these, and make them men of note: do you note men that most are affected to these?

Brag. How hast thou purchased this experience?

Boy. By my pen of observation.

Brag. But O, but O.

Boy. The Hobby-horse is forgot.

Brag. Call'st thou my love Hobby-horse.

Boy. No Master, the Hobby-horse is but a Colt, and your Love perhaps, a Hackny:

But have you forgot your Love?

Brag. Almost I had.

Boy. Negligent student, learn her by heart.

Brag. By heart, and in heart boy.

Boy. And out of heart Master: all those three I will prove.

Brag. What wilt thou prove?

Boy. A man, if I live (and this) by, in, and without, upon the instant: by heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her: in heart you love her, because your heart is in love with her: and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her.

Brag. I am all these three.

Boy. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.

Brag. Fetch hither the Swain, he must carry me a letter.

Boy. A message well simpathiz'd, a Horse to be embas-sadour for an Ass.

Brag. Ha, ha, What sayest thou?

Boy. Marry sir, you must send the Ass upon the Horse, for he is very slow gated: but I goe.

Brag. The way is but short, away.

Boy. As swift as Lead sir.

Brag. Thy meaning pretty ingenious, is not Lead a mettall heavy, dull, and slow?

Boy. Minime honest Master, or rather Master no.

Brag. I say Lead is slow.

Boy. You are too swift sir to say so.

Is that Lead slow which is fir'd from a Gun?

Brag. Sweet smoak of Rhetorick,
 He reputes me a Cannon, and the Bullet that's he:
 I shoote thee at the Swain.

Boy. Thump then, and I flee.

Exit.

Brag. A most acute Juvenal, voluble and free of grace,
 By thy favour sweet Welkin, I must sigh in thy face.
 Most rude melancholly, Valour gives the place.
 My Herald is return'd.

Enter Page, and Clown.

Pag. A wonder Master, here's a Costard broken in shin.

Arm. Some enigma, some riddle, no Lenvoy begin.

Clow. No egma, no riddle, no Lenvoy, no salve, in the male sir. O sir, Plantan, a plain Plantan: no Lenvoy, no Lenvoy, or Salvesir, but Plantan.

Arm. By vertue thou inforcest laughter, thy silly thought, my spleen, the heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling: O pardon me my starres, doth the inconsiderate take salve for Lenvoy, and the world Lenvoy for a salve?

Pag. Doe the wise think them other, is not Lenvoy
 a salve. (plain,

Arm. No Page, it is an epilogue or discourse to make
 Some obscure precedence that hath tofore been fain.
 Now will I begin your morral, and do you follow with my Lenvoy.

The Fox, the Ape, and the Humble-bee,

Were still at odds, being but three.

Pag. Untill the Goose came out of door,

Staying the odds by adding four.

A good Lenvoy, ending in the Goose: would you desire more?

Clow. The Boy hath sold him a bargain, a Goose, that's flat

Sir, your penny-worth is good, and your Goose be fat.
To sell a bargain well is as cunning as fast as loose:
Let me see a fat Lenvoy, I that's a fat Goose.

Arma. Come hither, come hither:

How did this argument begin?

Boy. By saying that a Costard was broken in a shin.
Then call'd you for a Lenvoy.

Clow. True, and I for a Plantan:

Thus came your argument in:

Then the Boyes fat Lenvoy, the Goose that you bought,
And he ended the market.

Arma. But tell me: How was there a Costard broken in a shin?

Pag. I will tell you senciably,

Clow. Thou hast no feeling of it Moth,
I will speak that Lenvoy.

I Costard running out, that was safely within,
Fell over the threshould, and broke my shin.

Arm. We will talk no more of this matter.

Clow. Till there be more matter in the shin.

Arm. Sirra Costard, I will infranchise thee.

Clow. O, marry me to one Francis, I smell some Lenvoy, some Goose in this.

Arm. By my sweet soul, I mean, setting thee at liberty.
Enfreedoming thy person; thou wert Immured, restrained, captivated, bound.

Clow. True, true, and now you will be my purgation, and let me loose.

Arm. I give thee thy liberty, set thee from durance, and in lieu thereof, impose on thee nothing but this: Bear this significant to the countrey Maid Jaquenetta: there is remuneration, for the best ward of nine honors, is rewarding my dependants. Moth, follow.---- Exit.

Pag. Like the sequell I.

Signior Costard adieu.

Clow. My sweet ounce of mans flesh, my in-cony Jew:
Now will I look to his remuneration.
Remuneration, O, that's the Latine word for three-farthings: There farthings remuneration, What's the price of this yncle? i. de. no, I'll give you a remuneration: Why?
It carries it's remuneration: Why? It is a fairer name then a French-Crown. I will never buy and sell out of this word.

Enter Birone.

Bir. O my good knave Costard, exceedingly well met.

Clow. Pray you sir, How much Carnation Ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?

Bir. What is a remuneration?

Cost. Marry sir, half penny farthing.

Bir. O, Why then three farthings worth of Silk.

Cost. I thank your worship, God be wy you.

Bir. O stay slave, I must employ thee:

As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave,
Doe one thing for me that I shall intreat.

Clow. When would you have it done sir?

Bir. O this after-noon.

Clow. Well, I will do it sir: Fare you well.

Bir. O thou knowest not what it is.

Clow. I shall know sir, when I have done it.

Bir. Why villain, thou must know it first.

Clow. I will come to your worship to morrow morning.

Bir. It must be done this after-noon,

Hark slave, it is but this:

The Princess comes to hunt here in the Park,

And in her train there is a gentle Lady:

When tongues speak sweetly, then they name her name,
And Rosaline they call her, ask for her:

And to her white hand see thou doe commend

This seal'd up counsell. There's thy guerdon: goe.

Clow. Guerdon, O sweet Guerdon, better then remuneration, a leavenpence-farthing better: most sweet guer-don. I will do it fir in print: guerdon. remuneration.

Exit.

Bir. O! and I forsooth in love,

I that have been loves whip?

A very beadle to a humerous sigh: A Critick,

Nay a night-watch Constable.

A dominiering pedant o're the Boy,

Then whom no mortall so magnificent.

This wimpled, whyning, purblind waiward Boy,

This signior *Junio*s gyant dwarfe, don Cupid,

Regent of Love-rimes, Lord of folded armes,

Th'annointed soveraign of sighes and groans:

Liedge of all loyterers, and malecontents:

Dread Prince of Plackers, King of Codpeeces.

Sole Emperator and great generall

Of trotting Parrators (O my little heart.)

And I to be a Corporall of his field,

And wear his colours like a Tumblers hoope?

What? I love! I sue! I seek a wife,

A woman, that is like a Germane Clock,

Still a repairing: ever out of frame,

And never going a right, being but a Watch:

But being watch'd, that it may still go right.

Nay to be perjur'd, which is worst of all:

And among three, to love the worst of all,

A whitely wanton with a velvet brow.

With two pitch balls stuck in her face for eyes.

I, and by heaven, one that will do the deed,

Though Argus were her Eunuch and her guard.

And I to sigh for her: to watch for her!

To pray for her, go to: it is a plague

That Cupid will impose for my neglect.

Of his almighty dreadfull little might.

Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue, and groan,

Some men must love my Lady, and some Joan.

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Princess, a Forrester, her Ladies, and her Lords.

Prin. Was that the King that spur'd his horse so hard,
Against the steep unrising of the hill?

Boy. I know not, but I think it was not he.

Prin. Who e're a was, a shew'd a mounting minde:
Well Lords, to day we shall have our dispatch,
On Saturday we will return to France.

Then Forrester my friend, Where is the Bush
That we must stand and play the murtherer in?

For. Hereby upon the edge of yonder Coppice.
A Stand where you may make the fairest shoote.

Prin. I thank my beauty, I am fair that shoot,
And thereupon thou speak'st the fairest shoote.

For. Pardon me, for I meant not so.

Prin. What, what? First praise me, then again say no.
O short liv'd pride. Not fair? alack for woe.

For Yes

For. Yes Madam, fair.

Prin. Nay, never paint me now,
Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow.
Here (good my glass) take this for telling true :
Fair payment for foul words, is more then due.

For. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit.

Prin. See, see, my beauty will be sav'd by merit.
O heresie in fair, fit for these dayes,
A giving hand, though foul, shall have the praise.
But come, the Bow : Now Mercy goes to kill,
And shooting well, is then accounted ill :
Thus will I save my credit in the shoote,
Not wounding, pitty would not let me do't :
If wounding, then it was to shew my skill,
That more for praise, then purpose meant to kill.
And out of question, so it is sometimes :
Glory grows guilty of detested crimes,
When for Fames sake, to praise an outward part,
We bend to that, the working of the heart.
As I for praise alone now seek to spill
The poor Dears blood, that my heart means no ill.

Boy. Doe not curst wives hold that self-soveraignty Onely for praise sake, when they strive to be Lords o're their Lords ?

Prin. Onely for praise, and praise we may afford,
To any Lady that subdues a Lord.

Enter Clown.

Boy. Here comes a member of the common-wealth.

Clo. God dig-you-den all, pray you which is the head
Lady ?

Prin. Thou shalt know her, fellow, by the rest that have no heads.

Clo. Which is the greatest Lady, the highest ?

Prin. The thickest, and the tallest.

Clo. The thickest, and the tallest : it is so, truth is truth.
And your waste Mistris, were as slender as my wit,
One a these maids girdles for your waste should be fit.
Are not you the chief woman ? You are the thickest here.

Prin. What's your will sir ? What's your will ?

Clo. I have a Letter from Monsieur Birone,
To one Lady Rosaline,

Prin. O thy letter, thy letter : He's a good friend of Stand aside good bearer. (mine.)

Boyet, you can carve,
Break up this Capon.

Boy. I am bound to serve.

This Letter is mistook : it importeth none here :
It is writ to Jaquenetta.

Prin. We will read it, I swear.

Break the neck of the Wax, and every one give ear.

Boyet reads.

BY heaven, that thou art fair, is most infallible : true that thou art beateous : truth it self that thou art lovely : more fairer then fair, beautifull then beautious, truer then truth it self : have comiseration on thy heroicall Vassall. The magnanimous and most illustrate King Cophetua set eye upon the pernicious and indubitate Beg-ger Zenelophon : and he it was that might rightly say, Veni, vidi, vici : Which to Anatomize in the vulgar, O base and obscure vulgar ; videlicet, He came, Saw, and overcame : he came one ; see two ; overcame three.
Who came ? the King. Why did he come ? to see. Why did he see ? to overcome. To whom came he ? to the Begger. What saw he ? the Begger. Who overcame he ? the Begger. The conclusion is victory : On whose side ? the Kings : the captive is enrich'd : On whose side ?

the Beggars. The catastrophe is a Nuptiall : On whose side ? the Kings : no, on both in one, or one in both. I am the King (for so stands the comparison) thou the Beg-ger, for so witnesseth thy lowliness. Shall I command thy love ? I may. Shall I enforce thy love ? I could.
Shall I intreat thy love ? I will. What, shalt thou exchange for rags ? roabs : for tittles ? titles : for thy selfe ?
me. Thus expecting thy reply, I prophane my lips on thy foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy every part.

Thine in the dearest designe of industry,

Don Adriana de Armado.

Thus dost thou hear the Nemean Lion roar,
Gainst thee thou Lamb, that standest as his prey :
Submissive fall his princely feet before,
And he from forrage will incline to play.
But if thou strive (poor soul) what art thou then ?
Food for his rage, repasture for his den.

Prin. What plume of feather is he that indited this Letter ? What vain ? What Weathercock ? Did you ever hear better ?

Boy. I am much deceived, but I remember the stile.

Prin. Else your memory is bad, going o're it ere while.

Boy. This Armado is a Spaniard that keeps here in court ;
A Phantasmie, a Monarcho, and one that makes sport
To the Prince and his Book-mates.

Prin. Thou fellow, a word.

Who gave thee this Letter ?

Clo. I told you, my Lord.

Prin. To whom should'st thou give it ?

Clo. From my Lord to my Lady.

Prin. From which Lord, to which Lady ?

Clo. From my Lord Berown, a good master of mine,
To a Lady of France, that he call'd Rosaline.

Prin. Thou hast mistaken his letter. Come Lords away.
Here sweet, put up this, 'twill be thine another day.

Exeunt.

Boy. Who is the shooter ? who is the shooter ?

Rosa. Shall I teach you to know.

Boy. I my continent of beauty.

Rosa. Why she that bears the Bow. Finely put off.

Boy. My Lady goes to kill hornes, but if thou marry,
Hang me by the neck, if horns taht year miscarry.

Finely put on.

Rosa. Well then, I am the shooter.

Boy. And who is your Dear ?

Rosa. If we choose by horns, your self come not near.
Finely put on indeed.

Mari. You still wrangle with her Boyet, and she strikes at the brow.

Boy. But she her self is hit lower :
Have I hit her now.

Rosa. Shall I come upon thee with an old saying, that was a man when King Pippin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it.

Boy. So I may answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when Queen Guinever of Brittain was a little weech, as touching the hit it.

Rosa.

Rosa. Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it,
Thou canst not hit it my good man.

Boy. I cannot, cannot, cannot :
And I cannot, another can.

Exit.

Clo. By my troth most pleasant, how both did fit it.

Mar. A mark marvellous well shot, for they both did hit.

Boy. A mark, O mark but that mark : a mark sayes my Lady.

Let the mark have a prick in't, to meat at, if it may be.

Mar. Wide a'th bow hand, ifaith your hand is out.

Clo. Indeed a'must shoot nearer, or hee'l ne're hit the clout.

Boy. And if my hand be out, then belike your hand is in.

Clo. Then will she get the upshoot by cleaving the Pin

Mar. Come, come, you talk greasily, your lips grow foule.

Clo. She's too hard for you at pricks, fir, challenge her to boule.

Boy. I fear too much rubbing : good night my good Owle.

Clo. By my soul a Swain, a most simple Clown.

Lord, Lord! how the Ladies and I have put him down.

O my troth most sweet jests, most incony vulgar wit,
When it comes so smoothly off, so obscenely, as it were,
so fit.

Armado ath to side, O a most dainty man.

To see him walk before a Lady, and to bear her Fan.

To see him kifs his hand, and how most sweetly a will fwear :

And his Page at other side, that handfull of wit,

Ah heavens, it is a most pathetical nite.

Sowla, Sowla.

Exeunt.

Showt within.

Enter Dull, Holofernes, the Pedant, and Nathaniel.

Nath. Very reverent sport truly, and done in the testimony of a good conscience.

Ped. The Dear was (as you know) sanguis in blood, ripe as a Pomewater, who now hangeth like a Jewell in the ear of Cælo the sky : the welken the heaven, and anon falleth like a Crab on the face of Terra, the soyle, the land, the earth.

Curat. Nath. Truly Master Holofernes, the epythites are sweetly varied like a scholler at the least : but sir I assure ye, it was a Buck of the first head.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, haud credo.

Dul. 'Twas not a haud credo, 'twas a Pricket.

Hol. Most barbarous intimation : yet a kind of ansuation, as it were in via, in way of explication facere : as it were replication, or rather ostentare, to show as it were his inclination after his undressed, unpollished, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or rather unlettered, or ratherest unconfirmed fashion, to insert again my haud credo for a Deer.

Dul. I said the Deer was not a haud credo, 'twas a Pricket.

Hol. Twice sod simplicity, bis coctus ; O thou monster ignorance, how deformed doest thou look ?

Nath. Sir he hath never fed on the dainties that are bred in a book.

He hath not eat paper as it were :

He hath not drunk ink.

His intellect is not replenished, he is onely an animal, onely sensible in the duller parts : and such barren plants are set before us, that we thankfull should be : which we taste and feeling, are for those parts that do fructifie in us more then he.

For as it would ill become me to be vain; indiscreet, or a foole ;

So were there a patch set on Learning, to see him in a Schoole.

But omne bene say I, being of an old Fathers minde,
Many can brook the weather, that love not the wind.

Dul. You two are book-men : Can you tell by your wit, What was a month old at Cains birth, that's not five weeks old as yet ?

Hol. Distissima goodman Dull, Distissima goodman Dull.

Dull. What is distinna ?

Nath. A title to Phebe, to Luna, to the Moon.

Hol. The Moon was a month old when Adam was no more. (score.

And wrought not to five-weeks when he came to five-
Th'allusion holds in the Exchange.

Ent. 'Tis true indeed, the Collusion holds in the Exchange.

Hol. God comfort thy capacity, I say th'allusion holds in the Exchange.

Dul. And I say the pollution holds in the Exchange :
for the Moon is never but a month old : and I say beside that, 'twas a Pricket that the Princess kild.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporall Epitaph on the death of the Dear, and to humour the ignorant call'd the Dear, the Princess kill'd a Pricket.

Nath. Perge good Master Holofernes, perge, so it shall please you to abrogate scurrility.

Hol. I will something effect the letter, for it argues facility.

*The praisfull Princeß pearst and prickt
a pretty pleasing Pricket,*

Some say a Sore, but not a sore, till now made sore with shooting.

The Dogs did yell, put ell to Sore, then Sorell jumps from thicket :

*Or Pricket-sore, or else Sorell,
the people fall a hooting.*

If Sore be sore, then ell to Sore, makes fifty sores O sorell :

Of one sore I an hundred make by adding but one more L.

Nath. A rare talent.

Dul. If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent.

Nath. This is a gift that I have simple : simple, a foolish extravagant spirit, full of formes, figures, shapes, objects, Ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions. These are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourisht in the wombe of primater, and delivered upon the mellowing of occasion : but the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankfull for it.

Hol. Sir, I praise the Lord for you, and so may my parishioners, for their Sonns are well tutor'd by you, and their Daughters profit very greatly under you : you are a good member of the common-wealth.

Nath. Me bersule, If their Sonns be ingenuous, they shall shall want no instruction : If their Daughters be capable, I will put it to them. But Vir sapit qui pauca loquitur, a foul Feminine saluteth us.

Enter Jaquenetta and the Clown.

Jaqu. God give you good morrow Master Parson.

Nath. Master Parson, quasi persone? And if one should be perst, Which is the one?

Clo. Marry Master Schoolmaster, he that is likeliest to a hog'shead.

Nath. Of persing a Hog'shead, a good cluster of conceit in a turp of Earth, fire enough for a Flint, Pearle enough for a Swine : 'tis pretty, it is well.

Jaqu. Good Master Parson be so good as read me this Letter, it was given me by Costard, and sent me from Don Armatho : I beseech you read it.

Nath. Fausse precor gelida, quando, pecus omne sub umbra, ruminat, and so forth. Ah good old Mantuan, I may speak of thee as the traveller doth of Venice, Venechi, venache a, qui non te vide, i non te piacech. Old Mantuan, old Mantuan. Who understandeth thee not, ut resolla misa. Under pardon sir, What are the contents? or rather as Horace saies in his, What! my soul verses.

Hol. I sir, and very learned.

Nath. Let me hear a stasse, a stanza, a verse, Lege domine.

If Love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?

Ah, never faith could hold, if not to beauty vowed.

Though to my selfe forsworn, to thee I'll faithfull prove.

Those thoughts to me were Okes, to thee like Officers bowed.

Study his byas leaves, and makes his book thine eyes.

Where all those pleasures live, that art would comprehend.

If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice,

Well learned is that tongue, that well can thee commend.

All ignorant that soul, that sees thee without wonder.

Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire;

Thy eye Joves lightning bears, thy voyce his dreadfull thunder.

Which not to anger bent, is musick, and sweet fire.

Celestiall as thou art, Oh pardon love this wrong,

That sings heavens praise, with such an earthly tongue.

Pedro. You find not the apostrophes, and so misse the accent. Let me supervise the cangenet.

Nath. Here are onely numbers ratified, but for the elegancy, facility, and golden cadence of poësie caret : Ovidius Naso was the man. And why indeed Naso, but for smelling out the odoriferous flowers of fancy? the jerks of invention imitary is nothing : So doth the Hound his master, the Ape his keeper, the tyred Horse his rider : But Damosella Virgin, Was this directed to you?

Jaqu. I sir, from one Mounseieur Birone, one of the strange Queens Lords.

Nath. I will overglance the superscript.

To the snow-white hand of the most beauntious Lady, Rosaline. I will look again on the intellect of the Letter, for the nomination of the party written to the person written unto.

Your Ladiships in all desired employment, Birone.

Per. Sir Holofernes, this Berown is one of the Votaries with the King, and here he hath framed a Letter to a sequent of the stranger Queens : which accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath miscarried. Trip and goe my sweet, deliver this Paper into the hand of the King, it may concern much : stay not thy complement, I forgive thy duty, adieu.

Maia. Good Costard goe with me ;

Sir God save your life.

Cost. Have with thee my girl.

Exit.

Hol. Sir you have done this in the fear of God very religiously : and as a certain father saith-----

Ped. Sir, tell not me of the father, I doe fear coulourable colours. But to return to the Verses, did they please you Sir Nathaniel?

Nath. Marvellous well for the pen.

Peda. I doe dine to day at the fathers of a certain Pupill of mine, where if (being repast) it shall please you to gratifie the table with a grace, I will on my priviledge I have with the parents of the foresaid Child and Pupill, undertake your bien venuto, where I will prove those Verses to be very unlearned, neither favouring of Poetry, Wit or Invention. I beseech your Society.

Nath. And thank you too : for society (saith the text) is the happiness of life.

Peda. And certes the text most infallibly concludes it. Sir I doe invite you too, you shall not say me nay : pauca verba.

Away, the gentles are at their game, and we will to our recreation.

Exeunt.

Enter Birone with a Paper in his hand, alone.

Biro. The King he is hunting the Dear, I am coursing my self.

They have pitcht a Toyle, I am toying in a pitch, pitch thar defiles ; defile, a foul word : Well, set thee down sorrow ; for so they say the fool said, and so say I, and I thee fool : Well proved wit. By the Lord this Love is as mad as Ajax, it kills sheep, it kills me, I a sheep : Well proved again a my side. I will not love, if I doe, hang me : ifaith I will not. O but her eye : by this light, but for her eye, I would not love her ; yes, for her to her eyes. Well, I doe nothing in the world but lye and lye in my throat. By heaven I doe love, and it hath taught me to Rime, and to be mallicholly : and here is part of my Rime, and here my mallicholly. Well, she hath one a my Sonnets already, the Clown bore it, the Foole sent it, and the Lady hath it : sweet Clown, sweeter Foole, sweetest Lady. By the world, I would not care a pin, if the other three were in. Here comes one with a paper, God give him grace to groan.

He stands aside.

The King entreteth.

King. Ay me.

Bir. Shot by heaven : proceed sweet Cupid, thou hast chumprt him with thy Birdoolt under the left pap : in faith secrets.

King. So sweet a kiss the golden Sun gives not, To those fresh morning drops upon the Rose, As thy eye beams when their fresh Rayes have smot The night of dew that on my cheeks down flows, Nor shines the silver Moon one halfe sobright, Through the transparent bosome of the deep, As doth thy face through tears of mine give light : Thou shin'st in every tear that I doe weep, No drop, but as a Coach doth carry thee, So ridest thou triumphing in my woe. Doe but behold the tears that swell in me, And they thy glory through my grief will shew :

But

But doe not love thy self, then thou wilt keep
My tears for glasses, and still make me weep.
O Queen of Queens, how far dost thou excell,
No thought can think, nor tongue of mortall tell.
How shall she know my griefs? I'll drop the paper.
Sweet leaves shade folly. Who is he comes here?

Enter Longavile. The King steps aside.

What! Longavile? and reading: listen ear.

Bir. Now in thy likenesse one more fool appears.

Long. Ay me, I am forsworn.

Bir. Why he comes in like a perjur'd, wearing papers.

Long. In love I hope, sweet fellowship in shame.

Bir. One drunkard loves another of the name.

Lon. Am I the first that have been perjur'd so? (know,

Bir. I could put thee in comfort: not by two, that I
Thou makest the triumphry, the corner cap of society,
The shape of Loves Tiburn, that hangs up simplicity.

Lon. I fear these stubborn lines lack power to move.
O sweet Maria, Empresse of my love,
These numbers will I tear, and write in prose.

Bir. O! Rimes are guards on wanton Cupids hose, Disfigure not his Shop.

Lon. This same shall go. He reads the Sonnet.

*Did not the heavenly Rhetorick of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world cannot hold argument,
Perswade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment
A Woman I forswore, but I will prove,
Thou being a Goddesse, I forswore not thee.
My Vow was earthly, thou a heavenly Love.
Thy grace being gain'd, cures all disgrace in me.
Vowes are but breath, and breath a vapour is,
Then thou fair Sun, which on my earth doest shine,
Exhal'st this vapour-vow, in thee it is:
If broken then, it is no fault of mine:
If by me broke, what fool is not so wise,
To loose an oath, to win a Paradise?*

Bir. This is the liver vein, which makes flesh a deity.
A green Goose, a Goddesse, pure, pure Idolatry.
God amend us, God amend, we are much out o'th' way.

Enter Dumaine.

Lon. By whom shall I send this! (Company?) Stay.

Bir. All hid, all hid, an old infant play,
Like a demy God, here sit I in the sky,
And wretched fools secrets heedfully o're eye.
More Sacks to th' Mill! O heavens I have my wish,
Dumaine transform'd; four Woodcocks in a dish.

Dum. O most divine Kate.

Bir. O most prophane coxcombe.

Dum. By heaven the wonder of a mortall eye.

Bir. By earth she is not: corporall, there you lye.

Dum. Her Amber hairs for fowl hath Amber coted.

Bir. An Amber coloured Raven was well noted.

Dum. As upright as the Cedar.

Bir. Stoop I say, her shoulder is with child.

Dum. As fair as day.

Bir. I as some dayes, but then no sun must shine.

Dum. O that I had my wish?

Long. And I had mine.

Kin. And mine too, good Lord.

Bir. Amen, so I had mine. Is not that a good word?

Dum. I would forget her, but a Feaver she Raigns in my bloud, and will remembered be.

Bir. A Feaver in your bloud! why then incision

Would let her out in Sawcers, sweet misprision.

Dum. Once more I'll read the Ode that I have writ.

Bir. Once more I'll mark how Love can vary Wit.

Dumaine reads his Sonnet.

*On a day, alack the day:
Love, whose Month is every May,
Spi'd a blossome passing fair,
Playing in the wanton aire:
Through the Velvet, leaveth the wind,
All unseen, can passage find.
That the Lover sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heavens breath.
Aire (quoth he) thy cheeks to blow,
Aire, would I might triumph so.
But alack my hand is sworn,
Ne're to pluck thee from thy throne:
Vow alack for youth unmeet,
Youth so apt to pluck a sweet.
Doe not call it sin in me,
That I am forsworn for thee.
Thou for whom Jove would swear,
Juno but an Ethiop were,
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortall for thy Love.*

This will I send, and something else more plain,
That shall expresse my true-loves fasting pain,
O would the King, Birone, and Longavile,
Were Lovers too, ill to example ill,
Would from my fore-head wipe a perjur'd note:
For none offend, where all alike doe dote.

Lon. Dumaine, thy Love is far from charity,
That in Loves grief desir'st society:
You may look pale, but I should blush I know,
To be o're-heard, and taken napping so.

King. Come sir, you blush: as his, your case is such,
You chide at him, offending twice as much.
You doe not love Maria, Longavile,
Did never Sonnet for her fake compile;
Nor never lay his wreathed armes achwart
His loving bosome, to keep down his heart.
I had been closely shrowded in this bush.

And markt you both, and for you both did blush.
I heard your guilty Rimes, observ'd your fashion;
Saw sighs reek from you, noted well your passion.
Ay me, sayes one! O Jove, the other cries!
Her hairs were Gold, Cristall the others eyes.
You would for Paradise break faith and troth,
And Jove for your Love would infringe an oath.
What will Birone say when that he shall hear
A faith infringed, which such zeal did swear.
How will he scorn? how will he spend his wit?
How will he triumph, leap, and laugh at it?
For all the wealth that ever I did see,
I would not have him know so much by me.

Bir. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisie.
Ah good my Liege, I pray thee pardon me.
Good heart, What grace hast thou thus to reprove
These wormes for loving, that are most in love?
Your eyes doe make no couches in your tears,
There is no certain Princessse that appears.
You'll not be perjur'd, 'tis a hatefull thing:
Tush, none but Minstrells like of Sonnetting.
But are you not asham'd? nay, are you not

All three of you, to be thus much o're shot?
 You found his Moth, the King your Moth did see:
 But I a Beam doe find in each of three.
 O what a Scene of fool'ry have I seen,
 Of sighs, of groans, of sorrow, and of teen:
 O me, with what strict patience have I sat,
 To see a King transformed to a Gnat?
 To see great Hercules whipping a Gigge,
 And profound Solomon tuning a Jygge?
 And Nestor play at push-pin with the Boyes,
 And Critick Tymon laugh at idle toyes.
 Where lies thy grief? O tell me good Dumain.
 And gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain?
 And where my Lieges? all about the breast.
 A Candle hoa!

Kin. Too bitter is thy jest,
 Are we betrayed thus to thy over-view?

Bir. Not you by me, but I betrayed to you.
 I that am honest. I that hold it sin

To break the vow I am engaged in:
 I am betray'd by keeping company
 With men, likemen of strange inconstancy.
 When shall you see me write a thing in rime?
 Or groan for Joan? or spend a minutes time,
 In pruning me? when shall you hear that I will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye: a gate, a state, a brow, a breast, a waste, a legge, a limme.

Kin. Soft, whither away so fast?
 A true man, or a thief, that gallops so.

Bir. I post from Love. good Lover let me go.

Enter Jaquenetta, and Clown.

Jaque. God blesse the King.

Kin. What Present hast thou there?

Clo. Some certain treason.

Kin. What makes treason here?

Clo. Nay it makes nothing sir.

Kin. If it marre nothing neither,
 The treason and you go in peace together.

Jaque. I beseech your Grace let this Letter be read,
 Our person misdoubts it: it was treason he said.

Kin. Birone, read it over. He reads the Letter.
 Where hadst thou it.

Jaque. Of Costard.

Kin. Where hadst thou it?

Cost. Of Dun Adramadio, Dun Adramadio.

Kin. How now, what mean you? why dost thou tear
 it?

Bir. A toy my Liege, a toy: your grace needs not fear it.

Long. It did move him to passion, and therefore let's hear it.

Dum. It is Birones writing, and here is his name.

Bir. Ah you whoreson loggerhead, you were born to doe me shame.

Bir. Guilty my Lord, guilty: I confesse, I confesse.

King. What?

Bir. That you three fools lackt me fool, to make up the messe.

He, he, and you: and you my Liege, and I,
 Are pick-purses in Love, and we deserve to dye.
 O dismiss this audience, and I shall tell you more.

Dum. Now the number is even.

Bir. True, true, we are four: will these Turtles be gone?

Kin. Hence sirs, away.

Exit.

Clo. Walk aside the true folk, and let the traytors stay.

Bir. Sweet Lords, sweet Lovers, O let us embrace:
 As true we are as flesh and blood can be.

The Sea will ebbe and flow, heaven will shew his face:
 Young blood doth not obey an old decree.

We cannot crosse the cause why we were born:
 Therefore of all hands must we be forsworn.

King. What did these rent lines shew some love of thine?

(Rosaline,

Bir. Did they, quoth you? Who sees the heavenly
 That (like a rude and savage man of Inde.)

At the first opening of the gorgeous East,
 Bowes not his vassall head, and strooken blind,
 Kisses the base ground with obedient breast?

What peremptory Eagle-sighted eye
 Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,
 That is not blinded by her Majesty?

Kin. What zeal, what fury hath inspir'd thee now?

My Love (her Mistress) is a gracious Moon,
 She (an attending Starre) scarce seen a light.

Bir. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Birone.
 O, but for my Love, day would turn to night,
 Of all complexions the cul'd sovereignty,
 Doe meet as at a Fair in her fair cheek,
 Where severall Worthies make one dignity,
 Where nothing wants, that want it self doth seek.

Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues,
 Fie painted Rhetorick, O she needs it not,
 To things of tale, a sellers praise belongs:

She passes praise, then praise too short doth blot.
 A withered Hermit, five score winters worn,
 Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye.
 Beauty doth varnish Age, as if new born,
 And gives the Crutch the Cradles infancy.

O tis the Sun that maketh all things shine.

Kin. By heaven, thy Love is black as Ebony.

Bir. Is Ebony like her? O word divine?

A Wife of such Wood were felicity.

O who can give an oath? where is a book?

That I may swear beauty doth beauty lack,

If that she learn not of her eye to look:

No face is fair that is not full so black.

Kin. O paradoxe, black as the badge of hell,
 The hue of Dungeons, and the School of Night:

And beauties crest becomes the heavens well.

Bir. Devils soonest tempt resembling spirits of light.

O, if in black my Ladies browes be deckt,

It mourns, that painting an usurping hair

Should ravish doters with a false aspect:

And therefore is she born to make black fair.

Her favour turns the fashion of the dayes,

For native blood is counted painting now:

And therefore red that would avoid dispraise,

Paints it self black, to imitate her brow.

Dum. To look like her are Chimney-sweepers black.

Lon. And since her time, are Colliers counted bright.

King. And Aethiops of their sweet complexion crack.

Dum. Dark needs no Candles now, for dark is light.

Bir. Your Mistresses dare never come in rain,

For fear their Colours should be washt away.

Kin. 'Twere good yours did: for sir to tell you plain,

I'll find a fairer face not washt to day.

Bir. I'll prove her fair, or talk till dooms-day here.

Kin. No Devil will fright thee then so much as she.

Dum. I never knew man hold vile stuffe so dear.

Lon. Look, here's thy love, my foot and her face see.

Bir. O if the streets were paved with thine eyes,

Her

Her feet were much too dainty for such tread.

Dum. O vile, then as she goes what upward lyes?
The street should see as she walk'd over head.

Kin. But what of this, are we not all in love?

Bir. Nothing so sure, and thereby all forsworn.

Kin. Then leave this chat, and good Birone now prove
Our loving lawfull, and our faith not torn.

Dum. I marry there, some flattery for this evill.

Long. O some authority how to proceed,
Some tricks, some quilllets, how to cheat the devill.

Dum. Some salve for perjury.

Bir. O 'tis more then need.

Have at you then affections, men at armes,
Consider what you first did swear unto:
To fast, to study, and to see no woman:
Flat treason 'gainst the Kingly state of youth.
Say, Can you fast? your stomachs are too young:
And abstinence ingenders maladies,
And where that you have vow'd to study (Lords)
In that each of you have forsworn his Book.
Can you still dream and pore, and thereon look?
For when would you, my Lord, or you,
Have found the ground of studies excellence,
Without the beauty of a womans face;
From womens eyes this Doctrine I derive,
They are the Ground, the Books, the Academs,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.
Why, universall plodding, poysons up
The nimble spirits in the arteries,
As motion and long action tires
The sinnowy vigour of the traveller.
Now for not looking on a womans face,
You have in that forsworn the use of eyes:
And study too, the causer of your vow.
For where is any Author in the world,
Teaches such beauty as a womans eye:
Learning is but an adjunct to our self,
And where we are, our learning likewise is.
Then when our selves we see in Ladies eyes,
Doe we not likewise see our learning there?
O, we have made a Vow to study, Lords,
And in that vow we have forsworn our Books:
For when would you (my Liege) or you, or you?
In Leaden contemplation have found out
Such fiery Numbeis as the prompting eyes
Of beauties tutors have inrich'd you with:
Other slow Arts intirely keep the brain:
And therefore finding barren practizers,
Scarce shew a harvest of their heavy toyle.
But Love first learned in a Ladies eyes,
Lives not alone immured in the brain:
But with the motion of all elements,
Courses as swift as thought in every power,
And gives to every power a double power,
Above their functions and their offices.
It adds a precious seeing to the eye:
A Lovers eyes will gaze an Eagle blind.
A Lovers ear will hear the lowest sound.
When the suspicious head of theft is stopt,
Loves feeling is more soft and sensible,
Then are the tender horns of Cockled Snayles.
Loves tongue proves dainty Bacchus, gross in taste,
For Valour, is not Love a Hercules?
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides.
Subtill as a Sphinx, as sweet and musically,
As bright Apollo's Lute, strung with his hair.

And when Love speaks, the voyce of all the gods,
Make heaven drowlie with the harmony.

Never durst Poet touch a pen to write,
Untill his Ink were tempred with Loves sighs:

O then his lines would ravish savage ears;
And plant in Tyrants milde humility,

From womens eyes this doctrine I derive:

They sparkle still the right Promethean fire,
They are the Books, the Arts, the Academes,

That shew, contain, and nourish all the world:
Else none at all in ought proves excellent:

Then fools you were these women to forswear:

Or keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools.

For wisdoms sake, (a word that all men love)

Or for Loves sake, a word that loves all men:

Or for Mens sake, the author of these Women:

Or Womens sake, by whom we men are men,

Let us once loose our oaths, to find our selves,

Or else we loose our selves, to keep our oaths:

It is religion to be thus forsworn,

For Charity it self fulfills the Law;

And who can sever love from Charity?

Kin. Saint Cupid then, and Souldiers to the field.

Bir. Advance your standards, and upon them Lords:
Pell, mell, down with them: but be first advis'd,
In conflict that you get the Sun of them.

Lon. Now to plain dealing, Lay these glozes by,
Shall we resolve to woe these girls of France?

Kin. And win them too; therefore let us devise,
Some entertainment for them at their Tents.

Bir. First from the Park let us conduct them thither,
Then homeward every man attach the hand

Of his fair Mistress: in the afternoon

We will with some strange pastime solace them:

Such as the shortness of the time can shape,

For Revels, Dances, Masks, and merry hours,

Fore-run fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.

Kin. Away, away, no time shall be omitted,

That will be time, and may by us be fitted.

Bir. Alone, alone sowed Cockell, reap'd no Corn,

And Justice alwayes whirls in equall measure:

Light Wenches may prove plagues to men forsworn,

If so, our Copper buyes no better treasure.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Pedant, Curate, and Dull.

Ped. Satis quid sufficit.

Cur. I praise god for you sir, your reasons at dinner have been sharp and sententious: pleasant without scur-rillity, witty without affectation, audacious without im-pudency, learned without opinion, and strange without heresie: I did converse this quondam day with a companion of the Kings, who is intitled, nominated or called,
Don Adriano de Armato.

Ped. Novi hominem tanquam te. His humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory; his tongue filed, his eye ambitious; his gate majesticall, and his generall behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thraconicall. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odde, as it were, too peregrinate, as I may call it.

M 2

Curat.

Curat. A most singular and choise Epithet,

Draw's out his Table book.

Ped. He draweth out the thred of his verbosity, finer then the staple of his argument. I abhor such phantasticall phantasies, such insociable and point devise companions, such rackers of orthography, as to speak doubt fine, when he should say doubt; det, when he should pronounce debt; debt, not det: he clepeth a Cause, Cause: halfe, haufe: neighbour vocatur nebour; neigh abbreviated ne: this is abominable, which we would call abominable: it insinuateth me of infamy: ne intelligis domine, to make frantick, lunatick?

Cura. Laus deo, bene intelligo.

Peda. Bome boon for boon prescian, a little scarch, 'twill serve.

Enter Braggart, Boy.

Curat. Vides-ne quis venit?

Peda. Video, & gaudeo.

Brag. Chirra.

Peda. Quare Chirra, not Sirra?

Brag. Men of peace well incountred.

Peda. Most military sir, salutation.

Boy. They have been at a great feast of Languages, and stole the scraps.

Clow. O they have liv'd long on the almes-basket of words. I marvell thy Master hath not eaten thee for a word, for thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus: Thou art easier swallowed then a flap-dragon.

Page. Peace, the peale begins.

Brag. Monsieur, are you not lettered?

Page. Yes, yes, he teaches boyes the Horn-book: What is Ab speld backward with the horne on his head?

Peda. Ba, pueritia with a horn added.

Page. Ba most silly Sheep, with a horn: you hear his learning.

Ped. Quis quis, thou Consonant?

Page. The last of the five Vowels, if You repeat them, or the fifth if I.

Ped. I will repeat them: a e I.

Page. The Sheep, the other two concludes it ou.

Brag. Now by the salt wave of the mediteraneum, a sweet tutch, a quick venew of wit, snip snap, quick and home, it rejoyceth my intellect, true wit.

Page. Offered by a child to an old man: which is wit-old.

Ped. What is the figure? What is the figure?

Page. Hornes.

Ped. Thou disputes't like an Infant: goe, whip thy Gigge.

Page. Lend me your Horn to make one, and I will whip about your infamy unum cita a gigge of a Cuckolds horne.

Clown. And I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy Ginger-bread: Hold, there is the very Remuneration I had of thy master, thou halfpenny purse of wit, thou Pidgeon-egge of discretion. O, and the heavens were so pleased, that thou wert but my Bastard; What a joyfull father wouldst thou make me? Goe to, thou hast it ad dungil, at the fingers ends, as they say.

Ped. Oh, I smell false Latine, dunghel for unguem.

Brag. Artf-man preambulat, we will be singled from the barbarous. Doe you not educate youth at the Charge-house on the top of the Mountain?

Ped. Or Mons the hill.

Brag. At your sweet pleasure, for the Mountain.

Ped. I doe sans question.

Brag. Sir, it is the Kings most sweet pleasure and affection, to congratulate the Princeesse at her Pavillion, in the posteriors of this day, which the rude multitude call the after-noon.

Ped. The posterior of the day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the after-noon: the word is well culd, choice, sweet, and apt I doe assure you sir, I do assure.

Brag. Sir, the King is a noble Gentleman, and my familiar; I doe assure ye very good friend: for what is inward between us, let it passe. I doe beseech thee, remember thy curtesie. I beseech thee apparell thy head: and among other importunate and most serious designes, and of great import indeed too: but let that passe, for I must tell thee it will please his Grace (by the world) sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder, and with his royal finger thus dally with my excrement, with my mustachio; but, sweet heart, let that passe. By the world I recount no fable, some certain special honours it pleaseth his Greatnesse to impart to Armado a Souldier, a man of travell, that hath seen the world: but let that passe; the very all of all is: but, sweet heart, I doe implore secrecy, that the King would have me present the Princeesse (sweet chuck) with some delightfull ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antick, or fire-work: Now, understanding that the Curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions, and sodain breaking out of mirth (as it were) I have acquainted you withall, to the end to crave your assistance.

Ped. Sir, you shall present before her the Nine Worthies. Sir Holofernes, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the posterior of this day, to be rendred by our assistants at the Kings command: and this most gallant, illustrate and learned Gentleman, before the Princeesse: I say none so fit as to present the Nine Worthies.

Curat. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?

Ped. Josua, your self: my self, and this gallant gentleman Judas Machabeus, this Swain (because of his great limme or joint) shall passe Pompey the great, the Page Hercules.

Brag. Pardon sir, error: he is not quantity enough for that Worthies thumb, he is not so big as the end of his Club.

Peda. Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strangling a Snake; and I will have an Apology for that purpose.

Page. An excellent device: so if any of the audience hiss, you may cry, Well done Hercules, now thou crushest the Snake; that is the way to make an offence gracious, though few have the grace to do it.

Brag. For the rest of the Worthies?

Ped. I will play three my self.

Page. Thrice worthy Gentleman.

Brag. Shall I tell you a thing?

Ped. We attend.

Brag. We will have, if this fadge not, an Antique. I beseech you follow.

Ped. Via good-man Dull, thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull. Nor understood none neither sir.

Ped. Alone, we will employ thee.

Dull. Ile make one in a dance, or so: or will play on on the taber to the Worthies, and let them dance the hey.

Ped. Most Dull, honest Dull, to our sport away. Exit.

Enter Princeß, and Ladies.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart,
If fairings come thus plentifully in,
A Lady wal'd about with Diamonds: look you, what I have from the King.

Rosa. Madam, came nothing else along with that?

Prin. Nothing but this: yes, as much love in Rime,
As would be cram'd up in a sheet of paper,
Writ on both sides the leaf, margent and all,
That he was fain to seal on Cypids name.

Rosa. That was the way to make his god-head wax,
For he hath been five thousand yeais a boy.

Kath. I, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too.

Rosa. You'll ne're be friends with him, a kild your sister.

Kath. He made her melancholly, sad and heavy,
And so she died: had she been light like you,
Of such a merry nimble stirring spirit,
She might have been a Grandam ere she died.
And so may you: For a light heart lives long.

Rosa. What's your dark meaning mouse of this light word?

Kath. A light condition in a beauty dark.

Rosa. We need more light to find your meaning out.

Kat. You'll mar the light by taking it in snuffe:
Therefore I'll darkly end the argument.

Ros. Look what you doe, you doe it still i'th dark.

Kut. So doe not you, for you are a light Wench.

Ros. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light.

Kat. You weigh me not, O that's you care not for me.

Ros. Great reason: for past care, is still past cure.

Prin. Well banded both, a set of wit well played.

But Rosaline, you have a favour too?

Who sent it? and what is it?

Ros. I would you knew.

And if my face were but as fair as yours,
My favour were as great, be witness this.

Nay, I have Verses too, I thank Birone,
The numbers true, and were the numbring too,
I were the fairest goddess on the ground.

I am compar'd to twenty thousand faires.

O he hath drawn my picture in his letter.

Prin. Any thing like?

Ros. Much in the letters, nothing in the praise.

Prin. Beauteous as Ink: a good conclusion.

Kat. Fair as a text B. in a Copy book.

Ros. Ware pensils. How? let me not die your debtor,
My red Dominicall, my golden letter.

O that your face were full of Oes.

Prin. A pox of that jest, and I beshrew all shrows:
But Katharine, what was sent to you
From fair Dumain?

Kath. Madam, this Glove.

Prin. Did he not send you twain?

Kath. Yes Madam: and moreover,
Some thousand Verses of a faithfull Lover
A huge translation of hypocrisie,
Vildly compil'd, profound simplicity.

Mar. This, and these Pearls, to me sent Longaville.
The Letter is too long by halfe a mile.

Prin. I think no less: Dost thou not wish in heart
The Chain were longer, and the Letter short?

Mar. I, or I would these hands might never part.

Prin. We are wise girls, to mock our Lovers so.

Ros. They are worse fools to purchase mocking so.
That same Birone I'll torture ere I goe.

O that I knew he were but in by th' week,
How I would make him fawn, and beg, and seek,
And wait the season, and observe the times,
And spend his prodigall wits in bootless rimes,
And shape his service all to my behests,
And make him proud to make me proud with jests.
So pertaunt like would I o'refway his state,
That he should be my fool, and I his fate.

Prin. None are so surely caught, when they are catch'd,
As wit turn'd fool: folly in wisdom hatch'd,
Hath wisdoms warrant, and the help of School,
And wits own grace to grace a learned Fool?

Ros. The blood of youth burns not in such excess,
As gravities revolt to wantonness.

Mar. Folly in fools bears not so strange a note,
As fool'ry in the Wise, when wit doth dote:
Since all the power thereof it doth apply,
To prove by Wit, worth in simplicity.

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Here comes Boyet, and mirth in his face.

Boy. O, I am stab'd with laughter, Where's her Grace?

Prin. Thy news Boyet?

Boy. Prepare Madam, prepare.

Arme Wenches arme, incounters mounted are Against your Peace, Love doth approach, disguis'd:
Armed in arguments, you'll be surpris'd.
Muste your Wits, stand in your own defence,
Or hide your heads like Cowards, and flye hence.

Prin. Saint Dennis, to S. Cupid: What are they
That chargeth their breath against us? Say scout, say.

Boy. Under the coole shade of a Syccamore,
I thought to close mine eyes some halfe an houre:
When loe to interrupt my purpos'd rest,
Toward that shade I might behold adrest
The King and his companions: warily
I stole into a neighbour thicket by,

And over-heard, what you shall over-hear:

That by and by disguis'd they will be here.

Their Herald is a pretty knavish Page,

That well by heart hath con'd his embassage,

Action and accent did they teach him there

Thus must thou speak, and thus thy body bear.

And ever and anon they made a doubt,

Pefence majestically would put him out:

For, quoth the King, an Angell shalt thou see:

Yet fear not thou, but speak audaciously.

The Boy reply'd, an Angell is not evill:

I should have feard her, had she been a devill.

With that all laugh'd, and clap'd him on the shoulder,

Making the bold wag by their praises bolder.

One rub'd his elbow thus, and fleer'd, and swore,

A better speech was never spoke before.

Another with his finger, and his thumb,

Cry'd via, we will doo't, come what will come.

The third he caperd and cryed, All goes well.

The fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell:

With that they all did tumble on the ground,

With such a zealous laughter, so profound,

That in this spleen ridiculous, appears,

To check their folly passions, solemn tears.

Prin. But what, but what, come they to visit us?

Boy. They doe, they doe; and are apparel'd thus,

Like Muscovites, or Russians, and I gues,

Their purpose is to parlee, court, and dance,

And every one his Love-feat will advance
Unto his several Mistresse: Which they'll know
By favours several, which they did bestow.

Prin. And will they so? the Gallants shall be taskt:
For Ladies; we will every one be maskt:
And not a man of them shall have the grace
Despight of sute, to see a Ladies face.
Hold Rosaline, this Favour thou shalt wear,
And then the King will court thee for his Dear:
Hold, take thou this my sweet, and give me thine,
So shall Biron take me for Rosaline.
And change your Favours too, so shall your Loves
Woove contrary, deceiv'd by these removes.

Ros. Come on then, wear the favours most in sight.

Kath. But in this changing, What is your intent?

Prin. The effect of my intent is to crosse theirs:
They doe it but in mocking merriment,
And mock for mock is onely my intent.
Their several counsels they unbosome shall
To Loves mistook, and so be mockt withall:
Upon the next occasion that me meet
With Visages displayed to talke and greet.

Ros. But shall we dance, if they desire us to't?

Prin. No, to the death we will not move a foot,
Nor to their pen'd speech render we no grace:
But while 'tis spoke, each turn away her face.

Boy. Why that contempt will kill the keepers heart,
And quite divorce his memory from his part.

Prin. Therefore I doe it, and I make no doubt,
The rest will ne're come in, if he be out.
There's no such sport, as sport by sport overthrow:
To make theirs ours, and ours none but our own;
So shall we stay mocking entended game,
And they well mockt, depart away with shame. Sound.

Boy. The Trumpet sounds, be maskt, the maskers come.

Enter Blackmoors with musick, the Boy with a speech, and the rest of the Lords disguised.

Pag. All haile, the richest Beauties on the earth.

Bir. Beauties no richer then rich Taffata.

Pag. A holy parcell of the fairest dames that ever turn'd their backs to mortall viewes.

The Ladies turn their back to him.

Bir. Their eyes villain, their eyes.

Pag. That ever turn'd their eyes to mortall viewes.
Out.

Bir. True, out indeed.

Pag. Out of your favours heavenly spirit, vouchsafe
Not to behold.

Bir. Once to behold, rogue.

Pag. Once to behold with your Sunne beamed eyes,
With your Sunne beamed eyes.

Bir. They will not answer to that Epithite,
You were best call it Daughter-beamed eyes.

Pag. They doe not mark me, and that brings me out.

Bir. Is this your perfectnesse? be gone you rogue.

Ros. What would these strangers?

Know their minds Boyet.

If they do speak out language, 'tis our will
That some plain man recount their purposes.

Know what they would?

Boy. What would you with the Princes?

Bir. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.

Ros. What would they, say they?

Boy. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.

Ros. Why that they have, and bid them so be gone.

Boy. She sayes you have it, and you may be gone.

Kin. Say to her we have measur'd many miles,
To tread a Measure with you on the grasse.

Boy. They say that they have measur'd many a mile,
To tread a Measure with you on this grasse.

Ros. It is not so. Ask them how many inches
Is in one mile? If they have measur'd many,
The measure then of one is easily told.

Boy. If to come hither, you have measur'd miles,
And many miles: the Princeesse bids you tell,
How many inches doth fill up one mile?

Bir. Tell her we measure them by weary steps.

Boy. She hears her self.

Ros. How many weary steps
Of many weary miles you have ore-gone,
Are numbred in the travell of one mile?

Bir. We number nothing that we spend for you,
Our duty is so rich, so infinite,
That we may doe it still without accompt.
Vouchsafe to shew the sunshine of your face,
That we (like savages) may worship it.

Ros. My face is but a Moon and clouded too.

Kin. Blessed are clouds, to doe as such clouds doe.
Vouchsafe bright Moon on these thy starres to shine,
(Those clouds removed) upon our watery eyne,

Ros. O vain petitioner, beg a greater matter,
Thou now requests but Moonshine in the water,

Kin. Then in our measure, vouchsafe but one change:
Thou bidst me beg, this begging is not strange.

Ros. Play musick then: nay you must doe it soon,
Not yet no dance: thus change I like the Moon.

Kin. Will you not dance: How come you thus estranged?

Ros. You took the Moon at full, but now she's changed?

Kin. Yet still she is the Moon, and I the Man.

Ros. The musick playes, vouchsafe some motion to it:
Our eares vouchsafe it.

Kin. But your legges should doe it.

Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here by chance,
We'll not be nice, take hands, we will not dance.

Kin. Why take you hands then?

Ros. Onely to part friends.

Curtie sweet hearts, and so the Measure ends.

Kin. More measure of this measure; be not nice.

Ros. We can afford no more at such a price.

Kin. Prise your selves then: what buyes your company?

Ros. Your absence onely.

Kin. That can never be.

Ros. Then cannot we be bought: and so adieu,
Twice to your Visor, and half once to you.

Kin. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.

Ros. In private then.

Kin. I am best pleas'd with that.

Bir. White handed Mistris, one sweet word with thee.

Prin. Honey, and Milk, and Sugar: there is three.

Bir. Nay then two treyes, and if you grow so nice
Methegline, Wort, and Malmfey; well run dice:
There's half a dozen sweets.

Prin. Seventh sweet adue, since you can cog.
Ile play no more with you.

Bir. One word in secret.

Prin. Let it not be sweet.

Bir. Thou griev'st my gall.

Prin.

Prin. Gall, bitter.
Bir. Therefore meet.
Du. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a word?
Mar. Name it.
Dum. Faire Lady:
Mar. Say you so? Fair Lord;
 Take you that for your fair Lady.
Dum. Please it you,
 As much in private, and Ile bid adieu.
Mar. What, was your vizard made without a tongue?
Long. I know the reason Lady why you ask.
Mar. O for your reason, quickly sir, I long.
Long. You have a double tongue within your mask.
 And would afford my speechlesse vizard half.
Mar. Veale quoth the Dutch-man: is not Veale a Calf?
Long. A Calf fair Lady?
Mar. No, a fair Lord Calf.
Long. Let's part the word.
Mar. No, Ile not be your half:
 Take all and wean it, it may prove an Oxe.
Long. Look how you But to your self in these sharp mocks,
 Will you give horns chaff Lady? Doe not so.
Mar. Then die a Calf before your hornes doe grow.
Long. One word in private with you ere I die.
Mar. Bleat softly then, the Butcher hears you cry.
Boy. The tongues of mocking wenches are as keen
 As is the Razors edge, invisible:
 Cutting a smaller hair then may be seen,
 Above the sense of fence so sensible:
 Seemeth their conference, their conceits have wings,
 Fleeter then arrows, bullets, wind, thought, swifter things.
Ros. Not one word more my inaids, break off, break off.
Bir. By heaven, all dry beaten with pure scoffe.
Kin. Fare-well madde Wenches, you have simple wits. Exeunt.
Prin. Twenty adieus my frozen Muscovites.
 Are these the breed of wits so wondred at?
Boy. Tapers they are, with your sweet breath's puff
 out.
Ros. Well-liking wits they have, grosse, grosse, fat, fat.
Prin. O poverty in wit, Kingly poor flout.
 Will they not (think you) hang themselves to night?
 Or ever but in vizards shew their faces:
 This pert Birone was out of count'nance quite.
Ros. O! They were all in lamentable cases.
 The King was weeping ripe for a good word.
Prin. Birone did swear himself out of all suite.
Mar. Dumaine was at my service, and his sword:
 No point (quoth I:) my servant straight was mute.
Kat. Lord Longaville said I came ore his heart:
 And trow you what he call'd me?
Prin. Quallm perhaps.
Kat. Yes in good faith.
Prin. Goe sicknesse as thou art.
Ros. Well, better wits have worn plain statute caps,
 But will you hear; the King is my love sworn.
Prin. And quick Birone hath plighted faith to me.
Kat. And Longaville was for my service born.
Mar. Dumaine is mine as sure as bark on tree.
Boy. Madam, and pretty mistresses give eare,
 Immediately they will again be here
 In their own shapes: for it can never be,
 They will disgest this harsh indignity.

Prin. Will they return?
Boy. They will, they will, God knows,
 And leap for joy, though they are lame with blows:
 Therefore change Favours, and when they repair,
 Blow like sweet Roses, in this summer aire.
Prin. How blow? how blow? Speak to be understood.
Boy. Fair Ladies masks, are Roses in their bud:
 Dismask, their damask sweet commixture shown,
 Are Angels vailing clouds, or Roses blown.
Prin. Avaunt perplexity: What shall we do,
 If they return in their own shapes to wooe?
Ros. Good Madam, if by me you ll be advis'd,
 Let's mock them still as well known as disguis'd:
 Let us complain to them what fools were here,
 Disguis'd like Muscovites in shapelesse gear:
 And wonder what they were, and to what end
 Their shallow shewes, and prologue vildely pen'd,
 And their rough carriage so ridiculous,
 Should be presented at our Tent to us.
Boy. Ladies, withdraw: the gallants are at hand.
Prin. Whip to our Tents, as Rots runs ore the Land.
Exeunt.

Enter the King and the rest.

King. Fair sir, God save you. Where's the Princeesse?
Boy. Gone to her Tent.
 Please it your Majesty command me any service to her?
King. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word.
Boy. I will, and so will she, I know my Lord. Exit.
Bir. This fellow picks up wit as Pigeons pease,
 And utters it again, when Jove doth please.
 He is Wits Pedler, and retails his Wares
 At Wakes, and Waffels, Meetings, Markets, Faires:
 And we that sell by grosse, the Lord doth know,
 Have not the grace to grace it with such show.
 This Gallant pins the Wenches on his sleeve:
 Had he bin Adam, he had tempted Eve.
 He can carve too, and lisse: Why this is he,
 That kiss away his hand in courtesie.
 This is the Ape of Fortune, Monsieur the nice,
 That when he plays at Tables, chides the Dice
 In honourable tearmes: Nay he can sing
 A mean most meanly, and in Ushering
 Mend him who can: the Ladies call him sweet:
 The staires as he treads on them kisse his feet.
 This is the flower that smiles on every one,
 To shew his teeth as white as Whale his bone.
 And consciences that will not die in debt,
 Pay him the duty of hony-tongued Boyes.
Kin. A blister on his sweet tongue with my heart,
 That put Armadoes Page out of his part.

Enter Ladies.

Bir. See where it comes. Behaviour what wert thou,
 Till this mad-man shew'd thee? And what art thou now?
Kin. All haile sweet madam, and fair time of day.
Prin. Fair in all Haile is foule, as I conceive.
Kin. Construe my speeches better if you may.
Prin. Then wish me better, I will give you leave;
Kin. We came to visit you, and purpose now
 To lead you to our Court, vouchsafe it then.
Prin. This field shall hold me, and so hold your vow:
 Nor God, nor I, delights in perjur'd men.
Kin. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke:

The

The vertue of your eye must break my oath.

Pr. You nickname vertue: vice you should have spoke:

For vertues office never breaks men's troth.

Now by my maiden honour, yet as pure

As the unfullied Lilly, I protest,

A world of torments though I should endure,

I would not to be your houses guest:

So much I hate a breaking cause to be

Of heavenly oathes, vow'd with integrity.

Kin. O you have liv'd In desolation here,

Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame.

Prin. Not so my Lord, it is not so I swear,

We have had pastimes here, and pleasant game.

A messe of Russians left us but of late.

Kin. How Madam? Russians?

Prin. I in truth, my Lord.

Trim gallants, full of Courtship and of state.

Ros. Madam speak true. It is not so my Lord:

My Lady (to the manner of the dayes)

In curtesie gives undeserving praise.

We four indeed confronted were with four

In Russian habit: Here they stay'd an hour,

And talk'd apace: and in that hour (my Lord)

They did not blesse us with one happy word.

I dare not call them fools; but I think,

When they are thirsty, fools would faine have drink,

Bir. This jest is dry to me. Fair, gentle, sweet,

Your wit makes wise things foolish, when we greet

With eyes best seeing, heavens fiery eye,

By light we lose light: your capacity

Is of that nature, that to your huge store

Wise things seem foolish, and rich things but poor.

Ros. This proves you wise and rich: for in my eye---

Bir. I am a fool, and full of poverty.

Ros. But that you take what doth to you belong,

It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.

Bir. O, I am yours and all that I possess.

Ros. All the fool mine.

Bir. I cannot give you lesse.

Ros. Which of the Vizards was it that you wore?

Bir. Where? when? What Vizard?

Why demand you this?

Ros. There, then, that vizard, that superfluous ease,

That hid the worse, and shew'd the better face.

Kin. We are descried,

They'll mock us now down right.

Duk. Let us confesse and turn it to a jest.

Prin. Amaz'd my Lord? Why looks your Highnesse ladde?

Ros. Help hold his brows, he'll swoond: why look you pale?

Sea-sick I think, comming from Muscovy.

Bir. Thus pour the starres down plagues for perjury.

Can any face of brasse hold longer out?

Here stand I, Lady, dart thy skill at me,

Bruise me with scorn, confound me with a flout,

Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my ignorance;

Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit:

And I will wish thee never more to dance,

Nor never more in Russian habit waite.

O! never will I trust to speeches pen'd,

Nor to the motion of a Schoole-boys tongue,

Nor never come in vizards to my friend,

Nor wooe in rime like a blind-harpers song,

Taffata phrases, filken tearms precise,

Three-pil'd Hyperboles, spruce affection;

Figures pedanticall, these summer flies,

Have blown me full of maggot ostentation,

I doe forswear them, and I here protest,

By this, white Glove (how white the hand. God knows)

Henceforth my wooing mind shall be exprest

In russet yeas, and honest kerfies noes.

And to begin Wench, so God help me law,

My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw.

Ros. Sans, Sans, I pray you.

Bir. Yet I have a trick

Of the old rage: bear with me, I am sick.

Ile leave it by degrees: both, let us see,

Write Lord have mercy on us, on those three,

They are infected, in their hearts it lies:

They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes:

These Lords are visited, you are not free:

For the Lords tokens on you both I see.

Prin. No, they are free that gave these tokens to us.

Bir. Our states are forfeit, seek not to undoe us.

Ros. It is not so; for how can this be true,

That you stand forfeit, being those that sue.

Bir. Peace, for I will not have to doe with you.

Ros. Nor shall not, if I doe as I intend.

Bir. Speak for your selves, my wit is at an end.

Kin. Teach us sweet Madam, for our rude transgression, some fair excuse.

Prin. The fairest is confession.

Were you not here but even now disguis'd?

Kin. Madam, I was.

Prin. And were you well advis'd?

Kin. I was, fair Madam.

Prin. When you then were here,

What did you whisper in your Ladies ear?

Kin. That more then all the world I did respect her.

Prin. When she shall challenge this, you will reject her.

Kin. Upon mine honour no.

Prin. Peace, peace, forbear:

Your oath once broke, you force not to forswear.

Kin. Despise me when I break this oath of mine.

Prin. I will, and therefore keep it. Rosaline,

What did the Russian whisper in your ear?

Ros. Madam, he swore that he did hold me dear

As precious eye-sight, and did value me

Above this World: adding there moreover,

That he would Wed me, or else die my Lover.

Prin. God give thee joy of him: the Noble Lord

Most honourably doth uphold his word.

Kin. What mean you Madam?

By my life, my troth.

I never swore this Lady such an oath.

Ros. By heaven you did; and to confirm it plain,

You gave me this: But take it fir again.

Kin. My faith and this, to th' Princess I did give,

I knew her by this Jewell on her sleeve.

Prin. Pardon me sir, this Jewell did she wear,

And Lord Birone (I thank him) is my dear.

What? Will you have me, or your Pearle again?

Bir. Neither of either, I remit both twain.

I see the trick on't: Here was a consent,

Knowing aforehand of our merriment,

To dash it like a Christmas Comedy.

Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight Zany,

Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick

That smiles his cheek in years, and knows the trick

To make my Lady laugh, when she's dispos'd,

Told

Told our intents before : which once disclos'd,
The Ladies did change Favours, and then we Following the signes, woo'd but the sign of the.
Now to our perjury, to adde more terror,
We are again forsworn in will and error.
Much upon this it is : and might not you
Foretell our sport, to make us thus untrue ?
Doe not you know my Ladies foot by'th squier ?
And laugh upon the apple of her eye ?
And stand between her back fir, and the fire,
Holding a trencher, jesting merrily ?
You put our Page out : goe, you are allow'd
Die when you will, a smock shall be your throw'd.
You leer upon me, do you ? There's an eye
Wounds like a Leaden sword.

Boy. Full merrily hath this brave manager, this carreere beene runne.

Bir. Loe, he is tilting straight. Peace, I have done.

Enter Clown.

Welcome pure wit, thou prat'st a fair fray.

Clo. O Lord fir, they would kno,
Whether the three Worthies shall come in, or no.

Bir. What, are there but three ?

Clo. No fir, but it is vara fine,
For every one pursents three.

Bir. And three times thrice is nine.

Clo. Not so fir, under correction fir, I hope it is not so.
You cannot beg us fir, I can assure you fir, we know what we know : I hope three times thrice fir.

Bir. Is not nine.

Clo. Under correction fir, we know where-untill it doth amount.

Bir. By Jove, I alwayes took three threes for nine.

Clo. O Lord fir, it were pittie you should get your living by reckoning fir.

Bir. How much is it ?

Clo. O Lord fir, the parties themselves, the actors fir will shew where-untill it doth amount : for mine own part, I am (as they say, but to perfect one man in one poor man) Pompon the great fir.

Bir. Art thou one of the Worthies ?

Clo. It pleased them to think me worthy of Pompey the great : for mine own part, I know not the degree of the Worthy, but I am to stand for him.

Bir. Goe, bid them prepare.

Exit.

Clo. We will turn it finely off fir, we will take some care.

King. Birone, they will shame us :
Let them not approach.

Bir. We are shame-prooffe my Lord : and 'tis some policy, to have one shew worse then the King and his company.

Kin. I say they shall not come.

Prin. Nay my good Lord, let me ore rule you now ;
That sport best pleases, that doth least know how.
Where Zeal strives to content, and the contents
Dies, in the Zeal of that which it presents :
Their form confounded, makes most form in mirth,
When great things labouring perish in their birth.

Bir. A right description of our sport my Lord.

Enter Braggart.

Brag. Anointed, I implore so much expence of thy royall sweet breath, as will utter a brace of words.

Prin. Doth this man serve God ?

Bir. Why ask you ?

Prin. He speak's not like a man of God's making.

Brag. That's all one my fair sweet honey Monarch :
For I protest, the Schoolmaster is exceeding fantastickall : Too too vain, too too vain. But we will put it (as they say) to Fortunna delaguar. I wish you the peace of mind most royall cupplement.

King. Here is like to be a good presence of Worthies ;
He presents Hector of Troy, the Swain Pompey the great,
the Parish Curate Alexander, Armadoes Page Hercules, the Pedant Indas Machabens : And if these four Worthies in their first shew thrive, these four will change habits, and present the other five.

Bir. There is five in the first shew.

Kin. You are deceived, 'tis not so.

Bir. The Pedant, the Braggart, the Hedge-Priest, the Fool, and the boy.

A bare throw at Novum, and the whole world again,
Cannot prich out five such, take each one in's vain.

Kin. The ship is under sail, and here she comes again.

Enter Pompey.

Clo. I Pompey am.

Boy. You lye, you are not he.

Clo. I Pompey am.

Boy. With Libbards head on knee.

Bir. Well said old mocker,
I must needs be friends with thee.

I Pompey am, Pompey surnam'd the big.

Du. The great.

Clo. It is great fir : Pompey surnam'd the great.
That oft in field, with Targe and Shield,
did make my foe to sweat :

And travelling along this coast, I here am come by chance,
And lay my Armes before the legs of this sweet Lass of France.

If your Ladiship would say thanks Pompey, I had done.

Prin. Great thanks great Pompey.

Clo. 'Tis not so much worth : but I hope I was perfect.
I made a little fault in great.

Bir. My hat to a half-penny, Pompey proves the best Worthy.

Enter Curate, for Alexander.

Curat. When in the world I liv'd, I was the worlds
Commander.

By East, West, North, and South, I spread my conquering might :

My Schutchior plain declares that I am Alisander.

Boy. Your nose saies no, you are not :

For it stands too right.

Bir. Your nose smells no, in this most tender smelling Knight.

Prin. The Conqueror is dismaid :

Proceed good Alexander.

Cur. When in the world I lived, I was the worlds
Commander

Boy. Most true, 'tis right : you were so Alisander.

Bir. Pompey the great.

Clo. Your servant and Costard.

Bir. Take away the Conqueror, take away Alisander.

Clo. O fir, you have overthrow Alisander the conqueror : you will be serap'd out of the painted cloth for this.

this : your Lion that holds his Pollax sitting on a close stool, will be given to Ajax. He will be the ninth worthy. A Conqueror, and afraid to speak? Run away for shame Alifander. There an't shall please you: a foolish milde man, an honest man, look you, and soon dash'd. He is a marvellous good neighbour insooth, and a very good Bowler: but for Alifander, alas you see, how 'tis a little ore-parted. But there are Worthies a coming, will speak their minde in some other sort.

Clo. Stand aside good Pompey.

Exit Clo.

Enter Pedant for Judas, and the Boy for Hercules.

Ped. Great Hercules is presented by this Imp, Whose Club kil'd Cerberus that three-headed Canus, And when he was a babe, a child, a shrimp, Thus did he strangle Serpents in his Manus : Quoniam, he seemeth in minority, Ergo, I come with this Apology.

Keep some state in thy Exit, and vanish.

Exit Boy.

Ped. Judas I am.

Dum. A Judas?

Ped. Not Iscariot sir.

Judas I am yclipped Machabens,

Dum. Judas Machabens clipt, is plain Judas.

Bir. A kissing traitor. How art thou prov'd Judas?

Ped. Judas I am.

Dum. The more shame for you Judas.

Ped. What mean you sir?

Boy. To make Judas hang himself.

Ped. Begin sir, you are my elder.

Bir. Well follow'd, Judas was hang'd on an Elder.

Ped. I will not be put out of countenance.

Bir. Because thou hast no face.

Ped. What is this.

Boy. A Cittern head.

Dum. The head of a bodkin.

Bir. A deaths face in a ring.

Lon. The face of an old Roman coyn, scarce seen.

Boy. The pummell of Cæsars Faulchion.

Dum. The carv'd-bone face on a Flask.

Bir. Saint Georges half Cheek in a brooch.

Dum. I, and in a brooch of Lead.

Bir. I, and worn in the cap of a Tooth-drawer.

And now forward, for we have put thee in countenance.

Ped. You have put me out of countenance.

Bir. False, we have given thee faces.

Ped. But you have outfac'd them all.

Bir. And thou wer't a Lion, we would do so.

Boy. Therefore as he is an As, let him goe:

And so adieu sweet Iude. Nay, why dost thou stay?

Dum. For the latter end of his name.

Bir. For the Ass to the Iude: give it him. Iud-as away.

Ped. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.

Boy. A light for monsieur Iudas, it growes dark, he may stumble.

Prin. Alas poor Machabens, how hath he been baited.

Enter Braggart.

Bir. Hide thy head Achilles, here comes Hector in Armes.

Dum. Though my mocks come home by me, I will now be merry.

King. Hector was but a Trojan in respect of this.

Boy. But this is Hector?

Kin. I think Hector was not so clean timber'd,

Lon. His leg is too big for Hector,

Dum. More Calf certain.

Boy. No; he is hest indued with the small.

Bir. This can't be Hector.

Dum. He's a god or a Painter, for he makes faces.

Brag. The Armipotent Mars, of Launces the almighty, gave Hector a gift.

Dum. A gilt Nutmeg.

Bir. A Lemmon.

Lon. Stuck with Cloves.

Dum. No cloven.

Brag. The Armipotent Mars, of Launces the almighty, Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Illion;

A man so breathed, that certain he would fight: yea From morn till night, out of his Pavillion.

I am that Flower.

Dum. That Mint.

Long. That Cullambine.

Brag. Sweet Lord Longaville rein thy tongue.

Lon. I must rather give it the rein: for it runs against Hector.

Dum. I, and Hector's a Grey-hound.

Brag. The sweet War-man is dead and rotten, Sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried:

But I will forward with my device;

Sweet Royalty bestow on me the Sence of hearing.

Birone steps forth.

Prin. Speak brave Hector, we are much delighted.

Brag. I doe adore thy sweet Graces slipper.

Boy. Loves here by the foot.

Dum. He may not by the yard.

Brag. This Hector far surmounted Hanniball.

The party is gone.

Clo. Fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two months on her way.

Brag. What meanest thou?

Clo. Faith unless you play the honest Trojan, the poor Wench is cast away: she's quick, the child brags in her belly already: 'tis yours.

Brag. Dost thou infamonize me among Potentates? Thou shalt die.

Clo. Then shall Hector be whipt for Iaquenetta that is quick by him, and hang'd for Pompey, that is dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey.

Boy. Renowned Pompey.

Bir. Greater then great, great, great, great Pompey: Pompey the huge.

Dum. Hector trembles.

Bir. Pompey is moved, more Atees, more Atees stir them, or stir them on.

Dum. Hector will challenge him.

Bir. I, if I have no more mans blood in's belly, then will sup a Flea.

Brag. By the North-pole I doe challenge thee.

Clo. I will not fight with a pole like a Northern man; I'll slash, I'll do it by the sword: I pray you let me borrow my Armes again.

Dum. Room for the incensed Worthies.

Clo. I'll doe it in my shirt.

Dum. Most resolute Pompey.

Pag. Master, let me take you a button hole lower Do you not see Pompey is uncasing for the combat: what mean mean you? you will lose your reputation.

Brag. Gentlemen and Souldiers pardon me, I will not combate in my shirt.

Du. You may not deny it, Pompey hath made the challenge.

Brag. Sweet bloods, I both may, and will.

Bir. What reason have you for't?

Bra. The naked truth of it is, I have no Shirt, I go woolward for penance.

Boy. True, and it was enjoined him in Rome for want of Linnen: since when, I'll be sworn he wore none; but a Dishelout of Jaquenetta's, and that he weares next his heart for a favour.

Enter a Messenger, Monsieur Marcade.

Mar. God save you Madam.

Prin. Welcome Marcade, but that thou interruptest our merriment.

Marc. I am sorry Madam, for the newes I bring is heavy in my tongue. The King your Father.

Prin. Dead for my life.

Mar. Even so: My tale is told.

Bir. Worthies away, the Scene begins to cloud.

Bra. For mine own part, I breathe free breath: I have seen the day of wrong, through the little hole of discretion, and I will right my self like a Souldier.

Exeunt Worthies.

Kin. How fare's your Majesty?

Prin. Boyet prepare, I will away to night.

Kin. Madam not so, I doe beseech you stay.

Prin. Prepare I say. I thank you gracious Lords For all your fair endeavours and entreats: Out of a new sad-soul, that you vouchsafe, In your rich wisdom to excuse or hide, The liberall opposition of our spirits, If over-boldly we have born our selves, In the converse of breath (your gentlenessse Was guilty of it.) Farewell worthy Lord: An heavy heart bears not an humble tongue. Excuse me so, comming so short of thanks, For my great suit so easily obtain'd.

Kin. The extreame parts of time, extreame forms All causes to the purpose of his speed: And often at his very loose decides That, which long processe of time could not arbitrate. And though the mourning brow of progeny Forbid the smiling courtesie of Love: The holy suit which faine it would convince, Yet since Love's argument was first on foot, Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it From what it purposed: since to wail friends lost, Is not by much so wholesome profitable, As to rejoyce at friends but newly found.

Prin. I understand you not, my griefs are double.

Bir. Honest plain words, best pierce the eares of grief And by these badges understand the King, For your fair sakes have we neglected time, Play'd foul play with our oathes: your beauty Ladies Hath much deformed us, fashioning our humours Even to the opposed end of our intents. And what in us hath seem'd ridiculous: As Love is full of unbefitting strains, All wanton as a child, skipping and vain. Form'd by the eye, and therefore like the eye. Full of straying shapes, of habits, and of formes, Varying in subjects as the eye doth rowl, To every varied object in his glance: Which parry-coated, presence of loose Love Put on by us, if in your heavenly eycs, Have misbecom'd our oathes and gravities, Those heavenly eyes that look into these faults, Suggested us to make: therefore Ladies Our love being yours, the error that Love makes Is likewise yours. We to our selves prove false, By being once false, for ever to be true To these that make us both, fair Ladies you, And even that falshood in it self a sin, Thus purifies it self, and turns to grace.

Prin. We have receiv'd your Letters, full of Love: Your Favours, the Ambassadors of Love.

And in our maiden council rated them At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesie, As bumbast, and as lining to the time: But more devout then these are our respects Have we not been, and therefore met your loves In their own fashion, like a merriment.

Du. Our Letters Madam, shew'd much more then jest.

Long. So did our looks.

Ref. We did not coate them so.

King. Now at the latest minute of the hour, Grant us your loves.

Prin. A time me thinks too short, To make a world-with-out end bargain in; No, no, my Lord, your Grace is perjur'd much, Full of dear guiltinesse, and therefore this: If for my Love (as there is no such cause) You will doe ought, this shall you doe for me, Your oath I will not trust: but go with speed To some forlorn and naked Hermitage, Remote from all the pleasures of the world: There stay, untill the twelve Celestiall Signs Have brought about their annuall reckoning. If this austere insociable life, Change not your offer made in heat of blood: If frosts, and fasts, hard lodging, and thin weeds Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your Love, But that it bear this triall, and last love: Then at the expiration of the year, Come challenge me, challenge by these deserts, And by this Virgin palme, now kissing thine, I will be thine: and till that instant shut My wofull self up in a mourning house, Raining the teares of lamentation, For the remembrance of my Fathers death. If this thou doe deny, let our hands part, Neither intitled in the others heart.

King. If this, or more then this, I would deny; To flatter up these powers of mine with rest, The sudden hand of death close up mine eye: Hence ever then, my heart is in thy breast.

Bir. And what to me my Love? and what to me?

Ref. You must be purged too, your sins are rack'd, You are attaint with fault and perjury: Therefore if you my favour mean to get, A twelve-month shall you spend, and never rest; But seek the weary beds of people sick.

Dum. But what to me my love? but what to me?

Kat. A wife? a beard, fair health, and honesty; With three-fold love, I wish you all these three.

Dum. O shall I say, I thank you gentle wife?

Kat. Not so my Lord, a twelve-month and a day,

I'll mark no words that smooth-fac'd wooers say.

Come when the King doth to my Lady come :

Then if I have much love, I'll give you some.

Dum. I'll serve thee true and faithfully till then.

Kath. Yet swear not, lest ye be forsworn agen.

Long. What says Maria?

Mari. At the twelve-moneths end,

I'll change my black Gown, for a faithfull friend.

Son. I'll stay with patience : but the time is long.

Mari. The liker you, few taller are so young.

Bir. Studies my Lady? Mistressse, look on me,

Behold the window of my heart, mine eye :

What humble suit attends thy answer there,

Impose some service on me for my Love.

Rosa. Oft have I heard of you my Lord Birone,

Before I saw you : and the worlds large tongue

Proclaims you for a man repleat with mocks,

Full of comparisons, and wounding flouts,

Which you on all estates will execute,

That lie within the mercy of your wit,

To weed this Wormwood from your fruitfull brain,

And therewithall to win me, if you please,

Without the which I am not to be won ;

You shall this twelve-moneth term from day to day,

Visit the speechlesse sick, and still converse

With groaning wretches : and your task shall be,

With all the fierce endeavour of your wit,

To enforce this pained impotent to smile.

Bir. To move wild laughter in the throat of death?

It cannot be, it is impossible.

Mirth cannot move a soul in agony.

Rosa. Why that's the way to choke a gibing spirit,

Whose influence is begot of that loose grace,

Which shallow laughing hearers give to fools :

A jests prosperity, lies in the ear

Of him that hears it, never in the tongue

Of him that makes it : then, if sickly ears,

Deaf with the clamours of their own dear groans,

Will hear your idle scorns ; continue then,

And I will have you, and that fault withall.

But if they will not, throw away that spirit,

And I shall find you empty of that fault,

Right joyfull of your reformation.

Bir. A twelve-moneth? Well : befall what will befall,

I'll jest a twelve-moneth in an Hospitall.

Prin. I, sweet my Lord, and so I take my leave.

King. No Madam, we will bring you on your way.

Bir. Our wooing doth not end like an old Play :

Jack hath not Jill : these Ladies courtesie

Might well have made our sport a Comedy.

King. Come Sir, it wants a twelve-moneth and a day,

And then 'twill end.

Bir. That's too long for a Play.

Enter Braggart.

Brag. Sweet Majesty vouchsafe me.

Prin. Was not that Hector?

Dum. The worthy Knight of Troy.

Brag. I will kisse thy Royall finger, and take leave.

I am a Votary, I have vow'd to Jaquenetta to hold the Plough for her sweet love three yeares. But most esteem'd greatnesse, will you hear the Dialogue that the two Learned men have compiled, in praise of the Owle and the Cuckow? It should have followed in the end of our shew.

Kin. Call them forth quickly, we will doe soe.

Brag. Holla, Approach.

Enter all.

This side is Hiems, Winter.

This Ver, the Spring : the one maintained by the Owle,

The other by the Cuckow.

Ver, begin.

The Song.

When Daisies pied, and Violets blew,

And Cuckow-buds of yellow hue :

And Lady-Smocks all silver white,

Doe paint the Medowes with delight,

The Cuckow then on every Tree,

Mocks married men, for thus sings he,

Cuckow.

Cuckow, Cuckow : O word of fear,

Unpleasing to a married ear.

When Shepheards pipe on Oaten Straws,

And merry Larks are Ploughmens Clocks :

When Turtles tread, and Rooks and Daws,

And Maidens bleach their summer Smocks :

The Cuckow then on every Tree

Mocks married men ; for thus sings he,

Cuckow.

Cuckow, Cuckow : O word of fear,

Unpleasing to a married ear.

Winter.

When Isckles hang by the wall,

And Dick the Shepheard blows his nail ;

And Tom bears Logs into the Hall,

And Milk comes frozen home in pail :

When blood is nipt, and wayes be foul,

Then nightly sings the staring Owle,

Tu-whit to-who.

A merry note,

While greasie Jone doth keel the pot.

When all about the Wind doth blow,

And coughing drownes the Parsons Saw :

And Birds sit brooding in the Snow,

And Marrians Nose looks red and raw :

When roasted Crabs hiss in the bowl,

Then nightly sings the staring Owle,

Tu-whit to-who :

A merry note,

While greasie Jone doth keel the pot.

Brag. The words of Mercury,

Are harsh after the Songs of Apollo :

You that way ; we this way.

Exeunt omnes.

F I N I S.

A Midsummers nights D R E A M.

Actus Primus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolita, with others.

Theseus.

Now fair Hippolita, our nuptiall hour
Drawes on apace : four happy dayes bring in Another Moon : but oh, me thinks, how slow
This old Moon wanes ? She lingers my desires
Like to a Step-dame or a Dowager,
Long withering out a young mans revenue.

Hip. Four dayes will quickly steep themselves in nights,
Four nights will quickly dream away the time :
And then the Moon, like to a silver bow,
Now bent in heaven, shall behold the night
Of our solemnities.

The. Go Philostrate,
Stirre up the Athenian youth to merriments,
Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth,
Turn melancholly forth to Funerals :
The pale companion is not for our pomp.
Hippolita, I woo'd thee with my sword,
And won thy love, doing thee injuries :
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pomp, with triumph, and with revelling.

Enter Egeus and his daughter Hermia, Lysander, and Demetrius.

Ege. Happy be Theseus, our renowned Duke.

The. Thanks good Egeus : what's the newes with thee ?

Ege. Full of vexation, come I, with complaint Against my child, my daughter Hermia.

Stand forth Demetrius.

My Noble Lord,
This man hath my consent to marry her.

Stand forth Lysander.

And my gracious Duke,
This hath bewitch'd the bosome of my child :
Thou, thou Lysander, thou hast given her rimes,
And interchang'd love-tokens with my child :
Thou hast by Moon-light at her window sung,
With faining voyce, verses of faining love,
And stoln the impression of her fantasie,
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gawdes, conceits,

Knacks, trifles, Nofegayes, sweet meats (messengers
Of strong prevailment in unhardned youth)
With cunning hast thou filch'd my daughters heart,
Turn'd her obedience (which is due to me)
To stubborn harshnesse. And my gracious Duke,
Be it so she will not here before your Grace,
Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient priviledge of Athens,
As she is mine, I may dispose of her ;
Which shall be either to this Gentleman,
Or to her death, according to our Law,
Immediately provided in that case.

The. What say you Hermia ? be advis'd fair Maid.
To you your Father should be as a God ;
One that compos'd your beauties ; yea, and one
To whom you are but as a form in wax
By him imprinted : and within his power,
To leave the figure, or disfigure it :
Demetrius is a worthy Gentleman.

Her. So is Lysander.

The. In himself he is.
But in this kind, wanting your Fathers voyce
The other must be held the worthier.

Her. I would my Father look'd but with my eyes.

The. Rather your eyes must with his judgement look.

Her. I doe entreat your Grace to pardon me,
I know not by what power I am made bold.
Nor how it may concern my modesty
In such a presence here to plead my thoughts :
But I beseech your Grace, that I may know
The worst that may befall me in this case,
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

The. Either to die the death, or to abjure
For ever the society of men.
Therefore fair Hermia question your desires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood.
Whether (if you yield not to your Fathers choyce)
You can endure the livery of a Nunne,
For aye to be in shady Cloister mew'd,
To live a barren sister all your life,
Chanting faint hymnes to the cold fruitlesse Moon,
Thrice blessed they that master so their blood,
To undergo such maiden pilgrimage.
But earthlier happy is the Rose distill'd,
Then that which withering on the virgin thorn,
Growes, lives, and dies, in single blessednesse.

N

Her.

Her. So will I grow, so live, so die my Lord,
Ere I will yield my virgin Patent up
Unto his Lordship, to whose unwished yolk,
My soul consents not to give sovereignty.

The. Take time to pause, and by the next new Moon,
The sealing day betwixt my Love and me,
For everlasting bond of fellowship.
Upon that day either prepare to die,
For disobedience to your Fathers will,
Or else to wed Demetrius as he would,
Or on Dianes Altar to protest
For aye, austerity and single life.

Dem. Relent sweet Hermia, and Lysander, yield
Thy crazed title to my certain right.

Lys. You have her Fathers love, Demetrius :
Let me have Hermias : doe you marry him.

Egeus. Scornfull Lysander : true, he hath my Love ;
And what is mine, my love shall render him.
And she is mine, and all my right of her
I doe estate unto Demetrius.

Lys. I am my Lord, as well deriv'd as he,
As well possesse : my love is more then his :
My fortunes every way as fairly ranck'd
(If not with vantage) as Demetrius :
And (which is more then all these boasts can be)
I am below'd of beauteous Hermia.

Why should not I then prosecute my right ?
Demetrius, I'll avouch it to his head,
Made love to Nedars Daughter, Helena,
And won her soul : and she (sweet Lady) dotes,
Devoutly dotes, dotes in Idolatry,
Upon this spotted and inconstant man.

The. I must confesse, that I have heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought to have spoke thereof :
But being over-full of self-affairs,
My mind did lose it. But Demetrius come,
And come Egeus, you shall go with me,
I have some private schooling for you both.
For you fair Hermia, look you arme your self,
To fit your fancies to your Fathers will ;
Or else the Law of Athens yields you up
(Which by no means we may extenuate)
To death, or to a vow of single life.

Come my Hippolita, what cheer my Love ?

Demetrius and Egeus go along ;

I must employ you in some businesse

Against our nuptials, and conferre with you
Of something, nearly that concerns your selves.

Ege. With duty and desire we follow you. Exeunt.

Manet Lysander and Hermia.

Lys. How now my Love ? Why is your cheek so pale ?
How chance the Roses there doe fade so fast ?

Her. Belike for want of rain, which I could well
Beteem them, from the tempest of mine eyes.

Lys. Hermia, for ought that ever I could read,
Could ever hear by Tale or History,
The course of true love never did run smooth,
But either it was different in blood.

Her. O crosse ! too high to be enthrall'd to love.

Lys. Or else misgraffed, in respect of yeares.

Her. O spight ! too old to be engag'd to young.

Lys. Or else it stood upon the choise of merit.

Her. O hell ! to choose love by anothers eye.

Lys. Or if there were a simpaty in choise,
War, death, or sicknesse, did lay siege to it ;
Making it momentary, as a sound :

Swift as a shadow, short as any dream,
Brief as the lightning in the collied night,
That (in a spleen) unfolds both heaven and earth ;
And ere a man hath power to say, behold,
The jawes of darknesse to devoure it up :
So quick bright things come to confusion.

Her. If then true Lovers have been ever crost ;
It stands as an Edict in destiny :

Then let us teach our triall patience,
Because it is a customary crosse,
As due to love, as thoughts, and dreames, and sighs,
Wishes and teares, poor Fancies followers.

Lys. A good perswasion ; therefore hear me Hermia,
I have a Widow Aunt, a Dowager,
Of great revenue, and she hath no Child :
From Athens is her house remov'd seven leagues,
And she respects me as her onely Son :
There gentle Hermia, may I marry thee,
And to that place, the sharp Athenian Law
Cannot pursue us. If thou lov'st me, then
Steal forth thy Fathers house to morrow night :
And in the Wood, a league without the Town,
(Where I did meet thee once with Helena,
To doe observance for a morn of May)
There will I stay for thee.

Her. My good Lysander,
I swear to thee, by Cupid's strongest bow,
By his best arrow with the golden head,
By the simplicity of Venus Doves,
By that which knitteth souls, and prospers love,
And by that fire which burn'd the Carthage Queen,
When the false Trojan under sail was seen,
By all the voves that ever men have broke,
(In number more then ever women spoke)
In that same place thou hast appointed me,
To morrow truly will I meet with thee.

Lys. Keep promise Love : look here comes Helena.

Enter Helena.

Her. God speed fair Helena, whither away ?

Hel. Call you me fair ? that fair again unsay,
Demetrius loves you fair : O happy fair !
Your eyes are load-starrs, and your tongues sweet ayre
More tuneable then Larke to Shepherds ear,
When Wheat is green, when Haw-thorn Buds appear,
Sicknesse is catching : O were favour so,
Your words I'de catch, fair Hermia ere I go,
My ear should catch your voyce, my eye, your eye,
My tongue should catch your tongues sweet melody,
Were the World mine, Demetrius being bated,
The rest I'll give to be to you translated.
O teach me how you look, and with what art
You sway the motion of Demetrius heart.

Her. I frown upon him, yet he loves me still.

Hel. O that your frowns would teach my smiles such

Her. I give him curses, yet he gives me love. (skill.)

Hel. O that my prayers could such affection move.

Her. The more I hate, the more he follows me.

Hel. The more I love, the more he hateth me.

Her. His folly Helena is none of mine. (mine.)

Hel. None but your beauty, would that fault were

Her. Take comfort : he no more shall see my face,
Lysander and my self will flie this place.

Before the time I did Lysander see,
Seem'd Athens like a Paradise to me.

O then, what graces in my Love do dwell,
That he hath turn'd a heaven into Hell?

Lys. Helen, to you our minds we will unfold,
To morrow night when Phæbe doth behold.
Her silver visage, in the watry glasse,
Decking with liquid pearl, the bladed grasse
(A time that Lovers flights doth still conceal)
Through Athens gate, have we devis'd to steal.

Her. And in the wood, where often you and I,
Upon faint Primrose beds, were wont to lie,
Emptying our bosomes, of their counsell sweld;
There my Lysander, and my self shall meet,
And thence from Athens turn away our eyes
To seek new friends and strange companions,
Farewell sweet play-fellow, pray thou for us,
And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius.
Keep word Lysander, we must starve our sight,
From lovers food, till mortow deep midnight.

Exit Hermia.

Lys. I will my Hermia. Helena adieu,
As you on him, Demetrius dotes on you.

Exit Lysander.

Hel. How happy some, o're othersome can be?
Through Athens I am thought as fair as she.
But what of that? Demetrius thinks not so:
He will not know, what all, but he doth know,
And as he erres, doting on Hermiaes eyes;
So I, admiring of his qualities:
Things base and vilde, holding no quantity,
Love can transpose to forme and dignity,
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the minde,
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind.
Nor hath loves mind of any judgement taste:
Wings and no eyes, figure, unheedy haste.
And therefore is Love said to be a childe,
Because in choise he often is beguil'd,
As waggish boyes themselves in game forswear;
So the boy Love is perjur'd every where.
For ere Demetrius lookt on Hermiaes eyne,
He hail'd down oathes that he was onely mine.
And when this Hail some heat from Hermia felt,
So he dissolv'd, and showres of oathes did melt.
I will go tell him of fair Hermiaes flight:
Then to the Wood will he to morrow night,
Pursue her; and for his intelligence,
If I have thanks, it is a dear expence:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his sight thither, and back again.

Exit.

Enter Quince the Carpenter, Snug the Joyner, Bottom the Weaver, Flute the Bellows-mender, Snowt the Tinker, and Starveling the Taylor.

Qu. Is all our company here?

Bot. You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the scrip.

Qu. Here is the scrowle of every mans name, which is thought fit through all Athens, to play in our Enterlude before the Duke and the Dutchesse, on his wedding day at night.

Bot. First, good Peter Quince, say what the Play treats on: then read the names of the Actors: and so grow on to a point.

Qu. Marry our Play is the most lamentable Comedy, and most cruell death of Pyramus and Thisby.

Bot. A very good piece of work I assure you, and a merry. Now good Peter Quince, call forth your Actors by the scrowle. Masters spread your selves.

Quince. Answer as I call you. Nick Bottom the Weaver.

Bottom. Ready: name what part I am for, and proceed.

Quince. You Nick Bottom are set down for Pyramus.

Bot. What is Pyramus, a lover, or a tyrant?

Quince. A Lover that kills himself most gallantly for love.

Bot. That will aske some teares in the true perfonning of it: if I doc it, let the audience look to their eyes; I will move stormes; I will condole in some measure. To the rest yet, my chief humour is for a tyrant. I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to tear a Cat in, to make all split the raging Rocks, and shivering shocks shall break the locks of prison gates, and Phibbus carre shall shine from farre, and make and marre the foolish Fates. This was lofty. Now name the rest of the Players. This is Ercles vein, a tyrants vein: a lover is more condoling.

Quin. Francis Flute the Bellows-mender.

Flu. Here Peter Quince.

Qu. You must take Thisbie on you.

Flu. What is Thisbie, a wandring Knight?

Qu. It is the Lady that Pyramus must love.

Flu. Nay faith, let not me play a woman, I have a Beard coming.

Qu. That's all one, you shall play it in a Maske, and you may speak as small as you will.

Bot. And I may hide my face, let me play Thisbie too: I'll speak in a monstrous little voyce, Thisbe, Thisbe, ah Pyramus my lover dear, thy Thisbie dear, and Lady dear.

Quin. No no, you must play Pyramus; and Flute you Thisbie.

Bot. Well, proceed.

Qu. Robin Starveling, the Taylor.

Star. Here Peter Quince.

Quince. Robin Starveling, you must play Thisbies Mother?

Tom Snowt, the Tinker.

Snowt. Here Peter Quince.

Qu. You Pyramus father; my self, Thisbies father; Snug the Joyner, you the Lyons part; and I hope there is a Play fitted.

Snug. Have you the Lyons part written? pray you if it be, give it me, for I am slow of study.

Qu. You may doe it extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let me play the Lyon too, I will roar that, I will doe any mans heart good to hear me. I will roar, that I will make the Duke say, Let him roare again, let him roare again.

Qu. If you should doe it too terribly, you would fright the Dutchesse and the Ladies, that they would shrike, and that were enough to hang us all.

All. That would hang us every mothers son.

Bottom. I grant you friends, if that you should fright the Ladies out of their Wits, they would have no more discretion but to hang us: but I will aggravate my voyce so, that I will roare you as gently as any sucking Dove; I will roare and twere any Nightingale.

Quince. You can play no part but Pyramus, for Pyra- mus is a sweet-fac'd man, a proper man as one shall see in a summers day ; a most lovely Gentleman-like-man, therefore you must needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What Beard were I best to play it in ?

Quin. Why, what you will.

Bot. I will discharge it, in either your straw-colour beard, your orange tawny beard, your purple in grain beard, or your French-crown colour'd beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French-Crowns have no hair at all, and then you will play bare-fac'd. But masters here are your parts, and I am to entreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to morrow night : and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the Town, by Moon-light, there we will rehearse : for if we meet in the City, we shall be dog'd with company, and our devices known. In the mean time, I will draw a Bill of properties, such as our Play wants. I pray you fail me not.

Bot. We will meet, and there we may rehearse more obscenely and courageously. Take pain, be perfect, adieu.

Quin. At the Dukes oak we meet.

Bot. Enough, hold or cut bow-strings. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter a Fairie at one door, and Robin Good-fellow at another.

Rob. How now spirit, whether wander you ?

Fai. Over hill, over dale, through bush, through briar, Over park, over pale, through flood, through fire, I doe wander every where, swifter then the Moons sphere ; And I serve the Fairy Queen, to dew her orbs upon the The Cowslips tall, her pensioners be, (green. In their gold coats : spots you see, Those be Rubies, Fairy favors, In those freckles, live their favors, I must go seek some dew drops here, And hang a pearl in every cowslip ear. Farewell thou Lob of spirits, I'll be gon, Our Queen and all her Elves come here anon.

Rob. The King doth keep his Revels here to night, Take heed the Queen come not within his sight, For Oberon is passing fell and wrath, Because that she, as her attendant, hath A lovely boy stoln from an Indian King, She never had so sweet a changeling, And jealous Oberon would have the child Knight of this train, to trace the Forrests wild. But she (per-force) with-holds the loved boy, Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her joy. And now they never meet in grove, or green, By fountain clear, or spangled star-light sheen, But they doe square, that all their Elves for fear Creep into Acorn cups and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mistake your shape and making quite, Or else you are that shrew'd and knavish spirit Call'd Robin Good-fellow. Are you not he, That fright the maidens of the Villagere, Skim milk, and sometimes labour in the Quern, And bootlesse make the breathlesse hyswife chern, And sometime make the drink to bear no barme, Mislead night-wanderers, laughing at their harm, Those that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Puck, You doe their work, and they shall have good luck. Are not you he ?

Rob. Thou speak'st aright ; I am that merry wanderer of the night : I jest to Oberon, and make him smile, When I a fat and Bean-fed Horse beguile, Neighing in likeness like a silly foal, And sometimes lurk I in a Gossips bole, In very likeness of a roasted crab : And when she drinks, against her lips I bob, And on her withered dewlop poure the Ale. The wisest Aunt telling the saddest tale, Sometime for three-foot stool, mistaketh me, Then slip I from her bum, down topples she, And tailour cries, and falls into a coffe. And then the whole quire hold their hips, and loffe, And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and swear, A merrier hour was never wasted there. But room Fairy, here comes Oberon.

Fai. And here my Mistressse : Would that we were gone.

Enter King of Fairies at one door with his train, and the Queen at another with hers.

Ob. Ill met by Moon-light, Proud Titania.

Qu. What, jealous Oberon ? Fairy skip hence. I have forsworn his bed and company.

Ob. Tarry rash Wanton, am not I thy Lord ?

Qu. Then I must be thy Lady : but I know When thou wast stoln away from Fairy Land, And in the shape of Corin, fate all day, Playing on pipes of Corn, and versing love To amorous Phillida. Why art thou here Come from the farthest steep of India ? But that forsooth the bouncing Amazon Your buskin'd Mistressse, and your Warriour love, To Theseus must be Wedded, and you come, To give their bed joy and prosperity.

Ob. How canst thou thus for shame, Titania, Glance at my credit, with Hippolita ? Knowing I know thy love to Theseus ? Didst thou not lead him through the glimmering night From Peregina, whom he ravished ? And make him with fair Eagles break his faith With Ariadne, and Antiopa ?

Qu. These are the forgeries of jealousy, And never since the middle Summers spring Met we on hill, in dale, Forrest, or mead, By paved fountain, or by rushe brook, Or in the beached margent of the sea, To dance our ringlets to the whistling wind, But with thy brawles thou hast disturb'd our sport. Therefore the winds, piping to us in vain, As in revenge, have suck'd up from the sea Contagious fogges : Which falling in the Land, Hath every petty River made so proud, That they have over-born their Continents. The Oxe hath therefore stretch'd his yoke in vain, The Ploughman lost his sweat, and the green Corn Hath rotted, ere his youth attain'd a beard : The fold stands empty in the drowned field, And Crows are fatted with the murrion flock,

The nine mens morris is fild up with mud,
And the queint Mazes in the wanton green,
For lack of tread are undistinguishable.
The humane mortals want their winter here,
No night is now with hymn or caroll blest ;
Therefore the Moon (the governess of fouds)
Pale in her anger, washes all the air ;
That Rheumatick diseases do abound.
And thorough this distemperature, we see,
The seasons alter ; hoary-headed frosts
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson Rose,
And on old Hyems chin and Icie crown,
An odorous Chaplet of sweet Summer buds
Is as in mockry set. The spring, the Summer,
The childing Autumn, angry Winter change
Their wonted Liveries, and the amazed world,
By their increase, now knows not which is which :
And this same progeny of evils comes
From our debate, from our dissension,
We are their parents and originall.

Ob. Do you amend it then, it lies in you,
Why should Titania cros her Oberon ?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my Henchman.

Qu. Set your heart at rest,
The Fairy land buyes not the child of me.
His mother was a Votress of my Order,
And in the spiced Indian air, by night
Full often she hath gossip by my side,
And sat with me on Neptunes yellow sands,
Marking th'embarked traders of the fload,
When we laught to see the sails conceive,
And grow big bellied with the wanton winde :
Which she with pretty and with swimming gate,
Following (her womb then rich with my young squire)
Would imitate, and sail upon the Land,
To fetch me trifles and return again,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandize.
But she being mortall of that boy did dye,
And for her sake I do rear up her boy,
And for her sake I will not part with him.

Ob. How long within this wood intend you stay ?

Qu. Perchance till after Thesens wedding day.
If you will patiently dance in our Round,
And see our Moon-light revels, go with us ;
If not, shun me and I will spare your haunts.

Ob. Give me that boy, and I will go with thee.

Qu. Not for thy Fairy Kingdome. Fairies away :
We shall chide down right, if I longer stay. Exeunt.

Ob. Well, go thy way : thou shalt not from this grove,
Till I torment thee for this injury.
My gentle Puck come hither ; thou remembrest
Since I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a Mear-maid on a Dolphins back,
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude sea grew civill at her song,
And certain stars shot madly from their Shpears,
To hear the Sea-maids musick.

Pu. I remember.

Ob. That very time I say (but thou could'st not).
Flying between the cold Moon and the earth,
Cupid all arm'd ; a certain aim he took
At a fair Vestall, throned by the West,
And loos'd his love-shaft smartly from his bow,
As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts,
But I might see young Cupids fiery shaft

Quench in the chaff beams of the warry Moon
And the imperiall Votress passed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free.
Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell.
It fell upon a little western flower :
Before, milk-white : now purple with loves wound,
And maidens call it, Love in idleness.
Fetch me that flower ; the herb I shew'd thee once,
The juyce of it, on sleeping eye-lids laid,
Will mak a man or woman madly doat
Upon the next live creature that it sees.
Fetch me this herb, and be thou here again,
Ere the Leviathan can swim a league.

Pa. I'll put a girdle about the earth in forty minutes.
Exit.

Ob. Having once this juyce,
I'll watch Titania, when she is a sleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes :
The next thing when she waking looks upon,
(Be it on Lyon, bear, or Wolfe, or Bull,
On meddling Monkey, or on busie Ape)
She shall pursue it, with the foul of love.
And ere I take this charm off from her sight,
(As I can take it with another herb)
I'll make her render up her Page to me.
But who comes here ? I am invisible,
And I will over-hear their conference.

Enter Demetrius, Helena following him.

Dem. I love thee not, therefore pursue me not,
Where is Lisander, and fair Hermia ?
The one I'll stay, the other stayeth me.
Thou told'st me they were stoln into this wood ;
And here am I, and wood within this wood,
Because I cannot meet my Hermia.
Hence get the gone, and follow me no more.

Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted Adamant,
But yet you draw not Iron, for my heart
Is true as steel. Leave your power to draw,
And I shall have no power to follow you.

Dem. Do I entice you ? do I speak you fair ?
Or rather do I not in plainest truth,
Tell you I do not, nor I cannot love you ?

Hel. And even for that do I love thee the more ;
I am your spaniell, and Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawn on you.
Use me but as your spaniell ; spurn me, strike me,
Neglect me, lose me ; onely give me leave
(Unworthy as I am) to follow you.
What worser place can I beg in your love,
(And yet a place of high respect with me)
Then to be used as you do your dog ?

Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit,
For I am sick when I do look on thee.

Hel. And I am sick when I look not on you.

Dem. You do impeach your modesty too much,
To leave the City, and commit your self
Into the hands of one that loves you not,
To trust the opportunity of night,
And the ill counsell of a desert place,
With the rich worth of your virginity.

Hel. Your virtue is my priviledge : for that
It is not night when I do see your face.
Therefore I think I am not in the night,
Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company,

For you in my respect are all the world.
Then how can it be said I am alone,
When all the world is here to look on me?

Dem. I'll run from thee, and hide me in the brakes,
And leave thee to the mercy of wilde beasts.

Hel. The wildest hath not such a heart as you;
Run when you will, the story shall be chang'd:
Apoll flies, and Daphne holds the chase;
The Dove pursues the Griffin, the milde Hinde
Makes speed to catch the Tyger. Bootless speed,
When cowardise pursues, and valour flies.

Dem. I will not stay thy questions, let me go;
Or if thou follow me, do not believe,
But I shall do thee mischief in the wood.

Hel. I, in the Temple, in the Town, and Field.
You do me mischief. Fye Demetrius,
Your wrongs do set a scandall on my sex:
We cannot fight for love, as men may do;
We should be woo'd, and were not made to wooe.
I follow thee, and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon the hand I love so well.

Exit.

Ob. Fare thee well Nymph, ere he do leave this grove.
Thou shalt fly him, and he shall seek thy love.
Hast thou the flower there? Welcome wanderer.

Enter Puck.

Pu. I, there it is.

Ob. I pray thee give it me.

I know a bank where the wilde time blows,
Where the Oxlips and the nodding Violet grows,
Quite over-cannop'd with luscious woodbine,
With sweet musk roses, and with Eglantine,
There sleeps Titania, sometime of the night,
Lul'd in these flowers, with dances and delight:
And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin,
Weed wide enough to wrap a Fairy in.
And with the juyce of this I'll streak her eyes,
And make her full of hatefull fantasies.
Take thou some of it, and seek through this grove;
A sweet Athenian Lady is in love
With a disdainfull youth: annoint his eyes,
But do it when the next thing he espies,
May be the Lady. Thou shalt know the man,
By the Athenian garments he hath on.
Effect it with some care, that he may prove
More fond on her, then she upon her love;
And look thou meet me, ere the first Cock crow.

Pu. Fear not my Lord, your servant shall do so. Exit.

Enter Queen of Fairies, with her train.

Qu. Come, now a Roundell, and a Fairy song:
Then for the third part of a minute hence,
Some to kill Kankers in the musk rose buds,
Some war with Reremise, for their leathern wings,
To make my small Elves coats, and some keep back
The clamorous Owle that nightly hoots and wonders
At our queint spirits: Sing me now asleep,
Then to your offices, and let me rest.

Fairies Sing.

*You spotted Snakes with double tongue,
Thorny Hedgehoggs be not seen,
Newts and blind wormes do no wrong,
Come not near our Fairy Queen.
Philomele with melodie,*

*Sing in your sweet Lullaby,
Lulla, lulla, lullaby, lulla lulla, lullaby
Never harm, nor spell, nor charm.
Come our lovely Lady nye,
So good night with Lullaby.*

2. Fairy.

*Weaving Spiders come not here,
Hence you long leg'd Spinners, hence:
Beetles black approach not near:
Worme nor Snayle do no offence.

1. Fairy.

*Hence away, now all is well:
One aloofe, stand Centinell.*

Enter Oberon.

Ob. What thou see'st when thou dost wake,
Do it for thy true love take:
Love and languish for his sake.
Be it Ounce, or Cat, or Bear,
Pard, or Boar, with bristled hair,
In thy eye that shall appear,
When thou wak'st, it is thy dear,
Wake when some vile thing is near.

Enter Lysander and Hermia.

Lys. Fair love, you faint with wandering in the woods;
And to speak troth, I have forgot our way:
We'll rest us Hermia, if you think it good,
And tarry for the comfort of the day.

Her. Be it so Lysander: finde you out a bed,
For I upon this bank will rest my head.

Lys. One turfe shall serve as pillow for us both,
One heart, one bed, two bosomes, and one troth.

Her. Nay good Lysander, for my sake, my dear,
Lie further off yet, do not lie so near.

Lys. O take the fence sweet, of my innocence,
Love takes the meaning, in loves conference,
I mean that my heart unto yours is knit,
So that but one heart can you make of it.
Two bosomes interchanged with an oath,
So then two bosomes, and a single troth.
Then by your side, no bed-room me deny,
For lying so, Hermia, I do not lye.

Her. Lysander riddles very prettily:
Now much beshrew my manners, and my pride,
If Hermia meant to say, Lysander lied.
But gentle friend, for love and curtesie
Lie further off in humane modesty,
Such separation, as may well be said,
Becomes a vertuous batchelor, and a maid,
So far be distant, and good night sweet friend:
Thy love ne're alter till thy sweet life end.

Lys. Amen, amen, to that fair prayer, say I,
And then end life, when I end loyalty:
Here is my bed, sleep give thee all his rest.

Her. With half that wish, the wishers eyes be prest.

Enter Puck.

They sleep.

Pu. Through the Forrest have I gone,
But Athenian finde I none,
On whose eyes I might approve
This flowers force in stirring love.
Night and silence: who is here?
Weeds of Athens he doth wear:
This is he (my master said)
Despised the Athenian maid:
And here the maiden sleeping found,

On

On the dank and durty ground.
Pretty soul, she durst not lie
Near this lack-love, this kill-curtessie.
Churle upon the eyes I throw
All the power this charm doth owe:
When thou wak'st, let love forbid
Sleep his seat on thy eye-lid.
So awake when I am gone:
For I must now to Oberen.

Exit.

Enter Demetrius and Helena running.

Hel. Say, though thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.

De. I charge thee hence, and do not haunt me thus.

Hel. O wilt thou darkling leave me? do not so.

De. Stay on thy perill, I alone will go.

Exit Demetrius.

Hel. O I am out of breath, in this fond chace,
The more my prayer, the lesser is my grace,
Happy is Hermia, where'soe'er she lies:
For she hath blessed and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with salt tears.
If so, my eyes are ofner wash't then hers.

No, no, I am as ugly as a Bear.

For beasts that meet me, runne away for fear,

Therefore no marvaile, though Demetrius

Do, as a monster, fly my presence thus.

What wicked and dissembling glasse of mine,

Made me compare with Hermias sphery eyne?

But who is here? Lysander on the ground:

Dead or asleep? I see no bloud, no wound,

Lysander, if you live, good sir, awake.

Lys. And run through fire I will for thy sweet sake.

Transparent Helena, nature here shews art,

That through thy bosome makes me see thy heart,

Where Demetrius? oh how fit a word

Is that vile name, to perish on my sword?

Hel. Do not say so Lysander, say not so:

What though he love your Hermia? Lord, what though?

Yet Hermia still loves you, then be content,

Lys. Content with Hermia? No, I do repent

The tedious minutes I with her have spent.

Not Hermia, but Helena now I love:

Who will not change a Raven for a Dove?

The will of man is by his reason sway'd:

And reason sayes you are the worthier Maid.

Things growing are not ripe untill their season:

So I being young, till now ripe not to reason,

And touching now the point of humane skill,

Reason becomes the Marshall to my will,

And leads me to your eyes, where I orelook

Loves stories, written in Loves richest book.

Hel. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?

When at your hands did I deserve this scorn?

Ist not enough, ist not enough, young man,

That I did never, no nor never can,

Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius eye,

But you must flout my insufficiency?

Good troth you do me wrong (good sooth you do)

In such disdainfull manner, me to wooe.

But fare you well: perforce I must confesse,

I thought you Lord of more true gentleness.

Oh, that a Lady of one man refus'd,

Should of another therefore be abus'd.

Lys. She sees not Hermia sleep thou there,

And never maist thou come Lysander near:

Exit.

For as a surfeit of the sweetest things
The deepest loathing to a stomach brings:
Or as the heresies that men do leave,
Are hated most of those that did deceive:
So thou, my surfeit, and my heresie,
Of all be hated: but the most of me,
And all my powers addresse your love and might,
To honour Helena, and to be her Knight.

Exit.

Her. Help me Lysander, help me, do thy best.

To pluck this crawling serpent from my brest.

Aye me, for pittie, what a dream was here?

Lysander look, how I do quake with fear:

Me-thought a serpent eat my heart away,

And yet sate smiling at his cruell prey.

Lysander, what remov'd? Lysander, Lord,

What out of hearing, gone? No sound, no word?

Alack where are you? speak and if you hear:

Speak of all loves: I swoound almost with fear.

No, then I well perceive you are not nye,

Either death or you Ile find immediately.

Exit.

Actus Tertius.

Enter the Clownes.

Bot. Are we all met?

Quin. Par, par, and here's a marvailous convenient place for our rehearfall. This green plot shall be our stage, this hauthorn brake our tyring house, and we will do it in action, as we will do it before the Duke.

Bot. Peter Quince?

Peter. What saist thou, bully Bottom;

Bot. There are things in this Comedy of Piramus and Thisby, that will never please. First, Piramus must draw a sword to kill himself: which the Ladies cannot abide.
How answer you that?

Snout. Berlaken, a parlous fear.

Star. I believe we must leave the killing out, when all is done.

Bot. Not a whit, I have a device to make all well.
Write me a Prologue, and let the Prologue seem to say, we will do no harm with our swords, and that Piramus is not kill'd indeed: and for the more better assurance, tell them, that I Piramus am not Piramus, but Bottom
the Weaver; this will put them out of fear.

Quin. Well, we will have such a Prologue, and it shall be written in eight and six.

Bot. No, make it two more, let it be written in eight and eight.

Snout. Will not the Ladies be asfear'd of the Lion?

Star. I fear it, I promise you.

Bot. Maisters, you ought to consider with your selves, to bring in (God shield us) a Lion among Ladies, is a most dreadful thing. For there is not a more fearful wild fowle then your Lyon living: and we ought to look to it.

Snout. Therefore another Prologue must tell he is not a Lion.

Bot. Nay, you must name his name, and half his face must be seen through the Lions neck, and he himself must speak through. saying thus, or to the same defect:
Ladies, or fair Ladies, I would wish you, or I would request

request you, or I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a Lion, it were pity of my life. No, I am no such thing, I am a man as other men are; and there indeed let him name his name, and tell him plainly he is Snug the Joiner.

Quince. Well, it shall be so; but there is two hard things, that is, to bring the Moon-light into a chamber: for you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by Moon-light.

Snug. Doth the Moon-shine that night we play our Play?

Bot. A Calender, a Calender, look in the Alinanack, find out Moon-shine, find out Moon-shine.

Enter Puck.

Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bot. Why then may you leave a casement of the great chamber window (where we play) open, and the Moon may shine in at the casement.

Qu. I, or else one must come in with a bush of thorns and a lanthorn, and say he comes to disfigure, or to present the person of Moon-shine. Then there is another thing, we must have a wall in the great Chamber; for Pyramus and Thisby (sayes the story) did talk through the chink of a wall.

Snug. You can never bring in a wall. What say you Bottom?

Bot. Some man or other must present wall, and let him have some Plaster; or some Lome, or some rough-cast about him, to signifie wall; or let him hold his fingers thus; and through that cranny, shall Pyramus, and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit down every mothers son, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus, you begin; when you have spoken your speech, enter into that Brake, and so every one according to his cue.

Enter Robin.

Rob. What hempen home-spuns have we swaggering here,

So near the Cradle of the Fairy Queen?
What, a Play toward? Ile be an auditor:
An Actor too perhaps, if I see cause.

Qu. Speak Pyramus: Thisby stand forth.

Pir. Thisby, the flowers of odious favors sweet.

Quin. Odours, odours.

Pir. Odours favors sweet,

So hath thy breath, my dearest Thisby dear.

But hark, a voice: stay thou but here a while,

And by and by I will to thee appear. Exit Pir.

Puck. A stranger Pyramus, then ere plaid here.

Thisb. Must I speak now?

Pet. I marry must you. For you must understand he goes but to see a noise that he heard, and is to come again.

This. Most radiant Pyramus, most Lilly white of hue,
Of colour like the red rose on triumphant bryer,
Most brisky Juvenall, and eke most lovely Jew,
As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire,
Ile meet thee Pyramus, at Ninnies tomb.

Pet. Ninus tomb, man: why, you must not speak that yet; that you answer to Pyramus: you speak all your part at once, cues and all. Pyramus enter, your cue is past; it is never tire.

Thisb. O, as true as truest horse, that yet would never tire;

Pir. If I were fair, Thisby I were onely thine.

Pet. O monstrous. O strange. We are hanted; pray masters, flie masters, help.

The Clowns all Exeunt.

Puck. Ile follow you, Ile lead you about a Round,
Through bogge, through bush, through brake, through Sometime a horse Ile be, sometimes a hound: (bryer,
A hogge, a headlesse Bear, sometime a fire,
And neigh, and bark, and grunt, and rore, and burne,
Like horse, hound, hog, Bear, fire, at every turn. Exit.

Enter Piramus with the Asses head.

Bot. Why do they run away? This is a knavery of them to make me afear'd. Enter Snout.

Sn. O Bottom, thou art chang'd; What do I see on thee?

Bot. What do you see? You see an Asses-head of your own, do you?

Enter Peter Quince.

Pet. Blesse thee Bottom, blesse thee; thou art translated. Exit.

Bot. I see their knavery: this is to make an asses of me, to fright me if they could; but I will not stirre from this place, do what they can. I will walk up and down here, and will sing that they shall here I am not afraid.
The Woodcock, so black of hew.

With Orenge-tawny bill.

The Throistle, with his note so true,

The Wren and little quill.

Tita. What Angell wakes me from my flowry bed?

Bot. The Finch, the Sparrow, and the Lark,
The plainsong Cuckow gray;

Whose note full many a man doth mark,
And dares not answer, nay.

For indeed, who would set his wit to so foolish a bird?
Who would give a bird the lye, though he cry Cuckow, never so?

Tita. I pray thee gentle mortall, sing again,

Mine ear is much enamored of thy note;

On the first view to say, to swear I love thee.

So is mine eye enthralled to thy shape.

And thy fair vertues force (perforce) doth move me.

Bot. Me-thinks mistress, you should have little reason for that: and yet to say the truth, reason and love keep little company together, now-a-days. The more the pity, that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleek upon occasion.

Tita. Thou art as wise as thou art beautiful.

Bot. Not so neither: but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to serve mine own turn.

Tita. Out of this wood, do not desire to go,
Thou shalt remain here, whether thou wilt or no.
I am a spirit of no common rate:

The Summer still doth tend upon my state,
And I do love thee; therefore goe with me,

Ile give thee Fairies to attend on thee;

And they shall fetch thee Jewels from the deep,

And sing, while thou on pressed flowers doth sleep:

And I will purge thy mortal grossnesse so,

That thou shalt like an airy spirit go.

Enter Pease-blossome, Cobweb, Moth, Mustard-seed, and four Fairies.

Fair. Ready; and I, and I, and I, Where shall we go?

Tit. Be-

Tita. Be kind and courteous to this Gentleman.
Hop in his walks, and gambole in his eyes,
Feed him with Apricocks, and Dewberries,
With purple Grapes, green Figs, and Mulberries,
The honie-bags steal from the humble Bees,
And for night-tapers crop their waxen thighs.
And light them at the fiery-Glow-wormes eyes,
To have my love to bed, and to arise:
And pluck the wings from painted Butterflies,
To fan the Moon-beames from his sleeping eyes.
Nod to him Elves, and doe him courtesies.

1. Fai. Hail mortall, hail.

2. Fai. Hail.

3. Fai. Hail.

Bot. I cry your worships mercy heartily, I beseech your worships name.

Cob. Cobweb.

Bot. I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good Master Cobweb: if I cut my finger, I shall make bold with you.

Your name honest Gentleman?

Peaf. Pease-blossoms.

Bot. I pray you commend me to Mistresse Squash, your Mother, and to Master Peascod your Father. Good Master Pease-blossom, I shall desire of you more acquaintance too. Your name I beseech you sir?

Mus. Mustard-seed.

Bot. Good Master Mustard-seed; I know your patience well: that same cowardly gyant-like Oxe-beef hath devoured many a Gentleman of your house. I promise you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I desire your more acquaintance, good Master Mustard-seed.

Tita. Come wait upon him, lead him to my bower.
The Moon me thinks, looks with a watry eye,
And when she weeps, weep every little flower,
Lamenting some enforced chastity.
Tye up my Lovers tongue, bring him silently. Exit.

Enter King of Fairies, solus.

Ob. I wonder if Titania be awak't:
Then what it was that next came in her eye,
Which she must dote on, in extremity.

Enter Puck.

Here comes my messenger: how now mad spirit,
What night-rule now about this haunted Grove?

Puck. My Mistresse with a monster is in love,
Near to her clofe and consecrated bower,
While she was in her dull and sleeping houre,
A crew of patches, rude Mechanicals,
That work for bread upon Athenian stalls,
Were met together to rehearse a Play,
Intended for great Theseus nuptiall day:
The shallowest thick-skin of that barren sort,
Who Pyramus presented, in their sport,
Forsook his Scene, and entred in a brake,
When I did him at this advantage take,
An Asses nole I fixed on his head.
Anon his Thissie must be answered,
And forth my Mimick comes: when they him spie,
As wild-Geese, that the creeping Fowler eye,
Or ruffed-pated choughs, many in sort (Rising and cawing at the Guns report)
Sever themselves, and madly sweep the skye:

So at his sight, away his fellows flie,
And at our stamp, here o're and o're one falls;
He murther cries, and help from Athens calls.
Their sense thus weak, lost with their fears thus strong,
Made senselesse things begin to doe them wrong.
For briars and thorns at their apparell snatch,
Some sleeves, some hats, from yelders all things catch,
I led them on in this distracted fear,
And left sweet Pyramus translated there:
When in that moment (so it came to passe)
Titania wak't, and straight way lov'd an Ass.

Ob. This falls out better then I could devise:
But hast thou yet latched the Athenians eyes,
With the love juyce as I did bid thee doe?

Rob. I took him sleeping (that is finisht too)
And the Athenian Woman by his side,
That when he wak't, of force she must be ey'd.

Enter Demetrius and Hermia.

Ob. Stand close, this is the same Athenian.

Rob. This is the woman, but not this the man.

Dem. O why rebuke you him that loves you so?
Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.

Her. Now I but chide, but I should use thee worse.
For thou (I fear) hast given me cause to curse,
If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep,
Being o're shoes in blood, plunge in the deep, and kill me too:

The Sun was not so true unto the day,
As he to me. Would he have stollen away,
From sleeping Hermia? I'll believe as soon
This whole earth may be bord, and that the Moon
May through the Center creep, and so displease
Her brothers noon-tide, with th' Antipodes.
It cannot be but thou hast murthered him,
So should a murtherer look, so dead, so grim.

Dem. So should the murderer look, and so should I,
Pierst through the heart with your steem cruelty:
Yet you the murderer looks as bright as clear,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering spheare.

Her. What's this to my Lysander? where is he?
Ah good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me?

Dem. I'de rather give his carkasse to my hounds.

Her. Out dog, out cur, thou driv'st me past the bounds
Of maidens patience. Hast thou slain him then?
Henceforth be never numbred among men.

Oh, once tell true, and even for my sake,
Durst thou a lookt upon him, being awake?
And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brave tutch:
Could not a worm, an Adder doe so much?

An Adder did it: for with doubler tongue
Then thine (thou serpent) never Adder stung,

Dem. You spend your passion on a mispris'd mood,
I am not guilty of Lysanders blood:
Nor is he dead for ought that I can tell.

Her. I pray thee tell me then that he is well.

Dem. And if I could, what should I get therefore?

Her. A priviledge, never to see me more;
And from thy hated presence part I: see me no more
Whether he be dead or no. Exit.

Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vein,
Here therefore for a while I will remain.
So sorrows heaviness doth heavier grow:
For debt that bankrout slip doth sorrow owe,
Which now in some slight measure it will pay,

If for his tender here I make some stay.

Lie down.

Ob. What hast thou done? Thou hast mistaken quite
And laid the love juyce on some true-loves fight:
Of thy misprision, must perforce ensue
Some true love turn'd, and not a false turn'd true.

Rob. Then fate, o're-rules, that one man holding troth,
A million fall, confounding oath on oath.

Ob. About the wood, go swifter then the wind,
And Helena of Athens look thou find.
All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer,
With sighs of love, that costs the fresh blood dear.
By some illusion see thou bring her here,
I'll charm his eyes against she doth appear,

Rob. I go, I go, look how I go,
Swifter then arrow from the Tartars bow.

Exit.

Ob. Flower of this purple die,
Hit with Cupids archery,
Sink in apple of his eye,
When his love he doth espy,
Let her shine as gloriously
As the Venus of the skie.
When thou wak'st if she be by Beg of her for remedy.

Enter Puck,

Puck. Captain of our Fairy band,
Helena is here at hand,
And the youth, mistook by me,
Pleading for a Lovers fee.
Shall we rheir fond Pageant see?
Lord, what fools these mortalls be!

Ob. Stand aside: the noyse they make,
Will cause Demetrius to awake.

Puck. Then will two at once wooe one.
That must needs be sport alone:
And those things doe best please me,
That befall preposterously.

Enter Lysander and Helena.

Lys. Why should you think that I should wooe in Scorn and derision never comes in teares: (scorn?)
Look when I vow I weep, and vowes so born,
In their nativity all truth appears.
How can these things in me seem scorn to you?
Bearing the badge of faith to prove them true.

Hel. You doe advance your cunning more and more,
When truth kills truth, O devillish holy fray!
These vowes are Hermiaes. Will you give her o're?
Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh.
Your vowes to her and me, (put in two scales)
Will even weigh, and both as light as tales.

Lys. I had no judgement, when to her I swore.

Hel. Nor none in my mind, now you give her o're.

Lys. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not you. Ama.

Dem. O Helen, goddess, nymph, perfect, divine,
To what? my love, shall I compare thine eyne,
Christall is muddy, O how ripe in show,
Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow!
That pure congealed white, high Taurus snow,
Fann'd with the Eastern wind, turns to a Crow,
When thou hold'st up thy hand. O let me kisse
This Princeesse of pure white, this seal of blisse.

Hel. O spight! O hell! I see you are all bent
To set against me, for your merriment:
If you were civil, and knew courtesie,
You would not doe me thus much injury.

Can you not hate me, as I know you doe,
But you must joyn in souls to mock me too?

If you are men, as men you are in show,
You would not use a gentle Lady so?
To vow, and swear, and superpraise my parts,
When I am sure you hate me with your hearts.
You both are Rivals, and love Hermia,
And now both Rivals, to mock Helena.

A trim exploit, a manly enterprize,
To conjure teares up in a poor maids eyes,
With your derision; none of noble sort,
Would so offend a Virgin, and extort
A poor souls patience, all to make you sport.

Lys. You are unkind Demetrius; be not so,
For you love Hermia; this you know I know;
And here with all good will, with all my heart,
In Hermiaes love I yield you up my part;
And yours of Helena, to me bequeath,
Whom I doe love, and will doe to my death.

Hel. Never did mockers waste more idle breath.

Dem. Lysander, keep thy Hermia, I will none:
If e're I lov'd her, all that love is gone.
My heart to her, but as guest-wife sojourn'd,
And now to Helen it is home return'd,
There to remain.

Lys. It is not so.

Dem. Disparage not the faith thou dost not know,
Left to thy perill thou abide it dear.
Look where thy Love comes, yonder is thy dear.

Enter Hermia.

Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes
The ear more quick of apprehension makes,
Wherein it doth impair the seeing sense,
It pays the hearing double recompence.
Thou art not by mine eye, Lysander found,
Mine ear (I thank it) brooght me to that sound,
But why unkindly didst thou leave me so? (to go?)

Lysan. Why should he stay whom Love doth presse?

Her. What love could presse Lysander from my side?

Lys. Lysanders love (that would not let him bide)
Fair Helena, who more engilds the night,
Then all yon fiery oes, and eyes of light.
Why seek'st thou me? Could not this make thee know,
The hate I bare thee, made me leave thee so?

Her. You speak not as you think; it cannot be.

Hel. Loe, she is one of this confederacy,
Now I perceive they have conjoyn'd all three,
To fashion this false sport in spite of me.
Injurious Hermia, most ungratefull maid,
Have you conspir'd, have you with these contriv'd
To bait me, with this foul derision?

Is all the counsell that we two have shar'd,
The sisters vowes, the houres that we have spent,
When we have chid the hasty footed time,
For parting us; O, and is all forgot?

All school-dayes friendship, child-hoods innocence?
We, Hermia, like two Artificiall gods,
Have with our needles, created both one flower,
Both on one sampler, sitting on one cushion;
Both warbling of one song, both in one key;
As if our hands, our sides, voyces, and minds
Had been incorporate. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted,
But a union in partition,

Two lovely berries molded on one stem,
So with two seeming bodies, but one heart;
Two of the first life, coats in Heraldry,
Due but to one, and crowned with one crest.
And will you rent our ancient love asunder,
To joyn with men in scorning your poor friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly.
Our sex as well as I may chide you for it,
Though I alone doe feel the injury.

Her. I am amazed at your passionate words,
I scorn you not; it seems that you scorn me.

Hel. Have you not set Lysander, as in scorn
To follow me, and praise my eyes and face?
And made your other love, Demetrius
(Who even but now did spurn me with his foot)
To call me goddesse, nymph, divine, and rare,
Precious, celestiall? Wherefore speaks he this
To her he hates? And wherefore doth Lysander
Deny your love (so rich within his soul)
And tender me (forsooth) affection,
But by your setting on, by your consent?
What though I be not so in grace as you,
So hung upon with love, so fortunate?
(But miserable most, to love unlov'd)
This you should pity rather then despise.

Her. I understand not what you mean by this.

Hel. I, doe, persevere, counterfeit sad looks,
Make mouthes upon me when I turn my back,
Wink each at other, hold the sweet jest up:
This sport well carried, shall be chronicled.
If you have any pitty, grace, or manners,
You would not make me such an argument:
But fare ye well, 'tis partly mine own fault,
Which death or absence soon shall remedy.

Lys. Stay gentle Helena, hear my excuse,
My love, my soul, fair Helena.

Hel. O excellent!

Her. Sweet, doe not scorn her so.

Dem. If she cannot entreat, I can compell.

Lys. Thou canst compell no more then she entreat.
Thy threats have no more strength then her weak praise.
Helena, I love thee, by my life I doe;
I swear by that which I will lose for thee,
To prove him false that sayes I love thee not.

Dem. I say, I love thee more then he can doe.

Lys. If thou say so, withdraw and prove it too.

Dem. Quick, come.

Her. Lysander, whereto tends all this?

Lys. Away, you Ethiops.

Dem. No, no, Sir, seem to break loose;
Take on as you would follow,
But yet come not: you are a tame man, go.
Lys. Hang off thou cat, thou but; vile thing set loose,
Or I will shake thee from me like a serpent.

Her. Why are you grown so rude?

What change is this, sweet Love?

Lys. Thy love? out tawny Tartar, out;
Out loathed medicine; O hated poison hence.

Her. Doe you not jest?

Hel. Yes sooth; and so doe you.

Lys. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.

Dem. I would I had your bond: for I perceive
A weak bond holds you; I'll not trust your word.

Lys. What, should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead?
Although I hate her, I'll not harm her so.

Her. What, can you doe me greater harm then hate?

Hate me, wherefore? O me, what newes my Love?

Am not I Hermia? are not you Lysander?

I am as fair now, as I was ere while.

Since night you lov'd me; yet since night you left me.

Why then you left me (O the Gods forbid)

In earnest, shall I say?

Lys. I, by my life;

And never did desire to see thee more.

Therefore be out of hope, of question, of doubt,

Be certain, nothing truer: 'tis no jest,

That I doe hate thee, and love Helena.

Her. O me, you jugler, you canker-blossome,
You thief of love; What have you come by night,
And stoln my loves heart from him?

Hel. Fine ifaith:

Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,
No touch of bashfulness? What will you tear
Impatient answers from my gentle tongue?
Fie, fie, you counterfeit, you puppet, you.

Her. Puppet? why so? I, that way goes the game.

Now I perceive that she hath made compare
Between our statutes, she hath urg'd her height,
And with her personage, her tall personage,
Her height (forsooth) she hath prevail'd with him.

And are you grown so high in his esteem,

Because I am so dwarfish, and so low?

How low am I, thou painted May-pole? Speak,

How low am I? I am not yet so low,

But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.

Hel. I pray you though you mock me, gentlemen,

Let her not hurt me, I was never curst:

I have no gift at all in shrewishness;

I am a right maid for my cowardize;

Let her not strike me: you perhaps may think,

Because she is something lower then my self,

That I can match her.

Her. Lower? hark again.

Hel. Good Hermia, doe not be so bitter with me,

I evermore did love you Hermia,

Did ever keep your counsells, never wronged you,

Save that in love unto Demetrius,

I told him of your stealth unto this Wood.

He followed you, for love I followed him,

But he hath chid me hence, and threatned me

To strike me, spurn me, nay, to kill me too;

And now, so you will let me quiet go,

To Athens will I bear my folly back,

And follow you no further. Let me go.

You see how simple, and how fond I am.

Her. Why get you gone: who is't that hinders you?

Hel. A foolish heart, that I leave here behind.

Her. What, with Lysander?

Hel. With Demetrius.

Lys. Be not afraid, she shall not harm thee Helena.

Dem. No sir, she shall not, though you take her part.

Hel. O, when she's angry, she is keen and shrewd,

She was a vixen when she went to schoole,

And though she be but little she is fierce.

Her. Little again? nothing but low and little?

Why will you suffer her to flout me thus?

Let me come to her.

Lys. Get you gone you dwarf,

You minimus, of hindring knot-grassie made,

You Bead, you Acorn.

Dem. You are too officious,

In her behalf that scorns your services.

Let her alone, speak not of Helena,
Take not her part. For if thou dost intend
Never so little shew of love to her,
Thou shalt abide it.

Lys. Now she holds me not,
Now follow if thou dar'st, to try whose right,
Of thine or mine is most in Helena.

Dem. Follow? Nay, I'll go with thee cheek by jowl.

Exit Lysander and Demetrius.

Her. You Mistress, all this coyl is long of you.
Nay, go not back.

Hel. I will not trust you I,
Nor longer stay in your curst company.
Your hands then mine are quicker for a fray,
My legs are longer though to run away.

Exeunt.

Enter Oberon and Puck.

Ob. This is thy negligence, still thou mistak'st,
Or else committ'st thy knaveries willingly.

Puck. Believe me, King of shadows, I mistook,
Did not you tell me, I should know the man,
By the Athenian garments he hath on?
And so far blamelesse proves my enterprize,
That I have nointed an Athenian's eyes,
And so far am I glad, it so did sort,
As this their jangling I esteem a sport.

Ob. Thou seest these Lovers seek a place to fight,
Hie therefore Robin, overcast the night,
The starry Welkin cover thou anon,
With drooping fogge as black as Acheron,
And lead these testy Rivals so astray,
As one come not within anothers way.
Like to Lysander, sometime frame thy tongue,
Then stirre Demetrius up with bitter wrong;
And sometime rail thou like Demetrius;
And from each other look thou lead them thus,
Till o're their browes, death-counterfeiting sleep
With leaden legs, and Battie-wings doth creep;
Then crush this hearbe into Lysanders eye,
Whose liquor hath this virtuous property,
To take from thence all errour, with his might,
And make his eye-balls rowl with wonted sight.
When they next wake, all this derision
Shall seem a dream, and fruitlesse vision,
And back to Athens shall the Lovers wend
With league, whose date till death shall never end.
Whiles I in this affaire doe thee imply,
I'll to my Queen, and beg her Indian Boy;
And then I will her charmed eye release
From monsters view, and all things shall be peace.

Puck. My Fairy Lord, this must be done with haste,
For nights-swift Dragons cut the Clouds full fast,
And yonder shines Auroras harbinger;
At whose approach Ghosts wandring here and there,
Troop home to Church-yards; damned spirits all,
That in crosse-ways and floods have buriall,
Already to their wormy beds are gone,
For fear least day should look their shames upon,
They wilfully exile themselves from light,
And must for aye consort with black-browd night.

Ob. But we are spirits of another sort:
I with the morning love have oft made sport,
And like a Forrester, the groves may tread,
Even till the Eastern gate all fiery red,
Opening on Neptune, with fair blessed beames,
Turns into yellow gold, his salt green streames.

But notwithstanding haste, make no delay:
We may effect this businesse, yet ere day.

Puck. Up and down, up and down, I will lead them up and down: I am fear'd in field and town. Goblin, lead them up and down: here comes one.

Enter Lysander

Lys. Where art thou, proud Demetrius?
Speak thou now.

Rob. Here villain, drawn and ready. Where art thou?

Lys. I will be with thee straight.

Rob. Follow me then to plainer ground.

Enter Demetrius.

Dem. Lysander, speak again;
Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled?
Speak in some bush: Where dost thou hide thy head?

Rob. Thou coward, art thou begging to the stars,
Telling the bushes that thou look'st for Wars,
And wilt not come? Come recreant, come thou child,
I'll whip thee with a rod. He is defil'd
That draws a sword on thee.

Dem. Yea, art thou there?

Re. Follow my voyce, wee'll try no manhood here. Exit.

Lys. He goes before me, and still dares me on,
When I come where he calls me, then he's gone.
The villain is much lighter heel'd than I:
I followed fast, but faster he did flye; Shifting places.
That faine am I in dark uneven way,
And here will rest me. Come thou gentle day: lie down.
For if but once thou shew me thy gray light,
I'll find Demetrius, and revenge this spight.

Enter Robin and Demetrius.

Rob. Ho, ho, ho, coward, why com'st thou not?

Dem. Abide me, if thou dar'st. For well I wot,
Thou runn'st before me, shifting every place,
And dar'st not stand, nor look me in the face.
Where art thou?

Rob. Come hither, I am here.

Dem. Nay then thou mock'st me; thou shalt buy this
If ever I thy face by day-light see. (dear,
Now go thy way: faintnesse constraineth me,
To measure out my length on this cold bed,
By dayes approach look to be visited.

Enter Helena.

Hel. O weary night, O long and tedious night,
Abate thy houres, shine comforts from the East,
That I may back to Athens by day-light,
From these that my poor company detest,
And sleep that sometimes shuts up sorrows eye,
Steal me a while from mine own company. Sleep.

Rob. Yet but three? Come one more,
Two of both kindes make up four.
Here she comes, curst and sad,
Cupid is a knavish lad,
Thus to make poor females mad.

Enter Hermia.

Her. Never so weary, never so in woe,
Bedabbled with the dew, and torn with briars,
I can no further crawl, no further go;
My legs can keep no pace with my desires.
Here will I rest me till the break of day,
Heavens shield Lysander, if they mean a fray.

Rob. On the ground sleep sound,
I'll apply your eye, gentle lover, remedy.
When thou wak'st, thou rak'st
True delight in the sight of thy former Ladies eye,

And

And the Countrey Proverb known,
That every man should take his own,
In your waking shall be shown.
Jack shall have Jill, naught shall go ill,
The man shall have his Mare again, and all shall be well.

They sleep all the Act.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Queen of Fairies, and Clown, and Fairies, and the King behind them.

Tita. Come, sit thee down upon this flowry bed,
While I thy amiable cheeks do coy,
And stick musk roses in thy sleek smooth head,
And kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy.

Clow. Where's Pease Blossome?

Pease. Ready.

Clow. Scratch my head, Pease-Blossome. Where's Mounsieur Cobweb.

Cob. Ready.

Clow. Mounseur Cobweb, good Mounseur get your weapons in your hand, and kill me a red hipt humble-Bee on the top of a thistle; and good Mounseur bring me the hony bag. Doe not fret your self too much in the action, Mounseur; and good Mounseur have a care the hony bag break not, I would be loth to have you over-flown with a hony-bag signior. Where's Mounseur Mustardseed?

Mus. Ready.

Clow. Give me your newse, Mounseur Mustard,
Pray you leave your curtesie good Mounseur.

Mus. What's your will?

Clow. Nothing good Mounseur, but to help Cavalero Cobweb to scratch. I must to the Barbers Mounseur, for me thinks I am marvellous hairy about the face. And I am such a tender asse, if my hair do but tickle me, I must scratch.

Tita. What, wilt thou hear some musick, my sweet love?

Clow. I have a reasonable good ear in musick. Let us have the tongues and the bones.

Musick Tongs, Rurall Musick.

Tita. Or say sweet Love, what thou desirest to eat.

Clow. Truly a peck of Provender; I would munch your good dry Oats. Me thinks I have a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweet hay hath no sellow.

Tita. I have a venturous Fairy,
That shall seek the Squirrels hoard,
And fetch thee new Nuts.

Clow. I had rather have a handfull or two of dried pease.
But I pray you let none of your people stir me, I have an exposition of sleep come upon me.

Tita. Sleep thou, and I will winde thee in my arms,
Fairies be gone, and be alwayes away.
So doth the woodbine, the sweet Honisuckle,
Gently entwist; the female Ivy so
Enrings the barky fingers of the Elme,

O how I love thee! how I dote on thee?

Enter Robin Goodfellow, and Oberon.

Ob. Welcome good Robin:

Seest thou this sweet sight?

Her dotage now I do begin to pittie.
For meeting her of late behind the wood,
Seeking sweet savors for this hatefull foole,
I did upbraid her, and fall out with her.
For she his hairy temples then had rounded,
With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers.
And that same dew which sometime on the buds,
Was wont to swell like round and orient pearls;
Stood now within the pretty flouriets eyes,
Like tears that did their own disgrace bewaile.
When I had at my pleasure taunted her,
And she in milde tearms beg'd my patience,
I then did ask of her, her changeling childe,
Which straight she gave me, and her Fairy sent
To bear him to my Bower in Fairy Land.
And now I have the Boy, I will undoe
This hatefull imperfection of her eyes,
And gentle Puck, take this transformed scalpe,
From off the head of this Athenian swain;
That he awaking when the other doe,
May all to Athens back again repair,
And think no more of this nights accidents,
But as the fierce vexation of a dream.
But first I will release the Fairy Queen.

Be thou as thou wast wont to be;

See as thou wast wont to see.

Dians bud, or Cupids flower,

Hath such force and blessed power.

Now my Titania wake you my sweet Queen.

Tita. My Oberon, what visions have I seen!
Me-thought I was enamoured of an Ass.

Ob. There lyes your love.

Tita. How came these things to pass?

Oh how mine eyes doe loath this visage now!

Ob. Silence a while. Robin take off his head:

Titania, musick call, and strike more dead
Then common sleep; of all these find the sense.

Tita. Musick, ho musick, such as charmeth sleep.

Musick still.

Rob. When thou awak'st, with thine own fools eyes peep. (me

Ob. Sound musick; come my Queen, take hand with
And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be.

Now thou and I are new in amity,
And will to morrow midnight, solemnly
Dance in Duke Theseus house triumphantly,
And blest it to all fair posterity.

There shall these paires of faithfull Lovers be Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.

Rob. Fair King attend, and mark,

I doe hear the morning Lark

Ob. Then my Queen in silence sad,
Trip we after the nights shade;
We the Globe can compass soon,
Swifter then the wandring Moon.

Tita. Come my Lord, and in our flight,
Tell me how it came this night,
That I sleeping here was found,

Sleepers lie still.

With

With these mortals on the ground.

*Exeunt.
Winde Horns.*

Enter Theseus, Egeus, Hippolita and all his train.

Thes. Go one of you, finde out the Forrester,
For now our observation is perform'd ;
And since we have the vaward of the day,
My Love shall hear the musick of my hounds.
Uncouple in the Western valley, let them go ;
Dispatch I say, and finde the Forrester.
We will fair Queen, up to the Mountains top,
And mark the musickall confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

Hip. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
When in a wood of Creet they bayed the Bear
With hounds of Sparta ; never did I hear
Such gallant chiding. For besides the groves,
The skies, the fountains, every region near,
Seem'd all one mutuall cry. I never heard
So musickall a discord, such sweet thunder.

Thes. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind,
So flew'd, so fanded, and their heads are hung
With eais that sweep away the morning dew,
Crook-kneed, and dew-lapt, like Theſſalian Bulls,
Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like bells,
Each under each. A cry more tuneable
Was never hollawed to, nor cheer'd with horn,
In Creet, in Sparta, nor in Theſſaly ;
Judge when you hear. But soft, what nymphs are these ?

Ege. My Lord, this is my daughter here asleep,
And this Lysander, this Demetrius is,
This Helena, old Nedars Helena,
I wonder of this being here together,

Thes. No doubt they rose up early, to observe
The right of May ; and hearing our intent,
Came here in grace of our solemnity.
But speak Egeus, is not this the day
That Hermia should give answer of her choice ?

Ege. It is my Lord.

Thes. Goe bid the hunts-men wake them with their horns.

Horns and they wake.

Shout within, they all start up.

Thes. Good morrow friends : Saint Valentine is past,
Begin these wood-birds but to couple now ?

Lys. Pardon my Lord.

Thes. I pray you all stand up.
I know you two are Rivall enemies.
How comes thus gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is so far from jealousy,
To sleep by hate, and fear no enmity,

Lys. My Lord, I shall reply amazedly,
Half sleep, half waking. But as yet, I swear,
I cannot truly say how I came here.
But as I think (for truly would I speak)
And now I do bethink me, so it is ;
I came with Hermia hither. Our intent
Was to be gone from Athens, where we might be Without the perill of the Athenian Law.

Ege. Enough, enough, my Lord : you have enough ;
I beg the Law, the Law, upon his head :
They would have stoln away, they would Demetrius,
Thereby to have defeated you and me :
You of your wife, and me of my consent ;
Of my consent, that she should be your wife.

Dem. My Lord, fair Helen told me of their stealth,
Of this their purpose hither, to this wood,

And I in fury hither followed them ;
Fair Helena, in fancy followed me.
But my good Lord, I wot not by what power,
(But by some power it is) my love
To Hermia (melted as the snow)
Seems to me now as the remembrance of an idle gaud,
Which in my childhood I did doat upon :
And all the faith, the vertue of my heart,
The object and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is onely Helena. To her, my Lord,
Was I betroth'd, ere I see Hermia,
But like a sicknesse did I loath this food :
But as in health, come to my naturall taste,
Now do I wish it, love it, long for it,
And will for evermore be true to it.

Thes. Fair Lovers, you are fortunately met ;
Of this discourse we shall hear more anon.

Egeus, I will over-bear your will ;
For in the Temple, by and by with us,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And for the morning now is something worn,
Our purpos'd hunting shall be set aside.
Away, with us to Athens ; three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnity.

Come Hippolita. Exit Duke and Lords.

Dem. These things seem small and undistinguishable,
Like far off mountains turned into Clouds.

Her. Me-thinks I see these things with parted eye,
When every thing seems double.

Hel. So me-thinks :
And I have found Demetrius, like a jewell,
Mine own, and not mine own.

Dem. It seems to me,
That we sleep, we dream. Do not you think,
The Duke was here, and bid us follow him ?

Her. Yea, and my Father.

Hel. And Hippolita.

Lys. And he bid us follow to the Temple.

Dem. Why then we are awake ; lets follow him, and by the way let us recount our dreams.

Bottomes Wakes.

Exit Lovers.

Clo. When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer.
My next is, most fair Piramus, Hey ho, Peter Quince ?
Flute the Bellows-mender ? Snout the Tinker ? Starv-ling ? Gods my life ! Stoln hence, and left me asleep : I have had a most rare vision. I had a dream, past the wit of man, to say, what dream it was. Man is but an Assle, if he goe about to expound this dream. Me-thought I was, there is no man can tell what. Me-thought I was,
and me-thought I had. But man is but a patch'd foole, if he will offer to say, what me-thought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not seen, mans hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report, what my dream was. I will get Peter Quince to write a ballet of this dream, it shall be called Bottomes Dream, because it hath no bottom ; and I will sing it in the latter end of a play, before the Duke. Peradventure, to make it the more gracious, I shall sing it at her death.

Exit.

Enter Quince, Flute, Thisby, Snout, and Starvling.

Qui. Have you sent to Bottomes house ? Is he come home yet ?

Star. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt he is tran-ported.

This. If

Thisb. If he come not, then the play is mar'd. It goes forward, doth it?

Quin. It is not possible: you have not a man in all Athens. able to discharge Piramus but he.

This. No, 'he hath simply the best wit of any handy-craft man in Athens.

Quin. Yea, and the best person too, and he is a very Paramour, for a sweet voice.

This. You must say, Paragon. A Paramour is (God bleſſe us) a thing of naught.

Enter Snug the Joiner.

Snug. Masters, the Duke is coming from the Temple, and there is two or three Lords and Ladies more married. If our sport had gone forward, we had all been made men.

This. O sweet bully Bottome: thus hath he lost sixpence a day, during his life; he could not have scaped sixpence a day. And the Duke had not given him sixpence a day for playing Piramus, Ile be hang'd. He would have deserved it. Sixpence a day in Piramus, or nothing.

Enter Bottome.

Bot. Where are these Lads? Where are these hearts?

Quin. Bottome, O most couragious day! O most happy hour!

Bot. Masters, I am to discourse wonders; but ask me not what. for if I tell you, I am no true Athenian. I will tell you every thing as it fell out.

Quin. Let us hear, sweet Bottome.

Bot. Not a word of me: all that I will tell you, is, that the Duke hath dined. Get your apparell together, good strings to your beards, new ribbands to your pumps, meet presently at the Palace, every man look ore his Part: for the short and the long is, our Play is preferred: In any case let Thisby have clean linnen: and let not him that playes the Lion, pare his nailes, for they shall hang out for the Lion's claws. And most dear Actors, eat no Onions, nor Garlick; for we are to utter sweet breath, and I do not doubt to hear them say, it is a sweet Comedy. No more words: away, goe away.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolita, Egæus and his Lords.

Hip. 'Tis strange my Theseus, that these lovers speak of

This. More strange then true. I never may believe These antick fables, nor these Fairy toyes, Lovers and mad men, have such seething braines, Such shaping phantasies, that apprehend more Then coole reason ever comprehends.

The Lunatick, the Lover, and the Poet, Are of imagination all compact.

One sees more devils then vast hell can hold; That is the mad-man. The Lover, all as frantick, Sees Helens beauty in a brow of Egypt.

The Poets eye in a fine frenzy rolling, Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven.

And as imagination bodies forth the forms of things Unknown: the Poets pen turns them to shapes, And gives to aire nothing, a locall habitation, And a name. Such tricks hath strong imagination,

That if it would but apprehend some joy, It comprehends some bringer of that joy. Or in the night, imagining some fear How easie is a bush suppos'd a Bear?

Hip. But all the story of the night told over, And all their minds transfigur'd so together, More witnesseth than fancies images, And grows to something of great constancy; But howsoever, strange, and admirable.

Enter Lovers, Lysander, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena.

This. Here come the loyers, full of joy and mirth: Joy, gentle friends, joy, and fresh dayes of Love Accompany your hearts.

Lys. More then to us,

Wait in your royal walks, your boord, you bed.

This. Come now, what masks, what dances shall we have,

To wear away this long age of three houres: Between our after supper, and bed-time?

Where is our usual manager of mirth?

What Revels are in hand? Is there no play, To ease the anguish of a torturing hour?

Call Egæus.

Egæus. Here mighty Theseus.

This. Say, what abridgement have you for this evening?

What mask? What musick? How shall we beguile The lazy time, if not with some delight?

Eg. There is a brief how many sports are rife: Make choice of which your Highnesse will see first.

Lys. The battell with the Centaurs to be sung By an Athenian Eunuch, to the Harp.

This. We'll none of that. That have I told my love In glory of my kinsman Hercules.

Lys. The riot of the tipsie Bachanals, Tearing the Thraſian ſinger in their rage?

This. That is an old device, and it was plaid When I from Thebes came laſt a Conqueror, Lys. The thrice three Muses, mourning for the death of Learning, late deceaſt in beggery.

This. That is ſome Satyr keen and criticall, Nor ſorting with a nuptial ceremony.

Lys. A tedious brief Scene of young Piramus, And his love Thisby; very tragicall mirth.

This. Merry and tragical? Tedious, and brief? That is, hot ice, and wondrous ſtrange ſnow. How ſhall we find the concord of this diſcord?

Eg. A Play there is my Lord, ſome ten words long, Which is as brief, as I have known a Play; But by ten words, my Lord, it is too long; Which makes it tedious. For in all the Play, There is not one word apt, one Player fitted.

And tragicall my noble Lord it is: For Piramus therein doth kill himſelf. Which when I ſaw rehearſt, I muſt confeſſe, Made mine eyes water: but more merry tears, The paſſion of loud laughter never ſhed.

This. What are they that do play it?

Eg. Hard handed men, that work in Athens here, Which never labour'd in their minds till now; And now have toiled their unbreathed memories With this ſame Play, againſt your Nuptials

This. And we will hear it.

Phil. No, my noble Lord, it is not for you. I have heard It over, and it is nothing, nothing in the world ; Unless you can find sport in their intents, Extremely stretcht, and cond with cruell pain, To doe you service.

Thes. I will hear that play. For never any thing, Can be amiss, when simpleness and duty tender it. Go bring them in, and take your places, Ladies.

Hip. I love not to see wretchedness o'recharged ; And duty in his service perishing.

Teef. Why gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing.

Hip. He sayes, they can do nothing in this kind.

Thes. The kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing : Our sport shall be, to take what they mistake ; And what poor duty cannot do, noble respect Takes it in might, not merrit.

Where I have come, great Clearks have purposed To greet me with premeditated welcomes ; Where I have seen them shiver and look pale, Make periods in the midst of sentences, Throttle their practiz'd accent in their fears, And in conclusion, dumbly have broke off, Not paying me a welcome. Trust me sweet, Out of this silence yet, I pickt a welcome : And in the modesty of fearfull duty, I read as much, as from the ratling tongue Of saucy and audacious eloquence.

Love therefore, and tong-tide simplicity, In least, speak most, to my capacity.

Ega. So please your Grace, the Prologue is adrest.

Duk. Let him approach. Flor. Trum.

Enter Prologue.

Quince.

Pro. If we offend, it is with our good will. That you should think, we come not to offend, But with good will. To shew our simple skill, That is the true beginning of our end. Consider then, we come but in despight. We do not come as minding to content you, Our true intent is. All for your delight, We are not here. That you should here repent you, The Actors are at hand ; and by their show, You shall know all, that you are like to know.

Thes. This fellow doth not stand upon points.

Lys. He hath rid his Prologue, like a rough Colt : he knows not the stop. A good morall my Lord. It is not enough to speak, but to speak true.

Hip. Indeed he hath plaid on his Prologue, like a child on the Recorder, a sound, but not in government.

Thes. His speech was like a tangled chain : nothing impaired, but all disordered. Who is the next ?

Tawyer with a Trumpet before them.

Enter Pyramus, and Thisby, Wall, Moon-shine, and Lyon.

Pro. Gentles, perchance you wonder at this show, But wonder on, till truth make all things plain. This man is Pyramus, if you would know ; This beauteous Lady, Thisby is certain. This man with lyme and rough-cast, doth present Wall, the vile wall, which did these lovers sunder : And through walls chink (poor souls) they are content To whisper. At the which, let no man wonder. This man with Lanthorn, dog, and bush of thorn, Presenteth moon-shine. For if you will know, By moon-shine did these Lovers think no scorn To meet at Ninus toomb, there, there to wooe :

This grizly beast (which Lyon hight by name) The trusty Thisby, coming first by night, Did scare away, or rather did affright : And as she fled, her mantle she did fall ; Which Lyon vile with bloody mouth did stain. Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth and tall, And finds his gentle Thisbies Mantle slain ; Whereat, with blade, with bloody blamefull blade, He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody breast, And Thisby, tarrying in the Mulberry shade, His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest, Let Lion, Moon-shine, Wall, and Lovers twain. At large discourse, while here they do remain.

Exit all but Wall.

Thes. I wonder if the Lion be to speak,

Dem. No wonder, my Lord : one Lion may, when many Asses doe.

Exit Lion, Thisby, and Moon-shine.

Wall. In this same interlude, it doth befall, That I, one Snowt (by name) present a wall : And such a wall, as I would have you think, That had in it a crannied hole or chink : Through which the Lovers, Pyramus and Thisby Did whisper often, very secretly.

This loam, this rough-cast and this stone doth shew, That I am that same Wall ; the truth is so.

And this the cranny is, right and sinister, Through which the fearfull Lovers are to whisper.

Thes. Would you desire Lime and Hair to speak better ?

Dem. It is the wittiest partition that ever I heard discoursed, my Lord.

Thes. Pyramus draws near the Wall, silence.

Enter Pyramus.

Pyr. O grim look'd night, O night with hue so black, O night, which ever art, when day is not : O night, O night, alack, alack, alack, I fear my Thisbies promise is forgot. And thou O wall, thou sweet and lovely wall, That stands between her fathers ground and mine, Thou wall, O wall, O sweet and lovely wall, Shew me thy chink, to blink through with mine eyne. Thanks courteous wall. Jove shield thee well for this. But what see I ? No Thisby do I see.

O wicked wall, through whom I see no blifs, Curst be thy stones for thus deceiving me.

Thes. The wall me-thinks being sensible, should curse again.

Pyr. No in truth sir, he should not. Deceiving me, Is Thisbies cue ; she is to enter, and I am to spy Her through the wall. You shall see it will fall

Enter Thisbie.

Pat as I told you ; yonder she comes.

This. O wall, full often hast thou heard my moans, For parting my fair Pyramus, and me.

My cherry lips have often kist thy stones ; Thy stones with Lime and Hair knit up in thee.

Pyr. I hear a voyce ; now will I to the chink, To spy and I can see my Thisbies face. Thisby ?

This. My love thou art, my Love I think.

Pyr. Think what thou wilt, I am thy Lovers grace, And like Limander am I trusty still.

This. And like Helen till the Fates me kill.

Pyr. Not Shafalus to Procrus, was so true.

This. As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you.

Pyr.

Pir. O kisse me through the hole of this vile wall.

Thisb. I kisse the walls hole, not your lips at all.

Pir. Wile thou at Ninnies tomb meet me straight way?

Thisb. Tide life, tide death, I come without delay.

Wall. Thus have I Wall, my part discharged so ;
And being done, thus Wall away doth go. Exit Clow.

Duk. Now is the morall down between the two Neighbours.

Dem. No remedy my Lord, when Walls are so wilful, to hear without warning.

Dut. This is the silliest stufte that ere I heard.

Duk. The best in this kind are but shadows, and the worst are no worse if imagination amend them.

Dut. It must be your imagination then, and not theirs.

Duk. If we imagine no worie of them then they of themselves, they may passe for excellent men. Here comes two noble beasts, in a Man and a Lion.

Enter Lion, and Moon-shine,

Lion. You Ladies, you (whose gentle hearts do fear
The smallest monstrous mouse that creeps on floore)
May now perchance, both quake and tremble here,
When Lion rough in wildest rage doth roare.
Then know that I, one Snug the Joiner am
A Lion fell, nor else no Lions damme :
For if I should as Lion come in strife
Into this place, 'twere pittie of my life.

Duk. A very gentle beast, and of a good conscience.

Dem. The very best at a beast, my Lord, that ere I saw.

Lif. This Lion is a very Fox for his valor.

Duk. True, and a Goose for his discretion.

Dem. Not so my Lord : for his valour cannot carry his discretion, and the Fox carries the Goose.

Duk. His discretion I am sure cannot carry his valor : for the Goose carries not the Fox. It is well : leave it to his discretion, and let us hearken to the Moon.

Moon. This Lanthorn doth the horned Moon present.

Dem. He should have worn the hornes on his head.

Duk. He is no crescent, and his hornes are invisible, within the circumference.

Moon. This lanthorne doth the horned Moon present : My self, the man i'th Moon doth seem to be.

Duk. This is the greatest error of all the rest ; the man should be put into the Lanthorne. How is it else the man i'th Moon ?

Dem. He dares not come there for the candle. For you see, it is already in snuffe.

Dut. I am weary of this Moon ; would he would change.

Duk. It appears by his small light of discretion, that he is in the wane : but yet in courtesie, in all reason, we must stay the time.

Lys. Proceed Moon.

Moon. All that I have to say, is to tell you, that the Lanthorne is the Moon ; I, the man in the Moon ; this thorn bush, my thorn bush ; and this dog, my dog.

Dem. Why all these should be in the Lanthorne : for they are in the Moon. But silence, here comes Thisby.

Enter Thisby.

Thisb. This is old Ninnies tomb : where is my love ?

Lion. Oh.

The Lion roares, Thisby runs off.

Dem. Well roar'd Lion.

Duk. Well run Thisby.

Dut. Well shone Moon.

Truly the Moon shines with a good grace.

Duk. Well mouz'd Lion.

Dem. And then came Piramus.

Lys. And so the Lion vanishht.

Enter Piramus.

Pir. Sweet Moon, I thank thee for thy sunny beams,
I thank thee Moon, for shining now so bright :
For by thy gracious, golden, glittering streams,
I trust to taste of truest Thisbies sight.

But stay : O spite ! but mark, poor Knight,
What dreadful dole is here ?

Eyes doe you see ! How can it be !

O dainty Duck : O Deer !

Thy mantle good ; what stained with blood !

Approach you Furies fell :

O Fates ! come, come : Cut thred and thrum,
Quaile, crush, conclude, and quell.

Duk. This passion, and the death of a dear friend,
Would goe near to make a man look sad.

Dut. Beshrew my heart, but I pity the man.

Pir. O wherefore Nature, did'st thou Lions frame ?
Since Lion vild hath here desflour'd my Deer :
Which is : no, no, which was the fairest Dame
That liv'd, that lov'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheer.
Come tears, confound : Out sword, and wound
The pap of Piramus :

I, that left pap, where heart doth hop ;

Thus die I, thus, thus, thus.

Now am I dead, now am I fled, my soul is in the sky,

Tongue lose thy light, Moon take thy flight,

Now, die, die, die, die, die.

Dem. No die, but an ace for him : for he is but one.

Lys. Lesse then an ace man. For he is dead, he is nothing.

Duk. With the help of a Surgeon, he might yet recover, and prove an Assle.

Dut. How chance the Moon-shine is gone before ?

Thisby comes back, and finds her Lover.

Enter Thisby.

Duk. She will find him by starre-light.
Here she comes, and her passion ends the play.

Dut. Methinks she should not use a long one for such a Piramus : I hope she will be brief.

Dem. A Moth will turn the ballance, which Piramus, which Thisby is the better. (eyes.)

Lys. She hath spied him already, with those sweet

Dem. And thus she means, videlicet.

Thisb. Asleep my Love ? What, dead my Dove ?

O Piramus arise :

Speak, speak. Quite dumb ? Dead, dead ? A tomb
Must cover my sweet eyes.

These Lilly Lips, this cherry nose,

These yellow Cowslip cheeks

Are gone, are gone : Lovers make mone :

His eyes were green as Leeks.

O sisters three, come come to me,

With hands as pale as Milk,

Lay them in gore, since you have shored

With sheeres, this thred of silk.

Tongue not a word : Come trusty sword :

Come blade ; my brest imbrue :

And farewell friends, thus Thisby ends;
Adieu, adieu, adieu.

Duk. Moon-shine and Lion are left to bury the dead.

Dem. I, and Wall too.

Bot. No, I assure you, the wall is down, that parted their Fathers. Will it please you to see the Epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask dance, between two of our company?

Duk. No Epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse; for when the Players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it had plaid Piramus, and hung himself in Thisbies garter, it would have been a fine Tragedy: and so it is truly, and very notably discharg'd. But come, your Bergomask; let your Epilogue alone.

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve.
Lovers to bed, 'tis almost Fairy time.

I fear we shall out-sleep the coming morn,
As much as we this night have over-watcht.
This palpable grosse play hath well beguil'd
The heavy gate of night. Sweet friends to bed.
A fortnight hold we this solemnity,
In nightly Revels; and new jollity.

Exeunt.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Now the hungry Lions roars,
And the Wolf beholds the Moon:
Whilest the heavy ploughman snores,
All with weary task fore-done.
Now the wasted brands do glow,
Whil'st the scritch-owle, scritch'ing loud,
Puts the wretch that lies in woe,
In remembrance of a shrowd.
Now it is the time of night,
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his spright,
In the Church-way paths to glide,
And we Fairies, that do run,
By the triple Hecates team,
From the presence of the Sun,
Following darknesse like a dream,
Now are frolick; not a Mouse
Shall disturb this hallowed house,
I am sent with broom before,
To sweep the dust behind the door.

Enter King and Queen of Fairies with their train.

Ob. Through the house give glimmering light,
By the dead and drowfie fire,

Every Elfe and fairy spright,
Hop as light as bird from brier,
And this Ditty after me, sing and dance it trippingly.
Tita. First rehearse this song by roate,
To each word a warbling note.
Hand in hand, with Fairy grace,
Will we sing and blesse this place.

The Song.

Now untill the break of day,
Through this house each Fairy stray,
To the best Bride-bed will we,
Which by us shall blest be;
And the issue there create,
Ever shall be fortunate:
So shall all the couples three,
Ever true in loving be:
And the blots in Natures hand:
Shall not in their issue stand,
Never mole, harelip, nor scarre,
Nor mark prodigious, such as are Despised in Nativity,
Shall upon their children be.
With this field dew consecrate,
Every Fairy take his gate.
And each severall chamber blesse,
Through this Pallace with sweet peace,
Ever shall in safety rest,
And the owner of it blest.
Trip away, make no stay;
Meet me all by break of day.

Robin. If we shadows have offended,
Think but (this and all is mended)
That you have but slumbered here,
While these visions did appear.
And this weak and idle theam,
No more yielding but a dream,
Gentles, do not reprehend.
If you pardon, we will mend.
And As I am honest Puck,
If we have unearned luck,
Now to scape the Serpents tongue,
We will make amends ere long:
Else the Puck a lyar call.
So good night unto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin shall restore amends.

F I N I S.

The MERCHANT of VENICE.

Actus Primus.

Enter Anthonio, Salarino, and Salanio.

Anth. IN sooth I know not why I am so sad,
It wearies me : you say it wearies you ;
But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
What stuff 'tis made of, whereof it is born,
I am to learn : and such a Want-wit sadness makes of me,
That I have much ado to know my self.

Sal. Your mind is tossing on the Ocean,
There where your Argosies with portly sail
Like Signiors and rich Burgers on the floud,
Or as it were the Pageants of the sea,
Do over-peer the petty Traffickers
That curtsie to them, do them reverence,
As they flye by them with their woven wings.

Sola. Believe me sir, had I such venture forth,
The better part of my affections would Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still Plucking the gras to know where sits the winde,
Peering in Maps for ports, and peers, and rodes:
And every object that might make me fear
Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt
Would make me sad.

Sal. My wind cooling my broth,
Would blow me to an Ague, when I thought
What harm a winde too great might do at sea.
I should not see the sandy hour-glass run,
But I should think of shallows, and of flats,
And see my wealthy Andrew docks in sand,
Vailing her high top lower then her ribs
To kiss her buriall ; should I go to Church
And see the ho'y edifice of stone,
And not berthink me straight of dangerous rocks,
Which touching but my gentle Vessels side
Would scatter all her spices on the stream,
Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks,
And in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing. Shall I have the thought
To think on this, and shall I lack the thought
That such a thing bechanc'd would make me sad ?
But tell not me, I know Anthonio
Is sad to thinke upon his merchandize.

Anth. Believe me no, I thank my fortune for it,
My ventures are not in one bottom trusted,
Nor to one place ; nor is my whole estate
Upon the fortune of this present year :

Therefore my merchandize makes me not sad :

Sola. Why then you are in love.

Anth. Fic, fie.

Sola. Not in love neither ! then let us say you are sad
Because you are not merry ; and 'twere as easie
For you to laugh and leap, and say you are merry
Because you are not sad. Now by two-headed Janus,
Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time :
Some that will evermore peep through their eyes,
And laugh like Parrats at a bag-piper.
And other of such vineger aspect,
That they'll not shew their teeth in way of smile,
Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.

Enter Bassanio, Lorenzo, and Gratiano.

Sola. Here comes Bassanio,
Your most noble Kinsman,
Gratiano, and Lorenzo. Fare ye well,
We leave you now with better company.

Sala. I would have staid till I had made you merry,
If worthier friends had not prevented me,

Anth. Your worth is very dear in my regard.
I take it your own business call on you,
And you embrace th'occasion to depart.

Sal. Good morrow my good Lords. (when ?

Bass. Good signiors both, when shall we laugh ? say,
You grow exceeding strange : must it be so ?

Sal. We'll make our leisures to attend on yours.

Exeunt Salarino, and Salanio.

Lord. My Lord Bassanio, since you have found Anthonio
We two will leave you, but at dinner time

I pray you have in minde where we must meet,

Bass. I will not fail you.

Grat. You look not well Signior Anthonio,
You have too much respect upon the world :
They loose it that do buy it with much care,
Believe me you are marvellously chang'd.

Anth. I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano,
A stage, where every man must play a part,
And mine a sad one.

Grati. Let me play the fool,
With mirth and laughter : let old wrinkles come,
And let my Liver rather heat with wine,
Then my heart cool with mortifying groans.
Why should a man whose blood is warm within,
Sit like his Grandfire, cut in Alabaster ?
Sleep when he wakes ? and creep into the Jaundies.

By

By being peevish? I tell thee what Antonio,
I love thee, and it is my love that speaks :
There are a sort of men, whose visages
Do cream and mantle like a standing pond,
And do a wilfull stillness entertain,
With purpose to be drest in an opinion
Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit,
As who should say, I am sir an Oracle,
And when I ope my lips, let no dog bark.
O my Antonio, I do know of these
That therefore onely are reputed wise,
For saying nothing; when I am very sure
If they should speak, would almost damme those ears
Which hearing them would call their brothers fools:
I'll tell thee more of this another time.
But fish not with this melancholly bait
For this fool Gudgeon, this opinion:
Come good Lorenzo, fare yee well a while,
I'll end my exhortation after dinner.

Lor. Well, we will leave you then till dinner time.
I must be one of these same dumb wife men,
For Gratiano never let's me speak.

Gra. Well, keep me company but two years mo,
Thou shalt not know the sound of thine own tongue.

Anth. Fare you well, I'll grow a talker for this gear.

Gra. Thanks ifaith, for silence is onely commendable
In a neats tongue dri'd, and a maid not vendible Exit.

Anth. It is that any thing now.

Bass. Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more then any man in all Venice, his reasons are two grains of wheat hid in two bushells of chaff: you shall seek all day ere you finde them, and when you have them, they are not worth the search.

Anth. Well: tell me now, what Lady is the same
To whom you swore a secret Pilgrimage
That you to day promis'd to tell me of?

Bass. 'Tis not unknown to you Antonio
How much I have disabled mine estate,
By something shewing a more swelling port
Then my faint means would grant continuance:
Nor do I now make moan to be abridg'd
From such a noble rate, but my chief care
Is to come fairly off from the great debts
Wherein my time something too prodigall
Hath left me gag'd: to you Antonio
I owe the most in money, and in love,
And from your love I have a warranty
To unburthen all my plots and purposes,
How to get clear of all the debts I owe.

Anth. I pray you good Bassanio let me know it,
And if it stands as you your self still doe,
Within the eye of honor, be assur'd
My purse, my person, my extreamest means
Lye all unlock'd to your occasions.

Bass. In my schoole dayes, when I had lost one shaft,
I shot his fellow of the self same flight
The self same way, with more advised watch
To finde the other forth, and by adventuring both,
I oft found both. I urge this child-hood prooffe,
Because what follows is pure innocence.
I owe you much, and like a willfull youth,
That which I owe is lost: but if you please
To shoot another arrow that self way
Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt,
As I will watch the aim: Or to finde both,
Or bring your latter hazard back again,

And thankfully rest debter for the first.

Anth. You know me well, and herein spend but time
To wind about my love with circumstance,
And out of doubt you do to me more wrong
In making question of my uttermost,
Than if you had made waste of all I have:
Then do but say to me what should I do
That in your knowledge may by me be done,
And I am prest unto it: therefore speak.

Bass. In Belmont is a Lady richly left,
And she is fair, and fairer then that word,
Of wondrous vertues: sometimes from her eyes,
I did receive fair speechless messages:
Her name is Portia, nothing undervalu'd
To Cato's daughter, Brutus Portia:

Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth,
For the four windes blow in from every coast
Renowned sutors, and her sunny locks
Hang on her temples like a golden fleece,
Which makes her seat of Belmont Cholchos strand,
And many Jasons come in quest of her.
O my Antonio, had I but the means
To hold a rivall place with one of them,
I have a minde presages me such thrift,
That I should questionless be fortunate.

Anth. Thou know'st that all my fortunes are at sea,
Neither have I mony, nor commodity
To raise a present sum, therefore go forth
Try what my credit can in Venice doe,
That shall be rack'd even to the uttermost,
To furnish thee to Belmont to fair Portia.
Go presently enquire, and so will I
Where money is, and I no question make
To have it of my trust, or for my sake. Exeunt.

Enter Portia with her waiting woman Nerissa.

Porti. By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is weary of this great world.

Ner. You would be, sweet Madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are:
and yet for ought I see, they are as sick that surfeit with too much, as they that starve with nothing; it is no small happinesse therefore to be seated in the mean, superfluity comes sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer.

Por. Good sentences, and well pronounc'd.

Ner. They would be better if well followed.

Por. If to do were as easie as to know what were good to do, Chappels had been Churches, and poor mens cottages Princes Pallaces: it is a good Divine that followes his own instructions; I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, then be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching: the brain may devise lawes for the bloud, but a hot temper leaps o're a cold decree, such a hare is Madnesse the youth, to skip o're the meshes of good counsell the Cripple; but this reason is not in fashion to choose me a husband: O me, the word choose, I may neither choose whom I would, nor refuse whom I dislike, so is the will of a living daughter curb'd by thee will of a dead father: is it not hard Nerissa, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none?

Ner. Your father was ever vertuous, and holy men at their death have good inspirations, therefore the lottery that he hath devised in these three chests of Gold, Silver, and Lead, whereof who chooses his meaning, chooses

chooses you, will no doubt never be chosen by any rightly, but one who you shall rightly love: but what warunt is there in your affection towards any of these Princely suiters that are already come?

Por. I pray thee over-name them, and as thou namest them, I will describe them, and according to my description, levell at my affection.

Ner. First there is the Neapolitan Prince.

Por. I that's a colt indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse, and he makes it a great appropriation to his owne good parts that he can shew himself: I am much afraid my Lady his mother plaid false with Smith.

Ner. Then is there the County Palentine.

Por. He doth nothing but frown (as who should say and you will not have me, choose: he hears merry tales and smiles not, I fear he will prove the weeping Philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmannerly sadness in his youth.) I had rather to be married to a deaths head with a bone in his mouth, then to either of these: God defend me from these two.

Ner. How say you by the French Lord, Mounseieur Le Boun?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man, in truth I know it is sinne to be a mocker, but he! why he hath a horse better then the Neapolitans, a better bad habit of frowning then the Count Palentine, he is every man in no man, a if a Tassell sing, he falls straight a capring, he will fence with his own shadow. If I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands: if he would despise me, I would forgive him, for if he love me to madness, I should never requite him.

Ner. What say you then to Fauconbridge, the young Baron of England?

Por. You know I say nothing to him, for he understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latine, French, nor Italian, and you will come into the Court and sweat that I have a poor penny-worth in the English: he is a proper mans picture, but alas who can converse with a dumb show? how odly he is suited, I think he bought his doublet in Italy his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour every where.

Ner. What think you of the other Lord his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him, for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him again when he was able. I think the Frenchman became his surety, and seald under for another.

Ner. How like you the young Germain the Duke of Saxonyes Nephew?

Por. Very vildely in the morning when he is sober, and most vildely in the afternoon when he is drunk: when he is best, he is a little worse then a man, and when he is worst, he is little better then a beast: and the worst fall that ever fell, I hope I shall make shift to go without him.

Ner. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right Casket, you should refuse to perform your Fathers will, if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore for fear of the worst, I pray thee let a deep glass of Rennish-wine on the contrary Casket, for if the devill be within, and the temptation without, I know he will choose it. I will do any thing Nerissa ere I will be married to a sponge.

Ner. You need not fear Lady the having any of these

Lords, they have acquainted me with their determinations, which is indeed to return to their hame, and to trouble you with no more suit, unless you may be won by some other sort then your Fathers imposition, depending on the Caskets.

Por. If I live to be as old as Sibilla, I will dye as chaste as Diana: unlesse I be obtained by the manner of my Fathers will: I am glad this parcell of wooers are so reasonable, for there is not one among them but I doat on his very absence: and wish them a faire departure.

Ner. Doe you not remember Lady in your Fathers time, a Venetian, a Scholler and a Souldier that came hither in company of the Marquesse of Mounforrat?

Por. Yes, yes, it was Bassanio, as I think, so was he call'd.

Ner. True Madam, he of all the men that ever my foolish eyes look'd upon, was the best deserving a faire Lady, Por. I remember him well, and I remember him worthy of thy praise.

Enter a Serving-man.

Ser. The four strangers seek you Madam to take their leave: and there is a fore-runner come from a fift, the Prince of Morocco, who brings word the Prince his Master will be here to night.

Por. If I could bid the fift welcome with so good heart as I can bid the other four farewell, I should be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a Saint; and the complexion of a devill, I had rather he should strive me then wive me. Come Nerissa, sirra go before; whiles we shut the gate upon one wooer, another knocks at the door.

Exeunt.

Enter Bassanio with Shylock the Jew.

Shy. Three thousand Ducats, well.

Bass. I sir, for three months.

Shy. For three months; well.

Bass. For the which, as I told you,

Antonio shall be bound.

Shy. Antonio shall become bound, well.

Bass. May yousted me? Will you pleasure me?

Shall I know your answer.

Shy. Three thousand Ducats for three months, And Antonio bound.

Bass. Your answer to that.

Shy. Antonio is a good man.

Bass. Have you heard any imputation to the contrary.

Shy. No, no, no, no: my meaning in saying he is a good man, is to have you understand me that he is sufficient, yet his means are in supposition: he hath an Argosie bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies. I understand moreover upon the Ryalto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England, and other ventures he hath squandred abroad, but ships are but boards, Sailers but men, there be land rats, and water rats, water theeves, and land theeves, I mean Pyrats; and then there is the perill of waters, windes, and rocks: the man is notwithstanding sufficient, three thousand Ducats, I think I may take his bond.

Bass. Be assured you may.

Jew.

Jew. I will be assured I may : and that I may be assured, I will bethink me, may I speak with Antonio.

Bass. If it please you to dine with us.

Jew. Yes, to smell pork, to eat of the habitation which your Prophet the Nazarite conjured the devill into: I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and so following: but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you.

What news on the Ryalto, who is he comes here?

Enter Antonio.

Bass. This is signior Antonio.

Jew. How like a fawning publican he looks.
I hate him, for he is a Christian:

But more, for that in low simplicity
He lends out money gratis, and brings down
The rate of usance here with us in Venice,
If I can catch him once upon the hip,
I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him.
He hates our sacred Nation, and he railes
Even there where Merchants most do congregate
On me, my bargains, and my well-worne thrift,
Which he calls interest: Cursed be my Tribe
If I forgive him.

Bass. Shylock, do you hear.

Shy. I am debating of my present store,
And by the near guess of my memory
I cannot instantly raise up the gross
Of full three thousand Ducats: what of that?
Tubal a wealthy Hebrew of my Tribe
Will furnish me; but soft, how many months
Do you desire? Rest you fair good signior,
Your worship was the last man in our mouth's.

Anth. Shylock, albeit I neither lend nor borrow
By taking, nor by giving of excess,
Yet to supply the ripe wants of my friend,
I'll break a custome: is he yet posselt
How much he would?

Shy. I, I, three thousand Ducats.

Anth. And for three month's.

Shy. I had forgot, three months, you told me so.
Well then, your bond: but let me see, but hear you,
Me thoughts you said, you neither lend nor borrow Upon advantage.

Anth. I do never use it.

Shy. When Jacob graz'd his Uncle Laban's sheep,
This Jacob from our holy Abram was
(As his wife mother wrought in his behalf)
The third possessor, I, he was the third.

Anth. And what of him, did he take interest?

Shy. No, not take interest, not as you would say
Directly interest, mark what Jacob did,
When Laban and himself were compriz'd
That all the eanelings which were streak'd and pied
Should fall as Jacob's hier, the Ewes being ranck,
In end of Autumn turned to the Ram's,
And when the work of generation was,
Between these woolly breeders in the act,
The skillfull shepherd pil'd me certain wands,
And in the doing of the deed of kinde,
He stuck them up before the fulsome Ewes,
Who then conceiving, did in yeanning time
Fall party-colour'd lambs, and those were Jacob's.
This was a way to thrive, and he was blest:

And thrift is blessing if men steal it not.

Anth. This was a venture sir that Iacob serv'd for,
A thing not in his power to bring to pass,
But sway'd and fashion'd by the hand of heaven.
Was this inserted to make interest good?

Or is your gold and Silver Ewes and Rams?

Shy. I cannot tell, I make it breed as fast,
But note me signior.

Anth. Mark you this Bassanio,
The devill can cite Scripture for his purpose,
An evill soul producing holy witness,
Is like a villain with a smiling cheek,
A goodly apple rotten at the heart.
O what a goodly outside falsehood hath.

Shy. Three thousand Ducats, 'tis a good round summe.
Three months from twelve, then let me see the rate.

Anth. Well Shylock, shall we be beholding to you?

Shy. Signior Antonio, many a time and oft
In the Ryalto you have rated me

About my moneys and my usances:
Still have I borne it with a patient shrug,
(For sufferance is the badge of all our Tribe)
You call me misbeliever, cur-throat dog,
And spit upon my Jewish gaberdine,
And all for use of that which is mine own.

Well then, it now appears you need my help:
Go to then, you come to me, and you say,
Shylock, we would have moneys, you say so:
You that did void your rheume upon my beard,
And foot me as you spurn a stranger cur
Over your threshold, moneys is your suit.
What should I say to you? Should I not say,
Hath a dog money? is it possible
A curre should lend three thousand Ducats? or Shall I bend low, and in a bond-mans key
With bated breath, and whispering humbleness,
Say this: Fair sir, you spet on me on Wednesday last;
You spuin'd me such a day; another time
You call'd me dog: and for these curtesies
I'll lend you thus much moneys.

Anth. I am as like to call thee so again,
To spet on thee again, to spurn thee too.
If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not
As to thy friend, for when did friendship take
A breed of barren mettall of his friend?
But lend it rather to thine enemy,
Who if he break, thou maist with better face
Exact the penalties.

Shy. Why look you how you storm,
I would be friends with you, and have your love,
Forget the shames that you have stain'd me with,
Supply your present wants, and take no doit
Of usance for my monies, and you'll not hear me,
This is kinde I offer.

Bass. This were kindness.

Shy. This kindness will I show,
Go with me to a Notary, seal me there
Your single bond, and in a merry sport
If you repay me not on such a day,
In such a place, such sum or sums as are Exprest in the condition, let the forfeit
Be nominated for an equall pound
Of your fair flesh, to be cut off and taken
In what part of your body it pleaseth me.

Anth. Content in faith, I'll seal to such a bond,
And say there is much kindness in the Jew.

Bass. You

Bass. You shall not seal to such a bond for me,
I'll rather dwell in my necessity.

Anth. Why fear not man, I will not forfeit it,
Within these two months, that's a month before
This bond expires, I do expect return
Of thrice three times the value of this bond.

Shy. O father Abram, what these Christians are,
Whose own hard dealing teaches them suspect
The thoughts of others: Pray you tell me this,
If he should break his day, what should I gain
By the exaction of the forfeiture?

A pound of mans flesh taken from a man,
Is not so estimable, profitable neither
As flesh of Muttons, Beefs, or Goats. I say
To buy his favour, I extend this friendship,
If he will take it, so: if not adieu,
And for my love I pray you wrong me not.

Anth. Yes Shylock, I will seal unto this bond.

Shy. Then meet me forthwith at the Notaries,
Give him direction for this merry bond,
And I will go and purse the Ducats straight:
See to my house left in the fearful guard
Of an unchristy knave: and presently
I'll be with you.

Exit.

Anth. Hye thee gentle Jew. This Hebrew will turn
Christian, he grows kind.

Bass. I like not fair terms, and a villains mind.

Anth. Come on, in this there can be no dismay,
My Ship's come home a month before the day.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Morocchio a tawny Moor all white, and three or four followers accordingly, with Portia,
Nerissa and their train.
Flo. Cornets.

Mor. Mislike me not for my complexion,
The shadowed livery of the burnish'd sun,
To whom I am a neighbour, and near bred.
Bring me the fairest creature Northward born,
Where Phœbus fire scarce thawes the yficles,
And let us make incision for your love,
To prove whose blood is reddest, his or mine.
I tell the Lady this aspect of mine
Hath feard the valiant, (by my love I swear)
The best regarded Virgins of our Clyme
Have lov'd it too: I would not change this hue,
Except to steal your thoughts my gentle Queen.

Por. In terms of choice I am not sely led
By nice direction of a maidens eyes:
Besides, the lottery of my destiny
Bars me the right of voluntary chusing:
But if my father had not scanted me,
And hedg'd me by his wit to yield my self
His wife, who wins me by that means I told you,
Your self (renowned Prince) then stood as fair
As any commer I have look'd on yet
For my affection.

Mor. Even for that I thank you,
Therefore I pray you lead me to the Caskets
To try my fortune: By this Symitar

That slew the Sophy, and a Persian Prince,
That won three fields of Sultan Solymán,
I would o're-stare the sternest eyes that look:
Out-brave the heart most daring on the earth:
Pluck the young sucking Cubs from the shee Bear,
Yea, mock the Lion when he roars for prey
To win the Lady. But alas the while,
If Hercules and Lychas play at dice
Which is the better man, the greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand:
So is Alcides beaten by his rage,
And so may I, blind fortune leading me,
Miss that which one unworthier may attain,
And dye with grieving.

Por. You must take your chance,
And either not attempt to choose at all,
Or swear before you choose, if you choose wrong
Never to speak to Lady afterward
In way of marriage, therefore be advis'd.

Mor. Nor will not, come bring me unto my chance.

Por. First forward to the temple, after dinner
Your hazard shall be made.

Mor. Good fortune then,
To make me blest or curs'd amongst men.

Cornets.

Exeunt.

Enter Clown alone.

Clow. Certainly, my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew my Master: the fiend is at mine elbow, and attempts me, saying to me, Job, Launcelet Job, good Launcelet, or good Job, or good Launcelet Job, use your legs, take the start, run away: my conscience sayes no; take heed honest Launcelet, take heed honest Job, or as afore-said honest Launcelet Job, doe not runne, scorne running with thy heeles; well, the most couragi-ous fiend bids me pack, fi sayes the fiend, away sayes the fiend, for the heavens rouse up a brave minde sayes the fiend, and runne; well, my conscience hanging about the neck of my heart, sayes very wisely to me: my honest friend Launcelet, being an honest mans son, or rather an honest womans sonne, for indeed my father did something smack, something grow too; he had a kind of taste; well, my conscience saies Launcelet budge not, budge sayes the fiend, budge not sayes my conscience, conscience say I you counsell well, fiend say I you counsell well, to be rul'd by my conscience I should stay with the Jew my Master, who (God blesse the mark) is a kinde of devill; and to run away from the Jew I should be ruled by the fiend, who saving your reverence is the devill himself: certainly the Jew is the very devill incarnation, and in my conscience, my conscience is a kinde of hard conscience, to offer to counsell me to stay with the Jew;
the fiend gives the more friendly counsell: I will runne fiend, my heeles are at your commandement, I will runne.

Enter old Gobbo with a Basket.

Gob. Master young-man, you I pray you, which is the way to Master Jewes?

Laun. O heavens, this is my true begotten Father, who being more then sand-blind, high gravell blind, knows me not, I will try confusions with him.

Gob. Master young Gentleman, I pray you which is the way to Master Jewes.

Laun. Turn upon your right hand at the next turning

ning, but at the next turning of all on your left; marry at the very next turning, turn of no hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jewes house.

Gob. Be Gods fonties 'twill be a hard way to hit, can you tell me whether one Launcelet that dwells with him, dwell with him or no.

Laun. Talk you of yong Master Launcelet, mark me now, now will I raise the waters; talk you of yong Master Launcelet?

God. No Master sir, but a poor mans son, his Father though I say't is an honest exceeding poor man, and God be thanked well to live.

Laun. Well, let his Father be what a will, we talk of yong Master Launcelet.

Gob. Your worships friend and Launcelet.

Laun. But I pray you ergo old man, ergo I beseech you, talk you of yong Master Launcelet.

Gob. Of Launcelet, ant please your mastership.

Laun. Ergo Master Launcelet, talk not of master Launcelet Father, for the yong gentleman according to fates and destinies, and such odde sayings, the sisters three, and such branches of learning, is indeed deceased, or as you would say in plain tearmes, gone to heaven.

Gob. Marry God forbid, the boy was the very stafte of my age, my very prop.

Laun. Do I look like a cudgell or a hovell-post, a staff or a prop: do you know me Father.

Gob. Alack the day, I know you not young Gentleman, but I pray you tell me, is my boy, God rest his soul, alive or dead.

Laun. Do you not know me Father,

Gob. Alack sir I am sand blind, I know you not.

Laun. Nay, indeed if you had your eyes you might faile of the knowing me: it is a wise Father that knowes his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your sonne, give me your blessing, truth will come to light, murder cannot be hid long, a mans sonne may, but in the end truth will not.

Gob. Pray you sir stand up, I am sure you are not Launcelet my boy.

Laun. Pray you let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing: I am Launcelet your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think you are my son.

Laun. I know not what I shall think of that: but I am Launcelet the Jewes man, and I am sure Margery your wife is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Murgery indeed, I'll be sworn if thou be Launcelet, thou art mine own flesh and bloud: Lord worships might he be, what a beard hast thou got; thou hast got more hair on thy chin, then Dobbin my philhorse has on his taile.

Laun. It should seem then that Dobbins taile growes backward. I am sure he had more hair of his tail then I have on my face when I last saw him.

Gob. Lord how art thou chang'd: how dost thou and thy Master agree, I have brought him a present; how gree you now?

Laun. Well, well, but for mine own part, as I have set up my rest to run away, so I will not rest till I have run some ground; my Master's a very Jew, give him a present, give him a halter, I am famisht in his service. You may tell every finger I have with my ribs: father I am glad you are come, give me your present to one Master Bassanio, who indeed gives rare new Liveries, if I serve not him, I will runn as farre as God has any ground. O rare fortune, here comes the man, to him Father, for I am a Jew if I serve the Jew any longer.

Enter Bassanio with a follower or two.

Bass. You may do so, but let it be so hasted that supper be ready at the farthest by five of the clock: see these Letters delivered, put the Liveries to making, and desire Gratiano to come anon to my lodging.

Laun. To him Father.

Gob. God blefs your worship.

Bass. Gramercy, would'st thou ought with me.

Gob. Here's my son sir, a poor boy.

Laun. Not a poor boy sir, but the rich Jewes man that would siras my Father shall specifie.

Gob. He hath a great infection sir, as one would say to serve.

Laun. Indeed the short and the long is, I serve the Jew, and have a desire as my Father shall specifie.

Gob. His Master and he (savin your worships reverence) are scarce catercosins.

Laun. To be brief, the very truth is, that the Jew having done me wrong, doth cause me as my Father being I hope an old man shall frutifie unto you.

Gob. I have here a dish of Doves that I would bestow upon your worship, and my suit is.

Laun. In very brief, the suit is impertinent to my self, as your worship shall know by this honest old man, and though I say it, though old man yet poor man my Father.

Bass. One speak for both, what would you?

Laun. Serve you sir.

Gob. This is the very defect of the matter sir.

Bass. I know thee well, thou hast obtain'd thy suit, Shylock thy Master spoke with me this day, And hath prefer'd thee, if it be preferment To leave a rich Jewes service, to become The follower of so poor a Gentleman.

Clo. The old proverb is very well parted between my Master Shylock and you sir, you have the grace of God sir, and he hath enough.

Bass. Thou speak'st it well; go Father with thy sonne, Take leave of thy old Master, and enquire My lodging out, give him a Livery More garded then his fellows: see it done.

Clo. Father in, I cannot get a service, no, I have ne're a tongue in my head well: if any man in Italy have a fairer table which doth offer to swear upon a book, I shall have good fortune; go too, here's a simple line of life, here's a small trifle of wives, alas, fifteen wives is nothing, a leaven widdowes and nine maids is a simple coming in for one man, and then to scape drowning thrice, and to be in perill of my life with the edge of a featherbed, here are simple scapes: well if Fortune be a woman, she's a good wench for this gere: Father come, I'll take my leave of the Jew in the twinkling.

Exit Clown.

Bass. I pray thee good Leonardo think on this, These things being bought and orderly bestowed Return in haste, for I do feast to night My best esteem'd acquaintance, hie thee gone.

Leon. My best endeavours shall be done hercin.

Exit Leonardo.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Where's your Master.

Leon.

Leon. Yonder sir he walks.

Gra. Signior Bassanio.

Bas. Gratiano.

Gra. I have a suit to you.

Bas. You have obtain'd it.

Gra. You must not deny me, I must go with you to Belmont.

Bas. Why then you must : but hear thee Gratiano ;
Thou art too wild, too rude, and bold of voyce,
Parts that become thee happily enough,
And in such eyes as ours appear not faults ;
But where they are not known, why there they show
Something too liberall, pray thee take pain
To allay with some cold drops of modesty
Thy skipping spirit, least through thy wild behaviour
I be misconsterd in the place I go to,
And lose my hopes.

Gra. Signior Bassanio, hear me,
If I doe not put on a sober habit,
Talk with respect, and swear but now and then,
Wear prayer-books in my pocket, look demurely,
Nay more, while Grace is saying, hood mine eyes
Thus with my hat, and sigh and say Amen,
Use all the observance of civility,
Like one well studied in a sad ostent
To please his Grandam, never trust me more.

Bas. Well, we shall see your bearing.

Gra. Nay but I barre to night, you shall not gage me
By what we doe to night.

Bas. No that were pity.
I would entreat you rather to put on
Your boldest suit of mirth, for we have friends
That purpose merriment : but fare you well,
I have some businesse.

Gra. And I must to Lorenzo and the rest ;
But we will visit you at supper time. Exeunt.

Enter Jessica and the Clown.

Jes. I am sorry thou wilt leave my Father so,
Our house is hell, and thou a devil
Did'st rob it of some taste of tediousnesse ;
But fare thee well, there is a Ducat for thee,
And Lancelot, soon at supper shalt thou see
Lorenzo, who is thy Masters guest,
Give him this Letter, doe it secretly,
And so farewell : I would not have my Father
See me talk with thee.

Clo. Adieu, teares exhibit my tongue, most beautifull Pagan, most sweet Jew, if a Christian did not play the knave and get thee, I am much deceived ; but adieu, these foolish drops doe somewhat drown my manly spirit :
adieu. Exit.

Jes. Farewell good Lancelot.
Alack, what hainous sin is it in me
To be ashamed to be my Fathers child,
But though I am a daughter to his blood,
I am not to his manners : O Lorenzo,
If thou keep promise I shall end this strife,
Become a Christian, and thy loving Wife.

Enter Gratiano, Lorenzo, Salarino, and Solania.

Lo. Nay, we will slinke away in supper time,
Disguise us at my lodging, and return all in an hour.

Gra. We have not made good preparation.

Sal. We have not spoke us yet of Torch-bearers,

Sol. 'Tis vile unlesse it may be quaintly ordered,
And better in my mind not undertook.

Lor. 'Tis now but four a clock, we have two hours
To furnish us ; friend Lancelot what's the newes ?

Enter Lancelot with a Letter.

Lan. And it shall please you to break up this, it shall seem to signifie.

Lo. I know the hand, in faith 'tis a fair hand,
And whiter then the paper it writ on,
I the fair hand that writ.

Gra. Love-newes in faith.

La. By your leave sir.

Lor. Whether goest thou ?

La. Marry to bid my old Master the Jew to sup to night with my new Master the Christian.

Lor. Hold here, take this, tell gentle Jessica
I will not fail her, speak it privately :

Go Gentlemen, will you prepare you for this Maske to night ?

I am provided of a Torch-bearer. Exit Clown,

Sal. I marry, i'll be gone about it straight.

Sol. And so will I.

Lor. Meet me and Gratiano at Gratiãos lodging
Some hour hence.

Sal. 'Tis good we doe so. Exit.

Gra. Was not that Letter from fair Jessica ?

Lo. I must needs tell thee all, she hath directed
How I shall take her from her Fathers house,
What gold and jewels she is furnisht with,
What Pages suit she hath in readinesse :
If e're the Jew her Father come to heaven,
It will be for his gentle daughters sake ;
And never dare misfortune crosse her foot,
Unlesse she doe it under this excuse,
That she is issue to a faithlesse Jew :
Come go with me, peruse this as thou goest,
Fair Jessica shall be my Torch-bearer. Exit.

Enter Jew, and his man that was the Clown.

Jew. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be thy judge,
The difference of old Shylocke and Bassanio ;
What Jessica, thou shalt not gurmardize
As thou hast done with me : what Jessica ?
And sleep, and snore, rend apparell out.
Why Jessica I say.

Clo. Why Jessica.

Shy. Who bids thee call ? I doe not bid thee call.

Clo. Your worship was wont to tell me
I could doe nothing without bidding.

Enter Jessica.

Jes. Call you ? what is your will ?

Shy. I am bid forth to supper Jessica,
There are my Keyes : but wherefore should I go ?

I am not bid for love, they flatter me,
But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon
The prodigall Christian. Jessica my girle,
Look to my house, I am right loath to go,
There is some ill a brewing towards my rest,
For I did dream of money bags to night.

Clo. I beseech you sir go, my young Master
Doth expect your reproach.

Shy. So doe I his.

Clo. And they have conspired together, I will not say you shall see a Maske, but if you doe, then it was not for nothing that my nose felt a bleeding on black Monday last.

last, at six a clock ith' morning, falling out that year on Ashwednesday was four year in th'afternoon.

Shy. What are their masks? hear you me Iessica, Lock up my doores, and when you hear the Drum And the vile squealing of the wry-neckt Fife, Camber not you up to the Casements then, Nor thrust your head into the publick street To gaze on Christian fools with varnish'd faces: But stop my houses eares, I mean my Casements, Let not the sound of shallow foppery enter My sober house. By Iacobs staffe I swear, I have no minde of feasting forth to night: But I will go; go you before me sirrah, Say I will come.

Clow. I will go before sir.
Mistresse look out at window for all this;
There will come a Christian by,
Will be worth a Jew's eye.

Shy. What sayes that fool of Hagars off-spring?
ha.

Ief. His words were farewell mistris, nothing else.

Shy. The patch is kind enough, but a huge feeder:
Snail-slow in profit, but sleeps by day
More then the wild-cat: drones hive not with me,
Therefore I part with him, and part with him
To one that I would have him help to waste
His borrowed purse. Well Iessica go in,
Perhaps I will return immediately;
Doe as I bid you, shut doors after you, fast bind, fast
finde,

A proverbe never stale in thrifty minde.

Exit.

Ief. Farewell, and if my fortune be not crost,
I have a Father, you a Daughter lost.

Exit.

Enter the Maskers, Gratiano and Salino.

Gra. This is the penthouse under which Lorenzo
Desired us to make a stand.

Sal. His hour is almost past.

Gra. And it is marvell he out-dwells his hour,
For lovers ever run before the clock.

Sal. O ten times faster Venus Pigeons flie
To steal loves bonds new made, then they are wont
To keep obliged faith unforfeited.

Gra. That ever holds, who riseth from a feast
With that keen appetite that he sits down?
Where is the Horse that doth untread again
His tedious measures with the unbated fire
That he did pace them first? all things that are,
Are with more spirit chased then enjoy'd.
How lik a younger or a prodigall
The skarfed barke puts from her native bay,
Hugg'd and embraced by the strumpet winde:
How like a prodigall she doth return
With over-wither'd ribs and ragged sailes,
Lean, rent, and begger'd by the strumpet winde?

Enter Lorenzo.

Salino. Here comes Lorenzo, more of this hereafter.

Loren. Sweet friends, your patience for my long abode,
Not I, but my affaires have made you wait:
When you shall please to play the thieves for Wives
I'll watch as long for you then: approach

Here dwells my Father Jew. Hoa, who's within?

Iessica above.

Ief. Who are you? tell me for more certainty,
Albeit I'll swear that I doe know your tongue.

Lor. Lorenzo, and thy Love.

Ief. Lorenzo certain, and my love indeed,
For who love I so much? and now who knows
But you Lorenzo, whether I am yours?

Lo. Heaven and thy thoughts are witness that thou art.

Ief. Here, catch this casket, it is worth the pains,
I am glad 'tis night, you doe not look on me,
For I am much asham'd of my exchange:
But love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit,
For if they could, Cupid himself would blush
To see me thus transformed to a boy.

Lor. Descend, for you must be my torch-bearer.

Ief. What, must I hold a Candle to my shame?
They in themselves goodsooth are too too light.
Why, 'tis an office of discovery, Love,
And I should be obscur'd.

Lor. So you are sweet,
Even in the lovely garnish of a boy: but come at once,
For the close night doth play the run-away,
And we are staid for at Bassanio's feast.

Ief. I will make fast the doors and guild my self
With some more Ducats, and be with you straight.

Gra. Now by my Hood, a Gentile, and no Jew.

Lor. Beshrew me but I love her heartily.
For she is wise, if I can judge of her,
And fair she is, if that mine eyes be true,
And true she is, as she hath prov'd her self:
And therefore like her self, wise, fair, and true,
Shall she be placed in my constant soul.

Enter Iessica.

What, art thou come? on gentlemen, away,
Our masking mates by this time for us stay.

Exit.

Enter Anthonio.

Ant. Who's there?

Gra. Signior Anthonio.

Ant. Fie, fie, Gratiano, where are all the rest?

'Tis nine a clock, our friends all stay for you,
No maske to night, the wind is come about,
Bassanio presently will go aboard,
I have sent twenty out to seek for you.

Gra. I am glad on't, I desire no more delight
Then to be under sail, and gone to night.

Exeunt.

Enter Portia with Morrocho, and both their trains.

Por. Go, draw aside the curtains, and discover
The severall Caskets to this noble Prince:
Now make your choyse.

Mor. The first of gold, who this inscription beares,
Who chooseth me, shall gain what men desire.
The second silver, which this promise carries,
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserves.
This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt,
Who chooseth me, must give and hazard all he hath.
How shall I know if I doe choosse the right?

Por.

Por. The one of them contains my picture Prince,
If you choose that, then I am yours withall.

Mar. Some God direct my judgement, let me see,
I will survey the inscriptions, back again :
What sayes this leaden casket ?

Who chooseth me, must give and hazard all he hath.
Must give, for what ? for lead ?

This casket threatens men that hazard all,
Doe it in hope of fair advantages :
A golden mind stoops not to shewes of dross,

I'll then nor give nor hazard ought for lead.
What sayes the Silver with her virgin hue ?
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserves.

As much as he deserves, pause there Morocho,
And weigh thy value with an even hand,
If thou beest rated by thy estimation

Thou dost deserve enough, and yet enough
May not extend so far as to the Lady :

And yet to be afraid of my deserving,
Were but a weak disabling of my self.

As much as I deserve, why that's the Lady.
I doe in birth deserve her, and in fortunes,

In graces, and in qualities of breeding :
But more then these, in love I doe deserve.

What if I stray'd no farther, but choose here ?
Let's see once more this saying grav'd in gold.

Who chooseth me, shall gain what many men desire :
Why that's the Lady, all the world desires her :

From the four corners of the earth they come
To kisse this shrine, this mortall breathing Saint.

The Hircanian deserts, and the vast wildes
Of wide Arabia are as through fares now

For Princes to come view fair Portia.
The watery Kingdome, whose ambitious head

Spets in the face of heaven, is no barre
To stop the forraign spirits, but they come

As o're a Brook to see fair Portia.
One of these three contains her heavenly picture.

Is't like that Lead contains her ? 'twere damnation
To think so base a thought, it were too grosse

To rib her searcloth in the obscure grave :
Or shall I think in Silver she's immur'd

Being ren time undervalued to tri'd gold ;
O sinfull thought, never so rich a Jem

Was set in worse then gold ! They have in England
A Coin that beares the figure of an Angell

Stamp't in gold, but that's insculpt upon :
But here an Angell in a golden Bed

Lies all within. Deliver me the Key ;
Here doe I choose, and thrive I as I may.

Por. There take it Prince, and if my form lie there
Then I am yours.

Mor. O hell ! what have we here, a carrion death,
Within whose empty eye there is a written scrowl ;

*All that glisters is not gold,
Often have you heard that sold ;
Many a man his life hath sold
But my outside to behold ;
Guildd timber doe wormes infold :
Had you been as wise as bold,
Young in limbs, in judgement old,
Your answer had not been inscrol'd :
Fare you well, your suit is cold,*

Mor. Cold indeed, and labour lost,

Then farewell heart, and welcome frost :

Portia adieu, I have too griev'd a heart
To take a tedious leave : thus losers part.

Exit.

Por. A gentle riddance : draw the curtains, go :
Let all of his complexion choose me so.

Exeunt.

Enter Salarino and Solanio.

Flo. Cornets.

Sal. Why man I saw Bassanio under sail,
With him is Gratiano gone along ;
And in their ship I am sure Lorenzo is not.

Sol. The villain Jew with outcries rais'd the Duke,
Who went with him to search Bassanio's ship.

Sal. He comes too late, the ship was under sail ;
But there the Duke was given to understand

That in a Gondilo were seen together
Lorenzo and his amorous Jessica.

Besides, Antonio certified the Duke
They were not with Bassanio in his ship.

Sol. I never heard a passion so confus'd,
So strange, outrageous, and so variable,

As the dog Jew did utter in the streets ;
My Daughter, O my Ducats, O my Daughter,

Fed with a Christian, O my Christian Ducats !
Justice, the Law, my Ducats, and my Daughter ;

A sealed bag, two sealed bags of Ducats,
Of double Ducats, stoln from me by my Daughter,

And Jewels, two rich and precious Stones,
Stoln by my Daughter : justice, find the Girl,

She hath the Stones upon her, and the Ducats.
Sal. Why all the Boyes in Venice follow him,

Crying his Stones, his Daughter, and his Ducats,
Sol. Let good Antonio look he keep his day

Or he shall pay for this.
Sal. Marry well remembered,

I reason'd with a Frenchman yesterday,
Who told me, in the narrow seas that part

The French and English, there miscarried
A vessell of our countrey richly fraught :

I thought upon Antonio when he told me,
And wisht in silence that it were not his.

Sol. You were best to tell Antonio what you hear,
Yet doe not suddenly, for it may grieve him.

Sal. A kinder Gentleman treads not the earth,
I saw Bassanio and Antonio part,

Bassanio told him he would make some speed
Of his return : he answered, doe not so,

Stubber not businesse for my sake Bassanio,
But stay the very riping of the time,

And for the Jew's bond which he hath of me,
Let it not enter in your mind of love :

Be merry, and employ your chiefest thoughts
To courtship, and such fair ostents of love

As shall conveniently become you there ;
And even there his eye being big with tears,

Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,
And with affection wondrous sensible

He wrung Bassanio's hand, and so they parted.
Sal. I think he only loves the world for him.

I pray thee let us go and find him out
And quicken his embraced heaviness

With some delight or other.
Sal. Doe we so.

Exeunt.

Enter Nerissa and a Serviter.

Ner. Quick, quick I pray thee, draw the curtain strait,
The

The Prince of Arragon hath tane his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Enter Arragon, his train, and Portia.
Flor. Cornets.

Por. Behold there stand the caskets noble Prince,
If you choofe that wherein I am contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptiall rights be solemniz'd :
But if thou fail, without more speech my Lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.

Ar. I am enjoyn'd by oath to observe three things ;
First, never to unfold to any one
Which casket 'twas I chose, next, if I fail
Of the right casket, never in my life
To wooe a Maid in way of marriage :
Lastly, if I doe fail in fortune of my choise,
Immediately to leave you, and be gone.

Por. To these injunctions every one doth swear
That comes to hazard for my worthlesse selfe.

Ar. And so have I addrest me, fortune now
To my hearts hope : gold, silver, and base lead.
Who chooseth me, must give and hazard all he hath.
You shall look fairer ere I give or hazard.

What sayes the golden chest, ha, let me see :
Who chooseth me, shall gain what many men desire :
What many men desire, that many may be meant
By the fool multitude that choofe by show,
Not learning more then the fond eye doth teach,
Which payes not to th interior, but like the Martlet
Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
Even in the force and rode of casualty.

I will not choofe what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits,
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.
Why then to thee thou Silver treasure house,
Tell me once more, what title thou dost bear :
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserves :
And well said too, for who shall go about
To cozen fortune, and be honourable
Without the stamp of merit, let none presume
To wear an undeserved dignity :
O that estates, degrees, and offices,
Were not deriv'd corruptly, and that clear honour
Were purchast by the merit of the wearer ;
How many then should cover that stand bare ?
How many be commanded that command ?
How much low pleasantry would then be gleaned
From the true seed of honour ? And how much honour
Pickt from the chaffe and ruine of the times,
To be new varnish't : Well, but to my choise.
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserves.
I will assume desert ; give me a key for this,
And instantly unlock my fortunes here.

Por. Too long a pause for that which you find there.

Ar. What's here, the portrait of a blinking idiot
Presenting me a scedule, I will read it :
How much unlike art thou to Portia ?
How much unlike my hopes and my deservings ?
Who chooseth me, shall have as much as he deserves.
Did I deserve no more then a fools head ?
Is that my prize ? are my deserts no better ?

Po. To offend and judge are distinct offices,
And of opposed natures.

Ar. What is here ?

The fire seven times tried this,

*Seven times tried that judgement is,
That did never choofe amiss,
Some there be that shadows kisse,
Such have but a shadowes blisse :
There be fools alive I wis
Silver'd o're, and so was this :
Take what Wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head :
So be gone sir, you are sped.*

Ar. Still more fool I shall appear
By the time I linger here,
With one fools head I came to wooe,
But I go away with two.
Sweet adieu, I'll keep my oath,
Patiently to bear my wroath.

Por. Thus hath the candle sing'd the moth :
O these deliberate fools when they do choofe,
They have the wisdom by their wit to loofe.

Ner. The ancient saying is no heresie,
Hanging and wiving goes by destiny.

Por. Come draw the curtain Nerrissa.

Enter Messenger.

Mes. Where is my Lady ?

Por. Here, what would my Lord ?

Mes. Madam, there is a-lighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes before
To signifie th'approaching of his Lord,
From whom he bringeth sensible regrets ;
To wit (besides commends and courteous breath)
Gifts of rich value ; yet I have not seen
So likely an Ambassadour of love.
A day in April never came so sweet
To show how costly Summer was at hand ,
As this fore-spurrer comes before his Lord.

Por. No more I pray thee, I am half a feard
Thou wilt say anon he is some kin to thee,
Thou spend'st such high-day wit in praising him :
Come come Nerrissa, for I long to see
Quick Cupids Post, that comes so mannerly.

Ner. Bassanio Lord, love if thy will it be. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Solanio and Salarino.

Sol. Now, what newes on the Ryalto ?

Sal. Why yet it lives there unchecked, that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wrackt on the narrow Seas; the Goodwins I think they call the place, a very dangerous flat, and fatall, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossips report be an honest woman of her word.

Sol. I would she were as lying a gossip in that, as ever knapt Ginger, or made her neighbours believe she wept for the death of a third husband : but it is true, without any slips of prolixity, or crossing the plain high-way of talk, that the good Antonio, the honest Antho. O that I had a title good enough to keep his name company !

Sal. Come, the full stop.

Sol. Ha, what sayest thou, why the end is, he hath lost a ship.

Sal.

Sal. I would it might prove the end of his losses.

Sol. Let me say Amen betimes, least the Devil crosse my prayer, for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew. How now Shylocke, what newes among the Merchants?

Enter Shylocke.

Shy. You knew, none so well, none so well as you, of my daughters flight.

Sal. That's certain, I for my part knew the Tailor that made the wings she flew withall.

Sol. And Shylocke for his own part knew the bird was fledg'd, and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the Dam.

Shy. She is damn'd for it.

Sal. That's certain, if the devil may be her Judge.

Shy. My own flesh and blood to rebell.

Sol. Out upon it old carrion, rebels it at these yeares.

Shy. I say my Daughter is my flesh and blood.

Sal. There is more difference between thy flesh and hers, then between Jet and Ivory, more between your bloods, then there is between red wine and rhennish: but tell us, doe you hear whether Antonio have had any losse at sea or no?

Shy. There I have another bad match, a bankrout, a prodigall, who dare scarce shew his head on the Ryalta, a beggar that was us'd to come so smug upon the Mart: let him look to his bond, he was wont to call me Usurer, let him look to his bond, he was wont to lend money for a Christian curstie, let him look to his bond.

Sal. Why I am sure if he forfeit, thou wilt not take his flesh, what's that good for?

Shy. To bait fish withall, if it will feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge, he hath disgrac'd me, and hindered me halfe a million, laught at my losses, mockt at my gains, scorned my Nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies, and what's the reason? I am a Jew: Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimentions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same Winter and Summer as a Christian is? if you prick us, doe we not bleed? if you tickle us, doe we not laugh? if you poyson us, doe we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? if we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that. If a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his humility, revenge? If a Christian wrong a Jew, what should his sufferance be by a Christian example? why revenge. The villany you teach me I will execute, and it shall go hard but I will better the instruction,

Enter a man from Antonio.

Gentlemen, my Master Antonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both.

Sal. We have been up and down to seek him.

Enter Tuball.

Sol. Here comes another of the tribe, a third cannot be matcht, unlesse the devil himself turn Jew.

Exeunt Gentlemen.

Shy. How now Tuball, what newes from Genova? hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did hear of her, but cannot find her.

Shy. Why there, there, there, there, a Diamond gone cost me two thousand Ducats in Frankford; the curse never fell upon our Nation till now, I never felt it till now, two thousand Ducats in that, and other precious, precious jewels: I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the jewels in her care: would she were heaft at my foot, and the Ducats in her Coffin: no newes of them, why so? and I know not how much is spent in the search: why then losse upon losse, the thief gone with so much, and so much to find the thief, and no satisfaction, no revenge, nor no ill luck stirring, but what lights a my shoulders, no sighs but a my breathing, no teares but a my shedding.

Tub. Yes, other men have ill luck too, Antonio as I heard in Genova.

Shy. What, what, what, ill luck, ill luck.

Tub. Hath an Argosie cast away coming from Tripolis.

Shy. I thank God, I thank God, is it true, is it true?

Tu. I spoke with some of the Saylers that escaped the wrack.

Shy. I thank thee good Tuball, good newes, good newes: ha, ha, here in Genova.

Tu. Your daughter spent in Genova, as I heard, one night fourscore Ducats,

Shy. Thou stick'st a Dagger in me, I shall never see my gold again, fourscore Ducats at a sitting, fourscore Ducats:

Tu. There came divers of Antonio's Creditors in my company to Venice, that swear he cannot choose but break.

Shy. I am very glad of it, I'll plague him, I'll torture him, I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them shewed me a Ring that he had of your Daughter for a Monkie.

Shy. Out upon her, thou torturest me Tuball, it was my Turkis, I had it of Leah when I was a Batchelor: I would not have given it for a wilderness of Monkies.

Tub. But Antonio is certainly undone.

Shy. Nay, that's true, that's very true, go Tuball, see me an Officer, bespeak him a fortnight before, I will have the heart of him if he forfeit, for were he ought of Venice, I can make what merchandize I will: go Tuball, and meet me at our Synagogue, go good Tuball, at our Synagogue Tuball.

Exeunt.

Enter Bassanio, Portia, Gratiano, and all their train.

Por. I pray you tarry, pause a day or two Before you hazard; for in choosing wrong I lose your company; therefore forbear a while, There's something tells me (but it is not love) I would not lose you, and you know your self, Hate counsells not in such a quality; But least you should not understand me well, And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought; I would detain you here some moneth or two Before you venture for me. I could teach you How to choose right, but then I am forsworn; So will I never be, so may you misse me, But if you doe, you'll make me with a sin, That I had been forsworn: Beshrew your eyes, They have o're-lookt me and divided me, One half of me is yours, the other halfe Mine own I would say: but first mine, then yours, And so all yours; O these naughty times Put bars between the owners and their rights, And so though yours, not yours (prove it so) Let fortune go to hell for it, not I. I speak too long, but 'tis to peize the time, To ich it, and draw it out in length, To stay you from election.

Baf. Let me choofe,
For as I am, I live upon the rack.

Por. Upon the rack Baffanio, then confesse
What treason there is mingled with your love.

Baf. None but that ugly treason of mistrust,
Which makes me fear the enjoying of my love :
There may as well be amity and life,

'Tween snow and fire, as treason and my love,
Por. I, but I fear you speak upon the rack,
Where men enforced do speak any thing.

Baf. Promise me life, and I'll confesse the truth.

Por. Well then, confesse and live.

Baf. Confesse and love
Had been the very summe of my confession :
O happy torment, when my torturer
Doth teach me answers for deliverance :

But let me to my fortune and the caskets.

Por. Away then, I am lockt in one of them,
If you doe love me, you will find me out.
Nerrissa and the rest, stand all aloof,
Let musick sound while he doth make his choyce,
Then if he loose he makes a Swan-like end,
Fading in musick. That the comparison
May stand more proper, my eye shall be the stream
And watry death-bed for him : he may win,
And what is musick then ? Then musick is Even as the flourish, when true subjects bowe
To a new crowned Monarch : Such it is,
As are those dulcet sounds in break of day,
That creep into the dreaming bride-grooms ear,
And summon him to marriage. Now he goes
With no lesse presence, but with much more love
Then young Alcides, when he did redeem
The Virgin-tribute, paid by howling Troy
To the Sea-monster : I stand for sacrifice,
The rest aloof are the Dardanian wives :
With bleared visages come forth to view
The issue of th' exploit : Go Hercules,
Live thou, I live, with much much more dismay
I view the fight, than thou that mak'st the fray.

Here Musick.

A Song the whilst Bassanio comments on the Caskets to himself.

*Tell me where is fancie bred,
Or in the heart, or in the head :*

How begot, how nourished.

It is engendred in the eyes,

With gazing fed, and Fancie dies,

In the cradle where it lies :

Let us all ring Fancies knell.

I'll begin it.

Ding, dong, bell,

All. Ding, dong, Bell.

Bass. So may the outward shewes be least themselves,
The world is still deceiv'd with ornament.
In Law what Plea so tainted and corrupt,
But being season'd with a gracious voyce,
Obscures the show of evil ? In Religion,
What damned error, but some sober brow
Will blesse it, and approve it with a text,
Hiding the grossness with fair ornament :
There is no vice so simple, but assumes
Some mark of virtue on his outward parts ;

How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false
As stayres of sand, wear yet upon their chins
The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars ?
Who inward searcht, have livers white as milk,
And these assume but valours excrement,
To render them redoubted. Look on beauty,
And you shall see 'tis purchast by the weight,
Which therein works a miracle in nature,
Make them lightest that wear most of it :
So are those crisped snakie golden locks
Which makes such wanton gambois with the winde
Upon supposed fairnesse, often known
To be the dowrie of a second head,
The scull that bred them in the Sepulcher.
Thus ornament is but the gilded shore
To a most dangerous sea : the beautilous scarfe
Vailing an Indian beauty : In a word,
The seeming truth which cunning times put on
To intrap the wisest. Therefore thou gaudy gold,
Hard food for Midas, I will none of thee,
Nor none of thee thou pale and common drudge
'Tween man and man : but thou, thou meager lead,
Which rather threatnest than dost promise ought,
Thy palenesse moves me more than eloquence,
And here choofe I, joy be the consequence.

Por. How all the other passions fleet to ayre,
As doubtfull thoughts, and rash embrac'd despair :
And shuddring fear, and green-eyed jealousy.
O love be moderate, allay thy exasie,
In measure rain thy joy, scant this excess,
I feel too much thy blessing, make it lesse,
For fear I surfeit.

Bass. What find I here ?

Fair Portias counterfeit. What demy god
Hath come so near creation ? move these eyes ?
Or whether riding on the bals of mine
Seem they in motion ? Here are sever'd lips
Parted with sugar breath, so sweet a barre
Should sunder such sweet friends : here in her haire
The Painter plays the Spider and hath woven
A golden mesh t'intrap the hearts of men
Faster then Gnats in Cobwebs : but her eyes,
How could he see to doe them ? having made one,
He thinks it should have power to steal both his
And leave it selfe unfurnisht : Yet look how far
The substance of my praise doth wrong this shadow
In underprising, so far this shadow
Doth limp behind the substance. Here's the scrowle,
The continent, and summary of my fortune.

*Then that choofe not by the view,
Chance as fair, and choofe as true.*

Since this fortune falls to you,

Be content, and seek no new.

If you be well pleased with this,

And hold your fortune for your blisse,

Turn you where your Lady is,

And claim her with a loving kisse.

A gentle scrowle ; Fair Lady, by your leave,
I come by note to give, and to receive,
Like one of two contending in a prize
That thinks he hath done well in peoples eyes :
Hearing applause and univerfall shout,
Giddy in spirit, still gazing in a doubt
Whether those peales of praise be his or no.

So thrice fair Lady stand I even so,
As doubtfull whether what I see be true,
Untill confirm'd, sign'd, ratified by you.

Por. You see my Lord Bassanio where I stand,
Such as I am; though for my self alone
I would not be ambitious in my wish,
To wish my self much better, yet for you,
I would be trebled twenty times my self,
A thousand times more fair, ten thousand times
More rich, that to stand high in your account,
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Exceed account: but the full summe of me
Is summe of nothing: which to terme in grosse,
Is an unlesioned Girl, unschoold, unpractiz'd:
Happy is this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn: happier then in this
She is nor bread so dull but she can learn;
Happiest of all is, that her gentle spirit
Commits it self to yours to be directed,
As from her Lord, her Governour, her King.
My self, and what is mine, to you and yours
Is now converted. But now I was the Lord
Of this fair Mansion, Master of my Servants,
Queen o're my self, and even now: but now
This House, these Servants, and this same my self
Are yours, my Lord, I give them with this Ring,
Which when you part from, loose or give away,
Let it preface the ruine of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

Bas. Madam, you have bereft me of all words,
Onely my blood speaks to you in my veins,
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As after some oration fairly spoke
By a beloved Prince, there doth appear
Among the buzzing pleased multitude,
Where every something being blent together,
Turns to a wild of nothing, save of joy
Exprest, and not exprest: but when this Ring
Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence,
O then be bold to say Bassanio's dead.

Ner. My Lord and Lady, it is now our time
That have stood by and seen our wishes prosper,
To cry good joy, good joy my Lord and Lady.

Gra. My Lord Bassanio, and my gentle Lady,
I wish you all the joy that you can wish:
For I am sure you can wish none from me;
And when your honours mean to solemnize
The bargain of your faith: I doe beseech you
Even at that time I may be married too.

Bas. With all my heart, so thou canst get a Wife.

Gra. I thank your Lordship, you have got me one.
My eyes my Lord can look as swift as yours:
You saw the Mistis, I beheld the Maid:
You lov'd, I lov'd for intermission,
No more pertains to me my Lord than you;
Your fortune stood upon the caskers there,
And so did mine too, as the matter falls:
For wooing heat untill I sweat again,
And swearing till my very rough was dry
With oathes of love, at last, if promise last,
I got a promise of this fair one here
To have her love: provided that your fortune
Atchiev'd her Mistresse.

Por. Is this true Nerrissa.

Ner. Madam it is so, so you stand pleas'd withall.

Bas. And doe you Gratiano mean good faith?

Gra. Yes faith my Lord.

Bas. Our feast shall be much honoured in your marriage.

Gra. We'll play with them, the first boy for a thousand Ducats.

Ner. What and stake down?

Gra. No, we shall ne're win at that sport, and stake down.

But who comes here? Lorenzo and his Infidell?

What and my old Venetian friend Salerio?

Enter Lorenzo, Jessica, and Salerio

Bas. Lorenzo and Salerio, welcome hither.
If that the youth of my new interest here
Have power to bid you welcome: by your leave
I bid my very friends and Countermen
Sweet Portia welcome.

Por. So doe I my Lord, they are intirely welcome.

Lor. I thank your honour; for my part my Lord,
My purpose was not to have seen you here,
But meeting with Salerio by the way,
Hee did intreat me past all saying nay
To come with him along.

Sal. I did my Lord.
And have reason for it, Signior Antonio
Commends him to you.

Bas. Ere I ope this Letter
I pray you tell me how my good friend doth.

Sal. Not sick my Lord, unlesse it be in mind,
Nor well, unlesse in mind: his Letter there
Will shew you his estate.

Opens the Letter.

Gra. Nerrissa, cheer yond stranger, bid her welcome.
Your hand Salerio, what's the newes from Venice?
How doth that royall Merchant good Antonio,
I know he will be glad of our successe,
We are the Jasons, we have won the fleece.

Sal. I would you had won the fleece that he hath lost.

Por. There are some shrewd contents in yond same Paper,

That steals the colour from Bassanio's cheek,
Some dear friend dead, else nothing in the world
Could turn so much the constitution
Of any constant man. What worse and worse?
With leave Bassanio I am half your self,
And must freely have the halfe of any thing
That this same paper brings you.

Bas. O sweet Portia,
Here are a few of the unpleasant'st words
That ever blotted paper. Gentle Lady,
When I did first impart my love to you,
I freely told you all the wealth I had
Ran in my veins: I was a Gentleman,
And then I told you true: and yet dear Lady,
Rating my self at nothing, you shall see
How much I was a Braggart, when I told you
My state was nothing, I should then have told you
That I was worse then nothing: for indeed
I have ingag'd my self to a dear friend,
Ingag'd my friend to his mee enemy
To feed my meanes. Here is a Letter Lady,
The paper as the body of my friend,
And every word in it a gaping wound
Issuing life blood. But is it true Salerio?

Hath

Hath all his ventures fail'd ! what not one hit !
From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England,
From, Lisbon, Barbary, and India,
And not one Vessell scape the dreadfull touch
Of Merchant-marring Rocks?

Sal. Not one my Lord.
Besides, it should appear, that if he had
The present money to discharge the Jew,
He would not take it : never did I know
A creature that did bear the shape of man
So keen and greedy to confound a man.
He plies the Duke at morning and at night,
And doth impeach the freedome of the state
If they deny him justice. Twenty Merchants,
The Duke himself, and the Magnificoes
Of greatest port have all perswaded with him,
But none can drive him from the envious plea
Of forfeiture of justice, and his bond.

Jes. When I was with him, I have heard him swear
To Tuball and to Chus, his Countermen,
That he would rather have Antonio's flesh,
Then twenty times the value of the summe
That he did owe him : and I know my Lord,
If law, authority, and power deny not,
It will go hard with poor Antonio.

Por. Is it your dear friend that is thus in trouble ?

Bas. The dearest friend to me, the kindest man,
The best condition'd, and unwearied spirit
In doing courtesies : and one in whom
The ancient Romane honour more appears
Then any that draws breath in Italy.

Por. What summe owes he the Jew ?

Bas. For me three thousand Ducats.

Por. What, no more ?

Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond :
Double six thousand, and then treble that,
Before a friend of this description
Shall lose a hair through my Bassanio's fault.
First go with me to Church, and call me wife,
And then away to Venice to your friend :
For never shall you lie by Portia's side
With an unquiet soul. You shall have gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times over.
When it is paid, bring your true friend along,
My maid Nerrissa, and my self mean time
Will live as Maids and Widows ; come away,
For you shall hence upon your wedding day :
Bid your friends welcome, show a merry cheer,
Since you are dear bought, I will love you dear.
But let me hear the Letter of your friend.

Sweet Bassanio, my ships have all miscarried, my Creditors grow cruell, my estate is very low, my bond to the Jew is forfeit, & since in paying it, it is impossible I should live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might see you at my death : notwithstanding use your pleasure, if your love doe not perswade you to come, let not my Letter.

Por. O love ! dispatch all businesse and be gone.

Bas. Since I have your good leave to go away,
I will make haste ; but till I come again,
No bed shall e're be guilty of my stay,
Nor rest be interposer 'twixt us twain.

Exeunt.

Enter the Jew, and Solanio, and Antonio, and the Jaylor.

Jew. Jaylor, look to him, tell not me of mercy,

This is the fool that lends out money gratis.
Jaylor, look to him.

Ant. Hear me yet good Shylocke.

Jew. I'll have my bond, speak not against my bond,
I have sworn an oath that I will have my bond :
Thou call'dst me dog before thou hadst a cause,
But since I am a dog, beware my phangs,
The Duke shall grant me justice : I doe wonder Thou naughty Jaylor, that thou art so fond
To come abroad with him at his request.

Ant. I pray thee hear me speak.

Jew. I'll have my bond, I will not hear thee speak,
I'll have my bond, and therefore speak no more.
I'll not be made a soft and dull-ey'd fool,
To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessours : follow not,
I'll have no speaking, I will have my bond. Exit. Jew.

Sol. It is the most impenetrable curre
That ever kept with men.

Ant. Let him alone,
I'll follow him no more with bootlesse prayers :
He seeks my life, his reason well I know ;
I oft deliver'd from his forfeitures
Many that have at times made mone to me,
Therefore he hates me.

Sol. I am sure the Duke will never grant this forfeiture to hold.

An. The Duke cannot deny the course of law ;
For the commodity that strangers have
With us in Venice, if it be denied,
Will much impeach the justice of the State,
Since that the trade and profit of the City
Consisteth of all Nations. Therefore go,
These griefs and losses have so bated me,
That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh
To morrow to my bloody Creditor.
Well Jaylor, on, pray God Bassanio come
To see me pay his debt, and then I care not. Exeunt.

Enter Portia, Nerrissa, Lorenzo, Jessica, a man of Portiaes.

Lor. Madam, although I speak it in your presence,
You have a noble and a true conceit
Of god-like amity, which appears most strongly
In bearing thus the absence of your Lord.
But if you knew to whom you shew this honour,
How true a Gentleman you send relief,
How dear a lover of my Lord your Husband,
I know you would be prouder of the work
Then customary bounty can enforce you.

Por. I never did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now : for in companions
That doe converse and waste the time together,
Whose soules doe bear an equal yoke of love,
There must be needs a like proportion
Of lineaments, of manners and of spirit,
Which makes me think that this Antonio
Being the bosome lover of my Lord,
Must needs be like my Lord. If it be so,
How little is the cost I have bestowed
In purchasing the semblance of my soul,
From out the state of hellish cruelty.
This comes too near the praising of my self,
Therefore no more of it : here other things,
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands,

The husbandry and manage of my house,
Untill my Lords return ; for mine own part
I have toward heaven breath'd a secret vow,
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Onely attended by Nerrissa here,
Untill her husband and my Lords return :
There is a monastery two miles off,
And there we will abide. I doe desire you
Not to deny this imposition,
The which my love and some necessity
Now layes upon you.

Lor. Madam, with all my heart,
I shall obey you in all fair commands.

Por. My people doe already know my minde,
And will acknowledge you and Jessica
In place of Lord Bassanio and my self.
So fare you well till we shall meet again.

Lor. Fair thoughts and happy houres attend on you.

Ies. I wish your Ladiship all hearts content.

Por. I thank you for your wish, and am well pleas'd
To wish it back on you : fare you well Jessica. Exeunt.
Now Balthazar, as I have ever found thee honest true,
So let me find thee still : take this same Letter,

And use thou all the endeavour of a man,
In speed to Mantua, see thou render this.
Into my Cousin's hand, Doctor Bellario,
And look what notes and garments he doth give thee,
Bring them I pray thee with imagin'd speed
Unto the Traneēt, to the common Ferrie
Which trades to Venice ; waste no time in words,
But get thee gone, I shall be there before thee.

Bal. Madam, I go with all convenient speed.

Pa. Come on Nerrissa, I have work in hand
That you yet know not of, we'll see our husbands
Before they think of us ?

Ner. Shall they see us ?

Por. They shall Nerrissa : but in such a habit,
That they shall think we are accomplished
With that we lack ; I'll hold thee any wager
When we are both accoutred like young men,
I'll prove the prettier fellow of the two,
And wear my Dagger with the braver grace,
And speak between the change of man and boy,
With a reed voyce, and turn two mincing steps
Into a manly stride, and speak of frayes
Like a fine bragging youth : and tell quaint lies
How honourable Ladies sought my love,
Which I denying, they fell sick and died.
I could not doe withall : then I'll repent,
And wish for all that, that I had not kill'd them ;
And twenty of these puny lies I'll tell
That men shall swear I have discontinued schoole
Above a twelvemonth : I have within my minde
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Jacks,
Which I will practice.

Ner. Why, shall we turn to men ?

Por. Fie, what a question's that,
If thou wert near a leud interpreter ?
But come, I'll tell thee all my whole device
When I am in my Coach, which stayes for us
At the Parke Gate ; and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twenty miles to day. Exeunt.

Enter Clown and Iessica.

Clown. Yestruly ; for look you, the sins of the Father are to be laid upon the children, therefore I promise you,

I fear you, I was alwayes plain with you, and so now I speak my agitation of the matter : therefore be of good cheer, for truly I think you are damn'd, there is but one hope in it that can doe you any good, and that is but a kind of bastard hope neither.

Ies. And what hope is that I pray thee ?

Clow. Marry you may partly hope that your father got you not, that you are not the Jew's Daughter.

Ies. That were a kind of bastard hope indeed, so the sins of my Mother should be visited upon me.

Clow. Truly then I fear you are damned both by Father and Mother, thus when I shun Scilla your Father, I fall into Charibdis your Mother ; well, you are gone both wayes.

Ies. I shall be saved by my Husband, he hath made me a Christian.

Clow. Truly the more to blame he, we were Christians enow before, e'ne as many as could well live one by another : this making of Christians will raise the price of Hogs, if we grow all to be Porke-eaters, we shall not shortly have a rasher on the coales for money.

Enter Lorenzo.

Ies. I'll tell my Husband Lancelot what you say, here he comes.

Lor. I shall grow jealous of you shortly Lancelot, if you thus get my Wife into corners ?

Ies. Nay you need not fear us Lorenzo, Lancelot and I are out, he tells me flatly there is no mercy for me in heaven, because I am a Jewes daughter : and he sayes you are no good member of the common-wealth, for in converting Jewes to Christians, you raise the price of Porke.

Lor. I shall answer that better to the Common-wealth than you can the getting up of the Negroes belly : the Moore is with Childe by you Lancelot.

Clow. It is much that the Moore should be more then reason : but if she be lesse then an honest woman, she is indeed more then I took her for.

Lor. How every fool can play upon the word, I think the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence, and discourse grow commendable in none onely but Parrats :
go in sirra, bid them prepare for dinner ?

Clow. That is done sir, they have all stomacks ?

Lor. Goodly Lord, what a wit-snapper are you, then bid them prepare dinner.

Clow. That is done too sir, onely cover is the word.

Lor. Will you cover than sir ?

Clow. Not so sir neither, I know my duty.

Lor. Yet more quarrelling with occasion, wilt thou shew the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant ; I pray thee understand a plain man in his plain meaning : go to thy fellows, bid them cover the table, serve in the meat and we will come in to dinner.

Clow. For the table sir, it shall be serv'd in, for the meat sir, it shall be covered, for your comming in to dinner sir, why let it be as humours and conceits shall govern. Exit Clown.

Lor. O dear discretion, how his words are suted ;
The fool hath planted in his memory
An Army of good words, and I doe know
A many fools that stand in better place,
Garnisht like him, that for a trickhe word
Defie the matter : how cheer'st thou Jessica,
And now good sweet say thy opinion,

How

How dost thou like the Lord Bassanio's wife?

Jes. Past all expressing, it is very meet
The Lord Bassanio live an upright life
For having such a blessing in his Lady,
He findes the joyes of heaven here on earth,
And if on earth he doe not mean it, it
Is reason he should never come to heaven?
Why, if two gods should play some heavenly match,
And on the wager lay two earthly women,
And Portia one; there must be something else
Pawn'd with the other, for the poor rude world
Hath not her fellow.

Lo. Even such a husband
Hast thou of me, as she is for a wife.

Jes. Nay, but aske my opinion too of that?

Lor. I will anon, first let us go to dinner?

Jes. Nay, let me praise you while I have a stomach?

Lor. No pray thee, let it serve for table talke,
Then howsomere thou speak'st 'mong other things,
I shall digest it?

Jes. Well, I'll set you forth.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Duke, the Magnificoes, Anthonio, Bassanio, and Gratiano.

Duk. What, is Anthonio here?

Ant. Ready, so please your grace?

Du. I am sorry for thee, thou art come to answer
A stony adversary, an inhumane wretch,
Uncapable of pitty, void, and empty
From any dramme of mercy.

Ant. I have heard
Your grace hath tane great pains to qualifie
His rigorous course: but since he stands obdurate,
And that no lawfull means can carry me
Out of his envies reach, I doe oppose
My patience to his fury, and am arm'd
To suffer with a quietnesse of spirit,
The very tyranny and rage of his.

Du. Go one and call the Jew into the Court.

Sal. He is ready at the door, he comes my Lord.

Enter Shylocke.

Du. Make room, and let him stand before our face.
Shylocke, the world thinks, and I think so too,
That thou but lead'st this fashion of thy malice
To the last hour of act, and then 'tis thought
Thou'lt shew thy mercy and remorse more strange,
Than is thy strange apparent cruelty,
And where thou now exact'st the penalty,
Which is a pound of this poor Merchant's flesh,
Thou wilt not onely loose the forfeiture,
But touch'd with humane gentlenesse and love,
Forgive a moiety of the principall,
Glancing an eye of pitty on his losses
That have of late so huddled on his back,
Enow to presse a royall Merchant down;
And pluck commiseration of his state
From brassie bosomes, and rough hearts of flint,
From stubborn Turks and Tarters never train'd

To offices of tender courtesie,

We all expect a gentle answer Jew?

Jew. I have posselt your grace of what I purpose,
And by our holy Sabbath have I sworn
To have the due and forfeit of my bond.

If you deny it, let the danger light
Upon your Charter, and your Cities freedome.

You'll aske me why I rather choose to have
A weight of carrion flesh, then to receive

Three thousand Ducats? I'll not answer that:

But say it is my humour; Is it answered?

What if my house be troubled with a Rat,

And I be pleas'd to give ten thousand Ducats

To have it bair'd? What, are you answer'd yet?

Some men there are love not a gaping Pigge:

Some that are mad, if they behold a Cat:

And others, when the Bag-pipe sings i'th' nose,

Cannot contain their Urine for affection.

Masters of passion swayes it to the mood

Of what it likes or loathes, now for your answer:

As there is no firm reason to be rendred

Why he cannot abide a gaping Pigge?

Why he a harmlesse necessary Cat?

Why he a woollen Bag-pipe: but of force

Must yield to such inevitable shame,

As to offend himself being offended:

So can I give no reason, nor I will not,

More then a lodg'd hate, and a certain loathing

I bear Anthonio, that I follow thus

A loosing suit against him? Are you answered?

Bas. This is no answer thou unfeeling man,

To excuse the current of thy cruelty.

Jew. I am not bound to please thee with my answer.

Bas. Doe all men kill the thing they doe not love?

Jew. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?

Bas. Every offence is not a hate at first.

Jew. What, would'st thou have a Serpent sting thee twice?

Ant. I pray you think you question with a Jew:

You may as well go stand upon the beach,

And bid the main flood be at his usuall height,

Or even as well use question with the Wolfe,

The Ewe bleat for the Lamb: when you behold,

You may as well forbid the Mountain Pines

To wagge their high tops, and to make no noise

When they are fretted with the gusts of heaven:

You may as well doe any thing most hard,

As seek to soften that, than which what harder?

His Jewish heart. Therefore I doe beseech you

Make no more offers, use no farther meanes,

But with all brief and plain conveniency

Let me have judgement, and the Jew his will.

Bas. For thy three thousand Ducats here is six.

Jew. If every Ducat in six thousand Ducats

Were in six parts, and every part a Ducat,

I would not draw them, I would have my bond?

Du. How shalt thou hope for mercy, rendring none?

Jew. What judgement shall I dread doing no wrong?

You have among you many a purchas'd slave,

Which like your Asses, and your Dogs and Mules,

You use in abject and in slavish part,

Because you bought them. Shall I say to you,

Let them be free, marry them to your heirs?

Why sweat they under burthens? Let their beds

Be made as soft as yours: and let their pallars

Be season'd with such Viands: you will answer

The slaves are ours. So doe I answer you.
The pound of flesh which I demand of him
Is dearly bought, 'tis mine, and I will have it.
If you deny me, fie upon your Law,
There is no force in the decrees of Venice;
I stand for judgement, answer, shall I have it?

Du. Upon my power I may dismisse this Court,
Unlesse Bellario a learned Doctor,
Whom I have sent for to determine this,
Come here to day.

Sal. My Lord, here staves without A Messenger with Letters from the Doctor,
New come from Padua.

Du. Bring us the Letters, Call the Messengers.

Bas. Good, cheer Antonio. What man, courage yet:
The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and all,
Ere thou shalt loose for me one drop of blood.

Ant. I am a tainted Weather of the flock,
Meetest for death, the weakest kind of fruit
Drops earliest to the ground, so let me;
You cannot better be employ'd Bassanio,
Then to live still, and write mine Epitaph.

Enter Nerissa.

Du. Came you from Padua from Bellario?

Ner. From both.

My Lord Bellario greets your Grace.

Bas. Why dost thou whet thy knife so earnestly?

Jew. To cut the forfeiture from that bankrupt there.

Gra. Not on thy soale, but on thy soul harsh Jew,
Thou mak'st thy knife keen: but no metall can,
No, not the hangmans Axe bear half the keenness
Of thy sharp envy. Can no prayers pierce thee?

Jew. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.

Gra. O be thou damn'd inexorable dog,
And for thy life let justice be accus'd:
Thou almost mak'st me waver in my faith;
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That souls of animals infuse themselves
Into the trunks of men. Thy currish spirit
Govern'd a Woolf, who hang'd for humane slaughter,
Even from the Gallows did his fell soul fleet;
And whilst thou layest in thy unhallowed Damme,
Infus'd it self in thee: For thy desires
Are Woolvisish, bloody, sterv'd, and ravenous.

Jew. Till thou canst rail the seal from off my bond:
Thou but offend'st thy Lungs to speal so loud:
Repair thy wit good youth, or it will fall
To endlesse ruine. I stand here for Law.

Du. This Letter from Bellario doth commend
A young and Learned Doctor in our Court:
Where is he?

Ner. He attendeth here hard by
To know your answer, whether you'll admit him.

Du. With all my heart. Some three or four of you
Go give him courteous conduct to this place,
Mean time the Court shall hear Bellario's Letter.

Your Grace shall understand, that at the receipt of your Letter I am very sick: but in the instant that your messenger came, in loving visitation was with me a young Doctor of Rome, his name is Balthasar: I acquainted him with the Case in controversie, between the Jew and Antonio the Merchant: We turn'd ore many Books together: he is furnished with my opinion, which bettered with his own learning, the greatness whereof I cannot enough commend, comes with him at my importunity, to fill up your Graces request in my stead. I beseech you, let his lack of yeares be no impediment to let him lack a reverend estimation: for I never knew so young a body, with so old a head. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, whose triall shall better publish his commendation.

Enter Portia for Balthasar

Du. You hear the learn'd Bellario what he writes,
And here (I take it) is the Doctor come.

Give me your hand: Came you from old Bellario?

Por. I did my Lord.

Du. You are welcome: take your place;
Are you acquainted with the difference
That holds this present question in the Court.

Por. I am inform'd throughly of the Case.

Which is the Merchant here? and which the Jew?

Du. Antonio and old Shylocke, both stand forth.

Por. Is your name Shylocke?

Jew. Shylocke is my name.

Por. Of a strange nature is the sute you follow,
Yet in such rule, that the Venetian Law
Cannot impugne you as you doe proceed.
You stand within his danger, doe you not?

Ant. I, so he sayes.

Por. Doe you confesse the bond?

Ant. I doe.

Por. Then must the Jew be mercifull.

Jew. On what compulsion must I? Tell me that.

Por. The quality of mercy is not strain'd,
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath. It is twice blest,
It blesseth him that gives, and him that takes,
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest, it becomes
The throned Monarch better than his Crown.
His Scepter shewes the force of temporall power,
The attribute to awe and Majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of Kings:
But mercy is above this sceptred sway,
It is enthroned in the hearts of Kings,
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then shew likest Gods
When mercy seasons Justice. Therefore Jew,
Though Justice be thy plea, consider this,
That in the course of Justice, none of us
Should see salvation: we doe pray for mercy,
And that same prayer, doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy. I have spoke thus much
To mitigate the justice of thy plea:
Which if thou follow, this strict course of Venice
Must needs give sentence against the Merchant there.

Shy. My deeds upon my head, I crave the Law,
The penalty and forfeit of my bond.

Por. Is he not able to discharge the money?

Bas. Yes, here I tender it for him in the Court,
Yea, twice the summe, if that will not suffice,
I will be bound to pay it ten times o're,
On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart:
If this will not suffice, it must appear
That malice beares down truth. And I beseech you
Wrest once the Law to your authority.
To doe a great right, doe a little wrong.
And curbe this cruell devil of his will.

Por. It must not be, there is no power in Venice
Can alter a decree established:
'Twill be recorded for a President,

And

And many an error by the same example ;
Will rush into the state : It cannot be.

Jew. A Daniel come to judgement, yea a Daniel.
O wise young Judge, how doe I honour thee.

Por. I pray you look upon the bond.

Jew. Here 'tis most reverend Doctor, here it is.

Por. Shylocke, ther's thrice thy money offered thee.

Shy. An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven :
Shall I lay perjury upon my Soul ?
No not for Venice.

Por. Why this bond is forfeit,
And lawfully by this the Jew may claime
A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off
Nearest the Merchants heart ; be mercifull,
Take thrice thy money, bid me tear the bond.

Jew. When it is paid according to the tenure.
It doth appear you are a worthy Judge :
You know the Law, your exposition
Hath been most sound. I charge you by the Law,
Whereof you are a well-deserving pillar,
Proceed to judgement : By my soul I swear,
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me : I stay here on my bond.

An. Most heartily I doe beseech the Court
To give the judgement.

Por. Why then thus it is :
You must prepare your bosome for his knife.

Jew. O noble Judge, O excellent young man.

Por. For the intent and purpose of the Law
Hath full relation to the penalty,
Which here appeareth due upon the bond.

Jew. 'Tis very true : O wise and upright Judge,
How much more elder art thou then thy looks ?

Por. Therefore lay bare your bosome.

Jew. I, his brest,
So sayes the bond, doth it not noble Judge ?
Nearest his heart, those are the very words.

Por. It is so : Are there balance here to weigh the flesh ?

Jew. I have them ready.

Por. Have by some Surgeon, Shylock, on your charge
To stop his wounds, least he should bleed to death.

Jew. It is not nominated in the bond ?

Por. It is not so exprest : but what of that ?

'Twere good you doe so much for charity.

Jew. I cannot find it, 'tis not in the bond.

Por. Come Merchant, have you any thing to say,

Ant. But little : I am arm'd and well prepar'd,
Give me your hand Bassanio, fare you well.
Grieve not that I am faine to this for you :
For herein fortune shewes her self more kind
Then is his custome. It is still her use
To let the wretched man out-live his wealth,
To view with hollow eye, and wrinkled brow
An age of poverty. From which lingring penance
Of such a misery, doth she cut me off :
Commend me to your honourable Wife,
Tell her the proceffe of Antonio's end :
Say how I lov'd you ; speak me fair in death :
And when the tale is told, bid her be judge,
Whether Bassanio had not once a Love :
Repent not you that you shall lose your friend,
And he repents not that he payes your debt,
For if the Jew doe cut but deep enough,
I'll pay it instantly, with all my heart.

Bas. Antonio, I am married to a wife,

Which is as dear to me as life it self,
But life it self, my wife and all the world,
Are not with me esteem'd above thy life.
I would lose all, I sacrifice them all
Here to this devil, to deliver you.

Por. Your wife would give you little thanks for that,
If she were by to hear you make the offer.

Gra. I have a Wife whom I protest I love,
I would she were in heaven, so she could
Intreat some power to change this curish Jew.

Ner. 'Tis well you offer it behind her back,
The wish would make else an unquiet house. (ter

Jew. These be the Christian husbands : I have a daugh-
Would any of the stock of Barrabas
Had been her husband, rather then a Christian.
We trifle time, I pray thee pursue sentence.

Por. A pound of that same Merchants flesh is thine,
The Court awards it, and the law doth give it.

Jew. Most rightfull Judge.

Por. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast,
The Law allows it, and the Court awards it.

Jew. Most learned Judge, a sentence, come prepare.

Por. Tarry a little, there is something else,
This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood,
The words expressly are a pound of flesh :
Then take thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh,
But in the cutting it, if thou dost shed
One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods
Are by the Lawes of Venice confiscate
Unto the State of Venice.

Gra. O upright Judge.

Mark Jew, O learned Judge.

Shy. Is that the law ?

Por. Thy self shalt see the Act :
For as thou urgest justice, be assur'd
Thou shalt have justice more then thou desirest.

Gra. O learned Judge, mark Jew, a learned Judge.

Jew. I take this offer then, pay the bond thrice.
And let the Christian go.

Bas. Here is the money.

Por. Soft, the Jew shall have all justice, soft, no haste,
He shall have nothing but the penalty.

Gra. O Jew, an upright Judge, a learned Judge.

Por. Therefore prepare thee to cut off the flesh,
Shed thou no blood, nor cut thou lesse nor more
But just a pound of flesh : if thou tak'st more
Or lesse then a just pound, be it so much
As makes it light or heavy in the substance,
Or the division of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple, nay if the scale doe turn
But in the estimation of a hair,
Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. A second Daniel, a Daniel Jew,
Now infidell I have thee on the hip.

Por. Why doth the Jew pause, take thy forfeiture.

Shy. Give me my principall, and let me go.

Bas. I have it ready for thee, here it is.

Por. He hath refus'd it in the open Court,
He shall have merely justice and his bond.

Gra. A Daniel still say I, a second Daniel,
I thank thee Jew for teaching me that word.

Shy. Shall I not have barely my principall ?

Por. Thou shalt have nothing but the forfeiture,
To be taken so at thy perill Jew.

Shy. Why then the Devil give him good of it :
I'll stay no longer question.

Por.

Por. Tarry Jew,
The Law hath yet another hold on you.
It is enacted in the Lawes of Venice,
If it be proved against an Alien,
That by direct, or indirect attempts
He seek the life of any Citizen,
The party 'gainst the which he doth contrive,
Shall seize one half his goods, the other half
Comes to the privy Coffer of the State,
And the offenders life lies in the mercy
Of the Duke onely, 'gainst all other voyce.
In which predicament I say thou standst :
For it appeares by manifest proceeding,
That indirectly, and directly too
Thou had contriv'd against the very life
Of the defendant : and thou hast incurr'd
The danger formerly by me rehearst.
Down therefore, and beg mercy of the Duke.

Gra. Beg that thou maist have leave to hang thy self,
And yet thy wealth being forfeit to the state,
Thou hast not left the value of a cord,
Therefore thou must be hang'd at the states charge.

Duk. That thou shalt see the difference of our spirit,
I pardon thee thy life before thou aske it :
For half thy wealth, it is Antonio's ;
The other halfe comes to the generall state,
Which humbleness may drive unto a fine.

Por. I, for the state, not for Antonio.

Shy. Nay, take my life and all, pardon not that,
You take my house, when you doe take the prop
That doth sustain my house : you take my life.
When you doe take the meanes whereby I live.

Por. What mercy can you render him Antonio ?

Gra. A Halter Gratis, nothing else for Gods sake.

Ant. So please my Lord the Duke, and all the Court
To quit the fine for one half of his goods,
I am content : so he will let me have
The other halfe in use, to render it
Upon his death, unto the Gentleman
That lately stole his daughter.

Two things provided more, that for this favour
He presently become a Christian :
The other, that he doe record a gift
Here in the Court of all he dies posselt
Unto his Son Lorenzo, and his Daughter.

Duk. He shall doe this, or else I doe recant
The pardon that I late pronounced here.

Por. Art thou contented Jew ? what dost thou say ?

Shy. I am content.

Por. Clarke, draw a deed of gift.

Shy. I pray you give me leave to go from hence,
I am not well, send the deed after me.
And I will sign it.

Duk. Get thee gone, but doe it.

Gra. In Christning thou shalt have two Godfathers,
Had I been Judge, thou shouldst have had ten more,
To bring thee to the Gallows, not to the Font. Exit.

Duk. Sir, I entreat you with me home to dinner.

Por. I humbly doe desire your Grace of pardon,
I must away this night toward Padua,
And it is meet I presently set forth.

Duk. I am sorry that your leisure serves you not :
Antonio gratifie this Gentleman,
For in my mind, you are much bound to him.

Exit Duke and his train.

Bass. Most worthy Gentleman, I and my friend

Have by your wisdom been this day acquitted
Of grievous penalties, in lieu whereof
Three thousand Ducats due unto the Jew
We freely cope your courteous pains withall.

Ant. And stand indebted over and above
In love and service to you evermore.

Por. He is well paid that is well satisfied,
And I delivering you, am satisfied,
And therein doe account my self well paid.
My mind was never yet more mercenary.
I pray you know me when we meet again,
I wish you well, and so I take my leave.

Bass. Dear sir, of force I must attempt you further,
Take some remembrance of us as a tribute,
Not as a fee : grant me two things, I pray you
Not to deny me, and to pardon me.

Por. You presse me far, and therefore I will yield,
Give me your Gloves, I'll wear them for your sake,
And for your love I'll take this Ring from you,
Doe not draw back your hand, I'll take no more,
And you in love shall not deny me this ?

Bass. This Ring good sir, alais it is a trifle,
I will not shame my self to give you this.

Por. I will have nothing else but onely this,
And now me thinks I have a mind to it.

Bass. There's more depends on this then on the value,
The dearest Ring in Venice will I give you,
And find it out by proclamation,
Onely for this I pray you pardon me.

Por. I see sir you are liberall in offers,
You taught me first to beg, and now me thinks
You teach me how a beggar should be answer'd.

Bass. Good sir, this Ring was given me by my Wife,
And when she put it on, she made me vow
That I should neither sell, nor give, nor lose it.

Por. That excuse serves many men to save their gifts,
And if your Wife be not a mad woman,
And know how well I have deserv'd this Ring,
She would not hold out enemy for ever
For giving it to me : well, peace be with you. Exeunt.

Ant. My Lord Bassanio, let him have the Ring,
Let his deservings and my love withall
Be valued against your Wives commandment.

Bass. Go Gratiano, run and overtake him,
Give him the Ring, and bring him if thou canst
Unto Antonio's house, away, make haste. Exit Grat.
Come, you and I will thither presently,
And in the morning early will we both Flie toward Belmont, come Antonio. Exeunt.

Enter Portia and Nerissa.

Por. Enquire the Jews house our, give him this deed,
And let him sign it, we'll away to night,
And be a day before our Husbands home :
This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Fair sir, you are well o'retane :
My Lord Bassanio upon more advice,
Hath sent you here this Ring, and doth intreat
Your company at dinner.

Por. That cannot be ;
His Ring I doe accept most thankfully,
And so I pray you tell him : furthermore,
I pray you shew my youth old Shylock's house,

Grati. That will I doe.

Ner. Sir, I would speak with you :

Q

I'll

I'll see if I can get my Husbands Ring
Which I did make him swear to keep for ever.
Por. Thou maist I warrant, we shall have old swearing
That they did give the Rings away to men ;
But we'll out-face them, and out-swear them too :
Away, make haste, thou know'st where I will tarry.
Ner. Come good sir, will you shew me to this house.
Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Lorenzo and Jessica.

Lor. The Moon shines bright. In such a night as this,
When the sweet wind did gently kisse the trees,
And they did make no noyse : in such a night
Troilus me thinks mounted the Trojan wall,
And sigh'd his soul toward the Grecian tents
Where Cresseid lay that night

Jes. In such a night.
Did Thisbie fearfully o're-trip the dew,
And saw the Lyons shadow ere himself,
And ran dismayed away.

Loren. In such a night
Stood Dido with a Willow in her hand
Upon the wild Sea banks, and waft her Love
To come again to Carthage.

Jes. In such a night
Medea gathered the enchanted herbs
That did renew old Eson.

Loren. In such a night
Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew,
And with an Unthrif Love did run from Venice,
As far as Belmont.

Jes. In such a night.
Did young Lorenzo swear he lov'd her well,
Stealing her soul with many vowes of faith,
And ne're a true one.

Loren. In such a night
Did pretty Jessica (like a little shrow)
Slander her Love, and he forgave it her.

Jes. I would out-night you did no body come :
But hark, I hear the footing of a man.

Enter Messenger.

Lor. Who comes so fast in silence of the night ?

Mes. A friend. (friend?)

Loren. A friend, what friend, your name I pray you

Mes. Stephano is my name, and I bring word
My Mistress will before the break of day
Be here at Belmont, she doth stray about
By holy crosses, where she kneels and prayes
For happy wedlock houres.

Loren. Who comes with her ?

Mes. None but a holy Hermit and her maid,
I pray you is my Master yet return'd ?

Loren. He is not, nor we have not heard from him,
But go we in I pray thee Jessica,
And ceremoniously let us prepare
Some welcome for the Mistress of the house.

Enter Clown.

Clow. Sola, sola : wo ha ho, sola, sola.

Loren. Who calls ?

Clo. Sola, did you see M. Lorenzo, and Mrs. Lorenza,

Lor. Leave hollowing man, here. (sola, sola.)

Clo. Sola, where, where ?

Lor. Here ?

Clo. Tell him there's a Post come from my Master, with his horn full of good newes, my Master will be here ere morning sweet love.

Loren. Let's in, and there expect their comming.

And yet no matter : why should we go in ?
My friend Stephano signifie pray you
Within the house, your Mistress is at hand,
And bring your musick forth into the aire,
How sweet the Moon-light sleeps upon this bank,
Here will we sit, and let the sounds of Musick
Creep in our eares ; soft stilnesse, and the night
Become the tutches of sweet harmony :
Sit Jessica, looke how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlayed with patterns of bright gold,
There's not the smallest orbe which thou behold'st
But in his motion like an Angel sings,
Still quiring to the young eyed Cherubims ;
Such harmony is in immortall souls,
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close in it, we cannot hear it :
Come hoe, and wake Diana with a hymne,
With sweetest tutches pierce your Mistress eare,
And draw her home with Musick.

Jes. I am never merry when I hear sweet Musick.

Play Musick.

Lor. The reason is, your spirits are attentive :
For doe but note a wild and wanton herd
Or race of youthfull and unhandled colts,
Fetching mad bounds, bellowing and neighing loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blood,
If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound,
Or any ayre of Musick touch their eares,
You shall perceive them make a mutuall stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze
By the sweet power of musick : therefore the Poet
Did faine that Orpheus drew teares, stonies, and floods.
Since naught so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But musick for the time doth change his nature :
The man that hath no Musick in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoyles,
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections darke as Erebus,
Let no such man be trusted : marke the Musick.

Enter Portia and Nerrissa.

Por. That light we see is burning in my hall :
How farre that little candle throws his beames,
So shines a good deed in a naughty world. (die?)

Ner. When the Moon shone, we did not see the can-

Por. So doth the greater glory dim the lesse,
A substitute shines brightly as a King
Untill a King be by, and then his state
Empties it self, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters : musick, hark.

Musick.

Ner. It is your musick Madam of the house.

Por. Nothing is good I see without respect,
Me thinks it sounds much sweeter then by day ?

Ner. Silence bestowes that virtue on it Madam,

Por. The Crow doth sing as sweetly as the Larke

When

When neither is attended : and I think
The Nightingale if she should sing by day
When every Goote is cackling, would be thought
No better a Musician then the Wren ?
How many things by season, season'd are.
To their right praise, and true perfection :
Peace, how the Moon sleeps with Endimion,
And would not be awak'd.

Musick ceases.

Lor. That is the voyce,
O: I am much deceiv'd of Portia.

Por. He knows me as the blind man knows the Cuc-kow by the bad voyce.

Lor. Dear Lady welcome home.

Por. We have been praying for our husbands welfare,
Which speed we hope the better for our words,
Are they return'd ?

Lor. Madam, they are not yet :
But there is come a Messenger before
To signifie their coming.

Por. Go in Nerrissa,
Give order to my servants, that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence,
Nor you Lorenzo, Jessica nor you.

A Tucket sounds.

Lor. Your husband is at hand, I hear his Trumpet,
We are no tell-tales Madam, fear you not.

Por. This night me thinks is but the day-light sick,
It looks a little paler, 'tis a day :
Such as the day is, when the Sun is hid.

Enter Bassanio, Antonio, Gratiano, and their Followers.

Bas. We should hold day with the Antipodes,
If you would walke in absence of the Sun.

Por. Let me give light, but let me not be light,
For a light Wife doth make a heavy Husband,
And never be Bassanio so from me,
But God sort all : you are welcome home my Lord.

Bas. I thank you Madam, give welcome to my friend,
This is the man, this is Antonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.

Por. You should in all sence be much bound to him,
For as I hear he was much bound for you.

Ant. No more then I am well acquitted of.

Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house :
It must appear in other wayes then words,
Therefore I scant this breathing courtesie.

Gra. By yonder Moon I swear you doe me wrong,
In faith I gave it to the Judges Clerk,
Would he were gelt that had it for my part,
Since you doe take it, Love, so much at heart.

Por. A quarrell hoe already, what's the matter ?

Gra. About a hoop of Gold, a paltry Ring
That she did give me, whose Poetic was
For all the world like Cutlers Poetrie
Upon a Knife ; Love me, and leave me not.

Ner. What talke you of the Poetic or the value :
You swore to me when I did give it you,
That you would wear it till the hour of death,
And that it should lie with you in your grave,
Though not for me, yet for your vehement oathes,
You should have been respective and have kept it.
Gave it a Judges Clerk : but well I know
The Clerk will ne're wear hair on's face that had it,

Gra. He will, and if he live to be a man.

Ner. If, if a woman live to be a man.

Gra. Now by this hand I gave it to a youth,
A kind of boy, a little scrubbed boy,
No higher then thy self, the Judges Clerk,
A prating boy that begg'd it as a Fee,
I could not for my heart deny it him.

Por. You were too blame, I must be plain with you,
To part so slightly with your wives first gift,
A thing stuck on with oatches upon your finger,
And so riveted with faith unto your flesh.
I gave my Love a Ring, and made him swear
Never to part with it, and here he stands :
I dare be sworn to him, he would not leave it,
Nor pluck it from his finger, for the wealth
That the world masters. Now in faith Gratiano,
You give your wife too unkind a cause of grief,
And twere to me I should be mad at it.

Bas. Why I were best to cut my left hand off,
And swear I lost the Ring defending it.

Gra. My Lord Bassanio gave his Ring away
Unto the Judge that begg'd it, and indeed
Deserv'd it too : and then the boy his Clerk
That took some pains in writing, he begg'd mine,
And neither man nor master would take ought
But the two Rings.

Por. What Ring gave you my Lord ?
Not that, I hope, which you receiv'd of me.

Bas. If I could adde a lye unto a fault,
I would deny it : but you see my finger
Hath not the Ring upon it, it is gone.

Por. And even so void is your false heart of truth.
By heaven I will ne're come in your bed
Untill I see the Ring.

Ner. Nor I in yours, till I again see mine.

Bas. Sweet Portia;

If you did know to whom I gave the Ring,
If you did know for whom I gave the Ring,
And would conceive for what I gave the Ring,
And how unwillingly I left the Ring,
When nought would be accepted but the Ring,
You would abate the strength of your displeasure ?

Por. If you had known the virtue of the Ring,
Or half her worthinesse that gave the Ring,
Or your own honour to contain the Ring,
You would not then have parted with the Ring :
What man is there so much unreasonable,
If you had pleas'd to have defended it
With any tearmes of Zeale : wanted the modesty
To urge the thing held as a ceremony :
Nerrissa teaches me what to believe,
I'll die for't, but some Woman had the Ring ?

Bas. No by mine honour Madam, by my soul
No woman had it, but a civil Doctor,
Which did refuse three thousand Ducats of me,
And begg'd the Ring ; the which I did deny him,
And suffer'd him to go displeas'd away :
Even he that had held up the very life
Of my dear friend. What should I say, sweet Lady ?
I was inforc'd to send it after him,
I was beset with shame and courtesie,
My honour would not let ingratitude
So much besmeare it. Pardon me good Lady,
And by these blessed Candles of the night,
Had you been there, I think you would have begg'd
The Ring of me, to give thee worthy Doctor.

Por. Let not that Doctor e're come near my house,
 Since he hath got the Jewell that I loved,
 And that which you did swear to keep for me,
 I will become as liberall as you,
 I'll not deny him any thing I have,
 No, not my body, nor my husbands bed:
 Know him I shall, I am well sure of it.
 Lie not a night from home. Watch me like Argus,
 If you doe not, if I be left alone,
 Now by mine honour which is yet mine own,
 I'll have the Doctor for my bedfellow.

Ner. And I his Clerk: therefore be well advis'd
 How you doe leave me to mine own protection.

Gra. Well, doe you so: let not me take him then,
 For if I doe, I'll marre the young Clerks pen.

Ant. I am th' unhappy subject of these quarrells.

Por. Sir, grieve not you,
 You are welcome notwithstanding.

Bas. Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong,
 And in the hearing of these many friends
 I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes
 Wherein I see my self.-----

Por. Mark you but that?
 In both mine eyes he doubly sees himself:
 In each eye one, swear by your double self,
 And there's an oath of credit.

Bas. Nay, but hear me.
 Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear
 I never more will break an oath with thee.

Anth. I once did lend my body for thy wealth,
 Which but for him that had your husbands Ring
 Had quite miscarried. I dare be bound again,
 My soul upon the forfeit, that your Lord
 Will never more break faith advisedly.

Por. Then you shall be his surety: give him this,
 And bid him keep it better then the other.

Ant. Here Lord Bassanio, swear to keep this Ring.

Bas. By heaven it is the same I gave the Doctor.

Por. I had it of him: pardon Bassanio,
 For by this Ring the Doctor lay with me.

Ner. And pardon me my gentle Gratiano,
 For that same scrubbed boy the Doctor's Clerk
 In lieu of this, last night did lie with me.

Gra. Why this is like the mending of high wayes
 In Summer, where the wayes are faire enough:
 What, are we Cuckolds ere we have deserv'd it?

Por. Speak not so grossely, you are all amaz'd;
 Here is a Letter, read it at your leisure,
 It comes from Padua from Bellarion.
 There you shall find that Portia was the Doctor,
Nerrissa there her Clerk. Lorenzo here
 Shall witnesse I set forth as soon as you,
 And but even now return'd: I have not yet
 Entred my house. Antonio you are welcome,
 And I have better newes in store for you
 Than you expect: unseale this Letter soon,
 There you shall find three of your Argosies
 Are richly come to harbour suddenly.
 You shall not know by what strange accident
 I chanced on this Letter.

Anth. I am dumbe.

Bas. Were you the Doctor, and I knew you not?

Gra. Were you the Clerk, that is to make me Cuckold?

Ner. I, but the Clerk that never means to doe it,
 Unlesse he live untill he be a man.

Bas. (Sweet Doctor) you shall be my bedfellow,
 When I am absent, then lie with my wife.

Ant. (Sweet Lady) you have given me life and living;
 For here I read for certain that my ships
 Are safely come to Rhodes.

Por. How now Lorenzo?

My Clerk hath some good comforts too for you.

Ner. I, and I'll give them him without a fee.
 There doe I give to you and Jessica
 From the rich Jew, a speciall deed of gift
 After his death, of all he dies possess'd of.

Loren. Fair Ladies you drop Manna in the way
 Of starved people.

Por. It is almost morning,
 And yet I am sure you are not satisfied
 Of these events at full. Let us go in,
 And charge us there upon interrogatories,
 And we will answer all things faithfully.

Gra. Let it be so, the first interrogatory
 That my Nerrissa shall be sworn on, is,
 Whether till the next night she had rather stay,
 Or go to bed, now being two hours to day,
 But were the day come, I should wish it dark,
 Till I were couching with the Doctors Clerk.
 Well, while I live, I'll fear no other thing
 So sore, as keeping safe Nerrissas Ring.

Exeunt.

F I N I S.

As you like it.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orlando.

AS I remember Adam, it was upon this fashion bequeathed me by will, but a poor thousand Crowns, and as thou saist, charged my brother on his blessing to breed me well; and there begins my sadnesse: My brother Iaques he keeps at schoole, and report speaks goldenly of his profit: for my part, he keeps me rustically at home, or (to speak more properly) stayes me here at home unkept: for call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stalling of an Oxe? his horses are bred better, for besides that they are fair with their feeding, they are taught their mannage, and to that end Riders dearly hir'd: but I (his brother) gain nothing under him but growth, for the which his Animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I: besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gave me, his countenance seems to take from me: he lets me feed with his Hindes, barres me the place of a brother, and as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it Adam that grieves me, and the spirit of my Father, which I think is within me, begins to mutiny against this servitude. I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to avoid it.

Enter Oliver.

Adam. Yonder comes my Master, your brother.

Orla. Go apart Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up.

Oli. Now Sir, what make you here;

Orla. Nothing: I am not taught to make any thing.

Oli. What marre you then sir?

Orla. Marry sir, I am helping you to marre that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours with idleness.

Oli. Marry sir be better employed, and be naught a while.

Orla. Shall I keep your hogs, and eat huskes with them? what prodigall portion have I spent, that I should come to such penury?

Oli. Know you where you are sir?

Orla. O sir, very well: here in your Orchard.

Oli. Know you before home sir?

Orla. I, better then him I am before, knowes me: I know you are my eldest brother, and in the gentle condition of blood you should so know me: the courtesie of nations allows you my better, in that you are the first born, but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt us: I have as much of my father in me, as you; albeit I confesse your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

Oli. What Boy.

(this.

Orla. Come, come elder brother, you are too young in

Oli. Wilt thou lay hands on me villain?

Orla. I am no villain: I am the youngest Son of sir Rowland de Boyes: he was my father, and he is thrice a villain that sayes such a father begot villains: wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat, till this other had pull'd out thy tongue, for saying so, thou hast rail'd on thy self.

Adam. Sweet Master be patient, for your Fathers remembrance, be at accord.

Oli. Let me go I say.

Orla. I will not till I please: you shall hear me: my father charg'd you in his will to give me good education: you have train'd me up like a pezant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities: the spirit of my father growes strong in me, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor allottery my father left me by testament, with that I will go buy my fortunes.

Oli. And what wilt thou doe? beg when that is spent? Well sir, get you in. I will not long be troubled with you: you shall have some part of your will, I pray you leave me.

Orla. I will no further offend you, then becomes me for my good.

Oli. Get you with him, you old dogge.

Adam. Is old dogge my reward: most true, I have lost my teeth in your service: God be with my old master, he would not have spoke such a word. Exit Oli. Ad.

Oli. Is it even so, begin you to grow upon me? I will physick your ranknesse, and yet give no thousand crowns neither: holla Dennis.

Enter Dennis.

Den. Calls your worship.

Oli. Was not Charles the Duke's Wraftler here to speak with me?

Den. So please you, he is here at the door, and importunes access to you.

Oli. Call him in: 'twill be a good way: and to morrow the wraftling is.

Enter Charles.

Char. Good morrow to your worship.

Oli. Good Mounseur Charles: what's the new newes at the new Court?

Char. There's no newes at the Court sir, but the old newes: that is, the old Duke is banished by his younger brother the new Duke, and three or four loving Lords

Lords have put themselves into a voluntary exile with him, whose Lands and revenues enrich the new Duke, therefore he gives them good leave to wander.

Oli. Can you tell if Rosalind the Dukes daughter be banished with her Father?

Cha. O no; for the Dukes Daughter her Cousin so loves her, being ever from their Cradles bred together, that she would have followed their exile, or have died to stay behind her; she is at the Court, and no lesse beloved of her Uncle, then his own Daughter, and never two Ladies loved as they doe.

Oli. Where will the old Duke live?

Cha. They say he is already in the Forrest of Arden, and a many merry men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Hood of England: they say many young Gentlemen flock to him every day, and fleet the time carelessly as they did in the golden world.

Oli. What, you wastle to morrow before the new Duke?

Charl. Marry doe I sir: and I came to acquaint you with a matter: I am given, sir, secretly to understand, that your younger brother Orlando hath a disposition to come in disguis'd against me to try a fall: to-morrow, sir, I wastle for my credit, and he that escapes me without some broken limbe, shall acquit him well: your brother is but young and tender, and for your love I would be loth to foyle him, as I must for mine own honour if he come in: therefore out of my love to you, I came hither to acquaint you withall, that either you might stay him from his intendment, or brook such disgrace well as he shall run into, in that it is a thing of his own search, and altogether against my will.

Oli. Charles, I thank thee for thy love to me, which thou shalt find I will most kindly requite: I had my self notice of my Brothers purpose herein, and have by under-hand meanes laboured to dissuade him from it; but he is resolute. I tell the Charles, It is the stubbornest young fellow of France, full of ambition, an envious emulator of every mans good parts, a secret and villanous contriver against me his naturall brother: therefore use thy discretion, I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger. And thou wert best look too't; for if thou dost him any slight disgrace, or if he doe not mightily grace himself on thee, he will practice against thee by poyson, to entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath tane thy life by some indirect meanes or other: for I assure thee, (and almost with teares I speak it) there is not one so young, and so villanous this day living. I speak but brotherly of him, but should I anatomize him to thee, as he is, I must blush, and weep, and thou must look pale and wonder.

Cha. I am heartily glad I came hither to you: if he come to morrow, I'll give him his payment: if ever he go alone again, I'll never wastle for prize more: and so God keep your worship. Exit.

Oli. Farewell good Charles. Now will I stirre this Gaeffer: I hope I shall see an end of him, for my soul (yet I know not why) hates nothing more then he: yet he's gentle, never school'd and yet learned, full of noble device, of all sorts enchantingly beloved, and indeed so much in the heart of the world, and especially of my own people, who best know him, that I am altogether misprised: but it shall not be so long, this waster shall clear all: nothing remains, but that I kindle the boy thither, which now I'll go about. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Rosalind, and Celia.

Cel. I pray thee Rosalind, sweet my Coz, be merry.

Ros. Dear Celia; I show more mirth then I am mistress of, and would you yet were merrier: unless you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learn me how to remember my extraordinary pleasure.

Cel. Herein I see thou lov'st me not with the full waight that I love thee; if my Uncle thy banished father had banished thy Uncle the Duke my Father, so thou hadst been still with me, I could have taught my love to take thy father for mine; so wouldst thou, if the truth of thy love to me were so righteously temper'd, as mine is to thee.

Ros. Well, I will forget the condition of my estate, to rejoyce in yours.

Cel. You know my Father hath no child but I, nor none is like to have, and truly when he dies, thou shalt be his heir? for what he hath taken away from thy father perforce, I will render thee again in affection: by mine honour I will, and when I break that oath, let me turn monster: therefore my sweet Rose, my dear Rose be merry.

Ros. From henceforth I will, Coz, and devise sports: let me see, what think you of falling in love?

Cel. Marry I prethee doe, to make sport withall: but love no man in good earnest, nor no further in sport neither, then with safety of a pure blush, thou maist in honour come off again.

Ros. What shall be our sport then?

Cel. Let us sit and mock the good housewife Fortune from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be bestowed equally.

Ros. I would we could doe so: for her benefits are mightily misplaced, and the bountifull blind woman doth most mistake in her gifts to women.

Cel. 'Tis true, for those that she makes fair, she scarce makes honest, and those that she makes honest, she makes very ill-favouredly.

Ros. Nay now thou goest from Fortunes Office to Natures: Fortune reigns in gifts of the world, not in the lineaments of Nature.

Enter Clown.

Cel. No; when Nature hath made fair a creature, may she not by Fortune fall into the fire? though Nature hath given us wit to flout at Fortune, hath not Fortune sent in this fool to cut off this argument?

Ros. Indeed Fortune is there too hard for Nature, when Fortune makes Natures naturall, the cutter off of Natures wit.

Cel. Peradventure this is not Fortunes work neither, but Natures, who perceiving our naturall wits too dull to reason of such goddesses, hath sent this Naturall for our whetstone: for alwayes the dullness of the fool, is the whetstone of the wits. How now Wit, whether wander you?

Clow. Mistressse, you must come away to your father,

Cel. Were you made the Messenger?

Clow. No by mine honour, but I was bid to come for you.

Ros.

Ros. Where learned you that oath foole?

Clo. Of a certain Knight, that swore by his Honour they were good Pancakes, and swore by his Honour the Mustard was naught: Now I'll stand to it, the Pancakes were naught, and the Mustard was good, and yet was not the Knight forsworn.

Cel. How prove you that in the great heap of your knowledge?

Ros. I marry, now unmuzzle your wisdom.

Clo. Stand you both forth now: stroke your chinnies, and swear by your beards that I am a knave.

Cel. By our beards (if we had them) thou art.

Clo. By my knavery (if I had it) then I were: but if you swear by that that is not, you are not forsworn: no more was this Knight swearing by his Honour, for he never had any; or if he had, he had sworn it away, before ever he saw those Pancakes, or that Mustard.

Cel. Prethee, who is't that thou means't?

Clo. One that old Fredrick your Father loves.

Ros. My Fathers love is enough to honour him enough; speak no more of him, you'll be whipt for taxation, one of these dayes.

Clo. The more pity that fooles may not speak wisely, what Wise men do foolishly.

Cel. By my troth thou saiest true: For, since the little wit that fooles have was silenced, the little foolery that wise men have makes a great shew; Here comes Mounsieur Le Ben.

Enter Le Ben.

Ros. With his mouth full of news.

Cel. Which he will put on us, as Pigeons feed their young.

Ros. Then shall we be news-cram'd.

Cel. All the better: we shall be the more marketable.
Boon-jour Mounſieur le Ben, what newes?

Le Ben. Fair Princess,
You have lost much sport.

Cel. Sport: of what colour?

Le Ben. What colour Madam? How shall I answer you?

Ros. As wit and fortune will.

Clo. Or as the destinies decrees,

Cel. Well said, that was laid on with a crowell.

Clo. Nay, if I keep not my rank.

Ros. Thou lookest thy old sinell.

Le Ben. You amaze me Ladies: I would have told you of good wraſtling, which you have lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell us the manner of the Wraſtling.

Le Ben. I will tell you the beginning: and if it please your Ladiships, you may see the end, for the best is yet to doe, and here where you are, they are coming to perform it.

Cel. Well, the beginning that is dead and buried.

Le Ben. There comes an old man, and his three sons.

Cel. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Ben. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence.

Ros. With bills on their necks: Be it known unto all men by these presents.

Le Ben. The eldest of the three, wraſtled with Charles the Dukes Wraſtler, which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribbes, that there is little hope of life in him: So he serv'd the second, and so the third: yonder they lye, the poor old man their Father, making such pitifull dole over them, that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

Ros. Alas.

Clo. But what is the sport Mounſieur, that the Ladies have lost?

Le Ben. Why this that I speak of.

Clo. Thus men may grow wiser every day. It is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribbes was sport for Ladies.

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else longs to see this broken Musick in his sides? Is there yet another doats upon rib-breaking? Shall we see this wraſtling Cofin?

Le Ben. You must if you stay here, for here is the place appointed for wraſtling, and they are ready to perform it.

Cel. Yonder sure they are coming. Let us now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter Duke, Lords, Orlando, Charles and Attendants

Duk. Come on, since the youth will not be entreated, His own perill on his forwardnesse.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le Ben. Even he, Madam.

Cel. Alas, he is too young: yet he lookes successfully.

Duk. How now daughter, and Cofin:
Are you crept hither to see the wraſtling?

Ros. I my Liege, so please you give us leave.

Duk. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is such odds in the man: In pity of the challengers youth, I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated. Speak to him Ladies, see if you can move him.

Cel. Call him hither good Mounſieur Le Ben.

Duk. Do so: I'll not be by.

Le Ben. Mounſieur the Challenger, the Princess calls for you.

Orl. I attend them with all respect and duty.

Ros. Young man, have you challeng'd Charles the Wraſtler?

Orl. No fair Princess: he is the generall challenger, I come but as others doe, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young Gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years: you have seen cruell proofe of this mans strength, if you saw your selfe with your eyes, or knew your selfe with your judgement, the fear of your adventure would counsell you to a more equall enterprife. We pray you for your own sake to embrace your own safety, and give over this attempt.

Ros. Do young Sir, your reputation shall not therefore be misprised: we will make it our suit to the Duke, that the wraſtling might not go forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts, wherein I confesse me much guilty to deny so fair and excellent Ladies any thing. But let your fair eyes, and gentle wishes go with me to my triall; wherein if I be foil'd, there is but one sham'd that was never gracious: if kil'd, but one dead that is willing to be so: I shall doe my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me: the world no injury, for in it I have nothing: onely in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied, when I have made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.

Cel.

Cel. And mine to eek-out hers.

Ros. Fare you well: pray heaven I be deceiv'd in you.

Cel. Your hearts desires be with you.

Char. Come, where is this young gallant, that is so desirous to lye with his mother earth?

Orla. Ready sir, but his will hath in it a more modest working.

Duk. You shall try but one fall.

Char. No I warrant your Grace you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily perswaded him from a first.

Orla. You mean to mock me after: you should not have mockt before: but come your wayes.

Ros. Now Hercules, be thy speed young man,

Cel. I would I were invisible, to catch the strong fellow by the leg. They Wraastle.

Ros. Oh excellent young man.

Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye, I can tell who should down. Shout.

Duk. No more, no more.

Orla. Yes I beseech your Grace, I am not yet well breath'd.

Duk. How do'st thou Charles?

Le Ben. He cannot speak my Lord.

Duk. Bear him away:

What is thy name young man?

Orl. Orlando my Liege, the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Boyes.

Duk. I would thou had'st been son to some man else, The world esteem'd thy father honourable, But I did find him still mine enemy: Thou should'st have better pleas'd me with this deed, Had'st thou descended from another house: But fare thee well, thou art a gallant youth, I would thou had'st told me of another Father.

Exit Duke.

Cel. Were I my Father (Coze) would I do this?

Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Rowlands son, His youngest son, and would not change that calling To be adopted heir to Fredrick.

Ros. My Father lov'd Sir Rowland as his soul, And all the world was of my Fathers minde, Had I before known this young man his son, I should have given him tears unto entreaties, Ere he should thus have ventur'd.

Cel. Gentle Cosin,

Let us go thank him, and encourage him: My Fathers rough and envious disposition Sticks me at heart: Sir, you have well deserv'd, If you do keep your promises in love, But justly as you have exceeded all in promise, Your Mistress shall be happy.

Ros. Gentleman,

Wear this for me: one out of suits with fortune, That could give more, but that her hand lacks means. Shall we go Coze?

Cel. I: fare you well fair Gentleman,

Orla. Can I not say, I thank you? My better parts Are all thrown down, and that which here stands up Is but a quintine, a meer livelesse block.

Ros. He calls us back: my pride sell with my fortunes I'll ask him what he would: Did you call Sir? Sir, you have wraстled well, and overthrown More then your enemies.

Cel. Will you go Coze?

Ros. Have with you: fare you well.

Exit.

Or. What passion hangs these waights upon my tongue? I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference.

Enter Le Ben.

O poor Orlando! thou art overthrown Or Charles, or something weaker masters thee.

Le Ben. Good sir, I do in friendship counsell you To leave this place; Albeit you have deserv'd High commendation, true applause, and love; Yet such is now the Dukes condition, That he misconsters all that you have done: The Duke is humorous, what he is indeed More suits you to conceive, then I to speak of.

Orl. I thank you sir; and pray you tell me this, Which of the two was daughter to the Duke, That here was at the Wraстling?

Le Ben. Neither his daughter, if we judge by manners, But yet indeed the taller is his daughter, The other is daughter to the banish'd Duke, And here detain'd by her usurping Uncle To keep his daughter company, whose loves Are dearer then the naturall bond of Sisters: But I can tell you, that of late this Duke Hath tane displeasure 'gainst his gentle Neice, Grounded upon no other argument, But that the people praise her for her vertues, And pittie her, for her good fathers sake; And on my life his malice 'gainst the Lady Will suddenly break forth: Sir, fare you well, Hereafter in a better world then this, I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.

Orl. I rest much bounden to you: fare you well! Thus must I from the smoke into the smother, From tyrant Duke, unto a tyrant Brother, But heavenly Rosaline.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Celia, and Rosaline.

Cel. Why Cosin, why Rosaline: Cupid have mercy, Not a word?

Ros. Not one to throw at a dog.

Cel. No, my words are too precious to be cast away upon cures, throw some of them at me; come, lame me with reasons.

Ros. Then there were two Cosins laid up, when the one should be lam'd with reasons, and the other mad without any.

Cel. But is all this for your Father?

Ros. No, some of it is for my childes Father: Oh how full of briers is this working day world.

Cel. They are but burs, Cosin, thrown upon thee in holiday foolery, if we walk not in the trodden paths, our very petti-coats will catch them.

Ros. I could shake them off my coat, these burs are in my heart.

Cel. Hem them away.

Ros. I would try if I could cry hem, and have him.

Cel. Come, come, wraстle with thy affections.

Ros. O they take the part of a better wraстler then my self.

Cel. O, a good wish upon you: you will try in time in in despite of a fall : but turning these jests out of service, let us talk in good earnest : Is it possible on such a sudden, you should fall into so strange a liking with old Sir Roxlands youngest son ?

Ros. The Duke my Father lov'd his Father dearly.

Cel. Doth it therefore ensue that you should love his Son dearly ? By this kinde of chafe, I should hate him, for my father hated his father dearly ; yet I hate not Orlando.

Ros. No faith, hate him not for my sake.

Cel. Why should I not ? doth not he deserve well ?

Enter Duke with Lords.

Ros. Let me love him for that, and doe you love him Because I doe. Look, here comes the Duke.

Cel. With his eyes full of anger.

Duk. Mistris, dispatch you with your safest haste, And get you from our Court.

Ros. Me Uncle !

Duk. You Cousin,
Within these ten dayes if that thou bee'st found
So near our publick Court as twenty miles,
Thou diest for it.

Ros. I doe beseech your Grace.
Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with me :
If with my self I hold intelligence,
Or have acquaintance with mine own desires,
If that I do not dream, or be not frantick,
(As I do trust I am not) then dear Uncle,
Never so much as in a thought unborne,
Did I offend your Highnesse.

Duk. Thus do all Traitors,
If their purgation did consist in words,
They are as innocent as grace it self ;
Let it suffice thee that I trust thee not.

Ros. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a Traitor ;
Tell me whereon the likelihood depends ?

Duk. Thou art thy Fathers daughter, there's enough.

Ros. So was I when your highnesse took his Dukedome,
So was I when your highnesse banish'd him ;
Treason is not inherited my Lord,
Or if we did derive it from our friends,
What's that to me, my Father was no Traitor :
Then good my Liege, mistake me not so much,
To think my poverty is treacherous.

Cel. Dear Sovereign hear me speak.

Duk. I Celia, we staid her for your sake,
Else had she with her Father rang'd along.

Cel. I did not then intreat to have her stay.
It was your pleasure, and your own remorse,
I was too young that time to value her,
But now I know her : if she be a Traitor,
Why so am I ; we still have slept together,
Rose at an instant, learn'd, plaid, eat together,
And wheresoere we went, like Inno's Swans,
Still we went coupled and inseparable.

Duk. She is too subtil for thee, and her smoothness
Her very silence and her patience,
Speak to the people, and they pittie her :
Thou art a foole, she robs thee of thy name,
And thou wilt show more bright, and seem more vertuous
When she is gone : then open not thy lips, (ous
Firm, and irrevocable is my doombe,
Which I have past upon her, she is banish'd.

Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me my Liege,
I cannot live out of her company.

Duk. You are a foole : you Neice provide your self,
If you out-stay the time, upon mine honour,
And in the greatnesse of my word you dye.

Exit Duke, &c.

Cel. O my poor Rosaline, whither wilt thou go ?
Wilt thou change father ? I will give thee mine :
I charge thee be not thou more griev'd then I am.

Ros. I have more cause.

Cel. Thou hast not Cousin,
Prethee be cheerefull ; know'st thou not the Duke
Hath banish'd me his daughter ?

Ros. That he hath not.

Cel. No, hath not ? Rosaline lacks then the love
Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one,
Shall we be sundred ? shall we part sweet girle ?
No, let my Father seek another heir :
Therefore devise with me how we may flye,
Whither to go, and what to bear with us,
And do not seek to take your charge upon you,
To bear your griefs your self, and leave me out :
For by this heaven (now as our sorrowes pale ;)
Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee.

Ros. Why, whither shall we go ?

Cel. To seek my Uncle in the Forrest of Arden.

Ros. Alas, what danger will it be to us,
(Maids as we are) to travell forth so far ?
Beauty provoketh theeves sooner then gold.

Cel. I'll put my self in poor and mean attire,
And with a kind of umber smutch my face,
The like do you, so shall we passe along,
And never stir assailants.

Ros. Were it not better,
Because that I am more then common tall,
That I did suit me all points like a man,
A gallant curtellax upon my thigh,
A bore-spear in my hand, and in my heart
Lye there what hidden womans fear there will,
We'll have a swashing and a marshall outside,
As many other mannish cowards have,
That do outface it with their semblances.

Cel. What shall I call thee when thou art a man ?

Ros. I'll have no worse a name then Joves own Page,
And therefore look you call me Ganimes,
But what will you be call'd ?

Cel. Something that hath a reference to my state :
No longer Celia, but Aliena.

Ros. But Cousin, what if we assaid to steal
The clownish Foole out of your Fathers Court :
Would he not be a comfort to our travell ?

Cel. He'll go along o're the wide world with me,
Leave me alone to wooe him ; Let's away
And get our Jewels and our wealth together ;
Devise the fittest time, and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be made
After my flight : now go we in content
To liberty and not to banishment.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke Senior : Amyens, and two or three Lords like Forresters.

Duk. Sen. Now my Coe-mates, and brother in exile :
Hath not old custome made this life more sweet

Then

Then that of painted pomp? Are not these woods
More free from perill then the envious Court?
Here feel we not the penalty of Adam,
The seasons' difference, as the Ice phange
And churlish chiding of the winters winde,
Which when it baits and blowes upon my body
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile, and say
(This is no flattery: these are counsellors
That feelingly perswade me what I am:
Sweet are the uses of adversity
Which like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious Jewell in his head:
And this our life exempt from publick haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.

Amien. I would not change it, happy is your Grace
That can translate the stubbornesse of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a stile.

Duk. Sen. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me the poor dappled foolies
Being native Burgers of this desert City,
Should in their own confines with forked heads
Have their round haunches goard.

1. Lord. Indeed my Lord
The melancholly Iaques grieves at that,
And in that kinde swears you do more usurp
Then doth your brother that hath banish'd you:
To day my Lord of Amiens, and my self,
Did steal behind him as he lay along
Under an oak, whose antick roop peeps out
Upon the brook that brawls along this wood,
To the which place a poor sequestred Stag
That from the hunters aim had tane a hurt,
Did come to languish; and indeed my Lord
The wretched animall heav'd forth such groans
That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat
Almost to bursting, and the big round tears
Cours'd one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase: and thus the hairy foole,
Much maik'd of the melancholly Iaques,
Stood on th'extremest verge of the swift brook,
Augmenting it with tears.

Duk. Sen. But what said Iaques?
Did he not moralize this spectacle?

1. Lord. O yes, into a thousand families.
First, for his weeping into the needlesse stream;
Poor Deer, quoth he, thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings doe, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much: then being alone,
Left and abandoned of his velvet friend;
'Tis right, quoth he, thus misery doth part
The Flux of company: anon a carelesse Heard
Full of the pasture, jumps along by him
And never staves to greet him: I, quoth Iaques, Sweep on, you fat and greazy Citizens,
'Tis just the fashion; wherefore do you look
Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?
Thus most invectively he pierceth through
The body of the Country, City, Court,
Yea, and this our life, swearing that we
Are meer usurpers, tyrants, and whats worse,
To fright the Animals, and to kill them up
In their assign'd and native dwelling place.

Duk. Sen. And did you leave him in this contemplation?

2. Lord. We did my Lord, weeping and commenting Upon the sobbing Deer.

Duk. Sen. Show me the place,
I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.

2. Lor. I'll bring you to him straight.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Duke with Lords

Duk. Can it be possible that no man saw them?
It cannot be, some villains of my Court
Are of consent and sufferance in this.

1. Lord. I cannot hear of any that did see her,
The Ladies, her attendants of her chamber,
Saw her abed, and in the morning early,
They found the bed untreasur'd of their Mistris.

2. Lor. My Lord, the roynish Clown, at whom so oft,
Your Grace was wont to laugh, is also missing:
Hesperia, the Princessse Gentlewoman,
Confesses that she secretly ore-heard
Your daughter and her Cousin much commend
The parts and graces of the Wrestler
That did but lately foile the synowly Charles,
And she believes where ever they are gone
That youth is surely in their company.

Duk. Send to his brother, fetch that gallant hither,
If he be absent, bring his Brother to me.
I'll make him finde him: do this suddenly;
And let not search and inquisition quaille,
To bring again these foolish runawayses.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Orlando, and Adam.

Orl. Who's there?

Ad. What my young master, oh my gentle master,
Oh my sweet master, O you memory
Of old Sir Rowland? Why, what make you here?
Why are you vertuous? Why do people love you?
And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?
Why would you be so fond to overcome
The bonny prifer of the humorous Duke?
Your praise is come too swiftly home before you.
Know you not Master, to some kind of men,
Their graces serve them but as enemies,
No more do yours: your vertues gentle Master
Are sanctified and holy traitours to you:
Oh what a world is this, when what is comely
Envenoms him that bears it?

Orl. Why, what's the matter?

Ad. O unhappy youth,
Come not within these doors: within this rooffe,
The enemy of all your graces lives.
Your brother, no, no brother, yet the son
(Yet not the son, I will not call him son)
Of him I was about to call his Father,
Hath heard your praises, and this night he means,
To burn the lodging where you use to lye,
And you within it: if he fail of that

He

He will have other means to cut you off ;
I overheard him : and his practises :
This is no place, this house is but a butchery ;
Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it.

Orl. Why whither Adam would'st thou have me go ?

Ada. No matter whither, for you come not here.

Orl. What, would'st thou have me go and beg my
Or with a base and boistrous Sword enforce (food,
A theevish living on the common rode ?
This I must do, or know not what to do :
Yet this I will not do, do how I can :
I rather will subject me to the malice
Of a diverted blood, and bloody brother.

Ada. But do not so : I have five hundred Crowns,
The thrifty hire I saved under you father,
Which I did store to be my foster Nurse,
When service should in my old limbs lie lame ;
And unregarded age in corners thrown,
Take that, and he that doth the Ravens feed,
Yea providently caters for the Sparrow,
Be comfort to my age : here is the gold,
All this I give you, let me be your servant,
Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty ;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood,
Nor did not with unbashfull forehead woo,
The means of weaknesse and debility,
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty but kindly ; let me go with you,
I'll do the service of a younger man
In all your businesse and necessities.

Orl. Oh good old man, how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antick world,
When service sweat for duty, not for meed :
Thou art not for the fashion of these times.
Where none will sweat, but for promotion,
And having that, do choak their service up,
Even with the having, it is not so with thee :
But poor old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree,
That cannot so much as a blossome yield,
In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry :
But come thy wayes, we'll go along together,
And ere we have thy youthfull wages spent,
We'll light upon some settled low content.

Ada. Master go on, and I will follow thee
To the last gasp with truth and loyalty,
From seventy years, till now almost fourscore
Here liv'd I, but now live here no more.
At seventeen years, many their fortunes seek,
But at fourscore, it is too late a week,
Yet fortune cannot recompence me better
Then to dye well, and not my Masters debter. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Rosaline for Ganimed, Celia for Aliena, and Clown, alias Touchstone.

Ros. O Jupiter, how merry are my spirits ?

Clo. I care not for my spirits, if my legges were not weary.

Ros. I could finde in my heart to disgrace my mans apparell, and to cry like a woman : but I must comfort the weaker vessell, as doublet and hose ought to show it self couragious to a pettycoat ; therefore courage, good Aliena.

Cel. I pray you bear with me, I can goe no further.

Clo. For my part, I had rather bear with you, then bear you : yet I should bear no crosse if I did bear you, for I think you have no money in your purse.

Ros. Well, this is the Forrest of Arden.

Clo. I, now am I in Arden, the more soole I, when I was at home I was in a better place, but Travellers must be content.

Enter Corin, and Silvius.

Ros. I, be so good Touchstone : look you who comes here, a young man and an old in solemn talk.

Cor. That is the way to make her scorn you still.

Sil. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her.

Cor. I partly guesse : for I have lov'd ere now.

Sil. No Corin, being old, thou can'st not guesse ;
Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover
As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow :
But if thy love were ere like to mine,
As sure I think did never man love so :
How many actions most ridiculous,
Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasie ?

Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.

Sil. Oh thou didst then never love so heartily,
If thou remembrest not the slightest folly,
That ever love did make thee run into,
Thou hast not lov'd.

Or if thou hast not sate as I do now,
Wearying thy hearer in thy Mistris praise,
Thou hast not lov'd.

Or if thou hast not broke from company,
Abruptly as my passion now makes me,
Thou hast not lov'd.

O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe.

Exeunt.

Ros. Alas poor Shepheard ! searching of their wound,
I have by hard adventure found mine own.

Clo. And I mine : I remember when I was in love, I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming a nights to Jane Smile and I remember the kissing of her batlet, and the Cowes dugs that her pretty chopt hands had milk'd ; and I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her, from whom I took two cods, and giving her them again, said with weeping tears, wear these for my sake : we that are true Lovers, run into strange capers ; but as all is mortall in nature, so is all nature in love, mortall in folly.

Ros. Thou speak'st wiser then thou art ware of.

Clo. Nay, I shall ne're be ware of mine own wit, till
I break my shins against it.

Ros. Love, love, this Shepheards passion
Is much upon my fashion.

Clo. And mine, but it growes something stale with me.

Cel. I pray you, one of you question yon'd man,
If he for gold will give us any food,
I faint almost to death.

Clo. Holla ; you Clown.

Ros. Peace fool, he's not thy kinsman.

Cor. Who calls ?

Clo. Your betters Sir.

Cor. Elie are they very wretched.

Ros.

Ros. Peace I say; good even to you friend.

Cor. And to you gentle Sir, and to you all.

Ros. I prethee, Shepheard, if that love or gold
Can in this Desert place buy entertainment,
Bring us where we may rest ourselves, and feed:
Here's a young Maid with travell much oppressed,
And fain for succour.

Cor. Fair sir, I pittie her,
And wish for her sake more then for mine own,
My fortunes were more able to relieve her:
But I am shepheard to another man,
And do not sheer the Fleeces that I graze:
My master is of churlish disposition,
And little wrecks to finde the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitality.

Besides his Coat, his Flocks, and bounds of feed
Are now on sale, and at our sheep-coat now
By reason of his absence there is nothing
That you will feed on: but what is, come see,
And in my voyce most welcome shall you be.

Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?

Cor. That young Swain that you saw here but ere-while.

That little cares for buying any thing.

Ros. I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,
Buy thou the Cottage, and the pasture, and the flock,
And thou shalt have to pay for it of us.

Cel. And we will mend thy wages:
I like this place, and willingly could
Waste my time in it.

Cor. Assuredly the thing is to be sold:
Go with me, if you like upon report,
The soile, the profit, and this kinde of life,
I will your very faithfull Feeder be,
And buy it with your gold right suddenly.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter, Amyens, Jaques, and others.

Song.

*Under the greenwood tree,
who loves to lye with me,
And turn his merry Note,
unto the sweet Birds throte:
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see no enemy,
But Winter and rough Weather.*

Jaq. More, more, I prethee more.

Amy. It will make you melancholly Mounseieur Iaques.

Jaq. I thank it: More, I prethee more,
I can suck melancholly out of a song.

As a Weazel sucks eggs: More, I prethee more.

Amy. My voyce is ragged, I know I cannot please you.

Jaq. I do not desire you to please me,
I do desire you to sing:

Come, more, another stanza: Call you'em stanza's?

Amy. What you will Mounseieur Iaques.

Jaq. Nay, I care not for their names, they own me nothing. Will you sing.

Amy. More at your request, then to please my self

Jaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I'll thank you: but that they call complement is like th'encounter of two dog-Apes. And when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I have given him a penny, and he renders me the beggarly thanks. Come sing, and you that will not, hold your tongues.

Amy. Well, I'll end the song. Sirs, cover the while, the Duke will drink under this tree; he hath been all this day to look you.

Jaq. And I have been all this day to avoid him: He is too disputeable for my company: I think of as many matters as he, but I give Heaven thanks, and make no boast of them.

Come, warble, come.

Song.

Altogether here.

*Who doth ambition shun,
and loves to live i'th Sun,
Seeking the food he eats,
And pleas'd with what he gets:
Come hither, come hither, come hither,
Here shall he see, no enemy,
But Winter, and rough Weather.*

Jaq. I'll give you a verse to this note,
That I made yesterday in despite of my invention.

Amy. And I'll sing it.

Jaq. Thus it goes.

*If it doe come to pass,
That any man turn Ass:
Leaving his wealth and ease,
A stubborn will to please,
Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame:
Here shall he see, grosse fooles as he,
And if he will come to me.*

Amy. What's that Ducdame?

Jaq. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools into a circle. I'll go sleep if I can: if I cannot, I'll raile against all the first born of Egypt.

Amy. And I'll go seek the Duke,
His banquet is prepar'd.

Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Orlando, and Adam.

Adam. Dear Master, I can go no further:
O I dye for food. Here lye I down,
And measure out my grave. Farewell kinde master.

Orl. Why how now Adam? No greater heart in thee!
Live a little, comfort a little, cheer thy self a little.

If this uncouth Forrest yield any thing savage,
I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee:

Thy conceit is nearer death, then thy powers.

For my sake be comfortable, hold death a while

At the armes end: I will here be with thee presently,

And if I bring thee not something to eat,

I will give thee leave to dye: but if thou diest
Before I come, thou art a mocker of my labour.

Well said, thou look'st cheerely,

And I'll be with thee quickly: yet thou liest

In the bleak aire. Come I will bear thee

To some shelter, and thou shalt not dye

For lack of a dinner,

If there live any thing in this Desert.

Cheerely good Adam.

Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Septima.

Enter Duke Sen. and Lord, like out-laws.

Du. Sen. I think he be transform'd into a beast,
For I can no where finde him, like a man.

1. Lord. My Lord, he is but even now gone hence,
Here was he merry, hearing of a Song.

Du. Sen. If he compact of jarres, grow Musically,
We shall have shortly discord in the Spheres :
Go seek him, tell him I would speak with him.

Enter Jaques.

1. Lord. He saves my labour by his own approach.

Du. Sen. Why how now Monsieur, what a life is this
That your poor friends must wooe your company,
What, you look merrily.

Jaq. A fool, a fool : I met a fool i'th Forrest,
A motley fool (a miserable world :)
As I doe live by food, I met a fool,
Who laid him down, and bask'd him in the Sun,
And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good termes,
In good set termes, and yet a motley fool.
Good morrow fool (quoth I :) no Sir, quoth he,
Call me not fool, till heaven hath sent me fortune,
And then he drew a Diall from his poake,
And looking on it, with lack-lustre eye,
Sayes, very wisely, it is ten a clock :
Thus we may see (quoth he) how the world waggess :
'Tis but but an hour ago, since it was nine,
And after one hour more, 'twill be eleven,
And so from hour to hour, we ripe, and ripe,
And then from hour to hour, we rot, and rot,
And thereby hangs a tale. When I did hear
The motley fool, thus morall on the time,
My Lungs began to crow like Chanticleere,
That Fools should be so deep contemplative :
And I did laugh, sans intermission.
An hour by his Diall. Oh noble fool,
A worthy fool : Motley's the onely wear.

Du. Sen. What fool is this ?

Jaq. O worthy fool : one that hath been a Courtier
And sayes, if Ladies be young, and fair,
They have the gift to know it : and in his brain,
Which is as dry as the remainder bisket
After a voyage : He hath strange places cram'd
With observation, the which he vents
In mangled formes. O that I were a fool,
I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Du. Sen. Thou shalt have one.

Jaq. It is my onely suite,
Provided that you weed your better judgements
Of all opinion that grows rank in them,
That I am wise. I must have liberty
Withall, as large a Charter as the winde,
To blow on whom I please, for so fools have :
And they that are most gaul'd with my folly,
They most must laugh : And why sir must they so ?
The why is plain, as way to Parish Church :
He, that a fool doth very wisely hit,
Doth very foolishly, although he smart
Seem senselesse of the bob. If not,
The Wise-man's folly is anatomiz'd
Even by the squandering glances of a fool.

Invest me in the motley : Give me leave
To speak my minde, and I will through Cleanse the foul body of th'infected world,
If they will patiently receive my medicine.

Du. Sen. Fie on thee, I can tell what thou wouldst do.

Jaq. What, for a Counter, would I doe, but good ?

Du. Sen. Most mischievous foul sin, in chiding sin :
For thou thy self hast been a Libertine,
As sensuall as the brutish sting it self,
And all th'imbossed sores, and headed evils,
That thou with license of free foot hast caught,
Would'st thou disgorge into the generall world.

Jaq. Why who cries out on pride,
That can therein tax any private party :
Doth it not flow as hugely as the Sea,
Till that the weary very meanes doe ebbe.
What woman in the City doe I name,
When that I say the City woman beares
The cost of Princes on unworthy shoulders ?
Who can come in, and say that I mean her,
When such a one as she, such is her neighbour ?
Or what is he of basest function,
That sayes his bravery is not on my cost,
Thinking that I mean him, but therein suits
His folly to the mettle of my speech,
There then, how then, what then, let me see wherein
My tongue hath wrong'd him : if it doe him right,
Then he hath wrong'd himself : if he be free,
Why then my taxing like a wild-goose flies
Unclaim'd of any man. But who comes here ?

Enter Orlando.

Orl. Forbear, and eat no more.

Jaq. Why I have eat none yet.

Orl. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serv'd.

Jaq. Of what kinde should this Cock come of ?

Du. Sen. Art thou thus bolden'd man by thy distress ?
Or else a rude despiser of good manneis,
That in civility thou seem'st so empty ?

Orl. You touch'd my vein at first, the thorny point
Of bare distress, that hath tane from me the shew
Of smooth civility : yet am I in-land bred,
And know some nurture : But forbear, I say,
He dies that touches any of this fruit,
Till I, and my affaires are answered.

Jaq. And you will not be answer'd with reason,
I must die.

Du. Sen. What would you have ?
Your gentleness shall force, more then your force
Move us to gentleness.

Orl. I almost die for food, and let me have it.

Du. Sen. Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table

Orl. Speak you so gently ? Pardon me, I pray you,
I thought that all things had been savage here,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of stern command'ment. But what e're you are
That in this desert inaccessible,
Under the shade of melancholly boughs,
Loose, and neglect the creeping hours of time :
If ever you have look'd on better dayes :
If ever been where bells have knoll'd to Church :
If ever sate at any good mans feast :
If ever from your eye-lids wip'd a tear,
And know what 'tis to pittie, and be pittied,
Let gentleness my strong enforcement be,
In the which hope, I bush, and hide my Sword.

R.

Duke.

Du. Sen. True is it, that we have seen better dayes,
And have with holy bell bin knowld to Church,
And sat at good mens feasts, and wip'd our eyes
Of drops, that sacred pittie hath engendred :
And therefore sit you down in gentlenesse,
And take upon command, what help we have
That to your wanting may be ministred,

Orl. Then but forbear your food a little while,
Whiles (like a Doe) I go to finde my Fawn,
And give it food. There is an old poor man,
Who after me hath many a weary step
Limpt in pure love : till he be fust suffic'd,
Opprest with two weak evils, age, and hunger,
I will not touch a bit.

Du. Sen. Go find him out,
And we will nothing waste till you return.

Orl. I thank ye, and be blest for your good comfort.

Du. Sen. Thou seest, we are not all alone unhappy :
This wide and universall Theater
Presents more wofull Pageants then the Scene
Wherein we play in.

Ja. All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women, meerly Players ;
They have their Exits and their Entrances,
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His Acts being seven ages. At first the Infant,
Mewling, and puking in the Nurfes armes.
Then, the whining Schoole-boy with his Satchell,
And shining morning face, cieeping like Snailc
Unwillingly to Schoole. And then the Lover,
Sighing like Furnace, with a wofull Ballad
Made to his Mistresse eye-brow. Then a Soldier,
Full of strange oathes, and bearded like the Pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden, and quick in quarrell,
Seeking the bubble Reputation,
Even in the Canons mouth. And then, the Justice
In fair round belly, with good Capon lin'd,
With eyes severe, and beard of formall cut,
Full of wise sawes, and modern instances,
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifis
Into the lean and slipper'd Pantalooone,
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side ;
His youthfull hose well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank, and his big manly voyce,
Turning again toward childish trebble pipes,
And whistles in his sound. Last Scene of all,
That ends this strange eventfull history,
Is second childishnesse, and meer oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.

Enter Orlando with Adam.

Du. Sen. Welcome : set down your venerable burden, and let him feed.

Orl. I thank you most for him.

Ad. So had you need,
I scarce can speak to thank you for my self.

Du. Sen. Welcome, fall too : I will not trouble you,
As yet to question you about your fortunes :
Giue us some musiek, and good Cousin, sing.

Song.

*Blow, blow, thou winter winde,
Thou art not so unkinde, as mans ingratitude ;
Thy tooth is not so keen, because thou art not seen,
Although thy breath be rude.*

*Heigh ho, sing heigh ho, unto the green holly,
Most friendship is faining ; most Loving meer folly :
The heigh ho, the holly,
This Life is most jolly,*

*Frieze, frieze, thou bitter skie, that dost not bite so nigh
as benefits forgot :*

*Though thou the waters warpe, thy sting is not so sharp,
as friend remembred not,*

Heigh ho, sing &c.

Du. Sen. If that you were the good Sir Rowlands son,
As you have whisper'd faithfully you were,
And as mine eye doth his effigies witnesse,
Most truly limn'd, and living in your face,
Be truly welcome hither : I am the Duke
That lov'd your Father : the Residue of your fortune,
Go to my Cave, and tell me. Good old man,
Thou art right welcome, as thy Master is :
Support him by the arme : give me your hand,
And let me all your fortunes understand. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Lords, and Oliver.

Du. Not see him since ? Sir, sir, that cannot be :
But were I not the better part made mercy,
I should not see an absent argument
Of my revenge, thou present : but look to it,
Find out thy brother wherefoe're he is,
Seek him with Candle : bring him dead, or living
Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more
To seek a living in our Territory.
Thy Lands and all things that thou dost call thine,
Worth seizure, doe we seize into our hands,
Till thou canst quit thee by thy brothers mouth,
Of what we think against thee.

Ol. Oh that your Highnesse knew my heart in this :
I never lov'd my brother in my life.

Duke. More villain thou. Well, push him out of doors
And let my Officers of such a nature
Make an extent upon his House and Lands :
Doe this expediently, and turn him going. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Orlando.

Orl. Hang there my verse, in witnesse of my love,
And thou thrice crowned Queen of night survey
With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above
Thy Huntresse name, that my full life doth sway.
O Rosalind, these Trees shall be my Books,
And in their barks my thoughts I'll character,
That every eye, which in this Forrest looks,
Shall see thy virtue witnest every where.
Run, run Orlando, carve on every Tree,
The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she: Exit.

Enter Corin and Clown.

Co. And how like you this Shepherds life M. Touchstone?
Cl.

Clo. Truly Shepherd, in respect of it self, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a Shepherds life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well: but in respect that it is private, it is a very vild life. Now in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well: but in respect it is not in the Court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life (look you) it fits my humour well: but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Has't any Philosophy in thee Shepherd?

Cor. No more, but that I know the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is: and that he that wants money, meanes, and content, is without three good friends. That the property of rain is to wet, and fire to burn: That good pasture makes fat sheep: and that a great cause of the night, is lack of the Sun: That he that hath learned no wit by Nature, nor Art, may complain of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred.

Clo. Such a one is a naturall Philosopher. Was't ever in Court Shepherd?

Cor. No truly.

Clo. Then thou art damn'd.

Cor. Nay, I hope.

Clo. Truly thou art damn'd, like an ill roasted Egge, all on one side.

Cor. For not being at Court? your reason.

Clo. Why, if thou never was't at Court, thou never saw'st good manners; if thou never saw'st good manners, then thy manners must be wicked; and wickednesse is sin, and sin is damnation: Thou art in a parlous state, Shepherd.

Cor. Not a whit Touchstone: those that have good manners at the Court, are as ridiculous in the Countrey, as the behaviour of the Countrey is most mockable at the Court. You told me, you salute not at the Court, but you kisse your hands; that courtesie would be uncleanly if Courtiers were Shepherds.

Clo. Instance, briefly: come, instance.

Cor. Why we are still handling our Ewes, and their Fels you know are greasie.

Clo. Why, doe not your Courtiers hands sweat? and is not the grease of Mutton as wholsome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow: A better instance I say: Come:

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard.

Clo. Your lips will feel them the sooner. Shallow again: a more sounder instance, come.

Cor. And they are often tarr'd over; with the surgery of our Sheep: and would you have us kisse Tarre? The Courtiers hands are perfum'd with Civet.

Clo. Most shallow man: Thou wormes-meat in respect of a good piece of flesh indeed: learn of the wife and perpend: Civet is of a baser birth then Tarre; the very uncleanly flux of a Cat. Mend the instance Shepherd.

Cor. You have too Courtly a wit for me, I'll rest.

Clo. Wilt thou rest damn'd? God help thee shallow man: God make incision in thee, thou art raw.

Cor. Sir, I am a true Labourer, I earn that I eat; get that I wear; owe no man hate, envy no mans happiness; glad of other mens good, content with my harme; and the greatest of my pride, is to see my Ewes graze, and my Lambs suck.

Clo. That is another simple sin in you, to bring the Ewes and the Rammes together, and to offer to get your living, by the copulation of Cattell, to be a Bawd to a Bell-weather, and to betray a shee-Lamb of a twelvemoneth to a crooked-pated old Cuckoldly Rammie, out of all reasonable match. If thou be'st not damnd for this, the devil himself will have no Shepherds; I cannot see how thou should'st scape.

Cor. Here comes Mr. Ganymed, my new Mistresses Brother.

Enter Rosalind.

Ros. From the east to western Inde, no jewel is like Rosalinde,
Her worth being mounted on the winds, through all the World beares Rosalinde
All the Pictures fairest Linde, are but black to Rosalinde:
Let no face be kept in minde,
but the most fair Rosalinde.

Clo. I'll rime you so, eight yeates together; dinners, and suppers, and sleeping houres excepted: it is the right Butter-womens rank to Marker.

Ros. Out Foole.

Clo. For a taste.

If a Hart doe lack a Hinde.
Let him seek out Rosalinde:
If the Cat will after kinde,
so be sure will Rosalinde:
Winter Garments must be linde,
so must slender Rosalinde:
They that reap must sheafe and binde,
then to Cart with Rosalinde.
Sweetest meat hath sowrest rinde,
such a nut is Rosalinde.
He that sweetest rose will finde, must finde Loves prick, and Rosalinde.

This is the very false gallop of Verses, why doe you infect your self with them?

Ros. Peace you dull fool, I found them on a tree.

Clo. Truly the tree yields bad fruit.

Ros. I'll graffe it with you, and then I shall graffe it with a Medler: then it will be the earliest fruit i'th countrey: for you'll be rotten ere you be half ripe, and that's the right virtue of the Medler.

Clo. You have said: but whether wisely or no, let the Forrest judge.

Enter Celia with a Writing,

Ros. Peace, here comes my sister reading, stand aside.

Cel. Why should this Desert be,
for it is unpeopled? Noe:

Tongs I'll hang on every tree;
that shall civil sayings shew.

Some, how brief the Life of man runs his erring pilgrimage,

That the stretching of a span, buckles in his summe of age.

Some of violated vowes,
'twixt the souls of friend, and friend,

But upon the fairest bowes,
or at every sentence end;

Will I Rosalinda write, teaching all that read, to know

This quintessence of every sprize, heaven would, in little shew.

Therefore heaven Nature chang'd, that one body should be fill'd

With all Graces wide enlarg'd, nature presently disfill'd

*Helen's cheeks, but not his heart,
Cleopatra's Majesty :
Attalanta's better part ;
sad Lucretia's Modesty.
Thus Rosalinde of many parts,
by Heavenly Synod was devis'd,
Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
to have the touches dearest priz'd.
Heaven would that she these gifts should have,
and I to live and die her slave.*

Ros. O most gentle Jupiter, what tedious homily of Love have you wearied your Parishioners withall, and never cri'd, Have patience good people.

Cel. How now ! back friends : Shepherd go off a little : go with him sirrah.

Clo. Come Shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat, though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage. Exit.

Cel. Didst thou hear these Verses ?

Ros. O yes, I heard them all, and more too, for some of them had in them more feet than the Verses would bear.

Cel. That's no matter : the feet might bear the Verses.

Ros. I, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou hear without wondring, how thy name should be hang'd and carved upon these trees ?

Ros. I was seven of the nine dayes out of wonder, before you came : for look here what I found on a Palme tree ; I was never so berim'd since Pythagoras time that I was an Irish Rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Tis you, who hath done this ?

Ros. Is it a man ?

Cel. And a chain that you once wore, about his neck : change your colour ?

Ros. I prethee who ?

Cel. O Lord, Lord, it is a hard matter for friends to meet ; but Mountains may be remov'd with Earthquakes, and so encounter.

Ros. Nay, but who is it ?

Cel. Is it possible ?

Ros. Nay, I prethee now, with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderfull, wonderfull, and most wonderfull wonderfull, and yet again wonderfull, and after that out of all hooping.

Ros. Good my complection, dost thou think though I am caparison'd like a man, I have a doublet and a hose in my disposition ? One inch of delay more, is a South-sea of discovery. I prethee tell me, who is it quickly, and speak apace : I would thou couldst stammer, that thou might'st powre this conceal'd man out of thy mouth, as Wine comes out of a narrow-mouth'd bottle : either too much at once, or none at all. I prethee take the Corke out of thy mouth, that I may drink thy tidings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.

Ros. Is he of Gods making ? What manner of man ? Is his head worth a hat ? or his chin worth a beard ?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Ros. Why God will send more, if the man will be thankfull ; let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando, that tript up the Wrestlers heeles, and your heart, both in an instant.

Ros. Nay, but the Devil take mocking : speak sad brow, and true maid :

Cel. I'faith (Coz) 'tis he.

Ros. Orlando ?

Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the day, what shall I doe with my doublet and hose ? What did he when thou saw'st him ? What said he ? How look'd he ? Wherein went he ? What makes he here ? Did he ask for me ? Where remains he ? How parted he with thee ? And when shalt thou see him again ? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Gargantuas mouth first : 'tis a Word too great for any mouth of this Ages size : to say I and no, to these particulars, is more then to answer in a Catechisme.

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this Forrest, and in mans apparell ? Looks he as freshly, as he did the day he Wrestled ?

Cel. It is as easie to count Atomes as to resolve the propositions of a Lover : but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with good observance. I found him under a tree like a dropp'd Acorn.

Ros. It may well be call'd Joves tree, when it drops forth such fruit.

Cel. Give me audience, good Madam.

Ros. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he stretch'd along like a Wounded knight.

Ros. Though it be pittie to see such a sight ; it well becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry holla, to the tongue, I prethee : it curvettes unseasonably. He was furnish'd like a Hunter.

Ros. O ominous, he comes to kill my Hart.

Cel. I would sing my song without a burthen, thou bring'st me out of tune.

Ros. Doe you not know I am a woman, when I think, I must speak : sweet, say on.

Enter Orlando and Jaques.

Cel. You bring me ont, Soft, comes he not near ?

Ros. 'Tis he, sling by, and note him.

Jaq. I thank you for your company ; but, good faith, I had lief have been my self alone.

Orl. And so had I : but yet for fashion sake I thank you too, for your society.

Jaq. God buy you, let's meet as little as we can.

Orl. I doe desire we may be better strangers.

Jaq. I pray you marre no more trees with Writing Love-songs in their barks.

Orl. I pray you marre no more of my verses with reading them ill-favour'dly.

Jaq. Rosalinde is your loves name ?

Orl. Yes, Just.

Jaq. I doe not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleasing you when she was christen'd.

Jaq. What stature is she of ?

Orl. Just as high as my heart.

Jaq. You are full of pretty answers : have you not bin acquainted with goldsmiths wives, & cond them out of rings.

Orl. Not so : but I answer you right painted cloath, from whence you have studied your questions.

Jaq. You have a nimble wit ; I think 'twas made of Attalanta's heeles. Will you sit down with me, and we two will raile against our Mistresse the world, and all our misery.

Orl. I will chide no breather in the world but my self against against whom I know no faults.

Jaq. The worst fault you have, is to be in love.

Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not change for your best virtue: I am weary of you.

Jaq. By my troth, I was seeking for a Fool, when I found you.

Orl. He is drown'd in the brook, look but in, and you shall see him.

Jaq. There I shall see mine own figure.

Orl. Which I take to be either a Fool, or a Cipher.

Jaq. I'll tarry no longer with you, farewell good signior Love.

Orl. I am glad of your departure: Adieu good Monsieur Melancholly.

Ref. I will speak to him like a sawcie Lacky, and under that habit play the knave with him: doe you hear

Orl. Very well, what would you? (Forrester.)

Ref. I pray you, what i'th a clock?

Orl. You should aske me what time o' day: there's no clock in the Forrest.

Ref. Then there is no true Lover in the Forrest, else sighing every minute, and groaning every hour would detect the lazy foot of time, as well as a clock.

Orl. And why not the swift foot of time? Had not that bin as proper?

Ref. By no meanes sir; Time travels in divers places, with divers persons: I'll tell you who Time ambles withall, who Time trots withall, who time gallops withall, and who he stands still withall.

Orl. I prethee, whom doth he trot withall?

Ref. Marry he trots hard with a young maid, between the contract of her marriage, and the day it is solemniz'd: if the interim be but a fennight, Times pace is so hard, that it seems the length of seven year.

Orl. Who ambles time withall?

Ref. With a Priest that lacks Latine, and a rich man that hath not the Gowte: for the one sleeps easily because he cannot study, and the other lives merrily, because he feels no pain: the one lacking the burthen of lean and wastefull Learning; the other knowing no burthen of heavy tedious penury. These time ambles withall.

Orl. Whom doth he gallop withall?

Ref. With a thief to the gallows: for though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Orl. Whom stayes it still withall?

Ref. With Lawyers in the vacation: for they sleep between Terme and Terme, and then they perceive not how time moves.

Orl. Where dwell you pretty youth?

Ref. With this Shepheardesse my sister: nere in the skirts of the Forrest, like Fringe upon a Petticoat.

Orl. Are you native of this place?

Ref. As the Cony that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer, than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

Ref. I have bin told so of many: but indeed, an old religious Unckle of mine taught me to speak, who was in his youth an inland man, one that knew Courtship too well: for there he fell in love, I have heard him read many Lectures against it, I thank God, I am not a Woman to be touch'd with so many giddy offences as he hath generally tax'd their whole sex withall.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal evils, that he laid to the charge of women?

Ref. There were none principall, they were all like one another, as half-pence are, every ones fault seeming monstrous, till his fellow-fault came to match it.

Orl. I prethee recount some of them.

Ref. No: I will not cast away my physick, but on those that are sick. There is a man haunts the Forrest, that abuses our young plants with carving Rosalind on their barks; hangs Odes upon Hawthorns, and Elegies on brambles; all (forsooth) deifying the name of Rosalind. If I could meet that Fancy-inonger, I would give him some good counsell, for he seems to have the Quotidian of Love upon him.

Orl. I am he that is so Love-shak'd; I pray you tell me your remedy.

Ref. There is none of my Unckles marks upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love: in which case of rushes, I am sure you are not prisoner.

Orl. What were his marks?

Ref. A lean cheek, which you have not: a blew eye and sunken, which you have not: an unquestionable spirit, which you have not: a beard neglected, which you have not: (but I pardon you for that, for simply your having no beard, is a younger brothers revenue) then your hose should be ungarter'd, your bonnet unbanded, your sleeve unbutton'd, your shoe untied, and every thing about you demonstrating a careless desolation: but you are no such man, you are rather a point device in your accoutrements, as loving your self, than seeming the Lover of any other. (I Love.)

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe

Ref. Me believe it? You may as soon make her that you Love believe it, which I warrant she is apter to doe, than to confesse she do's: that is one of the points, in the which women still give the lye to their consciences. But in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verses on the Trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee youth, by the white hand of Rosalind I am he, that unfortunate he.

Ref. But are you so much in love as your rimes speak?

Orl. Neither rime nor reason can expresse how much.

Ref. Love is meerly a madnesse, and I tell you, deserves as well a darke house, and a whip, as mad men doe: and the reason why they are not so punish'd and cured, is that the Lunacy is so ordinary, that the whippers are in love too: yet I professe curing it by counsell.

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?

Ref. Yes one, and in this manner. Hee was to imagine me his Love, his Mistresse: and I set him every day to wooe me. At which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking, proud, fantasticall, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of teares, full of smiles; for every passion something, and for no passion truly any thing, as boyes and women are for the most part cattel of this colour: would now like him, now loathe him: then entertain him, then forswear him: now weep for him, then spit at him; that I drave my Suitor from his mad humour of love, to a living humour of madnesse, which was to forswear the full stream of the world; and to live in a nook meerly Monastick: and thus I cur'd him, and this way will I take upon me to wash your Liver ascleer as a sound sheeps heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in't.

Orl. I would not be cur'd, youth.

Ref. I would cure you, if you would: but call me Rosalind, and come every day to my Coat, and wooe me.

Orlan. Now by the faith of my love, I will ; Tell me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it, and I'll shew it you : and by the way, you shall tell me, where in the Forrest you live : Will you go ?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Ros. Nay, you must call me Rosalind : Come sister will you go ? Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clown, Audrey, and Jaques.

Clow. Come apace good Audrey, I will fetch up your Goates, Audrey : and now Audrey am I the man yet ? Doth my simple feature content you ?

Aud. Your features, Lord warrant us : what features ?

Clow. I am here with thee, and thy Goats, as the most capricious Poet honest Ovid was among the Gothes.

Jaq. O knowledge ill inhabited, worse then Jove in a thatch'd house.

Clow. When a mans verses cannot be understood, nor a mans good wit seconded with the forward childe, understanding : it strikes a man more dead then a great reckoning in a little room : truly, I would the Gods had made the Poeticall.

Aud. I doe not know what Poeticall is : is it honest in deed and word : is it a true thing ?

Clow. No truly : for the truest Poetry is the most faining, and Lovers are given to Poetry : and what they swear in Poetry, may be said as Lovers, they doe feign.

Aud. Doe you wish then that the Gods had made me Poeticall ?

Clow. I doe truly : for thou swear'st to me thou art honest : Now if thou wert a Poet, I might have some hope thou didst feign.

Aud. Would you not have me honest ?

Clow. No truly, unlesse thou wert hard-favour'd : for honesty coupled to beauty, is to have Honey a sawce to Sugar.

Jaq. A materiall foole.

Aud. Well, I am not fair, and therefore I pray the Gods make me honest.

Clow. Truly, and to cast away honesty upon a foul slut, were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

Aud. I am not a slut, though I thank the Gods I am foul.

Clow. Well, praised be the Gods, for thy foulness ; Slutishness may come hereafter. But be it, as it may be, I will marry thee : and to that end, I have been with Sir Oliver Mar-text, the Vicar of the next Village, who hath promis'd to meet me in this place of the Forrest, and to couple us.

Jaq. I would fain see this meeting.

Aud. Well, the Gods give us joy.

Clow. Amen. A man may if he were of a fearfull heart, stagger in this attempt : for here we have no Temple but the Wood : no assembly but Horn-beasts. But what though ? Courage. As hornes are odious, they are necessary. It is said, many a man knowes no end of his goods ; right : Many a man has good Horns, and knowes no end of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife, 'tis none of his own getting ; hornes, even so poor men alone :

No, no, the noblest Deer hath them as huge as the Ras-call : Is the single man therefore blessed ? No, as a wall'd Town is more worthier then a village, so is the forehead of a married man, more honourable then the bare brow of a Batchellour : and by how much defence is better then no skill, by so much is a horn more precious then to want.

Enter Sir Oliver Mar-text.

Here comes Sir Oliver : Sir Oliver Mar-text you are well met. Will you dispatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your Chappell ?

Ol. Is there none here to give the woman ?

Clow. I will not take her on gift of any man.

Ol. Truly she must be given, or the marriage is not lawfull.

Jaq. Proceed, proceed : I'll give her.

Clow. Good even, good M. what ye call't : how doe you Sir, you are very well met : godild you for your last company, I am very glad to see you, even a toy in hand here Sir : Nay, pray be cover'd.

Jaq. Will you be married, Motley ?

Clow. As the Oxe hath his bow fir, the horse his curb, and the Falkon his bells, so man hath his desire, and as Pigeons bill, so wedlock would be nibling.

Jaq. And will you (being a man of your breeding) be married under a bush like a beggar ? Get you to Church, and have a good Priest that can tell you what marriage is : this fellow will but joyn you together, as they joyn Wainscot, then one of you will prove a shrunk pannell, and like green timber, warpe, warpe.

Clow. I am not in the minde, but I were better to be married of him then of another, for he is not like to marry me well : and not being well married, it will be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave my wife.

Jaq. Go thou with me.

And let me counsell thee.

Clow. Come sweet Audrey,

We must be married, or we must live in bawdrey : Farewell good M. Oliver : Not O sweet Oliver, O brave Oliver leave me not behind thee : But winde away, be gone I say, I will not to wedding with thee.

Ol. 'Tis no matter ; ne're a fantasticall knave of them all shall flout me out of my calling. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. Never talk to me, I will weep.

Cel. Doe I prethee, but yet have the grace to consider, that teares doe not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep ?

Cel. As good cause as one would desire, Therefore weep.

Ros. His very hair

Is of the dissembling colour.

Cel. Something browner then Judas's : Marry his kisses are Judas's own children.

Ros. I'faith his hair is of a good colour.

Cel. An excellent colour :

Your Cheffenut was ever the onely colour :

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctity, As the touch of holy bread.

Cel.

Cel. He hath bought a pair of chaste lips of Diana : a Nun of winters sisterhood kisses not more religiouslie, the very ice of chastity is in them.

Ref. But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not ?

Cel. Nay certainly, there is no truth in him.

Ref. Do you think so ?

Cel. Yes, I think he is not a pick purse, nor a horse-stealer, but for his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a covered goblet, or a Worme-eaten nut.

Ref. Not true in love ?

Cel. Yes, when he is in, but I think he is not in.

Ref. You have heard him swear downright he was.

Cel. Was, is not is : besides, the oath of a Lover is no stronger then the word of a Tapster, they are both the confirmer of false reckonings, he attends here in the forest on the Duke your father.

Ref. I met the Duke yesterday, and had much question with him : he askt me of what parentage I was ; I told him of as good as he, so he laugh'd and let me go. But what talk we of Fathers, when there is such a man as Orlando ?

Cel. O that's a brave man, he writes brave verses, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely, quite travers athwart the heart of his lover, as a puiſny Tilter, that spurres his horse but on one side, breaks his staffe like a noble goose ; but all's brave that youth mounts, and folly guides : who comes here ?

Enter Corin.

Corin. Mistress and Master, you have enquired. After the Shepheard that complaind of love, Whom you saw sitting by me on the Turffe, Praising the proud disdainfull Shepheardes That was his Mistress.

Cel. Well : and what of him ?

Cor. If you will see a pageant truly plaid Between the pale complexion of true Love, And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain, Go hence a little and I shall conduct you, If you will mark it.

Ref. O come, let us remove, The sight of Lovers feedeth those in love : Bring us to this sight, and you shall say He prove a busie actor in their play.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Silvins and Phebe.

Sil. Sweet Phebe do not scorn me, do not, Phebe, Say that you love me not, but say not so In bitterness ; the common executioner, Whose heart th'accustom'd sight of death makes hard, Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck, But first begs pardon : will you sterner be Then he that dies and lives by bloody drops ?

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Corin.

Phe. I would not be thy executioner, I flie thee, for I would not injure thee : Thou tel'st me there is murder in mine eye, 'Tis pretty sure, and very probable,

That eyes that are the frail't, and softest things ; Who shut their coward gates on atomies, Should be called tyrants, butchers, murtherers. Now I do frown on thee with all my heart, And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee : Now counterfeit to swoond, why now fall down, Or if thou can'st not, oh for shame, for shame, Lye not, to say mine eyes are murtherers : Now shew the wound mine eye hath made in thee ; Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains Some scar of it : Lean but upon a rush, The Cicatrice and capable impressure Thy Palme some moment keeps : but now mine eyes Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not, Nor I am sure there is no force in eyes That can do hurt.

Sil. O dear Phebe,

If ever (as that ever may be near) You met in some fresh cheek the power of fancie, Then shall you know the wounds invisible That Loves keen arrows make.

Phe. But till that time

Come not thou near me : and when that time comes, Afflict me with thy mocks, pity me not, As till that time I shall not pity thee.

Ref. And why I pray you ? who might be your mother That you insult, exult, and all at once Over the wretched ? what though you have no beauty As by my faith, I see no more in you Then without Candle may go dark to bed : Must you be therefore proud and pittiless ? Why what means this ? why do you look on me ? I see no more in you then in the ordinary Of natures sale-work ? 'ods my little life ; I think she means to tangle mine eyes too : No faith, proud Mistress, hope not after it, 'Tis not you inkie browes, your black silk hair, Your bugle eye-balls, nor your cheek of cream That can entame my spirits to your worship. You foolish Shepheard, wherefore do you follow her Like foggy South, puffing with winde and rain, You are a thousand times a proper man Then she a woman. 'Tis such fooles as you That makes the world full of ill-favour'd children : 'Tis not her glass, but you that flatters her, And out of you she sees her self more proper Then any any of her lineaments can show her : But Mistris, know your self, down on your knees And thank heaven, fasting for a good mans love ; For I must tell you friendly in your ear, Sell when you can, you are not for all markets : Cry the man mercy, love him, take his offer, Foul is most foul, being foule to be a scoffer. So take her to thee, Shepheard, fare you well.

Phe. Sweet youth, I pray you chide a year together, I had rather hear you chide then this man wooe.

Ref. He's fal'n in love with your foulness, and she'll Fall in love with my anger. If it be so, as fast As she answers thee with frowning looks, I'll sauce Her with bitter words : why look you so upon me ?

Phe. For no ill will I bear you.

Ref. I pray you do not fall in love with me, For I am falsder then vov'es made in wine : Besides, I like you not : if you will know my house ; 'Tis at the tuft of Olives, here hard by : Will you go Sister ? Shepheard ply her hard :

Come

Come Sister, Shepherdess, look on him better
And be not proud, though all the world could see,
None could be so abus'd in sight as he.
Come to our flock.

Exit.

Phe. Deed Shepheard, now I finde thy saw of might,
Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight?

Sil. Sweet Phebe.

Phe. Hah : what sayest thou Silvius?

Sil. Sweet Phebe, pittie me.

Phe. Why I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius.

Sil. Where ever sorrow is, relief would be :

If you do sorrow at my grief in love,
By giving love your sorrow, and my grief
Were both extermin'd.

Phe. Thou hast my love, is not that neighbourly?

Sil. I would have you.

Phe. Why that were covetousness:

Silvius; the time was, that I hated thee;
And yet it is not, that I bear thee love,
But since that thou canst talk of love so well,
Thy company, which earst was irksome to me
I will endure; and I'll employ thee too:
But do not look for further recompence.
Then thine own gladness, that thou art employed.

Sil. So holy, and so perfect is my love,
And such a poverty of grace,
That I shall think it a most plentiful crop
To glean the broken ears after the man
That the main harvest reaps: loose now and then
A scattered smile, and that I'll live upon. (while?)

Phe. Know'st thou the youth that spoke to me yere-

Sil. Not very well, but I have met him oft,
And he hath bought the Cottage and the bounds,
That the old Carlot once was Master of.

Phe. Think not I love him, though I ask for him,
'Tis but a peevish boy, yet he talks well,
But what care I for words? yet words do well,
When he that speaks them pleases those that hear:
It is a pretty youth, not very pretty,
But sure he's proud, and yet his pride becomes him;
He'll make a proper man: the best thing in him
Is his complexion: and faster then his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did heal it up:
He is not very tall, yet for his years he's tall:
His leg is but so so, and yet 'tis well:
There was a pretty redness in his lip,
A little riper, and more lusty red
Then that mix'd in his cheek: 'twas just the difference
Betwixt the constant red, and mingled Damask.
There be some women, Silvius, had they mark'd him
In parcels as I did, would have gone near
To fall in love with him: but for my part
I love him not, nor hate him not: and yet
I have more cause to hate him then to love him,
For what had he to do to chide at me?

He said mine eyes were black and my hair black,
And now I am remembred, scorn'd at me:

I marvell why I answer'd not again,
But that's all one: omittance is no quittance:
I'll write to him a very ranting Letter,
And thou shalt bear it, wilt thou, Silvius?

Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.

Phe. I'll write it straight:

The matter's in my head, and in my heart,
I will be bitter with him, and passing short;
Go with me, Silvius.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Rosalinde, and Celia,, and Jaques.

Jaq. I prethee, pretty youth, let me be better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say you are a melancholly fellow.

Jaq. I am so: I do love it better then laughing.

Ros. Those that are in extremity of either, are abominable fellows, and betray themselves to every modern censure, worse then drunkards.

Jaq. Why, 'tis good to be sad and say nothing.

Ros. Why then 'tis good to be a post.

Jaq. I have neither the Schollers melancholly, which is emulation: nor the Musicians, which is fantastical;
nor the Courtiers, which is proud: nor the Souldiers, which is ambitious: nor the Lawyers, which is politick:
nor the Ladies, which is nice: nor the Lovers, which is all these: but it is a melancholly of mine own, compounded of many simples, extracted from many objects, and indeed the sundrie contentions of travells, in which my often rumination, wraps me in a most humorous sadness.

Ros. A Traveller: by my faith you have great reason to be sad: I fear you have sold your own Lands, to see other mens; then to have seen much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor hands.

Jaq. Yes, I have gain'd my experience.

Enter Orlando.

Ros. And your experience makes you sad: I had rather have a fool to make me merry, then experience to make me sad, and to travel for it too.

Orl. Good-day, and happiness, dear Rosalinde.

Jaq. Nay then God buy you, and you talk in blank verse. Exit.

Ros. Farewell Mounseur Traveller: look you lisp, and wear strange suits; disable all the benefits of your own Countrie: be out of love with your nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will scarce think you have swam in a Gundello. Why how now Orlando, where have you bin all this while? you a lover? and you serve me such another trick, never come in my sight more.

Orl. My fair Rosalinde, I come within an hour of my promise.

Ros. Break an hours promise in love? he that will divide a minute into a thousand parts, and break but a part of the thousand part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him that Cupid hath clapt him oth' shoulder, but I'll warrant him heart hole.

Orl. Pardon me dear Rosalinde.

Ros. Nay, and you be so tardy, come no more in my sight, I had as lief be woo'd of a Snaille.

Orl. Of a Snaille?

Ros. I, of a Snaille: for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head: a better joynture I think then you make a woman: besides, he brings his destiny with him.

Orl. What's that?

Ros. Why horns: which such as you are fain to be beholding to your wives for: but he come armed in his fortune, and prevents the slander of his wife.

Orl. Vertue

Orl. Vertue is no horn-maker : and my Rosalinde is veruious.

Ref. And I am your Rosalinde.

Cel. It pleases him to call you so : but he hath a Rosalinde of a better leer then you.

Ref. Come, wooe me, wooe, me : for now I am in a holy-day humour, and like enough to consent : What would you say to me now, and I were your very, very Rosalinde ?

Orl. I would kifs before I spoke.

Ref. Nay, you were better speak first, and when you were gravel'd, for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kifs : very good Orators when they are out, they will spit, and for lovers, lacking (God warn us) matter, the cleantiest shift is to kifs.

Orl. How if the kifs be deni'd ?

Ref. Then she puts you to entreaty, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloved Mistress ?

Ref. Marry that should you if I were your Mistress, or I should think my honesty ranker then my wit.

Orl. What, of my suit ?

Ref. Not out of your apparell, and yet out of your suit.

Am not I your Rosalinde ?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Ref. Well, in her person, I say I will not have you.

Orl. Then in mine own person, I doe.

Ref. No faith, die by Attorney : the poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man dyed in his own person (videlicet) in a love cause : Troilus had his brain dash'd out with a Grecian club, yet he did what he could to die before, and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have liv'd many a fair year, though Hero had turn'd Nun ; if it had not been for a hot Midsummer-night, for (good youth) he went but forth to wash in the Hellespont, and being taken with the cramp, was drown'd, and the foolish Chroniclers of that age, found it was Hero of Sestos. But these are all lies, men have died from time to time, and wormes have eaten them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalinde, of this mind, for I protest her frown might kill me.

Ref. By this hand, it will not kill a flie : but come, now I will be your Rosalinde in a more comming-on disposition : and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalinde.

Ref. Yes faith will I, Fridayes and Saturdayes, and all

Orl. And wilt thou have me ?

Ref. I, and twenty such.

Orl. What sayest thou ?

Ref. Are you not good ?

Orl. I hope so.

Rosalind. Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing : Come sister, you shall be the Priest, and marry us : give me your hand Orlando : What doe you say sister ?

Orl. Pray thee marry us.

Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ref. You must begin, will you Orlando.

Cel. Go too : will you Orlando, have to wife this Rosalinde ?

Orl. I wil.

Ref. But when ?

Orl. Why now, as fast as she can marry us.

Ref. Then you must say, I take thee Rosalinde for wife.

Orl. I take thee Rosalinde for wife.

Ref. I might ask you for your Commission, But I do take thee Orlando for my husband : there's a girle goes before the Priest, and certainly a Womans thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts, they are wing'd.

Ref. Now tell me how long you would have her, after you have posselt her ?

Orl. For ever, and a day.

Ref. Say a day, without the ever : No, no Orlando, men are Aprill when they wooe, December when they wed : Maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives : I will be more jealous of thee, then a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen, more clamorous then a Parrat against rain, more new-fangled then an ape, more giddy in my desires, then a monkey : I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the Fountain, and I will doe that when you are dispos'd to be merry : I will laugh like a Hyen, and that when thou art inclin'd to sleep.

Orl. But will my Rosalinde do so ?

Ref. By my life, she will do as I do.

Orl. O but she is wise.

Ref. Or else she could not have the wit to do this : the wiser, the waywarder : make the doores upon a womans wit, and it will out at the casement : shut that, and 'twill out at the key-hole : stop that, 'twill flie with the smoak out at the chimney.

Orl. A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say, wit whether wilt ?

Ref. Nay, you might keep that check for it, till you met your wives wit going to your neighbours bed,

Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuse that ?

Ref. Marry to say, she came to seek you there : you shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue : O that woman that cannot make her fault her husbands occasion, let her never nurse her childe her self, for she will breed it like a foole.

Orl. For these two houres, Rosalinde, I will leave thee.

Ref. Alas, dear love, I cannot lack thee two hours.

Orl. I must attend the Duke at dinner, by two a clock I will be with thee again.

Ref. I, go your wayes, go your wayes : I knew what you would prove, my friends told me as much, and I thought no less : that flattering tongue of yours wonne me : 'tis but one cast away, and so come death : two o'clock is your houre.

Orl. I sweet Rosalinde.

Ref. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God inend me, and by all pretty oathes that are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise, or come one minute behinde your houre, I will think you the most patheticall break-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind, that may be chosen out of the grosse band of the unfaithfull : therefore beware my censure, and keep your promise.

Orl. With no less religion, then if thou wert indeed my Rosalinde : so adieu.

Ref. Well, Time is the old Justice that examines all such offenders, and let time try : adieu.

Exit.

Cel. You have simply misus'd our sex in your love-prate :

prate : we must have your doublet and hose pluckt over your head, and shew the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.

Ros. O coz, coz, coz : my pretty little coz, that thou did'st know how many fathome deep I am in love : but it cannot be sounded : my affection hath an unknown bottome, like the Bay of Portugall.

Cel. Or rather bottomelesse, that as fast as you poure affection in, it runs out.

Ros. No, that same wicked Bastard of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceiv'd of spleen, and borne of madness, that blind rascally boy, that abuses every ones eyes, because his own are out, let him be judge, how deep I am in love : I'll tell thee Aliena, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando : I'll go finde a shadow, and sigh till he come.

Cel. And I'll sleep.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Jaques and Lords, Forresters.

Jaq. Which is he that killed the Deer ?

Lord. Sir, it was I.

Jaq. Let's present him to the Duke like a Roman Conquerour, and it would do well to set the Deers horns upon his head, for a branch of Victory ; have you no song Forrester for this purpose ?

Lord. Yes Sir,

Jaq. Sing it : 'tis no matter how it be in tune, so it make noyse enough.

Musick, Song.

What shall he have that kil'd the Deer ?

His Leather skin, and horns to wear :

Then sing him home, the rest shall bear this bur-

Take thou no scorn to wear the horn, (then;

It was a crest ere thou wast born,

Thy fathers father wore it,

And thy father bore it,

The horn, the horn, the lusty horn,

Is not a thing to laugh to scorn.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Rosalinde and Celia.

Ros. How say you now, is it not past two a clock ? And here much Orlando.

Cel. I warrant you with pure love, and troubled brain.

Enter Silvius.

He hath tane his bow and arrows, and is gone forth To sleep : look who comes here.

Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth, My gentle Phebe, bid me give you this : I knew not the contents, but as I guess By the stern brow, and waspish action Which she did use, as she was writing of it, It bears an angry tenure ; pardon me, I am but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience her self would startle at this letter,

And play the swaggerer, bear this, bear all : She saies I am not fair, that I lack manners, She calls me proud, and that she could not love me Were man as rare as Phenix : 'od's my will, Her love is not the Hare that I did hunt, Why writes she so to me ? well Shepheard, well, This is a Letter of your own device.

Sil. No, I protest, I know not the contents, Phebe did write it,

Ros. Come, come, you are a foole, And turn'd into the extremity of love. I saw her hand, she has a leathern hand, A free-stone coloured hand : I verily did think That her old gloves were one, but 'twas her hands : She has a huswifes hand, but that's no matter : I say she never did invent this letter, This is a mans invention, and his hand.

Sil. Sure it is hers.

Ros. Why, 'tis a boyfisterous and a cruell stile, A stile for challengers : why, she defies me, Like Turk to Christian : womens gentle brain Could not drop forth such giant rude invention, Such Ethiop words, blacker in their effect Then in their countenance : will you hear the letter ?

Sil. So please you, for I never heard it yet : Yet heard too much of Phebes crueltie.

Ros. She Phebes me : mark how the tyrant writes.

Read. Art thou god, to shepheard turn'd ? That a maidens heart hath burn'd ? Can a woman rail thus.

Sil. Call you this railing ?

Ros. Read. Why, thy godhead laid apart, War'st thou with a womans heart ? Did you ever hear such railing ? Whiles the eye of man did wooe me, That could do no vengeance to me. Meaning me a beast.

If the scorn of your bright eie Have power to raise such love in mine, Alack, in me, what strange effect Would they work in mild aspect ? Whiles you chid me, I did love, How then might your prayers move ? He that brings this love to thee, Little knowes this love in me : And by him seal up thy minde, Whether that thy youth and kinde Will the faithfull offer take Of me, and all that I can make, Or else by him my love deny, And then I'll study how to dy.

Sil. Call you this chiding ?

Cel. Alas poor Shepheard,

Ros. Doe you pittie him ? No, he deserves no pittie : wilt thou love such a woman ? what to make thee an instrument, and play false strings upon thee ? not to be endur'd. Well, go your way to her ; (for I see Love hath made thee a tame snake) and say this to her ; That if she love me, I charge her to love thee : if she will not, I will never have her, unless thou entreat for her : if you be a true lover, hence, and not a word ; for here comes more company.

Exit. Sil.

Enter Oliver.

Oliv. Good morrow, fair ones : pray you, (if you Wherein the Purlews of this Forrest stands.

A sheep-coat, fenc'd about with Olive-trees.

Cel. West of this place down in the neighbour bottom
The rank of Oziars, by the murmuring stream
Left on your right hand, bring you to the place:
But at this hour the house doth keep it selfe,
There's none within.

Oli. If that an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description,
Such garments, and such years: the boy is fair,
Of female favour, and bestowes himself
Like a ripe sister: But the woman low
And browner then her brother: are not you
The owner of the house I did enquire for?

Cel. It is no boast, being ask'd, to say we are.

Oli. Orlando doth commend him to you both,
And to that youth he calls his Rosalinde,
He sends this bloody napkin; are you he?

Ros. I am: what must we understand by this?

Oli. Some of my shame, if you will know of me
What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkercher was stain'd.

Cel. I pray you tell it.

Oli. When last the young Orlando parted from you,
He left a promise to return again
Within an houre, and pacing through the Forrest,
Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancie,
Loe what befell: he threw his eye aside,
And mark what object did present it self
Under an old Oak, whose bows were moss'd with age,
And high top bald with drie antiquity:
A wretched ragged man, ore-grown with hair
Lay sleeping on his back; about his neck
A green and guilded snake had wreath'd it self,
Who with her head, nimble in threats approach'd
The opening of his mouth; but suddenly
Seeing Orlando, it unlink'd it self,
And with indented glides, did slip away
Into a bush, under whose bushes shade
A Lioness, with udders all drawn drie,
Lay cowering head on ground, with catlike watch
When that the sleeping man should stir; for 'tis
The royall disposition of that beast
To prey on nothing, that doth seem as dead:
This seen, Orlando did approach the man,
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.

Cel. O I have heard him speak of that same brother,
And he did render him the most unnaturall
That liv'd amongst men.

Oli. And well he might so doe,
For well I know he was unnaturall.

Ros. But to Orlando: did he leave him there
Food to the suck'd and hungry Lioness?

Oli. Twice did he turn his back and purpos'd so:
But kindness, nobler ever then revenge,
And nature stronger then his just occasion,
Made him give battle to the Lioness:
Who quickly fell before him, in which hurtling
From miserable slumber I awaked.

Cel. Are you his brother?

Ros. Was't you he rescu'd?

Cel. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?

Oli. 'Twas I: but 'tis not I: I do not shame
To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.

Ros. But for the bloody napkin?

Oli. By and by:

When from the first to last betwixt us two,
Tears our recountments had most kindly bath'd,
As how I came into that Desert place.
In brief, he led me to the gentle Duke,
Who gave me fresh array, and entertainment,
Committing me unto my brothers love,
Who led me instantly unto his Cave,
There stript himself, and here upon his arme
The Lioness had torn some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted,
And cri'd in fainting upon Rosalinde.
Brief, I recover'd him, bound up his wound,
And after some small space, being strong at heart,
He sent me hither, stranger as I am
To tell this, that you might excuse
His broken promise, and to give this napkin
Died in his blood, unto the Shepherd youth,
That he in sport doth call his Rosalinde.

Cel. Why how now Ganimed, sweet Ganimed.

Oli. Many will swoon when they do look on blood.

Cel. There is no more in it; Cosen Ganimed.

Oli. Look, he recovers.

Ros. I would I were at home.

Cel. We'll lead you thither:

I pray you take him by the arme.

Oli. Be of good cheer, youth: you a man?
You lack a mans heart.

Ros. I do so, I confesse it:

Ah, sirra, a body would think this was well counterfeit-ed, I pray you tell your brother how well I counterfeited:
heigh-ho.

Oli. This was not counterfeit, there is too great re-stimony in your complexion, that it was passion of earnest.

Ros. Counterfeit, I assure you.

Oli. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.

Ros. So I do: but I faith, I should have been a woman by right.

Cel. Come, you look paler and paler: pray you draw homewards: good sir, go with us.

Oli. That will I: for I must bear answer back
How you excuse my brother, Rosalinde.

Ros. I shall devise something: but I pray you commend my counterfeiting to him: will you goe?

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clown and Audrie.

Clo. We shall finde a time Audrie, patience gentle Audrie.

Aud. Faith the Priest was good enough, for all the old gentlemen saying.

Clo. A most wicked Sir Oliver, Audrie, a most vile Mar-text. But Audrie, there is a youth here in the Forrest layes claim to you.

Aud. I, I know who 'tis: he hath no interest in me in the world: here comes the man you mean.

Enter William.

Clo. It is meat and drink to me to see a Clown, by my

my troth, we that have good wits, have much to answer for: we shall be flouting: we cannot hold.

Will. Good ev'n Andrey.

And. God ye good ev'n William.

Will. And good ev'n to you Sir.

Clo. Good ev'n gentle friend. Cover thy head, cover thy head: Nay prethee be cover'd. How old are you Friend?

Will. Five and twenty Sir.

Clo. A ripe age: is thy name William?

Will. William, sir.

Clo. A fair name. Was't born i'th Forrest here?

Will. I sir, I thank God.

Clo. Thank God: A good answer:

Art rich?

Will. 'Faith sir, so, so.

Clo. So, so, is good, very good, very excellent good: and yet it is not, it is but so, so:

Art thou wife?

Will. I sir, I have a pretty wit,

Clo. Why, thou sayest well, I do now remember a saying: The foole doth think he is wise, but the wiseman knowes himself to be a Foole. The Heathen Philosopher, when he had a desire to eat a Grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth, meaning thereby, that Grapes were made to eat, and lips to open. You do love this maid?

Will. I do sir.

Clo. Give me your hand: Art thou Learned?

Will. No sir.

Clo. Then learn this of me, To have, is to have. For it is a figure in Rhetorick, that drink being powr'd out of a cup into a glass, by filling the one, doth empty the other. For all your Writers do consent, that ipse is he: now you are not ipse, for I am he.

Will. Which he sir?

Clo. He sir, that must marry this woman: Therefore you Clown, abandon: which is in the vulgar, leave the societie: which in the boorish, is company, of this female: which in the common is woman: which together, is, abandon the society of this Female, or Clown thou perishest: or to thy better understanding, dyest; or (to wit) I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage: I will deal in poyson with thee, or in bastinado, or in steel: I will bandy with thee in faction, I will ore-run thee with policy: I will kill thee a hundred and fifty wayes, therefore tremble and depart.

And. Do good William.

Will. God rest you merry sir.

Exit.

Enter Corin.

Cor. Our Master and Mistresse seeks you: come away, away.

Clo. Trip Andrey, trip Andrey, I attend, I attend.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Orlando and Oliver.

Orl. Is't possible, that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her?

And loving woote? and wooing, she should grant? And will you persevere to enjoy her?

Ol. Neither call the giddinesse of it in question; the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor sudden consenting: but say with me, I love Aliena: say with her, that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other: it shall be to your good: for my fathers house, and all the revenue, that was old Sir Rowlands, will I estate upon you, and here live and die a Shepheard.

Enter Rosalind.

Orl. You have my consent.

Let your wedding be to morrow: thither will I Invite the Duke, and all's contented followers:

Go you, and prepare Aliena; for look you, Here comes my Rosalinde.

Ros. God save you brother,

Orl. And you fair sister.

Ros. Oh my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarfe

Orl. It is my arme.

Ros. I thought my heart had been wounded with the clawes of a Lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a Lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to found, when he shew'd me your handkercher?

Orl. I and greater wonders then that.

Ros. O, I know where you are: nay, 'tis true: there was never any thing so sudden, but the fight of two Rammes, and Cesars Thraasonicall brag, of, I came, saw, and overcame. For your brother, and my sister, no sooner met, but they look'd: no sooner look'd, but they lov'd; no sooner lov'd, but they sigh'd: no sooner sigh'd, but they ask'd one another the reason: no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy: and in these degrees, have they made a pair of staires to marriage, which they will climbe incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage; they are in the very wrath of love, and they will together. Clubbes cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to morrow: and I will bid the Duke to the Nuptiall. But O, how bitter a thing it is, to look into happines through another mans eyes: by so much the more shall I to morrow be at the height of heart heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy, in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then to morrow, I cannot serve your turn for Rosalinde?

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weary you then no longer with idle talking. Know of me then (for now I speak to some purpose) that I know you are a Gentleman of good conceit: I speak not this, that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge: infomuch (I say) I know you are: neither do I labour for a greater esteem then may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do your self good, and not to grace me. Believe then, if you please, that I can doe strange things: I have since I was three year old convert with a Magitian, most profound in his heart, and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalinde so near the heart, as your gesture cries it out: when your brother marries Aliena, you shall marry her. I know into what straights of fortune she is driven, and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to morrow, humane as she is, and without any danger.

to

Orl. Speak'tt thou in sober meanings?

Ros. By my life I doe, which I tender dearly, though I say I am a Magician: Therefore put you in your best array, bid your friends: for if you will be married to morrow, you shall: and to Rosalind if you will.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Look, here comes a Lover of mine, and a Lover of hers

Phe. Youth, you have done me much ungentlenesse, To shew the Letter that I writ to you.

Ros. I care not if I have: it is my study To seem despightfull and ungentle to you: You are there followed by a faithfull Shepheard, Look upon him, love him: he worships you.

Phe. Good Shepheard, tell this youth what 'tis to love.

Sil. It is to be made all of sighes and teares, And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganimed.

Or. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of faith and service, And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganimed.

Or. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasie, All made of passion, and all made of wishes, All adoration, duty and obfervance, All humblenesse, all patience, and impatience, All purity, all triall, all obfervance: And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And so am I for Ganimed.

Or. And so am I for Rosalind.

Ros. And so am I for no woman.

Phe. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Sil. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Or. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Ros. Why doe you speak too? Why blame you me to love you?

Orl. To her that is not here, nor doth not hear.

Ros. Pray you no more of this, 'tis like the howling of Irish Wolves against the Moon: I will help you if I can: I would love you if I could: To morrow meet me altogether: I will marry you, if ever I marry Woman, and I'll be married to morrow: I will satisfie you, if ever I satisfi'd man, and you shall be married to morrow. I will content you, if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to morrow: As you love Rosalind meet, as you love Phebe meet, and as I love no woman I'll meet: so fare you well, I have left you commands.

Sil. I'll not fail, if I live.

Phe. Nor I.

Orl. Nor I.

Enter Clown and Audrey.

Cl. To morrow is the joyfull day, Audrey to morrow will we be married.

Au. I doe desire it withall my heart: and I hope it is no dishonest desire, to desire to be a woman of the world?

Here come two of the banish'd Dukes Pages.

Enter two Pages.

1. Pa. Well met honest Gentleman.

Cl. By my troth well met: come, sit, sit, and a song.

2. Pa. We are for you, sit i'th middle.

1. Pa. Shall we clap into't roundly, without hauking, or spitting, or saying we are hoarse, which are the onely prologues to a bad voice.

2. Pa. I'faith, i'faith, and both in tunc, like two Jip-sies on a horse.

Song.

*It was a Lover, and his Lasse,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
That o're the green cornfield did passe,
In the spring time; the onely pretty rang time,
When Birds doe sing, hey ding a ding, ding.
Sweet Lovers love the spring.
And therefore take the present time,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
For love is crown'd with the prime.
In spring time, &c.*

*Between the acres of the Rie,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino:
These pretty Countrey folks would lie,
In the spring time, &c.*

*The Carroll they began that houre,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
How that a life was but a Flower,
In the spring time, &c.*

Cl. Truly young Gentlemen, though there was no great matter in the ditty, yet the note was very untunable.

1. Pa. You are deceiv'd Sir, we keep time, we lost not our time.

Cl. By my troth yes: I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song. God buy you, and God mend your voyces. Come Audrey.

Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, Jaques, Orlando, Oliver, Celia.

Du. Sen. Dost thou believe Orlando, that the boy Can doe all this that he hath promised?

Or. I sometimes doe believe, and sometimes doe not, As those that fear they hope, and know they fear.

Enter Rosalinde, Silvius, and Phebe.

Ros. Patience once more, whiles our compact is urg'd: You say, if I bring in your Rosalinde, You will bestow her on Orlando here? (her.

Du. Sen. That would I, had I Kingdomes to give with

Ros. And you say you will have her, when I bring her?

Or. That would I, were I of all Kingdomes King

Ros. You say, you'll marry me, if I be willing.

Phe. That will I, should I die the hour after.

Ros. But if you doe refuse to marry me, You'll give your self to this most faithfull Shepheard.

Phe. So is the bargain.

Ros. You say that you'll have Phebe if she will.

Sil. Though to have her and death, were both one thing.

S

Ros.

Ros. I have promis'd to make all this matter even :
Keep you your word, O Duke, to give your Daughter,
You yours, Orlando, to receive his Daughter :
Keep you your word, Phebe, that you'll marry me,
Or else refusing me to wed the Shepheard :
Keep your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her,
If she refuse me, and from hence I go
To make these doubts all even. Exit Ros. and Celia.

Du. Sen. I doe remember in this Shepheard boy,
Some lively touches of my daughters favour.

Or. My Lord, the first time that I ever saw him,
Me thought he was a brother to your daughter :
But my good Lord, this Boy is Forrest born,
And hath bin tutor'd in the rudiments
Of many desperate studies, by his Uncle,
Who he reports to be a great Magician.

Enter Clown and Audrey.

Obscured in the circle of this Forrest.

Jaq. There is sure another flood toward, and these couples are coming to the Arke. Here comes a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongues, are call'd Fooles.

Clo. Salutation and greeting to you all.

Jaq. Good my Lord, bid him welcome : This is the Motley-minded Gentleman, that I have so often met in the Forrest : he hath bin a Courtier he swears.

Clo. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation, I have trod a measure, I have flattered a Lady, I have bin politick with my friend, smooth with mine enemy, I have undone three Tailors, I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Jaq. And how was that tane up ?

Clo. Faith we met, and found the quarrell was upon the seventh cause.

Jaq. How the seventh cause ? Good my Lord, like this fellow.

Du. Sen. I like him very well.

Clo. God'ild you sir, I desire you of the like : I presse in here, sir, amongst the rest of the Countrey copulatives to swear, and to forswear, according as marriage bindes and blood breakes : a poor virgin, sir, an ill-favour'd thing, sir, but mine own, a poor humour of mine, sir, to take that that no man else will : rich honestly dwells like a miser, sir, in a poor house, as your Pearl in your Oyster.

Du. Sen. By my faith he is very swift, and sententious.

Clo. According to the fooles bolt, sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Jaq. But for the seventh cause : How did you finde the quarrell on the seventh cause ?

Clo. Upon a lye seven times removed : (bear your body more seeming Audrey) as thus sir : I did dislike the cut of a certain Courtiers beard : he sent me word, If I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the minde it was : this is call'd the retort courteous. If I sent him word again it was well cut, he would send me word he cut it to please himself : this is call'd the quip modest. If again, it was not well cut, he disabled my judgement : this is call'd the reply churlish. If again it was not well cut, he would answer I spake not true : this is call'd the reproof valiant. If again it was not well cut, he would say, I lie : this is call'd the counter-check quarrellsome : and so to the lie circumstantiall, and the lie direct.

Jaq. And how oft did you say his beard was not well cut ?

Clo. I durst go no further then the lye circumstantiall :

nor he durst not give me the lye direct : and so we measured swords, and parted

Jaq. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lye.

Clo. O sir, we quarrell in print, by the book : as you have books for good manners : I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous : the second, the Quip modest : the third, the Reply churlish : the fourth, the Reproof valiant : the fifth, the Countercheck quarrellsome : the sixth, the Lye with circumstance : the seventh, the Lye direct : all these you may avoid, but the Lye direct : and you may avoid that too, with an If. I knew when seven Justices could not take up a Quarrell, but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an If ; as, If you said so, then I said so : and they shook hands, and swore brothers. Your If is the onely peace-maker : much virtue in If.

Jaq. Is not this a rare fellow my Lord ? He's as good at any thing, and yet a fool.

Du. Sen. He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, and under the presentation of that he shoots his wit.

Enter Hymen, Rosalind, and Celia.
Still Musick.

Hymen. Then is there mirth in heaven,
When earthly things made even atone together.

Good Duke receive thy daughter,
Hymen from heaven brought her,
Tea brought her hither.

That thou mightst joyn her hand with his,
Whose heart within his bosome is.

Ros. To you I give my self, for I am yours.

Or. To you I give my self, for I am yours.

Du. Se. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Or. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.

Phe. If sight and shape be true, why then my love adieu.

Ros. I'll have no Father, if you be not he :

I'll have no Husband, if you be not he :

Nor ne're wed woman, if you be not she.

Hy. Peace hoa : I bar confusion,

*Tis I must make conclusion

Of these most strange events :

Here's eight that must take hands,

To joyn in Hymens bands,

If truth holds true contents.

You and and you, no crosse shall part ;

You and you, are heart in heart ;

You, to his love must accord,

Or have a Woman to your Lord.

You and you, are sure together,

As the Winter to foul weather :

Whiles a Wedlock Hymn we sing,

Feed your selves with questioning :

That reason, wonder may diminish

How thus we met, and these things finish.

Song.

Wedding is great Junos crown,

O blessed bond of boord and bed :

*Tis Hymen peoples every town,

High wedlock then be honoured :

Honour, high honour and renown

To Hymen, God of every Town.

Du. Sen. O my dear Niece, welcome thou art to me,
Even daughter welcome, in no lesse degree.

Phe.

Phe. I will not eat my word, now thou art mine,
Thy faith, my fancy to thee doth combine.

Enter second Brother.

2. Bro. Let me have audience for a word or two :
I am the second son of old Sir Rowland,
That bring these tidings to this fair assembly.
Duke Frederick hearing how that every day,
Men of great worth resorted to this Forrest,
Addrest a mighty power which were on foot
In his own conduct, purposely to take
His brother here, and put him to the sword :
And to the skirts of this wilde Wood he came ;
Where, meeting with an old religious man,
After some question with him, was converted
Both from his enterprize, and from the world :
His crown bequeathing to his banish'd Brother,
And all their Lands restor'd to him again
That were with him exil'd. This to be true,
I doe engage my life.

Du. Sen. Welcome young man :
Thou offer'st fairly to thy brothers wedding :
To one his lands with-held, and to the other
A land it selfe at large, a potent Dukedome.
First, in this Forrest, let us doe those ends
That here were well begun, and well begot :
And after, every of this happy number
That have endur'd shrew'd dayes and nights with us,
Shall share the good of our returned fortune,
According to the measure of their states.
Mean time, forget this new-faln dignity,
And fall into our Rustick Revelry :
Play Musick, and you Brides and Bride-grooms all,
With measure heap'd in joy, to th' Measures fall.

Jaq. Sir, by your patience : If I heard you rightly,
The Duke hath put on a religious life,
And thrown into neglect the pompous Court.

2. Bro. He hath.

Jaq. To him will I : out of these convertites,
There is much matter to be heard, and learn'd :
You to your sonner Honour, I bequeathe
Your patience, and your virtue well deserves it.
You to a love, that your true faith doth merit :
You to your land, and love, and great allies :
You to a long, and well-deserved bed :
And you to wrangling, for thy loving voyage
Is but for two moneths victuall'd : So to your pleasures,
I am for other, then for dancing measures.

Du. Sen. Stay, Jaq., stay.

Jaq. To see no pastime, I : what you would have,
I'll stay to know, at your abandon'd cave. Exit.

Du. Sen. Proceed, proceed, we will begin these rights,
As we doe trust, they'll end in true delights.

Res. It is not the fashion to see the Lady the Epilogue:
but it is no more unhandsome, then to see the Lord the Prologue. If it be true, that good wine needs no bush,
'tis true, that a good Play needs no Epilogue. Yet to good wine they do use good bushes : and good Playes prove the better by the help of good Epilogues : What a case am I in then, that am neither a good Epilogue, nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalf of a good Play ?
I am not furnish'd like a Beggar, therefore to beg will not become mee. My way is to conjure you, and I'll begin with the Women. I charge you (O women) for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this Play, as pleases you : And I charge you (O men) for the love you bear to women (as I perceive by your simpring, none of you hates them) that between you, and the women, the Play may please. If I were a Woman, I would kisse as many of you as had beards that pleas'd me, complexions that lik'd me, and breaths that I desir'd not : And I am sure, as many as have good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will for my kind offer, when I make currt'sie, bid me farewell. Exeunt.

F I N I S.

The Taming of the Shrew.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Beggar and Hostesse, Christopher Sly.

Beggar.

I'le pheeze you in faith.
Host. A pair of Stocks you Rogue.
Beg. Y'are a baggage, the Slies are no Rogues. Look in the Chronicles, we came in with Richard Conquerour: therefore Paucas pallabris, let the world fl de: Sessa.

Host. You will not pay for the glasses you have burst?

Beg. No, not a deniere: go by S. Jeronimy, go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Host. I know my remedy, I must go fetch the Head-borough.

Beg. Third, or fourth, or fift Borough, I'll answer him by Law: I'll not budge an inch boy: Let him come, and kindly. Falls asleep.

Wind horns. Enter a Lord from hunting, with his train:

Lo. Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds, Brach Merriman, the poor Currie is imbest, And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd Brach, Saw'st thou not boy how Silver made it good At the hedge corner, in the coldest fault, I would not lose the dog for twenty pound.

Hun. Why Belman is as good as he, my Lord, He cried upon it at the meekest losse, And twice to day pick'd out the dullest sent; Trust me, I take him for the better dog.

Lord. Thou art a fool, if Eccho were as fleet, I would esteem him worth a dozen such: But sup them well, and look unto them all, To morrow I intend to hunt again.

Hun. I will my Lord.

Lord. What's here? one dead, or drunk? See doth he breathe?

2. Hun. He breathes, my Lord. Were he not warm'd with Ale, this were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.

Lord. O monstrous beast, how like a swine he lies. Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine image! Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man. What think you, if he were convey'd to bed, Wrap'd in sweet cloathes: Rings put upon his fingers: A most delicious banquet by his bed, And brave attendants near him when he wakes, Would not the Beggar then forget himself?

1. Hun. Believe me, Lord, I think he cannot choose.

2. Hun. It would seem strange unto him when he wak'd.

Lord. Even as a flatt'ring dream, or worthless fancy.

Then take him up, and manage well the jest: Carry him gently to my fairest Chamber, And hang it round with all my wanton pictures: Balm his foul head in warm distilled waters, And burn sweet Wood to make the Lodging sweet: Procure me Musick ready when he wakes, To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound: And if he chance to speak, be ready straight (And with a low submissive reverence)

Say, what is it your Honour will command:

Let one attend him with a silver Bason

Full of Rose-water, and bestrew'd with Flowers,

Another bear the Ewer: the third a Diaper, And say, wilt please your Lordship cool your hands.

Some one be ready with a costly suit,

And aske him what apparell he will wear:

Another tell him of his Hounds and Horse,

And that his Lady mourns at his disease,

Perfwade him that he hath bin Lunatick,

And when he sayes he is, say that he dreames

For he is nothing but a mighty Lord:

This doe, and doe it kindly; gentle sirs,

It will be pastime passing excellent,

If it be husbandd with modesty.

1. Hun. My Lord, I warrant you we will play our part, As he shall think by our true diligence He is no lesse then what we say he is.

Lord. Take him up gently, and to bed with him, And each one to his office when he wakes.

Sound Trampets.

Sirrah, go see what Trumpet 'tis that sounds, Belike some Noble Gentleman that meanes (Travelling some journey) to repose himself here.

Enter Servingman.

How now? who is it?

Ser. An't please your Honour, Players That offer service to your Lordship.

Enter Players.

Lord. Bid them come near: Now fellows, you are welcome.

Pla. We thank your Honour.

Lor. Doe you intend to stay with me to night?

2. Pla. So please your Lordship to accept our duty.

Lord. With all my heart. This fellow I remember, Since once he plaid a Farmer's eldest son, 'Twas where you woo'd the Gentlewoman so well: I have forgot your name: but sure that part

Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd

Sim. I think 'twas Soto that your Honour meanes.

Lord. 'Tis very true, thou didst it excellent:

Well you are come to me in happy time,
The rather for I have some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can assist me much.
There is a Lord will hear you play to night;
But I am doubtfull of your modesties,
Least (over-eying of his odde behaviour,
For yet his Honour never heard a Play)
You break into some merry passion,
And so offend him: for I tell you sir,
If you should smile, he growes impatient.

Pla. Fear not my Lord, we can contain our selves,
Were he the veriest antick in the world.

Lord. Go sirra, take them to the Buttery,
And give them friendly welcome every one,
Let them want nothing that my house affords.

Exit one with the Players.

Sirra go you to Baietholmew my Page,
And see him drest in all suits like a Lady:
That done, conduct him to the Drunkards chamber,
And call him Madam, doe him obeisance:
Tell him from me (as he will win my love)
He bear himself with honourable action
Such as he hath observ'd in noble Ladies
Unto their Lords, by them accomplished,
Such duty to the Drunkard let him doe:
With soft low tongue, and lowly courtesie,
And say: What is't your Honour will command,
Wherein your Lady, and your humble Wife,
May shew her duty, and make known her love.
And then with kind embracements, tempting kisses,
And with declining head into his bosome
Bid him shed teares, as being over-joyed
To see her noble Lord restor'd to health,
Who for this seven yeares hath esteemed him
No better then a poor and loathsome beggar:
And if the boy have not a womans gift
To rain a shower of commanded teares,
An Onion will doe well for such a shift,
Which in a Napkin (being close convey'd)
Shall in despite enforce a watry eye:
See this dispatch'd with all the haste thou canst,
Anon I'll give thee more instructions.

Exit a Servingman.

I know the boy will well usurpe the grace,
Voyce, gate, and action of a Gentlewoman.
I long to hear him call the Drunkard, Husband,
And how my men will stay themselves from laughter,
When they doe homage to this simple peasant,
I'll in to counsell them: haply my presence
May well abate the over-merry spleen,
Which otherwise would grow into extreames.

Enter aloft the Drunkard with attendants, some with apparel, Bason & Ewer, & other appurtenances, & Lord.

Beg. For Gods sake a pot of small Ale.

1. Ser. Will't please your Lordship drink a cup of sack

2. Ser. Will't please your Honour taste of these Conserves?

3. Ser. What raiment will your Honour wear to day.

Beg. I am Christophero Slie, call not me Honour nor Lordship: I ne're drank sack in my life: and if you give me any Conserve, give me Conserve of Beef: ne're ask me what raiment I'll wear, for I have no more Doublets then Backs: no more Stockings then Legges: nor no more Shooes then Feet, nay sometimes more Feet then Shooes, or such Shooes as my Toes look through the over-leather.

Lord. Heaven cease this idle humour in your Honour.
Oh that a mighty man of such descent,
Of such possessions, and so high esteem,
Should be infused with so foul a spirit.

Beg. What, would you make me mad? Am not I Christophero Slie, old Slie's son of Burton-heath, by birth a Pedler, by education a Card-maker, by transmutation a Bear-heard, and now by present profession a Tinker. Ask Marrian Hacker the fat Ale-wife of Wincot, if she know me not: if she say I am not liv'd on the score for sheere Ale, score me up for the lyingst knave in Christendome. What I am not bestraught: here's-----

1. Man. Oh this it is that makes your Lady mourn.

2. Man. Oh this is it that makes your servants droop.

Lord. Hence comes it that your kindred shuns your
As beaten hence by your strange Lunacy. (house.

Oh Noble Lord, bethink thee of thy birth,
Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment,
And banish hence the abject lowly dreamies:
Look how thy servants doe attend on thee,
Each in his office ready at thy beck.
Wilt thou have Musick? Heark, Apollo playes, Musick.
And twenty caged Nightingales do sing.
Or wilt thou sleep? We'll have thee to a Couch,
Softer and sweeter then the lustfull bed
On purpose trimm'd up for Semiramis.
Say thou wilt walk: we will bestow the ground.
Or wilt thou ride? thy horses shall be trapp'd,
Their harness studded all with Gold and Pearl.
Dost thou love hawking? thou hast Hawkes will soare
Above the morning Larke. Or wilt thou hunt,
Thy Hounds shall make the Welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.

1. Man. Say thou wilt course, thy Gray-hounds are as
As breathed Stags: I, fleetier then the Roe. (swift

2. M. Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee straight
Adonis painted by a running brook,
And Citherea all in sedges hid,
Which seem to move, and wanton with her breath,
Even as the waving sedges play with winde.

Lord. We'll shew thee Jo, as she was a Maid,
And how she was beguiled and surpriz'd,
As lively painted, as the deed was done.

3. Man. Or Daphne roming through a thorny wood,
Scratching her Legs, that one shall swear she bleeds,
And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep,
So workinantly the blood and teares are drawn.

Lord. Thou art a Lord, and nothing but a Lord:
Thou hast a Lady far more beautifull,
Then any woman in this waining age.

1. Man. And till the teares that she hath shed for thee,
Like envious floods, o're-run her lovely face,
She was the fairest creature in the world,
And yet she is inferiour to none.

Beg. Am I a Lord, and have I such a Lady?
Or doe I dream? or have I dream'd till now?
I doe not sleep: I see, I hear, I speak:
I smell sweet savours, and I feel soft things:
Upon my life I am a Lord indeed,
And not a Tinker, nor Christophero Slie.
Well, bring our Lady hither to our sight,
And once again a pot o'th' smallest Ale.

2. Man. Will't please your Mightinesse to wash your hands ?

Oh how we joy to see your wits restor'd,
Oh that once more you knew but what you are :
These fifteen yeares you have bin in a dream,
Or when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.

Beg. These fifteen yeares, by my fay, a goodly nap,
But did I never speak of all that time ?

1. Man. Oh yes, my Lord; but very idle words,
For though you lay here in this goodly chamber,
Yet would you say, ye were beaten out of door,
And rail upon the Hostesse of the House,
And say you would present her at the Leet,
Because she brought Stone-Jugs, and no seal'd quarts :
Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacker.

Beg. I, the womans maid of the house.

3. Ma. Why sir, you know no house, nor no such maid,
Nor no such men as you have reckon'd up,
As Stephen Slie, and old John Naps of Greece,
And Peter Turph, and Henry Pimpernell,
And twenty more such names and men as these,
Which never were, nor no man ever saw.

Beg. Now Lord be thanked for my good amends.

All. Amen.

Enter Lady with Attendants.

Beg. I thank thee, thou shalt not lose by it.

Lady. How fares my noble Lord ?

Beg. Marry I fare well, for here is cheer enough.
Where is my Wife ?

La. Here noble Lord, what is thy will with her ?

Beg. Are you my Wife, and will not call me Husband ?
My men should call me Lord, I am your good-man.

La. My Husband and my Lord, my Lord and Husband,
I am your Wife in all obedience.

Beg. I know it well, what must I call her ?

Lord. Madam.

Beg. Alce Madam, or Jone Madam ?

Lord. Madam, and nothing else, so Lords call Ladies.

Beg. Madam Wife, they say that I have dream'd,
And slept about some fifteen year or more.

Lady. I, and the time seems thirty unto me,
Being all this time abandon'd from your bed.

Beg. 'Tis much, servants leave me and her alone :
Madam undresse you, and come now to bed.

La. Thrice noble Lord, let me entreat of you
To pardon me yet for a night or two :
Or if not so, untill the Sun be set.

For your Physicians have expressly charg'd,
In perill to incurre your former malady,
That I should yet absent me from your bed :
I hope this reason stands for my excuse.

Beg. I, it stands so that I may hardly tarry so long :
But I would be loth to fall into my dreames again : I will therefore tarry in despite of the flesh and the blood.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Your Honours Players hearing your amendment,
Are come to play a pleasant Comedy,
For so your Doctors hold it very meet,
Seeing too much sadness hath congeal'd your blood,
And melancholly is the Nurse of frenzy,
Therefore they thought it good you hear a Play,
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
Which barres a thousand harmes, and lengthens life.

Beg. Marry I will, let them play, it is not a Comen-ty, a Christmas gambold, or a tumbling trick ?

Lady. No my good Lord, it is more pleasing stufte.

Beg. What, household stufte ?

Lady. It is a kind of history.

Beg. Well, we'll see't :

Come Madam Wife, sit by my side,
And let the world slip, we shall ne're be younger.

Flourish. Enter Lucentio, and his man Tranio.

Luc. Tranio, since for the great desire I had
To see fair Padua, nursery of Arts,
I am arriv'd for fruitfull Lumbardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy,
And by my fathers love and leave am arm'd
With his good will, and thy good company.
My trusty servant well approv'd in all,
Here let us breathe, and happily institute
A course of Learning, and ingenious studies.
Pisa renowned for grave Citizens
Gave me my being, and my father first
A Merchant of great Traffick through the world :
Vincentio's come of the Bentivolii,
Vincentio's son, brought up in Florence,
It shall become to serve all hopes conceiv'd
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds :
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study,
Virtue and that part of Philosophy
Will I apply, that treats of happinesse,
By virtue specially to be achiev'd.
Tell me thy minde, for I have Pisa left,
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A shallow plash, to plunge him in the deep,
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.

Tra. Me Pardonato, gentle master mine :
I am in all affected as your self,
Glad that you thus continue your resolve,
To suck the sweets of sweet Philosophy.
Onely (good master) while we doe admire
This virtue, and this morall discipline,
Let's be no Stoicks, nor no stocks I pray ;
Or so devote to Aristotles checks,
As Ovid be an out-cast quite abjur'd :
Balke Logick with acquaintance that you have,
And practice Rhetorick in your common talke,
Musick and Poetic use, to quicken you,
The Mathematicks, and the Metaphysicks,
Fall to them as you find your stomach serves you :
No profit growes, where is no pleasure tane :
In brief sir, study what you most affect.

Luc. Gramercies Tranio, well dost thou advise,
If Biondello thou wert come ashore,
We could at once put us in readinesse,
And take a Lodging fit to entertain
Such friends (as time) in Padua shall beget.
But stay a while, what company is this ?

Tra. Master some shew to welcome us to Town.

Enter Baptista with his two daughters, Katherine and Bianca, Gremio a Pantalonne, Horrenso a Suitor to Bianca, Lucen. Tranio, stand by.

Bap. Gentlemen, importune me no farther,
For how I firmly am resolv'd you know :
That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter,
Before I have a husband for the elder:
If either of you both love Katherine,

Because

Because I know you well, and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.

Gre. To court her rather. She's too tough for me,
There, there Hortensio, will you any Wife?

Kat. I pray you sir, is it your will
To make a tale of me among'st those mates?

Hor. Mates maid, how mean you that?
No mates for you,

Unless you were of gender milder mould.

Kat. I faith sir, you shall never need to fear,
I-wis it is not halfe way to her heart:

But if it were, doubt not; her care shall be,
To combe your noddle with a three-legg'd stoole,
And paint your face, and use you like a foole.

Hor. From all such devils, good Lord deliver us,

Gre. And me too, good Lord.

Tra. Hush'd maister, heres some good pastime toward,
That wench is stark mad or wonderfull froward.

Luc. But in the others silence do I see,
Maids milde behaviour and sobrietie.

Peace Tranio.

Tra. Well said Maister, mum, and gaze your fill.

Bap. Gentlemen, that I may soon make good
What I have said, Bianca get you in,
And let it not displease thee, good Bianca,
For I will love thee ne're the lesse my girle.

Kat. A pretty peat, it is best put finger in the eye, and she knew why.

Bian. Sister content you, in my discontent.
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:
My books and instruments shall be my company,
On them to look, and practise by my self.

Luc. Heark Tranio, thou maist hear Minerva speak.

Hor. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange,
Sorry am I that our good will effects
Bianca's grief.

Gre. Why will you mew her up
(Signior Baptista) for this fiend of hell,
And make her bear the penance of her tongue?

Bap. Gentlemen content ye: I am resolv'd:
Go in Bianca,

And for I know she taketh most delight
In Musick, Instruments, and Poetry,
Schöolemaisters will I keep within my house,
Fit to instruct her youth. If you Hortensio,
Or signior Gremio you know any such,
Preferre them hither: for to cunning men,
I will be very kinde and liberall,
To mine own children, in good bringing up,
And so farewell: Katherina you may stay,
For I have more to commune with Bianca.

Exit.

Kat. Why, and I trust I may go too; may I not?
What shall I be appointed houres, as though (Belike) I knew not what to take,
And what to leave? Ha.

Exit.

Gre. You may go to the devil's dam: your gifts are so good, here's none will hold you: Our love is not so great Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairly out. Our cake's drow on both sides. Farewell: yet for the love I bear my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means light on a fit man to teach her that wherein the delights, I will wish him to her father.

Hor. So will I Signior Gremio: but a word I pray:
Though the nature of our quarrell yet never brook'd parlee, know now upon advice, it toucheth us both: that we may yet again have access to our fair Mistress, and be happy rivals in Bianca's love, to labour and effect one thing specially.

Gre. What's that I pray?

Hor. Marry sir, to get a husband for her sister,

Gre. A husband: a devill.

Hor. I say a husband.

Gre. I say a devill: Think'st thou, Hortensio, though her father be very rich, any man is so very a foole to be married to hell?

Hor. Tush Gremio; though it passe your patience and mine to endure her lewd alarms, why man, there be good fellows in the world, and a man could light on them,
Would take her with all faults, and money enough.

Gre. I cannot tell: but I had as lief take her dowry with this condition; To be whipt at the high crosse every morning.

Hor. Faith (as you say) there's small choice in rotten apples: come, since this bar in law makes us friends, it shall be so forth friendly maintain'd, till by helping Baptista's eldest daughter to a husband, we set his youngest free for a husband, and then have too't afresh: Sweet Bianca, happy man be his dole: he that runnes fastest, gets the Ring: How say you signior Gremio?

Grem. I am agreed, and would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooing that would through-ly wooe her, wed her, and bed her, and rid the house of her. Come on.

Exeunt ambo. Manet Tranio and Lucencio.

Tra. I pray sir tell me, is it possible
That love should on a sudden take such hold.

Luc. Oh Tranio, till I found it to be true,
I never thought it possible or likely.

But see, while idely I stood looking on,
I found the effect of Love in idlenesse,
And now in plainnesse to confesse to thee
That art to me as secret and as dear
As Anna to the Queen of Carthage was:
Tranio I burn, I pine, I perish Tranio,
If I achieve not this young modest girle:
Councell me Tranio, for I know thou can'st:
Assist me Tranio, for I know thou wilt.

Tra. Master, it is no time to chide you now.
Affection is not rated from the heart:
If love touch'd you, nought remains but so,
Redime te captum quam queas minimo.

Luc. Gramercies Lad: go forward, this contents,
The rest will comfort, for thy counsel's found.

Tra. Master, you look'd so longly on the maid
Perhaps you mark'd not what's the pith of all.

Luc. Oh yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face,
Such as the daughter of Agenor had,
That made great Jove to humble him to her hand,
When with his knees he kiss'd the Cretan strand.

Tra. Saw you no more? mark'd you not how her sister,
Began to scold, and raise up such a storm?

That mortall eais might hardly endure the din,
Luc. Tranio, I saw her corall lips to move;
And with her breath she did perfume the aire,
Sacred and sweet was all I saw in her.

Tra. Nay, then 'tis time to stir him from his trance:
I pray awake sir: if you love the Maid;
Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it stands:
Her eldest sister is so curst and shrew'd,
That till the father rid his hands of her,
Master, your love must live a maid at home,
And therefore has he closely men'd her up,

Because

Because she will not be annoy'd with sisters.

Luc. Ah Tranio, what a cruell Fathers he :
But art thou not advis'd, he took some care
To get her cunning Schoolemasters to instruct her.

Tra. I marry am I sir, and now 'tis plotted.

Luc. I have it Tranio.

Tra. Maister, for my hand,
Both our inventions meet and jump in one.

Luc. Tell me thine first.

Tra. You will beschoole-maister,
And undertake the teaching of the maid:
That's your device.

Luc. It is: May it be done?

Tra. Not possible: for who shall bear your part,
And be in Padua here Vincentio's son,
Keep house, and ply his book, welcome his friendes,
Visit his Countrey-men, and banquet them?

Luc. Basta, content thee: for I have it full.
We have not yet been seen in any house,
Nor can we be distinguish'd by our faces,
For man or maister: then it follows thus;
Thou shalt be maister, Tranio in my sted:
Keep house, and port, and servants, as I should,
I will some other be, some Florentine,
Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Pisa.
'Tis hatch'd, and shall be so: Tranio at once
Uncase thee: take my colour'd hat and cloak,
When Biondello comes, he waits on thee,
But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.

Tra. So had you need:
In brief sir, sith it your pleasure is,
And I am tyed to be obedient,
For so your father charg'd me at our parting:
Be serviteable to my son (quoth he)
Although I think 'twas in another sence,
I am content to be Lucentio,
Because so well I love Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio be so, because Lucentio loves,
And let me be a slave, 't achieve that maid,
Whose sudden sight hath thrall'd my wounded eye.

Enter Biondello.

Here comes the rogue. Sirra, where have you been?

Bion. Where have I been? Nay how now, where are you? Maister, ha's my fellow Tranio stol'n your clothes, or you stol'n his, or both? Pray what's the news?

Luc. Sirrah come hither, 'tis no time to jest.
And therefore frame your manners to the time.
Your fellow Tranio here to save my life,
Puts my apparell, and my count'nance on,
And I for my escape have put on his:
For in a quarrell since I came ashore,
I kill'd a man, and fear I am deseried:
Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes:
While I make way from hence to save my life:
You understand me?

Bion. I sir, ne're a whit.

Luc. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth,
Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Bion. The better for him, would I were so too.

Tra. So would I, 'faith boy, to have the next wish after, that Lucentio indeed had Baptista's youngest daughter. But sirra, not for my sake, but your maisters, I advise you use your manners discretely in all kind of companies: When I am alone, why then I am Tranio: but in all places else, your maister Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio let's go:

One thing more rests, that thy self execute,
To make one 'mong these wooers: if thou ask me why,
Sufficieth my reasons are both good and weighty,

Exeunt. The Presenters above speaks.

1. Man. My Lord you nod, you do not mind the play.

Beg. Yes by Saint Anne do I, a good matter surely:
Comes there any more of it?

Lad. My Lord, 'tis but begun.

Beg. 'Tis a very excellent piece of work, Madam
Lady: would 'twere done. They sit and marke.

Enter Petruchio, and his man Grumio.

Pet. Verona, for for a while I take my leave,
To see my friends in Padua; but of all
My best beloved and approved friend
Hortentio: and I trow this is the house:
Here sirra Grumio, knock I say.

Gru. Knock sir? whom should I knock? Is there any man ha's rebus'd your worship?

Pet. Villain I say, knock me here soundly.

Gru. Knock you here sir? Why sir, what am I sir, that I should knock you here sir?

Pet. Villain I say knock me at this gate,
And rap me well, or I'll knock your knaves pate.

Gru. My Maister is grown quarrellsome:
I should knock you first,

And then I know after, who comes by the worst.

Pet. Will it not be?

Faith sirra, and you'll not knock, I'll ring it,
I'll try how you can Sol, Fa, and sing it.

He rings him by the ears.

Gru. Help mistress help, my maister is mad.

Pet. Now knock when I bid you: sirra villain.

Enter Hortentio

Hor. How now, what's the matter? My old friend Grumio, and my good friend Petruchio? How do you all at Verona?

Pet. Signior Hortentio, come you to part the fray?
Contutti le core bene trovatto, may I say.

Hor. Alla nostra casa ben venuto molto honorato siguior mio Petruchio.

Rise Grumio, we will compound this quarrell.

Gru. Nay 'tis no matter sir, what he leges in Latine.
If this be not a lawfull cause for me to leave his service, look you sir: He bid me knock him, and rap him soundly sir. Well, was it fit for a servant to use his master so, being perhaps (for ought I see) two and thirty, a peep out? Whom would to God I had well knock't at first, then had not Grumio come by the worst.

Pet. A sencelesse villain: good Hortentio,
I bad the rascall knock upon your gate,
And could not get him for my heart to do it.

Gru. Knock at the gate? O heavens: speak you not these words plain? Sirra, Knock me here: rap me here:
knock me well, and knock me soundly? And come you now with knocking at the gate?

Pet. Sirra, be gone, or talk not I advise you.

Hor. Petruchio patience, I am Grumio's pledge:
Why this a heavy chance 'twixt him and you,
Your ancient trusty pleasant servant Grumio:
And tell me now (sweet friend) what happy gale
Blows you to Padua here, from old Verona?

Pet. Such wind as scatters young men through the world,

To

To seek their fortunes farther than at home,
Where small experience grows but in a few.
Signior Hortentio, thus it stands with me,
Antonio my father is deceast,
And I have thrust my self into this maze,
Happily to wive and thrive, as best I may :
Crowns in my purse I have, and goods at home,
And so am come abroad to see the world.

Hor. Petruchio, shall I then come roundly to thee,
And with thee to a shrew'd ill-favour'd wife ?
Thou'dst thank me but a little for my counsell :
And yet I'le promise thee she shall be rich,
And very rich : but th'art too much my friend,
And I'le not wish thee to her.

Pet. Signior Hortentio, 'twixt such friends as we,
Few words suffice : and therefore, if thou know
One riche nough to be Petruchio's wife :
(As wealth is burthen of my wooing dance)
Be she as foul as was Florentius Love,
As old as Sibell, as curst and shrew'd
As Socrates Zantippe, or a worse :
She moves me not, or not removes at least Affections edge in time. Were she as rough
As are the swelling Adriatick seas.
I come to wive it wealthily in Padua :
If wealthily, then happily in Padua.

Gru. Nay look you sir, he tells you flatly what his minde is : why give him Gold enough, and marry him to a Puppet or an Aglet babie, or an old trot with ne're a tooth in her head, though she have as many diseases as two and fifty horses. Why nothing comes amiss, so money comes withall.

Hor. Petruchio, since we are stopt thus far in,
I will continue that I broach'd in jest,
I can Petruchio help thee to a wife
With wealth enough, and young and beauntions.
Brought up as best becomes a Gentlewoman.
Her onely fault, and that is fault enough,
Is, that she is intollerable curst,
And shrew'd, and froward, so beyond all measure,
That were my fate far worse then it is,
I would not wed her for a mine of Gold.

Pet. Hortentio peace : thou know'st not golds effect,
Tell me her fathers name, and 'tis enough :
For I will boord her, though she chide as loud
As thunder, when the clouds in Autumn crack.

Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola,
An affable and courteous Gentleman,
Her name is Katherina Minola,
Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.

Pet. I know her father, though I know not her,
And he knew my deceased father well :
I will not sleep Hortentio till I see her,
And therefore let me be thus bold with you,
To give you over at this first encounter,
Unless you will accompany me thither.

Gru. I pray you sir let him go while the humour lasts.
A my word and she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would doe little good upon him. She may perhaps call him half a score Knaves, or so : Why that's nothing ; and he begin once, he'll raile in his rope tricks. I'le tell you what sir, and she stand him but a little, he will throw a figure in her face, and so disfigure her with it, that she shall have no more eyes to see with-all then a Cat : you know him not sir.

Hir. Tarry Petruchio, I must go with thee,

For in Baptista's keep my treasure is :
He hath the Jewell of my life in hold,
His youngest daughter, beautifull Bianca,
And her with-holds he from me. Other more
Suters to her, and rivals in my Love :
Supposing it a thing impossible,
For those defects I have before rehearst,
That ever Katherine will be woo'd :
Therefore this order hath Baptista tane,
That none shall have access unto Bianca,
Till Katherine the Curst, have got a husband.

Gru. Katherine the curst,
A title for a maid, of all titles the worst.

Hor. Now shall my friend Petruchio do me grace,
And offer me disguis'd in sober robes,
To old Baptista as a schoole-master.
Well seen in Musick, to instruct Bianca,
That so I may by this device at least
Have leave and leisure to make love to her,
And unsuspected court her by her self.

Enter Gremio and Lucentio disguised

Gru. Here's no knavery. See, to beguile the old folks how the young folks lay their heads together. Maister, maister, look about you : Who goes there ? ha.

Hor. Peace Gremio, it is the rivall of my Love.
Petruchio stand by a while.

Gru. A proper stripling, and an amorous.

Gre. O very well, I have peus'd the note.
Heark you sir, I'le have them very fairly bound,
All books of Love, see that at any hand,
And see you read no other Lectures to her :
You understand me. over and beside

Signior Baptista's Liberality
I'le mend it with a Largeess. Take your paper too,
And let me have them very well perfum'd.
For she is sweeter then perfume it self
To whom they go to : what will you read to her ?

Luc. What ere I read to her, I'le plead for you,
As for my Patron, stand you so assur'd ;
As firmly as your self were still in place,
Yea and perhaps with more successfull words
Then you ; unlesse you were a scholler sir.

Gre. Oh this learning, what a thing it is.

Gru. Oh this Woodcock, what an Assc it is.

Pet. Peace sirra.

Hor. Gru. mum : God save you signior Gremio.

Gre. And you are well met, Signior Hortentio.
Trow you whither I am going ? To Baptista Minola,
I promis'd to enquire carefully
About a schoole-master for the fair Bianca,
And by good fortune I have lighted well
On this young man : For learning and behaviour
Fit for her turn, well read in Poetry
And other books, good ones, I warrant ye.

Hor. 'Tis well : and I have met a Gentleman
Hath promis'd me to help one to another,
A fine Musitian to instruct our Mistris,
So shall I no whit be behinde in duty
To fair Bianca, so beloved of me.

Gre. Beloved of me, and that my deeds shall prove.

Gru. And that his bags shall prove.

Hor. Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our love,
Listen to me, and if you speak me fair,
I'le tell you news indifferent good for either.
Here is a Gentleman whom by chance I met

Upon

Upon agreement from us to his liking,
Will undertake to wooe curst Katherine,
Yea and to marry her, if her dowry please,

Gre. So said, so done; is well:

Horcentio, have you told him all her faults?

Pet. I know she is an irksome brawling scold:
If that be all, Maisters, I hear no harm.

Gre. No, saist me so, friend? What Countreyman?

Pet. Born in Verona, old Butonio's son:
My father dead, my fortune lives for me,
And I do hope, good dayes and long, to see.

Gre. Oh sir, such a life with such a wife, were strange:
But if you have a stomach, too't a Gods name,
You shall have me assisting you in all.
But will you wooe this Wilde-cat?

Pet. Will I live?

Gre. Will he wooe her? I: or I'll hang her,

Pet. Why came I hither, but to that intent?
Think you a little dinne can daunt mine ears?
Have I not in my time heard Lions roar?
Have I not heard the sea, puff up with winds,
Rage like an angry Boar, chafed with sweat?
Have I not heard great Ordnance in the field?
And heavens Artillery thunder in the skies?
Have I not in a pitched battle heard
Loud larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets clangue?
And do you tell me of a womans tongue?
That gives not half so great a blow to hear,
As will a Chefs-nut in a Farmers fire.
Tush, tush, fear boyes with bugs.

Gre. For he fears none.

Gre. Horcentio haik:
This Gentleman is happily arriv'd,
My minde presumes for his own good, and yours.

Hor. I promis'd we would be Contributors,
And bear his charge of wooing whatsoever.

Gre. And so we will, provided that he win her.

Gre. I would I were as sure of a good dinner.

Enter Tranio brave, and Biondello.

Tra. Gentlemen God save you. If I may be bold,
Tell me I beseech you, which is the readiest way
To the house of Signior Baptista Minola?

Rio. He that ha's the two fair daughters: is't he you mean?

Tra. Even he Biondello.

Gre. Heark you sir, you mean not her to-----

Tra. Perhaps him and her, what have you to do?

Pet. Not her that chides sir, at any hand I pray.

Tra. I love no chiders sir: Biondello, let's away.

Luc. Well begun Tranio.

Hor. Sir, a word ere you go:

Are you a sutor to the Maid you talk of, yea or no?

Tra. And if I be, Sir, is it any offence?

Gre. Not if without more words you will get you hence.

Tra. Why sir, I pray are not the streets as free
For me, as for you?

Gre. But so is not shee.

Tra. For what reason I beseech you.

Gre. For this reason if you'll know,
That she's the choice love of Signior Gremio.

Hor. That she's the chosen of Signior Horcentio.

Tra. Softly my Maisters: If you be Gentlemen
Do me this right: hear me with patience.
Baptista is a noble Gentleman,

To whom my Father is not all unknown,
And were his daughter fairer then she is,
She may more sutors have, and me for one.
Fair Ladaes daughter had a thousand wooers,
Then well may one more fair Bianca have,
And so she shall. Lucentio shall make one,
Though Paris came, in hope to speed alone.

Gre. What, this Gentleman will out-talk us all.

Lu. Sir, give him head, I know he'll prove a Jade.

Pet. Horcentio, to what end are all these words?

Hor. Sir, let me be so bold, as to ask you,
Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter?

Tra. No sir, but hear I do that he hath two:
The one, as famous for a scolding tongue,
As is the other, for beauteous modesty.

Pet. Sir, sir, the first's for me, let her go by.

Gre. Yea, leave that labour to great Hercules,
And let it be more then Alcides twelve.

Pet. Sir, understand you this of me (insooth)
The youngest daughter, whom you hearken for,
Her father keeps from all access of sutors,
And will not promise her to any man,
Untill the elder sister first be wed.
The younger then is free, and not before.

Tra. If it be so sir, that you are the man
Must steed us all, and me amongst the rest:
And if you break the ice, and do this seek,
Atchieve the elder: set the younger free,
For our access, whose hap shall be to have her,
Will not so graceless be, to be ingrate.

Hor. Sir you say well, and well you do conceive,
And since do you profess to be a sutor,
You must as we do, gratific this Gentleman,
To whom we all rest generally beholding.

Tra. Sir, I shall not be slack, in signe wherof,
Please ye we may contrive this afternoon,
And quaff carowles to our Mistress health,
And do as adversaries do in law,
Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.

Gre. Bion. O excellent motion: fellowes let's be gone.

Hor. The motion's good indeed, and be it so,
Petruchio, I shall be your Benvenuto. Exeunt.

Enter Katherine and Bianca.

Bian. Good sister wrong me not, nor wrong your self,
To make a bondmaid and a slave of me;
That I disdain: but for these other goods,
Unbind my hands, I'll pull them off my self,
Yea all my raiment, to my petticoat,
Or what you will command me, will I do,
So well I know my duty to my elders.

Kat. Of all thy sutors here I charge thee tell whom thou lov'st best: see thou dissemble not.

Bian. Believe me sister, of all the men alive,
I never yet beheld that speciall face,
Which I could fancie, more then any other.

Kat. Minion thou lye'st, is't not Horcentio?

Bian. If you affect him sister, here I swear
I'll plead for you my self, but you shall have him.

Kat. Oh then belike you fancy riches more,
You will have Gremio to keep you fair.

Bian. Is it for him you envy me so?

Nay then you jest, and now I well perceive
You have but jested with me all this while;
I prethee, sister Kate, untie my hands.

Kat. If that be jest, then all the rest was so. Strikes her.

Enter

Enter Baptista.

Bap. Why how now Dame, whence grows this insolence?

Bianca stand aside, poor girl she weeps:
Go ply thy Needle, meddle not with her.
For sh me thou Hilding of a devilish spirit,
Why do'st thou wrong her, that did ne're wrong thee?
When did she cross thee with a bitter word?

Kat. Her silence flouts me, and I'll be reveng'd, Flies after Bianca.

Bap. What in my sight? Bianca get thee in. Exit

Kat. What will you not suffer me: Nay I see
She is your treasure, she must have a husband,
I must dance bare-foot on her wedding day,
And for your love to her, lead Apes in hell.
Talk not to me, I will go sit and weep,
Till I can finde occasion of revenge.

Bap. Was ever Gentleman thus griev'd as I?
But who comes here.

Enter Gremio, Lucentio, in the habit of a mean man, Petruchio with Tranio, with his boy bearing a Lute and Books.

Gre. Good morrow neighbour Baptista.

Bap. Good morrow neighbour Gremio: God save you Gentlemen.

Pet. And you good sir: pray have you not a daughter, call'd Katerina, fair and vertuous?

Bap. I have a daughter sir, call'd Katerina,

Gre. You are too blunt, go to it orderly.

Pet. You wrong me signior Gremio, give me leave.

I am a Gentleman of Verona sir,
That hearing of her beauty, and her wit,
Her affability and bashfull modesty:
Her wondrous qualities, and mild behaviour,
Am bold to shew my self a forward guest
Within your house, to make mine eye the witness
Of that report, which I so oft have heard,
And for an entrance to my entertainment,
I do present you with a man of mine.
Cunning in Musick, and the Mathematicks,
To instruct her fully in those sciences,
Whereof I know she is not ignorant:
Accept of him, or else you do me wrong,
His name is Licio, born in Mantua.

Bap. Y're welcome sir, and he for your good sake.
But for my daughter Katerina, this I know,
She is not for your turn, the more's my grief.

Pet. I see you do not mean to part with her.
Or else you like not of my company.

Bap. Mistake me not, I speak but what I finde,
Whence are you sir? What may I call your name.

Pet. Petruchio is my name, Antonio's son,
A man well known throughout all Italy.

Bap. I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.

Gre. Saving your tale Petruchio, I pray let us that are poor petitioners speak too? Baccare, you are marvailous forward.

Pet. Oh, Pardon me signior Gremio, I would fain be doing.

Gre. I doubt it not sir. But you will curse
Your wooing neighbours: this is a gift
Very gratefull, I am sure of it, to express
The like kindness my self, that have been More kindly beholding to you than any:

Free leave give unto this young Scholler, that hath
Been long studying at Rhemes, as cunning
In Greek, Latine, and other Languages,
As the other in Musick and Mathematicks:
His name is Cambio: pray accept his service.

Bap. A thousand thanks signior Gremio:
Welcome good Cambio. But gentle sir,
Me thinks you walk like a stranger,
May I be so bold, to know the cause of your coming?

Tra. Pardon me, sir, the boldness is mine own,
That being a stranger in this City here,
Do make my self a suitor to your daughter,
Unto Bianca, fair and vertuous:
Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me,
In the preferment of the eldest sister.
This liberty is all that I request,
That upon knowledge of my parentage,
I may have welcome 'mongst the rest that wooe,
And free access and favour as the rest.
And toward the education of your daughters,
I here bestow a simple instrument,
And this small packet of Greek and Latine books,
If you accept them, then their worth is great:

Bap. Lucentio is your name: of whence I pray.

Tra. Of Pisa sir, son to Vinsentio.

Bap. A mighty man of Pisa by report,
I know him well: you are very welcome sir:
Take you the Lute, and you the set of books,
You shall go see your pupils presently.
Holla, within.

Enter a Servant.

Sirrah, lead these Gentlemen
To my two daughters, and then tell them both
These are their Tutors, bid them use them well,
We will go walk a little in the Orchard,
And then to dinner: you are passing welcome,
And so I pray you all to think your selves.

Pet. Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste,
And every day I cannot come to wooe,
Yow know my father well, and in him me,
Left solie heir to all his Lands and goods,
Which I have bettered rather then decreast,
Then tell me, if I get your daughters love,
What dowry shall I have with her to wife.

Bap. After my death, the one halfe of my Lands,
And in possession twenty thousand Crowns.

Pet. And for that dowry, I'll assure her of Her widdow-hood, be it that she survive me,
In all my Lands and Leases whatsoever,
Let specialities be therefore drawn between us,
That covenants may be kept on either hand.

Bap. I, when the special thing is well obtain'd,
That is, her love: for that is all in all.

Pet. Why that is nothing: for I tell you father,
I am as peremptory as she proud minded:
And where two raging fires meet together
They do consume the thing that feeds their furie.
Though little fire growes great with little winde,
Yet extream gusts will blow out fire and all:
So I to her, and so she yields to me,
For I am rough, and wooe not like a babe.

Bap. Well maist thou wooe, and happy be thy speed:
But be thou arm'd for some unhappy words.

Pet. I, to the prooffe, as Mountains are for windes,
That shake not, though they blow perpetually.

Enter Hortentio with his head broke.

Bap.

Bap. How now my friend, why dost thou look so pale?

Hor. For fear, I promise you, If I look pale.

Bap. What, will my daughter prove a good Musitian?

Hor. I think she'll sooner prove a souldier,
Iron may hold with her, but never Lutes.

Bap. Why then thou can'st not break her to the Lute?

Hor. Why no, for she hath broke the Lute to me:

I did but tell her she mistook her frets,
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering,
When (with a moist impatient devilish spirit)
Frets call you these? (quoth she) I'll fume with them:
And with that word she struck me on the head,
And through the instrument my pate made way,
And there I stood amazed for a while,
As on a Pillory, looking through the Lute,
While she did call me Rascall, Fidler,
And twangling Jack, with twenty such vilde tearms,
As had she studied to misuse me so.

Pet. Now by the world, it is a lusty Wench,
I love her ten times more then ere I did,
Oh how I long to have some chat with her.

Bap. Well go with me, and be not so discomfited.
Proceed in practise with my younger daughter,
She's apt to learn, and thankfull for good turns:
Signior Petruchio; will you go with us,
Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you.

Exit. Manet Petruchio.

Pet. I pray you do. I attend her here.
And wooe her with some spirit when she comes.
Say that she raile, why then I'll tell her plain,
She sings as sweetly as a Nightingale:
Say that she frown, I'll say she looks as clear
As morning Roses newly wash'd with dew:
Say she be mute, and will not speak a word,
Then I'll commend her volubility,
And say she uttereth piercing eloquence:
If she do bid me pack, I'll give her thanks,
As though she bid me stay by her a week:
If she deny to wed, I'll crave the day
When I shall ask the banes, and when be married.
But here she comes, and now Petruchio speak.

Enter Katherine.

Good morrow Kate, for that's your name I hear.

Kat. Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing.

They call me Katherine, that do talk of me.

Pet. You lye infaith, for you are call'd plain Kate,
And bony Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst:
But Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendome,
Kate of Kate-hall, my super-dainty Kate,
For dainties are all Kates, and therefore Kate
Take this of me, Kate of my consolation,
Hearing thy mildness prais'd in every Town,
Thy vertues spoke of, and thy beauty sounded,
Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs,
My self am mov'd to wooe thee for my wife.

Kat. Mov'd, in good time, let him that mov'd you hither.

Remove you hence: I knew you at the first
You were a moveable.

Pet. Why, what's a moveable?

Kat. A joyn'd stoole.

Pet. Thou hast hit it: come sit on me.

Kat. Asses are made to bear, and so are you.

Pet. Women are made to bear, and so are you.

Kat. No such Jade sir as you, if me you mean.

Pet. Alas good Kate, I will not burthen thee,
For knowing thee to be but young and light.

Kat. Too light for such a swain as you to catch,
And yet as heavy as my waight should be.

Pet. Should be, should: buzz.

Kat. Well tane, and like a buzzard.

Pet. Oh slow-wing'd Turtle, shall a buzzard take thee?

Kat. I, for a Turtle, as he takes a buzzard.

Pet. Come, come you Waspe, I'faith you are too angry

Kat. If I be waspish, best beware my sting.

Pet. My remedy is then to pluck it out.

Kat. I, if the foole could finde it where it lies.

Pet. Who knows not where a Waspe does wear his sting? in his taile.

Kat. In his tongue?

Pet. Whose tongue.

Kat. Yours if you talk of tales, and so fare well.

Pet. What with my tongue in your taile.

Nay, come again, good Kate, I am a Gentleman,

Kat. That I'll trie. She strikes him.

Pet. I swear I'll cuffe you, if you strike again.

Kat. So may you loose your armes,
If you strike me, you are no Gentleman,
And if no gentleman, why then no armes.

Pet. A Herald Kate? Oh put me in thy books.

Kat. What is your Crest, a Coxcombe?

Pet. A comblelike Cock, so Kate will be my Hen.

Kat. No Cock of mine, you crow too like a craven.

Pet. Nay come Kate; come; you must not look so fowre.

Kat. It is my fashion when I see a Crab.

Pet. Why here's no crab, and therefore look not fowre.

Kat. There is, there is.

Pet. Then shew it me.

Kat. Had I a glass, I would.

Pet. What, you mean my face.

Kat. Well aim'd of such a young one.

Pet. Now by S. George I am too young for you.

Kat. Yet you are wither'd.

Pet. 'Tis with cares.

Kat. I care not.

Pet. Nay hear you Kate. Insooth you scape not so.

Kat. I chafe you if I tarry; Let me go.

Pet. No, not a whit, I finde you passing gentle:
'Twas told me you were rough, and coy, and sullen,
And now I finde report a very liar,
For thou art pleasant, gamefome, passing courteous,
But slow in speech, yet sweet as spring time flowers.
Thou can'st not frown, thou can'st not look a scance,
Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will,
Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk:
But thou with mildness entertain'st thy wooers,
With gentle conference, soft, and affable.
Why does the world report that Kate doth limp?
Oh stand'rous world: Kate like the hazle twig
Is straight, and slender, and as brown in hue
As hazle nuts, and sweeter then the kernels:
Oh let me see thee walk: thou dost not halt.

Kat. Go foole, and whom thou keep'st command.

Pet. Did ever Dian so become a Grove,
As Kate this chamber with her princely gate;
O be thou Dian, and let her be Kate,

And

And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportfull.

Kate. Where did you study all this goodly speech?

Pet. It is extempore, from my mother wit.

Kate. A witty mother, witlesse else her son.

Pet. Am I not wise?

Kate. Yes, keep you warine.

Pet. Marry so I mean sweet Katherine in thy bed:

And therefore setting all this chat aside,
Thus in plain termes: your father hath consented
That you shall be my wife: your dowry greed on,
And will you, nill you, I will marry you.
Now Kate, I am a husband for your turn,
For by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,
Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well,
Thou must be married to no man but me,

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Trayno.

For I am he am born to tame you Kate,
And bring you from a wild Kat to a Kate
Conformable as other household Kates:
Here comes your father, never make deniall,
I must, and will have Katherine to my wife. (daughter?)

Bap. Now Signior Petruchio, how speed you with my

Pet. How but well sir? how but well?

It were impossible I should speed amisse. (dumps?)

Bap. Why how now daughter Katherine, in your

Kat. Call you me daughter? now I promise you
You have shew'd a tender fatherly regard,
To with me wed to one halfe Lunatick,
A mad-cap ruffian, and a swearing Jack,
That thinks with oathes to face the matter out.

Pet. Father, 'tis thus, your self and all the world
That talk'd of her, have talk'd amisse of her:
If she be curst, it is for policy,
For she's not froward, but modest as the Dove,
She is not hot, but temperate as the morn:
For patience she will prove a second Grisel,
And Roman Lucrece for her chastity:
And to conclude, we have greed so well together,
That upon Sunday is the wedding day.

Kat. I'll see thee hang'd on Sunday first. (first.)

Gre. Hark Petruchio, she sayes she'll see thee hang'd

Tra. Is this your speeding? nay then good night our part.

Pet. Be patient gentlemen, I chioose her for my self,
If she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you?
'Tis bargain'd 'twixt us twain being alone,
That she shall still be curst in company.
I tell you 'tis incredible to believe
How much she loves me: oh the kindest Kate,
She hung about my neck, and kisse on kisse
She vi'd so fast, protesting oath on oath,
That in a twink she won me to her love.
Oh you are novices, 'tis a world to see
How tame when men and women are alone,
A meacock wretch can make the curstest shrew:
Give me thy hand Kate, I will unto Venice
To buy apparell 'gainst the wedding day;
Provide the feast father, and bid the guests,
I will be sure my Katherine shall be fine.

Bap. I know not what to say, but give me your hands,
God send you joy, Petruchio, 'tis a match.

Gre. Tra. Amen say we, we will be witnesses.

Pet. Father, and Wife, and Gentlemen adieu,
I will to Venice, Sunday comes apace,
We will have rings, and things, and fine aray,

And kisse me Kate, we will be married a Sunday.

Exit Petruchio, and Katherine.

Gre. Was ever match clapt up so suddenly?

Bap. Faith Gentlemen now I play a merchants part,
And venture madly on a desperate Mart.

Tra. 'Twas a commodity lay fretting by you,
'Twill bring you gain, or perish on the seas.

Bap. The gain I seek, is quiet me the match.

Gre. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch:
But now Baptista, to your younger daughter,
Now is the day we long have looked for,
I am your neighbour, and was suiter first.

Tra. And I am one that love Bianca more
Then words can witnesse, or your thoughts can guesse,

Gre. Youngling, thou canst not love so dear as I;

Tra. Gray-beard thy love doth freeze.

Gre. But thine doth fry,
Skipper stand back, 'tis age that nourisheth.

Tra. But youth in Ladies eyes that flourisheth.

Bap. Content you gentlemen, I will compound this 'Tis deeds must win the prize, and he of both (strife,
That can assure my daughter greatest dower,
Shall have Bianca's love.

Say Signior Gremio, what can you assure her?

Gre. First, as you know, my house within the City
Is richly furnished with plate and gold,
Basons and Ewers to lave her dainty hands:
My Hangings all of Tirian Tapestry:
In Ivory Coffers I have stuf't my Crowns:
In Cypress Chefts my Arras Counterpoints;
Costly apparell, Tents, and Canopies,
Fine Linnen, Turkey Cushions boft with Pearl,
Vallens of Venice Gold, in needle-work:
Pewter and Brasse, and all things that belongs
To house or house-keeping: then at my Farme
I have a hundred milch-kine to the Paile,
Six score fat Oxen standing in my Stalls;
And all things answerable to this portion.
My self am struck in yeares I must confesse,
And if I die to morrow this is heirs,
If whil't I live she will be onely mine.

Tra. That onely came well in: sir, list to me,
I am my Fathers Heir and onely Son,
If I may have your daughter to my Wife,
I'll leave her Houses three or four as good
Within rich Pisa Walls, as any one
Old Signior Gremio has in Padua,
Besides, two thousand Duckets by the year
Of fruitfull Land, all which shall be her Joynter
What, have I pinch't you Signior Gremio?

Gre. Two thousand Duckets by the year of Land,
My Land amounts not to so much in all:
That she shall have, besides an Argosie
That now is lying in Marsellis roade:
What, have I choak't you with an Argosie?

Tra. Gremio, 'Tis known my Father hath no lesse
Then three great Argosies, besides two Galliasse
And twelve rite Gallies, these I will assure her,
And twice as much what e're thou offer'st next.

Gre. Nay, I have offer'd all, I have no more,
And she can have no more then all I have,
If you like me, she shall have me and mine.

Tra. Why then the Maid is mine from all the world
By your firm promise, Gremio is out-vied.

Bap. I must confesse your offer is the best,
And let your Father make her the assurance,

T

She

She is your own, else you must pardon me:
If you should die before him, where's her dower?

Tra. That's but a cavill: he is old, I young.

Gre. And may not young men die as well as old?

Bap. Well gentlemen, I am thus resolv'd,
On Sunday next, you know

My daughter Katherine is to be married:

Now on the Sunday following, shall Bianca

Be Bride to you, if you make this assurance:

If not, to Signior Gremio:

And so I take my leave, and thank you both. Exit.

Gre. Adieu good neighbour: now I fear thee not:

Sirra, young Gamester, your Father were a fool

To give thee all, and in his waining age

Set foot under thy table: tut, a toy,

An old Italian fox is not so kind my boy. Exit.

Tra. A vengeance on your crafty withered hide,

Yet I have fac'd it with a card of ten:

'Tis in my head to doe my master good:

I see no reason but suppos'd Lucentio

Must get a father, call'd suppos'd Vincentio,

And that's a wonder: fathers commonly

Doe get their children: but in this case of wooing,

A child shall get a sire, if I fail not of my cunning. Exit.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Lucentio, Hortentio, and Bianca.

Luc. Fidler forbear, you grow too forward sir,
Have you so soon forgot the entertainment
Her sister Katherine welcom'd you withall?

Hort. But wrangling pedant, this is
The patronesse of heavenly harmony:
That give me leave to have prerogative,
And when in Musick we have spent an hour,
Your Lecture shall have leisure for as much.

Luc. Preposterous Ass! that never read so far,
To know the cause why musick was ordain'd:
Was it not to refresh the mind of man
After his studies, or his usuall pain?
Then give me leave to read Philosophy,
And while I pause, serve in your harmony.

Hort. Sirra, I will not bear these braves of thine.

Bian. Why gentlemen, you doe me double wrong,
To strive for that which resteth in my choyce:
I am no breeching schollar in the schooles,
I'll not be tied to hour, nor pointed times,
But learn my Lessons as I please my selfe,
And to cut off all strife: here sit we down,
Take you your instrument, play you the whiles,
His Lecture will be done ere you have tun'd.

Hort. You'll leave his Lecture when I am in tune?

Luc. That will be never, tune your instrument.

Bian. Where left we last?

Luc. Hefe Madam: Hic ibat Simois, hic est Sigcia tel-lus, hic steterat Priami regia celsa senis.

Bian. Conster them.

Luc. Hic Ibat, as I told you before, Simois, I am Lucentio, hic est, son unto Vincentio of Pisa, Sigcia tel-lus, disguised thus to get your love, hic steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a wooing, Priami, is my man Tranio, regia, bearing my port, celsa senis, that we might beguile
the old Pantaloune.

Hort. Madam, thy instruments 'in tune.

Bian. Let's hear, oh fie, the treble jarres.

Luc. Spit in the hole man, and tune againe.

Bian. Now let me see if I can conster it. Hic that simois, I know you not, hic est sigcia tellus, I trust you not hic steterat priami, take heed he hear us not, regia, presume not, celsa senis, despair not.

Hort. Madam, 'tis now in tune.

Luc. All but the base.

Hort. The base is right, 'tis the base knave that jars.

Luc. How fiery and froward our Pedant is,
Now for my life that knave doth court my love,
Pedafoote, I'll watch you better yet:
In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.

Bian. Mistrust it not, for sure Æacides
Was Ajax, call'd so from his Grandfather.

Hort. I must believe my Master, else I promise you,
I should be arguing still upon that doubt,
But let it rest, now Litio to you:

Good master take it not unkindly pray
That I have been thus pleasant with you both.

Bian. You may go walk, and give me leave a while,
My Lessons make not musick in three parts.

Luc. Are you so formall sir, well I must wait
And watch withall, for but I be deceiv'd,
Our fine Musician groweth amorous.

Hort. Madam, before you touch the instrument,
To learn the order of my fingering,
I must begin with rudiments of Art,
To teach you gamoth in a briefer sort,
More pleasant, pithy, and effectuall,
Then hath been taught by any of my trade,
And there it is in writing fairly drawn.

Bian. Why, I am past my gaineth long ago.

Hort. Yet read the gamoth of Hortensio.

Bian. Gamoth I am, the ground of all accord:
Are, to plead Hortensio's passion:

Beeme, Bianca take him for thy Lord

Cfant, that loves me with all affection:

D sol re, one Cliffe, two notes have I,

Elams, show pittie or I die.

Call you this gamoth? tut I like it not,
Old fashions please me best, I am not so nice
To change true rules for old inventions.

Enter a Messenger.

Nick. Mistresse, your Father prayes you leave your
And help to dresse your sisters Chamber up, (books,
You know to morrow is the wedding day.

Bian. Farewell sweet Masters both, I must be gone.

Luc. Faith Mistresse then I have no cause to stay.

Hort. But I have cause to pry into this pedant,
Me thinks he looks as though he were in love:
Yet if thoughts, Bianca, be so humble
To cast thy wandring eyes on every stale:
Seize thee that List, if once I find thee ranging,
Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing. Exit.

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, Katherine, Bianca, and others, attendants.

Bap. Signior Lucentio, this the pointed day
That Katherine and Petruchio should be married,
And yet we hear not of our Son in Law:
What will be said, what mockery will it be?
To want the Bride-groom when the Priest attends
To speak the ceremoniall rites of marriage?
What says Lucentio to this shame of ours?

Kate. No shame but mine, I must forsooth be forc't
To give my hand oppos'd against my heart
Unto a mad-brain rudes-y, full of spleen,
Who woo'd in haste, and meanes to wed at leisure:
I told you I, he was a frantick fool,
Hiding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour,
And to be noted for a merry man;
He'll wooe a thousand, point the day of marriage,
Make friends, invite, yes and proclaim the banns,
Yet never meanes to wed where he hath woo'd:
Now must the world point at poor Katherine,
And say, loe, there is mad Petruchio's wife,
If it would please him come and marry her.

Tra. Patience good Katherine and Baptista too,
Upon my life Petruchio meanes but well,
What ever fortune stayes him from his word,
Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise,
Though he be merry, yet withall he's honest.
Kate. Would Katherine had never seen him though.
Exit weeping.

Bap. Go girl, I cannot blame thee now to weep,
For such an injury would vex a saint,
Much more a shrew of thy impatient humour.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. Master, master, newes, and such newes as you never heard of.

Bap. Is it new and old too? how may that be?

Bio. Why, is it not newes to hear of Petruchio's com-

Bap. Is he come? Coming?

Bio. Why no sir.

Bap. What then?

Bio. He is coming.

Bap. When will he be here?

Bio. When he stands where I am, and sees you there.

Tra. But say, what to thy old newes?

Bio. Why Petruchio is coming, in a new hat and an old jerkin, a pair of old breeches thrice turn'd; a paire of boots that have been candle-cases, one buckled, another lac'd: an old rusty sword tane out of the Town Armory, with a broken hilt, and chaplesse: with two broken points: his horte hip'd with an old mothy saddle, the stirrups of no kindred: beside posselt with the glanders, and like to nose in the chine, troubled with the Lampasse, infected with the fashions, full of Windegalls, sped with Spavins, raied with the Yellowes, past cure of the Fives, stark spoyl'd with the Staggers, begnawn with the Bots, Waid in the back, and shoulder-shotten, neer leg'd before, and with a halfe checkt Bit, and a headstall of sheeps leather, which being rest ain'd to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst, and now repaired with knots: one girth six times piec'd, and a womans Crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name, fairly set down in studs, and here and there piec'd with packthred.

Bap. Who comes with him?

Bio. Oh sir, his Lacky, for all the world Caparison'd like the horse: with a linnen stock on one leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other, gartred with a red and blew list; an old hat, and the humour of forty fancies prickt up in't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in apparell, and not like a Christian foot-boy, or gentlemans Lackey.

Tra. 'Tis some odde humor prickshim to this fashion,
Yet oftentimes he goes but mean apparell'd.

Bap. I am glad he's come, howsoever he comes.

Bion. Why sir, he comes not.

Kap. Didst thou not say he comes?

Bion. Who, that that Petruchio came?

Bap. I, that Petruchio came.

Bion. No sir, I say his horse comes with him on his back.

Bap. Why that's all one.

Bion. Nay by S. Jamy, I hold you a penny, a horse and a man is more then one and yet not many.

Enter Petruchio, and Grumio.

Pet. Come, where be these gallants, who's at home?

Bap. You are welcome sir.

Pet. And yet I come not well.

Bap. And yet you halt not.

Tra. Not so well aparell'd as I wish you were.

Pet. Were it better I should rush in thus:

But where is Kate? where is my lovely Bride?
How does my father? gentles methinks you frown,
And wherefore gaze this goodly company,
As if they saw some wondrous monument,
Some Comet, or some unusuall prodig?

Bap. Why sir, you know this is your wedding day:
First were we sad, fearing you would not come,
Now sadder that you come unprovided:
Fie, doff this habit, shame to your estate,
An ey-sore to our solemne fellivall.

Tra. And tell us what occasion of import
Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife,
And sent you hither to unlike your self?

Pet. Tedious it were to tell, and harsh to hear,
Sufficeth I am come to keep my word,
Though in some part enforced to digresse,
Which at more leisure I will so excuse,
As you shall well be satisfied withall.

But where is Kate? I stay too long from her.
The morning wears, 'tis time we were at Church.

Tra. See not your Bride in these unreverent robes,
Go to my chamber, put on clothes of mine.

Pet. Not I, believe me, thus I'll visit he.

Bap. But thus I trust you will not marry her.

Pet. Good sooth even thus: therefore ha done with words.
To me she's married, not unto my clothes:

Could I repair what she will wear in me,
As I could change these poor accoutrements,
'Twere well for Kate, and better for my self.

But what a foole am I to chat with you,
When I should bid good morow to my Bride?
And seal the title with a lovely kisse. Exit.

Tra. He hath some meaning in his mad attire,
We will perswade him be it possible,
To put on better ere he go to Church.

Bap. I'll after him, and see the event of this. Exit.

Tra. But sir, Love concerneth us to adde
Her fathers liking, which to bring to passe
As before I imparted to your worship,
I am to get a man what ere he be,
It skills not much, we'll fit him to our turn,
And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa,
And make assurance here in Padua
Of greater summes then I have promised,
So shall you quietly enjoy your hope,
And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Luc. Were it not that my fellow schoolemaster
Doth watch Biancas steps so narrowly:

'Twere good me thinks to steal our marriage,
Which once perform'd, let all the world say no,
I'll keep mine own despite of all the world.

Tra. That by degrees we mean to look into,

And watch our vantage in this businesse,
We'll over-reach the gray-beard Gremio,
The narrow prying father Minola,
The quaint Musician, amorous Litio,
All for my master's sake Lucentio.

Enter Gremio.

Signior Gremio, came you from the Church?

Gre. As willingly as e're I came from schoole.

Tra. And is the Bride & Bride-groom coming home?

Gre. A Bridegroom say you? 'tis a groom indeed,
A grumbling groom, and that the girl shall find.

Tra. Curst then she, why 'tis impossible.

Gre. Why he's a devil, a devil, a very fiend.

Tra. Why she's a devil, a devil, the devils damme.

Gre. Tut, she's a Lamb, a Dove, a fool to him:

I'll tell you sir Lucentio: when the Priest
Should aske if Katherine should be his wife,
I, by gogs woons quoth he, and swore so loud,
That all amaz'd the Priest let fall the book,
And as he stoop'd again to take it up,
This mad-brain'd bride-groom took him such a cuffe,
That down fell Priest and book, and book and Priest,
Now take them up (quoth he) if any list.

Tra. What said the Wench when he rose up again?

Gre. Trembled and shook: for why, he stamp'd and swore.

As if the Vicar meant to cozen him:

But after many ceremonies done,
He calls for wine, a health quoth he, as if
He had been aboard carowzing to his Mates
After a storme; quast off the Muscadell,
And threw the Sops all in the Sexton's face:
Having no other reason, but that his beard
Grew thin and hungerly, and seem'd to aske
His sops as he was drinking: This done, he took
The Bride about the neck, and kist her lips.
With such a clamorous smack, that at the parting
All the church did echo: and I seeing this,
Came thence for very shame, and after me,
I know the rout is coming; such a mad marriage
Never was before: hark, hark, I hear the minstrels play

Musick plays.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Bianca, Hortensio, Baptista.

Pet. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your
I know you think to dine with me to day, (pains,
And have prepar'd great store of wedding cheer,
But so it is, my haste doth call me hence,
And therefore here I mean to take my leave.

Bap. Is't possible you will away to night?

Pet. I must away to day before night come,
Make it no wonder: if you knew my businesse,
You would intreat me rather go then stay:
And honest company, I thank you all,
That have beheld me give away my self
To this most patient sweet and virtuous wife,
Dine with my father, drink a health to me,
For I must hence, and farewell to you all.

Tra. Let us intreat you stay till after dinner.

Pet. It may not be.

Gre. Let me intreat you.

Pet. It cannot be.

Kat. Let me intreat you.

Pet. I am content.

Kat. Are you content to stay?

Pet. I am content you shall entreat me stay,
But yet not stay, entreat me how you can.

Kate. Now if you love me stay.

Pet. Grumio, my horse:

Gr. I sir, they be ready, the Oates have eaten the horses.

Kate. Nay then,

Doe what thou canst, I will not go to day,
No, nor to morrow, not till I please my self,
The door is open sir, there lies your way,
You may be jogging whiles your boots are green:
For me, I'll not be gone till I please my self,
'Tis like you'll prove a jolly surly groom,
That take it on you at the first so roundly.

Pet. O Kate content thee, prethee be not angry.

Kat. I will be angry, what hast thou to doe?

Father, be quiet, he shall stay my leisure.

Gre. I marry sir, now it begins to work.

Kat. Gentlemen, forward to the Bridall dinner.
I see a woman may be made a fool
If she had not a spirit to resist.

Pet. They shall go forward Kate at thy command,
Obey the Bride you that attend on her.

Go to the feast, revell and domineer;
Carowse full measure to her maiden-head,
Be mad and merry, or go hang your selves:
But for my bonny Kate, she must with me:

Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret,
I will be master of what is mine own,

She is my goods, my chattels, she is my house,
My household-stuffe, my field, my barn,
My horse, my oxen, my ass, my any thing,
And here she stands, touch her who ever dare,
I'll bring mine action on the proudest he,

That stops my way in Padua: Grumio
Draw forth thy weapon, we are beset with thieves,
Rescue thy Mistress if thou be a man:

Fear not sweet wench, they shall not touch thee Kate,
I'll buckler thee against a Million, Exeunt P. & K.

Bap. Nay, let them go, a couple of quiet ones. (ing.

Gre. Went they not quickly, I should die with laugh.

Tra. Of all mad matches never was the like.

Luc. Mistress, what's your opinion of your sister?

Bidn. That being mad her self, she's madly mated.

Gre. I warrant him Petruchio is Kated.

Bap. Neighbours and friends, though Bride and Bride-
For to supply the places at the table, (groom wants
You know there wants no junkets at the feast: Lucentio, you shall supply the Bridegrooms place,
And let Bianca take her sisters room.

Tra. Shall sweet Bianca practise how to bride it?

Bap. She shall Lucentio: come gentlemen let's go.

Enter Grumio.

Exeunt.

Gr. Fie, fie on all tired Jades, on all mad Masters, and all foul wayes: was ever man so beaten? was ever man so raide? was ever man so weary? I am sent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warme them: now were I not a little pot, and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roof of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me; but I with blowing the fire shall warme my self: for considering the weather, a taller man then I will take cold: Holla, holla Curtis.

Enter Curtis.

Curt. Who is it that calls so coldly?

Gr. A piece of Ice: if thou doubt it, thou shalt slide from my shoulder to my heele, with no greater greater a run, but my head and my neck. A fire good Cur.

Cur. Is my Master and his wife comming Grumio?

Grum. Oh I, Curtis, I; and therefore fire, fire, cast on no water.

Cur. Is she so hot a shrew as she's reported.

Grum. She was good Curtis before this frost: but thou know'st winter tames man, woman, and beast: for it hath ram'd my old master, and my new mistress, and my self, fellow Curtis.

Cur. Away you three-inch fool, I am no beast.

Grum. Am I but three inches? Why thy horn is a foot, and so long am I at the least. But wilt thou make a fire, or shall I complain on thee to our Mistress, whose hand (she being now at hand) thou shalt soon feel, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office.

Cur. I prethee good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world?

Grum. A cold world Curtis in every office but thine, and therefore fire: doe thy duty, and have thy duty, for my master and mistress are almost frozen to death.

Cur. There's fire ready, and therefore good Grumio the newes.

Grum. Why Jack boy, ho boy, and as much newes as thou wilt.

Cur. Come, you are so full of conicatching.

Grum. Why therefore fire, for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the Cook, is supper ready, the house trimm'd, rushes strew'd, cobwebs swept, the serving-men in their new fustian, their white stockings, and every officer his wedding garment on? Be the Jacks fair within, the Jills fair without, Carpets laid, and every thing in order?

Cur. All ready: and therefore I pray thee what newes?

Grum. First know my horse is tired, my master and mistress fain out.

Cur. How?

Grum. Out of their saddles into the dirt, and thereby hangs a tale.

Cur. Let's ha't good Grumio.

Grum. Lend thine ear.

Cur. Here.

Grum. There.

Cur. This 'tis to feele a tale, not to hear a tale.

Grum. And therefore 'tis call'd a sensible tale: and this Cuffe was but to knock at your eare, and beseech listening: now I begin, Inprimis we came down a foule hill, my Master riding behinde my Mistress.

Cur. Both of one horse?

Grum. What's that to thee?

Cur. Why a horse.

Grum. Tell thou the tale: but hadst thou not crost me, thou shouldst have heard how her horse fell, and she under her horse: thou shouldst have heard in how miery a place, how she was bemoil'd, how he left her with the horse upon her, how he heat me because her horse stumbled, how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me: how he swore, how she pray'd, that never pray'd before: how I cri'd, how the horses ran away, how her bridle was burst: how I lost my crupper, with many things of worthy memory, which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienc'd to thy grave.

Cur. By this reckoning he is more shrew than she.

Grum. I, and that thou and the proudest of you all shall find when he comes home. But what talk I of this? Call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Su- gersop and the rest: let their heads be slickly comb'd, their blew coats brush'd, and their garteis of an indifferent knit, let them curtsie with their left legs, and not presume to touch a hair of my masters horse tail; till they kisse their hands. Are they all ready?

Cur. They are.

Grum. Call them forth.

Cur. Doe you hear ho? you must meet my master to countenance my mistress.

Grum. Why she hath a face of her own.

Cur. Who knowes not that?

Grum. Thou it seems that calls for company to countenance her

Cur. I call them forth to credit her.

Enter four or five servingmen

Grum. Why she comes to borrow nothing of them.

Nat. Welcome home Grumio

Phil. How now Grumio.

Jos. What Grumio.

Nick. Follow Grumio.

Nath. Hew now old lad.

Grum. Welcome you: how now you: what you: fellow you: and thus much for greeting. Now my spruce companions, is all ready, and all things near?

Nat. All things are ready, how near is our master?

Grum. E'ne at hand, alighted by this: and therefore be not-----Cocks passion silence, I hear my Master.

Enter Petruchio and Kate.

Pet. Where be these knaves? What no man at door to hold my stirrop, nor to take my horse? Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip.

All Ser. Here, here sir, here sir.

Pet. Here sir, here sir, here sir, here sir. You loggerheaded and unpollisht grooms: What? no attendance? no regard? no duty? Where is the foolish knave I sent before?

Grum. Here sir, as foolish as I was before.

Pet. You pezant, swain, you horson malt-horse drudge, Did I not bid thee meet me in the Parke, And bring along the rascall knaves with thee?

Grum. Nathaniel's coat sir was not fully made, And Gabriel's pumps were all unpink't i'th heel: There was no Link to colour Peter's hat, And Walter's dagger was not come from sheathing: There were none fine, but Adam, Rafe, and Gregory, The rest were ragged, old, and beggerly, Yet as they are, they come to meet you.

Pet. Go rascalls, go and fetch my supper in. Ex Ser. Where is the life that late I led? Where are those? Sit down Kate. And welcome. Soud, soud, soud, soud.

Enter servants with supper.

Why when I say? Nay good sweet Kate be merry. Off with my boots, you rogues: your villains, when?

It was the Friar of Orders gray,

As he forth walked on his way.

Our you rogue, you pluck my foot awry, Take that, and mend the plucking of the other. Be merry Kate: Some water here: what ho.

Enter one with water.

Where's my Spaniel Troilus? Sirra, get you hence, And bid my Cousin Ferdinand come hither: One Kate that you must kisse, and be acquainted with. Where are my slippers? Shall I have some water? Come Kate and wash, and welcome heartily: You horson villain will you let it fall?

Kate. Patience I pray you, 'twas a fault unwilling.

Pet. A horson beetle-headed flap-ear'd knave :
Come Kate sit down, I know you have a stomach,
Will you give thanks, sweet Kate, or else shall I ?
What's this, Mutton ?

Ser. I.

Pet. Who brought it ?

Ser. I.

Pet. 'Tis burnt, and so is all the meat :
What dogs are these ? where is the rascall Cook ?
How durst you villains bring it from the dresser,
And serve it thus to me that love it not ?
There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all :
You heedlesse jolt-heads, and unmanner'd slaves.
What, doe you grumble ? I'le be with you straight.

Kate. I pray you Husband be not so disquiet,
The meat was well, if you were so contented.

Pet. I tell thee Kate, 'twas burnt and dried away,
And I expressly am forbid to touch it :
For it engenders choller, planteth anger,
And better 'twere that both of us did fast,
Since of our selves, our selves are chollerick,
Then feed it with such over-rosted flesh :
Be patient, to morrow't shall be mended,
And for this night we'l fast for company.
Come I will bring thee to thy Bridall Chamber. Exeunt.

Enter Servants severally.

Nash. Peter, didst ever see the like ?

Peter. He kills her in her own humour.

Gru. Where is he ?

Enter Curtis a Servant.

Cur. In her Chamber, making a sermon of continency to her, and rails, and swears, and rates, that she (poor soul) knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak, and sits as one new risen from a dream. Away, away, for he is coming hither.

Enter Petruchio.

Pet. Thus have I politickly begun my reign,
And 'tis my hope to end successfully :
My Faulcon now is sharp, and passing empty,
And till she stoop, she must not be full gorg'd,
For then she never looks upon her lure.
Another way I have to man my Haggard,
To make her come, and know her Keepers call :
That is, to watch her, as we watch these Kites,
That bait, and beat, and will not be obedient :
She eat no meat to day, nor none shall eat.
Last night she slept not, nor to night shall not :
As with the meat, some undeserved fault
I'le find about the making of the bed.
And here I'le fling the pillow, there the bolster,
This way the Coverlet, another way the Sheets :
I, and amid this hurly I intend,
That all is done in reverend care of her,
And in conclusion, she shall watch all night,
And if she chance to nod, I'le raile and brawle,
And with the clamour keep her still awake :
This is a way to kill a Wife with kindnesse,
And thus I'le curbe her mad and head-strong humour.
He that knowes better how to tame a shrew,
Now let him speak, 'tis charity to shew. Exit.

Enter Tranio and Hortensio.

Tra. Is't possible friend Lisio, that Mistresse Bianca
Doth fancy any other but Lucentio,
I tell you sir, she beares me fair in hand.

Hor. Sir, to satisfie you in what I have said,

Stand by, and mark the manner of his teaching.

Enter Bianca.

Luc. Now Mistresse, profit you in what you read ?

Bian. What Master read you first, resolve me that ?

Luc. I read, that I professe the art to love.

Bian. And may you prove sir master of your art.

Luc. While you sweet dear prove mistresse of my heart.

Hor. Quick proceeders marry, now tell me I pray, you that durst swear that your mistresse Bianca lov'd me in the World so well as Lucentio.

Tra. Oh despightfull Love, unconstant woman kind,
I tell thee Lisio this is wonderfull.

Hor. Mistake no more, I am not Lisio,
Nor a Musician as I seem to be,
But one that scorn to live in this disguise,
For such a one as leaves a Gentleman,
And makes a God of such a Cullion ;
Know sir, that I am call'd Hortensio.

Tra. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard
Of your entire affection to Bianca,
And since mine eyes are witnessse of her lightnesse,
I will with you, if you be so contented,
Forswear Bianca, and her love for ever.

Hor. See how they kisse and court : Signior Lucentio,
Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow
Never to wooe her more, but doe forswear her,
As one unworthy all the former favours
That I have fondly flatter'd her withall.

Tra. And here I take the like unsained oath,
Never to marry with her, though she would intreat,
Fie on her, see how beastly she doth court him.

Hor. Would all the world but he had quite forsworn
For me, that I may surely keep mine oath.
I will be married to a wealthy Widow,
Ere three dayes passe, which hath as long lov'd me,
As I have lov'd this proud disdainfull Haggard,
And so farewell Signior Lucentio,
Kindnesse in women, not their beauteous looks
Shall win my love, and so I take my leave,
In resolution, as I swore before.

Tra. Mistresse Bianca, blesse you with such grace,
As longeth to a Lovers blessed case :
Nay, I have tane you napping gentle Love,
And have forsworn you with Hortensio.

Bian. Tranio you jest, but have you both forsworn me ?

Tra. Mistresse we have.

Luc. Then we are rid of Lisio.

Tra. I'faith he'll have a lusty Widow now,
That shall be woo'd, and wedded in a day.

Bian. God give him joy.

Tra. I, and he'll taine her.

Bian. He sayes so Tranio.

Tra. Faith he is gone unto the taming schoole.

Bian. The taming schoole : what is there such a place ?

Tra. I mistresse, and Petruchio is the master,
That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long,
To tame a shrew, and charme her chattering tongue.

Enter Biondello.

Bian. Oh master, master, I have watcht so long,
That I am dog-weary, but at last I spied
An ancient Angel coming down the hill,
Will serve the turn.

Tra. What is he Biondello.

Bio. Master, a Marcantant, or a pedant,

I know not what, but formall in apparell,
In gate and countenance surly like a father.

Luc. And what of him Tranio?

Tra. If he be credulous, and trust my tale,
I'll make him glad to seem Vincentio,
And give assurance to Baptista Minola
As if he were the right Vincentio.
Take me your love, and then let me alone.

Enter a Pedant.

Ped. God save you sir.

Tra. And you sir, you are welcome.
Travell you far on, or are you at the farthest?

Ped. Sir, at the farthest for a week or two,
But then up farther, and as far as Rome,
And so to Tripoly, if God lend me life.

Tra. What Countreyman I pray?

Ped. Of Mantua.

Tra. Of Mantua Sir, marry God forbid,
And come to Padua, carelesse of your life?
Ped. My life sir? how I pray? for that goes hard.

Tra. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua
To come to Padua, know you not the cause?
Your ships are staid at Venice, and the Duke
For private quarrell 'twixt your Duke and him,
Hath publish'd and proclaim'd it openly:
'Tis marvel, but that you are but newly come,
You might have heard it else proclaim'd about.

Ped. Alas sir, it is worse for me then so,
For I have bills for money by exchange
From Florence, and must here deliver them.

Tra. Well sir, to do you curtesie,
This will I do, and this I will advise you.
First tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?

Ped. I sir, In Pisa have I often been,
Pisa renowned for grave Citizens.

Tra. Among them know you one Vincentio?

Ped. I know him not, but I have heard of him:
A Merchant of incomparable wealth.

Tra. He is my father sir, and sooth to say,
In count'nance somewhat doth resemble you.

Bion. As much as an apple doth an oyster, and all one.

Tra. To save your life in this extremity,
This favour will I do you for his sake,
And think it not the worst of all your fortunes
That you are like to Sir Vincentio.
His name and credit shall you undertake,
And in my house you shall be friendly lodg'd,
Look that you take upon you as you should,
You understand me sir: so shall you stay
Till you have done your business in the City:
If this be court'sie sir, accept of it.

Ped. Oh sir I do, and will repute you ever
The patron of my life and liberty.

Tra. Then go with me to make the matter good,
This by the way I let you understand,
My father is here look'd for every day,
To passe assurance of a dowre in marriage
'Twixt me, and one Baptista's daughter here:
In all these circumstances I'll instruct you,
Go with me sir to cloath you as becomes you.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Katherine and Grumio.

Grum. No, no forsooth I dare not for my life.

Kat. The more my wrong, the more his spite appears.
What, did he marry me to famish me?
Beggars that come unto my fathers door,
Upon entreaty have a present almes,
If not, elsewhere they meet with charity:
But I, who never knew how to intreat,
Nor never needed that I should intreat,
Am starv'd for meat, giddy for lack of sleep:
With oaths kept waking, and with brawling fed.
And that which spights me more then all these wants,
He does it under name of perfect love:
As who would say, if I should sleep or eat
'Twere deadly sicknesse, or else present death.
I prethee go, and get me some repast,
I care not what, so it be wholesome food.

Grum. What say you to a Neats foot?

Kat. 'Tis passing good, I prethee let me have it.

Grum. I fear it is too phlegmatick a meat.

How say you to a fat Tripe finely broil'd?

Kat. I like it well, good Grumio fetch it me.

Grum. I cannot tell, I fear 'tis chollerick.

What say you to a piece of Beef and Mustard?

Kat. A dish that I do love to feed upon.

Grum. I, but the Mustard is too hot a little.

Kat. Why then the Beef, and let the Mustard rest.

Grum. Nay then I will not, you shall have the Mustard,
Or else you get no Beef of Grumio.

Kat. Then both or one, or any thing thou wilt.

Grum. Why then the Mustard without the Beef,

Kat. Go get the gone, thou false deluding slave.

Beats him.

That feed'st me with the very name of meat,
Sorrow on thee, and all the pack of you
That triumph thus upon my misery:
Go get thee gone, I say.

Enter Petruchio, and Hortentio with meat.

Pet. How fares my Kate, what sweeting, all amorst?

Hor. Mistress, what cheer?

Kat. Faith as cold as can be.

Pet. Pluck up thy spirits, look cheerfully upon me.
Here Love, thou see'st how diligent I am,
To dresse thy meat my self, and bring it thee.
I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindnesse merits thanks.
What, not a word? Nay then, thou lov'st it not:
And all my pains is sorted to no proof.
Here take away the dish.

Kat. I pray you let it stand.

Pet. The poorest service is repaid with thanks,
And so shall mine before you touch the meat.

Kat. I thank you sir.

Hor. Signior Petruchio, fie you are too blame:
Come Mistress Kate, I'll bear you company.

Pet. Eat it up all Hortentio, if thou lovest me:

Much good do it unto thy gentle heart;

Kate eat apace; and now my hony Love,

Will we return unto thy fathers house,

And revell it as bravely as the best,

With silken coats and caps, and golden Rings,

With Ruffs and Cuffs, and Fardingales, and things:

With Scarffs, and Fanns, and double change of brav'ry,

With Amber Bracelets, Beads, and all this knav'ry.

With hast thou din'd? The Tailor staies thy leasure,

To deck thy body with his ruffling treasure.

Enter Tailor.

Comic

Come Tailor, let us see these ornaments.

Enter Haberdasher.

Lay forth the gown. What news with you sir?

Fel. Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.

Pet. Why this was moulded on a porrenger,
A Velvet dish: Fie, fie 'tis lewd and filthy,
Why 'tis a cockle or a walnut-shell,
A knack, a toy, a trick, a babies cap:
Away with it, come let me have a bigger.

Kat. I'll have no bigger, this doth fit the time,
And Gentlewomen were such caps as these.

Pet. When you are gentle, you shall have one too,
And not till then.

Hor. That will not be in haste.

Kat. Why sir, I trust I may have leave to speak,
And speak I will. I am no childe, no babe,
Your betters have endur'd me, say my minde,
And if you cannot, best you stop your ears.
My tongue will tell the anger of my heart,
Or else my heart concealing it will break,
And rather then it shall, I will be free,
Even to the uttermost as I please in words.

Pet. Why thou sai'st true, it is a paltry cap,
A custard coffen, a bauble, a silken pye,
I love thee well in that thou lik'st it not.

Kat. Love me, or love me not, I like the cap,
And it I will have, or I will have none.

Pet. Thy gown, why I: come Tailor let us see't,
O mercy God, what masking stufte is here?
What? this a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-cannon,
What, up and down carv'd like an apple-Tart?
Here snip, and nip, and cut, and slash and slash,
Like to a Censor in a barbers shop:

Why what a devils name Tailor call'st thou this?

Hor. I see she's like to have neither cap nor gown.

Tai. You bid me make it orderly and well,
According to the fashion, and the time.

Pet. Marry and did: but if you be remembred,
I did not bid you mar it to the time.

Go hop me over every kennell home,
For you shall hop without my custome sir:
I'll none of it: hence, make your best of it.

Kat. I never saw a better fashion'd gown,
More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable:
Belike you mean to make a puppet of me.

Pet. Why true, he means to make a puppet of thee.

Tai. She sayes your Worship means to make a puppet of her.

Pet. Oh most monstrous arrogance:
Thou lyesst, thou thred, thou thimble,
Thou yard, three quarters, half yard, quarter, nail,
Thou Flea, thou Nit, thou winter cricket thou:
Brav'd in mine own house with a skein of thred:
Away thou Rag, thou quantity, thou remnant,
Or I shall so be-meet thee with thy yard,
As thou shalt think on prating whil'st thou liv'st:
I tell thee I, that thou hast mar'd her gown.

Tai. Your worship is deceiv'd, the gown is made
Just as my Master had direction:

Grumio gave order how it should be done.

Gru. I gave him no order, I gave him the stuff.

Tai. But how did you desire it should be made?

Gru. Marry sir with needle and thred.

Tai. But did you not request to have it Cut?

Gru. Thou hast fac'd many things.

Tai. I have.

Gru. Face not me: thou hast brav'd many men, brave not me; I will neither be fac'd nor brav'd. I say unto thee,
I bid thy master cut out the gown, but I did not bid him cut it to pieces. Ergo thou liest.

Tai. Why here is the note of the fashion to testifie.

Pet. Read it.

Gru. The note lyes in's throat if he say I said so.

Tai. Imprimis, a loose bodied gown.

Gru. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gown, sow me in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bot-tome of brown thred: I said a gown.

Pet. Proceed.

Tai. With a small compast cape.

Gru. I confesse the cape.

Tai. With a trunk sleeve.

Gru. I confesse two sleeves.

Tai. The sleeves curiously cut.

Pet. I there's the villany.

Gru. Error i'th bill sir, error i'th bill? I commanded the sleeves should be cut out, and sow'd up again, and that I'll prove upon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.

Tai. This is true that I say, and I had thee in place where, thou shouldst know it.

Gru. I am for thee straight: take thou the bill, give me thy meet-yard, and spare not me.

Hor. God-a-mercy Grumio, then he shall have no odd's.

Pet. Well sir in brief the gown is not for me.

Gru. You are i'th right sir, 'tis for my mistress.

Pet. Go take it up unto thy masters use.

Gru. Villain, not for thy life: Take up my Mistress's gown for thy masters use.

Pet. Why sir, what's your conceit in that?

Gru. Oh sir, the conceit is deeper then you think for:
Take up my Mistress's gown unto his masters use.
Oh fie, fie, fie.

Pet. Hortentio, say thou wilt see the Tailor paid:
Go take it hence, be gone, and say no more.

Hor. Tailor, I'll pay thee for thy gown to morrow,
Take no unkindnesse of his hasty words:

Away I say, commend me to thy Master. Exit, Tai.

Pet. Well, come my Kate, we will unto your fathers,
Even in these honest mean habiliments:

Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor:

For 'tis the minde that makes the body rich.

And as the Sun breaks through the darkest clouds,
So honor peereth in the meanest habit.

What is the Jay more precious then the Lark,

Because his feathers are more beautifull?

Or is the Adder better then the Eele,

Because his painted skin contents the eye?

Oh no, good Kate: neither art thou the worse

For this poor furniture, and mean array.

If thou accounted'st it shame, lay it on me,

And therefore frolick, we will hence forthwith:

To feast and sport us at thy fathers house,

Go call my men, and let us straight to him,

And bring our horses unto Long-lane end,

There will we mount, and thither walk on foot.

Let's see, I think 'tis now some seaven a clock,

And well we may come there by dinner time.

Kat. I dare assure you sir, 'tis almost two,
And 'twill be supper time ere you come there.

Pet. It shall be seven ere I go to horse:
Look what I speak, or do, or think to do.

You are still crossing it ; first let's alone,
I will not go to day, and ere I doe,
I shall be what a clock I say it is.

Hor. Why so: this gallant will command the fun.

Enter Tranio, and the Pedant dressed like Vincentio.

Tra. Sirs, this is the house, please it you that I call.

Ped. I what else, and but I be deceived,
Signior Baptista may remember me
Near twenty yeares ago in Genoa.

Tra. Where we were Lodgers, at the Pegasus :
'Tis well, and hold your own in any case
With such austerity as longeth to a Father.

Enter Biondello.

Ped. I warrant you : but sir here comes your boy,
'Twere good he were school'd.

Tra. Fear you not him : sirra Biondello,
Now doe your duty thoroughly. I advise you :
Imagine 'twere the right Vincentio.

Bion. Tut, fear not me.

Tra. But hast thou done thy errand to Baptista ?

Bion. I told him that your father was in Venice,
And that you look't for him in Padua.

Tra. That's a tall fellow, hold thee that to drink,
Here comes Baptista : set your countenance sir.

Enter Baptista and Lucentio : and Pedant booted and bear-headed.

Tra. Signior Baptista you are happily met :
Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of,
I pray you stand good father to me now,
Give me Bianca for my patrimony.

Ped. Soft son : sir by your leave, having come to Padua
To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio
Made me acquainted with a weighty cause
Of love between your daughter and himself :
And for the good report I hear of you,
And for the love he beareth to your daughter,
And she to him ; to stay him not too long,
I am content in a good fathers care
To have him matcht, and if you please to like
No worse then I sir upon some agreement,
Me shall you finde most ready and most willing
With one consent to have her so bestowed :
For curious I cannot be with you
Signior Baptista, of whom I hear so well.

Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I have to say,
Your plainnesse and your shortnesse please me well :
Right true it is, your son Lucentio here
Doth love my daughter, and she loveth him,
Or both d.semble deeply their affections :
And therefore if you say no more then this,
That like a Father you will deal with him,
And passe my daughter a sufficient dowre,
The match is made, and all is done,
Your son shall have my daughter with consent.

Tra. I thank you sir, where then doe you know best
We be affied, and such assurance tane,
As shall with either parts agreement stand.

Bap. Not in my house Lucentio, for you know
Pitchers have eares, and I have many servants,
Besides old Gremio is harkning still,
And haply we might be interrupted.

Tra. Then at my lodging, and it like you sir
There doth my father lie : and there this night

We'll passe the businesse privately and well :
Send for your daughter by your servant here,
My Boy shall fetch the Scrivener presently,
The worst is this, that at so slender warning,
You are like to have a thin and slender pittance.

Bap. It likes we well :

Cambio hie you home, and bid Bianca make her ready straight :

And if you will tell what hath hapned,
Lucentio's Father is arriv'd in Padua,
And how she's like to be Lucentio's wife.

Bion. I pray the gods she may with all my heart.

Exit.

Tra. Dally not with the gods, but get thee gone.

Enter Peter.

Signior Baptista, shall I lead the way,
We come, one messe is like to be your cheer,
Come sir, we will better it in Pisa.

Bap. I follow you.

Exeunt.

Enter Lucentio, and Biondello.

Bion. Cambio.

Luc. What saist thou Biondello ?

Biond. You saw my Master wink and laugh upon you.

Luc. Biondello, what of that ?

Biond. Faith nothing : but has left me here behind to expound the meaning, or morall of his signs and tokens.

Luc. I pray the moralize them.

Biond. Then thus : Baptista is safe talking with the deceiving Father of a deceitfull Son.

Luc. And what of him ?

Bion. His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper.

Luc. And then ?

Bion. The old Priest at Saint Luke's Church is at your command at all houres.

Luc. And what of all this ?

Bion. I cannot tell, except they are busied about a countefeit assurance : take you assurance of her. Cum privilegio ad Imprimendum solum, to th' Church take the Priest, Clarke, and some sufficient honest witnesses :
If this be not that you look for, I have no more to say,
But bid Bianca farewell forever and a day.

Luc. Hear'st thou Biondello?

Bion. I cannot tarry : I knew a wench married in an afternoon as she went to the Garden for Parsley to stuftea Ra bit, and so may you sir : and so adieu sir, my Master hath appointed me to go to Saint Luke's to bid the Priest be ready to come against you come with your appendix.

Exit.

Luc. I may and will, if she be so contented :
She will be pleas'd, then wherefore should I doubt :
Hap what hap may, I'll roundly go about her :
It shall go hard if Cambio go without her.

Exit.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Hortensio.

Pet. Come on a Godsname, once more toward eu Fathers.

Good Lord how bright and goodly shines the Moon :

Kate. The Moon, the Sun : it is not Moon light now.

Pet. I say it is the Moon that shines so bright.

Kat. I know it is the Sun that shines so bright.

Pet. Now by my Mothers Son, and that's my self,

It

It shall be moon, or star, or what I list,
Or ere I journey to your fathers house :
Go on, and fetch our horses back again,
Ever more crost and crost, nothing but crost,

Hor. Say as he sayes, or we shall never go,

Kat. Forward I pray, since we have come so farre,
And be it moon, or sun, or what you please :
And if you please to call it a ruff Candle,
Hence forth I vow it shall be so for me.

Pet. I say it is the Moon.

Kat. I know it is the Moon.

Pet. Nay then you lye : it is the blessed Sun.

Kat. Then God be blest, it is the blessed Sun,
But sun it is not, when you say it is not.
And the Moon changes even as your minde :
What you will have it nam'd, even that it is,
And so it shall be so for Katherine.

Hor. Petruchio, go thy wayes, the field is won.

Pet. Well, forward, forward, thus the bowle should run,
And not unluckily against the Bias:
But soft, Company is comming here.

Enter Vincentio.

Good morrow gentle Mistris, where away :
Tell me sweet Kate, and tell me truly too,
Hast thou beheld a fresher Gentlewoman :
Such war of white and red within her cheeks :
What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty,
As those two eyes become that heavenly face ?
Fair lovely Maid, once more good day to thee :
Sweet Kate embrace her for her beauties sake.

Hor. A will make the man mad to make a woman of him.

Kat. Young budding Virgin, fair, and fresh, and sweet,
Whither away, or where is thy aboad ?
Happy the Parents of so fair a childe ;
Happier the man whom favourable stars
Alots thee for his lovely bedfellow.

Pet. Why how now Kate, I hope thou art not mad,
This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, withered,
And not a Maiden, as thou sai'st he is.

Kat. Pardon old father my mistaking eyes,
That have been so hedazled with the sun,
That every thing I look on seemeth green :
Now I perceive thou art a reverend Father:
Pardon I pray thee for my mad mistaking.

Pet. Do good old grandfire, and withall make known
Which way thou travellest, if along with us,
We shall be joyfull of thy company.

Vin. Fair Sir, and you my merry Mistris,
That with your strange encounter much amas'd me:
My name is call'd Vincentio, my dwelling Pisa,
And bound I am to Padua, there to visit
A son of mine, which long I have not seen.

Pet. What is his name ?

Vin. Lucentio, gentle sir.

Pet. Happily met, the happier for thy son :
And now by Law, as well as reverent age,
I may intitle thee my loving father ;
The sister to my wife, this Gentlewoman,
Thy Son by this hath inarried : wonder not,
Nor be not grieved, she is of good esteem,
Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth ;
Beside, so qualified, as may beseem
The Spouse of any noble Gentleman :
Let me embrace with old Vincentio,

And wander we to see thy honest son,
Who will of thy arrivall be full joyous.

Vin. But is this true, or is it else your pleasure,
Like present travellers to break a jest
Upon the company you overtake ?

Hor. I do assure thee father so it is.

Pet. Come go along and see the truth hereof.
For our first merriment hath made thee jealous. Exeunt.

Hor. Well Petruchio, this has put me in heart :
Have to my Widdow, if she be froward,
Then hast thou taught Hortentio to be untoward. Exit.

Enter Biondello, Lucentio and Bianca, Gremio is out before.

Bion. Softly and swiftly sir, for the Priest is ready.

Luc. I flye Biondello, but they may chance to need thee at home, therefore leave us. Exit.

Bion. Nay faith, I'll see the Church a your back, and then come back to my mistress as soon as I can.

Gre. I marvaile Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Vincentio, Grumio with Attendants.

Pet. Sir heres the door, this is Lucentio's house,
My Fathers bears more toward the Market-place,
Thither must I, and here I leave you sir.

Vin. You shall not choose but drink before you go,
I think I shall command your welcome here ?
And by all likelihood some cheer is toward. Knock.

Gre. They're busie within, you were best knock louder.
Pedant looks out of the window.

Ped. What's he that knocks as he would beat down the gate ?

Vin. Is Signior Lucentio within sir ?

Ped. He's within sir, but not to be spoken withall.

Vin. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two to make merry withall.

Ped. Keep your hundred pounds to your self, he shall need none as long as I live.

Pet. Nay, I told you your son was well beloved in Padua : doe you hear sir, to leave frivolous circumstances, I pray you tell signior Lucentio that his Father is come from Pisa, and is here at the door to speak with him.

Ped. Thou liest, his Father is come from Padua, and here looking out at the window.

Vin. Art thou his father ?

Ped. I sir, so his mother sayes, if I may believe her.

Pet. Why how now gentleman : why this is flat kna-very to take upon you another mans name.

Ped. Lay hands on the villain, I believe he means to cozen some body in this City under my countenance.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. I have seen them in the Church together, God send'em good shipping : but who is here ? mine old Master Vincentio : now we are undone and brought to nothing.

Vin. Come hither crackhemp.

Bion. I hope I may choose Sir.

Vin. Come hither you rogue, what have you forgot me ?

Bion. Forgot you, no sir : I could not forget you, for
I never saw you before in all my life.

Vin. What, you notorious villain, did'st thou never see thy Masters father, Vincentio ?

Bion.

Bion. What my old worshipfull old master? yes marry sir, see where he looks out of the window.

Vin. Is't so indeed? He beats Biondello.

Bion. Help, help, help; here's a mad man will murder me.

Peda. Help, son, help signior Baptista.

Pet. Prethee Kate let's stand aside and see the end of this controversie.

Enter Pedant with servants, Baptista, Tranio.

Tra. Sir, what are you that offer to beat my servant?

Vin. What am I sir: nay what are you sir: oh immortal God's: oh fine villain, a silken doublet, a velvet hose, a scarlet cloak, and a copatain hat: oh I am undone, I am undone: while I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the University.

Tra. how now, what's the matter?

Bap. What is the man lunatick?

Tra. Sir, you seem a sober ancient Gentleman by your habit: but your words shew you a mad man: why sir, what concerns it you, if I wear Pearle and gold: I thank my good father, I am able to maintain it.

Vin. Thy father! oh villain, he is a Sail-maker in Bergamo.

Bap. You mistake sir, you mistake sir, pray what doe you think is his name?

Vin. His name, as if I knew not his name: I have brought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is Tranio.

Ped. Away, away mad asse, his name is Lucentio, and he is mine onely son and heir to the Lands of me signior Vincenzio.

Vin. Lucentio! oh he hath murdered his Master; lay hold on him I charge you in the Dukes name: oh my sonne, my sonne: tell me thou villain, where is my son Lucentio?

Tra. Call forth an officer: Carry this mad knave to the Jayle: father Baptista, I charge you see that he be forth comming.

Vin. Carry me to the Jayle?

Gre. Stay officer, he shall not go to prison.

Bap. Talk not signior Gremio: I say he shall go to prison.

Gre. Take heed signior Baptista, least you be conicatch'd in this businesse: I dare swear this is the right Vincenzio.

Ped. Swear if thou dar'st.

Gre. Nay, I dare not swear it.

Tra. Then thou wert best say that I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be signior Lucentio.

Bap. Away with the dotard, to the Jayle with him.

Enter Biondello, Lucentio, and Bianca.

Tix. thus strangers may be hal'd and abus'd: oh monstrous villain.

Bion. Oh we are spoil'd, and yonder he is, deny him, forswear him, or else we are all undone.

Exit Biondello, Tranio, and Pedant as fast as may be.

Luc. Pardon sweet father.

Vin. Lives my sweet son?

Bian. Pardon dear father.

Bap. How hast thou offended, where is Lucentio.

Luc. Here's Lucentio, right son to the right Vincenzio.

That have by marriage made thy daughter mine, While counterfeit supposes bleer'd thine cine.

Gre. Here's packing with a witnesse to deceive us all.

Vin. Where is that damned villain Tranio, That fac'd and brav'd me in this matter so?

Bap. Why, tell me if not this my Cambio?

Bian. Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Luc. Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's love Made me exchange my state with Tranio,

While he did bear my countenance in the town, And happily I have arriv'd at last

Unto the wished haven of my blisse:

What Tranio did, my self enforst him to;

Then pardon him sweet Father for my sake.

Vin. I'll slit the villains nose that would have sent me to the Jayle.

Bap. But do you hear sir, have you married my daughter without asking my good will:

Vin. Fear not Baptista, we will content you, go to: but I will in, to be reveng'd on this villain. Exit.

Bap. And I to sound the depth of this knavery. Exit.

Luc. Look not pale, Bianca, thy father will not frown Exeunt.

Gre. My cake is dogh, but I'll in among the rest, Out of hope of all, but my share of the scaft.

Kat. Husband let's follow, to see the end of this adoe.

Pet. First kiss me Kate, and we will.

Kat. What in the midst of the street?

Pet. What art thou asham'd of me?

Kat. No sir, God forbid, but asham'd to kiss.

Pet. Why then let's home again: Come firra let's away.

Kat. Nay, I will give thee a kiss, now pray thee Love stay.

Pet. Is not this well? come my sweet Kate.

Better once then never, for never too late. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Baptista, Vincenzio, Gremio, the Pedant, Lucentio, and Bianca, Tranio, Biondello, Gremio, and Widow: The Serving men with Tranio bringing in a banquet.

Luc. At last though long, our jarring notes agree, And time it is when raging war is come,

To smile at scapes and perils overblown:

My fair Bianca bid my father welcome,

While I with selfe same kindnesse welcome thine:

Brother Petruchio, sister Katherina,

And thou Hortentio with thy loving Widdow:

Feast with the best, and welcome to my house,

My Banquet is to close our stomachs up

After our great good cheer: pray you sit down,

For now we sit to chat as well as eat.

Pet. Nothing but sit and sit, and eat and eat.

Bap. Padua affords this kindnesse, son Petruchio.

Pet. Padua affords nothing but what is kinde.

Hor. For both our sakes I would that word were true.

Pet. Now for my life Hortentio fears his Widdow.

Hor. Then never trust me if I be afeard.

Pet. You are very sencible, and yet you misse my sence: I mean Hortentio is afeard of you.

Wid.

Wid. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round.
Pet. Roundly replied.
Kat. Mistress, how mean you that?
Wid. Thus I conceive by him.
Pet. Conceives by me, how likes Hortentio that?
Hor. My Widdow sayes, thus she conceives her tale.
Pet. Very well mended: kisse him for that, good Widdow.
Kat. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round. I pray you tell me what you meant by that.
Wid. Your husband being troubled with a shrew, Measures my husbands sorrow by his woe: And now you know my meaning.
Kat. A very mean meaning.
Wid. Right, I mean you.
Kat. And I am mean indeed, respecting you.
Pet. To her Kate.
Hor. To her Widdow.
Pet. A hundred marks, my Kate do put her down.
Hor. That's my office.
Pet. Spoke like an Officer: ha to thee lad.
Drinks to Hortentio.
Bap. How likes Gremio these quick witted folks?
Gre. Believe me sir, they But together well:
Bian. Head, and but an hasty witty body, Would say your Head and But were head and horn.
Vin. I Mistress Bride, hath that awakened you?
Bian. I, but not frightened me, therefore I'll sleep again.
Pet. Nay that you shall not since you have begun: Have at you for a better jest or two.
Bian. Am I your Bird, I mean to shift my bush, And then pursue me as you draw your Bow. You are welcome all. Exit Bianca.
Pet. She hath prevented me, here signior Tranio, This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not, Therefore a health to all that shot and mist.
Tra. Oh sir, Lucentio slipt me like his Gray-hound, Which runs himself, and catches for his Master.
Pet. A good swift simile, but something curriish.
Tra. 'Tis well sir, that you hunted for your self: 'Tis thought your Deer does hold you at a bay.
Bap. Oh, oh Petruchio, Tranio hits you now.
Luc. I thank thee for that gird good Tranio,
Hor. Confesse, confesse, hath he not hit you here?
Pet. A has a little gall'd me I confesse: And as the Jest did glance away from me, 'Tis ten to one it main'd you too, out-right.
Bap. Now in good sadness for Petruchio, I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.
Pet. Well, I say no: and therefore for assurance, Let's each one send unto his wife, And he whose wife is most obedient, To come at first when he doth send for her, Shall win the wager which we will propose.
Hor. Content, what's the wager?
Luc. Twenty Crowns.
Pet. Twenty Crowns.
I'll venture so much of my Hawk or Hound, But twenty times so much upon my Wife.
Luc. A hundred then.
Hor. Content.
Pet. A match, 'tis done.
Hor. Who shall begin?
Luc. That will I.
Go Biondello, bid your Mistress come to me:

Bion. I go. Ex in.
Bap. Son, I'll be your half, Bianca comes.
Luc. I'll have no halves: I'll bear it all my self, Enter Biondello.
How now, what newes?
Bion. Sir, my Mistress sends you word That she is busie, and cannot come.
Pet. How? she's busie, and cannot come: is that an answer?
Gre. I, and a kinde one too: Pray God sir your wife send you not a worse.
Pet. I hope better.
Hor. Sirra Biondello, go and intreat my wife to come to me forthwith. Exit Biondello.
Pet. Oh ho, intreat her, nay then she must needs come.
Hor. I am afraid sir, do what you can, Enter Biondello.
Yours will not be entreated: Now, where's my wife?
Bion. She sayes you have some goodly Jest in hand, She will not come: she bids you come to her.
Pet. Worse and worse, she will not come: Oh vilde, intollerable, not to be indur'd: Sirra Gremio, go to your Mistress, Say I command her to come to me. Exit.
Hor. I know her answer.
Pet. What?
Hor. She will not.
Pet. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Enter Katherine.

Bap. Now by my hollidam here comes Katherine,
Kat. What is your will sir, that you send for me?
Pet. Where is your sister, and Hortentio's wife?
Kat. They sit conferring by the Parlor fire.
Pet. Go fetch them hither, if they deny to come, Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands: Away I say, and bring them hither straight.
Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.
Hor. And so it is: I wonder what it boads.
Pet. Marry peace it boads, and love, and quiet life, An awfull rule, and right supremacy: And to be short, what not, that's sweet and happy.
Bap. Now fair befall thee good Petruchio; The wager thou hast won, and I will adde Unto their losses twenty thousand Crowns, Another dowry to another daughter, For she is chang'd as she had never been.
Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet, And show more signe of her obedience, Her new built vertue and obedience.
Enter Kate, Bianca, and Widdow.
See where she comes, and brings your froward Wives As prisoners to her womanly perswasion: Katherine, that Cap of yours becomes you not, Off with that bable, and through it underfoot.
Wid. Lord let me never have a cause to sigh, Till I be brought to such a silly passe.
Bian. Fie what a foolish duty call you this?
Luc. I would your duty were as foolish too: The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca, Hath cost me five hundred Crowns since supper-time.
Bian. The more foole you for laying on my duty.
Pet. Katherine, I charge thee tell these headstrong women, what duty they owe to their Lords and husbands.
Wid. Come,

Wid. Come, come, you're mocking: we will have no telling..

Pet. Come on I say, and first begin with her.

Wid. She shall not.

Pet. I say she shall, and first begin with her.

Kat. Fie, fie, unknit that threatening unkinde brow,
And dart not scornfull glances from those eyes,
To wound thy Lord, thy King, thy governour.
It blots thy beauty, as frosts bite the meads,
Confounds thy fame, whirle-winds shake fair buds,
And in no sence is meet or amiable.
A woman mov'd, is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill seeming, thick, bereft of beauty,
And while it is so, none so drie or thirsty
Will dain to sip, or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy Lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy soveraign: One that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance. Commits his body
To painfull labour, both by sea and land:
To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
Whil'st thou ly'st warme at home, secure and safe,
And craves no other tribute at thy hands,
But love, fair looks, and true obedience;
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duty as the Subject owes the Prince,
Even such a woman oweth to her husband:
And when she's froward, peevish, sullen, sowre,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foule contending Rebell,
And gracelesse traitour to her loving Lord?
I am asham'd that women are so simple,

To offer warre where they should kneel for peace:
Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.
Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and smooth,
Unapt to toyl and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions, and our hearts,
Should well agree with our externall parts?
Come, come, you froward unable wormes,
My mind hath been as big as one of yours,
My heart is great, my reason haply more,
To bandy word for word, and frown for frown;
But now I see our Launces are but strawes:
Our strength as weak, our weaknesse past compare,
That seeming to be most, which we indeed least are,
Then vail your stomachs, for it is no boot,
And place your hands below your husbands foot:
In token of which duty, if he please,
My hand is ready, may it doe him ease.

Pet. Why there's a wench: Come on, and kisse me

Kate.

Luc. Well go thy wayes, old Lad, for thou shalt ha'e.

Vin. 'Tis a good hearing, when children are toward.

Luc. But a harsh hearing, when women are froward.

Pet. Come Kate, we'll to bed,
We three are married, but you two are sped.
'Twas I won the wager, though you hit the white,
And being a winner, God give you good night.

Exit Petruchio.

Hortens. Now go thy wayes, thou hast tam'd a curst Shrow.

Luc. 'Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tam'd so.

F I N I S.

All's well that ends well.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter young Bertram Count of Rossillion, his Mother, and Helena, Lord Lafew, all in black.

Mother.

IN delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Ros. And in going Madam, weep o're my Father's death anew; but I must attend his Majesties command, to whom I am now in Ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the King a husband, Madam, you sir a father. He that so generally is at all times good, must of necessity hold his virtue to you, whose worthinesse would stirre it up where it wanted, rather then lack it where there is such abundance.

Mo. What hope is there of his Majesties amendment?

Laf. He hath abandon'd his Phisicians, Madam, under whose practises he hath persecuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the proceffe, but onely the losing of hope by time.

Mo. This young Gentlewoman had a Father, O that had! how sad a passage 'tis, whose skill was almost as great as his honesty, had it stretch'd so far, would have made nature immortall, and death should have play for lack of work. Would, for the Kings sake, hee were living, I think it would be the death of the Kings disease.

Laf. How call'd you the man you speak of Madam?

Mo. He was famous sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so: Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent indeed, Madam, the King very lately spoke of him admiringly, and mourningly: he was skilfull enough to have liv'd still, if knowledge could be set up against mortallitie.

Ros. What is it (my good Lord) the King languishes of?

Laf. A Fistula my Lord.

Ros. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious. Was this Gentlewoman the Daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Mo. His sole child my Lord, and bequeathed to my over-looking. I have those hopes of her good, that her education promises her dispositions she inherits, which makes fair gifts fairer: for where an unclean mind carries vertuous qualities, there commendations go with pittie, they are virtues and traitors too: in her they are the better for their simplenesse; she derives her honestie, and atchieves her goodnesse.

Lafew. Your commendations, Madam, get from her teares.

Mo. 'Tis the best brine a Maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her Father never approaches her heart, but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all liveliehood from her cheek. No more of this Helena, go to, no more, least it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, then to have-----

Hel. I doe affect a sorrow indeed, but I have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentations is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Mo. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excesse makes it soon mortall.

Ros. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

Laf. How understand we that?

Mo. Be thou blest Bertram, and succeed thy Father In manners as in shape: thy blood and virtue Contend for Empire in thee, and thy goodnesse Share with thy birth-right. Love all, trust a few, Doe wrong to none: be able for thine enemy Rather in power then use: and keep thy friend Under thy own lifes key. Be checkt for silence, But never tax'd for speech. What heaven more will, That thee may furnish, and my prayers pluck down, Fall on thy hand. Farewell my Lord, 'Tis an unseason'd Courtier, good my Lord, Advise him.

Laf. He cannot want the best. That shall attend his love.

Mo. Heaven blese him: Farewell Bertram. Exit.

Ros. The best wishes that can be forg'd in your thoughts be servants to you: be comfortable to my mother, your mistresse, and make much of her.

Laf. Farewell pretty Lady, you must hold the credit of your Father.

Hel. O were that all, I think not on my Father, And these great tears grace his remembrance more Then those I shed for him. What was he like? I have forgot him. My imagination Carries no favour in't but Bertrams. I am undone, there is no living, none, If Bertram be away. 'Twere all one, That I should love a bright particular starre, And think to wed it, he is so above me In his bright radiance and collaterall light,

Must

Mst I be comforted, not in his sphere ;
Th'ambition in my love thus plagues it self :
The Hinde that would be mared by the Lion
Must die for love. 'Twas pretty, though a plague
To see him every hour sit and draw
His arched arrows, his hawking eye, his curles
In our hearts table : heart too capable
Of every line and trick of his sweet favour.
But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancy
Mst sanctifie his Relick. Who comes here ?

Enter Parolles.

One that goes with him : I love him for his sake,
And yet I know him a notorious Liar,
Think him a great way fool, solely a coward,
Yet these fixt evils sit so fit in him,
That they take place, when Virtues steely bones
Looks bleak ith cold wind : withall, full oft we see.
Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Par. Save you fair Queen.

Hel. And you Monarch.

Par. No.

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginity ?

Hel. I : you have some stain of souldier in you : Let me aske you a question. Man is enemy to virginity, how may we harrocado it against him ?

Par. Keep him out.

Hel. But he assailes, and our virginity though valiant, in the defence yet is weak : unfold us some warlike resistance.

Par. There is none : Man setting down before you, will undermine you, and blow you up.

Hel. Blesse our poor Virginity from Underminers, and blowers up. Is there no Military policy how Vir-gins might blow up men ?

Par. Virginity being I down down, Man will quicklier be blown up : marry in blowing him down again, with the breach your selves made, you lose your City. It is not politick, in the common-wealth of Nature, to preserve virginity. Losse of Virginity, is rationall encrease, and there was never virgin got, till virginity was first lost.
That you were made of, is mettall to make Virgins. Virginity, by being once lost, may be ten times found : by being ever kept, it is ever lost : 'tis too cold a companion :
away with't.

Hel. I will stand for't a little, though therefore I die a Virgin.

Par. There's little can be said in't, 'tis against the rule of Nature. To speak on the part of virginity, is to accuse your Mothers : which is most infallible disobedience.
He that hangs himself is a Virgin : Virginity murders it self, and should be buried in high-ways out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate Offendresse against Nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a Cheese, consumes it selfe to the very pairing, and so dies with feeding his own stomach. Besides, Virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhabited sin in the Cannon. Keep it not, you cannot choose but loose by't. Out with't : within ten yeares it will make it self two, which is a goodly increase, and the principall it self not much the worse. Away with't.

Hel. How might one doe sir, to loose it to her own liking ?

Par. Let me see. Marry ill, to like him that ne're it likes. 'Tis a comoditie will lose the glosse with lying.
The longer kept, the lesse worth : Off with't while 'tis vendible. Answer the time of request, Virginity like an olde Courtier, weares her cap out of fashion, richly futed, but unfutable, just like the brooch and the tooth-pick, which were not now : your Date is better in your Pye and your Porridge, then in your cheek : and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French wither'd Peares ; it looks ill, it eats drily, marry 'tis a wi-ther'd Pear : it was formerly better, marry yet 'tis a wi-ther'd Pear. Will you any thing with it ?

Hel. Not my virginity yet :

There shall your Master have a thousand loves ;
A mother, and a mistresse, and a friend,
A Phoenix, Captain, and an enemy,
A guide, a goddesse, and a soveraign,
A Counsellor, a Traitresse, and a Dear :
His humblest ambition, proud humility :
His jarring, concord : and his discord, dulcet :
His faith, his sweet disaster : with a world
Of pretty fond adoptious christendomes
That blinking Cupid gossips. Now shall he :
I know not what he shall, God send him well.
The Court's a learning place, and he is one.

Par. What one ifaith ?

Hel. That I with well, 'tis pittie.

Par. What's pittie ?

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in't,
Which might be felt, that we poorer born,
Whose baser starres doe shut them up in wishes,
Might with effects of them follow our friends,
And shew what we alone must think, which never Returns us thanks.

Page. Monsieur Parolles,
My Lord calls for you.

Par. Little Hellen farewell, if I can remember thee,
I will think of thee at Court.

Hel. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable starre.

Par. Under Mars I.

Hel. I especially think under Mars.

Par. Why under Mars ?

Hel. The waters hath so kept you under, that you must needs be born under Mars.

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrogade I think rather.

Par. Why think you so ?

Hel. You go so much backward when you fight,

Par. That's for advantage.

Hel. So is running away,

When fear proposes safety :

But the composition that your valour and fear makes in you, is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear-
well.

Paroll. I am so full of businesse, I cannot answer thee acutely : I will return perfect Courtier, in the which my instruction shall serve to naturalize thee, so thou wilt be capable of the Courtiers' counsell, and understand what advice shall thrust upon thee, else thou diest in thine unthankfulnessse, and thine ignorance makes thee away, farewell : When thou hast leisure, say thy prayers : when thou hast none, remember thy Friends :

Get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee :
So farewell.

Hel. Our remedies oft in our selves doe lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven; the fated skie
Gives us free scope, onely doth backward pull
Our slow designs, when we our selves are dull.
What power is it, which mounts my love so hie,
That makes me see and cannot feed mine eye ?
The mightiest space in fortune, Nature brings
To joyn like likes ; and kisse like native things.
Impossible be strange attempts to those
That weigh their pains in sence, and doe suppose
What hath been, cannot be. Who ever strove
To shew her merit, that did misse her love ?
(The Kings disease) my project may deceive me,
But my intents are fixt, and will not leave me. Exit.

Flourish Cornets.

Enter the King of France with Letters, and divers Attendants.

King. The Florentines and *Senoy*s are by th' cares,
Have fought with equall fortune, and continue
A braving warre.

1. Lo. G. So 'tis reported sir.

Kin. Nay 'tis most credible, we here receive it,
A certainty vouch'd from our Cousin Austria,
With caution, that the Florentino will move us
For speedy aide: wherein our dearest friend
Prejudicates the businesse, and would seem
To have us make deniall.

1. L. G. His love and wisdom
Approv'd so to your Majesty, may plead
For amplest credence.

Kin. He hath arm'd our answer,
And Florence is deni'd before he comes :
Yet for our Gentleinen that nican to see
The Tuscan service, freely have they leave
To stand on either part.

2. Lo. E. It may well serve
A nursery to our Centry, who are sick
For breathing, and exploit.

King. What's he comes here ?

Enter Bertram, Lafew and Parolles.

1. Lo. G. It 'tis the Count Rossillion, my good Lord,
Young Bertram.

King. Youth, thou beat'st thy Fathers face,
Frank Nature rather curious then in haste,
Hath well compos'd thee : Thy Fathers morall parts
Maist thou inherit too : welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your Majesties.

Kin. I would I had that corporall soundnesse now,
As when thy father, and my selfe, in friendship
First tri'd our souldiership : he did look farre
Into the service of the time, and was Discipl'd of the bravest. He lasted long,
But on us both did haggish Age steal on,
And wore us out of act : It much repaires me
To talke of your good father ; in his youth
He had the wit, which I can well observe
To day in our young Lords : but they may jest
Till their own scorn return to them unnoted,
Ere they can hide their levity in honour :
So like a Courtier, contempt nor bitternesse

Were in his pride, or sharpnesse, if they were,
His equall had awak'd them, and his honour
Clock to it self, knew the true minute when Exception bid him speak, and at this time
His tongue obey'd his hand. Who were below him,
He us'd as creatures of another place,
And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility,
In their poor praise he humbled : Such a man
Might be a copy to these younger times ;
Which followed well, would demonstrate them now
But goers backward.

Ber. His good remembrance, Sir,
Lies richer in your thoughts, then on his tombe :
So in approofe lives not his Epiraph,
As in your royall speech.

King. Would I were with him : he would alwaies say,
(Me thinks I hear him now) his plausive words
He scatter'd not in cares, but grafted them
To grow there and to bear : Let me not live,
This his good melancholly oft began
On the Catastrophe and heel of pastime
When it was out : Let me not live (quoth he)
After my flame lacks oyle, to be the snuffe
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses
All but new things dildain ; whose judgements are Meer fathers of their garments : whose constancies
Expire before their fashions : this he wish'd.
I after him, doe after him wish too :
(Since I, nor wax, nor honic can bring home,) I
I quickly were dissolved from my hive,
To give some Labourers room.

2. L. E. You're loved Sir,
They that least lend it you, shall lack you first.

King. I fill a place I know't, how long ist, Count,
Since the Physician at your fathers died ?
He was much fam'd.

Ber. Some six moneths sinceiny, Lord.

Kin. If he were living, I would try him yet.
Lend me an arme : the rest have worn me out
With severall applications : Nature and sicknesse Debate it at their leisure. Welcome Count,
My son's no dearer.

Ber. Thank your Majesty.

Exit.

Flourish.

Enter Countesse, Steward, and Clown.

Con. I will now hear, what say you of this Gentlewo-
man.

St. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the Kalender of my past endeavours, for then we wound our modesty, and make foule the clearnesse of our deservings, when of our selves we publish them.

Con. What do's this knave here ? Get you gone sirra :
the complaints I have heard of you, I doe not all believe,
'tis my slownesse that I doe not : for I know you lack not folly to commit them, and have ability enough to make such knaveries yours.

Clo. 'Tis not unknown to you Madam, I am a poor fellow.

Con. Well sir.

Clo. No Madam,
'Tis not so well that I am poor, though many of

of the rich are damn'd, but if I have your Ladyships good will to go the world, Isbell the woman and I will do as we may.

Conn. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?

Clo. I do beg your good will in this case.

Conn. What case?

Clo. In Isbels case and mine own: service is no heritage, and I think I shall never have the blessing of God, till I have issue a by body, for they say Barns are blessings.

Conn. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt Marry?

Clo. My poor body Madam requires it, I am driven on by the flesh, and he must needs goe that the devill drives.

Conn. Is this all your worships reason?

Clo. Faith Madam I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

Conn. May the world know them?

Clo. I have been (Madam) a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are, and indeed I do marry that I may repent.

Conn. Thy marriage sooner then thy wickedness.

Clo. I am out a friends, Madam, and I hope to have friends for my wives sake.

Conn. Such friends are thine enemies knave.

Clo. Y'are shallow Madam, in great friends, for the knaves come to do that for me which I am a weary of: he that eats my Land, spares my teame, and gives me leave to Inne the crop: if I be his Cuckold, he's my drudge; he that comforts my wife, is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; he that cherisheth my flesh and blood, loves my flesh and blood; he that loves my flesh and blood is my friend: ergo, he that kisses my wife is my friend: if men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage; for young Charbon the Puritan, and old Poyssam the Papist, howsomeere their hearts are sever'd in Religion, their heads are both one, they may joule horns together like any Dear i'th Heard.

Conn. Thou wilt ever be a foule mouth'd and calunious knave.

Clo. A prophete, I Madam, and I speak the truth the next way, for I the Ballad will repeat, which men full true shall finde, your marriage comes by destiny, your Cuckow sings by kinde.

Conn. Get you gone sir, I'll talke with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you, Madam, that he bid Hellen come to you, of her I am to speak.

Conn. Sirrah tell my Gentlewoman I would speak with her, Hellen I mean.

Clo. Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,

Why the Grecians sacked Troy?

Fond done, done fond, was this King Priam's joy?

With that she sigh'd as she stood, bis.

And gave this sentence then, among nine bad if one be good, among nine bad if one be good, there's yet one good in ten.

Conn. What, one good in ten? you corrupt the song sirra.

Clo. One good woman in ten, Madam, which is the purifying a'th song: would God would serve the world so all the year, we'd finde no fault with the rithe woman if I were the Parson, one in ten quoth a? and we might have a good woman born but o're every blazing starre, or at an earthquake, 'twould mend the Lottery well, a man may draw his heart out ere a pluck one.

Conn. You'll be gone sir knave, and do as I command you?

Clo. That man that should be at a womans command, and get no hurt done, though honesty be no Puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the Surplis of humility over the black Gown of a big heart: I am going forsooth, the business is for Hellen to come hither.

Exit.

Conn. Well now.

Stew. I know (Madam) you love your Gentlewoman intirely.

Conn. Faith I do: her Father bequeath'd her to me, and she her self without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she findes, there is more owing her then is paid, and more shall be paid her then she'll demand.

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her then I think she wish'd me: alone she was, and did communicate to her selfe her own words to her own ears: she thought, I dare vow for her, they touch'd not any stranger sence: her matter was, she loved your Son: Fortune she said was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates: Love no god, that would not extend his might onely, where qualities were levell: Queen of Virgins, that would suffer her poor Knight surpris'd without rescue in the first assault or ransome afterward: This she deliver'd in the most bitter touch of sorrow that e're I heard Virgin exclaim in, which I held my duty speedily to acquaint you withall: sithence in the losse that may happen, it concerns you something to know it.

Conn. You have discharg'd this honesty, keep it to your selfe; many likelihoods inform'd me of this before, which hung so tottring in the ballance, that I could never believe nor misdoubt: pray you leave me, shall this in your bosome, and I thank you for your honest care: I will speak with you further anon.

Exit Steward.

Enter Hellen.

Old Conn. Even so it was with me when I was young: If ever we are natures these are ours, this thorn Doth to our Rose of youth rightly belong: Our blood to us, this to our blood is born, It is the show and scale of natures truth, Where loves strong passion is imprest in youth, By our remembrances of dayes foigone, Such were our faults, or then we thought them none: Her eye is sick on't, I observe her now.

Hel. What is your pleasure, Madam?

Ol. Conn. You know, Hellen, I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honourable Mistress.

Ol. Conn. Nay a mother, why not a mother? when I fed mother,

Methought you saw a serpent, what's in mother, That you start at it? I say I am your mother, And put you in the Catalogue of those That were enwomb'd mine; 'tis often seen Adoption strives with nature, and choise breeds A native slip to us from foraine seeds: You ne're oppress me with a mothers groan, Yet I expresse to you a mothers care: (Gods mercy maiden) do's it curd thy blood To say I am thy mother? what's the matter, That this distempered messenger of wet,

The many colour'd Iris rounds thine eye?

-----Why, that you are my daughter?

Hel. That I am not.

Ol. Con. I say I am your Mother.

Hel. Pardon Madam,

The Count Rossillion cannot be my brother:

I am from humble, he from honoured name:

No note upon my Parents, his all noble,

My Master, my dear Lord he is, and I:

His servant live, and will his vassall die:

He must not be my brother.

Ol. Con. Nor I your Mother.

Hel. You are my mother Madam, would you were

So that my Lord your Son were not my brother,

Indeed my mother, or were you both our mothers,

I care no more for; then I do for heaven,

So I were not his sister, can't no other,

But I Your daughter, he must be my brother.

Ol. Con. Yes Hellen, you might be my daughter in law,

God shield you mean it not, daughter and mother

So strive upon your pulse; what pale agen?

My fear hath catch'd your fondness I now I see

The mistrie of your loveliness, and finde

Your salt tears head, now to all sence 'tis gross:

You love my son, invention is a sham'd

Against the proclamation of thy passion

To say thou dost not: therefore tell me true,

But tell me then 'tis so, for look, thy cheeks

Confess it 'tone to th'other, and thine eyes

See it is so grossly shown in thy behaviour,

That in their kinde, they speak it, onely sin

And hellish obstinacy tye thy tongue

That truth should be suspected, speak, is't so?

If it be so, you have wound a goodly clew:

If it be not, forswear't: how ere I charge thee,

As heaven shall work in me for mine a vaile

To tell me truly.

Hel. Good Madam pardon me.

Con. Do you love my Son?

Hel. Your pardon noble Mistris.

Con. Love you my Son?

Hel. Do not you love him Madam?

Con. Go not about; my love hath in't a bond

Whereof the world takes note: Come, come, disclose

The state of your affection, for your passions

Have to the full appeach'd.

Hel. Then I confess

Here on my knee, before high heavens and you,

That before you, and next unto high heaven, I love your

Sonne:

My friends were poor but honest, so's my love:

Be not offended, for it hurts not him

That he is lov'd of me; I follow him not.

By any token of presumptuous suit,

Nor would I have him, till I do deserve him,

Yet never know how that desert should be:

I know I love in vain, strive against hope:

Yet in this captious, and intenable Sive

I still pour in the waters of my love,

And lack not to loose still; thus Indian like

Religious in mine error, I adore

Th Sun that looks upon his worshipper,

But knows of him no no more. My dearest Madam,

Let not your hate incounter with my love.

For loving where you do; but if your self,

Whose aged honour cites a vertuous youth,

Did ever, in so true a flame of loving,

Wish chafly; and love dearly, that your Dian

Was both her self and love. O then give pity

To her whose state is such, that cannot choose

But lend and give where she is sure to loose;

That seeks not to finde that, search implies,

But riddle like; lives sweetly where she dies.

Con. Had you not lately an intent, speak truly,
To go to Paris?

Hel. Madam I had.

Con. Wherefore? tell true.

Hel. I will tell true, by grace it self I swear:

You know my Father left me some prescriptions

Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his reading

And manifest experience, had collected

For generall sovereignty: and that he will'd me

In heedfull'st reservation to bestow them,

As notes, whose faculties inclusive were,

More then they were in note: Amongst the rest,

There is a remedy, approv'd, set down,

To cure the desperate languishings whereof

The King is render'd lost.

Con. This was your motive for Paris, was it, speak?

Hel. My Lord, your son, made me to think of this;

Else Paris, and the medicine, and the King,

Had from the conversation of my thoughts,

Happily been absent then.

Con. But think you Hellen,

If you should tender your supposed aid;

He would receive it? He and his physicians

Are of one minde, He, that they cannot help him:

They, that they cannot help: how shall they credit

A poor unlearned Virgin, when the Schooles

Embowel'd of their doctrine, have left off

The danger to it self.

Hel. There's something in't

More then my Fathers skill, which was the great't

Of his profession, that his good receipt,

Shall for my legacy be sanctified

By th' luckiest stars in heaven, and would your honour

But give me leave to success, I'd venture

The well lost life of mine, on his Graces cure,

By such a day and houre.

Con. Do'st thou believ't?

Hel. I Madam knowingly.

Con. Why, Hellen, thou shalt have my leave and love,

Means and attendants, and my loving greetings

To those of mine in Court, I'll stay at home

And pray Gods blessing unto thy attempt:

Be gone to morrow, and be sure of this:

What I can help thee to, thou shalt not miss. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter the King with divers young Lords, taking leave for the Florentine warre: Count Rosse, and Parolles. Flourish Cornets.

King. Farewell young Lords; these warlike principles

Do not throw from you; and you my Lords farewell:

Share the advice betwixt you, if both gain, all

The gift doth stretch it self as 'tis receiv'd,

And is enough for both.

Lord. G. 'Tis our hope sir,

After

After well entred souldiers, to return
And finde your grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confes he owes the mallady
That doth my life besiege: farewell young Lords,
Whether I live or die, be you the sons
Of worthy French men: let higher Italy
(Those bated that inherit but the fall
Of the last Monarchy) see that you come
Not to wooe honour, but to wed it, when
The bravest question shrinks: finde what you seek,
That fame may cry you loud: I say farewell.

L. G. Health at your bidding serve your Majesty.

King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them,
They say our French, lack language to deny
If they demand: beware of being Captives
Before you serve.

Bo. Our hearts receive your warnings.

King. Farewell, come hither to me. (us.)

1. Lo. G. Oh my sweet Lord that you will stay behind

Par. 'Tis not his fault, the spark.

2. Lo. E. Oh 'tis brave warrs.

Par. Most admirable, I have seen those warrs.

Rossill. I am commanded here, and kept a coyle with,
Too young, and the next year, and 'tis too early.

Par. And thy minde stand too't boy,
Steale away bravely.

Rossill. I shall stay here the forchorse to a smock,
Creeking my shooes on the plain Masonry,
Till honour be bought up, and no sword worne
But one to dance with: by heaven, I'll steale away.

1. Lo. G. There's honour in the theft.

Par. Commit it Count.

2. Lo. E. I am your accessary, and so farewell.

Ros. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortur'd body.

1. Lo. G. Farewell Captain.

2. Lo. E. Sweet Monsieur Parolles.

Par. Noble Heroes; my sword and yours are kinne, good sparks and lustrous, a word good mettalls. You shall finde in the Regiment of Spinii, one Captain Spu- rio his Cicatrice, with an Emblein of war here on his sinister cheek; it was this very sword entrench'd it: 'say to him I live, and observe his reports of me.

L. G. We shall noble Captain.

Par. Mars doat on you for his novices, what will ye do?

Ross. Stay: the King.

Par. Use a more spacious ceremony to the Noble Lords, you have restrain'd your self within the List of too cold an adieu: be more expressive to them; for they wear themselves in the cap of the time, there do muster true gate; eat, speak, and more under the influence of the most receiv'd starre, and though the devill lead the measure, such are to be followed: after them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Ross. And I will do so.

Par. Worthy fellows, and like to prove most sinewie sword-men. Exeunt.

Enter Lafew.

L. Laf. Pardon my Lord for me and for my tidings.

King. I'll see thee to stand up. (pardon,

L. Laf. Then here's a man stands that hath brought his
I would you had kneel'd my Lord to ask me mercy,
And that at my bidding you could so stand up.

King. I would I had, so I had broke thy pate

And ask't thee mercy for't.

Laf. Goodfaith a-crofs, but my good Lord 'tis thus,
Will you be cur'd of your infirmity?

King. No.

Laf. O will you eat no grapes my royall fox?

Yes but you will, my noble grapes, and if
My royall fox could reach them: I have seen a medicine
That's able to breath life into a stone,
Quicken a rock, and make you dance Canary
With sprightly fire and motion, whose simple touch
Is powerfull to araise King Pippen, nay
To give great Charlemain a pen in's hand
And write to her a love-line.

King. What her is this?

Laf. Why doctor she: my Lord, there's one arriv'd,
If you will see her: now by my faith and honour,
If seriously I may convoy my thoughts
In this my light deliverance, I have spoke
With one, that in her sex, her years, profession,
Wisdom and constancy, hath amaz'd me more
Then I dare blame my weakness: will you see her?
For that is her demand, and know her business?
That done, laugh well at me.

King. Now good Lafew.

Bring in the admiration, that we with thee
May spend our wonder too; or take of thine
By wondring how thou took'st it.

Laf. Nay, I'll fit you,
And not be all day neither,

King. Thus he his speciall nothing ever prologues.

Laf. Nay, come your wayes.

Enter Hellen.

King. This haste hath wings indeed.

Laf. Nay, come your wayes,
This is his Majesty, say your minde to him,
A traitor you do looke like, but such traitors
His Majesty seldome fears, I am Cressids Uncle,
That dare leave two together, fare you well. Exit.

King. Now fair one, do's your business follow us?

Hell. I my good Lord.

Gerard de Narbon was my father,
In what he did profess, well found.

King. I knew him.

Hell. The rather will I spare my praises towards him,
Knowing him is enough: on's bed of death,
Many receipts he gave me, namely one,
Which as the dearest issue of his practise
And of his old experience, th'onely darling,
He bad me store up, as a triple eye,
Safer then mine own two: more dear I have so,
And hearing your high Majesty istouch'd
With that malignant cause, wherein the honour
Of my dear fathers gift, stands chief in power;
I come to tender it, and my appliance,
With all bound humbleness.

King. We thank you maiden,
But may not be so credulous of cure,
When our most learned Doctors leave us, and
The Congregated Colledge have concluded,
That labouring art can never ransome nature
From her unaydible estate: I say me must not
So stain our judgement, or corrupt our hope,
To prostitute our past-cure maladie
To empericks, or to dissever so
Our great self and our credit, to esteem
A senceless help, when help past sence we deem.

Hell. My

Hell. My duty then shall pay me for my pains:
I will no more enforce my office on you,
Humbly intreating from your royall thoughts,
A modest one to bear me back again.

Kin. I cannot give thee lesse to be call'd gratefull:
Thou thought'st to help me, and such thanks I give,
As one near death to those that wish him live:
But what at full I know, thou know'st no part,
I knowing all my perill, thou no Art.

Hell. What I can doe, can doe no hurt to try,
Since you set up your rest 'gainst remedy:
He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister:
So holy Writ, in babes, hath judgement shown,
When Judges have been babes, great floods have flown
From simple sources: and great Seas have dried,
When Miracles have by the great'st been denied.
Oft expectation failes, and most oft there
Where most it promises: and oft it hits,
Where hope is coldest, and despair most shifts.

Kin. I must not hear thee, fare thee well kind maid,
Thy pains not us'd, must by thy self be paid,
Proffers not took, reap thanks for their reward.

Hell. Inspired Merit so by breath is bard:
It is not so with him that all things knowes
As 'tis with us, that square our guesse by shewes:
But most it is presumption in us, when
The help of heaven we count the act of men.
Dear sir, to my endeavours give consent,
Of heaven, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an Impostor, that proclaim
My self against the levill of mine aime,
But know, I think, and think I know most sure,
My art is not past power, nor you past cure.

King. Art thou so confident? Within what space
Hop'st thou my cure?

Hell. The greatest grace lending grace,
Ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring
Their fiery torcher his diurnall ring.
Ere twice in murke and occidentall damp,
Moist Hesperus hath quenched her sleepy Lamp:
Or four and twenty times the Pilots glasse
Hath told the thievish minutes, how they passe:
What is infirm, from your sound parts shall flie,
Health shall live free, and sicknesse freely die.

King. Upon thy certainty and confidence,
What dar'st thou venture?

Hell. Taxe of impudence,
A stumpe's boldnesse, a divulged shame
Traduc'd by odious ballads: my maidens name
Seard otherwise, no worse of worst extended
With vilest torture, let my life be ended.

Kin. Me thinks in thee some blessed spirit doth speak
His powerfull sound, wherein an organ weak:
And what impossibility would slay

In common sense, sence saves another way:
Thy life is dear, for all that life can rate
Worth name of life, in thee hath estimate:
Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, all
That happinesse and prime, can happy call:
Thou this to hazard, needs must intimate
Skill infinite, or monstrous desperate:
Sweet practiser, Thy Physick I will try,
That ministers thine own death if I die.

Hell. If I break time, or flinch in property
Of what I spoke, unpittied, let me die,

And well deserv'd: not helping, death's my fee,
But if I help, what doe you promise me.

Kin. Make thy demand.

Hell. But will you make it even?

Kin. I by my Scepter, and my hopes of help.

Hell. Then shalt thou give me with thy kingly hand,
What husband in thy power I will command:
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To choose from forth the royall blood of France,
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy state:
But such a one thy vassall, whom I know
Is free for me to aske, thee to bestow.

Kin. Here is my hand; the premises observ'd,
Thy will by my performance shall be serv'd:
So make the choyce of thine own time, for I
Thy resolv'd Patient, on thee still relie:
More should I question thee, and more I must,
Though more to know, could not be more to trust:
From whence thou cam'st, how tended on, but rest
Unquestion'd welcome, and undoubted blest.
Give me some help here ho, if thou proceed,
As high as word, my deed shall match thy deed.

Exeunt.

Enter Countesse, and Clown.

Lady. Come on, sir, I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clown. I will shew my self highly fed, and lowly taught, I know my businesse is but to the Court.

Lady. To the Court, why what place make you speciall, when you put off that with such contempt, but to the Court?

Clow. Truly, Madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at Court: he that cannot make a legge; put off's cap, kisse his hand, and say nothing, has neither legges, hands, lip, nor cap; and indeed such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the Court, but for me, I have an answer will serve all men.

Lady. Marry that's a bountifull answer that fits all questions.

Clow. It is like a Barbers Chair, that fits all buttocks, the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the biawn-buttock, or any buttock.

Lady. Will your answer serve fit to all questions?

Clow. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an Attourney, as your French Crown for your Taffaty Punk, as Tibs
Rush for Tom's fore-finger, as a Pancake for Shrovetuesday, a Morris for May day, as the naile to his hok, the Cuckold to his Horn, as a scolding Quean to a rang-ling Knave, as the Nuns lip to the Friar's mouth, nay, as the Pudding to his skin.

Lady. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitnessse for all questions?

Clow. From below your Duke, to beneath your Constable, it will fit any question.

Lady. It must be an answer of most monstrous size, that must fit all demands.

Clow. But a trifle neither in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it: here it is, and all that belongs to't. Aske me if I am a Courtier, it shall doe you no harm to learn.

Lady. To be young again if we could: I will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer.

Lady.

I pray you sir, are you a Courtier?

Clo. O Lord sir there's a simple putting off: more, more, a hundred of them.

La. Sir I am a poor friend of yours; that loves you.

Clo. O Lord sir, thick, thick, spare not me.

La. I think sir, you can eat none of this homely meat.

Clo. O Lord sir; nay put me too't, I warrant you

La. You were lately whipt, sir, as I think.

Clo. O Lord, sir, spare not me.

La. Do you cry, O Lord sir, at your whipping, and spare not me? Indeed your, O Lord sir, is very sequest to your whipping: you would answer very well to a whip-pink if you were but bound too't.

Clo. I ne're had worse luck in my life in my, O Lord sir: I see things may serve long, but not serve ever.

La. I play the noble huswife with the time, to entertain it so merrily with a fool.

Clo. O Lord sir, why there't serves well agen.

La. And end; sir to your businesse: give Hellen this, And urge her to a present answer back, Commend me to my kinsmen, and my son, This is not much.

Clo. Not much commendation to them.

La. Not much employment for you, you understand me.

Clo. Most fruitfully, I am there, before my legs.

La. Hast you agen. Exeunt.

Enter Count, Lafew, and Parolles.

Ol. Laf. They say miracles are past, and we have our Philosophicall person, to make moderne and familiar things supernaturall and causelesse. Hence is it, that we make trifles of terrors, enconfering our selves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit our selves to an unknown fear.

Par. Why 'tis the rarest argument of wonder, that hath shot out in our latter times.

Ref. And so 'tis.

Ol. Laf. To be relinquish'd of the Artists.

Par. So I say both of Galen and Paracelsus.

Ol. Laf. Of all the learned and authentick fellows.

Par. Right, so I say.

Ol. Laf. That gave him out incurable.

Par. Why there 'tis, so say I too.

Ol. Laf. Not to be help'd.

Par. Right, as 'twere a man assur'd of a-----

Ol. Laf. Uncertain life, and sure death.

Par. Just you say well: so would I have said.

Ol. Laf. I may truly say, it is a novelty to the world.

Par. It is indeed if you will have it in the shewing, you shall read it in what do ye call there.

Ol. Laf. A shewing of a heavenly effect in an earthly Actor.

Par. That's it, I would have said, the very same.

Ol. Laf. Why your Dolphin is not lustier: for me I speak in respect-----

Par. Nay 'tis strange; 'tis very strange, that is the brief and the tedious of it, and he's of a most facinorous spirit, that will not acknowledge it to be the-----

Ol. Laf. Very hand of heaven.

Par. I, so I say.

Ol. Laf. In a most weak-----

Par. And debile minister great power; great transcendence, which should indeed give us a further use to be made, then onely the recovery of the King, as to be----

Ol. Laf. Generally thankfull.

Enter King, Helen, and attendants.

Par. I would have said it, you said well: here comes the King.

Ol. Laf. Lustick, as the Dutchman sayes: I'll like a maid the better while I have a tooth in my head: why he's able to lead her to a Carranto.

Par. Mor du vinager, is not this Helen?

Ol. Laf. Fore God I think so.

King. Go call before me all the Lords in Court, Sir, my preserver, by thy patients side, And with this healthfull hand whose banish'd sence Thou hast repeal'd, a second time receive The confirmation of my promis'd gift, Which but attends thy naming.

Enter three or four Lords.

Fair Maid, send forth thine eye, this youthfull parcell Of Noble Bachelors, stand at my bestowing, Ore whom both Sovereigne power, and fathers voice I have to use; thy frank election make, Thou hast power to choose, and they none to forsake.

Hel. To each of you, one fair and vertuous Mistis; Fall when love please: marry to each, but one.

Ol. Laf. I'de give bay curral, and his furniture, My mouth no more were broken then these boyes, And writ as little beard.

King. Peruse them well: Not one of those, but had a Noble father.

She addresses her to a Lord.

Hel. Gentlemen, heaven hath through me, restor'd the King to health.

All. We understand it, and thank heaven for you.

Hel. I am a simple Maid, and therein wealthiest, That I protest; I simply am a maid: Please it your Majesty, I have done already: The blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me.

King. We blush that thou shouldst choose, but be refused; Let not white death sit on thy cheeks for ever, We'll ne're come there again. Make choice and see;

Who shuns thy love, shuns all his love in me.

Hel. Now Dian from thy Altar do I fly, And to impartiall Jove, that God most high Do my sighes stream: Sir, will you hear my suit?

1. Lo. And grant it.

Hel. Thanks sir, all the rest is mute.

Ol. Laf. I had rather be in this choice, then throw A deaus-ace for my life.

Hel. The honour sir; that flames in your fair eyes, Before I speak too threateningly replies: Love make your fortunes, twenty times above Her that so wishes, and her humble love.

2. Lo. No better if you please.

Hel. My wish receive, Which great Jove grant, and so I take my leave.

Ol. Laf. Do all they deny her? And they were sons of mine, I'de have them whip'd, or I would send them to'th Turk to make Eunuches of.

Hel. Be not afraid that I your hand should take, I'll never do you wrong for your own sake: Blessing upon your voves, and in your bed Finde faire fortune, if you ere wed.

Ol. Laf. These boyes are boyes of Ice, they'll none have have her: sure they are bastards to the English, the French ne're got em.

Hel. You are too young, too happy, and too good
To make your son out of my blood.

4. Lord. Fair one, I think not so,

Ol. Lord. There's one grape yet, I am sure my father drunk wine. But if thou be'st not an asse, I am a youth of fourteen: I have known thee already.

Hel. I dare not say I take, but I give Me and my service, ever whil'ft I live
Into your guiding power: This is the man.

King. Why then young Bertram take her, she's thy wife.

Ber. My wife my Liege? I shall beseech your highness,
In such a business, give me leave to use
The help of mine own eyes.

Kin. Know'st thou not, Bertram, what she hat's done
for me?

Ber. Yes my good Lord, but never hope to know why
I should marry her.

King. Thou know'st she has rais'd me from my sickly bed.

Ber. But follows it my Lord, to bring me down
Must answer for your raising? I know her well:
She had her breeding at my fathers charge:
A poor Physicians daughter my wife? Disdain
Rather corrupt me ever.

King. 'Tis onely Title thou disdainst in her, the which I can build up: strange is it that our bloods
Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,
Would quite confound distinction: yet stands off
In differences of mightie. If she be
All that is virtuous (save what thou dislik'st)
A poor Physician's daughter, thou dislik'st
Of Virtue for the name: but do not so:
From lowest place, whence virtuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by th' doer's deed.
Where great addition swells, and virtue none,
It is a dropstied honour, Good alone,
Is good without a name? Vileness is so:
The property by what it is, should go,
Not by the title. She is young, wife, fair,
In these, to Nature she's immediate heir:
And these breed honour: that is honours scorn,
Which challenges it self as honours born,
And is not like the fire: Honours best thrive,
When rather from our acts we them derive
Then our fore-goers: the meer word's a slave
Debosht'd on every tombe, on every grave:
A lying Trophée, and as oft is dumb,
Where dust, and damn'd oblivion is the Tomb.
Of honour'd bones indeed, what should be said?
If thou canst like this creature, as a maid,
I can create the rest: Virtue, and she
Is her own dowre: Honour and wealth, from me.

Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to doo't.

King. Thou wrong'st thy self, if thou should'st strive to choofe.

Hel. That you are well restor'd my Lord, I'me glad:
Let the rest go.

King. My Honor's at the stake, which to defeat
I must produce my power. Here, take her hand,
Proud scornfull boy, unworthy this good gift,
That dost in vile misprision shackle up
My love, and her desert: that can'st not dream,
We poizing us in her defective scale,

Shall weigh thee to the beam: That wilt not know,
It is in Us to plant thine Honour, where
We please to have it grow. Check thy contempt:
Obey Our will, which travells in thy good:

Believe not thy disdain, but presently
Do thine own fortunes that obedient right
Which both thy duty owes, and our power claims.
Or I will throw thee from my cares for ever
Into the staggers and carelessse lapse
Of youth and ignorance: both my revenge and hate
Looking upon thee, in the name of justice,
Without all terms of pitty. Speak thine answer.

Ber. Pardon my gracious Lord: for I submit
My fancie to your eyes, when I consider
What great creation, and what dole of honour
Flies where you bid it: I finde that she which late
Was in my nobler thoughts, most base: is now
The praised of the King, who so ennobled,
Is as 'twere born so.

King. Take her by the hand.
And tell her she is thine: to whom I promise
A counterpoize: If not in thy estate,
A ballance more repleat.

Ber. I take her hand.

Kin. Good fortune, and the favour of the King
Smile upon the contract: whose Ceremony
Shall seem expedient on the now born brief,
And be perform'd to night: the solemne Feast
Shall more attend upon the coming space,
Expecting absent friends. As thou lov'st her,
Thy lov's to me Religious: else, do's erre.

Exeunt.

Parolles and Lafew stay behind, commenting of this wedding.

Laf. Doe you hear Monsieur? a word with you.

Par. Your pleasure sir.

Laf. Your Lord and Master did well to make his re-cantation.

Par. Recantation? my Lord? my Master?

Laf. I, is it not a Language I speak?

Par. A most haish one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My Master?

Laf. Are you companion to the Count Rossillion?

Par. To any Count, to all Counts: to what is man.

Laf. To what is Counts man: Counts master is of another stile.

Par. You are too old sir: Let it satisfie you, you are too old.

Laf. I must tell thee sirrah, I write Man: to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well doe, I dare not doe.

Laf. I did think thee for two ordinaries to be a pretty wise fellow. If thou didst make tollerable vent of thy travel, it might passe: yet the scarfes and the banners about thee, did manifoldly dissuade me from believing thee a vessell of too great a burthen. I have now found thee, when I lose thee again, I care not: yet art thou good for nothing but taking up, and that thou're scarce worth.

Par. Hadst thou not the priviledge of Antiquity upon thee.

Laf. Doe not plunge thy self too far in anger, least thou hasten thy triall: which is, Lord have mercy on thee for a hen; so my good window of Lattice, fare thee well, thy casement I need not open, I look through thee.
Give me thy hand.

Par. My Lord, you give me most egregious indignity.

Laf.

Laf. I, withall my heart, and thou art worthy of it.

Par. I have not my Lord deserv'd it.

Laf. Yes, good faith, ev'ry dram of it, and I will not bate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser.

Laf. Ev'n as soon as thou can'st, for thou hast to pull at a smack a'th contrary. If ever thou bee'st bound in thy skarfe and beaten, thou shalt finde what it is to be proud of thy bondage, I have a desire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say in the default, he is a man I know.

Par. My Lord you do me most insupportable vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell pains for thy sake, and my poor doing eternall: for doing I am past, as I will by thee, in what motion age will give me leave. Exit.

Par. Well, thou hast a son shall take this disgrace off me; scurvy, old, filthy, scurvy Lord: Well, I must be patient, there is no fettering of authority. I'll beat him (by my life) if I can meet him with any convenience, and he were double and double a Lord. I'll have no more pittie of his age then I would have of-----I'll beat him, and if I could but meet him agen.

Enter Lafew.

Laf. Sirra, your Lord and Master's married, there's news for you: you have a new Mistress.

Par. I most unfainedly beseech your Lordship to make some reservation of your wrongs. He is my good Lord, whom I serve above is my Master.

Laf. Who? God.

Par. I sir.

Laf. The devill it is, that's thy master. Why doeest thou garter up thy armes a this fashion? Dost make hose of thy sleeves? Do other servants so? Thou wert best set thy lower part where thy nose stands. By mine Honour, if I were but two houres younger, I'de beat thee: methink'ft thou art a generall offence, and every man should beat thee: I think thou wast created for men to breath themselves upon thee.

Par. This is hard and undeserved measure my Lord.

Laf. Go to sir, you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernell out of a Pomgranat, you are a vagabond, and no true traveller: you are more sawcie with Lords and honorable personages, then the commission of your birth and vertue gives you Heraldry. You are not worth another word, else I'de call you knave. I leave you. Exit.

Enter Count Rossillion.

Par. Good, very good, it is so then: good, very good, let it be conceal'd a while.

Ros. Undone, and forfeited to carts for ever.

Par. What's the matter sweet-heart?

Ros. Although before the solemn Priest I have sworn, I will not bed her.

Par. What? what sweet heart?

Ros. O my Parrolles, they have married me: I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits, The tread of a mans foot: too'th wars.

Ros. There's letters from my mother: What th'import is, I know not yet.

Par. I that would be known: too'th wars my boy, too'th wars:

He wears his honour in a box unseen,
That hugs his kicksie wicksie here at home,
Spending his manly marrow in her armes
Which should sustain the bound and high curves
Of Mars's fiery steed: to other Regions,
France is a stable, we that dwell in't Jades,
Therefore to th' warre;

Ros. It shall be so, I'll send her to my house,
Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled: Write to the King
That which I durst not speak. His present gift
Shall furnish me to those Italian fields
Where noble fellows strike: War is no strife
To the dark house, and the detested wife.

Par. Will this Caprichio hold in thee, art sure?

Ros. Go with me to my chamber, and advise me.
I'll send her straight away: To morrow
I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow.

Par. Why these balls bound, there's noise in it. 'Tis hard
A young man married, is a man that's mar'd:
Therefore away, and leave her bravely: go,
The King ha's done you wrong: but hush 'tis so. Exit.

Enter Helena and Clown.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly, is she well?

Cl. She is not well, but yet she ha's her health, she's very merry, but yet she is not well: but thanks be given she's very well, and want's nothing i'th world; but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be very well, what do's she ayle, that she's not very well?

Cl. Truly she's very well indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Cl. One that she is not in heaven, whither God send her quickly: the other that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly.

Enter Parolles.

Par. Bless you my fortunate Ladie,

Hel. I hope sir I have your good will to have mine own good fortune.

Par. You had my prayers to lead them on, and to keep them on, have them still. O my knave, how do's my old Lady?

Cl. So that you had her wrinkles and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why I say nothing.

Cl. Marry you are the wiser man: for many a mans tongue shakes out his masters undoing: to say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title, which is within a very little of nothing.

Par. Away, th'art a knave.

Cl. You should have said sir before a knave, th'art a knave, that's before th'art a knave: this had been truth sir.

Par. Go to, thou art a witty foole, I have found thee.

Cl. Did you finde me in your self sir, or were you taught to finde me.

Cl. The search sir was profitable, and much Fool may you finde in you, even to the worlds pleasure, and the increase of laughter.

Par. A good knave ifaith, and well fed.
Madam, my Lord will go away to night,

A very serious business calls on him :
The great prerogative and rite of love,
Which as your due time claims, he do's acknowledge,
But puts it off by a compell'd restraint :
Whose want, and whose delay, is strew'd with sweets
Which they distill now in the curbed time,
To make the coming hour o'reflow with joy,
And pleasure drown the brim.

Hel. What's his will else ?

Par. That you will take your instant leave a'th king,
And make this hast as your own good proceeding
Strengthened with what Apologie you think
May make it probable need.

Hel. What more commands he ?

Par. That having this obtain'd, you presently
Attend his further pleasure.

Hel. In every thing I wait upon his will.

Par. I shall report it so.

Hel. I pray you come, sirrah.

Exit Par.

Exit.

Enter Lafew and Bertram.

Laf. But I hope your Lordship thinks not him a souldier.

Ber. Yes my Lord, and of very valiant approuse.

Laf. You have it from his own deliverance.

Ber. And by other warranted testimony.

Laf. Then my Diall goes not true, I took this Larke for a bunting.

Ber. I doe assure you my Lord, he is very great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.

Laf. I have then sinn'd against his experience, and transgressed against his valour, and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot find in my heart to repent : Here he comes, I pray you make us friends, I will pursue the amity.

Enter Parolles.

Par. These things shall be done sir.

Laf. Pray you sir who's his Tailor ?

Par. Sir ?

Laf. O I know him well, I sir, he sir's a good workman, a very good Tailor.

Ber. Is she gone to the king ?

Par. She is.

Ber. Will she away to night ?

Par. As you'll have her.

Ber. I have writ my letters, casketed my treasure,
Given order for our horse, and to night,
When I should take possession of the Bride,
And ere I do begin.

Laf. A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner, but on that lies three thirds, and uses a known truth to passe a thousand nothings with, should be once heard, and thrice beaten. God save you Captain.

Ber. Is there any unkindnesse between my Lord and you Monsieur ?

Par. I know not how I have deserved to run into my Lords displeasure.

Laf. You have made shift to run into't, boots and spurres and all: like him that leaps into the Custard, and out of it you'll run again, rather then suffer question for your residence.

Ber. It may be you have mistaken him my Lord.

Laf. And shall doe so ever, though I took him at's prayers. Fare you well my Lord, and believe this of me, there can be no kernell in this light Nut : the soul of this man is his cloathes : Trust him not in matter of heavy consequence : I have kept of them tunic, and know their natures. Farewell Monsieur, I have spoken better of you, then you have or will deserve at my hands, but we must doe good against evill.

Par. An idle Lord, I swear.

Ber. I think so.

Par. Why doe you not know him ?

Ber. Yes, I doe know him well, and common speech
Gives him a worthy passe. Here comes my clog.

Enter Helena.

Hel. I have sir as I was commanded from you
Spoke with the King, and have procur'd his leave
For present parting, onely he desires
Some private speech with you.

Ber. I shall obey his will.

You must not marvell Helena at my course,
Which holds not colour with the time, nor does
The ministration, and required office
On my particular. Prepar'd I was not
For such a business, therefore am I found

So much unsettled : This drives me to entreat you,
That presently you take your way for home,
And rather muse then aske why I intreat you,
For my respects are better then they seem,
And my appointments have in them a need
Greater then shewes it self at the first view,
To you that know them not. This to my mother,
'Twill be two dayes ere I shall see you, so
I leave you to your wisdom.

Hel. Sir, I can nothing say,
But that I am your most obedient servant.

Ber. Come, come, no more of that.

Hel. And ever shall
With true observance seek to ecke out that Wherein toward me my homely starres have fail'd
To equall my great fortune.

Ber. Let that go : my haste is very great. Farewell :
Hie home.

Hel. Pray sir your pardon.

Ber. Well, what would you say ?

Hel. I am not worthy of the wealth I owe,
Nor dare I say 'tis mine : and yet it is,
But like a timorous thief, most fain would steal
What law do's vouch mine own.

Ber. What would you have ?

Hel. Something, and scarce so much : nothing indeed,
I would not tell you what I would my Lord : Faith yes,
Strangers and foes doe sunder, and not kisse.

Ber. I pray you stay not, but in haste to horse,

Hel. I shall not break your bidding, good my Lord :
Where are my other men ? Monsieur, farewell. Exit.

Ber. Go thou toward home, where I will never come,
Whil't I can shake my sword, or hear the drumme :
Away, and for our flight.

Par. Bravely, Coragio.

Actus Tertius.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, the two Frenchmen, with a troop of Souldiers.

Duke. So that from point to point, now have you heard
The

The fundamentall reasons of this warre,
Whose great decision hath much blood let forth,
And more thirsts after.

1. Lord. Holy seems the quarrell
Upon your Graces part : black and fearfull
On the opposer.

Duk. Therefore we marvell much our Cousin France
Would in so just a businesse, shut his bosome
Against our borrowing prayers.

French E. Good my Lord,
The reasons of our state I cannot yield,
But like a common and an outward man,
That the great figure of a Council frames,
By self unable motion, therefore dare not Say what I think of it, since I have found
My self in my incertain grounds to fail
As often as I guest.

Du. Be it his pleasure.

Fre. G. But I am sure the younger of our nature,
That surfet on their ease, will day by day
Come here for Physick.

Du. Welcome shall they be :
And all the honours that can flye from us,
Shall on them settle : you know your places well,
When better fall, for your availes they fell.
To morrow to the field.

Enter Countesse and Clown.

Count. It hath happen'd, as I would have had it, save that he comes not along with her.

Clow. By my troth I take my young Lord to be a very melancholly man.

Con. By what observance I pray you ?

Clow. Why he will look upon his boot, and sing : mend the Ruffe, and sing : aske questions, and sing : pick his teeth, and sing : I know a man that had this trick of me-lancholly sold a goodly Mannor for a long.

Lad. Let me see what he writes, and when he meanes to come.

Clow. I have no mind to Isbell since I was at Court.
Our old Ling, and our Isbels a'th Countrey, are nothing like your old Ling and your Isbels a'th Court : the brains of my Cupid's knock'd out, and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

Lad. What have we here ?

Clow. In that you have there.

Exit.

A Letter.

*I have sent you a daughter-in-Law : she hath recovered the King, and undone me : I have wedded her, Not bedded her, and sworn to make the Not eternall. You shall hear I am run away ; know it before the report come.
If there be breadth enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you.*

Your unfortunate Son, Bertram.

This is not well (rash and unbridled boy,)
To flye the favours of so good a King,
To pluck his indignation on thy head,
By the misprising of a Maid too virtuous
For the contempt of Empire.

Enter Clown.

Clow. O Madam, yonder is heavy newes within between two souldiers, and my young Lady.

La. What is the matter ?

Clow. Nay there is some comfort in the newes, some comfort, your son will not be kill'd so soon as I thought he would.

La. Why should he be kill'd ?

Clow. So say I, Madam, if he run a way ; as I hear he does ; the danger is in standing to't ; that's the losse of men, though it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more. For my part, I onely hear your son was run away.

Enter Hellen and two Gentlemen.

French E. Save you, good Madam ;

Hel. Madam, my Lord is gone, for ever gone.

French G. Doe not say so.

La. Think upon patience ; pray you Gentlemen,
I have felt so many quiiks of joy and grief,
That the first face of neither on the start
Can woman me unto't. Where is my son, I pray you ?

French G. Madam, he's gone to serve the Duke of Florence.

We met him thitherward, for thence we came :
And after some dispatch in hand at Court,
Thither we bend again.

Hel. Look on his Letter, Madam, here's my Passport.

When thou canst get the Ring upon my finger, which never shall come off and shew me a child begotten of chy body, that I am father to, then call me husband : but in [such a] Then [I write a] Never.]

This is a dreadfull sentence.

La. Brought you th's Letter, Gentlemen ?

1. G. I, Madam, and for the Contents sake are sorry for our paines.

Old. La. I prethee, Lady, have a better cheer,
If thou engross'st, all the griefs are thine,
Thou robb'st me of a moiety : He was my son,
But I doe wash his name out of my blood,
And thou art all my childe. Towards Florence is he ?

French G. I, Madam.

La. And to be a soldier !

French G. Such is his noble purpose, and believ'e
The Duke will lay upon him all the honour
That good convenience claimes.

La. Return you thither ?

French E. I, Madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.

Hel. Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France,
'Tis better.

1. a. Finde you that there ?

Hel. I, Madam.

French E. 'Tis but the boldnesse of his hand happily, which his heart was not consenting to.

La. Nothing in France untill he have no wife :
There's nothing here that is too good for him
But onely she, and she deserves a Lord
That twenty such rude boyes might tend upon,
And call her hourly Mistresse. Who was with him ?

French E. A servant onely, and a Gentleman : which I have some times known.

La. Parolles, was it not ?

French E. I, my good Lady, he.

La. A very tainted fellow, and full of wickednesse,
My Son corrupts a well derived nature
With his inducement.

French E. Indeed, good Lady, the fellow has a deal of that, too much ; which holds him much to have.

La. Y're welcome, Gentlemen, I will entreat you when you see my son, to tell him that his sword can never winne the honour that he looses : more I'll entreat

you

you written to bear along.

Fren. G. We serve you, Madam, in that, and all your worthiest affaires.

La. Not so, but as we change our courtesies, Will you draw near?

Hel. Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.

Nothing in France untill he has no wife:

Thou shalt have none Rossillion, none in France,

Then hast thou all again: poor Lord, is't I

That chase thee from thy Countrey, and expose

Those tender limbes of thine, to the event

Of the none sparing warre? And is it I,

That drive thee from the sportive Court, where thou

Wast shot at with fair eyes, to be the marke

Of smoaky Muskets? O you leaden messengers,

That ride upon the violent speed of fire;

Fly with false aime, move the still-piercing aire

That stings with piercing, doe not touch my Lord:

Who ever shoots at him, I set him there.

Who ever charges on his forward brest,

I am the Caitiffe that doe hold him to it,

And though I kill him not, I am the cause

His death was so affected. Better 'twere

I met the ravine Lyon when he roat'd

With sharpe constraint of hunger: better 'twere,

That all the miseries which nature owes

Were mine at once. No, come thou home, Rossillion,

Whence honour but of danger winnes a scarre,

As oft it looses all. I will be gone:

My being here it is, that holds thee hence,

Shall I stay here to do't? No, no, although

The aire of Paradise did fan the house,

And Angels offic'd all: I will be gone,

That pittifull rumour may report my flight

To console thine ear. Come night, end day,

For with the darke (poor thief) I'll steal away. Exit.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, Rossillion, Drumme and Trumpets, Soldiers, Parolles.

Duke. The Generall of our Horse thou art, and we Great in our hope, lay our best love and credence
Upon thy promising fortune.

Ross. Sir, it is

A charge too heavy for my strength, but We'll strive to bear it for your worthy sake,
To th'extreme edge of hazard.

Du. Then go thou forth,

And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm
As thy auspicious mistress.

Ross. This very day,

Great Mars, I put my self into thy file,
Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prove
A lover of thy Drumme; hater of love. Exeunt omnes.

Enter Countesse and Steward.

La. Alas! and would you take the letter of her:
Might you not know she would doe, as she has done,
By sending me a Letter. Read it agen.

Letter.

*I am S. Jaques Pilgrim, thither gone:
Ambitious love hath so in me offended,
That bare foot plod I the cold ground upon
With sainted vow my faults to have amended.*

*Write, write, that from the course of warre,
My dearest Master, your dear son, may hie,
Blesse him at home in peace, whilst I from farre,
His name with zealous fervour sanctifie:
His taken labours bid him me forgive:
I his despightfull Juno sent him forth,
From Courtly friends, with camping foes to live,
Where death and danger dogs the heels of worth.
He is too good and fair for death, and me,
Whom I my self embrace, to set him free.*

Ah what sharp stings are in her mildest words?

Rynaldo, you did never lack advice so much,

As letting her passe so: had I spoke with her,

I could have well diverted her intents,

Which thus she hath prevented.

Ste. Pardon me, Madam,

If I had given you this at over-night,

She might have been o'retane: and yet she writes

Pursuit would be but vain.

La. What Angel shall

Blesse this unworthy husband, he cannot thrive,

Unlesse her prayers, whom heaven delights to hear,

And loves to grant, reprieve him from the wrath

Of greatest Justice. Write, write, Rynaldo,

To this unworthy husband of his wife,

Let every word weigh heavy of her worth,

That he does weigh too light: my greatest grief,

Though little he doe feel it, set down sharply.

Dispatch the most convenient messenger,

When haply he shall hear that she is gone,

He will return, and hope I may that she

Hearing so much will speed her foot again,

Led hither by pure love: which of them both

Is dearest to me, I have no skill in sence

To make distinction: provide this Messenger:

My heart is heavy, and mine age is weak,

Grief would have teares, and sorrow bids me speak.

Exeunt.

A Tucket afarre off.

Enter an old Widow of Florence, her daughter, Violenta and Mariana, with other Citizens.

Widow. Nay come,

For if they doe approach the City,

We shall loose all the fight.

Dia. They say, the French Count has done
Most honourable service.

Wid. It is reported,

That he has taken their great'st Commander,

And that with his own hand he slew

The Dukes brother: we have lost our labour,

They are gone a contrary way: harke,

You may know by their Trumpets.

Maria. Come let's return again,

And suffice our selves with the report of it.

Well Diana, take heed of this French Earle,

The honour of a Maid is in her name,

And no Legacy is so rich

As honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour

How you have been solicited by a Gentleman

His Companion.

Maria

Maria. I know that knave, hang him, one Parrolles, a filthy Officer he is in those suggestions for the young Earle: beware of them Diana; their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all the engines of lust, are not the things they go under: many a maid hath been seduced by them, & the misery is example, that so terrible shewes in the wrack of maiden-hood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed with the twigs that threatens them. I hope I need not to advise you further, but I hope your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known, but the modesty which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not need to fear me,

Enter Hellen.

Wid. I hope so: look here comes a Pilgrim; I know she will lie at my house, thither they send one another; I'll question her. God save you Pilgrim, whether are you bound?

Hel. To S. Jaques le grand.

Where doe the Palmers lodge, I doe beseech you?

Wid. At the S. Francis here beside the Port.

Hel. Is this the way? A march afaire.

Wid. I marry is't. Harke you, they come this way:

If you will tarry, holy Pilgrim,
But till the troops come by,
I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd,
The rather for I think I know your hostesse
As ample as my self?

Hel. Is it your self?

Wid. If you shall please so Pilgrim.

Hel. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Wid. You came I think from France?

Hel. I did so.

Wid. Here you shall see a Countiman of yours
That has done worthy service.

Hel. His name I pray you?

Dia. The Count Rossillion: know you such a one?

Hel. But by the care that hears most nobly of him.
His face I know not.

Dia. Whatsomere he is,
He's bravely taken here. He stole from France
As 'tis reported: for the King had married him Against his liking. Think you it is so?

Hel. I surely, meer the truth, I know his Lady.

Dia. There is a Gentleman that serves the Count,
Reports but couresly of her.

Hel. What's his name?

Dia. Monsieur Parrolles.

Hel. Oh, I believe with him,
In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great Count himself, she is too mean
To have her name repeated, all her deserving
Is a reserved honesty, and that I have not heard examin'd.

Dia. Alas poor Lady.

'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife
Of a detesting Lord.

Wid. I right good creature, wherefoe're she is,
Her heart weighs sadly: this young maid might doe her
A shrewd turn if she pleas'd.

Hel. How doe you mean?

May be, the amorous Count solicits her
In the unlawfull purpose.

Wid. He does indeed,
And brokes with all that can in such a suit,

Corrupt the tender honour of a Maid:
But she is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard
In honestest defence.

Drumme and Colours.

Enter Count Rossillion, Parrolles, and the whole Army.

Ma. The gods forbid else.

Wid. So, now they come:

That is Antonio the Dukes eldest son,

That Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dia. He,

That with the plume, 'tis a most gallant fellow,
I would he lov'd his wife: if he were honest
He were much goodlier. Is't not a handsome Gentleman?

Hel. I like him well.

Dia. 'Tis pittie he is not honest: yonds that same knave
That leads him to these places: were I his Lady,
I would poyson that vile Rascall.

Hel. Which is he?

Dia. That Jack-an-apes with scarfes. Why is he melancholly?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i'th battell.

Par. Loose our drumme? Well.

Mar. He's shrewdly vext at something. Look he has spied us.

Wid. Marry hang you.

Mar. And your curtesie, for a ring-carrier. Exit.

Wid. The troop is past: Come Pilgrim, I will bring You, where you shall host: Of injoynd penitents
There's four or five, to great S. Jaques bound,
Already at my house.

Hel. I humbly thank you:

Please it this Matron, and this gentle Maid
To eat with us to night, the charge and thanking
Shall be for me, and to requite you further,
I will bestow some precepts on this virgin,
Worthy the note.

Both. We'll take your offer kindly.

Exeunt.

Enter Count Rossillion and the Frenchmen, as at first.

Cap. E. Nay good my Lord put him to't: let him have his way.

Cap. G. If your Lordship find him not a Hilding, hold me no more in your respect.

Cap. E. On my life, my Lord, a bubble.

Ber. Doe you think I am so farre
Deceived in him?

Cap. E. Believe it, my Lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speak of him as my Kinsman, he's a most notable Coward, an infinite and endlesse Liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality, worthy your Lordships entertainment.

Cap. G. It were fit you knew him, least reposing too farre in his virtue which he hath not, he might at some great and trusty businesse, in a main danger, fail you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

Cap. G. None better then to let him fetch off his drumme, which you hear him so confidently undertake to doe.

Cap. E. I with a troop of Florentines will suddenly surprize

Prize him ; such I will have whom I am sure he knowes not from the enemy : we will binde and hood-wink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the Leager of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents : be but your Lordship present at his examination, if he doe not for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you, and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the divine forfeit upon his soul upon oath, never trust my judgement in any thing.

Cap. G. O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drumme, he sayes he has a stratagem for't : when your Lordship sees the bottom of this successe in't, and to what mettle this counterfeit lump of ours will be melted, if you give him not John Drumm's entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed. Here he comes.

Enter Parolles.

Cap. E. O, for the love of laughter, hinder not the honour of his design, let him fetch off his drumme in any hand.

Ber. How now Monsieur ? This drumme sticks sorely in your disposition.

Cap. G. A pox on't, let it go, 'tis but a drumme.

Par. But a drumme ! Is't but a drumme ? A drumme so lost. There was excellent command, to charge in with our horse upon our own wings, and to rend our own souldiers.

Cap. G. That was not to be blam'd in the command of the service, it was a disaster of warre, that Caspar himself could not have prevented, if he had been there to command.

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our successe : some dishonour we had in the losse of that drumme, but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might have been recovered.

Ber. It might, but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered, but that the merit of service is seldome attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drumme or another, or hic jacet.

Ber. Why, if you have stomach to't, Monsieur : if you think your mystery in stratagem can bring this instrument of honour again into his native quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprize and go on, I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit : if you speed well in it, the Duke shall both speak of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatnesse, even to the utmost syllable of your worthinesse.

Par. By the hand of a souldier, I will undertake it.

Ber. But you must not now slumber in it.

Par. I'll about it this evening, and I will presently pen down my dilemmaes, encourage my self in my certainty, put my self into my mortall preparation : and by midnight look to hear further from me.

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his grace you are gone about it.

Par. I know not what the successe will be, my Lord, but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know th'art valiant, And to the possibility of thy souldier-ship, Will subscribe for thee : Farewell.

Par. I love not many words.

Cap. E. No more then a fish loves water. Is not this a strange fellow, my Lord, that so confidently seems to undertake this businesse, which he knowes is not to be done, damnes himself to doe, and dares better be damn'd then to do't.

Cap. G. You doe not know him, my Lord, as we doe, certain it is, that he will steal himself into a mans favour, and for a week escape a great deale of discoveries, but when you find him out, you have him ever after.

Ber. Why doe you think he will make no deed at all of this, that so seriously he do's addresse himself unto ?

Cap. E. None in the world, but return with an invention, and clap upon you two or three probable lies : but we have almost imboist him, you shall see his fall to night ; for indeed he is not for your Lordships respect.

Cap. G. We'll make you some sport with the Fox ere we case him. He was first smoak'd by the old Lord Lafew ; when his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall find him, which you shall see this very night.

Cap. E. I must go look my twigs, He shall be caught.

Ber. Your brother he shall go along with me.

Cap. G. As't please your Lordship, I'll leave you.

Ber. Now will I lead you to the house, and shew you The Lasse I spoke of.

Cap. E. But you say she's honest.

Ber. That's all the fault : I spoke with her but once, And found her wondrous cold, but I sent to her By this same Coxcombe that we have i'th' winde Tokens and Letters, which she did resend, And this is all I have done : She's a fair creature, Will you go see her ?

Cap. E. With all my heart, my Lord.

Exeunt.

Enter Hellen, and Widow.

Hel. If you misdoubt me that I am not she, I know not how I shall assure you further, But I shall loose the grounds I work upon.

Wid. Though my estate be faine, I was well born, Nothing acquainted with these businessees, And would not put my reputation now In any staining act.

Hel. Nor would I wish you. First give me trust, the Count he is my husband, And what to your sworn counsel I have spoken, Is so from word to word : and then you cannot By the good aide that I of you shall borrow, Erre in bestowing it.

Wid. I should believe you, For you have shew'd me that which well approves Y're great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purse of Gold, And let me buy your friendly help thus farre, Which I will over-pay, and pay again When I have found it. The Count he woos your daughter,

Layes down his wanton siege before her beauty, Resolves to carry her : let her in fine consent As we'll direct her how 'tis best to bear it : Now this important blood will naught deny, That she'll demand : a ring the County weares, That downward hath succeeded in his house From son to son, some four or five descents,

Since

Since the first father wore it. This Ring he holds
In most rich choyce : yet in his idle fire,
To buy his will, it would not seem too dear,
How e're repented after.

Wid. Now I see the bottom of your purpose.

Hel. You see it lawfull then, it is no more,
But that your daughter ere she seems as wonne,
Desires this Ring ; appoints him an encounter,
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Her self most chastly absent : after this
To marry her, I'll adde three thousand Crowns
To what is past already.

Wid. I have yielded :

Instruct my daughter how she shall persever,
That time and place with this deceit so lawfull
May prove coherent. Every night he comes
With Musicks of all sorts, and songs compos'd
To her unworthinesse : It nothing steeds us
To chide him from our eeves, for he persists
As if his life lay on't.

Hel. Why then to night
Let us assay our plot, which if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawfull deed ;
And lawfull meaning in a lawfull act,
Where both not sin, and yet a sinfull fact.
But let's about it.

Actus Quartus.

Enter one of the Frenchmen, with five or six other souldiers in ambush.

1. Lord E. He can come no other way but by this hedge corner : when you sally upon him, speak what terrible Language you will though you understand it not your selves, no matter : for we must not seem to understand him, unlesse some one among us, whom we must produce for an Interpreter.

1. Sol. Good Captain let me be th' Interpreter.

Lor. E. Art not acquainted with him ? knowes he not thy voyce ?

1. Sol. No, sir, I warrant you.

Lo. E. But what linie-woollic hast thou to speak to us again ?

1. Sol. E'n such as you speak to me.

Lo. E. He must think us some band of strangers, i'th adversaries entertainment. Now he hath a smack of all neighbouring Languages : therefore we must every one be a man of his own fancy, not to know what we speak one to another : so we seem to know, is to know straight our purpose : Chough's language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you Interpreter, you must seem very politick. But couch hoa, here he comes, to beguile two houres in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Enter Parolles.

Par. Ten a clock : Within these three houres 'twill be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done ? It must be a very plausible invention that carries it. They begin to smoak me, and disgraces have of late knock'd too often at my door : I find my tongue is too fool-hardy, but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

Lo. E. This is the first that e're thine own tongue was guilty of.

Par. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drumme, being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose ? I must give my self some hurts, and say I got them in exploit : yet slight ones will not carry it. They will say, came you off with so little ? And great ones I dare not give, wherefore what's the instance. Tongue, I must put you into a Butter-womans mouth, and buy my self another of Bajazeths Mules ; if you prattle me into these perils.

Lo. E. Is it possible he should know what he is, and be that he is.

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn, or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

Lo. E. We cannot afford you so.

Par. Or the baring of my beard, and to say it was in stratagem.

Lo. E. 'Twould not doe.

Par. Or to drown my cloathes, and say I was stript.

Lo. E. Hardly serve.

Par. Though I swore I leapt from the window of the Citadell.

Lo. E. How deep ?

Par. Thirty fadome.

Lo. E. Three great oathes would scarce make that be believed.

Pa. I would I had any drumme of the enemies, I would swear I recover'd it.

Lo. E. You shall hear one anon.

Par. A drumme now of the enemies.

Alarum within.

Lo. E. Throco movousus, cargo, cargo, cargo.

All. Cargo, cargo, villiando par corbo, cargo.

Par. O ransome, ransome,
Doe not hide mine eyes.

Inter. Baskos thromuldo beskos.

Par. I know you are the Muskos Regiment,
And I shall loose my life for want of language.
If there be here German or Dane, low Dutch,
Italian, or French, let him speak to me,
I'll discover that which shall undoe the Florentine.

Int. Baskos vauvado, I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue : Kerelybonto sir, betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen ponyards are at thy bosome.

Par. Oh.

Int. Oh pray, pray, pray,
Mancha revanacha dulce.

Lo. E. Ofceorbidulchos voliverco.

Int. The Generall is content to spare thee yet,
And hood-winkt as thou art, will lead thee on to gather from thee. Haply thou mayst inform Something to save thy life.

Par. O let me live,
And all the secrets of our camp I'll shew,
Their force, their purposes : Nay, I'll speak that,
Which you will wonder at.

Int. But wilt thou faithfully ?

Par. If I doe not, damn me.

Int. Acordo linta.

Come on, thou art granted space.

A short Alarum within.

X 3

Exit.

Lo. E.

L. E. Go tell the Count Rossillion and my brother,
We have caught the Woodcock, and will keep him muf-
Till we doe hear from them. (feld

Sol. Captain I will.

L. E. A will betray us all unto our selves,
Inform on that.

Sol. So I will fir.

L. E. Till then I'll keep him dark and safely lockt.

Exit.

Enter Bertram, and the Maid called Diana.

Ber. They told me that your name was Fontibell.

Dia. No my good Lord, Diana.

Ber. Titled Goddesse,

And worth it with addition : but fair soul,
In your fine frame hath love no quality ?
If the quick fire of youth light not your minde,
You are no Maiden but a monument :
When you are dead you shall be such a one
As you are now, for you are cold and stern :
And now you should be as your Mocher was
When your sweet self was got.

Dia. She then was honest.

Ber. So should you be.

Dia. No.

My Mother did but duty, such (my Lord)
As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more a'that :

I prethee doe not strive against my vowes :
I was compell'd to her, but I love thee
By loves own sweet constraint, and will for ever
Doe thee all rights of service.

Dia. I so you serve us

Till we serve you : But when you have our Roses,
You barely leave our Thorns to prick our selves,
And mock us with our barenesse.

Ber. How have I sworn.

Dia. 'Tis not the many oathes that make the truth,
But the plain single vow, that is vow'd true :
What is not holy, that we swear not by,
But take the high'st to witnesse : then pray you tell me,
If I should swear by Joves great attribute,
I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oathes,
When I did love you ill ? This has no holding
To swear by him whom I protest to love
That I will work against him. Therefore your oathes
Are words and poor conditions, but unseal'd
At least in my opinion.

Ber. Change it, change it :

Be not so holy cruell : Love is holy,
And my integrity ne're knew the crafts
That you doe charge men with : Stand no more off,
But give thy self unto my sick desires,
Who then recovers, Say thou art mine, and ever
My love, as it begins, shall so persever.

Dia. I see that men make ropes in such a scarre,
That we'll forsake our selves. Give me that Ring.

Ber. I'll lend it thee my dear, but have no power
To give it from me.

Dia. Will you not, my Lord ?

Ber. It is an honour longing to our house,
Bequeathed down from many Ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquy i'th world,
In me to loose.

Dia. Mine Honour's such a Ring,
My Chastitie's the Jewell of our house,

Bequeathed down from many Ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquy i'th world,
In me to loose. Thus your own proper wisedome
Brings in the Champion honour on my part,
Against your vain assault.

Ber. Here, take my Ring,
Hy house, my honour, yea my llfe be thine,
And I'll be bid by thee.

Dia. When midnight comes, knock at my chamber window :

I'll order take, my mother shall not hear.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth,
When you have conquer'd my yet maiden-bed,
Remain there but an houre, nor speak to me :
My reasons are most strong, and you shall know them,
When back again this Ring shall be deliver'd :
And on your finger in the night, I'll put Another Ring, that which in time proceeds,
May token to the future, our past deeds.
Adieu till then, then fail not : you have wonne
A wife of me, though there my hope be done.

Be. A heav'n on earth I've won by wooing thee. Exit.

Dia. For which, live long to thank both heav'n and me,
You may so in the end.

My mother told me just how he would wooe,
As if she fate in's heart. She sayes, all men
Have the like oathes : He had sworn to marry me
When his wife's dead : therefore I'll lie with him
When I am buried. Since French-men are so braide, Marry that will, I'll live and die a Maid :
Onely in this disguise, I think't no sin,
To cozen him that would unjustly win. Exit.

Enter the two French Captains, and some two or three Souldiers.

Cap. G. You have not given him his mothers letter.

Cap. E. I have deliver'd it an houre since, there is something in't that stings his nature : for on the reading it, he chang'd almost into another man.

Cap. G. He has much worthy blame laid upon him, for shaking off so good a wife, and so sweet a Lady.

Cap. E. Especially, he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the King, who had even tun'd his bounty to sing happinesse to him. I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with you.

Cap. G. When you have spoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it.

Cap. E. He hath perverted a young Gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown, and this night he fleshes his will in the spoyle of her honour : he hath given her his monumentall Ring, and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.

Cap. G. Now God delay our rebellion, as we are our selves, what things are we.

Cap. E. Meerly our own traitors. And as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveale themselves, till they attain to their abhorr'd ends : so he that in this action contrives against his own Nobility in his proper streame, o're-flows himself.

Cap. G. Is it not meant damnable in us, to be Trum-peters of our unlawfull intents ? We shall not then have his company to night ?

Cap. E. Not till after midnight : for he is dieted to his houre.

Cap. G. That approaches agace : I would gladly have him see his company anathomiz'd, that he might take a measure of his own judgements, wherein so seriously he had set his counterfeit.

Cap. E. We will not meddle with him till he come; for his presence must be the whip of the other.

Cap. G. In the mean time, what hear you of those Warres?

Cap. E. I hear there is an overture of peace.

Cap. G. Nay, I assure you a peace concluded.

Cap. E. What will Count Rossillion do then? Will he travell higher, or retrun again into France?

Cap. G. I perceive by this demand, you are not altogether of his counsell.

Cap. E. Let it be forbid, sir, so should I be a great deal of this act.

Cap. G. Sir, his wife some two months since fled from his house, her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Jacques le grand; which holy undertaking, with most austere sanctimony she accomplish'd: and there residing, the tenderness of her Nature, became as a prey to her grief: in fine; made a groan of her last breath, and now she sings in heaven.

Cap. E. How is this justified?

Cap. G. The stronger part of it by her own Letters, which makes her story true, even to the point of her death: her death it selfe, which could not be her office to say, is come, was faithfully confirm'd by the Rector of the place.

Cap. E. Hath the Count all this intelligence?

Cap. G. I, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.

Cap. E. I am heartily sorry that he'll be glad of this.

Cap. G. How mightily sometimes, we make us comforts of our losses.

Cap. E. And how mightily some other times, we drown our gain in tears, the great dignity that this valour hath here requir'd for him; shall at home be encountred with a shame as ample.

Cap. G. The web of our life, is of a mingled yarne, good and ill together: our vertues would be proud, if our faults whipt them not, and our crimes would despair if they were not cherish'd by our vertues.

Enter a Messenger.

How now? Where's your maister?

Ser. He met the Duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave: his Lordship will next morning for France. The Duke hath offered him Letters of commendations to the King.

Cap. E. They shall be no more then needfull there, if they were more then they can commend.

Enter Count Rossillion.

Cap. G. They cannot be too sweet for the Kings tartness, here's his Lordship now. How now my Lord, is't not after midnight?

Ber. I have to night dispatch'd sixteen busineses, a months length a piece, by an abstract of successe: I have congied with the Duke; done my adieu with his nearest; buried a wife; mourn'd for her; writ to my Lady mother, I am returning; entertain'd my Convoy, and between these main parcells of dispatch, effected many nicer needs: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

Cap. E. If the businesse be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your Lordship.

Ber. I mean the businesse is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter: but shall we have this dialogue between the Foole and the Souldier. Come; bring forth this counterfeit module; 'has deceived me, like a double-meaning Prophecier.

Cap. E. Bring him forth, ha's fate i'th stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter, his heels have deserv'd it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he carry himself?

Cap. G. I have told your Lordship already: The stocks carry him. But to answer you as you would be understood, he weeps like a wench that had shed her milk, he hath confest himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a Friar, from the time of his remembrance to this very instant disaster of his setting i'th stocks: and what think you he hath confest?

Ber. Nothing of me, ha's a?

Cap. E. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face, if your Lordship be in't, as I believe you are, you must have the patiente to hear it.

Enter Parolles with his Interpreter.

Ber. A plague upon him, muffled; he can say nothing of me: hush.

Cap. G. Hoodman comes: Portotartarossa.

Int. He calls for the tortures, what will you say without em.

Par. I will confesse what I know without constraint, If ye pinch me like a Pasty, I can say no more.

Int. Bosko Chimurcho.

Cap. Biblibindo chicurmurco.

Int. You are a mercifull Generall: Our Generall bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a Note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

Int. First demand of him, how many horse the Duke is strong. What say you to that?

Par. Five or six thousand, but very weak and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the Commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

Int. Shall I set down your answer so?

Par. Do, I'll take the Sacrament on't, how and which way you will: all's one to him.

Ber. What a past-saving slave is this?

Cap. G. Y'are deceiv'd, my Lord, this Monsieur Parolles the gallant militarist, that was his own phrase, that had the whole theoricke of war in the knot of his scarf and the practise in the chap of his dagger.

Cap. E. I will never trust a man again, for keeping his sword clean, nor believe he can have every thing in him, by wearing his apparell neatly.

Int. Well, that's set down.

Par. Five or six thousand horse I sed, I will say true, or thereabouts set down, for I'll speak truth.

Cap. G. He's very near the truth in this.

Ber. But I con him no thanks for't in the nature he delivers it.

Par. Poor rogues, I pray you say.

Int. Well, that's set down.

Par. I humbly thank you, sir, a truth's a truth, the Rogues are marvailous poor.

Int. Demand of him of what strength they are a foot. What say you to that?

Par. By my troth, sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true, Let me see, Spurio a hundred and fifty, fifty, Sebastian so many, Corambus so many, Jaques so many: Guiltian, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Gratii, two hundred each: Mine own Company, Chitopher, Van-mond, Bentii, two hundred fifty each: so that the muster file, rotten and sound, upon my life amounts not to fifteen thousand pole, halfe of the which, dare not shake the snow from off their Cassocks, least they shake themselves to pieces.

Ber. What shall be done to him?

Cap. G. Nothing, but let him have thanks. Demand of him my conditions: and what credit I have with the Duke.

Int. Well that's set down: you shall demand of him, whether one Captain Dumain be i'th Camp, a Frenchman: what his reputation is with the Duke, what his valour, honesty, and expertness in warre: or whether he thinks it were not possible with well-waighing sums of gold to corrupt him to revolt. What say you to this? What do you know of it?

Par. I beseech you let me answer to the particular of the intergatories. Demand them singly.

Int. Do you know Captain Dumain?

Par. I know him, a was a Butchers Prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipt for getting the Shrieves foole with childe, dumb innocent that could not say him nay.

Ber. Nay, by your leave hold your hands, though I know his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.

Inter. Well, is this Captain in the Duke of Florences campe?

Par. Upon my knowledge he is, and lowsie.

Cap. G. Nay look not so upon me: we shall hear of your Lord anon.

Int. What is his reputation with the Duke?

Par. The Duke knows him for no other, but a poor Officer of mine, and writ to me the other day, to turn him out a'th baud. I think I have his letter in my pocket.

Int. Marry we'll search.

Par. In good sadness I do not know, either it is there, or it is upon a file with the Dukes other Letters, in my Tent.

Int. Here 'tis, here's a paper, shall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it or no.

Ber. Our Interpreter do's it well.

Cap. G. Excellently.

Int. Dian, the Count's a foole, and full of gold.

Par. That is not the Dukes letter sir: that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurements of one Count Rossillion, a foolish idle boy: but for all that very ruttish. I pray you sir put it up again.

Int. Nay, I'll read it first by your favour.

Par. My meaning in't I protest was very honest in the behalfe of the maid: for I knew the young Count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy, who is a whale to Virginitie, and devours up all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable! both-sides rogue.

Int. Let. When he swears oaths; bid him drop gold, and take it:

After he scores, he never payes the score:

Half won is march well made, march and well make it,

He ne're payes after-debts, take it before,

And say a souldier (Dian) told thee this:

Men are to mell with, boyes are not to kifs.

For count of this, the Count's a Foole I know it, Who payes before, but not when he does owe it.

Thine as he vow'd to thee in thine ear, Parolles.

Ber. He shall be whipt through the Army with this rime in's forehead.

Cap. E. This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold Linguist, and the army-potent souldier.

Ber. I could endure any thing before, but a Cat, and he's a Cat to me.

Int. I perceive, sir, by the Generals looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, sir, in any case: Not that I am afraid to die, but that my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of Nature. Let me live, sir, in a dungeon, i'th stocks, any where, so I may live.

Int. We'll see what may be done, so you confesse freely: therefore once more to this Captain Dumain: you have answer'd to his reputation with the Duke, and to his valour. What is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, sir, an Egge out of a Cloister: for rapes and ravishments he paralels Nessus. He professes not keeping of oaths, breaking em he is stronger then Hercules. He will lye, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a foole: drunkenness is his best vertue, for he will be swine-drunk, and in his sleep he does little harme, save to his bed-cloathes about him: but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty, he ha's every thing that an honest man should not have: what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

Cap. G. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty? A pox upon him for me, he's more and more a Cat.

Int. What say you to his expertness in war?

Par. Faith sir, ha's led the drum before the English Tragedians: to belie him I will not, and more of his souldiership I know not, except in that Countrey, he had the honour to be the Officer at a place there called Mile-end, to instruct for the doubling of files. I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain.

Cap. G. He hath out-villain'd villany so far, that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A pox on him, he's a Cat still.

Int. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not to ask you, if Gold will corrupt him to revolt.

Par. Sir, For a Cardew he will sell the sec-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it, and cut th'intaille from all remainders, and a perpetuall succession for it perpetually.

Int. What's his Brother, the other Captain Dumain?

Cap. E. Why do's he ask him of me?

Int. What's he?

Par. E'n a Crow a'th same nest: not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evill. He excels his Brother for a Coward, yet his Brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreat he out-runnes any Lackey, marry in coming on, he ha's the Cramp.

Int. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Par. I, and the Captain of his horse Count Rossillion,

Int. I'll whisper with the Generall, and know his pleasure.

Par. I'll no more drumming, a plague of all drums, onely to seem to deserve well, and to beguile the supposition sition of that lascivious young boy the Count, have I run into this danger : yet who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken ?

Int. There is no remedy, sir, but you must die: the Generall sayes, you that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use : therefore you must die. Come heads-man, off with his head.

Par. O Lord, sir, let me live, or let me see my death.

Int. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends :

So look about you, know you any here ?

Coun. Good morrow noble Captain.

Lo. E. God blefs you Captain Parolles.

Cap. G. God save you noble Captain.

Lo. E. Captain, what greeting will you to my Lord Lafew ? I am for France.

Cap. G. Good Captain will you give me a Copy of the same sonnet you writ to Diana in behalfe of the Count Rossillion, and I were not a very Coward, I'de compell it of you, but fare you well. Exeunt.

Int. You are undone Captain all but your scarfe, that has a knot on't yet.

Par. Who cannot be crush'd with a plot ?

Int. If you could finde out a Countrey where but women were that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent Nation. Fare ye well sir, I am for France too, we shall speak of you there. Exit.

Par. Yet am I thankfull : if my heart were great 'Twould burst at this : Captain I'll be no more, But I will eat, and drink, and sleep as soft As Captain shall. Simply the thing I am Shall make me live : who knows himself a braggart Let him fear this ; for it will come to pass, That every braggart shall be found an Ass. Rust sword, coole blushes, and Parolles live Safest in shame : being fool'd, by fool'ry thrive ; There's place and means for every man alive, I'll after them.

Enter Hellen, Widow, and Diana.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,

One of the greatest in the Christian world Shall be my surety : 'fore whose throne 'tis needfull Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneele. Time was I did him a desired office Dear almost as his life, which gratitude Through stinty Tartars bosome would peep forth, And answer thanks. I duly am inform'd, His grace is at Marsellis, to which place We have convenient convoy : you must know I am supposed dead, the Army breaking, My husband hies him home, where heaven aiding, And by the leave of my good Lord the King, We'll be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle Madam, You never had a servant to whose trust Your business was more welcome.

Hel. Nor your Mistress Ever a friend, whose thoughts more truly labour To recompence your love : Doubt not but heaven Hath brought me up to be your daughters dowre, As it hath fated her to be my motive

And helper to a husband. But O strange men, That can such sweet use make of what they hate, When sawcy trusting of the cosin'd thoughts Defiles the pitchy night, so lust doth play With what it loaths, for that which is away, But more of this hereafter : you Diana, Under my poor instructions yet must suffer Something in my behalfe.

Dia. Let death and honesty Go with your impositions, I am yours Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet I pray you : But with the word the time will bring on summer, When Briars shall have leaves as well as thorns, And be as sweet as sharp : we must away, Our Wagon is prepar'd, and time revives us, All's well that ends well, still that fines the Crown ; What ere the course, the end is the renown. Exeunt.

Enter Clown, old Lady, and Lafew.

Laf. No, no, no, your son was misled with a snipt cassara fellow there, whose villanous saffron would have made all the unbak'd and dowy youth of a nation in his colour : your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanc'd by the King, then by that red-tail'd humble-Bee I speak of.

Lad. I would I had not known him, it was the death of the most vertuous gentlewoman, that ever Nature bad praise for creating, If she had partaken of my flesh and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

Laf. 'Twas a good Lady, 'twas a good Lady. We may pick a thousand fallers ere we light on such another herb.

Cl. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet Margerom of the faller, or rather the herb of grace.

Laf. They are not herbs you knave, they are nose-hearbs.

Cl. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir, I have not much skill in grace.

La. Whether dost thou profess thy self, a knave or a foole ?

Cl. A foole, sir, at a womans service, and a knave at a mans.

La. Your distinction.

Cl. I would cozen the man of his wife, and do his service.

La. So you were a knave at his service indeed.

Cl. And I would give his wife my bauble, sir, to do her service.

La. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knave and foole.

Cl. At your service.

La. No, no, no.

Cl. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

La. Whose that, a Frenchman ?

Cl. Faith, sir, a has an English main, but his fishony is more hotter in France then here.

La. What Prince is that ?

Cl. The black prince, sir, alias the prince of darkness, alias the devi I.

La. Hold thee, there's my purse, I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy Master thou talk'st of, serve him still.

Cl.

Clo. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that alwayes loved a great fire, and the maister I speak of ever keeps a good fire, but sure he is the Prince of the world, let his Nobility remain in's Court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pompe to enter: soine that humble themselves may, but the many will be too chill and tender, and they'll be for the flowry way that leads to the broad gate, and the great fire.

La. Go thy wayes, I begin to be a weary of thee, and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy wayes, let my horses be well look'd to, without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks upon em, sir, they shall be Jades tricks, which are their own right by the law of Nature. Exit.

Laf. A shrewd knave and an unhappy.

Lady. So a is. My Lord that's gone made himself much sport out of him, by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sawcinesse, and indeed he has no pace, but he runs where he will.

Laf. I like him well, 'tis not amisse: and I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good Ladies death, and that my Lord your son was upon his return home. I moved the King my maister to speak in the behalfe of my daughter, which in the minority of them both, his Majesty out of a self gracious remembrance did first propose; his Highnesse hath promis'd me to do it, and to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How do's your Ladyship like it?

La. With very much content, my Lord, and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His Highnesse comes post from Marselles, of as able a body as when he number'd thirty, a will be here to morrow, or I am deceiv'd by him that in such intelligence hath seldome fail'd.

La. It joyces me, that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be here to night: I shall beseech your Lordship to remain with me; till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what Manners I might safely be admitted.

Lad. You need but plead your honourable privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter, but I thank my God, it holds yet.

Enter Clown.

Clo. O Madam, yonders my Lord your son with a patch of velvet on's face, whether there be a scar under't or no, the Velvet knows, but 'tis a goodly patch of Velvet, his left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

La. A scar nobly got:
Or a noble scar, is a good liv'ry of honour.
So belike is that.

Clo. But it is your carbinado'd face.

Laf. Let us go see
Your son I pray you, I long to talk
With the young noble souldier.

Clo. Faith there's a dozen of em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Hellen, Widdow, and Diana, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting day and night, Must wear your spirits low, we cannot help it. But since you have made the dayes and nights as one, To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs, Behold you do so grow in my requital, As nothing can unroot you. In happy time,

Enter a Gentleman a stranger.

This man may help me to his Majesties ear, If he would spend his power. God save you sir:

Gent. And you.

Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the Court of France.

Gent. I have been sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume, sir, that you are not false From the report that goes upon your goodnesse, And therefore goaded with most sharp occasions, Which lay nice manners by, I put you to The use of your own vertues, for the which I shall continue thankfull.

Gent. What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you
To give this poor petition to the King,
And aid me with that store of power you have
To come into his presence.

Gent. The Kings not here.

Hel. Not here sir?

Gent. Not indeed,
He hence remov'd last night, and with more haste
Then is his use.

Wid. Lord, how we loose our pains.

Hel. All's well that ends well yet,
Though time seem so adverse, and means unfit:
I do beseech you, whether is he gone?

Gent. Marry as I take it to Rossillion, Whither I am going.

Hel. I do beseech you sir,
Since you are like to see the King before me,
Commend the paper to his gracious hand,
Which I presume shall render you no blame,
But rather make you thank your pains for it:
I will come after you with what good speed
Our means will make us means.

Gent. This I'll do for you.

Hel. And you shall finde your self to be well thank't what e're falls more. We must to horse again, Go, go, Exeunt.

Enter Clown, and Parolles.

Par. Good M. Levatch give my Lord Lafew this letter, I have ere now, sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with fresher cloathes: but I am now, sir, muddled in fortunes mood, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

Clo. Truly, Fortunes displeasure is but fluttish, if it smell so strongly as thou speak'st of: I will henceforth eat no Fish of Fortunes butt'ring. Prethee, allow the winde.

Par. Nay you need not to stop your nose, sir: I speak but a Metaphor.

Clo. Indeed, sir, if your Metaphor stink, I will stop my nose, or against any mans Metaphor. Prethee get thee further.

Par.

Par. Pray you, sir, deliver me this paper.

Clo. Foh, prechee stand away : a paper from fortunes close-stooke, to give to a Nobleman. Look here he comes himself.

Enter Lafew.

Clo. Here is a purre of Fortunes, sir, or of Fortunes Cat, but not a Muscat ; that ha's falne into the unclean fish-pond of her displeasure, and as he sayes muddied withall. Pray you, sir, use the Carp as you may, for he looks like a poor decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knave, I do pittie his distresse in my smiles of comfort, and leave him to your Lordship.

Par. My Lord, I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratch'd

Laf. And what would you have me to do ? 'Tis too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you played the knave with fortune that she should scratch you, who of her self, is a good Lady, and would not have knaves thrive long under her ? There's a Cardcue for you : Let the Justices make you and fortune friends ; I am for other businessse.

Par. I beseech your honour to heare me one single word.

Laf. You beg a single penny more : Come you shall ha't, save your word.

Par. My name my good Lord, is Parolles.

Laf. You beg more then one word then. Cox my passion, give me your hand : How does your drum.

Par. O my good Lord, your were the first that found me.

Laf. Was I insooth ? And I was the first that lost thee.

Par. It lies in you, my Lord to bring me in some grace, for you did bring me out.

Laf. Out upon thee knave, dost thou put upon me at once both the office of God and the devill : one brings thee in grace, and the other brings thee out. The King's coming I know by his Trumpets. Sirrah, enquire further after me, I had talk of you last night, though you are a foole and a knave, you shall eat, go to, follow.

Par. I praise God for you.

Flourish. Enter King, old Lady, Lafew, the two French Lords, with attendants.

Kin. We lost a Jewell, and our esteem Was made much poorer by it : but your son, As mad in folly, lack'd the sence to know Her estimation home.

Old La. 'Tis past, my Liege, And I beseech your Majesty to make it Naturall rebellion, done i'th blade of youth, When oyle and fire, too strong for reasons force, Ore-bears it and burns on.

King. My honour'd Lady, I have forgiven and forgotten all, Though my revenges were high bent upon him, And watch'd the time to shoot.

Laf. This I must say, But first I beg my pardon : the young Lord Did to his Majesty, his Mother, and his Lady, Offence of mighty note ; but to himself The greatest wrong of all. He lost a wife, Whose beauty did astonish the survey Of richest eyes : whose words all ears took captive, Whose deep perfection, hearts that scorn'd to serve, Humbly call'd Mistris.

Kin. Praising what is lost, Makes the remembrance dear. Well, call him hither, We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill All repetition : Let him not ask our pardon, The nature of his great offence is dead, And deeper then oblivion, we do bury Th'incensing relicks of it. Let him approach A stranger, no offender ; and inform him So 'tis our will he should Gent. I shall my Liege.

King. What sayes he to your daughter, Have you spoke ?

Laf. All that he is, hath reference to your Highness.

Kin. Then shall we have a match. I have letters sent me, that sets him high in fame.

Enter Count Bertram.

Laf. He looks well on't

Kin. I am not a day of season, For thou maist see a sun-shine, and a haile In me at once : But to the brightest beams Distracted clouds give way, so stand thou forth, The time is fair again.

Ber. My high repented blames, Dear Sovereigne, pardon me.

Kin. All is whole, Not one word more of the consumed time, Let's take the instant by the forward top : For we are old, and our quick'st decrees Th'inaudible, and noiselesse foot of time Steals, ere we can effect them. You remember The daughter of this Lord ?

Ber. Admiringly, my Liege, at first I stuck my choise upon her, ere my heart Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue : Where the impression of mine eye enfixing, Contempt his scornfull Perspective did lend me, Which wrapt the line of every other favour, Scorn'd a fair colour, or exprest it stoln, Extended or contracted all proportions To a most hideous object, Thence it came, That she whom all men prais'd, and whom my self, Since I have lost, have lov'd ; was in mine eye The dust that did offend it.

Kin. Well excus'd :

That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away From the great compt : but love that comes too late, Like a remorsefull pardon slowly carried To the great sencer, turns a sowre offence, Crying, that's good that's gone : our rash faults Make triall price of serious things we have, Not knowing them, untill we know their grave. Oft our displeasures to our selves unjust, Destroy our friends, and after weep their dust : Our own love waking, cries to see what's done, While shamefull hate sleeps out the afternoon. Be this sweet Helens knell, and now forget her. Send forth your amorous token for fair Maudlin, The main consents are had, and here we'll stay To see our widdowers second marriage day : Which better then the first, O dear heaven blefs, Or, ere they meet in me, O Nature ceas.

Laf. Come on my son, in whom my houses name Must be disgisted : give a favour from you To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,

That

That she may quickly come. By my old beard,
And ev'ry hair that's on't, Helen that's dead
Was a sweet creature: such a ring as this,
The last that ere I took her leave at Court,
I saw upon her finger.

Ber. Hers it was not.

Kin. Now pray you let me see it. For mine eye,
While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd too't:
This Ring was mine, and when I gave it Hellen,
I bad her, if her fortunes ever stood
Necessitated to help, that by this token
I would relieve her. Had you that craft to reave her
Of what should stead her most?

Ber. My gracious Sovereigne,
How ere it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was never hers.

Old La. Son, on my life
I have seen her wear it, and she reckon'd it
At her lives rate.

Laf. I am sure I saw her wear it.

Ber. You are deceiv'd, my Lord, she never saw it:
In Florence was it from a casement thrown me,
Wrap'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it: Noble she was, and thought
I stood engag'd, but when I had subscrib'd
To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully,
I could not answer in that course of Honour
As she had made the overture, she ceas'd
In heavy satisfaction, and would never Receive the Ring again.

Kin. Plutus himself,
That knows the tinct and multiplying medicine,
Hath not in natures mystery more science,
Then I have in this Ring. 'Twas mine, 'twas Hellens,
Who ever gave it you: then if you know
That you are well acquainted with your self,
Confess 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement
You got it from her. She call'd the Saints to surety,
That she would never put it from her finger,
Unlesse she gave it to your self in bed,
Where you have never come: or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.

Ber. She never saw it.

Kin. Thou speak'st it falsely: as I love mine Honour,
And mak'st conjecturall fears to come into me,
Which I would fain shut out, if it should prove
That thou art so inhumane, 'twill not prove so.
And yet I know not, thou didst hate her deadly,
And she is dead, which nothing but to close
Her eyes my self, could win me to believe,
More then to see this Ring. Take him away,
My fore-past proofes, how ere the matter fall
Shall tax my fears of little vanity,
Having vainly fear'd too little. Away with him,
We'll sift this matter further.

Ber. If you shall prove
This Ring was ever hers, you shall as easie
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was.

Enter a Gentleman.

Kin. I am wrap'd in dismall thinkings.

Gent. Gracious Sovereigne.

Whether I have been too blame or no, I know not,
Here's a petition from a Florentine,
Who hath for four or five removes come short,
To tender it her self. I undertook it,

Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech
Of the poor suppliant, who by this I know
Is here attending: her businesse looks in her
With an importing visage, and she told me
In a sweet verball breef, it did concern
Your Highnesse with her self.

A Letter.

*Upon his many protestations to marry me when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the Count Rossillion a Widdower, his vov'es are forfeited to me, & my honors paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to this Countrey for Justice:
Grant it me, O King, in you it best lies, otherwise a seduer flourishes, and a poor Maid is undone.*

Diana Capilet.

Laf. I will buy me a son in Law in a fear, and toulc him for this. I'll none of him.

Kin. The heavens have thought well on thee, Lafew,
To bring forth this discov'ry, seek the tutors:
Go speedily, and bring again the Count.

Enter Bertram.

I am a-ferd the life of Hellen (Lady)
Was fowly snatch'd.

Old La. Now justice on the doers.

Kin. I wonder, sir, wives are so monstrous to you,
And that you flye them as you swear them Lordship,
Yet you desire to marry. What woman's that?

Enter Widdow, Diana, and Parolles.

Dia. I am, my Lord, a wretched Florentine,
Derived from the ancient Capilet,
My suit, as I understand, you know,
And therefore know how far I may be pittied.

Wid. I am her Mother, sir, whose age and honour
Both suffer under this complaint we bring,
And both shall cease, without your remedy.

Kin. Come hither, Count, do you know these Women?

Ber. My Lord, I neither can nor will deny,
But that I know them, do they charge me further?

Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?

Ber. She's none of mine, my Lord.

Dia. If you shall marry
You give away this hand, and that is mine,
You give away heavens vov'es, and those are mine:
You give away my self, which is known mine:
For I by vow am so embodied yours,
That she which marries you, must marry me,
Either both or none.

Laf. Your reputation comes too short for my daughter, you are no husband for her.

Ber. My Lord, this is a fond and desperate creature,
Whom sometime I have laugh'd with: Let your highnes
Lay a more noble thought upon mine honour,
Then for to think that I would sinke it here.

Kin. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend,
Till your deeds gain them fairer: prove your honour,
Then in my thought, it lies.

Dia. Good my Lord,
Ask him upon his oath, if he do's think
He had not my virginity.

Kin. What saist thou to her?

Ber. She's impudent, my Lord,
And was a common gamester to the Camp.

Dia. He do's me wrong, my Lord: If I were so,
He might have bought me at a common price.

Doe not believe him. O behold this Ring,
Whose high respect and rich validity
Did lack a Paralell: yet for all that
He gave it to a Commoner a'th Camp
If I be one.

Old La. He blushes, and 'tis hit:
Of six preceding Ancestors, that Jemme
Conferr'd by testament to th' sequent issue
Hath it been owed and worn. This is his wife;
That Ring's a thousand proofs.

Kin. Me thought you said
You saw one here in Court could witness it.

Dia. I did, my Lord, but loath am to produce
So bad an instrument; his name's Parolles.

Laf. I saw the man to day, if man he be.

Kin. Find him, and bring him hither.

Ros. What of him?

He's quoted for a most perfidious slave
With all the spots a'th world, taxt and deboish'd,
Whose nature sickens: but to speak a truth,
Am I, or that or this, for what he'll utter,
That will speak any thing.

Kin. She hath that Ring of yours.

Ros. I think she has; certain it is I lik'd her,
And boarded her i'th wanton way of youth:
She knew her distance, and did angle of me,
Madding my eagerness with her restraint,
As all impediments in fancies course
Are motives of more fancy, and in fine,
Her insuit comming with her modern grace,
Subdu'd me to her rate; she got the Ring,
And I had that which any inferiour might
At Market price have bought.

Dia. I must be patient:
You that have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
May justly diet me. I pray you yet,
(Since you lack virtue, I will lose a husband)
Send for your Ring, I will return it home,
And give me mine again.

Ros. I have it not.

Kin. What Ring was yours, I pray you?

Dia. Sir, much like the same upon your finger.

Kin. Know you this Ring, this Ring was his of late.

Dia. And this was it I gave him being a bed.

Kin. The story then goes false, you threw it him
Out of a Casement.

Dia. I have spoke the truth. Enter Parolles.

Ros. My Lord, I doe confesse the Ring was hers.

Kin. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts you:
Is this the man you speak of?

Dia. I, my Lord.

Kin. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true I charge you,
Not fearing the displeasure of your Master:
(Which on your just proceeding, I'll keep off)
By him, and by this woman here, what know you?

Par. So please your Majesty, my Master hath been an honourable Gentleman. Tricks he hath had in him, which Gentlemen have.

Kin. Come, come, to th' purpose: Did he love this woman?

Par. Faith sir, he did love her, but how!

Kin. How I pray you?

Par. He did love her, sir, as a Gent. loves a Woman.

Kin. How is that?

Par. He lov'd her, sir, and lov'd her not.

Kin. As thou art a Knave and no Knave, what an equivocall Companion is this?

Par. I am a poor man, and at your Majesties command.

Laf. He's a good drunime, my Lord, but a naughty Oratour.

Dia. Doe you know he promis't me marriage?

Par. Faith, I know more then I'll speak.

Kin. But wilt thou not speak all thou know'st?

Par. Yes, so please your Majesty: I did go between them, as I said, but more then that, he loved her; for indeed he was mad for her, and talkt of Sathan, and of Limbo, and of Furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things that would derive me ill will to speak of, therefore I will not speak what I know.

Kin. Thou hast spoken all already, unlesse thou canst say they are married, but thou art too fine in thy evidence, Therefore stand aside. This Ring you say was yours.

Dia. I, my good Lord.

Kin. Where did you buy it? or who gave it you?

Dia. It was not given me, nor did not buy it.

Kin. Who lent it you?

Dia. It was not lent me neither.

Kin. Where did you find it then?

Dia. I found it not.

Kin. If it were yours by none of all these wayes,
How could you give it him?

Dia. I never gave it him.

Laf. This woman's an easie glove, my Lord, she goes off and on at pleasure.

Kin. This Ring was mine, I gave it his first wife.

Dia. It might be yours, or hers, for ought I know.

Kin. Take her away, I doe not like her now,
To prison with her: and away with him,
Unlesse thou tell'st me where thou had'st this Ring,
Thou diest within this houre.

Dia. I'll never tell you.

Kin. Take her away.

Dia. I'll put in bail my Liege.

Kin. I think thee now some common Customer.

Dia. By Jove if ever I knew man, 'twas you.

Kin. Wherefore hast thou accus'd him all this while?

Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty:
He knowes I am no Maid, and he'll swear to't:
I'll swear I am a Maid, and he knowes not.

Great King, I am no strumpet, by my life,
I am either Maid, or else this old mans wife.

Kin. She do's abuse our eares, to prison with her.

Dia. Good mother fetch my bayle. Stay, Royal sir,
The Jeweller that owes the Ring is sent for,
And he shall surety me. But for this Lord,
Who hath abus'd me as he knowes himself,
Though yet he never heard me, here I quit him.
He knowes himself my bed he hath defil'd,
And at that time he got his wife with child:
Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick:
So there's my riddle, one that's dead is quick,
And now behold the meaning.

Enter Hellen and Widow.

Kin. Is there no exorcist
Beguiles the true Office of mine eyes?
Is't reall that I see?

Hel. No, my good Lord,

Y

'Tis

'Tis but the shadow of a Wife you see,
The name, and not the thing.

Ros. Both, both, O pardon.

Hel. Oh, my good Lord, when I was like this Maid,
I found you wondrous kind, there is your Ring,
And look you, here's your Letter : this it sayes,
When from my finger you can get this Ring,
And is by me with child, &c. This is done,
Will you be mine, now you are doubly wonne ?

Ros. If she, my Liege, can make me know this clearly,
I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

Hel. If it appear not plain, and prove untrue,
Deadly divorce step between me and you.
O, my dear mother, doe I see you living ?

Laf. Mine eyes smell Onions, I shall weep anon :
Good Tom Drumme, lend me a handkercher.
So I thank thee, wait on me home, I'll make sport with thee : Let thy curtsies alone, they are scurvy ones.

King. Let us from point to point this story know,
To make the even truth in pleasure flow :
If thou beest yet a fresh uncropped flower,
Choose thou thy husband, and I'll pay thy dower.
For I can guesse, that by thy honest aide,
Thou keepest a Wife her self, thy self a Maid.
Of that and all the progresse more and lesse,
Resolv'dly more leisure shall expresse :
All yet seems well, and if it end so meet,
The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.

Flourish.

THe King's a Beggar, now the Play is done.
All is well ended, if his suit be wonne,
That you expresse content : which we will pay,
With strife to please you, day exceeding day :
Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts,
Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts. Ex. om.

F I N I S

Twelve-Night, Or what you will.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Orsino Duke of Illyria, Curio, and other Lords.

Duke.

IF Musick be the food of Love, play on,
Give me excess of it : that surfeiting,
The appetite may sicken, and so die.
That strain agen, it had a dying fall :
O, it came o're my ear, like the sweet sound
That breathes upon a bank of Violets ;

Stealing, and giving Odour. Enough, no more,
'Tis not so sweet now, as it was before.

O spirit of Love, how quick and fresh art thou,
That notwithstanding thy capacity,
Receiveth as the Sea. Nought enters there,
Of what validity, and pitch so e're,
But falls into abatement, and low price,
Even in a minute ; so full of shapes is fancy,
That it alone is high fantastical.

Cur. Will you go hunt, my Lord ?

Du. What Curio ?

Cur. The Hart.

Du. Why so I doe, the Noblest that I have :
O when mine eyes did see Olivia first,
Me thought she purg'd the ayre of pestilence ;
That instant was I turn'd into a Hart,
And my desires, like fell and cruell hounds,
E're since pursue me. How now, what newes from her ?

Enter Valentine.

Val. So please my Lord, I might not be admitted,
But from her hand-maid doe return this answer :
The Element it self, till seven yeares heat,
Shall not behold her face at ample view :
But like a Cloystresse she will vailed walke,
And water once a day her Chambers round
With eye-offending brine : all this to season
A brothers dead love, which she would keep fresh
And lasting, in her sad remembrance.

Du. O she that hath a heart of this fine frame,
To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
How will she love, when the rich golden shaft
Hath kill'd the flock of all affections else
That live in her. When Liver, Brain, and Heart,
These sovereign thrones, are all suppli'd and fill'd
Her sweet perfections with one self same king :
Away before me, to sweet beds of Flowers,
Love-thoughts lie rich, when cannopy'd with bowres.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Viola a Captain, and Saylor.

Vio. What Countrey (Friends) is this ?

Cap. This is Illyria, Lady.

Vio. And what should I doe in Illyria ?

My Brother he is in Elizium,

Perchance he is not drown'd : What think you, Sailors ?

Cap. It is perchance that you your self were saved.

Vio. O my poor Brother, and so perchance may he be.

Cap. True Madam, and to comfort you with chance.

Affure your self, after our ship did split,
When you, and those poor number saved with you,
Hung on our droving boat : I saw your brother
Most provident in perill, binde himself,
(Courage and hope both teaching him the practise)
To a strong Mast, that liv'd upon the sea :
Where like Orion on the Dolphins back,
I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves,
So long as I could see.

Vio. For saying so, there's Gold :

Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,
Whereto thy speech serves for authority
The like of him. Know'st thou this Countrey ?

Cap. I, Madam, well ; for I was bred and born
Not three houres travell from this very place ?

Vio. Who governs here ?

Cap. A noble Duke in nature, as in name.

Vio. What is his name ?

Cap. Orsino.

Vio. Orsino ! I have heard my Father name him.
He was a Batchellor then.

Cap. And so is now, or was so very late :
For but a moneth ago I went from hence,
And then 'twas fresh in murmure (as you know What great ones doe, the lesse will prattle of)
That he did seek the love of fair Olivia.

Vio. What's she ?

Cap. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a Count,
That di'd some twelvemonth since, then leaving her
In the protection of his son, her brother,
Who shortly also di'd : for whose dear love
(They say) she had abjur'd the sight
And company of men.

Vio. O that I serv'd that Lady,
And might not be delivered to the world

Y 2

Till

Till I had made mine own occasion mellow
What my estate is.

Cap. That were hard to compassse,
Because she will admit no kind of suit,
No not the Dukes.

Vio. There is a fair behaviour in thee, Captain,
And though that nature, with a beauteous wall
Doth oft close in pollution; yet of thee
I will believe, thou hast a mind that suits
With this thy fair and outward character.
I prethee (and I'll pay thee bounteously)
Conceal me what I am, and be my aide.
For such disguise as haply shall become
The form of my intent. I'll serve this Duke;
Thou shalt present me as an Eunuch to him,
It may be worth thy pains: for I can sing,
And speak to him in many sorts of Musick,
That will allow me very worth his service.
What else may hap, to time I will commit,
Onely shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Cap. Be you his Eunuch, and your Mute I'll be,
When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see.

Vio. I thank thee: Lead me on.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Toby, and Maria.

Sir To. What a plague meanes my Neece to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Mar. By my troth, sir Toby, you must come in earlier a nights: your Cousin, my Lady, takes great exceptions to your ill houres.

To. Why let her except, before excepted.

Mar. I, but you must confine your self within the modest limits of order.

To. Confine? I'll confine my self no finer then I am:
these cloathes are good enough to drink in, and so be these boots too: and they be not, let them hang them selves in their own straps.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undoe you: I heard my Lady talke of it yester day: and of a foolish knight that you brought in one night here, to be her

To. Who, Sir Andrew Ague-cheek? (wooe?)

Ma. I he.

To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Ma. What's that to th' purpose?

To. Why he has three thousand Ducats a year.

Ma. I, but he'll have but a year in all these Ducats:
He's a very fool, and a prodigall.

To. Fie, that you'll say so: he playes o'th Viol-de-gam- boyes, and speaks three or four languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath indeed, almost naturall: for besides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreller: and but that he hath the gift of a Coward, to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent, he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Tob. By this hand they are scoundrels and substra-ctors that say so of him. Who are they?

Mar. They that adde moreover, he's drunk nightly in your company.

To. With drinking healths to my Neece: I'll drink to her as long as there is a passage in my throat, and drink in Illyria: he's a Coward and a Coystrill that will not drink to my Neece, till his brains turn o'th' toe, like a parishi top. What wench? Castiliano vulgo: for here comes Sir Andrew Ague-face.

Enter Sir Andrew.

And. Sir Toby Belch. How now Sir Toby Belch?

To. Sweet Sir Andrew.

And. Blessè you fair Shrew:

Mar. And you too sir.

Tob. Accost, Sir Andrew, accost.

And. What's that?

To. My Neece's Chamber-maid.

An. Good Mistris accost, I desire better acquaintance.

Ma. My name is Mary sir.

And. Good Mistrisse Mary, accost.

To. You mistake knight: Accost is, front her, boord her, wooe her, assaile her.

An. By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of Accost?

Mar. Fare you well Gentlemen.

To. And thou let her part so, Sir Andrew, would thou mightst never draw sword agen.

And. And you part so Mistrisse, I would I might never draw sword agen. Fair Lady, doe you think you have fools in hand?

Ma. Sir, I have not you by th' hand.

And. Marry but you shall have, and here's my hand.

Mar. Now sir, thought is free: I pray you bring your hand to th' Buttry barre, and let it drink.

An. Wherefore (sweet heart?) what's your Metaphor?

Mar. It's dry sir.

An. Why I think so: I am not such an asse, but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

Ma. A dry jest, sir.

And. Are you full of them?

Ma. I Sir, I have them at my finger ends: marry now
I let go your hand, I am barren. Exit Maria.

Tob. O knight, thou lack'st a cup of Canary: when did I see the so put down?

And. Never in your life, I think, unlesse you see Canary put down: me thinks sometimes I have no more wit then a Christian, or an ordinary man ha's: but I am a great eater of beef, and I believe that do's harm to my wit.

To. No question.

An. And I thought that, I'de forswear it. I'll ride home to morrow, Sir Toby.

To. Pur quoy, my dear knight?

An. What is pur-quoy? Doe, or not doe? I would I had bestowed that time in the tongues, that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting: O had I but followed the Arts.

To. Then hadst thou had an excellent head of hair.

An. Why, would that have mended my hair?

To. Past question, for thou seest it will not cool my

An. But it becomes me well enough, do'st not? (nature.

To. Excellent, it hangs like flax on a distaffe: and I hope to see a hufwife take thee between her legs, & spin it off.

An. Faith I'll home to morrow, sir Toby, your Neece will not be seen, or if she be, it's four to one, she'll none of me: the Count himself here hard by, woos her.

To. She'll none o'th Count, she'll not match above her degree, neither in estate, yeares, nor wit: I have heard her swear. Tut, there's life in't man.

And.

And. I'll stay a moneth longer. I am a fellow o'th strangest mind i'th world: I delight in Maskes and Revels sometimes altogether.

To. Art thou good at these kick-shawses, Knight?

And. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be, under the degree of my betters, and yet I will not compare with an old man.

To. What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?

And. Faith, I can cut a caper.

To. And I can cut the Mutton to't.

And. And I think I have the back-trick, simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

To. Wherefore are these things hid? wherefore have these gifts a Curtain before 'em? are they like to take dust, like Mistress Malspieture? Why dost thou not go to Church in a Galliard, and come home in a Carranto? My very walk should be a Jigge: I would not so much as make water but in a Sink-a-pace: What dost thou mean? Is it a world to hide virtues in? I did think by the excellent constitution of thy legges, it was form'd under the starre of a Galliard.

And. I, 'tis strong, and it does indifferent well in a dam'd colour'd stocken. Shall we sit about some Revels?

To. What shall we doe else: were we not born under Taurus?

And. Taurus? That's sides and heart.

To. No sir, it is legges and thighes: let me see thee caper. Ha, higher: ha, ha, excellent. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, and Viola, in mans attire.

Val. If the Duke continue these favours towards you Cesario, you are like to be much advanc'd, he hath known you but three dayes, and already you are no stranger.

Vio. You either fear his humour, or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love. Is he inconstant sir, in his favours?

Val. No believe me.

Enter Duke, Curio, and Attendants.

Vio. I thank you: here comes the Count.

Duk. Who saw Cesario ho?

Vio. On your attendance, my Lord, here.

Du. Stand you a while aloof. Cesario, Thou knowst no lesse, but all: I have unclasp'd To thee the Booke even of my secret soul.

Therefore good youth, addresse thy gate unto her, Be not deny'd access, stand at her doores, And tell them, there thy fixed foot shall grow Till thou have audience.

Vio. Sure, my Noble Lord, If she be so abandon'd to her sorrow As it is spoke, she never will admit me.

Du. Be clamorous, and leap all civil bounds, Rather then make unprofitable return.

Vio. Say I doe speak with her (my Lord) what then?

Duk. O then, unfold the passion of my love, Surprise her with discourse of my dear faith; It shall become thee well to act my woes: She will attend it better in thy youth, Then in a Nuntio's of more grave aspect.

Vio. I think not to, my Lord:

Duk. Dear Lad, believe it;

For they shall yet belye thy happy yeares, That say thou art a man: Diana's lip Is not more smooth, and rubious: thy small pipe Is as the maidens organ, shrill, and sound, And all is semblative a woman's part.

I know thy constellation is right apt For this affaire: some four or five attend him, All if you will: for I my self am best When least in company: prosper well in this, And thou shalt live as freely as thy Lord, To call his fortunes thine.

Vio. I'll doe my best

To wooe your Lady: yet a barrefull strife, Who e're I wooe, my selfe would be his wife. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Maria, and Clown.

Mar. Nay, either tell me where thou hast bin, or I will not open my lips so wide as a bristle may enter in way of thy excuse: my Lady will hang thee for thy absence.

Clo. Let her hang me: he that is well hang'd in this world, needs fear no colours.

Ma. Make that good.

Clo. He shall see none to fear.

Mar. A good lenton answer: I can tell thee where that saying was born, of I fear no colours.

Clo. Where good Mistresse Mary?

Mar. In the warres, and that may you be bold to say in your foolery.

Clo. Well, God give them wisdom that have it: and those that are fooles, let them use their talents.

Mar. Yet you will be hang'd for being so long absent, or be turn'd away, is not that as good as a hanging to you?

Clo. Many a good hanging, prevents a bad marriage: and for turning away, let summer bear it out.

Mar. You are resolute then?

Clo. Not so neither, but I am resolv'd on two points.

Mar. That if one break, the other will hold: or if both break, your gaskins fall.

Clo. Apt in good faith, very apt: well, go thy way, if Sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eves flesh, as any in Illyria.

Mar. Peace you rogue, no more o'that: here comes my Lady: make your excuse wisely, you were best.

Enter Lady Olivia, with Malvolio.

Clo. Wit, and't be thy will, put me into good fooling: those wits that think they have thee, doe very oft prove fooles: and I that am sure I lack thee, may passe for a wise man. For what sayes Quinapalus, Better a witty fool, then a foolish wit. God blesse thee, Lady.

Ol. Take the fool away.

Clo. Doe you not hear fellowes, take away the Lady.

Ol. Go too, y'are a dry fool: I'll no more of you, besides you grow dishonest.

Clo. Two faults, Madona, that drink and good counsel will amend: for give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry: bid the dishonest man mend himself, if he mend, he is no longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the Botcher mend him: any thing that's mended, is but patch'd: virtue that transgresses, is but patcht with sin, and sin that amends, is but patcht with virtue. If that this simple Sillogisme will serve, so; if it will not, what remedy?

As there is no true Cuckold but calamity, so beauty's a flower; The Lady bad take away the fool, therefore I say again, take her away.

Ol. Sir, I bad them take away you.

Clo. Misprision in the highest degree. Lady, Cuculus non facit monachum: that's as much to say, as I wear not motley in my brain: good Madona, give me leave to prove you a fool.

Ol. Can you doe it? -

Clo. Dexteriously, good Madona.

Ol. Make your proof.

Clo. I must catechize you for it, Madona, Good my Mouse of virtue answer.

Ol. Well sir, for want of other idleness, I'll bide your proof.

Clo. Good Madona, why mourn'st thou?

Ol. Good fool, for my brothers death.

Clo. I think his soul is in hell, Madona.

Ol. I know his soul is in heaven, foole.

Clo. The more fool you (Madona) to mourn for your Brothers soul; being in heaven. Take away the fool, Gentlemen.

Ol. What think you of this fool, Malvolio, doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes, and shall doe, till the pangs of death shake him: Infirmitie that decays the wife, doth ever make the better fool.

Clo. God send you, sir, a speedy Infirmitie, for the better increasing your folly: Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no Fox, but he will not pass his word for two pence that you are no fool.

Ol. How say you to that Malvolio?

Mal. I marvell your Ladiship takes delight in such a barren rascal: I saw him put down the other day, with an ordinary fool, that has no more brains then a stone. Look you now, he's out of his guard already: unlesse you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gag'd. I protest I take these Wise men, that crow so at these set kind of fooles, no better then the fooles Zanies.

Ol. O you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, and taste with a distemper'd appetite. To be generous, guiltlesse, and of free disposition, is to take those things for Bird-bolts, that you deem Cannon bullets: There is no slander in an allow'd fool, though he doe nothing but rail; nor no railing in a known discreet man, though he doe nothing but reprove.

Clo. Now Mercury indue thee with leasing, for thou speak'st well of fooles.

Enter Maria.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate, a young Gentleman, much desire to speak with you.

Ol. From the Count Orsino, is it?

Ma. I know not (Madam) 'tis a fair young man, and well attended.

Ol. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Ma. Sir Toby, Madam, your kinsman.

Ol. Fetch him off I pray you, he speaks nothing but madman: Fie on him. Go you, Malvolio; if it be a suit from the Count, I am sick, or not at home. What you will, to dismisse it.

Exit Malvo.

Now you see, sir, how your fooling growes old, and people dislike it.

Clo. Thou hast spoke for us (Madona) as if thy eldest son should be a fool: whose scull, Jove cramme with brains, for here he comes.

Enter Sir Toby.

One of thy kin has a most weak Pia-mater.

Ol. By mine honour halfe drunk. What is he at the gate, Cousin?

To. A Gentleman.

Ol. A Gentleman? What Gentleman?

To. 'Tis a Gentleman here. A plague o' these pickle Herring: How now Sot.

Clo. Good Sir Toby.

Ol. Cousin, Cousin, how have you come so early by this Lethargy?

Tob. Lethery, I desie Lethery: there's one at the gate.

Ol. I marry, what is he?

To. Let him be the devil and he will, I care not: give me faith, say I. Well, it's all one. Exit.

Ol. What's a drunken man like, fool?

Clo. Like a drown'd man, a fool, and a mad man: One draught above heat makes him a foole, the second mads him, and a third drownes him.

Ol. Go thou and seek the Crowner, and let him sit o' my Coz: for he's in the third degree of drink: he's drown'd: go look after him.

Clo. He is but mad yet, Madona, and the fool shall look to the mad man.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, yond young fellow sweares he will speak with you. I told him you were sick, he takes on him to understand so much, and therefore comes to speak with you. I told him you were asleep, he seems to have a foreknowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, Lady, he's fortified against any deniall.

Ol. Tell him, he shall not speak with me.

Mal. Ha's been told so: and he sayes he'll stand at your door like a Sheriffes post, and be the supporter to a bench, but he'll speak with you.

Ol. What kind o' man is he?

Mal. Why, of man-kind.

Ol. What manner of man?

Mal. Of very ill manners: he'll speak with you, will you, or no.

Ol. Of what personage and yeares is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy: as a squash is before 'tis a pescod, or a Codling when 'tis almost an Apple: 'Tis with him in standing water, between boy and man. He is very well-favour'd, and he speaks very shrewishly: One would think his mothers milk were scarce out of him.

Old. Let him approach: Call in my Gentlewoman.

Mal. Gentlewoman, my Lady calls. Exit.

Enter Maria.

Ol. Give me my vail: come throw it o're my face, We'll once more hear Orsino's Embassie.

Enter Viola.

Vio. The honourable Lady of the house, which is she?

Ol. Speak to me, I shall answer for her: your will.

Vio. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty. I pray you tell me if this be the Lady of the house, for I never saw her. I would be loath to cast away my speech: for besides that it is excellently well penn'd, I have taken great pains to con it. Good Beauties, let me sustain no scorn; I am very comptible, even to the least sinister usage.

Ol. Whence came you, sir?

Vio. I can say little more then I have studied, and that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modest assurance, if you be the Lady of the house, that I may proceed in speech.

Ol. Are you a Comedian?

Vio. No my profound heart: and yet (by the very phangs of malice, I swear) I am not that I play. Are you the Lady of the house?

Ol. If I do not usurp my self, I am.

Vio. Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp your self: for what is yours to bestow, is not yours to reserve. But this is from my Commission: I will on with my speech in your praise, and then shew you the heart of my message.

Ol. Come to what is important in't: I forgive you the praise.

Vio. Alas, I took great pains to study it, and 'tis Poeticall.

Ol. It is the more like to be feigned, I pray you keep it in. I heard you were sawcy at my gates, and allow'd your approach rather to wonder at you, then to hear you. If you be not mad; be gone: if you have reason, be brief: 'tis not that time of Moon with me, to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

Ma. Will you hoyst sayle, sir, here lyes your way.

Vio. No good swabber, I am to hull here a little longer. Some mollification for your Giant, sweet Lady: tell me your mind, I am a messenger.

Ol. Sure you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the curtesie of it is so fearful. Speak your office.

Vio. It alone concerns your ear: I bring no overture of war, no taxation of homage; I hold the Olyffe in my hand: my words are as full of peace as matter.

Ol. Yet you began rudely. What are you? What would you?

Vio. The rudenesse that hath appear'd in me, have I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as a maiden-head: to your ears, Divinity; to any others, prophanation.

Ol. Give us the place alone.

We will hear this divinity. Now sir, what is your text?

Vio. Most sweet Lady.

Ol. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said of it. Where lyes your Text?

Vio. In Orsino's bosome.

Ol. In his bosome? In what chapter of his bosome?

Vio. To answer by the method, in the first of his heart.

Ol. O, I have read it: it is heresie. Have you no more to say?

Vio. Good Madam, let me see your face.

Ol. Have you any Commission from your Lord, to negotiate with my face: you are now out of your Text: but we will draw the Curtain, and shew you the picture. Look you, sir, such a one I was this present: Is't not well done?

Vio. Excellently done, if God did all.

Ol. 'Tis in grain, sir, 'twill endure winde and weather.

Vio. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white, Natures own sweet, and cunning hand laid on: Lady, you are the cruell'st she alive, If you will lead these graces to the grave, And leave the world no copy.

Ol. O sir, I will not be so hard-hearted: I will give out divers scedules of my beauty. It shall be Inventoried and every particle and utensile labell'd to my will: As, Item, two lips indifferent red, Item, two grey eyes, with lids to them: Item, one neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?

Vio. I see you what your are, you are too proud: But if you were the devill, you are fair:

My Lord and Master loves you: O such love Could be but recompenc'd, though you were crown'd The non-parill of beauty.

Ol. How does he love me?

Vio. With adorations, fertill tears, With groans that thunder love, with sighes of fire.

Ol. Your Lord do's know my mind; I cannot love him, Yet I suppose him vertuous, know him noble, Of great estate, of fresh and stainlesse youth; In voyces well divulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant, And in dimension, and shape of nature, A gracious person, But yet I cannot love him: He might have took his answer long ago.

Vio. If I did love you in my masters flame, With such a suffring, such a deadly life: In your deniall, I would find no fence; I would not understand it.

Ol. Why, what would you doe?

Vio. Make me a willow Cabline at your gate, And call upon my soul within the house, Write loyall Cantons of contemned love, And sing them loud even in the dread of night: Hollow your name to the reverberate hills, And Make the babling Gossip of the aire, Cry out, Olivia: O you should not rest Between the elements of aire, and earth, But you should pittie me.

Ol. You might do much:

What is your Parentage?

Vio. Above my fortunes, yet my state is well: I am a Gentleman.

Ol. Get you to your Lord:

I cannot love him: let him send no more, Unlesse (perchance) you come to me again, To tell me how he takes it; Fare you well: I thank you for your pains: spend this for me.

Vio. I am no-feed post, Lady; keep your purse, My Master, not my self, lacks recompence. Love make his heart of flint, that you shall love. And let your fervour like my Masters be, Plac'd in contempt: Farewell fair cruelty.

Exit.

Ol. What is your Parentage?

Above my fortunes, yet my state is well: I am a Gentleman. I'll be sworne thou art, Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit, Do give thee five-fold blazon: not too fast: soft, soft, Unlesse the Master were the man. How now? Even so quickly may one catch the plague? Methinks I feele this youth's perfections, With an invisible, and subtle stealth To creep in at mine eyes. Well, let it be. What hoa, Malvolio.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. Here Madam, at your service.

Ol. Run after that same peevish Messenger, The Counts man: he left this Ring behind him, Would I, or not: tell him, I'll none of it. Desire him not to flatter with his Lord, Nor hold him up with hopes, I am not for him: If that the youth will come this way to morrow, I'll give him reasons for't by thee, Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, I will.

Exit.

Ol. I do I know not what, and fear to find Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind:

Fate

Fate, shew thy force, our selves we do not owe ;
What is decreed, must be : and be this so.

Finis, Actus primi.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Antonio, and Sebastian.

An. Will you stay no longer : nor will you not that I go with you ?

Seb. By your patience, no : my starres shine darkly over me ; the malignancy of my fate, might perhaps distemper yours, therefore I shall crave of you your leave, that I may bear my evils alone. It were a bad recompence for your love, to lay any of them on you.

An. Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound.

Seb. No sooth, sir, my determinate voyage is meer extravagancy. But I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modesty, that you will not extort from me, what I am willing to keep in : therefore it charges me in manners, the rather to express my self : you must know of me then, Antonio, my name is Sebastian (which I call'd Redonigo) my father was that Sebastian of Messaline, whom I know you have heard of. He left behind him, my self, and a sister, both born in one houre : if the Heavens had been pleas'd, would we had so ended. But you sir, alter'd that, for some houres before you took me from the breach of the sea, was my sister drown'd.

An. Alas the day !

Seb. A Lady sir, though it was said she much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautifull : but though I could not with such estimable wonder over-far believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publish her, she bore a minde that envy could not but call fair : She is drown'd already, sir, with salt water, though I seem to drown her remembrance again with more.

An. Pardon me, sir, your bad entertainment.

Seb. O good Antonio, forgive me your trouble.

An. If you will not murder me for my love, let me be your servant.

Seb. If you will not undo what you have done, that is kill him, whom you have recover'd, desire it not. Fare ye well at once, my bosome is full of kindness, and I am yet so near the manners of my mother, that upon the least occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me : I am bound to the Count Orsino's Court, farewell.

Exit.

An. The gentleness of all the gods go with thee : I have made enemies in Orsino's Court, Else would I very shortly see thee there : But come what may, I do adore thee so, That danger shall seem sport, and I will go :

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Viola, and Malvolio, at severall doors.

Mal. Were not you ev'n now, with the Countess Olivia ?

Vio. Even now sir, on a moderate pace, I have since arriv'd but hither.

Mal. She returns this Ring to you (sir) you might have saved me my pains, to have taken it away your self. She adds moreover, that you should put your Lord in a desperate assurance, she will none of him. And one thing more, that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your Lords taking of this : receive it so.

Vio. She took the Ring of me, I'll none of it.

Mal. Come, sir, you peevishly threw it to her : and her Will is, it should be so return'd : If it be worth stooping for : there it lyes, in your eye : if not, be it his that finds it.

Exit.

Vio. I left no Ring with her : what means this Lady ? Fortune forbid my out-side have not charm'd her :

She made good view of me, indeed so much, That sure me thought her eyes had lost her tongue, For she did speak in starts distractedly.

She loves me sure, the cunning of her passion

Invites me in this churlish messenger :

None of my Lords Ring ? Why, he sent her none ?

I am the man, if it be so 'tis,

Poor Lady, she were better love a dream :

Disguise, I see thou art a wickednesse,

Wherein the pregnant enemy does much.

How easie is it, for the proper false

In womens waxen hearts to set their formes :

Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we,

For such as we are made, if such we be :

How will this fadge ? My Master loves her dearly,

And I (poor monster) fond as much on him :

And she (mistaken) seems to doat on me :

What will become of this ? As I am a man,

My state is desperate for my maisters love ;

As I am woman (now alas the day)

What thriftlesse sighes shall poor Olivia breath ?

O time, thou must untangle this, not I,

It is too hard a knot for me t'untie.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.

Tob. Approach Sir Andrew : not to be a bed after midnight, is to be up betimes, and Diliculo surgere, thou know'st.

And Nay by my troth I know not : but I know, to be up late, is to be up late.

To. A false conclusion : I hate it as an unfill'd Canne, To be up after midnight, and to go to bed then is early : so that to go to bed after midnight, is to go to bed betimes. Does not our lives consist of the four Elements ?

An. Faith so they say, but I think it rather consists of eating and drinking.

To. Th'art a scholler, let us therefore eat and drink, Marian I say, a stoope of wine.

Enter Clown.

An. Here comes the foole, ifaith.

Cl. How now my hearts : did you never see the Picture of we three ?

To. Welcome asse, now let's have a catch.

And. By my troth the foole has an excellent breast. I had rather then forty shillings I had such a legge, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the foole has. Insooth thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spok'st of Pigrogromitus, of the Vapians passing the Equinoctiall of Queubus : twas very good ifaith : I sent thee six pence for for thy Lemon, hadst it?

Clo. I did impericos thy gratillity: for Malvolio's nose is no Whip-stock. My Lady has a white hand, and the Mermaidons are no bottle ale houses.

An. Excellent: Why this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now a song.

To. Come on, there is six pence for you. Let's have a song.

An. There's a testrill of me too: if one knight give a--

Clo. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life?

To. A love song, a love song.

An. I, I. I care not for good life.

Clown sings.

O Mistress mine, where are you roming?

O stay and hear, your true loves coming,

That can sing both high and low.

Trip no further pretty sweeting.

Journeys end in lovers meeting.

Every wise mans son doth know.

An. Excellent good, ifaith.

To. Good, good.

Clo. What is love, 'tis not hereafter,
Present mirth, hath present laughter:
What's to come, is still unsure,
In delay there lyes no plenty,
Then come kiss me sweet and twenty:
Youth's a stuff will not endure.

An. A mellifluous voyce, as I am true knight.

To. A contagious breath.

An. Very sweet, and contagious, ifaith.

To. To hear by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion.

But shall we make the Welkin dance indeed? shall we rowze the night-Owle in a Catch, that will draw three souls out of one Weaver? Shall we do that?

An. And you love me, let's doo't: I am a dog at a Catch.

Clo. Byrlady sir, and some dogs will catch well.

An. Most certain: Let our Catch be, Thou Knave.

Clo. Hold thy peace, thou Knave knight. I shall be constrain'd in't, to call thee Knave, Knight.

An. 'Tis not the first time I have constrained one to call me knave. Begin foole: it begins, Hold thy peace.

Clo. Shall I never begin if I hold my peace.

An. Good ifaith: Come begin. Catch sing.

Enter Maria.

Mar. What a catterwalling do you keep here? If my Lady have not call'd up her Steward, Malvolio, and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

To. My Lady's a Catayan, we are politicians, Malvolio's a Peg-a-ramsie, and Three merry men be we. Am not I confanguinous? Am not I of her blood: tilly vally. Lady! There dwelt a man in Babylon, Lady, Lady.

Clo. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

An. I, he do's well enough if he be dispos'd, and so do I too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more naturall.

To. O twelfth day of December.

Mar. For the love o'God peace.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. My masters are you mad? Or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to gabble like Tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an Ale-house of my Ladies house, that ye squeak out your Coziers Catches without any mitigation or remorse of voyce? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in you?

To. We did keep time sir in our Catches. Sneek up.

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My Lady bad me tell you, that she harbours you as her kinsman, she's nothing ally'd to your disorders. If you can seperate your self and your misdemeanours, you are welcome to the house: if not, and it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

To. Farewell dear heart, since I must needs be gone.

Mar. Nay, good Sir Toby.

Clo. His eyes do shew his dayes are almost done.

Mal. Is't even so?

To. But I will never dye.

Clo. Sir Toby, there you lye.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

To. Shall I bid him go?

Clo. What and if you do?

To. Shall I bid him go, and spare not?

Clo. O no, no, no, no, you dare not.

To. Out o'tune sir, ye lye: Art any more then a Steward? Dost thou think because thou art vertuous, there shall be no more Cakes and Ale?

Clo. Yes by S. Anne, and Ginger shall be hot i'th mouth too.

To. Th'art i'th right. Go sir, rub your chain with crumbs. A Slope of Wine Maria.

Mal. Mistress Mary, if you priz'd my Ladies favour at any thing more then contempt, you would not give means for this uncivill rule; she shall know of it by this hand. Exit.

Mar. Go shake your ears.

An. 'Twere as good a deed as to drink when a mans a hungry, to challeng him the field, and then to break promise with him, and make a foole of him.

To. Doo't knight, I'll write thee a Challenge: or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet Sir Toby, be patient for to night; Since the youth of the Counts was to day with my Lady, she is much out of quiet. For Mounseur Malvolio, let me alone with him: If I do not gull him into an ayword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lye straight in my bed: I know I can do it.

To. Possess us, possess us, tell us something of him.

Mar. Marry sir, sometimes he is a kind of a Puritane,

An. O, if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog.

To. What for being a Puritan, thy exquisite reason, dear knight.

An. I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason good enough.

Mar. The dev'll a Puritan that he is, or any thing constantly but a time pleaser, an affection'd Afs, that Cons State without book, and utters it by great swarths. The best perswaded of himself: so cram'd (as he thinks) with excellencies, that it is his ground of faith, that all that look on him, love him: and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure Epistles of love, wherein by the colour of his beard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gate, the expresture of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personated. I can write very like my Lady your Niece, on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands.

To. Excellent, I smell a device.

An. I hav't in my nose too.

To. He shall think by the Letters that thou wilt drop that

That they come from my Niece, and that she's in love with him-

Mar. My purpose is indeed a horse of that colour.

An. And your horse now would make him an Ass.

Mar. Ass, I doubt not.

An. O 'twill be admirable.

Mar. Sport royall I warrant you: I know my Physick will work with him, I will plant you two, and let the Foole make a third, where he shall find the Letter: observe this construction of it: For this night to bed, and dream on the event. Farewell. Exit.

To. Good night Penthesilea.

An. Before me she's a good wench.

To. She's a beagle, true bred, and one that adores me; what o' that?

An. I was ador'd once too.

To. Let's to bed knight: Thou hadst need send for more money.

An. If I cannot recover your Niece, I am a foul way out.

To. Send for money knight, if thou hast her not i'th end, call me Cut.

An. If I do not, never trust me, take it how you will.

To. Come, come, I'll go burn some Sack, 'tis too late to go to bed now: Come knight, come knight. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and others.

Du. Give me some Musick; Now good morrow friends; Now good Cesario, but that piece of song, That old and Antick song we heard last night; Me thought it did relieve my passion much, More then light aires, and recollected termes Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times. Come, but one verse.

Cur. He is not here (so please your Lordship) that should sing it.

Du. Who was it?

Cur. Fesse the Jester my Lord, a foole that the Lady Olivia's Father took much delight in. He is about the house.

Du. Seek him out, and play the tune the while. Musick plays.

Come hither Boy, if ever thou shalt love
In the sweet pangs of it, remember me?
For such as I am, all true Lovers are,
Unstaid and skittish in all motions else,
Save in the constant image of the creature
That is belov'd. How dost thou like this tune?

Vio. It gives a very eccho to the seat
Where love is thron'd.

Du. Thou dost speak masterly,
My life upon't, young though thou art, thine eye
Hath staid upon some favour that it loves:
Hath it not boy?

Vio. A little by your favour.

Du. What kind of woman is't?

Vio. Of your complexion.

Du. She is not worth thee then. What years is't?

Vio. About your years my Lord.

Du. Too old by heaven: Let still the woman take

An elder then her self, so wears she to him:

So swaves she leuell in her husbands heart:

For boy, however we do praise our selves,

Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,

More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn,

Then womens are.

Vio. I think it well my Lord.

Du. Then let thy love be younger then thy self,
Or thy affection cannot hold the bent:

For women are as Roses, whose fair flower

Being once displaid, doth fall that very houre.

Vio. And so they are: alas, that they are so:

To dye, even when they to perfection grow.

Enter Curio, and Clown.

Du. O fellow come, the song we had last night:

Mark it Cesario, it is old and plain;

The Spinsters and the Knitters in the Sun,

And the free maids that weave their tread with bones,

Do use to chant it: it is silly sooth,

And dallies with the innocence of love,

Like the old age.

Clow. Are you ready Sir?

Du. I prethee sing.

The Song.

Come away, come away death,

And in sad cypress let me be laid,

Fie away, fie away breath,

I am slain by a fair cruell maid.

(pare it.)

My shroud of white, stuck all with Ew, O pre-

My part of death no one so true did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower sweet

On my black coffin, let there be strown:

Not a friend, not a friend greet

My poor corps, where my bones shall be thrown:

A thousand thousand sighs to save, lay me O where

Sad true lover never find my grave, so weep there.

Du. There's for thy pains.

Clow. No pains sir, I take pleasure in singing sir.

Du. I'll pay thy pleasure then.

Clow. Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid one time, or another.

Du. Give me now leave, to leave thee.

Clow. Now the melancholly God protect thee, and the Tailor make thy doublet of changeable Taffara, for thy mind is a very Opall. I would have men of such constancy put to Sea, that their business might be every thing, and their intent every where, for that's it that always makes a good voyage of nothing. Farewell. Exit.

Du. Let all the rest give place: Once more Cesario,
Get thee yond same sovereign cruelty:

Tell her my love (more noble then the world)

Prizes not quantity of dirty lands,

The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her,

Tell her I told as giddily as fortune:

But 'tis that miracle, and Queen of Jems

That nature pranks her in, attracts my soule.

Vio. But if she cannot love you sir.

Du. It cannot be so answer'd.

Vio. Sooth but you must.

Say that some Lady, as perhaps there is,

Hath for your love as great a pang of heart

As you have for Olivia: you cannot love her:

You tell her so: Must she not then be answer'd?

Du. There is no womans sides

Can abide the beating of so strong a passion,
As love doth give my heart: no woman's heart
So big, to hold so much, they lack retention.
Alas, their love may be call'd appetite:
No motion of the Liver, but the Pallat,
That suffer surfer, cloyment, and revolt;
But mine is all as hungry as the Sea,
And can digest as much, make no compare
Between that love a woman can bear me,
And that I owe Olivia.

Vio. I but I know.

Du. What dost thou know?

Vio. Too well what love women to men owe:
In faith they are as true of heart, as we.
My father had a daughter lov'd a man
As it might be perhaps, were I a woman
I should your Lordship.

Du. And what's her history?

Vio. A blank, my Lord: she never told her love,
But let concealment like a worme i'th bud
Feed on her damask cheek: she pin'd in thought,
And with a green and yellow melancholly,
She sate like Patience on a Monument,
Smiling at grief. Was not this love indeed?
We men may say more, swear more, but indeed
Our shews are more then will: for still we prove
Much in our voves, but little in our love.

Du. But dy'd thy sister of her love, my boy?

Vio. I am all the daughters of my Fathers house,
And all the brothers too, and yet I know not.
Sir, shall I to this Lady?

Du. I that's the Theam:

To her in haste? give her this Jewell: say,
My love can give no place, bide no deny.

Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

To. Come thy wayes, Signior Fabian.

Fab. Nay I'll come: if I lose a scruple of this sport, let me be boy'd to death with Melancholly.

To. Would'st thou not be glad to have the niggardly
Rascally sheep-biter, come by some notable shame?

Fa. I would exult man; you know he brought me out of favour with my Lady, about a Bear-baiting here.

To. To anger him we'll have the Bear again, and we will foole him black and blew, shall we not, Sir Andrew?

An. And we do not, it is pitty of our lives.

Enter Maria.

To. Here comes the little villain: How now my Nettle of India?

Mar. Get ye all three into the box tree: Malvolio's coming down this walk, he ha's been yonder i'the Sun practising behaviour to his own shadow this half hour:
observe him for the love of Mockery: for I know this Letter will make a contemplative Idiot of him. Close in the name of jesting, lye thou there: for here comes the Trowt, that must be caught with tickling. Exit.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. 'Tis but Fortune, all is fortune. Maria once told me she did affect me, and I have heard her self come thus near, that should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides she uses me with a more exalted respect, then any one else that follows her. What should

I think on't?

To. Here's an over-weening rogue.

Fa. Oh peace: Contemplation makes a rare Turkey
Cock of him, how he jets under his advan'd plumes.

And. 'Slight, I could so beat the Rogue.

To. Peace I say.

Mal. To be Count Malvolio.

To. Ah Rogue.

An. Pistoll him, pistoll him.

To. Peace, peace.

Mal. There is example for't: The Lady of the Strachy, married the yeoman of the wardrobe.

An. Fye on him Jezabel.

Fa. O peace, now he's deeply in: look how imagination blows him.

Mal. Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state.

To. O for a stone-bow to hit him in the eye.

Mal. Calling my Officers about me, in my branch'd Velvet gown: having come from a day bed, where I have left Olivia sleeping.

To. Fire and Brimstone.

Fa. O peace, peace.

Mal. And then to have the humour of state: and after a demure travaile of regard: telling them I know my place, as I would they should do theirs: to ask for my kinsman Toby.

To. Bolts and shackles.

Fa. Oh peace, peace, peace, now, now.

Mal. Seaven of my people with an obedient start, make out for him: I frown the while, and perchance winde up my watch, or play with some rich Jewell: Toby approaches; curtsies there to me.

To. Shall this fellow live?

Fa. Though our silence be drawn from us with cares, yet peace.

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus: quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of controll.

To. And do's not Toby take you a blow o'the lippes
then?

Mal. Saying, Cofin Toby, my Fortunes having cast me on your Neece, give me this prerogative of speech:

To. What, what?

Mal. You must amend your drunkenness.

To. Our scab.

Fab. Nay patience, or we break the sinews of our plot?

Mal. Besides you waste the treasure of your time, with a foolish knight.

And. That's me I warrant you:

Mal. One Sir Andrew.

And. I knew 'twas I, for many do call me foole.

Mal. What employment have we here?

Fa. Now is the Woodcock near the gin.

To. Oh peace, and the spirit of humors intimate reading aloud to him.

Mal. By my life this is my Ladies hand: these be her very C's, her W's, and her T's, and thus makes she her great P's. It is in contempt to question her hand.

And. Her C's, her W's, and her T's: why that?

Mal. To the unknown below'd, this, and my good Wishes:
Her very Phrases: By your leave wax. Soft, and the im-pressure her Lucrece, with which she uses to seal: 'tis my Lady: To whom should this be?

Fab. This winns him, Liver and all.

Mal.

Mal. Jove knowes I love, but who, Lips do not move, no man must know. No man must know. What follows? The numbers alter'd: No man must know, If this should be thee, Malvolio?

To. Marry hang thee brock.

Mal. I may command where I adore, but silence like a Lucress wife, With bloudless stroke my heart doth gore, M.O.A.I. doth sway my life.

Fa. A fustian riddle.

To. Excellent Wench, say I.

Mal. M.O.A.I. doth sway my life. Nay but first let me see, let me see.

Fab. What dish of poison has she dress'd him?

To. And with what wing the stallion checks at it?

Mal. I may command, where I adore: Why she may command me: I serve her, she is my Lady. Why this is evident to any formall capacity. There is no obstruction in this, and the end; What should that Alphabeticall position portend, If I could make that resemble something in me? Softly; M.O.A.I.

To. O, I, make up that, he is now at a cold sent.

Fab. Sowter will cry upon't for all this, though it be as rank as a Fox.

Mal. M. Malvolio, M. Why that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I say he would work it out, the Curre is excellent at faults.

Mal. M. But then there is no consonancy in the sequell that suffers under probation: A. should follow, but O. does.

Fa. And O. shall end, I hope.

To. I, or I'll cudgell him, and make him cry O.

Mal. And then I. comes behind.

Fab. I, and you had any eye behinde you, you might see more detraction at your heels, then Fortunes before you.

Mal. M.O.A.I. This simulation is not as the former: and yet to crush this a little, it would bow me, for every one of these Letters are in my name. Soft, here follows prose: If this fall into thy hand, revolve. In my Stars I am above thee, but be not afraid of greatness: Some are become great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness put upon em. Thy faces upon their hands, let thy blond and spirit embrace them, and to inure thy self to what thou art like to be: cast thy humble slough, and appear fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants: Let thy tongue tang arguments of State; put thy self into the trick of singularity. She thus advises thee, that sighes for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings, and wish'd to see thee ever cross-garter'd: I say remember, go too, thou art made, if thou desir'st to be so: If not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch Fortunes fingers: Farewell. She that would alter services with thee, the fortunate unhappy daylight and champion discovers not more: This is open, I will be proud, I will read politick Authours, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off grosse acquaintance, I will be point-devise, the very man. I do now foole my selfe, to let imagination jade me; for every reason excites to this, that my Lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late, she did praise my legge being cross-garter'd, and in this she manifests her self to my love, and with a kind of conjunction drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my starres, I am happy: I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings and cross-garter'd even with the swiftnesse of putting on. Jove, and my starres be praised. Here is yet a postscript. Thou canst not choose to know who I am. If thou entertainst my love, let it appear in thy smiling, thy smiles become thee well. Therefore in my presence still smile, dear my sweet, I prethee. Jove I thank thee, I will smile, I will do every thing that thou wilt have me. Exit.

Fab. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.

To. I could marry this wench for this device.

An. So could I too.

To. And ask no other dowry with her, but such another jest.

Enter Maria.

An. Nor I neither.

Fab. Here comes my noble gull-catcher.

To. Wilt thou set thy foot o'my neck?

An. Or o'mine either?

To. Shall I play my freedome at a tray-trip, and become thy bond-slave?

An. I faith, or either?

Tob. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that when the image of it leaves him, he must run mad.

Ma. Nay but say true, do's it work upon him?

To. Like Aqua-vita with a Midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my Lady: he will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors, and cross-garter'd, a fashion she detests: and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unfuteable to her disposition, being addicted to melancholy, as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt: if you will see it, follow me.-----

To. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent devill of wit.

And. I'll make one too.

Exeunt.

Finis Actus Secundi

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Viola, and Clown.

Vio. Save thee Friend and thy Musick: dost thou live by the Tabor?

Clo. No sir, I live by the Church.

Vio. Art thou a Churchman?

Clo. No such matter, sir, I do live by the Church: for, I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the Church.

Vio. So thou maist say the King lyes by a begger, if a begger dwell near him: or the Church stands by thy Tabor, if thy Tabor stand by the Church.

Clo. You have said, sir: To see this age! A sentence is but a chev'rill glove to a good wit; how quickly the wrong side may be turn'd outward.

Vio. Nay that's certain: they that dally nicely with words, may quickly make them wanton.

Clo. I would therefore my sister had no name, Sir.

Vio. Why man?

Clo. Why, sir, her name's a word, and to dally with that word, might make my sister wanton: But indeed, words are very Rascals, since bonds disgrac'd them.

Vio. Thy reason man?

Clo.

Clo. Troth, fir, I can yield you none without words, and words are grown so false, I am loath to prove reason with them.

Vio. I warrant thou art a merry fellow, and canst for nothing.

Clo. Not so, fir, I doe care for something: but in my conscience, fir, I doe not care for you: if that be to care for nothing, fir, I would it would make you invisible.

Vio. Art not thou the Lady Olivia's fool?

Clo. No indeed, fir, the Lady Olivia has no folly, she will keep no fool, fir, till she be married, and fools are as like husbands, as Pitchers are to Herrings, the husband's the bigger: I am indeed not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the Count Orsino's.

Clo. Foolery, fir, does walk about the Orbe like the Sun, it shines every where. I would be sorry, fir, but the Fool should be as oft with your Master, as with my Mistress: I think I saw your wisdom there.

Vio. Nay, and thou passe upon me, I'll no more with thee. Hold there's expences for thee.

Clo. Now Jove in his next commodity of hair, send thee a beard.

Vio. By my troth, I'll tell thee, I am almost sick for one, though I would not have it grow on my chin. Is thy Lady within?

Clo. Would not a pair of these have bred, fir?

Vio. Yes, being kept together, and put to use.

Clo. I would play Lord Pandarus of Phrygia, fir, to bring a Cressida to this Troilus.

Vio. I understand you, fir, tis well begg'd.

Clo. The matter I hope is not great, fir; begging, but a beggar: Cressida was a beggar. My Lady is within, fir. I will conster to them whence you come, who you are, and what you would is cut of my Welkin, I might say, Element, but the word is over-worn.

Exit.

Vio. This fellow is wise enough to play the fool, And to doe that well craves a kind of wit: He must observe their mood on whom he jests, The quality of persons, and the time: And like the Haggard, check at every Feather That comes before his eye. This is a practice, As full of labour as a Wife-mans Art: For folly that he wisely shewes, is fit: But wise mens folly faln, quite taint their wit.

Enter Sir Toby and Andrew.

To. Saye you Gentleman.

Vio. And you fir.

And Dieu vous guard Monsieur.

Vio. Et vous ausie vostre serviteur.

And. I hope, fir, you are, and I am yours.

To. Will you encounter the house, my Neece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your Neece, fir, I mean she is the list of my voyage.

To. Taste your legges, fir, put them to motion.

Vio. My legges doe better understand me, fir, then I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legges.

To. I mean to go, fir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gate and entrance, but we are prevented.

Enter Olivia and Gentlewoman.

Most excellent accomplish'd Lady, the heavens rain Odours on you.

And. That youth's a rare Courtier, rain Odours, well.

Vio. My matter hath no voyce, Lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed eare.

And. Odours, pregnant, and vouchsafed: I'll get 'em all three ready.

Ol. Let the Garden door be shut, and leave me to my hearing. Give me your hand, fir.

Vio. My duty, Madam, and most humble service.

Ol. What is your name?

Vio. Cesario is your servants name, fair Princeesse.

Ol. My servant, fir? 'Twas never merry world, Since lowly feigning was call'd complement: Y'are servant to the Count Orsino (youth.)

Vio. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours: Your servants servant is your servant, Madam.

Olivia. For him, I think not on him: for his thoughts, Would they were blanks rather then fill'd with me.

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts On his behalfe.

Ol. O by your leave I pray you. I had you never speak again of him; But would you undertake another suit? I had rather hear you, to solicit that, Then Musick from the spheares.

Vio. Dear Lady.

Ol. Give me leave, I beseech you: I did send, After the last enchantment you did hear, A Ring in chace of you. So did I abuse My self, my servant, and I fear me, you: Under your hard construction must I sit, To force that on you in a shamefull cunning Which you knew none of yours. What might you think? Have you not set mine honour at the stake, And baited it with all th'unmuzzled thoughts That tyrannous heart can think? to one of your receiving Enough is shewn, a Cipresse, not a bosome, Hides my poor heart: so let me hear you speak.

Vio. I pittie you.

Ol. That's a degree to love.

Vio. No not a grice: for 'tis a vulgar proof That very oft we pittie enemies.

Ol. Why then me thinks 'tis time to smile agen: O world, how apt the poor are to be proud? If one should be a prey, how much better To fall before the Lion, then the Wolfe?

Clock strikes.

The clock upbraides me with the waste of time. Be not afraid good youth, I will not have you; And yet when wit and youth is come to harvest: Your wife is like to reap a proper man: There lies your way, due West.

Vio. Then Westward hoe:

Grace and good disposition attend your Ladiship: You'll nothing, Madam, to my Lord, by me:

Ol. Stay: I prethee tell me what thou think'st of me?

Vio. That you doe think you are not what you are.

Ol. If I think so, I think the same of you.

Vio. Then think you right: I am not what I am.

Ol. I would you were, as I would have you be.

Vio. Would it be better, Madam, then I am? I wish it might, for now I am your foole.

Ol. O what a deal of scorn, looks beautifull? In the contempt and anger of his lip,

A murderous guilt shewes not it self more soon, Then love that would seem hid: Loves night, is noon. Cesario, by the Roses of the Spring, By maid-hood, honour, truth, and every thing, I love thee so, that maugre all thy pride,

Nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide :
Doe not extort thy reasons from this clause ,
For that I woove, thou therefore hast no cause :
But rather reason thus, with reason fetter ;
Love sought, is good ; but given unsought, is better.

Vio. By innocence I swear, and by my youth,
I have one heart, one bosome, and one truth,
And that no woman has, nor never none
Shall mistress be of it, save I alone.

And so adieu, good Madam, never more,
Will I my Masters teares to you deplore.

Ol. Yet come again : for thou perhaps may'st move
That heart, which now abhorres to like his love.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

And. No faith, I'll not stay a jot longer.

Tob. Thy reason dear venome, give thy reason.

Fab. You must needs yield your reason, Sir Andrew.

And. Marry I saw your Neece doe more favours to the Counts Serving-man, than ever she bestow'd upon me :
I saw't i'th Orchard.

Tob. Did she see thee the while, old boy, tell me that ?

And. As plain as I see you now.

Fab. This was a great argument of love in her toward
you.

And. 'Slight ; will you make an Ass of me ?

Fab. I prove it legitimate, sir, upon the oathes of judgement, and reason.

Tob. And they have been grand Jury-men, since before Noah was a Sailor.

Fab. She did shew favour to the youth in your sight, onely to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valour, to put fire in your Heart, and brimstone in your Liver :
you should then have accosted her, and with some excellent jests (fire-new from the mint) you should have bang'd the youth into dumbnesse : this was look'd for at your hand, and this was baulkt : the double gilt of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sail'd into the North of my Ladies opinion, where you will hang like an Ickle on a Dutchmans beard, unless you doe redeem it by some laudable attempt, either of valour or policy.

And. And't be any way, it must be with Valour, for Policy I hate : I had as lief be a Brownist, as a Politician.

Tob. Why then build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valour. Challenge me the Counts youth to fight with him, hurt him in eleven places, my Neece shall take note of it, and assure thy self, there is no love-Broker in the world, can more prevail in mens commendation with women, than report of valour.

Fab. There is no way but this, Sir Andrew.

And. Will either of you bear me a challenge to him ?

To. Go write it in a martiall hand, be curst and brief :
it is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent, and full of invention : taunt him with the license of Ink : if thou thou'st him some thrice, it shall not be amisse, and as many Lyes, as will lye in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware in England :

set 'em down, go about it. Let there be gall enough in thy Ink, though thou write with a Goose-pen, no matter :
about it.

And. Where shall I find you ?

Tob. We'll call thee at the Cubiculo : Go.

Exit Sir Andrew.

Fab. This is a dear Manakin to you, Sir Toby.

Tob. I have been dear to him lad, some two thousand strong, or so.

Fa. We shall have a rare Letter from him ; but you'll not deliver't.

Tob. Never trust me then : and by all meanes stirre on the youth to an answer. I think Oxen and wain-ropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were open'd and you find so much blood in his Liver, as will clog the foot of a flea, I'll eat the rest of th'anatomy.

Fab. And his opposite the youth beares in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter Maria.

Tob. Look where the youngest Wren of mine comes.

Mar. If you desire the spleen, and will laugh your selves into stitches, follow me ; yond gull Malvolio is turn'd Heathen, a very Renegatho ; for there is no christian that meanes to be saved by believing rightly, can ever believe such impossible passages of grossnesse. He's in yellow stockings.

Tob. And cross'd garter'd ?

Mar. Most villanously : like a Pedant that keeps a Schoole i'th Church : I have dogg'd him like his murthe-rer. He does obey every point of the Letter that I dropt, to betray him : He does smile his face into more lines, then is in the new Mappe, with the augmentation of the Indies : you have not seen such a thing as 'tis : I can hardly forbear hurling things at him, I know my Lady will strike him : if she doe, he'll smile, and tak't for a great favour.

Tob. Come bring us, bring us where he is.

Exeunt omnes.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sebastian, and Anthonio.

Seb. I would not by my will have troubled you,
But since you make your pleasure of your pains,
I will no further chide you.

Anth. I could not stay behind you : my desire
(More sharp then filed steel) did spur me forth,
And not all love to see you (though so much
As might have drawn one to a longer voyage)
But jealousy, what might befall your travell,
Being skilless in these parts : which to a stranger,
Unguided, and unfriended, often prove
Rough, and unhospitable. My willing love,
The rather by these arguments of fear
Set forth in your pursuit.

Seb. My kind Anthonio,
I can no other answer make, but thanks :
But were my worth, as is my conscience firm,

You

You should find better dealing : what's to doe ?
Shall we go see the reliicks of this Town ?

Ant. To morrow, fir, best first go see your Lodging.

Seb. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night,

I pray you let us satisfie our eyes
With the memorials, and the things of fame
That doe renown this City.

Ant. Would you'd pardon me :

I doe not without danger walk these streets.
Once in a sea-fight 'gainst the Count his gallies,
I did some service, of such note indeed,
That were I tane here, it would scarce be answer'd.

Seb. Belike you slew great number of his people.

Ant. Th' offence is not of such a bloody nature,
Albeit the quality of time, and quarrell
Might well have given us bloody argument :
It might have since been answer'd in repaying
What we took from them, which for Traffick's sake
Most of our City did. Onely my self stood out,
For which if I be laps'd in this place
I shall pay deare.

Seb. Doe not then walk too open.

Ant. It doth not fit me : hold, fir, here's my purse.
In the South Suburhes at the Elephant
Is best to lodge : I will bespeak our diet,
Whiles you beguile the time, and feed your knowledge
With viewing of the Town, there shall you have me.

Seb. Why I your purse ?

Ant. Haply your eye shall light upon some toy
You have desire to purchase : and your store
I think is not for idle Markets, fir.

Seb. I'll be your purse-bearer, and leave you
For an hour.

Ant. To th' Elephant.

Seb. I doe remember.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Olivia, and Maria.

Ol. I have sent after him, he sayes he'll come :
How shall I feast him ? What bestow of him ?
For youth is bought more oft, then hegg'd, or borrow'd.
I speak too loud : Where's Malvolio, he is sad, and civil,
And suits well for a servant with my fortunes,
Where is Malvolio ?

Mar. He's coming, Madam :
But in very strange manner. He is sure posselt, Madam.

Ol. Why, what's the matter, does he rave ?

Mar. No, Madam, he does nothing but smile : your Ladiship were best to have some guard about you, if he come, for sure the man is tainted in's wits.

Ol. Go call him hither.

Enter Malvolio.

I am as mad as he,
If sad and merry madnesse equall be.
How now Malvolio ?

Mal. Sweet Lady, ha, ha.

Ol. Smil'st thou ? I sent for thee upon a sad occasion.

Mal. Sad Lady, I could be sad :
This does make some obstruction in the blood :
This crosse-gartering, but what of that ?

If it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true
Sonnet is : Please one, and please all.

Ol. Why ? How dost thou man ?

What is the matter with thee ?

Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legges : It did come to his hands, and Commands shall be executed. I think we doe know the sweet Roman hand.

Ol. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio ?

Mal. To bed ? I sweet heart : and I'll come to thee.

Ol. God comfort thee : why dost thou smile so, and kisse thy hand so oft ?

Mar. How doe you, Malvolio ?

Mal. At your request :

Yes Nightingales answer Dawes.

Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldnesse before my Lady ?

Mal. Be not afraid of greatnesse : 'twas well writ.

Ol. What meanest thou by that Malvolio ?

Mal. Some are born great.

Ol. Ha ?

Mal. Some achieve greatnesse.

Ol. What say'st thou ?

Mal. And some have greatnesse thrust upon them.

Ol. Heaven restore thee.

Mal. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings.

Ol. Thy yellow stockings ?

Mal. And wish'd to see thee crosse-garter'd.

Ol. Crosse-garter'd ?

Mal. Go too, thou art made, if thou desir'st to be so.

Ol. Am I made ?

Mal. If not, let me see thee a servant still.

Ol. Why this is very Midsummer madnesse.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam, the young Gentleman of the Count Orsino's is return'd, I could hardly entreat him back : he attends your Ladiships pleasure.

Ol. I'll come to him.

Good Maria, let this fellow be look'd to. Where's my Cousin Toby, let some of my people have a speciall care of him, I would not have him miscarry for the half of my Dowry.

Exit.

Mal. Oh, ho, doe you come near me now : no worse man then Sir Toby to look to me. This concurs directly with the Letter, she sends him on purpose, that I may appear stubborn to him : for she incites me to that in the Letter. Cast thy humble slough, sayes she : be opposite with a Kinsman, surly with servants, let thy tongue tang with arguments of state, put thy self into the trick of singularity : and consequently sets down the manner how : as a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some Sir of note, and so forth. I have limde her, but it is Jove doing, and Jove make me thankfull.
And when she went away now, let this Fellow be look'd to : Fellow ? not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but Fellow. Why every thing adheres together, that no dramme of a scruple ; no scruple of a scruple ; no obstacle ; no incredulous or unsafe circumstance : What can be said ?
Nothing that can be, can come between me, and the full prospect of my hopes. Well Jove, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Enter Toby, Fabian, and Maria.

To

To. Which way is he in the name of sanctity? If all the devils of hell be drawn in little, and Legion himself possesse him, yet I'll speak to him.

Fab. Here he is, here he is: how is't with you sir? How is't with you man?

Mal. Go off, I discard you: let me enjoy my private: go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him; did not I tell you? Sir Toby, my Lady prays you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah ha. does she so?

To. Go to, go to: peace, peace: we must deale gently with him: Let me alone. How doe you, Malvolio? How is't with you? What man, despise the devil: consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Doe you know what you say?

Mar. La you, and you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart. Pray God he be not bewitch'd.

Fab. Carry his water to th' wife woman.

Mar. Marry and it shall be done to morrow morning if I live. My Lady would not loose him for more then I'll say.

Mal. How now Mistress?

Mar. Oh Lord.

To. Prethee hold thy peace, this is not the way: Doe you not see you move him?

Fa. No my gentleness, gently, gently: the Fiend is rough, and will not be roughly us'd.

To. Why how now my havock? how dost thou chuck?

Mal. Sir.

To. I biddy, come with me. What man, 'tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with sathan. Hang him foul Colliat.

Mar. Get him to say his prayers, good Sir Toby, get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers Minx.

Mar. No I warrant you, he will not hear of godliness.

Mal. Go hang your selves all: you are idle shallow things, I am not of your element, you shall know more hereafter.

Exit.

To. I'st possible?

Fab. If this were plaid upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an unprofitable fiction.

To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device man.

Mar. Nay pursue him now, least the device take ayre, and taint.

Fa. Why we shall make him mad indeed.

Mar. The house will be the quieter.

To. Come, we'll have him in a darke room and bound. My Neece is already in the belief that he's mad: we may carry it thus for our pleasure, and his penance, till our very pastime tired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him: at which time, we will bring the device to the bar, and crown thee for a finder of madmen: but see, but see.

Enter Sir Andrew.

Fa. More matter for a May morning.

And. Here's the Challenge, read it: I warrant there's vinegar and pepper in't.

Fab. Is't so sawcy?

And. I, is't? I warrant him: doe but read.

To. Give me.

Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow.

Fa. Good and valiant.

To. Wonder not, nor admire in thy mind why I doe call thee so, for I will shew thee no reason for't. (Law.

Fa. A good note, that keeps you from the blow of the

To. Thou comm'st to the Lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly: but thou lyest in thy throat, that is not the matter I challenge thee for.

Fa. Very brief, and to exceeding good sense-lesse,

To. I will way-lay thee going home, where if it be thy chance to kill me.

Fa. Good.

To. Thou kill'st me like a rogue and a villain.

Fa. Still you keep o'th windy side of the Law: good.

To. Fare thee well, and God have mercy upon our souls. He may have mercy upon mine; but my hope is better, and so look to thy self. Thy friend as thou usest him, and thy sworn enemy, Andrew Ague-cheek.

To. If this Letter move him not, his legges cannot: I'll give't him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion for't: he is now in some commerce with my Lady, and will by and by depart.

To. Go sir Andrew: scout me for him at the corner of the Orchard like a bum-Bailly: so soon as ever thou seest him, draw, and as thou draw'st swear horribly: for it comes to passe oft, that a terrible oath, with a swagging accent sharply twang'd off, gives manhood more approbation, then ever proof it self would have earn'd him. Away.

And. Nay let me alone for swearing.

Exit.

To. Now will not I deliver this Letter: for the behaviour of the young Gentleman, gives him out to be of good capacity, and breeding: his employment between his Lord and my Neece, confirms no lesse. Therefore, this Letter being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth: he will find that it comes from a Clodde-pole. But sir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth; set upon Ague-cheek a notable report of valour, and drive the Gentleman (as I know his youth will aptly receive it) into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and impetuosity. This will so fright them both, that they will kill one another by the look, like Cockatrices.

Enter Olivia, and Viola.

F. Here he comes with your Neece, give them way till he take leave, and presently after him.

To. I will meditate the while upon some horrid message for a Challenge.

Exeunt.

Ol. I have said too much unto a heart of stone,

And laid mine honour too unchary on't:

There's something in me that reproves my fault:

But such a head-strong potent fault it is:

That it but mocks reproof.

Vio. With the same haviour that your passion beares, Goes on my Master's griefs.

Ol. Here, wear this Jewell for me, 'tis my picture:

Refuse it not, it hath no tongue to vex you:

And I beseech you come again to morrow.

What shall you aske of me that I'll deny,

That (honour sav'd) may upon asking give.

Vio. Nothing but this, your true love for my Master.

Ol. How with mine honour may I give him that,

Which I have given to you?

Vio. I will acquit you.

Ol. Well, come again to morrow: fare-thee-well,

A Fiend like thee might bear my soul to hell.

Exit.

Enter Toby, and Fabian.

To. Gentleman, God save thee.

Vio.

Vio. And you, sir.

To. That defence thou hast, betake thee to't : of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not : but thy interceptor full of despight, bloody as the Hunter, attends thee at the Orchard end : dismount thy Tuck, be yare in thy preparation, for thy assailant is quick, skillfull, and deadly.

Vio. You mistake, sir, I am sure, no man hath any quarrell to me : my remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

To. You'll find it otherwise I assure you : therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your guard : for your opposite hath in him, what youth, strength, skill, and wrath can furnish a man withall.

Vio. I pray you, sir, what is he ?

To. He is knight dubb'd with unhatch'd Rapier, and on carpet consideration, but he is a devil in private brawl ; soules and bodies hath he divorc'd three, and his incensement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none, but by pangs of death and sepulcher : Hob, nob, is his word : giv't or tak't.

Vio. I will return again into the house, and desire some conduct of the Lady. I am no fighter, I have heard of some kind of men, that put quarrells purposely on others, to taste their valour : belike this is a man of that quirk.

To. Sir, no : his indignation derives it self out of a very compunct injury, therefore get you on, and give his desire. Back you shall not to the house, unless you undertake that with me, which with as much safety you might answer him : therefore on, or strip your sword stark naked : for meddle you must, that's certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

Vio. This is as uncivil as strange. I beseech you doe me this courteous office, as to know of the Knight what my offence to him is : it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

To. I will do so. Signior Fabian, stay you by this Gentleman till my return. Exit Toby.

Vio. Pray you sir, doe you know of this matter ?

Fab. I know the Knight is incens'd against you, even to a mortall arbitrement, but nothing of the circumstance more.

Vio. I beseech you, what manner of man is he ?

Fab. Nothing of that wonderfull promise to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valour. He is indeed, sir, the most skilfull, bloody, and fatall opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria : will you walk towards him, I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I shall be much bound to you for't : I am one, that had rather go with sir Priest, then sir Knight : I care not who knowes so much of my mettle. Exeunt.

Enter Toby, and Andrew.

Tob. Why man, he's a very devil, I have not seen such a fiasco : I had a passe with him, rapier, scabberd, and all : and he gives me the stuck in with such a mortall motion that it is inevitable : and on the answer, he payes you as surely, as your feet hits the ground they step on. They say, he has been Fencer to the Sophy.

And. Pox on't, I'll not meddle with him.

To. I, but he will not now be pacified, Fabian can scarce hold him yonder.

An. Plague on't, and I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in Fence, I'de have seen him damn'd ere I'de have challeng'd him. Let him let the matter slip, and I'll give him my horse, gray Capiter.

Tob. I'll make the motion : stand here, make a good shew on't, this shall end without the perdition of soules, marry I'll ride your horse as well as I ride you.

Enter Fabian, and Viola.

I have his horse to take up the quarrell, I have perswaded him the youth's a devil.

Fab. He is as horribly conceited of him : and pants, and looks pale, as if a Bear were at his heels.

To. There's no remedy, sir, he will fight with you for's oath sake : marry he hath better bethought him of his quarrell, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of : therefore draw for the supportance of his vow, he protests he will not hurt you.

Vio. Pray God defend me : a little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man.

Fab. Give ground if you see him furious.

To. Come, Sir Andrew, there's no remedy, the Gentleman will for his honours sake have one bout with you : he cannot by the Duello avoid it : but he has promised me, as he is a Gentleman and a Souldier, he will not hurt you. Come on, to't.

And. Pray God he keep his oath.

Enter Antonio.

Vio. I doe assure you 'tis against my will.

Ant. Put up your sword : if this young Gentleman Have done offence, I take the fault on me : If you offend him, I for him desie you.

Tob. You sir ? Why, what are you ?

Ant. One sir, that for his love dares yet doe more Then you have heard him brag to you he will.

Tob. Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you.

Enter Officers.

Fab. O good Sir Toby, hold : here come the Officers.

Tob. I'll be with you anon.

Vio. Pray sir, put your sword up if you please.

And. Marry will I sir : and for that I promis'd you I'll be as good as my word. He will bear you easily, and raines well.

1. Off. This is the man, doe thy Office.

2. Off. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit of Count Or.

Ant. You doe mistake me, sir.

(sino.)

1. Off. No sir, no jot : I know your favour well : Though now you have no sea-cap on your head : Take him away, he knowes I know him well.

Ant. I must obey. This comes with seeking you : But there's no remedy, I shall answer it :

What will you doe ? now my necessity Makes me to aske you for my purse. It grieves me Much more, for what I cannot doe for you, Then what befalls my self : you stand amaz'd. Be of comfort.

2. Off. Come, sir, away.

Ant. I must entreat of you some of that money.

Vio. What money, sir ?

For the fair kindnesse you have shew'd me here, And part being prompted by your present trouble, Out of my lean and low ability I'll lend you something : my having is not much, I'll make division of my present with you : Hold, there's half my Coffer.

Ant. Will you deny me now ? Is't possible, that my deserts to you Can lack perswasion ? Doe not tempt my misery, Least that it make me so unsound a man, As to upbraid you with those kindneses

That I have done for you.

Vio. I know of none.

Nor know I you by voyce, or any feature :

I hate ingratitude more in a man,

Then lying, vaineſſe, babling drunkenneſſe,

Or any taint of vice, whoſe ſtrong corruption

Inhabits our frail blood.

Ant. Oh heavens themſelves !

2. Off. Come, ſir, I pray you go.

Ant. Let me ſpeak a little. This youth that you ſee
I ſnatch'd one half out of the jaws of death, (here,

Reliev'd him with ſuch ſanctity of love ;

And to his image, which me thought did promiſe

Moſt venerable worth, did I devotion.

1. Off. What's that to us, the time goes by : Away.

Ant. But oh, how vilde an idoll proves this god :

Thou haſt Sebastian done good feature ſhame,

In Nature there's no blemiſh but the mind :

None can be call'd deform'd but the unkind.

Virtue is beauty, but the beauteous evil

Are empty trunks, o're-flouriſh'd by the devil.

1. Off. The man growes mad, away with him :

Come, come, ſir.

Ant. Lead me on.

Exit.

Vio. Me thinks his words doe from ſuch paſſion ſtie,

That he believes himſelf, ſo doe not I.

Prove true imagination, oh prove true,

That I dear brother, be now tane for you.

To. Come hither, Knight, come hither, Fabian : Well whiſper o're a couplet or two of moſt ſage ſawes.

Vio. He nam'd Sebastian : I my brother know

Yet living in my glaſſe : even ſuch, and ſo

In favour was my Brother, and he went

Still in this faſhion, colour, ornament,

For him I imitate : Oh if it prove,

Tempeſts are kind, and ſalt waves freſh in love. Exit.

Tob. A very diſhoneſt paltry boy, and more a coward then a Hare : his diſhoneſty appeares, in leaving his friend here in neceſſity, and denying him : and for his coward-ſhip aſke Fabian.

Fab. A Coward, a moſt devout Coward, religious in it.

And. 'Slid, I'll after him again, and beat him.

To. Doe, cuſſe him ſoundly, but never thy ſword.

And. And I doe not.

Fab. Come, let's ſee the event.

Tob. I dare lay any mony, 'twill be nothing yet. Ex.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Sebastian, and Clown.

Clo. Will you make me believe that I am not ſent for you ?

Seb. Go to, go to, thou art a fooliſh fellow,
Let me be clear of thee.

Clo. Well held our iſaith : No, I doe not know you, nor I am not ſent to you by my Lady, to bid you come ſpeak with her : nor your name is not Maſter Ceſario, nor this is not my noſe neither : nothing that is ſo, is ſo.

Seb. I prethee vent thy folly ſomewhere elſe, thou know'ſt not me.

Clow. Vent my folly : He has heard that word of ſome great man, and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly : I am afraid this great lubber the World will prove a Cockney : I prethee now ungird thy ſtrangenefſe, and tell me what I ſhall vent to my Lady : ſhall I vent to her that thou art coming ?

Seb. I prethee fooliſh Greek depart from me, there's money for thee, if you tarry longer, I ſhall give worſe payment.

Clo. By my troth thou haſt an open hand : theſe Wiſemen that give fooles money get themſelves a good report, after fourteen yeares purchaſe.

Enter Andrew, Toby, and Fabian.

And. Now, ſir, have I met you again : there's for you.

Seb. Why there's for thee, and there, and there :
Are all the people mad ?

To. Hold, ſir, or I'll throw your dagger o're the houſe.

Clo. This will I tell my Lady ſtraight : I would not be in ſome of your coats for two-pence.

To. Come on, ſir, hold.

And. Nay let him alone, I'll go another way to work with him : I'll have an action of Battery againſt him, if there be any law in Illyria : though I ſtrook him firſt, yet it's no matter for that.

Seb. Let go thy hand.

Tob. Come ſir, I will not let you go. Come my young ſouldier, put up your iron : you are well fleſh'd : Come
on.

Seb. I will be free from thee. What would'ſt thou now?
If thou dar'ſt tempt me further, draw thy ſword.

To. What, what ? Nay then I muſt have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you.

Enter Olivia.

Ol. Hold Toby, on thy life I charge thee hold.

Tob. Madam.

Ol. Will it be ever thus ? Ungracious wretch,
Fit for the Mountains, and the barbarous Caves,
Where manners ne're were preach'd : out of my ſight.
Be not offended, dear Ceſario.

Rudesby be gone. I prethee gentle friend,

Let thy fair wiſedome, not thy paſſion ſway

In this uncivil, and unjuſt extent

Againſt thy peace. Go with me to my houſe,

And hear thou there, how many fruitleſſe pranks

This Ruſſian hath borch'd up, that thou thereby

Maſt ſmile at this : Thou ſhalt not chooſe but go :

Doe not deny, beſhrew his ſoul for me ;

He ſtarted one poor heart of mine, in thee.

Seb. What reliſh is in this ? How runs the ſtream ?

Or I am mad, or elſe this is a dreame :

Let fancy ſtill my ſenſe in Lethe ſteep,

If it be thus to dreame, ſtill let me ſleep.

Ol. Nay come I prethee, would thou'd'ſt be rul'd by me.

Seb. Madam, I will.

Ol. O ſay ſo, and ſo be.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Maria, and Clown.

Mar. Nay, I prethee put on this Gown, and this beard ; make him believe thou art Sir Topas the Curate ;
doe it quickly. I'll call Sir Toby the whil'ſt.

Clo. Well, I'll put it on, and I will diſſemble my ſelf in't, and I would I were the firſt that ever diſſembled in ſuch

such a Gown. I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor lean enough to be thought a good Student : but to be said an honest man, and a good House-keeper goes as fairly, as to say, a carefull man, and a great Schollar. The Competitors enter.

Enter Toby.

To. Jove blesse thee, M. Parson.

Clo. Bonos dies, Sir Toby for as the old Hermit of Prage, that never saw Pen and Ink, very wittily said to a Neece of King Gorbodack, that that is, is : so I being M. Parson, am M. Parson ; for what is that, but that ? and is, but is ?

To. To him, Sir Topas.

Clo. What hoa, I say, Peace in this prison.

To. The Knave counterfeits well : a good Knave.

Malvolio within.

Mal. Who calls there ?

Clo. Sir Topas the Curate, who comes to visit Malvolio the Lunatick.

Mal. Sir Topas, Sir Topas, good Sir Topas, go to my Lady.

Clo. Out hyperbolicall fiend, how vexest thou this man ? Talkest thou nothing but of Ladies ?

Tob. Well said, M. Parson.

Mal. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged, good Sir Topas, doe not think I am mad : they have laid me here in hideous darknesse.

Clo. Fye, thou dishonest Sathan : I call thee by the most modest termes, for I am one of those gentle ones, that will use the Devil himself with curtesie : say'st thou that house is dark ?

Mal. As hell, Sir Topas.

Clo. Why it hath bay Windowes transparent as Baricadoes, and the clear stones toward the South-North, are lustrous as Ebony : and yet complaineest thou of obstruction ?

Mal. I am not mad ; Sir Topas, I say to you this house is dark.

Clo. Madam, thou errest : I say there is no darknesse but ignorance, in which thou art more puzzell'd then the Egyptians in their fogge.

Mal. I say this house is as dark as ignorance, thou Ignorance were as dark as hell ; and I say there was never man thus abus'd, I am no more mad than you are, make the triall of it in any constant question.

Clo. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning Wild-fowle ?

Mal. That the soul of our Grandam, might happily inhabit a Bird.

Clo. What think'st thou of his opinion ?

Mal. I think nobly of the soul, and no way approve his opinion.

Clo. Fare thee well : remain thou still in darknesse, thou shalt hold th'opinion of Pythagoras, ere I will allow of thy wits, and fear to kill a Woodcock, lest thou dispossesse the house of thy Grandam. Fare thee well.

Mal. Sir Topas, sir Topas.

To. My most exquisite Sir Topas.

Clo. Nay, I am for all waters.

Mar. Thou might'st have done this without thy beard and gown, he sees thee not.

Tob. To him in thine own voyce, and bring me word how thou findest him : I would we were all rid of this knavery. If he may be conveniently deliver'd, I would he were, for I am now so farre in offence with my Neece, that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport the upshot. Come by and by to my Chamber. Exit.

Clo. Hey Robin, jolly Robin, tell me how thy Lady does.

Mal. Fool.

Clo. My Lady is unkind, perdie.

Mal. Fool.

Clo. Alas, why is she so ?

Mal. Fool, I say.

Clo. She loves another. Who calls, ha ?

Mal. Good Fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at my hand, help me to a Candle, and Pen, Ink, and Paper : as I am a Gentleman, I will live to be thankful to thee for't.

Clo. M. Malvolio ?

Mal. I, good Fool.

Clo. Alas, sir, how fell you besides your five wits ?
Mal. Fool, there was never man so notoriously abus'd : I am as well in my wits (fool) as thou art.

Clo. But as well : then you are mad indeed, if you be no better in your wits then a foole.

Mal. They have here propertied me : keep me in darknesse, send Ministers to me, Asses, and doe all they can to face me out of my wits.

Clo. Advise you what you say : the Minister is here. Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens restore : endeavour thy self to sleep, and leave thy vain bibble bable.

Mal. Sir Topas.

Clo. Maintain no words with him good fellow. Who I sir, not I sir. God buy you good Sir Topas : Marry Amen. I will sir, I will sir.

Mal. Fool, fool, fool, I say.

Clo. Alas, sir, be patient. What say you, sir ? I am shent for speaking to you.

Mal. Good fool help me to some light, and some Paper. I tell thee I am as well in my wits, as any man in Illyria.

Clo. Well-a-day, that you were sir.

Mal. By this hand I am : good fool, some Ink, Paper, and Light : and convey what I will set down to my Lady : it shall advantage thee more, then ever the bearing of Letter did.

Clo. I will help you to't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed, or doe you but counterfeit ?

Mal. Believe me, I am not, I tell thee true.

Clo. Nay, I'll ne're believe a madman, till I see his I will fetch you light, and paper, and ink. (brains,

Mal. Fool, I'll requite it in the highest degree : I prethee be gone.

Clo. I am gone sir, and anon sir,

I'll be with you again :

In a trice, like to the old vice,

your need to sustain.

Who with Dagger of Lath, in his rage and his wrath, cries ah ha, to the Devil :

Like a mad Lad, pair thy nailes Dad, adieu good man Devil.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. This is the ayre, that is the glorious Sun,
This Pearl she gave me, I doe feel't, and see't,
And though 'tis wonder that enwraps me thus,

Yet

Yet 'tis not madnesse. Where's Antonio then ?
 I could not find him at the Elephant,
 Yet there it was, and there I found this credit,
 That he did range the Town to seek me out,
 His counsell now might do me golden service,
 For though my soule disputes well with my sense,
 That this may be some error, but no madnesse,
 Yet doth this accident and flood of Fortune,
 So far exceed all instance, all discourse,
 That I am ready to distrust mine eyes,
 And wrangle with my reason that perswades me
 To any other trust, but that I am mad,
 Or else the Ladies mad ; yet if 'twere so,
 She could not sway her house, command her followers,
 Take, and give back affairs, and their dispatch,
 With such a smooth, discreet, and stable-bearing
 As I perceive she do's: there's something in't
 That is deceiveable. But here the Lady comes.

Enter Olivia, and Priest.

Ol. Blame not this haste of mine: if you mean well
 Now go with me, and with this holy man
 Into the Chantry by: there before him,
 And underneath that consecrated roose,
 Plight me the full assurance of your faith,
 That my most jealous, and too doubtfull soule
 May live at Peace. He shall conceale it,
 Whiles you are willing it shall come to note,
 What time we will our celebration keep
 According to my birth, what do you say ?

Seb. I'll follow this good man, and go with you,
 And having sworn truth, ever will be true.

Ol. Then lead the way good father, & heaven so shine,
 That they may fairly note this act of mine. Exeunt.
Finis Actus Quarti.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clown and Fabian.

Fab. Now as thou lov'st me, let me see this Letter.

Clow. Good M. Fabian grant me another request.

Fab. Any thing.

Clow. Do not desire to see this Letter.

Fab. This is to give a Dog, and in recompence desire my dog again.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and Lords.

Du. Belong you to the Lady Olivia, friends ?

Clow. I sir, we are some of her trappings.

Duke. I know thee well: how do'st thou my good Fellow ?

Clow. Truly sir, the better for my foes, and the worse for my friends.

Du. Just the contrary: the better for thy friends.

Clow. No sir, the worse.

Du. How can that be ?

Clow. Marry sir, they praise me, and make an Ass of me, now my foes tell me plainly, I am an Ass: so that by my foes sir, I profit in the knowledge of my self, and by my friends I am abused: so that conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why then the worse of my friends, and the better for my foes.

Du. Why this is excellent.

Clow. By my troth sir, no: though it please you to be one of my friends.

Du. Thou shalt not be the worse for me, there's gold.

Clow. But that it would be double dealing sir, I would you could make it another.

Du. O you give me ill counsell.

Clow. Put your Grace in your pocket sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Du. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double dealer: there's another.

Clow. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play, and the old saying is, the third Payes for all: the triplex sir, is a good tripping measure, or the bells of S. Bennet sir, may put you in minde, one, two, three.

Du. You can foole no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your Lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clow. Marry sir, lullaby to your bounty till I come agen.
 I go sir, but I would not have you to think, that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness: but as you say sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. Exit.

Enter Antonio and Officers.

Vio. Here comes the man sir, that did rescue me.

Du. That face of his I do remember well,
 Yet when I saw it last, it was besmear'd
 As black as Vulcan, in the smoak of War:
 A bawbling Vessell was he Captain of,
 For shallow draught and Bulk unprizable,
 With which such scathfull grapple did he make,
 With the most noble bottome of our Fleet,
 That very envy, and the tongue of losse
 Cri'd fame and honour on him: What's the matter ?

1. Off. Orsino, this is that Antonio
 That took the Phoenix, and her fraught from Candy,
 And this is he that did the Tiger board,
 When your young Nephew Titus lost his leg:
 Here in the streets, desperate of shame and state,
 In private brabble did we apprehend him.

Vio. He did me kindnesse sir, drew on my side,
 But in conclusion put strange speech upon me,
 I know not what 'twas, but distraction.

Du. Notable Pyrate, thou salt-water Thief,
 What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies,
 Whom thou in termes so bloody, and so dear
 Hast made thine enemies ?

Ant. Orsino: Noble sir,
 Be pleas'd that I shake of these names you give me:
Antonio never yet was Thief, or Pyrate,
 Though I confess, on base and ground enough
Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither:
 That most ingratefull Boy there by your side,
 From the rude seas inrag'd and foamy mouth
 Did I redeem: a wrack past hope he was:
 His life I gave him, and did there to adde
 My love without retention, or restraint,
 All this is dedication. For his sake,
 Did I expose my self (pure of his love)
 Into the danger of this adverse Town,
 Drew to defend him, when he was beset:
 Where being apprehended, his false cunning
 (Not meaning to pertake with me in danger)
 Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,

And

And grew a twenty years removed thing,
While one would wink: deni'd be mine own purse,
Which I had recommended to his use,
Not half an houre before.

Vio. How can this be?

Du. When came he to this Town?

Ant. To day my Lord: and for three months before,
No interim, not a minutes vacancie,
Both day and night did we keep company.

Enter Olivia, and attendants.

Du. Here comes the Countess, now heaven walks on earth:

But for thee, fellow; fellow, thy words are madness,
Three months this youth hath tended upon me,
But more of that anon. Take him aside.

Ol. What would my Lord, but that he may not have,
Wherein Olivia may seem serviceable?

Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.

Vio. Madam.

Du. Gracious Olivia.

Ol. What do you say Cesario? Good my Lord.

Vio. My Lord would speak, my duty hushes me.

Ol. If it be ought to the old tune my Lord,
It is as fat and fulsome to mine ear
As howling after Musick.

Du. Still so cruell?

Ol. Still so constant my Lord.

Du. What to perverseness? you uncivill Lady
To whose ingrate, and unuspicious Altars
My soul the faithfull'st offerings have breath'd out
That ere devotion tender'd. What shall I do?

Ol. Even what it please my Lord, that shall become him.

Du. Why should I not, (had I the heart to do it)
Like to the Egyptian Thief, at point of death Kill what I love: (a savage jealousy,
That sometime savours nobly) but hear me this:
Since you to none regardance cast my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument
That screws me from my true place in your favour:
Live you the Marble-breasted Tyrant still.
But this your Minion, whom I know you love,
And whom, by heaven I swear, I tender dearly,
Him will I tear out of that cruell eye,
Where he sits crown'd in his Masters spight.
Come Boy with me, my thoughts are ripe in mischief:
I'll sacrifice the Lambe that I do love,
To spight a Ravens heart within a Dove.

Vio. And I most jocond, apt, and willingly,
To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die.

Ol. Where goes Cesario?

Vio. After him I love,
More then I love these eyes, more then my life,
More by all mores, then ere I shall love wife.
If I do feigne, you witnesses above
Punish my life, for tainting of my Love.

Ol. Aye me detested, how am I beguil'd?

Vio. Who do's beguile you? who do's do you wrong?

Ol. Hast thou forgot thy self? Is it so long?
Call forth the holy Father.

Du. Come, away.

Ol. Whither my Lord? Cesario, Husband, stay.

Du. Husband?

Ol. I Husband. Can he that deny?

Du. Her husband sirrah?

Vio. No my Lord, not I.

Ol. Alas, it is the baseness of thy fear,

That makes thee strangle thy propriety:
Fear not Cesario, take thy fortunes up,
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art
As great as thou fear'st.

Enter Priest.

O welcome Father:

Father, I charge thee by thy reverence
Here to unfold, though lately we intended
To keep in darkness, what occasion now
Reveals before 'tis ripe: what thou do'st know
Hath newly past, between this youth, and me.

Priest. A contract of eternall bond of love,
Confirm'd by mutuall joynder of your hands
Attested by the holy close of lips,
Strengthen'd by enterchangement of your Rings,
And all the Ceremony of this compact
Seal'd in my function, by my testimony:
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my grave
I have travell'd but two hours.

Du. O thou dissembling Cub: what wilt thou be
When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case?
Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow,
That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow?
Farewell, and take her, but direct thy feet,
Where thou, and (I henceforth) may never meet.

Vio. My Lord, I do protest.

Ol. O do not swear,
How little faith, though thou hast too much fear.

Enter Sir Andrew.

And. For the love of God a Surgeon, and one presently to Sir Toby.

Ol. What's the matter?

And. H'as broke my head a-crosse, and given Sir Toby a bloody Coxcombe too: for the love of God your help,
I had rather than forty pound I were at home.

Ol. Who has done this Sir Andrew?

And. The Counts Gentleman, one Cesario: we took him for a Coward, but he's the very Devill incardinate.

Du. My Gentleman Cesario?

And. Odd's lifelings here he is: you broke my head for nothing, and that that I did, I was set on to doo'e by Sir Toby.

Vio. Why do you speak to me I never hurt you:
You drew your sword upon me without cause,
But I bespake you fair and hurt you not.

Enter Toby and Clown.

And. If a bloody Coxcombe be a hurt, you have hurt me: I think you set nothing by a bloody Coxcombe, Here comes sir Toby halting, you shall hear more: but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickel'd you other gates then he did.

Du. How now Gentleman? how is't with you?

To. That's all one, has hurt me, and there's an end on't. Sor, did'st thou see Dick Surgeon for?

Cl. O he's drunk sir above an houre ago: his eyes were at eight i'th morning.

To. Then he's a Rogue after a passy measures Pavin: I hate a drunken Rogue.

Ol. Away with him? Who hath made this havock with them?

And. I'll help you Sir Toby, because we'll be drest together.

To. Will you help an Ass-head, and a Coxcombe, and a Knave: a thin-fac'd Knave, a Gull?

Ol.

Ol. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd to.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. I am sorry Madam I have hurt your kinsman :
But had it been the brother of my blood,
I must have done no lesse with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that I do perceive it hath offended you :
Pardon me (sweet one) even for the vowes
We made each other, but so late ago.

Du. One face, one voyce, one habit, and two persons
A naturall Perspective, that is, and is not.

Seb. Antonio, O my dear Antonio !
How have the hours rack'd, attd tortur'd me,
Since I have lost thee ?

Ant. Sebastian are you ?

Seb. Fear'st thou that Antonio ?

Ant. How have you made division of your self,
An ample cleft in two, is not more twin
Then these two creatures. Which is Sebastian ?

Ol. Most wonderfull.

Seb. Do I stand there ? I never had a brother :
Nor can there be a Deity in my nature
Of here and every where. I had a sister,
Whom the blinde waves and surges have devour'd :
Of charity, what kin are you to me ?
What Countreyman ? What name ? What Parentage ?

Vio. Of Messaline : Sebastian was my Father,
Such a Sebastian was my brother too :
So went he suited to his watery tombe :
If spirits can assume both forme and suit,
You come to fright us.

Seb. A spirit I am indeed,
But am in that dimension grossly clad,
Which from the Wombe I did participate.
Were you a woman, as the rest go even,
I should my tears let fall upon your cheek,
And say, thrice welcome drowned Viola.

Vio. My Father had a Moale upon his brow.

Seb. And so had mine.

Vio. And did that day when Viola from her birth
Had numbred thirteen years.

Seb. O that record is lively in my soule,
He finished indeed his mortall act
That day that made my sister thirteen years.

Vio. If nothing lets to make us happy both,
But this my masculine usurp'd attyre :
Do not embrace me, till each circumstance,
Of place, time, fortune, do cohere and jum p
That I am Viola, which to confirme,
I'll bring you to a Captain in this Town,
Where lye my Maiden weeds : by whose gentle help,
I was preserv'd to serve this noble Count :
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath been between this Lady, and his Lord.

Seb. So comes it Lady, you have been mistook :
But Nature to her bias drew in that.
You would have been contracted to a Maid,
Nor are you therein (by my life) deceiv'd,
You are betroth'd both to a Maid and man.

Du. Be not amaz'd, right noble is his blood :
If this be so, as yet the glasse seems true,
I shall have share in this most happy wrack.
Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times,
Thou never should'st love woman like to me.

Vio. And all those sayings, will I over-swear
And all those swearing keep as true in soule,

As doth that Orbed Continent, the fire,
That severs day from night.

Du. Give me thy hand,
And let me see thee in thy womans weeds.

Vio. The Captain that did bring me first on shore,
Hath my Maids garments : he upon some Action
Is now in durance, at Malvolio's suit,
A gentleman and follower of my Ladies.

Ol. He shall enlarge him : fetch Malvolio hither,
And yet alas, now I remember me,
They say, poor Gentleman, he's much distract.

Enter the Clown with a Letter, and Fabian
A most exacting frenzie of mine own,
From my remembrance, clearly banish his.
How does he sirrah ?

Clo. Truly Madam, he holds Belzebub at the staves end as well as a man in his case may do : has here writ a letter to you, I should have given't you to day morning.
But as a mad mans Epistles are no Gospels, so it skills not much when they are deliver'd.

Ol. Open't and read it.

Clo. Look then to be well edified, when the Foole delivers the Madman. By the Lord Madam,

Ol. How now, art thou mad ?

Clo. No Madam, I do but read madnesse : and your Ladiship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow Vox.

Ol. Prethee read it i'thy right wits.

Clo. So I do Madona : but to read his right wits, is to read thus : therefore, perpend my Princess, and give ear.

Ol. Read it you, sirrah.

Fab. Reads. By the Lord Madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it : Though you have put me into darknesse, and given your drunken Cozen rule over me, yet have I benefit of my senses as well as your Lady-ship. I have your own Letter, that induced me to the semblance I put on ; with the which I doubt not, but to do my self much right, or you much shame : Think of me as you please. I leave my duty a little unthought of, and speak out of my injury. The madly us'd Malvolio.

Ol. Did he write this ?

Clo. I Madam.

Du. This favours not much of distraction.

Ol. See him deliver'd. Fabian, bring him hither :
My Lord, so please you, these things further thought on,
To think me as well a sister, as a wife,
One day shall crown th'alliance on't, so please you,
Here at my house, and at my proper cost.

Du. Madam, I am most apt t'embrace your offer :
Your Master quits you : and for your service done him,
So much against the mettle of your sex,
So far beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you call'd me master, for so long :
Here is my hand, you shall from this time be
Your Masters Mistris.

Ol. A sister, you are she.

Enter Malvolio.

Du. Is this the Mad man ?

Ol. I my Lord, this same : How now Malvolio ?

Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong,
Notorious wrong.

Ol. Have I Malvolio ? No.

Mal. Lady you have, pray you peruse that Letter.
You must not now deny it is your hand,
Write from it if you can, in hand or phrase,

Or say 'tis not your seale, not your invention :
You can say none of this. Well, grant it then,
And tell me in the modesty of honour,
Why you have given me such clear lights of favour,
Bad me come smiling and crosse garter'd to you,
To put on yellow stockings, and to frown
Upon Sir Toby, and the lighter people :
And acting this in an obedient hope,
Why have you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,
Kept in a dark house, visited by the Priest,
And made the most notorious geck or gull,
That ere invention plaid on ? Tell me why ?

Ol. Alas Malvolio, this is not my writing,
Though I confesse, much like the Character :
But out of question, 'tis Maria's hand.
And now I do bethink me, it was she
First told me thou wast mad ; then cam'st in smiling,
And in such formes, which here were presuppos'd
Upon thee in the Letter : prethee be content,
This practise hath most shrewdly past upon thee :
But when we know the grounds and authours of it,
Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and the Judge
Of thine own cause.

Fab. Good Madam hear me speak,
And let no quarrell, nor no brawle to come,
Taint the condition of this present hour,
Which I have wondred at. In hope it shall not,
Most freely I confesse my self, and Toby
Set this device against Malvolio here,
Upon some stubborn and uncourteous parts
We had conceiv'd against him. Maria writ
The Letter, at Sir Toby's great importance,
In recompence whereof, he hath married her :
How with a sportfull malice it was follow'd,
May rather pluck on laughter then revenge,
If that the injuries be justly weigh'd,
That have on both sides past.

Ol. Alas poor Foole how have they baffel'd thee ?

Clo. Why some are born great, some atchieve great-nesse, and some have greatnesse thrown upon them. I was one sir, in this Enterlude, one Sir Topas sir, but that's all one : By the Lord Foole, I am not mad : but do you remember, Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal, and you smile not he's gag'd : and thus the whistle-gigge of time, brings in his revenges.

Mal. I'll be reveng'd on the whole pack of you.

Ol. He hath been most notoriously abus'd.

Du. Pursue him, and entreat him to a peace :
He hath not told us of the Captain yet,
When that is known, and golden time convents,
A solemn Combination shall be made
Of our dear souls. Mean time sweet sister,
We will not part from hence. Cesario come
(For so you shall be while you are a man :)
But when in other habits you are seen.
Orsino's Mistress, and his fancies Queen.

Exeunt.

Clown sings.

*When that I was and a little tine Boy, with hey, ho, the winde and the rain :
A foolish thing was but a toy,
for the rain it raineth every day.*

*But when I came to mans estate
with hey, ho, &c.
'Gainst knaves and theeves men shut their gate,
for the rain, &c.*

*But when I came at last to wive,
with hey, ho, &c.
By swaggering could I never thrive,
for the rain, &c.*

*But when I came unto my beds,
with he, ho, &c.
With Tospots still had drunken heads,
for the rain, &c.*

*A great while ago the world be gon,
with hey, ho, &c.
But that's all one, our Play is done,
and we'll strive to please you every day.*

F I N I S.

The Winters Tale.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Camillo, and Archidamnus.

Arch.

IF you shall chance Camillo to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my Services are now on-foot, you shall see (as I have said) great difference betwixt our Bohemia, and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this common Summer, the King of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation, which he justly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us: we will be justified in our Loves: for indeed——

Cam. 'Beseech you——

Arch. Verily I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence——in so rare——I know not what to say——We will give you sleepy Drinks, that your Sences (un-intelligent of our insufficiency) may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear, for what's given freely.

Arch. Beleeve me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot shew himself over kind to Bohemia: They were train'd together in their Child-hoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature Dignities, and Royall Necessaries, made separation of their Society, their encounters (though not personal) have been royally attorneyed with enter-change of Gifts, Letters, loving Embassies, that they have seem'd to be together, though absent: shook hands, as over a Vast Sea, and embrac'd as it were from the ends of oppos'd Winds. The Heavens continue their Loves.

Arch. I think there is not in the world, either Malice or Matter to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young Prince Mamillius: it is a Gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my Note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him: it is a gallant Child, one that (indeed) Physicks the Subject, makes old hearts fresh: they that went on Crutches ere he was born, desire yet their life, to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes; if there were no other excuse, why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the King had no Son, they would desire to live on Crutches till he had on.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Leontes, Hermione, Mamillius, Polixenus, Camillo.

Pol. Nine changes of the watry-Starre hath been

The Shepheards Note, since we have left our Throne Without a Burthen: Time as long again Would be fill'd up (my Brother) with our Thanks, And yet we should, for peperiety, Go hence in debt: and therefore, like a Cypher (Yet standing in rich place) I multiply With one we thank you, many thousands more, That goe before it.

Leo. Stay your thanks a while, And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to morrow: I am question'd by my fears of what may chance, Or breed upon our absence, that may blow No sneaping Winds at home, to make us say, This is put forth too truly: besides, I have stay'd To tire your Royalty.

Leo. We are tougher (Brother) Then you can put us to't.

Pol. No longer stay.

Leo. One seve'night longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to morrow.

Leo. Wee'll part the time between's then: and in that Ile no gain-saying.

Pol. Presse me not ('beseech you) so: There is no tongue that moves; none, none i'th' world So soon as yours, could win me: so it should now, Were there necessity in your request, although 'Twere needful I deny'd it. My affairs Do even drag me homeward: which to hinder, Were (in your Love) a whip to me; my stay, To you a Charge, and Trouble: to save both, Farewell (our brother.)

Leo. Tongue-ty'd our Queen? speak you.

Her. I had thought (Sir) to have held my peace, untill You had drawn Oathes from him, not to stay: you (Sir) Charge him too coldly. Tell him, you are sure All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction, The by-gone-day proclaim'd, say this to him. He's bear from his best ward.

Leo. VVell said, Hermione.

Her. To tell, he longs to see his Sonne, were strong: But let him say so then, and let him go; But let him swear so, and he shall not stay, VVee'll thwack him hence with Distaffes. Yet of your Royal presence, ile adventure The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia You take my Lord, ile give him my Commission, To let him there a Moneth, behind the Guest Prefix'd for's parting: yet (good heed) Leontes, I love thee not a jarre o'th' Clock, behind

A 2

VVhat

VVhat Lady she her Lord. You'l stay?

Pol. No, Madam,

Her. Nay, but you will?

Pol. I may not verily.

Her. Verily?

You put me off with limber voves : but I,
Though you would seek t'unsphere the Stars with Oaths,
Should yet say, Sir, no going : verily
You shall not go; a Ladies verily is
As potent as a Lords. VVill you goe yet?
Force me to keep you as a prisoner,
Not like a Guest : so you shall pay your Fees
VVhen you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?
My Prisoner? or my Guest? by your dread verily,
One of them you shall be.

Pol. Your Guest then Madam :

To be your Prisoner, should import offending;
VVhich is for me lesse easie to commit,
Then you to punish.

Her. Not your Goaler then,
But your kind Hostesse, come, ile question you
Of my Lords tricks and yours, when you were boys :
You were pretty Lordings then?

Pol. VVe were (fair Queen)

Two Lads, that thought there was no more behind,
But such a day to morrow, as to day,
And to be boy eternal.

Her. VVas not my Lord
The verier wag o'th' two?

Pol. VVe were as twin'd Lambs, that did frisk i'th' Sun
And bleat the one at th'other : what we chang'd, VVas innocence, for innocence : we knew not
The Doctrine of ill-doing, no nor dream'd
That any did : had we pursu'd that life,
And our weak spirits ne're been higher rear'd
VVith stronger blood, we should have answer'd Heaven
Boldly, not guilty; the imposition clear'd,
Hereditary ours.

Her. By this we gather
You have tript since.

Pol. O my most sacred Lady,
Temptations have since then been born to's : for
In those unfledg'd daies, was my wife a Girle;
Your precious self had then not cross'd the eies
Of my young Play-fellow.

Her. Grace to boot :
Of this make no conclusion, least you say
Your Queen and I are Devils : yet go on,
Th'offences we have made you do, wee'l answer,
If you first sinn'd with us : and that with us
You did continue fault; and that you tript not VVith any, but with us.

Leo. Is he wonne yet?

Her. Hee'll stay, (my Lord)

Leo. At my request, he would not :

Hermione (my dearest) thou never spok'st
To better purpose.

Her. Never?

Leo. Never, but once.

Her. VVhat have I twice said well? when was't before?
I prethee tell me : cram's with praise, and make's
As fat as tame things: One good deed, dying tonguelesse
Slaughters a thousand, waiting upon char.
Our praises are our wages, You may ride's
VVith one soft kiss a thousand Furlongs, ere VVith Spur we heat an Acre. But to th'Goal:

My last good deed was to intreat his stay.

VVhat was my first? it ha's an elder Sister,
Or I mistake you : O, would her name were Grace,
But once before I spake to th'purpose? when?
Nay, let me hav't : I long.

Leo. VVhy, that was when

Three crabbed Moneths had sower'd themselves to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white hand :
And clap thy self, my Love; then didst thou utter,
I am yours for ever.

Her. 'Tis Grace indeed.

VVhy lo-you now; I have spoke to th'purpose twice :
The one for ever earn'd a Royal Husband;
Th'other, for some while a Friend.

Leo. Too hot, too hot :

To mingle friendship farre, is mingling bloods.
I have Tremor Cordis on me : my heart dances,
But not for joy; not joy. This entertainment
May a free face put on : derives a Liberty
From heartinesse, from bounty, fertile bosom,
And wee'l become the Agent : 't may; I grant :
But to be padling palmes, and pinching fingers,
As now they are, and making practis'd smiles
As in a Looking-Glasse : and then to sigh, as 'twere
The Mort o'th' Deer : oh, that is entertainment
My bosom likes not, nor my Browes. Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?

Mam. I my good Lord.

Leo. I'fecks :

VVhy that's my Bawcock : what has't smutch'd thy Nose?
They say it is a Coppy out of mine. Come Captain,
We must be neat; not neat, cleanly Caprain;
And yet the Steer, the Heyfer, and the Calf,
Are all call'd Neat. Still Virginalling
Upon his palme? How now (you wanton Calfe)
Art thou my Calfe?

Mam. Yes if you will (my Lord)

Leo. Thou want'st a rough pash, & the shoots that I have To be full, like me : yet they say we are Almost as like as Egges; Women say so,
(That will say any thing, But were they false
As o're dy'd Blacks, as VVind, as VVarers; false
As Dice are to be wish'd, by one that fixes
No born 'twixt his and mine; yet were it true,
To say this Boy were like me. Come (Sir Page)
Look on me with your welkin eye : sweet villain.
Most deare'st, my Collop : Can thy Dam, may't be Affection? thy intention stabs the Center.
Thou do'st make possible things not be so held,
Communicat'st with Dreams (how can this be?)
With what's unreal, thou coactive art,
And fellow'st nothing. Then 'tis very credent,
Thou maist co-joyn with something, and thou dost,
(And that beyond Commission) and I find it,
(And that to the infection of my Brains,
And hardning of my Browes)

Pol. What means Sicilia?

Her. He something seems unsettled.

Pol. How? my Lord?

Leo. What cheer? how is't with you, best Brother?

Her. You look as if you held a brow of much distraction,
Are you mov'd (my Lord?)

Leo. No, in good earnest.

How sometimes Nature will betray its folly?
It's tenderesse? and make it self a pastime
To harder bosomes? Looking on the Lynes

Of my Boys face, me thoughts I did recoyl
Twenty three years, and saw my self unbreech'd,
In my green Velvet Coat; my Dagger muzzel'd, Least it should bite it's Master, and so prove
(As Ornaments oft do's) too dangerous:
How like (me thought) I then was to this Kernel
This Squash, this Gentleman. Mine honest friend,
Will you take egges for Money?

Mam. No (my Lord) ile fight.

Leo. You will: why happy man be's dole. My brother
Are you so fond of your young Prince, as we Do seem to be of ours?

Pol. If at home (Sir)

Here's all my exercise, my Mirth, my Matter;
Now my sworn friend, and then mine enemy;
My Parasite; my Souldier: States-man; all
He makes a July's day, short as December,
And with his varying child-nesse, cures in me
Thoughts, that should thicke my blood.

Leo. So stands this Squire
Offic'd with me: We two will walk (my Lord)
And leave you to your graver steps. Hermione.
How thou lov'st us, shew in our Brothers welcome;
Let what is dear in Sicily be cheap:
Next to thy self, and my young Rover, he's Apparant to my heart.

Her. If you would seek us,
We are yours i'th' Garden: shall's attend you there?

Leo. To your own bents dispose you: you'd be found,
Be you beneath the Sky: I am angling now,
(Though you perceive me not how I give Lyne)
Goe to, goe to.

How she holds up the Neb? the Byll to him?
And armes her with the boldnesse of a Wife
To her allowing Husband. Gone already,
Inch thick, knee deep; ore head and ears a fork'd one.
Goe play (Boy) play: thy Mocher plaies, and I
Play too: but so disgrac'd a parr, whose issue
Will hisse me to my Grave: Contempt and Clamor
Will be my Knell. Goe play (Boy) play, there have been (Or I am much deceiv'd) Cuckolds ere now,
And many a man there is (even at this present,
Now, while I speak this) holds his Wife by th' Arme,
That little thinks she has been sluy'd in's absence
And his Pond fish'd by his next Neighbour (by Sir Smil, his Neighbour:) nay, there's comfort in't,
Whiles other men have Gates, and those Gates open'd
(As mine) against their will. Should all despair
That have revolted wives, the tenth of Mankind
Would hang themselves. Physick for't, there's none:
It is a bawdy Planet that will strike
Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerful: think it:
From East, West, North, and South, be it concluded,
No Baricado for a Belly. Know't,
It will let in and out the enemy,
With bag and baggage: many thousand on's
Have the disease, and feel't not. How now Boy?

Mam. I am like you they say.

Leo. Why, that's some comfort.
What? Camillo there?

Cam. I, my good Lord.

Leo. Go play (Mamillius) thou'rt an honest man:
Camillo, this great Sir will yet stay longer.

Cam. You had much adoe to make his Anchor hold,
When you cast out, it still came home.

Leo. Didst note it?

Cam. He would not stay at your petitions, made
His businesse more material.

Leo. Didst perceive it?

They're here with me already; whisp'ring, rounding:
Sicilia is a so-forth: tis farre gone,
When I shall gust it last. How cam't (Camillo)
That he did stay?

Cam. At the good Queens entreaty.

Leo. At the Queens be't: Good should be pertinent,
But so it is; it is not. Was this taken
By any understanding pate but thine?
For the conceit is soaking, will draw in
More then the common Blocks, Not noted, is't,
But of the finer Natures? by some Severalls
Of Head-peece extraordinary? Lower Messes
Perchance are to this businesse purblind? say.

Cam. Businesse, my Lord? I think most understand
Bohemia staies here longer.

Leo. H?

Cam. Staies here longer.

Leo. I, but why?

Cam. To satisfie your Highnesse, and the Entreaties
Of our most gracious Mistriis.

Leo. Satisfie?

Th'entreaties of your Mistresse? Satisfie?
Let that suffice. I have trusted thee (Camillo)
With all the nearst things to my hearr, as well
My Chamber-Councels, wherein (Priest-like) thou
Hast cleans'd my bosom: I, from thee departed
Thy penitent reform'd: but we have been Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd
In that which seems so.

Cam. Be it forbid (my Lord.)

Leo. To bide upon't: thou art not honest: or
If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a Coward,
Which hoxes honesty behind, restraining
From Course requir'd: or else thou must be counted
A Servant, grafted in my serious Trust,
And therein negligent: or else a Foole,
That seest a Gameplaid home, the rich stake drawn,
And tak'st it all for jest.

Cam. My gracious Lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful,
In every one of these, no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Amongst the infinite doing of the World,
Sometime puts forth in your affairs (my Lord.)
If ever I were wilful-negligent,
It was my folly; if industriously
I play'd the fool, it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end: if ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-performance; 'twas a fear
Which oft infects the wisest: these (my Lord)
Are such allow'd infirmities that honesty
Is never free of. But beseech your Grace
Be plainer with me, let me know my trespass
By it's own visage; if I then deny it,
'Tis none of mine.

Leo. Ha' not you seen Camillo?

(But that's past doubt: you have, or your eye-glasse
Is thicker then a Cuckolds Horn) or heard?
(For to a Vision so apparent, Rumour
Cannot be mute) or thought? (for Cogitation Resides not in that man, that do's not think)

My Wife is slippery ? if thou wilt confesse,
Or else be impudently negative,
To have nor eies, nor ears, nor thought, then say
My wife's a Holy-Horse, deserves a Name
As rank as any Flax-wench, that puts to Before her troth-plight: say't, and justify't.

Cam. I would not be a stander-by, to hear
My Sovereign Mistriſs clouded so, without
My present vengeance taken: 'threw my heart,
You never spoke, what did become you lesse
Then this; which to reiterate, were sin
As deep as that, though true.

Leo. Is whispering nothing ?
Is leaning Cheek to Cheek ? is meating Noses ?
Kissing with in-side Lip ? stopping the Carier
Of Laughter, with a sigh ? (a note infallible
Of breaking honesty) horsing foot on foot ?
Skulking in corners ? wishing Clocks more swift ?
Hours, Minutes ? the Noon, Midnight ? and all eies
Blind with the pin and web, but theirs ; theirs only,
That would unseen be wicked ? Is this nothing ?
Why then the world, and all that's in't, is nothing,
The covering Skie is nothing. Bohemia nothing,
My wife is nothing, nor nothing have these nothings,
If this be nothing.

Cam. Good my Lord, be cut'd
Of this diseas'd opinion, and betimes
For 'tis most dangerous.

Leo. Say it be, 'tis true.

Cam. No, no, my Lord.

Leo. It is: you lye, you lye:
I say thou lyeſt Camillo, and I hate thee,
Pronounce thee a grosse Lowt. a mindlesse Slave,
Or else a hovering Temporizer, that
Canſt with thine eies at once see good and evil,
Inclining to them both: were my wives Liver
Infected (as her life) she would not live
The running of one Glasſe.

Cam. Who do's infect her ?

Leo. Why he that wears her like her Medull, hanging
About his neck (Bohemia) who, if I
Had Servants true about me, that bare eies
To see alike mine honour, as their profits,
(Their own particular Thrifts) they would do that
Which should undoe more doing: I, and thou
His Cup-bearer, whom I from meaner forme
Have bench'd, and rear'd to worship, who may't see Plainly, as Heaven sees earth, and earth sees Heaven,
How I am gall'd, thou mightſt be-spice a Cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink:
Which draught to me, were cordiall.

Cam. Sir (my Lord)
I could do this, and that with no rash Potion,
But with a lingring Dram, that should not work
Mal'ciouſly, like poison ? but I cannot Beleeve this Crack to be in my dread Mistresse
(So Sovereignly being honourable.)
I have lov'd thee.

Leo. Make that thy question, and go rot:
Doſt think I am so muddy, so unsetled,
To appoint my self in this vexation ?
Sully the purity and whitenesse of my sheers
(Which to preserve, is sleep: which being spotted,
Is Goads, Thorns, Nettles, Tails of Wasps)
Give scandall to the blood o'th'Prince, my Sonne,
(Who I do think is mine, and love as mine)

Without ripe moving to't ? Would I do this ?
Could man so blench ?

Cam. I must beleeve you (Sir)
I doe, and will fetch off Bohemia for't:
Provided, that when he's remov'd, your Highnesse
Will take again your Queen, as yours at first,
Even for your Sonnes sake, and thereby for sealing
The injury of Tongues, in Courts and Kingdoms
Known and ally'd to yours.

Leo. Thou doſt advise me.
Even so as I mine own course have set down:
He give no blemish to her honour, none.

Cam. My Lord,
Goe then; and with a countenance as cleir
As friendship wears at Feasts, keep with Bohemia
And with your Queen: I am his Cup-bearer,
If from me he have wholesome Beveridge,
Account me not your Servant.

Leo. This is all:
Do't, and thou haſt the one halfe of my heart;
Do't not, thou split'tt thine own.

Cam. He do't, my Lord.

Leo. I will seem friendly, as thou haſt advis'd me. Exit.

Cam. O miserable Lady. But for me!
What case stand I in ? I must be the poysoner
Of good Polixenes, and my ground to do't,
Is the obedience to a Master; one,
Who in Rebellion with himself, will have
All that are his, so too. To do this deed,
Promotion follows: If I could find example
Of thousands that had struck anointed Kings,
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't: But since
Nor Brasse, nor Stone, nor Parchment bears not one, Let villany it self forswear't. I must Forsake the Court: to do't, or no, is certain
To me a break-neck. Happy Starre reign now, Here comes Bohemia. Enter Polixenes.

Pol. This is strange: me thinks
My favour here begins to warp. Not speak ?
Good day Camillo.

Cam. Hoy! most royal Sir.

Pol. What is the news i'th'Court ?

Cam. None rare (my Lord.)

Pol. The King hath one him such a countenance,
As he had lost some Province, and a Region
Lov'd, as he loves himself: even now I met him
With customary complement, when he Waſting his eies to th'contrary, and falling
A Lippe of much contempt, speeds from me, and
So leaves me to consider what is breeding,
That changes thus his Manners.

Cam. I dare not know (my Lord.)

Pol. How, dare not? do not? do you know, and dare not?
Be intelligent to me, 'tis thereabouts:
For to your self, what do you know, you must,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good Camillo,
Your chang'd complexions are to me a Mirror,
Which shews me mine chang'd too: for I must be A party in this alteration, finding
My self thus alter'd with t.

Cam. There is a sicknesse
Which puts some of us in distemper, but I cannot name the Disease, and it is caught
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How caught of me ?
Make me not fighted like the Basilisque.

I have

I look'd on thousands, who have sped the better
By my regard, but kill'd none so: Camillo.
As you are certainly a Gentleman, thereto
Clerk-like expedienc'd, which no less adorns
Our Gentry, then our Parents Noble Names,
In whose success we are gentle: I beseech you,
If you know ought which do's behove my knowledge,
Thereof to be inform'd, imprison't not
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I may not answer.

Pol. A Sickness caught of me, and yet I well?
I must be answer'd. Dost thou hear Camillo,
I conjure thee by all the parts of man,
Which honour do's acknowledge, whereof the least
Is not this Suit of mine, that thou declare
What incidency thou dost guess of harm
Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near,
Which way to be prevented, if to be:
If nor, how best to bear it.

Cam. Sir, I will tell you,
Since I am charg'd in Honour, and by him
That I think Honourable: therefore mark my counsel,
Which must be ev'n as swiftly followed, as
I mean to utter it; or both your self, and me,
Cry lost, and so good night.

Pol. On, good Camillo.

Cam. I appointed him to murder you.

Pol. By whom, Camillo?

Cam. By the King.

Pol. For what?

Cam. He thinks, nay with all confidence he swears,
As he had seen't, or been an Instrument
To vice you to'r, that you have toucht his Queen Forbiddenly.

Pol. Oh then, my best blood turn
To an infected Gelly, and my Name
Be yoked with his, that did betray the best:
Turn then my freshest Reputation to
A savour, that may strike the dullest Nostril
Where I arrive, and my approach be shunn'd,
Nay hated too, worse then the great'st infection
That ere was heard, or read.

Cam. Swear his thought over
By each particular Star in Heaven, and
By all their influences; you may as well
Forbid the Sea for to obey the Moon,
As (or by Oath) remove, or (Counsel) shake
The Fabrick of his Folly, whose foundation
Is pyl'd upon his Faith, and will continue
The standing of his Body.

Pol. How should this grow?

Cam. I know not: but I am sure 'tis safer to Avoid what's grown, then question how 'tis born.
If therefore you dare trust my honesty,
That lies enclosed in this Trunk, which you
Shall bear along impawnd, away to Night,
Your Followers I will whisper to the business,
And will by twos, and threes, at several Posternes, Clear them o'th' City: For my self, Ile put My fortunes to your service (which are here
By this discovery lost.) Be not uncertain,
For by the honour of my Parents, I
Have uttered Truth: which if you seek to prove,
I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer,
Then one condemned by the Kings own mouth:
Thereon his Execution sworn.

Pol. I do believe thee:

I saw his heart i'ns face. Give me thy hand.
Be Pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbour mine. My Ships are ready, and My people did expect my hence departure
Two dayes ago. This Jealousie
Is for a precious Creature: as shee's rare,
Must it be great; and, as his Person's mighty,
Must it be violent: and, as he do's conceive,
He is dishonour'd by a man, which ever
Profess'd to him: Why his Revenges must
In that be made more bitter. Fear ore-shades me:
Good expedition be my friend, and comfort
The gracious Queen, part of his Theam; but nothing
Of his ill-tane suspicion. Come Camillo,
I will respect thee as a Father, if Thou bear'st my life off, hence: Let us avoid.

Cam. It is in mine authority to command
The Keyes of all the Posternes: Please your Highness
To take the urgent hour. Come Sir, away. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Hermione, Mamillius, Ladies: Leontes, Antigonus, Lord.

Her. Take the Boy to you: he so troubles me,
'Tis past enduring.

Lady. Come (my gracious Lord)
Shall I be your play-fellow?

Mam. No, Ile none of you.

Lady. Why (my sweet Lord?)

Mam. You'll kiss me hard, and speak to me, as if I were a Baby still. I love you better.

2 Lady. And why so (my Lord?)

Mam. Not for because
Your Brows are blacker (yet black-brows they say
Become some Women best, so that there be not Too much hair there, but in a Semicircle,
Or a half-Moon made with a Pen.)

2 Lady. Who taught this?

Mam. I learn'd it out of Womens faces: pray now,
What colour be your eye-brows?

Lady. Blew (my Lord.)

Mam. Nay, that's a mock: I have seen a Ladies Nose
That ha's been blew, but not her eye-brows.

Lady. Heark ye,
The Queen (your Morher) rounds apace: we shall Present our services to a fine new Prince
One of these daies, and then you'd wanton with us,
If we would have you.

2 Lady. She is spread of late
Into a goodly Bulk (good time encounter her.)

Her. What wisdom stirs amongst you? Come Sir, now
I am for you again: Pray you sit by us,
And tell's a Tale.

Mam. Merry, or sad, shal't be?

Her. As merry as you will.

Mam. A sad Tale's best for Winter:
I have one of Sprights, and Goblins.

Her. Let's have that (good Sir.)
Come-on, sit down, come-on, and do your best,
To fright me with your sprights: you're powerful at it.

Mam. There was a man.

Her. Nay, come sit down: then on.

Mam. Dwelt by a Church-yard: I will tell it softly,
Yond Crickets shall not hear it.

Her. Come on then, and giv't me in mine ear. Enter L.

Leon. Was he met there? his Train? Camillo with him?

Lord. Behind the tuft of Pines I met them, never Saw I men scow'r so on their way: I eyed them
Even to their Ships.

Leo. How blest am I

In my just Censure? In my true Opinion?
Alack, for lesser knowledge, how accurs'd,
In being so blest? There may be in the Cup
A Spider steep'd, and one may drink; depart,
And yet partake no venom; (for his knowledge
Is not infected) but if one present
Th' abhor'd Ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drunk, he crackes his gorge, his sides
With violent Hefts: I have drunk, and seen the Spider.
Camillo was his help in this, his Pander:
There is a plot against my Life, my Crown;
All's true that is mistrusted: that false Villain,
Whom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him:
He ha's discovered my Design, and I
Remain a pinch'd Thing; yea, a very Trick
For them to play at will: how came the Posternes
So easily open?

Lord. By his great authority,
Which often hath no less prevail'd, then so
On your command.

Leo. I know't too well.

Give me the Boy, I am glad you did not nurse him:
Though he do's bear some signes of me, yet you
Have too much bloud in him.

Her. What is this? Sport?

Leo. Bear the Boy hence, he shall not come about her,
Away with him, and let her sport her self
With that she's big with, for 'tis Polixenes
Ha's made thee swell thus.

Her. But I'd say he had not;
And Ile be sworn you would believe my saying,
How e're you lean to th' Nayward.

Leo. You (my Lords)

Look on her, mark her well: be but about
To say she is a goodly Lady, and
The justice of your hearts will thereto add
'Tis pity she's not honest: Honourable:
Prayse her but for this her without-dore-Form,
(Which on my faith deserves high speech) and straight
The Shrug, the Hum, or Ha, (these Petty-brands
That Calumny doth use; Oh I am out,
That Mercy do's, for Calumny will fear
Vertue it self) these Shrugs, these Hum's, and Ha's,
When you have said she's goodly, come between,
Ere you can say she's honest: But be't known
(From him that ha's most cause to grieve it should be) She's an Adulteress.

Her. Should a Villain say so,
(The most replenish'd Villain in the world)
He were as much more Villain: you (my Lord)
Do but mistake.

Leo. You have mistook (my Lady)
Polixenes for Leontes: O thou Thing,
(Which Ile not call a Creature of thy place,
Least Barbarisme (making me the precedent)

Should a like Language use to all degrees,
And mannerly distinguishment leave out,
Betwixt the Prince and Beggar:) I have said
She's an Adulteress, I have said with whom:
More; She's a Traytor, and Camillo is
A Federary with her, and one that knowes
What she should shame to know her self,
But with her most vild Principal; that she's
A Bed-swarver, even as bad as those
That Vulgars give bold't Titles, I, and privy
To this their late escape.

Her. No (by my life)

Privy to none of this: how will this grieve you,
When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that
You thus have publish'd me? Gentle my Lord,
You scarce can right me throughly, then, to say
You did mistake.

Leo. No: If I mistake

In those Foundations which I build upon,
The Center is not big enough to bear
A School-Boyes Top. Away with her, to Prison:
He who shall speak for her, is afar-off guilty,
But that he speaks.

Her. Ther's some ill Planet raignes:

I must be patient, till the Heavens look
With an aspect more favourable. Good my Lords,
I am not prone to weeping (as our Sex Commonly are) the want of which vain dew
Perchance shall dry your pities: but I have
That honourable Grief lodg'd here, which burnes
Worse then Tears down: 'beseech you all (my Lords)
With thoughts so qualified, as your Charities
Shall best instruct you, measure me: and so
The Kings will be perform'd.

Leo. Shall I be heard?

Her. Who is't that goes with me? 'beseech your Highness
My women may be with me, for you see
My plight requires it. Do not weep (good Fooles)
There is no cause: When you shall know your Mistress
Has deserv'd Prison, then abound in tears,
As I come out: this Action I now go on,
Is for my better grace. Adieu (my Lord)
I never wish'd to see you sorry, now
I trust I shall: my Women come, you have leave.

Leo. Go do our bidding: hence.

Lord. 'Beseech your Highness call the Queen again.

Ant. Be certain what you do (Sir) lest your Justice
Prove violence, in the which three great ones suffer,
Your self, your Queen, your Son.

Lord. For her (my Lord)

I dare my life lay down, and will do't (Sir)
Please you t' accept it, that the Queen is spotless
I'th' eyes of Heaven, and to you (I mean
In this, which you accuse her.)

Antig. If it prove

She's ocherwise, Ile keep my Stables where
I lodge my Wife, Ile go in couples with her:
Then when I feel, and see her, no further trust her:
For every Inch of Woman in the World,
I, every dram of Womans flesh is false,
If she be.

Leo. Hold your peaces.

Lord. Good my Lord.

Antig. It is for you we speak, not for our selves:
You are abus'd, by some putter on,
That will be damn'd for't: would I knew the Villain,
I would

I would Land-damne him : be she honor-flaw'd,
I have three daughters : the eldest is eleven :
The second, and the third, nine : and sonnes five :
If this prove true, they'l pay for't. By mine honour
Ile gel'd 'em all : fourteen they shall not see
To bring false generations : they are co-heirs,
And I had rather glib my self, then they Should not produce fair issue.

Leo. Cease, no more :
You smell this businesse with a sence as cold
As is a dead-mans nose : but I do see't, and feel't,
As you feel doing thus : and see withall
The instruments that feel.

Ant. If it be so,
We need no grave to bury honesty,
There's not a grain of it, the face to sweeten
Of the whole dungy-earth.

Leo. What ? lack I credit ?

Lord. I had rather you did lack then I (my Lord)
Upon this ground : and more it would content me
To have her Honour true, then your suspicion
Be blam'd for't how you might.

Leo. Why what need we Commune with you for this ? but rather follow
Our forceful instigation ? Our prerogative
Calls not your Counsels, but our natural goodnesse
Imparts this : which, if you, or stupified,
Or seeming so, in skill, cannot, or will not Relish a truth, like us : informe your selves
We need no more of your advice : the matter,
The losse, the gain, the ord'ring on't,
Is all properly ours.

Ant. And I wish (my Liege)
You had onely in your silent judgement try'd it,
Without more overture.

Leo. How could that be ?
Either thou art most ignorant by age
Or thou wer't born a fool : Camillo's flight
Added to their familiarity
(Which was as grosse, as ever touch'd conjecture,
That lack'd sight only, nought for approbation
But only seeing all other circumstances
Made up to th'deed) doth push on this proceeding,
Yet for a greater confirmation
(For in an act of this importance, 'twere
Most pittious to be wild) I have dispatch'd in post,
To sacred Delphos, to Apollo's Temple,
Cleomines and Deon, whom you know
Of stuff'd sufficiency : Now, from the Oracle
They will bring all, whose spiritual counsel had,
Shall stop, or spur me. Have I done well ?

Lord. Well done (my Lord.)

Leo. Though I am satisfy'd, and need no more
Then what I know, yet shall the Oracle
Give rest to th'minds of others ; such as he Whose ignorant credulity will not Come up to th'truth. So we have thought it good
From our free person, she should be confin'd,
Least that the treachery of the two, fled hence,
Be left her to perform. Come follow us,
We are to speak in publick : for this businesse
Will raise us all.

Antig. To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth, were known.

Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Paulina, a Gentleman, Goaler, Emilia.

Paul. The Keeper of the prison, call to him :
Let him have knowledge whom I am. Good Lady,
No Court in Europe is too good for thee,
What dost thou then in prison ? Now good Sir,
You know me, do you not ?

Goa. For a worthy Lady,
And one, whom much I honour.

Pau. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the Queen.

Goa. I may not (Madam)
To the contrary I have expresse commandment.

Pau. Here's a-doe to lock up honesty and honour from Th'accesse of gentle visitors. Is't lawful pray you
To see her women ? any of them ? Emilia ?

Goa. So please you (Madam)
To put a-part these your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.

Pau. I pray you now call her :
Withdraw your selves.

Goa. And Madam,
I must be present at your conference.

Paul. Well : be't so : prethee.
Here's such a-doe, to make no stain, a stain,
As passes colouring. Dear Gentlewoman,
How fares our gracious Lady ?

Enter.
Emilia.

Emil. As well as one so gear, and so forlorn
May hold together ; On her frights, and griefs
(Which never tender Lady hath born greater)
She is, something before her time, deliver'd.

Pau. A boy ?

Emil. A daughter, and a goodly babe,
Lusty, and like to live : the Queen receives
Much comfort in't : Saies, my poor prisoner,
I am innocent as you.

Pau. I dare be sworn :
These dangerous, unsafe Lunes i'th'King, beshrew them,
He must be told on't, and he shall : the office
Becomes a woman best. Ile take't upon me,
If I prove Honey-mouth'd, let my tongue blister.
And never to my red-look'd anger be
The Trumpet any more : pray you (Emilia)
Commend my best obedience to the Queen,
If she dares trust me with her little babe,
Ile shew't the King, and undertake to be
Her Advocate to'th loud'st. We do not know
How he may soften at the sight o'th'Child :
The silence often of pure innocence
Perswades, when speaking fails.

Emil. Most worthy Madam,
Your honour and your goodnesse is so evident,
That your free undertaking cannot mis
A thriving issue : there is no Lady living
So meet for this great errand ; please your Ladyship
To visit the next roome, ile presently
Acquaint the Queen of your most Noble offer,
Who, but to day hammered of this designe,
But durst not tempt a minister of honour
Least she should be deny'd.

Pau.

Paul. Tell her (Emilia)

Use that tongue I have : If wit flow from't
As boldnesse from my bosom, let't not be doubted
I shall do good.

Emil. Now be you blest for it.

He to the Queen: please you come something neerer.

Goa. Madam if't please the Queen to send the babe,
I know not what I shall incurre, to passe it,
Having no warrant.

Paul. You need not fear it (sir)

This Child was prisoner to the womb, and is
By Law and processe of great Nature, thence Free'd, and enfranchis'd, not a party to
The anger of the King, nor guilty of
(If any be) the trespass of the Queen.

Goa. I do belevee it.

Paul. Do not you fear : upon mine honour, I
Will stand betwixt you, and danger.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Leontes, Servants, Paulina, Antigonus, and Lords.

Leo. Nor night, nor day, no rest : it is but weaknesse
To bear the matter thus : meer weaknesse, if
The cause were not in being : part o'th cause,
She, th' Adulteresse ; for the harlot-King
Is quite beyond mine arme : out of the blank
And level of my brain : plot-proof : but she,
I can hook to me : say that she were gone,
Given to the fire, a moiety of my rest
Might come to me again. Who's there ?

Ser. My Lord.

Leo. How do's the boy ?

Ser. He took good rest to night : 'tis hop'd
His sicknesse is discharg'd.

Leo. To see his Noblenesse,
Conceiving the dishonour of his Mother,
He straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply,
Faden'd, and fix'd the shame on't in himself :
Threw off his Spirit, his Appetite, his Sleep,
And down-right languish'd. Leave me solely : go,
See how he fares : Fic, fie, no thought of him,
The very thought of my Revenges that way
Recoyl upon me : in himself too mighty,
Untill a time may serve, For present vengeance
Take it on her: Camillo, and Polixenes
Laugh at me ; make their pastime at my sorrow ;
They should not laugh, if I could reach them, nor Shall she, within my power.

Enter Paulina.

Lord. You must not enter.

Paul. Nay rather (good my Lords) be second to me :
Fear you his tyrannous passion more (alas)
Then the Queens life ? A gracious innocent soul,
More free, then he is jealous.

Antig. That's enough.

Ser. Madam ; he hath not slept to night, commanded
None should come at him.

Paul. Not so hor (good Sir)

I come to bring him sleep. 'Tis such as you

That creep like shadowes by him, and do sigh
At each his needlesse heavings : such as you
Nourish the cause of his awaking. I

Do come with words, as medicinal, as true ;
(Honest, as either ;) to purge him of that humour,
That presses him from sleep.

Leo. What noise there, hoe ?

Paul. No noise (my Lord) but needful conference,
About some Gossips for your Highnesse.

Leo. How ?

Away with that audacious Lady. Antigonus.
I charg'd thee that she should not come about me,
I knew she would

Ant. I told her so (my Lord)

On your displeasures pent and on mine,
She should not visit you.

Leo. What ? canst not rule her ?

Paul. From all dishonesty he can : in this (Unless he take the course that you have done)
Commit me, for committing honor, trust it,
He shall not rule me :

Ant. La-you now, you hear,
When she will take the rain, I let her run,
But she'l not stumble.

Paul. Good my Liege I come :

And I beseech you hear me : who professes
My self your loyal servant, your Physitian,
Your most obedient Counsellor : yet that dares
Lesse appear so, in comforting your evils,
Then such as most seem yours. I say, I come
From your good Queen.

Leo. Good Queen ?

Paul. Good Queen (my Lord) good Queen,
I say good Queen,
And would by combate, make her good so, were I
A man, the worst about you.

Leo. Force her hence.

Enter.

Paul. Let him that makes but trifles of his eies
First hand me : on mine own accord, ile off,
But first ; ile do my errand. The good Queen
(For she is good) hath brought you forth a daughter,
Here 'tis : commends it to your blessing.

Leo. Out :

A mankind Witch ? Hence with her, out o'dore :
A most intelligencing bawd.

Paul. Not so :

I am as ignorant in that, as you,
In so entit'ling me : and no lesse honest
Then you are mad : which is enough, ile warrant
(As this world goes) to passe for honest.

Leo. Traitors ;

Will you not push her out ? Give her the Bastard,
Thou dotard, thou art woman-tyr'd : unrooted
By thy dame Partlet here. Take up the Bastard, Tak't up, I say : give't to the Croane,

Paul. For ever

Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak'st up the Princess, by that forced basenesse
Which he has put upon't,

Leo. He dreads his Wife.

Paul. So I would you did : then 'twere past all doubt
You'd call your children, yours.

Leo. A nest of Traitors.

Ant. I am none, by this good light.

Paul. Nor I : nor any

But one that's here : and that's himself : for he,

The

The sacred honour of himself, his Queenes,
His hopeful Sons, his Bibes, betrayes to slander,
Whose tting is sharper then the Swords, and will not (For as the case now stands, it is a Curse
He cannot be compell'd too'r) once remove
The Root of his Opinion, which is rotten,
As ever Oak, or stone was found.

Leo. A Callat

Of boundless tongue, who late hath beat her husband,
And now baits me: This Brat is none of mine,
It is the Issue of Polixenes.
Hence with it, and together with the Dam,
Commit them to the fire.

Paul. It is yours:

And might we lay in' old Proverb to your charge,
So like you, 'tis the worse. Behold (my Lords)
Although the print be little, the whole Matter
And Copy of the Father: (Eye, Nose, Lip,
The trick of's Frown, his Forehead, nay, the Valley,
The pretty dimples of his Chin, and Cheek; his Smiles:
The very Mold, and frame of hand, nay, Finger.)
And thou good Goddess Nature, which hast made it
So like to him that got it, if thou hast
The ordering of the Mind too, 'mongst all Colours
No Yellow in't, lest she suspect, as he do's,
Her Children, not her Husbands.

Leo. A grofs Hag:

And Lozel, thou art worthy to be hang'd,
That wilt not stay her Tongue.

Antig. Hang all the Husbands

That cannot do that Feat, you'll leave your self Hardly one Subject.

Leo. Once more take her hence.

Paul. A most unworthy, and unnatural Lord
Can do no more.

Leo. Ile ha' thee burnt.

Paul. I care not;

It is an Heretick that makes the fire,
Not she which burnes in't. Ile not call you Tyrant:
But this most cruel usage of your Queen
(Not able to produce more accusation
Then your own weak-hing'd Fancy) something favours
Of Tyranny, and will ignoble make you,
Yea, scandalous to the World.

Leo. On your Allegiance,
Out of the Chamber with her. Were I a Tyrant,
Where were her life? she durst not call me so,
If she did know me one. Away with her.

Paul. I pray you do not push me, Ile be gone.
Look to your Babe (my Lord) 'tis yours: Jove send her
A better guiding Spirit. What need these hands?
You that are thus so tender o're his Follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.
So, so: Farewel, we are gone. Exit.

Leo. Thou (Traytor) hast set on thy Wife to this,
My Child? away with't? even thou, that hast
A heart so tender o're it, take it hence,
And see it instantly consum'd with fire.
Even thou, and none but thou. Take it up straight:
Within this hour bring me word 'tis done.
(And by good testimony) or Ile seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine: if thou refuse,
And wilt encounter with my VVrath, say so;
The Bastard-braines with these my proper hands
Shall I dash out: Go take it to the fire,
For thou set'st on thy VVife.

Antig. I did not, Sir:

These Lords, my Noble Fellowes, if they please,
Can clear me in't.

Lords. We can; my Royal Liege,
He is not guilty of her coming hither.

Leo. You're Liars all.

Lord. Beseech your Highness give us better credit:
We have alwaies truly serv'd you, and beseech
So to esteem of us: and on our knees we beg,
(As recompense of our dear services
Past, and to come) that you do change this purpose,
Which being so horrible, so bloody, must Lead on to some foul Issue. We all kneel.

Leo. I am a Feather for each wind that blowes:
Shall I live on, to see this Bastard kneel,
And call me Father? better burn it now,
Then curse it then. But be it: let it live.
It shall not neither. You Sir, come you hither:
You that have been so tenderly officious
With Lady Margery, your Mid-wife there,
To save this Bastards life; for 'tis a Bastard,
So sure as this Beard's gray. What will you adventure,
To save this Brats life?

Antig. Any thing (my Lord)
That my ability may undergo,
And Nobleness impose: at last thus much;
Ile pawn the little blood which I have left,
To save the innocent: any thing possible.

Leo. It shall be possible: Swear by this Sword
Thou wilt perform my bidding.

Antig. I will (my Lord.)

Leo. Mark and perform it: seest thou? for the fail
Of any point in't, shall not only be
Death to thy self, but to thy lewd-tongu'd Wife, (Whom for this timewe pardon) We enjoy thee
As thou art Liege-man to us, that thou carry
This female Bastard hence, and that thou bear it
To some remote and desert place, quite out
Of our Dominions; and that there thou leave it (Without much mercy) to its own protection,
And favour of the Climate: as by strange fortune,
It came to us, I do in Justice charge thee,
On thy Soules peril, and thy bodies torture,
That thou commend it strangely to some place,
Where Change may nurse, or end it: take it up.

Antig. I swear to do this: though a present death
Had been more merciful. Come on (poor Babe)
Some powerful Spirit instruct the Kites and Ravens
To be thy Nurses. Wolves and Bears, they say,
(Casting their savageness aside) have done
Like offices of pity. Sir, be prosperous
In more then this deed do's require; and blessing
Against this Cruelty, fight on thy side (Poor Thing condemn'd to loss.) Exit.

Leo. No: Ile not rear

Another's Issue.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Please your Highness, Posts
From those you sent to th' Oracle, are come
An hour since: Cleomines and Dion,
Being well arriv'd from Delphos, are both landed,
Hasting to th' Court.

Lord. So please you (Sir) their speed
Hath been beyond accompt.

Leo. Twenty three dayes
They have been absent: 'tis good speed: foretels
The great Apollo suddenly will have

The truth of this appear: Prepare you Lords,
Summon a Session, that we may arraign
Our most disloyal Lady: for as she hath Been publickly accus'd, so shall she have A just and open Trial. While she lives,
My heart will be a burden to me. Leave me,
And think upon my bidding.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scæna Prima.

Enter Cleomines and Dion.

Cle. The Climat's delicate, the Ayr most sweet,
Fertile the Isle, the Temple much surpassing
The common praise it bears.

Dion. I shall report,
For most it caught me, the Celestial Habits,
(Me thinks I so should term them) and the reverence
Of the Grave Wearers. O, the Sacrifice.
How ceremonious, solemn, and un-earthly
It was it's Offering?

Cleo. But of all, the burst
And the ear-deaf'ning Voyce o'th Oracle,
Kin to Joves Thunder, so surpriz'd my Sence
That I was nothing.

Dio. If th' event o'th Journey
Prove as successful to the Queen (O be't so)
As it hath been to us, rare, pleasant, speedy,
The time is worth the use on't.

Cleo. Great Apollo
Turn all to th' best: these Proclamations,
So forcing faults upon Hermione,
I little like.

Dio. The violent carriage of it
Will clear, or end the Business, when the Oracle
(Thus by Apollo's great Divine seal'd up)
Shall the Contents discover: something rare
Even then will rush to knowledge. Go: fresh Horses,
And gracious be the issue. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Leontes, Lords, Officers; Hermione (as to her Trial) Ladies: Cleomines, Dion.

Leo. This Sessions (to our great grief we pronounce)
Even pushes 'gainst our heart. The party try'd,
The Daughter of a King, our Wife, and one
Of us too much belov'd. Let us be clear'd
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly
Proceed in Justice, which shall have due course,
Even to the Guilt, or the Purgation:
Produce the Prisoner.

Officer. It is his Highness pleasure, that the Queen Appear in person, here in Court. Silence. Enter

Leo. Read the Indictment.

Officer. Hermione, Queen to the worthy Leontes, King of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of High Treason, in committing Adultery with Polixenes King of Bohemia, and conspiring with Camillo to take away the Life of our Sovereign Lord the King, thy royal Husband: the pretence whereof being by circumstance partly laid open, thou (Hermione) contrary to the Faith and Allegiance of a true Subject, didst counsel and ayd them, for their better safety, to flee away by Night.

Her. Since what I am to say, must be but that Which contradicts my Accusation, and
The testimony on my part, no other
But what comes from my self, it shall scarce boot me
To say, Not guilty: mine integrity
Being counted Falshood, shall (as I express it)
Be so receiv'd. But thus, if Powers divine
Behold our humane Actions (as they do)
I doubt not then, but innocence shall make False Accusations blush, and Tyranny
Tremble at Patience. You (my Lord) best know (Whom least will seem to do so) my past life
Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Then History can pattern, though devis'd,
And play'd, to take Spectators. For behold me,
A Fellow of the Royal Bed, which owe
A Moiety of the Throne: a great Kings Daughter,
The Mother to a hopeful Prince, here standing
To prate and talk for Life, and Honour, for Who please to come and hear. For Life, I prize it
As I weigh Grief (which I would spare :) For Honour,
'Tis a derivative from me to mine,
And only that I stand for. I appeal
To your own Conscience (Sir) before Polixenes
Came to your Court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so: Since he came,
With what encounter so uncurrant, I
Have strain'd t'appear thus; if one jot beyond
The bound of honour, or in act, or will
That way inclining, hardned be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st of Kin
Cry sic upon my grave.

Leo. I ne'r heard yet,
That any of these bolder Vices wanted
Less impudence to gain-say what they did,
Then to perform it first.

Her. That's true enough,
Though 'tis a saying (Sir) not due to me.

Leo. You will not own it.

Her. More then Mistress of,
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes
(With whom I am accus'd) I do confess
I lov'd him, as in Honour he requir'd:
With such a kind of Love, as might become
A Lady like me; with a Love, even such,
So, and no other, as your self commanded:
Which, not to have done, I think had been in me
Both Disobedience, and Ingratitude
To you, and towards your friends, whose love had spoke,
Even since it could speak, from an infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now for Conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes, though it be dish'd
For me to try how: All I know of it,
Is, that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your Court, the Gods themselves
(Wotting no more then I) are ignorant.

Leo. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have underta'ne to do in's absence.

Her. Sir,

Her. Sir,
You speak a Language that I understand not :
My Life stands in the level of your Dreames,
Which Ile lay down.

Leo. Your Actions are my Dreames,
You had a Bastard by Polixenes,
And I but dream'd it : As you were past all shame,
(Those of your fact are so) so past all truth ;
Which to deny, concernes more then avails : for as Thy Brat hath been cast our, like to it self,
No Father owning it (which is indeed
More criminal in thee, then it) so thou
Shalt feel our Justice ; in whose easiest passage,
Look for no less then death.

Her. Sir, spare your Threats :
The Bugge which you would fright me with, I seek :
To me can Life be no commodity,
The Crown and comfort of my Life (your Favour)
I do give lost, for I do feel it gone,
But know not how it went. My second Joy,
And first fruits of my body, from his presence
I am barr'd like one infectious. My third comfort (Star'd most unluckily) is from my breast
(The innocent milk in it most innocent mouth)
Hal'd out to murder. My self on every Post
Proclaim'd a Strumpet : With immodest hatred
The Child-bed priviledge deny'd, which 'longs
To Women of all fashion. Lastly, hurried
Here, to this place, i'th' open ayr before
I have got strength of limbs. Now (my Liege
Tell me what blessings I have here alive,
That I should fear to dye ? Therefore proceed -
But yet hear this : mistake me not : no Life,
(I prize it not a straw) but for mine Honour,
Which I would free : if I shall be condemn'd
Upon surmizes (all proofes sleeping else,
But what your Jealousies awake) I tell you
'Tis Rigour, and not Law. Your Honours all,
I do refer me to the Oracle :
Apollo be my Judge.

Lord. This your request Enter Dion and Cleomines.
Is altogether just : therefore bring forth
(And in Apollo's Name) his Oracle.

Her. The Emperour of Russia was my Father,
Oh that he were alive, and here beholding
His Daughters Tryal : that he did but see
The fluness of my misery ; yet with eyes
Of pity, not Revenge.

Officer. You here shall swear upon the Sword of Justice,
That you (Cleomines and Dion) have Been both at Delphos, and from thence have brought
This seal'd-up Oracle, by the hand deliver'd
Of great Apollo's Priest ; and that since then,
You have not dar'd to break the holy Seal,
Nor read the Secrets in't.

Cleo. Dio. All this we swear.

Leo. Break up the Seales and read.

Officer. Hermione is chaste, Polixenes blameless, Camillo a true Subject, Leontes a jealous Tyrant, his innocent Babe truly begotten, and the King shall live without an Heir, if that which is left, be not found.

Lords. Now blessed be the great Apollo.

Her. Praised.

Leo. Hast thou read the truth ?

Offic. I (my Lord) even so as it is here set down.

Leo. There is no truth at all i'th' Oracle :

The Sessions shall proceed : this is meer fallhood.

Ser. My Lord the King : the King ?

Leo. What is the business ?

Ser. O Sir, I shall be hated to report it.
The Prince your Son, with meer conceit and fear
Of the Queen's speed, is gone.

Leo. How ? Gone ?

Ser. Is dead.

Leo. Apollo's angry, and the Heavens themselves
Do strike at my Injustice. How now there ?

Paul. This newes is mortal to the Queen : Look down
And see what death is doing.

Leo. Take her hence :

Her heart is but o're-charg'd : she will recover.
I have too much believ'd mine own suspicion :

Beseech you tenderly apply to her

Some remedies for life. Apollo pardon

My great prophane's 'gainst thine Oracle.

Ile reconcile me to Polixenes,

New wooe my Queen, recal the good Camillo

(Whom I proclaim a man of Truth, of Mercy :)

For being transported by my Jealousies

To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose

Camillo for the minister, to poyson

My friend Polixenes : which had been done,

But that the good mind of Camillo tardied

My swift command : though I with death, and with

Reward did threaten and encourage him,

Not doing it, and being done : he, (most humane,

And fill'd with Honour) to my Kingly Guest

Unclass'd my practise, quit his fortunes here

(Which you knew great) and to the certain hazard

Of all uncertainties, himself commended,

No richer then his Honour : How he glisters

Through my dark Rust ? and how his Piety

Do's my deeds make the blacker ?

Paul. Wo the while :

O cut my Lace, lest my heart (cracking it)

Break too.

Lord. What fit is this ? Good Lady ?

Paul. What studied torments (Tyrant) hast for me ?

What Wheels ? Racks ? Fires ? What slaying ? boyling ? burn
In Leads, or Oyles ? What old, or new torture (ing,

Must I receive ? whose very word deserves

To taste of thy most worst. Thy tyranny

(Together working with thy Jealousies,

Fancies too weak for Boyes, too green and idle

For Girles of Nine) O think what they have done ,

And then run mad indeed : stark-mad : for all

Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices for it.

That thou betrayed'st Polixenes, 'twas nothing,

(That did but shew thee, of a Fool, inconstant,

And damnable ingrateful :) Nor was't much.

Thou would'st have poyson'd good Camillo's Honour,

To have him kill a King : poor Trespasses,

More monstrous standing by : whereof I reckon

The casting forth to Crowes, the Baby-daughter,

To be or none, or little ; though a Devil

Would have shed water out of fire, ere don't :

Nor is't directly laid to thee, the death

Of the young Prince, whose honourable thoughts

(Thoughts high for one so tender) cleft the heart

That could conceive a gross and foolish Sire

Blemish'd his gracious Dam : this is nor, no,

Laid to thy answer : but the last : O Lords,

When I have said, cry woe : the Queen, the Queen,

The

The sweet'st, dear'st creature's dead: and vengeance for't
Not drop'd down yet.

Lord. The higher powers forbid.

Paul. I say she's dead: Ile swear't. If word, nor oath Prevail not, go and see: if you can bring Tincture, or lustre in her lip, her eye
Hear outwardly, or breath within, Ile serve you
As I would do the Gods. But, O thou Tyrant,
Dost not repent these things, for they are heavier
Then all thy woes can stir: therefore betake thee
To nothing but despair. A thousand knees,
Ten thousand years together; naked, fasting,
Upon a barren Mountain, and still Winter
In storm perpetual, could not move the Gods
To look that way thou wert.

Leo. Go on, go on:
Thou canst not speak too much, I have deserv'd
All tongues to talk their bitterest.

Lord. Say no more,
How ere the business goes, you have made fault
I'th boldness of your speech.

Paul. I am sorry for't,
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent: Alas, I have shew'd too much
The rashness of a woman: he is toucht
To th' Noble heart. VVhat's gone, and what's past help
Should be past grief: Do not receive affliction
At my petition, I beseech you, rather
Let me be punish'd, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now (good my Liege)
Sir, Royal Sir, forgive a foolish woman:
The love I bore your Queen (Lo, fool again)
Ile speak of her no more, nor of your Children:
Ile not remember you of my own Lord,
(VVho is lost too:) take your patience to you,
And Ile say nothing.

Leo. Thou didst speak but well,
VVhen most the truth: which I receive much better,
Then to be pitied of thee. Prethee bring me
To the dead bodies of my Queen and Son,
One grave shall be for both. Upon them shall
The causes of their death appear (unto
Our shame perpetual) once a day, lie visit
The Chappel where they lie, and teares shed there Shall be my recreation. So long as Nature
VVill bear up with this exercise, so long
I daily vow to use it. Come, and lead me
To these sorrowes.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Antigonus, a Mariner, Babe, Sheep-heard, and Clown.

Ant. Thou art perfect then, our ship hath toucht upon
The Desarts of Bohemia.

Mar. I (My Lord) and fear
VVe have Landed in ill time: the skies look grimly,
And threaten present blusters. In my conscience
The heavens with that we have in hand, are angry,
And frown upon's.

Ant. Their sacred wils be done; get aboard,
Look to thy bark, Ile not be long before

I call upon thee.

Mar. Make your best hast, and go not Too far i'th Land: 'tis like to beloud weather,
Besides this place is famous for the Creatures
Of prey, that keep upon't.

Antig. Go thou away,
Ile follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so rid o'th business.

Exit.

Ant. Come, poor Babe;
I have heard (but not believ'd) the spirits o'th' dead
May walk again: if such thing be, thy Mother
Appear'd to me last night: for ne're was dream
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head is on one side, some another,
I never saw a Vessel of like sorrow
So fill'd, and so becoming: in pure white Robes
Like very Sanctity she did approach
My Cabbin where I lay: thrice bow'd before me,
And (gasping to begin some speech) her eyes
Became two spouts; the fury spent, anon
Did this break from her. Good Antigonus,
Since Fate (against thy better disposition)
Hath made thy perlon for the thrower-out
Of my poor Babe, according to thine oath,
Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
There weep, and leave it crying: and for the babe
Is counted lost for ever, Perdita
I prethee call't: For this ungentle business
Put on thee, by my Lord, thou ne're shalt see
Thy VVife Paulina more: and so, with shrieks
She melted into ayr. Affrighted much,
I did in time collect my self, and thought
This was so, and no slumber: Dreams, are toys,
Yet for this once, yea superstitiously,
I will be squar'd by this. I do believe Hermione hath suffer'd death, and that Apollo would (this being indeed the issue
Of King Polixenes) it should here be laid
(Either for life, or death) upon the Earth
Of it's right Farther. Blossom, speed thee well,
There lie, and there thy character: there these,
VVhich may if Fortune please, both breed thee (Pretty)
And still rest thine. The storm begins, poor wretch,
That for thy Mothers fault, art thus expos'd
To loss, and what may follow. VVeep I cannot,
But my heart bleeds: and most accurst am I
To be by Oath enjoyn'd to this. Farewel.
The day frowns more and more: thou'rt like to have
A lullaby too rough: I never saw

The heavens so dim, by day. A savage clamour I VVell may I get a-board: This is the Chace, (herd.
I am gone for ever. Exit pursued by a Bear. Enter a Sheep-

Shep. I would there were no age between ren and three and twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest:
for there is nothing (in the between) but getting wenches with child, wronging the Ancientry, stealing, fighting, hark you now: would any but these boyld-brains of nineteen, and two and twenty hunt this weather?
They have scarr'd away two of my best Sheep, which I fear the VVolf will sooner find then the Master;
if any where I have them, 'tis by the Sea-side, brou-zing of Ivy. Good-luck (and't be the will) what have we here? Mercy on's, A Barne! A very pretty barne;
A Boy, or a Child I wonder? (A pretty one, a very pretty one) sure some Scape: Though I am not bookish, yet I can read Waiting-Gentlewoman in the scape: this has been some stair-work, some Trunk-work, some behind-door work: they were warmer that got this, then the poor thing is here. Ile take it up for pity, yet Ile tarry till my sonne come: he hallov'd but even novv. Whoa-ho-hoa.

Enter Clown.

Clo. Hilloa, loa.

Shep. What? art so neer? If thou'lt see a thing to talk on, vhen thou art dead and rotten, come hither: vwhat ayl't thou, man?

Clo. I have seen two such sights, by Sea and by Land: but I am not to say it is a Sea, for it is novv the skye, betwixt the Firmament and it, you cannot thrust a bodkins point.

Shep. Why boy, howv is it?

Clo. I would you did but see howv it chafes, howv it rages, howv it takes up the shore, but that's not to the point: Oh, the most pitreous cry of the poor souls, sometimes to see'em, and not to see'em; Now the Ship boaring the Moon with her main Mast, and anon swallowed with yest and froth, as you'd thrust a Cork into a hog's head. And then for the Land-service, To see how the Bear roar out his shoulder-bone, how he cry'd to me for help, and said his name was Antigonus a Nobleman: But to make an end of the Ship, to see how the Sea flap-dragon'd it: but first, how the poor souls roared, and the Sea mock'd them: and how the poor Gentleman roared, and the Bear mock'd him, both roaring louder then the Sea, or Weather.

Shep. Name of mercy; when was this boy?

Clo. Now, now: I have not wink'd since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the Bear half din'd on the Gentleman: he's at it now.

Shep. Would I had been by to have help'd the old man.

Clo. I would you had been by the ship-side, to have help'd her; there your charity would have lack'd footing.

Shep. Heavy matters, heavy matters: but look thee here boy. Now blesse thy self; thou met'st with things dying, I with things new born. Here's a sight for thee: Look thee, a bearing-cloath for a Squires child: look thee here, take up, take up, (Boy:) open't: so, let's see, it was told me I should be rich by the Fairies. This is some Changeling: open't: what's with in boy?

Clo. You're a mad old man; If the finnes of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold, all Gold.

Shep. This is Faery Gold boy, and 'twill prove so: up with'r, keep it close: home, home, the next way. We are lucky (boy) and to be so still requires nothing but secrecy. Let my sheep goe: Come (good boy) the next way home.

Clo. Goe you the next way with your Findings, Ile go see if the Bear be gone from the Gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are never curst but when they are hungry: if there be any of him left, ile bury it.

Shep. That's a good deed: if thou maist discern by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to th'fight of him.

Clo. 'Marry will I: and you shall help to put him i'th'ground.

Shep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and wee'l do good deeds on't.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Time, the Chorus.

Tim. I that please some, try all: both joy and terror Of good, and bad: that makes, and unfolds error. Now take upon me (in the name of Time) To use my wings: Impute it not a crime To me, or my swift passage, that I slide, O're sixteen years, and leave the growth untride Of that wide gap, since it is in my power To overthrow Law, and in one self-born hour To plant, and ore-whelm Custom. Let me passe The same I am, ere ancient Order was, Or what is now receiv'd. I witnesse to The Times that brought them in, so shall I do To th'freshell things now reigning, and make stale The glistering of this present, as my Tale Now seems to it: your patience this allowing, I turn my glasse, and give my Scene such growing As you had slept between: Leontes leaving Th'effects of his fond jealousies, so greiving That he shuts up himself, imagine me (Gentle Spectators) that I now may be In fair Bohemia, and remember well, I mention here a sonne o'th Kings, which Florizel I now name to you, and with speed so pace To speak of Perdua, now grown in grace Equall with wond'ring. What of her insues I list not prophesie: but let Times news Be known when 'tis brought forth. A Shepherds daughter And what to her adheres, which follows after, Is th'argument of Time: of this allow, If ever you have spent time worse, ere now: If never, yet that Time himself doth say, He wishes e'neftly, you never may.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Polixenes and Camillo.

Pol. I pray thee (good Camillo) be no more importunate: 'tis a sicknesse denying thee any thing: a death to grant this.

Cam. It is fifteen years since I saw my Countrey: though I have (for the most part) been ayred abroad, I desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent King (my Master) hath sent for me, to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay (or I oreween to think so) which is another spurre to my departre.

Pol. As thou lov'st me (Camillo) wipe not out the rest of thy services, by leaving me now: the need I have of thee, thine own goodnesse hath made: better not to have had thee, then thus to want thee, thou having made me Busineses, (which none, (without thee) can sufficiently mannage) must either stay to execute them thy self, or take away with thee the very services thou hast done: which if I have not enough considered (as too much I cannot) to be more thankful to thee, shall be my study, and my profit therein, the heaping friendshippes. Of that fatall Countrey Sicilia, prethee speak no more, whose very naming, punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent (as thou call'st him) and reconciled King my brother, whose losse of his most precious Queen and Children, are even now to be a-fresh lamented. Say to me, when saw'st thou the Prince Florizel my son? Kings are no lesse unhappy, their issue not being gracious, then they are in loosing them, when they have approved their vertues.

Cam. Sir, it is three daies since I saw the Prince: what his happier affairs may be, are to me unknown: but I have (missingly) noted, he is of late much retired from Court: and is lesse frequent to his Princely exercises then formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I have considered so much (Camillo) and with some care, so farre, that I have eies under my service, which look upon his removednesse: from whom I have this intelligence, that he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepheard: a man (they say) that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unspeakable estate.

Cam. I have heard (Sir) of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more, then can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

Pol. That's likewise part of my intelligence: but (I fear) the Angle that plucks our sonne thither. Thou shalt accompany us to the place, where we will (not appearing what we are) have some question with the Shepheard; from whose simplicity, I think it not uneasy to get the cause of my sonnes resort thither. Prethee be my present partner in this businesse, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My best Camillo, we must disguise our selves. Exit.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Autolycus singing.

*When Daffadills begin to peer,
With heigh the Doxy over the dale,
Why then comes in the sweet o'th year.
For the red blood reigns in the winters pale.*

*The white sheet bleaching on the hedge,
With heigh the sweet birds, O how they sing:
Doth set my pugging tooth an edge,
For a quart of Ale is a dish for a King.*

*The Lark, that cirra-Lyrachants,
With heigh, with heigh the Thrush and the lay:
Are Summer songs for me and my Annes
While we lie tumbling in the hay.*

I have serv'd Prince Florizel, and in my time wore three pile. but now I am out of service.

*But shall I go mourn for that (my dear)
the pale Moon shines by night:*

*And when I wander here and there
I then do most goe right.*

*If Tinkers may have leave to live,
and bear the Sow-skin Bonnet,*

*Then my account I well may give,
and in the Stocks avouch it.*

My Traffick is sheets: when the Kite builds, look to lesser Linnen. My Father nam'd me Autolycus, who being (as I am) lytter'd under Mercury, was likewise a snapper-up of unconsidered trifles: With Dye and drab, I purchas'd Caparison, and my Revennew is the silly Cheat. Gallowes, and Knock, are too powerfull on the High-way. Beating and hanging are terrors to me: For the life to come, I sleep out the thought of it. A prize, a prize.

Enter Clown.

Clo. Let me see, every Leaven-weather toddes, every told yields pound and odde shilling: fifteen hundred shorn, what comes the wooll to?

Aut. If the sprindge hold, the Cock's mine.

Clo. I cannot do it without Compters. Let me see, what am I to buy for our Sheep-shearing-Feast? Three pound of Sugar, five pound of Currence, Rice: What will this Sister of mine do with Rice? but my father hath made her Mistris of the Feast, and she laies it on. She hath made mesfour and twenty Nose-gays for the shea-rers (three-man song-men, all, and very good ones) but they are most of them Means and Bases; but one Puritan amongst them, and he sings Psalms to horn-Pipes. I must have Saffron to colour the Warden Pies, Mace: Dates, none: that's out of my note: Nutmegs, seven; a Race or two of Ginger, but that I may begge: Four pound of Prewyns, and as many of Reasons o'th Sun.

Aut. Oh, that ever I was born.

Clo. I'th' name of me.

Aut. Oh help me, help me: pluck but off these raggs: and then, dearth, dearth.

Clo. Alack poor soul, thou hast need of more raggs to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

Aut. Oh sir, the loathsomnesse of them offends me, more then the stripes I have received, which are mighty ones and millions, Clo. Alas poor man, a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am rob'd sir, and beaten: my money, and apparel tane from me, and these detestable things put upon me.

Clo. What, by a horse-man, or a foot-man?

Aut. A foot-man (sweet sir) a foot-man.

Clo. Indeed, he should be a foot-man, by the garments he has left with thee: if this be a horsemans Coat, it hath seen very hot service. Lend me thy hand, ile help thee. Come lend me thy hand.

Aut. Oh good sir, tenderly, oh.

Clo. Alas poor soul.

Aut. Oh good sir, softly, good sir: I fear (sir) my shoulder-blade is out.

Clo. How now? canst stand?

Aut. Softly, deer sir: good sir, softly: you ha done me a charitable office.

Clo. Dost lack any money? I have a little money for thee.

Aut. No, good sweet sir: no, I beseech you sir: I have a kinsman not past three quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going: I shall there have money, or any thing I want: Offer me no money I pray you, that kills my heart.

Clo. What manner of Fellow was he that robb'd you?

Aut. A fellow (Sir) that I have known to go about with Troll-my-dames: I knew him once a servant of the Prince: I cannot tell good sir, for which of his Vertues it was, but he was certainly Whipt out of the Court.

Clo.

Clo. His vices you would say: there's no vertue whipt out of the Court: they cherish it to make it stay there; and yet it will no more but abide.

Aut. Vices I would say (Sir.) I know this man well, he hath been since an Ape-bearer, then a Process-server, (a Bailiffe) then he compass'd a Motion of the Prodigal son, and married a Tinkers wife, within a mile where my Land and living lies; and (having flown over many knavish professions) he settled only in Rogue: some call him Autolycus.

Clo. Out upon him: Prig, for my life Prig: he haunts VVakes, Fairs, and Bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true sir: he sir he: that's the Rogue that put me into this apparel.

Clo. Not a more cowardly Rogue in all Bohemia; If you had but look'd big, and spit at him, hee'd have run.

Aut. I must confesse to you (sir) I am no fighter: I am false of heart that way, and that he knew I warrant him.

Clo. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet Sir, much better then I was: I can stand, and walk: I will even take my leave of you, and pace softly towards my Kinsmans.

Clo. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good fac'd sir, no sweet sir.

Clo. Then farewell, I must go to buy Spices for our Sheep-shearing. Exit.

Aut. Prosper you sweet sir. Your Purse is not hot enough to purchase your Spice. He be with you at your Sheep-shearing too: If I make not this Cheat bring out another, and the shearers prove sheep, let me be unrold, and my name put in the book of Vertue.

Song. Jog on, Jog-on, the foot-path way

And merrily hent the stile-a.

A Merry heart goes all the day,

Your sad tires in a Mile-a

Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Florizel, Perdita, Shepherd, Clown, Polixenes, Camillo, Mopsa, Dorcas, Servants, Autolycus.

Flo. These your unusual weeds, to each part of you Do's give a life: no Shepherdess, but Flora Peering in Aprils front. This your sheep-shearing, Is as a merry meeting of the petty gods, And you the Queen on't.

Per. Sir: my gracious Lord, To chide at your extreames, it not becomes me: (Oh pardon, that I name them:) your high self The gracious mark o'th' Land, you have obscur'd With a Swaines wearing: and me (poor lowly Maid) Most goddess-like prank'd up: But that our Feasts In every Mese, have folly; and the Feeders Disgest it with a Custom, I should blush To see you so attyrd: sworn I think, To shew my self a glass.

Flo. I bless the time VVhen my good Falcon, made her flight a-cross Thy Fathers ground.

Per. Now Jove afford you cause: To me the difference forges dread (your Greatness Hath not been us'd to fear:) even now I tremble To think your Father, by some accident Should pass this way, as you did: Oh the Fates, How would he look, to see his work, so noble, Vildely bound up? VVhat would he say? Or how Should I (in these my borrowed Flaunts) behold The sternness of his presence?

Flo. Apprehend Nothing but jollity: the Gods themselves (Humbling their Deities to love) have taken The Shapes of Beasts upon them. Jupiter Became a Bull, and bellow'd: the green Neptune A Ram, and bleated: and the Fire-roab'd-God Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain, As I seem now. Their transformations, Were never for a piece of Beauty, rarer, Not in a way so chaste: since my desires Run not before mine Honour: nor my lusts Burn hotter then my Faith.

Perd. O but dear sir, Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis Oppos'd (as it must be) by th' power of the King. One of these two must be necessities, Which then will speak, that you must change this purpose, Or I my life. (pose,

Flo. Thou dearest Perdita, With these forc'd thoughts, I prethee darken not The Mirth o'th' Fest: Or Ile be thine (my Fair) Or not my Fathers. For I cannot be Mine own, nor any thing to any, if I be not thine. To this I am most constant, Though Destiny say no. Be merry (Gentle) Strangle such thoughts as these, with any thing That you behold the while. Your Guests are coming. Lift up your countenance, as it were the day Of celebration of that Nuptial, which We two have sworn shall come.

Perd. O Lady Fortune, Stand you auspicious.

Enter all.

Flo. See, your Guests approach, Address your self to entertain them sprightly, And let's be red with mirth.

Shep. Fye (daughter) when my old wife liv'd: upon This day, she was both Pantler, Burler, Cook, Both Dame and Servant: Welcom'd all: serv'd all, Would sing her Song, and dance her turn: now here At upper end o'th' Table; now, i'th middle: On his shoulder, and his: her face o'fire With labour, and the thing she took to quench it She would to each one sip. You are retired, As if you were a feasted one: and not The Hostess of the meeting: Pray you bid These unknown friends to's welcome, for it is A way to make us better Friends, more known. Come, quench your blushes, and present your self That which you are, Mistress o'th' Feast. Come on, And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing, As your good flock shall prosper.

Perd. Sir, welcome: It is my Fathers will, I should take on me The Hostessship o'th' day, you're welcome sir, Give me those Flowers there (Dorcas.) Reverend Sirs, For you, there's Rosemary, and Rue, these keep Seeming, and savour all the Winter long: Grace, and Remembrance be to you both, And welcome to our Shearing.

Bb 2

Pol.

Pol. Shepherdes,

(A fair one are you: well you fit our ages
With flowers of Winter.

Perd. Sir, the year growing ancient,
Not yet on summers death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter, the fairest flowers o'th' season
Are our Carnations. and streak't Gilly-vors,
(Which some call Natures bastards) of that kind
Our rustick Garden's barren, and I care not
To get slips of them.

Pol. VVherefore (gentle Maiden)

Do you neglect them.

Perd. For I have heard it said,
There is an Art, which in their pideness shares
With great creating-Nature.

Pol. Say there be:

Yet Nature is made better by no mean,
But Nature makes that Mean: so over that Art
(VVhich you say addes to Nature) is an Art
That Nature makes: you see (sweet Maid) we marry
Agentler Sien, to the wildest Sock,
And make conceive a bark of baser kind
By bud of Nobler race. This is an Art
VVhich do's mend Nature: change it rather, but
The Art it self, is Nature.

Per. So it is.

Pol. Then make your Garden rich in Gillyvors,
And do not call them bastards.

Per. He not put

The Dible in earth, to set one slip of them:
No more then were I painted, I would wish
This youth should say'twer well: and only therefore Desire to breed by me. Here's flowers for you:
Hot Lavender, Mints, Sivoiry, Marjorum,
The Mary-gold, that goes to bed with Sun,
And with him rises, weeping: These are Flowers
Of middle Summer, and I think they are given
To men of middle age. Y'are very welcome.

Cam. I should leave grazing, were I of your flock,
And only live by gazing.

Per. Out alas:

You'd be so lean, that blasts of January : Friend,
VVould blow you through and through. Now (my far'st
I would I had some Flowers o'th Spring, that might Become your time of day: and yours, and yours,
That wear upon your Virgin-branches yet
Your Maiden-heads growing: O Proserpina,
For the Flowers now, that (frighted) thou let'st fall
From Differ VVaggon: Daffadils,
That come before the Swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty: Violets (dim
But sweeter then the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cythered's breath) pale prime-roses,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phæbus in his strength (a Malady Most incident to Maids:) bold Oxlips, and
The Crown imperial: Lillies of all kinds,
(The flowre-de-Luce being one.) O, these I lack,
To make you Girlands of) and my sweet friend,
To strew him o're, and o're.

Flo. VVhat? like a Coarse?

Per. No, like a bank, for Love to lye, and play on:
Nor like a Coarse: or if: not to be buried,
But quick, and in mine armes. Come take your flowers,
Methinkes I play as I have seen them do
In VVhitson-pastorals: Sure this Robe of mine

Do's change my disposition:

Flo. VVhat you do,

Still betters what is done. VVhen you speak (sweet)
I'd have you do it ever: when you sing,
I'd have you buy, and sell so: so give Almes,
Pray so: and for the ord'ring your Affaires,
I o sing them too. VVhen you do dance, I wish you
A wave o'th sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that: move still, still so:
And own no other Function. Each your doing,
(So singular in each particular)
Crownes what you are doing, in the present deeds,
That all your Acts, are Queens.

Perd. O Doricles,

Your praises are too large: but that your youth
And the true blood which peeps fairly through't,
Do plainly give you out an unstain'd Shephera
VVith w'sdom, I might fear (my Doricles)
You woo'd me the false way.

Flo. I think you have

A little skill to fear, as I have purpose
To put you to't. But come, our dance I pray,
Your hand (my Perdita :) so Turtles pair
That never mean to part.

Perd. He swear for'em.

Pol. This is the prettiest Low-born Lais, that ever
Ran on the green-sord: Nothing she do's, or seemes
But smokes of somerhing greater then her self.
Too Noble for this place.

Cam. He tels her something

That makes her blood look on't. Good sooth she is The Queen of Curds and Cream.

Clo. Come on: strike up.

Dor. Mopsa must be your Mistis: marry Garlick to mend her kissing with.

Mop. Now in good time.

Clo. Not a word, a word, we stand upon our manners,
Come, strike up.

Here a Dance of Shepheards and Shepherdesses.

Pol. Pray good Shepherd, what fair S vain is this VVhich dances with your daughter?

Shep. They call him Doricles, and boasts himself
To have a worthy Feeding; but I have it
Upon his own report, and I believe it:
He looks like sooth: he saies he loves my daughter,
I think so too; for never gaz'd the Moon
Upon the water, as he'll stand and read
As 'twere my daughters eyes: and to be plain,
I think there is not half a kifs to chuse
Who loves another best.

Pol. Sie dances feartly.

Shep. So she do's any thing, though I report it
That should be silent: if young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreames of.

Enter Servant.

Ser. O Master: if you did but hear the Pedler at the door, you would never dance again after a Tabor and Pipe: no, the Bag-pipe could not move you: he sings several Tunes, fatter then you'll tell money: he utters them as he had eaten Ballads, and all mens eares grew to his Tunes.

Clo. He could never come better: he shall come in:
I love a ballad but even too well, if it be doleful matter merrily set down: or a very pleasant thing indeed, and sung lamentably.

Ser.

Ser. He hath songs for man, or woman, of all sizes; No Milliner can so fit his customers with Gloves: he has the prettiest Love songs for Maids, so without bawdry (which is strange) with such delicate burthens of Dildo's and Fadings: Jump-her, and thump her; and where some stretch-mouth'd Rascall, would, (as it were) mean mischief, and break a foul gap into the Matter, he makes the Maid to answer, Whoop, do me no harm good man: put's him off, slights him, with Whoop, do me no harm good man.

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

Clo. Beleeve me, thou talkest of an admirable conceited fellow, has he any unbraided Wares?

Ser. He hath Ribbons of all the colours i'th' Rainbow; Points, more then all the Lawyers in Bohemia, can learnedly handle, though they come to him by th' grosse: Is-kles, Caddisses, Cambricks, Lawns: why he sings 'em over, as they were Gods, or Goddesses: you would think a Smock were a she-Angell, he so chants to the sleeve-hand, and the work about the Square on't.

Clo. Prethee bring him in, and let him approach singing.

Perd. Forewarn him that he use no scurrilous words in's tunes.

Clo. You have of these Pedlers, that have more in them, then you'd think (Sister)

Per. I good brother, or go about to think.

Enter Antolicks singing.

*Lawn as white as driven Snow,
Cypresse black, as ere was Crow,
Gloves as sweet as Damask Roses,
Masks for Faces, and for Noses:
Bugle-Bracelet, Neck-lace Amber,
Perfume for a Ladies Chamber:
Golden Quiffs, and Stomachers
For my Lads to give their Dearts:
Pins, and poking-sticks of steel.
What Maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me, come: come buy, come buy.
Buy Lads, or else your Lasses cry: Come buy.*

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou shouldst take no money of me, but being enthrall'd as I am, it will also be the bondage of certain Ribbons and Gloves.

Mop. I was promis'd them against the Feast, but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promis'd you more then that, or there be lyars.

Mop. He hath paid you all he promis'd you: 'May be he has paid you more, which will shame you to give him again.

Clo. Is there no manners left among Maids? will they wear their plackets, where they should bear their faces? Is there not milking-time? when you are going to bed? Or kill-hole? To whistle of these secrets, but you must be rattle-ratling before all our Guests? 'Tis well they are whispering: clamour your tongues, and not a word more.

Mop. I have done; Come you promis'd me a tawdry-lace, and a pair of sweet Gloves.

Clo. Have I not told thee how I was cozen'd by the way, and lost all my money?

Ant. And indeed Sir, there are Cozeners abroad, therefore it behooves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou man, thou shalt lose nothing here.

Ant. I hope so fir, for I have about me many parcels of charge.

Clo. What hast here? Ballads?

Mop. Pray now buy some, I love a Ballad in print, a life, for then we are sure they are true.

Ant. Here's one, to a very doleful tune, how a Usurers wife was brought to bed with twenty money-bags at a burthen, and how she long'd to eat Adders heads, and Toads Carbonado'd.

Mop. Is it true, think you?

Ant. Very true, and but a moneth old.

Dor. Blesse me from marrying a Usurer.

Ant. Here's the Midwives name to't: one Mistress Tale-Porter, and five or six honest Wives, that were present.

Why should I carry lyes abroad?

Mop. 'Pray you now buy it.

Clo. Come on, lay it by: and let's first see moe Ballads: Wee'l buy the other things anon.

Ant. Here's another Ballad of a Fish, that appeared upon the coast, on Wednesday the fourscore of April, forty thousand fadom above water, and sung this Ballad against the hard hearts of Maids: it was thought she was a Woman, and was turn'd into a cold fish, for she would not exchange flesh with one that lov'd her: The Ballad is very pitiful, and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, think you.

Ant. Five Justices hands at it: and witnesses more then my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too; another.

Ant. This is a merry Ballad, but a very pretty one.

Mop. Let's have some merry ones.

Ant. Why this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of two Maids wooing a man: there's scarce a Maid Westward but she sings it: 'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it: if thou'lt bear a part, thou shalt hear, 'tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on't a moneth agoe.

Ant. I can bear my part, you must know 'tis my occupation: Have at it with you:

Song. Get you hence, for I must goe

Ant. Where it fits not you to know.

Dor. Whether.

Mop. O whether?

Dor. Whether?

Mop. *It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell.*

Dor. Me too, let me goe thither:

Mop. Or thou goest to th' Grange, or Mill,

Dor. If to either thou dost ill,

Ant. Neither.

Dor. What neither?

Ant. Neither:

Dor. Thou hast sworn my Love to be,

Mop. Thou hast sworn it more to me.

Then whether goest? Say whether?

Clo. Wee'l have this song out anon by our selves: My Father and the Gent. are in sad talk, and wee'l not trouble them: Come bring away thy pick after me, Wenches Ile buy for you both: Pedler let's have the first choice; follow me girles. Ant. And you shall pay well for 'em.

Song. Will you buy any Tape, or Lace for your Caps?

My dainty Duck, my Deer-a?

*Any Silk, any Thred, any Toys for your head
Of the new'st, and fin'st, fin'st wear-a.*

*Come to the Pedler, Money's a Medler,
That doth utter all mens wares-a.*

Exit.

Ser. Master, there is three Carriers, three Shepherds, three Neat-herds, three Swine-herds that have made themselves all men of hair, they call themselves Saltiers and they have a Dance, which the wenches say is a galli-mauffy of Gambols, because they are not in't : but they themselves are o'th'mind (if it be not too rough for some, that know little but bowling) it will please plentifully.

Shep. Away : wee'l none on't; here has been too much homely foolery already. I know (Sir) we weary you.

Pol. You weary those that refresh us : Pray 'let's see these four-and-threes of Heardsmen.

Ser. One three of them, by their own report (Sir,) hath danc'd before the King : and not the worst of the three, but jumps twelve foot and a half by th'squire.

Shep. Leave your prating, since these good men are pleas'd, let them come in : but quickly now.

Ser. Why, they stay at door Sir.

Here a Dance of twelve Satires.

Pol. O Father, you'l know more of that hereafter : Is it not too fargone ? 'tis time to part them, He's simple, and tels much. How now (fair Shepheard) Your heart is full of something, that do's take Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was young, And handed love, as you do ; I was wont To load my Shee with knacks : I would have ransackt The Pedlers filken Treasury, and have powr'd it To her acceptance : you have let him go, And nothing married with him. If your Lasse Interpretation should abuse, and call this Your lack of love, or bounty, you were straited For a reply at least, if you make a care Of happy holding her.

Flo. Old Sir, I know She prizes not such trifles as these are : The gifis she looks from me, are packt and lockt Up in my heart, which I have given already, But not deliver'd. O hear me breath my life Before this ancient Sir, who (it should seem) Hath somerime lov'd. I take thy hand, this hand, As soft as Doves Down, and as white as it, Or Ethiopians tooth, or the fan'd snow, That's bolted by th'Northern blast, twice o're.

Pol. What follows this ? How prettily th'young Swain seems to wash The hand, was fair before ? I have put you out, But to your protestation : Let me hear What you professe.

Flo. Do, and be witnessse to't.

Pol. And this my neighbour too ?

Flo. And he, and more Than he, and men : the earth, the heavens, and all ; That were I crown'd the most Imperial Monarch Thereof most worthy : were I the fairest youth That ever made eye swerve, had force and knowledge More than was ever mans, I would not prize them Without her Love ; for her, employ them all, Commend them, and condemn them to her service, Or to their own perdition.

Pol. Fairly offer'd,

Cam. This shews a sound affection,

She. But my daughter, Say you the like to him.

Per. I cannot speak

So well, (nothing so well) no, nor mean better, By th'pattern of mine own thoughts, I cut out The purity of his.

Shep. Take hands, a bargain ; And friends unknown, you shall bear witnessse to't : I give my daughter to him, and will make Her Portion, equal his.

Flo. O, that must be I'th vertue of your daughter : One being dead, I shall have more then you can dream of yet, Enough then for your wonder : but come-on : Contract us'fore these witnessses.

Shep. Come, your hand : And daughter, yours.

Pol. Saft Swain a-while : beseech you, Have you a Father ?

Flo. I have : but what of him ?

Pol. Knows he of this ?

Flo. He neither do's, nor shall.

Pol. Me-thinks a Father, Is at the Nuptial of his sonne, a Guest That best becomes the Table : pray you once more Is not your Father grown incapable Of reasonable affairs, is he not stupid With Age, and altring Rheums ? Can he speak ? hear ? Know man, from man ? Dispure his own estate ? Lies he not bed-rid ? And again, do's nothing But what he did, being childish ?

Flo. No good Sir : He has his health, and ampler strength indeed Then most have of his age.

Pol. By my white Beard, You offer him (if this be so) a wrong Something unfillial : Reason my sonne Should choose himself a wife, but as good reason The Father, (all whose joy is nothing else But fair posterity) should hold some counsel In such a businesse.

Flo. I yield all this ; But for some other reasons (my grave Sir) Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint My father of this businesse.

Pol. Let him know't.

Flo. He shall not.

Pol. Prethee let him.

Flo. No: he must not.

Shep. Let him (my sonne) he shall not need to grieve At knowing of thy choice.

Flo. Come, come, he must not : Mark our Contract.

Pol. Mark your divorce (young Sir) Whom sonne I dare not call : Thou art too base To be acknowledg'd. Thou a Scepters Heir, That thus affects a sheep-hook ? Thou old Traitor, I am forry, that by hanging thee, I can But shorten thy life one week. And thou, fresh piece Of excellent Witchcraft, who of force must know The royal Fool thou coap'st with.

Shep. Oh my heart.

Pol. Ile have thy beauty scratcht with bryers and made More homely then thy state. For thee (fond boy) If I may ever know thou dost but sigh, That thou no more shalt never see this knack (as never I mean thou shalt) wee'l barre thee from succession, Not hold thee of our blood, no nor our Kin, Farre than Dencalion off : (mark thou my words) Follow us to the Court. Thou Churle, for this time (Though full of our displeasure) yet we free thee From the dead blow of it : And your enchantment,

Wor-

Worthy enough a Heardsman : yea him too,
That makes himself (but for our Honour therein)
Unworthy thee. If ever henceforth, thou
These rural Larches, to his entrance open,
Or hope his body more, with thy embraces,
I will devise a death, as cruel for thee
As thou art tender to't.

Exit.

Perd. Even here undone :

I was not much afraid : for once, or twice
I was about to speak, and tell him plainly,
The self-same Sun, that shines upon his Court,
Hides not his visage from our Cottage, but Looks on alike. Wilt please you (Sir) be gone ?
I told you what would come of this : Beseech you
Of your own state take care : This dream of mine
Being now awake, Ile Queen it no inch farther,
But milk my Ewes, and weep.

Cam. Why how now Father,
Speak ere thou dyest.

Shep. I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know, that which I know : O Sir,
You have undone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet : yea,
To die upon the bed my father dy'd,
To lie close by his honest bones ; but now
Some Hangman must put on my shrowd, and lay me
Where no Priest shovels-in dust. Oh cursed wretch,
That knew't this was the Prince, and wouldst adventure
To mingle faith with him. Undone, undone :
If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd
To die when I desire.

Exit.

Flo. Why look you so upon me ?
I am but sorry, not afraid : delaid,
But nothing altered : What I was, I am :
More straining on, for plucking back : not following
My leash unwillingly.

Cam. Gracious my Lord,
You know your Fathers temper : at this time
He will allow no speech : (which I do ghes
You do not purpose to him :) and as hardly
Will he endure your sight, as yet I fear ;
Then till the fury of his Highness settle
Come not before him.

Flo. I nor purpose it :
I think Camillo.

Cam. Even he, my Lord.

Per. How often have I told you 'twould be thus ?
How often said, my dignity would last
But till 'twere known ?

Flo. It cannot fail, but by
The violation of my faith, and then
Let Nature crush the sides o'th' earth together,
And marre the seeds within. Lift up thy looks :
From my succession wipe me (Father) I
Am heir to my affection.

Cam. Be advis'd.

Flo. I am . and by my Fancy, if my Reason
Will thereto be obedient : I have Reason :
If not, my senses better (pleas'd with madness)
Do bid it welcom :

Cam. This is desperate (sir.)

Flo. So call it : but it do's fulfill my vow :
I needs must think it honesty. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pompe that may Be thereat gleaned : for all that the Sun sees, or
The close earth wombes, or the profound seas hide

In unknown fadomes ; will I break my Oath
To this my fair belov'd : Therefore I pray you,
As you have ever been my Fathers friend,
When he shall miss me, as (in faith I mean not
To see him any more) cast your good counsels
Upon his passion : Let my self, and Fortune
Tug for the time to come. This you may know,
And so deliver, I am put to sea
With her, whom here I cannot hold on shore :
And most opportune to her need, I have
A Vessel rides fast by, but not prepar'd
For this design. What course I mean to hold Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.

Cam. O my Lord,
I would your spirit were easier for advice,
Or stronger for your need.

Flo. Hark Perdita,
Ile hear you by and by.

Cam. He's irremovable,
Resolv'd for flight : Now were I happy, if
His going, I could frame to serve my turn.
Save him from danger, do him love and honour,
Purchase the sight again of dear Sicilia,
And that unhappy King, my Master, whom
I so much thirst to see.

Flo. Now good Camillo,
I am so fraught with curious business, that
I leave out Ceremony.

Cam. Sir, I think
You have heard of my poor services, i'th love
That I have born your Father ?

Flo. Very nobly
Have you deserv'd : It is my Fathers Musick
To speak your deeds : not little of his care
To have them recompenc'd, as thought on.

Cam. Well (my Lord)
If you may please to think I love the King,
And through him, what's nearest to him, which is
Your gracious self ; embrace but my direction,
If your more ponderous and settled project
May suffer alteration : On mine honour,
Ile point you where you shall have such receiving
As shall become your Highness, where you may Enjoy your Mistress ; from the whom, I see Ther's no disjunction to be made, but by
(As heavens forsend) your ruine : Marry her,
And with my best endeavours, in your absence,
Your discontenting Father, strive to qualifie
And bring him up to liking.

Flo. How Camillo
May this (almost a miracle) be done ?
That I may call thee something more than man,
And after that trust to thee.

Cam. Have you thought on
A place whereto you'l go ?

Flo. Not any yet :
But as th'untought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do, so we profess
Our selves to be the slaves of chance, and flies
Of every wind that blowes.

Cam. Then list to me :
This followes, if you will not change your purpose
But undergo this flight ; make for Sicilia,
And there present your self, and your fair Princess.
(For so I see she must be) fore Leontes ;

B b 4

She

She shall be habited, as it becomes
The partner of your Bed. Methinks I see
Leontes opening his free Armes, and weeping
His Welcomes forth : asks thee the Son forgiveness,
As 'twere i'th' Fathers person : kisses the hands
Of your fresh Princess ; ore and ore divides him,
'Twixt his unkindness, and his kindness : th'one
He chides to Hell, and bids the other grow
Faster than Thought, or Time.

Flo. Worthy Camillo,
What colour for my Visitation, shall I
Hold up before him ?

Cam. Sent by the King your Father
To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you (as from your Father) shall deliver,
Things known betwixt us three, Ile write you down,
The which shall point you forth at every sitting
What you must say, that he shall not perceive,
But that you have your Fathers Bosom there,
And speak his very heart.

Flo. I am bound to you :
There is some sap in this.

Cam. A Course more promising,
Then a wild dedication of your selves
To unpath'd waters, undream'd Shores ; most certain,
To Miseries enough : no hope to help you,
But as you shake off one, to take another :
Nothing so certain, as your Anchors, who
Do their best office, if they can but stay you,
Where you'll be loath to be : besides you know,
Prosperity's the very bond of Love,
Whose fresh complexion, and whose heart together,
Affliction alters.

Per. One of these is true :
I think Affliction may subdue the Cheek,
But not take in the Mind.

Cam. Yea, say you so ?
There shall not, at your Fathers house, these seven yeares
Be born another such.

Flo. My good Camillo,
She's as forward, of her Breeding, as
She is i'th' reare 'our birth.

Cam. I cannot say, 'tis pity
She lacks instructions, for she seemes a Mistress
To most that teach.

Per. Your pardon Sir, for this.
Ile blush you thanks.

Flo. My prettiest Perdita.
But O, the Thornes we stand upon : (Camillo)
Preserver of my Father, now of me,
The Medicine of our House : how shall we do ?
We are not furnish'd like Behemia's Son,
Nor shall appear in Sicily.

Cam. My Lord,
Fear none of this : I think you know my fortunes
Do all lie there : It shall be so my care
To have you royally appointed, as if
The Scène you play, were mine. For instance, Sir,
That you may know you shall not want ; one word.

Enter Autolichus.

Aut. Ha, ha, what a fool Honesty is ? and Trust (his sworn brother) a very simple Gentleman. I have sold all my Trumpery : not a counterfeit Stone, nor a Ribbon, Glas, Pomander, Browch, Table-book, Ballad, Knife, Tape, Glove, Shoe-tye, Bracelet, Horne-Ring, to keep my Pack from fasting : they throng who should buy first, as if my Trinkets had been hallowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer ; by which means, I saw whose Purse was best in Picture ; and what I saw, to my good use, I remembred. My Clown (who wants but something to be a reasonable man) grew so in love with the Wenches Song, that he would not stir his Pettycoes till he had both Tune and Words, which so drew the rest of the Heard to me, that all their other Sences stuck in Eares : you might have pinch'd a Placket, it was senseless, 'twas nothing to geld a Cod-piece of a Purse : I would have fil'd Keyes off that hung in Chaynes : no hearing, no feeling, but my Sirs Song, and admiring the nothing of it. So that in this time of Lethargy, I pick't and cut most of their Festival Purples : And had not the old man come in with a Whoo-bub against his Daughter, and the Kings Son, and scar'd my chowghes from the Chaffe, I had not left a Purse alive in the whole Army.

Cam. Nay, but my Letters by this means being there
So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

Flo. And those that you'll procure from King Leontes ?

Cam. Shall satisfie your Father.

Perd. Happy be you :
All that you speak, shewes fair.

Cam. Who have we here ?
Wee'll make an Instrument of this : omit
Nothing may give us ayd.

Aut. If they have over-heard me now : why hanging.

Cam. How now (Good-Fellow)
Why shak'st thou so ? Fear not (man)
Here's no harm intended to thee.

Aut. I am a poor Fellow, Sir.

Cam. Why, be so still : here's no body will steal that from thee : yet for the out-side of thy poverty, we must make an exchange : therefore dis-case thee instantly (thou must think there's a necessity in't) and change garments with this Gentleman : Though the peny-worth (on his side) be the worst, yet hold thee, there's some boot.

Aut. I am a poor Fellow, Sir, (I know ye well-enough.)

Cam. Nay prethee dispatch : the Gentleman is half fled already.

Aut. Are you in earnest, Sir ? (I smell the trick on't.)

Flo. Dispatch, I prethee.

Aut. Indeed I have had earnest, but I cannot with conscience take it.

Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle.
Fortunate Mistress (let my prophecy
Come home to ye :) you must retire your self
Into some Cover ; take your sweet-hearts Hat
And pluck it ore your Browes, muffle your face,
Dismantle you, and (as you can) disliken
The truth of your own seeming, that you may
(For I do fear eyes over) to Ship-board
Get undescry'd.

Per. I see the Play so lies,
That I must bear a part.

Cam. No remedy :
Have you done there ?

Flo. Should I now meet my Father,
He would not call me Son.

Cam. Nay, you shall have no Hat :
Come Lady, come : Farewel (my friend.)

Aut. Adieu, Sir.

Flo. O Perdita : what have we twain forgot ?

Pray

Pray you a word.

Cam. What I do next, shall be to tell the King
Of this escape, and whither they are bound ;
Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevail,
To force him after : in whose company
I shall review Sicilia ; for whose sight,
I have a womans Longing.

Flo. Fortune speed us :
Thus we set on (Camillo) to th' Sea-side.

Cam. The swifter speed, the better.

Exit.

Aut. I understand the businesse, I hear it : to have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a Cut-purse ; a good Nose is requisite also, to smell out work for th' other Sences. I see this is the time that the unjust man dorth thrive. What an exchange had this been, without boot ? What a boot is here, with this exchange ;
Sure the Gods do this year connive at us, and we may doe any thing ex tempore. The Prince himself is about a piece of iniquity (stealing away from his Father, with his Clog at his heels :) if I thought it were a piece of honest-ty to acquaint the King withall, I would not do't :
I hold it the more knavery to conceal it : and therein am
I constant to my Profession.

Enter Clown and Shepherd.

Aside, aside, here's more matter for a hor brain : Every Lanes end, every Shop, Church, Session. Hanging yields a careful man work.

Clown. See, see : what a man you are now ? there is no other way, but to tell the King she's a Changling, and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nays, but hear me.

Clown. Nays, but hear me.

Shep. Goe to then.

Clown. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the King, and so your flesh and blood is not to be punish'd by him. Shew those things you found about her (those secret things, all but what she has with her :) This being done, let the Law goe whistle : I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the King all, every word, yea, and his Sons pranks too ; who, I may say, is no honest man, neither to his Father, nor to me, to goe about to make me the Kings Brother in Law.

Clown. Indeed Brother in Law was the farthest off you could have been to him, and then your Blood had been the dearer, by I know how much an ounce.

Aut. Very wisely (Puppies)

Shep. Well : let us to the King : there is that in this Farthell, will make him scratch his Beard.

Aut. I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my Master.

Clown. 'Pray heartily he be at Pallace.

Aut. Though I am not naturally honest, I am so som-times by chance : Let me pocket up my Pedlers excrement. How now (Rustiques) whither are you Bound ?

Shep. To th' Pallace (and it like your Worship.)

Aut. Your affairs there ? what ? with whom ? the condition of that Farthell ? the place of your dwelling ? your names ? your ages ? of what having ? breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be known, discover ?

Clown. We are but plain fellows, Sir.

Aut. A Lye : you are rough, and hairy : Let me have no lying ; it becomes none but Trades-men, and they often give us (Souldiers) the Lie, but we pay them for it with stamped Coine, nor stabbing Steel, therefore they doe not give us the Lye.

Clown. Your Worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken your self with the manner.

Shep. Are you a Courtier, and't like you Sir ?

Aut. Whether it like me, or no, I am a Courtier. Seest thou not the ayr of the Court, in these enfoldings ? hath not my gate in it, the measure of the Court ? Receives not thy Nose Court-Odour from me ? Reflect I not on thy Basenesse, Court-contempt ? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, or toaze from thee thy businesse, I am therefore no Courtier ? I am Courtier Cap-a-pe ; and one that will either push-on, or pluck-back, thy businesse there :
whereupon I command thee to open thy affair.

Shep. My businesse, Sir, is to the King.

Aut. What Advocate hast thou to him ?

Shep. I know not, (and't like you.)

Clown. Advocate's the Court-word for a Pheasant : say you have none.

Shep. None, Sir : I have no Pheasant Cock, nor Hen.

Aut. How blessed are we, that are not simple men ?
Yet Nature might have made me as these are,
Therefore I will not disdain.

Clown. This cannot be but a great Courtier.

Shep. His Garments are rich, but he wears them not handfomly.

Clown. He seems to be the more Noble in being fantasticall : a great man, ile warrant ; I know by the picking on's teeth.

Aut. The Farthel there ? What's i'th' Farthel ?
Wherefore that Box ?

Shep. Sir, there lies such secrets in this Farthel and Box, which none must know but the King, and which he shall know within this hour, If I may come to th' speech
of him.

Aut. Age, thou hast lost thy labour.

Shep. Why Sir ?

Aut. The King is not at the Pallace, he is gone aboard a new Ship, to purge Melancholly, and ayr himself : for if thou bee'st capable of things serious, thou must know the King is full of grief.

Shep. So'tis said (Sir :) about his Sonne that should have married a Shepherds daughter.

Aut. If that Shepherd be not in hand-fast, let him flye ; the Curses he shall have, the Tortures he shall feel, will break the back of Man, the heart of Monster.

Clown. Think you so, Sir ?

Aut. Not he alone shall suffer what Wit can make heavy, and vengeance bitter ; but those that are Jermain to him (though remov'd fifty times) shall all come under the Hangman : which, though it be great pity, yet it is necessary. An old Sheep-whistling Rogue, a Ram-render, to offer to have his Daughter come into grace ? Some say he shall be ston'd : but that death is too soft for him (say I :) Draw out Throne into a Sheep-Coat ? all deaths are too few, the sharpest too easie.

Clown. He's the old man ere a Son Sir (do you hear) and't like you, Sir.

Aut. He ha's a Son : who shall be flay'd alive, then
'nointed over with honey, set on the Head of a Wasps Nest, then stand till he be three quarters and a dram dead ;
then recover'd again with Aqua-vite, or some other hot Infusion : then, raw as he is (& in the hottest day Prognostication proclaimes) shall he be set against a Brick-wall (the Sunne looking with a South-ward eye upon him ; where he is to behold him, with Flies blown to death.)
But what talk we of these Traitorly-Rascals, whose mi-series are to be smil'd at, their offences being so capital ?

Tell

Tell me (for you seem to be honest plain men) what you have to the King: being something gently consider'd, Ile bring you where he is aboard, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalves; and if it be in man, besides the King, to effect your Suits, here is a man shall do it.

Clo. He seems to be of great authority: close with him, give him Gold: and though authority be a stubborn Bear, yet he is oft led by the Nose with Gold: shew the in-side of your Purse to the out-side of his hand, and no more adoe. Remember flon'd and flay'd alive.

Shep. And't please you (Sir) to undertake the businesse for us, here is that Gold I have Ile make it as much more, and leave this young man in pawn till I bring it you.

Ant. After I have done what I promised?

Shep. I Sir.

Ant. Well, give me the moiety: are you a party in this businesse?

Clo. In some sort, Sir: but though my case be a pittiful one, I hope I shall not be flay'd out of it.

Ant. Oh that's the case of the Shepherds Sonne: hang him, he'll be made an example.

Clo. Comfort, good comfort: We must ro the King, and shew our strange fights: he must know 'tis none of your Daughter, nor my Sister: we are gone else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man do's, when the businesse is performed, and remain (as he saies) your pawn till it be brought you.

Ant. I will trust you, walk before toward the Sea-side, goe on the right hand, I will but look upon the Hedge, and follow you.

Clo. We are blest'd, in this man: as I may say, even blest'd.

Shep. Let's before, as he bids us: he was provided to do us good.

Exeunt.

Ant. If I had a mind to be honest, I see Fortune would not suffer me: she drops Booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion: (gold, and a means to doe the Prince my Master good: which, who knows how that may turn back to my advancement?) I will bring these two Moales, these blind ones, aboard him, if he think it fit to shoare them again, and that the Complaint they have to the King, concerns him nothing, let him call me Rogue, for being so farre officious, for I am proof against that Title, and what shame else belongs too't: To him will I present them, there may be matter in it.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Leontes, Cleomines, Dion, Paulina, Servants Florizel, Perdita.

Cleo. Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd A Saint-like Sorrow: No fault could you make, Which you have not redeem'd; indeed pay'd down More penitence, then done trespass: at the last Doe, as the Heavens have done; forget your evil, With them, forgive your self.

Leo. Whilest I remember Her and her vertues, I cannot forget

My blemishes in them, and so still think of The wrong I did my self: which was so much, That Heir-lesse it hath made my Kingdom, and Destroy'd the sweet'st companion, that ere man Bred his hopes out of, true.

Paul. Too true (my Lord:)

If one by one, you wedded all the world, Or from the All that are, took something good, To make a perfect woman; she you kill'd, Would be unparallell'd.

Leo. I think so. Kill'd?

She I kill'd? I did so, but thou strik'st me Sorely, to say I did, it is as bitter Upon thy tongue, as in my thought. Now, good now, Say so but seldom.

Clo. Not at all, good Lady:

You might have spoken a thousand things, that would Have done the time more benefit, and grac'd Your kindnesse better.

Paul. You are one of those Would have him wed again.

Dio. If you would not so,

You pity not the State, nor the Remembrance Of his most Sovereign Name: Consider little, What dangers, by his Highnesse fall of Issue, May drop upon his Kingdom, and devour Uncertain lookers on. What were more holy, Then to rejoyce the former Queen is well? What holier, then for Royalties repair, For present comfort, and for future good, To blesse the Bed of Majesty again With a sweet fellow too't?

Paul. There is none worthy, (Respecting her that's gone:) besides the Gods Will have fulfill'd their secret purposes: For has not the Divine Apollo said? Is't not the tenor of his Oracle, That King Leontes shall not have an Heir, Till his lost Child be found? Which, that it shall, Is all as monstrous to our humane reason, As my Antigonus to break his Grave, And come again to me: who, on my life, Did perish with the Infant. 'Tis your Council, My Lord should to the Heavens be contrary, Oppose against their wills. Care not for issue, The Crown will find an Heir. Great Alexander Left his to th'Worthiest: so his Successor Was like to be the best.

Leo. Good Paulina, Who hast the memory of Hermione I know in honour: O, that ever I Had squar'd me to thy Councell: then, even now, I might have look'd upon my Queens full eies, Have taken Treasure from her Lips.

Paul. And left them More rich, for what they yielded.

Leo. Thou speak'st truth: No more such wives, therefore no wife: one worse, And better us'd, would make her Sainted Spirit Again possesse her Corps, and on this Stage (Where we offenders now appear) Soul-vext, And begin, why to me;

Paul. Had she such power, She had just cause.

Leo. She had, and would incense me To murder her I married.

Paul.

Paul. I should so :

Were I the Ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you mark
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in't
You chose her : then I'd shriek, that even your eares
Should rift to hear me, and the words that follow'd,
Should be, Remember mine.

Leo. Stars, Stars,
And all eyes else, dead coales : fear thou no Wife ;
He have no Wife, Paulina.

Paul. Will you swear
Never to marry, but by my free leave ?

Leo. Never (Paulina) so be blest'd my Spirit.

Paul. Then good my Lords, bear witness to his oath.

Cleo. You rempr him over-much.

Paul. Unless another,
As like Hermione, as is her picture,
Affront his eye.

Cleo. Good Madam, I have done.

Paul. Yea if my Lord will marry : if you will, Sir ;
No remedy but you will : Give me the office
To chuse you a Queen : she shall not be so young
As was your former, but she shall be such
As (walk'd your first Queenes Ghost) it should take joy
To see her in your armes.

Leo. My true Paulina,
We shall nor marry, till thou bidst us.

Paul. That
Shall be when your first Queen's again in breath :
Never till then.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. One that gives out himself Prince Florizel, Son of Polixenes, with his Princess (she
The fairest I have yet beheld) desires access
To your high presence.

Leo. What with him ? he comes not Like to his Fathers Greatness : his approach
(So out of circumstance, and sudden) tels us,
'Tis not a Visitation fram'd, but forc'd
By need, and accident. What Trayn ?

Ser. But few,
And those but mean.

Leo. His Princess (say you) with him ?

Ser. I : the most peerless piece of Earth, I think,
That ere the Sun shone bright on.

Paul. Oh Hermione,
As every present Time doth boast it self
Above a better, gone ; so must thy Grave
Give way to what's seen now. Sir, you your self
Have said, and writ so ; but your writing now
Is colder then that Theam : she had not been Nor was nor to be equal'd, thus your Verse
Flow'd with her Beauty once, 'tis shrewdly ebb'd,
To say you have seen a better.

Ser. Pardon, Madam :
The one, I have almost forgot (your pardon):
The other, when she ha's obtain'd your Eye,
Will have your Tongue too. This is a Creature,
Would she begin a Sect, might quench the zeal
Of all Professors else ; make Profelytes
Of who she but bid follow.

Paul. How ? not women ?

Ser. Women will love her, that she is a woman
More worth then any Man : Men, that she is
The rarest of all Women.

Leo. Goe Cleomines,
Your self (assisted with your honour'd friends)

Bring them to our embracement. Still 'tis strange,
He thus should steal upon us. Exit.

Paul. Had our Prince,
(Jewel of Children) seen this hour, he had pay'd
Well with this Lord ; there was not a full moneth
Between their births.

Leo. 'Prethee no more ; cease : thou know'st
He dies to me again, when talk'd-of : sure
When I shall see this Gentleman, thy speeches
VWill bring me to consider that, which may Unfurnish me of Reason. They are come.

Enter Florizel, Perdita, Cleomines, and others.
Your Mother was most true to wedlock, Prince,
For she did print your Royal Father off,
Conceiving you. VVere I but twenty one,
Your Fathers Image is so hit in you, ..
(His very air) that I should call you Brother,
As I did him, and speak of something wildly
By us perform'd before. Most dearly welcome,
And your fair Princess (Goddess) oh : alas,
I lost a couple, that 'twixt Heaven and Earth
Might thus have stood, begetting wonder, as
You (gracious Couple) do : and then I lost
(All mine own Folly) the Society,
Amity too of your brave Father, whom (Though bearing Misery) I desire my life
Once more to look on him.

Flo. By his command
Have I here touch'd Sicilia, and from him
Give you all greetings, that a King (as friend)
Can send his Brother : and but infirmity
(VWhich waits upon worn times) hath something seiz'd
His wish'd Ability, he had himself
The Lands and Waters, 'twixt your Throne and his Measur'd, to look upon you ; whom he loves
(He bad me say so) more then all the Scepters,
And those that bear them, living.

Leo. Oh my brother,
(Good Gentleman) the wrongs I have done thee, stirre
Afresh within me : and these thy offices
(So rarely kind) are as Interpreters
Of my behind-hand slackness. VVelcome hither,
As is the Spring to th' Earth. And hath he too
Expos'd this Paragon to th' fearful usage
(At least ungentle) of the dreadful Neptune.
To greet a man, not worth her paines ; much less,
Th' adventure of her person ?

Flo. Good my Lord,
She came from Lybia.

Leo. VVhere the warlike Smalus,
That Noble honour'd Lord, is fear'd, and lov'd ?

Flo. Most Royal Sir,
From thence : from him, whose Daughter
His Teares proclaim'd his parting with her : thence (A prosperous South-wind friendly) we have cross'd,
To execute the Charge my Father gave me,
For visiting your Highness : my best Train
I have from your Sicilian Shores dismiss'd ;
Who for Bohemia bend, to signifie
Not only my success in Lybia (sir)
But my arrival, and my Wifes, in safety
Here, where we are.

Leo. The blessed Gods
Purge all infection from our Ayr, whilst you
Do Climate here : you have a holy Father,
A graceful Gentleman, against whose person

(So

(So sacred as it is) I have done sin,
For which the Heavens (taking angry note)
Have left me Issue-less : and your Father's blest'd
(As he from Heaven merits it) with you,
Worthy his goodness. What might I have been,
Might I a Son and Daughter now have look'd on,
Such goodly things as you ?

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most Noble Sir,
That which I shall report will bear no credit,
Were not the proof so nigh. Please you (great Sir)
Bohemia greets you from himself, by me :
Desires you to attach his Son, who h'as
(His Dignity, and Duty both cast off)
Fled from his Father, from his Hopes, and with A Shepherds Daughter.

Leo. Where's Bohemia ? speak.

Lor. Here in your City : I now came from him
I speak amazedly, and it becomes
My marvel, and my Message. To your Court
Whiles he was hastning (in the Chase, it seems,
Of this fair Couple) meets he on the way
The Father of this seeming Lady, and Her Brother, having both their Countrey quitted,
With this young Prince.

Flo. Camillo ha's betray'd me ;
Whose honour, and whose honesty till now,
Endur'd all Weathers.

Lord. Lay'r so to his charge :
He's with the King your Father.

Leo. Who ? Camillo ?

Lord. Camillo (Sir) I spake with him : who now Ha's these poor men in question. Never saw I
Wretches so quake : they kneel, they kiss the earth ;
Forswear themselves as often as they speak :
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths, in death.

Per. Oh my poor Father :
The Heaven sets Spies upon us, will not have
Our Contract celebrated.

Leo. You are married ?

Flo. We are not (Sir) nor are we like to be :
The Stars (I see) will kiss the Valleyes first :
The oddes for high and low's alike.

Leo. My Lord,
Is this the Daughter of a King ?

Flo. She is,
When once she is my Wife.

Leo. That once (I see) by your good Fathers speed,
Will come-on very slowly. I am sorry
(Most sorry) you have broken from his liking,
Where you were ty'd in duty : and as sorry,
Your choice is not so rich in Worth, as Beauty,
That you might well enjoy her.

Flo. Dear look up :
Though Fortune, visible an enemy,
Should chase us, with my Father : power no jot
Hath she to change our Loves. Beseech you (Sir)
Remember, since you ow'd no more to Time
Then I do now : with thought of such Affections,
Step forth mine Advocate : at your request,
My Father will grant precious things, as Trifles.

Leo. Would he do so, I'd beg your precious Mistress
Which he counts but a Trifle.

Paul. Sir (my Liege)
Your eye hath too much youth in't : not a moneth

'Fore your Queen di'd, she was more worth such gazes
Then what you look on now.

Leo. I thought of her,
Even in these Lookes I made. But your Petition
Is yet un-answer'd : I will to your Father :
Your Honour not o're-thrown by your desires,
I am friend to them, and you : upon which Errand
I now go toward him : therefore follow me,
And mark what way I make : Come good my Lord.

Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Antolichus, and a Gentleman.

Ant. Beseech you (Sir) were you present at this Relation ?

Gen. 1. I was by at the opening of the Fardel, heard the old Shepherd deliver the manner how he found it :
whereupon (after a little amazedness) we were all commanded out of the Chamber : only this (me thought) I heard the Shepherd say, he found the Child.

Ant. I would most gladly know the Issue of it.

Gen. 1. I make a broken delivery of the business : but the changes I perceived in the King and Camillo, were very Notes of admiration : they seem'd almost, with staring on one another, to tear the Cases of their Eyes. There was speech in their dumbness, Language in their very Gesture : they look'd as they had heard of a World ransom'd, or one destroyed : a notable passion of Wonder appeared in them : but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say, if th'importance were Joy, or Sorrow ; but in the extremity of the one, it must needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes a Gentleman, that happily knowes more :
The News, Rogero.

Gen. 2. Nothing but Bonfires : the Oracle is fulfill'd :
the Kings Daughter is found : such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour, that Ballad-makers cannot be able to express it.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes the Lady Paulina's Steward, he can deliver you more. How goes it now (Sir ?) This Newes (which is call'd true) is so like an old Tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspicion : Ha's the King found his heir ?

Gen. 3. Most true, if ever Truth were pregnant by Circumstance : That which you hear, you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the Prooves. The Mantle of Queen Hermione : her Jewel about the Neck of it :
the Letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his Character ; the Majesty of the Creature, in resemblance of the Mother : the Affection of Nobleness, which Nature shewes above her Breeding, and many other Evidences, proclaim her, with all certainty, to be the Kings Daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two Kings ?

Gen. 2. No.

Gen. 3. Then have you lost a Sight which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one Joy crown another, so and in such manner, that it seem'd Sorrow wept to take leave of them : for their Joy waded in tears. There was casting up of Eyes, holding up of hands, with Countenance of such distraction, that they were to be known by Garment, not by Favour.

Our

Our King being ready to leap out of himself, for joy of his found Daughter; as if that joy were now become a Losse, cries, Oh; thy Mother, thy Mother: then asks Bohemia forgiveness, then embraces his Son-in-law: then again worreys he his Daughter, with clipping her. Now he thanks the old Shepherd (which stands by, like a weather-beaten Conduit, of many Kings Reigns.) I never heard of such an encounter; which James Report to follow it, and undo's description to do it.

Gent. 2. What, pray you, became of Antigonus, that carryed hence the Child?

Gent. 3. Like an old Tale still, which will have matter to rehearse, though Credit be asleep, and not an ear open; he was torn to pieces with a Bear: This avouches the Shepherds son, who has not only his innocence (which seems much) to justify him, but a Handkerchief and Rings of his, that Paulina knows.

Gent. 1. What became of his Bark, and his Followers?

Gent. 3. Wrackt the same instant of their Masters death, and in the view of the Shepherd: so that all the Instruments which aided to expose the Child, were even then lost, when it was found. But oh the Noble combat, that 'twix Joy and Sorrow was fought in Paulina. She had one Eye declin'd for the losse of her Husband, another elevated, that the Oracle was fulfill'd: She lifted the Princess from the Earth, and so locks her in embracing, as if she would pin her to her heart, that she might no more be in danger of losing.

Gent. 1. The Dignity of this Act was worth the audience of Kings and Princes, for by such was it acted.

Gent. 3. One of the prettiest touches of all, and that which angl'd for mine Eies (caught the water, though not the Fish) was, when at the Relation of the Queens death (with the manner how she came to't, bravely confest'd, and lamented by the King) how attentiveness wounded his Daughter, till (from one signe of dolour to another) she did (with an Alas) I would fain say, bleed Tears; for I am sure, my heart wept blood. Who was most Marble there changed colour: some swoounded, all sorrowed: if all the World could have seen't, the Woe had been universall.

Gent. 1. Are they returned to the Court?

Gent. 3. No: The Princess hearing of her Mothers Statue (which is in the keeping of Paulina) a Piece many years in doing, and now newly perform'd, by that rare Italian Master, Julio Romano, who (had he himself eternity, and could but breath into his Work) would beguile Nature of her Custom, so perfectly he is her Ape: He so neer to Hermione, hath done Hermione, that they say one would speak to her, and stand in hope of answer. Thither (with all greediness of affection) are they gone, and there they intend to Sup.

Gent. 2. I thought she had some great matter there in hand, for she hath privately, twice or thrice a day, ever since the death of Hermione, visited that removed house. Shall we thither, and with our company piece the rejoicing?

Gent. 1. Who would be thence, that ha's the benefit of access? every wink of an Eye, some new Grace will be born: our absence makes us unthrifty to our Knowledge. Let's along.

Exit.

Aut. Now (had I not the dash of my former life in me) would Preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his Sonne aboard the Prince; told him, I heard them talk of a Farthell, and I know not what: but he at that time over-fond of the Shepherds daughter (so he then took her to be) who began to be much Sea-sick, and himself little better, extremity of weather continuing, this Mystery remained undiscover'd, But 'tis all one to me: for had I been the finder-out of this secret, it would not have rellish'd among my other discredits.

Enter Shepherd, and Clown.

Here come those I have done good to against my will, and already appearing in the blossoms of their Fortune.

Shep. Come boy, I am past more Children: but thy Sonnes and Daughters will be all Gentlemen born.

Clow. You are well met (Sir;) you deny'd to fight with me this other day, because I was no Gentleman born. See you these Clothes? say you see them nor, and think me still no Gentleman born: You were best say these Robes are not Gentlemen born. Give me the Lye: do: and try whether I am not now a Gentleman born.

Aut. I know you are now (Sir) a Gentleman born.

Clow. I, and have been so any time these four hours.

Shep. And so have I, Boy.

Clow. So you have: but I was a Gentleman born before my Father: for the Kings Sonne took me by the hand, and call'd me brother; and then the two Kings call'd my Father brother: and then the Prince (my brother) and the Princess (my Sister) call'd my Father, father; and so we wept: and there was the first Gentleman-like teares that ever we shed.

Shep. We may live (Sonne) to shed many more.

Clow. I: or else 'twere hard luck, being in so preposterous estate as we are.

Aut. I humbly beseech you (Sir) to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your Worship, and to give me your good report to the Prince my Master.

Shep. Prethe Sonne do: for we must be gentle, now we are Gentlemen.

Clow. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. I, and it like your good Worship.

Clow. Give me thy hand: I will swear to the Prince, thou art as honest a true Fellow as any is in Bohemia.

Shep. You may say it, but not swear it.

Clow. Not swear it, now I am a Gentleman? Let Boores and Francklins say it, Ile swear it.

Shep. How if it be false (Sonne?)

Clow. If it be ne're so false, a true Gentleman may swear it, in the behalf of his friend: And Ile swear to the Prince, thou art a tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunk: but I know thou art no tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunk: but Ile swear it, and I would thou wouldst be a tall Fellow of thy hands.

Aut. I will prove so (Sir) to my power.

Clow. I, by any means prove a tall Fellow: if I do not wonder how thou dar'st venture to be drunk, not being a tall Fellow, trust me not. Harke, the Kings and the Princess (our Kindred) are going to see the Queens Picture. Come, follow us: wee'l be thy good Master. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Leontes, Polixenes, Florizell, Perdita, Camillo, Paulina, Hermione (like a Statue:) Lords, &c.

Leo. O grave and good Paulina, the great comfort That I have had of thee?

Paul.

Paul. What (Sovereign Sir)

I did not well, I meant well : all my Services
You have paid home. But that you have vouchsaf'd (With your Crown'd Brother, and these your contracted Heirs of your Kingdoms) my poor House to visit ;
It is a surplus of your Grace, which never
My life may last to answer.

Leo. O Paulina,

We honour you with trouble : but we came
To see the Statue of our Queen. Your Gallery
Have we pass'd through, not without much content
In many singularities ; but we saw not
That which my Daughter came to look upon,
The Statue of her Mother.

Paul. As she liv'd Peerlesse,
So her dead likenesse I do well beleave
Excells what ever yet you look'd upon,
Or hand of Man hath done : therefore I keep it Lovely, apart. But here it is : prepare
To see the life as lively mock'd, as ever
Still Sleep mock'd death : behold, and say 'tis well.
I like your silence, it the more shews off
Your wonder : but yet speak, first you (my Liege)
Comes it not something neerer ?

Leo. Her natural Posture.

Chide me (dear Stone) that I may say indeed
Thou art Hermione ; or rather, thou art she,
In thy not chiding : for she was as tender
As infancy, and Grace. But yet (Paulina)
Hermione was not so much wrinkled, nothing
So aged as this seems.

Pol. Oh, not by much.

Paul. So much the more our Carvers excellence.
Which lets go-by some sixteen years, and makes her
As she liv'd now.

Leo. As now she might have done,
So much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my soul. Oh, thus she stood,
Even with such Life of Majesty (warm Life,
As now it coldly stands) when first I woo'd her.
I am asham'd : Do's not the Stone rebuke me,
For being more Stone then it ? Oh Royal Peece :
There's Magick in thy Majesty, which has
My evils conjur'd to remembrance ; and
From thy admiring Daughter took the Spirits,
Standing like Stone with thee.

Perd. And give me leave,

And do not say 'tis Superstition, that
I kneel, and then implore her Blessing. Lady,
Deer Queen, that ended when I but began,
Give me that hand of yours to kisse.

Paul. O, patience :

The Statue is but newly fix'd ; the Colour's
Not dry.

Cam. My Lord, your Sorrow was too fore lay'd-on,
Which sixteen Winters cannot blow away,
So many Summers dry : scarce any Joy
Did ever so long live ; no Sorrow,
But kill'd it self much sooner.

Pol. Deet my Brother,

Let him, that was the cause of this, have power
To take off so much grief from you, as he Will peece up in himself.

Paul. Indeed my Lord,

If I had thought the sight of my poor Image
Would thus have wrought you (for the Stone is mine)

It'd not have you shew'd ir.

Leo. Doe not draw the Curtain.

Paul. No longer shall you gaze on't : least your Fancy
May think anon, it moves.

Leo. Let be, let be,

Would I were dead, but that me thinks already.
(What was he that did make it ?) See (my Lord)
Would you not deem it breath'd ? and that those veins
Did verily bear blood ?

Pol. Masterly done.

The very life seems warm upon her Lippe,

Leo. The fixure of her Eye ha's motion in't,
As we are mock'd with Art.

Paul. Ile draw the Curtain :

My Lord's almost so farre transported, that He'll think anon it lives.

Leo. Oh sweet Paulina,

Make me to think so twenty years together :
No settled Sences of the World can match
The pleasure of that madnesse. Let's alone.

Paul. I am sorry (Sir) I have thus farre stirr'd you : but I could afflict you further.

Leo. Doe Paulina :

For this affliction ha's a taste as sweet
As any Cordiall comfort. Still me thinks
There is an ayre comes from her. What fine Chizzell
Could ever yet cut breath ? Let no man mock me,
For I will kisse her.

Paul. Good my Lord forbear :

The ruddinesse upon her Lippe, is wet.
You'll marre it, if you kisse it ; stain your own
With Oyle Painting : shall I draw the Curtain ?

Leo. No : not these twenty years.

Perd. So long could I

Stand by, a looker-on.

Paul. Either forbear,

Quit presently the Chappell, or resolve you
For more amazement : if you can behold ir,
Ile make the Statue move indeed ; descend,
And take you by the hand : but then you'll think (Which I protest against) I am assisted By wicked Powers.

Leo. What you can make her do,

I am content to look on : what to speak,
I am content to hear : for 'tis as easie
To make her speak, as move.

Paul. It is requir'd

You doe awake your Faith : then, all stand still :
On : those that think it is unlawful Businesse
I am about, let them depart.

Leo. Proceed :

No foot shall stirre,

Paul. Musick ; awake her : Strike :

'Tis time : descend : be Stone no more : approach :
Strike all that look upon with marvaile : Come :
Ile fill your Grave up : stirre, nay, come away :
Bequeath to death your numnesse : (for from him
Dear Life redeems you) you perceive she stirres :
Start not : her Actions shall be holy, as
You hear my spell is lawful : do not shun her,
Untill you see her dye again ; for then
You kill her double : Nay, present your hand :
When she was young, you woo'd her : now in age,
Is she become the Suitor ?

Leo. Oh she's warm :

If this be Magick, let it be an Art

Lawful as Eating.

Pol. She embraces him.

Cam. She hangs about his neck,

If she pertain to life, let her speak too :

Pol. I, and make it manifest where she ha's liv'd,
Or how stoln from the dead ?

Paul. That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old Tale : but it appears she lives,
Though yet she speak nor. Mark a little while :
Please you to interpose (fair Madam) kneel,
And pray your Mothers blessing ; turn good Lady,
Our Perdita is found.

Her. You gods look down,
And from your sacred Viols poure your graces
Upon my Daughters head : Tell me (mine own)
Where hast thou been preserv'd ? Where liv'd ? How found Thy Fathers Court ? For thou shalt hear that I
Knowing by Paulina, that the Oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being, have preserv'd
My self, to see the Issue.

Paul. There's time enough for that ;
Lest they desire (upon this push) to trouble
Your joyes with like Relation. Go together
You precious winners all : your exultation

Partake to every one : I (an old Turtle)
Will wing me to some wither'd bough, and there
My Mate (that's never to be found again)
Lament till I am lost.

Leo. O peace Paulina :

Thou shouldst a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine a Wife. This is a Match,
And made between's by Vowes. Thou hast found mine,
But how, is to be question'd : for I saw her
(As I thought) dead : and have (in vain) said many
A prayer upon her grave. He not seek far
(For him, I partly know his mind) to find thee
An honourable husband. Come Camillo,
And take her by the hand : whose worth, and honesty
Is richly noied : and here justified
By Us, a pair of Kings. Let's from this place.
What ? look upon my Brother : both your pardons,
That ere I put between your holy looks
My ill suspicion : This your Son-in-law,
And Son unto the King, whom heavens directing
Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina, Lead us from hence, where we may leisurely
Each one demand, and answer to his part Perform'd in this wide gap of Time, since first
Were dissever'd. Hastily lead away.

Exeunt.

FINIS.

The Life and Death of King John.

Actus Primus, Scena Prima.

Enter King John, Queen Elinor, Pembroke, Essex, and Salisbury, with the Chastilion of France.

King John.

Now say Chastilion, what would France with us?
 Chat. Thus (after greeting) speaks the King of France.

In my behaviour to the Majesty,
 The borrowed Majesty of England here.

Eli. A strange beginning: borrowed Majesty,

K. John. Silence (good Mother) hear the Embassie.

Chat. Philip of France, in right and true behalf

Of thy deceased brother, Geffreys son,

Arthur Plantaganet layes most lawful claim

To this fair Island, and the Territories:

To Ireland, Poytiers, Anjoue, Lorraine, Maine,

Desiring thee to lay aside the sword

Which sways usurpingly these several Titles,

And put the same into young Arthurs hand,

Thy Nephew, and right Royal Sovereign.

K. John. What follows if we disallow of this?

Chat. The proud controle of fierce and bloody warre,
 To inforce these rights so forcibly withheld.

K. John. Here have we war for war, & blood for blood,
 Controlement for controlement: so answer France.

Chat. Then take my Kings defiance from my mouth,
 The farthest limit of my Embassie.

K. John. Bear mine to him, and so depart in peace,
 Be thou as lightning in the eies of France;

For ere thou canst report, I will be there;

The Thunder of my Canon shall be heard.

So hence: be thou the Trumpet of our wrath,

And fullen preface of your own decay:

An honorable conduct let him have,

Pembroke look to't: farewell Chastilion.

Exit Chat. and Penn.

Eli. What now my sonne, have I not ever said

How that ambitious Constance would not cease

Till she had kindled France and all the world,

Upon the right and party of her sonne?

This might have been prevented, and made whole

With very easie arguments of Love,

Which now the mannage of two kingdoms must

With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.

K. John. Our strong possession, and our right for us.

Eli. Your strong possession much more than your right

Or else it must go wrong with you and me,

So much my conscience whispers in your eares.

Which none but heaven, and you and I shall hear:

Enter a Sheriff.

Essex. My Liege, here is the strangest controversie

Co me from the Countrey to be judg'd by you

That ere I heard, shall I produce the men?

K. John. Let them approach:

Our Abbies and our Priories shall pay

This expeditions charge. What men are you?

Enter Robert Faulconbridge and Philip.

Philip. Your faithful subject, I a Gentleman,

Born in Northamptonshire, and eldest son

As I suppose to Faulconbridge,

A Souldier by the Honour-giving-hand

Of Cordelion, Knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou?

Robert. The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge.

K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the Heir?

You came not of one Mother then it seems.

Philip. Most certain of one Mother, mighty King,

That is well known, and as I think one father:

But for the certain knowledge of that truth,

I put you o're to heaven, and to my mother;

Of that I doubt, as all mens children may.

Eli. Out on thee rude man, thou dost shame thy mother,

And wound her honour with this diffidence.

Phil. I Madam? No? I have no reason for it,

That is my brothers plea, and none of mine,

The which if he can prove, a pops me out,

At least from fair five hundred pound a year:

Heaven guard my Mothers honour, and my Land.

K. John. A good blunt fellow: why being younger born

Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Phil. I know not why, except to get the Land;

But once he slandered me with Bastardy:

But where I be as true begot or no,

That still I lay upon my mothers head,

But that I am as well begot my Liege

(Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me)

Compare our faces, and be judge your self

If old Sir Robert did beget us both,

And were our father, and this sonne like him:

O old Sir Robert father, on my knee

I give heaven thanks I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why what a mad-cap hath heaven sent us here?

Eli. He hath a trick of Cordelions face;

The accent of his tongue affecteth him:

Do you not read some tokens of my sonne

In the large composition of this man?

C c

K. John.

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And finds them perfect Richard: sitrah speak,
What dorth move you to claim your brothers Land?

Philip. Because he hath a half-face like my Father,
With half that face would he have all my Land,
A half-fac'd goat, five hundred pound a year?

Rob. My gracious Liege, when that my father liv'd,
Your brother did imploy my father much.

Phil. Well sir, by this you cannot get my Land,
Your tale must be how he imploy'd my Mother.

Rob. And once dispatch'd him in an Embassie
To Germany, there with the Emperour
To treat of high affairs touching that time:
Th'advantage of his absence took the King,
And in the mean time sojourn'd at my fathers;
Wherehow he did prevail, I shame to speak:
But truth is truth, large lengths of Seas and Shores
Between my father, and my mother lay,
As I have heard my father speak himself
When this same lusty Gentleman was got:
Upon his death-bed he by Will bequeath'd
His lands to me, and took it on his death
That this my Mothers son was none of his;
And if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time:
Then good my Liedge let me have what is mine,
My fathers Land, as was my fathers Will.

K. Joh. Sirra, your brother is Legitimate,
Your fathers wife did after wedlock bear him:
And if she did play false, the fault was hers,
Which fault lies on the hazzards of all Husbands
That marry wives: tell me, how if my brother
Who as you say, took pains to get this Son,
Had of your father claim'd this son for his,
Insooth, good friend, your father might have kept
This Calf, bred from his Cow from all the world:
Insooth he might: then if he were my brothers,
My brother might not claim him, nor your father
Being none of his, refuse him: this concludes,
My Mothers son did get your Fathers heire,
Your Fathers heire must have your Fathers land.

Rob. Shall then my fathers Will be of no force.
To dispossesse that child which is not his?

Phil. Of no more force to dispossesse me Sir,
Then was his will to get me, as I think.

Eli. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,
And like thy brother to enjoy thy Land:
Or the reputed son of Cordelion
Lord of thy presence, and no Land beside.

Bast. Madam, and if my brother had my shape
And I had his, Sir Roberts his like him,
And if my leggs were two such riding rods,
My armes, such Eele-skins stuf, my face so thin,
That in mine ear I durst not stick a Rose,
Lest men should say, look where three farthings goes,
And to his shape were heire to all this Land,
Would I might never stirre from off this place,
I would give it every foot to have this face:
I would not be sir nobbe in any case.

Eli. I like thee well: wilt thou forsake thy fortune,
Bequeath thy Land to him, and follow me?
I am a souldier, and now bound to France.

Bast. Brother, take you my Land, Ile take my chance;
Your face hath got five hundred pound a year,
Yet sell your face for five pence and 'tis dear.
Madam, Ile follow you unto the death.

Eli. Nay, I would have you go before me thither.

Bast. Our Countrey manners give our betters way.

K. John. What is thy name?

Bast. Philip my Liege, so is my name begun,
Philip, good old Sir Roberts wives eldest son.

K. John. From henceforth bear his name
Whose form thou bearest:

Kneel thou down Philip, but rise more great,
Arise Sir Richard and Plantagenet.

Bast. Brother by th'mothers side, give me your hand,
My father gave me Honour, yours gave Land,
Now blessed be the hour by night or day
When I was got Sir Robert was away,

Eli. The very spirit of Plantagenet:
I am thy Grandame Richard, call me so.

Bast. Madam by chance, but not by truth, what tho;
Something about a little from the right,
In at the window, or else ore the hatch:
Who dares not stirre by day, must walk by night,
And have is have, however men do carch:
Neer or farr off, well wonne is still well shot,
And I am I, how ere I was begot.

K. John. Go Faulconbridge, now hast thou thy desire,
A Landleffe Knight, makes thee a Landed Squire:
Come Madam, and come Richard, we must speed
For France, for France, for it is more then need.

Bast. Brother adieu, good fortune come to thee,
For thou wast got i'th way of honesty.

Exeunt all but Bastard.

Bast. A foot of honour better then I was,
But many a many foot of Land the worse.
Well, now can I make any Ioane a Lady;
Good denne Sir Richard, Godamercy fellow,
And if his name be George, Ile call him Peter;
For new made honour doth forget mens names:
'Tis too respective, and too sociable
For your conversion, now your traveller,
He and his Tooth-pick, at my worships messe,
And when my Knightly stomach is suffis'd,
Why then I suck my teeth and Carechize
My picked man of Countreys: my dear sir,
Thus leaning on mine elbow I begin,
I shall beseech you; that is question now,
And then comes answer like an Absey-book:
O sir, says answer, at your best command,
At your employment, at your service sir:
No sir, says question, I sweet sir at yours,
And so ere answer knows what question would,
Saving in Dialogue of Complement,
And talking of the Alpes and Appenines,
The Pyrennean and the river Poe,
It draws towards supper in conclusion for
But this is worshipful society,
And fits the mounting spirit like my self;
For he is but a Bastard to the time
That doth not smook of observation,
And so am I whether I smack or no;
And not alone in habit and device,
Exterior form, outward accoutrement;
But from the inward motion to deliver
Sweet, sweet, sweet poyson for the ages tooth,
Which though I will not practise to deceive,
Yet to avoid deceit I mean to learn;
For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising:
But who comes in such haste in riding Robes?

What

What woman post is this? hath she no Husband
That will take pains to blow a horn before her?
O me, 'tis my Mother: how now good Lady,
What brings you here to Court so hastily?

Enter Lady Faulconbridge and James Gurney.

Lady. Where is that slave thy Brother? where is he?
That holds in chafe mine honour up and down.

Bast. My brother Robert, old Sir Roberts son:
Colbrand the Gyant that same mighty man,
Is it Sir Roberts son that you seek so?

Lady. Sir Roberts son, I thou unreverend boy,
Sir Roberts son, why scorn'st thou at Sir Robert?
He is Sir Roberts son, and so art thou.

Bast. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave a while?

Gour. Good leave good Philip.

Bast. Philip, sparrow, James,
There's toys abroad, anon He tell thee more.

Exit James.

Madam, I was not old Sir Roberts Son,
Sir Robert might have eat his part in me
Upon good Friday, and nere broke his fast:
Sir Robert could do well, marry to confesse
Could get me, Sir Robert could not do it;
We know his handy-work, therefore good Mother
To whom am I beholding for these limbs?
Sir Robert never help to make this legge.

Lady. Hast thou conspired with thy brother too,
That for thine own gain shouldst defend mine honour?
What means this scorn, thou most untoward knave?

Bast. Knight, Knight, good Mother, Basilisco-like.
What, I am dub'd, I have it on my shoulder:
But Mother, I am not Sir Roberts son,
I have disclaim'd Sir Robert and my Land,
Legitimation, name, and all is gone;
Then good my Mother, let me know my Father,
Some proper man I hope, who was it Mother?

Lady. Hast thou denyed thy self a Faulconbridge?

Bast. As faithfully as I deny the Devil.

Lady. King Richard Cordelian was thy Father,
By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd
To make room for him in my Husbands bed:
Heaven lay not my transgression to my charge,
That art the issue of my dear offence
Which was so strongly urg'd past my defence.

Bast. Now by this light were I to get again,
Madam I would not wish a better father:
Some sins do bear their priviledge on earth,
And so doth yours: your fault was not your folly,
Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose,
Subjected tribute to commanding love,
Against whose fury and unmatched force,
The awlesse Lion could not wage the fight,
Nor keep his Princely heart from Richards hand:
He that perforce robs Lions of their hearts,
May easily win a womans: aye my Mother,
With all my heart I thank thee for my father:
Who lives and dares but say, thou didst not well
When I was got, He send his soul to hell.
Come Lady I will shew thee to my kin,
And they shall say, when Richard me begor,
If thou hadst said him nay, it had been sin;
Who says it was, he lyes, I say 'twas not.

Exeunt.

Scena secunda.

Enter before Angiers, Philip King of France, Lewis, Dauphin, Austria, Constance, Arthur.

Lewis. Before Angiers well met brave Austria,
Arthur that great forerunner of thy blood,
Richard that rob'd the Lion of his heart,
And fought the Holy warts in Palestine,
By this brave Duke came early to his grave:
And for amends to his posterity,
At our importance hither is he come,
To spread his colours boy in thy behalf,
And to rebuke the usurpation
Of thy unnatural Uncle English John,
Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither.

Arth. God shall forgive you Cordelions death
The rather, that you give his off-spring life,
Shadowing their right under your wings of warre:
I give you welcome with a powerlesse hand,
But with a heart full of unstained Love,
Welcome before the gates of Angiers Duke.

Lewis. A noble boy, who would not do thee right?

Aust. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous kisse,
As seal to this Indenture of my love:
That to my home I will no more return
Till Angiers and the right thou hast in France,
Together with that pale, that white-fac'd shore,
Whose foot spurns back the Oceans roaring tides:
And coops from other Linds her Islanders,
Even till that England hedg'd in with the main,
That water-walled Bulwark, still secure
And confident from forrain purposes,
Even till that utmost corner of the West
Salute thee for her King, till then fair boy
Will I not think of home, but follow Arms.

Const. O take his Mothers thanks, a widdows thanks,
Till your strong hand shall help to give him strength,
To make a more requital to your love.

Aust. The peace of heaven is theirs that lift their swords
In such a iust and charitable warre.

King. Well, then to work our Cannon shall be bent
Against the brows of this resisting town,
Call for our chiefest men of discipline,
To cull the plots of best advantages:
We'll lay before this Town our Royal bones,
Wade to the Marker-place in French-mens blood,
But we will make it subject to this boy.

Const. Stay for an answer to your Embassie,
Lest unadvic'd you stain your swords with blood:
My Lord Chastillon may from England bring
That right in peace which here we urge in warre,
And then we shall repent each drop of blood,
That hot rash haste so indirectly shed.

Enter Chastillon.

King. A wonder Lady; lo upon thy wish
Our Messenger Chastillon is arriv'd,
What England says, say briefly gentle Lord,
We coldly pause for thee, Chastillon speak.

Chat. Then turn your forces from this paltry siege,
And stirre them up against a mightier task:
England impatient of your iust demands,
Hath put himself in Arms, the adverse winds

Whose leisure I have staid, have given him time
To Land his Legions all as soon as I :
His marches are expedient to this Town,
His forces strong, his souldiers confident :
With him along is come the Mother Queen,
An Ace stirring him to bloud and strife,
With her her Neece, the Lady Blanch of Spain,
With them a Bastard of the King deceal'd,
And all th'unseled humours of the Land,
Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries,
With Ladies faces, and fierce Dragons spleens,
Have sold their fortunes at their native homes,
Bearing their birth-right proudly on their backs,
To make a hazzard of new fortunes here :
In brief, a braver choise of dauntlesse spirits
Then now the English bottoms have wast o're,
Did never float upon the swelling tide,
To do offence and scathe in Christendome :
The interruption of their churlish Drums
Cuts off more circumstance, they are at hand ;

Drums beats.

To parly or to fight, therefore prepare.

King. How much unlook'd for, is this expedition.

Aust. By how much unexpected, by so much
We must awake endeavour for defence,
For courage mounteth with occasion,
Let them be welcome then, we are prepar'd.

Enter King of England, Bastard, Queen, Blanch, Pembroke, and others.

K. John. Peace be to France : if France in peace permit
Our just and lineal entrance to our own ;
If not, bleed France, and peace ascend to Heaven.
Whiles we Gods wrathful agent do correct
Their proud contempt that beats his peace to Heaven.

Fran. Peace be to England, if that warre return
From France to England, there to live in peace :
England we love, and for that Englands sake,
With burden of our armour here we sweat :
This toyl of ours should be a work of thine,
But thou from loving England art so farre
That thou hast under-wrought his lawful King,
Cut off the sequence of posterity,
Out-faced Infant State, and done a rape
Upon the Maiden-vertue of the Crown :
Look here upon thy brother Geffreys face,
These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his ;
This little abstract doth contain that large,
Which died in Geffry : and the hand of time,
Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume :
That Geffry was thy elder brother born,
And this his son, England was Geffreys right,
And this is Geffreys in the Name of God :
How comes it then that thou art call'd a King,
When living blood doth in these Temples beat
Which owe the Crown that thou o're-maltest ?

K. John. From whom hast thou this great Commission
To draw my answer from thy Articles ? (France,

Fra. From that supernal judge that stirs good thoughts
In any breast of strong authority,
To look into the blots and stains of right,
That judge hath made me guardian to this boy,
Under whose warrant I impeach thy wrong,
And by whose help I mean to chastise it.

K. Joh. Alack thou dost usurp authority.

Fran. Excuse it is to beat usurping down.

Queen. Who is it thou dost call usurper France ?

Const. Let me make answer : thy usurping son,

Queen. Out insolent, thy Bastard shall be King,
That thou maist be a Queen and check the world.

Const. My bed was ever to thy Son as true
As thine was to thy Husband, and this boy
Liker in feature to his father Geffrey
Then thou and John, in manners being as like,
As rain to water, or devil to his damme.
My boy a bastard ? by my soul I think
His father never was so true begot,
It cannot be, and if thou wert his mother.

Qu. There's a good mother boy, that blots thy father.

Const. There's a good Grandame boy
That would blot thee.

Aust. Peace.

Bast. Hear the Cryer.

Aust. What the devil art thou ?

Bast. One that will play the devil fir with you,
And a may catch your hide and you alone :
You are the Hare of whom the Proverb goes
Whose valour plucks dead Lyons by the beard ;
He smoak your skin-coat, and I catch you right,
Sirrah look to't, yfaith I will, yfaith.

Blan. O well did he become that Lyons robe,
That did disrobe the Lyon of that robe.

Bast. It lyes as lightly on the back of him
As great Alcides shooes upon an Assie :
But Assie, He take that burden from your back,
Or lay on that shall make your shoulders crack.

Aust. What cracker is this same that deafe our ears
With this abundance of superfluous breath ?
King Lewis determine what we shall do strair.

Lew. Women and fools, break off your conference.
King John, this is the very summe of all :
England and Ireland, Angiers, Torain, Main,
In right of Arthur do I claim of thee :
Wilt thou resign them, and lay down thy Arms ?

John. My life as soon : I do desie thee France.
Arthur of Britain, yield thee to my hand ;
And out of my deer love He give thee more,
Then ere the coward hand of France can win ;
Submit thee boy.

Queen. Come to thy Grandame child.

Const. Do child, go to it grandame child,
Give Grandame kingdom, and it Grandame will Give it a plum, a cherry and a figge,
There's a good Grandame.

Arthur. Good my mother peace,
I would that I were low laid in my grave,
I am not worth this coyl that's made for me. (weeps.)

Qu. Mo. His Mother shames him so, poor boy he Const. Now shame upon you where she does or no.

His Grandames wrongs, and not his Mothers shames
Draws those Heaven-moving pearls from his poor eyes,
Which heaven shall take in nature of a fee :

I, with these Cristall beads heaven shall be brib'd
To do him justice and revenge on you.

Qu. Thou monstrous slanderer of heaven and earth.

Const. Thou monstrous injurer of heaven and earth,
Call not me slanderer, thou and thine usurp
The Domination, Royalties and Rights
Of this oppressed boy ; this is thy eldest sons son,
Infortunate in nothing but in thee ;

Thy

Thy sins are visited in this poor child,
The Canon of the Law is laid on him,
Being but the second generation
Removed from thy sin-conceiving womb.

John. Bedlam have done.

Const. I have but this to say,
That he is not only plagued for her sin,
But God hath made her sin and her, the plague
On this removed issue, plagued for her,
And with her plague her sin: his injury
Her injury the Beadle to her sin,
All punish'd in the person of this child,
And all for her, a plague upon her.

Que. Thou unadvised scold, I can produce
A Will, that bars the title of thy son.

Const. I who doubts that, a Will: a wicked will,
A womans will, a cankered Grandames will.

Fran. Peace Lady, pause, or be more temperate,
It ill beseems this presence to cry ay me
To these ill tuned repetitions:
Some Trumpet summon hither to the walls
These men of Angiers, let us hear them speak,
Whose title they admit, Arthurs or Johns.

Trumpet sounds.

Enter a Citizen upon the walls.

Citi. Who is it that hath warn'd us to the walls?

Fran. 'Tis France, for England.

John. England for it self:

You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects.

Fran. You loving men of Angiers, Arthurs subjects,
Our Trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle.

John. For our advantage, therefore hear us first:

These flags of France that are advanced here
Before the eye and prospect of your Town,
Have hither march'd to your endamagement.
The Canons have their bowels full of wrath,
And ready mounted are they to spit forth
Their Iron indignation 'gainst your walls;
All preparation for a bloody siege
And merciless proceeding, by these French.
Comfort your Cities eyes, your winking gates:
And but for our approach, those sleeping stones,
That as a waste doth girdle you about
By the compulsion of their ordinance,
By this time from their fixed beds of lime
Had been dishabited, and wide havock made
For bloody power to rush upon your peace,
But on the sight of us your lawful King,
Who painfully with much expedient march
Have brought a counter-check before your gates,
To save unscrach'd your Cities threatned cheeks:
Behold the French amaz'd vouchsafe a parle,
And now instead of bullets wrapt in fire
To make a shaking Feaver in your walls,
They shoot but calm words, folded up in smoak,
To make a faithlesse error in your ears,
Which trust accordingly kind Citizens,
And let us in. Your King, whose labour'd spirits
Fore-wearied in this action of swift speed,
Craves harbourage within your City walls.

Fran. When I have said, make answer to us both.
Loe in this right hand, whose protection
Is most divinely vow'd upon the right
Of him it holds, stands young Plantagenet,
Son to the elder brother of this man,

And King ore him, and all that he enjoys:

For this down-trodden equity, we tread
In warlike march, these greens before your Town,
Being no further enemy to you
Then the constraint of Hospitable zeal,
In the relief of this oppressed child,
Religiously provokes. Be pleased then
To pay that duty which you truly owe,
To him that owes it, namely, this young Prince,
And then our Arms, like to a muzzled Bear,
Save in aspect, hath all offence seal'd up:
Our Canons malice, vainly shall be spent
Against th'invulnerable clouds of Heaven,
And with a blessed, and un-vext retire,
With unhack'd swords, and Helmets all unbruil'd,
We will bear home that lusty blood again,
Which here we came to spout against your Town,
And leave your children, wives, and you in peace.
But if you fondly passe our proffer'd offer,
'Tis not the rounder of your old-fac'd walls,
Can hide you from our messengers of war,
Though all these English, and their discipline
Were harbour'd in their rude circumference:
Then tell us, Shall your City call us Lord,
In that behalf which we have challeng'd it?
Or shall we give the signal to our rage,
And stalk in blood to our possession?

Citi. In brief we are the King of Englands subjects,
For him, and in his right, we hold this Town.

John. Acknowledge then the King, and let me in.

Citi. That can we not: but he that proves the King
To him will we prove loyal, till that time
Have we ramm'd up our gates against the world.

John. Doth not the Crown of England, prove the King?

And if not that, I bring you witnesses
Twice fifteen thousand hearts of Englands breed.

Bast. Bastards and else.

John. To verifie our title with their lives.

Fran. As many and as well born bloods as those.

Bast. Some Bastards too.

Fran. Stand in his face to contradict his claim.

Citi. Till you compound whose right is worthiest,
We for the worthiest hold the right from both.

John. Then God forgive the sin of all those souls,
That to their everlasting residence,
Before the dew of evening fall shall fleet
In dreadful trial of our Kingdoms King.

Fran. Amen, Amen, mount Chevaliers to Arms.

Bast. Saint George that swindg'd the Dragon,
And ere since sits on's horseback at mine Hostesse door,
Teach us some fence. Sirrah, were I at home
At your den sirrah, with your Lyonnesse,
I would set an Ox-head to your Lyons hide:
And make a monster of you,

Aust. Peace no more.

Bast. O tremble: for you hear the Lyon roar.

John. Up higher to the plain, where we'll set forth
In best appointment all our Regiments.

Bast. Speed then to take advantage of the field.

Fran. It shall be so, and at the other hill Command the rest to stand. God and our right. Exeunt.

Here after excursions, enter the Herald of France with Trumpets to the gates.

F. Her. You men of Angiers open wide your gates,
And let young Arthur Duke of Britain in,

Whoby the hand of France, this day hath made Much work for tears in many an English Mother,
 Whose sons lye scattered on the bleeding ground :
 Many a widdows Husband groveling lyes,
 Coldly embracing the discoloured earth,
 And victory with little losse doth play
 Upon the dancing banners of the French,
 Who are at hand triumphantly displayed
 To enter Conquerors, and to proclaim
Arthur of Britain, Englands King, and yours.

Enter English Herald with Trumpet.

E. Har. Rejoyce you men of Angiers, ring your bells,
 King John, your King and Englands, doth approach,
 Commander of this hot malicious day,
 Their Armours that march'd hence so silver bright,
 Hither return all gilt with Frenchmens blood :
 There stuck no plume in any English Crest,
 That is removed by a staffe of France.
 Our colours do return in those same hands
 That did display them when we first marcht forth
 And like a jolly troop of Huntsmen come
 Our lusty English, all with purpled hands,
 Dide in the dying slaughter of their foes.
 Open your gates, and give the victors way.

Hub. Heralds, from off our towers we might behold
 From first to last, the on-set and retire,
 Of both your Armies, whose equality
 By our best eyes cannot be censured : (blows :
 Blood hath bought blood, and blows have answered
 Strength match with strength, and power confronted power.

Both are alike, and both alike we like :
 One must prove greatest. While they weigh so even,
 We hold our Town for neither : yet for both.

Enter the two Kings with their powers at several doors.

John. France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away ?
 Say, shall the currant of our right run on,
 Whose passage vext with thy impediment,
 Shall leave his native channel, and ore-swell
 With course disturb'd even thy confining shores,
 Unless thou let his silver Water, keep
 A peaceful progresse to the Ocean.

Fran. England thou hast not sav'd one drop of blood
 In this hor trial more than we of France.
 Rather lost more. And by this hand I swear
 That sways the earth this Climat over-looks,
 Before we will lay down our just born Arms,
 We'l put thee down, 'gainst whom these Arms we bear,
 Or add a royal number to the dead :
 Gracing the scroul that tells of this wars losse,
 With slaughter coupled to the name of Kings.

Bast. Ha Majesty : how high thy glory towers,
 When the rich blood of Kings is set on fire :
 Oh now doth death line his dead chaps with steel,
 The swords of Souldiers are his reeth, his phangs,
 And now he feasts, mousing the flesh of men
 In undetermin'd differences of Kings.
 Why stand these royall fronts amazed thus :
 Cry havock Kings, back to the stained field
 You equal Parents, fiery kindled spirits,
 Then let confusion of one part confirm
 The others peace : till then, blows, blood, and death.

John. Whose party do the Townsmen yet admit ?

Fran. Speak Citizens for England, who's your King.

Hub. The King of England, when we know the King.

Fran. Know him in us, that here hold up his right.

John. In us, that are our own great Deputy,
 And bear possession of our Person here,
 Lord of our presence Angiers, and if you.

Fran. A greater power than We denies all this,
 And till it be undoubted, we do lock
 Our former scruple in our strong barr'd gates :
 Kings of our fear, until our fears resolv'd
 Be by some certain King purg'd and depos'd.

Bast. By heaven, these scroyles of Angiers flout you
 And stand securely on their battlements, (Kings
 As in a Theater, whence they gape and point,
 At your industrious Scenes and acts of death.
 Your Royal presences be rul'd by me,
 Do like the Murines of Ierusalem,
 Be friends a while, and both conjoynly bend,
 Your sharpest deeds of malice on this Town.
 By East and West let France and England mount
 Their battering Canon charged to the mouths,
 Till their soul-fearing clamours have braul'd down
 The flinty ribs of this contemptuous City,
 I'de play incessantly upon these Jades,
 Even till unfenced desolation

Leave them as naked as the vulgar Air :
 That done, dissever your united strengths,
 And part your mingled colours once again,
 Turn face to face, and bloody point to point :
 Then in a moment Fortune shall cull forth
 Out of one side her happy Minion.

To whom in favour she shall give the day,
 And kisse him with a glorious victory :
 How like you this wild counsel mighty States,
 Smacks it not something of the policy ?

John. Now by the Sky that hangs above our heads,
 I like it well. France, shall we knit our powers,
 And lay this Angiers even with the ground,
 Then after fight who shall be King of it ?

Bast. And if thou hast the mettle of a King,
 Being wrong'd as we are by this peevish Town :
 Turn thou the mouth of thy Artillery,
 As we will ours, against these saucy walls,
 And when that we have dash'd them to the ground,
 Why then desie each other, and pell-mell,
 Make work upon our selves for heaven or hell.

Fran. Let it be so : say, where will you assault ?

John. We from the West will send destruction
 Into this Cities bosom.

Aust. I from the North.

Fran. Our Thunder from the South,
 Shall rain their drift of bullets on this Town,

Bast. O prudent discipline ! From North to South :
Austria and France shoot in each others mouth,
 Ile stirr them to it : come, away, away.

Hub. Hear us great Kings, vouchsafe awhile to stay
 And I shall shew you peace, and fair fac'd league :
 Win you this City without stroak, or wound,
 Rescue those Breathing lives to dye in beds,
 That here come sacrifices for the field.
 Persevere not, but hear me mighty Kings.

John. Speak on with favour, we are bent to hear.

Hub. That daughter there of Spain, the Lady Blanch
 Is neer to England, look upon the years
 Of Lewis the Dolphin, and that lovely maid.
 If lusty love should go in quest of beauty,

Where

Where should he find it fairer, than in Blanch :
 If zealous Love go in search of vertue,
 Where should he find it purer than in Blanch ?
 If Love ambitious, sought a match of birth,
 Whose veins hound richer blood then Lady Blanch ?
 Such as she is, in beauty, vertue, birth,
 Is the young Dolphin every way compleat,
 If not compleat of, say he is not she,
 And she again wants nothing, to name want,
 If want it be not, that she is not he :
 He is the half part of a blessed man,
 Left to be finished by such as she,
 And she a fair divided excellence,
 Whose fulnesse of perfection lies in him.
 O two such silver Currents when they joyn,
 Do glorifie the banks that bound them in :
 And two such shores, to two such streams made one,
 Two such controlling bounds shall you be, Kings,
 To these two Princes, if you marry them :
 This union shall do more than battery can,
 To our fast closed gates : for at this march,
 With swifter spleen than powder can enforce,
 The mouth of passage shall we fling wide ope,
 And give you entrance : but without this march,
 The Sea enraged is not halfe so deaf,
 Lyons more confident, Mountains and Rocks,
 More free from Motion, no not death himself
 In mortall fury half so peremptory,
 As we to keep this City.

Bast. Here's a stay,
 That shakes the rotten carkasse of old death
 Out of his raggs. Here's a large mouth indeed,
 That spits forth death, and Mountains, Rocks, and Seas,
 Talks as familiarly of roaring Lyons,
 As Maids of thirteen do of Puppi-dogs.
 What Cannoneer begot this lusty blood,
 He speaks plain Cannon fire, and smoak, and bounce,
 He gives the Bastinado with his tongue :
 Our ears are cudgel'd, not a word of his
 But buffers better than a fist of France
 Zounds I was never so bethumpt with words,
 Since I first call'd my brothers father Dad.

Old Qu. Son, list to this conjunction, make this match,
 Give with our Neece a dowry large enough,
 For by this knot, thou shalt so surely tye,
 Thy now unsur'd assurance to the Crown,
 That you green Boy shall have no Son to ripe,
 The bloom that promiseth a mighty fruit,
 I see a yeelding in the looks of France :
 Mark how they whisper, urge them while their souls
 Are capable of this ambition,
 Least zeal now melted by the windy breath
 Of soft petitions, pity and remorse,
 Cool and congeal again to what it was.

Hub. Why answer not the double Majesties,
 This friendly Treaty of our threatned Town ?

Fra. Speak England first, that hath been forward first,
 To speak unto this City : what say you ?

John. If that the Dolphin there thy Princely sonne.
 Can in this book of beauty read, I love :
 Her Dowry shall weigh equal with the Queen,
 For Angiers, and fair Torain, Main, Poytiers,
 And all that we upon this side the Sea,
 (Except this City now by us besieg'd)
 Find liable to our Crown and dignity,
 Shall gild her bridall bed and make her rich

In titles, honours, and promotions,
 As she in beauty, education, blood,
 Holds hands with any Princeesse of the world.

Fra. What say'st thou Boy ? look in the Ladies face.

Dol. I do my Lord, and in her eye I find,
 A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
 The shadow of my self form'd in her eye,
 Which being but the shadow of your son,
 Becomes a son, and makes your son a shadow :
 I do protest I never lov'd my self
 Till now, infixed I beheld my self,
 Drawn in the flattering Table of her eye.

Whispers with Blanch.

Bast. Drawn in the flattering Table of her eye,
 Hang'd in the frowning wrinkle of her brow,
 And quarter'd in her heart, he doth espie
 Himself Loves traitor, this is pity now :
 That hang'd and drawn, and quarter'd there should be,
 In such a Love, so vile a Lout as he.

Blan. My Ucles will in this respect is mine.
 If he see ought in you that makes him like,
 That any thing he sees which moves his liking
 I can with ease translate it to my will :
 Or if you will, to speak more properly,
 I will enforce it easily to my love.
 Further I will not flatter you my Lord,
 That all I see in you is worthy Love,
 Than this, that nothing do I see in you,
 Though churlish thoughts themselves should be your Judge,

That I can find, should merit any here.

John. What say these young-ones ? What say you my Neece ?

Blan. That she is bound in honour still to doe
 What you in wisdom still vouchsafe to say.

John. Speak then Prince Dolphin, can you love this Lady ?

Dol. Nay aske me if I can refrain from love,
 For I do love her most unfeinedly.

John. Then do I give Volquessen, Torain, Main, Poytiers, and Anjou, these five Provinces
 With her to thee, and this addition more,
 Full thirty thousand Marks of English coyn ;
Philip of France, if thou be pleas'd withall,
 Command thy son and daughter to joyn hands.

Fra. It likes us well young Princes : close your hands.

Aust. And your lips too, for I am well assur'd,
 That I did so, when I was first assur'd.

Fra. Now Citizens of Angiers ope your gates,
 Let in that amity which you have made,
 For at Saint Maries Chappell presently.
 The rights of marriage shall be solemniz'd.
 Is not the Lady Constance in this troop ?

I know she is not, for this match made up,
 Her presence would have interrupted much,
 Where is she and her son, tell me, who knows ?

Dol. She is sad and passionate at your Highnesse Tent.

Fra. And by my faith, this league that we have made,
 Will give her sadnesse very little cure :
 Brother of England, how may we content
 This widdow Lady ? in her right we came,
 Which we God knows, have turned another way,
 To our own vantage.

John. We will heal up all,
 For we'll create young Arthur Duke of Britain
 And Earl of Richmond, and this rich fair Town

We make him Lord of. Call the Lady Constance,
Some speedy Messenger bid her repair
To our solemnity: I trust we shall,
(If not fill up the measure of her will)
Yet in some measure satisfy her so,
That we shall stop her exclamation.
Go we as well as haste will suffer us,
To this unlook'd for unprepared pomp.

Exeunt.

Bast. Mad world, mad kings, mad composition;
John to stop Arthur's Title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part,
And France, whose Armour Conscience buckled on,
Whom zeal and charity brought to the field,
As Gods own souldier, rounded in the ear
With that same purpose-changer, that flye divel,
That broker, that still breaks the pate of faith,
That daily break-vow, he that winns of all,
Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men, maids,
Who having no external thing to lose,
But the word Maid, cheats the poor Maid of that.
That smooth-fac'd Gentleman, tickling commodity,
Commodity, the byas of the world,
The world, who of it self is peysed well,
Made to run even, upon even ground:
Till this advantage, this vile drawing byas,
This sway of motion, this commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpose, course, intent.
And this same byas, this commodity,
This Bawd, this Broker, that all-changing-world,
Clap'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawn him from his own determin'd ayd,
From a resolv'd and honorable warre.
To a most base and vile concluded peace.
And why rail I on this commodity?
But for because he hath not wooed me yet:
Nor that I have the power to clutch my hand,
When his fair Angels would salute my palm,
But for my hand, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor beggar, raileth on the rich.
Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail,
And say there is no sin but to be rich,
And being rich my virtue then shall be,
To say there is no vice, but beggary:
Since Kings break faith upon commodity
Gain be my Lord, for I will worship thee.

Exit.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Constance, Arthur, and Salisbury.

Const. Gone to be married? gone to swear a peace?
False blood to false blood joyn'd. Gone to be friends?
Shall Lewis have Blanch, and Blanch those provinces?
It is not so, thou hast mispoke, misheard,
Be well advis'd, tell ore thy tale again.
It cannot be, thou dost but say 'tis so.
I trust I may not trust thee, for thy word
Is but the vain breath of a common man:
Beleeve me, I do not beleeve thee man,
I have a Kings oath to the contrary.
Thou shalt be punish'd for thus frightening me,
For I am sick, and capable of fears.

Opprest with wrongs, and therefore full of fears,
A widow, Husbandless, subject to fears,
A woman naturally born to fears;
And though thou now confesse thou didst but jest
With my vex spirits, I cannot take a Truce,
But they will quake and tremble all this day.
What dost thou mean by shaking of thy head?
Why dost thou look so sadly on my son?

What means that hand upon that breast of thine?
Why holds thine eye that lamentable rheume,
Like a proud River peering ore his bounds?
Be these sad signes confirmers of thy words?
Then speak again; not all thy former tale,
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.

Sal. As true as I beleeve you think them false,
That give you cause to prove my saying true.

Const. Oh if thou teach me to beleeve this sorrow,
Teach thou this sorrow, how to make me dye,
And let beleeve, and life encounter so,
As doth the fury of two desperate men,
Which in the very meeting fall and dye.

Lewis marry Blanch? O boy, then where art thou?
France friend with England, what becomes of me?
Fellow be gone: I cannot brook thy sight,
This news hath made thee a most ugly man.

Sal. What other harm have I good Lady done,
But spoke the harm, that is by others done?

Const. Which harm within it self so hainous is,
As it makes harmful all that speak of it.

Arthur. I do beseech you Madam be content.

Const. If thou that bidst me be content, wert grim
Ugly, and slanderous to thy Mothers womb,
Full of unpleasing blots, and sightlesse stains,
Lame, foolish, crooked, swart, prodigious,
Patch'd with foul Moles, and eye-offending marks,
I would not care, I then would be content,
For then I should not love thee: no, nor thou
Become thy great birth, nor deserve a Crown.
But thou art fair, and at thy birth (dear boy)
Nature and Fortune joyn'd to make thee great.
Of Natures gifts, thou maist with Lillies boatt,
And with the halfe blown Rose. But Fortune, oh,
She is corrupted, chang'd, and wonn from thee,
Sh'adulterates hourly with thine Uncle John
And with her golden hand hath pluckt on France
To tread down fair respect of Sovereignty,
And made his Majesty the bawd to theirs.
France is a Bawd to Fortune, and king John,
That strumpet Fortune, that usurping John:
Tell me thou fellow, is not France forsworn?
Envenom him with words, or get thee gone,
And leave those woes alone, which I alone
Am bound to under-bear.

Sal. Pardon me Madam,
I may not go without you to the Kings.

Const. Thou mayst, thou shalt, I will not go with thee.
I will instruct my sorrows to be proud,
For grief is proud, and makes his owner sloop;
To me and to the state of my great grief,
Let Kings assemble: for my grief's so great,
That no supporter but the huge firm earth
Can hold it up: here I and sorrows sit,
Here is my Throne, bid Kings come bow to it.

Actus

Actus Tertius, Scæna prima.

Enter King John, France, Dolphin, Blanch Elianor, Philip, Austria, Constance.

Fran. 'Tis true (fair daughter) and this blessed day,
Ever in France shall be kept festival :
To solemnize this day the glorious Sunne
Stays in his course, and plays the Alchymist,
Turning with splendor of his precious eye
The meager cloddy earth to glittering gold :
The yearly course that brings this day about,
Shall never see it, but a holy day.

Const. A wicked day, and not a holy day.
What hath this day deserv'd ? what hath it done,
That it in golden letters should be set
Among the high tides in the Kalender ?
Nay, rather turn this day out of the week,
This day of shame, oppression, perjury.
Or if it must stand still, let wives with child
Pray that their burthens may not fall this day,
Lest that their hopes prodigiously be crost :
But (on this day) let Sea-men fear no wrack,
No bargains break that are not this day made ;
This day all things begun, come to ill end,
Yea, faith it self, to hollow falsehood change.

Fran. By heaven Lady, you shall have no cause
To curse the fair proceedings of this day :
Have I not pawn'd to you my Majesty ?

Const. You have beguil'd me with a counterfeit
Resembling Majesty, which being touch'd and try'd,
Proves valuelesse : you are forsworn, forsworn,
You came in Arms to spill mine enemies blood,
But now in Arms, you strengthen it with yours.
The grappling vigor, and rough frown of warre
Is cold in amity, and painted peace,
And our oppression hath made up this league :
Arme, arme, you heavens, against these perjur'd Kings,
A widdow cries, be Husband to me (Heavens)
Let not the hours of this ungodly day
Wear out the days in peace : but ere Sun-set,
Set armed discord 'twixt these perjur'd Kings,
Hear me, Oh, hear me.

Aust. Lady Constance, peace.

Const. Warre, warre, no peace, peace is to me a warre :
O Lymoges, O Austria, thou dost shame
That bloody spoil : thou slave, thou wretch, thou coward,
Thou little valiant, great in villany :
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side ;
Thou Fortunes Champion, that dost never fight
But when her humourous Ladyship is by
To reach thee safety : thou art perjur'd too,
And sooth'it up greatnesse. What a fool art thou,
A ramping fool, to brag, and stamp, and swear,
Upon my party : thou cold blouded slave,
Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side ?
Been sworn my souldier, bidding me depend
Upon thy stars, thy fortune, and thy strength,
And dost thou now fall over to my foes ?
Thou wear a Lyons hide ? dost it for shame,
And hang a Calves skin on those recreant Limbs.

Aust. O that a man should speak those words to me.

Phil. And hang a Calves-skin on those recreant Limbs.

Aust. Thou dar'st not say so villain for thy life.

Phil. And hang a Calves-skin on those recreant Limbs.
John. We like not this, thou dost forget thy self.

Enter Pandulph.

Fran. Here comes the holy Legat of the Pope.

Pan. Hail you anointed deputies of Heaven ;
To thee King John my holy errand is :
I Pandulph of fair Milane Cardinal,
And from Pope Innocent the Legate here,
Do in his name religiously demand
Why thou against the Church, our holy Mother,
So wilfully dost spurn, and force perforce
Keep Stephen Langton chosen Archbishop
Of Canterbury from that holy Sea :
This in our foresaid holy fathers name
Pope Innocent, I do demand of thee.

John. What earthy name to interrogatories
Can taste the free-breath of a sacred King ?
Thou canst not (Cardinal) devise a name
So slight, unworthy, and ridiculous
To charge me to an answer, as the Pope :
Tell him this tale, and from the mouth of England,
Adde thus much more, that no Italian Priest
Shall tythe or toll in our Dominions :
But as we, under heaven, are supream head,
So under him that great Supremacy
Where we do Reign, we will alone uphold
Without th^e assistance of a mortal hand :
So tell the Pope, all reverence set apart
To him and his usurp'd authority.

Fran. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this.

John. Though you, and all the Kings of Christendome
Are led so grossely by this meddling Priest,
Dreading the curse that money may buy out,
And by the merit of vile gold, drossie, dust,
Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,
Who in that sale sels pardon from himself :
Though you, and all the rest so grossely led,
This jugling witch-craft with revenue cherish,
Yet I alone, alone, do me oppose
Against the Pope, and count his friends my foes.

Pand. Then by the lawful power that I have,
Thou shalt stand curst, and excommunicate,
And blessed shall he be that doth revolt
From his Allegiance to an Heretique,
And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,
Canomzed and worshipp'd as a Saint,
That takes away by any secret course
Thy hateful life.

Const. O lawful let it be
That I have room with Rome to curse a while,
Good Father Cardinal, cry thou Amen
To my keen curses ; for without my wrong
There is no tongue hath power to curse him right.

Pan. There's Law and Warrant (Lady) for my curse.

Const. And for mine too, when Law can do no right.
Let it be lawful, that Law barre no wrong :
Law cannot give my child his kingdom here ;
For he that holds his kingdom, holds the law :
Therefore since Law it self is perfect wrong,
How can the Law forbid my tongue to curse ?

Pand. Philip of France, on peril of a curse,
Let go the hand of that Arch-heretique,
And raise the power of France upon his head,
Unlesse he do submit himself to Rome.

Elen. Look'it thou pale France ? do not let go thy hand.

Const. Look to that devil, lest that France repent.

And

And by disjoyning hands hell lose a soul.

Aust. King Philip, listen to the Cardinal.

Bast. And hang a Calves-skin on his recreant Limbs,

Aust. Well Ruffian, I must pocket up these wrongs
Because,

Bast. Your Breeches best may carry them.

John. Philip, what saist thou to the Cardinal?

Con. What should he say, but as the Cardinal?

Dolph. Berhink you father, for the difference

Is purchase of a heavy curse from Rome,

Or the light losse of England, for a friend :

Forgoe the easier.

Bla. That is the curse of Rome.

Con. O Lewis, stand fast, the devil tempts thee here
In likenesse of a new untrimmed Bride.

Bla. The Lady Constance speaks not from her faith,
But from her need.

Const. Oh, if thou grant my need,
Which onely lives but by the dearth of faith,
That need, must needs inferre this principle,
That faith would live again by dearth of need :
O then tread down my need, and faith mounts up:
Keep my need up, and faith is troden down.

John. The kind is moved, and answers not to this.

Const. O be remov'd from him, and answer well :

Aust. Doso king Philip, hang no more in doubt.

Bast. Hang nothing but a Calves-skin most sweet lout.

Fran. I am perplext, and know not what to say.

Pan. What canst thou say, but will perplex thee more?
If thou stand excommunicate, and curst?

Fran. Good reverend father, make my person yours,
And tell me how you would bestow your self?
This Royall hand, and mine are newly knit,
And the conjunction of our inward souls
Married in league, coupled and link'd together
With all Religious strength of sacred vows:
The latest breath that gave the sound of words,
Was deep-sworn faith, peace, amity, true love
Between our kingdoms and our Royal selves,
And even before this truce, but new before,
No longer than we well could wash our hands,
To clap this Royal bargain up of peace,
Heaven knows they were besmear'd and over-stain'd
With slaughters pencil; where revenge did paint
The fearful difference of incensed Kings:
And shall these hands so lately purg'd of blood?
So newly joyn'd in love? so strong in both,
Unyoke this seizure, and this kind regret?
Play fast and loose with faith? so jest with heaven,
Make such unconstant children of our selves
As now again to snatch our palm from palm?
Un-swear faith sworn, and on the marriage bed
Of smiling peace to march a bloody Host,
And make a riot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity? O holy sir
My reverend father, let it not be so;
Out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose
Some gentle order, and then we shall be blest
To do your pleasure and continue friends.

Pand. All form is formlesse, Order orderlesse,
Save what is opposite to Englands love.

Therefore to Arms, be champion of our Church,
Or let the Church our Mother breath her curse,
A Mothers curse on her revolting son.

France, thou mayst hold a Serpent by the tongue,
A cased Lion by the mortal paw,

A fasting Tyger safer by the tooth,
Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost hold.

Fran. I may dis-joyn my hand, but not my faith,

Pand. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith,
And like a civil war sett'st oath to oath,
Thy tongue against thy tongue. O let thy vow
First made to Heaven, first be to Heaven perform'd,
That is, to be the Champion of our Church,
What since thou swor'st, is sworn against thy self,
And may not be performed by thy self,
For that which thou hast sworn to do amisse,
Is not amisse when it is truly done :

And being not done, where doing tends to ill,
The truth is then most done not doing it :

The better Act of purposes mistook,
Is to mistake again, though indirect,
Yer indirection thereby grows direct,
And falsehood, falsehood cures, as fire cools fire
Within the scorching veins of one new burn'd.

It is Religion that doth make vows kept,
But thou hast sworn against Religion :

By what thou swear'st, against the thing thou swear'st:
And mak'st an oath the surety for thy truth:

Against an oath the truth, thou art unsure

To swear, swears, only not to be forsworn,

Else what a mockery should it be to swear?

But thou dost swear, onely to be forsworn,

And most forsworn, to keep what thou dost swear;

Therefore thy latter vows, against thy first,

Is in thy self rebellion to thy self :

And better conquest never canst thou make,

Than arm thy constant and thy nobler parts

Against these giddy loose suggestions :

Upon which better part, our pray'rs come in

If thou vouchsafe them. But if not, then know

The peril of our curses light on thee

So heavy, as thou shalt not shake them off

But in despair, dye under their black weight.

Aust. Rebellion, flat rebellion.

Bast. Wil't not be?

Will not a Calves-skin stop that mouth of thine?

Daul. Farther, to Arms.

Blanch. Upon thy wedding day?

Against the blood that thou hast married?

What, shall our feast be kept with slaughtered men?

Shall braying Trumpers, and loud churlish Drums

Clamours of hell, be measures to our pomp?

O husband hear me : ay, alack, how new

Is Husband in my mouth? even for that name

Which till this time my tongue did nere pronounce ;

Upon my knee I beg, go not to Arms

Against mine Uncle.

Const. O, upon my knee, made hard with kneeling,

I do pray to thee, thou vertuous Daulphin.

Alter not the doom fore-thought by heaven.

Blan. Now shall I see thy love, what motive may

Be stronger with thee, than the name of wife?

Const. That which upholdeth him, that thee upholds,
His honour. Oh thine honour, Lewis thine honour.

Dolph. I muse your Majesty doth seem so cold,

When such profound respects do pull you on?

Pand. I will denounce a curse upon his head.

Fra. Thou shalt not need. England, I will fall from thee.

Const. O fair return of banish'd Majesty.

Elea. O foul revolt of French inconstancy.

Eng. France, thou shalt rue this hour within this hour.

Bast.

Bast. Old Time the Clock-setter, that bauld sexton Time:
Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue.

Blan. The Sun's orecaft with blood: fair day adieu,
Which is the side that I must go withall?
I am with both, each Army hath a hand,
And in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whurle assunder, and dismember me.
Husband, I cannot pray that thou maist winn:
Uncle, I needs must pray that thou maist lose:
Father, I may not wish the fortune thine:
Grandame, I will not wish thy wishes thrive:
Who ever winnes, on that side shall I lose:
Assured losse, before the march be plaid.

Dolph. Lady, with me, with me thy fortune lies.

Bla. There where my fortune lives, there my life dies.

John. Cosen, go draw our puissance together,
France, I am burn'd up with inflaming wrath,
A rage, whose heat hath this condition;
That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,
The blood and dearest valued blood of France.

Fran. Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turne
To ashes, ere our blood shall quench that fire:
Look to thy self, thou art in jeopardy.

John. No more then he that threats. To Arms let's hie.

Exeunt

Scena secunda.

Alarums, Excursions: Enter Bastard with Austria's head.

Bast. Now by my life, this day grows wondrous hot,
Some airy devil hovers in the skie,
And pour's down mischief. Austria's head lye there,

Enter John, Arthur, Hubert.

While Philip breathes.

John. Hubert, keep this boy: Philip make up,
My Mother is assailed in our Tent,
And tane I fear.

Bast. My Lord I rescued her.
Her Highnesse is in safety, fear you not:
But on my Liege for very little pains
Will bring this labour to an happy end.

Exit.

Alarums, excursions, Retreat. Enter John, Eleanor, Arthur, Bastard, Hubert, Lords.

John. So shall it be: your grace shall stay behind
So strongly guarded: Cosen, look not sad,
Thy Grandame loves thee, and thy Unkle will
As deere be to thee, as thy father was.

Arth. O this will make my Mother die with grief.

John. Cosen, away for England, haste before,
And ere our coming see thou shake the bags
Of hoarding Abbots, imprisoned Angels
Set at liberty: the fat ribs of peace
Must by the hungry now be fed upon:
Use our Commission in his utmost force

Bast. Bell, Book, and Candle, shall not drive me back,
When gold and silver beckns me to come on.
I leave your Highnesse: Grandame, I will pray
(If ever I remember to be holy)
For your fair safety; so I kisse your hand.

Ele. Farewell gentle Cosen.

John. Coz, farewell.

Ele. Come hither little kinsman, hark, a word,

John. Come hither Hubert. O my gentle Hubert.
We owe thee much: within this wall of flesh
There is a soul counts thee her Creditor,
And with advantage means to pay thy love:
And my good friend, thy voluntary oath
Lives in this bosom, dearly cherished.
Give me thy hand, I had a thing to say,
But I will fit it with some better tune.
By heaven Hubert. I am almost asham'd
To say what good respect I have of thee.

Hub. I am much bounden to your Majesty.

John. Good friend, thou hast no cause to say so yet,
But thou shalt have: and creep time nere so slow,
Yet it shall come for me to do thee good.

I had a thing to say, but let it go:

The Sun is in the heaven, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton, and too full of gawdes.
To give me audience, if the midnight Bell
Did with his iron tongue, and brazen mouth
Sound on into the drowsie race of night:
If this same were a Church-yard where we stand,
And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs:
Or if that surely spirit melancholy
Had bak'd thy blood, and made it heavy, thick,
Which else runs tickling up and down the veins,
Making that idiot laughter keep mens eies,
And strain their cheeks to idle merriment,

A passion hateful to my purposes:
Or if that thou couldst see me without eies,
Heare me without thine ears, and make reply
Without a tongue, using conceit alone,
Without eies, ears, and harmful sound of words:
Then, in despite of brooded watchful day,
I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts:
But (ah) I will not, yet I love thee well,
And by my troth I think thou lov'st me well.

Hub. So well, that what you bid me undertake,
Though that my death were adjunct to my Act,
By heaven I would do it.

John. Do not I know thou wouldst?
Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert throw thine eye
On yon young boy: Ile tell thee what my friend,
He is a very serpent in my way,
And wherefore this foot of mine doth tread,
He lyes before me: dost thou understand me?
Thou art his keeper.

Hub. And ile keep him so,
That he shall not offend your Majesty.

John. Death.

Hub. My Lord.

John. A Grave.

Hub. He shall not live.

John. Enough.

I could be merry now, Hubert, I love thee.
Well, Ile not say what I intend for thee:
Remember: Madam, fare you well.
Ile send those powers o're to your Majesty,

Ele. My blessing go with thee.

John. For England Cosen, go.

Hubert shall be your man, to attend on you
With all true duty: on toward Calice ho.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter France, Dolphin, Pandulpho. Attendants.

Fran. So by a roaring Tempest on the flood,
A whole Armado of convicted sale
Is scattered and disjoyned from fellowship.

Pand. Courage and comfort, all shall yet go well.

Fran. What can go well, when we have run so ill?
Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost?

Arthur tane prisoner? divers deer friends slain?

And bloody England into England gone,
Ore-bearing interruption spight of France?

Dol. What he hath wonne, that hath he fortified:
So hot a speed, with such advice dispos'd,
Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,
Doth want example: who hath read, or heard
Of any kindred-action like to this?

Fran. Well could I bear that England had this praise,
So we could find some pattern of our shame.

Enter Constance.

Look who comes here? a grave unto a soul,
Holding th' eternal spirit against her will,
In the vilde prison of afflicted breath:
I prethee Lady go away with me.

Const. Lo, now: now see the issue of your peace.

Fran. Patience good Lady, comfort gentle Constance.

Const. No, I defie all counsel, all redresse,
But that which ends all counsel, true redresse:
Death, death, O amiable, lovely death,
Thou odoriferous stench: sound rottennesse,
Arise forth from the couch of lasting night,
Thou hare and terror to prosperity,
And I will kisse thy detestable bones.
And put my eyeballs in thy vaulty browes,
And ring these fingers with thy household worms,
And stop this gap of breath with fulsome dust,
And be a Carrion monster like thy self;
Come, grin on me, and I will think thou smil'st,
And buse thee as thy wife: Miseries love,
O come to me,

Fran. O fair affliction, peace.

Const. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry:
O that my tongue were in the thunders mouth,
Then with a passion I would shake the world,
And rowze from sleep that fell Anatomy
Which cannot hear a Ladys feeble voyce,
Which scorns a modern invocation.

Pand. Lady, you utter madnesse, and not sorrow.

Const. Thou art holy to bely me so,
I am not mad: this hair I tear is mine,
My name is Constance, I was Geffreys wife,
Young Arthur is my sonne. and he is lost:
I am not mad, I would to heaven I were,
For then 'tis like I should forget my self:
O, if I could, what grief should I forget?
Preach some Philosophy to make me mad,
And thou shalt be Canoniz'd (Cardinal)
For, being not mad, but sensible of grief,
My reasonable part produces reason
How I may be deliver'd of these woes,
And teaches me to kill or hang my self:
If I were mad, I should forget my sonne.

Or madly think a babe of clours were he;
I am not mad: too well, too well I feel
The different plague of each calamity.

Fran. Bind up those tresses: O what love I note
In the fair multitude of those her hairs;
Where but by chance a silver drop hath falne,
Even to that drop ten thousand wicry fiends
Do glew themselves in sociable grief,
Like true, inseparable, faithful Loves,
Sticking together in Calamity.

Const. To England, if you will.

Fran. Bind up your hairs.

Const. Yes that I will: and wherefore will I do it?
I tore them from their bonds, and cry'd aloud,
O, that these hands could so redeem my sonne,
As they have given these hairs their liberty:
But now I envy at their liberty,
And will again commit them to their bonds,
Because my poor child is a prisoner.
And father Cardinal, I have heard you say
That we shall see and know our friends in heaven:
If that be true, I shall see my boy again:
For since the birth of Cain, the first male-child
To him that did but yesterday suspire,
There was not such a gracious creature borne:
But now will canker-sorrow eat my bud,
And chase the native beauty from his cheek,
And he will look as hollow as a Ghost,
As dim and meager as an Agues fit,
And so he'll dye: and rising so again,
When I shall meet him in the Court of Heaven
I shall not know him: therefore never, never Must I behold my pretty Arthur more.

Pand. You hold too hainous a respect of grief.

Const. He talks to me that never had a sonne.

Fran. You are as fond of grief, as of your child.

Const. Grief fills the room up of my absent child:
Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me,
Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,
Remembers me of all his gracious parts,
Stuffs out his vacant garments with his forme,
Then, have I reason to be fond of grief?
Fare you well: had you such a losse as I,
I could give better comfort than you do.
I will not keep this forme upon my head,
When there is such disorder in my wit:
O Lord, my boy, my Arthur, my fair sonne,
My life, my joy, my food, my all the world:
My widow-comfort, and my sorrows cure.

Fran. I fear some outrage, and ile follow her. Exit.

Dol. There's nothing in this world can make me joy.
Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsie man;
And bitter shame hath spoil'd the sweet words taste,
That it yields nought but shame and bitterness.

Pand. Before the curing of a strong disease,
Even in the instant of repair and health,
The fit is strongest: evils that take leave
On their departure, most of all shew evil:
What have you lost by losing of this day?

Dol. All dayes of glory, joy, and happinesse.

Pand. If you had wonne it, certainly you had,
No, no: when Fortune means to men most good,
She looks upon them with a threatening eye:
'Tis strange to think how much King John hath lost
In this which he accounts so clearly wonne:

Are not you griev'd that Arthur is his prisoner?

Dol. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.

Pand. Your mind is all as youthful as your blood.
Now hear me speak with a prophetick spirit:
For even the breath of what I mean to speak,
Shall blow each dust, each straw, each little rub
Out of the path which shall directly lead
Thy foot to Englands Throne. And therefore mark:
John hath seiz'd Arthur, and it cannot be,
That whiles warm life plays in that infants veins,
The misplac'd John should entertain an hour,
One minute, nay one quiet breath of rest.
A Scepter snatch'd with an unruly hand,
Must be as boysterously maintain'd as gain'd.
And he that stands upon a slipp'ry place,
Makes nice of no vilde hold to stay him up:
That John may stand, then Arthur needs must fall,
So be it, for it cannot be but so.

Dol. But what shall I gain by young Arthurs fall?

Pand. You, in the right of Lady Blanch your wife,
May then make all the claim that Arthur did.

Dol. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.

Pand. How green you are, and fresh in this old world?
John laies you plots: the times conspire with you,
For he that sleeps his safety in true blood,
Shall find but bloody safety and untrue.
This Act so evilly born shall cool the hearts
Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal,
That none so small advantage shall step forth
To check his reigne, but they will cherish it.
No natural exhalation in the skie,
No scope of Nature, no disltemper'd day,
No common wind, no custom'd event,
But they will pluck away his natural cause,
And call them Meteors, prodigies, and signes,
Abortives, presages, and tongues of heaven,
Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.

Dol. Maybe he will not touch young Arthurs life,
But hold himself safe in his prisonment.

Pand. O Sir, when he shall hear of your approach,
If that young Arthur be not gone already,
Even at that news he dies: and then the hearts
Of all his people shall revolt from him,
And kisse the lips of unacquainted change,
And pick strong matter of revolt, and wrath
Out of the bloody fingers ends of John.
Me thinks I see this hurley all on foot;
And O, what better matter breeds for you,
Than I have nam'd. The bastard Faulconbridge
Is now in England ransacking the Church,
Offending Charity: If but a dozen French
Were there in Arms, they would be as a Call
To train ten thousand Engliss to their side;
Or, as a little snow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a Mountain. O noble Dolphin,
Go with me to the King, 'tis wonderful,
What may be wrought out of their discontent,
Now that their souls are rop full of offence,
For England go; I will whet on the King.

Dol. Strong reasons makes strong actions: let us go,
If you say I, the King will not say no.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Hubert and Executioners.

Hub. Heat me these Irons hot, and look thou stand
Within the Aras: when I strike my foot
Upon the bosom of the ground, rush forth
And bind the boy, which you shall find with me
Fast to the chair: be heedfull: hence and watch.

Exec. I hope your warrant will bear out the deed.

Hub. Uncleanly scruples fear not you: look to't,
Young Lad come forth; I have to say with you.

Enter Arthur.

Ar. Good morrow Hubert.

Hub. Good morrow little Prince.

Ar. As little Prince, having so great a Title
To be more Prince, as may be: you are sad.

Hub. Indeed I have been merrier.

Ar. Mercy on me:

Me thinks no body should be sad but I:
Yet I remember, when I was in France
Young Gentlemen would be as sad as night
Onely for wantonnesse: by my Chiltendome,
So I were out of prison, and kept steep
I should be as merry as the day is long:
And so I would be here, but that I doubt
My Uncle practises more harm to me:
He is afraid of me, and I of him:
Is it my fault that I was Geffreys son?
No indeed it's not, and I would to heaven
I were your son, so you would love me, Hubert:
Hub. If I talke to him, with his innocent prate
He will awake my mercy which lies dead:
Therefore I will be sodain, and dispatch.

Ar. Are you sick Hubert? you look pale to day,
Insooth I would you were a little sick.
That I might sit all night and watch with you.

I warrant I love you more than you do me,
Hub. His words do take possession of my bosom.
Read here young Arthur. How now foolish rheume?
Turning dispitious Torture out of doore?
I must be brief, least resolution drop
Out at mine eies, in tender womanish tears.
Can you not read it? Is it not fair writ?

Ar. Too fairly Hubert, for so foule effect,
Must you with hot Irons, burn out both mine eies?

Hub. Young boy, I must.

Ar. And will you?

Hub. And I will.

Ar. Have you the heart? When your head did but ake,

I knit my Hand-kercher about your brows
(The best I had, a Princess wrought it me)
And I did never aske it you again:
And with my hand, at midnight held your head;
And like the watchful minutes, to the hour,
Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time;
Saying, what lacke you? and where lies your grief?
Or what good love may I perform for you?
Many a poor mans son would have lyen still,
And ne're have spoke a loving word to you:
But you, at your sick service had a Prince:
Nay, you may think my love was crafty love,
And call it cunning. Do, and if you will,

If heaven be pleas'd that you must use me ill,
Why then you must. Will you put out mine eies?
These eies, that never did, nor never shall
So much as frown on you.

Hub. I have sworn to do it :
And with hot Irons must I burn them out.

Ar. Ah, none but in this Iron age, would do it :
The Iron of it self, though heat red hot,
Approaching neer these eies, would drink my tears,
And quench this fiery indignation,
Even in the matter of mine innocence :
Nay, after that, consume away in rust,
But for containing fire to harm mine eye :
Are you more stubborn hard, than hammer'd Iron ?
And if an Angell should have come to me,
And told me Hubert should put out mine eies,
I would not have believ'd him : no tongue but Hubert's.

Hub. Come forth : Do as I bid you do.

Ar. O save me Hubert, save me : my eies are out
Even with the fierce looks of these bloody men.

Hub. Give me the Iron I say, and bind him here.

Ar. Alas, what need you be so boisterous rough ?
I will not struggle, I will stand stone still :
For heaven sake Hubert, let me not be bound :
Nay, hear me Hubert, drive these men away,
And I will sit as quiet as a Lamb.
I will not stirre, nor wince, nor speake a word,
Nor look upon the Iron angerly :
Thrust but these men away, and Ile forgive you,
What ever torment you do put me to.

Hub. Go stand within : let me alone with him.

Exec. I am best pleas'd to be from such a deed.

Ar. Alas, I then have chid away my friend,
He hath a sterne look, but a gentle heart :
Let him come back, that his compassion may Give life to yours.

Hub. Come (Boy) prepare your self.

Ar. Is there no remedy ?

Hub. None, but to lose your eies.

Ar. O heaven : that there were but a moth in yours,
A grain, a dust, a gnat, a wandering hair,
Any annoyance in that precious sense :
Then feeling what small things are boisterous there
Your vild intent must needs seem horrible.

Hub. Is this your promise ? Go roo, hold your tongue.

Ar. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of tongues,
Must needs want pleading for a pair of eies :
Let me not hold my tongue, let me nor Hubert,
Or Hubert, if you will cut out my tongue,
So I may keep mine eies, O spare mine eies,
Though to no use, but still to look on you.
Loe, by my troth, the instrument is cold,
And would not harm me.

Hub. I can heat it, boy.

Ar. No, in good sooth, the fire is dead with grief,
Being create for comfort, to be us'd
In undeserv'd extreams : see else your self,
There is no malice in this burning coal,
The breath of heaven, hath blown his spirit out,
And strew'd repentant ashes on his head.

Hub. But with my breath I can revive it boy.

Ar. And if you do, you will but make it blush,
And glow with shame of your proceedings, Hubert :
Nay, it perchance will sparkle in your eies :
And, like a dog that is compell'd to fight,
Snatcht at his Master that doth tarre him on.

All things that you should use to do me wrong
Deny their office : onely you do lack
That mercy, which fierce fire, and Iron extends,
Creatures of note for mercy, lacking uses.

Hub. Well, see to live : I will not touch thine eye,
For all the treasure that thine Uncle owes,
Yet am I sworn, and I did purpose, boy,
With this same very Iron, to burn them out :

Ar. O now you look like Hubert. All this while
You were 'disguis'd.

Hub. Peace : no more. Adieu,
Your Uncle must not know but you are dead.
Ile fill these dogged spies with false reports :
And, pretty child, sleep doubtlesse, and secure,
That Hubert, for the wealth of all the world,
Will not offend thee.

Ar. O heaven ! I thank you Hubert.

Hub. Silence, no more : go closely in with me.
Much danger do I undergoe for thee.

Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter John, Pembroke, Salisbury, and other Lords.

John. Here once again we sit, once again crown'd
And look'd upon, I hope, with cheerfull eies.

Pem. This once again (but that your Highnesse pleas'd)
Was once superfluous : you were Crown'd before,
And that high Royalty was nere pluck'd off :
The faiths of men, nere stained with Revolt :
Fresh expectation troubled not the Land
With any long'd-for-change, or better Stare.

Sal. Therefore to be possess'd with double pomp,
To guard a Title that was rich before ;
To gild refined gold, to paint the Lilly ;
To throw a perfume on the Violet,
To smooth the ice, or adde another hew
Unto the Rainbow ; or with Taper-light
To seek the beaureous eye of Heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful, and ridiculous excesse.

Pem. But that your Royal pleasure must be done,
This Act is as an ancient tale new told,
And, in the last repeating troublesome,
Being urged at a time unseasonable.

Sal. In this the Antick, and well nored face
Of plain old form, is much disfigured,
And like a shifted wind unto a saile,
It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about,
Startles, and frights consideration :
Makes sound opinion sick, and truth suspected,
For putting on so new a fashion'd Robe.

Pem. When workmen strive to do better than well,
They do confound their skill in covetousnesse,
And oftentimes excusing of a fault,
Doth make the fault the worse by th'excuse :
As patches set upon a little breach,
Discredit more in hiding of the fault,
Than did the fault before it was so patch'd.

Sal. To this effect, before you were new crown'd
We breath'd our Counsel : but it pleas'd your Highnesse
To over-bear it, and we are all well pleas'd,
Since all, and every part of what we would Doth make a stand, at what your Highnesse will.

John

John. Some reasons of this double Coronation
I have possess'd you with, and think them strong.
And more, more strong, then lesse is my fear
I shall induc you with: Mean time, but aske
What you would have reform'd, that is not well,
And well shall you perceive, how willingly
I will both hear, and grant you your requests,

Pem. Then I, as one that am the tongue of these
To sound the purposes of all their hearts,
Both for my self, and them: but chief of all
Your safety: for the which, my self and them
Bend their best studies, heartily request
Th' infranchisement of Arthur, whose restraint
Doth move the murmuring lips of discontent
To break into this dangerous argument,
If what in rest you have, in right you hold,
Why then your feates (which as they say) attend
The steps of wrong, should move you to mew up
Your tender kinsman, and to choake his daies
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth
The rich advantage of good exercise,
That the times enemies may not have this
To grace occasions: let it be our suit,
That you have bid us ask his liberty,
Which for our goods we do no further ask,
Than, whereupon our weale on you depending,
Counts it your weale: he have his liberty.

Enter Hubert.

John. Let it be so: I do commit his youth
To your direction: Hubert, what news with you?

Pem. This is the man should do the bloody deed:
He shew'd his warrant to a friend of mine,
The image of a wicked heynous fault
Lives in his eye: that close aspect of his,
Do shew the mood of a much troubled breast,
And I do fearfully beleieve 'tis done,
What we so fear'd he had a charge to do.

Sal. The colour of the King doth come, and goe,
Between his purpose and his conscience,
Like Heralds 'twixt two dreadful battails set:
His passion is so ripe, it needs must break.

Pem. And when it breaks, I fear will issue thence
The foul corruption of a sweet child's death.

John. We cannot hold mortalities strong hand.
Good Lords, although my will to give, is living,
The suit which you demand is gone, and dead.
He tels us Arthur is deceas'd to night.

Sal. Indeed we fear'd his sicknesse was past cure.

Pem. Indeed we heard how neer his death he was,
Before the child himself felt he was sick;
This must be answer'd either here, or hence.

John. Why do you bend such solemn brows on me?
Think you I bear the Sheers of destiny?
Have I commandment on the pulse of life?

Sal. It is apparent foul-play, and 'tis shame
That greatness should so grossely offer it:
So thrive it in your game, and so farewell.

Pem. Stay yet: (Lord Salisbury) I legoe with thee,
And find th' inheritance of this poor child,
His little kingdome of a forced grave.
That blood which ow'd the bredth of all this Isle,
Three foot of it doth hold; bad world the while:
This must not be thus horn, this will break out
To all our sorrows, and ere long I doubt.

Exit.

John. They burn in indignation: I repent: Enter Mes.
There is no sure foundation set on blood:

No certain life achiev'd by others death:
A fearful eye thou hast. Where is that blood;
That I have seen inhabit in those cheeks?
So foul a skie, cleeres not without a storm,
Poure down thy weather: how goes all in France?

Mes. From France to England, never such a power
For any forraine preparation,
Was levied in the body of a Land.
The Copy of your speed is learn'd by them:
For when you should be told they do prepare,
The tydings comes, that they are all arriv'd.

John. Oh where hath our intelligence been drunk?
Where hath it slept? Where is my Mothers care?
That such an Army could be drawn in France,
And she not hear of it?

Mes. My Liege, her care
Is stopt with dust: the first of April dy'd
Your noble Mother; and as I hear, my Lord,
The Lady Constance in a frenzie dy'd
Three days before: but this from Rumours tongue
I idely heard: if true, or false I know not.

John. Withhold thy speed, dreadful occasion:
O make a league with me, 'till I have pleas'd
My discontented Peers. What? Mother dead?
How wildly then walkes my Estate in France?
Under whose conduct came those powers of France,
That thou for truth giv'st out are landed here?

Mes. Under the Dolphin.

Enter Bastard and Peter of Pomfret.

John. Thou hast made me giddy
With these ill tydings: Now? What saies the world
To your proceedings? Do not seek to stuffe
My head with more ill news: for it is full.

Bast. But if you be afraid to hear the worst,
Then let the worst unheard, fall on your head.

John. Beare with me Cosen, for I was amaz'd
Under the tide; but now I breath again
Aloft the flood, and can give audience
To any tongue, speak it of what it will.

Bast. How I have sped among the Clergy men,
The summes I have collected shall expresse:
But as I travail'd hither through the Land,
I find the people strangely fantasied,
Possess'd with rumours, full of idle dreams,
Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear.
And here's a Prophet that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found
With many hundreds treading on his heels:
To whom he sung in rude harsh sounding rimes,
That ere the next Ascension day at noon,
Your Highnesse should deliver up your Crown.

John. Thou idle Dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?

Pet. Fore-knowing that the truth will fall out so.

John. Hubert, away with him: imprison him,
And on that day at noon, whereon he saies
I shall yield up my Crown, let him be hang'd.
Deliver him to safety, and return,
For I must use thee. O my gentle Cosen,
Hear't thou the news abroad, who are arriv'd?

Bast. The French (my Lord) mens mouths are full of it:
Besides I met Lord Bigot, and Lord Salisbury
With eies as red as new enkindled fire,
And others more, going to seek the grave
Of Arthur, whom they say is kill'd to night, on your

John. Gentle kinsman, goe (suggestion:
And thrust thy self into their companies,

I have a way to winne their loves again :
Bring them before me.

Bast. I will seek them out.

John. Nay, but make haste : the better foot before.

O, let me have no subjects enemies,
When adverse Forreyners affright my Towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion.

Be Mercury, set feathers to thy heels,
And flye (like thought) from them, to me again.

Bast. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed. Exit.

John. Spoke like a sprightly Noble Gentleman.

Goe after him : for he perhaps shall need
Some Messenger betwixt me and the Peeres,
And be thou he.

Mef. With all my heart, my Liege.

John. My Mother dead ?

Enter Hubers.

Hub. My Lord, they say five Moons were seen to night:
Four fixed, and the fifth did whirle about
The other four in wondrous motion.

John. Five Moons ?

Hub. Old men, and Beldames, in the streets
Doe prophesie upon it dangerously :
Young Arthurs death is common in their mouths,
And when they talke of him, they shake their heads,
And whisper one another in the ear.

And he that speaks, doth gripe the hearers wrist,
Whilst he that hears makes fearful action

With wrinkled browes, with nods, with rolling eies,
I saw a Smith stand with his hammer (thus);

The whilst his Iron did on the Anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a Taylors news,

Who with his Sheers and Measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, which his nimble haste

Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet,
Told of a many thousand warlike French,

That were embattaile'd, and rank'd in Kent.
Another lean, unwash'd Artificer,

Cuts off his tale, and talks of Arthurs death.

John. Why seek'st thou to possesse me with these fears?
Why urgest thou so oft young Arthurs death ?

Thy hand hath murdered him : I had a mighty cause
To wish him dead, but thou hadst none to kill him.

H. No had (my Lord?) why, did you not provoke me ?

John. It is the curse of Kings, to be attended
By slaves that take their humours for a warrant,
To break the bloody house of life,
And on the winking of Authority
To understand a Law ; to know the meaning
Of dangerous Majesty, when perchance it frowns
More upon humour, than advis'd respect.

Hub. Here is your hand and seale for what I did.

John. Oh, when the last account 'twixt heaven and earth
Is to be made, then shall this hand and seale
Witnesse against us to damnation.

How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds,
Make deeds ill done ? hadst not thou been by,

A fellow by the hand of Nature mark'd,
Quoted, and sign'd to do a deed of shame,

This murder had not come into my mind.
But taking nore of thy abhor'd Aspect,

Finding thee fit for bloody villany :

Apt, liable to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthurs death :

And thou, to be endeered to a King,
Made it no conscience to destroy a Prince.

Hub. My Lord.

Joh. Had'st thou but shook thy head, or made a pause
When I spake darkly, what I purposed :

Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face ;

As bid me tell my tale in expresse words :

Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me break off,

And those thy fears, might have wrought fears in me.

But, thou didst understand me by my signes,

And didst in signes again parley with sinne,

Yea, without stop didst let thy heart consent.

And consequently thy rude hand to act.

The deed, which both our tongues held vild to name

Out of my sight, and never see me more :

My Nobles leave me, and my State is braved,

Even at my gates, with ranks of forrain powers :

Nay, in the body of this fleshly Land,

This Kingdom, this Confinde of blood, and breath

Hostility, and civil tumult reigns

Between my conscience, and my Cousins death.

Hub. Arme you against your other enemies ?

Ile make a peace between your soul, and you.

Young Arthur is alive : this hand of mine

Is yet a Maiden, and an innocent hand,

Not painted with the Crimson spots of blood :

Within this bosom, never entred yet

The dreadful motion of a murderous thought,

And you have slander'd Nature in my forme,

Which howsoever rude exteriorly,

Is yet the cover of a fairer mind,

Than to be butcher of an innocent child.

John. Doth Arthur live ? O halte thee to the Peers,

Throw this report on their incensed rage,

And make them tame to their obedience.

Forgive the Comment that my passion made

Upon thy feature, for my rage was blind,

And foule imaginary eyes of blood

Presented thee more hideous than thou art.

Oh, answer not ; but to my Closet bring,

The angry Lords, with all expedient haste.

I conjure thee but slowly : run more fast.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Arthur on the walls.

Art. The wall is high, and yet will I leap down.

Good ground be pitiful, and hurt me not :

There's few or none do know me, if they did,

This Ship-boys semblance hath disguis'd me quite.

I am afraid, and yet Ile venture it.

If I get down and do not break my limbs,

Ile find a thousand shifts to get away ;

As good to dye, and goe ; as dye, and stay.

Oh me, my Uncles spirit is in these stones,

Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones. Dies.

Enter Pembroke, and Salisbury, and Bigot.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at St. Edmondsbury,

It is our safety, and we must embrace

This gentle offer of the perillous time.

Pem. Who brought that Letter from the Cardinal ?

Sal. The Count Melloone, a Noble Lord of France,

Whose private with me of the Dolphins love,

Is much more general than these lines import.

Bigot

Big. To morrow morning let us meet him then.

Sal. Or rather then set forward, for 'twill be
Two long dayes journey (Lords) or ere we meet.

Enter Bastard.

Bast. Once more to day well met, distemper'd Lords,
The King by me requests your presence strait.

Sal. The King hath dispossest himself of us,
We will not line his thin-betained cloake
With our pure Honours: nor attend the foot
That leaves the print of blood where ere it walkes.

Return, and tell him so: we know the worst. (best.)

Bast. What ere you think, good words I think were

Sal. Our griefs, and not our manners reason now.

Bast. But there is little reason in your grief.

Therefore 'twere reason you had manners now.

Pem. Sir, sir, impatience hath his priviledge.

Bast. 'Tis true, to hurt his master, no man else.

Sal. This is the prison: what is he lyes here?

P. Oh death made proud with pure and princely beauty,
The earth had not a hole to hide this deed.

Sal. Murderer, as hating what himself hath done,
Doth lay it open to urge on revenge.

Big. Or when he doom'd this beauty to a grave,
Found it too precious Princely, for a grave.

Sal. Sir Richard, what think you? have you beheld,
Or have you read, or heard, or could you think?

Or do you almost think, although you see,
That you do see? could thought, without this object

Form such another? this is the very top,

The heighth, the Crest: or Crest unto the Crest

Of murders Armes: this is the bloodiest shame,

The wildest Savagery, the vildest stroke

That ever wall-ey'd wrath, or staring rage

Presented to the tears of soft remorse.

Pem. All murders past, do stand excus'd in this:

And this so sole, and so unmatchable,

Shall give a holiness, a purity,

To the yet unbegotten sinne of times;

And prove a deadly blood-shed, but a jest,

Exempl'd by this heynous spectacle.

Bast. It is a damned, and a bloody work,

The gracelesse action of a heavy hand,

If that it be the work of any hand.

Sal. If that it be the work of any hand?

We had a kind of light, what would ensue:

It is the shameful work of Huberts hand,

The practice, and the purpose of the King:

From whose obedience I forbid my soul,

Kneeling before this ruine of sweet life,

And breathing to his breathlesse excellence

The incense of a Vow, a holy Vow:

Never to taste the pleasures of the world,

Never to be infected with delight,

Nor conversant with ease, and idleness,

Till I have set a glory to this hand,

By giving it the worship of Revenge.

Pem. Big. Our souls Religiously confirm thy words.

Enter Hubert.

Hub. Lords, I am hot with haste, in seeking you,
Arthur doth live, the King hath sent for you.

Sal. Oh he is bold, and blushes not at death:

Avant thou hatefull villaine, get thee gone.

Hub. I am no villaine.

Sal. Must I rob the Law.

Bast. Your sword is bright sir, put it up again.

Sal. Not till I sheath it in a murderers skin.

Hub. Stand back Lord Salisbury, stand back I say
By heaven, I think my sword's as sharp as yours:

I would not have you (Lord) forget your self

Nor tempt the danger of my true defence;

Least I by marking of your rage, forget

Your Worth, your Greatnesse, and Nobility.

Big. Out dunghill, dar'st thou brave a Nobleman?

Hub. Not for my life: but yet I dare defend

My innocent life against an Emperor.

Sal. Thou art a Murderer.

Hub. Do not prove me so:

Yet I am none. Whose tongue so ere speaks false,

Nor truly speaks: who speaks not truly, Lies.

Pem. Cut him to pieces.

Bast. Keep the peace, I say.

Sal. Stand by, or I shall gaul you Faulconbridge.

Bast. Thou wer't better gaul the divel Salisbury.

If thou but frown on me, or stirre thy foot,

Or teach thy hasty spleen to do me shame,

Ile strike thee dead, Put up thy sword betime.

Or Ile so maul you, and your toiling-Iron,

That you shall think the divel is come from hell.

Big. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge?

Second a Villaine, and a Murderer?

Hub. Lord Bigot, I am none.

Big. Who kill'd this Prince?

Hub. 'Tis not an hour since I left him well:

I honour'd him, I lov'd him, and will weep

My date of life out, for his sweet lives losse.

Sal. Trust not those cunning waters of his eies,

For villany is not without such Rheume,

And he long traded in it, makes it seem

Like Rivers of remorse and innocency.

Away with me, all you whose souls abhorre

Th'uncleanly savour of a slaughter-house,

For I am stifled with this smell of sinne.

Big. Away toward Bury, to the Dolphin there.

P. There tell the King, he may enquire us out. Ex. Lords.

Ba. Here's a good world: knew you of this fair work?

Beyond the infinite and boundlesse reach of mercy,

(If thou didst this deed of death) art thou damn'd Hubert.

Hub. Do but hear me sir.

Bast. Ha? Ile tell thee what.

Thou'rt damn'd as black, nay nothing is so black,

Thou art more deep damn'd than Prince Lucifer.

There is not yet so ugly a fiend of Hell

As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this child.

Hub. Upon my soul.

Bast. If thou didst but consent

To this most cruel Act: do but despair,

And if thou wantst a Cord, the smallest thred

That ever Spider twisted from her womb

Will serve to strangle thee: A rush will be a beam

To hang thee on. Or wouldst thou drown thy self,

Put but a little water in a spoon,

And it shall be as all the Ocean,

Enough to stifle such a Villaine up.

I do suspect thee very grievously.

Hub. If I in act, consent, or sinne of thought,

Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath

Which was embounded in this beauteous clay,

Let hell want pains enough to torture me:

I left him well.

Bast. Go bear him in thine armes:

I am amaz'd me thinks, and lose my way

Among the thorns, and dangers of this world.

How easie dost thou take all England up,
 From forth this morsel of dead Royalty ?
 The life, the right, and truth of all this Realm
 Is fled to heaven : and England now is left
 To tug and scramble, and to part by th' teeth
 The unowed interest of proud swelling State :
 Now for the bare-pick'd bone of Majesty,
 Doth dogged warre bristle his angry crest,
 And snarleth in the gentle eyes of peace :
 Now Powers from home, and discontents at home
 Meet in one line : and vast confusion waits
 As doth a Raven on a sick-fallen beast,
 The imminent decay of wrested pomp.
 Now happy he, whose cloak and center can Hold out this tempest. Bear away that child,
 And follow me with speed ; lie to the King :
 A thousand businesses are brief in hand,
 And heaven it self doth frown upon the Land.

Exit.

Actus Quartus, Scæna Prima.

Enter King John, and Pandulph, attendants.

K. John. Thus have I yielded up into your hand
 The Circle of my glory.

Pand. Take again

From this my hand, as holding of the Pope
 Your Sovereigne greatnesse and authority.

John. Now keep your holy word, go meet the French,
 And from his holinesse use all your power
 To stop their marches 'fore we are enflam'd :
 Our discontented Counties do revolt :
 Our people quarrel with obedience,
 Swearing Allegiance, and the love of soul
 To stranger-blood, to forrain Royalty ;
 This inundation of mistempered humour,
 Rests by you only to be qualified.
 Then pause not ; for the present time's so sick,
 That present med'cine must be ministred,
 Or overthrow incurable ensues.

Pand. It was my breath that blew this tempest up,
 Upon your stubborn usage of the Pope :
 But since you are a gentle convertite.

My tongue shall hush again this storm of warre,
 And make fair weather in your blustering Land :

On this Ascension day, remember well,
 Upon your oath of service to the Pope,

Go I to make the French lay down their Arms.

Exit.

John. Is this Ascension day ? did not the Prophet
 Say, that before Ascension day at noon,
 My Crown I should give off ? even so I have :
 I did suppose it should be on constraint,
 But (heav'n be thank'd) it is but voluntary.

Enter Bastard.

Bast. All Kent hath yielded : nothing there holds out
 But Dover-Castle : London hath receiv'd
 Like a kind Host, the Dolphin and his powers.
 Your Nobles will not hear you, but are gone
 To offer service to your enemy :
 And wild amazement hurries up and down
 The little number of doubtful friends.

John. Would not my Lords return to me again
 After they heard young Arthur was alive ?

Bast. They found him dead, and cast into the streets,
 An empty Casket, where the Jewel of life
 By some damn'd hand was rob'd and tane away.

John. That villain Hubert told me he did live.

Bast. So on my soul he did, for ought he knew :
 But wherefore do you droop ? why look you sad ?
 Be great in Act, as you have been in Thought :

Let not the world see fear and sad distrust

Govern the motion of a kingly eye :

Be stirring as the time, be fire with fire,
 Threaten the threatner, and our-face the brow
 Of bragging horror : So shall inferior eies
 That borrow their behaviours from the great,
 Grow great by your example and put on
 The dauntlesse spirit of resolution.

Away, and glister like the god of warre
 When he intendeth to become the field :

Shew boldnesse and aspiring confidence :

What, shall they seek the Lyon in his denne,
 And fright him there ? and make him tremble there ?

Oh let it not be said : forrage, and run
 To meet displeasure farther from the doors,
 And grapple with him ere he come so nigh.

John. The Legat of the Pope hath been with me,
 And I have made a happy peace with him,
 And he hath promis'd to dismis the Powers
 Led by the Dolphin.

Bast. Oh inglorious League :
 Shall we upon the footing of our Land,
 Send fair-play-orders, and make compromise,
 Insinuation, parley, and base truce

To Arms Invasive ? Shall a beardlesse boy,
 A cockred-silken wanton brave our fields,

And flesh his spirit in a warre-like soyle,

Mocking the ayr with colours idely spread,

And find no check ? Let us my Liege to Armes :

Perchance the Cardinal cannot make your peace ;
 Or if he do, let it at least be said

They saw we had a purpose of defence.

John. Have thou the ordering of this present time.

Bast. Away then with good courage : yet I know
 Our party may well meet a prouder foe.

Exeunt.

Scæna secunda.

Enter (in Arms) Dolphin, Salisbury, Melloone, Pembroke,
Bigot, Souldiers.

Dol. My Lord Melloone, let this be coppied out,
 And keep it safe for our remembrance :

Return the president to these Lords again,

That having our fair order written down,

Both they and we, perusing ore these notes

May know wherefore we took the Sacrament,

And keep our faiths firm and inviolable.

Sal. Upon our sides it never shall be broken.

And noble Dolphin, albeit we swear

A voluntary zeale, and an an-urg'd faith

To your proceedings : yet beleieve me Prince,

I am not glad that such a sore of time

Should seek a plaister by contemn'd revolt,

And heal the inveterate Canker of one wound,

By

By making many : Oh it grieves my soul,
That I must draw this mettle from my side
To be a widdow-maker : oh, and there
Where honourable rescue, and defence
Cries out upon the name of Salisbury.
But such is the infection of the time,
That for the health and Physick of our right,
We cannot deal but with the very hand
Of stern injustice, and confused wrong :
And is't not pity, (oh my grieved friends)
That we, the sons and children of this Ile,
Were born to see so sad an hour as this,
Wherein we step after a stranger, march
Upon her gentle bosom, and fill up
Her enemies ranks ? I must withdraw, and weep
Upon the spot of this enforced cause,
To Grace the Gentry of a Land remote,
And follow unacquainted colours here :
What here ? O Nation that thou couldst remove,
That Neptunes Armes who clippeth thee about,
Would bear thee from the knowledge of thy self,
And cripple thee unto a Pagan shore,
Where these two Christian Armies might combine
The blood of malice, in a vein of league,
And not to spend it so un-neighbourly.

Dolph. A noble temper dost thou shew in this,
And great affections wrastring in thy bosom
Doth make an Earthquake of Nobility :
Oh, what a Noble combat hast fought
Between compulsion, and a brave respect :
Let me wipe off this honourable dew,
That silverly doth progresse on thy cheeks :
My heart hath melted at a Ladies tears,
Being an ordinary inundation :
But this effusion of such manly drops,
This showre blown up by tempest of the soul,
Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amaz'd
Than had I seen the vaulty top of Heaven,
Figur'd quite ore with burning Meteors.
Lift up thy brow (renowned Salisbury)
And with a great heart heave away this storme :
Commend these wars to those baby-eyes
That never saw the Gyant-world enrag'd,
Nor met with Fortune, other than at feasts,
Full warm of blood, of mirth, of Gossiping.
Come, come, for thou shalt thrust thy hand as deep
Into the purse of rich prosperity
As Lewis himself : so (Nobles) shall you all,
That knit your sinews to the strength of mine.

Enter Pandulpho.

And even there, methinks an Angel spake,
Look where the holy Legat comes apace,
To give us warrant from the hand of heaven,
And on our Actions set the name of right
With holy breath.

Pan. Hail noble Prince of France :
The next is this : King John hath reconcil'd Himself to Rome, his spirit is come in,
That so stood out against the Holy Church,
The great Metropolis and Sea of Rome :
Therefore thy threatening colours now wind up,
And tame the savage spirit of wild warre,
That like a Lyon fostered up at hand,
It may lie gently at the foot of peace,
And be no further harmful than in shew.

Dolph. Your grace shall pardon me, I will not back :

I am too high-born to be proprieted
To be a secondary at controll,
Or useful serving-man, and instrument
To any Sovereign State throughout the world :
Your breath first kindled the dead coal of warres,
Between this chastiz'd kingdom and my self,
And brought in matter that should seed this fire ;
And now 'tis farre too huge to be blown out
With that same weak wind which enkindled it :
You taught me how to know the face of right,
Acquainted me with interest to this Land,
Yea, thrust this enterprize into my heart,
And come ye now to tell me John hath made
His peace with Rome ? what is that peace to me ?
I (by the honour of my marriage bed)
After young Arthur, claim this Land for mine,
And now it is half conquer'd, must I back,
Because that John hath made his peace with Rome ?
Am I Romes slave ? what penny hath Rome born ?
What men provided ? what munition sent To under-prop this Action ? Is't not I
That under-go this charge ? who else but I,
And such as to my claim are liable,
Swear in this businesse, and maintain this warre ?
Have I not heard these Islanders shout out
Vive le Roy, as I have bank'd their Towns ?
Have I not here the best Cards for the game
To winne this easie match, playd for a Crown ?
And shall I now give ore the yielded Set ?
No, no, on my soul it never shall be said.

Pand. You look but on the out-side of this work.

Dolph. Out-side, or in-side, I will not return
Till my attempt so much be glorified,
As to my ample hope was promised,
Before I drew this gallant head of warre,
And cull'd these fiery spirits from the world
To out-look Conquest, and to winne renown
Even in the jaws of danger, and of death :
What lusty Trumper thus doth summon us ?

Enter Bastard.

Bast. According to the fair-play of the world,
Let me have audience : I am sent to speak :
My holy Lord of Millane from the King
I come to learn how you have dealt for him :
And, as you answer, I do know the scope
And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Pand. The Dolphin is too wilful opposite
And will not temporize with my entreaties :
He flatly sayes, he'll not lay down his Arms.

Bast. By all the blood that ever fury breath'd,
The youth says well. Now hear our English King,
For thus his Royalty doth speak in me :
He is prepar'd, and reason too he should,
This apish and unmannerly approach,
This harness'd Maske, and unadvised Revell,
This unheard sawcinesse and boyish Troops,
The King doth smile at, and is well prepar'd
To whip this dwarfish warre, this Pigmy Armes
From out the circle of his Territories.
That hand which had the strength, even at your door,
To cudgel you, and make you take the barch,
To dive like Buckets in concealed Wells,
To crowch in litter of your stable planks,
To lye like pawns, lock'd up in Chests and Trunks,
To hug with swine, to seek sweet safety out
In vaults and prisons, and to thrill and shake,

Even

Even at the crying of your Nations crow,
Thinking this voice an armed English man.
Shall that victorious hand be feeble here,
That in your chambers gave you chastisement?
No: know the gallant Monarch is in Armes,
And like an Eagle, o're his ayery towres,
To sowle annoyance that comes neere his Nest;
And you degenerate, you ingrate Revolts,
You bloody Nero's, ripping up the womb
Of your dear Mother-England: blush for shame:
For your own Ladies, and pale-visag'd Maids
Like Amazons, come tripping after drummes:
Their thimbles into armed Gantlets change,
Their Needles to Lances, and their gentle hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.

Dol. There end thy brave, and turne thy face in peace,
We grant thou canst out-scold us: fare thee well,
We hold our time too precious to be spent
With such a brabler.

Par. Give me leave to speake.

Bast. No, I will speake.

Dol. We will attend to neither:

Strike up the drummes, and let the tongue of warre,
Plead for our interest, and our being here.

Bast. Indeed your Drums being beaten, will cry out;
And so shall you, being beaten: do but start
An eccho with the clamour of thy drumme,
And even at hand, a drumme is ready brac'd,
That shall reverbrate all, as loud as thine.
Sound but another, and another shall
(As loud as thine) rattle the Welkins ear,
And mock the deep-mouth'd Thunder: for at hand
(Not trusting to this halting Legat here Whom he hath us'd rather for sport than need)
Is warlike John: and in his forehead sits
A bare-rib'd death, whose office is this day
To feast upon whole thousands of the French.

Dol. Strike up our drummes, to find this danger out.

Bast. And thou shalt find it (Dolphin) do not doubt.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Alarums. Enter John, and Hubert.

John. How goes the day with us? oh tell me Hubert.

Hub. Badly I fear; how fares your Majesty?

John. This Feaver that hath troubled me so long,
Lyes heavy on me: oh, my heart is sick.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord: your valiant kinsman Faulconbridge,
Desires your Majesty to leave the field,
And send him word by me, which way you goe.

John. Tell him toward Swinsford, to the Abby there.

Mes. Be of good comfort: for the great supply,
That was expected by the Dolphin here,
A wreck'd three nights agoe on Goodwin sands.
This news was brought to Richard but even now,
The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.

John. Aye me, this tyrant Feaver burns me up,
And will not let me welcome this good news.
Set on toward Swinsford: to my Litter straight,
Weaknesse possesseth me, and I am faint.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, and Bigot.

Sal. I did not think the King so stor'd with friends.

Pem. Up once again: put spirit in the French,
If they miscarry, we miscarry too.

Sal. That misbegotten Divil Faulconbridge,
In spite of spite, alone upholds the day.

Pem. They say King John sore sick hath left the field.

Enter Meloon wounded.

Mel. Lead me to the Revolts of England here.

Sal. When we were happy, we had other names.

Pem. It is the Count Meloon.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly Noble English, you are bought and sold,
Unthred the rude eye of rebellion,
And welcome home again discarded faith,
Seek out King John, and fall before his feet:
For if the French be Lords of this loud day,
He means to recompence the pains you take,
By cutting off your heads: Thus hath he sworn,
And I with him, and many moe with me,
Upon the Altar at St. Edmondsbury,
Even on that Altar, where we swore to you,
Deere amity, and everlasting love.

Sal. May this be possible? May this be true?

Mel. Have I not hideous death within my view,
Retaining but a quantity of life,
Which bleeds away, even as a form of waxe
Resolveth from his figure 'gainst the fire?
What in the world should make me now deceive,
Since I must lose the use of all deceit?
Why should I then be false, since it is true
That I must die here, and live hence, by truth?
I say againe, if Lewis do winne the day,
He is forsworn, if ere those eies of yours
Behold another day break in the East:
But even this night, whose black contagious breath
Already smoaks about the burning Crest
Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied Sunne,
Even this ill night, your breathing shall expire,
Paying the fine of rated Treachery,
Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives:
If Lewis, by your assistance win the day.
Commend me to one Hubert, with your King;
The love of him, and this respect besides
(For that my Grandfire was an Englishman)
Awakes my Conscience, to confesse all this.
In lieu whereof, I pray you bear me hence
From forth the noise and rumour of the field;
Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts
In peace: and part this body and my soul
With contemplation, and devout desires.

Sal. We do beleve thee, and beshrew my soul,
But I do love the favour, and the form
Of this most fair occasion, by the which
We will untread the steps of damned flight,
And like a bated and retired flood,
Leaving our ranknesse, and irregular course,
Stoop low within those bounds we have o're-look'd,
And calmly run on in obedience,
Even to our Ocean, to our great King John.
My arme shall give thee help to bear thee hence,

For I do see the cruel pangs of death
Right in thine eye. Away, my friends, new flight,
And happy newnesse that intends old right Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Dolphin and his Train.

Dol. The Sun of heaven (me thought) was loath to set;
But fad, and made the Western Welkin blush,
When English measure backward their own ground
In faint retire: Oh bravely came we off,
When with a Volley of our needlesse shot,
After such bloody toyle, we bid good night,
And woon'd our tott'ring colours clearly up,
Last in the field, and almost Lords of it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Where is my Prince the Dolphin?

Dol. Here, what news?

Mes. The Count Melloone is slain: The English Lords
By his perswasion are at length falln off,
And your supply which you have with'd so long,
Are cast away, and sunk on Goodwin Sands.

Dol. Ah foul shrew'd news. Beshrew thy very heart:
I did not think to be so sad to night
As this hath made me. Who was he that said
King John did fly an hour or two before
The stumbling night did part our weary powers?

Mes. Who ever spoke it, it is true my Lord,

Dol. Well: keep good quarter, and good care to night,
The day shall not be up so soon as I,
To try the fair adventure of to morrow. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Bastard and Hubert severally.

Hub. Whose there? Speak ho, speak quickly, or I shoot.

Bast. A friend. What art thou?

Hub. Of the part of England.

Bast. Whither dost thou goe?

Hub. What's that to thee?

Why may not I demand of thine affairs,
As well as thou of mine?

Bast. Hubert, I think.

Hub. Thou hast a perfect thought:
I will upon all hazzards well beleve
Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue so well:
Who art thou?

Bast. Who thou wilt: and if thou please
Thou maist be-friend me so much, as to think
I come one way of the Plantagenets.

Hub. Unkind remembrance: thou, and endlesse night,
Have done me shame: brave Souldier, pardon me,
That any accent breaking from thy tongue,
Should scape the true acquaintance of mine ear.

Bast. Come, come: sans complement, What newes abroad?

Hub. Why here walk I, in the black brow of night,
To find you out.

Bast. Brief then: and what's the news?

Hub. O my sweet Sir, news fitting to the night;
Black, fearfull, comfortlesse, and horrible.

Bast. Shew me the very wound of this ill news,
I am no woman, Ile not swoond at it.

Hub. The King I fear is poyson'd by a Monk,
I left him almost speechlesse, and broke out
To acquaint you with this evil that you might
The better arme you to the sodain time,
Than if you had at leisure known of this.

Bast. How did he take it? Who did taste to him?

Hub. A Monk I tell you, a resolved Villaine
Whose bowels suddenly burst out: The King
Yet speaks, and peradventure may recover.

Bast. Who didst thou leave to tend his Majesty?

Hub. Why know you not? the Lords are all come back,

And brought Prince Henry in their company,
At whose request the King hath pardon'd them,
And they are all about his Majesty.

Bast. With-hold thine indignation, mighty heaven,
And tempt us not to bear above our power.

Ile tell thee Hubert, halfe my power this night:

Passing these Flats, are taken by the Tide,

These Lincoln-washes have devoured them.

My self, well mounted, have escap'd.

Away before: Conduct me to the King,

I doubt he will be dead, or ere I come. Exeunt.

Scena Septima.

Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury, and Bigot.

Hen. It is too late, the life of all his blood
Is touch'd corruptibly: and his pure brain
(Which some suppose the souls frail dwelling house)
Doth by the idle Comments that it makes,
Foretell the ending of mortality.

Enter Pembroke.

Pem. His Highnesse yet doth speak, and holds belief,
That being brought into the open aire,
It would allay the burning quality
Of that fell poyson which assayleth him.

Hen. Let him be brought into the Orchard here:
Doth he still rage?

Pem. He is more patient
Than when you left him; even now he sung.

Hen. Oh vanity of sicknesse, fierce extreame
In their continuance, will not feele themselves.
Death having prey'd upon the outward parts
Leaves them invisible, and her siege is now
Against the wind, the which he pricks and wounds
With many legions of strange fantasies,
Which in their throng and presse to that last hold,
Confound themselves. 'Tis strange that death should sing:
I am the Symet to this pale faint Swan.

Who chaunts a doleful hymne to his own death,
And from the Organ-pipe of frailty sings
His soul and body their lasting rest.

Sal. Be of good comfort (Prince) for you are born
To set a forme upon that indigest
Which he hath left so shaplesse, and so rude.

John brought in.

John. I marry now my soul hath elbow-room,

It would not out at windows, nor at doors,
There is so hot a Summer in my bosom,
That all my bowels crumble up to dust :
I am a scribled forme drawn with a pen,
Upon a Parchment, and against this fire
Doe I shrink up.

Hen. How fares your Majestie ?

John. Poyson'd, ill fare : dead, forsook, cast off,
And none of you will bid the Winter come
To thrust his icie fingers in my maw ;
Nor let my Kingdomes Rivers take their course
Through my burn'd bosom : nor intreat the North
To make his bleak winds kisse my parched lips,
And comfort me with cold. I do not aske you much,
I beg cold comfort : and you are so straight
And so ingrateful, you deny me that.

Hen. Oh that there were some vertue in my tears,
That might relieve you.

John. The salt of them is hot.
Within me is a hell, and there the poyson
Is, as a fiend, confin'd to tyrannize,
On unrepreevable condemned blood.

Enter Bastard.

Bast. Oh, I am scalded with my violent motion
And spleen of speed to see your Majestie.

John. Oh Cozen, thou art come to set mine eye :
The tackle of my heart, is crackt and burnt,
And all the throwds wherewith my life should faile,
Are turned to one thred, one little hair :
My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,
Which holds but till thy news be uttered,
And then all this thou seest, is but a clod,
And module of confounded Royalty.

Bast. The Dolphin is preparing hitherward,
Where heaven he knows how we shall answer him.
For in a night the best part of my power,
As I upon advantage did remove,
Were in the Washes all unwarily,
Devoured by the unexpected flood.

Sal. You breath these dead news in as dead an ear
My Liege, my Lord : but now a King, now thus.

Hen. Even so must I run on, and even so stop.
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a King, and now is Clay ?

Bast. Art thou gone so ? I do but stay behind
To do the office for thee, of revenge,
And then my soul shall wait on thee to Heaven,

As it on earth hath been thy servant still.

Now, now you Stars, that move in your right Spheres,
Where be your powers ? Shew now your mended faiths,
And instantly return with me again,
To push destruction, and perpetual shame
Out of the weak door of our fainting Land :
Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be sought,
The Dolphin rages at our very heels.

Sal. It seems you know not then so much as we,
The Cardinal Pandulph is within at rest,
Who half an hour since came from the Dolphin,
And brings from him such offers of our peace,
As we with honour and respect may take,
With purpose presently to leave this warre.

Bast. He will the rather do it, when he sees
Our selves well finew'd to our defence.

Sal. Nay, 'tis in a manner done already,
For many carriages he hath dispatch'd
To the Sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel
To the disposing of the Cardinal,
With whom your self, my self, and other Lords,
If you think meet, this afternoon will post
To consummate this businesse happily.

Bast. Let it be so, and you my Noble Prince,
With other Princes that may best be spar'd,
Shall wait upon your Fathers funeral.

Hen. At Worcester must his body be interr'd,
For so he will'd it.

Bast. Thither shall it then,
And happily may your sweet self put on
The lineal state, and glory of the Land,
To whom with all submission on my knee,
I do bequeath my faithful services
And true subjection everlastingly.

Sal. And the like tender of our love we make
To rest without a spot for evermore.

Hen. I have a kind soul that would give thanks,
And knows not how to do it but with tears.

Bast. Oh let us pay the time : but needful woe,
Since it hath been before hand with our griefs.

This England never did, nor never shall Lye at the proud foot of a Conqueror,
But when it first did help to wound it self.

Now, these her Princes are come home again,
Come the three Corners of the world in Armes,
And we shall shock them : Nought shall make us rue,
If England to it self, do rest but true.

Exeunt.

FINIS.

The Life and Death of King Richard the Second.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter King Richard, John of Gaunt, with other Nobles and Attendants.

King Richard.

Old John of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaster,
Hast thou according to thy oath and band,
Brought hither Henry Herford thy bold son:
Here to make good the boisterous late appeal,
Which then our leasure would not let us hear,
Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Gaunt. I have my Liege.

King. Tell me moreover, hast thou sounded him,
If he appeal the Duke on ancient malice,
Or worthily as a good Subject should,
On some known ground of treachery in him.

Gaunt. As neer as I could sift him on that argument,
On some apparent danger seen in him,
Aym'd at your Highnesse, no inveterate malice.

King. Then call them to our presence face to face,
And frowning brow to brow, our selves will hear
Th'accuser, and the accused freely speak;
High stomach'd are they both, and full of ire.
In rage, deaf as the sea; hasty as fire.

Enter Bullingbrooke and Mowbray.

Bull. Many years of happy daies befall
My gracious Sovereign, my most loving Liege.

Mow. Each day still better others happinesse,
Until the heavens envying earths good hap,
Adde an immortal Title to your Crown.

King. We thank you both, yet one but flatters us,
As well appeareth by the cause you come,
Namely to appeal each other of high Treason.

Cousin of Hereford what dost thou object
Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Bull. First, heaven be the record to my speech,
In the devotion of a Subjects love,
Tending the precious safety of my Prince,
And free from other mis-begotten hate,
Come I appealant to this Princely presence.
Now Thomas Mowbray do I turn to thee,
And mark my greeting well: for what I speak,
My body shall make good upon this earth,
Or my Divine soul answer it in heaven.
Thou art a Traitor and a miscreant;
Too good to be so, and too bad to live;
Since the more fair and Cristall is the skie,

The uglier seem the clouds that in it flye:
Once more, the more to aggravate the note,
With a foule Traitors name stuffe I thy throat,
And wish (so please my Sovereigne) ere I move, (prove.
What my tongue speaks, my right drawn sword may

Mow. Let not my cool words here accuse my zeale:

'Tis not the Tryal of a womans warre,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain:
The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this.

Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,
As to be husht, and nought at all to say.
First the fair reverence of your Highnesse curbs me,
From giving reins and spurs to my free speech,
Which else would post, untill it had return'd
These termes of treason, doubly down his throat,
Setting aside his high bloods royalty,
And let him be no kinsman to my Liege,
I do defie him, and I spit at him,
Call him a slanderous Coward, and a Villaine:
Which to maintain, I would allow him odds,
And meet him, were I ride to run a foot;
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alpes,
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Where ever Englishman durst set his foot,
Mean time, let this defend my loyalty,
By all my hopes most falsly doth he lie.

Bull. Pale trembling Coward, there I throw my gage,
Disclaiming here the kindred of a King,
And lay aside my high bloods Royalty,
Which fear, not reverence makes thee to except,
If guilty dread hath left thee so much strength,
As to take up mine honours pawn, then sloop.
By that, and all the rights of Knighthood else,
Will I make good against thee arme to arme,
What I have spoken, or thou canst devise.

Mow. I take it up, and by that sword I swear,
Which gently laid my Knighthood on my shoulder,
He answer thee in any fair degree,
Or Chivalrous designe of Knightly tryall:
And when I mount, alive may I not light,
If I be Traitor, or unjustly fight.

King. What doth our Cousin lay to Mowbrayes charge?
It must be great that can inherit us,
So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Bull. Look what I said, my life shall prove it true,
That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand Nobles,

In name of lendings for your Highnesse Souldiers,
The which he hath detain'd for lewd imployments,
Like a false traitor and injurious Villain,
Besides I say, and will in battail prove,
Or here, or elsewhere to the furthest Verge
That ever was survey'd by English eye,
That all the Treasons for these eighteen years
Complotted and contrived in this Land,
Fetcht from false Mowbray their first head and spring.
Further I say, and further will maintain
Upon his bad life, to make all this good,
That he did plot the Duke of Glousters death,
Suggest his soon beleevving adversaries,
And consequently like a traitor Coward,
Sluc'd out his innocent soul through streams of blood :
Which blood, like sacrificing Abels cries,
(Even from the tonguelesse Caverns of the earth)
To me for justice, and rough chastisement :
And by the glorious worth of my descent,
This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.

King. How high a pitch his resolution soars :
Thomas of Norfolk, what saist thou to this ?

Mow. Oh let my Sovereign turn away his face,
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his blood,
How God and good men hate so foul a lyer.

King. Mowbray, impartial are our eyes and ears,
Were he my brother, nay, our Kingdoms heir,
As he is but my fathers brothers son ;
Now by my Scepters awe, I make a vow,
Such neighbour-neernesse to our sacred blood,
Should nothing privilege him, nor partialize
The unstooping firmnesse of my upright soul.
He is our subject (Mowbray) so art thou,
Free speech and fearlesse, I to thee allow.

Mow. Then Bullingbrooke as low as to thy heart,
Through the false passage of thy throat ; thou liest :
Three parts of that receipt I had for Callice,
Disburst I to his Highnesse Souldiers ;
The other part reserv'd I by consent,
For that my Sovereign Liege was in my debt,
Upon remainder of a deer account,
Since last I went to France to fetch his Queen :
Now swallow down that lye. For Glousters death,
I slew him not ; but (to mine own disgrace)
Neglected my sworn duty in that case :
For you my noble Lord of Lancaster,
The honorable father to my foe,
Once I did lay an ambush for your life,
A trespasse that doth vex my grieved soul :
But ere I last receiv'd the Sacrament,
I did confesse it, and exactly begg'd
Your Graces pardon, and I hope I had it.
This is my fault : as for the rest appeal'd,
It issues from the rancor of a Villaine,
A recreant and most degenerate traitor,
Which in my self I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurle down my gage,
Upon this overweening traitors foot,
To prove my self a loyal Gentleman,
Even in the best blood chamber'd in his bosom.
In haste whereof most heartily I pray
Your Highnesse to assigne our tryal day.

King. Wrath kindled Gentlemen be rul'd by me :
Let's purge this choller without letting blood :
This we prescribe, though no Physitian.

Deep malice makes too deep incision.
Forger, forgive, conclude and be agreed,
Our Doctors say, this is no time to bleed.
Good Uncle, let this end where it begun,
We'll calme the Duke of Norfolke, you your son.

Gaunt. To be a make-peace shall become my age,
Throw down (my son) the Duke of Norfolks gage.

King. And Norfolk throw down his.

Gaunt. When Harry when ? Obedience bids,
Obedience bids, I should not bid agen.

King. Norfolke, throw down, we bid ; there is no boor.

Mow. My self I throw (dread Sovereign) at thy foot.
My life thou shalt command, but not my shame,
The one my duty owes, but my fair name
Despight of death that lives upon my grave
To dark dishonours use, thou shalt not have.
I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffel'd here,
Pierc'd to the soul, with slanders venom'd spear :
The which no balme can cure, but his heart blood
Which breath'd this poyson.

King. Rage must be withstood :
Give me his gage : Lyons make Leopards tame.

Mow. Yea, but not change his spots: take but my shame,
And I resigne my gage. My deer, deer Lord,
The purest treasure mortal times afford,
Is spotlesse reputation : that away,
Men are but gilded loam, or painted clay.
A Jewell in a ten-times barr'd up Chest,
Is a bold spirit in a loyal brest.
Mine honour is my life, both grow in one :
Take honour from me, and my life is done.
Then (deer my Liege) mine honour let me try,
In that I live ; and for that will I dye.

King. Cousin, throw down your gage,
Doe you begin.

Bul. Oh heaven defend my soul from such foul sin.
Shall I seem Crest-faln in my fathers fight,
Or with pale beggar'd fear impeach my right
Before this out-dar'd dastard ? Ere my tongue,
Shall wound mine honour with such feeble wrong,
Or sound so base a parle : my teeth shall tear
The slavish motive of recanting fear,
And spit it bleeding in his high disgrace,
Where shame doth harbour, even in Mowbrays face.

Exit Gaunt.

King. We were not born to sue, but to command,
Which since we cannot doe to make you friends,
Be ready, (as your lives shall answer it)
At Coventree, upon Saint Lamberts day :
There shall your swords and Lances arbitrate
The swelling difference of your settled hate :
Since we cannot atone you, you shall see
Justice designe the Victors Chivalry.
Lord Marshal command our Officers at Arms,
Be ready to direct these home Alarmes.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Gaunt, and Dutchesse of Gloucester.

Gaunt. Alas, the part I had in Glousters blood,
Doth more sollicite me than your exclams,
To stirre against the Butchers of his life.

But

But since correction lyeth in those hands
Which made the fault that we cannot correct
Put we our quarrell to the will of Heaven,
Who when they see the hours ripe on earth,
Will rain hot vengeance on offenders heads.

Duc. Findes brotherhood in thee no sharper spur? Hath love in thy old blood no living fire?
Edwards seven sons (whereof thy self art one)
Were as seven Vials of his sacred blood.
Or seven fair branches springing from one root:
Some of those seven are dri'd by natures course,
Some of those branches by the definies cut:
But Thomas, my deer Lord, my life, my Gloster;
One Viall full of Edwards Sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most Royal root
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;
Is hackt down, and his Summer leaves all vaded
By Envies hand, and Murders bloody Axe.
Ah Gaunt? His blood was thine, that bed, that womb,
That mettle, that self-mould that fashion'd thee,
Made him a man: and though thou liv'st and breath'st;
Yet art thou slain in him: thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy Fathers death,
In that thou see'st thy wretched brother die,
Who was the modell of thy Fathers life.
Call it not patience (Gaunt) it is despair,
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd,
Thou shew'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee:
That which in mean men, we intitle patience
Is pale cold cowardesse in noble breasts:
What shall I say, to safegard thine own life,
The best way is to venge my Glosters death.

Gaunt. Heavens is the quarrell: for heavens substitute,
His Deputy anointed in his fight,
Hath caus'd his death, the which if wrongfully
Let heaven revenge: for I may never lift
An angry arme against his Minister.

Duc. Where then (alas) may I complain my self?

Gaunt. To heaven, the widows Champion to defence.

Duc. Why then I will: farewell old Gaunt.
Thou go'st to Covenrey, there to behold
Our Cousin Hereford, and fell Mowbray fight:
O sit my Husbands wrongs on Herefords spear,
That it may enter butcher Mowbrayes brest:
Or if misfortune miss the first career,
Be Mowbrayes sins so heavy in his bosom,
That they may break his foaming Coursers back,
And throw the Rider headlong in the Lists,
A Caytiffe recreant to my Cousin Hereford.
Farewell old Gaunt, thy sometimes brothers wife
With her companion Grief, must end her life.

Gaunt. Sister farewell: I must to Covenrey,
As much good stay with thee, as go with me.

Duc. Yet one word more, Grief bounderh where it fals,
Not with the empty hollownesse but weight:
I take my leave, before I have begun,
For sorrow ends not: when it seemeth done.
Commend me to my Brother Edward York.
Loe, this is all: nay yet depart not so,
Though this be all, do not so quickly go,
I shall remember more. Bid him, Oh, what?
With all good speed at Plashie visit me.
Alack, and what shall good old York there see
But empty lodgings, and unfurnish'd walls,
Un-peopl'd Offices, untroden stones?

And what hear there for welcome, but my groans?
Therefore commend me, let him not come there,
To seek out sorrow that dwells every where;
Desolate, desolate will I hence, and dye,
The last leave of thee, takes my weeping eye. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Marshal and Aumerle.

Mar. My L. Aumerle, is Harry Hereford arm'd?

Aum. Yea, at all points, and longs to enter in.

Mar. The Duke of Norfolk, sprightly and bold,
Stays but the summons of the appealants Trumpet.

An. Why then the Champions are prepar'd, and stay
For nothing but his Majesties approach. Flourish.

Enter King, Gaunt, Bushy, Bagot, Green, & others: Then Mowbray in Armor, and Harrold.

Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder Champion
The cause of his arrival here in Armes,
Aske him his name, and orderly proceed
To swear him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. In Gods Name, and the Kings, say who thou art?
And why thou com'st; thus Knightly clad in Armes?
Against what man thou com'st, and what's thy quarrell,
Speak truly on thy Knighthood, and thine oath,
As so defend thee heaven, and thy valour.

Mow. My name is Tho. Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk,
Who hither come engaged by my oath,
(Which heaven defend a Knight should violate)
Both to defend my loyalty and truth,
To God, my King, and his succeeding issue,
Against the Duke of Hereford, that appeals me:
And by the Grace of God and this mine Arme,
To prove him (in defending of my self)
A Traitor to my God, my King, and me;
And as I truly fight, defend me heaven.

Tucket. Enter Hereford, and Harrold.

Rich. Marshal: Aske yonder Knight in Armes,
Both who he is, and why he cometh hither,
Thus placed in habiliments of warre:
And formally according to our Law
Depose him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. What is thy name, & wherefore com'st thou hither
Before King Richard in his Royal Lists?
Against whom com'st thou? and what's thy quarel?
Speak like a true Knight, so defend thee heaven.

Bull. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Am I, who ready here do stand in Arms,
To prove by heavens grace, and my bodies valour,
In Lists, on Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolk,
That he's a Traitor foul and dangerous,
To God of heaven, King Richard, and to me,
And as I truly fight, defend me heaven.

Mar. On pain of death, no person be so bold,
Or daring hardy as to touch the Lists,
Except the Marshal, and such officers
Appointed to direct these fair designs.

Bull. Lord Marshal, let me kiss my Sovereigns hand,
And bow my knee before his Majesty:
For Mowbray and my self are like two men,
That vow a long and weary pilgrimage,

E c

Then

Then let us take a ceremonious leave
And loving farewell of our several friends.

Mar. The Appealant in all duty greets your Highnesse.
And craves to kisse your hand, and take his leave.

Rich. We will descend, and fold him in our arms.
Cousin of Hereford as thy cause is just,
So be thy fortune in this Royal fight :
Farewell, my blood, which if to day thou shed,
Lament me may, but not revenge thee dead.

Bull. Oh let no noble eye prophane a tear
For me, if I be gor'd with Mowbrays spear :
As confident, as is the Faulcons flight
Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight.
My loving Lord, I take my leave of you,
Of you (my noble Cousin) Lord Aumerle ;
Not sick, although I have to do with death,
But lusty, young, and cheerly drawing breath.
Loe, as at English Feasts, so I regreet
The daintiest last, to make the end most sweeter.
Oh thou the earthy author of my blood,
Whose youthful spirit in me regenerate,
Doth with a two-fold vigor lift me up
To reach at victory above my head,
Adde proof unto mine Armour with thy Prayers,
And with thy blessings steel my Lances point,
That it may enter Mowbrays waxen coat,
And furnish new the name of John a Gaunt
Even in the lusty haviour of his sonne.

Gaunt. Heaven in thy good cause make thee prosp'rous,
Be swift like lightning in the execution,
And let thy blows doubly redoubled,
Fall like amazing thunder on the Caske
Of thy amaz'd pernicious enemy.
Rouse up thy youthful Blood, be valiant, and live.

Bull. Mine innocence, and Sr. George to thrive.

Mow. How ever heaven or fortune cast my lot,
There lives, or dies, true to King Richards Throne,
A loyal, just, and upright Gentleman :
Never did Captain with a freer heart
Cast off his chains of bondage, and embrace
His golden uncontroul'd enfranchisement,
More than my dancing soul doth celebrate
This Feast of Battle, with mine adversary.
Most mighty Liege, and my companion Peers,
Take from my mouth, the wish of happy yeers,
As gentle, and as jocond, as to jest,
Go I to fight : Truth, hath a quiet brest.

Rich. Farewell my Lord, securely I espy
Vertue with valour, couched in thine eye :
Order the trial Marshal, and begin.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster and Derby,
Receive thy Launce, and Heaven defend thy right.

Bull. Strong as a Tower in hope, I cry Amen.

Mar. Goe bear this Launce to Thomas Duke of Norfolk.

1. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster and Derby,
Stands here for God, his Sovereign, and himself,
On pain to be found false and recreant,
To prove the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray,
A Traitor to his God, his King, and him,
And dares him to set forward to the fight.

2. Har. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolk
On pain to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himself, and to approve
Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his Sovereign, and to him disloyal :
Couragiously, and with a free desire,

Attending but the signall to begin. A charge sounded.

Mar. Sound trumpets, and set forward Combatants :
Stay, the King hath thrown his Warder down.

Rich. Let them lay by their Helmers, and their Spears,
And both return back to their Chairs again :
Withdraw with us, and let the Trumpets sound,
While we return these Dukes what we decree.

A long Flourish.

Draw neer and list
What with our Councel we have done.
For that our Kingdoms earth should not be soyl'd
With that deer blood which it hath fostered,
And for our eyes do hate the dire aspect
Of civil wounds plough'd up with neighbours swords,
Which so rous'd up with boisterous untun'd Drums,
With harsh resounding Trumpets dreadful bray,
And grating shock of wrathful iron Arms,
Might from our quiet Confiners fright fair Peace,
And make us wade even in our kindreds blood :
Therefore, we banish you our Territories.
You Cousin Hereford, upon pain of death,
Till twice five Summers have enrich'd our fields,
Shall not regret our fair dominions,
But tread the stranger paths of banishment.

Bull. Your will be done : This must my comfort be,
That Sun that warms you here, shall shine on me :
And those his golden beams to you here lent,
Shall point on me, and gild my banishment.

Rich. Norfolk : for thee remains a heavier doom,
Which I with some unwillingnesse pronounce,
The slye slow hours shall not determinate.
The datelesse limit of thy deer exile :
The hopelesse word, of never to return,
Breathe I against thee, upon pain of life.

Mow. A heavy sentence, my most Sovereign Liege,
And all unlook'd for from your Highnesse mouth :
A deerer merit, not so deep a maim,
As to be cast forth in the common air
Have I deserved at your Highnesse hands.
The language I have learn'd these forty years
(My native English) now I must forgo,
And now my tongues use is to me no more,
Than an unstringed Violl, or a Harp,
Or like a cunning Instrument cas'd up,
Or being open, put into his hands
That knows no touch to tune the harmony.
Within my mouth you have engoal'd my tongue,
Doubly perculist with my teeth and lips,
And dull, unfeeling, barren ignorance,
Is made my Goaler to attend on me :

I am too old to fawn upon a Nurse,
Too farre in yeats to be a pupil now :
What is thy sentence then, but speechlesse death,
Which robs my tongue from breathing native breath ?

Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate,
After our sentence, plaining comes too late.

Mow. Then thus I turn me from my Countries light
To dwell in solemn shades of endlesse night.

Rich. Return again, and take an oath with thee
Lay on our Royal sword, your banish'd hands ;
Swear by the duty that you owe to heaven
(Our part therein we banish with your selves)
To keep the Oath that we administer :
You never shall (so help you Truth, and Heaven)
Embrace each others love in banishment,
Nor ever look upon each others face,

Nor ever write, regret, or reconcile
This lowring tempest of your home-bred hate,
Nor ever by advised purpose meet,
To plot, contrive, or complot any ill,
'Gainst Us, our State, our Subjects, or our Land.

Bul. I swear.

Mow. And I, to keep all this.

Bull. Norfolk, so farre, as to mine enemy;
By this time (had the King permitted us)
One of our souls had wandred in the air,
Banish'd this frail sepulcher of our flesh,
As now our flesh is banish'd from this Land.
Confesse thy Treasons, ere thou fly this Realm,
Since thou hast farre to go, bear not along
The clogging burthen of a guilty soul.

Mow. No Bullingbrooke: if ever I were Traitor,
My name be blotted from the book of Life,
And I from heaven banish'd, as from hence:
But what thou art, heaven, thou, and I do know,
And all too soon (I fear) the King shall rue.
Farewell (my Liege) now no way can I stray,
Save back to England, all the worlds my way.

Rich. Uncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy grieved heart: thy sad aspect,
Hath from the number of his banish'd years
Pluck'd four away: Six frozen Winters spent,
Return with welcome home from banishment.

Bull. How long a time lies in one little word:
Four lagging Winters, and four wanton Springs
End in a word, such is the breath of Kings.

Gaunt. I thank my Liege, that in regard of me
He shortens four years of my sons exile:
But little vantage shall I reap thereby.
For ere the six years that he hath to spend,
Can change the Moons, and bring their times about,
My oyl-dri'd Lamp, and time-bewasted light
Shall be extinct with age, and endlesse night:
My inch of Taper, will be burnt, and done,
And blindfold death, nor let me see my son.

Rich. Why Uncle, thou hast many years to live.

Gaunt. But not a minute (King) that thou canst give;
Shorten my daies thou canst with sudden sorrow,
And pluck nights from me, but not lend a morrow:
Thou canst help time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage:
Thy word is currant with him, for my death,
But dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.

Rich. Thy son is banish'd upon good advice,
Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gave,
Why at our justice seem'st thou then to lowre?

Gaunt. Things sweet to taste, prove in digestion sowre:
You urg'd me as a Judge, but I had rather
You would have bid me argue like a Father.
Alas, I took'd when some of you should say,
I was too strict to make mine own away:
But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue,
Against my will, to do my self this wrong.

Rich. Cousin farewell: and Uncle bid him so:
Six years we banish him, and he shall go.

Flourish.

Au. Cousin farewell, what presence must not know
From where you do remain, let paper show.

Mar. My Lord, no leave take I, for I will ride
As far as Land will let me, by your side.

Gaunt. Oh to what purpose dost thou hoard thy words,
That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends?

Bull. I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongues office should be prodigal,
To breath th'abundant dolour of the heart.

Gaunt. Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.

Bull. Joy absent, grief is present for that time.

Gaunt. What is six Winters, they are quickly gone?

Bull. To men in joy, but grief makes one hour ten.

Gaunt. Call it a travel that thou tak'st for pleasure.

Bull. My heart will sigh, when I miscall it so,
Which finds it an enforced Pilgrimage.

Gaunt. The fullen passage of thy weary steps
Esteem a soyl, wherein thou art to set
The precious Jewell of thy home return.

Bull. Oh who can hold a fire in his hand
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?

Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,
By bare imagination of a Feast?

Or wallow naked in December snow
By thinking on fantastick Summers heat?

Oh no, the apprehension of the good
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse:

Fell sorrows tooth doth ever ranckle more
Then when it bites, but lanceth not the sore.

Gaunt. Come, come (my son) Ile bring thee on thy way
Had I thy youth, and cause, I would not stay.

Bull. Then England's ground farewell: sweet soyl adieu
My Mother and my Nurse, which bears me yet:

Where ere I wander, boast of this I can,
Though banish'd, yet a true-born Englishman.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter King, Aumerle, Green, Bagot.

Rich. We did observe. Cousin Aumerle,
How farre brought you High Hereford on his way?

Aum. I brought High Hereford (if you call him so)
But to the next high way, and there I left him.

Rich. And say, what store of parting tears were shed?

Aum. Faith none by me: except the Northeast wind
Which then grew bitterly against our face,
Awak'd the sleepy rheume, and so by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a tear.

Rich. What said our Cousin when you parted with him?

Au. Farewell: and for my heart disdain'd that my tongue
Should so prophane the word, that taught me craft

To counterfeit oppression of such grief,
That word seem'd buried in my sorrows grave.

Marry, would the word farewell, had lengthn'd hours,
And added years to his short banishment,

He should have had a volume of farewells
But since it would not, he had none of me.

Rich. He is our Cousin (Cousin) but 'tis doubt,
When time shall call him home from banishment,

Whether our kinsman come to see his friends,
Our self, and Bushy: here Bagot and Green

Observ'd his Courtship to the common people:
How he did seem to dive into their hearts,

With humble, and familiar courtesie,
What reverence he did throw away on slaves;

Wooing poor Crafts-men with the craft of souls,
And patient under-bearing of his fortune,

As 'twere to banish their affects with him.
Off goes his Bonnet to an Oyster-wench,

Exit.

A brace of Dray-men bid God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee,
With thanks my Countrey-men, my loving friends,
As were our England in reversion his,
And he our subjects next degree in hope.

Gr. Well, he is gone, & with him goe these thoughts:
Now for the Rebels, which stand out in Ireland,
Expedient mannage must be made my Liege
Ere further leisure, yield the further means
For their advantage, and your highnesse losse.

Rich. We will our self in person to this waire,
And for our Coffers, with too great a Courr,
And liberal Largesse, are grown somewhat light,
We are inforc'd to farm our Royal Realm,
The renew whereof shall furnish us
For our affairs in hand: if they come short
Our substitutes at home shall have Blank charters:
Whereto, when they shall know what men are rich,
They shall subscribe them for large summes of Gold,
And send them after to supply our wants:
For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter Bushy.

Bushy, what news?

Bu. Old John of Gaunt is very sick my Lord, Sodainly taken, and hath sent post haste
To intreat your Majesty to visit him.

Rich. Where lies he?

Bu. At Ely-houfe.

Rich. Now put it (heaven) in his Physicians mind,
To help him to his grave immediately:
The lining of his Coffers shall make Coats
To deck our souldiers for these Irish warres.
Come Gentlemen, let's all go visit him:
Pray heaven we may make haste, and come too late Exit.

Actus Secundus. Scæna Prima.

Enter sick Gaunt, with York.

Gau. Will the King come, that I may breath my last
In wholsom counsell to his unstaide youth?

Yor. Vex not your self, nor strive not with your breath,
For all in vain comes counsel to his ear.

Gau. Oh but (they say) the tongues of dying men
Inforce attention like deep harmony:
Where words are scarce, they are seldom spent in vain,
For they breath truth that breath their words in pain.
He that no more must say, is listen'd more,
Then they whom youth and ease have taught to glose,
More are mens ends markt; then their lives before,
The setting Sun, and Musick is the close
As the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last,
Writ in remembrance, more then things long past;
Though Richard my lives counsel would not hear,
My deaths sad tale may yet undeaf his ear.

Yor. No, it is stopp'd with other flatt'ring sounds
As praises of his state: then there are found
Lascivious Meeters, to whose venom sound
The open ears of youth doth always listen.
Report of fashions in proud Italy,
Whose manners fill our rardie apish Nation
Limps after in base imitation.

Where doth the World thrust forth a vanity,
So it be new, there's no respect how vile,
That is not quickly buz'd into their ears?
That all too late comes counsel to be heard,
Where will doth muriny with wits regard:
Direct not him, whose way himself will choose,
'Tis breath thou lackst, and that breath wilt thou loose.

Gaunt. Methinks I am a Propher new inspir'd,
And thus expiring, do foretell of him,
His rash fierce blaze of Ryot cannot last,
For violent fires soon burn out themselves;
Small showers last long, but sodain storms are short,
He tires betimes, that spurs too fast berimes;
With eager feeding, food doth choak the feeder;
Light vanity, insatiate cormorant,
Consuming means soon preys upon it self.
This royall Throne of Kings, this scepter'd Isle,
This earth of Majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demy paradise,
This Fortrefs built by Nature for her self,
Against infection, and the hand of warre:
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious stone set in the silver Sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a Moat defensive to a house,
Against the envy of lesse happier Lands,
This blessed plot, this Earth, this Realm, this England,
This Nurse, this teeming womb of Royal Kings,
Fear'd by their breed, and famous for their birth,
Renowned for their deeds, as far from home,
For Christian service, and true Chivalrie,
As is the sepulcher in stubborn Inry
Of the worlds ransom, blessed Maries Son.
This Land of such deer souls, this deer-deer Land,
Deer for her reputation through the world,
Is now Leas'd out (I dye pronouncing it)
Like to a Tenement or pelting Farme
England bound in with the triumphant Sea,
Whose rocky shore beats back the envious sledge
Of watry Neptune, is now bound in with shame,
With Inky blots, and rotten Parchment bonds.
That England that was wont to conquer others,
Hath made a shameful conquest of it self.
Ah? would the scandal vanish with my life,
How happy then were my ensuing death?

Enter King, Queen, Aumerle, Bushy, Green, Bago, Ros, and Willoughby.

Yor. The King is come, deal mildly with his youth,
For young hot Coalts, being rag'd, do rage the more.

Qu. How fares our Noble Uncle Lancaster?

Ri. What comfort man? How ist with aged Gaunt?

Ga. Oh how that name befits my composition:
Old Gaunt indeed, and gaunt in being old:
Within me grief hath kept a redious fast,
And who abstains from meat, that is not gaunt?
For sleeping England long time have I wacht,
Watching breeds leanness; leanness is all gaunt:
The pleasure that some Farhers feed upon,
Is my strict fast, I mean my Childrens looks,
And therein fasting hast thou made me gaunt:
Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
Whose hollow womb inherits nought but bones.

Ric. Can sick men play so nicely with their names?

Gau. No, miserv makes sport to mock it selfe:
Since thou dost seek to kill my name in me,

I mock my name (great King) to flatter thee.

Ric. Should dying men flatter those that live?

Gau. No, no men living flatter those that dye.

Ric. Thou now a dying, saist thou flatter'st me.

Gau. Oh no, thou dyest, though I the sicker be.

Ric. I am in health, I breathe, I see thee ill.

Gau. Now he that made me, knows I see thee ill:

Ill in my self to see, and in thee, seeing ill,

Thy death-bed is no lesser then the Land,

Wherein thou liest in reputation sick,

And thou too careless patient as thou art,

Committ'st thy anointed body to the cure

Of those Physicians that first wounded thee:

A thousand flatterers sit within thy Crown,

Whose compasse is no bigger then thy hand,

And yet engaged in so small a Verge,

The waste is no whit lesler then thy Land.

Oh had thy Grandfater with a prophets eye,

Seen how his sons son should destroy his sons,

From forth thy reach he would have laid thy shame,

Deposing thee before thou wert posselt,

Which art posselt now to depose thy self,

Why (Cousin) were thou Regent of the world,

It were a shame to let his Land by lease:

But for thy world enjoying but this Land,

Is it not more then shame, to shame it so?

Landlord of England art thou, and not King:

Thy state of Law, is bondslave to the Law,

And ———

Rich. And thou, a lunatick lean-witted fool,

Presuming on an Aguespriviledge,

Dar'st with thy frozen admonition

Make pale our cheek, chafing the Royal blood

With fury, from his native residence?

Now by my Seats right Royal Majesty,

Wer't thou not brother to great Edwards son,

This tongue that runs so roundly in thy head,

Should run thy head from thy unreverent shoulders.

Gau. Oh spare me not, my brother Edwards son,

For that I was his father Edwards son:

That blood already (like the Pellican)

Thou hast rapt out, and drunkenly carows'd.

My brother Gloucester, plain well meaning soul

(Whom fair befall in heaven 'mongst happy souls)

May be a president and witness good,

That thou respect'st not spilling Edwards blood:

Joyn with the present sickness that I have,

And thy unkindness be like crooked age,

To crop at once a too long wither'd flower.

Live in thy shame, but dye not shame with thee,

These words hereafter thy tormentors be.

Convey me to my bed, then to my grave.

Love they to live, that love and honour have.

Exit.

Rich. And let them dye that age and sullens have,

For both hast thou, and both become the grave.

Yor. I do beseech your Majesty impute his words

To wayward sickness, and age in him:

He loves you on my life, and holds you deer

As Harry Duke of Hereford, were he here.

Rich. Right, you say true: as Hereford's love, so his;

As theirs, so mine: and all be as it is.

Enter Northumberland.

Nor. My Liege, old Gauunt commends him to your Majesty.

Rich. What saies he?

Nor. Nay nothing, all is said:

His tongue is now a stringlesse instrument,

Words, life, and all, old Langcaster hath spent.

Yor. Be York the next, that must be bankrupt so.

Though death be poor, it ends a mortal wo.

Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he,

His time is spent, our pilgrimage must be:

So much for that. Now for our Irish warres,

We must supplant those rough-headed Kernes,

Which live like venom, where no venom else

But onely they, have priviledge to live.

And for these great affairs do aske some charge

Towards our assistance, we do seize t'ous

The plate, coyn, and revenews, and moveables,

Whereof our Uncle Gauunt did stand posselt.

Yor. How long shall I be patient? Oh how long

Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong?

Not Gloucesters death, nor Herefords banishment.

Nor Gauunt's rebukes, nor Englands private wrongs,

Nor the prevention of poor Bullingbrooke,

About his marriage, nor my own disgrace

Have ever made me sower, my patient cheek,

Or bend on wrinkle on my Sovereigns face:

I am the last of noble Edwards sons,

Of whom thy fater Prince of Wales was first:

In warres was never Lyon rag'd more fierce:

In peace, was never gentle Lamb more mild,

Then was that young and Princely Gentleman:

His face thou hast, for even so look'd he

Accomplish'd with the number of thy hours:

But when he frown'd, it was against the French,

And not against his friends: his noble hand

Did win what he did spend: and spent not that

Which his triumphant fathers hand had won:

His hands were guilty of no kindreds blood,

But bloody with the enemies of his kinne:

Oh Richard, York is too farre gone with grief,

Or else he never would compare between.

Rich. Why Uncle,

What's the matter?

Yor. Oh my Liege pardon me if you please, if not

I pleas'd not to be pardon'd, am content with all:

Seek you to seize, and gripe into your hands

The Royalties and Rights of banish'd Hereford?

Is not Gauunt dead, and doth not Hereford live?

Was not Gauunt just, and is not Harry true?

Did not the one deserve to have an heir?

Is not his heir a well deserving son?

Take Herefords rights away, and take from time

His Charters; and his customary rights:

Let not to morrow then ensue to day,

Be not thy self. For how art thou a King

But by fair sequence and succession?

Now afore God, God forbid I say true,

If you do wrongfully seize Herefords right,

Call in his Letters Patents that he hath

By his Attourneys general, to sue

His Livery, and deny his offer'd homage,

You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,

You loose a thousand well disposed hearts,

And prick my tender patience to those thoughts

Which honour and allegiance cannot think.

Rich. Think what you will: we seize into our hands,

His plate, his goods, his money, and his Lands.

Yor. He not be by the while: my Liege farewell,

E e 3

What

What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell,
But by bad courses may be understood,
That their events can never fall out good.

Exit.

Rich. Go Bushie to the Earle of Wiltshire straight,
Bid him repair to us to Ely-houfe,
To see this businesse: to morrow next
We will for Ireland, and 'tis time I trow:
And we create in absence of our self
Our Uncle York, Lord Governor of England:
For he is just, and always lov'd us well.
Come on our Queen, to morrow must we part,
Be merry, for our time of stay is short.

Flourish.

Manet North, Willoughby, and Rosse.

Nor. Well Lords, the Duke of Lancaster is dead.

Ross. And living too, for now his son is Duke.

Will. Barely in title, not in revenue.

Nor. Richly in both, if justice had her right.

Ross. My heart is great: but it must break with silence
Er't be disburthened with a liberal tongue.

Nor. Nay speak thy mind: and let him ne'r speak more
That speaks thy words again to do thee harm.

Will. Tends that thou'dst speak to th' Duke of Hereford?
If it be so, out with it boldly man:
Quick is mine ear to hear of good towards him.

Ross. No good at all that I can do for him,
Unless you call it good to pity him,
Bereft and gelded of his patrimony.

Nor. Now afore heaven, it's shame such wrongs are born,

In him a royal Prince, and many moe,
Of noble blood in this declining Land;
The King is not himself, but basely led
By flatterers, and what they will inform Meerly in hate 'gainst any of us all,
That will the King severely prosecute
'Gainst us, our lives, our children, and our heirs.

Ross. The Commons hath be pill'd with grievous taxes
And quite lost their hearts: the Nobles hath he fin'd
For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.

Will. And daily new exactions are devis'd
As blanks, benevolences, and I wot not what:
But what o' Gods name doth become of this?

Nor. Wars hath not wasted it, for war'd he hath not,
But basely yielded upon comprimize,
That which his Ancestors achiev'd with blows:
More hath he spent in peace, then they in warres.

Ross. The Earle of Wiltshire hath the Realm in Farm.

Will. The King's grown bankrupt like a broken man.

Nor. Reproach and dissolution hangeth over him.

Ross. He hath not money for these Irish wars:
(His burthenous taxations notwithstanding)
But by the robbing of the banish'd Duke.

Nor. His noble kinsman, most degenerate King:
But Lords, we hear this fearful tempest sing,
Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm:
We see the wind sit sore upon our sails,
And yet we strike not, but securely perish.

Ross. We see the very wrack that we must suffer,
And unavoyded is the danger now
For suffering so the cases of our wrack.

Nor. Not so: even through the hollow eies of death,
I spie life peering: but I dare not say
How neer the tidings of our comfort is,

Will. Nay let us share thy thoughts, as thou dost ours.

Ross. Be confident to speak Northumberland,
We three, are but thy self, and speaking so,

Thy words are but as thoughts, therefore be bold.

Nor. Then thus: I have from Port le Blan
A Bay in Britann receiv'd intelligence,
That Harry Duke of Hereford, Rainald Lord Cobham,
That late broke from the Duke of Exeter,
His brother Archbishop, late of Canterbury,
Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Rainston,
Sir John Norberie, Sir Robert Waterton, and Francis Quoint,
All these well furnish'd by the Duke of Britain,
With eight tall ships, three thousand men of warre
Are making hither with all due expedience,
And shortly mean to touch our Northern shore:
Perhaps they had ere this, but that they stay
The first departing of the King for Ireland.
If then we shall shake off our slavish yoke,
Impe our our drooping Countries broken wing,
Redeem from broaking pawn the blemish'd Crown,
Wipe off the dust that hides our Scepters gilt,
And make high Majesty look like it self,
Away with me in haste to Ravenespurgh,
But if you faint, as fearing to do so,
Stay, and be secret, and my self will go.

Ross. To horse, to horse, urge doubts to them that fear.

Will. Hold out my horse, and I will first be there.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Queen, Bushy, and Bagot.

Bush. Madam, your Majesty is too much sad,
You promis'd when you parted with the King,
To lay aside self-harming heaviness,
And entertain a cheerful disposition,

Qu. To please the King, I did: to please my self
I cannot do it: yet I know no cause
Why I should welcome such a guest as grief,
Save bidding farewell to so sweet a guest
As my sweet Richard, yet again me thinks
Some unborn sorrow, ripe in fortunes womb
Is coming towards me, and my inward soul
Which nothing trembles, at something it grieves,
More than with parting from my Lord the King.

Bush. Each substance of a grief hath twenty shadows
Which shews like grief it self, but is not so:
For sorrows eye, glazed with blinding tears,
Divides one thing intire, to many objects,
Like perspectives, which rightly gaz'd upon
Shew nothing but confusion ey'd awry,
Distinguish form: so your sweet Majesty
Looking awry upon your Lords departure,
Find shapes of grief, more then himself to waile,
Which look'd on as it is, is nought but shadows
Of what it is not: then thrice gracious Queen,
More then your Lords departure weep not, more's not
Or if it be, 'tis with false sorrows eye,
Which for things true, weep things imaginary. (seen;

Qu. It may be so, but yet my inward soul
Perswades me it is otherwise: how ere it be,
I cannot but be sad: so heavy sad,
As though one thinking on no thought I think,
Makes me with heavy nothing faint and shrink.

Bush. 'Tis nothing but conceit (my gracious Lady.)

Qu.

Qu. 'Tis nothing lesse : conceit is still deriv'd
From some fore-father grief, mine is not so,
For nothing hath begot my something grief,
Or something, hath the nothing that I grieve,
'Tis in reversion that I do possesse,
But what it is, that is not yet known, what
I cannot name, 'tis namelesse woe I wor.

Enter Green.

Gree. Heaven save your Majesty, and well met Gen-
I hope the King is not yet shipt for Ireland. (clemen)

Qu. Why hop'st thou so? 'Tis better hope he is :
For his designs crave haste, good hope,
Then wherefore dost thou hope he is not shipt?

Gree. That he our hope, might have retir'd his power,
And driven into despair an enemies hope,
Who strongly hath set footing in this Land,
The banish'd Bullinbrooke repeals himself,
And with up-lifted Arms is safe arriv'd
At Ravensturg.

Qu. Now God in heaven forbid.

Gree. O Madam 'tis too true : and that is worse,
The L. Northumberland, his young son Henry Percie,
The Lords of Rosse, Beaumont, and Willoughby,
With all their powerful friends are fled to him.

Bush. Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland
And the rest of that revolted faction, Traitors?

Gree. We have : whereupon the Earl of Worcester
Hath broke his staffe, resign'd his Stewardship,
And all the household servants fled with him to Bullinbrook.

Qu. So Green, thou art the Midwife of my woe,
And Bullinbrooke my sorrows dismal heir :
Now hath my soul brought forth her prodigie,
And I a gasping new delivered Mother,
Have woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow joyn'd.

Bush. Despair not Madam,

Qu. Who shall hinder me?
I will despair and be at enmity
With couzening hope ; he is a flatterer,
A Parasite. a keeper back of death,
Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,
Which false hopes linger in extremity.

Enter York.

Gree. Here comes the Duke of York.

Qu. With signes of warre about his aged neck,
Oh full of careful businesse are his looks:
Uncle, for heavens sake speak comfortable words.

Yor. Comfort's in heaven, and we are on the earth,
Where nothing lives but crosses, care and grief :
Your Husband he is gone to save farre off,
Whilst others come to make his loofe at home :
Here am I left to underprop his Land,
Who weak with age, cannot support my self :
Now comes his sick hour that his surfet made,
Now shall he try his friends that flattered him.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. My Lord, your son was gone before I came,

Yor. He was : why so, go all which way it will :
The Nobles they are fled, the Commons they are cold,
And will I fear revolt on Herefords side.
Sirra, get thee to Plashie to my Sister Gloster,
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound,
Hold, take my Ring.

Ser. My Lord, I had forgot,
To tell your Lordship, to day I came by, and call'd there,
But I shall grieve you to report the rest.

Yor. What is't knave?

Ser. An hour before I came, the Dutchesse di'd,

Yor. Heav'n for his mercy, what a tide of woes
Come rushing on this woful Land at once?

I know not what to do : I would to heaven
(So my untruth had not provok'd him to it)
The King had cut off my head with my brothers.

What, are there posts dispatch'd for Ireland?

How shall we do for money for these warres?

Come sister, (Cosin I would say) pray pardon me:

Go follow, get thee home, provide some Carts,

And bring away the Armour that is there.

Gentlemen, will you muster men?

If I know how, or which way to order these affairs

Thus disorderly thrust into my hands,

Never beleeve me. Both are my kinsmen,

Th'one is my Sovereign, whom both my oath

And duty bids defend : th'other again

Is my kinsman, whom the King hath wrong'd,

Whom conscience, and my kindred bids to right.

Well, somewhat we must do : Come Cozen,

Ile dispose of you. Gentlemen, go muster up your men,

And meet me presently at Barkly Castle ;

I should to Plashy too : but time will not permit,

All is uneven, & every thing is left at six and seven. Exit

Bush. The wind sits fair for news to go to Ireland,

But none returns : for us to levy power

Proportionable to th'enemy, is all impossible.

Gree. Besides our neernesse to the King in love,

Is neer the hate of those love not the King.

Bag. And that's the wavering Commons, for their love

Lies in their purses, and who so empties them,

By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

Bush. Wherein the King stands generally condemn'd.

Bag. If judgement lie in them, then so do we,

Because we have been ever neer the King.

Gree. Well : I will for refuge straight to Bristol Castle,

The Earl of Wiltshire is already there.

Bush. Thither will I with you, for little office

Will the hateful Commons perform for us,

Except like Currs, to tear us all in pieces :

Will you go along with us?

Bag. No, I will to Ireland to his Majesty :

Farewell, if hearts presages be not vain,

We three here part, that never shall meet again.

Bu. That's as York thrives to bear back Bullinbrooke.

Gree. Alas poor Duke, the taske he undertakes

Is numbring Sands, and drinking Oceans dry,

Where one on his side fights, thousands will flye.

Bush. Farewell at once, for once, for all, and ever.

Well, we may meet again.

Bag. I fear me never.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter the Duke of Hereford, and Northumberland.

Bul. How farre is it my Lord to Barkley now?

Nor. Beleeve me Noble Lord,

I am a stranger here in Gloustershire,

These high wild hills, and rough uneven waies,

Draws out our miles, and makes them wearisome :

And yet our fair discourse hath been as sugar,

Making

Making the hard way sweet and delectable :

But I bethink me, what a weary way

From Ravenſpurgh to Cottſhold will be found,
In Roffe and Willoughby, wanting your company,
Which I proteſt hath very much beguil'd

The tediousneſſe and proceſſe of my travel :

But theirs is ſweetned with the hope to have

The preſent benefit that I poſſeſſe :

And hope to joy, is little leſſe in joy,

Then hope enjoy'd : By this, the weary Lords

Shall make their way ſeem ſhort, as mine hath done,

By ſight of what I have, your noble Company,

Bull. Of much leſſe value is my Company,
Then your good words : but who comes here ?

Enter H. Percy.

North. it is my ſon, young Harry Percy,
Sent from my brother Worceſter : whenceſoever.

Harry, how fares your Uncle ?

Percy. I had thought, my Lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the Queen ?

Percy. No, my good Lord, he hath forſook the Court,
Broken his ſtaffe of Office, and diſperſt
The Houſhold of the King.

North. What was his reaſon ?

He was not ſo reſolv'd, when we laſt ſpake together.

Percy. Becauſe your Lordſhip was proclaimed Traitor.

But he, my Lord, is gone to Ravenſpurgh,
To offer ſervice to the Duke of Hereford,

And ſent me over by Barkley, to diſcover
What power the Duke of York had levied there,
Then with direction to repair to Ravenſpurgh,

North. Have you forgot the Duke of Hereford (Boy.)

Percy. No, my good Lord ; for that is not forgot
Which ne're I did remember : to my knowledge,
I never in my life did look on him.

North. Then learn to know him now : this is the Duke.

Percy. My gracious Lord, I tender you my ſervice,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young,
Which elder days ſhall ripen, and confirm
To more approved ſervice and deſert.

Bull. I thank thee gentle Percy, and be ſure
I count my ſelf in nothing elſe ſo happy,
As in a ſoul remembring my good Friends :
And as my fortune ripens with thy Love,
It ſhall be ſtill thy true Loves recompence,
My heart this covenant makes, my hand thus ſeals it.

North. How farre is it to Barkley ? and what ſtirre
Keeps good old York there with his men of Warre ?

Percy. There ſtands the Caſtle by yond tuft of trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard.
And in it are the Lords of York, Barkley, and Seymour
None elſe of name, and noble eſtimate.

Enter Roſſe and Willoughby.

North. Here comes the Lords of Roffe and Willoughby,
Bloody with ſpurring, fiery red with haſte.

Bull. Welcome my Lords. I wot your love purſues
A baniſht Traitor ; all my Treſury
Is yet but unfelt thanks, which more enrich'd,
Shall be your love and labours recompence.

Roffe. Your preſence makes us rich moſt Noble Lord.

Will. And farre ſurmounts our labour to attain it.

Bull. Evermore thanks, th' Exchequer of the poor,
Which till my infant-fortune comes to years,
Stands for my Bounty : but who comes here ?

Enter Barkley.

North. It is my Lord of Barkley, as I gueſſe.

Bark. My Lord of Hereford, my Meſſage is to you.

Bull. My Lord, my answer is to Lancaſter,
And I am come to ſeek that name in England,
And I muſt find that Title in your Town,
Before I make reply to aught you ſay.

Bark. Miſtake me not, my Lord, 'tis not my meaning
To raze one title of your honour out.
To you, my Lord, I come (what Lord you will)
From the moſt glorious of this Land,
The Duke of York, to know what pricks you on
To take advantage of the abſent time,
And fright our Native peace, with ſelf-born Arms.

Enter York.

Bull. I ſhall not need tranſport my words by you,
Here comes his Grace in perſon. My Noble Uncle.

Yor. Shew me thy humble heart, and not thy knee,
Whoſe duty is deceivable, and falſe.

Bull. My gracious Uncle.

Yor. Tut, tut, Grace me no Grace, nor Uncle me,
I am no Traitors Uncle ; and that word Grace,
In an ungracious mouth, is but prophane.

Why have theſe baniſh'd, and forbidden Leggs.

Dar'd once to touch a duſt of Englands Ground ?

But more then why, why have they dar'd to march

So many miles upon her peaceful Boſom,

Frighting her pale-fac'd Villages with Warre,

And oſtentation of deſpised Arms ?

Com'ſt thou becauſe th' anointed King is hence ?

Why fooliſh Boy, the King is left behind,

And in my loyal Boſome lies his power.

Were I but now the Lord of ſuch hot youth,

As when brave Gaunt, thy Father, and thy ſelf
Reſcued the Black Prince, that young Mars of men,
From forth the Ranks of many thouſand French :

Oh then, how quickly ſhould this arm of mine,

Now Priſoner to the Palfie, chaſtiſe thee,

And miniſter correction to thy fault.

Bull. My gracious Uncle, let me know my fault,
On what condition ſtands it, and wherein ?

Yor. Even in condition of the worſt degree,
In groſſe Rebellion, and deteſted Treason :
Thou art a baniſh'd man, and here art come
Before th' expiration of thy time,
In braving Arms againſt thy Sovereigne.

Bull. As I was baniſh'd, I was baniſh'd Hereford,
But as I come, I come for Lancaſter.

And noble Uncle, I beſeech your Grace

Look on my wrongs with an indifferent eye :

You are my Father, for me thinks in you

I ſee old Gaunt alive. Oh then my Father,

Will you permit that I ſhall ſtand condemn'd

A wandring Vagabond : my Rights and Royalties

Pluckt from my Arms perforce, and given away

Toupſtart Unthrifts ? wherefore was I born ?

If that my Coſin King, be King of England,

It muſt be granted I am Duke of Lancaſter.

You have a ſon, Aumerle, my Noble kinf nan,

Had you firſt died, and he been thus trode down,

He ſhould have ſound his Uncle Gaunt a father,

To rowze his wrongs, and chaſe them to the bay.

I am deny'd to ſue my Livery here,

And yet my Letters Patents give me leave :

My Fathers goods are all deſtrain'd, and ſold,

And theſe and all, are all amiſſe imploy'd.

What

What would you have me do? I am a subject,
And challenge Law: Attorneys are deny'd me,
And therefore personally I lay my claim
To mine inheritance of free Descent.

North. The Noble Duke hath been too much abus'd.

Ross. It stands your Grace upon to do him right.

Will. Base men by his endowments are made great.

Yor. My Lords of England, let me tell you this,
I have had feeling of my Cousins wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to do him right:
But in this kind, to come in braving Arms,
Be his own Carver, and cut out his way,
To find out right with wrongs it may not be,
And you that do abet him in this kind,
Cherish Rebellion, and are Rebels all.

North. The Noble Duke hath sworn his coming is
But for his own; and for the right of that,
We all have strongly sworn to give him aid,
And let him nev'r see joy that breaks that oath.

Yor. Well, well, I see the issue of these Arms,
I cannot mend it, I must needs confesse,
Because my power is weak, and all ill left:
But if I could, by him that gave me life,
I would attach you all, and make you stoop
Unto the Sovereign mercy of the King.
But since I cannot, be it known to you,
I do remain as Neuter. So fare you well,
Unlesse you please to enter in the Castle,
And there repose you for this night.

Bull. An offer Uncle that we will accept:
But we must winne your Grace to go with us
To Bristol-Castle, which they say is held
By Busby, Bagot, and their Complices,
The Caterpillars of the Common-wealth,
Which I have sworn to weed, and pluck away.

Yor. It may be I will go with you, but yet I pause,
For I am loth to break our Countreys Laws:
For friends, nor foes, to me welcome you are,
Things past redresse, are now with me past care. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Salisbury, and a Captain.

Cap. My Lord of Salisbury, we have staid ten days,
And hardly kept your Countrey-men together,
And yet we hear no tidings from the King;
Therefore we will disperse our selves: farewell.

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welchman,
The King reposeth all his confidence in thee.

Cap. 'Tis thought the King is dead, we will not stay.
The Bay-trees in our Countrey are all wither'd,
And Meteors fright the fixed Stars of heaven;
The pale-fac'd Moon looks bloody on the Earth,
And lean-look'd Prophets whisper fearful change;
Rich men look sad, and Ruffians dance and leap,
The one in fear, to lose what they enjoy,
The other to enjoy by Rage and Warre:
These signes forerun the death of Kings.
Farewell, our Countreymen are gone and fled,
As well assur'd Richard their King is dead. Exit.

Sal. Ah Richard, with eies of heavy mind,
I see thy Glory like a shooting Starre,
Fall to the base earth from the firmament:
Thy Sun sets weeping in the lowly West.
Witnessing Storms to come, Woe, and Unrest:
Thy Friends are fled to wait upon thy Foes,
And crossely to thy good, all fortune goes. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Bullinbrooke, York, Northumberland, Ross, Percie, Willoughby, with Busby and Green, prisoners.

Bull. Bring forth these men:
Busby and Green, I will not vex your souls,
(Since presently your souls must part your bodies)
With too much urging your pernicious lives,
For 'twere no Charity: yet to wash your blood
From off my hands, here in the view of men,
I will unfold some causes of your deaths.
You have mis-led a Prince, a Royal King,
A happy Gentleman in Blood and Lineaments,
By you unhappied, and disfigur'd clean:
You have in manner with your sinful hours
Made a divorce betwixt his Queen and him,
Broke the possession of a Royal Bed,
And stain'd the Beauty of a fair Queens Cheeks
With tears drawn from her eies, with your foul wrongs.
My self a Prince, by fortune of my birth,
Neer to the King in blood, and neer in love,
Till you did make him mis-interpret me,
Have stoopt my neck under your injuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in forrain Clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment;
While you have fed upon my Seignories,
Dispark'd my Parks, and fell'd my Forrest Woods;
From mine own windows torn my Household Coat,
Raz'd out my Impresse, leaving me no signe,
Save mens opinions, and my living blood,
To shew the world I am a Gentleman.
This, and much more, much more then twice all this,
Condemns you to the death: see them delivered over
To execution, and the hand of death.

Busbie. More welcome is the stroak of death to me,
Then Bullinbrooke to England.

Gree. My comfort is, that Heaven will take our souls,
And plague injustice with the pains of Hell.

Bull. My Lord Northumberland, see them dispatch'd:
Uncle, you say the Queen is at your house,
For Heavens sake, fairly let her be entreated,
Tell her I send to her my kind commends;
Take special care my Greetings be deliver'd.

Yor. A Gentleman of mine I have dispatch'd
With Letters of your love to her at large.

Bull. Thanks gentle Uncle: come Lords away,
To fight with Glendoure, and his Complices;
A while to work, and after holliday. Exeunt.

Scena

Scæna Secunda.

Drums: Flourish, and Colours

Enter Richard, Aumerle, Carlisle, and Souldiers.

Rich. Barkloughly-Castle call you this at hand?

Aum. Yea my Lord, How brooks your Grace the air,
After your late tossing on the breaking Seas?Rich. Needs must I like it well: I weep for joy
To stand upon my Kingdome once again.Deer Earth, I do salute thee with my hand,
Though Rebels wound thee with their Horses hoofs:
As a long parted Mother with her Child,
Plays fondly with her tears, and smiles in meeting;
So weeping, smiling, greet I thee the Earth,
And do thee favour with my Royal hands.Feed not thy Sovereigns Foe, my gentle Earth,
Nor with thy sweets, comfort his ravenous sense
But let thy Spiders that suck up thy venom,
And heavy-gated Toads lie in their way,
Doing annoyance to the treacherous feet,
Which with usurping steps do trample thee.
Yeeld stinging Nettles to mine Enemies;
And when they from thy Bosom pluck a Flower,
Guard it I prethee with a lurking Adder,
Whose double tongue may with a mortal touch
Throw death upon thy Sovereigns Enemies.
Mock not my senselesse Conjurat[i]on: Lords;
This Earth shall have a feeling, and these stones
Prove armed Souldiers ere her Native King
Shall falter under foul Rebellious Arms.Car. Fear not my Lord, that power that made you King Hath power to keep you King, in spite of all.Aum. He means, my Lord, that we are too remiss
Whilst Bullingbrooke through their security,
Grows strong and great, in substance and in friends.Rich. Discomfortable Cousin, knowest thou not,
That when the searching eye of heaven is hid
Behind the Globe that lights the lower World,
Then Thieves and Robbers raunge abroad unseen,
In Murthers, and in out-rage bloody here:
But when from under this Terrestrial Ball
He fires the proud tops of the Eastern Pines,
And darts his Lightning through ev'ry guilty hole,
Then Murthers, Treasons, and detested sinnes
(The Cloak of Night being pluckt from off their backs)
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves.
So when this Thief, this Traitor Bullingbrooke,
Who all this while hath revell'd in the Night,
Shall see us rising in our Throne, the East,
His Treasons will set blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of Day;
But se'f-affrighted, tremble at his sinne.
Not all the water in the rough rude Sea
Can wash the balm from an anointed King;
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The Deputy elected by the Lord:
For every man that Bullingbrooke hath prest,
To lift shrewd S'eel against our Golden Crown,
Heaven for his Richard hath in heavenly payA glorious Angel: then if Angels fight,
Weak men must fall, for Heaven still guards the right.

Enter Salisbury.

Welcome my Lord, how farre off lies your Power?

Salis. Nor neer, nor farther off, my gracious Lord,
Then this weak arm; discomfort guides my tongue,
And bids me speak of nothing but despair:
One day too late, I feare (my Noble Lord)
Hath clouded all my happy daies on Earth:
Oh call back yesterday, bid time return,
And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting men:
To day, to day, unhappy day too late
Orethrows thy Joyes, Friends, Fortune, and thy State.
For all the Welchmen hearing thou art dead,
Are gone to Bullingbrooke, disperst, and fled.

Aum. Comfort my Liege, why looks your Grace so pale?

Rich. But now the blood of twenty thousand men
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled,
And till so much blood thither come again,
Have I not reason to look pale, and dead?
All souls that will be safe, fly from my side,
For time hath set a blot upon my pride.

Aum. Comfort my Liege, remember who you are.

Rich. I had forgot my self. Am I not King?
Awake thou sluggard Majesty, thou sleepest:
Is not the Kings Name, forty thousand Names?
Arm, arm my Name: a punie subject strikes
At thy great glory. Look not to the ground,
Ye Favorites of a King: are we not high?
High be our thoughts: I know my Uncle York
Hath power enough to serve our turn,
But who comes here?

Enter Scroop.

Scroop. More health and happinesse betide my Liege,
Then can my care-tun'd tongue deliver him.Rich. Mine ear is open, and my heart prepar'd:
The worst is worldly loss, thou canst unfold:
Say, Is my Kingdome lost? why 'twas my Care:
And what losse is it to be rid of Care?
Strives Bullingbrooke to be as great as we?
Greater he shall not be: if he serve God,
We'll serve him too, and be his Fellow so.
Revolt our subjects? That we cannot mend,
They break their Faith to God as well as us:
Cry Woe, Destruction, Ruine, Losse, Decay,
The worst is Death, and death will have his day.Scroop. Glad am I, that your Highnesse is so arm'd
To bear the tidings of Calamity.
Like an unseasonable stormy day,
Which make the Silver Rivers drown their Shores,
As if the world were all dissolv'd to tears:
So high above his Limits, swells the Rage
Of Bullingbrooke, covering your fearful Land
With hard bright Steel, and hearts harder then Steel:
White Bears have arm'd their thin and hairlesse Scalps
Against thy Majesty, and Boys with Womens voices,
Strive to speak bigge, and clap their female joynts
In stiff unwieldy Armes: against thy Crown
Thy very Beidf-men learn to bend their Bows
Of double fatal Eugh: against thy State
Yea Distaff-women manage rusty Bills:
Against thy Seat both young and old rebell.
And all goes worse then I have power to tell.Rich. Too well, too well thou tel'st a tale so ill.
Where is the Eul of Wiltshire? where is Bagot?
What is become of Busby? where is Green?

That

That they have let the dangerous Enemy
Measure our Confines with such peaceful steps ?
If we prevail, their hands shall pay for it.
I warrant they have made peace with Bullingbrooke.

Scroope. Peace have they made with him indeed (my Lord.)

Rich. Oh Villains, Vipers, damn'd without redemption,
Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man,
Snakes in my heart-blood warm'd, that sting my heart,
Three *Judas*es, each one thrice worse than Judas,
Would they make peace? terrible Hell make warre
Upon their spotted souls for this offence.

Scroope. Sweet Love (I see) changing his property,
Turns to the fowrest, and most deadly hate:
Again uncurse their Souls; their peace is made
With Heads, and not with Hands: those whom you curse
Have felt the worst of deaths destroying hand.
And lie full low, grav'd in the hollow ground.

Aum. Is Bushy, Green, and the Earle of Wiltshire dead?

Scroope. Yea, all of them at Bristow lost their heads.

Aum. Where is the Duke my Father with his Power?

Rich. No matter where, of comfort no man speak:
Let's talke of Graves, of Worms, and Epitaphs.
Make Dust our Paper, and with Rainy eies
Write Sorrow in the bosom of the Earth.
Let's chuse Executors, and talke of Wills:
And yet not so, for what can we bequeath,
Save our deposed bodies to the ground?
Our Lands, our Lives, and all are Bullingbrookes
And nothing can we call our own, but Death,
And that small Modell of the barren Earth,
Which serves as Paste, and Cover to our bones:
For Heavens sake let us sit upon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of Kings:
How some have been depos'd, some slain in warre,
Some haunted by the Ghosts they have depos'd,
Some poyson'd by their Wives, some sleeping kill'd,
All murther'd. For within the hollow Crown
That rounds the mortal Temples of a King,
Keeps Death his Court, and there the Antique sits
Scoffing his State, and grinning at his pomp,
Allowing him a breath, a little scene,
To Monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looks,
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,
As if this Flesh, which walls about our Life,
Were Brasse impregnable: and humour'd thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little Pinne
Boares through his Castle walls, and farewell King.
Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
With solemn Reverence: throw away Respect,
Tradition, Form, and Ceremonious duty,
For you have but mistook me all this while:
I live with bread like you, feel want,
Taste Grief, need Friends: subjected thus,
How can you say to me, I am a King?

Carl. My Lord, wise men ne're wail their present woes,
But presently prevent the waies to wail:

To fear the Foe, since fear oppresseth strength,
Gives in your weaknesse, strength unto your Foe;
Fear, and be slain, no worse can come to fight:
And fight and die, is death destroying death.
Where fearing, dying, payes death servile breath.

Aum. My Father hath a Power, enquire of him,
And learn to make a Body of a Limb.

Rich. Thou chid'st me well: proud Bullingbrooke I come

To change blows with thee, for our day of Doom:

This ague-fit of fear is over-blown,

An easie task it is to winne our own.

Say Scroope, where lies our Uncle with his Power?

Speak sweetly man, although thy looks be fowre.

Scroope. Men judge by the complexion of the Skie

The stare and inclination of the day,

So may you by my dull and heavy eye:

My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say:

I play the Torturer, by small and small

To lengthen out the worst, that must be spoken.

Your Uncle York is joyn'd with Bullingbrooke,

And all your Northern Castles yielded up,

And all your Southern Gentlemen in Arms

Upon his faction.

Rich. Thou hast said enough.

B-shrew thee Cousin, which didst lead me forth

Of that sweet way I was in, to despair:

What say you now? What comfort have we now?

By heaven Ile hate him everlastingly

That bids me be of comfort any more.

Go to Flin-Castle, there Ile pine away,

A King, Woes slave, shall Kingly woe obey:

That Power I have, discharge, and let 'em goe

To ear the Land, that hath some hope to grow,

For I have none. Let no man speak again

To alter this, for counsell is but vain.

Aum. My Liege, one word.

Rich. He does me double wrong,

That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue.

Discharge my followers: let them hence away,

From Richards Nighr, to Bullingbrooks fair Day,

Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Bullingbrooke, York, Northumberland, Attendants.

Bull. So that by this intelligence we learn
The Welchmen are dispers'd, and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the King, who lately landed
With some few private friends, upon this Coast.

North. The news is very fair and good, my Lord,
Richard not farre from hence, hath hid his head.

Yor. It would beseem the Lord Northumberland,
To say King Richard: alack the heavy day,
When such a sacred King should hide his head.

North. Your Grace mistakes: onely to be brief,
Left I his Title out.

Yor. The time hath been,
Would you have been so brief with him, he would Have been so brief with you, to shorten you,
For taking so the head, your whole heads length.

Bull. Mistake not (Uncle) farther than you should,

Yor. Take not (good Cousin) farther than you should,
Least you mistake the heavens are ore your head.

Bull. I know it (Uncle) and oppose not my self Against their will. But who comes here?

Enter Piercie.

Welcome Harry: what, will not this Castle yield?

Per. The Castle royally is mann'd, my Lord,
Against thy entrance.

Bull. Roy.

Bull. Royally? Why, it contains no King?

Per. Yes (my good Lord)

It doth contain a King: Kind Richard lies
Within the Limits of yond Lime and Stone,
And with him, the Lord Aumerle, Lord Salisbury,
Sir Stephen Scroop, besides a Clergy-man
Of holy reverence; who, I cannot learn.

North. Oh, belike it is the Bishop of Carlile.

Bull. Noble Lord,

Go to the rude Ribs of that ancient Castle,
Through brazen Trumpet send the breath of Parle
Into his ruin'd ears, and thus deliver:

Henry Bullingbrooke upon his knees doth kisse
King Richards hand, and sends allegiance
And true faith of heart to his royal Person: hither come
Even at his feet, to lay my Arms and Power,
Provided, that my banishment repeal'd,
And Lands restor'd again, be freely granted:
If not, Ile use th'advantage of my power,
And lay the Summers dust with showers of blood,
Rain'd from the wounds of slaughter'd Englishmen;
The which, how farre off from the mind of Bullingbrooke
It is, such Crimson tempest should bedrench
The fresh green Lap of fair King Richards Land,
My stooping duty tenderly shall shew.

Go signifie as much, while here we march
Upon the Grassie Carpet of this plain:
Let's march without the noise of threatening Drum,
That from this Castles ratter'd Battlements
Our fair appointments may be well perus'd.
Me thinks King Richard and my self should meet
With no lesse terror than the Elements
Of Fire and Water, when their thundring smok
At meeting rears the cloudy Cheeks of Heaven:
Be he the Fire, Ile be the yielding Water;
The Rage be his, while on the earth I raine
My Waters on the Earth, and not on him.
March on, and mark King Richard how he looks.

Parle without, and answer within: then a Flourish.

Enter on the Walls, Richard, Carlile, Aumerle, Scroop, Salisbury.

See, see, King Richard doth himself appear
As doth the blushing discontented Sun,
From out the fiery Portall of the East,
When he perceives the envious Clouds are bent
To dimme his glory, and to stain the tract
Of his bright passage to the Occident.

Tor. Yet looks he like a King: behold his eye
(As bright as is the Eagles) lightens forth
Controlling Majesty: alack, alack, for woe,
That any harm should stain so fair a show.

Rich. We are amaz'd, and thus long have we stood
To watch the fearful bending of thy knee,
Because we thought our self thy lawful King:
And if we be, how dare thy joynts forget
To pay the awful duty to our presence?
If we be not, shew us the hand of God,
That hath dismiss'd us from our Stewardship,
For well we know, no hand of blood and bone
Can gripe the sacred handle of our Scepter,
Unlesse he do prophane, steal, or usurpe.
And though you think, that all, as you have done,
Have torn their souls, by turning them from us,
And we are barren, and bereft of Friends:
Yet know, my Master, God Omnipotent,
Is mustring in his Clouds on our behalf,

Armies of Pestilence, and they shall strike
Your Children yet unborn, and unbegot,
That list your Vassal hands against my head,
And threat the Glory of my precious Crown.
Tell Bullingbrooke, for yond me thinks he is,
That every stride he makes upon my Land,
Is dangerous Treason, he is come to ope
The purple Testament of a bleeding Warre;
But ere the Crown he looks for, live in peace,
Ten thousand bloody crowns of Mothers Sonnes
Shall ill become the flower of Englands face,
Change the complexion of her Maid-pale Peace
To Scarlet indignation, and bedew
Her Pastors Grassie with faithful English Blood.

North. The King of Heaven forbid our Lord the King
Should so with civil and uncivil Arms
Be rush'd upon: Thy thrice-noble Cousin,
Harry Bullingbrooke doth humbly kifs thy hand,
And by the honourable Tomb he swears
That stands upon your Royal Grandfiers bones
And by the Royalties of both your bloods,
(Currents that spring from one most gracious Head)
And by the buried hand of Warlike Gaunt,
And by the Worth and Honour of himself,
Comprising all that may be sworn, or said,
His coming hither hath no further scope,
Than for his Lineall Royalties, and to beg
Infranchisement immediate on his knees:
Which on thy Royal party granted once,
His glittering Arms he will commend to Rust,
His barbed Steeds to Stables, and his heart
To faithful service of your Majesty:
This swears he, as he is a Prince, is just,
And as I am a Gentleman, I credit him.

Rich. Northumberland, say thus: The King returns,
His Noble Cousin is right welcome hither,
And all the number of his fair demands
Shall be accomplish'd without contradiction:
With all the gracious utterance thou hast,
Speak to his gentle hearing kind commends.
We do debase our self (Cousin) do we not,
To look so poorly, and to speak so fair?
Shall we call back Northumberland and send Defiance to the Traitor, and so die?

Aum. No, good my Lord, let's fight with gentle words,
Till time lend friends, & friends their hopeful Swords.

Rich. Oh God, oh God, that ere this tongue of mine
That laid the Sentence of dread banishment
On yond proud man, should take it off again
With words of sooth: Oh that I were as great
As is my Grief, or lesser than my Name,
Or that I could forget what I have been,
Or not remember what I must be now:
Swell'st thou proud heart? Ile give thee scope to beat,
Since foes have scope to beat both thee and me.

Aum. Northumberland comes back from Bullingbrooke.

Rich. What must the King do now? must he submit?
The King shall do it: Must he be depos'd?
The King shall be contented: Must he lose
The Name of King? o'Gods Name let it go.
Ile give my Jewels for a set of Beads,
My gorgeous Pallace, for a Hermitage,
My gay Apparel, for an Almes-mans Gown,
My figur'd Goblets, for a dish of Wood,
My Scepter, for a Palmers walking Staffe,

My

My Subjects, for a pair of Carved Saints,
And my large Kingdom, for a little Grave,
A little little Grave, an obscure Grave.
Or ile be buried in the Kings high-way,
Some way of common Trade, where Subjects feet
May hourly trample on their Sovereigns head:
For on my heart they tread now, whilst I live;
And buried once, why not upon my head?
Annerle, thou weepst, (my tender-hearted Cousin)
We'll make foul weather with despised tears:
Our sighs, and they, shall lodge the Summer Corn,
And make a dearth in this Revolting Land.
Or shall we play the wantons with our woes,
And make some pretty match with shedding tears?
As thus: to drop them still upon one place,
Till they have fretted us a pair of Graves,
Within the earth: and therein laid, there lies
Two Kinsmen digg'd their graves with weeping eies?
Would not this ill do well? Well, well, I see
I talk but idely, and you mock at me.
Most mighty Prince, my Lord Northumberland,
What saies King Bullingbrooke? Will his Majesty
Give Richard leave to live, till Richard die?
You make a Legge, and Bullingbrooke saies I.
North. My Lord, in the base Court he doth attend
To speak with you, may it please you to come down.
Rich. Down, down I come, like glist'ring Phaeton,
Wanting the manage of unruly Jides.
In the base Court? base Court where Kings grow base,
To come at Traitors Calls, and do them Grace.
In the base Court come down: down Court, down King,
For night-Owls shriek, where mounting Larks should sing.
Bull. What saies his Majesty?
North. Sorrow, and grief of heart
Makes him speak fondly, like a frantick man:
Yet he is come.
Bull. Stand all apart,
And shew fair duty to his Majesty.
My gracious Lord.
Rich. Fair Cousin.
You debase your Princely knee,
To make the base earth proud with kissing it.
Me rather had, my heart might feel your Love,
Than my un-pleas'd Eye see your Courtresie.
Up Cousin, up, your heart is up, I know,
Thus high at least, although your knee be low.
Bull. My gracious Lord, I come but for mine own.
Rich. Your own is yours, and I am yours, and all.
Bull. So farre be mine, (my most redoubred Lord,)
As my true service shall deserve your love.
Rich. Well you deserv'd:
They well deserve to have,
That know the strong't and surest way to get.
Uncle give me your hand: nay, dry your eies
Tears shew their love, but want their remedies.
Cousin I am too young to be your Father,
Though you are old enough to be my Heir.
What you will have, ile give, and willing too,
For do we must, what force will have us do.
Set on towards London:
Cousin, is it so?

Bull. Yea, my good Lord:

Rich. Then I must not say, no

Flourish.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Queen and two Ladies.

Qu. What sport shall we devise here in this Garden,
To drive away the heavy thought of care?

La. Madam, we'll play at Bowls.

Qu. 'Twill make me think the world is full of Rubs,
And that my fortune runs against the Byas.

La. Madam, we'll dance.

Qu. My Legs can keep no measure in delight,
When my poor heart no measure keeps in grief.
Therefore no dancing (Girle) some other sport.

La. Madam, we'll tell tales.

Qu. Of Sorrow, or of Grief?

La. Of either, Madam.

Qu. Of neither, Gidle.

For if of joy, being altogether wanting,
It doth remember me the more of sorrow:

Or if of grief, being altogether had,

It addes more sorrow to my want of joy:

For what I have, I need not to repeat;

And what I want, it boots not to complain.

La. Madam, ile sing.

Qu. 'Tis well that thou hast cause:

But thou should'st please me better, would'st thou weep.

La. I could weep, Madam, would it do you good?

Qu. And I could sing, would weeping do me good,
And never borrow any tear of thee.

Enter a Gardiner, and two Servants.

But stay, here comes the Gardiners,
Let's step into the shadow of these Trees.

My wretchednesse, unto a row of Pinnes,
They'll talk of state? for every one doth so,
Against a Change; woe is fore-run with woe.

Gard. Go bind thou up yond dangling Apricocks,
Which like unruly Children, make their Syre
Stoop with oppression of their prodigal weight:
Give some supportance to the bending twigs.
Go thou, and like an Executioner
Cut off the heads of too fast growing spraves,
That look too lofty in our Common-wealth:
All must be even, in our Government.

You thus imploy'd, I will go root away
The noisom weeds that without profit suck
The soyles fertility from wholsom Flowers.

Ser. Why should we in the compasse of a Pale,
Keep Law and Form, and due Proportion,
Shewing as in a Modell our firm state?
When our Sea-walled Garden, (the whole Land,)
Is full of weeds, her fairest Flowers choakt up,
Her fruit-trees all unpruin'd, her hedges ruin'd,
Her Knobs disorder'd, and her wholsome Hearbs
Swarming with Caterpillars.

Gard. Hold thy peace.
He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd Spring,
Hath now himself met with the fall of Leaf.
The weeds that his broad-spreading Leaves did shelter,
That seem'd in eating him, to hold him up,
Are pull'd up, root and all, by Bullingbrooke
I mean, the Earle of Wiltshire, Bushy, Green.

F f

Ser. What

Ser. What are they dead?

Gard. They are,

And Bullingbrooke hath seiz'd the wasteful King.
What pittie is it, that he had not trim'd
And dress'd his Land, as we this Garden at time of year;
And wound the Bark, the skin of our Fruit-trees,
Least being over proud with Sap and Blood,
With too much riches it confound it self?
Had he done so, to great and growing men,
They might have liv'd to bear, and he to taste
Their fruits of duty. All superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughs may live:
Had he done so, himself had born the Crown,
Which waste and idle hours hath quite thrown down.

Ser. VVhat think you the King shall be depos'd?

Gard. Deprest he is already, and depos'd
'Tis doubted he will be. Letters came last night
To a deer friend of the Duke of York,
That tell black tidings.

Qu. Oh I am prett to death through want of speaking:
Thou old Adams likenesse, set to dresse this Garden:
How dares thy harsh tongue sound this unpleasing news?
VVhat Eve? what serpent hath suggested thee,
To make a second fall of cursed man?
VVhy dost thou say, King Richard is depos'd?
Dar'st thou (thou little better thing then earth)
Divine his downfall? say where, when, and how Cam'st thou by this ill tidings? speak thou wretch.

Gard. Pardon me Madam. Little joy have I
To breathe these news; yet what I say, is true;
King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
Of Bullingbrooke, their fortunes both are weigh'd:
In your Lords Scale, is nothing but himself,
And some few vanities that make him light:
But in the Ballance of great Bullingbrooke,
Besides himself, are all the English Peers,
And with that odds he weighs King Richard down.
Post you to London, and you'll find it so,
I speak no more, then every one doth know.

Qu. Nimble mischance, that art so light of foot,
Doth not thy Embassage belong to me?
And am I last that knows it? Oh thou think'st
To serve me last, that I may longest keep Thy sorrow in my breast. Come Ladies goe,
To meet at London, London King in woe.
VVhat, was I born to this! that my sad look,
Should grace the Triumph of great Bullingbrooke!
Gard'ner, for telling me this news of woe,
I would the Plants thou graft'st, may never grow. Exit.

G. Poor Queen, so that thy state might be no worse,
I would my skill were subject to thy curse:
Here did she drop a tear, here in this place
He set a bank of Rem, (sowre Herb of Grace:)
Rem, ev'n for Ruth, here shortly shall be seen,
In the remembrance of a weeping Queen. Exit.

Actus Quartus. Scæna Prima.

Enter as to the Parliament, Bullingbrooke, Aumerle, Nor- thumberland, Percie, Fitz-Water, Surrey, Carlile, Abbot of Westminster. Herault, Officers, and Bagot.

Bullingbrooke. Call forth Bagot.

Now Bagot, freely speak thy mind,
VVhat thou dost know of Noble Glousters death;
VVho wrought it with the King, and who perform'd
The bloody Office of his timelesse end.

Bag. Then set before my face the Lord Aumerle.

Bull. Cousin, stand forth and look upon that man.

Bag. My Lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue
Scorns to unsay, what it hath once deliver'd.
In that dead time when Glousters death was plotted,
I heard you say, Is not my arme of length,
That reacheth from the restless English Court
As far as Callis to my Uncles head?
Amongst much other talke, that very time,
I heard you say, that you had rather refuse
The offer of an hundred thousand Crowns,
Then Bullingbrooke return to England; adding withall,
How blest this Land would be in this your Cousins death.

Aum. Princes and Noble Lords:

VVhat answer shall I make to this base man?

Shall I so much dishonour my fair Starrs.

On equal terms to give him chastisement?

Either I must, or have mine honour spoild

VVith th'Atteindor of his stand'rous Lips.

There is my Gage, the manual Seal of death

That marks thee out for Hell. Thou liest,

And will maintain what thou hast said, is false,

In thy heart blood, though being all too base,

To stain the temper of my Knightly sword.

Bull. Bagot forbear, thou shalt not take it up.

Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the best
In all this presence that hath moved me so.

Fitz. If that thy valour stand on sympathies:

There is my Gage, Aumerle, in Gage to thine:

By that fair Sunne, that shews me where thou stand'st,

I heard thee say (and wantingly thou spak'st it)

That thou wert cause of Noble Glousters death.

If thou deniest it, twenty times thou liest,

And I will turn thy falshood to thy heart,

Where it was forged with my Rapiers point.

Aum. Thou dar'st not (Coward) live to see the day.

Fitz. Now by my soul, I would it were this hour.

Aum. Fitzwater thou art damn'd to hell for this.

Per. Aumerle, thou lyest: his Honour is as true
In this appeal, as thou art all unjust:

And that thou art so, there I throw my Gage

To prove it on thee, to th'extremest point

Of mortal breathing. Seize it, if thou dar'st.

Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off,

And never brandish more revengeful Steel,

Over the glittering Helmet of my Foe.

Surrey. My Lord Fitzwater:

I do remember well, the very time

Aumerle and you did talke.

Fitz. My Lord,

'Tis very true: You were in presence then;

And you can witnesse with me, this is true.

Surrey. As false, by heaven,

As heaven it self is true.

Fitz. Surrey, thou lyest.

Surrey. Dishonourable Boy,

That Lye, shall lie so heavy on my sword,

That it shall render Vengeance and revenge,

Till thou the Lye-giver, and that Lye, do lye

In earth as quiet, as thy Fathers Scull.

In proof whereof, there is mine Honours pawn,

Engage it to the Trial, if thou dar'st.

Fitz.

Fitzw. How fondly do'st thou spur a forward Horse?
If I dare eat, or drink, or breath, or live,
I dare meet Surry in a Wilderness,
And spit upon him, whilst I say he Lyes,
And Lyes, and Lyes: there is my bond of Faith,
To tye thee to my strong Correction.

A I intended to thrive in this new World,
Aumerle is guilty of my true Appeal.
Besides, I heard the banisht Norfolke say,
That thou Aumerle didst send two of thy men,
To execute the Noble Duke at Calice.

Aum. Some honest Christian trust me with a Gage,
That Norfolke lies: here do I throw down this,
If he may be repeal'd, to try his honour.

Bull. These differences shall all rest under Gage,
Till Norfolke be repeal'd: repeal'd he shall be;
(And though mine Enemy) restor'd again
To all his Lands and Seigniories: when he's return'd,
Against Aumerle we will enforce his Tryal.

Carl. That honourable day shall ne're be seen.
Many a time hath banisht Norfolke fought
For Jesu Christ, in glorious Christian field
Streaming the Ensign of the Christian Cross
Against black Pagans, Turks, and Saracens:
And toyl'd with works of War, retr'y'd himself
To Italy, and there at Venice gave
His Body to that pleasant Countries Earth,
And his pure Soul unto his Captain Christ,
Under whose Colours he had fought so long.

Bull. Why Bishop, is Norfolke dead?

Carl. As sure as I live my Lord.

Bull. Sweet peace conduct his sweet Soul
To the Bosom of good old Abraham.
Lords Appealants, your differences shall all rest under gage,
Till we assign you to your dayes of Tryal.

Enter Yorke.

Yorke. Great Duke of Lancaster, I come to thee
From Plume-pluckt Richard, who with willing Soul
Adopts thee Heir, and his high Scepter yields
To the possession of thy Royal Hand.
Ascend his Throne, descending now from him,
And long live Henry, of that Name the Fourth.

Bull. In Gods Name, Ile ascend the Regal Throne.

Carl. Marry, Heaven forbid.

Worst in this Royal Presence may I speak,
Yet best bebecmiug me to speak the truth.
Would God, that any in this Noble Presence
VWere enough Noble to be upright Judge
Of Noble Richard, then true Nobleness would Learn him forbearance from so foul a wrong.
VWhat Subject can give Sentence on his King?
And who sits here, that is not Richards Subject?
Thieves are not judg'd, but they are by to hear,
Although apparent guilt be seen in them:
And shall the figure of Gods Majesty,
His Caprain, Steward, Deputy elect,
Anoynd, Crown'd and planted many years,
Be judg'd by subject and inferiour breath,
And he himself not present? Oh, forbid it, God,
That in a Christian Climate, Soules refin'd
Should shew so heinous, black, obscene a deed.
I speak to Subjects, and a Subject speaks,
Strirr'd up by Heaven, thus boldly for his King.
My Lord of Hereford here, whom you call King,
Is a foul Traytor to proud Herefords King.
And if you Crown him, let me prophesie,

The blood of English shall manure the ground,
And future ages groan for his foul Act.
Peace shall go sleep with Turks and Infidels,
And in this Seat of Peace, tumultuous VVars
Shall Kin with Kin, and Kind with Kind confound.

Disorder, Horror, Fear and Mutiny
Shall here inhabit, and this Land be call'd
The field of Golgotha, and dead mens Skuls.
Oh, if you rear this House, against this House
It will the wofullest Division prove,
That ever fell upon this cursed Earth.
Prevent it, resist it, let it not be so,
Lest Child, Childs Children cry against you, wo.

North. VVell have you argu'd Sir: and for your paines,
Of Capital Treason we arrest you here.

My Lord of Westminster, be it your charge,
To keep him safely, till his day of Tryal.

May it please you, Lords, to grant the Commons Suit?

Bull. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may surrender: so we shall proceed
VWithour suspicion.

Yor. I will be his Conduct.

Exit.

Bull. Lords, you that are here under our Arrest,
Procure your Sureties for your Dayes of Answer:
Little are we beholding to your Love,
And little look'd for at your helping Hands.

Enter Richard and Yorke.

Rich. Alack, why am I sent for to a King,
Before I have shook off the Regal thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet have learn'd
To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my Knee.
Give Sorrow leave a while, to return me
To this Submission. Yet I will remember
The favours of these men: were they not mine?
Did they not sometime cry, All haile to me?
So Judas did to Christ: but he in twelve,
Found truth in all, but one; I, in twelve thousand, none.
God save the King: will no man say, Amen?
Am I both Priest and Clark? well then, Amen.
God save the King, although I be not he:
And yet Amen, if Heaven do think him me.
To do what service, am I sent for hither?

Yor. To do that Office of thine own good will,
Which tyred Majesty did make thee offer:
The Resignation of thy Sate and Crown
To Henry Bullingbrooke.

Rich. Give me the Crown. Here Cousin, seize the Crown:
Here Cousin, on this side my Hand, on that side thine.
Now is this Golden Crown like a deep Well,
That owes two Buckets, filling one another,
The emptier ever dancing in the Ay,
The other down, unseen, and full of Water:
That Bucket down, and full of Teares am I,
Drinking my Griefs, whilst you mount up on high.

Bul. I thought you had been willing to resign.

Rich. My Crown I am, but still my Griefs are mine:
You may my Glories, and my State depose,
But not my Griefes; still am I King of those.

Bul. Part of your Cares you give me with your Crown.

Rich. Your Cares set up, do not pluck my Cares down,
My Care, is loss of Care, by old Care done,
Your Care, is gain of Care, by new Care won.
The Cares I give, I have, though given away,
They tend the Crown, yet still with me they stay.

Bul. Are you contented to resign the Crown?

FF 2

Rich. I

Rich. I no ; no, I for I must nothing be:
Therefore no, no, for I resigne to thee.
Now, mark me how I will undo myself;
I give this he .vy Weight from off my Head,
And this unwieldy Scepter from my Hand,
The pride of Kingly sway from out my Heart,
With mine own tears I wash away my blame,
With mine own hands I give away my Crown,
With mine own tongue deny my Sacred State,
With mine own breath release all dutious Oaths :
All Pomp and Majesty I do forswear :
My Manors, Rents, Revenues, I forgoe ;
My Acts, Decrees, and Statutes I deny :
God pardon all Oathes that are broke to me,
God keep all vows unbroke are made to thee.
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing griev'd,
And thou with all pleas'd, that hast all achiev'd,
Long maist thou live in Richards seat to sit,
And soon lie Richard in an Earthy pit.
God save King Henry, un-King'd Richard saies,
And send him many years of Sun-shine daies.
What more remains ?

North. No more : but that you read
These Accusations, and these grievous Crimes,
Committed by your person, and your followers,
Against the State and Profit of this Land :
That by confessing them, the Souls of men
May deem that you are worthily depos'd.

Rich. Must I do so ? and must I ravel cut
My weav'd-up follies ? Gentle Northumberland,
If thy Offences were upon Record,
Would it not shame thee, in so fair a troope,
To read a Lecture of them ? if thou wouldest
There shouldst thou find one hainous article,
Containing the deposing of a King,
And cracking the strong warrant of an Oath,
Mark'd with a blot, damn'd in the Book of Heaven.
Nay, all of you, that stand and look upon me,
Whil'st that my wretchednesse doth bait my self,
Though some of you, with Pilate wash your hands,
Shewing an outward piety : yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my sower Crosse,
And water cannot wash away your sinne.

North. My Lord, dispatch, read o're these Articles.

Rich. Mine eies are full of tears, I cannot see :
And yet salt-water blinds them not so much,
But they can see a sort of Traitors here.
Nay, if I turn mine eies upon my self,
I find my self a Traitor with the rest :
For I have given here my souls consent,
T'undock the pompous Body of a King ;
Made Glory base ; a Sovereign, a Slave ;
Proud Majesty, a Subject ; State, a Peasant.

North. My Lord.

Rich. No Lord of thine, thou haught-insulting man ;
No, nor no mans Lord : I have no Name, no Title ;
No, not that name was given me at the Font,
But 'tis usurpt : alack the heavy day,
That I have worn so many Winters out,
And know not now what name to call my self.
Oh, that I were a Mockerie, King of Snow,
Standing before the Sun of Bullingbrooke,
To melt my self away in water-drops.
Good King, great King, and yet not greatly good,
And if my word be Sterling yet in England
Let it command a Mirror hither straight,

That it may shew me what a face I have,
Since it is Bankrupt of his Majesty.

Bull. Goe some of you, and fetch a Looking-Glasse.

North. Read o're this paper, while the Glasse doth come.

Rich. Fiend, thou torments me, ere I come to Hell.

Bull. Urge it no more, my Lord Northumberland.

North. The Commons will not then be satisfy'd.

Rich. They shall be satisfy'd : ile read enough,
When I do see the very Book indeed,
Where all my sins are writ, and that's my self.

Enter one with a Glasse.

Give me that Glasse, and therein will I read.
No deeper wrinkles yet ? hath sorrow struck
So many blows upon this face of mine.
And made no deeper wounds ? Oh flaunting Glasse,
Like to my followers in prosperity,
Thou dost beguile me. Was this Face, the Face
That every day under his Household-roof,
Did keep ten thousand men ? Was this the face,
That like the Sun did make beholders wink ?
Is this the Face, which fac'd so many follies,
That was at last out-fac'd by Bullingbrooke ?
A brittle Glory shineth in this Face,
As brittle as the Glory, is the Face,
For there it is, crackt in an hundred shivers.
Mark silent King, the Morall of this sport,
How soon my sorrow hath destroy'd my Face.

Bul. The shadow of your sorrow hath destroy'd
The shadow of your Face.

Rich. Say that again.

The shadow of my Sorrow : ha, let's see,
'Tis very true, my Grief lies all within,
And these external manners of Laments,
Are meerly shadowes to the unseen Grief,
That swells with silence in the tortur'd Soul.
There lies the Substance : and I thank thee King
For thy great bounty, that not only giv'st
Me cause to wail, but reachest me the way
How to lament the cause. Ile beg one boon,
And then be gone, and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtain it ?

Bull. Name it, fair Cousin.

Rich. Fair Cousin ? I am greater than a King :
For when I was a King, my flatterers
Were then but subjects ; being now a subject,
I have a King here to my flatterer :
Being so great, I have no need to beg.

Bul. Yet aske.

Rich. And shall I have ?

Bull. You shall.

Rich. Then give me leave to goe.

Bull. Whither ?

Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your sights.

Bull. Goe some of you, convey him to the Tower.

Rich. Oh good : convey : Conveyers are you all,
That rise thus nimble by a true Kings fall.

Bull. On Wednesday next we solemnly set down
Our Coronation : Lords, prepare your selves. Exeunt.

Abbot. A woful Pageant have we here beheld.

Carl. The woes to come, the Children yet unborn,
Shall feel this day as sharp to them as thorn.

Aunt. You holy Clergy-men, is there no plot ?
To rid the Realm of this pernicious blot ?

Abbot. Before I freely speak my mind herein,
You shall not only take the Sacrament,
To bury mine intents, but also to effect

What

What ever I shall happen to devise.
I see your Brows are full of discontent,
Your Heart of sorrow, and your Eies of tears,
Come home with me to Supper, Ile lay a plot
Shall shew us all a merry day.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Queen, and Ladies.

Qu. This way the King will come : this is the way
To Julius Casars ill-erected Tower :
To whose flint bosom, my condemned Lord
Is doom'd a Prisoner, by proud Bullingbrooke.
Here let us rest, if this Rebellious earth
Have any resting for her true Kings Queen.

Enter Richard, and Guard.

But soft; but see, or rather do not see,
My fair Rose wither : yet look up ; behold,
That you in pitty may dissolve to dew,
And wash him fresh again with true-love tears.
Ah thou, the Modell, where old Troy did stand,
Thou Mapple of Honour, thou King Richards Tomb,
And not King Richard : thou most beauteous Inne,
Why should hard-favor'd grief be lodg'd in thee,
When Triumph is become an Ale-house Guest ?

Rich. Joyn not with grief, fair woman, do not so,
To make my end too sudden : learn good soul,
To think our former State a happy Dream,
From which awak'd, the truth of what we are,
Shews us but this. I am sworn Brother (Sweet)
To grim necessity ; and he and I
Will keep a League till death. High thee to France,
And Cloyster thee in some Religious house :
Our holy lives must winne a new worlds Crown,
Which our prophane hours here have stricken down.

Qu. What, is my Richard both in shape and mind
Transform'd and weaken'd ? hath Bullingbrooke
Depos'd thine intellect ? hath he been in thy heart ?
The Lyon dying thrusteth forth his Paw,
And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o're-powr'd : and wilt thou, Pupill-like,
Take thy correction mildly, kisse the Rod,
And fawn on rage with base humility,
Which art a Lyon and a King of Beasts ?

Rich. A King of Beasts indeed : if aught but Beasts,
I had been still a happy King of men.
Good (sometime) Queen prepare thee hence for France :
Think I am dead, and that even here thou tak'st,
As from my Death-bed, my last-living leave.
In Winiers tedious Nights sit by the fire
With good old folks, and let them tell thee tales
Of wofull Ages, long agoe beride :
And ere thou bid good-night, to quit their grief,
Tell thou the lamentable fall of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their beds :
For why ? the senselesse Brands will sympathize
The heavy accent of my moving tongue,
And in compassion weep the fire out :
And some will mourn in Ashes, some coal-black,
For the deposing of a rightful King.

Enter Northumberland.

North. My Lord, the mind of Bullingbrooke is chang'd.

You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.
And Madam, there is order ta'en for you :
With all swift speed, you must away to France.

Rich. Northumberland, thou Ladder wherewithall
The mounting Bullingbrooke ascends my Throne,
The time shall not be many hours of age,
More than it is, ere foul sin, gathering head,
Shall break into corruption : thou shalt think,
Though he divide the Realm, and give thee halfe,
It is too little, helping him to all :

He shall think, that thou which know'st the way
To plant unrightful Kings, wilt know again,
Being ne're so little urg'd, another way,
To pluck him headlong from th'usurped Throne.
The Love of wicked friends converts to fear ;
That Fear, to Hate ; and Hate turns one, or both,
To worthy danger, and deserved death.

North. My guilt be one my head, and there an end :
Take leave, and part, for you must part forthwith.

Rich. Doubly divorc'd ? (bad men) ye violate
A two-fold Marriage ; 'twixt my Crown and me ;
And then betwixt me, and my married wife,
Let me un-kisse the Oath, 'twixt thee and me :
And yet not so, for with a kisse 'twas made.
Part us Northumberland : I, towards the North,
Where shivering Cold and Sicknesse pines the Climate :
My Queen to France : from whence, set forth in Pomp,
She came adorned hither like sweet May,
Sent back like Hollowmas, or short 'st of day.

Qu. And must we be divided ? must we part ?

Rich. I, hand from hand (my Love) and heart from heart.

Qu. Banish us both, and send the King with me.

North. That were some Love, but little policy.

Qu. Then whither he goes, thither let me goe.

Rich. So two together weeping, make one woe,
Weep thou for me in France ; I, for thee here :
Better farre off then neer, be ne're the neer
Goe, count thy way with sighs, I mine with groans.

Qu. So longest way, shall have the longest moans.

Rich. Twice for one step Ile groan, the way being short,
And piece the way out with a heavy heart.
Come, come, in wooing Sorrow let's be brief,
Since wedding it, there is such length in Grief :
One Kisse shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part ;
Thus give I mine, and thus take I thy heart.

Qu. Give me mine own again : 'twere no good part,
To take on me to keep, and kill thy heart.
So, now I have mine own again, be gone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan.

Rich. We make woe wanton with this fond delay :
Once more adieu ; the rest let sorrow say.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter York and his Dutchesse.

Dut. My Lord, you told me you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you break the story off,
Of our two Cousins coming into London.

Yor. Where did I leave ?

Dut. At that sad stop, my Lord,
Where rude mis-govern'd hands, from Windows tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on King Richards head.

F f 3

Yor. Then

Yor. Then, as I said, the Duke (great Bullingbrooke)
Mounted upon a hot and fiery Steed,
Which his aspiring Rider seem'd to know,
With slow, but stately pace, kept on his course :
While all tongues cry'd, God save thee Bullingbrooke.
You would have thought the very windows spake,
So many greedy looks of young and old,
Through Casements dard'd their desiring eies
Upon his visage : and that all the walls
With painted Imagery had said at once,
Jesu preserve thee, welcome Bullingbrooke.
Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower then his proud Steeds neck,
Bespake them thus : I thank you Countrey-men :
And thus still doing, thus he past along.

Duch. Alas poor Richard, where rides he the whilst ?

Yor. As in a Theater, the eies of men
After a well-grac'd Actor leaves the Stage,
Are idely bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious :
Even so, or with much more contempt, mens eies,
Did scowle on Richard : no man cry'd, God save him :
No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home,
But dust was thrown upon his Sacred head,
Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,
His face still combating with tears and smiles
(The badges of his grief and patience)
That had not God (for some strong purpose) steel'd
The hearts of men, they must perforce have melted,
And Barbarisme it self have pittied him.
But heaven hath a hand in these events,
To whose high will we bound our calme contents.
To Bullingbrooke, are we sworn Subjects now,
Whose State, and Honour, I for aye allow.

Enter Aumerle.

Dut. Here comes my sonne Aumerle.

Yor. Aumerle that was,
But that is lost, for being Richards Friend.
And Madam, you must call him Rutland now :
I am in Parliament pledge for his truth,
And lasting fealtie in the new-made King.

Dut. Welcome my Sonne : who are the violets now,
That strew the green lap of the new-come Spring ?

Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care nor,
God knows, I had as lief be none, as one.

Yor. Well, bear you well in this new-spring of time,
Least you be cropt before you come to prime.
What news from Oxford ? Hold those Jufts and Triumphs ?

Aum. For ought I know my Lord, they do.

Yor. You will be there I know.

Aum. If God prevent nor, I purpose so.

Yor. What Seal is that that hangs without thy bosom ?
Yea, look'st thou pale ? let me see the Writing.

Aum. My Lord, 'tis nothing.

Yor. No matter then who sees it,
I will be satisfied, let me see the writing.

Aum. I do beseech your Grace to pardon me,
It is a matter of small consequence,
Which for some reasons I would not have seen.

Yor. Which for some reasons sir, I mean to see :
I fear, I fear.

Dut. What should you fear ?

'Tis nothing but some bond, that he is enter'd into
For gay apparell, against the triumph.

Yor. Bound to himself ? VVhat doth he with a Bond
That he is bound to ? VVife, thou art a fool.

Boy, let me see the writing.

Aum. I do beseech you pardon me, I may not shew it.

Yor. I will be satisfied, let me see it I say. Snatches it.
Treason, foul treason, Villain, Traitor, Slave.

Dut. What's the matter, my Lord ?

Yor. Ho, who's within there ? saddle my horse.
Heaven for his mercy : what treachery is here ?

Dut. VVhy, what is't my Lord ?

Yor. Give me my boots, I say : saddle my horse :
Now by my honour, my life, my troth,
I will appeach the villain.

Dut. VVhat is the matter ?

Yor. Peace foolish woman.

Dut. I will not peace. What is the matter Son ?

Aum. Good Mother be content, it is no more
Then my poor life must answer.

Dut. Thy life answer ?

Enter Servant with Boots.

Yor. Bring my Boots, I will unto the King.

Dut. Strike him Aumerle. Poor boy, thou art amaz'd,
Hence villain, never more come in my sight.

Yor. Give me my Boots I say.

Dut. Why York what wilt thou do ?

Wilt thou nor hide the trespass of thine own ?
Have we more Sonnes ? or are we like to have ?
Is not my teeming date drunk up with time ?
And wilt thou pluck my fair Son from mine age,
And rob me of a happy Mothers name ?
Is he not like thee ? is he not thine own ?

Yor. Thou fond mad woman :
Wilt thou conceale this dark Conspiracy ?
A dozen of them here have tane the Sacrament,
And interchangeably set their hands
To kill the King at Oxford.

Dut. He shall be none :

VVe'll keep him here : then what is that to him ?

Yor. Away fond woman : were he twenty times my Son, I would appeach him.

Dut. Hadst thou groan'd for him as I have done,
Thou wouldst be more pittifull :
But now I know thy mind ; thou dost suspect
That I have been disloyal to thy bed,
And that he is a Bastard, not thy Sonne :
Sweet York, sweet Husband, be not of that mind :
He is as like thee, as a man may be,
Not like to me, nor any of my kin,
And yet I love him.

Yor. Make way, unruly woman.

Dut. After Aumerle. Mount thee upon his horse,
Spurr post, and get before him to the King,
And beg thy pardon, ere he do accuse thee,
He nor be long behind : though I be old,
I doubt not but to ride as fast as York :
And never will I rise up from the ground,
Till Bullingbrooke have pardon'd thee : Away, be gone. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Bullingbrooke, Percie, and other Lords.

Bull. Can no man tell of my unthrifty Son ?
'Tis full three moneths since I did see him last.
If any plague hang over us, 'tis he :
I would to heaven (my Lords) he might be found ;
Enquire at London, amongst the Taverns there :

For

For there (they say) he daily doth frequent,
With unrestrained loose Companions,
Even such (they say) as stand in narrow Lanes,
And rob our Watch, and beat our passengers,
Which he (young wanton, and effeminate Boy)
Takes on the point of honour, to support
So dissolute a crew.

Per. My Lord, some two days since I saw the Prince;
And told him of these triumphs held at Oxford.

Bull. And what said the Gallant?

Per. His answer was: he would unto the Stews,
And from the common'st creature pluck a Glove
And wear it as a favour, and with that
He would unhorse the lustiest Challenger.

Bull. As dissolute as desperate, yet through both,
I see some sparks of better hope: which elder daies
May happily bring forth. But who comes here?

Enter Aumerle.

Aum. Where is the King?

Bull. What means our Cousin, that he stares
And looks so wildly?

Aum. God save your Grace. I do beseech your Majesty
To have some conference with your Grace alone.

Bull. Withdraw yourselves, and leave us here alone:
What is the matter with our Cousin now?

Aum. For ever may my knees grow to the earth,
My tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth,
Unless a Pardon, ere I rise or speak.

Bull. Intended or committed was this fault?
If on the first, how hainous ere it be,
To win thy after-love I pardon thee.

Aum. Then give me leave, that I may turn the key,
That no man enter till the tale be done.

Bull. Have thy desire.

Tork within.

Tor. My Liege beware, look to thy self,
Thou hast a Traitor in thy presence here.

Bull. Villain, Ile make thee safe.

Aum. Stay thy revengeful hand, thou hast no cause to fear.

Tork. Open the door, secure fool hardy King:
Shall I for love speak Treason to thy face?
Open the door, or I will break it open.

Enter Tork.

Bull. What is the matter (Uncle) speak, recover breath,
Tell us how neer is danger,
That we may arme us to encounter it.

Tor. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know
The reason that my haste forbids me show.

Aum. Remember as thou read'st, thy promise past:
I do repent me, read not my name there,
My heart is not confederate with my hand.

Tor. It was (villain) ere thy hand did set it down.
I tore it from the Traitors bosom, King.
Fear and not Love, begets his penitence;
Forget to pity him, least thy pity prove
A Serpent, that will sting thee to the heart.

Bull. Oh heinous, strong, and bold Conspiracie,
O loyal Father of a treacherous Son:
Thou sheer, immaculate, and silver fountain,
From whence this stream, through muddy passages
Hath had his current, and defil'd himself.
Thy overflow of good, converts to bad,
And thine abundant goodnesse shall excuse
This deadly blot, in thy digressing son.

Tor. So shall my vertue be his vices bawd,
And he shall spend mine Honour with his Shame:

As chrestlesse Sonnes their scraping Fathers Gold.
Mine honour lives when his dishonour dies,
Or my sham'd life in his dishonour lies:
Thou kil'st me in his life, giving him breath,
The traitor lives, the true mans put to death.

Dutcheffe within.

Dut. What hoa (my Liege) for heavens sake let me in.

Bull. What shrill-voic'd Suppliant makes this eager cry?

Dut. A Woman and thine Aunt (great King) 'tis I.

Speak with me, pittie me, open the doore,
A Beggar begs, that never begg'd before.

Bull. Our Scene is alter'd from a serious thing,
And now chang'd to the Beggar, and the King:
My dangerous Cousin, let your Mother in,
I know she's come to pray for your soul sin.

Tor. If thou do pardon, whosoever pray,
More sins for this forgivenesse, prosper may.
This fester'd joynt cut off, the rest rests sound,
This let alone, will all the rest confound.

Enter Dutcheffe.

Dut. O King, beleeve not this hard hearted man,
Love, loving not it self, none other can.

Tor. Thou frantick woman, what dost thou make here,
Shall thy old dugges once more a Traitor rear?

Dut. Sweet Tork be patient, hear me gentle Liege.

Bull. Rise up good Aunt.

Dut. Not yet, I thee beseech,
For ever will I kneel upon my knees,
And never see day that the happy sees,
Till thou give joy: until thou bid me joy,
By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing Boy.

Aum. Unto my Mothers prayers, I bend my knee.

Tork. Against them both, my true joynts bended be.

Dut. Plead he in earnest? Look upon his face,
His eyes do drop no tears: his prayers are in jest:
His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast.
He prays but faintly, and would be deny'd,
We pray with heart and soul, and all beside:
His weary joynts would gladly rise, I know,
Our knees shall kneel, till to the ground they grow.
His prayers are full of false Hypocrisie,
Ours of true zeale, and deep integrity:
Our prayers do out-pray his, then let them have
That mercy, which true prayers ought to have.

Bull. Good Aunt stand up.

Dut. Nay do not say stand up.
But pardon first, and afterwards stand up.
And if I were thy Nurse, thy tongue to teach,
Pardon should be the first word of thy speech.
I never long'd to hear a word till now:
Say Pardon (King) let pittie teach thee how.
The word is short, but not so short as sweet,
No word like Pardon, for Kings mouths so meere.

Tor. Speak it in French (King) say Pardon ne moy.

Dut. Dost thou teach pardon, Pardon to destroy?
Ah my sowre husband, my hard-hearted Lord,
That set'st the word it self, against the word.
Speak pardon as 'tis currant in our Land,
The chopping French we do not understand.
Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue there;
Or in thy pittieus heart, plant thou thine ear,
That hearing how our plaints and prayers do pierce,
Pittie may move thee, Pardon to rehearse.

Bull. Good Aunt stand up.

Dut. I do not sue to stand,
Pardon is all the suit I have in hand.

Bull.

Bull. I pardon him as heaven shall pardon me.

Dur. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee :
Yet am I sick for fear : Speak it again,
Twice saying Pardon, doth not pardon twain,
But makes one pardon strong.

Bull. I pardon him with all my heart.

Dur. A God on earth thou art.

Bull. But for our trusty brother-in-law, the Abbot,
With all the rest of that comforted crew,
Destruction straight shall dog them at the heels :
Good Uncle help to order several powers
To Oxford, or where ere these Traitors are :
They shall not live within this world I swear,
But I will have them once know where.
Uncle farewell, and Cousin adieu :
Your Mother well hath pray'd, and prove you true.

Dur. Come my old son, I pray heaven make thee new.

Exit.

Enter Exton and Servant.

Ext. Didst thou not mark the King, what words he spake ?

Have I no friend will rid me of this living fear :
Was it not so ?

Ser. Those were his very words.

Ex. Have I no friend ? (quoth he :) he spake it twice,
And urg'd it twice together, did he not ?

Ser. He did.

Ex. And speaking it, he wistly look'd on me,
As who shall say, I would thou wer't the man
That would divorce this terror from my heart ;
Meaning the King at Pomfret : Come, let's goe,
I am the Kings friend, and will rid his foe.

Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Richard.

Rich. I have been studying, how to compare
This Prison where I live : unto the World :
And for because the world is populous,
And here is not a Creature, but my self,
I cannot do it : yet Ile hammer't out.
My Brain, Ile prove the Female to my soul,
My soul, the Father : and these two beget
A generation of still breeding Thoughts ;
And these same thoughts, people this little world
In humours, like the people of this world,
For no thought is contented. The better sort,
As thoughts of things Divine, are intermixt
With scruples, and do set the faith it self
Against the Faith : as thus : Come little ones : & then again,
It is as hard to come, as for a Camell
To thred the postern of a Needles eye.
Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plor
Unlikely wonders ; how these vain weak nailes
May tear a passage through the Flinty ribs
Of this hard world, my ragged prison walls :
And for they cannot, dye in their own pride.
Thoughts tending to content, flatter themselves,
That they are not the first of Fortunes slaves,
Nor shall not be the last. Like silly Beggars,
Who sitting in the Stocks, refuge their shame
That many have, and others must sit there ;
And in this thought, they find a kind of ease,

Bearing their own misfortune on the back
Of such as have before endur'd the like.
Thus play I in one Prison, many people,
And none contented. Sometimes am I King :
Then Treason makes me with my self a Beggar,
And so I am. Then crushing penury,
Perswades me, I was better when a King :
Then am I King'd again : and by and by,
Think that I am un-king'd by Bullingbrooke,
And straight am nothing. But what ere I am,
Nor I, nor any man, that but man is,
With nothing shall be pleas'd, till he be eas'd
With being nothing. Musick do I hear ?
Ha, ha ? keep time : How sower sweet Musick is,
When time is broke, and no proportion kept ?
So is it in the Musick of mens lives :

Musick

And here have I the daintinesse of ear
To hear time broke in a disorder'd string :
But for the Concord of my State and Time,
Had not an ear to hear my true Time broke.
I wasted Time, and now doth Time waste me :
For now hath Time made me his numbring clock ;
My thoughts are minutes ; and with sighs they jarre,
Their watches to mine eies, the outward Watch,
Whereto my finger, like a Dials point,
Is pointing still, in cleansing them from tears.
Now sir, the sound that tells what hour it is,
Are clamorous groans, that strike upon my heart,
Which is the bell : so Sighs, and Tears, and Groans,
Shew Minutes, Hours, and Times : O but my Time
Runs posting on, in Bullingbrookes proud joy,
While I stand fooling here, his jack o'th'Clock.
This Musick mads me, let it sound no more,
For though it have holpe mad men to their wits,
In me it seems, it will make wise-men mad :
Yet blessing on his heart that gives it me ;
For 'tis a signe of love, and love to Richard,
Is a strange Brooch, in this all-hating world.

Enter Groome.

Groo. Hail Royal Prince.

Ric. Thanks Noble Peer.

The cheapest of us, is ten groats too deer.
What art thou ? and how com'st thou hither ?
Where no man ever comes, but that sad dogge
That brings me food, to make misfortune live ?

Groo. I was a poor Groom of thy Stable (King)
When thou wer't King, who travelling towards York,
With much adoe, at length have gotten leave
To look upon my (sometimes Royal) Masters face.
O how it yern'd my heart, when I beheld
In London streets, that Coronation day,
When Bullingbrooke rode on Roan Barbary,
That horse, that thou so often hast bestrid,
That horse, that I so carefully have drest.

Rich. Rode he on Barbary ? tell me gentle Friend,
How went he under him ?

Groo. So proudly, as if he had disdain'd the ground.

Rich. So proud, that Bullingbrooke was on his back ;
That Jade hath eat bread from my Royall hand.
This hand hath made him proud with clapping him.
Would he not stumble ? would he not fall down
(Since Pride must have a fall) and break the neck
Of that proud man, that did usurpe his back ?
Forgivenessse horse : why do I rail on thee,
Since thou created to be aw'd by man
V Vas't born to bear ? I was not made a horse,

And

And yet I bear a burthen like an Ass,
Spur-gall'd, and tyr'd by jauncing Bullingbrooke.

Enter Keeper with a Dish.

Keep. Fellow, give place, here is no longer stay.

Rich. If thou love me, 'tis time thou wert away.

Groo. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say.

Keep. My Lord, wilt please you to fall too?

Rich. Taste of it first, as thou wert wont to do.

Keep. My Lord I dare not: Sir Pierce of Exton,
Who lately came from th'King, commands the contrary.

Rich. The devil take Henry of Lancaster, and thee;
Patience is stale, and I am weary of it.

Keep. Help, help, help.

Enter Exton and Servants.

Rich. How now? what means death in this rude assault?
Villain, thine own hand yields thy death's instrument,
Go thou and fill another room in Hell.

Exton strikes him down.

That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire,
That staggers thus my person. Exton, thy fierce hand,
Hath with the Kings blood, stain'd the Kings own land.
Mount, mount my soul, thy seat is up on high,
Whil'st my gross flesh sinks downward, here to dye.

Exton. As full of valour as of Royal blood,
Both have I spilt: Oh would the deed were good,
For now the devil that told me I did well,
Saies, that this deed is chronicled in Hell.
This dead King to the living King ile bear,
Take hence the rest; and give them burial here.

Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Flourish. Enter Bullingbrooke, Yorke, with other Lords and attendants.

Bull. Uncle Yorke, the latest news we hear,
Is that the Rebels have consum'd with fire
Our Town of Cicester in Gloucestershire,
But whether they be tane or slain, we hear not.

Enter Northumberland.

Welcome my Lord: what is the news?

Nor. First to thy Sacred State wish I all happinesse:
The next news is, I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent:

The manner of their taking may appear
At large discoursed in this paper here.

Bull. We thank thee gentle Piercy for thy pains,
And to thy worth will adderight worthy gaines.

Enter Fitzwaters.

Fitz. My Lord, I have from Oxford sent to London,
The heads of Broccas, and Sir Bennet Seely,
Two of the dangerous consorted Traitors,
That fought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.

Bull. Thy pains Fitzwaters shall not be forgot,
Right Noble is thy merit, well I wor.

Enter Piercy and Carlile.

Per. The grand Conspirator, Abbot of Westminster,
With clog of Conscience, and sower melancholly,
Hath yielded up his body to the grave:
But here is Carlile, living to abide

Thy Kingly doom, and sentence of his pride.

Bull. Carlile, this is your doom:

Choose out some secret place, some reverend roome
More than thou hast, and with it joy thy self:
So as thou liv'st in peace, dye free from strife:
For though mine enemy thou hast ever been,
High sparks of Honour in thee have I seen.

Enter Exton with a Coffin.

Exton. Great King, within this Coffin I present
Thy buried fear. Herein all breathlesse lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies
Richard of Burdeaux by me hither brought.

Bull. Exton. I thank thee not, for thou hast wrought
A deed of Slaughter with thy fatal hand,
Upon my head, and all this famous Land.

Ex. From your own mouth my Lord, did I this deed.

Bull. They love not poyson, that do poyson need,
Nor do I thee: though I did wish him dead,
I hate the Murtherer, love him murdered.

The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neither my good word, nor Princely favour.
With Caingo wander through the shade of night,
And never shew thy head by day, nor light.

Lords I protest my soul is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkle me, and make me grow.
Come mourn with me, for that I do lament.

And put on sullen black incontinent:

Ile make a voyage to the holy-land,
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand.

Murch sadly after, grace my mourning here,
In weeping after this untimely Beer.

Exeunt.

FINIS.

The First Part of Henry the Fourth, with the Life and Death of HENRY Surnamed HOT-SPURRE.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter the King, Lord John of Lancaster, Earl of Westmerland, with others.
King.

S O shaken as we are, so wan with care,
Find we a time for frightened Peace to pant,
And breath short winded accents of new Broils
To be commenc'd in Storms afar remote :
No more the thirsty entrance of this Soyl,
Shall dambe her lips with her own childrens blood :
No more shall trenching War channel her fields,
Nor bruise her Flowrets with the armed hooves
Of hostile paces. Those opposed eyes,
Which like the Meteors of a troubled Heaven
All of one Nature, of one Substance bred,
Did lately meet in the intestine shock,
And furious cloze of civil Burchery,
Shall now in mutual well-beseeming ranks
March all one way, and be no more oppos'd
Against Acquaintance, Kindred, and Allies.
The edge of War, like an ill-sheathed knife,
No more shall cut his Master. Therefore Friends,
As far as to the Sepulcher of Christ,
Whose Souldier now, under whose blessed Cross
We are impressed, and engag'd to fight,
Forthwith a power of English shall we levy,
Whose armes were moulded in their Mothers Womb,
To chase these Pagans in those holy Fields,
Over whose Acres walk'd those blessed feet
Which fourteen hundred years ago were nail'd
For our advantage on the bitter Cross.
But this our purpose is a twelvemonth old,
And bootless 'tis to tell you we will go :
Therefore we meet not now. Then let me hear
Of you my gentle Cousin Westmerland,
What yesternight our Council did decree,
In forwarding this dear expedience.

West. My Liege : This hast was hot in question,
And many limits of the Charge set down
But yesternight : when all athwart there came
A Post from Wales, loaden with heavy News ;
Whose worst was, That the Noble Mortimer,
Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight
Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken,
And a thousand of his people butchered :

Upon whose dead corps there was such misuse,
Such beastly, shameless transformation,
By those Welshwomen done, as may not be (Without much shame) re-told or spoken of.

King. It seems then, that the tidings of this broil,
Brake off our business for the Holy Land.

West. This matcht, with other like, my gracious Lord,
Far more uneven and unwelcome News
Came from the North, and thus it did report :
On Holy-Rood day, the gallant Hotspur there,
Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
That ever-valiant and approved Scot,
At Holmedon met, where they did spend
A sad and bloody hour :
As by discharge of their Artillery,
And shape of likelihood the newes was told :
For he that brought them, in the very hear
And pride of their contention, did take horse,
Uncertain of the issue any way.

King. Here is a dear and true industrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his Horse,
Stain'd with the variation of each soyl,
Betwixt the Holmedon, and this Seat of ours :
And he hath brought us smooth and welcom News.
The Earle of Douglas is discomfited,
Ten thousand bold Scots, two and twenty Knights Balk't in their own blood did Sir Walter see On Holmedons Plaines. Of Prisoners, Hotspur took Mordake Earle of Fife, and eldest son
To beaten Douglas, and the Earle of Arhol,
Of Marry, Angus, and Memeith.
And is not this an honourable spoyl ?

A gallant prize ? Ha Cousin, is it not ? In faith it is.
West. A Conquest for a Prince to boast of.

King. Yea, there thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin,
In envy, that my Lord Northumberland
Should be the father of so blest a son :
A Son, who is the Theam of Honours tongue :
Amongst a Grove, the very straitest Plant,
Who is sweet Fortunes Minion, and her Pride :
Whil'st I by looking on the praise of him,
See Ryot and Dishonour stain the brow
Of my young Harry. O that it could be prov'd,
That some Night-tripping Fayry, had exchange'd
In Cradle cloaths, our Children where they lay,
And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet :

Then

Then would I have his Harry, and he mine :
But let him from my thoughts. What think you Coze
Of this young Percies pride ? The Prisoners
Which he in this adventure hath surpriz'd,
To his own use he keeps, and sends me word
I shall have none but Mordake Earl of Fife,

West. This is his Uncles reaching. This is Worcester
Malevolent to you in all Aspects :
Which makes him prune himself, and bristle up
The crest of Youth against your Dignity.

King. But I have sent for him to answer this :
And for this cause a while we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Jerusalem.

Cosin, on Wednesday next, our Council we will hold
At Windfor, so inform the Lords :

But come your self with speed to us again,
For more is to be said, and to be done,
Then out of anger can be uttered.

West. I will my Liege.

Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Henry Prince of Wales, Sir John Fal-staffe, and Poins.

Fal. Now Hal, what time of day is it Lad ?

Prince. Thou art so fat-witted with drinking of old Sack and unburtuning thee after Supper, and sleeping upon benches in the afternoon that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly, which thou wouldst truly know. What a divel hast thou to do with the time of the day ? unless houres were Cups of Sack, and minutes Capons, and Clocks the tongues of Bawds, and Dials the signes of Leaping-houses, and the blessed Sun himself a fair hot Wench in Flame-coloured Taffara. I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous, to demand the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed you came near me now Hal. for we that take Purfes, go by the Moon and seven Stars, and not by Phœbus he, that wandring Knight sofair. And I pray thee sweet Wagge, when thou art King, as God save thy Grace, Majesty I should say, for Grace thou wilt have none.

Prince. What I none ?

Fal. No, not so much as will serve to be Prologue to an Egge and Buter.

Prince. Well, how then ? Come roundly, roundly.

Fal. Marry then, sweet Wagge, when thou art King, let not us that are Squires of the Nights body, be call'd Theeves of the D yes beauty. Let us be Diana's Forrest-ers, Gentlemen of the Shade, Minions of the Moon ; and let men say, we be men of good Government, being governed as the Sea is, by our noble and chaste Mistris the Moon, under whose countenance we steal.

Prince. Thou say'st well, and it holds well too : for the fortune of us that are the Moones men, doth ebb and flow like the Sea, being governed as the Sea is, by the Moon :
as for proof. Now a Purse of Gold most resolutely snatch'd on Monday night, and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday morning ; got with swearing, Laid by : and spent with crying, Bring in : now in as low an ebb, as the foot of the Ladder ; and by and by in as high a flow as the tide of the Gallows.

Fal. Thou say'st true Lad : and is not my Hostess of the Tavern a most sweet Wench ?

Prince. As is the honey, my old Lad of the Castle : and is not a Buffe Jerkin a most sweet robe of durance ?

Fal. How, how ? how now mad Wagge ? What in thy quips and thy quiddities ? What a plague have I to do with a Buffe-Jerkin ?

Prince. Why, what a pox have I to do with my Hostess of the Tavern ?

Fal. Well, thou hast call'd her to a reckoning many a time and oft.

Prince. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy part ?

Fal. No, Ile give thee thy due, thou hast paid all there.

Prince. Yea and elsewhere, so far as my Coyn would stretch, and where it would not, I have us'd my Credit.

Fal. Yea, and so us'd it, that were it here apparent, that thou art Heir apparent. But I prythee sweet Wagge, shall there be Gallows standing in England when thou art
King ? and Resolution thus sobb'd as it is, with the rusty curb of old Father Antick the Law ? Do not thou when thou art a King, hang a Thief.

Prince. No, thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I ? O rare ! Ile be a brave Judge.

Prince. Thou judgest false already. I mean, thou shalt have the hanging of the Thieves, and so become a rare Hangman.

Fal. Well Hal, well : and in some sort it jumpes with my humour, as well as waiting in the Court, I can tell
you.

Prince. For obtaining of suites ?

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of suites, whereof the Hangman hath no lean Wardrobe. I am as Melancholly as a Cyb-Car, or a lugg'd Bear.

Prin. Or an old Lion, or a Lovers Lute.

Fal. Yea, or the Drone of a Lincolnshire Bagpipe.

Prin. What say'st thou to a Hare, or the Melancholy of Moor-Diuch ?

Fal. Thou hast the most unsavoury similes, and art indeed the most comparative rascaldest sweet young Prince. But Hal, I prythee trouble me no more with vanity, I would thou and I knew, where a Commodity of good names were to be bought : an old Lord of the Council rated me the other day in the street about you sir ; but I mark'd him not, and yet he talk'd very wisely, but I regarded him not,
and yet he talkt wisely, and in the street too.

Prin. Thou didst well : for no man regards it.

Fal. O, thou hast damnable iteration, and art indeed able to corrupt a Saint. Thou hast done much harm unto me Hal, God forgive thee for it. Before I knew thee Hal,
I knew nothing : and now I am (if a man should speak truly) little better then one of the wicked. I must give over this life, and I will give it over : and I do not, I am a Villain. Ile be damned for never a Kings son in Christendom.

Prin. Where shall we take a Purse to morrow, Jack ?

Fal. Where thou wilt Lad, Ile make one : and I do not, call me Villain, and baffle me.

Prin. I see a good amendment of life in thee : From Praying, to Purse-taking.

Fal. Why Hal, 'tis my Vocation Hal. 'Tis no sin for a man to labour in his Vocation.

Poins. Now shall we know if Gads-hill have set a Watch. O, if men were to be saved by merit, what hole in Hell were hot enough for him ? This is the most omnipotent Villain, that ever cryed, Stand, to a true man.

Prin. Good morrow, Ned.

Poins.

Pointz. Good morrow sweet Hal. What saies Monsieur Remorse? What saies Sir John Sack and Sugar, Jack? How agrees the Devil and thee about thy Soul, that thou soldst him on Good-Friday last, for a Cup of Madera, and a cold Capons legge?

Prin. Sir John stands to his word, the devil shall have his bargain, for he was never yet a Breaker of Proverbs: He will give the devil his due.

Poin. Then art thou damn'd for keeping thy word with the devil.

Prin. Else he had been damn'd for cozening the devil.

Poy. But my Lads, my Lads, to morrow morning, by four a clock early at Gads-hill, there are Pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich Offerings, and Traders riding to London with fat Purfes. I have Vizards for you all; you have horses for your selves: Gads-hill lies to night in Rochester, I have bespoke Supper to morrow in Eastcheap; we may do it as secure as sleep: if you will go, I will stuffe your Purfes full of Crownes: if you will not, tarry at home and be hang'd.

Fal. Hear ye Yedward, if I tarry at home, and go not, Ile hang you for going.

Poy. You will Chops.

Fal. Hal, wilt thou make one?

Prin. Who, I rob? I a Thief? Not I.

Fal. Ther's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou cam'st not of the bloud-royal, if thou dar'st not stand for ten shillings.

Prin. Well then, once in my daies Ile be a mad-cap.

Fal. Why that's well said.

Prin. Well, come what will, Ile tarry at home.

Fal. Ile be a Traytor then, when thou art King.

Prin. I care not.

Poy. Sir John, I pray thee leave the Prince and me alone, I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure, that he shall go.

Fal. Well, maist thou have the spirit of perswasion; and he the cares of profiting, that what thou speakest, may move; and what he hears may be believed, that the true Prince may (for recreation sake) prove a false thief; for the poor abuses of the time, want countenance. Farewel, you shall find me in Eastcheap.

Prin. Farewel the latter Spring. Farewel Allhollown Summer.

Exit Fal.

Poy. Now, my good sweet honey Lord, ride with us to morrow. I have a jest to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaffe, Harvey, Rossil, and Gads-hill, shall rob those men that we have already way-layd; your self and I, will not be there: and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head from my shoulders.

Prin. But how shall we part with them in setting forth?

Poy. Why we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fail; and then will they venture upon the exploit themselves, which they have no sooner atchieved, but we'll set upon them.

Prin. I but 'tis like that they will know us by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment to be our selves.

Poy. Tut, our horses they shall not see, Ile tye them in the Wood; our vizards we will change after we leave them: and firrah, I have Cafes of Buckram for the nonce, to immask our noted outward garments.

Prin. But I doubt they will be too hard for us.

Poy. Well, for two of them, I know them to be as true bred Cowards as ever turn'd back: and for the third, if he fight longer than he sees reason, Ile forswear Armes. The vertue of this Jest will be, the incomprehensible lies that this fat Rogue will tell us, when we meet at Supper; how thirty at least he fought with, what wards, what blowes, what extremities he endured; and in the reproof of this, lies the Jest.

Prin. Well, Ile go with thee, provide us all things necessary, and meet me to morrow night in Eastcheap, there Ile sup. Farewel.

Poy. Farewel, my Lord.

Exit Poyes.

Prin. I know you all, and will a while uphold

The unyok'd humour of your Idleness:

Yet herein will I imitate the Sun,

Who doth permit the base contagious cloudes

To smother up his Beauty from the world;

That when he please again to be himself,

Being wanted, he may be more wondred at,

By breaking through the foul and ugly Mists

Of vapours, that did seem to strangle him.

If all the year were playing Holidais,

To sport, would be as tedious as to work;

But when they seldom come, they wisht-for come,

And nothing pleaseith but rare accidents.

So when this loose behaviour I throw off,

And pay the debt I never promised:

By how much better then my word I am,

By so much shall I falsifie mens hopes,

And like bright Metal on a sullen ground:

My reformation glittering o're my fault,

Shall shevv more goodly, and attract more eyes,

Then that which hath no soyl to set it off.

Ile so offend, to make offence a skill,

Redeeming time, when men think least I will.

Scena Tertia.

Enter the King, Northumberland, Worcester, Hotspur, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

King. My blood hath been too cold and temperate, Unapt to stir at these indignities,

And you have found me; for accordingly,

You tread upon my patience: But be sure,

I vvill from henceforth rather be my self,

Mighty, and to be fear'd, then my condition,

Which hath been smooth as Oyl, soft as young Down,

And therefore lost the Title of respect,

Which the proud ne're payes, but to the proud.

Wor. Our house (my Sovereign Liege) little deserves

The scourge of greatness to be used on it,

And that same greatness too, vvhich our ovvn hands

Have help to make so portly.

Nor. My Lord.

King. Worcester get thee gone: for I do see

Danger and disobedience in thine eye.

O sir, your presence is too bold and peremptory,

And Majesty might never yet endure

The moody Frontier of a servant brow,

You have good leave to leave us. When we need

Your use and counsel, we shall send for you.

You were about to speak.

North. Yea, my good Lord.

Thofe

Those Prisoners in your Highnesse demanded,
Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took,
Where (as he sayes) not with such strength denied
As was delivered to your Majesty :
Who either through enyy, or misprision,
Was guilty of this fault; and not my Son.

Hot. My Liege, I did deny no Prisoners.
But, I remember when the fight was done,
When I was dry with Rage, and extream toyl,
Breathlesse, and faint, leaning upon my Sword,
Came there a certain Lord, neat and trimly drest;
Fresh as a Bride-groom, and his Chin new reapt,
Shew'd like a stubble Land at harvest home.
He was perfum'd like a Milliner,
And 'twixt his Finger and his Thumb, he held
A Pouncet-box : which ever and anon
He gave his Nose, and took't away again :
Who therewith angry, when it next came there,
Took it in Snuffe. And still he smil'd and talk'd :
And as the Souldiers bare dead bodies by,
He call'd them untaught Knaves, Unmannerly,
To bring a slovenly unhandsome Coarse
Betwixt the wind, and his Nobility.
With many holiday and Lady tearmes
He question'd me : Among the rest, demanded
My Prisoners, in your Majesties be half.
I then, all-smarting with my wounds being cold,
(To be so pestered with a Poppingay)
Out of my grief, and my impatience,
Answer'd (neglectingly) I know not what,
He should, or should not: For he made me mad,
To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet,
And talk so like a Waiting-Gentlewoman,
Of Guns, and Drums, and Wounds: God save the mark;
And telling me, the Sovereign'st thing on earth
Was Parmacity, for an inward bruise :
And that it was great pittie, so it was,
That villanous Salt-peter should be digg'd
Out of the bowells of the harmlesse Earth,
Which many a good tall Fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly. And but for these vile Guns,
He would himself have been a Souldier.
This bald, unjoynted Chat of his (my Lord)
Made me to answer indirectly (as I said.)
And I beseech you, let not this report
Come currant for an Accusation,
Betwixt my love and your high Majesty.

Blunt. The circumstance considered, good my Lord,
What ever Harry Percie then had said,
To such a person, and in such a place,
At such a time, with all the rest retold,
May reasonably die, and never rise
To doe him wrong, or any way impeach
What then he said, so he unfay it now.

King. Why yet he doth deny his Prisoners,
But with Proviso and Exception,
That we at our own charge, shall ransom straight
His Brother-in-Law, the foolish Mortimer,
Who (in my soule) hath wilfully betraid
The lives of those, that he did lead to Fight, Against the great Magician, damnd Glendower;
Whose daughter (as we hear) the Earl of March
Hath lately marrried. Shall our Coffers then
Be emptied, to redeem a Traitor home?
Shall we buy Treason? and indent with Fears,
When they have lost and forfeited themselves?

No: on the barren Mountain let him starve :
For I shall never hold that man my friend,
Whose tongue shall aske me for one penny cost
To ransom home revolted Mortimer,

Hot. Revolted Mortimer?
He never did fall off, my Sovereign Liege,
But by the chance of Warre: to prove that true,
Needs no more but one tongue. For all those Wounds,
Those mouthed Wounds, which valiantly he took,
When on the gentle Severnes siedgie bank,
In single opposition hand to hand,
He did confound the best part of an hour
In changing hardiment with great Glendower :
Three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink
Upon agreement, of swift Severnes flood ;
Who then affrighted with their bloody looks,
Ran fearfully among the trembling Reeds,
And hid his crisped-head in a hollow bank,
Blood stained with these valiant Combatants.
Never did base and rotten policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds ;
Nor never could the noble Mortimer
Receive so many, and all willingly :
Then let him not be slander'd with Revolt.

King. Thou do'st belye him Percy, thou do'st belye
He never did encounter with Glendower : (him ;
I tell thee, he durst as well have met the devil alone,
As Owen Glendower for an enemy.

Art thou not asham'd ? But sirrah, henceforth
Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer.
Send me your Prisoners with the speediest meanes,
Or you shall hear in such a kind from me
As will displease ye. My Lord Northumberland,
We License your departure with your Son,
Send us your Prisoners, or you'll hear of it. Exit King.

Hot. And if the devil come and roare for them,
I will not send them. I will after straight
And tell him so : for I will ease my heart,
Although it be with hazard of my head,
Nor. What? drunk with choller? stay and pause awhile,
Here comes your Uncle. Enter Worcester.

Hot. Speak of Mortimer?
Yes, I will speak of him, and let my soul
Want mercy, if I doe not joyn with him.
In his behalf, I'll empty all those Veines,
And shed my dear blood drop by drop i'th dust,
But I will lift the downfall Mortimer
As high i'th aire as this unthankfull King,
As this ingrate and cankred Bullingbrook.

Nor. Brother, the King hath made your Nephew mad.

Wor. Who strook this heat up after I was gone?

Hot. He will (forsooth) have all my Prisoners :
And when I urg'd the ransom once again
Of my wives Brother, then his cheek look'd pale,
And on my face he turn'd an eye of death,
Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.

Wor. I cannot blame him : was he not proclaim'd
By Richard that dead is, the next of blood?

Nor. He was : I heard the Proclamation,
And then it was, when the unhappy King
(Whose wrongs in us God pardon) did set forth
Upon his Irish Expedition :

From whence he, intercepted, did return
To be depos'd, and shortly murdered.

Wor. And for whose death, we in the worlds wide Live so scandaliz'd, and foully spoken of. (mouth

Hot. But soft I pray you; did King Richard then Proclaime my brother Mortimer,
Heir to the Crown?

Nor. He did, my self did hear it.

Hot. Nay then I cannot blame his Cousin King,
That wish'd him on the barren Mountains starv'd.
But shall it be, that you that set the Crown
Upon the head of this forgetfull man,
And for his sake wore the detested blot
Of murtherous subornations? shall it be,
That you a world of curses undergo,
Being the Agents, or base second meanes,
The Cords, the Ladder, or the Hangman rather?
O pardon, if that I descend so low,
To shew the Line, and the Predicament
Wherein you range under this subtill King.
Shall it for shame, be spoken in these dayes,
Or fill up Chronicles in time to come,
That men of your Nobility and Power,
Did gage them both in an unjust behalf
(As both of you, God pardon it, have done)
To put down Richard, that sweet lovely Rose,
And plant this Thorn, this Canker Bullingbrook?
And shall it in more shame be further spoken,
That you are fool'd, discarded, and shook off
By him, for whom these shames ye underwent?
No: yet time serves, wherein you may redeem
Your banish'd Honours, and restore your selves
Into the good thoughts of the world again.
Revenge the jeering and disdain'd contempt
Of this proud King, who studies day and night
To answer all the debt he owes unto you,
Even with the bloody payments of your deaths:
Therefore I say.-----

Wor. Peace Cousin, say no more.
And now I will unclasp a secret book,
And to your quick conveying Discontents,
I'll read you Matter, deep and dangerous,
As full of peril and advenurous Spirit,
As to o're-walk a Current, roaring loud
On the unstedfast footing of a Spear.

Hot. If he fall in, good night, or sink or swimme:
Send danger from the East unto the West,
So Honour crosse in from the North to South,
And let them grapple: The blood more stirres
To rowze a Lyon, then to start a Hare.

Nor. Imagination of some great exploit,
Drives him beyond the bounds of Patience.

Hot. By heaven; me thinks it were an easie leap,
To pluck bright Honour from the pale-fac'd Moon,
Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where Fadome-line could never touch the ground,
And pluck up drowned Honour by the Locks:
So he that doth redeem her thence, might wear
Without Co-rivall, all her Dignities:
But out upon this half-fac'd Fellowship.

Wor. He apprehends a world of Figures here,
But not the form of what he should attend:
Good Cousin give me audience for a while,
And list to me.

Hot. I cry you mercy.

Wor. Those same noble Scots
That are your Prisoners.

Hot. I'll keep them all.
By heaven, he shall not have a Scot of them:
No, if a Scot would save his Soul, he shall not.

I'll keep them, by this Hand.

Wor. You start away,
And lend no eare unto my purposes.
Those Prisoners you shall keep.

Hot. Nay, I will; that's flat:
He said he would not ransom Mortimer:
Forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer.
But I will find him when he lies asleep,
And in his eare I'll holla Mortimer.
Nay, I'll have a Starling shall be taught to speak
Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him,
To keep his anger still in motion.

Wor. Hear you Cousin: a word.

Hot. All studies here I solemnly desie,
Save how to gall and pinch this Bullingbrook,
And that same Sword and Buckler Prince of Wales.
But that I think his Father loves him not,
And would be glad he met with some mischance,
I would have poyson'd him with a pot of Ale.

Wor. Farewell Kinsman: I'll talk to you
When you are temper'd to attend.

Nor. Why what a Wasp-tongu'd and impatient fool
Art thou, to break into this Womans mood,
Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own?

Hot. Why look you, I am whipt & scourg'd with rods?
Netled, and stung with Pismiers, when I hear
Of this vile Politician Bullingbrook.
In Richard's time: What doe ye call the place?
A plague upon't, it is in Glocester-shire:
'Twas where the madcap Duke his Uncle kept
His Uncle York, where I first bow'd my knee
Unto the King of Smiles, this Bullingbrook:
When you and he came back from Ravenpurgh.

Nor. At Barkley Castle.

Hot. You say true:
Why what a gaudie deal of curtesie,
This fawning Gray-hound then did proffer me.
Look when his infant fortune came to age,
And gentle Harry Percy, and kind Cousin:
O, the Devil take such Cozeners, God forgive me:
Good Uncle tell your tale, for I have done.

Wor. Nay, if you have not, to't again,
We'll stay your leisure.

Hot. I have done insooth.

Wor. Then once more to your Scottish Prisoners.
Deliver them up without their ransome straight,
And make the Douglas son your onely mean
For powers in Scotland: which for divers reasons
Which I shall send you written, be assur'd
Will easily be granted you, my Lord.
Your Son in Scotland being thus employ'd,
Shall secretly in the bosome creep
Of that same noble Prelate, well belov'd,
The Arch-Bishop.

Hot. Of York, is't not?

Wor. True, who beares hard
His Brothers death at Bristow, the Lord Scroop.
I speak not this in estimation,
As what I think might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted, and set down,
And onely staves but to behold the face
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.

Hot. I smell it:

Upon my life, it will doe wondrous well.

Nor. Before the game's a foot, thou still lett'st slip.

Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble plot,
And

And then the power of Scotland, and of York
To joyn with Mortimer, Ha.

Wor. And so they shall

Hotsp. In faith it is exceeding well aim'd.

Wor. And 'tis no little reason bids us speed,
To save our heads, by raising of a Head :
For, bear our selves as even as we can,
The King will alwayes think him in our debt,
And think we think our selves unsatisfied,
Till he hath found a time to pay us home.
And see already, how he doth begin
To make us strangers to his looks of love.

Hot. He does, he does ; we'll be reveng'd on him.

Wor. Cousin, farewell. No further go in this,
Then I by Letters shall direct your course
When time is ripe, which will be suddenly :
I'll steal to Glendower, and lo, Mortimer,
Where you, and Douglas, and our powers at once,
As I will fashion it, shall happily meet,
To bear our fortunes in our own strong armes,
Which now we hold at much uncertainty.

Nor. Farewell good Brother, we shall thrive, I trust.

Hot. Uncle, adieu : O let houres be short,
Till fields, and blows, and groans applaud our sport. Exit.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Carrier with a Lantern in his hand.

1. Car. Heigh ho, an't be not four by the day I'll be hang'd. Charles wain is over the new Chimney, and yet our horse not packt. What Ostler ?

Ost. Anon, anon.

1. Car. I prethee Tom, beat Cuts Saddle, put a few Flocks in the point: the poor Jade is wrung in the withers, out of all celfe.

Enter another Carrier.

2. Car. Pease and Beans are as dank here as a Dog, and this is the next way to give poor Jades the Bots :
This house is turned upside down since Robin the Ostler died.

1. Car. Poor fellow never joy'd since the price of oats rose, it was the death of him.

2. Car. I think this is the most villanous house in all
London roade for Fleas : I am stung like a Tench.

1. Car. Like a Tench ? There's ne're a King in Chri-stendome, could be better bit, then I have been since the first Cock.

2. Car. Why, you will allow us ne'r a Jourden, and then we leak in your Chimney : and your Chamber-lye breeds Fleas like a Loach.

1. Car. What Ostler, come away, and be hang'd :
come away.

2. Car. I have a Gammon of Bacon, and two razes of Ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing-crosse.

1. Car. The Turkies in my Panniers are quite starved. What Ostler ? a plague on thee, hast thou never an eye in thy head ? can't not hear ? and 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to break the pate of thee, I am a very Villain. Come and be hang'd, hast no faith in thee ?

Enter Gads-hill.

Gad. Good morrow Carriers. What's a clock ?

Car. I think it be two a Clock.

Gad. I prethee lend me thy Lanthorn to see my Gelding in the staole.

1. Car. Nay soft I pray ye, I know a trick worth two of that.

Gad. I prethee lend me thine.

2. Car. I, when, canst tell ? lend me thy Lanthorn (quoth-a) marry I'll see thee hang'd first.

Gad. Sirra Carrier : what time doe you mean to come to London.

2. Car. Time enough to go to bed with a Candle, I warrant thee. Come neighbour Mugges, we'll call up the Gentlemen, they will along with company, for they have great charge. Exeunt.

Enter Chamberlain.

Gad. What ho, Chamberlain ?

Cham. At hand quoth Pick-purse.

Gad. That's even as fair, as at hand quoth the Chamberlain : For thou variest no more from picking of Purses, then giving direction doth from labouring. Thou lay'st the plot, how.

Cham. Good morrow Master Gads-hill, it holds currant that I told you yesternight. There's a Franklin in the wilde of Kent, hath brought three hundred Marks with him in Gold : I heard him tell it to one of his company last night at Supper ; a kind of Auditor, one that hath abundance of charge too (God knowes what) they are up already, and call for Egges and Butter. They will away presently.

Gad. Sirra, if they meet not with S. Nicholas Clarks,
I'll give thee this neck.

Cham. No, I'll none of it : I prethee keep that for the Hangman, for I know thou worship'st S. Nicholas as truly as a man of falshood may.

Gad. What talkest thou to me of the Hangman ? If I hang, I'll make a fat pair of Gallows. For, if I hang, old Sir John hangs with me, and thou know'st be's no Starveling. Tut, there are other Trojans that thou dream'st not of, the which (for sport sake) are content to dye the Profession some grace ; that would (if matters should be look'd into) for their own Credit sake, make all whole. I am joyned with no Foot-Land-Rakers, no Long-staffe six-penny strikers, none of these mad Mustachio-purple-hu'd-Malt-wormes, but with Nobility, and Tranquility ; Bourgomasters, and great Oneyers, such as can hold in, such as will strike sooner then speak ; and speak sooner then drink, and drink sooner then pray ; and yet I lye, for they pray continually unto their Saint the Common-wealth ; or rather, not to pray to her, but prey on her : for they ride up and down on her, and make her their Boors.

Cham. What, the Commonwealth their Boots ? Will she hold out water in foul way ?

Gad. She will, she will ; Justice hath liquor'd her.
We steal, as in a Castle, cock-lure : we have the receipt of Fern-seed, we walk invisable.

Cham. Nay, I think rather, you are more beholding to the Night, then the Fern-seed, for your walking in-visable.

Gad. Give me thy hand.

Thou shalt have a share in our purpose,
As I am a true man.

Cham. Nay, rather let me have it, as you are a false Thief.

Gad. Go to : Homo is a common name to all men.
Bid the Ostler bring the Gelding out of the stable. Farewell, ye muddy Knave. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Prince, Poynes, and Peto.

Poines. Come shelter, shelter, I have removed Falstaff's Horse, and he frets like a gumm'd Velvet.

Prin. Stand close.

Enter Falstaffe.

Fal. Poynes, Poynes, and be hang'd Poynes.

Prin. Peace ye fat-kidney'd Rascall, what a bawling dost thou keep?

Fal. What Poynes. Hal?

Prin. He is walk'd up to the top of the hill, I'll go seek him.

Fal. I am accurst to rob in that Thiefs company: that Rascall hath removed my Horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travell but four foot by the square further a foot, I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I scape hanging for killing that Rogue. I have forsworn his company hourelly any time this two an twenty year, and yet I am bewitcht with the Rogues company. If the Rascall have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hang'd, it could not be else: I have drunk Medicines. Poynes, Hall, a Plague upon you both. Bardolph, Peto: I'll starve e're I rob a foot further. And 'twere not as good a deed as to drink, to turn Trueman, and to leave these Rogues, I am the veriest Varlet that ever chewed with a Tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground, is threescore and ten miles afoot with me: and the stony-hearted Villains know it well enough. A plague upon't, when Thieves cannot be true one to another.

They whistle.

Whew: a plague light upon you all. Give me my Horse you Rogues: give me my Horse and be hang'd.

Prin. Peace ye fat-guts, lie down, lay thine ear close to the ground, and list if thou can hear the tread of travellers.

Fal. Have you any Leavers to lift me up again being down? I'll not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again, for all the coin in thy Fathers Exchequer. What a plague mean ye to colt me thus?

Prin. Thou ly'st, thou art not colted, thou art uncolted.

Fal. I prethee good Prince Hal, help me to my horse, good Kings son.

Prin. Out you Rogue, shall I be your Ostler?

Fal. Go hang thy self in thine own heir-apparant Garters: If I be tane, I'll peach for this: and I have not Ballads made on all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a Cup of Sack be my poyson: when a jest is so forward, and a foot too, I hate it.

Enter Gads-hill.

Gad. Stand.

Fal. So I doe against my will.

Poyn. O 'tis our Setter, I know his voyce: Bardolfe, what newes?

Bar. Case ye, case ye; on with your Vizards, there's money of the Kings coming down the hill, 'tis going to the Kings Exchequer.

Fal. You lie you Rogue, 'tis going to the Kings Ta-

Gad. There's enough to make us all. (vern.)

Fal. To be hang'd.

Prin. You four shall front them in the narrow Lane: Ned and I will walk lower; if they scape from your encounter, then they light on us.

Peto. But how many be of them?

Gad. Some eight or ten.

Fal. Will they not rob us?

Prin. What, a Coward Sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed I am not John of Gaunt your Grandfather: but yet no Coward, Hal.

Prin. We'll leave that to the proof.

Poyn. Sirra Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge, when thou need'st him, there shalt thou finde him, farewell, and stand fast.

Fal. Now I cannot strike him if I should be hang'd.

Prin. Ned, where are our disguises?

Poyn. Here hard by: Stand close.

Fal. Now my Masters, happy man be his dole, say I: every man to his businesse.

Enter Travellers.

Tra. Come neighbour: the boy shall lead our Horses down the hill: We'll a foot a while, and ease our Legges.

Thieves. Stay.

Tra. Jesu blesse us.

Fal. Strike: down with them, cut the villains throats; a whorson Caterpillars: Bacon-fed Knaves, they hate us youth; down with them, fleece them.

Tra. O, we are undone, both we and ours for ever.

Fal. Hang ye gorbellied knaves, are you undone? No ye Fat Chuffes, I would your store were here. On Basons on, what ye knaves? young men must live, you are Grand Jurers? We'll jure ye ifaich.

Here they rob them and bind them. Enter the Prince and Poynes.

Prin. The thieves have bound the True-men: Now could thou and I rob the thieves and go merrily to London, it would be argument for a Week, Laughter for a Moneth, and a good jest for ever.

Poynes. Stand close, I hear them comming.

Enter Thieves again.

Fal. Come my Masters, let us share, and then to horse before day: and the Prince and Poynes be not two arrand Cowards, there's no equity stirring. There's no more valour in that Poynes, than in a wild Duck.

Prin. Your money.

Poyn. Villains.

As they are sharing, the Prince and Poynes set upon them. They all run away, leaving the booty behind them.

Prince. Got with much ease. Now merrily to Horse: The Thieves are scattred, and posselt with fear so strongly, that they dare not meet each other: each takes his fellow for an Officer. Away good Ned, Falstaff sweats to death, and Lards the lean earth as he walks along: wer't not for laughing, I should pity him.

Poyn. How the Rogue roar'd.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Hotspurre solus, reading a Letter.

But for mine own part, my Lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your house. He could be contented: Why is he not then? in respect of the love he beares our house. He shewes in this, he loves his own Barn better then he loves our house. Let me see some more, The purpose you undertake is dangerous.

rons.

rous. Why that's certain : 'Tis dangerous to take a cold, to sleep, to drink : but I tell you (my Lord foole) out of this Nettle, Danger ; we pluck this Flower, Safety. The purpose you undertake is dangerous, the Friends you have named uncertain, the Time is self unsorted, and your whole Plot too light, for the counterpoize of so great an Opposition. Say you so, say you so : I say unto you again, you are a shallow cowardly Hinde, and you lye. What a lack-brain is this ? I protest, our plot is as good a plot as ever was laid ; our Friends true and constant : A good Plot, good Friends, and full of expectation : An excellent Plot, very good Friends. What a Frosty-spirited rogue is this ? Why, my Lord of York commends the Plot, and the generall courle of the action. By this hand, if I were now by this Rascall, I could brain him with his Ladies Fan. Is there not my Father, my Uncle, and and my Self, Lord Edmond Mortimer, my Lord of York, and Owen Glendower ? Is there not besides, the Dowglas ? Have I not all their letters, to meet me in Armes by the ninth of the next moneth ? and are there not some of them set forward already ? What a Pagan Rascall is this ? An Infidell. Ha, you shall see now in very sincerity of Fear and Cold heart, will he to the King, and lay open all our proceedings. O, I could divide my self, and go to buffets, for moving such a dish of skim'd Milk with so honourable an action. Hang him, let him tell the King we are prepared. I will set forward to night,

Enter his Lady.

How now Kate, I must leave you within these two hours.

La. O my good Lord, why are you thus alone ? For what offence have I this fortnight been A banish'd woman from my Harries bed ? Tell me (sweet Lord) what is't that takes from thee Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep ? Why dost thou bend thy eyes upon the earth ? And start so often when thou sitt'st alone ? Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks ? And given my Treasures and my rights of thee, To thick-ey'd musing, and curst melancholly ? In my faint slumbers, I by thee have watcht, And heard thee murmur tales of Iron Warres : Speak tearmes of mannage to thy bounding Steed, Cry courage to the field. And thou hast talk'd Of Sallies, and Retires ; Trenches, Tents, Of Palizadoes, Frontiers, Parapets. Of Basilisks, of Canon, Culverin. Of Prisoners ransome, and of Souldiers slain, And all the current of a heady fight. Thy spirit within thee hath been so at Warre, And thus hath so bestirr'd thee in thy sleep, That beds of sweat hath stood upon thy Brow, Like bubbles in a late disturbed streame ; And in thy face strange motion have appear'd, Such as we see when men restrain their breath On some great sudden haste. O what portents are these ? Some heavy businesse hath my Lord in hand, And I must know it : else he loves me not.

Hor. What ho ; Is Gilliams with the Packet gone ?

Ser. He is, my Lord, an hour ago.

Hor. Hath Butler brought those horses from the Sheriff ?

Ser. One horse, my Lord, he brought even now.

Hor. What Horse ? a Roan, a crop-eare, is it not ?

Ser. It is, my Lord.

Hor. That Roan shall be my Throne. Well, I will back him straight. Esperance, bid Butler lead him forth into the Parke.

La. But hear you, my Lord.

Hor. What say'st thou, my Lady ?

La. What is it that carries you away ?

Hor. Why, my Horse (my Love) my Horse.

La. Out you mad-headed Apt, a Weazell hath not such a deal of spleen, as you are toft with. Insooth I'll know your businesse Harry, that I will. I fear my Brother Mortimer doth stirre about his Title, and hath sent for you to line his enterprize. But if you go-----

Hor. So farre a foot, I shall be weary, Love.

La. Come, come, you Paraquito, answer me directly unto this question, that I shall aske. Indeed I'll break thy little finger Harry, if thou wilt not tell me true.

Hor. Away, away, you trifler : Love, I love thee not, I care not for thee Kate : this is no world To play with Mammets, and to tilt with lips.

We must have bloody Noses, and crack'd Crownes, And passe them currant too. Gods me, my horse.

What saist thou Kate ? what would'st thou have with me ?

La. Do ye not love me ? doe you not indeed ?

Well, doe not then. For since you love me not, I will not love my self. Doe you not love me ? Nay, tell me if thou speakest in jest, or no.

Hor. Come, wilt thou see me ride ?

And when I am a horse-back, I will swear I love thee infinitely. But harke you Kate, I must not have you henceforth, question me, Whether I go : nor reason whereabouts.

Whether I must, I must : and to conclude, This Evening must I leave thee, gentle Kate.

I know you wise, but yet no further wise Then Harry Percies wife. Constant you are.

But yet a woman : and for secrecie, No Lady closer. For I will believe Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know, And so farre will I trust thee, gentle Kate.

La. How so farre ?

Hor. Not an inch further. But hark you Kate, Whether I go, thither shall you go too : To day will I set forth, to morrow you.

Will this content you Kate ?

La. It must of force.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Prince and Poynes.

Prin. Ned, prethee come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poynes. Where hast been Hall ?

Prin. With three or four Loggerheads, amongst three or fourscore Hogsheads. I have sounded the very base string of humility. Sirra, I am sworn brother to a lesh of Drawers, and can call them by their names, as Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their confidence, that though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the King of Curtelie : telling me flatly, I am not proud like Jack Falstaffe, but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy, and when I am King of England, I shall command all the good Lads in Eastcheap. They call drinking deep, dying Scarlet ; and when you break in your warring, then they cry pem, and bid you play it off. To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any Tinker in his own Language during my life. I tell thee Ned, thou hast lost much honour, that thou wert not with me in this action: but sweet Ned, to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this penniworth of Sugar, clapt even now into my hand by an under Skinker, one that never spake other English in his life, then Eight shillings and six pence, and, You are welcome: with this shrill addition, Anon sir, Anon sir, Score a pint of Bastard in the Half Moon, or so. But Ned, to drive away time till Falstaffe come, I prethee doe thou stand in some by-room, while I question my puny Drawer, to what end he gave me the Sugar, and doe never leave calling Francis, that his Tale to me may be nothing but, Anon: step aside, and I'll shew thee a President.

Poynes. Francis.

Prin. Thou art perfect.

Poyn. Francis.

Enter Drawer.

Fran. Anon, anon sir; look down into the Pomgarner, Ralfe.

Prince. Come hither, Francis.

Fran. My Lord.

Prin. How long hast thou to serve, Francis?

Fran. Forsooth five yeares, and as much as to-----

Poyn. Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon sir.

Prin. Five yeares: Berladly a long Lease for the clinking of Pewter. But Francis, darest thou be so valiant, as to play the coward with thy Indenture, and shew it a fair pair of heeles, and run from it?

Fran. O Lord sir, I'll be sworn upon all the Books in England, I could find in my heart.

Poyn. Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon sir.

Prin. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me see, about Machaelmas next I shall be---

Poyn. Francis.

Fran. Anon sir, pray you stay a little, my Lord.

Prin. Nay but hark you Francis, for the Sugar thou gavest me, 'twas a penniworth, was't not?

Fran. O Lord sir, I would it had been two.

Prin. I will give thee for it a thousand pound: aske me when thou wilt, and thou shalt have it.

Poyn. Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon.

Prin. Anon, Francis? No, Francis, but to morrow Francis: or Francis, on Thursday: or indeed Francis when thou wilt. But Francis.

Fran. My Lord.

Prin. Wilt thou rob this Leathern Jerkin, Christall button, Not-pated, Agatring, Puke stocking, Caddice garter, Spanish pouch.

Fran. O Lord, sir, who doe you mean?

Prin. Why then your brown Bastard is your onely drink: for look you, Francis, your white Canvas doublet will sully. In Barbary, sir, it cannot come to so much.

Fran. What, sir?

Poyn. Francis.

Prin. Away you Rogue, dost thou hear them call?

Here they both call, the Drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.

Enter Vintner.

Vint. What stand'st thou still, and hear'st such a calling? Look to the Guests within: My Lord, old Sir

John with half a dozen more, are at the door: shall I let them in?

Prin. Let them alone awhile, and then open the door, Poynes.

Enter Poynes.

Poyn. Anon, anon sir.

Prin. Sirra, Falstaffe and the rest of the Thieves are at the door, shall we be merry?

Poyn. As merry as Crickets my Lad. But hark ye, what cunning match have you made with this jest of the Drawer? Come, what's the issue?

Prin. I am now of all humors, that have shewed themselves humors, since the old dayes of goodman Adam, to the pupill age of this present twelve a clock at midnight. What's a clock Francis?

Fran. Anon, anon sir.

Prin. That ever this Fellow should have fewer words then a Parret, and yet the son of a Woman. His industry is up-staires and down-staires, his eloquence the parcell of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percies mind, the Hotspur of the North, he that killes me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a Breakfast, washes his hands and sayes to his Wife; Fie upon this quiet life, I want work. O my sweet Harry, sayes she, how many hast thou kill'd to day? Give my Roan horse a drench (sayes he) and answers, some fourteen, an hour after: a trifle, a trifle. I prethee call in Falstaffe, I'll play Percy, and that damn'd Brawn shall play Dame Mortimer his wife. Ri-vo, sayes the Drunkard. Call in Ribs, call in Tallow.

Enter Falstaffe.

Poyn. Welcome Jack, where hast thou been?

Fal. A plague of all cowards I say, and a vengeance too, marry and Amen. Give me a cup of Sack Boy. Ere I lead this life long, I'll sow nether stocks, and mend them too. A plague of all Cowards. Give me a Cup of Sack, Rogue. Is there no Virtue extant?

Prin. Didst thou never see Titan kisse a dish of Butter, pittifull hearted Titan that melted at the sweet Tale of the Sun? If thou didst, then behold that compound.

Fal. You Rogue, here's Lime in this Sack too: there is nothing but Roguery to be found in Villanous man; yet a Coward is worse then a Cup of Sack with lime. A villanous Coward, go thy wayes old Jack, die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten Herring: there lives not three good men unhang'd in England, & one of them is fat, and growes old, God help the while, a bad world I say. I would I were a Weaver, I could sing all manner of Songs. A plague of all Cowards, I say still.

Prin. How now Woolfsack, what mutter you?

Fal. A Kings Son? If I doe not beat thee out of thy Kingdome with a Dagger of Lath, and drive all thy Subjects afore thee like a flock of Wild-geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You Prince of Wales?

Prin. Why you horsen round man? what's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to that, and Poynes there?

Prin. Ye fat paunch, and ye call me Coward, I'll stab thee.

Fal. I call thee Coward? I'll see thee damn'd ere I call thee Coward: but I would give a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders, you care not who sees your back: Call you that that tacking of your friends? a plague upon such backing: give me them that will face me. Give me a Cup of Sack, I am a Rogue if I drunk to day.

Prin. O Villain, thy Lips are scarce wip'd, since thou drunk't last.

Falst. All's one for that.

He drinks.

A plague of all Cowards still; say I.

Prin. What's the matter?

Falst. What's the matter? here be four of us, have ta'ne a thousand pound this Morning.

Prince. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Falst. Where is it? taken from us. it is: a hundred upon poor four of us.

Prin. What, a hundred, man?

Falst. I am a Rogue, if I were not at halfe sword with a dozen of them two houres together. I have escaped by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the Doublet, foure through the Hose, my Buckler cut through and through, my Sword hack'd like a Hand-saw, ecce signum. I never dealt better since I was a man: all would not do. A plague of all Cowards: let them speak; if they speak more or lesse then truth, they are villains and the sons of darknesse.

Prince. Speak sirs, how was it?

Gad. We four set upon some dozen.

Falst. Sixteen, at least, my Lord.

Gad. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Falst. Yon Rogue they were bound, every man of them, or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

Gad. As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us.

Falst. And unbound the rest, and then came in the other.

Prin. What, fought ye with them all?

Falst. All? I know not what ye call all: but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a Bunch of Radish: if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legg'd Creature.

Poin. Pray Heaven, you have not murdered some of them.

Falst. Nay, that's past praying for. I have pepper'd two of them: Two I am sure I have payed, two Rogues in Buckrom Sutes. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a Lye, spit in my face, call me Horse: thou knowest my old word: here I lay and thus I bore my point; four Rogues in Buckrom let drive at me.

Prince. What, four? thou said'st but two, even now.

Falst. Four Hal, I told thee four.

Poin. I, I, he said four.

Falst. These four came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me; I made no more adoe, but took all their seven points in my Target, thus.

Prince. Seven? why there were but four, even now.

Falst. In Buckrom.

Poin. I, four, in Buckrom Sutes.

Falst. Seven, by these hilts, or I am a Villain else.

Prin. Prethee let him alone, we shall have more anon.

Falst. Doe'st thou hear me, Hal?

Prin. I, and mark thee too, Jack.

Falst. Do so, for it is worth the listening too: these nine in Buckrom, that I told thee of.

Prin. So, two more already.

Falst. Their points being broken.

Poin. Down fell his Hose.

Falst. Began to give me ground: but I followed me close, came in foot and hand; and with a thought: seven of the eleven I pay'd.

Prin. O monstrous! eleven Buckrom men grown out of two?

Falst. But as the Devill would have it, three mis-be gotten Knaves, in Kendall Green, came at my Back, and let drive at me; for it was so dark, Hal, that thou could'st not see thy Hand.

Prin. These Lyes are like the Father that begets them, grosse as a Mountain, open, palpable. Why thou Clay-brain'd Cuck, thou Knotty-pated Foole, thou Horson obscene greasie Tallow Catch.

Falst. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth, the truth?

Prin. Why, how could'st thou know these men in Kendall Green, when it was so dark, thou could'st not see thy hand? Come, tell us your reason: what say'st thou to this?

Poin. Come, your reason Jack, your reason.

Falst. What, upon compulsion? No: were I at the Strappado, or all the Racks in the World, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion? If reasons were as plenty as Black-berries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I.

Prin. I'll be no longer guilty of this sin. This sanguine Coward, this Bed-prester, this Horse-back-breaker, this huge Hill of Flesh.

Falst. Away you Starveling, you Elf-skin, you dried Neats tongue, Bulls-pissell, you stock-fish: O for breath to utter. What is like thee? You Tailors yard, you sheath, you Bow-case, you vile standing tuck.

Prin. Well, breath a-while, and then to't again: and when thou hast tyr'd thy self in base comparisons, hear me speak but thus.

Poin. Mark Jack.

Prin. We two, saw you four set on four and bound them, and were Masters of their Wealth: mark now how a plain Tale shall put you down. Then did we two, set on you four, and with a word, outface'd you from your prize, and have it: ye, and can shew it you in the House. And Falstaffe, you carried your Cuts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and still ran and roar'd, as ever I heard Bull-Calf. What a Slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say it was in fight. What trick? what device? what starting hole canst thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparent shame?

Poin. Come, let's hear Jack: What trick hast thou now?

Falst. I knew ye as well as he that made ye. Why hear ye my Masters, was it for me to kill the Heir apparent? Should I turn upon the true Prince? Why, thou knowest I am as valiant as Hercules: but beware instinct, the Lion will not touch the true Prince: Instinct is a great matter. I was a Coward on Instinct: I shall think the better of my self, and thee, during my life: I, for a valiant Lion and thou for a true Prince. But Lads, I am glad you have the Money. Hostesse, clap to the doors: watch to Night, pray to morrow. Gallants, Lads, Boyes, Hearts of Gold, all the good titles of Fellowship come to you. What, shall we be merry? shall we have a Play extempory.

Prin. Content, and the argument shall be, thy running away.

Falst. A, no more of that Hal, if thou lovest me.

Enter Hostesse.

Host. My Lord the Prince?

Prin.

Prin. How now my Lady the Hostesse, what say'st thou to me?

Hostess. Marry, my Lord, there is a Noble man of the Court at door would speak with you: he sayes he comes from your Father.

Prin. Give him as much as will make him a Royall man, and send him back again to my Mother.

Falst. What manner of man is he?

Hostess. An old man.

Falst. What doth Gravity out of his Bed at Midnight? Shall I give him his answer?

Prin. Prethee do Jack.

Falst. 'Faith and I'll send him packing. Exit

Prince. Now Sirs: you fought fair; so did you Peto, so did you Bardol: you are Lions too, you ran away upon instinct: you will not touch the true Prince; no, fie.

Bard. 'Faith, I ran when I saw others run.

Prin. Tell me now in earnest, how came Falstaff's Sword so hackt?

Peto. Why, he hackt it with his Dagger, and said, he would swear truth out of all England: but he would make you believe it was done in fight, and perswaded us to do the like.

Bard. Yea, and tickle our Noses with Spear-grasse, to make them bleed, and then beslobber our garments, with it, and swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not these seaven years before, I blusht to hear his monstrous devices.

Prin. O Villain, thou stolest a Cup of Sack eighteen years agoe, and wert taken with the manner, and ever since thou hast blusht extempore: thou hadst fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou rankest away; what instinct hadst thou for it?

Bard. My Lord, do you see these Meteors? do you behold these exhalations?

Prin. I doe.

Bard. What think you they portend?

Prin. Hot Livers, and cold Purfes.

Bard. Choler, my Lord, if rightly taken.

Prin. No, if rightly taken, Halter.

Enter Falstaffe.

Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone. How now my sweet Creature of Bombast, how long is't ago, Jack, since thou saw'st thine own Knee?

Falst. My own Knee? When I was about thy years (Hal) I was not an Eagles Talent in the Waste, I could have crept into any Aldermans Thumb-Ring: a plague of sighing and grief, it blowes a man up like a Bladder. There's villanous Newes abroad: here was Sir John Braby from your Father; you must go to the Court in the Morning. The same mad fellow of the North, Percy; and he of Wales, that gave Amamon the Bastinado, and made Lucifer Cuckold, and swore the Devill his true Liege-man upon the Crosse of a Welsh-hook; what a Plague call you him?

Poin. O, Glendower.

Falst. Owen, Owen; the same, and his Son in Law Mortimer, and old Northumberland, and the sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs a Horse-back up a Hill perpendicular.

Prin. He that rides at high speed, and with a Pistol kills a Sparrow flying.

Falst. You have hit it.

Prin. So did he never the Sparrow.

Falst. Well, that Rascall hath good mettall in him, he will not run.

Prin. Why, what a Rascall art thou then, to praise him so for running?

Falst. A Horse-back (ye Cuckow) but a foot he will not budge a foot.

Prin. Yes Jack, upon instinct.

Falst. I grant ye, upon instinct: Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand blew-Capps more, Worcester is stolne away by Night: thy Fathers Beard is turn'd white with the Newes; you may buy Land now as cheap as stinking Mackerell.

Prin. Then 'tis like, if there come a hot Sun, and this civill buffeting hold, we shall buy Maidenheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundreds.

Falst. By the Masse Lad, thou say'st true, it is like we shall have good trading that way. But tell me Hall, art not thou horrible as fear'd? thou being Heir apparent, could the World pick thee out three such Enemies again, as that Fiend Douglas, that Spirit Percy, and that Devill Glendower? Art thou not horrible afraid? Doth not thy blood thrill at it?

Prin. Not a whit: I lack some of thy instinct.

Falst. Well, thou wilt be horrible chid to morrow, when thou comest to thy Father: if thou do love me practice an answer.

Prin. Do thou stand for my Father, and examine me upon the particulars of my Life.

Falst. Shall I? content: This Chaire shall be my State, this Dagger my Scepter, and this Cushion my Crown.

Prin. Thy State is taken for a Joyn'd-Stoole, thy Golden Scepter for a Leaden Dagger, and thy precious rich Crown, for a pittifull bald Crown.

Falst. Well, and the fire of Grace be not quite out of thee now shalt thou be moved. Give me a Cup of Sack to make mine eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept, for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in King Cambysses vein.

Prin. Well, here is my Legge.

Falst. And here is my speech: stand aside Nobility.

Hostess. This is excellent sport, ifaith.

Fal. Weep not sweet Queen, for trickling tears are vain.

Hostess. O the Father, how he holds his countenance?

Fal. For Gods sake Lords, convey my trustfull Queen, For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes.

Hostess. O rare, he doth it as like one of these harlotry Prayers as ever I see.

Fal. Peace good Pint-pot, peace good Tickle-brain. Harry, I do not onely marvell where thou spendest thy time; but also, how thou art accompanied: For though the Camomile, the more it is trodden, the faster it grows; yet Youth, the more it is wasted, the sooner it wears. Thou art my sonne: I have partly thy Mothers Word, partly my Opinion; but chiefly, a villanous trick of thine Eye, and a foolish hanging of thy nether Lip, that doth warrant me. If then thou be Sonne to me, here lyeth the point: why, being Son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed Sonne of heaven prove a Micher, and eat Black-berries? a question not to be ask'd. Shall the Sonne of England prove a Thief, and take Purfes? a question to be ask'd. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many many in our Land, by the name of Pitch: this Pitch (as ancient Writers do report) doth defile; so doth the company thou keepest: for Harry, now I do not speak to thee in Drink, but in Tears; not in pleasure, but in Passion; not in Words onely, but in Woës also: and yet there is a vertuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his Name.

Prin. What manner of man, and it like your Majesty?

Falst. A goodly portly man ifaith, and corpulent, of a cheerfull Look, a pleasing Eye, and a most noble Carriage, and as I think, his age some fifty, or (byrlady) inclining to threescore; and now I remember me, his Name is Falstaffe: if that man should be lewdly given; he deceives me; for Harry, I see vertue in his Looks. If then the Tree may be known by the Fruit, as the Fruit by the Tree, then peremptorily I speak it, there is Vertue in that Falstaffe: him keep with, the rest banish. And tell me now, thou naughty Varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

Prin. Do'st thou speak like a King? do thou stand for me, and I'll play my Father.

Falst. Depose me: if thou do'st it halfe so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a Rabbet-sucker, or a Poulters Hare.

Prin. Well, here I am set.

Falst. And here I stand: judge my Masters.

Prin. Now Harry, whence come you?

Falst. My Noble Lord, from East-cheap.

Prin. The complaints I hear of thee, are grievous.

Falst. Ifaith, my Lord, they are false: Nay, I'll tickle ye for a young Prince.

Prin. Swarest thou, ungracious Boy? henceforth ne're look on me: thou art violently carried away from Grace: there is a Devill hunts thee, in the likenesse of a fat old Man; a Tunne of Man is thy Companion: Why do'st thou converse with that Trunk of Humours, that Boulting-Hutch of Beastlineße, that swolne Parcell of Droplics, that huge Bombard of Sack, that stufte Cloak-bagge of Guts, that rosted Manning-Tree Oxe with the Puddings in his Belly, that Reverend Vice, that grey Iniquity, that Father Ruffian, that Vanity in years? wherein is he good, but to taste Sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a Capon and eat it? wherein Cunning, but in Craft? where in Crafty, but in Villany? wherein Villanous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

Falst. I would your Grace would take me with you: whom means your Grace?

Prin. That villanous abominable mis-leader of Youth, Falstaffe, that old white-bearded Sathan.

Falst. My Lord, the man I know.

Prin. I know thou do'st.

Falst. But to say, I know more harm in him then in my selfe, were to say more then I know. That he is old (the more's the pittie) his white hairs do witnesse it: But that he is (saving your reverence) a Whore-master, that I utterly deny. If Sack and Sugat be a fault, Heaven help the wicked: if to be old and merry, be a sinne, then many an Hoste that I know is damn'd: if to be fat, to be hated, then Pharaohs lean Kine are to be loved. No, my good Lord, banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poins: but for sweet Jack Falstaffe, kinde Jack Falstaffe, true Jack Falstaffe, valiant Jack Falstaffe, and therefore more valiant, being as he is old Jack Falstaffe, banish not him thy Harryes company, banish not him thy Harryes company; banish plump Jack, and banish all the World.

Prince. I doe, I will.

Enter Bardolph running.

Bard. O, my Lord, my Lord, the Sheriff, with a most monstrous Watch, is at the door.

Falst. Out you Rogue, play out the Play: I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaffe.

Enter the Hostesse.

Host. O, my Lord, my Lord.

Falst. Heigh, heigh, the Devill rides upon a Fiddlestick: what's the matter?

Hostess. The Sheriff and all the Watch are at the door: they are come to search the House, shall I let them in?

Falst. Do'st thou hear Hal, never call a true piece of Gold a Counterfeit: thou art essentially mad, without seeming so.

Prince. And thou a naturall Coward, without instinct.

Falst. I deny your Major; if you will deny the Sheriff, so: if not, let him enter. If I become not a Cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up: I hope I shall as soon be strangled with a Halter, as another.

Prince. Go hide thee behinde the Arras, the rest walk up above. Now my Masters, for a true Face and good Conscience.

Falst. Both which I have had: but their date is out, and therefore I'll hide me.

Prin. Call in the Sheriff.

Exit.

Enter Sheriff and the Carrier.

Prince. Now Master Sheriff, what is your will with me?

She. First pardon me, my Lord. A Hue and Cry hath followed certain men unto this house.

Prince. What men?

She. One of them is well known, my gracious Lord, a grosse fat man.

Car. As fat as Butter.

Prin. The man, I do assure you is not here, For I my self at this time have imploy'd him: And Sheriff, I will engage my word to thee, That I will by to morrow Dinner time, Send him to answer thee, or any man, For any thing he shall be charg'd withall: And so let me entreat you, leave the house.

She. I will, my Lord: there are two Gentlemen Have in this Robbery lost three hundred Marks.

Prin. It may be so: if he have robb'd these men, He shall be answerable: and so farewell.

She. Good Night, my Noble Lord.

Prin. I think it is good Morrow, is it not?

She. Indeed, my Lord, I think it be two a Clock.

Exit.

Prince. This oyle Rascall is known as well as Poules: go call him forth.

Peto. Falstaffe? fast a sleep behinde the Arras, and snorting like a Horse.

Prin. Hark, how hard he fetches his breath: search his Pockets.

He

He searcheth his pockets and findeth certain Papers.

Prin. What hast thou found?

Peto. Nothing but papers, my Lord.

Prin. Let's see, what be they? read them.

Peto. Item, a Capon.

ii.s.ii.d.

Item, Sawce.

iiii.d.

Item, Sack, two Gallons.

v.s.viii.d.

Item, Anchoves and Sack after supper.

ii.s.vi.d.

Item, Bread.

ob.

Prince. O monstrous, but one halfe penny-worth of Bread to this intollerable deale of Sack? What there is else, keep close, we'll read it at more advantage: there let him sleep till day. I'll to the Court in the Morning: We must all to the Warrs, and thy place shall be honorable. I'll procure this fat Rogue a Charge of Foot, and I know his death will be a March of Twelve-score. The Money shall be pay'd back again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the Morning: and so good morrow

Peto.

Peto. Good morrow, good my Lord.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Hotspurre, Worcester, Lord Mortimer, Owen Glendower.

Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure,
And our induction full of prosperous hope.

Hotsp. Lord Mortimer, and Cousin Glendower,
Will you sit down?
And Uncle Worcester; a plague upon it,
I have forgot the Map.

Glend. No, here it is:

Sit Cousin Percy, sit good Cousin Hotspurre:
For by that Name, as oft as Lancaster doth speak of you,
His cheeks look pale, and with a rising sigh,
He wisheth you in Heaven.

Hotsp. And you in Hell, as oft as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of.

Glend. I cannot blame him: At my Nativity,
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,
Of burning Cressets: and at my Birth,
The frame and foundation of the Earth
Shak'd like a Coward.

Hotsp. Why so it would have done at the same season if your Mothers Cat had but kitten'd, though your self had never been born.

Glend. I say the Earth did shake when I was born.

Hotsp. And I say the Earth was not of my minde:
If you suppose, as fearing you, it shook.

Glend. The heavens were all on fire, the Earth did tremble.

Hotsp. Oh, then the Earth shook
To see the Heavens on fire,
And not in fear of your Nativity.
Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth
In strange eruptions: and the teeming Earth
Is with a kind of Cholick pinch'd and vext,
By the imprisoning of unruly Winde
Within her Wombe: which for enlargement striving,
Shakes the old Beldam Earth, and tumbles down

Steeple, and moss-grown Towers. At your Birth,
Our Grandam Earth, having this distemperature,
In passion shook.

Glend. Cousin: of many men
I do not bear these Crossings: give me leave
To tell you once again, that at my Birth
The front of Heaven was full of fiery shapes,
The Goats ran from the Mountains, and the Heards
Were strangely clamorous to the frightened fields:
These signes have mark'd me extraordinary,
And all the courses of my Life do shew,
I am not in the Roll of common men.
Where is the Living, clipt in with the Sea,
That chides the Banks of England, Scotland, and Wales,
Which calls me Pupill, or hath read to me?
And bring him out, that is but womans son,
Can trace me in the tedious wayes of Art,
And hold me pace in deep experiments,

Hotsp. I think there's no man speaks better Welsh:
I'll to Dinner.

Mort. Peace Cousin Percy, you will make him mad.

Glend. I can call Spirits from the vastie Deep.

Hotsp. Why so can I, or so can any man:
But will they come, when you do call for them?

Glend. Why, I can teach thee, Cousin, to command the Devill.

Hot. And I can teach thee, Cousin, to shame the Devill,
By telling truth. Tell truth, and shame the Devill.
If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither,
And I'll be sworn, I have power to shame him hence.
Oh, while you live, tell truth, and shame the Devill.

Mort. Come, come, no more of this unprofitable Chat.

Glend. Three times hath Henry Bullingbrook made head
Against my power: thrice from the banks of Wye,
And sandy-bottom'd Severn, have I sent him,
Bootlesse home, and Weather-beaten back.

Hot. Home without Boots,
And in foule Weather too,
How scapes he Agues in the Devils name?

Glend. Come, here's the Map:
Shall we divide our Right,
According to our threefold order ta'ne?

Mort. The Arch-Deacon hath divided it
Into three Limits, very equally:
England, from Trent, and Severn hitherto,
By South and East, is to my part assign'd:
All Westward, Wales, beyond the Severn shore,
And all the fertile Land within that bound,
To Owen Glendower: And dear Couze, to you
The remnant Northward, lying off from Trent.
And our indentures Tripartite are drawn:
Which being sealed interchangeably,
(A business that this Night may execute)
To morrow, Cousin Percy, you and I,
And my good Lord of Worcester will set forth,
To meet your Father, and the Scottish Power,
As is appointed us at Shrewsbury.

My Father Glendower is not ready yet,
Nor shall we need his help these fourteen dayes:
Within that space, you may have drawn together
Your Tenants, Friends, and neighbouring Gentlemen.

Glend. A short time shall send me to you, Lords:
And in my conduct shall your Ladies come,
From whom you now must steale, and take no leave
For there will be a world of Water shed,

Upon

Upon the parting of your Wives and you :

Hotsp. Methinks my moiety, North from Burton here :
In quantity equals not one of yours :
See, how this River comes me cranking in,
And cuts me from the best of all my Land,
A huge half Moon, a monstrous Cantle out.
I'll have the Currant in this place damn'd up,
And here the smug and Silver Trent shall run,
In a new Channell, fair and evenly :
It shall not winde with such a deep indent,
To rob me of so rich a bottome here.

Glend. Not winde ? it shall, it must, you see it doth.

Mort. Yea, but mark how he bends his course,
And runs me up, with like advantage on the other side,
Gelding the opposing Continent as much,
As on the other side it takes from you.

Worc. Yea, but a little Charge will trench him here,
And on this North side win this Cape of Land,
And then he runs straight and even.

Hotsp. I'll have it so, a little Charge will do it.

Glend. I'll not have it alter'd.

Hotsp. Will not you ?

Glend. No, nor you shall not.

Hotsp. Who shall say me nay ?

Glend. Why, that will I.

Hotsp. Let me not understand you then, speak it in Welsh.

Glend. I can speak English, Lord, as well as you :
For I was train'd up in the English Court ;
Where, being but young, I framed to the Harpe,
Many an English Ditty, lovely well,
And gave the tongue a helpfull Ornament ;
A vertue that was never seen in you.

Hotsp. Marry, and I am glad of it withall my heart,
I had rather be a Kitten, and cry mew,
Then one of these same Meeter-Ballad-mongers :
I had rather hear a Brazen Candlestick turn'd,
Or dry a Wheele grate on the Axle-tree,
And that would set my teeth on edge,
Nothing so much as mincing Poetrie ;
'Tis like the forc't gate of a shuffling Nag.

Glend. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.

Hotsp. I do not care : I'll give thrice so much Land
To any well-deserving friend ;
But in the way of Bargain, mark ye me,
I'll cavillon the ninth part of a hair,
Are the Indentures drawn ? shall we be gone ?

Glend. The Moon shines fair,

You may away by Night :

I'll haste the Writer ; and withall,
Break with your Wives, of your departure hence :
I am afraid my Daughter will run mad.
So much she dotech on her Mortimer.

Exit.

Mort. Fie, Cousin Percy, how you crosse my Father.

Hotsp. I cannot choose : sometime he angers me,
With telling me of the Moldwarpe and the Ant,
Of the Dreamer Merlin, and his Prophecies ;
And of a Dragon, and a fin-lesse Fish,
A clip-wing'd Griffin, and a moulten Raven,
A couching Lyon, a ramping Cat,
And such a deale of skimble-skamble Stuff,
As puts me from my Faith. I tell you what,
He held me last Night, at least, nine hours,
In reckning up these severall Devils Names,
That were his Lackeys :

I cry'd hum, and well, go too,
But mark'd him not a word. O, he is as tedious
As a tyred Horse, a railing Wife,
Worse then a smoaky house. I had rather live
With Cheese and Garlick in a Windmill far,
Then feed on Cates, and have him talk to me,
In any Summer-house in Christendome.

Mort. In faith he was an honest Gentleman ;
Exceeding well read, and profited,
In strange Concealments :
Valiant as a Lion, and wondrous affable,
And as bountifull, as Mines of India.
Shall I tell you, Cousin,
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbs himself, even of his naturall scope,
When you do crosse his humour : 'faith he does.
I warrant you, that a man is not alive,
Might so have tempted him, as you have done,
Without the taste of danger, and reproofe :
But do not use it oft, let me entreat you.

Worc. In faith, my Lord, you are too willfull blame,
And since your coming hither, have done enough,
To put him quite besides his patience :
You must needs learn, Lord, to amend this fault ;
Though sometimes it shew greatness, Courage, Bloud,
And that's the dearest grace it renders you ;
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh Rage,
Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, Haughtinesse, Opinion, and Disdain :
The least of which, haunting a Nobleman,
Loseth mens hearts, and leaves behind a stain
Upon the beauty of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of commendation.

Hotsp. Well, I am school'd :
Good-manners be your speed ;
Here come your Wives, and let us take our leave.

Enter Glendower, with the Ladies

Mort. This is the deadly spight that angers me,
My Wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My daughter weeps, she'll not part with you,
She'll be a Souldier too, she'll to the Warrs.

Mort. Good Father tell her, that she and my Aunt Percy
Shall follow in your Conduct speedily.

Glendower speaks to her Welsh, and she answers him in the same.

Glend. She is desperate here :
A peevish self-will'd Harlotry,
One that perswasion can do good upon,

The Lady speaks in Welsh.

Mort. I understand thy Looks : that pretty Welsh
Which thou powr'st down from these swelling Heavens,
I am too perfect in : and but for shame,
In such a parley should I answer thee.

The Lady again in Welsh.

Mort. I understand thy Kisses, and thou mine,
And that's a feeble disputation :
But I will never be a Truant, Love,
Till I have learn'd thy Language : for thy tongue

Makes

Makes Welsh as sweet as Ditties highly penn'd,
Sung by a fair Queen in a Summers Bower,
With ravishing Division to her Lute.
Glend. Nay, if thou melt, then will she run mad:

The Lady speaks again Welsh.

Mort. O, I am ignorance it self in this.

Glend. She bids you,

On the wanton rushes lay you down,
And rest your gentle head upon her Lap,
And she will sing the song that pleaseth you,
And on your Eye-lids Crown the God of Sleep,
Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness;
Making such difference betwixt Wake and Sleep,
As is the difference betwixt Day and Night,
The houre before the Heavenly Harneis'd Team
Begins his golden Progresse in the East.

Mort. Withall my heart I'll sit, and hear her sing:
By what time will our Book, I think, be drawn.

Glend. Go so:

And those Musicians that shall play to you,
Hang in the Aire a thousand Leagues from thence;
And straight they shall be here: sit, and attend.

Hotsp. Come Kate, thou art perfect in lying down:
Come, quick, quick, that I may lay my Head in thy Lap.

Lady. Go, ye giddy-Goose.

The Musick plays.

Hotsp. Now I perceive the Devill understands Welsh,
And 'tis no marvell he is so humorous:
Byrlady he's a good Musician.

Lady. Then would you be nothing but Musically,
For you are altogether governed by humors:
Lie still ye thief, and hear the Lady sing in Welsh.

Hotsp. I had rather hear (Lady) my Brach howle in Irish.

Lady. Would'st have thy Head broken?

Hotsp. No.

Lady. Then be still.

Hotsp. Neither, 'tis a Woman's fault.

Lady. Now God help thee.

Hotsp. To the Welsh Ladies Bed.

Lady. What's that?

Hotsp. Peace she sings.

Here the Lady sings a Welsh Song.

Hotsp. Come, I'll have your Song too.

Lady. Not mine, in good sooth.

Hotsp. Not yours, in good sooth?

You swear like a Comfit-makers Wife:
Not you, in good sooth; and, as true as I live;
And, as God shall mend me; and as sure as day:
And givest such Sarcenet surety for thy Oaths,
As if thou never walk'st further then Finsbury.
Swear me, Kate, like a Lady, as thou art,
A good mouth-filling Oath: and leave in sooth,
And such proteett of Pepper-Ginger-bread,
To Velvet-Guards, and Sunday-Citizens.

Come, sing.

Lady. I will not sing.

Hotsp. 'Tis the next way to turn Taylor, or be Red-breast teacher; and the Indentures be drawn, I'll away within these two houres: and so come in, when ye will.

Exit.

Glend. Come, come, Lord Mortimer, you are as slow,
As hot Lord Percy is on fire to go,
By this our Book is drawn: we'll but seale,
And then to Horse immediately.

Mort. With all my heart.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, and others.

King. Lords, give us leave:
The Prince of Wales, and I,
Must have some private conference:
But be near at hand,
For we shall presently have need of you.

Exeunt Lords.

I know not whether Heaven will have it so,
For some displeasing service I have done;
That in his secret Doome, out of my Bloud,
He'll breed Revengement, and a Scourge for me:
But thou dost in thy passages of Life,
Make me believe, that thou art onely mark'd
For the hot vengeance, and the Rod of heaven
To punish my Mistreadings. Tell me else,
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poor, such bare, such lew'd, such mean attempts,
Such barren pleasures, rude society,
As thou art match'd withall, and grafted too,
Accompany the greatness of thy bloud,
And hold their levell with thy Princely heart?
Prince. So please your Majesty, I would I could Quit all offences with as clear excuse,
As well as I am doubtlesse I can purge
My self of many I am charg'd withall:
Yet such extenuation let me beg,
As in reproofe of many Tales devis'd,
Which oft the Ear of Greatnesse needs must hear,
By smiling Pick-thanks, and base News-mongers;
I may for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faulty wandred, and irregular,
Finde pardon on my true submission.

King. Heaven pardon thee:

Yet let me wonder, Harry,
At thy affections, which do hold a Wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in Counsell thou hast rudely lost,
Which by thy yonger brother is suppli'd;
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the Court and Princes of my bloud.
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd and the soul of every man
Prophetically do fore-think thy fall.
Had I so lavish of my presence been,
So common hackney'd in the wayes of men,
So stale and cheap to vulgar Company;
Opinion, that did help me to the Crown,
Had still kept loyall to possession,
And left me in reputelesse banishment,
A fellow of no mark, nor likelihood.
By being seldome seen, I could not stir,
But like a Comet, I was wondred at.

That

That men would tell their children, This is he :
Others would say, where ? which is Bullingbrook ?
And then I stole all courtesie from heaven,
And drest my self in such humility ,
That I did pluck allegiance from mens hearts,
Loud shouts and salutations from their mouthes ,
Even in the presence of the crowned King.
Thus I did keep my person fresh and new,
My presence like a Robe Pontificall ,
Ne're seen, but wondred at : and so my state,
Seldome but sumptuous, shewed like a Feast,
And wonne by rarenesse such solemnity.
The skipping King he ambled up and down ,
With shallow Jesters, and rash Bavin Wits,
Soon kindled, and soon burnt, carded his State,
Mingled his Royalty with carping fooles,
Had his great Name profaned with their scornes,
And gave his countenance, against his name,
To laugh at gybing Boyes, and stand the push
Of every beardless vain comparative ;
Grew a companion to the common streets,
Enseoff'd himself to popularity :
That being daily swallowed by menseyes,
They surfett'd with Honie, and began to loathe
The taste of sweetnesse, whereof a little
More then a little, is by much too much.
So when he had occasion to be seen ,
He was but as the Cuckow in June,
Heard, not regarded : seen but with such eyes ,
As sick and blunted with community,
Affoord no extraordinary gaze,
Such as is bent on Sun-like Majesty ,
When it shines seldome in admiring Eyes :
But rather drowz'd, and hung their eye-lids down,
Slept in his face, and rendred such aspect
As cloudy men use to doe their adversaries,
Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd, and full.
And in that very Line, Harry, standest thou
For thou hast lost thy Princely priviledge,
With vile participation. Not an eye
But is a weary of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more :
Which now doth that I would not have it doe,
Make blind it self with foolish tendernesse.

Prince. I shall hereafter, my thrice gracious Lord,
Be more my self.

King. For all the World,
As thou art to this hour, was Richard then,
When I from France set forth at Ravenspurgh ;
And even as I was then, is Percy now :
Now by my Scepter, and my Soul to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the state
Then thou the shadow of succession ;
For of no right, nor colour like to right,
He doth fill fields with Harneis in the Realm ,
Turns head against the Lyons armed Jawes ;
And being no more in debt to yeares, then thou,
Leads ancient Lords, and reverend Bishops on
To bloody Battels, and to bruising Armes.
What never-dying honour hath he got ,
Against renowned Dowglas, whose high deeds,
Whose hot incursions, and great name in Armes,
Holds from all Soldiers chief Majority,
And Military Title Capitall.
Through all the Kingdomes that acknowledge Christ,
Thrice hath the Hotspurre Mars, in swathing Cloathes,

This Infant-Warriour, in his Enterprises,
Discomfited great Dowglas, ta'ne him once,
Enlarged him, and made a friend of him ,
To fill the mouth of deep Defiance up,
And shake the peace and safety of our Throne.
And what say you to this ? Percy, Northumberland.
The Arch-Bishops Grace of Tork, Dowglas, Mortimer, Capitulate against us, and are up.
But wherefore doe I tell this newes to thee ?
Why, Harry, doe I tell thee of my Foes ,
Which art my near'st and dearest enemy ?
Thou art like enough, through vassall fear,
Base inclination , and the start of spleen,
To fight against me under Percies pay,
To dogge his heels, and curtsie at his frowns.
To shew how much thou art degenerate.

Prince. Doe not think so, you shall not find it so :
And heaven forgive them, that so much have sway'd
Your Majesties good thoughts away from me :
I will redeem all this on Percies head,
And in the closing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you, that I am your Son,
When I will wear a Garment all of blood,
And stain my favours in a bloody Maske :
Which washt away, shall scowre my shame with it.
And that shall be the day when ere it lights,
That this same Child of honour and renown,
This gallant Hotspurre, this all-praised Knight,
And your unthought of Harry chance to meet :
For every Honour sitting on his Helme,
Would they were multitudes, and on my head
My shame's redoubled. For the time will come,
That I shall make this Northern Youth exchange
His glorious Deeds for my indignities :
Percy is but my Factor, good my Lord,
To engrosse up glorious deeds on my behalf :
And I will call him to so strict account ,
That he shall render every Glory up,
Yea, even the sleightest worship of his time ,
Or I will tear the Reckoning from his heart.
This, in the Name of Heaven, I promise here :
The which, if I promise, and doe survive ,
I doe beseech your Majesty, may salve
The long-grown Wounds of my intemperature :
If not, the end of Life cancels all Bands ,
And I will dye a hundred thousand deaths,
Ere break the smallest parcell of this Vow.

King. A hundred thousand Rebels die in this :
Thou shalt have Charge, and soveraign trust herein.

Enter Blunt.

How now good Blunt ? thy looks are full of speed.

Blunt. So hath the businesse that I come to speak of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word ,
That Dowglas and the English Rebels met
The eleventh of this moneth, at Shrewsbury :
A mighty and a fearfull Head they are,
(If promises be kept on every hand)
As ever offered foul play in a State.

King. The Earl of Westmerland set forth to day :
With him my Son, Lord John of Lancaster ,
For this advertisement is five dayes old.
On Wednesday next, Harry, thou shalt set forward :
On Thursday, we our selves will march.
Our meeting is Bridgenorth : and Harry, you shall march

H h

Through

Through Glocester-shire : by which account,
Our Businesse valued some twelve dayes hence,
Our generall Forces at Bridgenorth shall meet.
Our hands are full of businesse : let's away,
Advantage feeds them fat, while men delay. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaffe, and Bardolph.

Falst. Bardolph, am I not faine away vilely, since this last action ? doe I not bate ? doe I not dwindle ? Why my skinne hangs about me like an old Ladies loose Gown : I am withered like an old Apple John. Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking : I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. And I have not forgotten what the in-side of a Church is made of, I am a Pepper Coin, a Brewers Horse : the in-side of a Church. Company, villainous Company hath been the spoyle of me.

Bard. Sir John, you are so fretfull, you cannot live long.

Falst. Why there is it : Come, sing me a bawdy Song, make me merry : I was as virtuously given, as a Gentleman need to be ; virtuous enough, swore little, Dic'd not above seven times a week, went to a Bawdy-house not above once in a quarter of an hour, paid money that I borrowed, three or four times ; lived well, and in good compasse : and now I live out of all order, out of compasse.

Bard. Why, you are so fat, Sir John, that you must needs be out of all compasse ; out of all reasonable compasse, Sir John.

Falst. Doe thou amend thy Face, and I'll amend my Life. Thou art our Admirall, thou bearest the Lantern in the Poop, but 'tis in the Nose of thee ; thou art the Knight of the burning Lamp.

Bard. Why, Sir John, my Face does you no harme.

Falst. No, I'll be sworn : I make as good use of it, as many a man doth of a Deaths-Head, or a Memento Mori. I never see thy Face, but I think upon Hell fire, and Dives that lived in purple : for there he is in his Robes burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy Face ; my Oath should be, By this Fire : But thou art altogether given over ; and wert indeed, but for the Light in thy Face, the Sun of utter Darknesse. When thou rann'st up Gads-hill in the night to catch my Horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an Ignis fatuus, or a Ball of Wild-fire, there's no purchase in Money. O, thou art a perpetuall Triumph, an everlasting Bone-fire-light : thou hast saved me a thousand Markes in Links and Torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt Tavern and Tavern : but the sack that thou hast drunk me, would have bought me light as good cheap, as the dearest Chandlers in Europe. I have maintain'd that Salamander of yours with fire, any time this two and thirty yeares, heaven reward me for it.

Bard. I would my Face were in your belly.

Falst. So should I be sure to be heart-burn'd.

Enter Hostesse.

How now, Dame Partlet the Hen, have you enquir'd yet who pick'd my Pocket ?

Hostesse. Why Sir John, what doe you think, Sir John ? doe you think I keep Thieves in my house ? I have search'd, I have enquir'd, so has my husband, Man by Man, Boy by Boy, Servant by Servant : the tight of a hair was never lost in my house before.

Falst. Yelpe, Hostesse : Bardolph was shav'd, and lost many a hair ; and I'll be sworn my Pocket was pick'd, go to, you are a Woman, go.

Hostesse. Who I ? I defie thee : I was never call'd so in mine own house before.

Falst. Go to, I know you well enough.

Hostesse. No, Sir John : you doe not know me, Sir John ; I know you, Sir John : you owe me money, Sir John, and now you pick a quarrell to beguile me of it : I bought you a dozen of Shirts to your back.

Falst. Dowlas, filthy Dowlas : I have given them away to Bakers Wives, and they have made Boulters of them.

Hostesse. Now as I am a true Woman, Holland of eight shillings an Ell : You owe Money here besides, Sir John, for your Diet, and by-Drinkings, and Money lent you, four and twenty pounds.

Falst. He had his part of it, let him pay.

Hostesse. He ? alas he is poor, he hath nothing.

Falst. How ? poor ? look upon his face : What call you rich ? Let him coyn his Nose, let him coyn his Cheeks, I'll not pay a Denier. What, will you make a Yonker of me ? Shall I not take mine ease in mine Inne, but I shall have my Pocket pick'd ? I have lost a Seal-Ring of my Grand-fathers, worth forty Mark.

Hostesse. I have heard the Prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that Ring was Copper.

Falst. How ? the Prince is a Jack, a Sneak-Cup : and if he were here, I would cudgell him like a Dog, if he would say so.

Enter the Prince marching, and Falstaffe meets him, playing on his Trunchion like a Fife.

Falst. How now Lad ? is the wind in that Doore ? Must we all march ?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate fashion.

Hostesse. My Lord, I pray you hear me.

Prince. What say'st thou, Mistresse Quickly ? How does thy Husband ? I love him well, he is an honest man.

Hostesse. Good, my Lord, hear me.

Falst. Prethee let her alone, and list to me.

Prince. What say'st thou, Jack ?

Falst. The other night I fell asleep here behind the Arras, and had my Pocket pickt : this House is turn'd Bawdy-house, they pick Pockets.

Prince. What didst thou lose, Jack ?

Falst. Wilt thou believe me, Hal ? Three or four Bonds of forty pound a piece, and a Seal-Ring of my Grand-fathers.

Prince. A trifle, some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my Lord ; and I said, I heard your Grace say so : and (my Lord) he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouth'd man as he is, and said he would cudgell you.

Prince. What he did not ?

Host. There's neither Faith, Truth, nor Woman-hood in me else.

Falst.

Falst. There's no more faith in thee then in a stu'de Prune ; nor no more truth in thee then in a drawn Fox : and for Woman-hood, Maid-marian may be the Deputies Wife of the Ward to thee. Go you nothing, go.

Hofst. Say, what thing ? what thing ?

Falst. What thing ? why a thing to thank heaven on.

Hofst. I am nothing to thank heaven on, I would thou shouldst know it : I am an honest mans wife : and setting thy Knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

Falst. Setting thy Womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Hofst. Say, what beast, thou knave thou ?

Fal. What beast ? Why an Otter.

Prin. An Otter, Sir John, why an Otter ?

Fal. Why ? she's neither fish nor flesh ; a man knowes not where to have her.

Hofst. Thou art an unjust man in saying so ; thou, or any man knowes where to have me, thou knave thou.

Prince. Thou say'st true, Hofstesse, and he slanders thee most grossely.

Hofst. So he doth you, my Lord, and said this other day, you ought him a thousand pound.

Prince. Sirrah, doe I owe you a thousand pound ?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal ? a million : thy love is worth a million : thou ow'st me thy love.

Hofst. Nay, my Lord, he call'd you Jack, and said he would cudgell you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph ?

Bar. Indeed, Sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yea, if he said my Ring was Copper.

Prin. I say 'tis Copper. Dar'st thou be as good as thy word now ?

Fal. Why, Hal ? thou know'st, as thou art but a man, I dare ; but, as thou art a Prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the Lyons Whelp.

Prin. And why not as the Lyon ?

Fal. The King himself is to be feared as the Lyon : Do'st thou think I'll fear thee, as I fear thy Father ? nay if I doe, let my Girdle break.

Prin. O, if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees. But sirra : there's no room for Faith, Truth, nor Honesty, in this bosome of thine : it is all fill'd up with Guts and Midriffe. Charge an honest Woman with picking thy pocket ? Why thou horson impudent imboist Rascall, if there were any thing in thy Pocket but Tavern Recknings, Memorandums of Bawdy-houses, and one poor penny-worth of Sugar-candy to make thee long-winded : if thy pocket were enrich'd with any other injuries but these, I am a Villain : And yet you will stand to it, you will not Pocket up wrongs. Art thou not asham'd ?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal ? Thou know'st in the state of Innocency, Adam fell : and what would poor Jack Falstaffe doe, in the dayes of Villany ; Thou seest, I have more flesh then another man, and therefore frailty. You confesse then you pickt my Pocket ?

Prin. It appeares so by the Story.

Fal. Hofstesse, I forgive thee : Go make ready Breakfast, love thy Husband, Look to thy Servants, and cherish thy Guests : Thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason : Thou seest, I am pacified still. Nay, I prethee be gone.

Exit Hofstesse.

Now, Hal, to the newes at Court for the Robbery, Lad ? How is that answered ?

Prin. O my sweet Beef :

I must still be good Angell to thee.

The money is paid back again.

Fal. O, I doe not like that paying back, 'tis a double Labour.

Prin. I am good Friends with my Father, and may doe any thing.

Fal. Rob me the Exchequer the first thing thou do'st, and doe it with unwash'd hands too.

Bard. Doe, my Lord.

Prin. I have procured thee, Jack, a Charge of Poore.

Fal. I would it had been of Horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well ? O, for a fine thief, of two and twenty, or thereabout : I am hainously unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these Rebels, they offend none but the Virtuous. I laud them, I praise them.

Prin. Bardolph.

Bar. My Lord.

Prin. Go bear this Letter to Lord John of Lancaster, to my Brother John. This to my Lord of Westmerland : Go Peto, to horse : for thou, and I, Have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner time.

Jack, meet me to morrow in the Temple Hall

At two a clock in the afternoon,

There shalt thou know thy Charge, and there receive Money and Order for their Furniture.

The Land is burning, Percy stands on hie, And either they, or we, must lower lie.

Fal. Rare words : brave world,

Hofstesse, my Breakfast, come :

Oh, I could wish this Tavern were my Drumme.

Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Harry Hotspurre, Worcester and Dowglas.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot, if speaking truth In this fine Age, were not thought flattery, Such attribution should the Dowglas have, As not a Souldier of this seasons stamp, Should go so generall currant through the world. By heaven I cannot flatter : I defie The Tongues of Soothers. But a braver place In my hearts love, hath no man then your Self. Nay, taske me to my word : approve me Lord.

Dow. Thou art the King of Honour : No man so potent breathes upon the ground, But I will Beard him.

Enter a Messenger.

Hot. Do so, and 'tis well. What Letters hast thou there ? I can but thank you.

Mes. These Letters come from your Father.

Hot. Letters from him ?

Why comes he not himself ?

Mess. He cannot come, my Lord, He is grievous sick.

Hot. How ? has he the leisure to be sick now, In such a justling time ? who leads his power ? Under whose Government come they along ?

H h 2

Mess.

Mess. His Letters beares his minde, not I his minde.

Wor. I prethee tell me, doth he keep his Bed ?

Mess. He did, my Lord, four dayes ere I set forth :
And at the time of my departure thence,
He was much fear'd by his Physician.

Wor. I would the state of time had first been whole,
Ere he by sicknesse had been visited ;
His health was never better worth then now.

Hotsp. Sick now? droop now? this sicknesse doth infect
The very Life-blood of our Enterprize,
'Tis catching hisher, even to our Camp.
He writes me here, that inward sicknesse,
And that his friends by deputation
Could not so soon be drawn : nor did he think it meet,
To lay so dangerous and dear a trust
On a Soul remov'd, but on his own.
Yet doth he give us bold advertisement,
I'hat with our small conjunction we should on,
To see how Fortune is dispos'd to us,
For, as he writes, there is no quailing now,
Because the King is certainly possesst
Of all our purposes. What say you to it ?

Wor. Your Fathers sicknesse is a mainie to us.

Hotsp. A perilous Gash, a very Limme lopt off :
And yet, infaith, 'tis not his present want
Seems more then we shall find it.

Were it good, to set the exact wealth of all our states
All at one Cast ? to set so rich a mine
On the nice hazard of one doubtfull hour,
It were not good : for therein should we read
The very bottom, and the Soul of hope,
The very Lift, the very utmost bound
Of all our fortunes.

Dowg. Faith and so we should,
Where now remains a sweet reversion.
We may boldly spend, upon the hope
Of what is to come in :

A comfort of retirement lives in this.

Hotsp. A Randevous, a Home to flie unto,
If that the Devil and Mischance look big
Upon the Maidenhead of our affaires.

Wor. But yet I would your Father had been here :
The quality and heir of our attempt
Brooks no division : It will be thought
By some, that know not why he is away,
That wisdom, loyalty, and meer dislike
Of our proceedings, kept the Earl from hence.
And think, how such an apprehension
May turn the tide of fearfull Faction,
And breed a kind of question in our cause :
For well you know, we of the offering side,
Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement,
And stop all sight-holes, every loop, from whence
The eye of reason may pry in upon us :
This absence of your Father drawes a Curtain,
That shewes the ignorant a kind of fear
Before not dreamt of.

Hotsp. You strain too far.
I ratber of his absence make this use :
It lends a lustre, and more great opinion,
A larger Dare to your great Enterprize,
Then if the Earl were here : for men must think,
If we without his help, can make a Head
To push against the Kingdome : with his help,
We shall o'return it topsie-turvy down.
Yet all goes well, yet all our joynts are whole,

Dowg. As heart can think :

There is not such a word spoke of in Scotland,
At this Dream of Fear.

Enter Sir Richard Vernon.

Hotsp. My Cousin Vernon, welcome by my soul,

Vern. Pray God my newes be worth a welcome, Lord.
The Earl of Westmerland, seven thousand strong,
Is marching hither-wards with Prince John.

Hotsp. No harm : what more ?

Vern. And further, I have learn'd,
The King himself in-person hath set forth,
Or hither-wards intended speedily,
With strong and mighty preparation.

Hotsp. He shall be welcome too,
Where is his Son,
The nimble-footed Mad-cap, Prince of Wales,
And his Comrades, that dash the World aside,
And bid it passe ?

Vern. All furnisht all in Armes,
All plum'd like Estridges, that with the Wind
Baited like Eagles, having lately bath'd,
Glittering in Golden Coats, like Images,
As full of spirit as the Moneth of May,
And gorgeous as the Sun at Mid-summer,
Wanton as youthfull Goats, wild as young Bulls.
I saw young Harry with his Beaver on,
His Cushes on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,
Rise from the ground like feathered Mercnry,
And vaulted with such ease into his Seat,
As if an Angell dropt down from the Clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
And witcht the world with noble Horfemanship,

Hotsp. No more, no more ;
Worse then the Sun in March,
This praise doth nourish Agues : let them come.
They come like Sacrifices in their trimme,
And to the fire-ey'd Maid of smoaky War,
All hot, and bleeding, will we offer them :
The mailed Mars shall on his Altar sit
Up to the eares in blood. I am on fire,
To hear this rich reprizall is so nigh,
And yet not ours. Come, let me take my Horse,
Who is to bear me like a Thunder-bolt,
Against the bosome of the Prince of Wales.
Harry to Harry, shall not Horse to Horse
Meet, and ne're part, till one drop down a Coarse ?
Oh, that Gendower were come.

Vern. There is more newes :
I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along,
He cannot draw his Power this fourteen dayes.

Dowg. That's the worst Tidings that I hear of yet.

Wor. I by my faith, that beares a frosty sound.

Hotsp. What may the Kings whole Battell reach un-to ?

Vern. To thirty thousand :

Hot. Forty let it be,

My Father and Glendower being both away,
The powers of us may serve so great a day.
Come, let us take a muster speedily :
Dooms-day is near ; die all, die merrily.

Dowg. Talk not of dying, I am out of fear
Of death, or deaths hand, for this one half year.

Exeunt omnes.
Scena.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Falstaffe and Bardolph.

Falst. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry, fill me a Bottle of Sack, our Souldiers shall march through: we'll to Sutton-cop-hill to Night.

Bard. Will you give me money, Captain?

Falst. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This Bottle makes an Angell.

Falst. And if it doe, take it for thy labour: and if it make twenty, take them all, I'll answer thy Coynage. Bid my Lieutenant Peto meet me at the Townsend.

Bard. I will Captain: farewell.

Exit.

Falst. If I be not ashamed of my Souldiers, I am a sowe't Gurnet: I have mis-us'd the Kings Presse damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty Souldiers, three hundred and odd pounds. I presse me none but good house-holders, Yeomens Sons: enquire me out contracted Batchellors, such as had been ask'd twice on the Banes: such a Commodity of warm slaves, as had as lieve hear the Devil, as a Drumme; such as fear the report of a Caliver, worse then a struck-Fool, or a hurt Wild-Duck. I prest me none but such Tostes and Butter, with hearts in their Bellies no bigger then Pinnes heads, and they have bought out their services: And now my whole Charge consists of Ancients, Corporals, Lieutenants, Gentlemen of Companies, Slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted Cloth where the Gluttons Dogges licked his Sores; and such as indeed were never Souldiers, but dis-carded unjust Servingmen, younger Sonnes to younger Brothers: Revolted Tapsters and Ostlers, Trade-falne, the Cankers of a calm World, and long peace, ten times more dishonourable, ragged, then an old-fac'd Ancient; and such have I to fill up the rooines of them that have bought out their services: that you would think, that I had a hundred and fifty tatter'd Prodigalls, lately come from Swine-keeping, from eating Draffe and Husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me, I had unloaded all the Gibbers, and prest the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such skar-Crowes: I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat. Nay, and the Villains march wide betwixt the Legges, as if they had Gyves on; for indeed, I had the most of them out of Prison. There's not a Shirt and a halfin all my Company: and the half Shirt is two Napkins tacked together, and thrown over the Shoulders like a Heralds Coat, without sleeves: and the Shirt, to say the truth, stoln from my Host of S. Albans; or the Red-Nose Inne-keeper of Dayntry. But that's all one, they'll finde Linnen enough on every Hedge.

Enter the Prince, and the Lord of Westmerland.

Prince. How now, blown Jack? how now, Quilt?

Falst. What Hal? How now, mad Wag, what a Devil do'st thou in Warwick-shire? My good Lord of Westmerland, I cry you mercy, I thought your Honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

West. Faith, Sir John, 'tis more then time that I were there, and you too: but my Powers are there already. The King, I can tell you, looks for us all: we must away all to Night.

Falst. Tut, never fear me, I am as vigilant as a Cat, to steal Cream.

Prince. I think to steal Cream indeed, for thy theft hath already made thee Butter: but tell me, Jack, whose fellows are these that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine.

Prince. I did never see such pittifull Rascals.

Fal. Tut, tut, good enough to tosse: food for Powder, food for Powder: they'll fill a Pit, as well as better: tust! man, mortall men, mortall men.

Westm. I, but Sir John, me thinks they are exceeding poor and bare, too beggarly.

Fal. Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that; and for their barrenesse, I am sure they never learn'd that of me.

Prin. No, I'll be sworn, unlesse you call three fingers on the Ribs bare. But sirrah make haste. Percy is already in the field.

Fal. What, is the King encamp'd?

West. He is, John, I fear we shall stay too long.

Falst. Well, to the latter end of a Fray, and the beginning of a Feast, fits a dull Fighter, and a keen Guest.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Hotspurre, Worcester, Dowglas, and Vernon.

Hotsp. We'll fight with him to Night.

Worc. It may not be.

Dowg. You give him then advantage.

Vern. Not a whit.

Hotsp. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Vern. So doe we.

Hotsp. His is certain, ours is doubtfull.

Worc. Good Cousin be advis'd, time not to night.

Vern. Doe not, my Lord.

Dowg. You doe not counsell well: You speak it out of fear, and cold heart.

Vern. Doe me no slander, Dowglas: by my Life, And I dare well maintain it with my Life,

If well-respected Honour bid me on,

I hold as little counsell with weak fear,

As you, my Lord, or any Scot that this day lives.

Let it be seen to morrow in the Battell,

Which of us feares.

Dowg. Yea, or to night.

Vern. Content.

Hotsp. To night, say I.

Vern. Come, come, it may not be.

I wonder much, being men of such great leading as you That you foresee not what impediments (are,

Drag back our expedition: certain Horse

Of my Cousin Vernons are not yet come up,

Your Uncle Worcesters Horse came but to day,

And now their pride and mettle is asleep,

Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,

That not a Horse is half the half of himself,

Hotsp. So are the Horse of the Enemy

In generall, journey-bated, and brought low:

The better part of ours are full of rest.

H h 3

Wor.

Worc. The number of the King exceedeth ours :
For Gods sake, Cousin, stay till all come in.

The Trumpet sounds a Parley. Enter Sir Walter Blunt.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the King,
If you vouchsafe me hearing, and respect.

Hotsp. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt :
And would to God you were of our determination.
Some of us love you well : and even those some Envy your great deservings, and good name,
Because you are not of our quality,
But stand against us like an enemy.

Blunt. And heaven defend, but still I should stand so,
So long as out of Limit, and true Rule,
You stand against anointed Majesty.
But to my Charge.

The King hath sent to know
The nature of your griefs, and whereupon
You conjure from the breast of Civil Peace,
Such bold Hostility, teaching his dutious Land
Audacious Cruelty. If that the King
Have any way your good deserts forgot,
Which he confesseth to be manifold,
He bids you name your griefs ; and with all speed
You shall have your desires, with interest :
And Pardon absolute for your self, and these,
Herein mis-led, by your suggestion.

Hotsp. The King is kind :
And well we know, the King
Knowes at what time to promise, when to pay.
My Father, my Uncle, and my self,
Did give him that same Royalty he wears :
And when he was not six and twenty strong,
Sick in the worlds regard, wretched and low,
A poor unminded Out-law, sneaking home,
My Father gave him welcome to the shore :
And when he heard him swear, and vow to God,
He came to be but Duke of Lancaster,
To sue out his Livery, and beg his Peace,
With teares of Innocency, and tearmes of zeal :
My Father, in kind heart and pitty mov'd,
Swore him assistance, and perform'd it too.
Now, when the Lords and Barons of the Realm
Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him,
The more and lesse came in with Cap and Knee,
Met him in Boroughs, Citics, Villages,
Attended him on Bridges, stood in Lanes,
Laid Gifts before him, proffer'd him their Oathes,
Gave him their Heirs, as Pages followed him,
Even at the heeles, in golden multitudes.
He presently, as greatnesse knowes it self,
Steps me a little higher then his Vow
Made to my Father, while his blood was poor,
Upon the naked shore at Ravenpurgh :
And now (forsooth) takes on him to reform
Some certain Edicts, and some strait Décrees,
That lay too heavy on the Common-wealth ;
Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep
Over his Countreys wrongs : and by his Face,
This seeming Brow of Justice, did he win
The hearts of all that he did angle for.
Proceeded further, cut me off the Heads
Of all the Favourites, that the absent King
In deputation left behind him here,

When he was personall in the Irish Warre.

Blunt. Tut, I came not to hear this.

Hot. Then to the point.

In short time after, he depos'd the King,
Soon after that, depriy'd him of his Life :
And in the neck of that, task't the whole State.
To make that worse, suffer'd his Kinsman March,
Who is, if every Owner were right plac'd,
Indeed his King, to be engag'd in Wales,
There, without ransome, to lie forfeited :
Disgrac'd me in my happy Victories,
Sought to intrap me by intelligence,
Rated my Uncle from the Council Boord,
In rage dismiss'd my Father from the Court,
Broke Oath, committing wrong on wrong,
And in conclusion, drove us to seek out
This head of safety ; and withall, to prie
Into his Title : the which we find
Too indirect, for long continuance.

Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the King ?

Hotsp. Not so, Sir Walter.

We'll withdraw a while :

Go to the King, and let there be impawn'd
Some surety for a safe return again,
And in the morning early shall my Uncle
Bring him our purpose : and so farewell.

Blunt. I would you would accept of Grace and Love.

Hotsp. And't may be, so we shall.

Blunt. Pray Heaven you doe.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the Arch-Bishop of York, and Sir Michell.

Arch. Hie, good Sir Michell, bear this sealed Brief
With winged haste to the Lord Marshall,
This to my Cousin Scroop, and all the rest
To whom they are directed.
If you knew how much they do import,
You would make haste.

Sir Mich. My good Lord, I guesse their tenour.

Arch. Like enough you doe.
To morrow, good Sir Michell, is a day,
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Must bide the touch. For, Sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly given to understand,
The King, with mighty and quick-raised Power,
Meets with Lord Harry : and I fear, Sir Michell,
What with the sicknesse of Northumberland,
Whose power was in the first proportion ;
And what with Owen Glendowers absence thence,
Who with them was rated firmly too,
And comes not in, over-rul'd by Prophecies,
I fear the power of Percy is too weak,
To wage an instant tryall with the King.

Sir Mich. Why, my good Lord, you need not fear,
There is Douglas, and Lord Mortimer.

Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.

Sir Mich. But there is Mordake, Vernon, Lord Har-
And there is my Lord of Worcester, (ry Percy,
And a Head of gallant Warriours,
Noble Gentlemen.

Arch.

Arch. And so there is, but yet the King hath drawn
The speciall head of all the Land together:
The Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster,
The Noble Westmerland, and warlike Blunt;
And many more Corrivalls, and dear men
Of estimation, and command in Armes.

Sir M. Doubt not, my Lord, he shall be well oppos'd.

Arch. I hope no lesse: Yet needfull 'tis to fear,
And to prevent the worst, Sir Michell speed;
For if Lord Percy thrive not, ere the King
Disfinis his power, he means to visit us;
For he hath heard of our Confederacie,
And, 'tis but Wisdome to make strong against him:
Therefore make haste, I must go write again
To other Friends: and so farewell, Sir Michell. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster, Earle of Westmerland, Sir Walter Blunt, and Falstaffe.

King. How bloudily the Sun begins to peer
Above yon busky hill: the day looks pale
At his distemperature.

Prin. The Southern winde
Doth play the Trumpet to his purposes,
And by his hollow whistling in the Leaves,
Foretells a Tempest: and a blust'ring day.

King. Then with the losers let it sympathize,
For nothing can seem fowre to them that win.

The Trumpet sounds.

Enter Worcester.

King. How now my Lord of Worster? 'Tis not well
That you and I should meet upon such termes,
As now we meet. You have deceiv'd our trust,
And made us doff our easie Robe of Peace,
To crush our old limbs in ungentle Steele:
This is not well, my Lord, this is not well.
What say you to it? Will you again unknit
This churlish knot of all-abhorred War?
And move in that Obedient Orbe again,
Where you did give a fair and naturall light,
And be no more an exhal'd Meteor,
A prodigie of Fear, and a Portent
Of broached Mischief, to the unborn Times?

Wor. Hear me my Liege:
For mine own part, I could be well content
To entertain the Lag-end of my life
With quiet hours: For I do protest,
I have not fought the day of this dislike.

King. You have not fought it: how comes it then?

Falst. Rebellion lay in his way; and he found it.

Prin. Peace, Chewet, peace.

Wor. It pleas'd your Majesty, to turn your looks
Of Favour, from my Self, and all our House;
And yet I must remember you, my Lord,
We were the first, and dearest of your Friends:
For you, my staffe of Office did I break
In Richard's time, and possted day and night
To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand,

When yet you were in place, and in account
Nothing so strong and fortunate, as I;
It was my Self, my Brother, and his Son,
That brought you home, and boldly did out-dare
The danger of the time. You swore to us,
And you did swear that Oath at Doncaster,
That you did nothing of purpose 'gainst the State,
Nor claim no further, then your new-faln right,
The seat of Gaunt, Dukedome of Lancaster.
To this, we swore our aid: But in short space,
It rain'd down Fortune shewing on your head,
And such a flood of Greatness, fell on you,
What with our help, what with the absent King,
What with the injuries of wanton time,
The seeming sufferances that you had borne,
And the contrarious Windes that held the King
So long in the unlucky Irish Wars,
That all in England did repute him dead:
And from this swarme of fair advantages,
You took occasion to be quickly woo'd,
To gripe the generall sway into your hand,
Forgot your Oath to us at Doncaster,
And being fed by us, you us'd us so,
As that ungentle gull the Cuckows Bird,
Useth the Sparrow, did oppresse our Nest,
Grew by our Feeding, to so great a bulk,
That even our Love durst not come near your sight:
For fear of swallowing: But with nimble wing
We were inforc'd for safety sake, to flye
Out of your sight, and raise this present Head,
Whereby we stand opposed by such means
As you your self, have forg'd against your self,
By unkinde usage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth
Sworn to us in your younger enterprize.

King. These things indeed you have articulated,
Proclaim'd at Market Crosses, read in Churches,
To face the Garment of Rebellion.
With some fine colour, that may please the eye
Of fickle Changelings, and poor Discontents,
Which gape, and rub the Elbow at the news
Of hurly burly Innovation:
And never yet did Insurrection want
Such water-colours, to impaint his cause:
Nor moody Beggars, starving for a time
Of pell-mell havock, and confusion.

Prin. In both our Armies, there is many a soule
Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
If once they joyn in triall. Tell your Nephew,
The Prince of Wales doth joyn with all the world
In praise of Henry Percy: By my Hopes,
This present enterprize set off his head,
I do not think a braver Gentleman,
More Active, valiant, or more valiant young,
More daring, or more bold, is now alive,
To grace this latter Age with noble deeds.
For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
I have a Truant been to Chivalry,
And so I hear, he doth account me too:
Yet this before my Fathers Majesty,
I am content that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation,
And will, to save the bloud on either side,
Try fortune with him, in a Single Fight.

King. And, Prince of Wales, so dare we venter thee,
Albeit, considerations infinite

Do make against it: No, good Worcester, no,
We love our people well; even those we love
That are mislaid upon your Cousins part:
And will they take the offer of our Grace:
Both he, and they, and you, yea, every man
Shall be my Friend again, and I'll be his.
So tell your Cousin, and bring me word,
What he will do. But if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dread correction waite on us,
And they shall do their Office. So be gone,
We will not now be troubled with reply,
We offer fair, take it advisedly,

Exit Worcester.

Prin. It will not be accepted, on my Life,
The Dowglas and the Hotspurre both together,
Are confident against the world in Armes.

King. Hence therefore, every Leader to his charge,
For on their answer will we set on them;
And God befriend us, as our cause is just. Exeunt.

Manet Prince and Falstaffe.

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battell,
And bestride me, so; 'tis a point of friendship.

Prin. Nothing but a Colossus can do thee that friendship:
Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Falst. I would it were bed time, Hal, and all well.

Prin. Why thou owest heaven a death.

Fal. 'Tis not due yet: I would be loath to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that call's not on me? Well, 'tis no matter, Honour pricks me on. But how if honour prick me off when I come on? How then; Can Honour set to a leg? No: or an arme? No: Or take away the grief of a wound? No.
Honour hath no skill in Surgery then? No. What is Honour? a word. What is that word Honour? Ayre: A trim reckoning. Who hath it? He that dy'd a Wednesday. Doth he feele it? No. Doth he bear it? No. Is it insensible then? yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it, therefore I'll none of it. Honour is a meer Scutcheon, and so ends my Catechisme. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Worcester, and Sir Richard Vernon.

Wor. O no, my nephew must not know, Sir Richard,
The liberall kinde offer of the King.

Ver. 'Twere best he did.

Wor. Then we are all undone.
It is not possible, it cannot be,
The King would keep his word in loving us,
He will suspect us still, and finde a time
To punish this offence in other faults:
Supposition, all our lives shall be stuck full of eyes;
For treason is but trusted like the Fox,
Who ne're so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up,
Will have a wilde trick of his Ancestors:
Look how he can, or sad or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our looks,
And we shall feed like Oxen at a stall,
The better cherish'd, still the nearer death.
My Nephews trespasses may be well forgot,
It hath the excuse of youth, and heat of blood,

And an adopted name of priviledge,
A hare-brain'd Hotspurre, govern'd by a Spleen:
All his offences live upon my head,
And on his Fathers. We did train him on,
And his corruption being tane from us,
We as the Spring of all, shall pay for all:
Therefore, good Cousin, let not Harry know
In any case, the offer of the King.

Ver. Deliver what you will, I'll say 'tis so.
Here comes your Cousin.

Enter Hotspurre.

Hor. My Unkle is return'd:
Deliver up, my Lord of Westmerland.
Unkle, what newes?

Wor. The King will bid you battle presently.

Dow. Defie him by the Lord of Westmerland.

Hor. Lord Dowglas: go you and tell him so.

Dow. Marry and shall, and very willingly. Exit Dowglas.

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the King.

Hor. Did you begany? God forbid.

Wor. I told him gently of our grievances,
Of his Oath-breaking: which he mended thus,
By now forswearing that he is forsworne,
He calls us Rebels, Traitors, and will scourge
With haughty armes, this hatefull name in us.

Enter Dowglas.

Dow. Arme Gentlemen, to Armes, for I have thrown
A brave defiance in King Henries teeth:

And Westmerland that was engag'd did bear it,
Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on,

Wor. The Prince of Wales slept forth before the King,
And Nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hor. O, would the quarrell lay upon our heads,
And that no man might draw short breath to day,
But I and Harry Monmouth. Tell me, tell me,
How shew'd his Talking? Seem'd it in contempt?

Ver. No, by my Soule: I never in my life
Did hear a Challenge urg'd more modestly,
Unlesse a Brother should a Brother dare
To gentle exercise, and proove of Armes.
He gave you all the Duties of a Man,
Trim'd up your praises with a Princely tongue,
Spoke your deservings like a Chronicle,
Making you ever better then his praise,
By still dispraising praise, valu'd with you:
And which became him like a Prince indeed,
He made a blushing citall of himself
And chid his Trewant youth so with a Grace,
As if he mastred there a double spirit
Of teaching and of learning instantly:
There did he pause. But let me tell the World,
If he out-live the envy of this day,
England did never owe so sweet a hope,
So much misconstrued in his wantonnesse.

Hor. Cousin, I think thou art enamored
On his Follies: never did I hear

Of any Prince so wilde at Liberty.

But be he as he will, yet once ere night,

I will embrace him with a Souldiers Arme,

That he shall shrink under my curtesie.

Arme, arme with speed. And Fellow's, Souldiers, Friends,

Better consider what you have to do,

Then I that have not well the gift of Tongue,

Can

Can lift your bloud up with perswasion.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord, here are letters for you.

Hor. I cannot read them now.

O Gentlemen, the time of life is short;
To spend that shortnesse basely, were too long.
If life did ride upon a Dials point,
Still ending at the arrivall of an houre,
And if we live, we live to tread on Kings:
If dye; brave death, when Princes dye with us.
Now for our Consciences, the Armes is fair,
When the intent for bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

Mes. My Lord prepare, the King comes on apace,

Hor. I thank him, that he cuts me from my tale:

For I professe not talking: Onely this,
Let each man do his best. And here I draw a Sword,
Whose worthy temper I intend to stain
With the best bloud that I can meet withall,
In the adventure of this perillous day.

Now Esperance Percy, and set on:
Sound all the lofty Instruments of War,
And by that Musick, let us all embrace:
For heaven to earth, some of us never shall,
A second time do such a curtesie.

They embrace, the Trumpets sound, the King entreth with his power, alarum unto the battell. Then enter Dowglas, and Sir Walter Blunt.

Blu. What is thy name, that in battell thus thou cross'est
What honour dost thou seek upon my head? (me?)

Dow. Know then my name is Dowglas,
And do haunt thee in the battle thus,
Because some tell me, that thou art a King.

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Dow. The Lord of Stafford here to day hath bought Thy likeness: for instead of thee, King Harry,
This sword hath ended him, so shall it thee,
Unlesse thou yield thee as a Prisoner.

Blu. I was not born to yield, thou haughty Scot,
And thou shalt finde a King that will revenge
Lord Staffords death.

Fight, Blunt is slain, then enters Hotspurre.

Hor. O Dowglas, hadst thou fought at Holmedon thus,
I never had triumphed o're a Scot.

Dow. All's done, all's won, here breathless lies the King.

Hor. Where?

Dow. Here.

Hor. This Dowglas? No, I know this face full well:
A gallant Knight he was, his name was Blunt,
Semblably furnish'd like the King himself.

Dow. Ah foole: go with thy soule whither it goes,
A borrowed title hast thou bought too dear.

Why didst thou tell me, that thou wert a King?

Hor. The King hath many marching in his Coats.

Dow. Now by my Sword, I will kill all his Coats,
I'll murder all his Wardrobe piece by piece,
Untill I meet the King.

Hor. Up and away,

Our Souldiers stand full fairly for the day. Exeunt.

Alarm, and enter Falstaffe solus.

Fal. Though I could scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot here: here's no scoring, but upon the pate. Soft who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt, there's Honour for you:
here's no vanity, I am as hot as moulten Lead, and as heavy too; heaven keep Lead out of me, I need no more weight then mine own Bowells. I have led my rag of Muffians where they are pepper'd: there's not three of my 150, left alive; and they for the Towns end, to beg during life. But who comes here?

Enter Prince.

Prin. What stand'st thou idle here? Lend me thy sword,
Many a Noble man lies stark and stiff
Under the hooves of vantage enemies,
Whose deaths are unreveng'd. Prethee lend me thy sword.

Fal. O Hal, I prethee give me leave to breath a while:
Turk Gregory never did such deeds in Armes, as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him sure.

Prin. He is indeed, and living to kill thee;
I prethee lend me thy sword.

Falst. Nay, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou getst not my Sword; but take my Pistoll if thou wilt.

Prin. Give it me: What, is it in the Case?

Fal. I, Hal, 'tis hot: There's that will Sack a City.

The Prince drawes out a Bottle of Sack.

Prin. What, is it a time to jett and dally now? Exit.
Throwes it at him.

Falst. If Percy be alive, I'll pierce him: if he do come in my way, so: if he do not, if I come in his (willingly) let him make a Carbonado of me, I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath: Give me life, which if I can save, so: if not, honour comes unlook'd for, and there's an end. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Alarm, excursions, enter the King, the Prince, Lord John of Lancaster, and the Earle of Westmerland.

King. I prethee, Harry, withdraw thy self, thou bleed-est too much: Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.

P. Joh. Not I, my Lord, unlesse I did bleed too.

Prin. I beseech your Majesty make up,
Least your retirement do amaze your friends.

King. I will do so:

My Lord of Westmerland, lead him to his Tent.

West. Come my Lord, I'll lead you to your Tent.

Prin. Lead me, my Lord? I do not need your help,
And heaven forbid a shallow scratch should drive
The Prince of Wales from such a field as this,
Where stain'd Nobility lyes troden on,
And Rebels Armes triumph in massacres.

Joh. We breath too long: come, cousin Westmerland,
Our duty this way lyes, for heavens sake come.

Prin. By heaven thou hast deceived me, Lancaster,
I did not think thee Lord of such a spirit:

Before, I lov'd thee as a brother John;

But now, I do respect thee as my Soule,

King. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point,
With lustier maintenance then I did look for
Of such an ungrown Warriour.

Prin. O this Boy, lends mettle to us all. Exit.

Enter Dowglas.

Dow. Another King? They grow like Hydra's heads:
I am the Dowglas fatall to all those

That were those colours on them. What art thou
That counterfeit'st the person of a King?

King. The King himself: who Dowglas grieves at heart
So

So many of his shadows thou hast met,
And not the very King. I have two Boyes
Seek Percy and thy self about the Field:
But seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
I will assay thee: so defend thy self.

Dow. I fear thou art another counterfeit:
And yet in faith thou bear'st thee like a King:
But mine I am sure thou art, who ere thou be,
And thus I win thee. They fight, the K. being in danger.

Enter Prince.

Prin. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like Never to hold it up again: the Spirits
Of valiant Sherly, Stafford, Blunt, are in my Armes;
It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee,
Who never promiseth, but means to pay.

They fight; Dowglas flyeth.

Cheerly My Lord: how fares your Grace?
Sir Nicholas Ganssey hath for succour sent,
And so hath Clifton: I'll to Clifton straight.

King. Stay, and breath a while.
Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion,
And shew'd thou mak'st some tender of my life
In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

Prin. O heaven, they did me too much injury,
That ever said I hearkned to your death.
If it were so, I might have let alone
The insulting hand of Dowglas over you,
Which would have been as speedy in your end,
As all the poysonous Potions in the world,
And sav'd the Treacherous labour of your Son.

K. make up to Clifton, I'll to Sir Nichol. Ganssey. Exit.

Enter Hotspur.

Hot. If I mistake not thou art Harry Monmouth.

Prin. Thou speakest as if I would deny my name.

Hot. My name is Harry Percy.

Prin. Why then I see a very valiant rebell of that name.
I am the Prince of Wales, and think not Percy,
To share with me in glory any more:
Two Stars keep not their motion in one Sphere,
Nor can one England brook a double reigne,
Of Harry Percy, and the Prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it, Harry, for the houre is come
To end the one of us; and would to heaven,
Thy name in Armes, were now as great as mine.

Prin. I'll make it greater, ere I part from thee,
And all the budding Honours on thy Crest,
I'll crop to make a Garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brook thy Vanities.

Fight.

Enter Falstaffe.

Fal. Well said, Hal, to it Hal. Nay you shall find no
Boyes play here, I can tell you.

Enter Dowglas, he fights with Falstaffe, who falls down as if he were dead. The Prince killeth Percy.

Hot. Oh Harry, thou hast rob'd me of my youth:
I better brook the losse of bitter life,
Then those proud titles thou hast won of me,
They wound my thoughts worse, then the sword my flesh:
But thought's the slave of Life, and Life Times foole;
And Time, that takes survey of all the world,
Must have a stop. O, I could Prophesie,
But that the Earth, and the cold hand of death,
Lyes on my Tongue: No, Percy, thou art dust.
And food for-----

Prin. For Wormes, brave Percy. Farewell great heart:
Ill-weav'd Ambition, how much art thou shrunk?
When that this body did contain a spirit,

A Kingdome for it was too small a bound:

But now two paces of the vilest Earth
Is room enough. This Earth that bears the dead,
Bears not alive so stout a Gentleman.

If thou wer't sensible of curtesie,
I should not make so great a show of Zeale.
But let my favours hide thy mangled face,
And even in thy behalfe, I'll thank my selfe
For doing these fair Rites of Tenderesse.
Adiew, and take thy praise with thee to heaven,
Thy ignominy sleep with thee in the grave,
But not remembred in thy Epitaph.
What? Old Acquaintance? Could not all this flesh
Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell:
I could have better spar'd a better man.
O, I should have a heavy misse of thee,
If I were much in love with Vanity.
Death hath not struck so fat a Dear to day,
Though many dearer in this bloody Fray:
Imbowell'd will I see thee by and by,
Till then, in bloud? by Noble Percy lye. Exit.

Falstaffe riseth up.

Falst. Imbowell'd? If thou imbowell me to day, I'll give you leave to powder me, and eat me too to morrow.
Twas time to counterfeit, or that hot Termagant Scot, had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit? I am no counterfeit; to dye, is to be a counterfeit, for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man: But to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeed. The better part of Valour, is Discretion; in the which better part, I have saved my life. I am afraid of this Gun-powder Percy though he be dead. How if he should counterfeit too, and rise? I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit: therefore I'll make him sure:
yea, and I'll swear I kill'd him. Why may not he rise as well as I? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and no-body sees me. Therefore, sirra, with a new wound in your thigh come you along with me. Takes Hotspur on his back.

Enter Prince, and John of Lancaster.

Prin. Come Brother John, full bravely hast thou sleight thy Maiden sword.

John. But soft, who have we here?

Did you not tell me this fat man was dead?

Prin. I did, I saw him dead,
Breathlesse, and bleeding on the ground: Art thou alive?
Or is it fantasie that playes upon our eye-sight?
I prethee speak, we will not trust our eyes
Without our ears. Thou art not what thou seem'st.

Falst. No, that's certain: I am not a double man: but if I am not Jack Falstaffe, then am I a Jack: There is Percy, if your Father will do me any Honor, so if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look either to be Earle or Duke, I can assure you.

Prin. Why, Percy I kill'd my self, and saw thee dead.

Fal. Did'st thou? Lord, Lord, how the world is given to Lying? I grant you I was down, and out of Breath, and so was he, but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long houre by Shrewsbury clock, if I may be believed, so: if not, let them that should reward Valour, bear the sinne upon their own heads. I'll take't on my death
I gave him this wound in the Thigh: if the man were alive and would deny it, I would make him eat a peece of my sword.

John. This is the strangest tale that e're I heard.

Prin. This is the strangest Fellow, Brother John.

Come

Come bring your luggage nobly on your back :
For my part, if a lye may do the grace,
I'll guil'd it with the happiest termes I have.

A Retreat is sounded.

The Trumpets sound Retreat, the day is ours :
Come Brother, let's to the highest of the field,
To see what Friends are living, who are dead. Exeunt.

Fal. I'll follow as they say, for Reward. He that rewards me, heaven reward him. If I do grow great again, I'll grow lesse ? For I'll purge, and leave Sack, and live cleanly, as a Noble man should do. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

The Trumpets sound.

Enter King, Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster, Earle of Westmerland, with Worcester and Vernon Prisoners.

King. Thus ever did Rebellion finde Rebuke.
Ill-spirited Worcester, did we not send Grace,
Pardon, and termes of Love to all of you ?
And would'st thou turn our offers contrary ?
Misuse the tenor of thy Kinsmans trust ?
Three Knights upon our party slain to day,
A Noble Earle and many a creature else,
Had been alive this houre,
If like a Christian thou had'st truly borne,
Betwixt our Armies, true Intelligence.

Wor. What I have done, my safety urg'd me to,

And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be avoided, it falls on me.

King. Bear Worcester to death, and Vernon too.
Other Offenders we will pause upon.

Exit Worcester and Vernon

How goes the Field ?

Prin. The Noble Scot Lord Dowglas, when he saw
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
The Noble Percy slain, and all his men,
Upon the foot of fear, fled with the rest ;
And falling from a hill, he was so bruiz'd
That the Pursuers took him. At my Tent
The Dowglas is, and I beseech your Grace,
I may dispose of him.

King. Withall my heart.

Prin. Then Brother John of Lancaster,
To you this honourable bounty shall belong :
Go to the Dowglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless and free :
His Valour shewn upon our Crests to day,
Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,
Even in the bosome of our Adversaries.

King. Then this remains: that we divide our Power.
You Son John, and my Cousin Westmerland
Towards York shall bend you, with your deereft speed
To meet Northumberland, and the Prelate Scroop,
Who (as we hear) are busily in Armes.
My Self, and Son Harry will towards Wales,
To fight with Glendower, and the Earle of March.
Rebellion in this Land shall lose his way,
Meeting the Check of such another day ;
And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be wonne. Exeunt.

F I N I S.

The Second Part of Henry the Fourth,

Containing his Death : and Coronation of King Henry the Fifth.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

INDUCTION.

Enter Rumor.

Open your Ears: For which of you will stop
The vent of Hearing, when loud Rumor speaks?
I, from the Orient, to the drooping West
(Making the wind my Post-horse) still unfold
The Acts commenced on this Ball of Earth.
Upon my Tongue continuall Slanders ride,
The which, in every Language, I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of them with false Reports:
I speak of Peace, while covert Enmity
(Under the smile of safety) wounds the World:
And who but Rumor, who but onely I
Make fearfull Musters, and prepar'd Defence,
Whil'st the big year, swolne with some other griefs,
Is thought with childe, by the stern Tyrant War;
And no such matter. Rumor is a Pipe
Blown by Surmise, Jealousies, Conjectures;
And of so easie, and so plain a stop,
That the blunt Monster, with uncounted heads,
The still discordant, wavering Multitude,
Can play upon it. But what need I thus
My well-known Body to Anathomize
Among my household? Why is Rumor here?
I run before King Harries victory,
Who in a bloody field by Shrewsbury
Hath beaten down young Hotspurre, and his Troops,
Quenching the flame of bold rebellion,
Even with the Rebels blood. But what mean I
To speak of truth at first? My Office is
To noyse abroad, that Harry Monmouth fell
Under the Wrath of Noble Hotspurr's Sword:
And that the King, before the Dowglas Rage
Stoop'd his Anointed head, as low as death.
This have I rumor'd through the peasant-Towns,
Between the Royall Field of Shrewsbury,
And this Worm-eaten-Hole of ragged Stone,
Where Hotspurr's Father, old Northumberland, Lyes crafty sick. The Posts come tyring on,
And not a man of them brings other news
Then they have learn'd of me. From Rumors Tongues,
They bring smooth-Comforts-false, worse then True-wongs.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lord Bardolfe, and the Porter.

L. Bar. Who keeps the Gate hoa?
Where is the Earle?

Por. What shall I say you are?

L. Bar. Tell thou the Earle
That the Lord Bardolfe doth attend him here.

Por. His Lordship is walk'd forth into the Orchard,
Please it your Honor, knock but at the Gate,
And he himself will answer.

Enter Northumberland.

L. Bar. Here comes the Earle.

Nor. What news Lord Bardolfe? Ev'ry minute now
Should be the Father of some Stratagem;
The Times are wilde: Contention (like a Horse
Full of high feeding) madly hath broke loose,
And bears down all before him:

L. Bar. Noble Earle,
I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.

Nor. Good, and heaven will.

L. Bar. As good as heart can wish:
The King is almost wounded to the death:
And in the Fortune of my Lord your Son,
Prince Harry slain outright: and both the Blunts
Kill'd by the hand of Dowglas. Young Prince John,
And Westmerland, and Stafford, fled the Field.
And Harry Monmouth's Brawn (The Hulk Sir John)
Is prisoner to your Son. O, such a Day.
(So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly wonne)
Came not, till now, to dignifie the Times
Since Casars Fortunes.

Nor. How is this deriv'd?

Saw you the Field? Came you from Shrewsbury?

L. Bar. I spake with one (my L.) that came from thence
A Gentleman well bred, and of good name,
That freely render'd me this news for true.

Nor. Here comes my servant Travers, whom I sent
On Tuesday last, to listen after News.

Enter Travers.

L. Bar. My Lord, I over-rode him on the way.
And he is furnish'd with no certainties,
More then he (haply) may retaille from me.

Nor. Now Travers, what good tidings comes from you?
Tra.

Tra. My Lord, John Umfrevill turn'd me back
With joyfull tydings; and (being better hors'd)
Out-rode me. After him, came spurring hard
A Gentleman (almost fore-spent with speed)
That stopp'd by me, to breathe his bloodied horse.
He ask'd the way to Chester: And of him
I did demand what Newes from Shrewsbury:
He told me, that Rebellion had ill luck,
And that young Harry Percies Spurre was cold.
With that he gave his able Horse the head,
And bending forward strook his able heels
Against the panting sides of his poor Jade
Up to the Rowell head, and starting so,
He seem'd in running, to devoure the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha? Again:

Said he young Harry Percies Spurre was cold?
(Of Hosspurre, cold-Spurre) that Rebellion,
Had met ill luck?

L. Bar. My Lord: I'll tell you what,
If my young Lord your Son, have not the day,
Upon mine Honour, for a sikken point
I'll give my Barony. Never talk of it.

Nor. Why should the Gentleman that rode by Travers
Give then such instances of Losse?

L. Bar. Who he?
He was some hielding Fellow, that had stoln
The Horse he rode on: and upon my life
Spake at adventure. Look, here comes more Newes:

Enter Morton.

Nor. Yea, this mans brow, like to a Title-leaf,
Foretells the Nature of a Tragick Volume:
So looks the Strond, when the Imperious Flood
Hath left a witneste Usurpation.

Say, Morton, did'st thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury (my Noble Lord)
Where hatefull death put on his ugliest Mask
To fright our party.

Nor. How doth my Son, and Brother?
Thou trembl'st; and the whitenesse in thy Cheek
Is apter then thy Tongue, to tell thy Errand.
Even such a man, so faint, so spiritlesse,
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-be-gone,
Drew Priams Curtain, in the dead of night,
And would have told him, half his Troy was burn'd.
But Priam found the Fire, ere he his Tongue:
And I, my Percies death, ere thou report'st it.
This, thou would'st say: Your Son did thus, and thus:
You Brother, thus. So fought the Noble Douglas,
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds.
But in the end (to stop my Ear indeed)
Though hast a Sigh, to blow away this Praise,
Ending with Brother, Son, and all are dead.

Mor. Douglas is living, and your Brother, yet:
But for my Lord, your Son.

No. Why he is dead.
See what a ready tongue suspicion hath:
He that but feares the thing, he would not know.
Hath by Instinct, knowledge from others Eyes,
That what he fear'd, is chanc'd. Yet speak (Morton)
Tell thou thy Earl, his Divination Lies,
And I will take it as a sweet Disgrace,
And make thee rich, for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great, to be (by me) gainfaid.

Your Spirit is too true, your Feares too certain.

Nor. Yet for all this, say not that Percy's dead.
I see a strange Confession in thine Eye:

Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it Fear, or Sin,
To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so:

The Tongue offends not, that reports his death:

And he doth sin that doth belye the dead:

Not he, which sayes the dead is not alive:

Yet the first bringer of unwelcome Newes

Hath but a loosing Office: and his Tongue,

Sounds ever after as a sullen Bell

Remembred, knolling a departing Friend,

L. Bar. I cannot think (my Lord) your Son is dead.

Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe
That, which I would to heaven I had not seen.

But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state,

Rend'ring faint quittance (wearied, and out-breath'd)

To Henry Monmouth, whose swift wrath beat down

The never-daunted Percy to the earth,

From whence (with life) he never more sprung up.

In few; his death (whose spirit lent a fire,

Even to the dullest Peazant in his Camp)

Being bruited once, took fire and heat away

From the best temper'd Courage in his Troops.

For from his Mettle was his Party steel'd;

Which once in him abated all the rest

Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy Lead,

And as the thing that's heavy in it self,

Upon enforcement, flies with greatest speed,

So did our Men, heavy in Hosspurre's losse,

Lend to this weight, such lightnesse with their Fear.

That Arrows fled not swifter toward their ayme,

Then did our Souldiers (ayming at their safety)

Fly from the field. Then was that Noble Worcester

Too soon ta'ne prisoner: and that furious Scot,

(The bloody Douglas) whose well-labouring sword

Had three times slain th' appearance of the King,

'Gan vail his stomach, and did grace the shame

Of those that turn'd their back: and in his flight,

Stumbling in Fear, was took. The summe of all,

Is, that the King hath won: and hath sent out

A speedy power, to encounter you my Lord,

Under the conduct of young Lancaster

And Westmerland. This is the Newes at full.

Nor. For this, I shall have time enough to mourn.

In Poyson there is Physick: and this newes

(Having been well) that would have made me sick,

Being sick, hath in some measure made me well.

And as the Wretch, whose Feaver-weakened joynts,

Like strengthlesse Hinges, buckle under life,

Impatient of his Fit, breaks like a fire

Out of his Keepers armes: Even so, my Limbs

(Weakned with grief) being now inrag'd with grief,

Are thrice themselves. Hence therefore thou nice crutch,

A scaly Gauntlet now, with joynts of Steel

Must glove his hand. And hence thou sickly Quoif,

Thou art a guard too wanton for the head,

Which Princes flesh'd with Conquest, ayme to hit.

Now bind thy Brows with Iron, and approach

The ragged'st hour that Time and Spight dare bring

To frown upon th' enrag'd Northumberland.

Let Heaven kisse Earth: now let not Natures hand

Keep the wild Flood confin'd: Let Order die,

And let the world no longer be a stage

To feed Contention in a lingring Act:

But let one spirit of the first-born Cain,

Reign in all bosomes, that each heart being set
On bloody Courses, the rude Scene may end,
And darknesse be the burier of the dead. (Honour.

L. Bar. Sweet Earl, divorce not wisdom from your

Mor. The lives of all your loving Conspirers
Lean on your health, the which if you give o're
To stormy Passion, must perforce decay.
You call th'event of War (my Noble Lord)
And sumn'd the account of Chance, before you said,
Let us make head: It was your presumize,
That in the dole of blows, your Son might drop.
You knew he walk'd o're perils, on an edge
More likely to fall in, then to get o're:
You were advis'd his flesh was capable
Of Wounds, and Scars; and that his forward Spirit
Would lift him, where most trade of danger rang'd,
Yet did you say, go forth: and none of this (Though strongly apprehended) could restrain
The stiffe-born action: what hath then befall'n?
Or what hath this bold enterprize brought forth,
More then that Being, which was like to be?

L. Bar. We all that are engaged to this losse,
Knew that we venter'd on such dangerous Seas,
That if we wrought out life, was ten to one:
And yet we venter'd for the gain propos'd,
Choak'd the respect of likely peril fear'd,
And since we are o're-set, venter again.

Come, we will all put forth; Body, and Goods.

Mor. 'Tis more then time: And (my most noble Lord)

I hear for certain, and do speak the truth:
The gentle Arch-Bishop of York is up
With well appointed Powers: he is a man
Who with a double Surety bindes his Followers.
My Lord (your Son) had onely but the Corps,
But shadows, and the shews of men to fight.
For that same word (Rebellion) did divide
The action of their bodies, from their souls,
And they did fight with queasinesse, constrain'd
As men drink Potions; that their Weapons only
Seem'd on our side: but for their Spirits and Souls,
This word (Rebellion) it had froze them up,
As Fish are in a Pond. But now the Bishop
Turns Insurrection to Religion,
Suppos'd sincere, and holy in his Thoughts:
He's follow'd both with Body, and with Minde:
And doth enlarge his Rising, with the blood
Of fair King Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret Stones,
Derives from heaven his Quarrell, and his Cause:
Tells them, he doth bestride a bleeding Land,
Gasping for life, under great Bullingbrook,
And more, and lesse, do flock to follow him.

North. I knew of this before. But to speak truth,
This present grief had wip'd it from my mind.
Go in with me, and counsell every man
The aptest way for safety, and revenge:
Get Posts, and Letters; and make Friends with speed,
Never so few, nor never yet more need. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaffe, and Page.

Fal. Sirra, you giant, what says the Doct. to my water?

Pag. He said, sir, the water it self was a good healthy water: but for the party that ow'd it, he might have more diseases then he knew for.

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me: the brain of this foolish compounded Clay-man, is not able to invent any thing that tends to laughter, more then I invent, or is invented on me. I am not onely witty in my self, but the cause that wit is in other men. I doe here walk before thee, like a Sow, that hath o'rewhelm'd all her Litter, but one. If the Prince put thee into my Service for any other reason, then to set me off, why then I have no judgement. Thou horson Mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap, then to wait at my heeles. I was never maim'd with an Agot till now: but I will set you neither in Gold, nor Silver, but in vilde apparell, and send you back again to your Master, for a Jewell. The Juvenall (the Prince your Master) whose Chin is not yet fledg'd, I will sooner have a beard grow in the Palm of my hand, then he shall get one on his cheek: yet he will not stick to say, his Face is a Face-Royall. Heaven may finish it when he will, it is not a hair amisse yet: he may keep it still as a Face-Royall, for a Barber shall never earn six pence out of it; and yet he will be crowing, as if he had writ man ever since his Father was a Batchel-lor. He may keep his own Grace, but he is almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said M. Dombledon, about the Satten for my short Cloak, and Slops?

Pag. He said, sir, you should procure him better Assurance, then Bardolfe: he would not take his Bond and yours, he lik'd not the Security.

Fal. Let him be damn'd like the Glutton, may his Tongue be hotter, a horson Achitophel, a Rascally-yea-forsooth-knave, to bear a Gentleman in hand, and then stand upon Security? The horson smooth-pates doe now wear nothing but high shooes, and bunches of Keyes at their girdles: and if a man is through with them in honest Taking-up, then they must stand upon Security: I had as lief they would put Rats-bane in my mouth, as offer to stop it with Security. I look'd he should have sent me two and twenty yards of Satten (as I am a true Knight) and he sends me Security. Well, he may sleep in Security, for he hath the horn of Abundance: and the lightnesse of his Wife shines through it, and yet cannot he see, though he have his own Lanthorn to light him.
Where's Bardolfe?

Pag. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your Worship a Horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paules, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield. If I could get me a wife in the Stewes, I were Mann'd, Hors'd, and Wiv'd.

Enter Chief Justice, and Servant.

Pag. Sir, here comes the Nobleman that committed the Prince for striking him, about Bardolfe.

Fal. Wait close, I will not see him.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there;

Ser. Falstaffe, and't please your Lordship.

Just. He that was in question for the Robbery?

Ser. He, my Lord, but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury: and (as I hear) is now going with some Charge to the Lord John of Lancaster.

Just. What, to York? Call him back again.

Ser. Sir John Falstaffe.

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Pag. You must speak lowder, my Master is deaf.

Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of any thing good.
Go pluck him by the Elbow. I must speak with him.

Ser. Sir John.

Fal. What? a young knave & beg? Is there not wars? Is there not employment? Doth not the K. lack subjects? do not the Rebels want Soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg, then to be on the worst side, were it worse then the name of Rebellion can tell how to make it.

Ser. You mistake me, Sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? Setting my Knight-hood, and my Souldiership aside, I had lyed in my throat, if I had said so.

Ser. I pray you (Sir) then set your Knighthood and your Souldiership aside; and give me leave to tell you, you lye in your throat, If you say I am any other then an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so? I lay aside that which grows to me? If thou gett'st any leave of me, hang me, if thou tak'st leave, thou wer't better be hang'd: you Hunt-counter: hence, avant.

Ser. Sir, my Lord would speak with you.

Just. Sir John Falstaffe, a word with you.

Fal. My good Lord: give your Lordship good time of the day. I am glad to see your Lordship abroad: I heard say your Lordship was sick. I hope your Lordship goes abroad by advice. Your Lordship (though not clean past your youth) hath yet some smack of age in you: some relish of the saltneffe of time: and I most humbly beseech your Lordship, to have a reverend care of your health.

Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your Expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. If it please your Lordship, I hear his Majesty is return'd with some discomfort from Wales.

Just. I talk not of his Majesty: you would not come when I sent for you?

Fal. And I hear moreover, his Highnesse is faine into this same whorson Apoplexy.

(you.

Just. Well, heaven mend him. I pray let me speak with

Fal. This Apoplexy is (as I take it) a kind of Lethargy, a sleeping of the blood, a horson Tingling.

Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath its originall from much grief; from study and perturbation of the brain. I have read the cause of his effects in Galen. It is a kind of deafnesse.

Just. I think you are faine into that disease: for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well (my Lord) very well: rather an't please you) it is the disease of not Listning, the malady of not Marking, that I am troubled withall.

Just. To punish you by the heels, would amend the attention of your ears, and I care not if I be your Physitian.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my Lord; but not so patient: your Lordship may minister the Potion of imprisonment to me, in respect of Poverty: but how I should be your Patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or indeed, a scruple it self.

Just. I sent for you (when there were matters against you for your life) to speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned Council, in the Laws of this Land-service, I did not come.

Just. Well, the truth is (sir John) you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my Belt, cannot live in leis.

Just. Your Means is very slender, and your waste great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise: I would my Means were greater, and my Waste slenderer.

Just. You have misled the youthfull Prince.

Fal. The young Prince hath misled me. I am the Fellow with the great belly, and he my Dog.

Just. Well, I am loth to gall a new-heal'd wound: your dayes service at Shrewsbury, hath a little gilded over your Nights exploit on Gads-hill. You may thank the unquiet time, for your quiet o're-posting that Action.

Fal. My Lord?

(Wolf.

Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping

Fal. To wake a Wolf, is as bad as to smell a Fox.

Just. What? you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A Wassell-Candle, my Lord; all Tallow: if I did say of Wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Just. There is not a white hair on your face, but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravy, gravy, gravy.

Just. You follow the young Prince up and down, like his evil Angel.

Fal. Not so (my Lord) your ill Angel is light: but I hope, he that looks upon me, will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects I grant, I cannot go: I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these Costormongers dayes, that true valour is turn'd Bear-heard. Pregnancy is made a Tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving Recknings: all the other gifts appertinent to man (as the malice of this Age shapes them) are not worth a Goose-berry. You that are old, consider not the capacities of us that are young: you measure the heat of our Livers, with the bitterness of your galls: and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wagg too.

Just. Doe you set down your name in the scrowle of youth, that are writen down old, with all the Characters of age? Have you not a moist eye? a dry hand? a yellow cheek? a white beard? a decreasing leg? an increasing belly? is not your voyce broken? your wind short? your wit single? and every part about you blasted with Antiquity? and will you call your self young? Fy, fie, fie, Sir John.

Fal. My Lord, I was born with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voyce, I have lost it with hollowing and singing of Anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not. The truth is, I am onely old in judgement and understanding, and he that will caper with me for a thousand Marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him. For the box oth' ear that the Prince gave you, he gave it like a rude Prince, and you took it like a sensible Lord. I have checkt him for it, and the young Lyon repents: Marry not in sack-cloth, but in new Silk, and old Sack.

Just. Well, heaven send the Prince a better companion.

Fal. Heaven send the Companion a better Prince: I cannot rid my hands of him.

Just. Well, the King hath sever'd you and Prince Harry, I hear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster, against the Archbishop, and the Earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yes, I thank your pretty sweet wit for it: but look you pray, (all you that kisse my Lady Peace at home) that our Armies joyn not in a hot day: for if I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily: if it be a hot day, if I brandish any thing but my Bottle, would I might never spit white againe: There is not a dangerous Action can peepe out his head, but I am thrust upon it. Well, I cannot last ever.

Just. Well, be honest, be honest, and heaven bleesse your Expedition.

Fal. Will your Lordship lend me a thousand pound, to furnish me forth?

Just. Not a penny, not a penny: you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well. Commend me to my Cousin Westmerland.

Exit.

Fal. If I do, fillop me with a three-man-Beetle. A man can no more separate Age and Covetousnesse, then he can Part young limbs and lechery : but the Gowt galls the one, and the pox pinches the other ; and so both the Decrees prevent my curses. Boy ?

Pag. Sir.

Fal. What money is in my purse ?

Pag. Seven groats, and two pence.
