Fal. I can get no remedy against this Consumption of the purse. Borrowing onely lingers, and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this Letter to my Lord of Lancaster, this to the Prince, this to the Earl of Westmerland, and this to old Mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry, since I perceiv'd the first white hair on my chin. About it : you know where to find me. A pox of this Gowt, or a Gowt of this Pox : for the one or th'other playes the rogue with my great toe : It is no matter, if I doe halt, I have the Warrs for my colour, and my Pension shall seem the more reasonable : A good wit will make use of any thing : I will turn diseases to commodity

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Archbishop, Hastings, Mowbray, & Lor. Bardolfe.

Ar. Thus have you heard our causes, and know our And my most noble Friends, I pray you all (Means : Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes, And first (Lord Marshall) what say you to it ?

Mow. I well allow the occasion of our Armes, But gladly would be better satisfied, How (in our Means) we should advance our selves To look with forehead bold and big enough Upon the Power and Puissance of the King.

Hast. Our present Musters grow upon the File To five and twenty thousand men of choice : And our Supplies, live largely in the hope Of great Northumberland, whose bosome burns With an-incensed Fire of Injuries.

L. Bar. The question then (Lord Hastings) standeth Whether our present five and twenty thousand (thus, May hold up head without Northumberland :

Hast. With him we may.

L. Bar. I marry, there's the point ; But if without him we be thought too feeble, My judgement is, we should not step too far Till we had his Assistance by the hand. For in a Theam so bloody fac'd as this, Conjecture, Expectation, and Surmise Of Aides uncertain, should not be admitted.

Arch. 'Tis true, Lord Bardolfe, for indeed It was young Hoisprres case at Shrewsbury.

L. Bar. It was (my Lord) who lin'd himself with hope, Eating the aire, on promise of Supply, Flattring himself with Project of a power, Much smaller then the smallest of his Thoughts, And so with great imagination (Proper to mad men) led his Powers to death, And (winking) leap'd into destruction.

Hast. But (by your leave) it never yet did hurt, To lay down likely-hoods, and forms of hope.

L. Bar. Yes, if this present quality of war, Indeed the instant action : a cause on foot, Lives so in hope : As in an early Spring, We see th'appearing buds, which to prove fruit, Hope gives not so much warrant, as Despair That Frosts will bite them. When we mean to build, We first survey the Plot, then draw the Modell,

And when we see the figure of the house, Then must we rate the cost of the Erection, Which if we find out-weighs ability, What doe we then, but draw a-new the Modell In fewer Offices (Or at least, desist To build at all ? Much more, in this great work, (Which is (almost) to pluck a Kingdome down, And set another up) should we survey The plot of Situation, and the Modell, Consent upon a sure Foundation : Question Surveyors, know our own estate. How able such a Work to undergo, To weigh against his Opposite ? or else, We fortifie in Paper, and in Figures, Using the Names of men, instead of men : Like one that draws the Modell of a house Beyond his power to build it ; who (half through) Gives o're, and leaves his part-created Cost A naked subject to the Weeping Clouds, And waste, for churlish Winters tyranny.

Hast. Grant that our hopes (yet likely of fair birth) Should be still-born : and that we now possesse The utmost man of expectation :

I think we are a Body strong enough (Even as we are) to equall with the King.

L. Bar. What is the King but five & twenty thousand ?

Hast. To us no more : nay not so much, Lord Bardolfe. For his divisions (as the Times do brawl) Are in three Heads : one Power against the French, And one against Glendower : Perforce a third Must take up us : So is the unfirm King In three divided : and his Coffers found With hollow Poverty, and Emptinesse.

Ar. That he should draw his several strengths together, And come against us in full puissance, Need not be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so, He leaves his back unarm'd, the French, and Welch Baying him at the heels : never fear that.

L. Bar. Who is it like should lead his Forces hither ?

Hast. The Duke of Lancaster and Westmerland : Against the Welch himself, and Harry Monmouth. But who is substituted 'gainst the French, I have no certain notice.

Arch. Let us on :

And publish the occasion of our Armes. The Common-wealth is sick of their own choyce, Their over-greedy love hath surfett'd : An habitation giddy, and unsure Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart. O thou fond Many, with what loud applause Didd'st thou beat heaven with blessing Bullingbrook, Before he was, what thou would'st have him be ? And being now trimm'd up in thine own desires, Thou (beastly Feeder) art so full of him, That thou provok'st thy self to cast him up. So, so, (thou common Dog) didst thou disgorge Thy glutton-bosome of the Royal Richard, And now thou would'st eat thy dead vomit up, And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these Times ? They, that when Richard liv'd, would have him die. Are now become enamour'd on his grave. Thou that threw'st dust upon his goodly head, When through proud London he came sighing on, After th'admired heels of Bullingbrook, Cui'st now, O Earth yield us that King again,

And

And take thou this (O thoughts of men accurs'd)
Past, and to come, seems best; things present, worst.
Mow. Shall we go draw our numbers, and set on?
Hast. We are Times subjects, and Time bids, be gon.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Hostesse, with two Officers, Fang, and Snare.

Hostesse. Mr. Fang, have you entred the Action?

Fang. It is enter'd.

Host. Where's your Yeoman? Is it a lusty yeoman? Will he stand to it?

Fang. Sirra, where's Snare?

Host. I, I, good M. Snare.

Snare. Here, here.

Fang. Snare, we must Arrest Sir John Falstaffe.

Host. I, good M. Snare, I have enter'd him, and all.

Sn. It may chance cost some of us our lives: he will stab.

Host. Alas-the-day: take heed of him: he stabb'd me in mine own house, and that most beastly: he cares not what mischief he doth, if his weapon be out. He will foyn like any devil, he will spare neither man, woman, nor child.

Fan. If I can close with him, I care not for his thrust.

Host. No, nor I neither: I'll be at your elbow.

Fang. If I but fist him once: if he come but within my Vice.

Host. I am undone with his going: I warrant he is an infinitive thing upon my score. Good M. Fang, hold him sure: good M. Snare, let him not scape, he comes continually to Pie-corner (saving your manhoods) to buy a Saddle, and he is invited to dinner to the Lubbers-head in Lombard-street to M. Smooches the Silkman. I pray ye since my Action is enter'd, and my Case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred Mark is a long one, for a poor lone woman to bear: and I have born, and born, and born; and have bin sub'd off, and sub'd off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing, unlesse a Woman should be made an Ass and a Beast, to bear every Knaves wrong.

Enter Falstaffe and Bardolfe.

Yonder he comes, and that arrant Malmsey-Nose Bardolfe with him, do your offices, do your offices: M. Fang, and M. Snare, do me, do me, do me your offices.

Fal. How now? whose Mare's dead? what's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mistr. Quickly.

Fal. Away Varlets, draw Bardolfe: Cut me off the Villains head: throw the Qucan in the Channell.

Host. Throw me in the channell? I'll throw thee there. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastardy rogue. Murder, murder: O thou Hony-suckle villain, wilt thou kill Gods officers and the Kings? O thou hony-seed Rogue, thou art a hony-seed, a Man-queller, and a woman queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolfe.

Fang. A rescue, a rescue.

Host. Good people bring a rescue. Thou wilt not? thou wilt not? Do, do thou Rogue: Do thou Hempseed.

Fal. Away you Scullion, you Rampallian, you Fustilrian: I'll tuck your Catastrophe. Enter Ch. Justice.

Just. What's the matter? Keep the Peace here, ho.

Host. Good my Lord, be good to me. I beseech you stand to me.

Ch. Ju. How now, sir John? what are you brawling here? Doth this become your place, your time, and business? You should have been well on your way to Tork, Stand from him Fellow, wherefore hang'st upon him?

Host. Oh my most worshipfull Lord, and't please your Grace, I am a poor Widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what summe?

Host. It is more then for some (my Lord) it is for all: all I have, he hath eaten me out of house and home? he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his: but I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee o' Nights, like the Mare.

Fal. I think I am as like to ride the Mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John? Fie, what a man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not asham'd to inforce a poor Widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal. What is the grosse summe that I owe thee?

Host. Marry (if thou wer't an honest man) thy self, & the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcell gilt Goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-cole fire, on Wednesday in Whitson week, when the Prince broke thy head for likening him to a singing-man of Windsor; thou didst swear to me then (as I was washing thy wound) to marry me, and make me my Lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not good wife Keech the Butchers wife come in then, and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a messe of Vinegar: telling us, she had a good dish of Prawns: whereby thou didst desire to eat some: whereby I told thee they were ill for a green wound? And didst not thou (when she was gone down staires) desire me to be no more familiar with such poor people, saying, that ere long they should call me Madam? And didst thou not kisse me, and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy Book-oath, deny it if thou canst?

Fal. My Lord, this is a poor mad soul: and she sayes up and down the town, that her eldest Son is like you. She hath bin in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her: but for these foolish Officers, I beseech you, I may have redresse against them.

Just. Sir John, sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause, the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words, that come with such (more then impudent) sawciness from you, can thrust me from a levell consideration, I know you ha' practis'd upon the easie-yielding spirit of this woman.

Host. Yes in troth, my Lord.

Just. Prethee peace: pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villany you have done her: the one you may do with sterling mony, & the other with currant repentance.

Fal. My Lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply. You call honorable boldnesse, impudent sawciness. If a man will cur'sie, and say nothing, he is virtuous: No, my Lord (your humble duty remembred) I will not be your tutor. I say to you, I desire deliv'rance from these Officers being upon hasty employment in the Kings affaires.

Just. You speak, as having power to do wrong: But answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfie the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither, Hostesse.

Enter M. Gower.

Ch. Just. Now, Master Gower, what newes?

Gow. The King (my Lord) and Henry Prince of Wales are near at hand: The rest the Paper tells.

Fal. As I am a Gentleman,

Host. Nay, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a Gentleman, Come, no more words of it.

Hof. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my Plate, and the Tapistry of my Dining Chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the onely drinking: and for thy walls a pretty slight Drollery, or the Story of the Prodigal, or the Germane hunting in Water-work, is worth a thousand of these Bed-hangings, and these Fly-bitten Tapistries. Let it be ten pound (if thou canst.) Come, if it were not for thy humours, there is not a bet-Wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy Action: Come, thou must not be in this humour with me, come, I know thou wast set on to this.

Hof. Prethee (Sir John) let it be but twenty Nobles I am loth to pawn my Plate, in good earnest la.

Fal. Let it alone, I'll make other shift: you'll be a fool still.

Hof. Well, you shall have it, although I pawn my Gown. I hope you'll come to Supper: You'll pay me altogether?

Fal. Will I live? Go with her, with her: hook on, hook on.

Hof. Will you have Doll Tear-sheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words. Let's have her.

Ch. Just. I have heard bitter newes.

Fal. What's the newes, my good Lord?

Ch. Just. Where lay the King last night?

Mef. At Basingstoke, my Lord.

Fal. I hope (my Lord) all's well. What is the newes, my Lord?

Ch. Ju. Come all his Forces back?

Mef. No: fifteen hundred Foot, and five hundred Horse, are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaster, against Northumberland and the Arch-Bishop.

Fal. Comes the King back from Wales, my noble Lord?

Ch. Ju. You shall have Letters of me presently.

Come go along with me, good M. Gower.

Fal. My Lord.

Ch. Ju. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, I shall entreat you with me to dinner.

Gow. I must wait upon my good Lord here. I thank you, good Sir John.

Ch. Ju. Sir John, you loyter here too long, being you are to take Souldiers up in Countreys as you go.

Fal. Will you sup with me, Master Gower?

Ch. Ju. What foolish Master taught you these manners, Sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a Fool that taught them me. This is the right Fencing grace (my Lord) tap for tap, and so part fair.

Ch. Ju. Now the Lord lighten thee, thou art a great Fool.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Prince Henry, Poyns, Bardolf, and Page,

Prin. Trust me, I am exceeding weary.

Poyn. Is it come to that? I had thought wearinesse durst not have attach'd one of so high blood.

Prin. It doth me, though it discolours the complexion of my greatnesse to acknowledge it. Doth it not shew vildly in me, to desire small Beer?

Poyn. Why, a Prince should not be so loosely studied, as to remember so weak a Composition.

Prin. Belike then, my Appetite was not Princely got: for (in troth) I do now remember the poor Creature, Small Beer. But indeed these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatnesse. What a disgrace is it to me, to remember thy name? or to know thy face to morrow? or to take notice how many pair of Silk Stockings thou hast? (viz. these, and those that were the peach-colour'd ones:) or to bear the Inventory of thy Shirts; as one for superfluity, and one other for use: but that the Tennis-Court Keeper knows better then I, for it is a low ebbe of Linnen with thee, when thou keepest not Racket there, as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy Low Countreys have made a shift to eat up thy Holland.

Poyn. How ill it follows, after you have labour'd so hard, you should talk so idly? Tell me how many good young Princes would do so, their Fathers lying so sick, as yours is?

Prin. Shall I tell the one thing, Poyns?

Poyn. Yes: and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prin. It shall serve among Wits of no higher breeding then thine.

Poyn. Go to: I stand the pulch of your one thing, that you'll tell.

Prin. Why, I tell thee, it is not meet that I should be sad now my Father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee (as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend) I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poyn. Very hardly upon such a subject.

Prin. Thou think'st me as far in the Devils Book, as thou, and Falstaffe, for obduracy and persistency. Let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly, that my Father is sick: and keeping such vild company as thou art, hath in reason taken from me, all ostentation of sorrow.

Poyn. The reason?

Pr. What would'st thou think of me, if I should weep?

Poyn. I would think thee a most Princely hypocrite.

Prin. It would be every mans thought: and thou art a blessed Fellow, to think as every man thinks: never a mans thought in the world keeps the rode-way better then thine: every man would think me an Hypocrite indeed. And what excites your most worshipfull thought to think so?

Poyn. Why, because you have been so lewd, and so much ingrafted to Falstaffe.

Prin. And to thee.

Poyn. Nay, I am well spoken of, I can hear it with mine own ears: the worst that they can say of me is, that I am a second Brother, and that I am a proper fellow of my hands; and those two things I confesse I cannot help. Look, look, here comes Bardolfe.

Prin. And the Boy that I gave Falstaffe: he had him from me Christian, and see if the fat villain have not transform'd him Ape.

Enter Bardolfe.

Bar. Save your Grace.

Prin. And yours, most Noble Bardolfe.

Poyn. Come you pernicious Ass, you bashfull Fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? what a Maidenly man at Armes are you become? Is it such a matter to get a Pottle-pots Maidenhead?

Page. He call'd me even now (my Lord) through a red Lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window:

window; at last I spy'd his eyes, and me thought he had made two holes in the Ale-wives new Petticoat, and peeped through.

Prin. Hath not the Boy profited?

Bar. Away, you horson upright Rabbet, away.

Page. Away, you rascally Althea dream, away.

Prin. Instruct us Boy, what dream, Boy?

Page. Marry (My Lord) Althea dream'd, she was deliver'd of a Firebrand, and therefore I call him her dream.

Prince. A Crowns-worth of good Interpretation: There it is, Boy.

Poin. O that this good Blossome could be kept from Cankers: Well, there is six pence to preserve thee.

Bard. If you do not make him be hang'd among you, the gallows shall be wong'd.

Prin. And how doth thy Master, Bardolph?

Bard. Well, my good Lord: he heard of your Graces coming to Town. There's a Letter for you.

Prin. Deliver'd with good respect: And how doth the Martlemas, your Master?

Bard. In bodily health, Sir.

Poin. Marry, the immortall part needs a Physician: but that moves not him: though that be sick, it dyes not.

Prin. I do allow this Wen to be as familiar with me as my dogge. and he holds his place, for look you how he writes.

Poin. Letter. John Falstaffe Knight: (Every man must know that, as oft as he hath occasion to name himself:) Even like those that are kin to the King, for they never prick their finger, but they say, there is some of the Kings bloud spilt. How comes that (sayes he) that takes upon him not to conceive? the answer is as ready as a borrowed cap: I am the Kings poor Cousin, Sir.

Prin. Nay, they will be kin to us, but they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the Letter:-----Sir John Falstaffe, Knight, to the Son of the King, nearest his Father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting.

Poin. Why this is a Certificate.

Prin. Peace.

I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity.

Poin. Sure he means brevity in breath: short-winded. I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poin, for he misuses thy Favours so much, that he swears thou art to marry his Sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou maist, and so farewell.

Thine, by yea and no: which is as much as to say, as thou usest him. Jack Falstaffe with my Familiars: John with my Brothers & Sister: and Sir John with all Europe.

My Lord, I will steep this Letter in Sack, and make him eat it.

Prin. That's to make him eat twenty of his Words. But do you use me thus, Ned? Must I marry your Sister?

Poin. May the Wench have no worse fortune. But I never said so.

Prin. Well, thus we play the Fool with the time and the spirits of the wise, sit in the clouds, and mock us: Is your Master here in London?

Bard. Yes, my Lord.

Prin. Where supps he? Doth the old Bore, feed in the old Frank?

Bard. At the old place, my Lord, in East-cheap.

Prin. What company?

Prin. Sup any women with him?

Prin. What Pagan may that be?

Page. A proper Gentlewoman, Sir, and a Kinswoman of my Masters.

Prin. Even such Kin, as the Parish Heyfors are to the Town-Bull?

Shall we steal upon them (Ned) at Supper?

Poin. I am your shadow, my Lord, I'll follow you.

Prin. Sirra, you Boy, and Bardolph, no word to your Master that I am yet in Town.

There's for your silence.

Bar. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, Sir, I will govern it.

Prin. Fare ye well: go.

This Dol Tear-sheet should be some Rode.

Poin. I warrant you, as common as the way between S. Albans and London.

Prin. How might we see Falstaffe bestow himself to night in his true colours, and not our selves be seen?

Poin. Put on two Leather Jerkins, and Aprons, and wait upon him at his Table, like Drawers.

Prin. From a god, to a Bull? A heavy declension: It was Joves case, From a Prince, to a Prentice, a low transformation, that shall be mine: for in every thing, the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Northumberland, his Lady, and Harry Percies Lady.

North. I prethee loving Wife, and gentle Daughter, Give an even way unto my rough affairs.

Put not you on the visage of the Times, And be like them to Percie, troublesome.

Wife. I have given over, I will speak no more, Do what you will: your Wisdome, be your guide.

Nor. Alas (sweet Wife) my Honour is at pawn, And but my going, nothing can redeem it.

La. Oh yet, for heavens sake, go not to these Warrs; The Time was (Father) when you broke your word,

When you were more endear'd to it, then now, When your own Percie, when my heart-dear Harry,

Threw many a Northward look, to see his Father Bring up his powers: but he did long in vain.

Who then perswaded you to stay at home?

There were two Honour's lost; you and your Sons.

For Yours, may heavenly glory brighten it:

For His, it stuck upon him, as the Sun

In the grey vault of Heaven: and by his Light

Did all the Chevalry of England move

To do brave Acts. He was (indeed) the Glasse Wherein the Noble-Youth did dresse themselves.

He had no Legs, that practis'd not his Gate:

And speaking thick (which Nature made his blemish)

Became the Accents of the Valliant,

For those that could speak low, and tardily,

Would turn their own Perfection, to Abuse,

To seem like him. So that in Speech, and Gate,

In Diet, in Affections of delight,

In Military Rules, Humors of Bloud,

He

He was the Mark, and Glas, Copy, and Book,
That fashion'd others. And him, O wondrous! him,
O Miracle of Men! Him did you leave
(Second to none) un-seconded by you;
To look upon the hideous god of War,
In disadvantage, to abide the field,
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's Name
Did seem defensible: so you left him.
Never, O never do his Ghost the wrong,
To hold your Honour more precise and nice
With others, then with him. Let them alone:
The Marshall and the Arch-Bishop are strong.
Had my sweet Harry had but half their Numbers,
To day might I (hanging on Hotspur's Neck)
Have talk'd of Monmouth's Grave.

North. Beshrew your heart,
(Fair Daughter) you do draw my spirits from me,
With new lamenting ancient Over-sights.
But I must go, and meet with danger there.
Or it will seek me in another place,
And find me worse provided.

Wife. O flye to Scotland,
Till that the Nobles, and the armed Commons,
Have of their Puissance made a little taste.

Lady. If they get ground, and vantage of the King,
Then joyn you with them, like a Rib of Steel,
To make Strength stronger. But, for all our loves,
First let them try themselves. So did your Son,
He was so suffer'd; so came I a Widow:
And never shall have length of Life enough,
To rain upon Remembrance with mine Eyes,
That it may grow, and sprowt, as high as Heaven,
For Reco dation to my Noble Husband.

Nor. Come, come, go in with me: 'tis with my Mind
As with the Tyde, swell'd up unto his height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither way.
Fain would I go to meet the Arch-Bishop,
But many a thousand Reasons hold me back.
I will resolve for Scotland: there am I,
Till Time and Vantage crave my company. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter two Drawers.

1. Drawer. What hast thou brought there? Apple-Johns? Thou know'st Sir John cannot endure an Apple-John.

2. Draw. Thou say'st true: the Prince once set a Dish of Apple-Johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns: and, putting off his Hat, said, I will now take my leave of these six drie, round, old-wither'd Knights. It anger'd him to the heart: but he hath forgot that.

1. Draw. Why then cover, and set them down: and see if thou canst finde out Sneaks Noyse; Mistris Tear-shee would fain have some Musick.

2. Draw. Sirra, here will be the Prince; and Master Poins, anon: and they will put on two of our Jerkins, and Aprons, and Sir John must not know of it. Bardolph hath brought word.

1. Draw. Then here will be old Uris: it be an excellent Stratagem.

2. Draw. I'll see if I can find out Sneak, Exit.

Enter Hostesse, and Dol.

Host. Sweet-heart, me thinks now you are in an excellent good temperality: your Pullidge bears as extraordinarily, as heart would desire; and your Colour (I warrant you) is as red as any Rose: But you have drunk too much Canaries; and that's a marvellous searching Wine; and it perfumes the blood, ere we can say what's this. How do you now?

Dol. Better then I was: Hem.

Host. Why that was well said: A good heart's worth Gold. Look, here comes Sir John.

Enter Falstaffe.

Fal. When Arthur first in Court--(empty the Jordan) and was a worthy King: How now Mistris Dol.

Host. Sick of a Calme: yea, good-footh.

Falst. So is her Sect: if they be once in a Calme, they are sick.

Dol. You muddy Rascall, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat Rascalls, Mistris Dol.

Dol. I make them? Gluttony and Diseases make them, I make them not.

Fal. If the Cook make the Gluttony, you help to make the Diseases (Dol) we catch of you (Dol) we catch of you: Grant that, my poor Vertue, grant that.

Dol. I marry, our Chains, and our Jewels.

Falst. Your Brooches, Pearls, and Owches: For to serve bravely, is to come halting off: you know to come off the Breach, with his Pike bent bravely, and to Surgery bravely; to venture upon the charg'd-Chambers bravely.

Host. Why is this the olde fashion: you two never meet, but you fall to some discord: you are both (in good troth) as Rheumatick as two drie Tostes, you cannot one bear with anothers Confirmities. What the good-yere? One must bear, and that must be you: you are the weaker Vessell, as they say, the emptier Vessell.

Dol. Can a weak empty Vessell bear such a huge full Hogs-head? There's a whole Merchants Venture of Burdeux stufte in him: you have not seen a Hulk better stufte in the Hold. Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack: Thou art going to the Warrs, and whether I shall ever see thee again, or no, there is no body cares.

Enter Drawer.

Draw. Sir, Ancient Pistol is below, and would speak with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering Rascall, let him not come hither: it is the foul-mouth'dst Rogue in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here: I must live amongst my Neighbours, I'll no swaggerers: I am in good name, and fame, with the very best: shut the door, there comes no swaggerers here: I have not liv'd all this while, to have swaggering now: shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Do'st thou hear, Hostesse?

Host. Pray you pacifie your self (Sir John) there comes no Swaggerers here.

Fal. Do'st

Falst. Do'st thou hear? it is mine Ancient.

Hofst. Tilly-fally (Sir John) never tell me, your ancient Swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick the Deputy, the other day: and as he said to me, it was no longer ago then Wednesday last: Neighbour Quickly (saies he;) Master Domb, our Minister, was by then: Neighbour Quickly (saies he) receive those that are Civill; for (saith he) you are in an ill Name: now he said so, I can tell whereupon: for (saies he) you are an honest Woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what Guests you receive: Receive (saies he) no swaggering Companions. There comes none here. You would blesse you to hear what he said. No, I'll no Swaggers.

Falst. He's no Swaggerer (Hofstess): a tame Cheater, he: you may stroke him as gently, as a Puppy Greyhound: he will not swagger with a Barbary Hen: if her feathers turn back in any shew of resistance. Call him up (Drawer.)

Hofst. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no Cheater: but I do not love swaggering; I am the worse when one sayes, swaggerer: Feel Masters, how I shake: look you, I warrant you.

Dol. So you do, Hofstesse.

Hofst. Do I? yea, in very truth do I, if it were an Aspen Leaf: I cannot abide Swaggers.

Enter Pistoll, and Bardolph, and his Boy.

Pist. 'Save you, Sir John.

Fal. Welcome Ancient Pistol. Here (Pistol) I charge you with a Cup of Sack: do you discharge upon mine Hofstesse.

Pist. I will discharge upon her (Sir John) with two Bullets.

Falst. She is Pistoll-proof (Sir) you shall hardly offend her.

Hofst. Come, I'll drink no Proofs, nor no Bullets: I will drink no more then will do me good, for no mans pleasure, I.

Pist. Then to you (Mistress Dorothy) I will charge you.

Dol. Charge me; I scorn you (scurvy Companion). What? you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-Linnen-Mate: away you mouldy Rogue, away, I am meat for your Master.

Pist. I know you, Mistress Dorothy.

Dol. Away you Cut-purse Rascall, you filthy Bung, away: By this Wine, I'll thrust my Knife in your mouldy Chaps, if you play the sawcy Curtle with me. Away you Bottle-Ale Rascall, you Basket-hilt stale Jugler, you. Since when, I pray you, Sir? what, with two Points on your shoulder? much.

Pist. I will murder your Ruffe, for this.

Hofst. No, good Captain Pistol: not here, sweet Captain.

Dol. Captain? thou abominable damn'd Cheater, art thou not ashamed to be call'd Captain? If Captains were of my mind, they would trunchion you out, for taking their Names upon you, before you have earn'd them. You a Captain? you slave, for what? for tearing a poor Whores Ruffe in a Bawdy-house? He a Captain? hang him Rogue, he lives upon mouldy stew'd-Prunes, and dry'd Cakes. A Captain? These Villains will make the word Captain odious: Therefore Captains had need look to it.

Bard. Pray thee go down, good Ancient.

Fal. Hark the hither Mistress Dol.

Pist. Not I: I tell thee what, Corporall Bardolph, I could tear her: I'll be reveng'd on her.

Pist. I'll see her damn'd first: to Pluto's damn'd Lake, to the Infernall Deep, where Erebus and Tortures vilde also. Hold Hook and Line, say I: Down: down Doggs, down Fates: have we not Hiren here?

Hofst. Good Captain Peefel be quiet, it is very late: I beseech you now, aggravate your Choler.

Pist. These be good humors indeed. Shall Pack-Horses, and hollow-pamper'd Jades of Asia, which cannot go but thirty miles a day, compare with Cesar, and with Canniball, and Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn them with King Cerberus, and let the Welkin roar: shall we fall foul for Toyes?

Hofst. By my troth, Captain, these are very bitter words.

Bard. Be gone, good Ancient: this will grow to a Brawl anon.

Pist. Dic men, like Dogs; give Crowns like Pinns: Have we not Hiren here?

Hofst. On my word (Captain) there's none such here. What the good-yere, do you think I would deny her? I pray be quiet.

Pist. Then feed, and be fat (my fair Calipolis.) Come, give me some Sack, Si fortune me tormente, sperato me contente. Fear we broad-sides? No, let the Fiend give fire: Give me some Sack: and Sweet-heart lye thou there: Come we to full Points here; and are & cetera's nothing?

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pist. Sweet Knight, kisse thy Neasse: what? we have seen the seven starrs.

Dol. Thrust him down stayers, I cannot endure such a Fustian Rascall.

Pist. Thrust him down stayers? know we not Gallo-way Naggs?

Fal. Quoit him down (Bardolph) like a shove-groat shilling: nay, if he do nothing but speak nothing, he shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come get you down stayers.

Pist. What shall we have Incision? shall we embrew? then Death rock me asleep, abridge my dolefull dayes: why then let grievous, gaffly, gaping Wounds, untwine the Sisters three: Come Atropos, I say.

Hofst. Here's good stuff toward.

Fal. Give me my Rapier, Boy.

Dol. I prethee, Jack, I prethee do not draw.

Falst. Get you down stayers.

Hofst. Here's a goodly tumult: I'll forswear keeping house, before I'll be in these tirrits, and frights. So: Murder I warrant now. Alas, put up your naked Weapons put up your naked Weapons.

Dol. I prethee, Jack, be quiet, the Rascall is gone: ah, you whorson little valiant Villain, you.

Hofst. Are you not hurt i'th' Groyn? me thought he made a shrewd Thrust at your Belly.

Fal. Have you turn'd him out of doors?

Bard. Yes, Sir, the Rascall's drunk: you have hurt him (Sir) in the shoulder.

Fal. A Rascall to brave me.

Dol. Ah, you sweet little Rogue, you: alas, poor Ape, how thou sweat'st? come, let me wipe thy Face: Come on, you whorson Chops: Ah Rogue, I love thee: Thou art art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon; and ten times better then the nine Worthies: ah Villain.

Falst. A rascally Slave, I will toss the Rogue in a Blanket.

Dol. Do, if thou dar'st for thy heart: if thou doo'st I'll canvas thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Musick.

Pag. The Musick is come, Sir.

Fal. Let them play; play Sirs. Sit on my Knee, Dol. A Rascall, bragging Slave: the Rogue fled from me like Quick-silver.

Dol. And thou followd'st him like a Church: thou whorson little tydie Bartholmew Bore-pigge, when wilt thou leave fighting on dayes, and foyning on nights, and begin to patch up thine old Body for Heaven?

Enter the Prince and Poins disguis'd.

Fal. Peace (good Dol) do not speak like a Deaths-head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour is the Prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: he would have made a good Pantler, he would have chipp'd Bread well.

Dol. They say Poins hath a good Wit.

Fal. He a good Wit? hang him Baboon, his Wit is as thick as Tewksbury Mustard: there is no more conceit in him, then is in a Mallet.

Dol. Why doth the Prince love him so then?

Fal. Because their Leggs are both of a bignesse: and he playes at Quoits well, and eats Conger and Fennell, and drinks of Candles ends for Flap-dragongs, and rides the wild-Mare with the Boyes, and jumps upon Joyn'd-stooles, and swears with a good grace, and wears his Boot very smooth, like unto the Signe of the Legge; and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories: and such other Gamboll faculties he hath, that shew a weak Minde, and an able Body, for the which the Prince admits him; for the Prince himself is such another: the weight of an hair will turn the Scales between their Hamberde-pois.

Prince. Would not this Nave of a Wheel have his Ears cut off?

Poin. Let us beat him before his Whore.

Prin. Look, if the wither'd Elder hath not his Poll claw'd like a Parrot.

Poin. Is it not strange, that Desire should so many years out-live performance?

Fal. Kisse me Dol.

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in Conjunction? What sayes the Almanack to that?

Poin. And look whether the fiery Trigon, his Man, be not lisping to his Masters old Tables, his Note-Book, his Councell-keeper?

Fal. Thou do'st give me flatt'ring Buffes.

Dol. Nay truly, I Kisse thee with most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better, then I love ere a scurvy young Boy of them all.

Fal. What Stuffle wilt thou have a Kirtle of? I shall receive Money on Thursday: thou shalt have a Cappe to morrow. A merry Song, come: it grows late, we will to Bed. Thou wilt forget me, when I am gone.

Dol. Thou wilt set me a weeping, if thou say'st so: prove that ever I dresse my self handsome, till thy return: Well, hearken the end.

Fal. Some Sack, Francis.

Prin. Poin. Anon, anon, Sir.

Fal. Ha? a Bastard Son of the Kings? And art not thou Poins, his Brother?

Prin. Why thou Globe of sinfull Continents, what a Life dost thou lead?

Fal. A better then thou: I am a Gentleman, thou art a Drawer.

Prin. Very true, Sir: and I come to draw you out by the Ears.

Hof. Oh, the Lord preserve thy good Grace: Welcome to London. Now heaven blesse that sweet Face of thine: What are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whorson mad Compound of Majesty: by this light Flesh, and corrupt Bloud, thou art welcome.

Prin. How? you fat Fool, I scorn you.

Poin. My Lord, he will drive you out of your revenge, and turn all to merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prin. You whorson Candle-myne you, how vilely did you speak of me even now, before this honest, virtuous civill Gentlewoman?

Hof. Blessing on your good heart, and so she is by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

Prince. Yes: and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gads-hill: you knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose, to try my patience.

Fal. No, no, no: not so: I did not think, thou wast within hearing.

Prin. I shall drive you then to confesse the wilfull abuse, and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse (Hal) on mine Honor, no abuse,

Prin. Not to dispraise me? and call me Pantler, and Bread-chopper, and I know not what?

Fal. No abuse (Hal.)

Poin. No abuse?

Fal. No abuse (Ned) in the World: honest Ned none. I disprais'd him before the Wicked, that the Wicked might not fall in love with him: In which doing, I have done the part of a carefull Friend, and true Subject, and thy Father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse (Hal.) none (Ned) none; no Boyes none.

Prin. See now whether pure Fear, and entire Cowardise, doth not make thee wrong this virtuous Gentlewoman, to close with us? Is she of the Wicked? Is thine Hostesse here, of the Wicked? Or is the Boy of the Wicked? Or honest Bardolph (whose Zeal burns in his Nose) of the Wicked?

Poin. Answer, thou dead Elme, answer.

Fal. The Fiend hath prickt down Bardolph irrecoverable, and his face is Lucifers Privy-Kitchin, where he doth nothing but roast Mault-Wormes: for the Boy, there is a good Angell about him, but the Devill out-bids him too.

Prin. For the Women?

Fal. For one of them, she is in Hell already, and burnes poore souls: for the other, I owe her Money; and whether she be damn'd for that, I know not.

Hof. No I warrant you.

Fal. No,

Falst. No. I think thou art not : I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another Indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the Law, for the which I think thou wilt howle.

Hofl. All Victuallers do so : What is a Joynt of Mutton or two in a whole Lent ?

Prin. You, Gentlewoman.

Dol. What sayes your Grace ?

Falst. His Grace sayes that, which his flesh rebels against.

Hofl. Who knocks so loud at the door ? Look to the door there, Francis ?

Enter Peto.

Prin. Peto, how now ? what news ?

Peto. The King, your Father, is at Westminster, And there twenty weak and wearied Posts, Come from the North : and as I came along, I met, and over-took a dozen Captains, Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the Taverns, And asking every one for Sir John Falstaffe.

Prin. By Heaven (Poins) I feele me much to blame, So idly to prophane the precious time, When Tempest of Commotion, like the South Borne with black Vapour, doth begin to melt, And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.

Give me my Sword, and Cloak :

Falstaffe, good night.

Exit.

Falst. Now comes in the sweetest Morfell of the night, and we must hence, and leave it unpickt. More knocking at the door ? How now ? what's the matter ?

Bard. You must away to the Court, Sir, presently, A dozen Captains stay at the door for you.

Falst. Pay the Musicians, Sirra : farewell Hostesse, farewell Dol. You see (my good Wenches) how men of Merit are sought after : the undeserver may sleep, when the man of Action is cal'd on. Farewell, good Wenches : if I be not sent away post, I will see you again, ere I goe.

Dol. I cannot speak : if my heart be not ready to burst. Well (sweet Jack) have a care of thy self.

Falst. Farewell, farewell.

Exit.

Hofl. Well, fare thee well : I have known thee these twenty nine years, come Pescod-time : but an honest, and true-hearted man-Well, fare thee well.

Bard. Mistress Tear-sheets.

Hofl. What's the matter ?

Bard. Bid Mistress Tear-sheets come to my Master.

Hofl. Oh run, Dol, run : run, good Dol.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter the King, with a Page.

King. Go, call the Earls of Surrey, and Warwick : But ere they come, bid them o're-read these Letters, And well consider of them : make good speed.

Exit.

How many thousand of my poorest Subjects Are at this houre asleep ? O sleep, O gentle Sleep, Natures soft Nurse, how have I frighted thee, That thou no more wilt weigh my eye-lids down, And steep my Sences in Forgetfullnesse ? Why rather (Sleep) lyeest thou in smoaky Cribbs, Upon uneasie Pallads stretching thee, And hush't with buzzing Night, flies to thy slumber, Then in the perfum'd Chambers of the Great ? Under the Canopies of costly state, And lull'd with sounds of sweetest Melody ? O thou dull god, why lyeest thou with the vilde, In loathsum Beds, and leav'st the Kingly Couch, A watch-case, or a common Larum-Bell ? Wilt thou, upon the high and giddy Mast, Seal up the Ship-boyes Eyes, and rock his Brains, In Criadle of the rude imperious Surge, And in the visitation of the Windes, Who take the Ruffian Billows by the top, Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them With deaff'ning Clamors in the slip'ry Clouds, That with the hurley, Death it self awakes ? Canst thou (O partiall Sleep) give thy Repose To the wet Sea-boy in aa houre so rude : And in the calmest, and most stillest Night, With all appliances, and means to boot, Deny it to a King ? Then happy Low, lye down, Uneasie lyes the Head, that wears a Crown.

Enter Warwick and Surrey.

War. Many good-morrows to your Majesty.

King. It is good-morrow, Lords ?

War. 'Tis one a Clock, and past.

King. Why then good-morrow to you all (my Lords:) Have you read o're the Letters that I sent you ?

War. We have (my Liege.)

King. Then you perceive the body of our Kingdome, How foul it is : what rank Diseases grow, And with what danger, near the heart of it ?

War. It is but as a Body, yet distemper'd, Which to the former strength may be restor'd, With good advice, and little Medicine : My Lord, Northumberland will soon be cool'd.

King. Oh Heaven, that onemight read the Book of Fate, And see the revolution of the times

Make Mountains levell, and the Continent

(Weary of solid firmnesse) melt it self

Into the Sea : and other Times, to see

The bea chy Girdle of the Ocean

Too wide for Neptunes hipps ; how Chances mocks

And Changes fill the Cup of Alteration

With divers Liquors. 'Tis not ten years gone.

Since Richard, and Northumberland, great friends,

Did feast together ; and in two years after,

Were they at Warrs. It is but eight years since,

This Percie was the man, nearest my Soul ;

Who like a Brother, toyl'd in my Affairs,

And laid his Love and Life under my foot :

Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard

Gave him defiance. But which of you was by

(You Cousin Nevil, as I may remember)

When Richard, with his Eye, brim-full of Tears :

(Then check'd, and rated by Northumberland)

Did speak these words (now prov'd a Prophecie :)

Northumberland, thou Ladder, by the which

My

My Cousin Bullinbrook ascends my Throne :
 (Though then, Heaven knows, I had no such intent,
 But that necessity so bow'd the State,
 That I and Greatnesse were compell'd to kifs :)
 The time shall come (thus did he follow it)
 The time will come, that foul Sin gathering head,
 Shall break into Corruption : so went on,
 Fore-telling this same Times Condition,
 And the division of our Amity.

War. There is a History in all mens Lives,
 Figuring the nature of the Times deccas'd.
 The which observ'd, a man may prophetic
 With a neeraim, of the main chance of things,
 As yet not come to Life, which in their Seeds
 And weak beginnings ly entreaured :
 Such things become the Hatch and Brood of Time ;
 And by the necessary forme of this
 King Richard might create a perfect guesse,
 That great Northumberland, then false to him,
 Would of that Seed, grow to a greater falseness,
 Which should not find a ground to root upon,
 Unless on you.

King. Are these things then Necessities ?
 Then let us meet them like Necessities ;
 And that same word, even now cries out on us :
 They say the Bishop and Northumberland
 Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be (my Lord :)
 Rumor doth double, like the Voice, and Echo,
 The numbers of the feared. Please it your Grace
 To go to bed, upon my Life (my Lord)
 The Pow'rs that you already have sent forth,
 Shall bring this Prize in very easily.
 To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
 A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
 Your Majesty hath been this fore-night ill,
 And these unseason'd hours perforce must adde
 Unto your Sickness.

King. I will take your counsell :
 And were these inward Warrs once out of hand,
 We would (dear Lords) unto the Holy-Land.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Shallow and Silence, with Mouldy and Shadow, Wart, Feeble, Bull-calfs.

Shal. Come-on, come-on, come-on : give me your Hand Sir, give me your Hand, Sir : an early stirrer, by the Rood. And how doth my good Cousin Silence ?

Sil. Good morrow, good Cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my Cousin, your Bed-fellow ? and your fairest Daughter, and mine my God-Daughter Ellen ?

Sil. Alas, a black Ouzell (Cousin Shallow.)

Shal. By yea and nay, Sir, I dare say my Cousin William is become a good Scholler ? he is at Oxford still, is he not ?

Sil. Indeed, Sir, to my cost.

Shal. He must then to the Inns of Court shortly : I was once of Clements Inne ; where (I think) they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were call'd lusty Shallow then (Cousin.)

Shal. I was call'd any thing : and I would have done any thing indeed too, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doir of Staffordshire, and black George Bare, and Francis Pick-bone, and Will Squele a Cot-sal-man, you had not four such Swinge-bucklers in all the Inns of Court again : And I may say to you, we know where the Bona-Roba's were, and had the best of them all at commandement. Then was Jack Falstaffe (now Sir John) a Boy, and a Page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir John (Cousin) that comes hither anon about Souldiers ?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same : I saw him break Schoggan's Head at the Court-Gate, when he was a Crack, not thus high : and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stock-fish, a Fruiterer, behind Greys-Inne. Oh the mad dayes that I have spent ! and to see how many of mine old Acquaintance are dead ?

Sil. We shall all follow (Cousin.)

Shal. Certain : 'tis certain : very sure, very sure : Death is certain to all, all shall dye. How a good Yoke of Bullocks at Stamford Fair ?

Sil. Truly Cousin, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your Town living yet ?

Sil. Dead, Sir.

Shal. Dead ? See, see : he drew a good Bow : and dead ? he shot a fine shoot. John of Gaunt loved him well, and betted much Money on his head. Dead ? he would have clapt in the Clowt at Twelve-score, and carryed you afore-hand Shaft at fourteen, and fourteen and a halfe, that it would have done a mans heart good to see. How a score of Ewes now ?

Sil. Thereafter as they be : a score of good Ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead ?

Enter Bardolph and his Boy.

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaffe's Men (as I think.)

Shal. Good-morrow, honest Gentlemen.

Bard. I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow ?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow (Sir) a poor Esquire of this County, one of the Kings Justices of the Peace : What is your good pleasure with me ?

Bard. My Captain, (Sir) commends him to you : my Captain, Sir John Falstaffe : a tall Gentleman, and a most gallant Leader.

Shal. He greets me well : (Sir) I knew him a good Back-Sword-man. How doth the good Knight ? may I ask, how my Lady his Wife doth ?

Bard. Sir, pardon : a Souldier is better accommodated, then with a Wife.

Shal. It is well said, Sir ; and it is well said indeed, too : Better accommodated ? it is good, yea indeed is it : good phrases are surely, and every where very commendable. Accommodated, it comes of Accommodo : very good, a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon, Sir, I have heard the word. Phrase call you it ? by this day, I know not the Phrase : but I will maintain the Word with my Sword, to be a Souldier-like Word, and a Word of exceeding good Command. Accommodated : that is, when a man is (as they say) accommodated : or, when a man is, being whereby whereby he thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing.

Enter Falstaffe.

Shal. It is very iust : Look, here comes good Sir John. Give me your hand, give me your Worships good hand : Trust me, you look well : and bear your yeares very well. Welcome, good Sir John.

Falst. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow : Master Sure card as I think ?

Shal. No, Sir John, it is my Cousin Silence : in Commission with me.

Falst. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good Worship is welcome.

Falst. Fie, this is hot weather (Gentlemen) have you provided me here half a dozen of sufficient men ?

Shal. Marry have we sir : Will you sit ?

Falst. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the Roll ? Where's the Roll ? Where's the Roll ? Let me see, let me see, let me see : so, so, so, so : yea marry, Sir, Ralph Mouldy : let them appear as I call : let them do so, let them do so : Let me see, Where is Mouldy ?

Moul. Here, if it please you.

Shal. What think you (Sir John) a good limb'd fellow : young, strong, and of good friends.

Falst. Is thy name Mouldy ?

Moul. Yea, if it please you.

Falst. 'Tis the more time thou wert us'd.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha, most excellent. Things that are mouldy, lack use : very singular good. Well said, Sir John, very well said.

Falst. Prick him.

Moul. I was prickt well enough before, if you could have let me alone : my old Dame will be undone now, for one to do her Husbandry, and her Drudgery ; you need not to have prickt me, there are other men fitter to go out then I.

Falst. Go to : peace Mouldy, you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent ?

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace ; stand aside : Know you where you are ? For the other, Sir John : Let me see : Simon Shadow.

Falst. I marry, let me have him to sit under : he's like to be a cold souldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow ?

Shad. Here, Sir.

Falst. Shadow, whose Son art thou ?

Shad. My Mothers Son, Sir.

Falst. Thy Mothers Son : like enough, and thy Fathers shadow : so the Son of the Female, is the shadow of the Male : it is often so indeed, but not of the fathers substance.

Shal. Do you like him, Sir John ?

Falst. Shadow will serve for Summer : prick him : For we have a number of shadows to fill up the Muster-Book.

Shal. Thomas Wart.

Falst. Where's he ?

Wart. Here, sir.

Falst. Is thy name Wart ?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Falst. Thou art a very ragged Wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him down, Sir John ?

Falst. It were superfluous : for his apparell is built up on his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins : prick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha, you can do it, sir : you can do it : I commend you well.

Francis Feeble.

Feeble. Here, sir.

Shal. What Trade art thou Feeble ?

Feeble. A Womans Taylor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir ?

Falst. You may :

But if it had been a Mans Taylor, he would have prick'd you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemies Battell, as thou hast done in a Womans Petticoat ?

Feeble. I will do my good will, sir, you can have no more.

Falst. Well said, good Womans Taylor : Well said Couragious Feeble : thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathfull Dove, or most magnanimous Mousse. Prick the womans Taylor well, Master Shallow, deep, Master Shallow.

Feeble. I would Wart might have gone, sir.

Falst. I would thou wert a Mans Taylor, that thou might'st mend him, and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private souldier, that is the Leader of so many thousands. Let that suffice, most Forceible Feeble.

Feeble. It shall suffice.

Falst. I am bound to thee reverend Feeble. Who is the next ?

Shal. Peter Bulcalse of the Green.

Falst. Yea marry, let us see Bulcalse.

Bul. Here, sir.

Falst. Trust me, a likely Fellow. Come prick me Bulcalse till he roar again.

Bul. Oh, good my Lord Captain.

Fal. What ? do'st thou roar before th'art prickt.

Bul. Oh sir, I am a diseased man.

Falst. What disease hast thou ?

Bul. A whorson cold, sir ; a cough, sir, which I caught with Ringing in the Kings affaires, upon his Coronation day, sir.

Falst. Come, thou shalt go to the Warrs in a Gown : we will have away thy Cold, and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for thee. Is here all ?

Shal. There is two more called then your number : you must have but four here, sir, and so I pray you go in with me to dinner.

Falst. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot carry dinner. I am glad to see you in good troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O, Sir John, doe you remember since we lay all night in the Wind-mill in Saint George's Field ?

Falst. No more of that, good Master Shallow : No more of that.

Shal. Ha ? it was a merry night. And is Jane Night-work alive ?

Falst. She lives, Master Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with me.

Falst. Never, never : she would alwayes say she could not abide Master Shallow.

Shal. I could anger her to the heart : she was then a Bona-Roba. Doth she hold her own well ?

Fal. Old, old, Master Shallow.

Shal. Nay she must be old, she cannot chuse but be old :

old : certain she's old : and had Robin Night-work, by old Night-work, before I came to Clements Inne.

Sil. That's fifty five yeares ago.

Shal. Hah, Cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that, that this Knight and I have seen : hah, Sir John, said I well ?

Fal. We have heard the Chimes at mid-night, Master Shallow.

Shal. That we have, that we have ; in faith, Sir John, we have : our watch-world was, Hem-Boyes. Come, let's to Dinner ; come, let's to Dinner : Oh the dayes that we have seen. Come, come.

Bul. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend, and here is four Harry ten shillings in French Crowns for you : in very truth, sir, I had as lief be hang'd, sir, as go ? and yet for mine own part, sir, I do not care, but rather, because I am unwilling, and for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends : else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much.

Bar. Go to : stand aside.

Moul. And good Master Corporall Captain, for my old Dames sake, stand my friend : she hath no body to do any thing about her, when I am gone : and she is old and cannot help her self : you shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to : stand aside.

Feeble. I care not, a man can die but once : we owe a death. I will never bear a base mind : if it be my destiny, so : if it be not, so : no man is too good to serve his Prince : and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year, is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said, thou art a good fellow.

Feeble. Nay, I will bear no base mind.

Falst. Come, sir, which men shall I have ?

Shal. Four of which you please.

Bard. Sir, a word with you : I have three pound, to free Mouldy and Bulcalfe.

Falst. Go to : well.

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have ?

Fal. Do you chuse for me.

Shal. Marry then, Mouldy, Bulcalfe, Feeble, and Shallow.

Fal. Mouldy, and Bulcalfe : for you Mouldy, stay at home, till you are past service : and for your part, Bulcalfe, grow till you come unto it : I will none of you.

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not your self wrong, they are your likeliest men, and I would have you serv'd with the best.

Falst. Will you tell me (Master Shallow) how to chuse a man ? Care I for the Limb, the Thewes, the Stature, Bulk, and big assemblance of a man ? give me the spirit (Master Shallow.) Where's Wart ? you see what a ragged appearance it is : he shall charge you, and discharge you, with the motion of a Pewterers Hammer : come off, and on, swifter then he that gibbets on the Brewers Bucket. And this same half fac'd fellow, Shadow, give me this man, he presents no mark to the Enemy, the so-man may with as great ayme levell at the edge of a Pen-knife : and for a Retreat, how swiftly will this Feeble, the womans Taylor, run off. O give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a Calyver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold Wart, Traverse : thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come manage me your Calyver : so, very well, go to, very good, exceeding good. O give me alwayes a little, lean, old, chopt, bald Shot. Well said Wart, thou art a good Scab : hold, there is a Tester for thee.

Shal. He is not his Craft-master ; he doth not doe it right. I remember at Mile-end Green, when I lay at Clements Inne, I was then Sir Dagenet in Arthur's Show. there was a little quiver fellow, and he would manage you his Piece thus : and he would about, and about, and come you in, and come you in : Rah, tah, tah, would he say, Bownce would he say, and away again would he go, and again would he come : I shall never see such a fellow.

Fal. These fellows will do well, Master Shallow. Farewell Master Silence, I will not use many words with you : fare you well, Gentlemen both : I thank you : I must a dozen mile to night. Bardolph, give the Souldiers Coats.

Shal. Sir John, Heaven bleffe you, and prosper your Affaires, and send us Peace. As you return, visit my house. Let our old acquaintance be renewed : peradventure I will with you to the Court.

Falst. I would you would, Master Shallow.

Shal. Go to : I have spoke at a word. Fare you well.

Exit.

Falst. Fare you well, gentle Gentlemen. On Bardolph, lead the men away. As I return, I will fetch off these Justices : I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. How subject we old men are to this vice of Lying ? This same starv'd Justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildenesse of his Youth, and the Feats he hath done about Turnball-street, and every third word a Lye, duer paid to the hearer, then the Turks Tribute. I do remember him at Clements Inne, like a man made after supper, of a Cheese-paring. When he was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked Radish, with a Head fantastically carv'd upon it with a Knife. He was forlorn, that his Dimensions (to any thick sight) were invincible. He was the very Genius of Famine : he came ever in the reer-ward of the Fashion : And now is the Vices Dagger become a Squire, and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt, as if he had been sworn Brother to him : and I'll be sworn he never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he burst his head, for crowding among the Marshals men. I saw it, and told John of Gaunt, he beat his own Name, for you might have trufs'd him, and all his apparell into an Eele-skinne : The Case of a Treble Hoe-boy was a Manfron for him : a Court : and now hath he Land, and Beeves. Well, I will be acquainted with him, if I return : and it shall go hard, but I will make him a Philosophers two Stones to me. If the young Dace be a Bait for the old Pike, I see no reason, in the Law of Nature, but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Arch-Bishop, Mowbray, Hastings, Westmerland, Coleville.

Bish. What is the Forrest call'd ?

Hast. 'Tis Gualtree Forrest, and't please your Grace.

Bish. Here stand (my Lords) and send discoveries forth To know the number of our Enemies.

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Bish.

Bish. 'Tis well done.

My friends and brethren (in these great Affaires)
I must acquaint you, that I have receiv'd
New-dated Letters from Northumberland :
Their cold intent, tenure, and substance thus.
How doth he wish his Person, with such Powers
As might hold fortance with his Quality,
The which he could not levy : whereupon
He is retir'd, to ripe his growing Fortunes,
To Scotland ; and concludes in hearty Prayers,
That your Attempts may over-live the hazard,
And fearfull meeting of their Opposite.

Mow. Thus do the hopes we have in him, touch ground,
And dath themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now ? what newes ?

Mess. West of this Forrest, scarcely off a mile,
In goodly form, comes on the Enemy :
And by the ground they hide, I judge their number
Upon, or near, the rate of thirty thousand.

Mow. The just proportion that we gave them out.
Let us sway on, and face them in the Field.

Enter Westmerland.

Bish. What well appointed Leader fronts us here ?

Mow. I think it is my Lord of Westmerland.

West. Health, and fair greeting from our Generall,
The Prince, Lord John, and Duke of Lancaster.

Bish. Say on (my Lord of Westmerland) in peace :
What doth concern your coming ?

West. Then (my Lord)
Unto your Grace do I in chief addresse
The substance of my Speech. If that Rebellion
Came like it self, in base and abject Routs,
Led on by bloody Youth guarded with Rage,
And countenanc'd by Boyes, and Beggery :
I say if damn'd Commotion so appear,
In his true, native, and most proper shape,
You (Reverend Father, and these Noble Lords)
Had not been here, to dresse the ugly form
Of base, and bloody insurrection,
With your fair Honours. You, Lord Arch-Bishop,
Whose Sea is by a Civil Peace maintain'd,
Whose Beard, the Silver Hand of Peace hath touch'd,
Whose Learning, and good Letters, Peace hath tutor'd,
Whose white Investments figure Innocence,
The Dove, and very blessed Spirit of Peace.
Wherefore do you so ill translate your self,
Out of the speech of Peace, that bears such grace,
Into the haish and boystrous Tongue of War ?
Turning your Books to Graves, your Ink to Blood,
Your Pens to Launces, and your Tongue divine
To a low Trumpet, and a Point of War ?

Bish. Wherefore do I this ? so the question stands.
Briefly to this end : We are all diseas'd,
And with our surfeting, and wanton hours,
Have brought our selves into a burning Feaver,
And we must bleed for it : of which Disease,
Our late King Richard (being infected) dy'd.
But (my most Noble Lord of Westmerland)
I take not on me here as a Physitian,
Nor do I, as an Enemy to Peace,
Troop in the Throngs of Military men :

But rather thew a while like fearfull Warre,
To dyet rank Mindes, sicke of happinesse ;
And purge th'obstructions, which begin to stop
Our very Veins of Life : hear me more plainly.
I have in equall ballance justly weigh'd,
What wrongs our Armes may do, what wrong we suffer,
And find our griefs heavier, then our offences.
We see which way the stream of Time doth run,
And are enforc'd from our most quiet there,
By the rough Torrent of Occasion,
And have the summary of all our Griefs
(When time shall serve) to shew in Articles ;
Which long ere this, we offer'd to the King,
And might by no Suit, gain our Audience :
When we are wrong'd and would unfold our Griefs,
We are deny'd access unto his person,
Even by those men, that most have done us wrong.
The dangers of the dayes but newly gone,
Whose memory is written on the Earth
With yet appearing blood ; and the examples
Of every Minutes instance (present now)
Hath put us in these ill-beseeming Armes :
Not to break Peace, or any Branch of it,
But to establish here a Peace indeed,
Concurring both in Name and Quality.

West. When ever yet was your Appeal deny'd ?
Wherein have you been galled by the King ?
What Peer hath been stubborn'd, to grate on you,
That you should seal this lawlesse bloody Book
Of forg'd Rebellion, with a Seal divine ?

Bish. My brother Generall, the Common-wealth,
I make my quarrell in particular.

West. There is no need of any such redresse ;
Or if there were, it not belongs to you.

Mow. Why not to him in part, and to us all,
That feell the bruises of the dayes before,
And suffer the Condition of these Times
To lay a heavy and unequall Hand upon our Honours ?

West. O my good Lord Mowbray,
Construe the Times to their Necessities,
And you shall say (indeed) it is the Time,
And not the King, that doth you injuries.
Yet for your part, it not appears to me,
Either from the King, or in the present Time
That you should have an inch of any ground
To build a Grief on : were you not restor'd
To all the Duke of Norfolk's Seignories,
Your Noble, and right well remembred Fathers ?

Mow. What thing, in Honour, had my Father lost,
That need to be reviv'd, and breath'd in me ?
The King that lov'd him, as the State stood then,
Was forc'd, perforce compell'd to banish him :
And then, that Henry Bullingbrook and he
Being mounted, and both rowled in their Seats,
Their neighing Courses daring of the Spurre,
Their armed Staves in charge, their Beavers down,
Their eyes of fire, spackling through fights of Steel,
And the loud Trumpet blowing them together :
Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay'd
My Father from the Breast of Bullingbrook ;
O, when the King did throw his Warder down.
(His own Life hung upon the Staffe he threw)
Then threw he down himself, and all their Lives,
That by Indictment, and by dint of Sword,
Have since miscarried under Bullingbrook. (what.

West. You speak (Lord Mowbray) now you know not K k 2 The

The Earl of Hereford, was reputed then
In England the most valiant Gentleman.
Who knows, on whom Fortune would then have smil'd ?
But if your Father had been Victor there,
He ne're had born it out of Coventry.
For all the Countrey, in a generall voyce,
Cry'd hate upon him : and all their prayers, and love,
Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on,
And bless'd, and grac'd, and did more then the King.
But this is meer digression from my purpose.
Here come I from our Princely Generall,
To know your Grievs ; to tell you from his Grace,
That he will give you Audience : and wherein
It shall enjoy them, every thing set off,
You shall appear, that your demands are just,
That might might so much as think you Enemies.

Mow. But he hath forc'd us to compell this Offer,
And it proceeds from Policy, not Love.

West. Mowbray, you over-ween to take it so :
This Offer comes from Mercy, not from Fear.
For lo, within a Ken our Army lies,
Upon mine Honour, all too confident
To give admittance to a thought of fear.
Our Battell is more full of Names then yours,
Our Men more perfect in the use of Armes,
Our Armour all as strong, our Cause the best ;
Then Reason will, our hearts should be as good.
Say you not then, our Offer is compell'd.

Mow. Well, by my will, we shall admit no Parley.

West. That argues but the shame of your offence :
A rotten Case abides no handing.

Hast. Hath the Prince John a full Commission,
In very ample virtue of his Father,
To hear, and absolutely to determine
Of what Conditions we shall stand upon ?

West. That is intended in the Generalls Name :
I muse you make so slight a Question.

Bish. Then take (my Lord of Westmerland) this Sche-
For this contains our generall Grievances : (dile,
Each severall Article herein redress'd,
All members of our Cause, both here, and hence,
That are insinew'd to this Action,
Acquitted by a true substantiall form,
And present execution of our wills,
To us, and to our purposes confin'd,
We come within our awfull Banks again,
And knit our Powers to the Arm of Peace.

West. This will I shew the Generall. Please you Lords
In sight of both our Battels, we may meet
At either end in peace : which Heaven so frame,
Or to the place of difference call the Swords,
Which must needs decide it.

Bish. My Lord, we will do so.

Mow. There is a thing within my Bosome tells me,
That no condition of our Peace can stand.

Hast. Fear you not that, if we can make our Peace
Upon such large termes, and so absolute,
As our Conditions shall consist upon,
Our Peace shall stand as firm as Rocky Mountains.

Mow. I, but our valuation shall be such,
That every slight, and false-derived Cause,
Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton Reason,
Shall to the King, taste of this Action :
That were our Royall faiths, Martyrs in Love,
We shall be winnowed with so rough a wind,
That even our Corn shall seem as light as Chaffe,

And good from bad find no partition.

Bish. No, no (my Lord) note this : the King is weary
Of dainty, and such picking Grievances :
For he hath found, to end one doubt by Death,
Revives two greater in the Heirs of Life.
And therefore will he wipe his Tables clean,
And keep no Tell-tale to his Memory,
That may repeat, and History his losse,
To new remembrance. For full well he knows,
He cannot so precisely weed this Land,
As his misdoubts present occasion :
His foes are so enrooted with his friends,
That plucking to unfix an Enemy,
He doth unfasten so, and shake a friend.
So that this Land, like an offensive wife,
That hath enrag'd him on, to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his infant up,
And hangs resolv'd Correction in the Arm,
That was uprear'd to execution.

Hast. Besides, the King hath wasted all his Rods,
On late Offenders; that he now doth lack
The very Instruments of Chastisement :
So that his power, like to a Fangleffe Lyon
May offer, but not hold.

Bish. 'Tis very true :
And therefore be assur'd (my good Lord Marshall)
If we do now make our attonement well,
Our Peace will (like a broken Limb united)
Grow stronger, for the breaking.

Mow. Be it so :
Here is return'd my Lord of Westmerland.

Enter Westmerland.

We. The Prince is here at hand: pleaseth your Lordship
To meet his Grace, just distance 'tween our Armies ?

Mow. Your Grace of York, in heavens name then forward.

Bish. Before, and greet his Grace (my Lord) we come.

Enter Prince John.

John. You are well encountred here (my cousin Mow-
Good day to you, gentle Lord Arch-Bishop, (bray)
And so to you Lord Hastings, and to all.
My Lord of York, it better shew'd with you,
When that your Flock (assembled by the Bell)
Encircled you, to hear with reverence
Your Exposition on the holy Text,
Then now to see you here an Iron man,
Cheering a rout of Rebels with your Drumme,
Turning the Word, to Sword ; and Life, to Death.
That man that sits within a Monarchs heart,
And ripens in the Sun-shine of his favour,
Would he abuse the Countenance of the King,
Alack, what mischiefs might he set abroad,
In shadow of such greatnesse ? With you, Lord Bishop,
It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken,
How deep you were within the Books of Heaven ?
To us, the Speaker in his Parliament ;
To us, the imagine voyce of Heaven itself :
The very Opener, and Intelligencer,
Between the Grace, the Sanctities of Heaven,
And our dull workings. O, who shall believe,
But you misuse the reverence of your Place,
Employ the Countenance and Grace of Heaven,
As a false Favourite doth his Princes Name,
Inde eds dishonourable ? You have taken up,

Under

Under the counterfeited zeal of Heaven,
The Subjects of Heavens Substitute, my Father,
And both against the Peace of Heaven, and him,
Have here up-swarm'd them.

Bish. Good my Lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your Fathers Peace:
Bat (as I told my Lord of Westmerland)
The time (mis-order'd) doth in common sence
Crowd us, and crush us, to this monstrous Form,
To hold our safety up. I sent your Grace
The parcels, and particulars of our Grief,
The which hath bin with scorn shov'd from the Court:
Whereon this Hydra-Son of War is born,
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep.
With grant of our most just and right desires;
And true Obedience, of this Madnesse cur'd,
Stoop tameſy to the foot of Majesty.

Mow. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall down,
We have Supplies to second our Attempt:
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them.
And so, successe of mischief shall be born,
And Heir from Heir shall hold this Quarrell up,
Whiles England shall have generation.

John. You are too shallow (Hastings)
Much too shallow,
To sound the bottom of the after-times.

West. Pleaseth your Grace, to answer them directly,
How far-forth you do like their Articles:

John. I like them all, and do allow them well:
And swear here, by the honour of my blood,
My Fathers purposes have been mistook,
And some, about him, have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning, and Authority.
My Lord, these Grievs shall be with speed redrest:
Upon my life, they shall. If this may please you,
Discharge your Powers unto their severall Counties,
As we will ours: and here between the Armies,
Let's drink together friendly, and embrace,
That all their eyes may bear those Tokens home,
Of our restored Love, and Amity.

Bish. I take your Princely word, for these redresses.

John. I give it you, and will maintain my word;
And thereupon I drink unto your Grace.

Hast. Go Captain, and deliver to the Army
This newes of Peace; let them have pay, and part:
I know it will well please them.

High thee Captain. Exit.

Bish. To you, my Noble Lord of Westmerland.

West. I pledge your Grace:
And if you knew what pains I have bestow'd,
To breed this present Peace,
You would drink freely: but my love to ye,
Shall shew it self more openly hereafter.

Bish. I do not doubt you.

West. I am glad of it.
Health to my Lord, and gentle Cousin Mowbray.

Mow. You wish me health in very happy season,
For I am on the sudden, something ill.

Bish. Against ill Chances men are ever merry,
But heavinesse fore-runs the good event.

West. Therefore be merry (Coz) since sudden sorrow
Servesto say thus: some good thing comes to morrow.

Bish. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.

Mow. So much the worse, if your own Rule be true.

John. The word of Peace is render'd: hark how they shout.

Mow. Th's had been cheerfull after Victory.

Bish. A Peace is of the nature of a Conquest:
For then both parties nobly are subdu'd,
And neither party looser.

John. Go (my Lord)
And let our Army be discharged too:
And good my Lord so (please you) let our Trains
March by us, that we may peruse the men
We should have cop'd withall. Exit.

Bish. Go, good Lord Hastings:
And ere they be dismiss'd let them march by. Exit.

John. I trust (Lords) we shall lie to night together.

Enter Westmerland.

Now Cousin, wherefore stands our Army still?

West. The Leaders having charge from you to stand,
Will not go off untill they hear you speak.

John. They know their duties. Enter Hastings.

Hast. Our Army is dispers'd:
Like youthfull Steers, unyoak'd, they took their course
East, West, North, South: or like a School broke up,
Each hurries towards his home, and sporting place.

West. Good tidings (my Lord Hastings) for the which I do arrest thee (Traytor) of high Treason:
And you Lord Arch-Bishop, and you Lord Mowbray,
Of Capitall Treason, I attach you both.

Mow. Is this proceeding just and honourable?

West. Is your Assembly so?

Bish. Will you thus break your faith?

John. I pawn'd thee none:
I promis'd you redresse of these same Grievances
Whereof you did complain; which by mine Honour,
I will perform, with a most Christian care.
But for you (Rebels) look to taste the due
Meet for Rebellion, and such Acts as yours.
Most shallowly did you these Armes commence,
Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent hence.
Strike up our Drummes, pursue the scatter'd stray,
Heaven, and not we, have safely fought to day.
Some guard these Traitors to the block of Death,
Treasons true bed, and yielder up of breath. Exeunt.

Enter Falstaffe, and Collevile.

Falst. What's your Name, Sir? of what Condition are you? and what place, I pray?

Col. I am a Knight, Sir:
And my Name is Collevile of the Dale.

Falst. Well then, Collevile is your Name, a Knight is your Degree, and your Place, the Dale. Collevile shall still be your Name, a Traitor your Degree, and the Dungeon your Place, a place deep enough: so shall you be still Collevile of the Dale.

Col. Are not you Sir John Falstaffe?

Falstaffe. As good a man as he, sir, who e're I am: do ye yield, sir, or shall I swear for you? if I do swear, they are the drops of thy Lovers, and they weep for thy death, therefore rowze up Fear and Trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Col. I think you are Sir John Falstaffe, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole School of Tongues in this belly of mine, and not a Tongue of them all speaks any other word but my Name: and I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe:
my womb, my womb, my womb undo's me. Here comes our Generall.

Enter Prince John and Westmerland.

John. The heat is past, follow no farther now,
Call in the Powers, good Cousin Westmerland.
Now Falstaffe, where have you been all this while?
When every thing is ended, then you come.
These tardy tricks of yours will (on my life)
One time or other, break some Gallows back.

Falst. I would be sorry (my Lord) but it should be thus: I never knew yet, but rebuke and check was the reward of Valour. Do you think me a Swallow, an Arrow, or a Bullet? Have I, in my poor and old Motion, the expedition of Thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility. I have foundred nine score and odde Posts: and here (travell-tainted as I am) have, in my pure and immaculate Valour, taken Sir John Collevile of the Dale, a most furious Knight, and valorous Enemy: But what of that? he saw me, and yielded: that I may justly say with the hook-nos'd fellow of Rome, I came, saw, and over-came.

John. It was more of his Courtesie, then your deserving.

Falst. I know not: here he is, and here I yield him:
and I beseech your Grace, let it be book'd with the rest of this dayes deeds; or, I swear, I will have it in a particular Ballad, with mine own Picture on the top of it (Collevile) kissing my foot: To the which course, if I be enforc'd, if you do not all shew it like gilt two-pences to me; and I, in the clear Sky of Fame, o're-shine you as much as the full Moon doth the Cynders of the Element (which shew like Pins Heads to her) believe not the word of the Noble: therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

John. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Falst. Let it shine then.

John. Thine's too thick to shine.

Falst. Let it do something (my good Lord) that may do me good, and call it what you will.

John. Is thy Name Collevile?

Col. It is (my Lord.)

John. A famous Rebel art thou, Collevile.

Falst. And a famous true Subject took him.

Col. I am (my Lord) but as my Betters are,
That led me hither: had they been rul'd by me,
You should have won them dearer then you have.

Falst. I know not how they sold themselves, but thou like a kind fellow, gav'st thy self away; and I thank thee, for thee.

Enter Westmerland.

John. Have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made, and Execution stay'd.

John. Send Collevile, with his Confederates,
To York, to present Execution.

Blunt, lead him hence, and see you guard him sure.

Exit Collevile.

And now dispatch we toward the Court (my Lords)

I hear the King, my Father is sore sick,
Our Newes shall go before us, to his Majesty,
Which (Cousin) you shall bear, to comfort him:
And we with sober speed will follow you.

Falst. My Lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go through Glocestershire; and when you come to Court, stand my good Lord, pray, in your good report.

John. Fare you well, Falstaffe: I, in my condition,
Shall better speak of you, then you deserve. Exit.

Falst. I would you had but the wit: 'twere better then your Dukedome. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded Boy doth not love me, nor a man cannot make him laugh; but that's no marvell, he drinks no Wine.
There's never any of these demure Boyes come to any proof: for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many Fish-Meals, that they fall into a kind of Male Green-sickness: and then, when they marry, they get Wenches. They are generally Fools, and Cowards; which some of us should be too, but for inflammation.
A good Sherris-Sack hath a two-fold operation in it:
it ascends me into the Brain, dries me there all the foolish, and dull, and crudy Vapours, which environ it:
makes it apprehensive, quick, sogetive, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes; which deliver'd o're to the Voyce, the Tongue, which is the Birth, becomes excellent Wit. The second property of your excellent Sherris, is, the warming of the Blood: which before (cold, and settled) left the Liver white, and pale: which is the Badge of Pusillanimity, and Cowardize: but the Sherris warmes it, and makes it course from the inwards, to the parts extreme: it illuminateth the Face, which (as a Beacon) gives warning to all the rest of this little Kingdome
(man) to Arm: and then the Vital Commoners, and inland petty spirits, muster me all to their Captain, the Heart; who great, and puff up with his retinue, doth any deed of Courage: and this Valour comes of Sherris.
So, that skill in the Weapon is nothing, without Sack
(for that sets it a work:) and Learning, a meer Hoard of Gold, kept by a Devil, till Sack commences it, and sets it in a fl, and ute. Hereof comes it, that Prince Harry is valiant: for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his Father, he hath, like lean, sterill, and bare Land, manured, husbanded, and till'd, with excellent endeavour of drinking good, and good store of fertil Sherris, that he is become very hot, and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first Principle I would teach them, should be to forswear thin Potations, and to addict themselves to Sack. Enter Bardolph.

How now, Bardolph.

Bard. The Army is discharged all, and gone.

Falst. Let them go: I'll through Glocestershire, and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, Esquire: I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Warwick, Clarence, Glocester.

King. Now Lords, if heaven doth give successfull
To this Debate that bleedeth at our doors, (end
We will our Youth lead on to higher Fields,
And draw no Swords, but what are sanctifi'd.
Our Navy is address'd, our Power collected,
Our Substitutes, in absence, well invested,
And every thing lies levell to our wish;
Onely we want a little personall strength:
And pause us, till these Rebels, now a foot,
Come underneath the yoke of Government.

War. Both which we doubt not, but your Majesty
Shall soon enjoy.

King.

King. Humphrey (my Son of Gloucester) where is the Prince, your Brother?

Glo. I think he's gone to hunt (my Lord) at Windsor.

King. And how accompanied?

Glo. I do not know (my Lord.)

King. Is not his Brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him?

Glo. No (my good Lord) he is in presence here.

Clar. What would my Lord, and Father?

King. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence, How chance thou art not with the Prince, thy Brother? He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him (Thomas.)

Thou hast a better place in his Affection,

Then all thy Brothers: Cherish it (my Boy)

And Noble Offices thou may'st effect

Of Mediation (after I am dead)

Between his Greatness, and thy other Brethren.

Therefore omit him not: blunt not his Love,

Nor loose the good advantage of his Grace,

By seeming cold, or careless of his will.

For he is gracious if he be observ'd:

He hath a Tear for Pity, and a Hand

Open (as Day) for melting Charity:

Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's Flint,

As humorous as Winter, and as sudden,

As Flaws congealed in the Spring of day.

His temper therefore must be well observ'd:

Chide him for faults, and do it reverently,

When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth:

But being moody, give him Line, and scope,

Till that his passions (like a Whale on ground)

Confound themselves with working. Learn this Thomas,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,

A Hoop of Gold to bind thy Brothers in:

That the united Vessel of their Blood

(Mingled with Venome of Suggestion,

As force, perforce, the Age will pour it in)

Shall never leak, though it do work as strong

As Aconitum, or rash Gun-powder.

Clar. I shall observe him with all care, and love.

King. Why art thou not at Windsor with him (Thomas?)

Clar. He is not there to day: he dines in London.

King. And how accompanied? Canst thou tell that?

Clar. With Poins, and other his continuall followers.

King. Most subject is the fattest Soyl to Weeds:
And he (the Noble Image of my Youth)

Is over-spread with them: therefore my grief
Stretches it self beyond the hour of death.

The blood weeps from my heart, when I do shape

(In formes imaginary) th'unguided Dayes,

And rotten Times, that you shall look upon,

When I am sleeping with my Ancestors.

For when his head-strong Riot hath no Curb,

When Rage and hot-blood are his Counsellors,

When Means and lavish Manners meet together,

Oh, with what Wings shall his Affections flye

Towards fronting Perill, and oppos'd decay?

War. My gracious Lord, you look beyond him quite:

The Prince but studies his Companions,

Like a strange Tongue: wherein, to gain the Language

'Tis needfull, that the most immodest word

Be look'd upon, and learn'd: which once attain'd,

Your Highness knows, comes to no farther use,

But to be known, and hated. So, like gross terms,

The Prince will, in the perfectness of time,

Cast off his followers: and their memory

Shall as a Pattern, or a Measure live,

By which his Grace must mete the lives of others,

Turning past evils to advantages.

King. 'Tis feldome, when the Bee doth leave her Comb
In the dead Carrion.

Enter Westmerland.

Who's here? Westmerland?

West. Health to my Sovereign, and new happiness

Added to that, that I am to deliver.

Prince John, your Son, doth kisse your Graces hand:

Mowbray, the Bishop, Scroop, Hastings, and all,

Are brought to the Correction of your Law.

There is not now a Rebels Sword unsheath'd,

But Peace puts forth her Olive every where:

The manner how this Action hath been borne,

Here (at more leisure) may your Highness read,

With every course, in his particular.

King. O Westmerland, thou art a Summer Bird,

Which ever in the haunch of Winter sings

The lifting up of day.

Enter Harcourt.

Look, here's more news.

Har. From enemies, Heaven keep your Majesty:

And when they stand against you, may they fall,

As those that I am come to tell you of.

The Earle Northumberland, and the Lord Bardolfe,

With a great Power of English, and of Scots,

Are by the Sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown:

The manner, and true order of the fight,

This Packet (please) you contains at large.

King. And wherefore should these good news

Make me sick?

Will fortune never come with both hands full,

But write her fair words still in foulest Letters?

She either gives a Stomack, and no food,

(Such are the poor, in health) or else a Feast,

And takes away the Stomack (Such are the Rich,

That have abundance, and enjoy it not.

I should rejoyce now, at this happy news,

And now my Sight fails, and my brain is giddy.

O me, come near me, now I am much ill.

Glo. Comfort your Majesty.

Cl. Oh, my Royall Father.

Westmer. My sovereign Lord, cheer up your self, look up.

War. Be patient (Princes) you do know, these Fits

Are with his Highness very ordinary.

Stand from him, give him aire:

He'll straight be well.

Clar. No, no, he cannot long hold out: these pangs,

Th'incessant care, and labour of his mind,

Hath wrought the Mure, that should confine in it,

So thin, that life looks through, and will break out.

Glo. The people fear me: for they do observe

Unfather'd Heirs, and loathly Births of Nature:

The seasons change their manners, as the year

Had found some monthes asleep, and leap'd them over.

Clar. The River hath thrice flow'd, no ebbe between:

And the old talk (Times doting Chronicles)

Say it did so, a little time before

That our Grand-sire Edward sick'd, and dy'd.

War. Speak lower (Princes) for the King recovers.

Glo. This Apolpexy will (certain) be his end.

King. I pray you take me up, and bear me hence
Into some other Chamber : softly pray.

Let there be no noyse made (my gentle friends)
Unlesse some dull and favourable hand

Will whisper Musick to my weary Spirit.

War. Call for the Musick in the other Room.

King. Set me the Crown upon my Pillow here.

Clar. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

War. Less noyse, less noyse.

Enter Prince Henry.

Prin. Hen. Who saw the Duke of Clarence?

Clar. I am here (Brother) full of heaviness.

Prin. Hen. How now? Rain within doors, and none abroad? How doth the King?

Glo. Exceeding ill.

Prin. Hen. Heard he the good news yet?
Tell it him.

Glo. He alter'd much, upon the hearing it.

Prin. Hen. If he be sick with Joy,
He'll recover without Physick.

War. Not so much noyse (my Lords)
Sweet Prince speak low.

The King, your father, is dispos'd to sleep.

Clar. Let us with-draw into the other Room.

War. Will't please your Grace to go along with us?

Prin. Hen. No: I will sit, and watch here, by the King.
Why doth the Crown lye there, upon his Pillow,
Being so troublesome a Bed-fellow?

O pollish'd Perturbation! Golden Care!
That keepe'st the Ports of slumber open wide,
To many a watchfull Night: sleep with it now,
Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet,
As he whose Brow (with homely Biggen bound)
Snores out the Watch of Night. O Majesty!
When thou do'st pinch thy Bearer, thou do'st sit
Like a rich Armor, worn in heat of day,
That scald'st with safety: by his Gates of breath,
There lyes a downey feather, which stirs not:
Did he suspire, that light and weightless down
Perforce must move. My gracious Lord, my Father,
This sleep is sound indeed: this is a sleep,
That from this Golden Rigoll hath divorc'd
So many English Kings. Thy due from me,
Is Tears, and heavy Sorrows of the Bloud,
Which Nature, Love, and filiall tenderness,
Shall (O dear father) pay thee plenteously.
My due, from thee, is this imperiall Crown,
Which (as immediate from thy place, and bloud)
Derives it self to me. Lo, here it sits,
Which heaven shall guard:
And put the worlds whole strength into one gyant arme,
It shall not force this Lineall Honor from me.
This, from thee, will I to mine leave,
As 'tis left to me.

Enter Warwick, Gloucester, Clarence.

King. Warwick, Gloucester, Clarence.

Clar. Doth the King call?

War. What would your Majesty? how fares your Grace?

King. Why did you leave me here alone (my Lords?)

Clar. We left the Prince (my Brother) here (my Liege)
Who undertook to sit and watch by you.

King. The Prince of Wales? where is he? let me see him.

War. This door is open, he is gone this way.

Glo. He came not through the Chamber where we staid.

King. Where is the Crown? who took it from my Pillow?

War. When we with-drew (my Liege) we left it here.

King. The Prince hath ta'en it hence:
Go seek him out.

Is he so hasty, that he doth suppose
My sleep, my death? Find him (my Lord of Warwick)
Chide him hither: this part of his conjoyns
With my disease, and helps to end me.

See Sonns, what things you are:

How quickly Nature falls into revolt,
When Gold becomes her object?

For this, the foolish over-carefull fathers
Have broke their sleeps with thoughts,
Their brains with care, their bones with industry.

For this, they have ingrossed and pyl'd up
The canker'd heaps of strange-atchieved Gold:
For this, they have been thoughtfull, to invest
Their Sonns with Arts, and Martiall Exercises:
When, like the Bee, culling from every flower
The vertuous Sweets, our Thighes packt with Wax,
Our Mouths with Honey, we bring it to the Hive;
And like the Bees, are murdered for our pains.
This bitter taste yields his engrossments,
To the ending father.

Enter Warwick.

Now where is he, that will not stay so long,
Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me?

War. My Lord, I found the Prince in the next Room,
Washing with kindly Tears his gentle Cheeks,
With such a deep demeanour, in great sorrow,
That Tyranny, which never quafft but bloud,
Would (by beholding him) have wash'd his Knife
With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.

King. But wherefore did he take away the Crown?

Enter Prince Henry.

Lo, where he comes. Come hither to me (Harry),
Depart the Chamber, leave us here alone. Exit.

Prin. Hen. I never thought to hear you speak again.

King. Thy wish was father (Harry) to that thought:
I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.

Do'st thou so hunger for my empty Chair,
That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine Honors,
Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth!

Thou seek'st the Greatness, that will over-whelm thee:
Stay but a little: for my Cloud of Dignity
Is held from falling, with so weak a winde,

That it will quickly drop: my Day is dimme.
Thou hast stoln that, which after some few hours
Were thine, without offence: and at my death

Thou hast seal'd up my expectation.
Thy life did manifest, thou lov'd'st me not,

And thou wilt have me dye assur'd of it.
Thou hid'st a thousand Daggers in thy thoughts,
Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart,

To stab at half an hour of my fraile life.

What? canst thou not forbear me half an hour?

Then

Then get thee gone, and dig thy grave thy self,
And bid the merry Bells ring to thy ear
That thou art Crowned, not that I am dead,
Let all the Tears, that should bedew my Herse
Be drops of Balme, to sanctifie thy head:
Onely compound me with forgotten dust;
Give that, which gave thee life, unto the Wormes:
Pluck down my Officers, break my Decrees;
For now a time is come, to mock at forme.
Henry the fifth is Crown'd: Up Vanity,
Down Royall State: All you sage Counsellors, hence:
And to the English Court, assemble now
From ev'ry Region, Apes of Idleness.
Now Neighbour-Confiners, purge you of your Scum:
Have you a Russian that will swear? drink? and dance?
Revell the night? Rob? Murder? and commit
The oldest sins, the newest kind of wayes?
Be happy, he will trouble you no more:
England, shall double gill'd, his trebble guilt.
England, shall give him Office, Honor, Might:
For the Fifth Harry, from curb'd License plucks
The muzzle of Restraint, and the wilde Dog
Shall flesh his tooth in every Innocent.
O my poor Kingdome (sick with civill blowes)
When that my Care could not with-hold thy Ryots,
What wilt thou do, When Ryot is thy Care?
O, thou wilt be a Wildernesse again,
Peopled with Wolves (thy old Inhabitants.)

Prin. O pardon me (my Liege)
But for my Tears,
The most Impediments unto my Speech,
I had fore-stall'd, and deep rebuke,
Ere you (with grief) had spoke, and I had heard
The course of it so far. There is your Crown,
And he that wears the Crown immortally,
Long guard it yours: If I affect it more,
Then as your Honour, and as your Renown,
Let me no more from this Obedience rise,
Which my most true, and inward duteous spirit
Teacheth this prostrate, and exterior bending.
Heaven witness with me, when I here came in,
And found no course of breath within your Majesty,
How cold it struck my heart. If I do faine,
O let me, in my present wildeness, dye,
And never live, to shew th'incredulous World,
The Noble change that I have purposed.
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead
(And dead almost (my Liege) to think you were)
I spake unto the Crown (as having sense)
And thus upbraided it. The Care on thee depending,
Hath fed upon the body of my Father,
Therefore, thou best of Gold, art worst of Gold.
Other, less fine in Charraet, is more precious,
Preserving life, in Med'cine potable:
But thou, most Fine, most Honour'd, most Renown'd,
Hast eat the Bearer up.
Thus (my Royall Liege)
Accusing it, I put it on my Head,
To try with it (as with an Enemy,
That had before my face murdred my father)
The Quarrell of a true inheritor,
But if it did infect my blood with joy,
Or swell my Thoughts to any strain of Pride,
If any Rebell, or vain spirit of mine,
Drd, with the least Affection of a Welcome,
Give entertainment to the might of it,

Let heaven, for ever, keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest Vassall is,
That doth with awe, and terrour kneel to it.
King. O my Son!
Heaven put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou might'st joyn the more, thy Fathers love,
Pleading so wisely, in excuse of it.
Come hither Harry, sit thou by my bed,
And hear (I think the very latest Counsell
That ever I shall breath:) Heaven knowes, my Son,
By what by-pathes, and indirect crook'd-wayes
I met this Crown: and I my self know well
How troublesome it sate upon my head.
To thee, it shall descend with better Quiet,
Better Opinion, better Confirmation:
For all the soyle of the Atchievement goes
With me, into the Earth. It seem'd in me,
But as an Honor snatch'd with boy'strous hand,
And I had many living, to upbraid
My gain of it; by their assistances,
Which daily grew to a Quarrell, and to Bloud-shed, Wounding supposed Peace.

All these bold Fears,
Thou seest (with perill) I have answered:
For all my Reign, hath been but as a Scene
Acting that argument. And now my death
Changes the Mode: For what in me was purchas'd,
Falls upon thee, in a more Fairer sort.
So thou, the Garland wear'st successively,
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure, then I could do,
Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green:
And all thy Friends, which thou must make thy friends
Have but their stings, and teeth, newly taken out.
By whose fell working, I was first advanc'd,
And by whose power, I well might lodge a Fear
To be again displac'd. Which to avoid,
I cut them off: and had a purpose now
To lead out many to the Holy Land;
Least rest, and lying still, might make them look
Too near unto my State.

Therefore (my Harry)
Be it thy course to busie giddy Minds
With Forraign Quarrels: that Action hence borne out,
May waste the memory of the former dayes.
More would I, but my Lungs are wast'd so,
That strength of Speech is utterly deni'd me.
How I came by the Crown, O heaven forgive:
And grant it may, with thee, in true peace live.

Poin. My gracious Liege:
You won it; wore it, kept it, gave it me,
Then plain and right must my possession be;
Which I, with more, then with a common pain,
'Gainst all the World, will rightfully maintain.

Enter Lord John of Lancaster, and Warwick.

King. Look, look,
Here comes my John of Lancaster:
John. Health, Peace, and Happiness,
To my Royall Father:

King. Thou bring'st me happiness,
(Son John,)
But health (alack) with youthfull wings is flown
From this bare, wither'd Trunk. Upon thy sight
My worldly business makes a period.

Where

Where is my Lord of Warwick?

Prin. My Lord of Warwick.

King. Doth any name particular, belong
Unto the Lodging, where I first did swoon'd?

War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my Noble Lord.

King. Laud be to heaven:

Even there my life must end.

It hath been prophes'd to me many years,

I should not dye, but in Jerusalem:

Which (vainly) I suppos'd the Holy-Land.

But bear me to that Chamber, there he lye:

In that Jerusalem, shall Harry dye.

Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

*Enter Shallow, Silence, Falstaffe, Bardolfe,

Shal. By Cock and Pye, you shall not away to night.
What, Davy, I say.

Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow.

Shal. I will not excuse you: you shall not be excus'd.
Excuses shall not be admitted: there is no excuse shall serve: you shall not be excus'd.

Why Davy.

Dav. Here sir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, let me see (Davy) let me see:
William Cook, bid him come hither. Sir John, you shall not be excus'd.

Davy. Marry, sir, thus: those Precepts cannot be serv'd: and again, sir, shall we sow the head-land with Wheat?

Shal. With red Wheat, Davy. But for William Cook: are there no young Pigeons?

Dav. Yea, Sir.

Here is now the Smith's note, for Shooing,
And Plough-Irons.

Shal. Let it be cast, and paid: Sir John, you shall not be excus'd.

Dav. Sir, a new link to the Bucket must needs be had: And, Sir, do you mean to stop any of Williams
Wages, about the Sack he lost the other day, at Hinckley Fairst?

Shal. He shall answer it:

Some Pigeons, Davy, a couple of short legg'd Hens: a joint of Mutton, and any pretty little fine Kickshaws, tell William Cook.

Davy. Doth the man of War, stay all night, sir?

Shal. Yes, Davy:

I will use him well. A friend i'th Court, is better then a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy, for they are arrant Knaves, and will back-bite.

Davy. No worse then they are bitten, sir: For they have marvellous foul linnen.

Shal. Well conceited, Davy: about thy businesse, Davy.

Davy. I beseech you, sir,

To countenance William Visor of Wancot, against Cle- ment Perkes of the hill.

Shal. There are many Complaints, Davy, against that Visor, that Visor is an arrant Knave, on my knowledge.

Davy. I grant your Worship, that he is a knave, Sir:
But yet heaven forbid, sir, but a Knave should have some Countenance, at his Friends request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a Knave is not. I have serv'd your Worship truly, sir, these eight years: and if I cannot once or twice in a Quarter bear out a knave, against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your Worship. The Knave is mine honest friend, Sir, therefore I beseech your Worship, let him be Countenanc'd.

Shal. Go too,

I say he shall have no wrong: Look about, Davy.
Where are you, Sir John? Come, off with your Boots.
Give me your hand, Master Bardolfe.

Bard. I am glad to see your Worship.

Shal. I thank thee, with all my heart, kind Master
Bardolfe, and welcome, my tall Fellow:
Come, Sir John.

Falst. I'll follow you, good Master Robert Shallow.
Bardolfe, look to our Horses. If I were saw'd into Quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded Hermite's staves, as Master Shallow. It is a wonderfull thing to see the semblable Coherence of his mens spirits, and his: They, by observing of him, do bear them-
selve like foolish Justices: He, by conversing with them, is turn'd into a Justice-like Servingman. Their spirits are so married in Conjunction, with the participation of Society, that they flock together in consent, like so many Wilde-Geese. If I had a suit to Master Shallow,
I would humour his men, with the imputation of being near their Master. If to his Men, I would curry with Master Shallow, that no man could better command his Servants. It is certain, that either wise bearing, or ignorant Carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore, let men take heed of their Company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow, to keep Prince Harry in continuall Laughter, the wearing out of six fashions (which is four Terms) or two Actions, and he shall laugh with Intervallums. O it is much that a Lye (with a slight oath) and a jest (with a sad brow) will do with a Fellow, that never had the Ache in his shoulders. O you shall see him laugh, till his Face be like a wet Cloak, ill laid up.

Shal. Sir John.

Fal. I come, Master Shallow, I come, Master Shallow.
Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

*Enter Earle of Warwick, and the Lord
Chief Justice.*

War. How now, my Lord Chief Justice, whither away?

Chie. Just. How doth the King?

War. Exceeding well: his Cares
Are now, all ended.

Chie. Just. I hope, not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of Nature,
And to our purposes, he lives no more.

Chie. Just. I would his Majesty had call'd me with him,
The service that I truly did his life,
Hath left me open to all injuries.

War.

War. Indeed I think the young King loves you not.

Chei. Just. I know he doth not, and do arme my self
To welcome the condition of the Time,
Which cannot look more hideously upon me.
Then I have drawn it in my fantasie.

Enter John of Lancaster, Gloucester, and Clarence.

War. Here comes the heavy issue of dead Harry.
O, that the living Harry had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three Gentlemen:
How many Nobles then, should hold their places,
That must strike saile, to spirits of vild sort?

Chei. Just. Alas, I fear, all will be over-turn'd.

Joh. Good morrow, Cofin Warwick, good morrow.

Glon. Clar. Good morrow, Cofin.

Joh. We meet, like men, that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember: But our Argument
Is all too heavy, to admit much talk.

Joh. Well: Peace be with him, that hath made us heavy.

Chei. Just. Peace be with us, least we be heavier.

Glon. O, good my Lord, you have lost a friend indeed:
And I dare swear, you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow, it is sure your own.

Joh. Though no man be assur'd what grace to find,
You stand in coldest expectation.
I am the forrier, would 'twere otherwise.

Clar. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaffe fair,
Which swim's against your stream of Quality.

Chei. Just. Sweet Princes: what I did, I did in Honor,
Led by th' Imperiall Conduct of my Soul,
And never shall you see, that I will begge
A ragged and forestall'd Remission.
If Troth, and upright Innocency fail me,
I'll to the King (my Master) that is dead,
And tell him, who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the Prince.

Enter Prince Harry.

Ch. Just. Good morrow: and heaven save your Majesty.

Prin. This new, and gorgeous Garment, Majesty,
Sits not so easie on me, as you think.
Brothers, you mix your Sadness with some Fear:
This is the English, not the Turkish Court:
Not Amurrah, an Amurrah succeeds,
But Harry, Harry: Yet be sad (good Brothers)
For (to speak truth) it very well becomes you:
Sorrow, so Royally in you appears,
That I will deeply put the fashion on,
And wear it in my heart. Why then be sad,
But entertain no more of it (good brothers)
Then a joint burthen, laid upon us all.
For me, by Heaven (I bid you be assur'd)
I'll be your Father, and your Brother too:
Let me but bear your Love, I'll bear your Cares;
But weep that Harry's dead, and so will I.
But Harry lives, that shall convert those Tears
By number, into hours of happinesse.

Joh. &c. We hope no other from your Majesty.

Prin. You all look strangely on me: and you most.
You are: (I think) assur'd, I love you not.

Chei. Just. I am assur'd (if I be measur'd rightly)
Your Majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

Prin. No? How might a Prince of my great hopes forget
So great indignities you laid upon me?

What? Rate? Rebuke? and roughly send to Prison
Th'immediate Heir of England? Was this easie?

May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?

Chei. Just. I then did use the Person of your Father:
The Image of his power lay then in me,
And in th' administration of his Law,
Whiles I was busie for the Commonwealth,
Your Highness pleased to forget my place,
The Majesty, and power of Law, and Justice,
The Image of the King, whom I presented,
And struck me in my very Seat of Judgment:
Whereon (as an Offender to your Father)
I gave bold way to my Authority,
And did commit you. If the deed were ill.
Be you contented, wearing now the Garland,
To have a Son, set your Decrees at naught?
To pluck down Justice from your awfull Bench?
To trip the course of Law, and blunt the Sword
That guards the peace, and safety of your Person?
Nay more, to spurn at your most Royall Image,
And mock your workings, in a Second body?
Question your Royall Thoughts, make the case yours:
Be now the Father, and propose a Son:
Hear your own dignity so much prophan'd,
See your most dreadfull Lawes, so loosely slighted;
Behold your self, so by a son disdain'd:
And then imagine me, taking your part,
And in your power, soft silencing your Son:
After this cold consideration, sentence me;
And, as you are a King, speak in your State,
What I have done, that misbecame my place,
My person, or my Lieges Sovereignty.

Prin. You are right Justice, and you weigh this well:
Therefore still bear the Ballance, and the Sword:
And I do wish your Honors may encrease,
Till you do live, to see a Son of Mine
Offend you, and obey you, as I did.
So shall I live to speak my Fathers words:
Happy am I, that have a man so bold,
That dares do Justice, on my proper son;
And no lesse happy, having such a Son,
That would deliver up his greatness so,
Into the hands of Justice, You did commit me:
For which I do commit into your hand,
Th'unstained Sword that you have us'd to bear:
With this Remembrance; That you use the same
With the like bold, just, and impartiall spirit
As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand,
You shall be as a Father to my Youth:
My voice shall sound, as you do prompt mine ear,
And I will stoop, and humble my intents,
To your well practis'd, wise Directions.
And Princes all, believe me, I beseech you:
My father is gone wilde into his Grave,
(For in his Tomb, ly my Affections)
And with his Spirit, sadly I survive,
To mock the expectation of the World:
To frustrate Prophecies, and to race out
Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
After my seeming. The Tide of Bloud in me,
Hath proudly flow'd in Vanity, till now.
Now doth it turn, and ebbe back to the Sea.
Wherein it shall mingle with the state of floods,
And flow henceforth in formall Majesty.
Now call we our High Court of Parliament,
And let us choose such Limbs of Noble Counsell,

That

That the great Body of our State may go
In equall rank with the best govern'd Nation,
That War, or Peace, or both at once may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us,
In which you (father) shall have formost hand,
Our Coronation done, we will accite
(As I before remembred) all our State,
And heaven (consigning to my good intents)
No Prince, nor Peer, shall have just cause to say,
Heaven shorten Harries happy life, one day. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

*Enter Falstaffe, Shallow, Silence, Bardolfe,

Shal. Nay; you shall see mine Orchard, where in an Arbor we will eat a last years Pippin of my own graffing, with a dish of Carrawayes, and so forth: Come cofin Silence, and then to bed.

Fal. You have here a goodly dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren: Beggars ail, beggars all.
Sir John: Marry, good aire. Spread Davy, spread Davy:
Well said Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses: he is your Servingman, and your Husbandman.

Shal. A good Varlet, a good Varlet, a very good Var-let, Sir John: I have drunk too much Sack at Supper.
A good Varlet. Now sit down, now sit down: Come Cousin.

Sil. Ah sirra (quoth a) we shall do nothing but eat, and make good cheer, and praise heaven for the merry
year: when flesh is cheap, and Females dear, and lusty Lads more here and there: so merrily, and ever among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart, good Master Silence. I'll drink your health for that anon.

Shal. Good Master Bardolfe: some wine, Davy.

Dav. Sweet sir, sir: I'll be with you anon: most sweet sir, sir. Master Page, sit: good Master Page, sit: Proface.
What you want in meat, we'll have in drink: but you bear, the heart's all.

Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolfe, and my little Souldier there, be merry.

Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife ha's all.

For women are shrews, both short and tall:

'Tis merry in Hall, when Beards wag all:

And welcome merry Shrovetide. Be merry, be merry.

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this Mettle.

Sil. Who I? I have been merry twice and once, ere now.

Dav. There is a dish of Lether-coats for you.

Shal. Davy.

Dav. Your Worship: I'll be with you straight. A cup of Wine, sir?

Sil. A Cup of Wine, that's brisk and fine, and drink unto the Leman mine: and a merry heart lives long-a.

Fal. Well said, Master Silence.

Sil. If we shall be meriy, now comes in the sweet of the night.

Fal. Health, and long life to you, Master Silence.

Sil. Fill the Cup, and let it come. I'll pledge you were't a mile to the bottome.

Shal. Honest Bardolfe, welcome: If thou want'st any thing, and will not call, beshrew thy heart. Welcome my little tyne thief, and welcome indeed too: I'll drink to Master Bardolfe, and to all Cavileroes about London.

Dav. I hope to see London, once ere I dye.

Bar. If I might see you there, Davy.

Shal. You'll crack, a quart together? Ha, will you not,
Master Bardolfe?

Bar. Yes Sir, in a pottle pot.

Shal. I thank thee: the knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that. He will not out, he is true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why there spoke a King: lack nothing, be merry.
Look, who's at door there, ho: who knocks?

Fal. Why now you have done me right

Sil. Do me right, and dub me Knight, Samingo. Is't not so.

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is't? Why then say an old man can do somewhat.

Dav. If it please your Worship, there's one Pistoll come from the Court with news.

Fal. From the Court? Let him come in.

Enter Pistoll.

How now Pistoll?

Pist. Sir John, save you sir.

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistoll?

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows none to good, sweet Knight: Thou art now one of the greatest men in the Realm.

Silen. Indeed, I think he be, but Goodman Puffe of Barfon.

Pist. Puffe? Puffe in thy teeth, most recreant Coward base Sir John, I am thy Pistoll, and thy friend: helter skelter have I rode to thee, and tydings do I bring, and lucky joyes, and golden Times, and happy News of price.

Fal. I prethee now deliver them, like a man of this World.

Pist. A footra for the World, and Worldlings base,
I speak of Affrica, and Golden Joyes.

Fal. O base Assyrian Knight, what is thy news?
Let King Covitha know the truth thereof.

Sil. And Robin-hood, Scarlet, and John.

Pist. Shall dunghill Currs confront the Hellicon?
And shall good news be baffel'd?

Then Pistoll lay thy head in Furies lap.

Shal. Honest Gentleman,
I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why then lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, Sir.

If sir, you come with news from the Court, I take it,
there is but two wayes, either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am Sir, under the King, in some Authority.

Pist. Under which King?

Bezonian, speak, or dye.

Shal. Under King Harry.

Pist. Harry the Fourth? or Fifth?

Shal. Harry the Fourth.

Pist. A footra for thine Office.

Sir John, thy tender Lamb-kin, now is King,
Harry the Fifth's the man, I speak the truth.

When Pistoll lyes, do this, and fig-me, like
The bragging Spaniard.

Falst.

Fal. What, is the old King dead?
Pist. As nail in door.
 The things I speak are just.
Fal. Away Bardolph, Saddle my Horse,
 Master Robert Shallow, choose what Office thou wilt
 In the Land, 'tis thine. Pistol, I will double charge thee
 With Dignities.
Bard. O joyfull day:
 I would not take a Knighthood for my Fortune.
Pist. What? I do bring good newes.
Falst. Carry Master Silence to bed: Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt, I am Fortunes Steward. Get on thy Boots, we'll ride all night. Oh sweet Pistol: Away Bardolfe: Come Pistol, utter more to me: and withall devise something to do thy self good.
 Boot, Boot, Master Shallow, I know the young King is sick for me. Let us take any mans Horses: The Lawes of England are at my commandment. Happy are they, which have been my Friends: and woe unto my Lord
 Chief Justice.
Pist. Let Vultures vild seize on his Lungs also:
 Where is the Life that late I led, say they?
 Why here it is, welcome those pleasant dayes. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Hostesse Quickly, Doll Tear-sheet, and Beadles.

Hostesse No, thou arrant knave: I would I might die, that I might have thee hang'd: Thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joynt.
Off. The Constables have deliver'd her over to me:
 and she shall have Whipping cheer enough, I warrant her. There hath been a man or two (lately) kill'd about her.
Dol. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lye: Come on, I'll tell thee what, thou damn'd Tripe-visag'd Rascall, if the Child I now go with, do miscarry, thou had'st better thou had'st strook thy Mother, thou Paper-fac'd Villain.
Host. O that Sir John were come, he would make this a bloody day to some body. But I would the Fruit of her Womb might miscarry.
Officer. If it do, you shall have a dozen of Cushions again, you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me: for the man is dead, that you and Pistoll beat among you.
Dol. I'll tell thee what, thou thin man in a Censor; I will have you as soundly swing'd for this, you blew-Bottl'd Rogue: you filthy famish'd Correctioner, if you be not swing'd, I'll forswear half Kirtles.
Off. Come, come, you she-Knight-arrant, come.
Host. O, that right should thus o'ecome might. Well, of sufferance comes ease.
Dol. Come you Rogue, come:
 Bring me to a Justice.
Host. Yes, come, you starv'd Blood-hound.
Dol. Goodman Death, goodman Bones.
Host. Thou Anatomy, thou.
Dol. Come, you thin Thing:
 Come, you Rascall.
Off. Very well. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter two Grooms.

1. Groom. More Rushes, more Rushes.
 2. Groom. The Trumpets have sounded twice.
 1. Groo. It will be two of the Clock ere they come from the Coronation. Exeunt Grooms.

Enter Falstaffe, Shallow, Pistol, Bardolfe, and Page.

Falstaffe. Stand here by me, M. Robert Shallow, I will make the King do you Grace. I will leer upon him, as he comes by: and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.
Pistol. Bless thy Lungs, good Knight.
Falst. Come here Pistol, stand behind me. O, if I had had time to have made new Liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But it is no matter, this poor shew doth better: this doth inferre
 the zeal I had to see him.

Shal. It doth so.
Falst. It shewes my earnestnesse in affection.
Pist. It doth so.
Fal. My devotion.
Pist. It doth, it doth, it doth.
Fal. As it were to ride day and night,
 And not to deliberate, not to remember,
 Not to have patience to shift me.
Shal. It is most certain.
Fal. But to stand stained with Travell, and sweating with desire to see him, thinking of nothing else, putting all affaires in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done, but to see him.
Pist. 'Tis semper idem: for absque hoc nihil est.
 'Tis all in every part.
Shal. 'Tis so indeed.
Pist. My Knight, I will enflame thy Noble Liver, and make thee rage. Thy Dol, & Hellen of thy noble thoughts is in base Durance, and contagious prison: Hall'd thither by most Mechanicall and durty hands. Rowze up Revenge from Ebon den, with fell Alesto's Snake, for Dol s in. Pistol speaks nought but troth.
Fal. I will deliver her.
Pist. There roar'd the Sea: and Trumpet Clangour sounds.

The Trumpets sound. Enter King Henry the Fifth, Brothers, Lord Chief Justice.

Falst. Save thy Grace, King Hall, my Royall Hall.
Pist. The heavens thee guard, and keep, most royall
 Imp of Fame.
Fal. 'Save thee my sweet Boy.
King. My Lord Chief justice, speak to that vain
 man.
Ch. Just. Have you your wits?
 Know you what 'tis you speak?
Falst. My King, my Jove: I speak to thee, my heart.
King. I know thee not, old man: Fall to thy Prayers:
 How ill white hairs become a Fool, and Jester?
 L I I have

I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,
 So surfet swell'd, so old, and so prophane:
 But being awake, I do despise my dream.
 Make less thy body, (hence) and more thy Grace,
 Leave gormandizing; Know the Grave doth gape
 For thee, thrice wider then for other men.
 Reply not to me, with a Fool-born Jest,
 Presume not, that I am the thing I was,
 For heaven doth know (so shall the world perceive)
 That I have turn'd away my former Self,
 So will I those that kept me Company.
 When thou dost hear I am, as I have bin,
 Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast
 The Tutor and the Feeder of my Riots:
 Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death,
 As I have done the rest of my Misleaders,
 Not to come near our Person, by ten mile.
 For competence of life, I will allow you,
 That lack of means enforce you not to evil:
 And as we hear you do redeem your selves,
 We will according to your strength, and qualities,
 Give you advancement. Be it your charge (my Lord)
 To see perform'd the tenure of our word. Set on.

Exit King.

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. I marry, Sir John, which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be. M. Shallow, do not you grieve at this: I shall be sent for in private to him: Look you, he must seem thus to the world: fear not your advancement: I will be the man yet, that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot well perceive how, unless you should give me your Doublet, and stuffe me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word. This that you heard was but a colour.

Shal. A colour I fear, that you will dye in, Sir John.

Fal. Fear no colours, go with me to dinner:

Come Lieutenant Pistol, come Bardolfe,

I shall be sent for soon at night.

Ch. Just. Go carry Sir John Falstaffe to the Fleet, Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My Lord, my Lord.

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak, I will hear you soon: Take them away.

Pist. Si fortuna me tormento, spera me contento.

Exit Master Lancaster, and Chief Justice.

John. I like this fair proceeding of the Kings, He hath intent his wonted Followers Shall be very well provided for:

But are banisht, till their conversations

Appear more wise, and modest in the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are.

John. The King hath call'd his Parliament, My Lord.

Ch. Just. He hath.

John. I will lay oddes, that ere this year expire, We bear our Civil Swords, and Native fire As far as France. I heard a Bird so sing, Whose Musick (to my thinking) pleas'd the King. Come, will you hence?

Exeunt.

F I N I S.

EPILOGUE.

First, my Fear; then, my Curtesie; last, my Speech. My Fear, is your Displeasure, my Curtesie, my Duty; and my Speech, to beg your Pardons. If you look for a good Speech now, you undoe me: for what I have to say, is of mine own making and what (indeed) I should say, will (I doubt) prove mine own marring. But to the Purpose, and so to the Venture. Be it known to you (as it is very well) I was lately here in the end of a displeasing Play, to pray your Patience for it, and to promise you a better: I did mean (indeed) to pay you with this, which if (like an ill Venture) it come unluckily home, I break; and you, my gentle Creditors lose. Here I promise you I would be, and here I commit my Body to your Mercies: Bate me some, and I will pay you some, and (as most Debtors do) promise you infinitely.

If my Tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my Legs? And yet that were but light payment, to Dance out of your debt: But a good Conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the Gentlewomen here have forgotten me; ; if the Gentlewomen will not, then the Gentlemen do not agree with the Gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you: if you be not too much cloyed with Fat meat, our humble Authour will continue the story (with Sir John in it) and make you merry with fair Katherine of France: where (for any thing I know) Falstaffe shall die of a Sweat, unlesse already he be kill'd with your hard Opinions: For Odcastle died a Martyr, and this is not the man. My Tongue is weary, when my Legs are too, I will bid you good night; and so kneel down before you: (But indeed) to pray for the Queen.

The

The Life of King HENRY the Fifth.

Enter Prologue.

O, For a Muse of Fire, that would ascend
The brightest Heaven of Invention
A Kingdome for a Stage, Princes to act,
And Monarchs to behold the swelling Scene.
Then should the Warlike Harry, like himself,
Assume the Port of Mars, and at his heels
(Leasht in, like hounds) should Famine, Sword, and Fire
Crouch for employment. But pardon, Gentles all :
The flat unraised Spirits, that hath dar'd,
On this unworthy Scaffold, to bring forth
So great an Object. Can this Cock-Pit hold
The vasty Field of France ? Or may we cramme
Within this Wooden O, the very Casket
That did affright the Aire at Agincourt ?
O pardon : since a crooked Figure may
Attest in little place a Million,
And let us, Cyphers to this great Accompt,

On your imaginary Forces work,
Suppose within the Girdle of these Walls
Are now confin'd two mighty Monarchs,
Whose high, up-rear'd, and abutting Fronts,
The perilous narrow Ocean parts asunder.
Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts :
Into a thousand parts divide one Man,
And make imaginary Puissance.
Think when we talk of Horses, that you see them
Printing their proud Hoofs ith' receiving Earth :
For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our Kings,
Carry them here and there : jumping o're Times ;
Turning th' accomplishment of many yeares
Into an Hour-glasse : for the which supply,
Admit me Chorus to this History ;
Who Prologue-like, your humble patience pray,
Gently to hear, kindly to judge our Play.

Exit.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Bishops of Canterbury, and Ely.

Bish. Cant.

MY Lord, I'll tell you, that self Bill is urg'd,
Which in th'eleventh year of the last Kings reign
Was like, and had indeed against us past,
But that the scrambling and unquiet time
Did push it out of farther question.

Bish. Ely. But how, my Lord, shall we resist it now ?

Bish. Cant. It must be thought on : if it passe against us,
We lose the better part of our Possession :
For all the Temporall Lands which men devout
By Testament have given to the Church,
Would they strip from us ; being valu'd thus,
As much as would maintain, to the Kings honour,
Full fifteen Earles, and fifteen hundred Knights,
Six thousand and two hundred good Esquires :
And to relief of Lazars, and weak age
Of indigent faint Souls, past corporall toyl,
A hundred Almes-houses, right well suppli'd :
And to the Coffers of the King beside,
A thousand pound by th' year. Thus runs the Bill.

Bish. Ely. This would drink deep.

Bish. Cant. 'T would drink the Cup and all.

Bish. Ely. But what prevention ?

Bish. Cant. The King is full of grace, and fair regard.

Bish. Ely. And a true lover of the holy Church.

Bish. Cant. The courtes of his youth promis'd it not.
The breath no sooner left his Fathers body,
But that his wildnesse mortifi'd in him,
Seem'd to diet too : yea at that very moment,
Consideration like an Angel came,
And whipt th'offending Adam out of him,
Leaving his Body as a Paradise,
T'invelope and contain Celestiall Spirits.
Never was such a sudden Schollar made :
Never came Reformation in a Flood,
With such a heady currant scowring faults :
Nor never Hydra-headed Wilfulness
So soon did lose his Seat ; and all at once ;
As in this King.

Bish. Ely. We are blessed in the Change.

Bish. Cant. Here him but reason in Divinity :
And all-admiring, with an inward wish
You would desire the King were made a Prelate.
Hear him debate of Common-wealth affaires ;
You would say, it hath been all in all his study :
Lift his discourse of War, and you shall hear
A fearfull Battell rendred you in Musick.

L 3

Turn

Turn him to any Cause of Pollicy,
The Gordian Knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his Garter: that when he speaks,
The Aire, a Charter'd Libertine, is still,
And the mute Wonder lurketh in mens eares,
To steal his sweet and honied Sentences:
So that the Art and Practick part of Life,
Must be the Mistresse to his Theorique,
Which is a wonder how his Grace should glean it,
Since his addiction was to Courses vain,
His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow,
His Houres fill'd up with Riots, Banquets, Sports;
And never noted in him any study,
Any retirement, any sequestration,
From open Haunts and Popularity.

B. Ely. The Strawberry grows underneath the Nettle,
And wholesome Berries thrive and ripen best,
Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality:
And so the Prince obscur'd his Contemplation
Under the vail of wildnesse, which (no doubt)
Grew like the Summer Grasse, fastest by Night,
Unseen, yet cressive in his faculty.

B. Cant. It must be so; for Miracles are ceas'd:
And therefore we must needs admit the means,
How things are perfected.

B. Ely. But my good Lord:
How now for mitigation of this Bill,
Urg'd by the Commons? doth his Majesty
Incline to it, or no?

B. Cant. He seems indifferent:
Or rather swaying more upon our part,
Then cherishing th'exhibitors against us
For I have made an offer to his Majesty,
Upon our Spirituall Convocation,
And in regard of Causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his grace at large,
As touching France, to give a greater Summe,
Then ever at one time the Clergy yet
Did to his Predecessors part withall

B. Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my Lord?

B. Cant. With good acceptance of his Majesty:
Save that there was not time enough to hear,
As I perceiv'd his Grace would fain have done,
The severalls and unhidden passages
Of his true Titles to some certain Dukedomes,
And generally, to the Crown and seat of France,
Deriv'd from Edward, his great Grandfather.

B. Ely. What was th'impediment that broke this off?

B. Cant. The French Ambassador upon that instant
Craw'd audience; and the hour I think is come,
To give him hearing: Is it four a Clock?

B. Ely. It is.

B. Cant. Then go we in, to know his Embassie:
Which I could with a ready guesse declare,
Before the Frenchman speaks a word of it.

B. Ely. I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear it.

Exeunt.

Enter the King, Humfrey, Bedford, Clarence, Warwick, Westmerland, and Exeter.

King. Where is my gracious Lord of Canterbury?

Exeter. Not here in presence.

King. Send for him, good Uncle.

Westm. Shall we call in th'Ambassadour, my Liege?

King. Not yet, my Cousin: we would be resolv'd,
Before we hear him, of some things of weight,
That taske our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter two Bishops.

B. Cant. God and his Angels guard your sacred
And make you long become it. (Throne,

King. Sure we thank you,
My learned Lord, we pray you to proceed,
And justly and religiously unfold,
Why the Law Salike, that they have in France,
Or should, or should not bar us in our claim:
And God forbid, my dear and faithfull Lord,
That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading,
Or nicely charge your understanding Soul,
With opening Titles miscreate, whose right
Sutes not in native colours with the truth:
For God doth know, how many now in health,
Shall drop their blood, in approbation
Of what your reverence shall incite us to.
Therefore take heed how you impawn our Person,
How you awake our sleeping Sword of War;
We charge you in the name of God take heed:
For never two such Kingdomes did contend,
Without much fall of blood, whose guiltlesse drops
Are every one, a woe, a sore complaint,
'Gainst him, whose wrong gives edge unto the Swords,
That makes such waste in brief mortality.
Under this Conjururation, speak my Lord:
For we will hear, note, and believe in heart,
That what you speak is in your Conscience washt,
As pure as sin with Baptism.

B. Can. Then hear me gracious Sovereign, & you Peers,
That owe your selves, your lives, and services,
To this Imperiall Throne. There is no bar
To make against your Highnesse claim to France,
But this which they produce from Pharamond,
In terram Salicam Mulieres ne succedant,
No Woman shall succeed in Salike Land:
Which Salike Land, the French unjustly gloze
To be the Realm of France, and Pharamond
The founder of this Law and female Bar.
Yet their own Authours faithfully affirm,
That the Land Salike is in Germany,
Between the Floods of Sala and of Elbe:
VVhere Charles the Great having subdu'd the Saxons,
There left behind and settled certain French:
VVho holding in disdain the German women,
For some dishonest manners of their life,
Establisht then this Law; to wit, No Female
Should be Inheritrix in Salike Land:
VVhich Salike (as I said) 'twixt Elbe and Sala,
Is at this day in Germany call'd Meisen.
Then doth it well appear, the Salike Law
VVas not devised for the Realm of France:
Nor did the French possess the Salike Land,
Untill four hundred one and twenty years
After defunction of King Pharamond,
Idely suppos'd the founder of this Law,
VVho died within the year of our Redemption,
Four hundred twenty six: and Charles the Great
Subdu'd the Saxons, and did seat the French
Beyond the River Sala, in the year
Eight hundred five. Besides, their VVriters say,
King Pepin, which deposed Childerike,
Did as Heir generall, being descended
Of Bluhild, which was Daughter to King Clothair,
Make Claim and Title to the Crown of France,
Hugh Capet also, who usurpt the Crown

Of Charles the Duke of Lorain, sole Heir male
Of the true Line and Stock of Charles the great :
To find his Title with some shews of truth,
Though in pure truth it was corrupt and naught,
Convey'd himself as th' Heir to th' Lady Lingare.
Daughter to Charlemain, who was the Son
To Lewes the Emperour, and Lewes the Son
Of Charles the Great : also King Lewes the Tenth,
Who was sole Heir to the Usurper Capet,
Could not keep quiet in his conscience,
Wearing the Crown of France, 'till satisfied,
That fair Queen Isabel, his Grandmother,
Was Lineall of the Lady Ermengare,
Daughter to Charles the foresaid Duke of Lorain :
By the which Marriage, the Line of Charles the Great
Was re-united to the Crown of France.

So, that as clear as is the Summers Sun,
King Pepins Title, and Hugh Capets Claim,
King Lewes his satisfaction, all appear
To hold in Right and Title of the Female :
So do the Kings of France upon this day.
Howbeit, they would hold up this Salique Law,
To bar your Highnesse claiming from the Female,
And rather chuse to hide them in a Net,
Then amply to imbar their crooked Titles,
Usurpt from you and your Progenitors.

King. May I with right and conscience make this claim?

Bish. Cant. The sin upon my head, dread Sovereign:

For in the Book of Numbers, it is writ,
When the man dies, let the Inheritance
Descend unto the Daughter. Gracious Lord,
Stand for your own, unwind your bloody Flag :
Look back into your mighty Ancestors :
Go my dread Lord, to your great Grandfathers Tombe,
From whom you claim ; invoke his Warlike Spirit,
And your great Uncle, Edward the Black Prince,
Who on the French ground play'd a Tragedy,
Making defeat on the full Power of France :
Whiles his most mighty Father on a Hill
Stood smiling, to behold his Lyons Whelp
Forrage in blood of French Nobility.
O Noble English, that could entertain
With half their Forces, the full pride of France,
And let another half stand laughing by,
And out of work, and cold for action.

Bish. Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead,
And with your puissant Arme renew their Feats ;
You are their Heir, you sit upon their Throne :
The Blood and Courage that renowned them,
Runs in your Veins : and my thrice-puissant Liege
Is in the very May-Morn of his Youth,
Ripe for Exploits and mighty Enterprises.

Exe. Your brother Kings and Monarchs of the Earth
Do all expect, that you should rouze your self,
As did the former Lions of your Blood. (might:

West. They know your Grace hath cause, & means, and
So hath your Highnesse, never King of England
Had Nobles richer, and more loyal Subjects,
Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England,
And lie pavillion'd in the field of France.

Bish. Cant. O let their bodies follow my dear Liege
With Blood, and Sword and Fire, to win your Right :
In aid whereof, we of the Spirituality
Will raise your Highness such a mighty Sum,
As never did the Clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your Ancestors.

King. We must not onely arme t'invade the French,
But lay down our proportions, to defend
Against the Scot, who will make road upon us,
With all advantages.

Bish. Can. They of those Marches, gracious Sovereign, Shall be a Wall sufficient to defend
Our in-land from the pilfering Borderers.

King. We do not mean the courting snatchers onely,
But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us :
For you shall read, that my great Grandfather
Never went with his forces into France,
But that the Scot, on his unfurnisht Kingdome,
Came pouring like a Tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fulnesse of his force,
Calling the gleaned Land with hot assaies,
Girding with grievous siege, Castles and Towns :
That England being empty of defence,
Hath shook and trembled at th' ill neighbourhood.

B. Can. She hath bin then more fear'd then harm'd, my
For hear her but exampl'd by her self. (Liege

When all her Chevalry hath been in France,
And she a mourning Widdow of her Nobles,
She hath her self not onely well defended,
But taken and impounded as a Stray,
The King of Scots : whom she did send to France,
To fill King Edwards fame with prisoner Kings,
And make their Chronicle as rich with praise,
As is the Owse and bottome of the Sea
With sunken Wrack, and sum-lesse Treasuries.

Bish. Ely. But there's a saying very old and true,
If that you will France win, then wish Scotland first begin.
For once the Eagle (England) being in prey,
To her unguarded Nest, the Weazel (Scot)
Comes sneaking, and so sucks her Princely Eggs,
Playing the Mouse in absence of the Cat,
To tame and havock more then she can eat.

Exe. It follows then, the Cat must stay at home,
Yet that is but a crush'd necessity ;
Since we have locks to safeguard necessities,
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the Armed hand doth fight abroad,
Th' advised head defends it self at home :
For government, though high, and low, and lower,
Put into parts, doth keep in one consent,
Congreeing in a full and naturall close,
Like Musick.

Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continuall motion :
To which is fixed as an aime or butt,
Obedience : for so work the Hony Bees,
Creatures that by a rule in Nature teach
The Act of Order to a peopled Kingdome.
They have a King, and Officers of sorts,
Where some like Magistrates correct at home :
Others, like Merchants venture Trade abroad :
Others, like Souldiers armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the Summers Velvet buds :
Which pillage, they with merry march bring home
To the Tent Royall of their Emperour :
Who busied in his Majesties surveys,
The singing Mason building roofs of Gold,
The civill Citizens kneading up the hony ;
The poor Mechannick Porters, crowding in
Their heavy burchens at his narrow gate :

The sad-ey'd Justice with his surly hum,
 Delivering o're to Executors pale
 The lazy yawning Drone: I this infer,
 That many things having full reference
 To one consent, may work contrariously,
 As many Arrows loosed severall wayes
 Come to one mark: as many wayes meet in one town,
 As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;
 As many Lines close in the Dials center:
 So may a thousand actions once a foot,
 And in one purpose, and be all well borne
 Without defeat. Therefore to France, my Liege,
 Divide your happy England into four,
 Whereof, take you one quarter into France,
 And you withall shall make all Gallia shake.
 If we with thrice such powers left at home,
 Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
 Let us be worried, and our Nation lose
 The name of hardiness and policie.

King. Call in the Messengers sent from the Dolphin.
 Now are we all resolv'd, and by Gods help
 And yours, the noble sinews of our power;
 France being ours, we'll bend it to our Awe,
 Or break it all to pieces. Or there we'll sit,
 (Ruling in large and ample Emperie,
 O're France, and all her (almost) Kingly Dukedomes)
 Or lay these bones in an unworthy Urne,
 Tombleffe, with no remembrance over them:
 Either our History shall with full mouth
 Speak freely of our Acts, or else our grave
 Like Turkish mite, shall have a tonguelesse mouth,
 Not worshipt with a waxen Epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
 Of our fair Cosin Dolphin: for we hear,
 Your greeting is from him, not from the King.

Amb. May't please your Majesty to give us leave
 Freely to render what we have in charge:
 Or shall we sparingly shew you far off
 The Dolphins meaning, and our Embassie.

King. We are no Tyrant, but a Christian King,
 Unto whose grace our passion is as subject
 As is our wretches fettred in our prisons:
 Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plainnesse,
 Tell us the Dolphins minde.

Amb. Thus then in few:
 Your Highnesse lately sending into France,
 Did claim some certain Dukedomes, in the right
 Of your great Predecessor, King Edward the third.
 In answer of which claim, the Prince our Master
 Sayes that you favour too much of your youth,
 And bids you be advis'd: There's nought in France,
 That can be with a nimble Galliard won:
 You cannot revell into Dukedomes there.
 He therefore sends you meeter for your spirit
 This Tun of Treasure; and in lieu of this,
 Desires you let the Dukedomes that you claime
 Hear no more of you. This the Dolphin speaks.

King. What Treasure Unkle?

Exc. Tennis balls, my Liege.

King. We are glad the Dolphin is so pleasant with us,
 His Present, and your pains we thank you for:
 When we have match'd our Rackets to these balls,
 We will in France (by Gods grace) play a set,
 Shall strike his fathers Crown into the hazard.
 Tell him, he hath made a match with such a Wrangler,

That all the Courts of France will be disturb'd
 With Chaces. And we understand him well,
 How he comes o're us with our wilder dayes,
 Not measuring what use we made of them.
 We never valu'd this poor seat of England,
 And therefore living hence, did give our self
 To barbarous license: and 'tis common,
 That men are merriest, when they are from home.
 But tell the Dolphin, I will keep my State,
 Be like a King, and shew my sayle of Greatnesse,
 When I do rowze me in my Throne of France.
 For that I have laid by my Majesty,
 And plodded like a man for working dayes:
 But I will rise there with so full a glory,
 That I will dazle all the eyes of France,
 Yea strike the Dolphin blind to look on us.
 And tell the pleasant Prince, this Mock of his Hath turn'd his balls to Gun-stones, and his soul
 Shall stand sore charged, for the wastefull vengeance
 That shall flye with them: for many a thousand widows
 Shall this his Mock, mock out of their dear husbands;
 Mock mothers from their sonns, mock Castles down:
 And some are it ungotten and unborn,
 That shall have cause to curse the Dolphins scorn.
 But this lyes all within the will of God,
 To whom I do appeal, and in whose name
 Tell you the Dolphin, I am coming on,
 To venge me as I may, and to put forth
 My rightfull hand in a well-hallow'd cause.
 So get you hence in peace: and tell the Dolphin,
 His Jest will savour but of shallow wit,
 When thousands weep more then did laugh at it.
 Convey them with safe conduct. Fare ye well.

Exeunt Ambassadors.

Exc. This was a merry Message.

King. We hope to make the Sender blush at it:
 Therefore, my Lords, omit no happy hour,
 That may give furth'rance to our Expedition;
 For we have now no thought in us but France,
 Save those to God, that run before our businesse.
 Therefore let our proportions for these Warres
 Be soon collected, and all things thought upon,
 That may with reasonable swiftnesse adde
 More feathers to our Wings: for God before,
 We'll chide this Dolphin at his father's door.
 Therefore let every man now task his thought,
 That this fair Action may on foot be brought. Exeunt

Flourish. Enter Chorus.

Now all the Youth of England are on fire,
 And silken Dalliance in the Wardrobe lyes:
 Now thrive the Armourers, and Honour's thought
 Reigns solely in the breast of every man.
 They sell the Pasture now, to buy the Horse,
 Following the Mirror of all Christian Kings,
 With winged heels, as English Mercuries.
 For now sits expectation in the Aire,
 And hides a Sword, from Hilt unto the Point,
 With Crowns imperiall, Crowns and Coronets,
 Promis'd to Harry, and his followers.
 The French advis'd by good intelligence
 Of this most dreadfull preparation,
 Shake in their fear, and with pale Pollicy
 Seek to divert the English purposes.
 O England: Modell to thy inward Greatness,
 Like little Body with a mighty Heart:

What

What mightst thou do, that honour would thee do,
Were all thy children kind and naturall :
But see, thy fault France hath in thee found out,
A nest of hollow bosomes, which he fills
With treacherous Crowns, and three corrupted men :
One Richard Earle of Cambridge, and the second
Henry Lord Scroop of Masham, and the third
Sir Thomas Gray Knight of Northumberland,
Have for the Gilt of France (O guilt indeed)
Confirm'd Conspiracy with fearfull France,
And by their hands, this grace of Kings must die,
If Hell and Treason hold their promises,
Ere he take ship for France ; and in Southampton.
Linger your patience on, and we'll digest
Th'abuse of distance ; force a play :
The sum is paid, the Traitors are agreed,
The King is set for London, and the Scene
Is now transported (Gentles) to Southampton,
There is the play-house now, there must you sit,
And thence to France shall we convey you safe,
And bring you back : Charming the narrow seas
To give you gentle Passe : for if we may,
We'll not offend one stomach with our Play.
But till the King come forth, and not till then,
Unto Southampton we do shift our Scene.

Exit.

Enter Corporall Nim, and Lieutenant Bardolfe.

Bar. Well met Corporall Nim.

Nim. Good morrow Lieutenant Bardolfe.

Bar. What, are Ancient Pistoll and you friends yet?

Nim. For my part, I care not : I say little : but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles, but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight, but I will wink and hold out mine iron : it is but a simple one, but what though? It will toste Cheese, and it will endure cold, as another mans sword will : and there's an end.

Bar. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends, and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France : Let's be so, good Corporall Nim.

Nim. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it : and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may : That is my rest : that is the rendezvous of it.

Bar. It is certain, Corporall, that he is married to Nell Quickly, and certainly she did you wrong, for you were troth-plight to her.

Nim. I cannot tell, Things must be as they may : men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time, and some say, knives have edges : It must be as it may, though patience be a tyred name, yet she will plod, there must be Conclusions, well, I cannot tell.

Enter Pistoll, and Quickly.

Bar. Here comes Ancient Pistoll and his wife : good
Corporall be patient here. How now, mine Hoste Pistoll?

Pist. Base Tyke, call'st thou me Hoste, now by this hand I swear I scorne the terme : nor shall my Nell keep Lodgers.

Host. No by my troth, not long : For we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen Gentlewomen that live honestly by the prick of their Needles, but it will be thought we keep a Bawdy-house straight. O welliday Lady, if he be not hewn now, we shall see willfull adultery and murder committed.

Bar. Good Lieutenant, Good Corporall, offer nothing here.

Nim. Pist.

Pist. Pist. for thee, Island dog : thou prickeard curte of Island.

Host. Good Corporall Nim, shew thy valor, and put up thy sword.

Nim. Will you shog off? I would have you solus,

Pist. Solus, egregious dog? O viper vile ; The solus in thy most marvellous face, the solus in thy teeth, and in thy throat, and in thy hatefull Lungs, yea in thy Maw perdy ; and which is worse, within thy nasty mouth. I do retort the solus in thy bowels, for I can take, and Pi-stol's cock is up, and flashing fire will follow.

Nim. I am not Barbason, you cannot conjure me : I have an humor to knock you indifferently well : If yo grow foul with me Pistoll, I will scour you with my Rapier, as I may, in fair termes. If you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little in good termes, as I may, and that's the humor of it.

Pist. O Braggard vile, and damned furious wight,
The Grave doth gape, and doting death is near,
Therefore exhale.

Bar. Hear me, hear me what I say : He that strikes the first stroak, I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier.

Pist. An oath of mickle might, and fury shall abate.
Give me thy first, thy fore-foot to me give : Thy spirits are most tall.

Nim. I will cut thy throat one time or other in fair termes, that is the humor of it.

Pistoll. Couple a gorge that is the word. I defie thee again. O hound of Creet, think'st thou my spouse to get?
No, to the Spittle go, and from the Powdring tub of infamy, fetch forth the Lazar Kite of Cressids kinde, Doll
Tear-sheer, she by name, and her spouse. I have, and I will hold the Quondam Quickly for the onely she : and Pauca, there's enough to go to.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine Host Pistoll, you must come to my Master, and your Hostesse : He is very sick, and would to bed.
Good Bardolfe, put thy face between the sheets, and do the Office of a Warming-man : Faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away you Rogue.

Host. By my troth he'll yield the Crow a pudding one of these dayes : the King has killd his heart. Good Husband come presently.

Exit.

Bar. Come shall I make you two friends. We must to France together : why the devill should we keep knives to cut one anothers throats?

Pist. Let floods o'reswell and fiends for food howle on.

Nim. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at Betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that payes.

Nim. That now I will have : that's the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound : push home. Draw.

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust,
I'll kill him : by this sword, I will.

Pi. Sword is an Oath, and Oaths must have their course.

Bar. Corporal Nim, & thou wilt be friends, be friends, and thou wilt not, why then be enemies with me too :
prethee put up.

Pist. A Noble shalt thou have, and present pay, and Liquor likewise will I give to thee, and friendship shall coubine, and brotherhood. I'll live by Nim, and Nim shall live by me, is not this just? For I shall Sutler be unto the Campe, and profits will accrue. Give me thy hand.

Nim

Nim. I shall have my Noble?

Pist. In cash, most justly paid.

Nim. Wel, then that's the humor of't.

Enter Hostesse.

Host. As ever you came of women, come in quickly to Sir John: A poor heart, he is so shak'd of a burning quotidian Tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nim. The King hath run bad humors on the Knight, that's the even of it.

Pist. Nim, thou hast spoke the right, his heart is fractured and corroborate.

Nim. The King is a good King, but it must be as it may: he passes some humors, and carreres.

Pist. Let us condole the Knight, for (Lambkins) we will live.

Enter Exeter, Bedford, and Westmerland.

Bed. Fore God, his Grace is bold to trust these traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves, As if all allegiance in their bosomes fate Crowned with faith, and constant loyalty.

Bed. The King hath note of all that they intend, By interception, which they dream not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow, Whom he hath lull'd and cloy'd with gracious favours, That he should for a forraign purse, so sell His Sovereigns life to death and treachery.

Sound Trumpets.

Enter the King, Scroop, Cambridge, and Gray.

King. Now sits the winde fair, and we will aboard. My Lord of Cambridge, and my kind Lord of Masbam, And you my gentle Knight, give me your thoughts: Think you not that the powers we bear with us Will cut their passage through the force of France? Doing the execution, and the act. For which we have in head assembled them.

Scro. No doubt, my Liege, if each man do his best.

King. I doubt not that, since we are well perswaded, We carry not a heart with us from hence, That grows not in a fair consent with ours: Nor leave not one behind, that doth not wish Success and Conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was a Monarch better fear'd and lov'd, Then is your Majesty; there's not I think a subject That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness Under the sweet shade of your government.

Kni. True: those that were your Fathers enemies, Have sleep'd their gauls in honey, and do observe you With hearts create of duty, and of zeal.

King. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness, And shall forget the office of our hand Sooner then quittance of desert and merit, According to the weight and worthiness.

Scro. So service shall with steeld sinews toyl, And labour shall refresh it self with hope To do your Grace incessant services.

King. We Judge no lesse. Unkle of Exeter, Inlarge the man committed yesterday, That rail'd against our person: We consider It was excessse of Wine that set him on, And on his more advice, We pardon him.

Scro. That's mercy, but too much security: Let him be punish'd Sovereign, least example Breed (by his sufferance) more of such a kind.

King. O let us yet be mercifull.

Cam. So may your Highness, and yet punish too.

Gray. Sir, you shew great mercy if you give him life, After the taste of much correction.

King. Alas, your too much love and care of me, Are heavy Orisons 'gainst this poor wretch: If little faults proceeding on distemper, Shall not be wink'd at; how shall we stretch our eye When capitall crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested, Appears before us? We'll yet inlarge that man, Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Gray, in their dear care And tender preservation of our person Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes. Who are the late Commissioners?

Cam. I one my Lord, Your Highness bad me ask for it to day.

Scro. So did you me, my Liege.

Gra. And I, my Royall Sovereign.

King. Then Richard Earle of Cambridge, there is yours: There yours Lords Scroop of Masbam, and Sir Knight: Gray of Northumberland, this same is yours: Read them, and know I know your worthiness. My Lord of Westmerland and Unkle Exeter, We will aboard to night. Why how now Gentlemen? What see you in those papers, that you lose So much complexion? Look ye how they change: Their cheeks are paper. Why, what read you there That have so cowarded and chac'd your bloud Out of appearance.

Cam. I do confesse my fault, And do submit me to your Highness mercy.

Gray. Scro. To which we all appeal.

King. The mercy that was quick in us but late, By your own counsell is suppress'd and kill'd: You must not dare (for shame) to talk of mercy, For your own reasons turn into your bosomes, As dogs upon their Masters, worrying you: See you my Princes, and my Noble Peers, These English monsters: My Lord of Cambridge here, You know how apt our love was, to accord To furnish him with all appertinents Belonging to his honour; and this man, Hath for a few light Crowns, lightly conspir'd And sworn unto the practises of France To kill us here in Hampton. To the which, This Knight no lesse for bounty bound to us Then Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn. But O, What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop, thou cruell, Ingratefull, savage, and inhumane Creature? Thou that didst bear the key of all my counsells, That knew'st the very bottome of my soul, That (almost) might'st have coyn'd me into Gold, Would'st thou have practis'd on me, for thy use? May it be possible, that forraign hyer Could out of thee extract one spark of evil That might annoy my finger? 'Tis so strange, That though the truth of it stand off as grosse As black and white, my eye will scarcely see it. Treason and murther, ever kept together, As two yoke devills sworn to eithers purpose, Working so grossly in a naturall cause, That admiration did not hoop at them. But thou ('gainst all proportion) didst bring in Wonder to wait on treason, and no murther: And whatsoever cunning fiend it was That wrought upon thee so preposterously, Hath got the voyce in hell for excellence:

And

And other devils that suggest by treasons,
Do borch and bungle up damnation,
With patches, colours, and with forms, being fetcht
From glist'ring semblances of piety:
But he that temper'd thee, bad thee stand up,
Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason,
Unlesse to dub thee with the name of Traitor.
If that same Dæmon that hath gull'd thee thus,
Should with his Lyon-gate walk the whole world,
He might return to vasty Tatar back,
And tell the Legions, I can never win
A soul so easie as that English mans.
Oh, how hast thou with jealousie infected
The sweetnesse of affiance? Shew men dutifill?
Why so didst thou. Seem they grave and learned?
Why so didst thou. Come they of Noble Family?
Why so didst thou. Seem they religious?
Why so didst thou. Or are they spare in diet,
Free from grosse passion, or of mirth, or anger,
Constant in spirit, not swerving with the bloud,
Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement,
Not working with the eye, without the ear,
And but in purged judgements trusting neither?
Such and so finely boulded didst thou seem:
And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot,
To make thee full fraught man, and best indued
With some suspicion, I will weep for thee.
For this revolt of thine, me thinks is like
Another fall of man. Their faults are open,
Arrest them to the answer of the Law,
And God acquit them of their practises.

Exe. I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Richard Earle of Cambridge.

I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Thomas
Lord Scroop of Marsham.

I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Thomas
Grey, Knight of Northumberland.

Scro. Our purposes God justly hath discover'd,
And I repent my fault more then my death,
Which I beseech your Highnesse to forgive,
Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me, the Gold of France did not seduce,
Although I did admit it as a motive,
The sooner to effect what I intended:
But God be thanked for prevention,
Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoyce
Beseeching God to pardon me.

Gray. Never did faithfull subject more rejoyce
At the discovery of most dangerous Treason,
Then I do at this hour joy o're my self,
Prevented from a damned enterprize:
My fault, but not my body, pardon Sovereign.

King. God quit you in his mercy: Hear your sentence.
You have conspir'd against Our Royall person.
Joyn'd with an enemy proclaim'd; and from his Coffers
Receiv'd the Golden Earnest of Our death:
Wherein you would have sould your King to slaughter,
His Princes, and his Peers of servitude,
His Subjects to oppression, and contempt,
And his whole Kingdome into desolation:
Touching our person, seek we no revenge,
But we our Kingdomes safety must so tender,
Whose ruine you three sought, that to her Lawes
We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence,
(Poor miserable wretches) to your death:
The taste whereof, God of his mercy give

You patience to endure, and true repentance
Of all your dear offences. Bear them hence. Exeunt.
Now Lords for France: the enterprize whereof
Shall be to you as us, like glorious.

We doubt not of a fair and lucky War,
Since God so graciously hath brought to light
This dangerous Treason, lurking in our way
To hinder our beginning. We doubt not now,
But every Rub is smoothened on our way:
Then forth, dear Countreymen: Let us deliver
Our Puissance into the hand of God,
Putting it straight in expedition.

Cheerly to Sea, the signes of War advance,
No King of England, if not King of France. Exeunt.

Enter Pistoll, Nim, Bardolph, Boy, and Hostess.

Hostess. 'Prithee honey, sweet Husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pistoll. No: for my manly heart doth yern. Bardolph, be blythe: Nim, rowze thy vaunting Veins: Boy, bristle thy Courage up: for Falstaffe he is dead, and we must yern therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, wheresomere he is, either in Heaven, or in Hell.

Hostess. Nay sure, he's not in Hell: he's in Arthurs
Bosome, if ever man went to Arthurs Bosome: a made finer end, and went away and it had been any Christome Child: a parted just between Twelve and One, ev'n at the turning o'th' Tyde: for after I saw him fumble with the Sheets, and play with Flowers, and smile upon his fingers end, I knew there was but one way: for his Nose was as sharpe as a Pen, and a Table of green fields. How now Sir John (quoth I?) what man? be a good cheer: so a cryed out, God, God, God, three or four times: now I, to comfort him, bid him a should not think of God; I hop'd there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet: so a bad me lay more Cloathes on his feet:
I put my hand into the Bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as a stone: then I felt to his knees, and so upward and upward, all was as cold as any stone.

Nim. They say he cryed out of Sack.

Hostess. I, that a did.

Bard. And of Women.

Hostess. Nay, that a did not.

Boy. Yes that a did, and said they were Devills incarnate.

Woman. A could never abide Carnation, 'twas a Colour he never lik'd.

Boy. A said once, the Deule would have him about Women.

Hostess. A did in some sort (indeed) handle Women:
but then he was rumatick, and talk'd of the Whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember a saw a Flea stick upon Bardolph's Nose, and said it was a black Soul burning in Hell.

Bard. Well, the fuell is gone that maintain'd that fire:
that's all the Riches I got in his service.

Nim. Shall we shogg? the King will be gone from Southampton.

Pist. Come, let's away. My love, give me thy Lips:
Look to my Chattels, and my Moveables: Let Sences rule: The world is, Pitch and pay: trust none: for Oaths are Strawes, mens Faiths are Wafer-Cakes, and hold-fast is the onely Dog: My Duck, therefore, Cavero be thy Counsellor. Goe, clear thy Chrystalls. Yokefellowes in Armes, let us to France, like Horseleeches

lecches my Boyes, to suck, to suck, the very bloud to suck.

Boy. And that's but unwholsome food they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farewell Hostess.

Nim. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it : but adieu.

Pist. Let Hufwifrie appear : keep close, I thee command.

Hostess. Farewell : adieu.

Exeunt.

Enter the French King, the Dolphin, the Dukes of Berry and Britain.

King. Thus comes the English with full power upon us,
And more then carefully it us concerns,
To answer Royally in our defences.

Therefore the Dukes of Berry and of Britain,
Of Brabant and of Orleans shall make forth,
And you Prince Dolphin, with all swift dispatch
To tyne and new repair our towns of War
With men of courage, and with means defendant :
For England his approaches makes as fierce,
As Waters to the sucking of a Gulfe.

It fits us then to be as provident,
As fear may teach us, out of late examples
Left by the fatal and neglected English,
Upon our fields.

Dolphin. My most redoubted Father,
it is most meet we arme us 'gainst the Foe :
For Peace it self should not so dull a Kingdome,
(Though War nor no known Quarrel were in question)
But that Defences, Musters, Preparations,
Should be maintain'd, assembled and collected,
As were a War in expectation.

Therefore I say, 'tis mete we all go forth,
To view the sick and feeble parts of France :
And let us do it with no shew of fear,
No, with no more, then if we heard that England
Were busied with a Whitsen Morris-dance :
For, my good Lidge, she is so idly King'd,
Her Scepter so phantastically borne,
By a vain giddy shallow humorous Youth,
That fear attends her not.

Const. O Peace, Prince Dolphin,
You are too much mistaken in this King :
Question your Grace the late Embassadors,
With what great State he heard their Embassie,
How well supply'd with Noble Councillors,
How modest in exception ; and withall,
How terrible in constant resolution :
And you shall find, his Vanities fore-spent,
Were but the out-side of the Roman Brutus,
Covering Discretion with a Coat of Folly ;
As Gardeners do with Ordure hide those Roots
That shall first spring, and be most delicate.

Dolph. Well, 'tis not so, my Lord High Constable.
But though we think it so, it is no matter :
In causes of defence, 'tis best to weigh
The enemy more mighty then he seems,
So the proportions of defence are fill'd :
Which of a weak and nigardly projection,
Doth like a Miser spoil his Coat, with scanting
A little Cloth

King. Think we King Harry strong :
And Princes, look you strongly arme to meet him.
The Kindred of him hath been flesht upon us :
And he is bred out of that bloody strain,

That haunted us in our familiar Pathes :
Witnesse our too much memorable shame,
When Cressy Battell fatally was struck,
And all our Princes captiv'd, by the hand
Of that black Name, Edward, black Prince of Wales :
Whiles that his Mountain Sire, on Mountain standing
Up in the Aire, crown'd with the Golden Sun,
Saw his Heroicall Seed, and smil'd to see him
Mangle the Work of Nature, and deface
The Patterns, that by God and by French Fathers
Had twenty years been made. This is a Stem
Of that Victorious Stock : and let us fear
The Native mightinesse and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Embassadors from Harry King of England,
Do crave admittance to your Majesty.

King. We'll give them present audience.
Go, and bring them.

You see this Chase is hotly followed, friends.

Dolph. Turn head, and stop pursuit : for coward Dogs
Most spend their mouths, when what they seem to threaten Runs far before them. Good my Sovereign
Take up the English short, and let them know
Of what a Monarchy you are the Head :
Self-love, my Liege, is not so vile a sin,
As self neglecting.

Enter Exeter.

King. From our Brother of England ?

Exc. From him, and thus he greets your Majesty :
He wills you in the Name of God Almighty,
That you devest your selfe, and lay apart
The borrowed Glories, that by gift of Heaven,
By Law of Nature, and of nations, longs
To him and to his Heirs, namely the Crown ;
And all wide-stretched Honors, that pertain
By Custome, and the Ordinance of Times,
Unto the Crown of France : that you may know
'Tis no sinister, nor no awk-ward Claim,
Pickt from the Worm-holes of long-vanish'd dayes,
Nor from the dust of old Oblivion rakt,
He sends you this most memorable Line,
In every Branch truly demonstrative ;
Willing you over-look this Pedigree :
And when you find him evenly deriv'd
From his most fam'd, of famous Ancestors,
Edward the third ; he bids you then resign
Your Crown and Kingdome indirectly held
From him the Native and true Challenger.

King. Or else what follows ?

Exc. Bloody constraint : for if you hide the Crown
Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it.
Therefore in fierce Tempest is he coming,
In Thunder and in Earth-quake, like a Jove :
That if requiring fail, he will compell.
And bids you, in the Bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the Crown, and to take mercy
On the poor Souls for whom this hungry War
Opens his vasty Jawes : and on your head
Turning the Widows Tears, the Orphans Cryes,
The dead-mens Bloud, the privy Maidens Groans,
For Husbands, Fathers, and betrothed Lovers,
That shall be swallowed in this Controversie.
This is his Claim, his threatening, and my Message :
Unless the Dolphin be in presence here ;
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

King. For

King. For us, we will consider of this further :
To morrow shall you bear our full intent
Back to our Brother of England.

Dolph. For the Dolphin,
I stand here for him : what to him from England ?

Exe. Scorn and defiance, sleight regard, contempt,
And any thing that may not mis-become
The mighty Sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus sayes my King : and if your Father's Highness
Doe not, in grant of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter Mock you sent his Majesty ;
He'll call you to so hot an Answer of it,
That Caves and Womby Vaultages of France
Shall chide your Trespas, and return your Mock
In second Accent of his Ordinance.

Dolph. Say : if my Father render fair return,
It is against my will : for I desire
Nothing but Oddes with England,
To that end, as matching to his Youth and Vanity,
I did present him with the Paris-Balls.

Ex. He'll make your Paris Lover shake for it,
Were it the Mistresse Court of mighty Europe :
And be assur'd, you'll find a diff'rence,
As we his Subjects have in wonder found,
Between the promise of his greener dayes,
And these he masters now : now he weighs Time
Even to the utmost Grain : that you shall read
In your own Losses, if he stay in France.

King. To morrow shall you know our mind at full.
Flourish.

Exe. Dispatch us with all speed, least that our King
Come here himself to question our delay ;
For he is footed in this Land already.

King. You shall be soon dispatch, with fair conditions.
A Night is but small breathe, and little pause,
To answer matters of this consequence. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Chorus.

Thus with imagin'd wing our swift Scene flies,
In motion of no lesse celerity then that of Thought.
Suppose, that you have seen
The well-appointed King at Dover Peer,
Embark his Royalty : and his brave Fleet,
With silken Streamers, the young Phebus faining ;
Play with your Fancies : and in them behold,
Upon the Hempen Tackle, Ship-boyes climbing ;
Hear the shrill Whistle, which doth order give
To sounds confus'd : behold the threaten Sails,
Born with th'invisible and creeping Wind,
Draw the huge Bottomes through the furrowed Sea,
Breasting the lofty Surge. O, do but think
You stand upon the Rivage, and behold
A Citie on th'inconstant Billowes dancing :
For so appears this Fleet Majestical,
Holding due course to Harflew. Follow, follow.
Grapple your minds to sternage of this Navy,
And leave your England as dead Mid-night, still,
Guarded with Grandfires, Babies, and old Women
Either past, or not arriv'd to pith and puissance :
For who is he, whose Chin is but enrich

With one appearing Hair, that will not follow
These cull'd and choice-drawn Cavaliers to France ?
Work, work your Thoughts, and therein see a Siege :
Behold the Ordenance on their Carriages,
With fatal mouthes gaping on girded Harflew,
Suppose th'Embassador from the French comes back :
Tells Harry, That the King doth offer him
Katherine his Daughter, and with her to Dowrie,
Some petty and unprofitable Dukedomes.
The offer likes not : and the nimble Gunner
With Lynstock now the devilish Cannon touches.

Alarum, and Chambers go off.

And down goes all before him. Still be kind,
And ech out our performance with your mind. Exit.

Enter the King, Exeter, Bedford, and Gloucester.

Alarum. Scaling-Laddere at Harflew.

King. Once more unto the Breach,
Dear friends, once more ;
Or close the Wall up with our English dead :
In Peace, there's nothing so becomes a man,
As modest stilnesse and humility :
But when the blast of War blowes in our eares,
Then imitate the action of the Tyger :
Stiffen the sinewes, commune up the blood,
Disguise fair Nature with hard-favour'd Rage :
Then lend the Eye a terrible aspect :
Let it pry through the portage of the Head,
Like the Brads Cannon: let the Brow o'rewhelm it,
As fearfully, as doth a galled Rock
O're-hang and jutting his confounded Base,
Swill'd with the wilde and wastfull Ocean.
Now set the Teeth, and stretch the Nostril wide,
Hold hard the Breath, and bend up every Spirit
To his full height. On, you Noblest English,
Whose blood is fet from Fathers of War-proof :
Fathers, that like so many Alexanders,
Have in these parts from Morn till Even fought,
And sheath'd their Swords for lack of argument.
Dishonour not your Mothers : now attest,
That those whom you call'd Fathers, did beget you.
Be Coppy now to me of grosser blood,
And teach them how to Warre. And you good Yeomen,
Whose Limbs were made in England ; shew us here
The mettel of your Pasture : let us swear,
That you are worth your breeding : which I doubt not :
For there is none of you so mean and base,
That hath not Noble lustre in your eyes.
I see you stand like Grey-hounds in the slips,
Straying upon the Start. The Game's a-foot :
Follow your Spirit ; and upon this Charge,
Cry, God for Harry, England, and S. George.

Alarum, and Chambers go off.

Enter Nim, Bardolph, Pistol, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on, on, to the Breach, to the Breach.

Nim. 'Pray thee Corporal stay, the Knocks are too hot : and for mine own part, I have not a Case of Lives :
the humor of it is too hot, that is the very plain-Song of it.

Pistol. The plain-Song is most just : for humors do abound : Knocks goe and come : Gods Vassals drop and dye : and Sword and Shield, in bloody Field, doth winne immortal fame.

Boy. Would I were in an Ale-house in London, I would give all my Fame for a Pot of Ale, and safety.

M m

Pistol. And

Pist. And I: if wishes would prevail with me, my purpose should not fail with me; but thither would I hie.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly, as Bird doth sing on bough.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Up to the breach, you Dogs; avant you Cullions.

Pist. Be mercifull great Duke to men of Mould, abate thy Rage, abate thy manly Rage; abate thy Rage, great Duke. Good Bawcock bate thy Rage: use lenity sweet Chuck.

Nim. These be good humors: your Honour wins bad humors. Exit.

Boy. As young as I am, I have observ'd these three Swashers. I am Boy to them all three, but all they three though they would serve me, could not be Man to me; for indeed three such Antiques do not amount to a man: for Bardolph, he is white-liver'd, and red-fac'd; by the means whereof, a faces it out, but fights not: for Pistol, he hath a killing Tongue, and a quiet Sword; by the means whereof, a breaks Words, and keeps whole Weapons: for Nim, he hath heard, that men of few Words are the best men, and therefore he scorns to say his Prayers, lest a should be thought a Coward: but his few bad Words are matcht with as few good Deeds; for a never broke any man's head but his own, and that was against a Post, when he was drunk. They will steal any thing, and call it Purchase. Bardolph stole a Lute-case, bore it twelve Leagues, and sold it for three half-pence. Nim and Bardolph are sworn Brothers in filching: and in Callice they stole a fire-shovel. I knew by that piece of Service, the men would carry Coals. They would have me as familiar with men's Pockets, as their Gloves or their Hand-kerchers: which makes much against my Manhood, if I should take from another's Pocket, to put into mine; for it is plain pocketting up of Wrongs. I must leave them, and seek some better Service: their Villany goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up. Exit.

Enter Gower

Gower. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the Mynes; the Duke of Gloucester would speak with you.

Flu. To the Mynes? Tell you the Duke, it is not so good to come to the Mynes: for look you, the Mynes are not according to the disciplines of War; the concavities of it is not sufficient: for look you, th'athversary, you may discusse unto the Duke, look you, is digt himself four yard under the Countermines: by Cheshu, I think a will plow up all, if there is not better directions.

Gower. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the Order of the Siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irish man, a very valiant Gentleman yfaith.

Welch. It is Captain Makmorrice, is it not?

Gower. I think it be.

Welch. By Cheshu he is an Ass, as in the World, I will verifie as much in his Beard: he ha's no more directions in the true disciplines of the Warres, look you, of the Roman disciplines, then is a Puppy-dog.

Enter Makmorrice, and Captain Jany.

Gower. Here a comes, and the Scots Captain, Captain Jany, with him.

Welch. Captain Jany is a marvellous valorous Gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in th'aunchiant Warres, upon my particular knowledge of his directions: by Cheshu he will maintain his Argument as well as any Militarie man in the World, in the disciplines of the Pristine Warres of the Romans.

Scot. I say gudday, Captain Fluellen.

Welch. Godden to your Worship, good Captain James.

Gower. How now Captain Makmorrice, have you quit the Mynes? have the Pioners given o're?

Irish. By Chrish Law tish ill done: the Work ish give over, the Trompet sound the Retreat. By my Hand I swear, and my father's Soul, the VVork ish ill done: it ish give over: I would have blowed up the Town, so Chrish save me law, in an hour. O tish ill done, tish ill done: by my Hand ish ill done.

Welch. Captain Makmorrice, I beseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the VVar, the Roman VVarres, in the way of Argument, look you, and friendly communication: partly to satisfy my Opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my Mind: as touching the direction of the Military discipline, that is the Point.

Scot. It shall be vary gud, gud feith, gud Captens bath, and I shall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion: that shall I mary.

Irish. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me: the day is hot, and the Weather, and the Warres, and the King, and the Dukes: it is no time to discourse, the Town is beseech'd: and the Trumpet calls us to the breach, and we talk, and be Chrish do nothing, tis shame for us all: so God sa' me tis shame to stand still, it is shame by my hand: and there is Throats to be cut, and Works to be done, and there ish nothing done, so Chrish sa' me law.

Scot. By the Mes, ere theise eyes of mine take themselves to slomber, ayle de gud service, or Ile liggei th' grund for it; ay, or go to death: and Ile pay't as valorously as I may, that shall I surely doe, the breff and the long: mary, I wad full fain heard some question 'tween you tway.

Welch. Captain Makmorrice, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your Nation.

Irish. Of my Nation? What ish my Nation? Is a Villain, and a Bastard, and a Knave, and a Rascal. What ish my Nation? Who talks of my Nation?

Welch. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise then is meant, Captain Makmorrice, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that affability, as in discretion you ought to use me, look you, being as good a man as your self both in the disciplines of War, and in the derivation of my Birth, and in other particularities.

Irish. I do not know you so good a man as my self, so Chrish save me, I will cut off your Head.

Gower. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Scot. A, that's a foul fault.

A Parley.

Gower. The Town sounds a Parley.

Welch. Captain Makmorrice, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you, I know the disciplines of War, and there is an end. Exit.

Enter the King and all his Train before the Gates.

King. How yet resolves the Governour of the Town? This is the latest Parle we will admit:

There

Therefore to our best mercy give your selves,
Or like to men proud of destruction,
Defie us to our worst : for as I am a Souldier,
A Name that in my thoughts becomes me best ;
If I begin the batt'rie once again,
I will not leave the half-atchieved Harflew,
'Till in her ashes she lye buried.
The Gates of Mercy shall be all shut up,
And the flesh'd Souldier, rough and hard of heart,
In liberty of bloody hand, shall range
With Conscience wide as Hell, mowing like Grass
Your fresh fair Virgins, and your flowing Infants.
What is it then to me, if impious War,
Arrayed in games like to the Prince of Fiends,
Do with his smirch'd complexion of fell seats,
Enlincke to waste and desolation ?
What is't to me, when you your selves are cause,
If your pure Maidens fall into the hand
Of hot and forcing Violation ?
What Rein can hold licentious Wickedness,
When down the Hill he holds his fierce Career ?
We may as bootlesse spend our vain Command
Upon th'enraged Souldiers in their spoil,
As send Precepts to the Leviathan to come a-shoar.
Therefore, you men of Harflew,
Take pitie of your Town and of your People,
Whiles yet my Souldiers are in my Command,
Whiles yet the cool and temperate VVind of Grace
O're-blowes the filthy and contagious Clouds
Of heady Murther, Spoil, and Villany.
If not : why in a moment look to see
The blind and bloody Souldier, with foul hand
Desire the Locks of your shrill-shreiking Daughters.
Your Fathers taken by the silver Beards,
And their most reverend Heads dashed to the Walls :
Your naked Infants spitted upon Pikes,
Whiles the mad Mothers, with their howles confus'd,
Do break the Clouds ; as did the Wives of Jewry,
At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughter-men.
What say you ? Will you yield, and this avoid ?
Or guilty in defence be thus destroy'd.

Enter Governour.

Gover. Our expectation hath this day an end :
The Dolphin, whom of Succours we entreated,
Returns us, that his Powers are yet not ready,
To raise so great a Siege. Therefore great King,
VVe yield our Town and Lives to thy soft Mercy :
Enter our Gates, dispose of us and ours,
For we no longer are defensible.

King. Open your Gates : Come Uncle Exeter,
Go you and enter Harflew, there remain,
And fortifie it strongly 'gainst the French :
Use mercy to them all for us, dear Uncle.
The Winter comming on, and Sicknesse growing
Upon our Souldiers, we will retire to Calis.
To night in Harflew will we be your Guest,
To morrow for the March are we addrest.

Flourish, and enter the Town.

Enter Katherine and an old Gentlewoman.

Kath. Alice, tu as esté en Angleterre, & tu parlois bien le Language.

Alice. En peu Madame.

Kath. Je te prie m'enseigner, il faut que j'apprenne a parler. Comment appelle vous la main en Anglois ?

Alice. La main, il est appelé, de Hand.

Kath. De Hand.

Alice. Et le doyt.

Ka. Le doyt, ma foy ie ouble le doyt, mais ie m'esouviendray le doyt, ie pense qu'ils ont appelé de fingres, on de fingres.

Alice. La main, de Hand, le doyt, le Fingres, le pense que ie suis le bon escholier.

Kath. I'ay gaigné deux mots d'Anglois visiblement, comment appelle vous les ongles ?

Alice. Les ongles, les appellons de Nayles.

Kath. De Nayles escoutez : dites moy, si ie parle bien : de Hand, de Fingres, de Nayles.

Alice. C'est bien dit Madame, il est fort bon Anglois.

Kath. Dites moy en Anglois le bras.

Alice. De Arme, Madame.

Kath. Et le coude.

Alice. D'Elbow.

Kath. D'Elbow : Je m'en faitz la reperision de tous les mots que m'avez appris des a present.

Alice. Il est trop difficile Madame, comme ie pense.

Kath. Excuse moy Alice, escoute, d'Hand, de Fingre, de Nayles, d'Arme, de Bilbow.

Alice. D'elbow, Madame.

Kath. O Seigneur Dieu, ie m'en oublie d'Elbow, comment appelle vous le col ?

Alice. De Neck, Madame.

Kath. De Neck, & le manton ?

Alice. De Chin.

Kath. De Sin : le col, de Neck ; le manton, de Sin.

Alice. Ouy. Sauf vostre honneur en verite vous prononcies les mots aussi droit, que le Natifs d'Angleterre.

Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendre par le grace de Dieu, & en peu de temps.

Al. N'avez vous pas desia oublié ce que ie vous ay enseigné.

Kath. Nomme, ie reciteray a vous promptement d'Hand, de Fingre, de Nayles, Madame.

Alice. De Nayles, Madame.

Kath. De Nayles, de Arme, de Ilbow.

Alice. Sans vostre honneur d'Elbow.

Kath. Ainsi dis-je de'Elbow, de Neck, de Sin : comment appelle vous les pieds & de roba.

Alice. Le Foot Madame, & le Count.

Kath. Le Foot, & le Count : O Signieur Dieu, ce sont des mots mauvais, corruptible & impudique, & non pour les Dames d'Honneur d'oser : Je ne vendrois prononcer ces mots devant les Signeurs de France, pour tout le monde, il faut le Foot, & le Count, neant moins, Je reciteray un autrefois ma lecon ensemble, d'Hand, de Fingre, de Nayles, d'Arme, d'Elbow, de Neck, de Sin, de Foot, de Count.

Alice. Excellent, Madame.

Ka. C'est assez pour une fois, allons nous en disner. Excunt.

Enter the King of France, the Dolphin, the Constable of France, and others.

King. 'Tis certain he hath past the River Some.

Const. And if he be not fought withall, my Lord, Let us not live in France : let us quit all, And give our Vineyards to a barbarous People.

Dolph. O Dieu vivant ! shall a few Sprayes of us, The emptying of our Fathers Luxury, Our Syens, put in wild and savage Stock, Spirt up so suddenly into the Clouds, And owar-look their Grafters ?

Brit. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards. Mors de ma vie, if they march along Unfought withall, but I will sell my Dukedome,

To buy a slobbry and a ditty Farm
In that nook-shotten Ile of Albion.

Const. Dieu de Battailles! where have they this met-
Is not their Climate foggy, raw, and dull? [tel?

On whom, as in despatch, the Sun looks pale,
Killing their Fruit with frowns? Can sodden Water,
A Drench for sur-reyn'd Jades, their Barly broth,
Decoet their cold blood to such valiant heat?
And shall our quick blood, spirited with Wine,
Seem frostie? O, for the honour of our Land,
Let us not hang like roping Isicles
Upon our Houses Thatch, whiles a more frostie People
Sweat drops of gallant Youth in our rich fields:
Poor we may call them, in their Native Lords.

Dolph. By Faith and Honour,
Our Madames mock at us, and plainly say,
Our Mettel is bred out, and they will give
Their bodies to the Lust of English Youth,
To new-store France with Bastard Warriors.

Brit. They bid us to the English Dancing-Schools,
And teach Lavolta's high, and swift Carranto's,
Saying, our Grace is onely in our Heels.
And that we are most lofty Run-awayes.

King. Where is Montjoy the Herald? speed him hence,
Let him greet England with our sharp defiance.
Up Princes, and with spirit of Honour edged,
More sharper then your Swords, high to the field:
Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France,
You Dukes of Orleance, Burbon, and of Berry,
Alançon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgondie,
Jaques Chatillion, Rambures, Vaudemont,
Beaumont, Grand Pree, Roussi, and Faulconbridge,
Loys, Lestrale, Bouciquall, and Charaloyes,
High Dukes, great Princes, Barons, Lords, and Kings:
For your great Seats, now quit you of great shames:
Barre Harry England, that sweeps through our Land
With Penons painted in the blood of Harflew:
Rush on his Host, as doth the melted Snow
Upon the Vallies, whose low Vassal Seat,
The Alpes doth spit, and void his rhewm upon.
Go down upon him, you have Power enough,
And in a Captive Chariot, into Roan
Bring him our Prisoner.

Const. This becomes the Great.
Sorry am I his numbers are so few,
His Souldiers sick, and famisht in the March:
For I am sure, when he shall see our Army,
He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear,
And for Atchievement, offer us his Ransome.

King. Therefore Lord Constable, haste on Montjoy.
And let him say to England, that we send,
To know what willing Ransome he will give.
Prince Dolphin, you shall stay with us in Roan.

Dolph. Not I, I do beseech your Majesty.

King. Be patient, for you shall remain with us.
Now forth Lord Constable, and Princes all;
And quickly bring us word of Englands fall. Exeunt.

Enter Captains, Welch and English, Gower, and Fluellen.

Gower. How now Captain Fluellen, come you from the Bridge?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent Services committed at the Bridge.

Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Aga-

memnon, and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my live, and my living, and my uttermost power. He is not, God be praised and blest, any hurt in the World, but keeps the Bridge
most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an auncient Lieutenant there at the Pridge, I think in my very conscience he is as valiant a man as Mark Anthony, and he is a man of no estimation in the World, but I did see him doe as gallant service.

Gow. What do you call him?

Flu. He is call'd aunchient Pistol.

Gow. I know him not.

Enter Pistol.

Flu. Here is the man.

Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to doe me favours: the Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. I, I praise God, and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a Souldier firm and sound of heart, and of buxome valour, hath by cruel Fate, and giddy Fortunes furious fickle Wheel, that goddesse blind, that stands upon the rolling restlesse Stone.

Flu. By your patience, aunchient Pistol: Fortune is painted blind, with a Muffler afore his eyes, to signifie to you, that Fortune is blind; and she is painted also with a Wheel, to signifie to you, which is the Moral of it, that she is turning and inconstant, and mutability, and variation: and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a Spherical Stone, which rowles, and rowles, and rowles:
in good truth, the Poet makes a most excellent description of it: Fortune is an excellent Moral.

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him:
for he hath stoln a Pax, and hanged must a be: damned
death: let Gallowes gape for Dog, let Man goe free, and let not Hemp his Wind-pipe suffocate: but Exeter
hath given the doom of death, for Pax of little price.
Therefore goe speak, the Duke will hear thy voice;
and let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut with edge of Penny-Cord, and vile reproach. Speak Captain for his Life, and I will thee requite.

Flu. Aunchient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist. Why then rejoyce therefore.

Flu. Certainly Aunchient, it is not a thing to rejoyce at: for if, look you, he were my Brother, I would desire the Duke to ute his good pleasure, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be used.

Pist. Die, and be damn'd, and Figo for thy friendship.

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The Fig of Spain.

Exit.

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit Rascal, I remember him now: a Bawd, a Cut-purse.

Flu. I'll assure you, a utt'ed as prave words at the Pridge, as you shall see in a Summers day: but it is very well: what he ha's spoke to me, that is well I warrant you, when time is serve.

Gow. Why 'tis a Gull, a Fool: a Rogue, that now and then goes to the Warres, to grace himself at his return into London, under the form of a Souldier, and such fellows are perfit in the Great Commanders Names, and they will learn you by rote where Services were done;
at such and such a Sconce, at such a Breach, at such a Convoy: who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgrac'd, what termes the Enemy stood on: and this they conne perfitly in the phrase of War; which they trick up

up with new-tuned Oathes: and what a Beard of the Generals Cut, and a horrid Sute of the Camp, will do among foming Bottles, and Ale-washt wits, is wonderful to be thought on: but you must learn to know such flanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower: I do perceive he is not the man that he would gladly make shew to the World he is: if I find a hole in his Coat, I will tell him my mind: hear you, the King is coming, and I must speak with him from the Pridge.

Drum and Colours. Enter the King and his poor Souldiers.

Flu. God pless your Majesty.

King. How now Fluellen, canst thou from the Bridge?

Flu. I, so please your Majesty: The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintain'd the Pridge; the French is gone off, look you, and there is gallant and most prave passages: marry, th'athversary was have possession of the Pridge, but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is Master of the Pridge: I can tell your Majesty, the Duke is a prave man.

King. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th'athversary hath been very great, reasonable great: marry for my part, I think the Duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for Robbing a Church, one Bardolph, if your Majesty know the man: his face is all bubukles and whelks, and knobs, and flames a fire, and his lippes blowes at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plew, and sometimes red, but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

King. We would have all such offenders so cut off: and we give expresse charge, that in our Marches through the Countrey, there be nothing compell'd from the Villages; nothing taken, but paid for: none of the French upbraided or abused in disdainfull Language: for when Levity and Cruelty play for a Kingdome, the gentler Gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter Mountjoy.

Mountjoy. You know me by my habit.

King. Well then, I know thee: what shall I know of thee?

Mount. My Master's mind.

King. Unfold it.

Mountjoy. Thus sayes my King: Say thou to Harry of England, Though we seem'd dead, we did but sleep: Advantage is a better Souldier then Rashness. Tell him, we could have rebuk'd him at Harflew, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury, till it were full ripe. Now we speak upon our Q. and our voice is imperial: England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore consider of his Ransome, which must proportion the losses we have born, the Subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses, his Exchequer is too poor; for th'effusion of our blood, the Muster of his Kingdome too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this adde defiance: and tell him for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounc'd: So far my King and Master; so much my Office.

King. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Mount. Mountjoy.

King. Thou dost thy Office fairly. Turn thee back, And tell thy King, I do not seek him now, But could be willing to march on to Callice, Without impeachment: for to say the sooth, Though 'tis no wisdom to confels so much Unto an Enemy of Craft and Vantage, My people are with sickness much enfeebled, My numbers lessen'd: and those few I have, Almost no better then so many French; Who when they were in health, I tell the Herald, I thought, upon one pair of English Legs Did march three Frenchmen. Yet forgive me God, That I do brag thus; this your air of France Hath blown that vice in me. I must repent: Go therefore tell thy Master, here I am; My Ransome, is this frail and worthless Trunk; My Army, but a weak and sickly Guard: Yet God before, tell him we will come on, Though France himself, and such another Neighbour Stand in our way. There's for thy labour Mountjoy. Go bid thy Master well advise himself, If we may pass, we will: if we be hindred, We shall your tawny ground with your red blood Discolour: and so Mountjoy fare you well. The sum of all our Answer is but this: We would not seek a Battel as we are, Nor as we are, we say we will not shun it: So tell your Master.

Mount. I shall deliver so: Thanks to your Highness.

Glen. I hope they will not come upon us now.

King. We are in Gods hand, Brother, not in theirs: March to the Bridge, it now drawes toward night, Beyond the River we'll encamp our selves, And on to-morrow bid them march away. Exeunt.

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord Ramburs, Orleans, Dolphin, with others.

Const. Tut, I have the best Armour of the World: would it were day.

Orl. You have an excellent Armour: but let my Horse have his due.

Const. It is the best Horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be Morning?

Dolph. My Lord of Orleans, and my Lord High Constable, you talk of Horse and Armour?

Orl. You are as well provided of both, as any Prince in the World.

Dolph. What a long Night is this? I will not change my Horse with any that treads but on four pasternes: ch'ha: he bounds from the Earth, as if his entrails were haire: le Cheval volant, the Pegasus, ches les narines de fen. When I bestride him, I soar, I am a Hawk: he trots the air: the Earth sings, when he touches it: the basest horn of his hoof, is more Musical then the Pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the colour of the Nutmeg.

Dolph. And of the heat of the Ginger. It is a Beast for Perseus: he is pure Air and Fire; and the dull Elements of Earth and Water never appear in him, but only in patient stillness while his Rider mounts him: he is indeed a Horse, and all other Jades you may call Beasts.

Const. Indeed my Lord, it is a most absolute and excellent Horse.

Dolph. It is the Prince of Palfrayes, his Neigh is like the bidding of a Monarch, and his countenance enforces Homage.

Orl. No more Cousin.

Dolph. Nay, the man hath no wit; that cannot from the rising of the Lark to the lodging of the Lamb, vary deserved praise on my Palfray: it is a Theme as fluent as the Sea: Turn the Sands into eloquent tongues, and my Horse is argument for them all: 'tis a subject for a Sovereign to reason on, and for a Sovereigns Sovereign to ride on: And for the World, familiar to us, and unknown, to lay a-part their particular Functions, and wonder at him. I once writ a Sonnet in his praise, and began thus, Wonder of Nature.

Orleance. I have heard a Sonnet begin so to ones Mistress.

Dolph. Then did they imitate that which I compos'd to my Courser, for my Horse is my Mistress.

Orl. Your Mistress beares well.

Dolph. Me well, which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular Mistress.

Const. Nay, for me thought yesterday your Mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dolph. So perhaps did yours.

Const. Mine was not bridled.

Dolph. O then belike she was old and gentle, and you rode like a Kerne of Ireland, your French Horse off, and in you strait Strossers.

Const. You have good judgement in Horseman-ship.

Dolph. Bewarn'd by me then: they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul Boggs: I had rather have my Horse to my Mistress.

Const. I had as lieve have my Mistress a Jade.

Dolph. I tell thee Constable, my Mistress weares his own hair.

Const. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a Sow to my Mistress.

Dol. Le chien est retourné a son propre vomissement, est la levée lavée au boubier: thou mak'st use of any thing.

Const. Yet do I not use my Horse for my Mistress, or any such Proverb, so little kin to the purpose.

Ramb. My Lord Constable, the Armour that I saw in your Tent to night, are those Starres or Sunnes upon it.

Const. Starres my Lord.

Dolph. Some of them will fall to morrow, I hope.

Const. And yet my Sky shall not want.

Dolph. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously, and 'twere more honour some were away,

Const. Ev'n as your Horse beares your praises, who would trot as well, were some of your bragges dismounted.

Dolph. Would I were able to load him with his desert. Will it never be day? I will trot to morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English Faces.

Const. I will not say so, for fear I should be fac't out of my way: but I would it were morning, for I would fain be about the cares of the English.

Ramb. Who will goe Hazard with me for twenty Prisoners?

Const. You must first goe your self to hazard, ere you have them.

Dolph. 'Tis Mid-night, Ile go arme my self. Exit.

Orl. The Dolphin longs for morning.

Ramb. He longs to eat the English.

Const. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white Hand of my Lady, he's a gallant Prince.

Const. Swear by her Foot, that she may tread out the Oath.

Orleance. He is simply the most active Gentleman of France.

Const. Doing is activity, and he will still be doing.

Orl. He never did harm, that I heard of.

Const. Nor will do none to morrow: he will keep that good name still.

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Const. I was told that, by one that knowes him better then you.

Orl. What's he?

Const. Marry he told me so himself, and he said he car'd not who knew it.

Orleance. He needs not, it is no hidden virtue in him.

Const. By my faith, Sir, but it is: never any body saw it, but his Lacquey: 'tis a hooded valour, and when it appears, it will bate.

Orl. Ill will never said well.

Const. I will cap that Proverb with, There is flattery in friendship.

Orl. And I will take up that with, Give the Devil his due.

Const. Well plac't: there stands your friend for the Devil: have at the very eye of that Proverb with, A Pox of the Devil.

Orl. You are the better at Proverbs, by how much a Fools Bolt is soon shot.

Const. You have shot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were over-shot.

Enter a Messenger.

Messen. My Lord high Constable, the English lye within fifteen hundred paces of your Tents.

Const. Who hath measur'd the ground?

Mes. The Lord Grandpree.

Const. A valiant and most expert Gentleman. Would it were day. Alas poor Harry of England: he longs not for the Dawning, as we doe.

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brain'd followers so far out of his knowledge.

Const. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away.

Orl. That they lack: for if their Heads had any intellectual Armour, they could never wear any such heavy Head-pieces.

Ramb. That Island of England breeds very valiant Creatures; their Mastiffs are of unmatchable courage.

Orleance. Foolish Curses, that run winking into the mouth of a Russian Bear, and have their heads crush'd like rotten Apples: you may as well say, that's a valiant Flea, that dare to eat his breakfast on the Lip of a Lyon.

Const. Just, just: and the men do sympathize with the Mastiffs, in robustious and rough comming on, leaving their Wits with their Wives: and then give them great Meales of Beef, and Iron and Steel; they will eat like Wolves, and fight like Devils.

Or. I.

Orl. I, but these English are shrewdly out of Beef.

Const. Then shall we find to morrow, they have only stomachs to eat, and none to fight. Now 'is it time to arme: come, shall we about it?

Orl. It is now two a Clock: but let me see, by ten We shall have each a hundred English men. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Chorus.

Now entertain conjecture of a time,
When creeping Murmur and the poring Dark
Fills the wide Vessel of the Universe.
From Camp to Camp, through the foul Womb of Night
The Humme of either Army stilly sounds,
That the fixt Centinels almost receive
The secret Whispers of each others Watch.
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames
Each Battel sees the others umber'd face.
Steed threatens Steed, in high and boastfull Neighs
Piercing the Nights dull Ear: and from the Tents,
The Armourers accomplishing the Knights,
With busie Hammers closing Rivers up,
Give dreadfull note of preparation.
The Countrey Cocks do crow, the Clocks do towle:
And the third hour of drowsie Morning nam'd,
Proud of their Numbers, and secure in Soul,
The confident and over-lusty French,
Doe the low-rated English play at Dice;
And chide the creeple-rardy-gated Night,
Who like a foul and ugly Witch doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned English,
Like Sacrifices, by their watchfull Fires
Sit patiently, and inly ruminate
The Mornings danger, and their gesture sad,
Investing lank-lean Cheeks, and War-worn Coats,
Presented them unto the gazing Moon
So many horrid Ghosts. O now, who will behold
The Royal Captain of this ruin'd Band
Walking from Watch to Watch, from Tent to Tent;
Let him cry, Praise and Glory on his head:
For forth he goes, and visits all his Host,
Bids them good morrow with a modest Smile,
And calls them Brothers, Friends, and Countreymen.
Upon his Royal Face there is no note,
How dread an Army hath enrounded him;
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of Colour
Unto the weary and all-watched Night:
But freshly looks, and over-bears Attaint,
With chearfull semblance, and sweet Majesty:
That every Wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his Looks.
A Largeesse universal, like the Sun,
His liberal Eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear, that mean and gentle all
Behold, as may unworthinesse define,
A little touch of Harry in the Night,
And so our Scene must to the Battel flie:
Where, O for pitie, we shall much disgrace,
With four or five most vile and ragged foiles
(Right ill dispos'd, in brawl ridiculous)

The Name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see,
Minding true things, by what their Mock'ries be.

Exit.

Enter the King, Bedford, and Gloucester.

King. Gloster, 'tis true that we are in great danger,
The greater therefore should our Courage be.
Good morrow Brother Bedford: God Almighty,
There is some foul of goodnes in things evil,
Would men observingly distill it out.
For our bad Neighbour makes us early stirrers,
Which is both healthfull, and good husbandry.
Besides, they are our outward Consciences,
And Preachers to us all; admonishing,
That we should dresse us fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather Honey from the Weed,
And make a Moral of the Devil himself.

Enter Erpingham.

Good morrow old Sir Thomas Erpingham:
A good soft Pillow for that good white Head,
Were better then a churlish turf of France.

Erping. Not so my Liege, this Lodging likes me better,
Since I may say, now lye I like a King.

King. 'Tis good for men to love their present pain,
Upon example, so the Spirit is eased:
And when the Mind is quickned, out of doubt
The Organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break up their drowsie Grave, and newly move
With call'd slough, and fresh celerity.
Lend me thy Cloak Sir Thomas: Brothers both,
Commend me to the Princes in our Camp:
Do my good morrow to them, and anon
Desire them all to my Pavillion.

Gloster. We shall, my Liege.

Erping. Shall I attend your Grace?

King. No my good Knight:
Go with my Brothers to my Lords of England:
I and my Bosome must debate a while,
And then I would no other company.

Erping. The Lord in Heaven bleffe thee, Noble Harry.
Exeunt.

King. God a mercy old Heart, thou speak'st chearfully.
Enter Pistol.

Pist. Che vous la?

King. A friend.

Pist. Discusse unto me, art thou Officer, or art thou base, common, and popular?

King. I am a Gentleman of a Company.

Pist. Trayl'st thou the puissant Pike?

King. Even so: what are you?

Pist. As good a Gentleman as the Emperour.

King. Then you are a better then the King.

Pist. The King's a Bawcock, and a Heart of Gold,
a Lad of Life, an Impe of Fame, of Parents good, of Fist most valiant: I kiss his dirty shooe, and from heart-string I love the lovely Bully. What is thy Name?

King. Harry le Roy.

P. Le Roy? a Cornish Name: art thou of Cornish Crew?

King. No, I am a Welchman.

Pist. Know'st thou Fluellen?

King. Yes.

Pist. Tell him I'll knock his Leek about his Pate upon
S. Davies day.

King. Do not you wear your Dagger in your Cap that day, lest he knock that about yours.

Pist. Art

Pist. Art thou his friend ?

King. And his Kinsman too.

Pist. The Figo for thee then.

King. I thank you : God be with you.

Pist. My name is Pistol call'd.

King. It sorts well with your fierceness.

Exit.

Manet King.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gower. Captain Fluellen.

Flu. 'So, in the Name of Jesu Christ, speak fewer : it is the greatest admiration in the universal World , when the true and aunchient Prerogatives and Lawes of the Warres is not kept : if you would take the paines but to examine the Warres of Pompey the Great , you shall find, I warrant you , that there is no tiddle taddle, nor pibble babble in Pompey's Camp : I warrant you, you shall find the Ceremonies of the Warres , and the Cares of it , and the Formes of it, and the Sobriety of it, and the Modesty of it, to be otherwise.

Gower. Why the Enemy is loud , you hear him all Night.

Flu. If the Enemy is an Ass and a Fool , and a prating Coxcombe ; is it meet , think you , that we should also, look you, be an Ass and a Fool, and a prating Coxcombe, in your own conscience now ?

Gow. I will speak lower.

Flu. I pray you, and beseech you, that you will. Exit.

King. Though it appear a little out of fashion, There is much care and valour in this Welchman.

Enter three Souldiers, John Bates, Alexander Court, and Michael Williams.

Court. Brother John Bates , is not that the Morning which breaks yonder ?

Bates. I think it be : but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.

Williams. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it. Who goes there ?

King. A friend :

Will. Under what Captain serve you ?

King. Under Sir John Erpingham.

Will. A good old Commander, and a most kind Gentleman : I pray you, what thinks he of our estate ?

King. Even as men wrackt upon a Sand, that look to be washt off the next Tide.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the King ?

King. No : nor it is not meet he should : for though I speak it to you, I think the King is but a man, as I am : the Violet smells to him , as it doth to me ; the Element shewes to him, as it doth to me ; all his senses have but humane Conditions : his Ceremonies laid by, in his Nakedness he appears but a man ; and though his affections are higher mounted then ours, yet when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing : therefore, when he sees reason of feares, as we doe ; his feares, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are : yet in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear ; lest he, by shewing it, should dis-hearten his Army.

Bates. He may shew what outward courage he will : but I believe as cold a Night as 'tis , he could with himself in Thames up to the Neck ; and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here.

King. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the King. I think he would not wish himself any where, but where he is.

Bates. Then would he were here alone ; so should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor mens lives saved.

King. I dare say, you love him not so ill, to wish him here alone : howsoever you speak this to feel other mens minds , me thinks I could not dye any where so contented, as in the Kings company ; his Cause being just, and his Quarrel honourable.

Will. That's more then we know.

Bates. I, or more then we should seek after ; for we know enough, if we know we are the King's Subjects : if his Cause be wrong, our obedience to the King wipes the Crime of it out of us.

Williams. But if the Cause be not good, the King himself hath a heavy Reckoning to make, when all those Legges, and Armes, and Heads, chopt off in a Battel, shall joyn together at the latter day, and cry all, We dyed at such a place, some swearing, some crying for a Surgeon ; some upon their Wives left poor behind them ; some upon the Debts they owe, some upon their Children rawly left : I am afraid, there are few die well, that die in Battel : for how can they charitably dispose of any thing, when Bloud is their argument ? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the King, that led them to it ; whom to disobey, were against all proportion of subjection.

King. So, if a Son that is by his Father sent about Merchandize, do sinfully miscarry upon the Sea ; the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his Father that sent him : or if a Servant, under his Master's command, transporting a summe of Monney, be assailed by Robbers, and die in many irreconcil'd Iniquities ; you may call the business of the Master the author of the Servants damnation : but this is not so : The King is not bound to answer the particular endings of his Souldiers, the Father of his Son, nor the Master of his Servant ; for they purpose not their death, when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no King, be his Cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of Swords, can try it out with all unspotted Souldiers : some (peradventure) have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived Murther ; some, of beguiling Virgins with the broken Seales of Perjury ; some, making the Warres their Bulwark, that have before go-red the gentle Bosome of Peace with Pillage and Robberie. Now, if these men have defeated the Law, and outrunne Native punishment ; though they can out-strip men, they have no wings to flie from God. War is his Beadle, War is his Vengeance : so that here men are punished, for before breach of the Kings Lawes, in now the Kings Quarrel : where they feared the death, they have born life away ; and where they would be safe, they perish. Then if they die unprovided, no more is the King guilty of their damnation, then he was before guilty of those Impieties, for the which they are now visited. Every Subjects Duty is the Kings, but every Subjects Soul is his own. Therefore should every Souldier in the Warres doe as every sick man in his Bed, wash every Moth out of his Conscience : and dying so, Death is to him advantage ; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost, wherein such preparation was gained : and in him that escapes, it were not sin to think, that making God so free an offer, he let him out-live that day, to see his Greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dyes ill, the ill upon his own head, the King is not to answer for it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me, and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

King. I my self heard the King say he would not be ransom'd.

Will. I, he said so, to make us fight chearfully: but when our throats are cut, he may be ransom'd, and we ne're the wiser.

King. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. You pay him then: that's a perilous shot out of an Elder Gun, that a poor and private displeasure can doe against a Monarch: you may as well go about to turn the Sun to ice, with fanning in his face with a Peacocks feather: You'll never trust his word after, come, 'tis a foolish saying.

King. Your reproof is something too round, I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a Quarrel between us, if you live.

King. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

King. Give me any Gage of thine, and I will wear it in my Bonnet: Then if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my Quarrel.

Will. Here's my Glove: Give me another of thine.

King. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my Cap: if ever thou come to me, and say, after to morrow, This is my Glove, by this Hand I will give thee a box on the ear.

King. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou dar'st as well be hang'd.

King. Well; I will doe it, though I take thee in the King's company.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends you English fools, be friends, we have French Quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon.

Exeunt Souldiers.

King. Indeed the French may lay twenty French Crowns to one, they will beat us, for they bear them on their shoulders: but it is no English Treason to cut French Crowns, and to morrow the King himself will be a Clipper.

Upon the King, let us, our Lives, our Soules,
Our Debts, our carefull Wives,
Our Children, and our Sinnes, lay on the King:
He must bear all.

O hard Condition, Twin-born with Greatnesse,
Subject to the breath of every fool, whose fence
No more can feel, but his own wringing.

What infinite heart-ease must Kings neglect,
That private men enjoy?
And what have Kings, that Privates have not too,
Save Ceremonie, save general Ceremonie?
And what art thou, thou Idol Ceremonie?
What kind of god art thou? that suffer'st more
Of mortal griefs, then do thy worshippers.
What are thy Rents? what are thy Commings in?
O Ceremonie, shew me but thy worth.
What? is thy Soul of Adoration?
Art thou thought else, but Place, Degree, and Form,
Creating awe and fear in other men?
Wherein thou art lesse happy, being fear'd,
Then they in fearing.

What drink'st thou oft, instead of Homage sweet,
But poison'd flatterie? O, be sick, great Greatnesse,
And bid thy Ceremonie give thee cure.
Thinks thou the fierie Fever will go out
With titles blown from Aululation?
Will it give place to flexure and low bending?
Canst thou, when thou command'st the begges knee,
Command the health of it? No, thou proud Dream,
Thou play'st so subtilly with a King's Repose,
I am a King that find thee: and I know,
'Tis not the Balm, the Scepter, and the Ball,
The Sword, the Mace, the Crown Imperial,
The enter-tissued Robe of Gold and Pearl,
The farfed Title running fore the King,
The Throne he sits on: nor the Tide of Pomp,
That beats upon the high shoar of this World:
No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous Ceremonies,
Nor all these, laid in bed Majestical,
Can sleep so soundly, as the wretched Slave:
Who with a body fill'd, and vacant mind,
Gets him to rest, cram'd with distressfull bread,
Never sees horrid Night, the Child of Hell:
But like a Lacquey, from the Rise to Set,
Sweats in the eye of Phebus; and all Night
Sleeps in Elizium: next day after dawn,
Doth rise and help Hiperion to his Horse,
And follows so the ever-running year
With profitable labour to his Grave:
And but for Ceremonie, such a Wretch,
Winding up Dayes with toil, and Nights with sleep,
Had the fore-hand and vantage of a King.
The Slave, a Member of the Countries peace,
Enjoies it: but in grosse brain little wots,
What watch the King keeps, to maintain the peace;
Whose houres, the Pesant best advantages.

Enter Erpingham.

Erp. My Lord, your Nobles jealous of your absence,
Seek through your Camp to find you.

King. Good old Knight, collect them all together,
At my Tent: I'll be before thee.

Erp. I shall do't, my Lord.

Exit.

King. O God of Battels, steel my Souldiers hearts,
Possesse them not with fear: Take from them now
The sense of reck'ning of the opposed numbers:
Pluck their hearts from them: Not to day, O Lord,
O not to day, think not upon the fault
My Father made, in compassing the Crown.
I Richard's body have interred new,
And on it have bestowed more continu teares,
Then from it issued forced drops of blood.
Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,
Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up
Toward Heaven, to pardon blood:
And I have built two Chauntries,
Where the sad and solemn Priests sing still
For Richard's Soul. More will I doe:
Though all that I can doe, is nothing worth:
Since that my Penitence comes after all,
Imploring pardon.

Enter Gloucester.

Glouc. My Liege.

King. My Brother Gloucester's voice?
I know thy errand, I will go with thee:
The day, my friend, and all things stay for me. Exeunt
Enter.

Enter the Dolphin, Orleanse, Ramburs, and Beaumont.

Orleanse. The Sun doth gild our Armour, up my Lords.

Dolph. Monte Cheval: My Horse, Valet Lacquay: Ha.

Orl. Oh brave spirit.

Dolph. Via les ewes & terre.

Orl. Rien puis le air & feu.

Dolph. Cien, Cousin Orleanse. Enter Constable.
Now my Lord Constable?

Const. Hark how our Steeds, for present Service neigh.

Dolph. Mount them, and make incision in their Hides,
That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,
And doubt them with superfluous courage: ha.

Ram. What will you have them weep our Horses blood?
How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter Messenger.

Messenger. The English are embattel'd, you French Peers.

Const. To Horse you gallant Princes, straight to Horse.
Do but behold yond poor and starved Band,
And your fair shew shall suck away their Soules,
Leaving them but the shales and husks of men.
There is not work enough for all our hands,
Scarce blood enough in all their sickly Veins,
To give each naked Curtlex a stain,
That our French Gallants shall to day draw out,
And sheath for lack of sport. Let us but blow on them,
The vapour of our Valour will o're-turn them.
'Tis positive 'gainst all exception, Lords,
That our superfluous Lacquies, and our Peasants,
Who in unnecessary action swarm
About our Squares of Battel, were enow
To purge this field of such a hilding Foe;
Though we upon this Mountains Basis by,
Took stand for idle speculation:
But that our Honours must nor. What's to say?
A very little little let us do,
And all is done: then let the Trumpets sound
The Tucket Sonuance, and the Note to mount:
For our approach shall to much dare the field,
That England shall couch down in fear, and yield.

Enter Graundpree.

Graund. Why do you stay so long, my Lords of France?
Yond Iland Carrians, desperate of their bones,
Ill-favour'dly become the Morning field:
Their ragged Curtains poorly are let loose,
And our air shakes them passing scornfully.
Big Mars seems banqu'rout in their begger'd Host,
And faintly through a rusty Bever peeps.
The Horsemen sit like fixed Candlesticks,
With Torch-staves in their hand: and their poor Jades
Lob down their heads, drooping the hide and hips:
The gumme down roping from their pale-dead eyes,
And in their pale dull mouthes the Jymold Bitt
Lyes foul with chaw'd grass, still and motionlesse,
And their executors, the knavish Crowes,
Flye o're them all, impatient for their hour.
Description cannot suit it self in words,
To demonstrate the Life of such a Battel,
In life so livelesse, as it shews it self.

Const. They have said their prayers,
And they stay for death.

Dol. Shall we go send them Dinners, and fresh Sutes,

And give their fasting Horses Provender,
And after fight with them?

Const. I stay but for my Guard: on
To the field, I will the Banner from a Trumpet take,
And use it for my haste. Come, come away,
The Sun is high, and we out-wear the day. Exeunt.

Enter Gloucester, Bedford, Exeter, Erpingham with all his Host: Salisbury, and Westmerland.

Gloucester. Where is the King?

Bedf. The King himself is rode to view their Battel.

West. Of fighting men they have full threescore thousand.

Exe. There's five to one, besides they all are fresh.

Salisbury. Gods Arm strike with us, 'tis a fearfull oddes.
God buy you Princes all; I'll to my Charge:

If we no more meet, 'till we meet in Heaven;
Then joyfully, my Noble Lord of Bedford,
My dear Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord Exeter,
And my kind Kinsman, Warriors all adieu.

Bed. Farewell good Salisbury, and good luck go with
And yet I do thee wrong, to mind thee of it, [thee:
For thou art fam'd of the firm truth of valour,

Exe. Farewell kind Lord: fight valiantly to day.

Bed. He is as full of Valour as of Kindness,
Princely in both.

Enter the King.

West. O that we now had here
But one ten thousand of those men in England,
That do no work to day.

King. What's he that wishes so?
My Cousin Westmerland. No my fair Cousin:

If we are markt to die, we are enow
To do our Countrey loss: and if to live,
The fewer men, the greater share of honour.
Gods will, I pray thee wish not one man more.

By Jove, I am not covetous for Gold,
Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost:
It yerns me not, if men my Garments wear;
Such outward things dwell not in my desires.

But if it be a sin to covet Honour,
I am the most offending Soul alive.

No faith, my Couze, wish not a man from England:
Gods peace, I would not loose so great an Honour,

As one man more me-thinks would share from me,
For the best hope I have. O, do not wish one more:

Rather proclaim it (Westmerland) through my Host,
That he which hath no stomach to this fight,

Let him depart, his Passport shall be made,
And Crowns for Convoy put into his Purse:
We would not die in that man's company,
That feares his fellowship, to die with us.

This day is call'd the Feast of Crispian:

He that out-lives this day, and comes safe home
Will stand a tip-toe when this day is named,

And rouze him at the Name of Crispian:

He that shall see this day, and live old age,
Will yearly on the Vigil feast his Neighbours,
And say to morrow is Saint Crispian:

Then will he strip his sleeve, and shew his scarres:

Old men forget; yet all shall not be forgot:

But he'll remember, with advantages,
What feats he did that day. Then shall our Names,
Familiar in 'his mouth as household words,

Harry

Harry the King, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester,
Be in their flowing Cups freshly remembred.
This story shall the good man teach his son :
And Crispine Crispian shall ne're go by,
From this day to the ending of the World,
But we in it shall be remembred ;
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers :
For he to day that sheds his blood with me,
Shall be my brother : be he ne're so vile,
This day shall gentle his condition.
And Gentlemen in England, now a-bed,
Shall think themselves accurst they were not here ;
And hold their Manhoods cheap, whiles any speaks,
That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day
Enter Salisbury.

Sal. My Sovereign Lord, bestow you self with speed:
The French are bravely in their battels set,
And will with all expedience charge on us.

King. All things are ready, if our minds be so.

West. Perish the man, whose mind is backward now.

King. Thou do'st not wish more help from England,
Couze ?

West. God will, my Liege, would you and I alone,
Without more help could fight this Royal battel.

King. Why now thou halt unwilful five thousand men:
Which likes me better, then to wish us one.
You know your places : God be with you all.

Tucket. Enter Montjoy.

Mon. Once more I come to know of thee King Harry,
If for thy Ransome thou wilt now compound,
Before thy most assured Overthrow :
For certainly, thou art so near the Gulfe,
Thou needs must be englutted. Besides, in mercy
The Constable desires thee, thou wilt mind
Thy followers of Repentance ; that their Soules
May make a peacefull and a sweet Retire
From off these fields: where (wretches) their poor bodies
Must lye and fester.

King. Who hath sent thee now ?

Mon. The Constable of France.

King. I pray thee bear my former Answer back :
Bid them achieve me, and then sell my bones.
Good God ! why should they mock poor fellows thus ?
The man that once did sell the Lyon's skin
VWhile the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him.
A many of our bodies shall no doubt
Find Native Graves: upon the which, I trust
Shall witness live in Brasse of this dayes work.
And those that leave their valiant bones in France,
Dying like men, though buried in your Dunghills,
They shall be fam'd: for there the Sun shall greet them,
And draw their honours recking up to Heaven,
Leaving their earthly parts to choak your Clime,
The smell whereof shall breed a Plague in France.
Mark then abounding valour in our English:
That being dead, like to the bullets graving,
Break out into a second course of mischief,
Killing in relapse of Mortality.
Let me speak proudly: Tell the Constable,
We are but Warriors for the working day:
Our Gaynesse and our Gilt are all be-smircht
With rainy Marching in the painfull field.
There's not a piece of feather in our Host:
Good argument (I hope) we will not flie:

And time hath worn us into slovenry.
But by the Mass, our hearts are in the trim:
And my poor Souldiers tell me, yet e're Night,
They'll be in fresher Robes, or they will pluck
The gay new Coats o're the French Souldiers heads,
And turn them out of service. If they doe this,
As if God please, they shall; my Ransome then
Will soon be levied.

Herauld, save thou thy labour:
Come thou no more for Ransome, gentle Herauld,
They shall have none, I swear, but these my joynts:
VWhich if they have, as I will leave un them,
Shall yield them little, tell the Constable.

Mon. I shall, King Harry. And so farethee well:
Thou never shall hear Herauld any more. Exit.

King. I fear thou wilt once more come again for a Ransome.

Enter York.

York. My Lord, most humbly on my knee I beg
The leading of the Vaward.

King. Take it, brave York,
Now Souldiers march away;
And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day. Exeunt.

Alarum. Excursions.

Enter Pistol, French Souldier, Boy.

Pistol. Yield Curte.

French. Je pense que vous estes le Gentil-homme de bone qualité.

Pist. Quality calmy culture me. Art thou a Gentleman? what is thy Name? discusse

French. O Seigneur Dieu.

Pist. O Signieur Dewe should be a Gentleman: per-pend my words O Signieur Dewe, and mark: O Signieur Dewe, thou dyest on point of Fox, except O Signieur thou do give to me egregious Ransome.

French. O prenez misericorde ayez pitie de moy.

Pist. Moy shall not serve, I will have fourty Moyes:
for I will fetch thy rymme out at thy Throat, in drops of Crimson blood

Fren. Est-il impossible d'eschapper la force de ton bras.

Pist. Brasse, Cuire? thou damned and luxurious Mountain Goat, offer'tt me Brasse?

French. O pardonne moy.

Pist. Say'tt thou me so? is that a Tonne of Moyes?
Come hither boy, ask me this slave in French what is his Name.

Boy. Esconte comment estes vous appelle?

French. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He sayes his name is M. Fer.

Pist. M. Fer: I'll fer him, and firk him, and ferret him: discusse the same in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and fiske.

Pst. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

French. Que dit-il Monsieur?

Boy. Il me commande de vous dire que vous vous reniez prest, car ce soldat icy est disposee vous asture de couper vostre gorge.

Pist. Owy, cuppele gorge parmafoy pesant, unlessse thou give me Crownes, brave Crownes, or mangled shalt thou be by this my Sword.

French. O Je vous supplie pour l'amour de Dieu: me pardanner, Je suis Gentilhomme de bonne maison, gar de ma vie, & Je vous donneray deux cents escus.

Pist. VWhat are his words?

Boy. He

Boy. He prayes you to save his life, he is a Gentleman of a good house, and for his Ransom he will give you two hundred Crowns.

Pist. Tell him my fury shall abate, and I the Crowns will take.

Fren. Petit Monsieur que dit-il?

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son Jurement, de pardonner aucun prisonnier: neant-moins pour les escus que vous luy promettez, il est content de vous donner la liberté de franchise.

Fren. Sur mes genoux ie vous donne milles remerciement, & ie me estime heureux qui ie ne tombe entre les mains d'un Chevalier, ie pense le plus brave valiant, & tres destiné Seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me Boy.

Boy. He gives you upon is knees a thousand thanks, and esteems himself happy, that he hath false into the hands of one (as he thinks) the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signeur of England.

Pist. As I suck bloud, I will some mercy shew. Follow me.

Boy. Save you le grand Capitain!

I did never know so wofull a voice issue from so empty a heart: but the song is true, The empty vessel makes the greatest sound. Bardolph and Nim had ten times more valour, then this roaring Devil i'th' old Play, that every one may pair his nails with a wooden dagger, and they are both hang'd, and so would this be, if he durst steal any thing adventurously. I must stay with the Lackies, with the luggage of our Camp, the French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it, for there is none to guard it but boyes.

Exit.

Enter Constable, Orleans, Bourbon, Dolphin, and Rumburs.

Con. O Diable.

Orl. O Signeur le jour & perdia, toute & perdie.

Dol. Mort Dieu ma vie, all is confounded, all,

Reproach, and everlasting shame

Sits mocking in our Plumes.

A short Alarm.

O meschante fortune, do not run away.

Con. Why all our Ranks are broke.

Dol. O perdurable shame, let's stab our selves:

Be these the wretches that we plaid at dice for?

Orl. Is this the King we sent to, for his ransom?

Bur. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame, Let us flye in once more back again,

And he that will not follow Burbon now,

Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand

Like a base Pander hold the Chamber door,

Whilst by a base slave, no gentler then my dog,

His fairest daughter is contaminated.

Con. Disorder that hath spoil'd us, friend us now, Let us on heaps go offer up our lives.

Orl. We are enow yet living in the Field,

To smother up the English in our throngs,

If any order might be thought upon:

Bur. The Devil take Order now, I'll to the throng; Let life be short, else shame will be too long.

Exit.

Alarm. Enter the King and his train, with Prisoners.

King. Well have we done, thrice-valiant Countermen, But all's not done, yet keep the French the field.

Exc. The D. of York commends him to your Majesty.

King. Lives he good Uncle: thrice within this hour I saw him down: thrice up again, and fighting, From Helmet to the spur all bloud he was.

Exc. In which array (brave Soldiers) doth he lye, Larding the plain: and by his bloody side, (Yoak-fellow to his honour-owing-wounds) The Noble Earl of Suffolk also lyes.

Suffolk first died, and York all haggled over Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteeped, And takes him by the Beard, kisses the gashes That bloudily did yawn upon his face.

He cries aloud; Tarry my Cousin Suffolk, My soul shall thine keep company to heaven: Tarry (sweet soul) for mine, then flye a-brest: As in this glorious and well-foughten field We kept together in our Chivalry.

Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up, He smil'd me in the face, caught me his hand, And with a feeble gripe, sayes; Dear my Lord, Commend my service to my Sovereign; So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck He threw his wounded arme, and kiss his lippes, And so espous'd to death, with bloud he seal'd A Testament of Noble-ending-Love: The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd Those waters from me, which I would have stop'd, But I had not so much of man in me, And all my mother came into mine eyes, And gave me up to tears.

King. I blame you not, For hearing this, I must perforce compound With mixtfull eyes, or they will issue too. Alarm. But heark, what new alarm is this same? The French have re-enfor'd their scatter'd men: Then every souldier kill his Prisoners, Give the word through.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Fluellen, and Gower.

Flu. Kill the poyes and the luggage, 'Tis expressly against the Law of Armes, 'tis as arrant a peece of knavery mark you now, as can be offert in your Conscience now, is it not?

Gow. 'Tis certain, there's not a boy left alive, and the Cowardly Rascals that ran from the Battail ha' done this slaughter: besides they have burned and carried away all that was in the King's Tent, wherefore the King most worthily hath caus'd every souldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O 'tis a gallant King.

Flu. I, he was porm at Monmouth Captain Gower: what call you the Town's name where Alexander the pig was born?

Gow. Alexander the Great.

Flu. Why I pray you, is not pig, great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations.

Gow. I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon, his Father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is porm.

porn: I tell you Captain, if you look in the Maps of the Orld, I warrant you shall find in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations look you, is both alike. There is a River in Macedon, and there is also moreover a River at Monmouth, it is call'd Wye at Monmouth: but it is out of my prains, what is the name of the other River: but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is Salmons in both. If you mark Alexanders life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well, for there is figures in all things. Alexander God knows, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his chollers, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did in his Ales and his angers, (look you) kill his best friend Clytus.

Gow. Our King is not like him in that, he never kill'd any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done (mark you now) to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures, and comparisons of it: as Alexander kild his friend Clytus, being in his Ales and his Cups; so also Harry Monmouth being in his right wits; and his good judgements, turn'd away the fat Knight with the great belly doublet: he was full of jests, and gypes, and knaveries, and mocks, I have forgot his name.

Gow. Sir John Falstaffe.

Flu. That is he: I'll tell you, there is good men porn at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his Majesty.

Alarum. Enter King Harry and Burbon with prisoners. Flourish.

King. I was not angry since I came to France, Untill this instant. Take a Trumpet Herald, Ride thou unto the horsemen on yond hill: If they will fight with us, bid them come down, Or voyd the field: they do offend our fight. If they'll do neither, we will come to them, And make them sker away, as swift as stones Enforced from the old Assyrian slings: Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have, And not a man of them that we shall take, Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter Montjoy.

Exe. Here comes the Herald of the French, my Liege.

Glow. His eyes are humbler then they us'd to be,

King. How now, what means their Herald? Know'st thou not,

That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ranfome? Com'st thou again for ranfome?

Her. No great King:

I come to thee for charitable License,
That we may wander o're this bloody field,
To book our dead, and then to bury them,
To sort our Nobles from our common men.
For many of our Princes (woe the while)
Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood:
So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs
In blood of Princes, and with wounded steeds
Fret fet-lock deep in gore, and with wilde rage
Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters,
Killing them twice. O give us leave great King,
To view the field in safety, and dispose
Of their dead bodies.

King. I tell thee truly, Herald,
I know not if the day be ours or no,
For yet a many of your horsemen peer,
And gallop o're the field.

Her. The day is yours.

King. Praised be God and not our strength for it:
What is this Castle call'd that stands hard by.

Her. They call it Agincourt.

King. Then call we this the field of Agincourt,
Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your Grandfather of famous memory (an't please your Majesty) and your great Ungle Edward the Plack Prince of Wales, as I have read in the Chronicles, fought most prave battell here in France.

King. They did Fluellen.

Flu. Your Majesty sayes very true: If your Majesties is remembred of it, the Welchmen did good service in a Garden where Leeks did grow, wearing Leeks in their Monmouth caps, which your Majesty know to this hour is an honourable badge of the service: And I do believe your Majesty takes no scorn to wear the Leek upon S. Tavyes day.

King. I wear it for a memorable honour:

For I am Welch you know good Countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye, cannot wash your Majesties Welsh ploud out of your pody, I can tell you that: God plesse it, and preserve it, as long as it pleases his Grace, and his Majesty too.

King. Thanks good my Countryman.

Flu. By Jeshu, I am your Majesties Countryman, I care not who know it: I will confesse it to all the Orld, I need not to be ashamed of your Majesty, praised be God so long as your Majesty is an honest man.

King. God keep me so.

Enter Williams.

Our Heralds go with him,
Bring me justt notice of the numbers dead
On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.

Exe. Souldier, you must come to the King.

King. Souldier, why wear'st thou the Glove in thy Cap?

Will. And't please your Majesty, 'tis the gage of one that I should fight withall, if he be alive.

King. An English man?

Will. And't please your Majesty, a Rascall that swager'd with me last night: who if alive, and ever dare to challenge this Glove, I have sworn to take him a box a'th ear: or if I can see my Glove in his cap, which he swore as he was a Souldier he would wear (if alive) I will strike it out soundly.

King. What think you Captain Fluellen, is it fit this souldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a Craven and a Villain else, and't please your Majesty in my conscience.

King. It may be, his enemy is a Gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a Gentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary (look your Grace) that he keep his vow and his oath: If he be perjur'd (see you now) his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jack sawee, as ever his black shooe trod upon Gods ground, and his earth, in my conscience law.

King. Then keep thy vow firrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.

Will. So, I will my Liege, as I live.

King. Who serv'st thou under?

N n

Will.

Will. Under Captain Gower, my Liege.

Flu. Gower is a good Captain, and is good knowledge and literated in the Warrs.

King. Call him hither to me Souldier.

Will. I will my Liege.

Exit.

King. Here Fluellen, wear thou this favour for me, and stick it in thy Cap: when Alanfon and my self were down together, I pluckt this Glove from his Helme: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alanfon, and an enemy to our Person, if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, and thou do'st me love.

Flu. Your Grace do's me as great Honours as can be desir'd in the hearts of his Subjects: I would fain see the man, that ha's but two leggs, that shall find himself agriev'd at this Glove; that is all: but I would fain see it once, and please God of his grace that I might see.

King. Know'st thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, and please you.

King. Pray thee go seek him, and bring him to my Tent.

Flu. I will fetch him.

Exit.

King. My Lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloster, Follow Fluellen closely at the heels, The Glove which I have given him for a favour, May haply purchase him a box a'th'ear. It is the Souldiers: I by bargain should Wear it my self. Follow good Cousin Warwick: If that the Souldier strike him, as I judge By this blunt bearing, he will keep his word; Some sudden mischief may arise of it: For I do know Fluellen valiant, And toucht with Choler, hot as Gunpowder, And quickly will return an injury. Follow, and see there be no harme between them. Go you with me, Unkle of Exeter.

Exeunt.

Enter Gower and Williams.

Will. I warrant it is to Knight you, Captain.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Gods will, and his pleasure, Captain, I beseech you now, come apace to the King: there is more good toward you peradventure, then is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this Glove?

Flu. Know the Glove? I know the Glove is a Glove.

Will. I know this, and thus I challenge it.

Strikes him.

Flu. 'Slbud, an arrant Traitor as anyes in the Univer-sall World, or in France, or in England.

Gow. How now sir? you Villain.

Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn?

Flu. Stand away Captain Gower, I will give Treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.

Will. I am no Traitor.

Flu. That's a Lie in thy Throat. I charge you in his Majesties Name apprehend him, he's a friend of the Duke Alanfons.

Enter Warwick and Gloucester.

War. How now, how now, what's the matter?

Flu. My Lord of Warwick, here is, praised be God for it, a most contagious Treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a Summers day. Here is his Majesty.

Enter King, and Exeter.

King. How now, what's the matter?

Flu. My Liege, here is a Villain and a Traitor, that look your Grace, ha's struck the Glove which your Majesty is take out of the Helmet of Alanfon.

Will. My Liege, this was my Glove, here is the fellow of it: and he that I gave it to in change, promis'd to wear in his Cap: I promis'd to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my Glove in his Cap, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your Majesty hear now, saving your Majesties Man-hood, what an arrant rascally, beggerly, lowlie Knave it is: I hope your Majesty is pear me testimony and witnesse, and will vouchment, that this is the Glove of Alanfon, that your Majesty is give me, in your Con-science now.

King. Give me thy Glove Souldier;

Look, here is the fellow of it:

'Twas I indeed thou promis'd'st to strike.

And thou hast given me most bitter termes.

Flu. And please your Majesty, let his Neck answer for it, if there is any Marshall Law in the world.

King. How canst thou make me satisfaction?

Will. All offences, my Lord, come from the heart: never came any from mine, that might offend your Majesty.

King. It was our self thou didst abuse.

Will. Your Majesty came not like your self: you appear'd to me but as a common man: witnesse the Night, your Garinents, your Lowlineffe: and what your highness suffer'd under that shape, I beseech you take it for your own fault, and not mine; for had you been as I took you for, I made no offence; therefore I beseech your highness pardon me.

King. Here Unkle Exeter, fill this Glove with Crowns, And give it to this fellow. Keep it fellow, And wear it for an honor in thy Cap, Till I do challenge it. Give him the Crowns: And Captain, you must needs be friends with him.

Flu. By this Day and this Light, the fellow ha's met-tell enough in his belly: hold, there is twelve-pence for you, and I pray you serve God, and keep you out of prawls and prabbles, and quarrells and dissentions, and I warrant you it is the better for you.

Will. I will none of your Money.

Flu. It is with a good will: I can tell you it will serve you to mend your shooes: come: wherefore should you be so pathfull: your shooes is not so good: 'tis a good filling I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter Herald.

King. Now Herald, are the dead numbred?

Her. Here is the number of the slaught'ed French.

King. What Prisoners of good sort are taken Unkle?

Exe. Charles Duke of Orleance, Nephew to the King, John Duke of Burbon, and Lord Bonchignald: Of other Lords and Barons, Knights and Squires, Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.

King. This Note doth tell me of ten thousand French That in the field lie slain: of Princes in this number, And Nobles bearing Banners, there lye dead One hundred twenty six; added to these, Of Knights, Esquires, and gallant Gentlemen, Eight thousand and four hundred: of the which, Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd Knights, So that in these ten thousand they have lost, There are but sixteen hundred Mercenaries:

The rest are Princes, Barons, Lords, Knights, Squires,

And

And Gentlemen of blood and quality,
The Names of those their Nobles that lie dead:
Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France,
Jaques of Chastillon, Admirall of France,
The Master of the Cross-bows, Lord Rambures,
Great Master of France, the brave Sir Guichard Dolphin,
John Duke of Alanfon, Antonio Duke of Brabant,
The Brother to the Duke of Burgundy,
And Edward Duke of Barr: of lusty Earles,
Grandpree and Roussie, Fauconbridge and Foyes,
Beaumont and Marle, Vaudemont and Lestrale.
Here was a Royall fellowship of death.
Where is the number of our English dead?
Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk,
Sir Richard Ketly, Davy Gam Esquire;
None else of name: and of all other men,
But five and twenty.

King. O God, thy Arm was here:
And not to us, but to thy Arm alone,
Ascribe we all: when, without stratagem,
But in plain shock, and even play of Battell,
Was ever known so great and little loss?
On one part and on th'other, take it God,
For it is none but thine.

Exet. 'Tis wonderfull.

King. Come, go we in procession to the Village:
And be it death proclaimed through our Host,
To boast of this, or take that praise from God,
Which is his onely.

Flu. Is it not lawfull and please your Majesty, to tell how many is kill'd.

King. Yes Captain; but with this acknowledgement,
That God fought for us.

Flu. Yes, my conscience, he did us great good.

King. Do we all holy Rights;
Let there be sung Non nobis, and Te Deum,
The dead with charity enclos'd in Clay:
And then to Callice, and to England then,
Where ne're from France arriv'd more happy men.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Chorus.

Vouchsafe to those that have not read the Story,
That I may prompt them: and of such as have,
I humbly pray them to admit th'excuse
Of time, of numbers, and due course of things,
Which cannot in their huge and proper life,
Be here presented. Now we bear the King
Toward Callice: grant him there; And there being seen,
Heave him away upon your winged thoughts,
Athwart the Sea; Behold the English beach,
Pales in the flood, with Men, with Wives, and Boyes,
Whose shouts and claps out-voyce the deep-mouth'd Sea,
Which like a mighty Whiffer 'fore the King,
Seems to prepare his way: So let him land,
And solemnly see him set on to London.
So swift a pace hath Thought, that even now
You may imagine him upon Black-Heath:
Where, that his Lords desire him, to have born
His bruised Helmet, and his bended Sword
Before him, through the City: he forbids it,

Being free from vauuestle, and self-glorious pride;
Giving full Trophée, Signall, and Ostent,
Quite from himself, to God. But now behold,
In the quick Forge and working-house of Thought,
How London doth powre out her Citizens,
The Mayor and all his Brethren in best sort,
Like to the Senatours of th'antique Rome,
With the Plebeians swanning at their heels,
Go forth and fetch their Conquering Cesar in:
As by a lower, but by loving likelihood,
Were now the Generall of our gracious Empreffe,
As in good time he may, from Ireland conning,
Bringing Rebellion broached on his Sword;
How many would the peacefull City quit.
To welcome him? much more, and much more cause,
Did they this Harry. Now in London place him.
As yet the lamentation of the French
Invites the King of Englands stay at home:
The Emperour's coming in behalf of France,
To order peace between them: and omit
All the occurrences, what ever chanc't,
Till Harryes back return again to France:
There must we bring him: and my self have play'd
The Interim, by remembring you 'tis past.
Then brook abridgement, and your eyes advance,
After your thoughts, straight back again to France.

Exit.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gow. Nay, that's right: but why wear you your Leek to day? Saint Davies day is past.

Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things: I will tell you asse my friend, Captain
Gower; the rascally, scauld, beggarly, lowsie, praggling
Knave Pistoll, which you and your self, and all the world know to be no better then a fellow, look you now, of no merits: he is come to me, and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my Leek: it was in a place where I could not breed no contention with him;
but I will be so bold as to wear it in my Cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Enter Pistoll.

Gow. Why here he comes, swelling like a Turkey-cock.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings, nor his Turkeycocks. God plesse aunchient Pistoll: you scurvy lowsie
Knave, God blesse you.

Pist. Ha, art thou bedlam? do'st thou thirst, base Trojan, to have me fold up Parcas fatal Web? Hence; I am qualinish at the smell of Leek.

Flu. I pefeech you heartily, scurvy lowsie Knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this Leek, because, look you, you doe not love it, nor your affections, and your appetites, and your disgections doo's not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all his Goats.

Flu. There is one Goat for you. Strikes him.
Will you be so good, scauld Knave, as eat it?

Pist. Base Trojan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scauld Knave, when Gods will is: I will desire you to live in the mean time, and eat your Victualls: come, there is sawce for it. You call'd me yesterday Mountain-Squire, but I will make

N n 2

you

you to day a Squire of low degree. I pray you fall to, if you can mock a Leek, you can eat a Leek.

Gow. Enough Captain, you have astonish'd him.

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my Leek, or I will peat his pate four dayes : bite I pray you, it is good for your green wound, and your bloody Coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes certainly, and out of doubt, and out of question too, and ambiguities.

Pist. By this Leek, I will most horribly revenge : I eat and eat I swear.

Flu. Eat I pray you, will you have some more sawce to your Leek : there is not enough Leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy Cudgell, thou dost see I eat.

Flu. Much good do you scauld knave, heartily. Nay, pray you throw none away, the skin is good for your broken Coxcomb ; when you take occasions to see Leeks hereafter, I pray you mock at 'em ; that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. I, Leeks is good : hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat?

Flu. Yes verily, and in truth you shall take it, or I have another Leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy groat in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you any thing, I will pay you in Cudgels, you shall be a Woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but Cudgels : God buy you, and keep you, and heal your pate.

Exit.

Pist. All hell shall stir for this.

Gow. Go, go, you are a counterfeit cowardly Knave, will you mock at an ancient Tradition, began upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable Trophée of predeceased valour, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words. I have seen you gleeing and galling at this Gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English Cudgell : you find it otherwise, and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition ; fare ye well.

Exit.

Pist. Doth fortune play the huswife with me now? Newes have I that my Doll is dead i'th Spittle of a malady of France, and there my rendezvous is quite cut off : Old I do wax, and from my weary limbs honour is Cudgell'd. Well, Bawd I'll turn, and something lean to Cut-purse of quick hand : To England will I steal, and there I'll steal ;

And patches will I get unto these cudgel'd scarres, And swear I got them in the Gallia warres.

Exit.

Enter at one door, King Henry, Exeter, Bedford, Warwick, and other Lords ; at another, Queen Isabel, the King, the Duke of Burgoyne, and other French.

King. Peace to this meeting, wherefore are we met? Unto our Brother France, and to our Sister, Health and fair time of day : Joy and good wishes To our most fair and Princely Cousin Katherine ; And as a branch and member of this Royalty, By whom this great assembly is contriv'd, We do salute you Duke of Bargoigne, And Princes French and Peers, health to you all.

Fra. Right joyous are we to behold your face, Most worthy Brother England, fair met. So are you Princes (English) every one.

Quee. So happy be the Issue, Brother England, Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting, As we are now glad to behold your eyes, Your eyes which hitherto have born in them Against the French that met them in their bent, The fatal Balls of murdering Basilisks : The venome of such Looks we fairly hope Have lost their quality, and that this day Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love.

Eng. To cry Amen to that, thus we appear.

Quee. You English Princes all, I do salute you.

Burg. My duty to you both, on equall love.

Great Kings of France & England : that I have labour'd With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavours, To bring your most imperiall Majesties Unto this Bar, and Royall enterview : Your Mightinesse on both parts best can witnesse. Since then my Office hath so far prevail'd, That Face to Face, and Royall Eye to Eye, You have congregated : let it not disgrace me, If I demand before this Royall view, What Rub, or what impediment there is, Why that the naked, poor, and mangled Peace, Dear Nurse of Arts, Plenties, and joyfull Births, Should not in this best Garden of the World, Our fertile France, put up her lovely Visage? Alas, she hath from France too long been chas'd, And all her Husbandry doth lie on heaps, Corrupting in it's own fertility.

Her Vine, the merry cheerer of the heart, Unpruned dies : her Hedges even, pleach'd, Like Prisoners wildly over-grown with hair, Put forth disorder'd Twigs : her fallow Leas, The Darnell, Hemlock, and rank Fennel, Doth root upon ; while that the Culter rusts, That should deracinate such Savagery : The even Mead, that erst brought sweetly forth The freckled Cowslip, Burnet, and green Clover, Wanting the Scythe, withall uncorrected, rank ; Conceives by idlenesse, and nothing teems, But hatefull Dock, rough Thistles, Keckfies, Burres, Losing both beauty and utility ; And all our Vineyards, Fallows, Meads, and Hedges, Defective in their natures, grow to wildnesse. Even so our Houses, and our selves, and Children, Have lost, or do not learn, for want of time, The Sciences that should become our Country ; But grow like Savages, as Souldiers will, That nothing do, but meditate on Blood, To swearing, and stern Looks, diffus'd Attire, And every thing that seems unnaturall. Which to reduce into our former favour, You are assembled : and my speech entreats, That I may know the Let, why gentle Peace Should not expell these inconveniences, And blesse us with her former qualities.

Eng. If, Duke of Burgoyne, you would the Peace, Whose want gives growth to th'imperfections Which you have cited ; you must buy that Peace With full accord to all our just demands, Whose Tenures and particular effects You have enschedul'd briefly in your hands.

Burg. The King hath heard them : to the which, as yet There is no Answer made.

Eng. Well then : the Peace which you before so urg'd, Lies in his Answer.

Fran.

France. I have but with a curſelary eye
O're glaunc't the Articles: Pleaſeth your Grace
To appoint ſome of your Councell preſently,
To ſit with us once more, with better heed
To re-ſurvey them: we will ſuddenly
Paſſe our accept and peremptory Answer.

Eng. Brother we ſhall. Go Unkle Exeter,
And brother Clarence, and brother Glouceſter,
Warwick, and Huntington, go with the King,
And take with you free power, to ratiſie;
Augment, or alter, as your Wiſdomes beſt
Shall ſee advantageable for our Dignity,
Any thing in or out of our Demands,
And we'll conſigne thereto. Will you, fair Siſter,
Go with the Princes, or ſtay here with us?

Quee. Our gracious Brother, I will go with them:
Happely a Womans Voyce may do ſome good,
When Articles too nicely urg'd, be ſtood on,

Eng. Yet leave our Couſin Katherine here with us,
She is our capitall Demand, compris'd
Within the fore-rank of our Articles.

Quee. She hath good leave.

Exeunt omnes.

Manet King, and Katherine.

King. Fair Katherine, moſt fair,
Will you vouchſafe to teach a Souldier termes,
Such as will enter at a Ladies car,
And plead his Love-ſuit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your Maſteſty ſhall mock at me, I cannot ſpeak your England.

King. O fair Katherine, if you will love me ſoundly with you French heart, I will be glad to hear you confeſſe it brokenly with your Engliſh Tongue. Do you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonne moy, I cannot tell wat is like me.

King. An Angell is like you Kate, and you are like an Angell.

Kath. Que dit il, que de ſuis ſemblable a les Anges?

Lady. Ouy verament (ſauf voſtre Grace) ainſi dit il.

King. I ſaid ſo, dear Katherine, and I muſt not bluſh to affirm it.

Kath. O bon Dieu, les langues des hommes ſont plein de tromperies.

King. What ſaies ſhe, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Lady. Ouy, dat de tongues of de mans is be full of de-ceits: dat is de Princeſſe.

King. The Princeſſe is the better Engliſh-woman ifaith Kate, my wooing is fit for thy underſtanding, I am glad thou canſt ſpeak no better Engliſh, for if thou could'ſt, thou woul'dſt find me ſuch a plain King, that thou woul'dſt think, I had ſold my ſanne to buy my Crown, I know no wayes to mince it in love, but directly to ſay, I love you, then if you urge me farther, then to ſay, Do you in faith? I wear out my ſuit: Give me your answer, ifaith do, and clap hands; and a bargain: how ſay you, Lady?

Kath. Sauf voſtre honour, me underſtand well.

King. Marry, if you would put me to Verſes, or to Dance for your ſake, Kate, why you undid me: for the one, I have neither words nor meaſure; and for the other,
I have no ſtrength in meaſure, yet a reaſonable meaſure in ſtrength. If I could win a Lady at Leap-frog, or by vaulting into my ſaddle, with my Armor on my back;
under the correction of bragging be it ſpoken, I ſhould quickly leap into a Wife: Or if I might buffet for my Love, or bound my Horſe for her favours, I could lay on like a Butcher, and ſit like a Jack an Apes, never off. But before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly, nor gaspe out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in proteſtation;

onely down-right Oathes, which I never us'd till urg'd, nor never break for urging, If thou canſt love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whoſe face is not worth Sun-burning? that never looks in his Glaſſe, for love of any thing he ſees there? let thine eye be thy Cook, I ſpeak to thee plain Souldier: If thou canſt love me for this, take me? if not? to ſay to thee that I ſhall die, is true; but for thy love, by the L. No: yet I love thee too. And while thou liv'ſt, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoyned Conſtancy, for he perforce muſt do thee right, becauſe he hath not the gift to wooe in other places: for theſe fellows of infinite tongue, that can ryme themſelves into Ladies favours, they do alwayes reaſon themſelves out again. What? a ſpeaker is but a prater, a Ryme is but a Ballad; a good Leg will fall, a ſtraight back will ſtoop, a black Beard will turn white, a curl'd Pate will grow bald, a fair Face will wither, a full eye will wax hollow: but a good heart, Kate, is the Sun and the Moon, or rather the Sun, and not the Moon; for it ſhines bright, and never changes, but keeps his courſe truely. If thou would have ſuch a one, take me? and take me; take a ſouldier: take a ſouldier; take a King.
And what ſay'ſt thou then to my Love? ſpeak my fair,
and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it poſſible dat I ſould love de enemy of France?

King. No, it is not poſſible that you ſhould love the Enemy of France, Kate; but in loving me, you ſhould love the Friend of France: for I love France ſo well, that I will not part with a Village of it; I will have it all mine:
and Kate, when France is mine, and I am yours; then yours is France, and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell wat is dat.

King. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am ſure will hang upon my tongue; like a new-married
Wife about her Husbands Neck, hardly to be ſhook off;
Je quand ſur le poſſeſſion de France, & quand vous aves le poſſeſſion de moy. Let me ſee, what then? Saint Dennis be my ſpeed) Donc voſtre eſt France, & vous eſtes mienne. It is as eaſie for me, Kate, to conquer the Kingdome, as to ſpeak ſo much more French: I ſhall never move thee
in French, unleſſe it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf voſtre honneur, le Francois ques vous parleis, il & melius quel' Anglois le quel Je parle.

King. No faith is't not, Kate: but thy ſpeaking of my Tongue, and I thine, moſt truely falſely, muſt needs be granted to be much at one. But Kate, do'ſt thou underſtand thus much Engliſh? Canſt thou love me?

Kath. I cannot tell.

King. Can any of your Neighbours tell, Kate? He aſk them, Come, I know thou lovelſt me: and at night, when you comie into your Cloſet, you il'queſtion this Gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her diſpraiſe thoſe parts in me, that you love with your heart; but good Kate, mock me mercifully, the rather gentle Princeſſe, becauſe I love thee cruelly. If ever thou beeſt mine, Kate, as I have ſaving Faith within me tells me thou ſhalt; I get thee with ſkambling, and thou muſt therefore needs prove a good Souldier-breeder:
Shall not thou and I, between Saint Dennis and Saint
George, compound a Boy, half French half Engliſh, that shall go to Constantinople, and take the Turk by The Beard. Shall we not? what say'st thou, my fair Flower-de-Luce.

Kath. I do not know dat.

King. No: 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise: do but now promise Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy; and for my English moiety, take the word of a King, and a Bachelor. How answer you, La plus belle Katherine du monde mon trescher & devin deesse.

Kath. Your Majestee aue fause Frenche enough to deceive de most sage Damoisel dat is in en France.

King. Now fie upon my false French: by mine honor in true English, I love thee Kate; by which honor, I dare not swear thou lovest me, yet my blood begins to flatter me, that thou do'st; yet notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my Visage. Now befhrew my Fathers Ambition, he was thinking of Civill Warres when he got me, therefore was I created with a stubborn out-side with an aspect of Iron, that when I come to wooe Ladies, I fright them: but in faith Kate, the elder I wax, the better I shall appear. My comfort is, that Old Age, that ill layer up of Beauty, can do no more spoyle upon my Face. Thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better: and therefore tell me, most fair Katherine, will you have me? Put off those Maiden Bluishs, avouch the thoughts of your Heart with the Looks of an Empresse, take me by the Hand and say, Harry of England, I am thine: which word thou shalt no sooner blesse mine Ear withall, but I will tell thee aloud England is thine: Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantaginet is thine; who, though I speak it before his Face, if he be not Fellow with the best King, thou shalt find the best King of Good-fellows. Come your answer in broken Musick; for thy Voyce is Musick, and thy English broken: Therefore Queen of all, Katherine, break thy mind to me in broken English, wilt thou have me?

Kath. Dat is as it shall please de roy mon pere.

King. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Den it shall also content me.

King. Upon that I kisse your Hand, and I call you my Queen.

Kath. Laisse mon Seigneur, laisse, laisse, may foy: Je ne veus point que vous abbaisse vostre grandeur, en baissant le main d'une nostre Seigneur indigne serviteur, excuse moy. Je vous supply mon tres-puissant Seigneur.

King. Then I will kisse your Lips, Kate.

Kath. Les Dames & Damoisels pour estre baise devant leur nopcese il net pas le costume de Fraunce.

King. Madam, my Interpreter, what sayes she?

Lady. Dat is not be de fashion pour le Ladies of France; I cannot tell wat is buisse en English.

King. To Kisse.

Lady. Your Majesty entendre better que moy.

King. Is it not a fashion for the Maids in France to kisse before they are marryed, would she say?

Lady. Ouy verayment.

King. O Kate, nice Customes currie to great Kings, Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confin'd within the weak List of a Countries fashion: we are the makers of Manners, Kate; and the liberty that followes our Places, stops the mouth of all find-faults, as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your Country, in denying me a Kisse: therefore patiently, and yielding. You have Witch-craft in your Lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a Suger touch of them; then in the Tongues of the French Councill: and they should sooner perswade Harry of England, then a generall Petition of Monarchs. Here comes your father.

Enter the French Power, and the English Lords.

Burg. God save your Majesty, my Royall Cousin, teach you our Princess English?

King. I would have her learn, my fair Cousin, how perfectly I love her, and that is good English.

Burg. Is she apt?

King. Our Tongue is rough, Coze, and my Condition is not smooth: so that having neither the Voyce nor the Heart of Flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness.

Burg. Pardon the frankness of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you must make a Circle: if conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked, and blind. Can you blame her then, being a Maid, yet ros'd over with the Virgin Crimson of Modetty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind Boy in her naked seeing selfe? It were (my Lord) a hard Condition for a Maid to consign to.

King. Yet they do wink and yield as Love is blind and enforces.

Burg. They are then excus'd, my Lord, when they see not what they do.

King. Then good my Lord, teach your Cousin to consent to winking.

Burg. I will wink on her to consent, my Lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for Maids well Summer'd, and warme kept, are like Flies at Bartholomew-tyde, blind, though they have their eyes, and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

King. This Moral ties me over to Time, and a hot Summer; and so I shall catch the Flie, your Cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too.

Burg. As Love is my Lord, before it loves.

King. It is so: and you may, some of you, thank Love for my blindness, who cannot see many a fair French City for one fair French Maid that stands in my way.

French King. Yes my Lord, you see them perspetively: the Cities turn'd into a Maid; for they are all girdled with Maiden Walls, that Warre hath entered.

King. Shall Kate be my Wife?

Fran. So please you.

England. I am content, so the Maiden Cities you talk of, may wait on her: so the Maid that stood in the Way for my Wish, shall shew me the way to my Will.

France. We have consented to all tearmes of reason.

Eng. Is't so, My Lords of England?

West. The King hath granted every Article: His Daughter first; and then in sequele, all, According to their firm proposed natures.

Exit. Onely

Exet. Onely he hath not yet subscribed this:
Where your Majesty demands, That the King of France having occasion to write for matter of Grant, shall name your Highnesse in this forme, and with this addition, in French: Nostre trescher filz Henry Roy'd An- gleterre Heretere de Fraunce: and thus in Latine; Pr-
clarissimus Filius noster Henricus Rex Anglia & Heres Francia.

Fran. Nor this I have not Brother so deny'd,
But your request shall make me let it passe.

Engl. I pray you then, in love and dear allyance,
Let that one Article rank with the rest,
And thereupon give me your Daughter.

Fran. Take her fair son, and from her bloud raise up
Issue to me, that the contending Kingdomes.
Of France and England, whose very shoars look pale,
With envy of each others happinesse,
May cease their hatred; and this dear Conjunction Plant Neighbourhood and Christian-like accord
In their sweet Bosomes: that never War advance
His bleeding Sword 'twixt England and fair France.

Lords. Amen.

King. Now welcome Kate: and bear me witnesse all,
That here I kisse her as my Sovereign Queen.

Flourish.

Queen. God, the best maker of all Marriages,
Combine your hearts in one, your Realms in one,
As Man and Wife being two, are one in love,
So be there 'twixt your Kingdomes such a Spousall,

That never may ill Office, or fell jealousie,
Which troubles oft the Bed of blessed Marriage,
Thrust in between the Passion of these Kingdomes,
To make divorce of their incorporate League:
That English may as French, French English men,
Receive each other. God speak this Amen.

All. Amen.

King. Prepare for our Marriage: on which day,
My Lord of Burgundy we'll take your Oath
And all the Peers, for surety of our Leagues.
Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me,
And may our Oaths well kept and prosp'rous be.

Sonet.

Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

Thus far with rough, and all-unable Pen,
Our bending Author hath pursu'd the Story,
In little room confining Mighty men,
Mangling by starts the full course of their glory.
Small time: but in that small, most greatly lived
This Star of England. Fortune made his Sword;
By which, the Worlds best Garden he achiev'd:
And of it left his Son Imperiall Lord,
Henry the Sixth, in Infant Bands crown'd King
Of France and England, did this King succeed:
Whose State so many had the managing,
That they lost France, and make his England bleed:
Which oft our Stage hath shown; and for their sake,
In your fair minds let this acceptance take.

F I N I S.

The first Part of King HENRY the Sixth,

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Dead March.

Enter the Funerall of King Henry the Fifth, attended on by the Duke of Bedford, Regent of France; the Duke of Gloster, Protector: the Duke of Exeter, Warwick, the Bishop of Winchester, and the Duke of Somerset.

Bedford.

Bring be the heavens with black, yield day to night,
Comets importing change of Times and States,
Brandish your crySTALL Tresses in the Sky,
And with them scourge the bad revolting Stars,
That have consented unto Henries death:
King Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long,
England ne're lost a King of so much worth.

Gloster. England ne're had a King untill his time:
Vertue he had, deserving to command.
His brandisht Sword did blind men with his beams,
His Armes spread wider then a Dragons Wings:
His sparkling Eyes, repleat with wrathfull fire,
More dazled and drove back his Enemies,
Then mid-day sun, fierce bent against their faces.
What should I say? his Deeds exceed all speech:
He ne're listup his hand but conquered.

Exe. We mourn in black, why mourn we not in bloud?
Henry is dead, and never shall revive:
Upon a Wooden Coffin we attend:
And deaths dishonorable Victory,
We with our stately presence glorifie,
Like Captives bound to a Triumphant Car.
What? shall we curse the Planets of Mishap,
That plotted thus our Glories overthrow?
Or shall we think the subtil-witted French,
Conjurers and Sorcerers, that afraid of him,
By Magick Verse have contriv'd his end?

Winch. He was a King, blest of the King of Kings.
Unto the French, the dreadfull judgement-Day
So dreadfull will not be, as was his sight.
The Battells of the Lord of Hosts he fought:
The Churches Prayers made him so prosperous.

Gloster. The Church? Where is it?
Had not Church-men pray'd,
His thred of Life had not so soon decay'd:
None do you like, but an effeminate Prince,
Whom like a School-boy you may over-awe.

Winch. Gloster, what ere we like, thou art Protector,
And lookest to command the Prince and Realm.
Thy Wife is proud, she holdeth thee in awe,

More then God or Religious Church-men may.

Gloster. Name not Religion for thou lov'st the Flesh,
And ne're throughout the year to Church thou go'st,
Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed. Cease, cease these Jarres, and rest your minds in Let's to the Altar: Herald's wait on us; (peace:
Instead of Gold, we'll offer up our Armes,
Since Armes avail not, now that Henri's dead.
Posterity await for wretched years,
When at their Mothers moist eyes, Babes shall suck,
Our Isle be made a Nourish of salt Tears,
And none but Women left to wayle the dead.
Henry the Fifth, thy Ghost I invoke:
Prosper this Realm, keep it from Civill Broyles,
Combat with adverse Planets in the heavens;
A far more glorious Star thy soul will make,
Then Julius Caesar, or bright-----

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honorable Lords, health to you all:
Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of losse, of slaughter, and discomfiture:
Cuyen, Champaigne, Rheimes, Orleance,
Paris, Guysors, Poictiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What sai'st thou man, before dead Henri's Coarse?
Speak softly, or the losse of those great Towns
Will make him burst his Lead, and rise from death.

Gloster. Is Paris lost, and is Roan yielded up?
If Henry were recall'd to life again,
These news would cause him once more yield the ghost.

Exe. How were they lost? what treachery was us'd?

Mess. No treachery, but want of Men and Money.
Amongst the Souldiers this is muttered,
That here you maintain severall Factions:
And whil'st a Field should be dispatch'd and fought,
You are disputing of your Generalls.

One would have lingring Warrs with little cost;
Another would flye swift but wanteth Wings:
A third man thinks, without expence at all,
By guilefull fair words Peace may be obtain'd.
Awake, awake, English Nobility,
Let not sloth dim your Honors, new begot;
Cropt are the Flower-de-Luces in your Armes
Of Englands Coat, one halfe is cut away.

Exe. Were our Tears wanting to this Funerall,
These Tidings would call forth her flowing Tides.

Bed. Me they concern, Regent I am of France:
Give me my steeld Coat, I'll fight for France.
Away with these disgracefull wayling Robes;
Wounds will I lend the French, in stead of Eyes,
To weep their intermissive Miseries.

Enter

Enter to them another Messenger.

Mess. Lords view these Letters, full of bad mischance.
France is revolted from the English quite,
Except some petty Towns of no import.
The Dolphin Charles is crowned King in Rhemes:
The Bastard of Orleans with him is joyn'd:
Reynold, Duke of Anjou, doth his part,
The Duke of Alanson fieth on his side. Exit.

Exe. The Dolphin Crown'd King? all flye to him?
O whether shall we flye from this reproach?

Gloster. We will not flye, but to our enemies throats.
Bedford, if thou be slack, I'll fight it out.

Bed. Gloster, why doubt'st thou of my forwardnesse?
An Army have I muster'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is over-run.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My gracious Lords, to adde to your laments,
Wherewith you now bedew King Henry's Hearse,
I must inform you of a dismall fight,
Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot, and the French.

Win. What? wherein Talbot overcame, is't so?

3. Mess. O no: wherein Lord Talbot was o'rethrown:
The circumstance I'll tell you more at large.
The tenth of August last, this dreadful Lord,
Retiring from the Siege of Orleans,
Having full scarce six thousand in his troupe,
By three and twenty thousand of the French
Was round encompassed, and set upon:
No leisure had he to enrank his men.
He wanted Pikes to set before his Archers:
Instead wherof, sharp Stakes pluckt out of Hedges
They pitched in the ground confusedly,
To keep the Horsemen off, from breaking in.
More then three houres the fight continued:
Where valiant Talbot, above humane thought,
Enacted wonders with his Sword and Lance.
Hundreds he sent to Hell, and none durst stand him:
Here, there, and every where enrag'd, he slew.
The French exclaim'd, the Devil was in Armes,
All the whole Army stood amaz'd on him.
His Souldiers spying his undaunted Spirit,
A Talbot, a Talbot, cri'd out amain.
And rush't into the bowels of the Battell.
Here had the Conquest fully been seal'd up,
If Sir John Falstaffe had not play'd the Coward,
He being in the Vauward, plac't behind,
With purpose to relieve and follow them,
Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke.
Hence grew the generall wrack and massacre;
Enclosed were they with their enemies.
A base Walloon, to win the Dolphins grace,
Thrust Talbot with a Spear into the Back,
Whom all France, with their assembled strength,
Durst not presume to look once in the face.

Bed. Is Talbot slain then? I will slay my self,
For living idly here in pomp and ease,
Whil'st such a worthy Leader, wanting aid,
Unto his dastard foe-men is betray'd,

3. Mess. O no, he lives, but is took Prisoner,
And Lord Scales with him, and Lord Hungerford:
Most of the rest slaughter'd, or took likewise.

Bed. His Ransome there is none but I shall pay.
I'll hale the Dolphin headlong from his Throne,
His Crown shall be the Ransome of my friend:
Four of their Lords I'll change for one of ours.

Farewell my Masters, to my Task will I,
Bonafires in France forthwith I am to make,
To keep our great Saint Georges Feast withall.
Ten thousand Souldiers with me I will take,
Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake.

3. Mess. So you had need, for Orleans is besieg'd,
The English Army is grown weak and faint:
The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply,
And hardly keeps his men from mutiny,
Since they so few, watch such a multitude.

Exe. Remember Lords your Oaths to Henry sworn:
Either to quell the Dolphin utterly,
Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I do remember it, and here take leave,
To go about my preparation. Exit Bedford.

Gloster. I'll to the Tower with all the hast I can,
To view th' Artillery and Munition,
And then I will proclaim young Henry King.

Exit Gloster.

Exe. To Elton will I, where the young King is,
Being ordain'd his speciall Governour,
And for his safety there I'll best devise. Exit.

Winch. Each hath his place and Function to attend:
I am left out; for me nothing remains:
But long I will not be Jack out of Office,
The King from Elton I intend to send,
And sit at chiefest stern of publick Weal.

Exit.

Enter Charles Alanson, and Reigneir, marching with Drum and Souldiers.

Charl. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens,
So in the Earth to this day is not known.
Late did he shine upon the English side:
Now we are Victors, upon us he smiles.
What Towns of any moment, but we have?
At pleasure here we lye, near Orleans:
Otherwhiles, the famisht English, like pale Ghosts,
Faintly besiege us one hour in a moneth.

Al. They want their Porridge, and their fat Bull.
Either they must be diered like Mules. (Beeves

Reig. Let's raise the Siege: why live we idly here?
And have their Provender tidd to their mouths,
Or pitteous they will look, like drowned Mice.
Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear:
Remaineth none but mad-brain'd Salisbury,
And he may well in fretting spend his gall,
Nor men, nor money hath he to make War.

Char. Sound, sound Alarum, we will rush on them,
Now for the honour of the forlorn French:
Him I forgive my death, that killeth me;
When he sees me go back on foot, or flye. Exeunt.

Here Alarum, they are beaten back by the English, with great losse.

Enter Charles, Alanson, and Reigneir.

Charl. VVho ever saw the like? what men have I?
Dogs, Cowards, Dastards: I would ne're have fled,
But that they left me midst my enemies.

Reig. Salisbury is a desperate Homicide,
He fighteth as one weary of his life:
To other Lords, like Lyons wanting food,
Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

Alans.

Alans. Froysard, a Countreyman of ours, records,
England all Olivers and Rowlands breed,
 During the time Edward the third did reign :
 More truly now may this be verified ;
 For none but Samsons and Goliasses
 It sendeth forth to skirmish : one to ten ?
 Lean raw-bon'd Rascalls, who would e're suppose,
 They had such courage and audacity ;

Charl. Let's leave this Town,
 For they are hair-brain'd Slaves ,
 And hunger will enforce them to be more eager :
 Of old I know them ; rather with their Teeth
 The Walls they'll tear down, then forsake the Siege.

Reig. I think by some odde Gimnalls or device
 Their Armes are set, like Clocks, still to strike on ;
 Else ne're could they hold out so as they do :
 By my consent, we'll even let them alone.

Alan. Be it so.

Enter the Bastard of Orleans.

Bast. Where's the Prince Dolphin ? I have newes for him.

Dolph. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us.

Bast. Me thinks your looks are sad, your cheer appal'd.
 Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence ?
 Be not dismay'd for succour is at hand :
 A holy Maid hither with me I bring,
 Which by a Vision sent to her from heaven,
 Ordained is to raise this tedious Siege,
 And drive the English forth the bounds of France :
 The Spirit of deep Prophecie she hath,
 Exceeding the nine Sibyls of old Rome :
 What's, past, and what's to come, she can descry.
 Speak, shall I call her in ? believe my words,
 For they are certain, and unfallible.

Dolph. Go call her in : but first, to try her skill,
Reignier stand thou as Dolphin in my place ;
 Question her proudly, let thy Looks be stern,
 By this means shall we sound what skill she hath.

Enter Jone Puzel.

Reig. Fair Maid, is't thou wilt do these wondrous feats ?

Puz. Reignier, is't thou that thinkest to beguile me ?
 Where is the Dolphin ? Come, come from behind,
 I know thee well, though never seen before.
 Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me ;
 In private will I talk with thee apart :
 Stand back you Lords, and give us leave a while.

Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash.

Puz. Dolphin, I am by birth a Shepherds Daughter,
 My wit untrain'd in any kind of Art :
 Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd
 To shine on my contemptible estate.
 Loe, whilst I waited on my tender Lambs,
 And to Suns parching heat display'd my cheeks,
 Gods Mother deigned to appear to me,
 And in a Vision full of Majesty,
 Will'd me to leave my base Vocation,
 And free my Country from Calamity :
 Heraid she promis'd, and assur'd successe.
 In compleat Glory she reveal'd her self :
 And whereas I was black and swart before :
 With those clear Rayes, which she infus'd on me,
 That beauty am I blest with, which you see.

Ask me what question thou canst possible,
 And I will answer unpremeditated :
 My Courage try by Combat, if thou dar'st,
 And thou shalt find that I exceed my Sex.
 Resolve on this, thou shalt be fortunate,
 If thou receive me for thy Warlike Mate.

Dolph. Thou hast astonisht me with thy high termes :
 Onely this proof I'll of thy Valour make,
 In single Combat thou shalt buckle with me ;
 And if thou vanquishest, thy words are true,
 Otherwise I renounce all confidence.

Puz. I am prepar'd : here is my keen-edg'd Sword,
 Deckt with fine Flower-de-Luces on each side,
 The which at Tourain, in S. Katherines Church-yard,
 Out of a great deal of old Iron, I chose forth.

Dolph. Then come a God's name, I fear no woman.

Puzel. And while I live, I'll ne're flie no man.

Here they fight, and Jone de Puzel overcomes.

Dolph. Stay, stay thy hands, thou art an Amazon,
 And fightest with the Sword of Debora.

Puzel. Christs Mother helps me, else I were too weak.

Dolph. Who e're helps thee, 'tis thou that must help
 Impatiently I burn with thy desire, (me :

My heart and hands thou hast at once subdu'd,
 Excellent Puzel, if thy name be so,
 Let me thy servant, and not Sovereign be,
 'Tis the French Dolphin sueth to thee thus.

Puzel. I must not yield to any rights of Love,
 For my Profession's sacred from above :
 When I have chased all thy Foes from hence,
 Then will I think upon a recompence.

Dolph. Mean time look gracious on thy prostrate Thrall.

Reig. My Lord me thinks is very long in talk.

Alan. Doubtless he shrives this Woman to her smock,
 Else ne're could he so long protract his speech.

Reign. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean ?

Ala. He may mean more then we poor men do know ?
 These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.

Reig. My Lord, where are you ? what devise you on,
 Shall we give o're Orleans, or no ?

Puzel. Why no, I say : distrustfull Recreants,
 Fight till the last gasp : for I'll be your guard.

Dolph. What she sayes, I'll confirm : we'll fight it out.

Puzel. Assign'd I am to be the English Scourge.
 This night the Siege assuredly I'll raise :
 Expect Saint Martins Summer, Halcyon dayes,
 Since I have entred thus into these Wars.

Glory is like a Circle in the Water,
 Which never ceaseth to enlarge it self,
 Till by broad spreading, it disperse to nought.
 With Henry's death, the English Circle ends,
 Dispersed are the glories it included :
 Now am I like that proud insulting Ship,
 Which Cesar and his fortune bare at once.

Dolph. Was Mahomet inspired with a Dove ?
 Thou with an Eagle art inspired then.

Hellen, the Mother of great Constantine,
 Nor yet S. Philips Daughters were like thee.
 Bright Star of Venus, fal'n down on the Earth,
 How may I reverently worship thee enough ?

Alan. Leave off delays, and let us raise the Siege.

Reignier.

Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honors,
Drive them from Orleance, and be immortalliz'd.

Dolph. Presently we'll try : come, let's away about it,
No Prophet will I trust, if she prove false. Exeunt.

Enter Gloucester, with his serving-men.

Gloft. I am to survey the Tower this day ;
Since Henries death, I fear there is a Conveyance :
Where be these Warders, that they wait not here ?
Open the Gates, 'tis Gloster that calls.

1. Warder. Who's there, that knocks so imperiously ?

Gloft. 1. man. It is the Noble Duke of Gloster.

2. Warder. Who ere he be, you may not be let in.

1. Man. Villains, answer you so the Lord Protector ?

1. Warder. The Lord protect him, so we answer him,
We do not otherwise then we are will'd.

Gloft. Who willed you ? or whose will stands but mine ?
There's none Protector of the Realme, but I :
Break up the Gates, I'll be your warrantize ;
Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill Grooms ?

*Glosters men rush at the Tower Gates, and Woodvile
the Lieutenant speaks within.*

Wood. What noyse is this ? what Traytors have we here ?

Gloft. Lieutenant, is it you whose voyce I hear ?
Open the Gates, here's Gloster that would enter.

Wood. Have patience Noble Duke, I may not open,
The Cardinall of Winchester forbids :
From him I have expresse commandement,
That thou nor none of thine shall be let in.

Gloft. Faint-hearted Woodvile, prizest him 'fore me :
Arragant Winchester, that haughty Prelate,
Whom Henry our late Sovereign ne're could brook ?
Thou art no friend to God, or to the King :
Open the Gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly.

Servingmen. Open the Gates to the Lord Protector,
Or we'll burst them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter to the Protector at the Tower Gates, Winchester and his men in Tawney Coats.

Winchest. How now ambitious Umpire what means
this ?

Gloft. Piel'd Priest, do'st thou command me to be shut out ?

Winch. I do, thou most usurping Proditor,
And not Protector of the King or Realm.

Gloft. Stand back thou manifest Conspirator,
Thou that contrived'st to murder our dead Lord,
Thou that giv'st Whores Indulgences to sin,
I'll canvas thee in thy Broad Cardinalls Hat,
If thou proceed in this thy insolence.

Winch. Nay, stand thou back, I will not budge a foot :
This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain,
To slay thy Brother Abel, if thou wilt.

Gloft. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back :
Thy Scarlet Robes, as a Childs bearing Cloth,
I'll use, to carry thee out of this place.

Winch. Doe what thou dar'st, I heard thee to thy face.

Gloft. What ? am I dar'd, and bearded to my face ?
Draw men, for all this privileged place,
Blew Coats to Tawney Coats. Priest beware thy Beard,
I mean to rugge it, and to cuff you soundly.
Under my feet I'll stamp thy Cardinalls Hat :

In spight of Pope, or dignities of Church,
Here by the Checks I'll drag thee up and down.

Winch. Gloster, thou wilt answer this before the Pope.

Gloft. Winchester Goose, I cry, a Rope, a Rope.

Now beat them hence, why do you let them stay ?

Thee I'll chase hence, thou Wolf in Sheeps array.

Out Tawney-Coats, out Scarlet Hypocrite.

Here Glosters men beat out the Cardinalls men, and enter in the hurly-burly the Mayor of London and his Officers.

Mayor. Fie Lords, that you being supream Magistrates,
Thus contumeliously should break the Peace.

Glo. Peace Mayor, for thou know'st little of my wrongs :
Here's Beauford, that regards not God nor King,
Hath here distrayn'd the Tower to his use.

Winch. Here's Gloster too, a Foe to Citizens,
One that still motions War, and never Peace,
O're-charging your free purses with large Fines ;
That seeks to overthrow Religion,
Because he is Protector of the Realm ;
And would have Armour here out of the Tower,
To Crown himself King, and suppress the Prince.

Gloft. I will not answer thee with words, but blows.

Here they skirmish again.

Mayor. Nought rests for me, in this tumultuous strife,
But to make open Proclamation.

Come Officer, as loud as e're thou canst, cry :

*All manner of men, assembled here in Armes this day, against Gods Peace and the Kings, we charge and command you, in his Highness Name, to repair to your several dwelling places, and not to wear, handle, or use any Sword,
Weapon, or Dagger hence-forward, upon pain of death.*

Gloft. Cardinall, I'll be no breaker of the Law :
But we shall meet, and break our minds at large.

Winch. Gloster, we'll meet to thy dear cost be sure :
Thy heart-bloud I will have for this dayes work.

Mayor. I'll call for Clubs, if you will not away :
This Cardinall is more haughty then the Devill.

Gloster. Major farewell : thou do'st but what thou may'st

Winch. Abominable Gloster, guard thy head,
For I intend to have it e're be long. Exeunt.

Mayor. See the Coast clear'd, and then we will depart.
Good God, these Nobles should such stomacks bear,
I my self fight not once in forty year. Exeunt.

Enter the Master Gunner of Orleance, and his Boy.

M.Gun. Sirra, thou know'st how Orleance is besiedg'd
And how the English have the Suburbs won.

Boy. Father I know, and oft have shot at them,
How e're unfortunate, I miss'd my aime.

M.Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rul'd by me :
Chief Master Gunner am I of this Town,
Something I must do to procure me grace :
The Princes espyalls have informed me :
How the English, in the Suburbs close entrencht ;
Went through a secret Grate of Iron Barres,
In yonder Tower, to over-peer the City,
And thence discover, how with most advantage
They may vex us with shot or with Assault.
To intercept this inconvenience,
A piece of Ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd,

And

And fully even these three dayes have I watch'd,
If I could see them. Now Boy do thou watch,
For I can stay no longer.

If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word,
And thou shalt find me at the Governors.

Boy. Father, I warrant you take you no care,
I'll never trouble you, if I may spy them.

Enter Salisbury, and Talbot on the Turrets, with others.

Salis. Talbot, my life, my joy, again return'd?
How wert thou handled, being Prisoner?
Or by what means got'st thou to be releas'd?
Discourse I prethee on this Turrets top.

Tal. The Earle of Bedford had a Prisoner,
Call'd the brave Lord Ponton de Santraile,
For him was I exchange'd, and ransom'd.
But with a baser man of Armes by far,
Once in contempt they would have barter'd me:
Which I disdain'd, scorn'd, and craved death,
Rather then I would be so pil'd esteem'd;
In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd.
But O, the trecherous Falstaffe wounds my heart,
Whom with my bare fists I would execute,
If I now had him brought into my power.

Salis. Yet tell'st thou not, how thou wert entertain'd.

Tal. With scoffs and scorns, and contumelious taunts,
In open Market-place produc'd they me,
To be a publick spectacle to all:
Here, said they, is the Terror of the French,
The Scare-Crow that affrights our Children so.
Then broke I from the Officers that led me,
And with my nails digg'd stones out of the Ground,
To hurle at the beholders of my shame.
My grisly countenance made others flye,
None durst come near, for fear of sudden death.
In Iron Walls they deem'd me not secure:
So great fear of my Name 'mong't them were spread,
That they suppos'd I could rend Barres of steel,
And spurn in pieces posts of Adamant.
Wherefore a guard of chosen Shot I had;
That walkt about me every Minute while:
And if I did but stir out of my Bed,
Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Enter the Boy with a Linstock.

Salis. I grieve to hear what torments you endur'd,
But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.

Now it is Supper time in Orleans:

Here, through this Grate, I can count every one,

And view the French men how they fortifie:

Let us look in, the sight will much delight thee:

Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Sir William Glandsdale,

Let me have your expresse opinions,

Where is best place to make our Batt'ry next?

Garg. I think at the North Gate, for there stand Lords.

Glandsf. And I here, at the Bulwark of the Bridge.

Talb. For ought I see, this City must be famisht,
Or with light Skirmishes enfeebled.

Here they shot, and Salisbury falls down.

Salis. O Lord have mercy on us wretched sinners.

Garg. O Lord have mercy on me, wofull man.

Talb. What chance is this that suddenly hath crost us?
Speak Salisbury; at least, if thou canst, speak:

How far'st thou, Mirror of all Martiall men?
One of thy Eyes, and thy Cheeks side struck off?
Accursed Tower, accursed fatall Hand,
That hath contriv'd this wofull Tragedy.

Exit.

In thirteen Battells, Salisbury o're came:

Henry the Fifth he first train'd to the Wars.

Whil'st any Trump did sound, or Drum struck up,
His Sword did ne're leave striking in the field.

Yet liv'st thou Salisbury? though thy speech doth fail,
One Eye thou hast to look to Heaven for grace.
The Sun with one Eye vieweth all the World.

Heaven be thou gracious to none alive,

If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands.

Bear hence this Body, I will help to bury it.

Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life?

Speak unto Talbot, nay, look up to him.

Salisbury cheer thy Spirit with this comfort,

Thou shalt not die whiles-----

He beckens with his hand, and smiles on me:

As who should say, When I am dead and gone,

Remember to avenge me on the French.

Plantaginet I will, and, Nero like, will Play on the Lute, beholding the Towns burn:

Wretched shall France be onely in my Name.

---Here an Alarum, and it Thunders and Lightens.

What stir is this? what tumult's in the Heavens?

Whence cometh this Alarum, and the noyse?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My Lord, my Lord, the French have gather'd
The Dolphin, with one Joan de Puzel joyn'd, (head.
A holy Prophetesse, new risen up,
Is come with a great Power, to raise the Siege.

Here Salisbury lifteth himself up and groans

Talb. Hear, hear, how dying Salisbury doth groan,
It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd.

French men, I'll be a Salisbury to you.

Puzel or Puffel, Dolphin or Dog-fish,

Your hearts I'll stamp out with my Horses heels,

And make a Quagmire of your mingled brains.

Convey me Salisbury into his Tent,

And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare.

Alarum.

Exit.

Here an Alarum again: and Talbot pursueth the Dolphin, and driveth him: Then enter Joan de Puzel, driving Englishmen before her. Then enter Talbot.

Talb. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
Our English Troups retyre, I cannot stay them.
A Woman clad in Armour chaseth them.

Enter Puzel.

Here, here she comes. I'll have a bout with thee:

Devill, or Devils Dam, I'll conjure thee:

Bloud will I draw on thee, thou art a Witch.

And straightway give thy Soul to him thou serv'st.

Puz. Come, come, 'tis onely I that must disgrace thee.

Here they fight.

Talb. Heavens, can you suffer Hell so to prevail?

My brest I'll burst with straining of my courage,

And from my shoulders crack my Armes asunder,

But I will chastise this high-minded Strumpet.

They fight again.

Puz. Talbot farewell, thy hour is not yet come,
I must go Victuall Orleans forthwith;

A short Alarum: Then enter the Town with Souldiers.

O're-

O re-take me if thou canst, I scorn thy strength.
Go, go, cheer up they hungry-starved men,
Help Salisbury to make his Testament,
This Day is ours, as many more shall be.

Exit.

Talb. My thoughts are whirled like a Potter's Wheel.
I know not where I am, nor what I do :
A Witch by fear, not force, like Hannibal,
Drives back our Troops, and conquers as she lists :
So Bees with Imoak, and Doves with noisome stench,
Are from their Hives and Houses driven away.
They call'd us, for our fierceness, English Dogges,
Now like the Whelps, we crying run away.

A short Alarum.

Heark Countreymen, either renew the fight,
Or tear the Lyons out of England's Coat ;
Renounce your Soil, give Sheep in Lyons stead :
Sheep run not half so treacherous from the Wolf,
Or Horse or Oxen from the Leopard,
As you flie from your oft-subdued Slaves.

Alarum. Here another Skirmish.

It will not be, retire into your Trenches :
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,
For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.
Puzel is entred into Orleans,
In spite of us, or ought that we could doe.
O would I were to die with Salisbury,
The shame hereof, will make me hide my head.

Exit Talbot.

Alarum, Retreat, Flourish.

Enter on the Wall Puzel, Dolphin, Reigneir, Alanson, and Souldiers.

Puzel. Advance our waving Colours on the Walls,
Rescu'd is Orleans from the English wolves ;
Thus Joan de Puzel hath perform'd her word.

Dolph. Divinest Creature, bright Astrea's Daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this successe ?

Thy promises are like Adonis Garden,
That one day bloom'd, and fruitfull were the next.
France, triumph in thy glorious Prophetsse,
Recover'd is the Town of Orleans,
More blessed hap did ne're befall our State.

Reigneir. Why ring not out the Bells aloud,
Throughout the Town ?

Dolphin command the Citizens make Bonfires,
And feast and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.

Alansf. All France will be repleat with mirth and joy,
When they shall hear how we have play'd the men.

Dolph. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won :

For which, I will divide my Crown with her,
And all the Priests and Fryers in my Realm,
Shall in procession sing her endless praise.

A statelier Pyramid to her I'll rear,
Then Rhodope's or Memphis ever was.

In memory of her when she is dead,
Her Ashes, in an Urn more precious
Then the rich-jewel'd Coffer of Darius,
Transported, shall be at high Festivals
Before the Kings and Queens of France.

No longer on Saint Dennis will we cry,
But Joan de Puzel shall be France's Saint.

Come in, and let us Banquet Royally,
After this Golden Day of Victory.

Flourish.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Serjeant of a Band, with two Centinels.

Ser. Sirs, take your places and be vigilant :
If any noise or Souldier you perceive
Near to the walls, by some apparent sign
Let us have knowledge at the Court of Guard.

Cent. Serjeant you shall. Thus are poor Servitors
(When others sleep upon their quiet beds)
Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, and Burgundy, with scaling Ladders : Their Drummes bearing a Dead March.

Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubted Burgundy,
By whose approach, the Regions of Artoys,
Wallon, and Picardie, are friends to us :
This happy night, the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carous'd and banquetted,
Embrace we then this opportunity,
As fitting best to quittance their deceit,
Contriv'd by Art, and balefull Sorcery.

Bed. Coward of France, how much he wrongs his fame,
Despairing of his own armes fortitude,
To joyn with Witches, and the help of Hell.

Bur. Traitors have never other company.
But what's that Puzel, whom they term so pure ?

Tal. A Maid, they say.

Bed. A Maid ? And be so martial ?

Bur. Pray God she prove not masculine e're long :
If underneath the Standard of the French
She carry Armour, as she hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits.
God is our Fortresse, in whose conquering name
Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend brave Talbot, we will follow thee.

Tal. Not altogether : Better far I guesse,
That we do make our entrance several ways :
That if it chance the one of us do fail,
The other yet may rise against their force.

Bed. Agreed ; I'll to yond corner.

Bur. And I to this.

Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.
Now Salisbury for thee and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appear
How much in duty, I am bound to both.

Cent. Arme, arme, the enemy doth make assault.

Cry, S. George. A Talbot.

The French leap o're the walls in their shirts. Enter several wayes, Bastard, Alanson, Reigneir, half ready, and half unready.

Alan. How now my Lords ? what all unreadie so ?

Bast. Unreadie ? I and glad we scap'd so well.

Reig. 'Twas time (I trow) to wake and leave our beds,
Hearing Alarums at our Chamber doores.

Alan. Of all exploits since first I follow'd Armes,
Ne're heard I of a warlike enterprize

O o

More

More venturous, or desperate then this.

Bast. I think this Talbot be a Fiend of Hell.

Reig. If not of Hell, the Heavens sure favour him.

Alansf. Here commeth Charles, I marvel how he sped.

Enter Charles and Joan.

Bast. Tut, holy Joan was his defensive Guard.

Charl. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitfull Dame ?
Didst thou at first, to flatter us withall,

Make us partakers of a little gain,

That now our loss might be ten times so much ?

Joan. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend ?

At all times will you have my power alike ?

Sleeping or waking, must I still prevail,

Or will you blame and lay the fault on me ?

Improvident Souldiers, had your watch been good,
This sudden mischief never could have fain.

Charl. Duke of Alanson, this was your default,
That being Captain of the Watch to Night,
Did look no better to that weighty Charge.

Alansf. Had all our Quarters been as safely kept,
As that whereof I had the government,
We had not been thus shamefully surpriz'd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reign. And so was mine, my Lord.

Charl. And for my self, most part of all this Night
Within her Quarter, and mine own Precinct,
I was employ'd in passing to and fro,
About relieving of the Centinels.

Then how, or which way, should they first break in ?

Joan. Question (my Lords) no further of the case,
How, or which way ; 'tis sure they found some place,
But weakly guarded, where the breach was made :

And now there rests no other shifts but this,
To gather our Souldiers, scatter'd and dispers'd,
And lay new Plat-formes to endamage them.

Exeunt.

Alarm. Enter a Souldier, crying, a Talbot, a Talbot :
they flie, leaving their Cloathes behind.

Sould. I'll be so bold to take what they have left :
The Cry of Talbot serves me for a Sword,
For I have loaden me with many Spoiles,
Using no other Weapon but his Name.

Exit.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundie.

Bedf. The day begins to break, and Night is fled,
Whose pitchy Mantle over-vail'd the Earth.
Here sound Retreat, and cease our hot pursuit. Retreat.

Talb. Bring forth the Body of old Salisbury,
And here advance it in the Market-place,
The middle Centre of this cursed Town.
Now have I pay'd my Vow unto his Soul,
For every drop of Bloud was drawn from him,
There hath at least five Frenchmen dyed to night.
And that hereafter Ages may behold
What ruine happened in revenge of him,
Within their chiefest Temple I'll erect
A Tomb, wherein his Corps shall be interr'd :
Upon the which, that every one may read,
Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans,
The treacherous manner of his mournfull death,
And what a terrour he had been to France.
But Lords, in all our bloody Massacre,
I muse we met not with the Dolphin's Grace,

His new-come Champion, virtuous Joan of Acre,
Nor any of his false Confederates.

Bedf. 'Tis thought, Lord Talbot, when the fight began,
Rouz'd on the sudden from their drowsie Beds,
They did amongst the troops of armed men,
Leap o're the Walls for refuge in the field.

Burg. My self, as far as I could well discern,
For smoak, and dusky vapours of the night,
Am sure I scar'd the Dolphin and his Trull,
When Arme in Arme they both came swiftly running,
Like to pair of loving Turtle-Doves,
That could not live asunder day or night.
After that things are set in order here,
We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my Lords : which of this Princely train
Call ye the Warlike Talbot, for his Acts
So much applauded through the Realm of France ?

Talb. Here is the Talbot, who would speak with him ?

Mess. The virtuous Lady, Countess of Auergne,
With modesty admiring thy Renown,
By me intreats (great Lord) thou would'st vouchsafe
To visit her poor Castle where she lyes,
That she may boast she hath beheld the man,
Whose glory fills the World with loud report.

Burg. Is it even so ? Nay, then I see our Warres
Will turn unto a peacefull Comick sport,
When Ladies crave to be encountred with.
You may not (my Lord) despise her gentle suit.

Talb. Ne're trust me then : for when a World of men
Could not prevail with all their Oratorie,
Yet hath a Woman's kindness over-rul'd :
And therefore tell her, I return great thanks,
And in submission will attend on her.

Will not your Honours bear me company ?

Bedf. No, truly, 'tis more then manners will :
And I have heard it said, Unbidden Guests
Are often welcomest when they are gone.

Talb. Well then, alone (since there's no remedy)
I mean to prove this Ladies courtesie.
Come hither Captain, you perceive my mind.

Whispers.

Capt. I do my Lord, and mean accordingly.

Exeunt.

Enter Countess.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge,
And when you have done so, bring the Keyes to me.

Port. Madam, I will.

Exit.

Count. The Plot is laid, if all things fall out right,
I shall as famous be by this exploit,
As Scythian Tomyris by Cyrus death.

Great is the rumour of this dreadfull Knight,
And his achievements of no less account :
Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine eares,
To give their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and Talbot.

Mess. Madam, according as your Ladieship desir'd,
By message crav'd, so is Lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome : what ? is this the man ?

Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the Scourge of France ?
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad ?
That with his Name the Mothers still their Babes ?
I see Report is fabulous and false.

I thought I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect,
And large proportion of his strong knit Limbs.
Alas, this is a Child, a silly Dwarf:
It cannot be, this weak and writhled Shrimp
Should strike such terrour to his Enemies.

Talb. Madam, I have been bold to trouble you:
But since your Ladiship is not at leisure,
I'll fort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now?
Go ask him, whither he goes?

Mess. Stay my Lord Talbot, for my Lady craves,
To know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Talb. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certifie her Talbot's here.

Enter Porter with Keyes.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou Prisoner.

Talb. Prisoner? to whom?

Count. To me, bloud-thirsty Lord:
And for that cause I train'd thee thee to my House.
Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me,
For in my Gallery thy picture hangs:
But now the substance shall endure the like,
And I will chain these Legges and Armes of thine,
That hast by tyranny these many yeares
Wasted our Countrey, slain our Citizens,
And sent our Sonnes and Husbands captivate.

Talb. Ha, ha, ha.

Count. Laughst thou Wretch?
Thy mirth shall turn to moan.

Talb. I laugh to see your Ladiship so fond,
To think, that you have ought but Talbot's shadow,
Wherein to practice your severity.

Count. Why? art thou not the man?

Talb. I am indeed.

Count. Then have I substance too.

Talb. No, no, I am but shadow of my self:
You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here;
For what you see, is but the smallest part,
And least proportion of Humanity:
I tell you Madam, were the whole Frame here,
It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,
Your Roof were not sufficient to contain't.

Count. This is a Riddling Merchant for the nonce,
He will be here, and yet he is not here:
How can these contrarieties agree?

Talb. That will I shew you presently.

Winds his Horn, Drummes strike up, a Peal of Ordinance: Enter Souldiers.

How say you Madam? are you now perswaded,
That Talbot is but shadow of himself?
These are his substance, sinews, armes, and strength,
With which he yoketh your rebellious Necks,
Razeth your Cities, and subverts your Towns,
And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot, pardon my abuse,
I find thou art no less then Fame hath bruided,
And more then may be gathered by thy shape.
Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath,
For I am sorry, that with Reverence
I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Talb. Be not dismay'd, fair Lady, nor misconster
The mind of Talbot, as you did mistake
The outward composition of his body.
What you have done, hath not offended me:
Nor other satisfaction do I crave,

But onely with our patience, that we may
Taste of your Wine. and see what Cates you have,
For Souldiers Stomacks always serve them well.

Count. With all my heart, and think me honoured,
To feast so great a Warriour in my house. Exeunt.

Enter Richard Plantagenet, Warwick, Somerset, Pool, and others.

York. Great Lords and Gentlemen,
What means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a Case of Truth?

Suff. Within the Temple Hall we were too loud,
The Garden here is more convenient.

York. Then say at once, if I maintain'd the Truth:
Or else was wrangling Somerset in th'error?

Suff. Faith I have been a Truant in the Law,
And never yet could frame my will to it,
And therefore frame the Law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my Lord of Warwick, then between us.

War. Between two Hawks, which flies the higher pitch,
Between two Dogs, which hath the deeper mouth,
Between two Blades, which beates the better temper,
Between two Horses, which doth bear him best,
Between two Girls, which hath the merriest eye,
I have perhaps some shallow spirit of judgement:
But in these nice sharp Quillets of the Law,
Good faith, I am no wiser then a Daw.

York. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance:
Truth appears so naked on my side,
That any pur-blind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparel'd,
So clear, so shining, and so evident,
That it will glimmer through a blind-man's eye.

York. Since you are tongue-ty'd, and so loth to speak,
In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts:
Let him that is a true-born Gentleman,
And stands upon the honour of his birth,
If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,
From off this Bryer pluck a white Rose with me,

Som. Let him that is no Coward, nor no flatterer,
But dare maintain the party of the Truth,
Pluck a red Rose from off this Thorn with me.

War. I love no Colours: and without all colour
Of base insinuating flattery,
I pluck this white Rose with Plantagenet.

Suff. I pluck this red Rose with young Somerset,
And say withall, I think he held the right.

Vernon. Stay Lords and Gentlemen, and pluck no more
Till you conclude, that he upon whose side
The fewest Roses are cropt from the tree,
Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good Master Vernon, it is well objected:
If I have fewest, I subscribe in silence.

York. And I.

Vernon. Then for the truth, and plainness of the Case,
I pluck this pale and Maiden Blossome here,
Giving my Verdict on the white Rose side.

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off,
Least bleeding, you do paint the white Rose red,
And fall on my side so against your will.

Vernon. If I, my Lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion shall be Surgeon to my hurt,
And keep me on the side still where I am.

Som. Well well, come on, who else?

Lawyer. Unless my Study and my Books be false,
The argument you held, was wrong in you ;
In sign whereof, I pluck a white Rose too.

York. Now Somerſet, where is your argument ?

Som. Here in my Scabbard, meditating, that Shall dy your white Rose in a bloody red.

York. Mean time your cheeks do counterfeit our Roses,
For pale they look with fear, as witnessing
The truth on our ſide.

Som. No Plantagenet.

'Tis not for fear, but anger, that my cheeks
Blush for pure ſhame, to counterfeit our Roses,
And yet thy tongue will not confeſſe thy error.

York. Hath not thy Rose a Canker, Somerſet ?

Som. Hath not thy Rose a Thorn, Plantagenet ?

York. I, ſharp and piercing to maintain his truth,
Whiles thy consuming Canker eats his falſehood.

Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding Roses.
That ſhall maintain what I have ſaid is true,
Where falſe Plantagenet dare not be ſeen.

York. Now by this Maiden Bloſſome in my hand,
I ſcorn thee and thy faſhion, peeviſh Boy.

Suff. Turn not thy ſcornes this way Plantagenet.

York. Proud Poole, I will, and ſcorn both him and thee.

Suff. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat.

Som. Away, away, good William de la Pool,
We grace the Yeoman, by converſing with him.

Warw. Now by God's will thou wrong'ſt him, Somerſet :
His Grandfather was Lyonel Duke of Clarence,
Third Son to the third Edward King of England :
Spring Crettleſs Yeomen from ſo deep a Root ?

York. He beares him on the place's Priviledge,
Or durſt not for his craven heart ſay thus.

Som. By him that made me, I'll maintain my words
On any plot of Ground in Chriſtendome.

Was not thy Father, Richard, Earl of Cambridge,
For Treason executed in our late King's dayes ?

And by his Treason, ſtand'ſt not thou attainted,
Corrupted and exempt from ancient Gentry ?

His treſpaſſe yet lives guilty in thy blood,
And 'till thou be reſtor'd, thou art a Yeoman.

York. My Father was attached, not attainted,
Condemn'd to dye for Treason, but no Traytor ;
And that I'll prove on better men then Somerſet,
Were growing time once ripened to my will.

For your partaker Pool, and you your ſelf,
I'll note you in my Book of Memory,
To ſcourage you for this apprehenſion :

Look to it well, and ſay you are well warn'd.

Som. Ah, thou ſhalt find us ready for thee ſtill :
And know us by theſe Colours for thy Foes,
For theſe, my friends in ſp'g't of thee ſhall wear.

York. And by my Soul, this pale and angry Rose,
As Cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,
Will I for ever, and my faction weare,
Until it wither with me to my Grave,
Or flouriſh to the height of my Degree.

Suff. Go forward, and be choak'd with thy ambition :
And ſo farewell, until I meet thee next. Exit.

Som. Have with thee Pool : Farewell ambitious Richard. Exit.

York. How I am brav'd, and muſt perforce endure it ?

Warw. This blot that they object againſt your Houſe,
Shall be wip't out in the next Parliament,

Call'd for the Truce of Wincheſter and Glouceſter :

And if thou be not then created York,

I will not live to be accounted Warwick,

Mean time, in ſignal of my love to thee,

Againſt proud Somerſet, and William Pool,

Will I upon thy party wear this Rose.

And here I prophetic : this Brawl to day,

Grown to this faction in the Temple Garden,

Shall ſend between the Red-Rose and the White,

A thouſand Soules to Death and deadly Night.

York. Good Maſter Vernon, I am bound to you,
That you on my behalf would pluck a Flower.

Ver. In your behalf ſtill will I wear the ſame.

Lawyer. And ſo will I.

York. Thanks gentle Sir.

Come, let us four to Dinner : I dare ſay,
This Quarrel will drink Blood another day.

Exeunt.

Enter Mortimer, brought in a Chair, and jaylors.

Mort. Kind Keepers of my weak decaying Age,
Let dying Mortimer here reſt himſelf.

Even like a man new haled from the Wrack,

So fare my Limbs with long Imprisonment :

And theſe gay Locks, the Purſuivants of Death,

Nefor-like aged, in an Age of Care,

Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.

Theſe Eyes, like Lamps, whoſe waſting Oil is ſpent,

Wax dimm, as drawing to their Exigent.

Weak Shoulders, over-born with burthening Grief,

And pithleſs Armes, like to a withered Vine,

That droops his ſap-leſs Branches to the ground.

Yet are theſe Feet, whoſe ſtrength-leſs ſtay is numm,

(Unable to ſupport this Lump of Clay)

Swift-winged with deſire to get a Grave,

As witting I no other comfort have.

But tell me Keeper, will my Nephew come ?

Keeper. Richard Plantagenet, my Lord, will come :

We ſent unto the Temple, his Chamber,

And answer was return'd, that he will come :

Mort. Enough : my ſoul then ſhall be ſatisfied.

Poor Gentleman, his wrong doth equal mine,

Since Henry Monmouth firſt began to Reign,

Before whoſe Glory I was great in Armes,

This loathſome tequeſtration have I had ;

And even ſince then, hath Richard been obſcur'd,

Depriv'd of Honour and Inheritance.

But now, the Arbitrator of Deſpaires,

Juſt Death, kind Umpire of men's miſeries,

With ſweet Enlargeiment doth diſmiſſe me hence :

I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,

That ſo he might recover what was loſt.

Enter Richard.

Keeper. My Lord, your loving Nephew now is come.

Mort. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he come ?

Rich. I, Noble Uncle, thus ignobly us'd,

Your Nephew, late deſpised Richard, comes.

Mort. Direct mine Armes, I may embrace his Neck,

And in his Boſome ſpend my latter gasp.

Oh tell me when my Lipps do touch his Cheeks,

That I may kindly give one fainting Kiſs,

And now declare ſweet Stem from York' great Stock,

Why did'ſt thou ſay of late thou wert deſpis'd ?

Rich. Firſt

Rich. First, lean thine aged Back against mine Arme,
And in that ease I'll tell thee my Disease.

This day in argument upon a Case,
Some words there grew 'twixt Somerſet and me:
Amongſt which tearms, he us'd his laſhiv tongue;
And did upbraid me with my Father's death;
Which obloquie ſet barres before my tongue,
Elſe with the like I had requited him.
Therefore good Uncle, for my Father's ſake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet,
And for Alliance ſake, declare the cauſe
My Father, Earl of Cambridge, loſt his Head.

Mort. That cauſe (fair Nephew) that imprifon'd me,
And hath detain'd me all my flow'ring Youth,
Within a loathſome Dungeon, there to pine,
Was curſed inſtrument of his deceaſe.

Rich. Discover more at large what cauſe that was,
For I am ignorant, and cannot gueſs.

Mort. I will, if that my fading breath permit,
And Death approach not, ere my Tale be done.

Henry the Fourth, Grandfather to this King,
Depoſ'd his Nephew Richard, Edward's Son,
The firſt begotten, and the lawfull Heir
Of Edward King, the third of that Deſcent.
During whoſe Reign, the Piercies of the North,
Finding his Uſurpation moſt unjuſt,
Endeavour'd my advancement to the Throne,
The reaſon mov'd theſe Warlike Lords to this,
Was, for that (young King Richard thus remov'd, Leaving no Heir begotten of his Body)

I was the next by Birth and Parentage:

For by my Mother I deriv'd am
From Lyonel Duke of Clarence, the third Son
To King Edward the Third; whereas he,
From John of Gaunt doth bring his Pedigree,
Being but the fourth of that Heroick Line.
But mark: as in this haughty great attempt,
They labour'd to plant the rightfull Heir,
I loſt my Liberty, and they their Lives,
Long after this, when Henry the Fifth
(Succeeding his Father Bullingbrook) did reign;
Thy Father, Earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd
From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of York,
Marrying my Siſter, that thy Mother was;
Again, in pitie of my hard diſtreſs,
Levied an Army, weening to redeem,
And have install'd me in the Diademe:
But as the reſt, ſo fell that Noble Earl,
And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the Title reſted, were ſuppreſt.

Rich. Of which, my Lord, your Honour is the laſt.

Mort. True; and thou ſeeſt, that I no Iſſue have
And that my fainting words do warrant death:
Thou art my Heir; the reſt, I wiſh thee gather:
But yet be wary in thy ſtudious care.

Rich. Thy grave admoniſhments prevail with me:
But yet me thinks, my Father's execution
Was nothing leſs than bloody Tyranny.

Mort. With ſilence, Nephew, be thou politick,
Strong fix'd is the Houſe of Lancaster,
And like a Mountain, not to be remov'd.
But now thy Uncle is removing hence,
As Princes do their Courts, when they are cloy'd
With long continuance in a ſetled place.

Rich. O Uncle, would ſome part of my young yeares
Might but redeem the paſſage of your Age.

Mort. Thou doſt then wrong me, as that ſlaughtere
Which giveth many Wounds, when one will kill. (doth,
Mourn not, except thou ſorrow for my good,
Onely give order for my Funeial.

And ſo farewell, and fair be all thy hopes;
And prosperous be thy Life in Peace and War. Dyes.

Rich. And Peace, no War, befall thy parting Soul.

In priſon haſt thou ſpent a Pilgrimage,
And like a Hermit over-paſt thy dayes.
Well, I will lock his Counſel in my Breaſt,
And what I do imagine, let that reſt.
Keepers convey him hence, and I myſelf
Will ſee his Burial better then his Life.

Exit.

Here dyes the duſkie Torch of Mortimer,
Choak't with Ambition of the meaner ſort.
And for thoſe Wrongs, thoſe bitter injuries,
Which Somerſet hath offer'd to my Houſe,
I doubt not, but with honour to redreſs,
And therefore haſte I to the Parliament,
Either to be reſtoied to my Bloud,
Or make my willth' advantage of my good.

Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Flouriſh. Enter King, Exeter, Gloſter, Wincheſter, Warwick, Somerſet, Suffolk, Richard Plantagenet. Gloſter offers to put up a Bill: Wincheſter ſnatches it, tears it.

Winch. Can'ſt thou with deep premeditated Lines?

With written Pamphlets, ſtudiouſly devis'd?

Humfrey of Gloſter, if thou can'ſt accuſe,

Or ought intend'ſt to lay unto my charge,

Do it without invention, ſuddenly,

As I with ſudden, and extemporal ſpeech,

Purpoſe to anſwer what thou can'ſt object. (patience,

Glo. Preſumptuous Prieſt, this place commands my

Or thou ſhould'ſt find thou haſt diſ-honour'd me.

Think not, although in Writing I prefer'd

The manner of thy vile outrageous Crimes,

That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able

Verbatim to rehearſe the Method of my Pen.

No Prelate, ſuch is thy audacious wickedneſs,

Thy leud, peſtiferous and diſſentionous pranks,

As very infants prattle of thy pride.

Thou art a moſt pernicious Uſurer,

Froward by nature, Enemy to peace,

Laſcivious, wanton, more then well beſeems

A man of thy profeſſion, and Degree.

And for thy Treachery, what's more maniſeſt?

In that thou laid'ſt a Trap to take my Life,

As well at London Bridge, as at the Tower.

Beſide, I fear me, if thy thoughts were liſted,

The King, thy Sovereign, is not quite exempt

From envious malice of thy ſwelling heart.

Winch. Gloſter, I do deſie thee. Lords vouchſafe

To give me hearing what I ſhall reply.

If I were covetous, ambitious or perverſe,

As he will have me: how am I ſo poor?

Or how haps it, I ſeek not to advance

Or raiſe my ſelf? but keep my wonted Calling.

And for Diſſention, who preferreth Peace

More then I do? except I be provok'd.

No, my good Lords, it is not that offends,

It is not that, that hath incens'd the Duke:

It is becauſe no one ſhould ſway but he,

No one, but he, ſhould be about the King;

And that engenders Thunder in his breaſt,

And makes him roar these Accusations forth.
But he shall know I am as good -----

Gloſt. As good ?

Thou Bastard of my Grandfather.

Winch. I, Lordly Sir : for what are you, I pray,
But one imperious in another's Throne ?

Gloſt. Am not I Protector, sawcie Priest ?

Winch. And am not I a Prelate of the Church ?

Gloſt. Yes, as an Out-law in a Castle keeps,
And useh it, to patronage his Theft.

Winch. Unreverent Gloceſter.

Gloſt. Thou art Reverend,
Touching thy Spiritual unction, not thy Life.

Winch. Rome shall remedie this.

Warw. Roam thither then.

My Lord, it were your duty to forbear.

Som. I, see the Bishop be not over-borne :
Me thinks my Lord should be Religious,
And know the Office thas belongs to such.

Warw. Me thinks his Lordship should be humbler,
It fitteth not a Prelate so to plead.

Som. Yes, when his holy State is toucht so near.

Warw. State holy, or unhallow'd, what of that ?
Is not his Grace Protector to the King ?

Rich. Plantagenet I see must hold his tongue,
Left it be said, Speak Sirrha when you should :
Must your bold Verdict enter talk with Lords ?
Else would I have a fling at Wincheſter.

King. Uncles of Gloſter, and of Wincheſter,
The special Watch-men of our English Weal,
I would prevail, if Prayers might prevail,
To join your hearts in love and amitie.
Oh, what a Scandal is it to our Crown,
That two such Noble Peers as ye should jarre ?
Believe me, Lords, my tender yeares can tell,
Civil dissention is a viperous Worm,
That gnaws the Bowels of the Common-wealth.

A noise within. Down with the Tawny-Coats.

King. What Tumult's this ?

Warw. An Uproar, I dare warrant,
Begun through malice of the Bishop's men.

A noise again, Stones, Stones.

Enter Mayor.

Mayor. Oh my good Lords, and virtuous Henry,
Pitie the City of London, pitie us :
The Bishop, and the Duke of Gloſter's men,
Forbidden late to carry any Weapon,
Have fill'd their Pockets full of peble stones ;
And banding themselves in contrary parts,
Do pelt so fast at one anothers Pate,
That many have their giddy braines knockt out :
Our Windows are broke down in every Street,
And we, for fear, compell'd to shut our Shops.

Enter in skirmish with bloody Pates.

King. We charge you, on allegiance to our selves,
To hold your slaughtering hands, and keep the Peace :
Pray' Uncle Gloſter mitigate this strife.

1. Serving. Nay, if we be forbidden Stones, we'll fall to it with our Teeth.

2. Serving. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.
skirmish again.

Gloſt. You of my household leave this peevish broil,
And set this unaccustom'd fight aside.

3. Serv. My Lord, we know your Grace to be a man
Just, and upright ; and for your Royal Birth,
Inferior to none, but to his Majesty :

And e're that we will suffer such a Prince,
So kind a Father of the Common weal,
To be disgraced by an Ink-horn Mate,
We and our Wives and Children all will fight,
And have our bodies slaughtered by thy foes.

1. Serv. I, and the very paring of our Nails
Shall pitch a Field when we are dead.

Begin again.

Gloſt. Stay, stay, I say,
And if you love me, as you say you doe,
Let me perswade you to forbear a while.

King. Oh, how this discord doth afflict my soul.
Can you, my Lord of Wincheſter, behold
My sighes and teares, and will not once relent ?
Who should be pittifull, if you be not ?
Or who should study to prefer a Peace,
If holy Church-men take delight in broils ?

Warw. Yield, my Lord Protector, yield Wincheſter,
Except you mean with obstinate repulse
To slay your Sovereign, and destroy the Realm.
You see what mischief, and what Murther too,
Hath been enacted through your enmity :
Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.

Winch. He shall submit, or I will never yield.

Gloſt. Compassion on the King commands me stoop,
Or I would see his heart out, e're the Priest
Should ever get that priviledge of me.

Warw. Behold, my Lord of Wincheſter, the Duke
Hath banisht moodie discontented fury,
As by his smoothed Brows it doth appear :
Why look you still so stern and Tragical ?

Gloſt. Here Wincheſter, I offer thee my Hand.

King. Fie Uncle Beauford, I have heard you preach,
That Malice was a great and grievous sin :
And will not you maintain the thing you teach ?
But prove a chief offender in the same.

Warw. Sweet King : the Bishop hath a kindly gird :
For shame, my Lord of Wincheſter, relent ;
What, shall a Child instruct you what to doe ?

Winch. Well, Duke of Gloſter, I will yield to thee
Love for thy Love, and Hand for Hand I give.

Gloſt. I, but I fear me with a hollow Heart.
So here my friends and loving Countreymen,
The token serveth for a Flag of Truce,
Betwixt our selves, and all our followers :
So help me God, as I dissemble not.

Winch. So help me God, as I intend it not.

King. Oh, loving Uncle, kind Duke of Gloſter,
How joyfull am I made by this Contract,
Away my Masters, trouble us no more,
But joyn in friendship, as your Lords have done.

1. Serv. Content, I'll to the Surgeon's.

2. Serv. And so will I.

3. Serv. And I will see what Physick the Tavern affords.

Exeunt.

Warw. Accept this Scrowl, most gracious Sovereign,
Which in the Right of Richard Plantagenet,
We do exhibit to your Majesty.

Glo. Well urg'd, my Lord of Warwick: for sweet Prince,
And if your Grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right,
Especially for those occasions
At Eltham place I told your Majesty.

King. And

King. And those occasions, Uncle, were of force :
Therefore my loving Lords, our pleasure is,
That Richard be restored to his Bloud.

Warw. Let Richard be restored to his Bloud,
So shall his Father's wrongs be recompenc't.

Winch. As will the rest, so will I Vinchester.

King. If Richard will be true, not that alone,
But all the whole Inheritance I give,
That doth belong unto the House of York,
From whence you spring, by Lineal Descent.

Rich. Thy humble servant vows obedience,
And humble service, till the point of death.

King. Stoop then, and set you Knee against my Foot,
And in requerdon of that duty done,
I girt thee with the valiant Sword of York.
Rise Richard, like a true Plantagenet.

And rise created Princely Duke of York.

Rich. And so thrive Richard, as thy foes may fall,
And as my duty springs, so pe ish they,
That grudge one Thought against your Majesty.

All. Welcome high Prince, the mighty Duke of York.

Som. Perish base Prince, ignoble Duke of York.

Gloster. Now will it best avail your Majesty,
To cross the Seas, and to be Crown'd in France :

The presence of a King engenders love
Amongst his Subjects and his loyal Friends,
As it dis-animates his Enemies.

King. When Gloster lays the word, King Henry goes,
For friendly counset cuts off many Foes.

Gloster. Your Ships already are in readines.

Exeunt.

Manet Exeter.

Exe. I, we may march in England or in France,
Not seeing what is likely to ensue ;

This late dissention grown betwixt the Peers,
Burns under fained ashes of forg'd love,

And will at last break out into a flame,
As festred members rot but by degree,

Till bones and flesh and sinews fall away,
So will this base and envious discord breed.

And now I fear that fatal Prophecie,
Which in the time of Henry, nam'd the Fifth,

Was in the mouth of every sucking Babe,
That Henry born at Monmouth should winne all,

And Henry born at Windsor should lose all :
Which is so plain, that Exeter doth wish,

His dayes may finish, e're that hapless time. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Puzel disguis'd, and four Souldiers with Sacks upon their backs.

Puzel. These are the Citie Gates, the Gates of Roan,
Through which our Policy must make a breach.
Take heed, be wary how you place your words,
Talk like the vulgar sort of Market men,
That come to gather Money for their Corn.
If we have entrance, as I hope we shall,
And that we find the sloathfull Watch but weak,
I'll by a sign give notice to our friends,
That Charles the Dolphin may encounter them.

Souldier. Our Sacks shall be a mean to sack the City,
And we be Lords and Rulers over Roan,
Therefore we'll knock. Knock.

Watch. Che la.

Puzel. Peasauns la pouure gens de France,
Poor Market folks that come to sell their Corn.

Watch. Enter, go in, the Market Bell is rung.

Puzel. Now Roan, I'll shake thy Bulwarkes to the ground. Exeunt.

Enter Charles, Bastard, Alanfon.

Charles. Saint Dennis blefs this happy Stratagem,
And once again we'll sleep secure in Roan.

Bastard. Here entred Puzel, and her Practisants :
Now she is there, how will she specific ?
Here is the best and safest passage in.

Reign. By thrusting out a Torch from yonder Tower,
Which once discern'd shews that her meaning is,
No way to that (for wakness) which she entred.

Enter Puzel on the top, thrusting out a Torch burning.

Puzel. Behold, this is the happy Wedding Torch,
That joyneth Roan unto her Countreymen,
But burning fatal to the Talbonites.

Bastard. See Noble Charles the Beacon of our friend,
The burning Torch in yonder Turiet stands.

Charles. Now shines it like a Comet of Revenge,
A Prophet to the fall of all our Foes.

Reig. Deferre no time, delayes have dangerous ends ;
Enter and cry, the Dolphin, presently,
And then do execution on the Watch. Alarum.

An Alarum, Talbot in an Excursion.

Talb. France, thou shalt rue this Treason with thy teares,
If Talbot but survive thy Treachery.

Puzel that Witch, that damned Sorceress,
Hath wrought this Hellish mischief unawares,

That hardly we escap't the Pride of France. Exit.

An Alarum : Excursions. Bedford brought in sick in a Chair.

Enter Talbot and Burgonie without : within, Puzel, Charles, Bastard, and Reigneir on the Walls.

Puzel. Good morrow Gallants, want ye Corn for Bread ?
I think the Duke of Burgonie will fast,
Before he'll buy again at such a rate.

'Twas full of Darnel : do you like the taste ?
Burg. Scoff on vile Fiend, and shameless Curtizan,
I trust e're long to choak thee with thine own,
And make thee curse the Harvest of that Corn.

Charles. Your Grace may starve (perhaps) before that time.

Bedf. Oh let not words, but deeds, revenge this Treason.

Puzel. What will you do, good gray-beard ?
Break a Lance, and run a-Tilt at Death,
Within a Chair.

Talb. Foul Fiend of France, and Hag of all despight,
Incompass'd with thy lustfull Paramours,
Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant Age,
And twit with Cowardise a man half dead ?
Damsel, I'll have a bout with you again,
Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Puzel. Are ye so hot, Sir : yet Puzel hold thy peace,
If Talbot do but Thunder, Rain will follow.

They whisper together in counsel.

God speed the Parliament : who shall be the Speaker ?

Talb. Dare

Talb. Dare ye come forth, and meet us in the field?
Puzel. Belike your Lordship takes us then for fools,
 To try if that our own be ours, or no.

Talb. I speak not to that railing Hecate,
 But unto thee Alanson, and the rest.
 Will ye, like Souldiers, come and fight it out?

Alansf. Seignior, no.

Talb. Seignior, hang : base Muleters of France,
 Like Pesant foot-Boyes do they keep the Walls,
 And dare not take up Armes, like Gentlemen.

Puzel. Away Captains, let's get us from the Walls,
 For Talb. means no goodnes by his Looks,
 God b'uy my Lord, we came fir but to tell you
 That we are here. Exeunt from the Walls.

Talb. And there we will be too, e're it be long.
 Or else Reproach be Talbot's greatest fame.
 Vow Burgonie, by honour of thy house,
 Prickt on by publick Wrongs sustain'd in France,
 Either to get the Town again, or dye.
 And I, as sure as English Henry lives,
 And as his Father here was Conqueror ;
 As sure as in this late betrayed Town,
 Great Cordelion's Heart was buried ;
 So sure I swear, to get the Town, or dye.

Burg. My Vowes are equal partners with thy Vowes.

Talb. But e're we go, regard this dying Prince,
 The valiant Duke of Bedford : Come my Lord,
 We will bestow you in some better place,
 Fitter for sickness, and for crazie age.

Bedf. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me :
 Here I will sit, before the Walls of Roan,
 And will be partner of your weal or woe.

Burg. Courageous Bedford, let us now perswade you.

Bedf. Not to be gone from hence, for once I read,
 That stout Pendragon, in his Litter sick,
 Came to the field, and vanquished his foes.
 Me thinks I should revive the Souldiers hearts,
 Because I ever found them as my self.

Talb. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast,
 Then be it so : Heavens keep old Bedford safe.
 And now no more adoe, brave Burgonie,
 But gather we our Forces out of hand,
 And set upon our boasting Enemy. Exit.

An Alarum : Excursions. Enter Sir John Falstaff, and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away Sir John Falstaff, in such haste?
Falstf. Whither away? to save my self by flight,
 We are like to have the overthrow again.

Cap. What? will you flie, and leave Lord Talbot?

Falstf. I, all the Talbots in the World, to save my life.
Exit.

Capt. Cowardly Knight, ill fortune follow thee.
Exit.

Retreat. Excursions. Puzel, Alanson, and Charles flie.

Bedf. Now quiet Soul, depart when Heaven please,
 For I have seen our Enemies overthrow.
 What is the trust or strength of foolish man?
 They that of late were daring with their scoffes,
 Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

Bedford dyes, and is carried by two in his Chair.

An Alarum. Enter Talbot, Burgonie, and the rest.

Talb. Lost, and recovered in a day again,
 This is a double Honour, Burgonie :
 Yet Heavens have glory for this Victory..

Burg. Warlike and Martial Talbot, Burgonie
 Inshrines thee in his heart, and there erects
 Thy Noble Deeds, as Valour's Monuments.

Talb. Thanks gentle Duke : but where is Puzel now?
 I think her old Familiar is asleep.
 Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his glikes?
 What all amout? Roan hangs her head for grief,
 That such a valiant Company are fled.

Now will we take some order in the Town,
 Placing therein some expert Officers,
 And then depart to Paris, to the King,
 For there young Henry with his Nobles lye.

Burg. What wills Lord Talbot, pleaseth Burgonie.

Talb. But yet before we go, let's not forget
 The Noble Duke of Bedford, late deceas'd,
 But see his Exequies fulfill'd in Roan,
 A braver Souldier never couched Launce,
 A gentler heart did never sway in Court.
 But Kings and mightiest Potentates must die,
 For that's the end of humane miserie. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Charles, Bastard, Alanson, Puzel.

Puzel. Dismay not (Princes) at this accident,
 Nor grieve that Roan is so recovered :
 Care is no cure, but rather corrasive,
 For things that are not to be reinedy'd.
 Let frantick Talbot triumph for a while,
 And like a Peacock sweep along his tail,
 We'll pull his Plumes, and take away his Train,
 If Dolphin and the rest will be but rul'd.

Charles. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
 And of thy Cunning had no diffidence,
 One sudden Foil shall never breed distrust.

Bastard. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
 And we will make thee famous through the World.

Alansf. We'll set thy Statue in some holy place,
 And have thee reverenc't like a blessed Saint.
 Employ thee then, sweet Virgin, for our good.

Puzel. Then thus it must be, this doth Joan devise :
 By fair perswasions, mixt with sugred words,
 We will intice the Duke of Burgonie
 To leave the Talbot, and to follow us.

Charles. I marry Sweeting, if we could do that,
 France were no place for Henrie's Warriours,
 Nor should that Nation boast it so with us,
 But be extirped from our Provinces.

Alansf. For ever should they be expuls'd from France,
 And not have Title of an Earldome here.

Puzel. Your Honours shall perceive how I will work,
 To bring this matter to the wished end.

Drumme sounds a-far off.

Heark, by the sound of Drumme you may perceive
 Their Powers are marching unto Paris-ward.

Here sound an English March.

There goes the Talbot with his Colours spred,
 And all the Troops of English after him.

French.

French March.

Now in the Rereward comes the Duke and his:
Fortune in favour makes him lagge behind.
Summon a Parley, we will talk with him.

Trumpets sound a Parley.

Charles. A Parley with the Duke of Burgonie?

Burg. Who craves a Parley with the Burgonie?

Puzel. The Princely Charles of France, thy Countreyman.

Burg. What say'st thou Charles? for I am marching hence.

Charles. Speak Puzel, and enchant him with thy words.

Puzel. Brave Burgonie, undoubted hope of France,
Stay, let thy humble hand-maid speak to thee.

Burg. Speak on, but be not over-tedious.

Puzel. Look on thy Countrey, look on fertile France,
And see the Cries and the Towns defac't,
By waiting Ruine of the cruel Foe,
As looks the Mother on her lowly Babe,
When Death doth close his tender-dying Eyes,
See, see the pining Malady of France:
Behold the Wounds, the most unnatural Wounds,
Which thou thy self hast given her wofull Breast.
Oh turn thy edged Sword another way,
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help:
One drop of Bloud drawn from thy Countrie's Bosome,
Should grieve thee more then streames of common gore.
Return thee therefore with a flood of Teares,
And wash away thy Countries stained Spots.

Burg. Either she hath bewicht me with her words,
Or Nature makes me suddenly relent.

Puzel. Besides, all French and France exclaims on Doubting thy Birth and lawfull Progenie. (thee,

Whom joyn'st thou with, but with a Lordly Nation,
That will not trust thee, but for Profits sake?

When Talbot hath set footing once in France,

And fashion'd thee that Instrument of Ill,

Who then, but English Henry, will be Lord,

And thou be thrust out, like a Fugitive?

Call we to mind, and mark but this for proof:

Was not the Duke of Orleance thy Foe?

And was he not in England Prisoner?

But when they heard he was thine Enemy,

They set him free, without his Ransome pay'd,

In spight of Burgonie and all his friends,

See then, thou fight'st against thy Countrey-men,

And joyn'st with them will be thy slaughter-men.

Come, come, return: return thou wandring Lord,

Charles and the rest will take thee in their armes.

Burg. I am vanquished:

These haughty words of hers

Have Batt'ed me like roaring Cannon-shot,

And made me almost yield upon my knees.

Forgive me Countrey, and sweet Countrey-men:

And Lords accept this hearty kind embrace.

My Forces and my Power of men are yours.

So farewell Talbot, I'll no longer trust thee.

Puzel. Done like a Frenchman: turn and turn again.

Charles. Welcome brave Duke, thy friendship makes us fresh.

Bassard. And doth beget new Courage in our Breasts.

Alansf. Puzel hath bravely play'd her part in this,
And doth deserve a Coronet of Gold.

Charles. Now let us on, my Lords,
And joyn our Powers,
And seek how we may prejudice the Foe.

Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the King, Gloucester, Winchester, York, Suffolk, Somerset, Warwick, Exeter: To them, with his Souldiers, Talbot.

Talb. My gracious Prince, and honourable Peers,
Hearing of your arrival in this Realm,
I have a while given Truce unto my Warres,
To doe my duty to my Sovereign.
In sign whereof, this Arme, that hath reclaim'd
To your obedience, fistic Fortresses,
Twelve Cities, and seven walled Towns of strength,
Beside five hundred Prisoners of esteem;
Lets fall his Sword before your Highness feet:
And with submissive loyalty of heart
Ascribes the Glory of his Conquest got,
First to my God, and next unto your Grace.

King. Is this the Lord Talbot, Uncle Gloucester,
That hath so long been resident in France.

Gloster. Yes, if it please your Majesty, my Liege.

King. Welcome, brave Captain, and victorious Lord.
When I was young (as yet I am not old)
I do remember how my Father said,
A stouter Champion never handled Sword.
Long since we have resolved of your truth,
Your faithfull service, and your toil in War:
Yet never have you tasted our Rewa d,
Or bee reguerdon'd with so much as Thanks,
Because 'till now, we never saw your face;
Therefore stand up, and for these good deserts,
We here create you Earl of Shrewsbury,
And in our Coronation take your place.

Exeunt.

Manent Vernon and Basset.

Vern. Now Sir, to you that were so hot at Sea,
Disgracing of these Colours that I wear,
In honour of my Noble Lord of York,
Dar'st thou maintain the former words thou spak'st?

Bassf. Yes Sir, as well as you dare patronage
The envious barking of your sawcie Tongue,
Against the Duke of Somerset.

Vern. Sirrha, thy Lord I honour as he is.

Bassf. Why what is he? as good a man as York.

Vern. Heark ye: not so: in wittnesse take you that.
Strikes him.

Bassf. Villain, thou knowest
The Law of Armes is such,
That who so drawes a Sword, 'tis present death,
Or else this Blow should broach thy dearest Bloud.
But I'll unto his Majesty, and crave,
I may have liberty to venge this Wrong,
When thou shalt see, I'll meet thee to thy cost.

Vern. Well miscreant, I'll be there as soon as you,
And after meet you, sooner then you would.

Exeunt.

Enter

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter King, Gloucester, Winchester, York, Suffolk, Somerset, Warwick, Talbot, and Governor Exeter.

Glo. Lord Bishop, set the Crown upon his head.

Win. God save King Henry of that name the sixth.

Glo. Now Governour of Paris take your Oath,
That you elect no other King but him;
Esteem none friends, but such as are his Friends,
And none your Foes, but such as shall pretend
Malicious practices against his State:
This shall ye do, so help you righteous God.

Enter Falstaffe.

Fal. My gracious Sovereign, as I rode from Calice,
To haste unto your Coronation:
A Letter was deliver'd to my hands,
Writ to your Grace, from th' Duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy, and thee:
I vow'd (base Knight) when I did meet thee next,
To tear the Garter from thy Craven's leg,
Which I have done, because (unworthily)
Thou wast installed in that High Degree.
Pardon my Princely Henry, and the rest:
This Dastard, at the Battel of Poitiers,
When (but in all) I was six thousand strong,
And that the French were almost ten to one,
Before we met, or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trusty Squire, did run away.

In which assault we lost twelve hundred men.
My self, and divers Gentlemen beside,
Were there surpriz'd, and taken prisoners.
Then judge (great Lords) if I have done amiss:
Or whether that such Cowards ought to wear
This Ornament of Knighthood, yea or no?

Glo. To say the truth, this fact was infamous,
And ill becoming any common man:
Much more a Knight, a Captain, and a Leader.

Tal. When first this Order was ordain'd my Lords,
Knights of the Garter were of Noble birth;
Valiant, and Virtuous, full of haughty Courage,
Such as were grown to credit by the Warres:
Not fearing Death, nor shrinking for Distress.
But alwaies resolute, in most extreames.
He then, that is not furnish'd in this sort,
Doth but usurp the Sacred name of Knight,
Prophaning this most Honourable Order,
And should (if I were worthy to be Judge)
Be quite degraded, like a Hedge-born Swain,
That doth presume to boast of Gentle Blood.

K. Stain to thy Countreymen, thou hear'st thy doom;
Be packing therefore, thou that wast a Knight:
Henceforth we banish thee on pain of death. Exit.
And now my Lord Protector view the Letter,
Sent from our Uncle Duke of Burgundie.

Glo. VVhat means his Grace, that he hath chang'd his stile?

No more but plain and bluntly? (To the King.)
Hath he forgot he is his Sovereign?
Or doth this churlish Supercription
Pretend some alteration in good will?
What's here? I have upon especial cause,
Mov'd with compassion of my Countries wrack,
Together with the pittifull complaints
Of such as your Oppression feeds upon,

Forsoaken your pernicious Faction,
And joyn'd with Charles, the rightfull king of France.
O monstrous Treachery! Can this be so?

That in alliance, amity, and oathes,
There should be found such false dissembling guile?

King. What? doth my Uncle Burgundy revolt?

Glo. He doth, my Lord, and is become my foe.

King. Is that the worst this Letter doth contain?

Glo. It is the worst, and all (my Lord) he writes.

King. Why then, Lord Talbot, there shall talk with
And give him chastisement for this abuse. him,

How say you (my Lord) are you not content?

Tal. Content my Liege? Yes: but that I am prevented,
I should have begg'd I might have been employ'd.

King. Then gather strength, and march unto him straight:

Let him perceive how ill we brook his Treason,
And what offence it is to flout his Friends.

Tal. I go, my Lord, in heart desiring still
You may behold confusion of your foes.

Enter Vernon and Basset.

Ver. Grant me the Combat, gracious Sovereign.

Bas. And me (my Lord) grant me the Combate too.

York. This is my Servant, hear him noble Prince.

Som. And this is mine (sweet Henry) favour him.

King. Be patient Lords, and give them leave to speak,
Say Gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim
And wherefore crave you Combate? Or with whom?

Ver. With him (my Lord) for he hath done me wrong.

Bas. And I with him, for he hath done me wrong.

King. What is that wrong whereon you both complain?
First let me know, and then I'll answer you.

Bas. Crossing the Sea, from England into France,
This fellow here with carping tongue,
Upbraided me about the Rose I wear,
Saying, the sanguine colour of the Leaves
Did present my Master's blushing cheeks:
When stubbornly he did repugn the truth,
About a certain question in the Law,
Argu'd betwixt the Duke of York, and him:
With other vile and ignominious termes.
In confusion of which rude Reproach,
And in defence of my Lord's worthiness,
I crave the benefit of Law of Armes.

Ver. And that is my petition (Noble Lord):
For though he seem with forged quaint conceit
To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
Yet know (my Lord) I was provok'd by him,
And he first took exceptions at this badge,
Pronouncing that the paleness of this Flower,
Bewray'd the faintness of my Master's heart.

York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left?

Som. Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out;
Though ne're so cunningly you smother it.

King. Good Lord, what madness rules in brain-sick men,

When for so slight and frivolous a cause,
Such factious emulations shall arise?

Good Cousins both of York and Somerset,
Quiet your selves, and be at peace.

York. Let this dissention first be tryed by fight,
And then your Highness shall command a Peace.

Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us alone,
Betwixt our selves let us decide it then.

York. There is my pledge, accept it Somerset.

Ver. Nay let it rest where it began at first.

Bass.

Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable Lord.

Glo. Confirm it so? Confounded be your strife,
And perish ye with your audacious prate;
Presumptuous vassals, are you not ashamed
With this immodest clamorous outrage,
To trouble and disturb the King, and Us?
And you my Lords, me thinks you do not well
To bear with their perverse Objections:
Much less to take occasion from their mouths,
To raise a mutiny betwixt your selves:
Let me persuade you take a better course.

Exet. It grieves his Highness,
Good my Lords, be friends.

King. Come hither you that would be Combatants,
Henceforth I charge you, as you love our favour,
Quite to forget this Quarrel, and the cause.
And you my Lords: Remember where you are,
In France, amongst a fickle wavering Nation:
If they perceive dissention in our looks,
And that within our selves we disagree;
How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd
To wilfull Disobedience, and Rebell?
Beside, What infamy will there arise,
When Foreign Princes shall be certified,
That for a toy, a thing of no regard,
King Henrie's Peers, and chief Nobility,
Destroy'd themselves, and lost the Realm of France?
O think upon the Conquest of my Father,
My tender yeares, and let us not forgoe
That for a trifle, that was bought with blood.
Let me be Umpier in this doubtful strife:
I see no reason if I wear this Rose,
That any one should therefore be suspicious
I more incline to Somerſet, then York:
Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both.
As well they may upbraid me with my Crown,
Because (forsooth) the King of Scots is Crown'd.
But your discretions better can persuade,
Then I am able to instruct or teach:
And therefore as we hither came in peace,
So let us still continue peace and love.
Cofin of York, we institute your Grace
To be our Regent in these parts of France:
And good my Lord of Somerſet, unite
Your troops of horsemen, with his Bands of foot,
And like true Subjects, sonnes of your Progenitors,
Go chearfully together, and digest
Your angry Choler on your Enemies.
Our Self, my Lord Protector, and the rest,
After some respite will return to Calice;
From thence to England, where I hope e're long
To be presented by your Victories,
With Charles, Alanſon, and that traiterous Rout.

Exeunt. Manet York, Warwick, Exeter, Vernon.

War. My Lord of York, I promise you the King
Prettily (me thought) did play the Orator.

York. And so he did, but yet I like it not,
In that he weares the badge of Somerſet.

War. Tush, that was but his fancie, blame him not,
I dare presume (sweet Prince) he thought no harm.

York. And if I wish he did. But let it rest,
Other affairs must now be managed. Exeunt.

Flourish. Manet Exeter.

Exet. Well didst thou Richard to suppress thy voice:
For the passions of thy heart burst out,
I fear we should have seen decipher'd there

More rancorous spight, more furious Raging broils,
Then yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd:
But howsoever, no simple man that sees
This jarring discord of Nobilitie,
This shouldering of each other in the Court,
This factious bandying of their Favourites,
By that it doth presage some ill event.
'Tis much, when Scepters are in Childrens hands:
But more, when Envy breeds unkind Division:
Then comes the Ruine, there begins Confusion. Exit.

Enter Talbot with Trumpet and Drumme, before Burdeaux.

Talb. Go to the Gates of Burdeaux, Trumpeter, Summon their General unto the Wall. Sounds.

Enter General Aloft.

English John Talbot (Captains) calls you forth,
Servant in Armes to Harry King of England,
And thus he would: Open your City Gates,
Be humbled to us, call my Sovereign yours,
And do him homage as obedient Subjects,
And I'll withdraw me, and my bloody power.
But if you frown upon this proffer'd Peace,
And tempt the fury of my three Attendants;
Lean Famine, quartering Steel, and climbing Fire,
Who in a moment, even with the earth,
Shall lay your stately, and air-braving Towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Cap. Thou ominous and fearfull Owl of death,
Our Nations terrour, and their bloody scourge,
The period of thy Tyranny approacheth,
On us thou canst not enter but by Death:
For I protest we are well fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight.
If thou retire, the Dolphin well appointed,
Stands with the snares of War to tangle thee.
On either hand thee, there are Squadrons pitch'd,
To wall the from thee liberty of Flight;
Ten thousand French have ta'en the Sacrament,
And no way canst thou turn thee for Redresse,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face:
To rive their dangerous Artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot:
Loe, there thou stand'st a breaching valiant man
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit:
This is the latest Glory of thy praise,
That I thy enemy dew thee withall:
For e're the Glass that now begins to run;
Finish the proceſſe of his sandy hour,
These eyes that see thee now well coloured,
Shall see thee withered, bloody, pale, and dead.

Drum a-far off.

Heark, heark, the Dolphin's drum, a warning Bell
Sings heavy Musick to thy timorous soul,
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out. Exit.

Talb. He Fables not, I heard the enemy:
Out some light Horsemen, and peruse their Wings.
O negligent and heedlesse Discipline,
How are we park'd and bounded in a pale?
A little Heard of Englands Timorous Deer,
'Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French Curses.
If we be English Deer, be then in bloud,
Not Rascal-like to fall down with a pinch,
But rather moodie mad: And desperate Stagges,

Turn.

Turn on the bloody Hounds with heads of Steel,
And make the Cowards stand aloof at bay :
Sellevery man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear Deer of us my Friends.
God, and S. George, Talbot and Englands Right,
Prosper our Colours in this dangerous fight. Exeunt.

Enter a Messenger that meets York. Enter York with Trumpet, and many Souldiers.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd again,
That dog'd the mighty Army of the Dolphin?
Mess. They are return'd my Lord, and give it out,
That he is march'd to Burdeaux with his power
To fight with Talbot : as he march'd along,
By your espys were discovered
Two mightier Troops then that the Dolphin led,
Which joyn'd with him, and made their march for (Burdeaux.

York. A plague upon that Villain Somerfet,
That thus delayes my promised supply
Of horsemen, that were levied for this sledge.
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid,
And I am low'd by a Traitor Villain,
And cannot help the noble Chevalier :
God comfort him in this necessity :
If he miscarry, farewell Warres in France.

Enter another Messenger.

2. Mess. Thou Princely Leader of our English strength,
Never so needfull on the earth of France,
Spur to the Rescue of the Noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a waste of Iron,
And hem'd about with grim destruction :
To Burdeaux, warlike Duke, to Burdeaux York,
Else farewell Talbot, France, and Englands honour.

York. O God, that Somerfet who in proud heart
Doth stop my Cornets, were in Talbot's place,
So should we save a valiant Gentleman,
By forfeiting a Traitor and a Coward :
Mad ire, and wrathfull fury makes me weep,
That thus we die, while remisse Traitors sleep.

Mess. O send some succour to the distressed Lord.

York. He dies, we lose : I break my warlike word :
We mourn, France smiles : We lose, they dayly get,
All long of this vile Traitor Somerfet.

Mess. Then God take mercy on brave Talbot's soul,
And on his Son young John, who two houres since,
I met in travel towards his warlike Father ;
This seven yeares did not Talbot see his son,
And now they meet where both their lives are done.

York. Alas, what joy shall noble Talbot have,
To bid his young son welcome to his Grave :
Away, vexation almost stops my breath,
That hundred friends greet in the hour of death.
Lucie farewell, no more my fortune can,
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man.

Maine, Bloys, Poytiers, and Toures, are won away,
Long all of Somerfet, and his delay. Exit.

Mess. Thus while the Vulture of sedition,
Feeds in the bosome of such great Commanders,
Sleeping neglectiō doth betray to loss :
The Conquest of our scarce cold Conqueror,
That ever-living man of Memorie,
Henry the fifth : Whiles they each other crosse,
Lives, Honours, Lands, and all, hurrie to loss. Exit.

Enter Somerset with his Army.

Som. It is too late, I cannot send them now :
This expedition was by York and Talbot,
Too rashly plotted. All our general force,
Might with a sally of the very Town
Be buckled with : the over-daring Talbot
Hath sullied all his glofs of former Honour
By this unheedfull, desperate, wilde adventure :
York set him on to fight, and die in shame,
That Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.

Cap. Here is Sir William Lucie, who with me
Set from our o're-matcht forces forth for aid.

Som. How now Sir William, whither were you sent ?

Lu. Whither my Lord? from bought and sold L. Talbot,
Who ring'd about with bold adversitie,
Cryes out for noble York and Somerfet,
To beat assailing death from his weak Regions ;
And whiles the honourable Captain there
Drops bloody sweat from his war-wearied limbs,
And in advantage lingring looks for Rescue,
You his false hopes, the trust of Englands honour,
Keep off aloof with worthless emulation :
Let not your private discord keep away
The levied succours that shall lend him aide,
While he renowned Noble Gentleman
Yields up his life unto a world of odds.
Orleance the Bastard, Charles, and Burgundie,
Alanfon, Reignard, compass him about,
And Talbot perisheth by your default.

Som. York set him on, York should have sent him aide.

Luc. And York as fast upon your Grace exclaims,
Swearing that you with-hold his levied host,
Collected for this expedition.

Som. York lyes: He might have sent, and had the Horse :
I owe him little Dutie, and less Love,
And take foul scorn to fawn on him by sending.

Luc. The fraud of England, not the force of France,
Hath now intrapt the Noble-minded Talbot :
Never to England shall he bear his life,
But dies betraid to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come go, I will dispatch the Horsemen strait :
Within six houres, they will be at his aid.

Luc. Too late comes Rescue, if he is tane or slain,
For flie he could not, if he would have fled :
And flie would Talbot never though he might.

Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot then adieu.

Luc. His fame lives in the World. His shame in you.
Exeunt.

Enter Talbot and his Son.

Tal. O young John Talbot, I did send for thee
To tutor thee in stratagems of War,
That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd,
When sapless Age, and weak unable limbs
Should bring thy father to his drooping Chair.
But O malignant and ill-boading Starres,
Now art thou come unto a Feast of death,
A terrible and unavoi'ded danger :
Therefore dear Boy, mount on my swiftest horse,
And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape
By sudden flight. Come, dally not, be gone.

John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your Son?

Shall-

And shall I flye? O, if you love my Mothers,
Dishonour not her honourable Name,
To make a Bastard and a slave of me:
The World will say, he is not Talbot's blood,
That basely fled, when Noble Talbot stood.

Talb. Flye, to revenge my death, if I be slain.

John. He that flies so, will ne're return again.

Talbot. If we both stay, we both are sure to dye.

John. Then let me stay, and, Father, do you flye:
Your losse is great, so your regard should be;
My worth unknown, no losse is known in me.
Upon my death, the French can little boast;
In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost.
Fight cannot stain the honour you have won,
But mine it will, that no exploit have done.
You fled for Vantage, every one will swear:
But if I bow, they'll say it was for fear.
There is no hope that ever I will stay,
If the first hour I shrink and run away:
Here on my knee I beg Mortality,
Rather then Life, preserv'd with Infamy.

Talb. Shall all thy Mothers hopes lye in one Tomb?

John. I, rather then I'll shame my Mothers Womb.

Talb. Upon my blessing I command thee go.

John. To fight I will, but not flye the Foe.

Talb. Part of thy Father may be sav'd in thee.

John. No part of him, but will be shame in me.

Talb. Thou never hadst Renown, nor canst not lose it.

John. Yes, your renowned Name: shall flight abuse it?

Talb. Thy Fathers charge shall clear thee from the stain.

John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.

If Death be so apparent, then both flye.

Talb. And leave my followers here to fight and die?

My age was never tainted with such shame.

John. And shall my Youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can I be severed from your side,

Then can your self, your self in twain divide:

Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I;

For live I will not; if my Father die.

Talb. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair Son,

Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon:

Come, side by side, together live and die,

And Soul with Soul from France to heaven flye.

Exeunt.

Alarum: Excursions, wherein Talbot's Son is hemm'd about, and Talbot rescues him.

Talb. S. George, and Victory, fight Souldiers, fight:

The Regent hath with Talbot broke his word,

And left us to the rage of France his Sword.

Where is John Talbot? pause, and take thy breath,

I gave thee Life, and rescu'd thee from Death.

John. O twice my Father, twice am I thy Son:

The Life thou gav'st me first, was lost and done,

Till with thy Warlike Sword, despite of Fate,

To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Talb. When from the Dolphins Crest thy Sword struck

It warm'd thy Fathers heart with proud desire (fire,

Of bold-fact Victory. Then Leaden Age,

Quicken'd with Youthfull Spleen, and Warlike Rage,

Beat down Alanfon, Orleanse, Burgundy,

And from the pride of Gallia rescued thee.

The irefull Bastard Orleanse, that drew blood

From thee my Boy, and had the Maidenhood

Of thy first fight, I soon encountered,

And interchanging blows, I quickly shed

Some of his Bastard blood, and in disgrace
Bespoke him thus: Contaminated, base,
And mis-begotten blood, I spill of thine,
Mean and right poor, for that pure blood of mine,
Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave Boy.

Here purposing the Bastard to destroy,

Came in strong rescue. Speak thy Fathers care:

Art thou not weary, John? How do'st thou fare?

Wilt thou yet leave the Battell, Boy, and flye,

Now thou art seal'd the Son of Chivalry?

Flye, to revenge my death when I am dead,

The help of one stands me in little stead.

Oh, too much folly is it, well I wot,

To hazard all our lives in one small Boat.

If I to day dye not with French-mens Rage,

To morrow I shall die with mickle age.

By me they nothing gain, and if I stay,

'Tis but the shortning of my Life one day.

In thee thy Mother dies, our Households Name,

My Deaths Revenge, thy Youth, and Englands Fame:

All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay;

All these are sav'd, if thou wilt flye away.

John. The Sword of Orleanse hath not made me smart,

These words of yours draw Life-blood from my heart.

On that advantage, bought with such a shame,

To save a paltry Life, and slay bright Fame,

Before young Talbot from old Talbot flye,

The Coward Horse that bears me, fall and die:

And like me to the pezzant Boyes of France,

To be Shames scorn, and subject of Mischance.

Surely, by all the Glory you have won,

And if I flye, I am not Talbot's Son.

Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot,

If Son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Talb. Then follow thou thy desprate Sire of Creet

Thou Icarus, thy life to me is sweet:

If thou wilt fight, fight by thy Fathers side,

And commendable prov'd let's die in pride. Exit

Alarum. Excursions. Enter old Talbot led.

Talb. Where is my other Life? mine own is gone.

O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant John?

Triumphant Death, smear'd with Captivity,

Young Talbot's Valour makes me smile at thee.

When he perceiv'd me shrink, and on my Knee,

His bloody Sword he brandisht over me,

And like a hungry Lyon did commence

Rough deeds of Rage, and stern impatience:

But when my angry Guardant stood alone,

Tendring my ruine, and assail'd of none,

Dizzy-ey'd Fury, and great rage of heart,

Suddenly made him from my side to start

Into the clust'ring Battell of the French:

And in that Sea of Blood, my Boy did drench

His over-mounting Spirit; and there di'd

My Icarus, my Blossome in his pride.

Enter with John Talbot, born.

Serv. O, my dear Lord, loe where your Son is born.

Talb. Thou antick Death, which laugh'st us here to scorn,

Anon from thy insulting Tyranny,

Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,

Two Talbots winged through the liher Skie,

In thy despite shall scape Mortality.

O thou whose wounds become hard favoured death,

P p

Speak

Speak to thy Father, ere thou yield thy breath,
 Brave death by speaking, whether he will or no:
 Imagine him a French-man, and thy Foe.
 Poor Boy, he smiles, me thinks, as who should say,
 Had Death been French, then Death had died to day.
 Come, come, and lay him in his Fathers armes,
 My spirit can no longer bear these harmes.
 Souldiers adieu: I have what I would have,
 Now my old armes are young John Talbot's grave. Dies.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Charles, Alanson, Burgundy, Bastard, and Puzell.

Char. Had York and Sommerfet brought rescue in,
 We should have found a bloody day of this.

Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's raging wood,
 Did flesh his puny-sword in French-mens blood.

Puz. Once I encountred him, and thus I said:
 Thou Maiden youth, be vanquish'd by a Maid.
 But with a proud Majesticall high scorn
 He answer'd thus: Young Talbot was not born
 To be the pillage of a Giglot Wench,
 He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.

Bur. Doubtlesse he would have made a noble Knight:
 See where he lies inhearsed in the armes
 Of the most bloody Nurser of his harmes.

Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones asunder,
 Whose life was Englands glory, Gallias wonder.

Char. Oh no forbear: For that which we have fled
 During the life, let us not wrong it dead.

Enter Lucy.

Lu. Herald, conduct me to the Dolphins Tent,
 To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.

Char. On what submissive message art thou sent?

Lucy. Submission, Dolphin? 'Tis a neerer French word:
 We English Warriours wot not what it means.
 I come to know what Prisoners thou hast tane,
 And to survey the bodies of the dead.

Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? Hell our prison is.
 But tell me whom thou seek'st?

Luc. But where's the great Alcides of the field,
 Valiant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury?
 Created for his rare successe in Armes,
 Great Earl of Washford, Waterford, and Valence,
 Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield,
 Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdon of Alton,
 Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of Sheffield,
 The thrice victorious Lord of Falconbridge,
 Knight of the Noble Order of S. George,
 Worthy S. Michael, and the Golden Fleece,
 Great Marshall to our King Henry the sixt,
 Of all his Wars within the Realm of France.

Puz. Here's a silly stately stile indeed:
 The Turk that two and Fifty Kingdomes hath,
 Writes not so tedious a stile as this.

Him that thou magnifi'st with all these Titles,
 Stinking and flye-blown lies here at our feet,

Lucy. Is Talbot slain, the French-mens only Scourge,
 Your Kingdomes terrour, and black Nemesis?
 Oh were mine eye-balls into Bullets turn'd,
 That I in rage might shoot them at your faces.

Oh, that I could but call these dead to life,
 It were enough to fright the Realm of France.
 Were but his Picture left amongst you here,
 It would amaze the proudest of you all.

Give me their Bodies, that I may bear them hence,
 And give them Buriall, as becoms their worth.

Puz. I think this upstart is old Talbot's Ghost,
 He speaks with such a proud-commanding spirit:
 For Gods sake let him have him: to keep them here,
 They would but stink, and putrifie the aire.

Char. Go take their Bodies hence.

Lucy. I'll bear them hence: but from their ashes shall be rear'd

A Phoenix that shall make all France affear'd. (wilt.

Char. So we be rid of them, do with them what thou
 And now to Paris in this conquering vein,
 All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Glocester, and Exeter.

King. Have you perus'd the Letters from the Pope,
 The Emperour, and the Earl of Arminack?

Glo. I have, my Lord, and their intent is this,
 They humbly sue unto your Excellence,

To have a godly peace concluded of,
 Between the Realms of England and of France.

King. How doth your Grace affect their motion?

Glo. Well (my good Lord) and as the onely means
 To stop effusion of our Christian blood,
 And stablish quietnesse on every side.

King. I marry, Uncle, for I alwayes thought
 It was both impious and unnaturall,
 That such immanity and bloody strife
 Should raign among Professors of one Faith,

Glo. Beside, my Lord, the sooner to effect,
 And surer bind this knot of amity,
 The Earl of Arminack near knit to Charles,
 A man of great Authority in France,
 Proffers his onely Daughter to your Grace,
 In marriage, with a large and sumptuous Dowry.

King. Marriage, Uncle? Alas! my yeares are young:
 And fitter is my study, and my Books,
 Than wanton dalliance with a Paramour.
 Yet call th'Embassadours, and as you please,
 So let them have their answers every one:
 I shall be well content with any choyce
 Tends to Gods glory, and my Countreys weal.

Enter Winchester, and three Ambassadors.

Exet. What, is my Lord of Winchester install'd,
 And call'd unto a Cardinals degree?

Then I perceive, that will be verified
Henry the Fifth did sometime prophesie.

If once he come to be a Cardinall,
 He'll make his Cap coequall with the Crown.

King. My Lords Ambassadors, your severall suits
 Have bin consider'd and debated on,
 Your purpose is both good and reasonable:
 And therefore are we certainly resolv'd,
 To draw conditions of a friendly peace,

Which

Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean
Shall be transported presently to France.

Glo. And for the proffer of my Lord your Master,
I have inform'd his Highness so at large,
As liking of the Ladies virtuous gifts,
Her beauty, and the value of her Dowry,
He doth intend she shall be Englands Queen,

King. In argument and proof of which contract,
Bear her this Jewell, pledge of my affection.
And so, my Lord Protector, see them guarded,
And safely brought to Dover, wherein shipp'd
Commit them to the fortune of the Sea. Exeunt.

Win. Stay, my Lord Legate, you shall first receive
The summe of money which I promised
Should be delivered to his Holiness,
For cloathing me in these grave Ornaments.

Legat. I will attend upon your Lordships leisure.

Win. Now Winchester will not submit, I trow,
Or be inferiour to the proudest Peer.

Humphrey of Gloster, thou shalt well perceive,
That neither in birth, or for authority,
The Bishop will be over-borne by thee:
I'll either make the stoop, and bend thy knee,
Or sack this Country with a mutiny. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alançon, Bastard, Reignier, and Joan.

Charl. This newes (my Lords) may cheer our drooping spirits:

'Tis said, the stout Parisians do revolt,
And return again unto the warlike French.

Alan. Then march to Paris Royall Charles of France.
And keep not back your power in dalliance.

Puz. Peace be amongst them if they turn to us,
Else ruine combat with their Pallaces.

Enter Scout.

Scout. Successe unto our valiant Generall,
And happinesse to his accomplices.

Char. What tidings send our Scouts? I prethee speak, Scout. The English Army that divided was Into two parties, is now conjoyn'd in one,
And means to give you Battell presently.

Char. Somewhat too sudden Sirs, the warning is,
But we will presently provide for them.

Bur. I trust the Ghost of Talbot is not there:
Now he is gone, my Lord, you need not fear.

Puz. Of all base passions, Fear is most accurst.
Command the Conquest Charles, it shall be thine:
Let Henry fret, and all the world repine.

Char. Then on my Lords, and France be fortunate.

Exeunt. Alarums. Excursions.

Enter Joan de Puzell.

Puz. The Regent conquers, and the French-men flye.
Now help ye charming Spells and Periapts,
And ye choyse spirits that admonish me,
And give me signs of future accidents. Thunder.
You speedy helpers, that are Substitutes

Under the Lordly Monarch of the North,
Appear, and aid me in this enterprize.

Enter Fiends.

This speedy and quick appearance argues proof
Of your accustom'd diligence to me.

Now ye familiar Spirits, that are cull'd

Out of the powerfull Regions under earth.

Help me this once, that France may get the field.

They walk, and speak not.

Oh hold me not with silence over long:

Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,

I'll lop a member off, and give it you

In earnest of a further benefit:

So you do condescend to help me now.

They hang their heads.

No hope to have redresse? My body shall Pay recompence, if you will grant my suit.

They shake their heads.

Cannot my body, nor blood-sacrifice,

Intreat you to your wonted furtherance?

Then take my soul; my body, soul, and all,

Before that England give the French the soyl.

They depart.

See, they forsake me. Now the time is come,

That France must vail her lofty plumed Crest,

And let her head fall into Englands lap.

My ancient Incantations are too weak,

And hell too strong for me to buckle with:

Now France thy glory droopeth to the dust.

Exit.

Excursions. Burgundy and York fight hand to hand. French flye.

York. Damsell of France, I think I have you fast,

Unchain your spirits now with spelling Charmes,

And try if they can gain your liberty.

A goodly prize, fit for the Devils grace.

See how the ugly Witch doth bend her brows,

As if with Circe, she would change my shape.

Puz. Chang'd to a worser shape thou canst not be.

Yor. Oh, Charles the Dolphin is a proper man,

No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Puz. A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee,

And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd

By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds.

York. Fell banning Hag, Inchantresse hold thy tongue.

Puz. I prethee give me leave to curse a while.

Yor. Curse Miscreant, when thou com'st to the stake.

Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter Suffolk with Margaret in his hand.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.

Gazes on her.

Oh fairest Beauty, do not fear, nor flye:

For I will touch thee but with reverend hands,

I kisse these fingers for eternall peace,

And lay them gently on thy tender side.

Who art thou, say? that I may honour thee.

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a King,

The King of Naples, who so ere thou art.

Suf. And Earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.

Be not offended, Natures miracle,

Thou art allotted to be tane by me:

So doth the Swan her downy Cignets save,

Keeping them prisoners underneath her wings :
 Yet if this servile usage once offend,
 Go, and be free again, as Suffolk's friend. She is going.
 Oh stay : I have no power to let her passe,
 My hand would free her, but my heart sayes no.
 As playes the Sun upon the glassie streams,
 Twinkling another counterfeited beam,
 So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes,
 Fain would I wooe her, yet I dare not speak :
 I'll call for Pen and Ink, and write my mind :
 Fie De la Pole, disable not thy self :
 Hast not a Tongue ? Is she not here thy prisoner ?
 VVilt thou be daunted at a VVomans sight ?
 I : Beauties Princely Majesty is such,
 Confounds the Tongue, and makes the senses rough.

Mar. Say Earl of Suffolk, if thy name be so,
 VVhat rancome must I pay before I passe ?
 For I perceive I am thy prisoner.

Suf. How canst thou tell she will deny thy suit,
 Before thou make a triall of her love ? (pay ?)

M. VVhy speak'st thou not ? VVhat rancome must I

Suf. She's beautifull ; and therefore to be VVoood :
 She is a VVoman, therefore to be wonne.

Mar. VVilt thou accept of rancome, yea or no ?

Suf. Fond man, remember that thou hast a wife,
 Then how can Margaret be thy Paramour ?

Mar. I were best to leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. There all is marr'd : there lies a cooling card.

Mar. He talks at randome : sure the man is mad,

Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me :

Suf. I'll win this Lady Margaret. For whom ?
 VVhy for my King : Tush, that's a wooden thing.

Mar. He talks of wood : It is some Carpenter.

Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,
 And peace established between these Realms.
 But there remains a scruple in that too :
 For though her Father be the King of Naples,
 Duke of Anjou and Main, yet is he poor,
 And our Nobility will scorn the match.

Mar. Hear ye Captain ? are you not at leisure ?

Suf. It shall be so, disdain they ne're so much :
Henry is youthfull, and will quickly yield.
 Madam, I have a secret to reveal.

Mar. VVhat though I be inthrall'd, he seems a Knight,
 And will not any way dishonour me.

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.

Mar. Perhaps I shall be rescu'd by the French,
 And then I need not crave his curtesie.

Suf. Sweet Madam, give me hearing in a cause.

Mar. Tush, women have been captivate ere now.

Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so ?

Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but Quid for Quo.

Suf. Say gentle Princeesse, would you not suppose
 Your bondage happy, to be made a Queen ?

Mar. To be a Queen in bondage, is more vile,
 Than is a slave, in base servility :
 For Princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall you,
 If happy Englands Royall King be free.

Mar. Why, what concerns his freedome unto me ?

Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's Queen,
 To put a Golden Scepter in thy hand,
 And set a precious Crown upon thy head,
 If thou wilt condescend to be my-----

Mar. What ?

Suf. His love.

Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.

Suf. No, gentle Madam, I unworthy am
 To wooe so fair a Dame to be his wife,
 And have no portion in the choyce my self.
 How say you, Madam, are you so content ?

Mar. And if my Father please, I am content.

Suf. Then call our Captains and our Colours forth,
 And Madam, at your Fathers Castle walls,
 We'll crave a parley to conferre with him.

Sound. Enter Reignier on the walls
 See Reignier see, thy daughter prisoner.

Reig. To whom ?

Suf. To me.

Reig. Suffolk, what remedy ?
 I am a Souldier, and unapt to weep,
 Or to exclaim on Fortunes ficklenesse.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough my Lord,
 Consent, and for thy Honour give consent,
 Thy Daughter shall be wedded to my King,
 Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto :
 And this her easie held imprisonment,
 Hath gain'd thy Daughter Princely liberty.

Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks ?

Suf. Fair Margaret knows,
 That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or fain.

Reig. Upon thy Princely warrant, I descend,
 To give thee answer of thy just demand.

Suf. And here I will expect thy comming.

Trumpets sound. Enter Reignier.

Reig. Welcome, brave Earl, into our Territories,
 Command in Anjou what your Honour pleases.

Suf. Thanks Reignier, happy for so sweet a Child,
 Fit to be made Companion with a King :
 What answer makes your Grace unto my suit ?

Reig. Since thou dost daign to wooe her little worth,
 To be the Princely Bride of such a Lord :
 Upon condition I may quietly

Enjoy mine own, the Country Main and Anjou,
 Free from oppression, or the stroke of War,
 My Daughter shall be Henry's, if he please.

Suf. That is her rancome, I deliver her,
 And those two Counties I will undertake
 Your Grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again in Henry's Royall name,
 As Deputy unto that gracious King,
 Give thee her hand for sign of plighted faith.

Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee Kingly thanks,
 Because this is in Traffick of a King.

And yet methinks I could be well content
 To be mine own Attorney in this case.

I'll over thee to England with this newes,
 And make this marriage to be solemniz'd :
 So farewell Reignier, set this Diamond safe
 In golden Pallaces as it becomes.

Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace
 The Christian Prince King Henry were he here.

Mar. Farewell my Lord, good wishes, praise, & prayers,
 Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret. She is going.

Suf. Farewell sweet Madam : but heark you Margaret,
 No Princely commendations to my King ?

Mar. Such commendations as becomes a Maid,
 A Virgin and his Servant, say to him.

Suf. Words sweetly plac'd, and modestly directed,
 But

But, Madam, I must trouble you again,
No loving Token to his Majesty?

Mar. Yes, my good Lord, a pure unspotted heart,
Never yet taint with love, I send the King.

Suf. And this withall.

Kisse her

Mar. That for thy self, I will not so presume,
To send such peevish Tokens to a King.

Suf. Oh wert thou for my self: but Suffolk stay,
Thou mayest not wander in that Labyrinth,
There Minotaurs, and ugly Treasons lurk.
Solicite Henry with her wondrous praise,
Bethink thee on her Virtues that surmount,
Made naturall Graces that extinguish Art,
Repeat their semblance often on the Seas,
That when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet,
Thou mayest bereave him of his wits with wonder. Exit.

Enter York, Warwick, Shepherd, Puzel.

Yor. Bring forth that Sorceresse condemn'd to burn.

Shep. Ah, Joan, this kills thy Fathers heart out-right,
Have I sought every Countrey far and near,
And now it is my chance to find thee out,
Must I behold thy timelesse cruell death:
Ah Joan, sweet Daughter, I'll die with thee.

Puz. Decrepit Miser, base ignoble Wretch,
I am descended of a gentler blood.
Thou art no Father, nor no Friend of mine.

Shep. Out, out: My Lords, and please you, 'tis not so,
I did beget her, all the Parish knows:
Her Mother liveth yet, can testifie

She was the first fruit of my Batch'lor-ship,

War. Gracelesse, wilt thou deny thy Parentage?

Yor. This argues what her kind of life hath been,
Wicked and vile, and so her death concludes.

Shep. Fie Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle:
God knows, thou art a collop of my flesh,
And for thy sake have I shed many a tear:
Deny me not, I pray thee, gentle Joan.

Puz. Pezant avant, you have suborn'd this man
Of purpose, to obscure my Noble birch.

Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a Noble to the Priest,
The morn that I was wedded to her Mother.

Kneel down and take my blessing, good my Girl.
Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time

Of thy nativity: I would the Milk
Thy Mother gave thee when thou suck'dst her brest,
Had bin a little Ratsbane for thy sake.

Or else, when thou didst keep my Lambs a field,
I wish some ravenous Wolf had eaten thee.

Dost thou deny thy Father, cursed Drab?

O burn her, burn her, hanging is too good.

Exit.

Yor. Take her away, for she hath liv'd too long,
To fill the world with vicious qualities.

Puz. First let me tell you whom you have condemn'd,
Not me, begotten of a Shepherd Swain,
But issued from the Progeny of Kings.
Virtuous and Holy, chosen from above,
By inspiration of Celestiall Grace,
To work exceeding miracles on earth.
I never had to do with wicked Spirits,
But you that are polluted with your lusts,
Stain'd with the guiltlesse blood of Innocents,
Corrupt and tainted with a thousand Vices:
Because you want the grace that others have,
You judge it straight a thing impossible
To compasse Wonders, but by help of Devils.

No misconceived, Joan of Aire hath been
A Vigin from her tender infancy,
Chaste, and immaculate, in very thought,
Whose Maiden-blood thus rigorously effus'd,
Will cry for vengeance at the Gates of heaven.

Yor. I, I: away with her to execution.

War. And heark ye sirs: because she is a Maid,
Spare for no Faggots, 'et there be enow:
Place Barrells of pitch upon the fatal stake,
That so her torture may be shortned.

Puz. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?
Then Joan discover thine infirmity,
That warranteth by Law, to be thy priviledge.
I am with Child, ye bloody Homicides:
Murther not then the Fruit within my Womb,
Although ye hale me to a violent death.

Yor. Now heaven forfend, the holy Maid with Child?

War. The greatest miracle that ere ye wrought:
Is all your strict precisenesse come to this?

Yor. She and the Dolphin have bin jugling,
I did imagine what would be her refuge.

War. Well, go to, we will have no Bastards live,
Especially since Charles must Father it.

Puz. You are deceiv'd, my child is none of his,
It was Alanfon that enjoy'd my love.

Yor. Alanfon, that notorious Macheville?
It dies, and if it had a thousand lives.

Puz. Oh give me leave, I have deluded you,
'Twas neither Charles, nor yet the Duke I nam'd,
But Reignier King of Naples that prevail'd.

War. A married man! that's most intollerable.

Yor. Why here's a Girl: I think she knows not well
(There were so many) whom she may accuse.

War. It's a sign she had been liberall and free.

Yor. And yet forseeth she is a Virgin pure.
Strumpet, thy words condemn thy Brat, and thee.
Use no intreaty, for it is in vain.

Puz. Then lead me hence: with whom I leave my curse.
May never glorious Sun reflex his beams
Upon the Country where you make abode:
But darknesse, and the gloomy shade of death
Inviron you, till Mischief and Despair,
Drive you to break your necks, or hang your selves. Exit.

Enter Cardinall.

Yor. Break thou in pieces, and consume to ashes,
You foul accursed minister of Hell.

Car. Lord Regent, I do greet your Excellence
With Letters of Commission from the King.
For know my Lords, the States of Christendome,
Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous broyles,
Have earnestly implor'd a generall peace,
Betwixt our Nation, and th'aspiring French;
And here at hand, the Dolphin and his Train
Approacheth, to conferre about some matters.

Yor. Is all our travell turn'd to this effect,
After the slaughter of so many Peers,
So many Captains, Gentlemen, and Souldiers,
That in this quarrell have been overthrown,
And sold their Bodies for their Countries benefit,
Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?
Have we not lost most part of all the Towns,
By treason, falshood, and by treachery,
Our great Progenitors had conquered?
Oh Warwick, Warwick, I foresee with grief
The utter losse of all the Realm of France.

War. Be patient York, if we conclude a Peace,

It shall be with such strict and severe Covenants,
As little shall the French-men gain thereby.

Enter Charles, Alançon, Bastard, Reignier.

Char. Since Lords of England, it is thus agreed,
That peacefull truce shall be proclaim'd in France,
VVe come to be informed by your selves,
VVhat the conditions of that league must be.

Tor. Speak Winchester, for boyling choller chokes
The hollow passage of my poyson'd voyce,
By sight of those our balefull enemies.

Win. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:
That in regard King Henry gives consent,
Of meer compassion, and of lenity,
To ease your Country of distresfull VVar,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitfull peace,
You shall become true Liegemen to his Crown.
And Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thy self,
Thou shalt be plac'd as Viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy Regall dignity.

Alan. Must he be then as shadow of himself?
Adorn his Temples with a Coronet,
And yet in substance and authority,
Retain but priuiledge of a private man?
This proffer is absurd, and reasonlesse.

Char. 'Tis known already that I am possesse
With more then half the Gallian Territories,
And therein reuerenc'd for their lawfull King.
Shall I for lucre of the rest un-vanquish't,
Detract so much from that prerogative,
As to be call'd but Viceroy of the whole?
No, Lord Ambassadour, I'll rather keep
That which I have, than coveting for more,
Be cast from possibility of all.

Tor. Insulting Charles, hast thou by secret means
Us'd intercession to obtain a league,
And now the matter grows to compremize,
Stand'st thou aloof upon Comparison.
Either accept the Title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our King,
And not of any challenge of Desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant Warres.

Reig. My Lord, you do not well, in obstinacy
To cavill in the course of this Contract:
If once it be neglected, ten to one
We shall not find like opportunity.

Alan. To say the truth, it is your policy,
To save your Subjects from such massacre
And ruthlesse slaughters as are daily seen
By our proceeding in Hostility.
And therefore take this contract of a Truce,
Although you break it, when your pleasure serves,

War. How say'st thou Charles?
Shall our Condition stand?

Char. It shall:
Onely reserv'd, you claim no interest
In any of our Towns of Garrison.

Tor. Then swear Allegiance to his Majesty,
As thou art Knight, never to disobey,
Nor be Rebellious to the Crown of England,
Thou nor thy Nobles, to the Crown of England.
So, now dismisse your Army when ye please:
Hang up your Ensigns, let your Drummes be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace.

Exeunt.

*Enter Suffolk in conference with the King,
Glocester, and Exeter.*

King. Your wondrous rare description (noble Earl)
Of beauctious Margaret hath astonish'd me:
Her virtues graced with externall gifts,
Do breed Loves settled passions in my heart,
And like as rigour with tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest Hulk against the tide,
So am I driven by breath of her Renown,
Either to suffer Shipwrack, or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her Love.

Suf. Tush, my good Lord, this superficial tale,
Is but a preface to her worthy praise:
The chief perfections of that lovely Dame,
(Had I sufficient skill to utter them)
Would make a volume of inticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit.
And which is more, she is not so Divine,
So full repleat with choyce of all delights,
But with as humble lowlinesse of mind,
She is content to be at your command:
Command I mean, of virtuous chaste intents,
To love, and honour Henry as her Lord.

King. And otherwise, will Henry ne're presume:
Therefore, my Lord Protector, give consent,
That Margaret may be Englands Royall Queen.

Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sin,
You know (my Lord) your Highnesse is betroth'd
Unto another Lady of esteem,
How shall we then dispence with that contract,
And not deface your Honour with reproach?

Suf. As doth a Ruler with unlawfull Oathes,
Or one that at a Triumph, having vow'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the Lists
By reason of his Adversaries oddes,
A poor Earl's Daughter is unequall oddes,
And therefore may be broke without offence.

Glo. Why, what (I pray) is Margaret more than Her Father is no better than an Earl, (that)
Although in glorious Titles he excell.

Suf. Yes, my good Lord, her Father is a King,
The King of Naples and Jerusalem,
And of such great authority in France,
As his alliance will confirm our peace,
And keep the French-men in Allegiance.

Glo. And so the Earl of Arminack may do,
Because he is near Kinsman unto Charles.

Exet. Beside, his wealth doth warrant liberall dower,
Where Reignier sooner will receive than give.

Suf. A Dower, my Lords? disgrace not so your King,
That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth, and not for perfect Love.
Henry is able to enrich his Queen,
And not to seek a Queen to make him rich:
So worthlesse Pezants bargain for their Wives,
As Market-men for Oxen, Sheep, or Horse.
But marriage is a matter of more worth,
Then to be dealt in by Attorney-ship:
Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affects,
Must be companion of his Nuptiall bed.
And therefore, Lords, since he affects her most,
Most of all these reasons bindeth us,
In our opinions she should be preferr'd,
For what is Wedlock forced, but a Hell,
An age of discord and continuall strife?

Whereas

Whereas the contrary bringeth forth blisse,
And is a pattern of Celestiall peace.
Whom should we match with Henry, being a King,
But Margaret, that is Daughter to a King?
Her peerlesse feature, joynd with her birch,
Approves her fit for none, but for a King.
Her valiant courage, and undaunted spirit,
(More then in women comonly is seen)
Will answer our hope in issue of a King:
For Henry, Son unto a Conquerour,
Is likely to beget more Conquerors,
If with a Lady of so high resolve,
(As is fair Margaret) he be linked in Love.
Then yield my Lords, and here conclude with me,
That Margaret shall be Queen, and none but she.

King. Whether it be through force of your report,
My Noble Lord of Suffolk: Or for that
My tender youth was never yet attain
With any passion of inflaming Love,
I cannot tell: but this I am assur'd,
I feel such sharp dissention in my breast,
Such fierce alarums both of Hope and Fear,
As I am sick with working of my thoughts.

Take therefore shipping, post, my Lord, to France,
Agree to any covenants, and procure
That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
To crosse the Seas to England, and be Crown'd
King Henry's faithfull and annointed Queen.
For your expences and sufficient charge,
Among the people gather up a tenth.
Be gone I say, for till you do return,
I rest perplexed with a thousand Cares.
And you (good Uncle) banish all offence:
If you do censure me, by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excuse
This sudden execution of my will,
And so conduct me, where from company,
I may revolve and ruminare my grief. Exit.

Glo. I, grief I fear me, both at first and last.

Exit Gloucester.

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd, and thus he goes
As did the youthfull Paris once to Greece,
With hope to find the like event in love,
But prosper better than the Trojan did:
Margaret shall now be Queen, and rule the King:
But I will rule both her, the King, and Realm. Exit.

F I N I S.

The

The second Part of King HENRY the Sixth,

With the Death of the good Duke HUMPHREY.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Flourish of Trumpets : Then Hoboyes.

Enter King, Duke Humfrey, Salisbury, Warwick, and Beauford on the one side.

The Queen, Suffolk, York, Sommerfet, and Buckingham on the other.

Suffolk,

As by your high Imperiall Majesty,
I had in charge at my depart from France,
As Procurator to your Excellence,
To marry Princes Margaret for your Grace;

So in the famous ancient City, Toures,
In presence of the Kings of France, and Sicill,
The Dukes of Orleanse, Calaber, Britaigne, Alanson,
Seven Earls, twelve Barons, & twenty reverend Bishops
I have perform'd my Taske, and was espous'd,
And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In sight of England, and her Lordly Peers,
Deliver up my Title in the Queen
To your most gracious hand, that are the Substance
Of that great Shadow I did represent :
The happiest Gift, that ever Marquesse gave,
The Fairest Queen that ever King receiv'd.

King. Suffolk arise. Welcome Queen Margaret,
I can expresse no kinder sign of Love
Then this kind Kisse : O Lord, that lends me life,
Lend me a heart repleat with thankfulnessse :
For thou hast given me in this beauteous Face
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of Love unite our thoughts.

Que. Great King of England, and my gracious Lord,
The mutuall conference that my mind hath had,
By day, by night ; waking, and in my dreams,
In Courtly company, or at my Beads,
With you mine Alder liefest Sovereign,
Makes me the bolder to salute my King,
With ruder termes, such as my wit affoords,
And over-joy of heart doth minister.

King. Her sight did revivsh, but her grace in Speech,
Her words yclad with wisdomes Majesty,
Make me from wondring, fall to weeping Joyes,
Such is the fulnesse of my hearts content.
Lords, with one cheerfull voyce, welcome my Love.

All kneel. Long live Q. Margaret, Englands happines.

Quee. We thank you all.

Flourish.

Suf. My Lord Protector, so it please your Grace,
Here are the Articles of contracted peace,
Between our Sovereign, and the French King Charles,
For eighteen moneths concluded by consent.

*Glo. Reads. Imprimis, It is agreed between the French
King Charles, and William de la Pole, Marquesse of Suffolk, Ambassador for Henry King of England,
That the said Henry shall espouse the Lady Margares,
Daughter unto Reigner King of Naples, Sicillia, and Jerusalem, and Crown her Queen of England, ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing.*

Item, That the Duchy of Anjou, and the County of Main, shall be released & delivered to the K. her father.

King. Uncle, how now ?

Glo. Pardon me gracious Lord,
Some sudden quallm hath struck me at the heart,
And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no further.

King. Uncle of Winchester, I pray read on.

Win. Item, It is further agreed between them, That the Dutchesse of Anjou and Main, shall be released and delivered over to the King her Father, and she sent over of the King of Englands own proper Cost and Charges, without having any Dowry.

King. They please us well. Lord Marques kneel down,
We here create thee the first Duke of Suffolk,
And girt thee with the Sword. Cousin of York,
We here discharge your Grace from being Regent
I'h parts of France, till terme of eighteen Moneths
Be full expir'd. Thanks Uncle Winchester,
Gloster, York, Buckingham, and Sommerfet,
Salisbury, and Warwick,
We thank you all for this great favour done,
In entertainment to my Princely Queen.
Come, let us in, and with all speed provide
To see her Coronation be perform'd.

*Exeunt King, Queen, and Suffolk.
Manent the rest.*

Glo. Brave Peers of England, Pillars of the State,
To you Duke Humphrey must unload his grief :
Your grief, the common grief of all the Land.
What ? did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His Valour, Coyn, and People in the Wars ?
Did he so often lodge in open field,
In Winters cold, and Summers parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance ?
And did my Brother Bedford toy his wits,

To

To keep by policy what Henry got :

Have you your selves, Sommerfet, Buckingham,
Brave Tork, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
Receiv'd deep scarres in France and Normandy :
Or hath mine Uncle Beauford, and my self,
With all the Learned Council of the Realm,
Studied so long, sat in the Council-house,
Early and late, debating to and fro
How France and French-men might be kept in awe,
And hath his Hignesse in his infancy,
Crowned in Paris in despite of foes,
And shall these Labours, and these Honours die ?
Shall Henry's Conquest, Bedfords vigilance,
Your Deeds of War, and all our Counsell die !
O Peers of England, shamefull is this League,
Fatall this Marriage, cancelling your Fame,
Blotting your names from Books of memory,
Racing the Characters of your Renown,
Defacing Monuments of Conquer'd France,
Undoing all, as all had never bin.

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse ?
This peroration with such circumstance :

For France, 'tis ours ; and we will keep it still.

Glo. I, Uncle, we will keep it, if we can :
But now it is impossible we should.

Suffolk, the new made Duke that rules the rostr,
Hath given the Dutchy of Anjou and Main,
Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style
Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sal. Now by the death of him that di'd for all,
These Counties were the Keyes of Normandy :
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son ?

War. For grief that they are past recovery.
For were there hope to conquer them again,
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no teares.
Anjou and Main ? My self did win them both :
Those Provinces, these Armes of mine did conquer,
And are the Cities that I got with wounds,
Deliver'd up again with peacefull words ?

Mort Dieu.

Tor. For Suffolks Duke, may he be suffocate,
That dimines the Honour of this Warlike Isle :
France should have torn and rent my very heart,
Before I would have yielded to this League.
I never read but Englands Kings have had Large summes of Gold, and Dowries with their wives,
And our King Henry gives away his own,
To match with her that brings no vantages.

Hum. A proper jest, and never heard before,
That Suffolk should demand a whole Fifteenth,
For Costs and Charges in transporting her :
She should have staid in France, and starv'd in France
Before-----

Car. My Lord of Gloster, now ye grow too hot,
It was the pleasure of my Lord the King.

Hum. My Lord of Winchester, I know your mind.
'Tis not my Speeches that you do mislike :
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye,
Rancour will out, proud Prelate, in thy face
I see thy fury : If I longer stay,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings :
Lordings farewell, and say when I am gone,
I prophesied, France will be lost ere long. Exit Humph.

Car. So, there goes our Protector in a rage :

'Tis known to you he is mine enemy :
Nay more, an enemy unto you all,

And no great friend, I fear me, to the King ;
Consider Lords, he is the next of blood,
And heir-pparant to the English Crown :
Had Henry got an Empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy Kingdomes of the West,
There's reason he should be displeas'd at it :
Look to it Lords, let not his smoothing words
Bewitch your hearts, be wise an circumspect.
What though the common people favour him,
Calling him, Humphrey the good Duke of Gloster,
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voyce,
Jesu maintain your Royall Excellence,
With God preserve the good Duke Humphrey.
I fear me, Lords, for all this flattering glosse,
He will be found a dangerous Protector.

Buc. Why should he then protect our Sovereign ?
He being of age to govern of himself.

Cousin of Sommerfet, joyn you with me.
And altogether with the Duke of Suffolk,
We'll quickly hoysse Duke Humphrey from his seat.

Car. This weighty businesse will not brook delay,
I'll to the Duke of Suffolk presently. Exit Cardinal.

Sorn, Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphreys pride
And greatnesse of his place be grief to us,
Yet let us watch the haughty Cardinal,
His insolence is more intollerable

Then all the Princes in the Land beside,
If Gloster be displac'd, he'll be Protector.

Buc. O thou, or I, Sommerfet, will be Protector,
Despite Duke Humphrey, or the Cardinall.

Exit Buckingham, and Sommerfet.

Sal. Pride went before, Ambition follows him.
While these do labour for their own preferment,
Behoves it us to labour for the Realm.
I never saw but Humphrey Duke of Gloster,
Did bear him like a Noble Gentleman :
Oft have I seen the haughty Cardinall,
More like a Souldier then a man o'th Church,
As stout and proud as he were Lord of all,
Swear like a Ruffian, and demean himself
Unlike the Ruler of a Common-weal.

Warwick my son, the comfort of my age,
Thy deeds, thy plainnesse, and thy house-keeping,
Hath won the greatest favour of the Commons,
Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey.
And Brother Tork, thy acts in Ireland,
In bringing them to civil Discipline :
Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,
When thou wert Regent for our Sovereign,
Have made thee fear'd and honour'd of the people,
Joyn we together for the publick good,
In what we can, to bridle and suppress
The pride of Suffolk, and the Cardinall,
With Sommerfets and Buckinghams ambition,
And as we may, cherish Duke Humphreys deeds,
While they do tend the profit of the Land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the Land,
And common profit of his Country.

Tor. And so sayes Tork,
For he hath greatest cause.

Sal. Then lets make haste away,
And look unto the main ?

Warw. Vnto the main ?

Oh Father, Main is lost,
That Main, which by main force Warwick did win
And would have kept, so long as breath did last :

Main

Main-chance Father you meant, but I meant Main,
Which I will win from France, or else be slain.

Exit Warwick and Salisbury. Manet York.

York. Anjou and Main are given to the French,
Paris is lost, the state of Normandy
Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone :
Suffolk concluded on the Articles,
The Peers agreed, and Henry was well pleas'd,
To change two Dukedomes for a Duke's fair Daughter.
I cannot blame them all, what is't to them ?
'Tis thine they give away, and not their own.
Pirates may make cheap penniworths of their pillage,
And purchase Friends, and give to Curtezans,
Still revelling like Lords till all be gone.
While as the silly owner of the goods
Weeps over them, and wrings his haplesse hands,
And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof,
While all is shar'd, and all is born away,
Ready to starve and dare not touch his own.
So York must sit, and fret, and bite his tongue,
While his own Lands are bargain'd for, and sold :
He thinks the Realms of England, France, and Ireland,
Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood,
As did the fatal brand Althea burnt,
Unto the Princes heart of Calidon :
Anjou and Main both given unto the French ?
Cold newes for me : for I had hope of France,
Even as I have of fertile Englands soil.
A day will come, when York shall claim his own,
And therefore I will take the Neville parts,
And make a shew of love to proud Duke Humphrey,
And when I spy advantage, claim the Crown,
For that's the golden mark I seek to hit :
Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,
Nor hold the Scepter in his childish Fist,
Nor wear the Diadem upon his head,
Whose Church-like humours fits not for a Crown.
Then York be still a while till time do serve :
Watch thou, and wake when others be asleep,
To prye into the secrets of the State,
Till Henry sussetting in joyes of love,
With his new Bride, and Englands dear bought Queen,
And Humphrey with the Peers be faine at jarres.
Then will I raise aloft the Milk-white Rose,
With whose sweet smell the aire shall be perfum'd,
And in my Standard bear the Armes of York,
To grapple with the house of Lancaster,
And force perforce I'll make him yield the Crown,
Whose Bookish Rule hath pull'd fair England down.

Exit York.

Enter Duke Humphrey, and his Wife. Elianor.

Eli. Why droops my Lord, like over-ripen'd Corn,
Hanging the head at Ceres plenteous load ?
Why doth the great Duke Humphrey knit his brows,
As frowning at the Favours of the World ?
Why are thine eyes fixt to the sullen earth,
Gazing on that which seems to dimme thy sight ?
What seest thou there ? King Henry's Diadem,
Inchac'd with all the Honours of the World ?
If so, gaze on, and grovell on thy face,
Untill thy head be circled with the same.
Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious Gold.
What, is't too short ? I'll lengthen it with mine.
And having both together heav'd it up,
Wee'll both together lift our heads to heaven,
And never more abase our fight so low,

As to vouchsafe one glance upon the ground.

Hum. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy Lord,
Banish the Canker of ambitious thoughts :
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Against my King and Nephew, virtuous Henry,
Be my last breathing in this mortall world.

My troublous dreames this night, doth make me sad.

Eli. What dream'd my Lord, tell me, and I'll requite
With sweet rehearfall of my mornings dream ? (it,

Hum. Me thought this staffe, mine Office-badge in Court,

Was broke in twain : by whom, I have forgot,
But as I think, it was by th' Cardinall,
And on the pieces of the broken Wand
Were plac'd the heads of Edmond Duke of Sommerfet,
And William de la Pole first Duke of Suffolk.
This was the dream, what it doth bode God knows.

Eli. Tut, this was nothing but an argument,
That he that breaks a stick of Glosters Grove,
Shall lose his head for his presumption.
But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet Duke :
Me thought I sate in seat of Majesty,
In the Cathedrall Church of Westminster,
And in that Chair where Kings & Queens were Crown'd,
Where Henry and Dame Margaret kneel'd to me,
And on my head did set the Diadem.

Hum. Nay Elianor, then must I chide out-right :
Presumptuous Dame, ill-nurtur'd Elianor,
Art thou not second Woman in the Realm ?
And the Protectors wife below'd of him ?
Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Above the reach or compasse of thy thought ?
And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,
To tumble down thy husband, and thy self,
From top of Honour, to Disgraces feet ?
Away from me, and let me hear no more.

Eli. What, what, my Lord, are you so chollerick
With Elianor, for telling but her dream ?
Next time I'll keep my dreams unto my self,
And not be check'd.

Hum. Nay be not angry, I am pleas'd again.

Enter Messenger.

Mess. My Lord Protector, 'tis his Highnesse pleasure,
You do prepare to ride unto S. Albans,
Whereas the King and Queen do mean to Hawk.

Hu. I go: Come Nell, thou wilt ride with us ? Ex. Hu.

Eli. Yes, my good Lord, I'll follow presently.

Follow I must, I cannot go before,
While Gloster bears this base and humble mind.
Were I a Man, a Duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling blocks,
And smoothe my way upon their headlesse necks.
And being a woman, I will not be slack
To play my part in Fortunes Pageant.

Where are you there ? Sir John ; nay fear not man,
We are alone, here's none but thee and I. Enter Hume.

Hume. Jesus preserve your Royall Majesty.

Eli. What saist thou ? Majesty : I am but Grace.

Hume. But by the grace of God, and Humes advice,
Your Graces Title shall be multipli'd.

Eli. VVhat saist thou Man ? Hast thou as yet confer'd
VVith Margery Jordan the cunning VVitch,
VVith Roger Bullingbrook the Conjuror ?
And will they undertake to do me good ?

Hume. This they have promised, to shew your Highness
A Spirit rais'd from depth of under ground,

That

That shall make answer to such Questions,
As by your Grace shall be propounded him.

Elianos. It is enough, I'll think upon the Questions:
When from Saint Albans we do make return;
We'll see those things effected to the full.

Here Hume, take this reward, make merry man
With thy Confederates in this weighty cause.

Exit Elianos.

Hum. Hume must make merry with the Dutchesse Marry and shall: but how now, Sir John Hume? (Gold:
Seal up your Lips, and give no words but Mum,
The businesse asketh silent secrecy.

Dame Elianos gives Gold, to bring the Witch:
Gold cannot come amisse, were she a Devil.
Yet have I Gold flies from another Coast:
I dare not say, from the rich Cardinall,
And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk;

Yet I do find it so: for to be plain,
They (knowing Dame Elianos's humour)
Have hired me to under-mine the Dutchesse,
And buzze these Conjurations in her brain.

They say, a crafty Knave do's need no Broker.
Yet am I Suffolk and the Cardinalls Broker.

Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near
To call them both a pair of crafty Knaves.

Well, so it stands: and thus I fear at last.

Humes Knavery will be the Dutchesse Wrack,
And her attainure will be Humphreys fall:

Sort how it will, I shall have Gold for all.

Exit.

*Enter three or four Petitioners, the Armors
Man being one.*

1. Pet. My Masters, let's stand close, my Lord Protectoeur will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our Supplications in the Quill.

2. Pet. Marry the Lord protect him, for he's a good man, Jesu blesse him.

Enter Suffolk, and Queen

Peter. Here a comes me thinks, and the Queen with him: I'll be the first sure.

2. Pet. Come back fool, this is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my Lord Protector.

Suff. How now fellow: would'st any thing with me?

1. Pet. I pray, my Lord, pardon me, I took ye for my Lord Protector.

Quee. To my Lord Protector? are your Supplications to his Lordship? let me see them: what is thine?

1. Pet. Mine is, and't please your Grace, against John Goodman, my Lord Cardinals Man, for keeping my House, and Lands, and Wife and all from me.

Suff. Thy Wife too? that's some Wrong indeed.
What's yours? what's here? against the Duke of Suf- folk, for enclosing the Commons of Melford. How now, Sir Knave?

2. Pet. Alas, Sir, I am but a poor Petitioner of our whole Township.

Pet. Against my Master Thomas Horner, for saying,
That the Duke of York was rightfull Heir to the Crown.

Quee. What say'st thou? Did the Duke of York say,
he was rightfull Heir to the Crown?

Pet. That my Mistresse was? No forsooth: my Master said, that he was; and that the King was an Usurper.

Suf. Who is there?

Enter Servant.

Take this fellow in, and send for his Master with a Pur-servant presently: we'll hear more of your matter before the King.

Exit.

Quee. And as for you that love to be protected
Under the wings of our Protector's Grace,
Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

Tear the Supplication.

Away, base Cullions: Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone.

Exit.

Quee. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise?

Is this the Fashions in the Court of England?

Is this the Government of Britains I'll?

And this the Royalty of Albions King?

What, shall King Henry be a Pupill still,

Under the surly Glosters Governance?

And I a Queen in Title and in Stile,

And must be made a Subject to a Duke?

I tell thee Pool, when in the City Tours

Thou rann'st a tilt in honour of my Love,

And stol'st away the Ladies hearts of France;

I thought King Henry had resembled thee,

In Courage, Courtship, and Proportion:

But all his mind is bent to holiness,

To number Ave-Maries on his Beads:

His Champions, are the Prophets and Apostles,

His Weapons, holy Saws of sacred Writ,

His Study is his Tilt-yard, and his Loves

Are brazen Images of Canonized Saints.

I would the Colledge of the Cardinalls

Would chuse him Pope, and carry him to Rome,

And set the Triple Crown upon his head;

That were a State fit for his Holiness.

Suff. Madam, be patient: as I was cause

Your Highness came to England, so will I

In England work your Graces full content.

Quee. Beside the haught Protector, have we Beauford
The imperious Church-man; Somerset, Buckingham,
And grumbling York: and not the least of these,
But can do more in England then the King.

Suff. And he of these that can do most of all,

Cannot do more in England then the Nevills:

Salisbury and Warwick are no simple Peers.

Quee. Not all these Lords do vex me half so much,

As that proud Dame, the Lord Protector's Wife:

She sweeps it through the Court with troupes of Ladies,

More like an Emprise, then Duke Humphreys Wife:

Strangers in Court, do take her for the Queen:

She bears a Dukes revenues on her back,

And in her heart she scorns our Poverty:

Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her?

Contempruous base-born Callot as she is,

She vaunted 'mongst her Minions 'tother day,

The very train of her worst wearing Gown,

Was better worth then all my Fathers Lands,

Till Suffolk gave two Dukedomes for his Daughter.

Suff. Madam, my self have lim'd a Bush for her,

And plac'd a Quier of such enticing Birds,

That she will light to listen to the Lays,

And never mount to trouble you again.

So let her rest: and, Madam, list to me,

For I am bold to counsell you in this;

Although we fancy not the Cardinall,

Yet must we joyn with him, and with the Lords,

Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace.

As for the Duke of York, this late Complaint
Will make but little for his benefit :
So one by one we'll weed them all at last,
And you your self shall steer the happy Helm. Exit.

Enter the King, Duke Humphrey, Cardinall, Buckingham, York, Salisbury, Warwick, and the Dutchesse.

King. For my part, Noble Lords, I care not which,
Or Sommerfet, or York, all's one to me.

Yor. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,
Then let him be deny'd the Regent-ship.

Som. If Sommerfet be unworthy of the Place,
Let York be Regent, I will yield to him.

Warw. Whether your Grace be worthy, yea or no,
Dispute not that, York is the worthier.

Card. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.

Warw. The Cardinall's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.

War. Warwick may live to be the best of all.

Salisb. Peace Son, and shew some reason Buckingham,
Why Sommerfet should be prefer'd in this ?

Quee. Because the King forsooth will have it so.

Hum. Madam, the King is old enough himself
To give his Censure : These are no Womens matters.

Quee. If he be old enough, what needs your Grace
To be Protector of his Excellence ?

Humph. Madam, I am Protector of the Realm,
And at his pleasure will resign my Place.

Suff. Resign it then, and leave thine insolence,
Since thou wert King, as who is King, but thou ?
The Common-wealth hath daily run to wrack,
The Dolphin hath prevail'd beyond the Seas,
And all the Peers and Nobles of the Realm
Have been as Bond-men to thy Sovereignty.

Car. The Commons hast thou rackt, the Clergies Bags
Are lank and lean with thy Extortions.

Som. Thy sumptuous Buildings, and thy Wives Attire
Have cost a masse of publick Treasure.

Buck. Thy Cruelty in execution
Upon Offenders, hath exceeded Law,
And left thee to the mercy of the Law.

Quee. Thy sale of Offices and Towns in France,
If they were known, as the suspect is great,
Would make the quickly hop without thy Head.

Exit Humphrey.
Give me my Fan : what, Minion, can ye not ?

She gives the Dutchesse a box on the ear.

I cry you mercy, Madam : was it you ?

Dutch. Was't I ? yea, I it was, proud French-woman :
Could I come near your Beauty with my Nails,
I could set my ten Commandements in your face.

King. Sweet Aunt be quiet, 'twas against her will.

Dutch. Against her will, good King ? look to't in time,
She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a Baby :
Though in this place most Master wears no Breeches,
She shall not strike Dame Elleanor unreveng'd.

Exit Elleanor.
Buck. Lord Cardinall, I will follow Elleanor,
And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds :
She's tickled now, her Fume can need no spurres,
She'll gallop far enough to her destruction.

Exit Buckingham.

Enter Humphrey.

Humph. Now, Lords, my Choller being over-blown,
With walking once about the Quadrangle,
I come to talk of Common-wealth Affaires.

As for your spightfull false Objections,
Prove them, and I lye open to the Law :
But God in mercy so deal with my Soul,
As I in Duty love my King and Countrey.
But to the matter that we have in hand :
I say, my Sovereign, York is meetest man
To be your Regent in the Realm of France.

Suff. Before we make election, give me leave
To shew some reason, of no little force,
That York is most unmeet of any man.

York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet.
First, for I cannot flatter thee in Pride :

Next, if I be appointed for the Place,
My Lord of Sommerfet will keep me here,
Without Discharge, Money, or Furniture,
Till France be won into the Dolphin's hands.
Last time I danc't attendance on his will,
Till Paris was besieg'd, famisht, and lost.

Warw. That can I witnesse, and a fouler fact
Did never Traytor in the Land commit.

Suff. Peace head-strong Warwick.

Warw. Image of Pride, why should I hold my peace ?

Enter Armorer and his Man.

Suff. Because here is a man accus'd of Treason,
Pray God the Duke of York excuse himself.

York. Doth any one accuse York for a Traytor ?

King. What mean'st thou, Suffolk ? tell me, what are these ?

Suff. Please it your Majesty, this is the man
That doth accuse his Master of High Treason ;
His words were these : That Richard, Duke of York,
Was rightfull Heir unto the English Crown,
And that you Majesty was an Usurper.

King. Say man, were these thy words ?

Armo. And't shall please your Majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter : God is my witnesse, I am falsly accus'd by the Villain.

Peter. By these ten bones, my Lords, he did speak them to me in the Garret one Night, as we were scowring my Lord of York's Armour.

York. Base Dunghill Villain, and Mechanicall,
I'll have thy Head for this thy Traytors speech :
I do beseech your Royall Majesty,
Let him have all the rigour of the Law.

Ar. Alas, my Lord, hang me if ever I spake the words :
my accuser is my Prentice, and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his Knees he would be even with me : I have good witnesse of this, therefore I beseech your Majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a Villains accusation.

King. Uncle, what shall we say to this in Law ?

Humph. This doom, my Lord, if I may judge :
Let Sommerfet be Regent o're the French,
Because in York this breeds suspicion :
And let these have a day appointed them
For single Combat, in convenient place,
For he hath witnesse of his servants malice :
This is the Law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom.

Som.

Som. I humbly thank your Royal Majesty.

Armourer. And I accept the Combate willingly.

Peter. Alas, my Lord, I cannot fight; for God's sake pittie my case: the spight of my man prevaileth against me. O Lord have mercy upon me, I shall never be able to fight a blow: O Lord my heart.

Humf. Sirrha, or you must fight, or else be hang'd.

King. Away with them to Prison: and the day of Combat, shall be the last of the next moneth. Come Somerſet, we'll see thee sent away.

Flourish.

Exeunt.

Enter the Witch, the two Priests, and Bullingbrook.

Hume. Come, my Masters, the Ducheſs I tell you expects performance of your promises.

Bulling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided: will her Ladiship behold and hear our Exorcismes?

Hume. I, what else? fear you not her courage.

Bulling. I have heard her reported to be a Woman of an invincible spirit: but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while we be busie below; and so I pray you go in God's Name, and leave us.

Exit Hume.

Mother Jordan, be you prostrate, and grovel on the Earth; John Southwell read you, and let us to our work.

Enter Elianor aloft.

Elian. Well said, my Masters, and welcome all: To this geer, the sooner the better.

Bul. Patience, good Lady, Wizards know their times: Deep Night, dark Night, the silent of the Night, The time of Night when Troy was set on fire, The times when Screech-owls cry, and Bandogs howle; And Spirits walk, and Ghosts break up their Graves: That time fits best the work we have in hand. Madam, sit you, and fear not: whom we raise, We will make fast within a hallow'd Verge.

Here doe the Ceremonies belonging, and make the Circle,

Bullingbrook or Southwell reads, Conjuro te, &c.

It Thunders and Lightens terribly: then the Spirit riseth.

Spirit. Adſum.

Witch. Aſmath, by the eternal God, Whose name and power thou tremblest at, Answer that I ask: for till thou speak, Thou shalt not pass from hence.

Spirit. Ask what thou wilt; that I had said, and done.

Bulling. First of the King: What shall of him become?

Spirit. The Duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose: But him out-live, and dye a violent death.

Bull. What Fates await the Duke of Suffolk?

Spirit. By Water shall he dye, and take his end.

Bull. What shall befall the Duke of Somerſet?

Spirit. Let him shun Castles.

Safer shall he be upon the sandie Plaines, Then where Castles mounted stand.

Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Bull. Descend to Darknes, and the burning Lake: False fiend avoid.

Thunder and Lightning.

Exit Spirit.

Enter the Duke of York, and the Duke of Buckingham with their Guard, and break in.

York. Lay hands upon these Traytors, and their trash: Beldame I think we watch you at an inch.

What Madam, are you there? the King and Common- Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains; (weale

My Lord Protector will, I doubt it not,

See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts.

Elian. Not half so bad as thine to England's King, Injurious Duke, that threaten'st where's no cause.

Buck. True Madam, none at all: what call you this?

Away with them, let them be clapt up close,

And kept asunder: you Madam shall with us.

Stafford take her to thee.

We'll see your Trinkets here all forth-comming.

All away.

Exit.

York. Lord Buckingham, me thinks you watch her

A pretty Plot, well chosen to build upon.

(well.

Now pray my Lord, let see the Devil's Writ.

What have we here?

Reads.

The Duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose:

But him out-live, and dye a violent death.

Why this is just: Aio Aecide Romanos vincere posse.

Well, to the rest:

Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?

By Water shall he dye, and take his end.

What shall betide the Duke of Somerſet?

Let him shun Castles,

Safer shall he be upon the sandie Plaines,

Then where Castles mounted stand.

Come, come, my Lords,

These Oracles are hardly attain'd,

And hardly understood.

The King is now in progresse towards Saint Albans,

With him, the husband of this lovely Lady:

Thither goes these Newes,

As fast as horse can carry them:

A sorry breakfast for my Lord Protector.

Buc. Your Grace shall give me leave, my Lord of York, To be the Poste, in hope of his reward.

York. At your pleasure, my good Lord.

VVho's within there, hoe?

Enter a Serving-man.

Invite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick

To sup with me to morrow Night. Away.

Exeunt.

Enter the King, Queen, Protector, Cardinal, and Suffolk, with Faulknors bellowing.

Queer. Believe me Lords, for flying at the Brook, I saw not better sport these seven year's day;

Yet by your leave, the winde was very high,

And ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.

King. But what a point, my Lord, your Faulcon made, And what a pitch she flew above the rest:

To see how God in all his Creatures works,

Yea Man and Birds are faine of climbing high.

Suff. No marvel, and it like your Majesty,

My Lord Protector's Hawks do towre so well,

They know their Master loves to be aloft,

And bears his thoughts above his Faulcon's Pitch.

Gloſt. My Lord, 'tis but a base ignoble minde,

That mounts no higher than a Bird can soar.

Q q

Card.

Card. I thought as much, he would be above the Clouds.

Gloft. I my Lord Cardinal, how think you by that? Were it not good your Grace could flie to Heaven?

King. The Treasury of everlasting Joy.

Card. Thy heaven is on Earth, thine Eyes and Thoughts Beat on a Crown, the Treasure of thy heart, Pernicious Protector, dangerous Peer, That smooth't it so with King and Commonweal.

Gloft. What Cardinal?

Is your Priest-hood grown peremptory?

Tantane animis Cælestibus ira, Church-men so hot?

Good Uncle hide such Malice:

With such Holiness can you do it?

Suff. No malice Sir, no more then well becomes So good a Quarrel, and so bad a Peer.

Gloft. As who, my Lord?

Suff. Why, as you, my Lord, An't like your lordly Lords Protectorship.

Gloft. Why Suffolk, England knows thine insolence.

Queen. And thy Ambition, Gloster.

King. I prethee peace, good Queen, And whet not on these too-too-furious Peers, For blessed are the Peace-makers on Earth

Card. Let me be blessed for the Peace I make Against this proud Protector with my Sword.

Gloft. Faith holy Uncle, would't were come to that.

Car. Marry, when thou dar'st.

Gloft. Make up no factious numbers for the matter, In thine own person answer thy abuse.

Card. I, where thou dar'st not peep:

And if thou dar'st, this Evening,

On the East side of the Grove.

King. How now, my Lords?

Card. Believe me, Cousin Gloster, Had not your man put up the Foul so suddenly, We had had more sport.

Come with thy two-hand Sword.

Gloft. True Uncle, are ye advis'd?

The East side of the Grove:

Cardinal, I am with you.

King. Why how now, Uncle Gloster?

Gloft. Talking of Hawking; nothing else, my Lord, Now by Gods Mother, Priest, I'll shave your Crowne for this, Or all my Fence shall fail.

Car. Medice teipsum, Protector see to't well, protect your self.

King. The Winds grow high, So do your Stomacks Lords:

How irksome is this Musick to my heart?

When such Strings jarre, what hope of Harmony?

I pray my Lords let me compound this strife.

Enter one crying a Miracle.

Gloft. What means this noise?

Fellow, what Miracle do'st thou proclaim?

One. A Miracle, a Miracle.

Suffolk. Come to the King, and tell him what Miracle.

One. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's Shrine, Within this half hour hath receiv'd his sight, A man that ne're saw in his life before.

King. Now God be prais'd, that to believing Soules Gives Light in Darknes, Comfort in Despair.

Enter the Mayor of Saint Albans, and his Brethren, bearing the man between two in a Chair.

Card. Here comes the Towns-men on procession, To present your Highness with the man.

King. Great is his comfort in this Earthly Vale, Although by his sight his sin be multiplyed.

Gloft. Stand by, my Masters, bring him near the King, His Highness pleasure is to talk with him.

King. Good-fellow, tell us here the circumstance, That we for thee may glorifie the Lord.

What, hast thou been long blind, and now restor'd?

Simp. Born blind, and't please your Grace.

Wife. I indeed was he.

Suff. What Woman is this?

Wife. His Wife, and't like your Worship.

Gloft. Had'st thou been his Mother, thou could'st have better told.

King. Where wert thou born?

Simp. At Barwick in the North, and't like your Grace.

King. Poor soul, God's goodness hath been great to thee: Let never Day or Night unhallowed pass, But still remember what the Lord hath done,

Queen. Tell me, good-fellow, Cam'st thou here by Chance, or of Devotion, To this holy Shrine?

Simp. God knows of pure Devotion, Being call'd a hundred times, and oftner, In my sleep, by good Saint Alban: Who said; Simon, come: come offer at my Shrine, And I will help thee.

Wife. Most true, forsooth: And many a time and oft my self have heard a Voice, To call him so.

Card. What, art thou lame?

Simp. I, God Almighty help me.

Suff. How cam'st thou so?

Simp. A fall off a Tree.

Wife. A Plum-tree, Master.

Gloft. How long hast thou been blind?

Simp. O born so, Master.

Gloft. What, and would'st climb a Tree?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

Wife. Too true, and bought his climbing very dear.

Gloft. 'Masse, thou lov'd'st Plummes well, that would'st venture so.

Simp. Alas, good Master, my Wife desired some Damsons, and made me climb, with danger of my Life.

Gloft. A subtil Knave, but yet it shall not serve: Let me see thine Eyes; wink now, now open them, In my opinion, yet thou seest not well.

Simp. Yes Master, clear as day, I thank God and Saint Alban.

Gloft. Say'st thou me so: what Colour is this Cloak of?

Simp. Red Master, Red as blood.

Gloft. Why that's well said: What Colour is my Gown of?

Simp. Black forsooth, Coal-black, as Jet.

King. Why then, thou know'st what Colour Jet is of?

Suff. And yet I think, Jet he did never see.

Gloft.

Gloft. But Cloakes and Gownes, before this day, a many.

Wife. Never before this day, in all his life.

Gloft. Tell me Sirrha, what's my Name?

Simp. Alas Master, I know not

Gloft. What's his Name?

Simp. I know not.

Gloft. Nor his?

Simp. No indeed, Master.

Gloft. What's thine own Name?

Simp. Saunders Simpcox, and if it please you, Master.

Gloft. Then Saunders, sit there,
The lying't Knave in Christendome,

If thou had'st been born blind,

Thou might'st as well have known all our Names,

As thus to name the several Colours we do wear.

Sight may distinguish Colours:

But suddenly to nominate them all,

It is impossible.

My Lords, Saint Alban here hath done a Miracle:

And would ye not think it, Cunning to be great,

That could restore this Cripple to his Legges again?

Simp. O Master, that you could?

Gloft. My Masters of Saint Alban,

Have you not Beadles in your Town,

And things call'd Whippes?

Mayor. Yes, my Lords, if it please your Grace.

Gloft. Then send for one presently.

Mayor. Sirrha, go fetch the Beadle hither straight.

Exit.

Gloft. Now fetch me a Stool hither by and by.

Now Sirrha, if you mean to save your self from Whipping, leap me over this Stool, and run away.

Simp. Alas Master, I am not able to stand alone:
You go about to torture me in vain.

Enter a Beadle with Whippes.

Gloft. Well Sir; we must have you find your Legges.
Sirrha Beadle, whip him 'till he leap over that same Stool.

Bead. I will, my Lord,
Come on Sirrha, off with your Doublet, quickly.

Simp. Alas Master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.

After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the Stool, and runnes away: and they follow, and cry, A Miracle.

King. O God, see'st thou this, and bearest so long;

Queen. It made me laugh, to see the Villain run.

Gloft. Follow the Knave, and take this Drab away.

Wife. Alas Sir, we did it for pure need.

Gloft. Let him be whipt through every Market Town
'Till they come to Barwick, from whence they came.

Exit.

Card. Duke Humphrey ha's done a Miracle to day.

Suff. True, made the Lame to leap, and flie away.

Gloft. But you have done more Miracles then I:
You made in a day, my Lord, whole Towns to flie.

Enter Buckingham.

King. What Tidings with our Cousin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold:
A sort of naughty persons, lewdly bent,
Under the Countenance and Confederacy

Of Lady Elienor, the Protector's wife,
The Ring-leader and head of all this Rour,
Have practis'd dangerously against your State,
Dealing with Witches and with Conjurers,
Whom we have apprehended in the Fact,
Raising up wicked Spirits from under ground,
Demanding of King Henrie's Life and Death,
And other of your Highness Privy Council,
As more at large your Grace shall understand.

Card. And so my Lord Protector, by this means
Your Lady is forth-coming, yet at London.
This newes I think hath turn'd your Weapon's edge;
'Tis like, my Lord, you will not keep your hour.

Gloft. Ambitious Church-man, leave to afflict my heart:
Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers;
And vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee,
Or to the meanest Groom.

King. O God, what mischiefs work the wicked ones?
Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby.

Queen. Gloster, see here the Tincture of thy Nest,
And look thy self be faultless, thou wert best.

Gloft. Madam, for my self, to heaven I do appeal,
How I have lov'd my King, and Common-weal:

And for my Wife, I know not how it stands,
Sorry am I to bear, what I have heard.

Noble she is: but if she have forgot

Honour and Virtue, and convers't with such,

As like to Pitch, defile Nobility;

I banish her my Bed, and Company,

And give her as a Prey to Law and Shame,

That hath dis-honoured Gloster's honest name.

King. Well, for this Night we will repose us here:

To morrow toward London, back again,

To look into this Business thorowly,

And call these foul Offenders to their answers;

And poise the Cause in Justice equal Scales,

Whose Beam stands sure, whose rightfull cause prevails.

Exeunt.

Enter York, Salisbury, and Warwick.

York. Now my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick,
Our simple Supper ended, give me leave,
In this close Walk, to satisfie my self,
In craving your opinion of my Title,

Which is infallible to England's Crown.

Salisb. My Lord, I long to hear it thus at full.

Warw. Sweet York begin: and if thy claim be good,

The Neuills are thy Subjects to command.

York. Then thus:

Edward the third, my Lords, had seven Sonnes:

The first, Edward the Black-Prince, Prince of Wales;

The second, William of Hatfield; and the third,

Lionel, Duke of Clarence: next to whom,

Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster;

The fifth, was Edward Langley, Duke of York;

The sixth, Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloster,

William of Windfor, was the seventh, and last.

Edward the Black-Prince dyed before his Father,

And left behind him Richard, his only Son,

Who after Edward the third's death, reign'd King,

'Till Henry Bullingbrook, Duke of Lancaster,

The eldest Son and Heir of John of Gaunt,

Crown'd by the Name of Henry the fourth,

Seiz'd on the Realm, depos'd the rightfull King,

Sent his poor Queen to France, from whence she came,

Q q 2

And

And him to Pomfret ; where, as all you know,
Harmless King Richard was murdered traiterously.

Warm. Father, the Duke hath told the truth ;
Thus got the House of Lancaster the Crown.

York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right :
For Richard, the first Sonnes Heir, being dead,
The issue of the next Son should have reign'd.

Salis. But William of Hatfield dyed without an Heir.

York. The third Son, Duke of Clarence,
From whose Line I claim the Crown,
Had issue Philip, a Daughter,
Who married Edmond Mortimer, Earl of March :
Edmond had issue, Roger Earl of March ;
Roger had issue, Edmond, Anne, and Eliana.

Salis. This Edmond, in the Reign of Bullingbrook ,
As I have read, laid claime unto the Crown,
And, but for Owen Glendour, had been King ;
Who kept him in Captivity, till he dyed.
But, to the rest.

York. His eldest Sister, Anne,
My Mother, being Heir unto the Crown,
Married Richard, Earl of Cambridge,
Who was to Edmond Langley,
Edward the third's first Son's son ;
By her I claim the Kingdom :
She then was Heir to Roger, Earl of March,
Who was the Son of Edmond Mortimer,
Who married Philip, sole Daughter
Unto Lyonel, Duke of Clarence.
So, if the issue of the elder Son
Succeed before the younger, I am King.

Warm. What plain proceeding is more plain then this ?
Henry doth claim the Crown from John of Gaunt,
The fourth Son, York claims it from the third :
'Till Lyonel's issue fails, his should not Reign.
It fails not yet, but flourishes in thee,
And in thy Sonnes, fair slips of such a Stock,
Then Father Salisbury, kneel we together,
And in this private Plot be we the first,
That shall salute our rightfull Sovereign
With honour of his Birth-right to the Crown.

Both. Long live our Sovereign Richard, England's
King.

York. We thank you Lords :
But I am not your King, 'till I be Crown'd,
And that my Sword be stain'd
With heart-blood of the House of Lancaster :
And that's not suddenly to be perform'd,
But with advice and silent secrecy.
Do you as I do in these dangerous dayes,
Wink at the Duke of Suffolk's insolence,
At Beauford's Pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At Buckingham, and all the Crew of them,
'Till they have snar'd the Shepherd of the Flock,
That virtuous Prince, the good Duke Humfrey :
'Tis that they seek ; and they, in seeking that,
Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesie.

Salisb. My Lord, break we off ; we know your mind at full.

Warm. My heart assures me, that the Earl of Warwick,
Shall one day make the Duke of York a King.

York. And Nevil, this I do assure my self.
Richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick
The greatest man in England, but the King.

Exeunt.

Sound Trumpets. Enter the King and State with Guard, to banish the Duchess.

King. Stand forth Dame Eliana Cobham,
Gloster's Wife :

In sight of God, and us, your guilt is great,
Receive the sentence of the Law for sin,
Such as by God's Book are adjudg'd to death.
You four from hence to Prison, back again
From thence, unto the place of Execution ;
The Witch in Smichfield shall be burnt to ashes,
And you three shall be strangled on the Gallows.
You Madam, for you are more Nobly born,
Despoiled of your Honour in your life,
Shall, after three days open Penance done,
Live in your Countrey here, in Banishment,
With Sir John Stanley, in the Ile of Man.

Eliana. Welcome is Banishment, welcome were my Death.

Gloster. Eliana, the Law thou seest hath judged thee,
I cannot justifie whom the Law condemns.
Mines eyes are full of teares, my heart of grief.
Ah Humfrey, this dishonour in thine age,
Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground.
I beseech your Majesty give me leave to goe ;
Sorrow would solace, and mine Age would cease.

King. Stay Humfrey, Duke of Gloster,
E're thou go, give up thy Staff,
Henry will to himself Protector be,
And God shall be my hope, my stay, my guide,
And lanthorn to my feet :

And go in peace, Humfrey, no less belov'd,
Then when thou wert Protector to thy King.

Queen. I see no reason, why a King of yeares
Should be to be protected like a Child ;
God and King Henry govern England's Realm :
Give up your Staff, Sir, and the King his Realm.

Gloster. My Staff ? Here, Noble Henry, is my Staff :
As willingly do I the same resign,
As e're thy Father Henry made it mine ;
And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it,
As others would ambitiously receive it.
Farewell good King : when I am dead and gone,
May honourable Peace attend thy Throne.

Exit Gloster.

Queen. Why now is Henry King, and Margaret Queen,
And Humfrey, Duke of Gloster, scarce himself,
That bears so shrewd a maim : two Pulls at once ;
His Lady banisht, and a limb lopt off,
This Staff of Honour raught, there let it stand,
Where best it fits to be, in Henrie's hand.

Suff. Thus droops this lofty Pine, and hangs his sprays,
Thus Eliana's Pride dyes in her younger dayes.

York. Lords, let him go. Please it your Majesty,
This is the day appointed for the Combat,
And ready are the Appellant and Defendant,
The Armourer and his Man, to enter the Lists,
So please your Highness to behold the fight.

Queen. I, good my Lord : for purposely therefore Left I the Court, to see this Quarrel try'd.

King. A God's Name see the Lists and all things fit,
Here let them end it, and God defend the right.

York. I never saw a fellow worse bestead,
Or more afraid to fight, then is the Appellant,
The servant of this Armourer, my Lords.

Enter

Enter at one Door the Armourer and his Neighbours, drinking to him so much, that he is drunk; and he enters with a Drumme before him, and his Staff with a Sand-bag fastened to it: and at the other Door his Man, with a Drumme and Sand-bag, and Prentices drinking to him.

1. Neighbour. Here Neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a Cup of Sack; and fear not Neighbour, you shall do well enough.

2. Neighbour. And here Neighbour, here's a Cup of Charneco.

3. Neighbour. And here's a Pot of good Double-Beer Neighbour: drink, and fear not your Man.

Armourer. Let it come yfaith, and I'll pledge you all, and a figge for Peter.

1. Pren. Here Peter, I drink to thee, and be not afraid.

2. Pren. Be merry Peter, and fear not thy Master; Fight for the credit of the Prentices.

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me, I pray you, for I think I have taken my last Draught in this World. Here Robin, and if I dye, I give thee my Aporn; and Will, thou shalt have my Hammer: and here Tom, take all the Money that I have. O Lord blefs me, I pray God, for I am never able to deal with my Master, he hath learnt so much to fence already.

Salis. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blowes. Sirrha, what's thy Name?

Peter. Peter forsooth.

Salis. Peter? what more?

Peter. Thump.

Salis. Thump? Then see thou thump thy Master well.

Armourer. Masters, I am come hither as it were upon my Man's instigation, to prove him a Knave, and my self an honest man: and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the King, nor the Queen, and therefore Peter have at thee with a down-right blow.

York. Dispatch, this Knaves tongue begins to double. Sound Trumpets, Alarum to the Combatants.

They fight, and Peter strikes him down.

Armourer. Hold Peter, hold, I confesse, I confesse Treason.

York. Take away his Weapon: Fellow thank God, and the good Wine in thy Master's way.

Peter. O God, have I overcome mine Enemie in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevail'd in right.

King. Goe, take hence that Traytor from our sight, For by his death we do perceive his guilt, And God in Justice hath reveal'd to us The truth and innocence of this poor fellow, Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully. Come fellow, follow us for thy Reward. Exeunt.

Enter Duke Humfrey and his Men in Mourning Cloaks.

Gloft. Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a Cloud And after Summer, evermore succeeds Barren Winter, with his wrathfull nipping Cold; So Cares and Joyes abound, as Seasons fleet. Sirs, what's a Clock?

Serv. Ten, my Lord.

Gloft. Ten is the hour that was appointed me, To watch the coming of my punish'd Duchefs: Unneath may she endure the Flinty Streets, To tread them with her tender-feeling feet. Sweet Nell, ill can thy Noble Mind a-brook The abject People, gazing on thy face, With envious Looks still laughing at thy shame, That erst did follow thy proud Chariot-Wheels, When thou didst ride in triumph through the Streets, But soft, I think she comes, and I'll prepare My tear-stain'd eyes, to see her Miseries.

Enter the Duchefs in a white Sheet, and a Taper burning in her hand, with the Sheriff and Officers.

Serv. So please your Grace, we'll take her from the Sheriff.

Gloft. No, stirre not for your lives, let her passe by.

Elian. Come you, my Lord, to see my open shame? Now thou do'st Penance too. Look how they gaze, See how the giddy multitude do point, And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee. Ah Gloster, hide thee from their hatefull looks, And in thy Closet pent up, rue my shame, And banne thine Enemies, both mine and thine.

Gloft. Be patient, gentle Nell, forget this grief.

Elian. Ah Gloster, teach me to forget my self: For whilest I think I am thy married Wife, And thou a Prince, Protector of this Land: Me thinks I should not thus be led along, Mail'd up in shame, with Papers on my back, And follow'd with a Rabble, that rejoyce To see my tears, and hear my deep-set groans. The ruthless Flint doth cut my tender feet, And when I start, the envious people laugh, And bid me be advised how I tread.

Ah Humfrey, can I bear this shameful yolk? Trowest thou, that e're I'll look upon the World, Or count them happy, that enjoyes the Sun? No: Dark shall be my Light, and Night my Day. To think upon my Pomp, shall be my Hell. Sometime I'll say, I am Duke Humfrey's Wife, And he a Prince, and Ruler of the Land: Yet so he Rul'd, and such a Prince he was, As he stood by, whilest I, his forlorn Duchefs, Was made a wonder, and a pointing stock. To every idle Rascal follower.

But be thou mild, and blush not at my shame, Nor stir at nothing, till the Axe of Death Hang over thee, as sure it shortly will. For Suffolk, he that can do all in all With her, that hateth thee, and hates us all, And York, and impious Beauford, that false Priest, Have all lym'd Buthes to betray thy Wings, And flie thou how thou canst, they'll tangle thee. But fear not thou, until thy foot be snar'd, Nor ever seek prevention of thy foes.

Gloft. Ah Nell, forbear: thou aimest all awry. I must offend, before I be attainted: And had I twenty times so many foes, And each of them had twenty times their power, All these could not procure me any scathe, So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless. Would't have me rescue thee from this Reproach?

Why yet thy scandal were not wip't away
But I in danger for the breach of Law.
Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell :
I pray thee sort thy heart to patience,
These few dayes wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your Grace to his Majesties Parliament
Holden at Bury, the first of this next Moneth,

Gloft. And my consent ne're ask'd herein before ?
This is close dealing. Well, I will be there.
My Nell, I take my leave; and Master Sheriff,
Let not her Penance exceed the King's Commission.

Sher. And't please your Grace, here my Commission
And Sir John Stanly is appointed now, (stays :
To take her with him to the Ile of Man.

Gloft. Must you, Sir John, protect my Lady here ?

Stanly. So am I given in charge, may't please your Grace.

Gloft. Entreat her not the worse, in that I pray
You use her well: the World may laugh again,
And I may live to do you kindness, if you do it her.
And so Sir John, farewell.

Elian. What, gone my Lord, and bid me not farewell ?

Gloft. Witness my teares, I cannot stay to speak.

Exit Gloster.

Elian. Art thou gone too? all comfort go with thee,
For none abides with me: my Joy, is Death :
Death, at whose Name I oft have been asfear'd,
Because I wish'd this World's eternity.

Stanly. I prethee goe, and take me hence,
I care not whither, for I beg no favour ;
Only convey me where thou art commanded.

Stan. Why, Madam, that is to the Ile of Man,
There to be us'd according to your State.

Elian. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach :
And shall I then be us'd reproachfully ?

Stan. Like to a Duchess, and Duke Humfry's Lady,
According to that State you shall be us'd.

Elian. Sheriff farewell, and better then I fare,
Although thou hast been Conduct of my shame.

Sher. It is my Office, and Madam pardon me.

Elian. I, I, farewell, thy Office is discharg'd :
Come Stanley, shall we goe ?

Stan. Madam, your Penance done,
Throw off this Sheet,
And goe we to attire you for our Journey.

Elian. My shame will not be shifted with my Sheet :
No, it will hang upon my richest Robes,
And shew it self, attire me how I can.
Goe, lead the way, I long to see my Prison. Exeunt.

Enter King, Queen, Cardinal, Suffolk, York, Buckingham, Salisbury, and Warwick, to the Parliament.

King. I muse my Lord of Gloster is not come :
'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
What e're occasion keeps him from us now.

Queen. Can you not see ? or will ye not observe
The strangeness of his alter'd Countenance ?
With what a Majesty he beares himself,
How insolent of late he is become,
How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself.
We know the time since he was milde and affable,
And if we did but glance a far-off Look,
Immediately he was upon his Knee,

That all the Court admir'd him for submission.
But meet him now, and be it in the Morn,
When every one will give the time of day,
He knits his Brow, and shews an angry Eye,
And passeth by with stiff unbowed Knee,
Disdaining duty that to us belongs.

Small Curres are not regarded when they grin,
But great men tremble when the Lyon roars,
And Humfrey is no little Man in England.
First note, that he is near you in descent,
And should you fall, he is the next will mount.
Me seemeth then, it is no Policy,
Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears,
And his advantage following your decease,
That he should come about your Royal Person,
Or be admitted to your Highness council.
By flattery hath he won the Commons hearts :
And when he please to make Commotion,
'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him.

Now 'tis the Spring, and Weeds are shallow-rooted,
Suffer them now, and they'll o're-grow the Garden,
And choak the Herbs for want of husbandry,
The reverent care I bear unto my Lord,
Made me collect these dangers in the Duke.
If it be fond, call it a Woman's fear :
Which fear, if better Reasons can supplant,
I will subscribe, and say I wrong'd the Duke.
My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York.
Reprove my allegation, if you can,
Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suff. Well hath your Highness seen into this Duke :
And had I first been put to speak my mind,
I think I should have told your Graces Tale.
The Duchess, by his subornation,
Upon my Life began her devillish practises :
Or if he were not privy to those Faults,
Yet by reputing of his high descent,
As next the King, he was successive Heir,
And such high vaunts of his Nobility,
Did instigate the Bedlam brain-sick Duchess,
By wicked means to frame our Sovereign's fall.
Smooth runs the Water where the Brook is deep,
And in his simple shew he harbours Treason.
The Fox barks not, when he would steal the Lamb.
No, no, my Sovereign, Gloster is a man
Unfounded yet, and full of deep deceit.

Card. Did he not, contrary to form of Law,
Devise strange deaths, for small offences done ?

York. And did he not, in his Protectorship,
Levy great summes of Money through the Realm,
For Souldiers pay in France, and never sent it ?
By means whereof the Towns each day revolted.

Buck. Tut, these are petty faults to faults unknown,
Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humfrey.

King. My Lords at once: the care you have of us,
To mow down Thorns that would annoy our Foot,
Is worthy praise: but shall I speak, my conscience,
Our Kinsman Gloster is as innocent,
From meaning Treason to our Royal Person,
As is the sucking Lamb, or harmless Dove :
The Duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given,
To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.

Que. Ah what's more dangerous, then this fond affiance?
Seems he a Dove? his feathers are but borrow'd
For he's disposed as the hatefull Raven.
Is he a Lamb? his Skin is surely lent him,

For he's enclin'd as is the ravenous Wolves.
Who cannot steal a shape, that means deceit?
Take heed, my Lord, the welfare of us all,
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudfull man.

Enter Somerset.

Som. All health unto my gracious Sovereign.

King. Welcome Lord Somerset: What Newes from France?

Som. That all your Interest in those Territories,
Is utterly bereft you: all is lost.

King. Cold Newes, Lord Somerset: but God's will be done.

York. Cold Newes for me: for I had hope of France,
As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
Thus are my Blossoms blasted in the Bud,
And Caterpillars eat my Leaves away:
But I will remedy this geare e're long,
Or sell my Title for a glorious Grave.

Enter Gloucester.

Gloucester. All happiness unto my Lord the King:
Pardon, my Liege, that I have stay'd so long.

Suff. Nay Gloucester, know that thou art come too soon,
Unless thou wer'st more loyal then thou art:
I do arrest thee of high Treason here.

Gloucester. Well Suffolk, yet thou shalt not see me blush,
Nor change my Countenance for this Arrest:
A heart unspotted, is not easily daunted.
The purest Spring is not so free from mud,
As I am clear from Treason to my Sovereign.
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my Lord,
That you took Bribes of France,
And being Protector, stay'd the Souldiers pay,
By means whereof, his Highness hath lost France.

Gloucester. Is it but thought so?
What are they that think it?
I never rob'd the Souldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny Bribe from France.
So help me God, as I have watcht the Night,
I, Night by Night, in studying good for England.
That Doit that e're I wrested from the King,
Or any Groat I hoorded to my use,
Be brought against me at my Trial day.
No: many a Pound of mine own proper store,
Because I would not tax the needy Commons,
Have I dispursed to the Garrisons,
And never ask'd for restitution.

Card. It serves you well, my Lord, to say so much.

Gloucester. I say no more then truth, so help me God.

York. In your Protectorship, you did devise Strange Tortures for Offenders, never heard of,
That England was defam'd by Tyranny.

Gloucester. Why 'tis well known, that whiles I was Pro-tectior, (tectior,
For I should melt at an Offendor's teares,
And lowly words were Ransome for their fault:
Unless it were a bloody Murderer,
Or foul felonious Thief, that fleec'd poor passengers,
I never gave them condign punishment.
Murder indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd
Above the Felon, or what Trespas else.

Suff. My Lord, these faults are easie, quickly answer'd:
But mightier Crimes are lay'd unto your charge,
Whereof you cannot easily purge your self.

I do arrest you in his Highness Name,
And here commit you to my Lord Cardinal
To keep, until your further time of Tryal.

King. My Lord of Gloucester, 'tis my special hope,
That you will clear your self from all suspence,
My Conscience tells me you are innocent.

Gloucester. Ah gracious Lord, these dayes are dangerous:
Virtue is choak't with foul Ambition,
And Charity chas'd hence by Rancour's hand;
Foul Subornation is predominant,
And Equitie exil'd your Highness Land.
I know, their Complot is to have my Life:
And if my death might make this Iland happy,
And prove the Period of their Tyranny,
I would expend it with all willingness.
But mine is made the Prologue to their Play:
For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,
Will not conclude their plotted Tragedy.

Beauford's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice,
And Suffolk's cloudy Brow his stormy hate;
Sharp Buckingham unburthens with his tongue,
The envious Load that lyes upon his heart:
And dogged York, that reaches at the Moon,
Whose over-weening Arme I have pluckt back,
By false accuse doth level at my life.
And you, my Sovereign Lady, with the rest,
Causeless have lay'd disgraces on my head,
And with your best endeavour have stirr'd up
My liefeft Liege to be mine Enemy:

I, all of you have lay'd your heads together,
My self had notice of your Conventicles,
And all to make away my guiltless life.
I shall not want false Witness, to condemn me,
Nor store of Treasons, to augment my guilt:
The ancient Proverb will be well effected,
A Staff is quickly found to beat a Dog.

Card. My Liege, his railing is intollerable.
If those that care to keep your Royal Person
From Treason's secret Knife, and Traytor's Rage,
Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,
And the Offender granted scope of speech,
'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your Grace.

Suff. Hath he not twit our Sovereign Lady here
With ignominious words, though Clarkly coucht?
As if she had suborned some to swear
False allegations, to o'rethrow his state.

Queen. But I can give the loser leave to chide.

Gloucester. Far truer spoke then meant: I lose indeed,
Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me false,
And well such losers may have leave to speak.

Buck. He'll wrest the sence, and hold us here all day.
Lord Cardinal, he is your Prisoner.

Card. Sirs, takes away the Duke, and guard him sure.

Gloucester. Ah, thus King Henry throws away his Crutch
Before his Legges be firm to bear his body,
Thus is the Shepherd beaten from thy side,
And Wolves are gnarling, who shall gnaw thee first.
Ah that my fear were false, ah that it were;
For good King Henry, thy decay I fear. Exit Gloucester.

King. My Lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best,
Doe, or undoe, as if our self were here.

Queen. What, will your Highness leave the Parliament?

King. I Margaret: my heart is drown'd with grief,
Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes;
My body round engirt with misery:

For

For what's more miserable then Discontent ?
 Ah Uncle Humfrey, in thy sad face I see
 The Map of Honour, Truth, and Loyalty :
 And yet, good Humfrey, is the hour to come,
 That e're I prov'd thee false, or fear'd thy faith.
 What lowring Star now envies thy estate ?
 That these great Lords, and Margaret our Queen,
 Do seek subversion of thy harmless Life.
 Thou never did'st them wrong, nor no man wrong :
 And as the Butcher takes away the Calf,
 And binds the Wretch, and beats it when it strays,
 Bearing it to the bloody Slaughter-house ;
 Even so remorseless have they borne him hence :
 And as the Damme runs lowing up and down,
 Looking the way her harmless young one went,
 And can do nought but wail her Darlings loss ;
 Even so my self bewails good Gloster's case
 With sad unhelpfull teares, and with dimn'd eyes ;
 Look after him, and cannot do him good :
 So mighty are his vowed Enemies.
 His fortunes I will weep, and twist each groan,
 Say, who's a Traytor ? Gloster he is none.

Exit.

Queen. Free Lords :
 Cold Snow melts with the Sun's hot Beames :
Henry, my Lord, is cold in great Affairs,
 Too full of foolish pitie : and Gloster's shew
 Beguiles him, as the mournfull Crocodile
 With sorrow snares relenting passengers ;
 Or as the Snake, roll'd in a flowing Bank,
 With shining checker'd slough doth sting a Child,
 That for the beauty thinks it excellent.
 Believe me Lords, were none more wise then I,
 And yet herein I judge my own Wit good ;
 This Gloster should be quickly rid the World,
 To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Card. That he should dye, is worthy policy,
 But yet we want a Colour for his death :
 'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of Law.

Suff. But in my mind, that were no policy :
 The King will labour still to save his Life,
 The Commons haply rise, to save his Life ;
 And yet we have but trivial argument,
 More then mistrust, that shews him worthy death.

York. So that by this, you would not have him dye.

Suff. Ah York, no man alive, so fain as I.

York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.
 But my Lord Cardinal, and you my Lord of Suffolk,
 Say as you think, and speak it from your Soules :
 Wer't not all one, an empty Eagle were set,
 To guard the Chick from a hungry Kite,
 As place Duke Humfrey for the King's Protector ?

Queen. So the poor Chicken should be sure of death.

Suff. Madam 'tis true : and wer't not madness then,
 To make the Fox surveyor of the Fold ?
 Who being accus'd a crafty Murderer,
 His guilt should be but idly posted over,
 Because his purpose is not executed.
 No : let him dye, in that he is a Fox,
 By nature prov'd an Enemy to the Flock,
 Before his Chaps be stain'd with Crimson blood,
 As Humfrey prov'd by Reasons to my Liege.
 And do not stand on Quilllets how to slay him :
 Be it by Ginnes, by Snares, by Subtilty,
 Sleeping, or Waking, 'tis no matter how,
 So he be dead ; for that is good deccit.
 Which mates him first, that first intends deccit.

Queen. Thrice noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suff. Not resolute, except so much were done,
 For things are often spoke, and seldome meant,
 But that my heart accordeth with my tongue,
 Seeing the deed is ineritorious,
 And to preserve my Sovereign from his Foe,
 Say but the word, and I will be his Priest.

Card. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,
 E're you can take due Orders for a Priest :
 Say you consent, and censure well the deed,
 And I'll provide his Executioner,
 I tender to the safety of my Liege.

Suff. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.

Queen. And so say I.

York. And I : and now we three have spoke it,
 It skills not greatly who impugnes our dooin.

Enter a Poste.

Post. Great Lords, from Ireland am I come again,
 To signifie, that Rebels there are up,
 And put the Englishmen unto the Sword ;
 Send Succours (Lords) and stop the Rage betime,
 Before the Wound do grow incurable ;
 For being green, there is great hope of help.

Card. A Breach that craves a quick expedient stop.
 What counsel give you in this weighty cause ?

York. That Somerset be sent a Regent thither :
 'Tis meet the luckie Ruler be imploy'd,
 Witnes the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If York, with all his far-set policy,
 Had been the Regent there, in stead of me,
 He never would have stay'd in France so long.

York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done.
 I rather would have lost my life betimes,
 Then bring a burthen of dis-honour home,
 By staying there so long, 'till all were lost.
 Shew me one skar, character'd on thy skin.
 Men's flesh preserv'd so whole, do seldome win.

Queen. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire,
 If Wind and Fuel be brought, to feed it with :
 No more, good York ; sweet Somerset be still.
 Thy fortune, York, had'st thou been Regent there,
 Might haply have prov'd far worse then his.

York. What, worse then naught ? nay, then a shame take all.

Somerset. And in the number, thee, that wishest shame.

Card. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is,
 Th'uncivil Kernes of Ireland are in Armes,
 And temper Clay with blood of Englishmen.
 To Ireland will you lead a Band of men,
 Collected choicely, from each County some,
 And try your hap against the Irishmen ?

York. I will, my Lord, so please his Majesty.

Suff. Why, our Authority is his consent,
 And what we do establish, he confirms ;
 Then, Noble York, take thou this Task in hand.

York. I am content : Provide me Souldiers, Lords.
 Whiles I take order for mine own affaires.

Suff. A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd.
 But now return we to the false Duke Humfrey.

Card. No more of him : for I will deal with him,
 That henceforth he shall trouble us no more :
 And so break off, the day is almost spent,
 Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

York. My

York. My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen dayes
At Britlow I expect my Souldiers,
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

Suff. I'll see it truly done, my Lord of York. Exeunt.
Manet York.

York. Now York, or never, steel thy fearfull thoughts,
And change misdoubt to resolution;
Be that thou hop'st to be, or what thou art;
Resign to death, it is not worth th'enjoying:
Let pale-fac't fear keep with the mean-born man,
And find no harbour in a Royal heart.
Faster then Spring-time showres, comes thought on
And not a thought, but thinks on Dignity. (thought,
My brain, more busie then the labouring Spider,
Weaves tedious Snarles to trap mine Enemies.
Well Nobles, well: 'tis politicly done,
To send me packing with an Host of men:
I fear me, you but warm the starved Snake,
Who cherish't in your breasts, will sting your hearts,
'Twas Men I lack't, and you will give them me;
I take it kindly: yet be well assur'd,
You put sharp Weapons in a mad-man's hands.
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty Band,
I will stir up in England some black Storm,
Shall blow ten thousand Soules to heaven or hell:
And this fell Tempest shall not cease to rage,
Until the Golden Circuit on my head,
Like to the glorious Sun's transparent Beams,
Do calm the fury of this mad-bred Flawe.
And for a minister of my intent,
I have seduc'd a head-strong Kentishman,
John Cade of Ashford,
To make Commotion, as full well he can,
Under the Title of John Mortimer.
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade
Oppose himself again a troop of Kernes,
And fought so long, till that his thighes with Darts
Were almost like a sharp-quill'd Porpentine:
And in the end being rescued, I have seen
Him caper upright, like a wild Morisco,
Shaking the bloody Darts, as he his Bells.
Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty Kern,
Hath he conversed with the Enemy,
And undiscover'd, come to me again,
And given me notice of their Villanies.
This devil here shall be my substitute,
For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,
In face, in gate, in speech he doth resemble.
By this, I shall perceive the Commons mind,
How they affect the House and Claim of York.
Say he be taken, rack't, and tortured;
I know, no pain they can inflict upon him,
Will make him say, I mov'd him to those Armes.
Say that he thrive, as 'tis great like he will,
Why then from Ireland come I with my strength,
And reap the Harvest which that Rascal sow'd.
For Humfrey being dead, as he shall be,
And Henry put a-part: the next for me. Exit.

Enter two or three running over the Stage, from the Murder of Duke Humfrey.

1. Run to my Lord of Suffolk: let him know
We have dispatcht the Duke, as he commanded.

2. Oh, that it were to doe; what have we done?

Did't ever hear a man so penitent? Enter Suffolk.

1. Here comes my Lord.

Suff. Now Sirs, have you dispatcht this thing?

1. I, my good Lord, he's dead.

Suff. Why that's well said. Go, get you to my house,
I will reward you for this venturous deed:
The King and all the Peers are here at hand.
Have you laid fair the Bed? are all things well,
According as I gave directions?

1. 'Tis, my good Lord.

Suff. Away, be gone.

Exeunt.

Enter the King, the Queen, Cardinal, Suffolk, Somerset, with Attendants.

King. Go call our Uncle to our presence straight:
Say, we intend to try his Grace to day,
If he be guilty, as 'tis published.

Suff. I'll call him presently, my Noble Lord. Exit.

King. Lords take your places; and I pray you all
Proceed no straiter 'gainst our Uncle Gloster,
Then from true evidence, of good esteem,
He be approv'd in practice culpable.

Queen. God forbid any malice should prevail,
That faultless may condemn a Noble man:
Pray God he may acquit him of suspicion.

King. I thank thee Nell, these words content me much.

Enter Suffolk.

How now? why look'st thou pale? why tremblest thou?
Where is our Uncle? what's the matter, Suffolk?

Suff. Dead in his Bed, my Lord: Gloster is dead.

Queen. Marry God forfend.

Card. God's secret Judgement: I did dream to night,
The Duke was dumb, and could not speak a word.

King sounds.

Queen. How fares my Lord? Help Lords, the King is dead.

Som. Rear up his Body, wring him by the Nose.

Queen. Run, go, help, help: Oh Henry ope thine eyes.

Suff. He doth revive again, Madam be patient.

King. Oh heavenly God!

Queen. How fares my gracious Lord?

Suff. Comfort my Sovereign, gracious Henry comfort.

King. What, doth my Lord of Suffolk comfort me?
Came he right now to sing a Raven's Note,
Whose dismal tune bereft my Vital powres:
And thinks he, that the chirping of a Wren,
By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
Can chase away the first conceived sound?
Hide not thy poison with such sugred words,
Lay not thy hands on me: forbear I say,
Their touch affrights me as a Serpent's sting.
Thou balefull Messenger, out of my sight:
Upon thy eye-balls, murderous Tyranny
Sits in grim Majesty, to fright the World.
Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounding;
Yet do not go away; come Basilisk.

And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight:
For in the shade of death, I shall find joy;
In life, but double death, now Gloster's dead

Queen. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk thus?
Although the Duke was enemy to him,
Yet he most Christian-like laments his death;
And for my self, Foe as he was to me,
Might liquid teares, or heart-offending groans,
Or blood-consuming sighes recall his life;

I would

I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans,
Look pale as Prim-rose with bloud-drinking sighes,
And all to have the Noble Duke alive.
What know I how the world may deem of me?
For it is known we were but hollow Friends:
It may be judg'd I made the Duke away.
So shall my name with Slander's tongue be wounded,
And Princes Courts be fill'd with my reproach:
This get I by his death: aye me unhappy,
To be a Queen, and Crown'd with infamy.

King. Ah woe is me for Gloster, wretched man.

Queen. Be woe for me, more wretched then he is.
What, Do'st thou turn away, and hide thy face?
I am no loathsome Leper, look on me.
What? art thou like the Adder waxen deaf?
Be poysonous too, and kill thy forlorn Queen.
Is all thy comfort shut in Gloster's Tombe?
Why then Dame Elienor was ne're thy joy.
Erect his Statue, and worship it,
And make my image but an Ale-house sign.
Was I for this nigh wrack'd upon the sea,
And twice by aukward wind from England's bank
Drove back again unto my Native Clime.
What boaded this? but well fore-warning wind
Did seem to say, seek not a scorpion's Nest,
Nor set no footing on this unkind shoar.
What did I then? but curst the gentle gusts,
And he that loos'd them from their Brazen Caves,
And bid them blow towards England's blessed shoar,
Or turn our Stern upon a dreadfull Rock:
Yet Aeolus would not be a murtherer,
But left that hatefull office unto thee.
The pretty vaulting sea refus'd to drown me,
Knowing that thou would'st have me drown'd on shoar
With teares as salt as sea, through thy unkindness.
The splitting Rocks cower'd in the sinking sands,
And would not dash me with their ragged sides,
Because thy flinty heart more hard then they,
Might in thy Pallace perish Elienor:
As far as I could ken thy Chalky Cliffs,
When from thy shoar, the Tempest beat us back,
I stood upon the Hatches in the storm:
And when the dusky sky, began to rob
My earnest-gaping-sight of the Land's view,
I took a costly Jewel from my neck,
A Heart it was bound in with Diamonds,
And threw it towards thy Land: the Sea receiv'd it,
And so I wish'd thy body might my Heart:
And even with this, I lost fair England's view,
And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart,
And call'd them blind and dusky Spectacles,
For loosing ken of Albion's wished Coast.
How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue
(The agent of thy foul inconstancy)
To sit and watch me, as Ascanius did,
When he to madding Dido would unfold
His Father's Acts, commenc'd in burning Troy,
Am I not witcht like her? or thou not false like him?
Aye me, I can no more: Dye Elinor,
For Henry weeps, that thou do'st live so long.

Noise within. Enter Warwick, and many Commons.

Warw. It is reported, mighty Sovereign,
That good Duke Humfrey Traiterously is murdered

By Suffolk, and the Cardinal Beauford's means:
The Commons like an angry hive of Bees
That want their Leader, scatter up and down,
And care not who they sting in his revenge.
My self have calin'd their spleenfull mutiny,
Until they hear the order of his death.

King. That he is dead good Warwick, 'tis too true,
But how he dyed, God knows, not Henry:
Enter his Chamber, view his breathless Corps,
And comment then upon his sudden death.

Warw. That shall I do my Liege: stay Salisbury
With the rude multitude, till I return.

King. O thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts:
My thoughts, that labour to perswade my soul,
Some violent hands were laid on Humfrey's life:
If my suspect be false, forgive me God,
For judgement only doth belong to thee:
Fain would I goe to chafe his paly lips,
With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain
Upon his face an Ocean of salt teares,
To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk,
And with my fingers feel his hand, unfeeling:
But all in vain are these mean Obsequies,

Bed put forth.

And to survey his dead and earthly Image:
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

Warw. Come hither gracious Sovereign, view this body.

King. That is to see how deep my grave is made,
For with his soul fled all my worldly solace;
For seeing him, I see my life in death.

Warw. As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King that took our state upon him,
To free us from his Father's wrathfull curse,
I do believe that violent hands were laid
Upon the life of this thrice-famed Duke.

Suff. A dreadfull Oath, sworn with a solemn tongue:
What instance gives Lord Warwick for his vow?

Warw. See how the bloud is setled in his face.
Oft have I seen a timely-parted Ghost,
Of ashy semblance, meager, pale, and bloudless,
Being all descended to the labouring heart,
Who in the Conflict that it holds with death,
Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy,
Which with the heart there cools, and ne're returneth,
To blush and beautifie the Cheek again.
But see, his face is black, and full of bloud:
His eye-balls further out, than when he lived,
Staring full gaskly, like a strangled man:
His hair up-rear'd, his nostrils stretcht with strugling:
His hands abroad display'd, as one that graspt
And tugg'd for Life, and was by strength subdued.
Look on the Sheets, his hair (you see) is sticking,
His well-proportion'd Beard, made ruffe and rugg'd,
Like to the Summer's Corn by Tempest lodged:
It cannot be but he was murdred here,
The least of all these signes were probable.

Suff. Why Warwick, who should do the Duke to death?
My self and Beauford had him in protection,
And we, I hope Sir, are no murtherers. (death.)

Warw. But both of you have vowed Duke Humfrey's
And you (forsooth) had the good Duke to keep:
'Tis like you would not feast him like a friend,
And 'tis well seen, he found an enemy.

Queen. Then you belike suspect these Noble men,
As guilty of Duke Humfrey's timeless death.

Warw.

Warw. Who finds the Heifer dead, and bleeding fresh,
And sees fast-by, a Butcher with an Axe,
But will suspect, 'twas he that made the slaughter?
Who finds the Partridge in the Puttocks Nest,
But may imagine, how the Bird was dead,
Although the Kite soar with un-bloudied Beak?
Even so suspicious is this Tragedy.

Qu. Are you the Butcher, Suffolk? where's your Knife?
Is Beauford term'd a Kite? where are his Tallons?

Suff. I wear no Knife, to slaughter sleeping men,
But here's a 'vengefull Sword, rusted with ease,
That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart.
That slanders me with Murther's Crimson Badge.
Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire,
That I am faulty in Duke Humfrey's death.

Warw. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?

Queen. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit,
Nor cease to be an arrogant Controller,
Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.

Warw. Madam be still: with reverence may I say,
For every word you speak in his behalf,
Is slander to your Royal Dignity.

Suff. Blunt-witted Lord, ignoble in demeanor,
If ever Lady wrong'd her Lord so much,
Thy Mother took into her blamefull Bed,
Some stern un-tutor'd Churl; and Noble Stock
Was graft with Crab-tree slip, whose Fruit thou art,
And never of the Nevils Noble Race.

Warw. But that the guilt of Murther bucklers thee,
And I should rob the Deaths-man of his Fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my Sovereigns presence makes me mild,
I would, false murd'rous Coward, on thy Knee
Make thee beg pardon for thy pasted speech,
And say, it was thy Mother that thou meant'st.
That thou thy self wast born in Bastardy;
And after all this fearfull Homage done,
Give thee thy hire, and thy Soul to hell,
Pernicious blood-sucker of sleeping men.

Suff. Thou shalt be waking, while I shed thy blood.
If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.

Warw. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence:
Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee,
And do some service to Duke Humfrey's Ghost.

Exeunt.

King. What stronger Breast-plate then a heart untainted?
Thrice is he arm'd, that hath his Quarrel just;
And he but naked, though lockt up in Steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

A noise within.

Queen. What noise is this?

Enter Suffolk and Warwick, with their Weapons drawn.

King. Why how now Lords?
Your wrathfull Weapons drawn,
Here in our presence? Dare you be so bold?
Why what Tumultuous clamour have we here?

Suff. The trayt'rous Warwick with the men of Bury,
Set all upon me, mighty Sovereign.

Enter Salisbury.

Salis. Sirs stand a-part, the King shall know your mind.

Dread Lord, the Commons send you word by me,
Unless Lord Suffolk straight be done to death,
Or banished fair England's Territories,
They will by violence tear him from your Pallace,
And torture him with grievous lingring death.
They say, by him the good Duke Humfrey dy'd:
They say, in him they fear your Highness death;
And mere instinct of Love and Loyalty,
Free from a stubborn opposite intent,
As being thought to contradict your liking,
Makes them thus forward in his Banishment.
They say, in care of your most Royal Person,
That if your Highness should intend to sleep,
And charge, that no man should disturb your Rest,
In pain of your dislike, or pain of death;
Yet notwithstanding such a strait Edict,
Were there a Serpent seen, with forked Tongue,
That slyly glided towards your Majesty,
It were but necessary you were wak't:
Lest being suffer'd in that harmless slumber,
The mortal Worm might make the sleep eternal,
And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you, where you will, or no,
From such fell Serpents as false Suffolk is;
With whose invenomed and fatal sting,
Your loving Uncle, twenty times his worth,
They say is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons within. An Answer from the King, my Lord of Salisbury.

Suff. 'Tis like the Commons, rude unpolisht hinds,
Could send such Message to their Sovereign:
But you, my Lord, were glad to be imploy'd,
To shew how quaint an Orator you are.
But all the Honour Salisbury hath wonne,
Is, that he was the Lord Embassador,
Sent from a sort of Tinkers to the King.

Within. An answer from the King, or we will all break in.

King. Go Salisbury, and tell them all from me,
I thank them for their tender loving care;
And had I not been cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do intreat:
For sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesie,
Mischance unto my State by Suffolk's means.
And therefore by his Majesty I swear,
Whose far-un-worthy Deputy I am,
He shall not breed infection in this air,
But three days longer, on the pain of death.

Queen. Oh Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk.

King. Ungentle Queen, to call him gentle Suffolk;
No more I say: if thou do'st plead for him,
Thou wilt but add increase unto my Wrath.
Had I but said, I would have kept my word;
But when I swear, it is irrevocable:
If after three days space thou here be'st found,
On any ground that I am Ruler of,
The World shall not be Ransome for thy Life.
Come Warwick, come good Warwick, go with me,
I have great matters to impart to thee. Exit.

Queen. Mischance and Sorrow go along with you,
Hearts Discontent, and sower Affliction,
Be play-fellows to keep you company:
There's two of you, the Devil made a third,
And three-fold Vengeance tend upon your steps,

Suff. Cease, gentle Queen, these Execrations,
And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Queen.

Queen. Fie Coward woman, and soft-hearted wretch,
Hast thou not spirit to curse thine Enemy?

Suff. A plague upon them: wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the Mandrakes groan,
I would invent as bitter searching termes,
As curst, as harsh, and horrible to hear,
Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signes of deadly hate,
As lean-fac'd envy in her loathsome cave.
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words,
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten Flint,
Mine hair be fixt an end, as one distract:
I, every joynt should seem to curse and ban,
And even now my burthen'd heart would break
Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink,
Gall, worse then Gall, the daintiest that they taste:
Their sweetest shade, a grove of Cypress Trees:
Their chiefest Prospect, murthering Basilisks:
Their softest Touch, as smart as Lizards stings:
Their Musick, frightfull as the Serpents hiss,
And boading Screech-Owls, make the Comfort full.
All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell-----

Queen. Enough sweet Suffolk, thou torment'st thy self,
And these dread curses like the Sun 'gainst glass,
Or like an over-charged Gun, recoil,
And turns the force of them upon thy self.

Suff. You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave?
Now by the ground that I am banish'd from,
Well could I curse away a Winters night,
Though standing naked on a Mountain top,
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,
And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Queen. Oh, let me intreat thee cease, give me thy hand,
That I may dew it with my mournfull teares;
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my wofull Monuments.
Oh, could this kiss be printed in thy hand,
That thou might'st think upon these by the Seal,
Through whom a thousand sighes are breath'd for thee.
So get thee gone, that I may know my grief,
'Tis but surmiz'd, whiles thou art standing by,
As one that sursets; thinking on a want:
I will repeal thee, or be well assur'd,
Adventure to be banished my self:
And banished I am, if but from thee.
Goe, speak not to me; even now be gone,
Oh goe not yet. Even thus, two friends condemn'd
Embrace, and kiss, and take ten thousand leaves,
Loather a hundred times to part then dye;
Yet now farewell, and farewell life with thee.

Suff. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,
Once by the King, and three times thrice by thee.
'Tis not the Land I care for, we're thou hence,
A Wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company:
For where thou art, there is the World it self,
With every several pleasure in the World:
And where thou art not, Desolation.
I can no more: Live thou to joy thy life;
My self no joy in ought, but that thou liv'st.

Enter Vaux.

Queen. Whither goes Vaux so fast? what newes I prethee?

Vaux. To signifie unto his Majesty,
That Cardinal Beauford is at the point of death:
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
That makes him gasp, and stare, and catch the air,
Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.
Sometime he talks, as if Duke Humfrey's Ghost
Were by his side: sometime, he calls the King,
And whispers to his Pillow, as to him,
The secrets of his over-charged soul,
And I am sent to tell his Majesty,
That even now he cries aloud for him.

Queen. Go tell this heavy Message to the King. Exit:
Aye me! What is this World? What newes are these?
But wherefore grieve I at an houres poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soules Treasure?
Why onely Suffolk mourn I not for thee?
And with the Southern clouds, contend in teares?
Theirs for the Earth's increase; mine for my sorrows.
Now get thee hence, the King thou know'st is comming
If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.

Suff. If I depart from thee, I cannot live,
And in thy sight to dye, what were it else,
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?
Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As milde and gentle as the Cradle-babe,
Dying with mother's duggie between it's lips.
Where from thy sight, I should be raging mad:
And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes:
To have thee with thy lippest to stop my mouth:
So should'st either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breath it so into thy body,
And then it lives in sweet Elizium.
To dye by thee, were but to dye in jest,
From thee to dye, were torture more then death:
Oh let me stay, befall what may befall.

Queen. Away: though parting be a fretfull corrosive,
It is applyed to a deathfull wound.

To France sweet Suffolk: Let me hear from thee:
For wheresoever thou art in this world's Globe,
I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suff. I goe.

Queen. And take my heart with thee.

Suff. A Jewel lockt into the woful'st Cask,
That ever did contain a thing of worth,
Even as a splitted Bark, so sunder we:
This way fall I to death.

Queen. This way for me.

Exeunt.

Enter the King, Salisbury, and Warwick, to the Cardinal in bed.

King. How fares my Lord? Speak Beauford to thy Sovereign.

Car. If thou bee'st death, I'll give thee Englands Trea-
Enough to purchase such another Island, (sure,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

King. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
Where death's approach is seen so terrible.

War. Beauford, it is thy Sovereign speaks to thee.

Beau. Bring me unto my Trial when you will.
Did he not in his bed? Where should he dye?
Can I make men live where they will or no?
Oh torture me no more, I will confess.
Alive again? Then shew me where he is:
I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him,
He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.

Combe down his hair; look, look, it stands upright,
Like Lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul:
Give me some drink, and bid the Apothecary
Bring the strong poyson that I bought of him.

King. O thou eternall moover of the heavens,
Look with a gentle eye upon this Wretch,
Oh beat away the busie meddling Fiend,
That layes strong siege unto this wretches soul,
And from his bosome purge this black despair.

War. See how the pangs of death do make him grin.

Sal. Disturb him not, let him passe peaceably.

King. Peace to his soul, if Gods good pleasure be.
Lord Card'nall, if thou think'st on heavens blisse,
Hold up thy hand, make signall of thy hope.

He dies and makes no signe: Oh God forgive him,

War. So bad a death, argues a monstrous life.

King. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all.
Close up his eyes, and draw the Curtain close,
And let us all to Meditation.

Exeunt.

Alarum. Fight at Sea. Ordenance goes off.

Enter Lieutenant, Suffolk, and others.

Lieu. The gaudy blabbing and remorsefull day,
Is crept into the bosome of the Sea:

And now loud howling Wolves arouze the Jades
That drag the Tragick melancholy night:
Who with their drowfie, slow, and flagging wings
Cleape dead-mens graves; and from their misty Jaws,
Breath foul contagious darknesse in the air:

Therefore bring forth the Souldiers of our prize,
For whil'st our Pinnace Anchors in the Downs,
Here shall they make their ransome on the sand,
Or with their blood stain this discoloured shore.
Master, this Prisoner freely give I thee.

And thou that art his Mate, make boot of this:

The other Walter Whitmore is thy share.

1. Gent. What is my ransome Master, let me know.

Ma. A thousand Crowns, or else lay down your head.

Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.

Lieu. What think you much to pay 2000. Crowns,
And bear the name and port of Gentlemen?
Cut both the Villains throats, for die you shall:
The lives of those which we have lost in fight,
Be counter-poyss'd with such a petty sum.

1. Gent. I'll give it, sir, and therefore spare my life.

2. Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight.

Whitm. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard,
And therefore to revenge it, shalt thou die,
And so should these, if I might have my will.

Lieu. Be not so rash, take ransome, let him live.

Suf. Look on my George, I am a Gentleman,
Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.

Whit. And so am I: my name is Walter Whitmore.
How now? why start'st thou? what doth death affright?

Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death:
A cunning man did calculate my Birth,
And told me that by Water I should die:
Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded,
Thy name is Gualtier, being rightly sounded.

Whit. Gualtier or Walter, which it is I care not,
Never yet did base dishonour blur our name,
But with our sword we wip'd away the blot.
Therefore, when Merchant-like I sell revenge,
Broke be my sword, my Armes torn and defac'd,
And I proclaim'd a Coward through the world,

Suf. Stay Whitmore, for thy Prisoner is a Prince,
The Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.

Whit. The Duke of Suffolk, muffled up in rags?

Suf. I, but these rags are no part of the Duke.

Lieu. But Jove was never slain as thou shalt be,
Obscure and lowlie Swain, King Henries blood.

Suf. The honorable blood of Lancaster
Must not be shed by such a jaded Grooin:
Hast thou not kist thy hand, and held my stirrop?
Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth Mule,
And thought thee happy when I shook my head.

How often hast thou waited at my cup,
Fed from my Trencher, kneel'd down at the board,
When I have feasted with Queen Margaret?
Remember it, and let it make thee Crest-fain,
I, and alay this thy abortive Pride:

How in our voiding Lobby hast thou stood,
And duly waited for my coming forth?

This hand of thine hath writ in thy behalf,
And therefore shall it charme thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak Captain, shall I stab the forlorn Swain?

Lieu. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

Suf. Base slave, thy words are blunt, and so art thou.

Lieu. Convey him hence, and on our long boats side,
Strike off his head. Suf. Thou dar'st not for thy own.

Lieu. Poole, Sir Poole? Lord?

I, kennell. puddle, sink, whose filth and dirt
Troubles the silver Spring, where England drinks:
Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth,
For swallowing up the Treasure of the Realm.

Thy lips that kist the Queen, shall sweep the ground:
And thou that smil'dst at good Duke Humfries death,
Against the senseless winds shalt grin in vain,
Who in contempt shall hiss at thee again.

And wedded be thou to the Hags of hell,
For daring to affye a mighty Lord

Unto the daughter of a worthless King,
Having neither Subject, Wealth, nor Diadem:

By devilish policy art thou grown gear,
And like ambitious Sylla over-gor'd,

With gobbets of thy Mother-bleeding heart.
By thee Anion and Main were sold to France.

The false revolting Normans thorough thee,
Disdain to call us Lord, and Piccardie

Hath slain their Governors, surpriz'd our Forts,
And sent the ragged Souldiers wounded home:

The Princely Warwick, and the Nevils all,
Whose dreadfull swords were never drawn in vain,

As hating thee, and rising up in Armes.
And now the House of York thrust from the Crown,

By shamefull murther of a guileless King,
And lofty proud incroaching tyranny,

Burns with revenging fire, whose hopefull colours
Advance our half-fac'd Sun, striving to shine;

Under the which is writ, Invictis nubibus.

The commons here in Kent are up in armes,
And to conclude, Reproach and Beggery,

Is crept into the Pallace of our King,
And all by thee: away convey him hence.

Suf. O that I were a God, to shoot forth Thunder
Upon these paltry, servile, abject Drudges:

Small things make base men proud. This Villain here,
Being Captain of a Pinnace, threatens more

Then Bargulus the strong Illyrian Pirate.
Drones suck not Eagles blood, but rob Bee-hives.

It is Impossible that I should die

By such a lowly Vassall as thy self.

Thy words move Rage, and not remorse in me:

I go of Message from the Queen to France:

I charge thee waite me safely crosse the Channell.

Lien. Water: W. Come Suffolk, I must waite thee to thy death.

Suf. Galidus timor occupat artus, it is thee I fear.

Wal. Thou shalt have cause to fear before I leave thee.

What, are ye daunted now? will you stoop?

r. Gent. My gracious Lord intreat him; speak him fair.

Suf. Suffolks Imperiall tongue is stern and rough: Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favour.

Far be it, we should honour such as these

With humble suit: no, rather let my head

Stoop to the block, then these knees bow to any,

Save to the God of heaven; and to my King:

And sooner dance upon a bloody pole,

Then stand uncover'd to the Vulgar Groom.

True Nobility, is exempt from fear:

More can I bear, then you dare execute.

Lien. Hale him away, and let him talk no more:

Come Souldiers, shew what cruelty ye can.

Suf. That this my death may never be forgot.

Great men oft die by vilde Bezonians.

A Roman Sworder, and Bandetto slave

Murder'd sweet Tully. Brutus Bastard hand

Stab'd Julius Caesar. Savage Islanders

Pompey the Great, and Suffolk dies by Pyrats.

Exit Walter with Suffolk.

Lien. And as for these whose ranfome we have let,

It is our pleasure one of them depart:

Therefore come you with us, and let him go.

Exit Lieutenants, and the rest.

Manet the first Gent. Enter Walter with the body.

Wal. There let his head, and livelesse body lie, Untill the Queen his Mistris bury it. Exit Walter.

r. Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle,

His body will I bear unto the King:

If he revenge it not, yet will his Friends,

So will the Queen, that living held him dear. Exit.

Enter Bevis, and John Holland.

Bevis. Come and get thee a sword, though made of a Lath, they have been up these two dayes.

Hol. They have the more need to sleep now then.

Bevis. I tell thee, Jack Cade the Cloathier, means to dresse the Common-wealth and turn it, and set a new nap upon it

Hol. So he had need, 'tis thred-bare. Well, I say, it was never merry world in England, since Gentlemen came up.

Bevis. O miserable Age: Veretue is not regarded in Handy-craftsmen.

Hol. The Nobility think scorn to go in Leather Aprons.

Bevis. Nay more, the Kings Councell are no good Workmen.

Hol. True: and yet it is said, Labour in thy Vocation: which is as much as to say, let the Magistrates be labouring men, and therefore should we be Magistrates, Bevis. Thou hast hit it: for there's no better signe of a brave mind, then a hard hand.

Hol. I see them, I see them: There's Bests Son, the Tanner of Wingham.

Bevis. He shall have the skins of our enemies, to make Dogs Leather of.

Hol. And Dick the Butcher.

Bevis. Then is sin struck down like an Oxe, and iniquities throat cut like a Calf.

Hol. And Smith the Weaver.

Bevis. Argo, their thred of life is spun.

Hol. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drum. Enter Cade, Dick Butcher, Smith the Weaver, and a Sawyer, with infinite numbers.

Cade. We John Cade, so term'd of our supposed Father.

But. Or rather of stealing a Cade of Herrings.

Cade. For our enemies shall fall before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down Kings and Princes. Command silence.

But. Silence.

Cade. My Father was a Mortimer.

But. He was an honest man, and a good Bricklayer.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet.

But. I knew her well, she was a Midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies.

But. She was indeed a Pedlers daughter, and sold many Laces.

Weaver. But now of late, not able to travell with her furr'd Pack, she washes bucks here at home.

Cade. Therefore am I of an honorable house.

But. I by my faith the field is honorable, and there was he born, under a hedge: for his Father had never a house but a Cage.

Cade. Valiant I am.

Weaver. A must needs, for beggery is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

But. No question of that: for I have seen him whipt three Market dayes together.

Cade. I fear neither, sword nor fire.

Weav. He need not fear the sword, for his Coat is of proof.

But. But me thinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i'th hand for stealing of Sheep.

Cade. Be brave then, for your Captain is Brave, and Vows Reformation. There shall be in England, seven half penny Loaves sold for a penny: the three hoop'd pot, shall have ten hoops, and will make it Felony to drink small Beer. All the Realm shall be in Common, and in Cheapside shall my Palfrey go to grass: and when I am King, as King I will be.

All. God save your Majesty.

Cade. I thank you good people. There shall be no money, all shall eat and drink on my score, and I will apparell them all in one Livery, that they may agree like Brothers, and worship me their Lord.

But. The first thing we do, let's kill all the Lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that the skin of an innocent Lamb should be made Parchment; that Parchment being scribeld o're, should undo a man. Some say the Bee stings, but I say, 'tis Bees wax: for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never my own man since. How now? Who's there?

Enter a Clerk.

Weaver. The Clerk of Chattam: he can write and read, and cast accompt.

Cade. O monstrous!

Weav. We took him setting boyes Copies.

Cade.

Cade. Here's a Villain.

Weav. Ha's a Book in his pocket with red Letters in't.

Cade. Nay then he is a Conjuror.

But. Nay, he can make Obligations, and write Court hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: The man is a proper man of mine Honour: unless I find him guilty, he shall not die. Come hither Sirrah, I must examine thee: What is thy name?

Clerk. Emannell.

But. They use to write it on the top of Letters: 'Twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone: Do'st thou use to write thy name? Or hast thou a mark to thy self, like an honest plain dealing man?

Clerk. Sir I thank God, I have been so well brought up, that I can write my name.

All. He hath confest: away with him: he is a Villain and a Traitor.

Cade. Away with him I say: Hang him with his Pen and Ink-horn about his neck.

Exit one with the Clerk.

Enter Michaell.

Mich. Where is our Generall?

Cade. Here I am thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly, Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the Kings Forces.

Cade. Stand villain, stand or I'll fell thee down: he shall be encountred with a man as good as himself. He is but a Knight, is a?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equall him I will make my self a knight presently: Rise up Sir John Mortimer. Now have at him.

Enter Sir Humphrey Stafford, and his Brother, with Drum and Souldiers.

Staf. Rebellious Hinds, the filth and scum of Kent, Mark'd for the Gallows; Lay your Weapons down, Home to your Cottages: forsake this Groom. The King is mercifull, if you revolt.

Bro. But angry, wrathfull, and inclin'd to bloud, If you go forward: therefore yield or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves I passe not, It is to you good people, that I speak, Over whom (in time to come) I hope to reign: For I am rightfull heir unto the Crown.

Staf. Villain, thy Father was a Plasterer, And thou thy self a Shearman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a Gardiner.

Bro. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this Edmond Mortimer Earle of March, married the Duke of Clarence daughter, did he not?

Stafford. I sir.

Cade. By her he had two Children at one birth,

Bro. That's false.

Cade. I, there's the question; But I say, 'tis true: The elder of them being put to nuffe, Was by a begger-woman stoln away, And ignorant of his birth and parentage, Became a Bricklayer, when he came to age. His son am I, deny it if you can.

But. Nay, 'tis too true, therefore he shall be King.

Weav. Sir, he made a Chimney in my Fathers house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testifie it: therefore deny it not.

Staf. And will you credit this base Drudges Words, that speaks he knows not what?

All. I marry will we, therefore get you gone.

Bro. Jack Cade, the D. of York bath taught you this.

Cade. He lyes, for I invented it my self. Go too Sirrah, tell the King from me, that for his Fathers sake Henry the fifth, (in whose time boyes went to Span-counter for French Crowns) I am content he shall reign, but I'll be Protector over him.

But. And further more we'll have the Lord Sayes head, for felling the Dukedome of Main.

Cade. And good reason: for thereby is England main'd. And fain to go with a staffe, but that my puissance holds it up, Fellow-Kings, I tell you, that Lord Say hath gelded the Commonwealth, and made it an Eunuch: and more then that, he can speak French, and therefore he is a Traitor.

Staf. O grosse and miserable ignorance.

Cade. Nay answer if you can: The Frenchmen are our enemies: go too then: I ask but this: Can he that speaks with the tong of an enemy, be a good Councillor, or no?

All. No, no, and therefore we'll have his head.

Bro. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail, Assaile them with the Army of the King.

Staf. Herauld away, and throughout every Town, Proclaim them Traitors that are up with Cade, That those which flye before the battell ends, May even in their wives and Childrens sight, Be hang'd up for example at their doors:

And you that be the Kings friends follow me. Exit.

Cade. And you that love the Commons follow me:

Now shew your selves men, 'tis for Liberty.

We will not leave one Lord, one Gentleman:

Spare none, but such as go in clouted shoon,

For they are thrifty honest men, and such

As would (but that they dare not) take our parts.

But. They are all in order, and march towards us.

Cade. But then are we in order, when we are most out of order. Come, march forward.

Alarums to the fight, wherein both the Staffords are slain.

Enter Cade and the rest.

Cade. Where's Dick, the Butcher of Ashford?

But. Here sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like Sheep and Oxen, and thou behaved'st thy self, as if thou hadst been in thine own Slaughter-house: Therefore thus I will reward thee, the Lent shall be as long again as it is, and thou shalt have a License to kill for a hundred lacking one.

But. I desire no more.

Cade. And to speak truth, thou deserv'st no lesse.

This Monument of the Victory will I bear, and the bodies shall be dragg'd at my horses heels, till I do come to London, where we will have the Maiors sword borne before us.

But. If we mean to thrive, and do good, break open the Goals, and let out the Prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London. Exeunt.

Enter the King with a Supplication, and the Queen with Suffolks head, the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Say.

Queen. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind,

And makes it fearfull and degenerate,
Think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep.
But who can cease to weep, and look on this,
Here may his head lye throbbing on my brest:
But where's the body that I should embrace?

Buc. What answer makes your Grace to the Rebels Supplication?

King. I'll send some holy Bishop to intreat:
For God forbid, so many simple souls
Should perish by the Sword. And I my self,
Rather then bloody war shall cut them short,
Will parly with Jack Cade their Generall
But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Qu. Ah barbarous villains: Hath this lovely face,
Rul'd like a wandering Plannet over me,
And could it not inforce them to relent,
That were unworthy to behold the same?

King. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

Say. I, but I hope your Highnesse shall have his.

King. How now Madam?
Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolks death?
I fear me (Love) if that I had been dead,
Thou would'st not half have mourn'd so much for me.

Que. No my Love, I should not mourn, but dye for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

King. How now? What news? Why com'st thou in such haste?

Mes. The Rebels are in Southwarke: Flye my Lord:
Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer,
Descended from the Duke of Clarence house,
And calls your Grace Usurper openly,
And vows to Crown himself in Westminster.
His Army is a ragged multitude
Of Hinds and Pezants, rude and mercileffe:
Sir Humfrey Stafford, and his Brothers death,
Hath given them heart and courage to proceed:
All Schollers, Lawyers, Courtiers, Gentlemen,
They call false Caterpillers, and intend their death.

King. O graceless men: they know not what they do.

Buc. My gracious Lord, retire to Killingworth,
Untill a power be rais'd to put them down.

Qu. Ah were the Duke of Suffolk now alive,
These Kentish Rebels should be soon appeas'd.

King. Lord Say, the Traitors hate thee,
Therefore away with us to Killingworth.

Say. So might your Graces person be in danger:
The sight of me is odious in their eyes:
And therefore in this City will I stay,
And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

Mes. Jack Cade hath gotten London-bridge,
The Citizens flye him and forsake their houses:
The Rascall people thirsting after prey,
Joyn with the Traitor, and they joyntly swear
To spoyle the City, and your Royall Court.

Buc. Then linger not my Lord, away, take horse.

King. Come Margaret, God our hope will succour us.

Qu. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceas'd.

King. Farewell my Lord, trust not to Kentish Rebels.

Buc. Trust no body for fear you be betraid.

Say. The trust I have, is in mine innocence,

And therefore am I bold and Resolute.

Exeunt.

Enter Lord Scales upon the Tower walking. Then enters two or three Citizens below.

Scales. How now? Is Jack Cade slain?

1. Cit. No my Lord, nor likely to be slain:

For they have won the Bridge,
Killing all those that withstand them:
The L. Maior craves aid of your Honor from the Tower
To defend the City from the Rebels.

Scales. Such aid as I can spare you shall command,
But I am troubled here with them my self.
The Rebels have assay'd to win the Tower.
But get you into Smithfield, and gather head,
And thither will I send you Matthew Goffe.
Fight for your King, your Countrey, and your Lives,
And so farewell, for I must hence again.

Exeunt.

Enter Jack Cade and the rest, and strikes his staffe on London stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer Lord of this City,
And here sitting upon London Stone,
I charge and command, that of the Cities cost
The pissing Conduit run nothing but Claret Wine
The first year of our reign.
And now henceforward it shall be treason for any,
That calls me other then Lord Mortimer.

Enter a Souldier running.

Soul. Jack Cade, Jack Cade.

Cade. Knock him down there. They kill him.

Buc. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call ye *Jack
Cade* more, I think he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My Lord, there's an Army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come, then let's go fight with them:
But first, go and set London Bridge on fire,
And if you can, burn down the Tower too.
Come, let's away.

Exeunt omnes.

*Alarums. Mathew Goffe is slain, and all the rest.
Then enter Jack Cade, with his Company.*

Cade. So first: now go some and pull down the Savoy:
Others to'rth Inns of Court, down with them all.

Buc. I have a suit unto your Lordship.

Cade. Be it a Lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Buc. Onely that the Laws of England may come out of your mouth.

John. Masse 'twill be sore Law then, for he was thrust in the mouth with a Spear, and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith. Nay John, it will be stinking Law, for his breath stinks with tosted Cheese.

Cade. I have thought upon it, it shall be so. Away, burn all the Records of the Realm, my mouth shall be the Parliament of England.

Joh. Then we are like to have biting Statutes.
Unlesse his teeth be pull'd out.

Cade. And hence-forward all things shall be in Common.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord, a prize, a prize, here's the Lord Say, which sold the Towns in France, He that made us pay
one and twenty Fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last Subsidie.

Enter

Enter George with the Lord Say.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times: Ah thou Say, thou Surge, nay thou Buckram Lord, now art thou within point-blank of our Jurisdiction Regall. What canst thou answer to my Majesty, for giving up of Normandy unto Mounſieur Basmeu, the Dolphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the Beesome that must sweep the Court clean of such filth as thou art: Thou hast most traiterously corrupted the youth of the Realm, in erecting a Grammar School: and whereas before, our Fore-fathers had no other Books but the Score and the Tally, thou hast caused printing to be us'd, and contrary to the King, his Crown, and Dignity, thou hast built a Paper-Mill. It will be proved to thy Face, that thou hast men about thee, that usually talk of a Noun and a Verb, and such abominable words, as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed Justices of Peace, to call poor men before them, about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison, and because they could not read, thou hast hang'd them, when (indeed) only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou do'st ride on a foot-cloth, do'st thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou ought'st not to let thy horse wear a Cloak, when honest men then thou go in their Hose and Doublets.

Dick. And work in their shirt too, as my self for example, that am a Butcher.

Say. You men of Kent.

Dick. What say you of Kent?

Say. Nothing but this: 'Tis bona terra, mala gens.

Cade. Away with him, away with him, he speaks Latine.

Say. Heare me but speak, and beare me where you will:

Kent in the Commentaries Cesar writ,
Is term'd the civel'st place of all this Isle:
Sweet is the Country, because full of Riches,
The People Liberal, Valiant, Active, Wealthy,
Which makes me hope thou art not void of pity.
I sold not Main, I lost not Normandy,
Yet to recover them would lose my life:
Justice with favour have I alwayes done,
Prayers and Tears have mov'd me, Gifts could never;
When have I ought exacted at your hands?
Kent to maintain, the King, the Realm and you,
Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned Clerks,
Because my Book preferr'd me to the King.
And seeing Ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the Wing wherewith we flye to heaven,
Unlesse you be possest with devilish spirits,
You cannot but forbear to murder me:
This Tongue hath parlied unto Forraign Kings
For your behoof.

Cade. Tut, when struck'st thou one blow in the field?

Say. Great men have teaching hands: oft have I struck Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.

Geo. O monstrous Coward! What, to come behinde Folks?

Say. These cheeks are pale with watching for your good.

Cade. Give him a box o'th' ear, and that will make'em red again.

Say. Long sitting to determine poor mens causes, Hath made me full of sicknesse and diseases.

Cade. Ye shall have a heipen Candle then, and the help of a hatchet.

Dick. Why do'st thou quiver man?

Say. The Palsie, and not fear provokes me.

Cade. Nay he nods at us, as who should say, I'll be even with you. I'll see if his head will stand steddier on a pole, or no: Take him away and behead him.

Say. Tell me: wherein have I offended most?

Have I affected Wealth, or honor? Speak.

Are my Chests fill'd up with extorted Gold?

Is my apparel sumptuous to behold?

Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death?

These hands are free from guiltlesse bloodshedding,

This brest from harbouring soul deceitfull thoughts.

O let me live.

Cade. I feel remorse in my self with his words: but I'll bridle it: he shall dye, and be it but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him, he ha's a Familiar under his Tongue, he speaks not a Gods name. Go, take him away I say, and strike off his head presently, and then break into his Son in Laws house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah Countrimen; if when you make your prai'rs, God should be so obdurate as your selves:

How would it fare with your departed souls?

And therefore yet relent, and save my life.

Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye: the proudest Peer of the Realm, shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unlesse he pay me tribute: there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay me her Maiden-head ere they have it: Men shall hold of me in Capite. And we charge and command, that their wives be as free as heart can wish, or tongue can tell.

Dick. My Lord,

When shall we go to Cheapside, and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marry presently.

All. O brave.

Enter one with the heads.

Cade. But is not this braver:

Let them kisse one another: For they lov'd well
When they were alive. Now part them again,
Least they consult about the giving up
Of some more Towns in France. Souldiers,
Defer the spoyl of the City untill night;
For with these borne before us, in stead of Maces,
Will we ride through the streets, at every Corner
Have them kisse. Away.

Exit.

Alarm, and Retreat. Enter again Cade, and all his rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish-street; down Saint Magnes corner, kill and knock down, throw them into Thames:

Sound a Parley.

What noyse is this I hear?

Dare any be so bold to sound Retreat or Parley
When I command them kill?

R r 3

Enter

Enter Buckingham, and old Clifford.

Buc. I here they be that dare and will disturb thee:
Know Cade, we come Ambassadors from the King
Unto the Commons whom thou hast misled,
And here pronounce free pardon to them all,
That will forsake thee, and go home in peace.

Clif. What say ye Countrimen, will ye relent
And yield to mercy, whilst 'tis offered you,
Or let a rabble lead you to your deaths.
Who loves the King, and will embrace his pardon,
Fling up his cap and say, God save his Majesty;
Who hateth him, and honors not his Father,
Henry the fifth, that made all France to quake,
Shake he his weapon at us, and passe by.

All. God save the King, God save the King.

Cade What Buckingham and Clifford are ye so brave?
And you base Pezants, do ye believe him, will you needs be hang'd with your Pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the white-heart in Southwarke.
I thought ye would never have given out these Armes till you had recovered your ancient Freedome: but you are all Recreants and Dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the Nobility. Let them break your backs with burthens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your Wives and Daughters before your faces. For me, I will make shift for one, and so Gods Curse light upon you all.

All. We'll follow Cade.
We'll follow Cade.

Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the fifth,
That thus you do exclaim you'll go with him.
Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
And make the meanest of you Earls and Dukes?
Alas, he hath no home, no place to flye to:
Nor knows he how to live, but by the spoyle,
Unlesse by robbing of your Friends, and us.
Wer't not a shame, that whilst you live at jar,
The fearfull French, whom you late vanquished
Should make a start o're seas, and vanquish you?
Me thinks already in this civill broyl,
I see them Lording it in London streets,
Crying Villiano unto all they meet.
Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry,
Then you should stoop unto a Frenchmans mercy.
To France to France, and get what you have lost;
Spare England, for it is your Native Coast:
Henry hath mony, you are strong and manly:
God on our side, doubt not of Victory.

All. A Clifford, a Clifford,
We'll follow the King and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever Feather so lightly blown too and fro, as this multitude? The name of Henry the fifth, hales them to an hundred mischiefs, and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together to surprize me. My sword make way for me, for here is no staying:
in despite of the devills and hell, have through the very middest of you, and heavens and honour be witnesse, that no want of resolution in me, but only my Followers base and ignominious treasons, make me betake me to my heels.

Exit.

Buck. what, is he fled? Go some and follow him,
And he that brings his head unto the King,
Shall have a thousand Crowns for his reward.

Exeunt some of them.

Follow me souldiers, we'll devise a mean,
To reconcile you all unto the King. Exeunt omnes.

Sound Trumpets. Enter King, Queen, and Somerset on the Tarras.

King. Was ever King that joy'd an earthly Throne,
And could command no more content then I?
No sooner was I crept out of my Cradle,
But I was made a King at nine months old:
Was never subject long to be a King,
As I do long and and wish to be a Subject.

Enter Buckingham and Clifford.

Buc. Health and glad tydings to your Majesty.

King. Why Buckingham, is the Traitor Cade surpris'd?
Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter Multitudes with Halters about their Necks.

Clif. He is fled my Lord, and all his powers do yield,
And humbly thus with halters on their necks,
Expect your Highness doom of life or death.

King. Then heaven set ope thy everlasting gates,
To entertain my vows of thanks and praise.
Souldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives,
And shew'd how well you love your Prince and Country:
Continue still in this so good a mind.
And Henry though he be unfortunate,
Assure your selves will never be unkind:
And so with thanks and pardon to you all,
I do dismisse you to your severall Countries.

All. God save the King, God save the King.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Please it your Grace to be advertis'd,
The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland,
And with a puissant and mighty power
Of Gallow-glasses and stout Kernes,
Is marching hitherward in proud array,
And still proclaimeth as he comes along,
His Armies are only to remove from thee
The Duke of Somerset, whom he termes a Traitor.

King. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York
distrest,

Like to a Ship, that having scap'd a Tempest,
Is straightway claim'd and boarded with a Pyrate,
But now is Cade driven back, his men dispierc'd,
And now is York in armes to second him.

I pray thee Buckingham go and meet him,
And ask him what's the reason of these Armes:
Tell him, I'll send Duke Edmund to the Tower,
And Somerset we will commit thee thither,
Untill his Army be dismiss from him.

Somer. My Lord,
I'll yield my self to prison willingly,
Or unto death, to do my Country good.

King. In any case, be not to rough in termes,
For he is fierce, and cannot brook hard Language.

Buck. I will my Lord, and doubt not so to deal,
As all things shall redound unto your good.

King. Come Wife, let's in, and learn to govern better,
For yet may England curse my wretched reign.

*Exeunt.
Enter.*

Enter Jack Cade.

Cade. Fie on Ambition : fie on my self, that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish. These five dayes have I hid me in these Woods, and durst not peep out, for all the Country is laid for me : but now am I hungry, that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years, I could stay no longer. Wherefore on a Brick wall have I climb'd into this Garden, to see if I can eat Grasse, or pick a Sallet another while, which is not amisse to cool a mans stomach this hot weather : and I think this word Sallet was born to do me good ; for many a time but for a Sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown Bill ; and many a time when I have been dry, & bravely marching, it hath serv'd me instead of a quart pot to drink in : and now the word Sallet must serve me to feed on.

Enter Iden.

Iden. Lord who would live turmoyled in the Court, And inay enjoy such quiet walks as these ? This small inheritance my Father left me, Contenteth me, and worth a Monarchy. I seek not to wax great by others warning, Or gather wealth I care not with what envy : Sufficeth, that I have maintains my state, And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here's the Lord of the soile come to seize me for a stray, for entring his Fee-simple without leave. Ah Villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a 1000. Crowns of the King by carrying my head to him, but I'll make thee eat Iron like an Ostridge, and swallow my Sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why rude Companion, whatsoere thou be, I know thee not, why then should I betray thee ? Is't not enough to break into my Garden, And like a thief to come to rob my grounds : Climbing my walls in spight of me the Owner, But thou wilt brave me with these sawcie tearms ?

Cade. Brave thee ? I by the best blood that ever was braach'd, and beard thee too. Look on me well, I have eat no meat these five dayes, yet come thou and thy five men, and If I do not leave you all as dead as a door nail, I pray God I may never eat grasse more.

Iden. Nay, it shall ne're be said, while England stands, That Alexander Iden an Esquire of Kent, Took odds to combate a poor famisht man. Oppose thy stedfast gazing eyes to mine, See if thou canst out-face me with thy looks : Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser : Thy hand is but a finger to my fist, Thy leg a stick compared with this Truncheon, My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast, And if mine armie be heaved in the aire, Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth : As for words, whose greatnesse answers words, Let this my sword report what speech forbears.

Cade. By my Valour : the most compleat Champion that ever I heard. Steel, if thou turn the edge, or, cut not out the burly bon'd Clown in chins of Beef, ere thou sleep in thy Sheath, I beseech Jove on my knees thou mayst be turnd to Hobnails.

Here they fight.

O I am slain, Famine and no other hath slain me, let ten thousand devills come against me, and give me but the ten meales I have lost, and I'll deifie them all. Wither Garden, and be henceforth a burying place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor ? Sword, I will hollow thee for this thy deed, And hang thee o're my Tomb, when I am dead. Ne're shall this blood be wiped from thy point, But thou shalt wear it as a Herald's coat, To emblaze the Honor thy Master got.

Cade. Iden farewell, and be proud of thy victory : Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the World to be Cowards : for I that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by Valour. Dies.

Id. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven be my judge ; Die damned Wretch, the curse of her that bare thee : And as I thrust thy body in with my sword, So wish I, I might thrust thy soul to hell. Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels Unto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave, And there cut off thy most ungracious head, Which I will bear in triumph to the King, Leaving thy trunk for Crows to feed upon. Exit.

Enter York, and his Army of Irish, with Drum and Colours.

Yor. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right, And pluck the Crown from feeble Henries head. Ring, Bells aloud, burn Bonfires clear and bright To entertain great Englands lawfull King. Ah Santa Majestas ? who would not buy thee dear ? Let them obey, that knows not how to Ruie. This hand was made to handle nought but Gold. I cannot give due action to my words, Except a Sword or Scepter ballance it. A Scepter shall it have, have I a soul, On which I'll toss the Floure-de-Luse of France.

Enter Buckingham

Whom have we here ? Buckingham to disturb me ? The King hath sent him sure : I must dissemble.

Buc. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

Yor. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting. Art thou a Messenger, or come of pleasure.

Buc. A Messenger from Henry, our dread Liege, To know the reason of these Armies in peace. Or why, thou being a Subject, as I am, Against thy Oath, and true Allegiance sworn, Should raise so great a power without his leave ? Or dare to bring thy Force so near the Court ?

Yor. Scarce can I speak, my Choler is so great. Oh I could hew up Rocks, and fight with Flint, I am so angry at these abject termes.

And now like Ajax Telamonius, On Sheep or Oxen could I spend my fury. I am far better born then is the King : More like a King, more Kingly in my thoughts. But I must make fair weather yet a while, Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong.

O Buckingham, I prethee pardon me, That I have given no answer all this while : My mind was troubled with deep Melancholly. The cause why I have brought this army hither,

Is.

Is to remove proud Somerſet from the King,
Seditious to his Grace, and the State.

Buc. That is too much preſumption on thy part :
But if thy Armes be to no other end,
The King hath yielded unto thy demand :
The Duke of Somerſet is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine Honor is he Priſoner ?

Buc. Upon mine Honor he is Priſoner ?

York. Then Buckingham, I do diſmiſſe my Powers.
Souldiers I thank you all : diſperſe your ſelves :
Meet me to morrow in S. Georges field,
You ſhall have pay, and every thing you wiſh.
And let my Sovereign, vertuous Henry,
Command my eldeſt ſon, nay all my ſons,
As pledges of my Fealty and Love,
I'll ſend them all as willing as I live :
Lands, Goods, Horſe, Armor, any thing I have
Is his to uſe, ſo Somerſet may die.

Buck. York, I commend this kind ſubmiſſion,
We twain will go into his Highneſſe Tent.

Enter King and Attendants.

King. Buckingham, doth York intend no harme to us,
That thus he marcheth with thee Arme in Arme ?

York. In all ſubmiſſion and humility,
York doth preſent himſelf unto your Highneſſe.

King. Then what intends theſe forces thou doſt bring ?

York. To have the Traitor Somerſet from hence,
And fight againſt that monſtrous Rebell Cade,
Whom ſince I heard to be diſcomfited.

Enter Iden with Cades head.

Iden. If one ſo rude, and of ſo mean condition
May paſſe into the preſence of a King :
Loe, I preſent your Grace a Traitors head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat ſlew.

King. The head of Cade? Great God, how juſt art thou?
O let me view his Viſage being dead,
That living wrought me ſuch exceeding trouble.
Tell me my Friend, art thou the man that ſlew him ?

Iden. I was, an't like your Maſteſty.

King. How art thou call'd ? And what is thy degree ?

Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name,
A poor Eſquire of Kent, that love the King.

Buck. So pleaſe it you my Lord, 'twere not amiſſe
He were created Knight for his good ſervice.

King. Iden, kneel down, riſe up a Knight :
We give thee for reward a thouſand Marks,
And will, that thou henceforth attend on us.

Iden. May Iden live to merit ſuch a bounty,
And never live but true unto his Liege.

Enter Queen and Somerſet.

King. See Buckingham, Somerſet, comes with th' Queen,
Go bid her hide him quickly from the Duke.

Queen. For thouſand Yorks he ſhall not hide his head,
But boldly ſtand and front him to his face,

York. How now ? is Somerſet at liberty ?
Then York unloofe thy long imprifoned thoughts,
And let thy tongue be equall with thy heart.
Shall I endure the ſight of Somerſet ?

False King, why haſt thou broken faith with me,
Knowing how hardly I can brook abuſe ?
King did I call thee ? no, thou art no King :
Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,
Which durſt not, no nor canſt nor rule a Traitor.

That head of thine doth not become a Crown :
Thy hand is made to graſpe a Palmers ſtaffe,
And not to grace an awfull Princely Scepter.
That Gold, muſt round engirt the brows of mine,
Whoſe ſmile and frown, like Achilles Spear
Is able with the change, to kill and cure.

Here is a hand to hold a Scepter up,
And with the ſame to act controlling Laws :
Give place : by heaven thou ſhalt rule no more
O're him, whom heaven created for thy Ruler.

Som. O monſtrous Traitor ! I arreſt thee York,
Of Capitall Treason 'gainſt the King and Crown :
Obey audacious Traitor, kneel for Grace.

York. Would'ſt have me kneel? Firſt let me aſk of thee,
If they can brook I bow a knee to man :
Sirrah, call in my ſons to be my bail :

I know ere they will let me go to Ward,
They'll pawn their ſwords for thy infranchiſement.

Queen. Call hither Clifford, bid him come again,
To ſay, if that the Baſtard boyes of York
Shall be the Surety for their Traitor Father.

York. O bloud-beſpotted Neapolitan,
Out-caſt of Naples, Englands bloody Scourge :
The ſons of York, thy betters in their birth,
Shall be their Fathers Bail, and bane to thoſe
That for my Surety will reſuſe the Boyes.

Enter Edward and Richard.

See where they come, I'll warrant they'll make it good.

Enter Clifford.

Queen. And here comes Clifford to deny their bail.

Cliff. Health and all happineſſe to my Lord the King.

York. I thank thee Clifford. Say, what news with thee?
Nay, do not fright me with an angry look :

We are thy Sovereign Clifford, kneel again ;
For thy miſtaking ſo, We pardon thee.

Cliff. This is my King, York, I do not miſtake,
But thou miſtakeſt me much to think I do,
To Bedlem with him, is the man grown mad ?

King. I Clifford, a Bedlem and ambitious humor
Makes him oppoſe himſelf againſt his King.

Cliff. He is a Traitor, let him to the Tower,
And crop away that factious pate of his.

Queen. He is arreſted, but will not obey :
His ſons (he ſayes) ſhall give their words for him.

York. Will you not ſons ?

Edm. I Noble Father, if our words will ſerve.

Rich. And if words will not, then our Weapons ſhall.

Cliff. Why what a brood of Traitors have we here ?

York. Look in a Glaſs, and call thy Image ſo.
I am the King, and thou a falſe-heart Traitor :
Call hither to the ſtake my two brave Bears,
That with the very ſhaking of their Chains,
They may aſtoniſh theſe fell-lurking Currs :
Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me.

Enter the Earls of Warwick and Salisbury.

Cliff. Are theſe thy Bears? We'll bait thy Bears to death,
And manacle the Bearard in their Chains,
If thou dar'ſt bring them to the baiting place.

Rich. Oft have I ſeen a hot ore-weening Cur,
Run back and bite, becauſe he was with-held,
Who being ſuffer'd with the Bears fell paw,
Hath clapt his tail, between his legs and cride,
And ſuch a piece of ſervice will you do,

If you suppose your selves to match Lord Warwick,

Clif. Hence heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,
As crooked in thy manners, as thy shape.

York. Nay we shall heat you thoroughly anon.

Clif. Take heed least by your heat you burn your selves.

King. Why Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?

Old Salisbury, shame to thy silver hair,

Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son,

What wilt thou on thy death-bed play the Ruffian?

And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles?

Oh where is Faith? Oh where is Loyalty?

If it be banish'd from the frosty head,

Where shall it find a harbour in the earth?

Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out War,

And shame thine honourable age with blood?

Why art thou old, and want'st experience?

Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it?

For shame in duty bend thy knee to me,

That bows unto the grave with milky age.

Sal. My Lord, I have considered with my self

The Title of this most renowned Duke,

And in my conscience, do repute his grace

The rightfull heir to Englands Royal seat.

King. Hast thou not sworn Allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have.

King. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin, to swear unto a sin:

But greater sin to keep a sinfull oath:

Who can be bound by any solemn Vow

To do a murd'rous deed, to rob a man,

To force a spotlesse Virgins Chastity,

To reave the Orphan of his Patrimony,

To wring the Widow from her custom'd right,

And have no other reason for this wrong,

But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

Qu. A subtle Traitor needs no Sophister.

King. Call Buckingham, and bid him arme himself.

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,
I am resolv'd for death and dignity.

Old Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.

War. You were best to go to bed, and dream again,
To keep thee from the Tempest of the field.

Old Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm,

Then any thou canst conjure up to day:

And that I'll write upon thy Burgonet,

Might I but know thee by thy houses Badge.

War. Now by my Fathers badge, old Nevels Crest,

The rampant Bear chain'd to the ragged staff,

This day I'll wear aloft my Burgonet,

As on a Mountain top, the Cedar shews,

That keeps his leaves in spight of any storm,

Even so affright thee with the view thereof.

Old Clif. And from thy Burgonet I'll rend thy Bear,

And tread it underfoot with all contempt,

Despight the Bearard, that protects the Bear.

Yo. Clif. And so to Armes victorious noble Father,

To quell the Rebels, and their Complices.

Rich. Fie, Charity for shame, speak not in spight,

For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to night.

Yo. Clif. Foul stigmatick, that's more then thou canst
tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell. Exeunt

Enter Warwick.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls:
And if thou do'st not hide thee from the Bear,

Now when the angry Trumpet sounds alarm,
And dead mens cries do fill the empty air,
Clifford I say, come forth and fight with me,
Proud Northern Lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to armes.

Enter York.

War. How now my Noble Lord? What all a-foot.

York. The deadly handed Clifford slew my steed:
But match to match I have encountred him,
And made a prey for Carrion Kytes and Crows
Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well.

Enter Clifford.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

York. Hold Warwick: seek thee out some other chase,
For I my self must hunt this Deer to death.

War. Then nobly York, 'tis for a Crown thou fight'st:
As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd. Exit War.

Clif. What seest thou in me York?

Why do'st thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love,
But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem.
But that 'tis shewn ignobly, and in Treason.

York. So let it help me against thy sword,
As I in justice, and true right expresse it.

Clif. My soul and body on the action both.

York. A dreadful day, addresse thee instantly.

Clif. La fin Couronne les oeures. Dies.

York. Thus War hath given thee peace, for thou art still,
Peace with his soul, heaven if it be thy will.

Enter young Clifford.

Clif. Shame and confusion all is on the rout,
Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds
Where it should guard. O War thou son of hell,
Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosomes of our part,
Hot Coals of Vengeance. Let no Souldiers flye.
He that is truly dedicate to War,
Hath no self-love: nor he that loves himself,
Hath not essentially, but by circumstance
The name of Valour. O let the vile world end,
And the premised Flames of the last day,
Knit earth and heaven together.

Now let the generall Trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities, and petty sounds
To cease. Was't thou ordained (O dear Father)
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve
The Silver Livery of advised Age,
And in thy Reverence, and thy Chair-dayes, thus
To die in Ruffian battell? Even at this sight,
My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis mine,
It shall be stony. York, not our old men spares:
No more will I their Babes, Tears Virginall,
Shall be to me, even as the Dew to Fire,
And Beauty, that the Tyrant oft reclaims,
Shall to my flaming wrath, be Oyle and Flax:
Henceforth, I will not have to do with pitty,
Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many gobbet will I cut it
As wilde Medea, young Abfissis did.
In cruelty, will I seek out my Fame.
Come thou new ruine of old Cliffords house:
As did Aeneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders:
But then, Aeneas bare a living load;

Nothing

Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine.

Enter Richard, and Somerset to fight.

Rich. So lie thou there:
For underneath an Ale-house paltry signe,
The Castle in S. Albans, Somerset
Hath made the Wizard famous in his death:
Sword, hold thy temper; Heart, be wrathfull still:
Priests pray for enemies, but Princes kill.

Fight.

Excursions.

Enter King, Queen, and others.

Qu. Away my Lord, you are slow, for shame away.

King. Can we out-run the Heavens? Good Margaret stay.

Qu. What are you made of? You'll not fight nor flye:
Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence,
To give the enemy way, and to secure us
By what we can, which can no more but flye.

Alarum afar off.

If you be tane, we then should see the bottome
Of all our Fortunes: but if we haply scape,
(As well we may, if not through your neglect)
We shall to London get, where you are lov'd,
And where this breach now in our fortunes made
May readily be stop't.

Enter Clifford.

Clif. But that my heart's on future mischief set,
I would speak blasphemy e're bid you flye:
But flye you must: Uncircurable discomfite
Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away for your relief, and we will live
To see their day, and them our Fortune give.
Away my Lord, away.

Exeunt.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter York, Richard, Warwick, and Souldiers, with Drum and Colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him,
That winter Lyon, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions, and all brush off Time:
And like a Gallant, in the brow of youth,
Repairs him with Occasion. This happy day
Is not it selfe, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My Noble Father:

Three times to day I hope him to his horse,
Three times bestri'd him: Thrice I led him off,
Perswaded him from any further act:
But still where danger was, still there I met him,
And like rich hangings in an homely house,
So was his will, in his old feeble body.
But Noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. Now by my Sword, well hast thou fought to day:
By'th'Masse so did we all. I thank you Richard.
God knows how long it is I have to live:
And it hath pleas'd him that three times to day
You have defended me from eminent death.
Well Lords, we have not got that which we have,
'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repairing Nature.

York. I know our safety is to follow them,
For (as I hear) the King is fled to London,
To call a present Court of Parliament.
Let us pursue him e're the Writsgo forth.
What sayes Lord Warwick, shall we after them?

War. After them! nay before them if we can:
Now by my hand (Lords) 'twas a glorious day.
Saint Albans battell won by famous York,
Shall we be eterniz'd in all Age to come.
Sound Drum and Trumpets, and to London all,
And more such dayes as these, to us befall.

Exeunt.

F I N I S.

The third Part of King HENRY the Sixth. with the death of the Duke of YORK.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Alarum.

Enter Plantagenet, Edward, Norfolk, Mountague, Warwick, and Souldiers.

Warwick.

Wonder how the King escap'd our hands?
Pl. While we pursu'd the Horsmen of the North,
 He slyly stole away, and left his men:
 Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland,
 Whose Warlike ears could never brook retreat,
 Chear'd up the drooping Army, and himself.
 Lord Clifford and Lord Stafford all a-breast
 Charg'd our main Battells Front: and breaking in,
 Were by the Swords of Common Souldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's Father, Duke of Buckingham,
 Is either slain or wounded dangerous.
 I cleft his Beaver with a down-right blow:
 That this is true (Father) behold his blood.

Mount. And Brother, here's the Earle of Wiltshires
 Whom I encountred as the Battells joyn'd. (blood)

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.

Plan. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons:
 But is your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?

Nor. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt.

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henries head.

Warm. And so do I, victorious Prince of York.

Before I see thee seated in the Throne,
 Which now the House of Lancaster usurps,
 I vow by Heaven, these eyes shall never close.

This is the Pallace of the fearfull King,
 And this the Regall Seat: possesse it York,
 For this is thine, and not King Henries Heirs.

Plant. Assist me then, sweet Warwick, and I will,
 For hither we have broken in by force.

Nor. We'll all assist you: he that flies shall die.

Plant. Thanks gentle Norfolk, stay by me my Lords,
 And Souldiers stay and lodge by me this Night.

They go up.

War. And when the King comes, offer him no violence,
 Unless he seek to thrust you out perforce.

Plant. The Queen this day here holds her Parliament,
 But little thinks we shall be of her counsell,
 By words or blows here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this House.

War. The bloody Parliament shall this be call'd,
 Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be King,

And bashfull Henry depos'd, whose Cowardize
 Hath made us by-words to our enemies.

Plant. Then leave me not, my Lords be resolute,
 I mean to take possession of my right.

War. Neither the King, nor he that loves him best,
 The proudest he that holds up Lancaster,
 Dares stir a Wing, if Warwick shake his Bells.
 I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares:
 Resolve thee Richard, claim the English Crown.

Enter King Henry, Clifford, Northumberland, Westmerland, Exeter, and the rest.

Hen. My Lords, look where the sturdy Rebell sits,
 Even in the Chair of State: belike he means,
 Backt by the power of Warwick, that false Peer,
 To aspire unto the Crown, and reign as King,
 Earle of Northumberland, he slew thy Father,
 And thine, Lord Clifford, & you both have vow'd revenge
 On him, his sons, his favorites, and his friends.

North. If I be not, Heavens be reveng'd on me.

Clifford. The hope thereof, makes Clifford mourn in Steel.

West. What, shall we suffer this? let's pluck him down,
 My heart for anger burns, I cannot brook it.

Henry. Be patient, gentle Earle of Westmerland.

Clifford. Patience is for Poultroones, and such is he:
 He durst not sit there had your Father liv'd.
 My gracious Lord, here in the Parliament
 Let us assayl the Family of York.

North. Well hast thou spoken, Cousin be it so.

Henry. Ah, know you not the City favours them,
 And they have troops of Souldiers at their beck?

Westm. But when the Duke is slain, they'll quickly flye.

Henry. Far be the thought of this from Henries heart.
 To make a shambles of the Parliament House.
 Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats,
 Shall be the War that Henry means to use:
 Thou factious Duke of York, descend my Throne,
 And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet,
 I am thy Sovereign.

York. I am thine.

Exet. Far shame come down, he made thee Duke of York.

York. It was my Inheritance, as the Earldome was.

Exet. Thy

Thy Father was a Traitor to the Crown.

War. Exeter thou art a Traitor to the Crown.

In following this usurping Henry.

Clifford. Whom should he follow, but his naturall King?

War. True Clifford, and that's Richard Duke of York.

Henry. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my Throne?

York. It must and shall be so, content thy self.

Warw. Be Duke of Lancaster, let him be King.

Westm. He is both King, and Duke of Lancaster, And that the Lord of Westmerland shall maintain.

War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget, That we are those which chas'd you from the field, And slew your Fathers, and with Colours spread March'd through the City to the Pallace Gates.

North. Yes Warwick, I remember it to my grief. And by his Soul, thou and thy House shall rue it.

West. Plantagenet, of thee and these thy Sons, Thy Kinsmen, and thy Friends, I'll have more lives Than drops of blood were in my Fathers Veins.

Cliff. Urge it no more, lest that instead of words I send thee, Warwick, such a Messenger, As shall revenge his death, before I stir.

Warw. Poor Clifford, how I scorn his worthlesse Threats.

Plant. Will you we shew our Title to the Crown? If not, our Swords shall plead it in the field.

Henry. What Title hast thou Traitor to the Crown? My Father was as thou art, Duke of York, Thy Grandfather Roger Mortimer, Earle of March. I am the Son of Henry the Fifth, Who made the Dolphin and the French to stoop, And seiz'd upon their Towns and Provinces.

Warw. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.

Henry. The Lord Protector lost it, and not I: When I was crown'd I was but nine months old.

Rich. You are old enough now, And yet me thinks you lose: Father tear the Crown from the Usurpers Head.

Edward. Sweet Father do so, set it on your Head.

Mount. Good Brother, As thou lov'st and honorest Armes, Let's fight it out, and not stand cavilling thus.

Richard. Sound Drums and Trumpets, and the King will flye.

Plant. Sons peace.

Henry. Peace thou, and give King Henry leave to speak.

Warw. Plantagenet shall speak first: Hear him Lords, And be you silent and attentive too, For he that interrupts him, shall not live.

Hen. Think'st thou, that I will leave my Kingly Throne, Wherein my Grandfire and my Father sat? No: first shall War unpeople this my Realm; I, and their Colours often borne in France, And now in England, to our hearts great sorrow, Shall be my Winding-sheet. Why faint you Lords? My Title's good, and better far then his.

Warw. But prove it Henry, and thou shalt be King.

Hen. Henry the Fourth by Conquest got the Crown.

Plant. 'Twas by rebellion against his King.

Hen. I know not what to say, my Title's weak: Tell me, may not a King adopt an Heir?

Plant. What then?

Plant. If he may, then am I lawfull King: For Richard, in the view of many Lords, Resign'd the Crown to Henry the Fourth, Whose Heir my Father was, and I am his.

Plant. He rose against him, being his Sovereign, And made him to resign his Crown perforce.

Warw. Suppose, my Lords, he did it unconstrain'd, Think you 'twere prejudiciall to his Crown?

Exet. No: for he could not so resign his Crown, But that the next Heir should succeed and reign.

Henry. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter?

Exet. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.

Plant. Why whisper you, my Lords, and answer not?

Exet. My Conscience tells me he is lawfull King.

Henry. All will revolt from me, and turn to him.

North. Plantagenet, for all the Claim thou lay'st, Think not, that Henry shall be so depos'd.

Warw. Depos'd he shall be in despite of all.

Northumb. Thou art deceiv'd:

'Tis not thy Southern power Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent, Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud, Can set the Duke up in despite of me.

Cliff. King Henry, be thy Title right or wrong, Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence: May that ground gape, and swallow me alive; Where I shall kneel to him that slew my Father.

Hen. Oh Clifford, how thy words revive my heart.

Plant. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy Crown: What mutter you, or what conspire you Lords?

Warw. Do right unto this Princely Duke of York, Or I will fill the house with armed men, And o're the Chair of State, where now he sits, Write up his Title with usurping blood.

He stamps with his foot, and the Souldiers shew themselves

Henry. My Lord of Warwick, hear me but one word, Let me for this time reign as King.

Plant. Confirm the Crown to me, and to mine Heirs, And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.

Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet Enjoy the Kingdome after my decease.

Clifford. What wrong is this unto the Prince, your Son?

War. What good is this to England, and himself?

Westm. Base, fearfull, and despairing Henry.

Cliff. How hast thou injur'd both thy self and us?

Westm. I cannot stay to hear these Articles.

Northumb. Nor I

Clifford. Come Cousin, let us tell the Queen these News..

West. Farewell faint-hearted and degenerate King, In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

North. Be thou a prey unto the House of York, And die in Bands, for this unmanly deed.

Cliff. In dreadfull War may'st thou be overcome, Or live in peace abandon'd and despis'd.

Warw. Turn this way Henry, and regard them not.

Exeter. They seek revenge, and therefore will not yield.

Henry. Ah Exeter.

Warw. Why should you sigh my Lord?

Hen. Not for my self Lord Warwick, but my Son, Whom I unnaturally shall dis-inherit But be it as it may: I here entayle The Crown to thee and to thine heirs for ever, Conditionally, that here you take an Oath, To cease this Civill War: and whil'st I live,

To honour me as thy King and Sovereign :
Neither by Treason nor Hostility,
To seek to put me down, and reign thy self.

Plant. This Oath I willingly take, and will perform.
War. Long live King Henry: Plantagenet embrace him.
Henry. And long live thou, & these thy forward Sons.
Plant. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.
Exet. Accurst be he that seeks to make them foes.

Sonet. Here they come down.

Plant. Farewell my gracious Lord, I'll to my Castle.
War. And I'll keep London with my Souldiers.
Nor. And I to Norfolk with my followers.
Mount. And I unto the Sea, from whence I came.
Hen. And I with grief and sorrow to the Court.

Enter the Queen.

Exet. Here comes the Queen,
Whose looks bewray her anger
I'll steal away.

Henry. Exeter, so will I.

Queen. Nay, go not from me, I will follow thee.

Hen. Be patient, gentle Queen, and I will stay.

Quee. Who can be patient in such extreames?

Ah wretched man, would I had d'd a Maid,
And never seen thee, never born thee Son,
Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnaturall a Father.
Hath he deserv'd to lose his Birth-right thus?
Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I,
Or felt that pain which I did for him once,
Or nourisht him, as I did with my blood;
Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there,
Rather then made that savage Duke thine Heir,
And dis-inherited thine only Son.

Prin. Father, you cannot dis-inherit me:
If you be King, why should not I succeed?

Hen. Pardon me, Margaret, pardon me, sweet Son,
The Earl of Warwick and the Duke enforce't me.

Quee. Enforce't thee? art thou King, and wilt be forc't?
I shame to hear thee speak: ah timorous Wretch,
Thou hast undone thy self, thy Son, and me,
And given unto the house of York such head,
As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.
To entaile him and his Heirs unto the Crown,
What is it, but to make thy Sepulcher,
And creep into it far before thy time?

Warwick is Chancellour, and the Lord of Callice,
Stern Falconbridge commands the Narrow Seas,
The Duke is made Protector of the Realm,
And yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds
The trembling Lamb, invironed with Wolves.
Had I been there, which am a silly Woman,
The Souldiers should have tosd me on their Pikes,
Before I would have granted to that Act.

But thou preferrest thy Life before thine honour.
And seeing thou do'st, I here divorce my self,
Both from thy Table, Henry, and thy Bed,
Untill that Act of Parliament be repealed.
Whereby my Son is dis-inherited.

The Northern Lords, that have forsworn thy Colours,
Will follow mine, if once they see them spread:
And spread they shall be, to thy foul disgrace,
And utter ruine of the House of York.

Thus do I leave thee: Come Son, let's away,
Our Army is ready, come, we'll after them,

Henry. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Queen. Thou hast spoke too much already: get thee gone.

Hen. Gentle Son Edward, thou wilt stay with me?

Quee. I, to be murder'd by his enemies.

Prin. When I return with victory from the field,
I'll see your Grace: till then I'll follow her.

Quee. Come, Son, away, we may not linger thus.

Hen. Poor Queen,

How love to me, and to her Son,
Hath made her break out into termes of Rage.
Reveng'd may she be on that hatefull Duke,
Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
Will cost my Crown, and like an empty Eagle,
Tyre on the Flesh of me, and of my Son.
The losse of those three Lords torments my heart:
I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair;
Come, Cousin, you shall be the Messenger.

Exet. And I hope, shall reconcile them all. Exit.

Enter Richard, Edward, and Montague.

Richard. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.

Edw. No, I can better play the Orator.

Monn. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter the Duke of York.

Yor. Why, how now Sons and Brothers, at a strife?
What is your Quarrell? how began it first?

Edw. No Quarrell, but a slight Contention.

Yor. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your Grace and us;
The Crown of England, Father, which is yours.

Yor. Mine, Boy? not untill King Henry be dead.

Rich. Your Right depends not on his life, or death.

Edw. Now you are Heir, therefore enjoy it now:
By giving the House of Lancaster leave to breathe,
It will out-run you, Father, in the end.

Yor. I took an Oath, that he should quietly reign.

Edw. But for a Kingdome any Oath may be broken:
I would break thousand Oathes to reign one year.

Richard. No: God forbid, your Grace should be forsworn.

Yor. I shall be, if I claim by open War.

Richard. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak.

Yor. Thou canst not, Son, 'tis impossible.

Rich. An Oath is of no moment, being not took
Before a true and lawfull Magistrate,
That hath authority over him that sweares.

Henry had none, but did usurp the place.
Then seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,
Your Oath, my Lord, is vain and frivolous.
Therefore to Armes: and, Father, do but think,
How sweet a thing it is to wear a Crown,
Within whose Circuit is Elizium,
And all that Poets fain of Blisse and Joy.

Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest,
Untill the White Rose that I wear, be dy'd
Even in the luke-warm blood of Henry's heart.

Yor. Richard, enough: I will be King, or die.
Brothers, thou shalt to London presently,
And whet on Warwick to this Enterprife.

S.

Thou

Thou, Richard, shalt to the Duke of Norfolk,
And tell him privily of our intent:
You, Edward, shall unto my Lord Cobham,
With whom the Kentish-men will willingly rise.
In them I trust; for they are Souldiers,
Witty, courteous, liberall, full of spirit.
While you are thus employ'd, what resteth more,
But that I seek occasion how to rise?
And yet the King not privy to my drift,
Nor any of the House of Lancaster.

Enter Gabriel.

But stay, what Newes? why comm'st thou in such poste?

Gabriel. The Queen,
With all the Northern Earls and Lords,
Intend here to besiege you in your Castle.
She is hard by, with twenty thousand men:
And therefore fortifie your hold, my Lord.

Yor. I, with my Sword.
What? think'st thou, that we fear them?
Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me,
My Brother Mountague shall poste to London.
Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,
Whom we have left Protectors of the King.
With powerfull Policy strengthen themselves,
And trust not simple Henry, nor his Oathes.

Moun. Brother, I go: I'll win them, fear it not.
And thus most humbly I do take my leave.

Exit Mountague.

Enter Mortimer, and his Brother.

Yor. Sir John, and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine Unckles,
You are come to Sandall in a happy hour.

The Army of the Queen means to besiege us.

John. She shall not need, we'll meet her in the field.

Yor. What, with five thousand men?

Rich. I, with five hundred, Father, for a need.
A Woman's Generall: what should we fear?

A March afar off.

Edw. I hear their Drummes:
Let's set our men in order,
And issue forth, and bid them Battell straight.

Yor. Five men to twenty: though the oddes be great,
I doubt not, Unckle, of our Victory.
Many a Battell have I won in France,
When as the Enemy hath been ten to one:
Why should I not now have the like successe?

Alarum.

Exit.

Enter Rutland, and his Tutor.

Rutl. Ah, whether shall I flye, to scape their hands?
Ah, Tutor, look where bloody Clifford comes.

Enter Clifford.

Clifford. Chaplain, away, thy Priesthood saves thy
As for the Brat of this accursed Duke, (life,
Whose Father slew my Father, he shall die.

Tutor. And I, my Lord, will bear him company.

Cliff. Souldiers, away with him.

Tutor. Ah Clifford, murder not this innocent Child,
Least thou be hated both of God and Man.

Exit.

Clifford. How now? is he dead already?
Or is it fear that makes him close his eyes?
I'll open them.

Rutl. So looks the pent-up Lyon o're the wretch,
That trembles under his devouring Paws:
And so he walks, insulting o're his Prey,
And so he comes to rend his Limbs asunder.
Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy Sword,
And not with such a cruel threatening Look.
Sweet Clifford, hear me speak, before I die:
I am too mean a subject for thy wrath,
Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live.

Cliff. In vain thou speak'st, poor Boy:
My Fathers blood hath stoppt the passage
Where thy words should enter.

Rutl. Then let my Fathers blood open it again,
He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Cliff. Had I thy Brethren here, their lives and thine
Were not revenge sufficient for me:
No, if I digg'd up thy fore-fathers Graves,
And hung their rotten Coffins up in Chains,
It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart.
The sight of any of the House of York,
Is as a Fury to torment my Soul:
And till I root out their accursed Line,
And leave not one alive, I live in hell.

Therefore----

Rutl. Oh let me pray, before I take my death:
To thee I pray; sweet Clifford, pitty me.

Clifford. Such pitty as my Rapiers point affords.

Rutl. I never did thee harm: why wilt thou slay
me?

Cliff. Thy Father hath.

Rutl. But 'twas ere I was born.

Thou hast one Son, for his sake pitty me,
Least in revenge thereof, sith God is just,
He be as miserably slain as I.

Ah, let me live in Prison all my dayes,
And when I give occasion of offence,
Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.

Cliff. No cause? thy Father slew my Father: therefore die.

Rutl. Dii faciant laudis summa sit ista tua.

Cliff. Plantagenet, I come Plantagenet:
And this thy Sons blood cleaving to my Blade,
Shall rust upon my Weapon, till thy blood
Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both. Exit.

Alarum. Enter Richard, Duke of York.

Yor. The Army of the Queen hath got the field:
My Unckles both are slain in rescuing me,
And all my followers to the eager foe
Turn back, and flye, like Ships before the wind,
Or Lambs pursu'd by hunger-starved Wolves.
My Sons, God knows what hath bechanced them:
But this I know, they have demean'd themselves
Like men born to Renown, by Life or Death.
Three times did Richard make a Lane to me,
And thrice cri'd, Courage Father, fight it out:
And full as oft came Edward to my side,
With Purple Faulchion, painted to the Hilt,
In blood of those that had encountred him:
And when the hardiest Warriours did retire,
Richard cri'd, Charge, and give no foot of ground,
And cri'd, A Crown, or else a glorious Tombe,

A Scepter or an Earthly Sepulcher.
With this we charg'd again : but out alas,
We bodg'd again : as I have seen a Swan
With bootlesse labour swim against the Tide,
And spend her strength with over-matching waves.

A short alarum within.

Ah heark, the fatall followers do pursue,
And I am faint, and cannot flye their fury.
And were I strong, I would not shun their fury.
The Sands are numbred, that make up my life,
Here must I stay, and here my life must end.

Enter the Queen, Clifford, Northumberland, the young Prince, and Souldiers

Come bloody Clifford, rough Northumberland,
I dare your quenchlesse fury to more rage :
I am your But, and I abide your shot.

North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.

Clif. I, to such mercy, as his ruthlesse Aime
With down-right payment, shew'd unto my Father.
Now Phaeton hath tumbled from his Carre,
And made an Evening at the Noon-tide Prick.

Tor. My ashes, as the Phoenix may bring forth
A Bird, that will revenge upon you all :
And in that hope, I throw mine eyes to heaven,
Scorning what ere you can afflict me with.
Why come you not ? what ? multitudes, and fear ?

Clif. So Cowards fight, when they can flye no further,
So Doves do peck the Falcons piercing Tallons,
So desperate Thieves, all hopelesse of their Lives,
Breathe out invectives gainst the Officers.

Tor. Oh Clifford, but bethink thee once again;
And in thy thought o're-run my former time :
And if thou canst, for blushing, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with Cowardice,
Whose frown hath made thee faint and flye ere this.

Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word,
But buckler with thee blows twice two for one.

Quee. Hold, valiant Clifford, for a thousand causes
I would prolong a while the Traytors Life :
Wrath makes him deaf ; speak thou Northumberland.

North. Hold, Clifford, do not honour him so much,
To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart.
What valour were it, when a Curie doth grin,
For one to thrust his Hand between his Teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot away ?
It is VVas prize, to take all vantages,
And ten to one, is no impeach of Valour.

Clifford. I, I, so strives the Woodcock with the Gynne.

Northumberland. So doth the Cony struggle in the Net.

Tor. So triumph Thieves upon their conquer'd Booty,
So true men yield, with Robbers so o're-matched.

North. What would your Grace have done unto him now ?

Quee. Brave Warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,
Come make him stand upon this Mole-hill here,
That caught at Mountains with out-stretched Armes,
Yet parted but the shadow with his hand.
What, was it you that would be Englands King ?
Was't you that revell'd in our Parliament,
And made a Preachment of your high Descent ?
Where are your messe of Sonsto back you now ?
The wanton Edward, and the lusty George ?

And where's that valiant Crook-back Prodigy,
Dicky, your Boy, that with his grumbling voyce
Was wont to cheer his Dad in Mutinies ?
Or with the rest, where is your Darling, Rutland ?
Look York, I stain'd this Napkin with the blood
That valiant Clifford, with his Rapiers point,
Made issue from the bosome of the Boy,
And if thine eyes can water for his Death;
I give thee this to dry thy Cheeks with all.
Alas poor York, but that I hate thee deadly,
I should lament thy miserable state.

I prethee grieve, to make me merry, York.
What, hath thy fiery heart so parcht thine entrails,
That not a tear can fall for Rutland's Death ?
Why art thou patient, man ? thou should'st be mad :
And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.
Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.
Thou would'st be see'd, I see, to make me sport :
York cannot speak, unlesse he wear a Crown.
A Crown for York ; and Lords bow low to him :
Hold you his hands, whilest I do set it on.

I marry, Sir, now looks he like a King :
I, this is he that took King Henry's Chair,
And this is he was his adopted Heir.
But how is it, that great Plantagenet
Is Crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn Oath ?
As I bethink me, yon should not be King,
Till our King Henry had shook hands with Death,
And will you pale your head in Henry's Glory,
And rob his Temples of the Diadem,
Now in his Life against your holy Oath ?
Oh 'tis a fault too too unpardonable.

Off with the Crown, and with the Crown, his Head,
And whil'st we breathe take time to do him dead.

Clifford. That is my Office, for my Fathers sake.

Queen. Nay stay, let's hear the Orizons he makes.

Tork. She-Wolf of France,
But worse then Wolves of France,
Whose Tongue more poysons then the Adders Tooth :
How ill-beseeming is it in thy Sex,
To triumph like an Amazonian Trull;
Upon their Woes, whom Fortune captivates ?
But that thy Face is Vizard-like, unchanging,
Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
I would assay, proud Queen, to make thee blush.
To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd,
Were shame enough to shame thee,
Wert thou not shamelesse,

Thy Father bears the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils, and Jerusalem,
Yet not so wealthy as an English Yeoman.
Hath that poor Monarch taught thee to insult ?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud Queen,
Unlesse the Adage must be veres'd,
That Beggars mounted, run their Horse to death.
'Tis Beauty that doth oft make Women proud,
But God he knows, thy share thereof is small.
'Tis Virtue that doth make them most admir'd,
The contrary doth make thee wondred at.
'Tis Government that makes them seem Divine,
The want thereof makes thee abominable.

Thou art as opposite to every good,
As the Antipodes are unto us,
Or as the South to the Seprentrion.
Oh Tiges Heart, wrapt in a Womans Hide.

How could'st thou drain the Life-blood of the Child,
To bid the Father wipe his eyes withall,
And yet be seen to bear a Womans face?
Women are soft, mild, pittifull, and flexible;
Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorselesse,
Bidst thou me rage? why now thou hast thy wish.
Would'st thou have me weep? why now thou hast thy will.
For raging wind blows up incessant showers,
And when the Rage allayes, the Rain begins.
These Teares are my sweet Rutlands Obsequies,
And every drop cries vengeance for his death,
'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false French-woman.

Northumb. Belhrew me, but his passions move me so,
That hardly can I check mine eyes from Teares.

Yor. That face of his,
The hungry Caniballs would not have toucht,
Would not have stain'd the Roses just with blood:
But you are more inhumane, more inexorable,
Oh, ten times more then Tygers of Hyrkania.
See, ruthlesse Queen, a haplesse Fathers teares:
This Cloth thou dip'dst in blood of my sweet Boy,
And I with teares do wash the blood away.
Keep thou the Napkin, and go boast of this,
And if thou tell'st the heavy story right,
Upon my Soul, the hearers will shed Teares:
Yea, even my Foes will shed fast-falling Teares,
And say, alafs, it was a pittious deed.

There, take the Crown, and with the Crown, my Curse.
And in thy need, such comfort come to thee,
As now I reap at thy too cruell hand.

Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the World,
My Soul to Heaven, my Blood upon your Heads.

North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my Kin,
I should not for my Life but weep with him,
To see how inly sorrow gripes his Soul.

Quee. What, weeping ripe, my Lord Northumberland?
Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting Teares.

Clifford. Here's for my Oath, here's for my Fathers
Death.

Quee. And here's to right our gentle-hearted
King.

Yor. Open thy Gate of mercy, gracious God.
My Soul flies through these wounds, to seek out thee.

Quee. Off with his Head, and set it on York Gates,
So York may over-look the Town of York.

Exeunt.

A March. Enter Edward, Richard,
and their power.

Edw. I wonder how our Princely Father scap't:
Or whether he be scap't away, or no,
From Cliffords and Northumberlands pursuit?
Had he been tane, we should have heard the newes:
Had he been slain, we should have heard the newes:
Or had he scap't, methinks we should have heard
The happy tidings of his good escape.
How fares my Brother? why is he so sad?

Rich. I cannot joy untill I be resolv'd:
Where our right valiant Father is become.
I saw him in the Battell range about,
And watcht him how he singled Clifford forth,
Me thought he bore him in the thickest troupe,
As doth a Lyon in a Heard of Neat,
Or as a Bear encompass'd round with Dogs:

Who having pincht a few, and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him.
So far'd our Father with his Enemies,
So fled his Enemies, my Warlike Father:
Me thinks 'tis prize enough to be his Son.
See how the Morning opes her golden Gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious Sun.
How well resembles it the prime of Youth,
Trim'd like a Yonker, prancing to his Love?

Ed. Dazle mine eyes, or do I see three Suns?

Rich. Three glorious Suns, each one a perfect Sun,
Not separated with the racking Clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining skie.
See, see they joyn, embrace, and seem to kisse,
As if they vow'd some League inviolable.
Now are they but one Lamp, one Light, one Sun:
In this, the Heaven figures some event.

Edm. 'Tis wondrous strange,
The like yet never heard of.
I think it cites us (Brother) to the field,
That we, the Sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meeds,
Should notwithstanding joyn our Lights together,
And over-shine the Earth, as this the World.
What e're it bodes, hence-forward will I bear
Upon my Target three fair shining Suns.

Rich. Nay, bear three Daughters:
By your leave, I speake it,
You love the Breeder better then the Male.

Enter one blowing.

But what art thou, whose heavy Looks fore-tell
Some dreadfull story hanging on thy Tongue?

Messe. Ah, one that was a wofull looker on,
When as the Noble Duke of York was slain,
Your Princely Father, and my loving Lord.

Edward. Oh speak no more, for I have heard too much.

Rich. Say how he di'd, for I will hear it all.

Mess. Environed he was with many foes,
And stood against them, as the hope of Troy
Against the Greeks, that would have entred Troy.
But Hercules himself must yield to odds:
And many stroaks, though with a little Axe,
Hewes down and fells the hardest-timber'd Oake.
By many hands your Father was subdu'd,
But onely slaughter'd by the irefull Arme
Of un-renting Clifford, and the Queen:
Who crown'd the gracious Duke in high despight,
Laugh'd in his face: and when with grief he wept,
The ruthlesse Queen gave him, to dry his Cheek,
A Napkin, steeped in the harmlesse blood.
Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain:
And after many scorns, many foul taunts,
They took his Head, and on the Gates of York
They set the same, and there it doth remain,
The saddest spectacle that e're I view'd.

Edw. Sweet Duke of York, our Prop to lean upon,
Now thou art gone, we have no Staffe, no Stay.
Oh Clifford, boystrous Clifford, thou hast slain
The flower of Europe, for his Chevalry,
And treacherously hast thou vanquish't him,
For hand to hand he would have vanquish't thee.
Now my Souls Palace is become a Prison:
Ah, would she break from hence, that this my body

Might

Might in the ground be closed up in rest:
For never henceforth shall I joy again:
Never, oh never shall I see more joy.

Rich. I cannot weep: for all my bodies moisture
Scarce serves to quench my Furnace-burning heart:
Nor can my tongue unload my hearts great burthen,
For self-same winde that I should speak withall,
Is kindling coales that fires up all my brest,
And burns me up with flames, that reares would quench.
To weep, is to make lesse the depth of grief:
Teares then for Babes; Blowes, and Revenge for me.
Richard, I bear thy name, I'll venge thy Death,
Or die renowned by attempting it.

Ed. His name that valiant Duke hath left with thee:
His Dukedome, and his Chair with me is left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that Princely Eagles Bird,
Shew thy descent by gazing 'gainst the Sun:
For Chair and Dukedome, Throne and Kingdome say,
Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter Warwick, Marquesse Mountaigne, and their Army.

Warwick. How now, fair Lords? what fare? what newes abroad?

Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should recount
Our balefull newes, and at each words deliverance
Stab Poniards in our flesh, till all were told,
The words would adde more anguish then the wounds.
O, valiant Lord, the Duke of York is slain.

Edw. O, Warwick, Warwick, that Plantagenet,
Which held thee dearly as his Soules Redemption,
Is by the stern Lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten dayes ago I drown'd these newes in teares,
And now to adde more measure to your woes,
I come to tell you things sith then befall.
After the bloody Fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave Father breath'd his latest gasp,
Tidings, as swiftly as the Posts could run,
Were brought me of your losse, and his depart.

I then in London, keeper of the King,
Muster'd my Souldiers, gathered flocks of Friends,
Marcht toward S. Albans, to intercept the Queen,
Bearing the King in my behalf along:

For by my Scouts, I was advertised
That she was coming with a full intent
To dash our late Decree in Parliament,
Touching King Henry's Oath, and your Succession:
Short Tale to make, we at S. Albans met,
Our Battells joyn'd, and both sides fiercely fought:
But whether 'twas the coldnesse of the King,
Who look'd full gently on his War-like Queen,
That robb'd my Souldiers of their heated Spleen.

Or whether 'twas report of her successe,
Or more then common fear of Cliffords Rigour,
Who thunders to his Captives, Blood and Death,
I cannot judge: but to conclude with truth,
Their Weapons like to Lightning, came and went:
Our Souldiers like the Night-Owles lazy flight,
Or like a lazy Thresher with a Flayle,
Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.

I cheer'd them up with justice of our Cause,
With promise of high pay, and great Reward
But all in vain, they had no heart to fight,
And we (in then) no hope to win the day,
So that we fled: the King unto the Queen,
Lord George, your Brother Norfolk, and my self,

In haste, post-haste, are come to joyn with you:
For in the Marches here we heard you were,
Making another Head, to fight again.

Ed. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick?
And when came George from Burgundy to England?

War. Some six miles off the Duke is with the Soldiers;
And for your Brother he was lately sent
From your kind Aunt, Dutchesse of Burgundy,
With aid of Souldiers to this needfull Warre.

Rich. 'Twas oddes belike, when valiant Warwick fled;
Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne're till now, his scandall of Retire.

War. Nor now my scandall, Richard, dost thou hear:
For thou shalt know this strong right hand of mine,
Can pluck the Diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the awfull Scepter from his Fist,
Were he as famous, and as bold in warre,
As he is fam'd for mildnesse, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, Lord Warwick, blame me not,
'Tis love I bear thy glories makes me speak.

But in this troublous time, what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our Coats of Steele,
And wrap our Bodies in black mourning Gowns,
Numb'ring our Ave-Maries with our Beads?
Or shall we on the Helmets of our foes,
Tell our Devotion with revengefull Armes?

If for the last, say I, and to it Lords.

War. Why therefore Warwick came to seek you out,
And therefore comes my Brother Mountaigne:
Attend me Lords, the proud insulting Queen,
With Clifford, and the haught Northumberland,
And of their Feather, many moe proud Birds,
Have wrought the easie-melting King, like Wax;
He swore consent to your succession,
His Oath enrolled in the Parliament.

And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his Oath, and what beside
May make against the House of Lancaster.
Their power (I think) is thirty thousand strong:
Now, if the help of Norfolk, and my self,
With all the friends that thou brave Earl of March,
Amongst the loving Welch-men canst procure,
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why Via; to London will we march,
And once again bestride our foaming Steeds,
And once again cry, Charge upon our foes,
But never once again turn back and flye.

Rich. I, now me thinks I hear great Warwick speak;
Ne're may he live to see a sun-shine day,
That cries Retire, if Warwick bid him stay.

Ed. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean,
And when thou fail'st (as God forbid the hour)
Must Edward fall, which perill heaven forsend.

War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke of York:
The next Degree, is Englands Royall Throne:
For King of England shalt thou be proclaim'd
In every Burrough as we passe along,
And he that throws not up his cap for joy,
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.

King Edward, valiant Richard Mountaigne:
Stay we no longer, dreaming of Renown,
But sound the Trumpets, and about our Task.

Rich. Then, Clifford, wear thy heart as hard as Steele,
As thou hast shewn it stinty by thy deeds,
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up Drums, God and S. George for us.

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now? what newes?

Mes. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word by me,
The Queen is coming with a puissant Hoste,
And craves your company, for speedy counsell.

War. Why then it sorts, brave Warriors let's away.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter the King, the Queen, Clifford, Northumberland and young Prince, with Drumme and Trumpets.

Quee. Welcome, my Lord, to this brave Town of York,
Yonder's the head of that Arch-enemay,
That sought to be encompassed with your Crown.
Doth not the object cheer your heart, my Lord.

K. I, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wrack,
To see this sight, it irks my very soul:
With-hold revenge (dear God) 'tis not my fault,
Nor wittingly have I infring'd my Vow.

Clif. My gracious Liege, this too much lenity
And harmful pitty must be laid aside:

To whom do Lyons cast their gentle looks?
Not to the Beast that would usurp their Den.
Whose hand is that the Forrest Bear doth lick?
Not his that spoyle her young before her face.
Who scapes the lurking Serpents mortall sting?
Not he that sets his foot upon her back.

The smallest Worm will turn, being troden on,
And Doves will peck in safeguard of their Brood.

Ambitious York did leuell at thy Crown,
Thou smiling, while he knit his angry Browes.

He but a Duke, would have his Son a King,
And raise his issue like a loving Sire,

Thou being a King, blest with a goodly Son,
Didst yield consent to dis-inherit him:

Which argued thee a most unloving Father.

Unreasonable Creatures feed their young,
And though mans face be fearfull to their eyes,

Yet in perfection of their tender ones,

Who hath not seen them even with those wings.

Which sometime they have us'd with fearfull flight,

Make Warre with him that climb'd unto their nest,
Offering their own lives in their youngs defence?

For shame, my Liege, make them your President:

Were it not pitty that this goodly Boy

Should lose his Birth-right by his Fathers fault,

And long hereafter say unto his Childe,

What my great Grandfather, and my Grandfire got,

My carelesse Father fondly gave away.

Ah, what a shame were this? look on the Boy,

And let his manly face, which promiseth

Successfull Fortune steale thy melting heart,

To hold thine own, and leave thine own with him.

King. Full well hath Clifford plaid the Orator,
Inferring arguments of mighty force:

But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear,

That things ill got, had ever bad successe.

And happy alwayes was it for that Son,

Whose Father for his hoarding went to hell:

I'll leave my Son my virtuous deeds behinde,

And would my Father had left me no more:

For all the rest is held at such a Rate,

As brings a thousand fold more care to keep,

Then in possession any jot of pleasure.

Ah Cousin York, would thy best friends did know,

How it doth grieve me that thy head is here.

Quee. My Lord, cheer up your spirits, our foes are nigh,
And this soft courage makes your Followers faint:

You promise Knighthood to our forward Son,

Unsheath your sword, and dub him presently.

Edward, kneele down.

King. Edward Plantagenet, arise a Knight,
And learn this Lesson, Draw thy Sword in right.

Prin. My gracious Father, by your Kingly leave,
I'll draw it as apparrant to the Crown,

And in that Quarrell use it to the death.

Clif. Why that is spoken like a toward Prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Royall Commanders, be in readinesse,
For with a Band of thirty thousand men,

Comes Warwick backing of the Duke of York,

And in the Towns as they do march along,

Proclaimes him King, and many flye to him,

Darraign your Battell, they are at hand.

Clif. I would your Highnesse would depart the field,
The Queen hath best successe when you are absent.

Qu. I good my Lord, and leave us to our fortune.

King. Why, that's my fortune too, therefore I'll stay.

North. Be it with resolution then to fight.

Prin. My Royall Father, cheer these Noble Lords,
And hearten those that fight in your defence:
Unsheath your sword, good Father: cry S. George.

March. *Enter Edward, Warwick, Richard, Clarence,
Norfolk, Mountague, and Souldiers.*

Ed. Now perjur'd Henry, wilt thou kneel for grace?
And set thy Diadem upon my head?

Or bide the mortall fortune of the field.

Qu. Go rate thy Minions, proud insulting Boy,

Becomes it thee to be thus bold in termes,

Before thy Sovereign, and thy lawfull King?

Ed. I am his King, and he should bow his knee;

I was adopted Heir by his consent.

Since when, his Oath is broke: for as I hear,

You that are King, though he do wear the Crown,

Have caus'd him by new Act of Parliament,

To blot out me, and put his own Son in.

Clif. And reason too:

Who should succeed the Father, but the Son?

Rich. Are you there, Butcher? O, I cannot speak.

Clif. I Crook back, here I stand to answer thee,

Or any he, the proudest of thy sort.

Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd young Rusland, was it not?

Clif. I, and old York, and yet not satisfied.

Rich. For Gods sake, Lords, give signall to the fight.

War. VVhat say'st thou, Henry,

VVilt thou yield the Crown? (you speak?)

Quee. VVhy how now, long-tongu'd Warwick, dare

VVhen you and I met at S. Albans last,

Your legges did better service then your hands.

War. Then 'twas my turn to flye, and now 'tis thine:

Clif. You said so much before, and yet you fled.

War. 'Twas not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.

Nor. No, nor your manhood that durst make you stay.

Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently,
Break off the parley, for scarce I can refrain

The execution of my big-swoln heart

Upon that Clifford, that cruell Child-killer.

Clif. I flew thy Father, call'st thou him a Child?

Rich.

Rich. I like a Dastard, and a treacherous Coward,
As thou didst kill our tender Brother Rutland,
But ere Sun set, I'll make thee curse the deed.

King. Have done with words (my Lords) and hear me speak.

Qu. Defie them then, or else hold close thy lips.

King. I prethee give no limits to my Tongue;
I am a King, and priviledg'd to speak.

Clif. My Liege, the wound that bred this meeting here,
Cannot be cur'd by words, therefore be still.

Rich. Then, Executioner, unsheath thy sword :
By him that made us all, I am resolv'd,
That Clifford's Manhood lyes upon his tongue.

Ed. Say Henry, shall I have my right, or no :
A thousand men have broke their Falts to day,
That ne're shall dine, unlesse thou yield the Crown.

War. If thou deny, their blood upon thy head.
For York in justice puts his Armour on.

Pr. Ed. If that be right, which Warwick sayes is right,
There is no wrong, but every thing is right.

War. VVho ever got thee, there thy Mother stands,
For well I wot, thou hast thy Mothers tongue.

Qu. But thou art neither like thy Sire nor Damme,
But like a foul mishapen Stigmatick,
Mark'd by the Destinies to be avoided,
As venome Toads, or Lizards dreadfull stings.

Rich. Iron of Naples, hid with English gilt,
VVhose Father beares the Title of a King,
(As if a Channell should be call'd the Sea)
Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught,
To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart.

Ed. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand Crowns,
To make this shamelesse Callet know her self.

Hellen of Greece was fairer farre then thou,
Although thy Husband may be Menelaus;
And ne're was Agamemnon's Brother wrong'd
By that false woman, as this King by thee.
His Father revell'd in th heart of France,
And tam'd the King; and made the Dolphin stoop :
And had he match'd according to his State,
He might have kept that glory to this day.

But when he took a beggar to his bed,
And grac'd thy poor Sire with his Bridall day,
Even then that Sun-shine brew'd a shower for him,
That washt his Fathers fortunes forth of France,
And heap'd Sedition on his Crown at home :
For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy Pride ?
Hadst thou been meek, our Title still had slept,
And we in pitty of the Gentle King,
Had slept our Claim untill another Age.

Cl. But when we saw, our Sunshine made thy Spring,
And that thy Summer bred us no encrease,
VVe set the Axe to thy usurping Root :
And though the edge hath something hit our selves,
Yet know thou, since we have begun to strike,
VVe'll never leave, till we have hewn thee down,
Or bath'd thy growing, with our heated bloods.

Ed. And in this resolution, I defie thee,
Not willing any longer Conference,
Since thou deni'dst the gentle King to speak.
Sound Trumpets, let our bloody Colours wave,
And either Victory, or else a Grave.

Qu. Stay, Edward.

Ed. No, wrangling VVoman, we'll no longer stay,
These words will cost ten thousand lives this day.

Exeunt omnes.

Alarm. Excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Fore-spent with toyle, as Runners with a Race,
I lay me down a little while to breathe :
For strokes receiv'd, and many blowes repaid,
Have robb'd my strong kni sinewes of their strength,
And spight of spight, needs must I rest a while.

Enter Edward running.

Ed. Smile, gentle heaven, or strike, ungentle death,
For this world frowns, and Edward's Sun is clouded.

War. How now, my Lord, what hap ? what hope of good ?

Enter Clarence.

Cl. Our hap is losse, our hope but sad despaire,
Our ranks are broke, and ruine follows us.
What counsell give you ? whether shall we flye ?

Ed. Bootlesse is flight, they follow us with wings,
And weak we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thy self ?
Thy Brothers blood the thirsty Earth hath drunk,
Broach'd with the steelly point of Clifford's Launce :
And in the very pangs of death he cri'd,
Like to a dismall Clangor heard from farre,
Warwick, revenge ; Brother, revenge my death.
So underneath the belly of their Steeds,
That stain'd their Ferlocks in his smoaking blood,
The Noble Gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the Earth be drunken with our blood :
I'll kill my Horse because I will not flye :
Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
Wailing our losses, whiles the Foe doth rage,
And look upon, as if the Tragedy
Were plaid in jest, by counterfeiting Actors.
Here on my knee, I vow to God above,
I'll never pawse again, never stand still,
Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,
Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Ed. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine,
And in this vow do chain my soul to thine,
And ere my knee rise from the Earths cold face,
I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou setter up, and plucker down of Kings,
Beseech thee (if with thy will it stands)
That to my Foes this body must be prey,
Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope,
And give sweet passage to my sinfull soule.
Now Lords, take leave untill we meet again,
Where e're it be, in heaven, or in the earth.

Rich. Brother,
Give me thy hand, and gentle Warwick,
Let me embrace thee in my weary armes :
I that did never weep, now melt with woe,
That Winter should cut off our Spring-time so.

War. Away, away :

Once more, sweet Lords, farewell.

Cl. Yet let us altogether to our Troops.
And give them leave to flye that will not stay :
And call them Pillars that will stand to us :
And if we thrive, promise them such rewards
As Victors wear at the Olympian Games.
This may plant Courage in their quailing breasts,
For yet is hope of Life and Victory :

Fore-

Fore-flow no longer, make we hence amain. Exeunt.

Excursions. Enter Richard and Clifford.

Rich. Now Clifford, I have singled thee alone,
Suppose this arme is for the Duke of York,
And this for Rutland, both bound to revenge,
Wert thou environ'd with a Brazen wall.

Clif. Now Richard, I am with thee here alone,
This is the hand that stabb'd thy Father York,
And this the hand that slew thy Brother Rutland,
And here's the heart, that triumphs in their death,
And cheeres these hands that slew thy Sire and Brother,
To execute the like upon thy self;
And so have at thee.

They fight, Warwick comes, Clifford flies.

Rich. Nay Warwick, single out some other Chace,
For I my self will hunt this Wolf to death. Exeunt.

Alarm. Enter King Henry alone.

Hen. This Battell fares like to the mornings Warre,
When dying Clouds contend with growing Light,
What time the Shepherd blowing of his nailes,
Can neither call it perfect day, nor night.
Now swayes it this way, like a mighty Sea,
Forc'd by the Tide to combat with the Wind:
Now swayes it that way, like the self-same Sea,
Forc'd to retire by fury of the Winde.
Sometime, the Flood prevails; and then the Winde:
Now, one the better, then another best;
Both tugging to be Victors, brest to brest:
Yet neither Conqueror, nor conquered.
So is the equall poize of this fell Warre.
Here on this Mole-hill will I sit me down,
To whom God will, there be the victory:
For Margaret my Queen, and Clifford too
Have chid me from the Battell; Swearing both,
They prosper best of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead; if Gods good will were so:
For what is in this world, but grief and woe.
Oh God! me thinks it were a happy life,
To be no better then a homely Swain,
To sit upon a hill, as I do now,
To carve out Dialls quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the Minutes how they run:
How many makes the Hour full compleat,
How many houres bring about the day,
How many dayes will finish up the year,
How many yeares a mortall Man may live.
When this is known, then to divide the Times:
So many houres must I tend my Flock;
So many houres must I take my rest:
So many houres must I contemplate:
So many houres must I sport my self:
So many dayes my Ewes have been with young:
So many dayes ere the poor Fools will Ean:
So many yeares ere I shall shear the Fleece:
So minutes, houres, dayes, moneths, and yeares,
Past over to the end they were created,
Would bring white haire unto a quiet Grave.
Ah! what a life were this? how sweet, how lovely?
Gives not the Haw-thorn bush a sweeter shade
To Shepherds, looking on their silly sheep,
Then doth a rich embroider'd Canopy
To Kings, that fear their Subjects treachery?
Oh yes, it doth, a thousand fold it doth.
And to conclude, the Shepherds homely Curds,

His cold thin drink out of his Leather Bottle,
His wonted sleep, under a fresh Trees shade,
All which secure, and sweetly he enjoyes,
Is farre beyond a Princes Delicates:
His Viands sparkling in a Golden Cup,
His body couched in a curious bed,
When Care, Mistrust, and Treasons waits on him.

Alarm. Enter a Son that hath kill'd his Father at one door, and a Father that hath kill'd his Son at another door.

Son. Ill blowes the winde that profits no body,
This man whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
May be possessed with some store of Crowns,
And I that (haply) take them from him now,
May yet (ere night) yield both my life and them
To some man else, as this dead man doth me.
Who's this? Oh God! it is my Fathers face,
Whom in this Conflict, I (unwares) have kill'd:
Oh heavy times! hegetting such events.
From London, by the King was I prest forth,
My Father being the Earl of Warwick's Man,
Came on the part of York; prest by his Master:
And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,
Have by my hands of life bereaved him.
Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did:
And pardon, Father, for I knew not thee.
My teares shall wipe away these bloody marks:
And no more words, till they have flow'd their fill.

King. O pittious spectacle! O bloody Times!
Whiles Lyons warre, and Battell for their Dennes,
Poor harmlesse Lambs abide their enmity.
Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee Tear for Tear,
And let our hearts and eyes, like Civil Warre,
Be blinde with teares, and break o're-charg'd with grief.

Enter Father, bearing of his Son.

Fa. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
Give me thy Gold, if thou hast any Gold:
For I have bought it with an hundred blowes.
But let me see: is this our foe-man's face?
Ah, no, no, no, it is mine onely Son.
Ah Boy, if any life be left in thee,
Throw up thine eye; see, see, what showers arise,
Blown with the windy Tempest of my heart,
Upon thy wounds, that kills mine eye, and heart.

O pittie God, this miserable Age!
What stratagems? how fell? how butcherly?
Erroneous, mutinous, and unnaturall,
This deadly quarrell daily doth beget?
O Boy! thy Father gave thee life too soon,
And hath bereft thee of thy life too late.

Ki. Woe above woe: grief, more then common grief;
O that my death would stay these ruefull deeds:
O pittie, pittie, gentle heaven, pittie.
The Red Rose and the White are on his face,
The fatall Colours of our striving Houses:
The one his purple blood right well resembles,
The other his pale Cheeks (me thinks) presenteth:
Wither one Rose, and let the other flourish:
If you contend, a thousand lives must wither.

Son. How will my Mother, for a Father's death
Take on with me, and ne're be satisf'd?

Fa. How will my Wife, for slaughter of my Son,
Shed seas of Teares, and ne're be satisf'd?

King. How will the Country, for the wofull chances,
Mis-think

Mis-think the King, and not be satisfied ?

Son. Was ever Son so rew'd a Fathers death ?

Fath. Was ever Father so bemoan'd his Son ?

Hen. Was ever King so griev'd for Subjects woe ?
Much is your sorrow ; mine, ten times so much.

Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill.

Fath. These armes of mine shall be thy winding-sheet :

My heart (sweet Boy) shall be thy Sepulcher,

For from my heart thine Image ne're shall go.

My sighing breast shall be thy Funerall bell ;

And so obsequious will thy Father be,

Men for the losse of thee, having no more,

As Priam was for all his valiant Sons,

I'll bear thee hence, and let them fight that will,

For I have murder'd where I should not kill. Exit.

Hen. Sad-hearted men, much over-gone with Care ;
Here sits a King, more wofull then you are.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter the Queen, the Prince, and Exeter.

Prin. Fly Father, flye : for all your Friends are fled.

And Warwick rages like a chafed Bull :

Away, for death doth hold us in pursuit.

Quee. Mount you my Lord, towards Barwick post again :

Edward and Richard like a brace of Grey-hounds,

Having the fearfull flying Harc in sight,

With fiery eyes, sparkling for very wrath,

And bloody Steele graspt in their irefull hands,

Are at our backs, and therefore hence again.

Exet. Away : for vengeance come along with them.

Nay, stay not to expostulate, make speed,

Or else come after, I'll away before.

Hen. Nay take me with thee, good sweet Exeter :

Not that I fear to stay, but love to go

Whether the Queen intends. Forward, away. Exeunt.

A loud Alarm. Enter Clifford wounded.

Clif. Here burns my Candle out ; I, here it dies,
Which whiles it lasted, gave King Henry light.

O Lancaster ! I fear thy overthrow,

More then my Bodies parting with my Soul :

My Love and Fear glew'd many Friends to thee,

And now I fall. Thy tough Commixtures melt,

Impairing Henry, strengthning mis-proud Tork ;

And whether flye the Gnats, but to the Sun ?

And who shines now, but Henry's Enemies ?

O, Phæbus ! hadst thou never given consent,

That Phæton should check thy fiery Steds,

Thy burning Carre never had scorch'd the earth.

And Henry, hadst thou sway'd as Kings should do,

Or as thy Father, and his Father did,

Giving no ground unto the House of Tork,

They never then had sprung like Summer Flyes :

I, and ten thousand in this lucklesse Realm,

Had left no mourning Widows for our death,

And thou this day, hadst kept thy Chaire in peace.

For what doth cherrish Weeds, but gentle aire ?

And what makes Robbers bold, but too much lenity ?

Bootlesse are Plaints, and Curelesse are my VVounds ?

No way to flye, nor strength to hold out flight :

The Foe is mercilesse, and will not pittie :

For at their hands I have deserv'd no pittie.

The aire hath got into my deadly VVounds,

And much effuse of blood doth make me faint :

Come Tork, and Richard, Warwick, and the rest,

I flabb'd your Fathers bosomes ; Split my breast.

Alarm & Retreat. Enter Edward, Warwick, Richard, and Souldiers, Mountague, and Clarence.

Ed. Now breathe we Lords, good fortune bids us pause,

And smoothe the frowns of War, with peacefull looks :

Some Troups pursue the bloody-minded Queen,

That led calm Henry, though he were a King,

As doth a Saile, fill'd with a fretting gull,

Command an Argosie to stemme the Waves :

But think you (Lords) that Clifford fled with them ?

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape :

(For though before his face I speak the word)

Your Brother Richard markt him for the Grave.

And wheresoe're he is, he's surely dead. Clifford grones.

Rich. Whose Soul is that which takes her heavy leave ?

A deadly grone, like life and deaths departing.

See who it is.

Ed. And now the Battell's ended,

If Friend or Foe, let him be gently used.

Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford,

VVho not contented that he lopp'd the Branch

In hewing Rutland, when his leaves out forth,

But set his murth'ring knife unto the Root,

From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring,

I mean our Princely Father, Duke of Tork,

War. From off the gates of Tork fetch down the head,

Your Fathers head, which Clifford placed there :

In stead whereof, let this supply the room,

Measure for measure must be answered.

Ed. Bring forth that fatall Schreech-owl to our house,

That nothing sung but death, to us and ours :

Now death shall stop his dismall threatening sound,

And his ill-boading tongue, no more shall speak.

War. I think his understanding is bereft :

Speak Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee ?

Dark cloudy death o're-shades his beames of life,

And he nor sees, nor heares us, what we say.

Rich. O would he did, and so (perhaps) he doth,

'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,

Because he would avoid such bitter taunts

VVhich in the time of death he gave our Father.

Cl. If so thou think'st,

Vex him with eager words.

Rich. Clifford, aske mercy, and obtain no grace.

Ed. Clifford, repent in bootlesse penitence.

War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.

Cl. VVhile we devise fell Tortures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didst love Tork, and I am Son to Tork.

Edw. Thou pittied'st Rutland, I will pittie thee.

Cl. VVhere's Captain Margaret, to fence you now ?

War. They mock thee, Clifford,

Swear as thou wast wont.

Ric. VVhat, not an Oath ? nay the world go's hard,

VVhen Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath :

I know by that he's dead, and by my Soul,

If this right hand would buy but two houres life,

That I (in all despight) might rail at him,

This hand should chop it off : and with the issuing blood

Stifle the Villain, whose unstanched thirst

Tork, and young Rutland, could not satisfie.

War. I, but he's dead. Off with the Traytors head,

And rear it in the place your Fathers stand,

And now to London with triumphant march,

There

There to be Crowned England's Royall King :
 From whence shall Warwick cut the Sea to France,
 And aske the Lady Bona for thy Queen :
 So shalt thou sinow both these Lands together,
 And having France thy Friend, thou shalt not dread
 The scatter'd Foe, that hopes to rise again :
 For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,
 Yet look to have them buz to offend thine ears.
 First will I see the Coronation,
 And then to Britany I'll crosse the Sea,
 To effect this marriage, so it please my Lord.

Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be :
 For on thy shoulder do I build my Seat ;
 And never will I undertake the thing
 Wherein thy counsell and consent is wanting :
Richard, I will create thee Duke of Glocester ,
 And George of Clarence ; Warwick as our Self,
 Shall do, and undo, as him pleaseth best.

Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Gloster,
 For Gloster's Dukedome is too ominous.

War. Tut, that's a foolish observation :

Richard, be Duke of Gloster : Now to London,
 To see these honours in possession.

Exeunt.

Enter Sinkle, and Humphrey, with Crosse-bowes in their hands.

(our selves :

Sink. Under this thick grown brake we'll shrowd
 For through this Laund anon the Deer will come,
 And in this covert will we make our Stand,
 Culling the principall of all the Deer.

Hum. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot,

Sink. That cannot be, the noyse of thy Crosse-bow
 Will scare the Heard, and so my shoot is lost :
 Here stand we both, and aim we at the best :
 And for the time shall not seem tedious ,
 I'll tell thee what befell me on a day ,
 In this self-place, where now we mean to stand.

Sink. Here comes a man, let's stay till he be past :

Enter the King with a Prayer-Book.

Hen. From Scotland am I stoln even of pure love,
 To greet mine own Land with my wishfull sight :
 No Harry, Harry, 'tis no Land of thine ,
 Thy place is fill'd, thy Scepter wrung from thee,
 Thy Balm washt off wherewith thou wast annointed :
 No bending Knee will call thee Cesar now ,
 No humble tutors presse to speak for right :
 No, not a man comes for redresse of thee :
 For how can I help them, and not my self ?

Sin. I, here's a Deer, whose skin's a Keepers Fee :
 This is the quondam King ; let's seize upon him.

Hen. Let me embrace the sowre adversaries,
 For wise men say, it is the wisest course.

Hum. Why linger we ? let us lay hands upon him.

Sink. Forbear a while, we'll hear a little more.

Hen. My Queen and Son are gon to France for aid :
 And (as I hear) the great Commanding Warwick
 Is thither gone, to crave the French King's Sister
 To wife for Edward. If this newes be true ,
 Poor Queen, and Son, your labour is but lost :
 For Warwick is a subtle Orator :
 And Lewis, a Prince soon won with moving words :
 By this account then Margaret may win him,
 For she's a woman to be pittied much :
 Her sighs will make a battery in his brest,
 Her tears will pierce into a Marble heart :

The Tyger will be mild, whiles she doth mourn ;
 And Nero will be tainted with remorse,
 To hear and see her plaints, her Brinish Teares.
 I, but she's come to beg, Warwick to give :
 She on his left side, craving aid for Henry ;
 He on his right, asking a wife for Edward.
 She weeps, and sayes, her Henry is depos'd :
 He smiles, and sayes, his Edward is install'd ;
 That she (poor wretch) for grief can speak no more :
 Whiles Warwick tells his Title, smooths the wrong,
 Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,
 And in conclusion wins the King from her ,
 With promise of his Sister, and what else,
 To strengthen and support King Edwards place.
 O Margaret, thus 'twill be, and thou (poor soul)
 Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn.

Hum. Say, what art thou talk'st of Kings and Queens ?

King. More then I seem, and lesse then I was born to :
 A man at least, for lesse I should not be :
 And men may talk of Kings, and why not I ?

Hum. I, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a King.

King. Why so I am (in Mind) and that's enough.

Hum. But if thou be a King, where is thy Crown ?

King. My Crown is in my heart, not on my head :
 Not deck'd with Diamonds, and Indian stones :
 Nor to be seen : my Crown is call'd Content,
 A Crown it is that seldom Kings enjoy.

Hum. Well, if you be a King crown'd with Content,
 Your Crown Content, and you, must be contented
 To go along with us. For (as we think)
 You are the King, King Edward hath depos'd :
 And we his subjects, sworn in all Allegiance,
 Will apprehend you as his Enemy.

King. But did you never swear, and break an Oath.

Hum. No, never such an Oath, nor will not now.

King. Where did you dwell when I was K. of England ?

Hum. Here in this Country, where we now remain.

King. I was annointed King at nine moneths old,
 My Father, and my Grandfather were Kings :
 And you were sworn true Subjects unto me :

And tell me then, have you not broke your Oathes ?

Si. No, for we were Subjects, but while you were King.

King. Why ? am I dead ? do I not breathe a Man ?

Ah simple men, you know not what you swear :

Look, as I blow this Feather from my Face,

And as the aire blows it to me again,

Obeying with my wind when I do blow,

And yielding to another when it blows,

Commanded alwayes by the greater gust :

Such is the lightnesse of you common men.

But do not break your Oath, for of that sin,

My mild intreaty shall not make you guilty.

Go where you will, the King shall be commanded,

And be you Kings, command, and I'll obey.

Sink. We are true Subjects to the King,

King Edward.

King. So would you be again to Henry,
 If he were seated as King Edward is.

Sink. We charge you in Gods name and the Kings,
 To go with us unto the Officers.

King. In Gods name lead, your Kings name be obey'd,
 And what God will, that let your King perform ,
 And what he will, I humbly yield unto.

Exeunt.

Enter King Edward, Gloster, Clarence, Lady Gray.

King. Brother of Gloster, at S. Albans field

This

This Ladies Husband, Sir Richard Grey, was slain,
His Land then seiz'd on by the Conqueror,
Her suit is now, to repossesse those Lands,
Which we in Justice cannot well deny,
Because in Quarrell of the House of York,
The worthy Gentleman did lose his Life.

Rich. Your Highnesse shall do well to grant her suit:
It were dishonour to deny it her.

King. It were no lesse, but yet I'll make a pawse.

Rich. Yea, is it so:

I see the Lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the King will grant her humble suit.

Cl. He knows the Game, how true he keeps the wind?

Rich. Silence.

King. Widow, we will consider of your suit,
And come some other time to know our mind.

Wid. Right gracious Lord, I cannot brook delay,
May it please your Highnesse to resolve me now,
And what your pleasure is, shall satisfie me.

Rich. I VVidow: then I'll warrant you all your Lands,
And if what pleaseth him, shall please you:

Fight closer, or good faith you'll catch a blow.

Cl. I fear her not, unlesse she chance to fall.

Rich. God forbid, for he'll take vantages.

King. How many Children hast thou, VVidow? tell
me.

Cl. I think he means to beg a Child of her.

Rich. Nay then whip me: he'll rather give her two.

Wid. Three, my most gracious Lord.

Rich. You shall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him.

King. 'Twere pittie they should lose their Fathers
Lands.

Wid. Be pittifull, dread Lord, and grant it then.

King. Lords give us leave, I'll trye this VVidows wit.

Rich. I, good leave have you, for you will have leave,
Till Youth take leave, and leave you to the Cruch.

King. Now tell me, Madam, do you love your Children?

Wid. I, full as dearly as I love my self.

King. And would you not do much to do them
good?

Wid. To do them good, I would sustain some harm.

King. Then get your Husbands Lands, to do them
good.

Wid. Therefore I came unto your Majesty.

King. I'll tell you how these Lands are to be got.

Wid. So shall you bind me to your Highnesse service.

King. VVhat service wilt thou do me, if I give them?

Wid. VVhat you command, that rests in me to do.

King. But you will take exceptions to my Boon.

Wid. No, gracious Lord, except I cannot do it.

King. I, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.

Wid. VVhy then I will do what your Grace commands.

Rich. He plies her hard, and much Rain wears the Marble.

Cl. As red as fire? nay then, her VVax will melt.

Wid. VVhy stops my Lord? shall I not hear my Task?

King. An easie Task, 'tis but to love a King.

Wid. That's soon perform'd, because I am a Subject.

King. VVhy then, thy Husbands Lands I freely give thee.

Wid. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.

Rich. The Match is made, she seals it with a Curtsie.

King. But stay thee, 'tis the fruits of love I mean.

Wid. The fruits of Love, I mean, my loving Liege.

King. I, but I fear me in another sence.

VVhat Love, think'st thou, I sue so much to get?

Wid. My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers,
That love which Virtue begs, and Virtue grants.

King. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.

Wid. VVhy then you mean not as I thought you did.

King. But now you partly may perceive my mind.

Wid. My mind will never grant what I perceive
Your Highnesse aims at, if I aim aright.

King. To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee.

Wid. To tell you plain, I had rather lye in Prison.

King. VVhy then thou shalt not have thy Husbands
Lands.

Wid. VVhy then mine Honesty shall be my Dower,
For by that losse I will not purchase them.

King. Therein thou wrong'st thy Children mightily.

Wid. Herein your Highnesse wrongs both them & me:
But mighty Lord, this merry inclination

Accords not with the sadnesse of my suit:

Please you dismisse me, either with I, or No.

King. I, if thou wilt say I to my request:

No, if thou do'st say No to my demand.

Wid. Then No, my Lord: my suit is at an end.

Rich. The Widow likes him not, she knits her Brows.

Clarence. He is the bluntest Wooer in Christen-dome.

King. Her looks do argue her repleat with modesty,
Her words do shew her wit incomparable,
All her perfections challenge Sovereignty,
One way or other, she is for a King,
And she shall be my Love, or else my Queen.

Say, that King Edward take thee for his Queen?

Wid. 'Tis better said then done, my gracious Lord:

I am a subject fit to jeast withall,

But far unfit to be a Sovereign.

King. Sweet Widow, by my State I swear to thee,

I speak no more then what my soul intends,

And that is, to enjoy thee for my Love.

Wid. And that is more then I will yield unto:

I know, I am too mean to be your Queen,

And yet too good to be your Concubine.

King. You cavill, Widow, I did mean my Queen.

Wid. 'Twill grieve your Grace, my Sons should call you Father.

King. No more, then when my Daughters
Call thee Mother.

Thou art a Widow, and thou hast some Children,

And by Gods Mother, I being but a Batchelor,

Have other-some. Why, 'tis a happy thing,

To be the Father unto many Sons:

Answer no more, for thou shalt be my Queen.

Rich. The Ghostly Father now hath done his Shrift.

Cl. When he was made a Shriver, 'twas for a shifte.

King. Brothers, you muse what Chat we two have had.

Richard. The VVidow likes it not, for she looks sad.

King. You'd think it strange, if I should marry
her.

Cl. To whom, my Lord?

King. VVhy Clarence, to my self.

Rich.

Rich. I hat would be ten dayes wonder at the least.

Clar. That's a day longer then a Wonder lasts.

Rich. By so much is the wonder in extremes.

King. Well, jeast on Brothers I can tell you both,
Her suit is granted for her Husbands Lands.

Enter a Noble man.

Nob. My gracious Lord, Henry your Foe is taken,
And brought your Prisoner to your Palace Gate.

King. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower:

And go we, Brothers, to the man that took him.

To question of his apprehension.

Widow, go you along: Lords use her honourably.

Exeunt.

Manet Richard.

Rich. I, Edward will use Women honourably.
Would he were wasted, Marrow, Bones, and all,
That from his Loyns no hopefull Branch may spring,
To crosse me from the Golden time I look for:
And yet, between my Souls desire, and me,
The lustfull Edward's Title buried,
Is Clarence, Henry, and his Son young Edward,
And all the unlook'd-for Issue of their Bodies.
To take their Rooms, ere I can place my self:
A cold premeditation for my purpose.
Why then I do but dream on Sovereignty,
Like one that stands upon a Promontory,
And spies a far-off shore, where he would tread,
Wishing his foot were equall with his eye,
And chides the Sea, that sunders him from thence,
Saying he'll lade it dry to have his way:
So do I with the Crown; being so far off,
And so I chide the means that keeps me from it,
And so (I say) I'll cut the Causes off,
Flattering me with impossibilities:
My eye's too quick, my heart o're-weens too much,
Unlesse my Hand and Strength could equall them.
Well, say there is no Kingdome then for Richard:
What other pleasure can the World afford?
I'll make my Heaven in a Ladies Lap,
And deck my Body in gay Ornaments,
And 'twixt sweet Ladies with my words and looks.
Oh miserable thought! and more unlikely,
Then to accomplish twenty Golden Crowns.
Why Love forswore me in my Mothers Womb:
And for I should not deal in her soft Laws,
She did corrupt frail Nature with some Bribe,
To shrink mine Arm up like a wither'd shrub,
To make an envious Mountain on my back,
Where sits Deformity to mock my body;
To shape my Legs of an unequal size,
To disproportion me in every part:
Like to a Chaos, or unlick'd Bear-whelp,
That carries no impression like the Damme.
And am I then a man to be belov'd?
Oh monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought.
Then since this Earth affords no Joy to me,
But to command, to check, to o're-bear such,
As are of better Person then my self:
I'll make my Heaven, to dream upon the Crown,
And whiles I live, r'account this world but Hell,
Untill this mis-shap'd Trunk that bears this Head,
Be round impaled with a glorious Crown.
And yet I know not how to get the Crown,
For many Lives stand between me and home:

And I, like one lost in a thorny Wood,
That rents the thorns, and is rent with the thorns,
Seeking a way, and straying from the way,
Not knowing how to find the open aire,
But toying desperately to find it out,
Torment my self to catch the English Crown:
And from that torment I will free my self,
Or hew my way out with a bloody Axe.
Why I can smile, and murder whiles I smile,
And cry, Content, to that which grieves my heart,
And wet my Cheeks with artificiall tears,
And frame my face to all occasions,
I'll drown more Sailors then the Mermaid shall,
I'll slay more gazers then the Basilisk,
I'll play the Orator as well as Nestor,
Deceive more slyly then Ulysses could,
And like a Sinon, take another Troy.
I can adde Colours to the Camelion,
Change shapes with Proteus, for advantages,
And set the inurtherous Machevill to School.
Can I do this, and cannot get a Crown?
Tut, were it farther off, I'll pluck it down.

Exit.

Flourish.

Enter Lewis the King, his Sister Bona, his Admirall, call'd Bourbon, Prince Edward, Queen Margaret, and the Earl of Oxford. Lewis sits, and riseth up again.

Lewis. Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret,
Sit down with us: it ill befits thy State,
And Birth, that thou should'st stand, while Lewis doth sit.

Mar. No, mighty King of France: now Margaret,
Must strike her sail, and learn a while to serve,
Where Kings command. I was (I must confesse)
Great Albion's Queen, in Golden dayes:
But now mischance hath trod my Title down,
And with dishonour laid me on the ground,
Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
And to my humble seat conform my self.

Lewis. Why say, fair Queen, whence springs this deep despair?

Mar. From such a cause, as fills mine eyes with tears,
And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.

Lew. What ere it be, be thou still like thy self,
And sit thee by our side. Seats her by him.

Yield not thy neck to Fortunes yolk,
But let thy dauntlesse mind still ride in triumph,
Over all mischance.
Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief,
It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.

Mar. Those gracious words
Revive my drooping thoughts,
And give my tongue-ty'd sorrows leave to speak.
Now therefore be it known to Noble Lewis,
That Henry, sole possessor of my Love,
Is, of a King, become a banisht man,
And forc'd to live in Scotland a Forlorne;
While proud ambitious Edward, Duke of York,
Usurps the Regal Title, and the Seat
Of England's true anointed lawful King.
This is the cause that I, poor Margaret,
With this my Son Prince Edward, Henry's Heir,
Am come to crave thy just and lawfull aid:
And if thou fail us, all our hope is done.
Scotland hath Will to help, but cannot help:

Our

Our people, and our Peers, are both mis-led,
Our Treasure seiz'd, our Souldiers put to flight,
And (as thou seest) our selves in heavy plight.

Lew. Renowned Queen,
With patience calme the Storme,
While we bethink a means to break it off.

Marg. The more we stay, the stronger growes our Foe.

Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succour thee.

Marg. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow.
And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter Warwick.

Lew. What's he approacheth boldly to our presence?

Marg. Our Earle of Warwick, Edwards greatest friend.

Lewis. Welcome brave Warwick, what brings thee to France?

He descends. She ariseth.

Marg. I, now begins a second Storm to rise,
For this is he that moves both Wind and Tyde.

War. From worthy Edward, King of Albion,
My Lord and Sovereign, and thy vowed Friend,
I come (in Kindnesse, and unfeined Love)
First, to do greetings to thy Royall Person,
And then to crave a League of Amity:

And lastly, to confirm that Amity
With Nuptiall Knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant
That vertuous Lady Bona, thy fair Sister,
To Englands King in lawfull Marriage.

Marg. If that go forward, Henries hope is done.

Warw. And gracious Madam, Speaking to Bona.
In our Kings behalf,
I am commanded, with your leave and favour,
Humbly to kisse your Hand, and with my Tongue
To tell the passion of my Sovereigns Heart;
Where Fame, late entring at his heedfull Ears,
Hath plac'd thy beauties Image, and thy Vertue.

Marg. King Lewis, and Lady Bona, hear me speak,
Before you answer Warwick. His demand
Springs not from Edwards well-meant honest Love,
But from Deceit, bred by Necessity:
For how can Tyrants safely govern home,
Unlesse abroad they purchase great alliance?
To prove him Tyrant, this reason may suffice,
That Henry liveth still: but were he dead,
Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henries Son.
Look therefore Lewis, that by this League and Marriage
Thou draw not on thy Danger, and Dis-honor:
For though Usurpers sway the rule a while,
Yet Heavens are just, and Time suppresseth Wrongs.

War. Injurious Margaret.

Edw. And why not Queen?

War. Because thy father Henry did usurp,
And thou no more art Prince, then she is Queen.

Oxf. Then Warwick disanulls great John of Gaunt,
Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;
And after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Whose Wisdom was a Mirror to the wisest:
And after that wise Prince, Henry the Fifth,
Who by his Prowesse conquered all France:
From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how haps it in this smooth discourse,
You told not, how Henry the Sixth hath lost
All that, which Henry the Fifth had gotten;

Me thinks these Peers of France should smile at that,
But for the rest: you tell a Pedigree
Of three score and two years, a silly time
To make prescription for a Kingdomes worth.

Oxf. Why Warwick, canst thou speak against my Liege
Whom thou obeyd'st thirty and six years,
And not bewray thy Treason with a blush?

War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,
Now buckler falsehood with a Pedigree?

For shame leave Henry, and call Edward King.

Oxf. Call him my King, by whose injurious doom
My elder Brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere
Was done to death? and more then so, my Father,
Even in the down-fall of his mellow'd years,
When Nature brought him to the door of death;
No Warwick, no: while Life upholds this Arme,
This Arme upholds the House of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York.

Lew. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford
Vouchsafe at our request, to stand aside,
While I use further conference with Warwick.

They stand aloofe.

Mar. Heavens grant, that Warwicks words bewitch him not.

Lew. Now Warwick, tell me even upon thy conscience
Is Edward your true King? for I were loth
To link with him, that were not lawfull chosen.

Warw. Thereon I pawn my Credit, and mine Honour.

Lew. But is he gracious in the peoples eyes?

War. The more, that Henry was unfortunate.

Lew. Then further: all dissembling set aside,
Tell me for truth, the measure of his love,
Unto our Sister Bona.

War. Such it seems,
As may be seem a Monarch like himself,
My self have often heard him say, and swear,
That this his Love was an external Plant,
Whereof the Root was fix'd in Vertues ground,
The Leaves and Fruit maintain'd with Beauties Sun,
Exempt from Envy, but not from Disdain,
Unlesse the Lady Bona quit his pain,

Lew. Now Sister, let us hear your firm resolve.

Bona. Your grant, or your deny, shall be mine,
Yet I confesse, that often ere this day, Speaks to War.
When I have heard your Kings desert recounted,
Mine ear hath temptred judgement to desire.

Lew. Then Warwick, this:

Our Sister shall be Edwards.
And now forthwith shall Articles be drawn,
Touching the Joynture that your King must make,
Which with her Dowry shall be counterpoys'd:
Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be a witnesse,
That Bona shall be Wife to the English King.

Prin. Edw. To Edward, but not to the English King.

Marg. Deceitfull Warwick, it was thy device,
By this alliance to make void my suit;
Before thy coming, Lewis was Henries friend.

Lew. And still is friend to him, and Margaret,
But if your Title to the Crown be weak,
As may appear by Edwards good successe:
Then 'tis but reason, that I be releas'd
From giving aid, which late I promised.
Yet shall you have all kindnesse at my hand,
That your estate requires, and mine can yield.

War. Henry now lives in Scotland, at his ease;

T

Where

Where having nothing, nothing can he lose.
And as for yon your self (our quondam Queen)
You have a Father able to maintain you,
And better 'twere, yon troubled him, then France.

Mar. Peace impudent, and shameless Warwick, peace,
Proud setter up, and puller down of Kings,
I will not hence, till with my Talk and Tears
(Both full of Truth) I make King Lewis behold
Thy sly conveyance, and thy Lords false love.

Post blowing a horn within.

For both of you are Birds of self-same Feather.

Lew. Warwick, this is some Post to us, or thee.

Enter a Post.

Post. My Lord Ambassador,
These Letters are for you. Speaks to Warwick.
Sent from your Brother Marquess Montague.
These from our King, unto your Majesty. To Lewis.
And Madam, these for you, To Margaret.
From whom, I know not.

They all read their Letters.

Oxf. I like it well, that our fair Queen and Mistress
Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.

Prin. Edw. Nay mark how Lewis stamps as he were nettled. I hope, all's for the best.

Lew. Warwick, what are thy News?
And yours, fair Queen?

Mar. Mine such, as fill my heart with unhop'd joys.

War. Mine full of sorrow, and hearts discontent.

Lew. What? has your King Married the Lady Grey?
And now to sooth your Forgery, and his,
Sends me a Paper to perswade me Patience?
In th' Alliance that he seeks with France?
Dare he presume, to scorn us in this manner?

Mar. I told your Majesty as much before:
This proveth Edwards Love, and Warwick's honesty.

War. King Lewis, I here protest in sight of heaven,
And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,
That I am clear from this misdeed of Edwards;
No more my King, for he dishonors me,
But most himself, if he could see his shame.

Did I forget, that by the house of York
My father came untimely to his death?
Did I let passe th' abuse done to my Niece?
Did I impale him with the Regal Crown?
Did I put Henry from his Native Right?
And am I guerdon'd at the last, with Shame?
Shame on himself, for my Desert is Honor.

And to repair my Honor lost for him,
I here renounce him, and return to Henry.
My Noble Queen, let former grudges passe,
And henceforth, I am thy true Servitour:
I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona,
And replant Henry in his former state.

Mar. Warwick,
These words have turn'd my Hate, to Love,
And I forgive, and quite forget old faults,
And joy that thou becom'st King Henries Friend.

War. So much his Friend, I, his unfeigned Friend,
That if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us
With some few Bands of chosen Souldiers,
I'll undertake to land them on our Coast,
And force the Tyrant from his seat by War.

'Tis not his new-made Bride shall succour him,
And as for Clarence, as my Letters tell me,
He's very likely now to fall from him,
For matching more for wanton Lust, then Honor,

Or then for strength and safety of our Countrey.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd,
But by thy help to this distressed Queen?

Mar. Renowned Prince, how shall Poor Henry live,
Unlesse thou rescue him from foul despair?

Bona. My quarrel, and this English Queens, are one.

War. And mine fair Lady Bona, joyns with yours.

Lew. And mine, with hers, and thine, and Margarets.
Therefore at last, I firmly am resolv'd
You shall have aid.

Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all, at once.

Lew. Then Englands Messenger, return in Post,
And tell false Edward, thy supposed King,
That Lewis of France, is sending over Maskers
To revel it with him, and his new Bride.

Thou seest what's past, go fear thy King withall.
Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly;
I wear the Willow Garland for his sake.

Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are laid aside,
And I am ready to put Armor on.

War. Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore I'll un-Crown him, er't be long.
There's thy reward be gone. Exit Post.

Lew. But Warwick,
Thou and Oxford, with five thousand men
Shall crosse the Seas, and bid false Edward battell:
And as occasion serves, this Noble Queen
And Prince, shall follow with a fresh supply,
Yet ere thou go, but answer me one doubt:
What Pledge have we of thy firm Loyalty?

War. This shall assure my constant Loyalty,
That if our Queen, and this young Prince agree,
I'll joyn my eldest daughter, and my Joy,
To him forthwith, in holy Wedlock bands.

Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your Motion.
Son Edward, she is Fair and Vertuous,
Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick,
And with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
That onely Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prin. Ed. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it,
And here to pledge my Vow, I give my hand.

He gives his hand to Warwick.

Lew. Why stay we now? these souldiers shall be levied,
And thou Lord Bourbon, our High Admirall
Shalt waft them over with our Royal Fleet.
I long till Edward fall by Warrs mischance,
For mocking Marriage with a Daine of France.

Exeunt. Manet Warwick.

War. I came from Edward as Ambassador,
But I return his sworn and mortal Foe:
Matters of Marriage was the charge he gave me,
But dreadfull War shall answer his demand.
Had he none else to make a stale but me?
Then none but I, shall turn his Jest to Sorrow,
I was the Chief that rais'd him to the Crown,
And I'll be Chief to bring him down again:
Not that I pitty Henries misery,
But seek Revenge on Edwards mockery. Exit.

Enter Richard, Clarence, Somerset and Montague.

Rich. Now tell me Brother Clarence, what think you
Of this new Marriage with the Lady Gray?
Hath not our Brother made a worthy choyce?

Clar. Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to France,
How

How could he stay till Warwick made return ?

Som. My Lords, forbear this talk : here comes the King.

Flourish.

Enter King Edward, Lady Gray, Pembroke, Stafford, Hastings : four stand on one side and four on the other.

Rich. And his well-chosen Bride.

Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.

King. Now Brother of Clarence,
How like you our Choyce,
That you stand pensive, as half malecontent ?

Clar. As well as Lewis of France,
Or the Earle of Warwick,
Which are so weak of courage, and in judgement,
That they'll take no offence at our abuse.

King. Suppose they take offence without a cause :
They are but Lewis and Warwick, I am Edward,
Your King and Warwicks, and must have my will.

Rich. And shall have your will, because our King :
Yet hasty Marriage seldom proveth well.

King. Yes Brother Richard, are you offended too ?

Rich. Not I : no :
God forbid, that I should wish them sever'd,
Whom God hath joyn'd together :
I, and 'twere pity, to sunder them,
That yoke so well together.

King. Setting your skorns, and your mislike aside,
Tell me some reason, why the Lady Gray
Should not become my Wife, and Englands Queen ?
And you too, Somerset and Mountagne,
Speak freely what you think.

Clar. Then this is my opinion :
That King Lewis becomes your Enemy,
For mocking him about the Marriage
Of the Lady Bona.

Rich. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,
Is now dishonoured by this New Marriage.

King. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd,
By such invention as I can devise ?

Moun. Yet, to have joyn'd with France in such alliance,
Would more have strength'ned this our Commonwealth
Gainst forrain stormes, then any home-bred Marriage.

Hast. Why, knows not Mountague, that of it self,
England is safe, if true within it self ?

Moun. Yes, but the safer, when 'tis back'd with France.
Hast. 'Tis better using France, then trusting France ;

Let us be back'd with God, and with the Seas,
Which he hath giv'n for fence impregnable,
And with their helps, only defend our selves :
In them, and in our selves, our safety lyes.

Clar. For this one speech, Lord Hastings well deserves
To have the Heir of the Lord Hungerford.

King. I, what of that ? it was my will, and grant,
And for this once, my Will shall stand for Law.

Rich. And yet me thinks, your Grace hath not done well
To give the Heir and Daughter of Lord Scales
Unto the Brother of your loving Bride ;
She better would have fitted me or Clarence :
But in your Bride you bury Brotherhood.

Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the Heir
Of the Lord Bonvill on your new Wives Son,
And leave your Brothers to go speed elsewhere.

King. Alas, poor Clarence : is it for a Wife
That thou art malecontent ? I will provide thee.

Clar. In chusing for your self,
You shew'd your judgement :
Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the Brother in mine own behalf ;
And to that end, I shortly mind to leave you.

King. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be King.
And not be ty'd unto his brothers will.

Lady Gray. My Lords, before it pleas'd his Majesty
To raise my State to Title of a Queen,
Do me but right, and you must all confesse,
That I was not ignoble of Descent,
And meaner then my self have had like fortune.
But as this Title honors me and mine,
So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Doth cloud my joyes with danger, and with sorrow.

King. My Love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns :
What danger, or what sorrow can befall thee,
So long as Edward is thy constant friend,
And their true Sovereign, whom they must obey ?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,
Unlesse they seek for hatred at my hands :
Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,
And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Rich. I hear, yet say not much, but think the more.

Enter a Post.

King. Now Messenger, what Letters, or what News from France ?

Post. My Sovereign Liege, no Letters, and few words,
But such as I (without your special pardon)
Dare not relate.

King. Go too, we pardon thee :
Therefore, in brief, tell their words,
As near as thou canst guesse them.
What answer makes King Lewis, unto our Letters ?

Post. At my depart, these were his very words :
Go tell false Edward, the supposed King,
That Lewis of France is sending over Maskers,
To revell it with him, and his new Bride.

King. Is Lewis so brave ? belike he thinks me Henry.
But what said Lady Bona to my Marriage ?

Post. These were her words, utt'ed with mild disdain :
Tell him, in hope he'll prove a Widower shortly,
I'll wear the Willow Garland for his sake.

King. I blame not her, she could say little lesse :
She had the wrong. But what said Henries Queen ?
For so I heard, that she was there in place.

Post. Tell him (quoth she)
My mourning Weeds are done,
And I am ready to put Armor on.

King. Belike she means to play the Amazon.
But what said Warwick to these injuries ?

Post. He, more incens'd against your Majesty,
Then all the rest, discharg'd me with these words :
Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore I'll uncrown him, er't be long.

King. Ha ? durst the Traitor breath out so proud words ?
Well, I will arme me, being thus fore-warn'd :
They shall have Warrs, and pay for their presumption.
But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret ?

Post. I, gracious Sovereign,
They are so link'd in friendship,
That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's Daughter.

Clar. Belike, the elder ;
Clarence will have the younger.

Now Brother King farewell, and sit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwick's other Daughter,
That though I want a Kingdome, yet in Marriage
I may not prove inferior to your self.
You that love me, and Warwick, follow me.

Exit Clarence, and Somerset follows.

Rich. Not I :

My thoughts aim at a further matter :

I stay not for the love of Edward, but the Crown.

King. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick?

Yet I am arm'd against the worst can happen :

And haste is needfull in this desprate case.

Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf

Go levy men, and make prepare for War ;

They are already, or quickly will be landed :

My self in person will straight follow you.

Exit Pembroke and Stafford.

But ere I go, Hastings and Mountague

Resolve my doubt : you twain of all the rest,

Are near to Warwick, by bloud, and by allyance :

Tell me, if you love Warwick more then me ;

If it be so, then both depart to him :

I rather wish you foes, then hollow friends.

But if you mind to hold your true obedience,

Give me assurance with some friendly Vow,

That I may never have you in suspect.

Mouns. So God help Mountague, as he proves true.

Hast. And Hastings, as he favours Edwards cause.

King. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us ?

Rich. I, in despite of all that shall withstand you.

King. Why so : then am I sure of Victory.

Now therefore let us hence, and lose no hour,

Till we meet Warwick, with his fortain power.

Exeunt.

Enter Warwick, and Oxford in England, with French Souldiers.

Warw. Trust me, my Lord, all hitherto goes well,
The common people by numbers swarme to us.

Enter Clarence and Somerset.

But see where Somerset and Clarence comes :

Speak suddenly, my Lords, are we all friends ?

Clar. Fear not that, my Lord.

War. Then gentle Clarence, welcome unto Warwick,

And welcome Somerset : I hold it cowardize,

To rest mistrustfull, where a Noble Heart

Hath pawn'd an open Hand, in sign of Love :

Else might I think, that Clarence, Edwards brother,

Were but a fained friend to our proceedings :

But welcome sweet Clarence, my daughter shall be thine.

And now, what rests ? but in Nights Coverture,

Thy Brother being carelessly encamp'd,

His Souldiers lurking in the town about,

And but attended by a simple Guard,

We may surprize and take him at our pleasure,

Our Scouts have found the adventure very easie :

That as Ulysses, and stout Diomedes,

With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus Tents,

And brought from thence the Thracian fatall Steeds ;

So we, well cover'd with the Nights black Mantle,

At unawares may beat down Edwards Guard,

And seize himself : I say not, slaughter him,

For I intend but only to surprize him.

You that will follow me to this attempt,

Applaud the Name of Henry, with your Leader.

They all cry Henry.

Why then, let's on our way in silent sort,

For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George.

Exeunt.

Enter the Watchmen to guard the Kings Tent.

1. Watch. Come on my Masters, each man take his stand,
The King by this, is set him down to sleep.

2. Watch. What, will he not to Bed ?

1. Watch. Why, no : for he hath made a solemn Vow,
Never to lie and take his natural Rest,
Till Warwick, or himself, be quite suppress.

2. Watch. To morrow then belike shall be the day,
If Warwick be so near as men report.

3. Watch. But say, I pray, what Noble man is that,
That with the King here resteth in his Tent ?

1. Watch. 'Tis the Lord Hastings, the Kings chiefest friend.

3. Watch. O, is it so ? but why commands the King,
That his chief followers lodge in Towns about him,
While he himself keeps in the cold field ?

2. Watch. 'Tis the more honor, because the more dangerous.

3. Watch. I, but give me worship, and quietnesse,
I like it better then a dangerous honor.

If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,

'Tis to be doubted he would waken him.

1. Watch. Unlesse our Halberds did shut up his passage.

2. Watch. I : wherefore else guard we this Royal Tent,
But to defend his Person from Night-foes ?

Enter Warwick, Clarence, Oxford, Somerset, and French Souldiers, silent all.

War. This is his Tent, and see where stands his Guard:
Courage my Masters : Honor now or never :

But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

1. Watch. Who goes there ?

2. Watch. Stay or thou dyest.

*Warwick and the rest cry all, Warwick, Warwick,
and set upon the Guard, who flye, crying, Arme, Arme,
Warwick and the rest following them.*

The Drum playing, and Trumpet sounding.

Enter Warwick, Somerset, and the rest, bringing the King out in a gown, sitting in a Chair : Richard and Hastings flyes over the Stage.

Som. What are they that flye there ?

Warw. Richard and Hastings, let them go, here is the Duke.

King Edm. The Duke ?

Why Warwick, when we parted,

Thou call'dst me King.

Warw. I, but the case is alter'd.

When you disgrace'd me in my Embassade,

Then I degraded you from being King,

And come now to create you Duke of York,

Alas how should you govern any Kingdome,

That know not how to use Embassadors,

Nor how to be contented with one Wife,

Nor how to use your Brothers brotherly,

Nor how to study for the Peoples Welfare,

Nor how to shrowd your self from Enemies ?

King Edw.

K. Edw. Yea, Brother of Clarence,
Art thou here too?
Nay then I see, that Edward needs must down.
Yet Warwick, in despite of all mischance,
Of thee thy self, and all thy Complices,
Edward will alwayes bear himself as King:
Though Fortunes mallice overthrow my State.
My mind exceeds the compasse of her Wheel.
War. Then for his mind, be Edward Englands King.

Takes off his Crown.

But Henry now shall wear the English Crown,
And be true King indeed: thou but a shadow.
My Lord of Somerset, at my request,
See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey'd
Unto my Brother Arch-Bishop of York:
When I have fought with Pembrook, and his fellows,
I'll follow you, and tell what answer
Lewis and the Lady Bona send to him.
Now for a while farewell good Duke of York.

They lead him out forcibly.

K. Ed. What Fates impose, that men must needs abide;
It boots not to resist both wind and tide. Exeunt.

Oxf. What now remains my Lords for us to do,
But march to London with our Souldiers?

War. I, that's the first thing that we have to do,
To free King Henry from imprisonment,
And see him seated in the Regal Throne.

Exit.

Enter Rivers, and the Lady Gray.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?
Gray. Why Brother Rivers, are you yet to learn
What late misfortune is befalln King Edward?

Riv. What? losse of some pitcht battell
Against Warwick?

Gray. No, but the losse of his own Royal person.

Riv. Then is my Sovereign slain?

Gray. I almost slain, for he is taken prisoner,
Either betrayed by falshood of his Guard,
Or by his Foe surpriz'd at unawares:
And as I further have to understand,
Is new committed to the Bishop of York,
Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our Foe.

Riv. These News I must confesse are full of grief,
Yet gracious Madam, bear it as you may,
Warwick may loose, that now hath won the day.

Gray. Till then, fair hope must hinder lives decay.
And I the rather wain me from despair
For love of Edward's Off-spring in my womb:
This is it that makes me bridle my passion,
And bear with Mildnesse my misfortunes crosse:
I, I, for this I draw in many a tear,
And stop the rising of bloud-sucking sighes,
Least with my sighes or tears, I blast or drown
King Edward's Fruit, true heir to th' English Crown.

Riv. But Madam,
Where is Warwick then become?

Gray. I am inform'd that he comes towards London,
To set the Crown once more on Henries head:
Guesse thou the rest, King Edward's friend must down.
But to prevent the Tyrants violence,
(For trust not him that hath once broken faith)
I'll hence forthwith unto the Sanctuary,

To save (at least) the heir of Edward's right:
There shall I rest secure from force and fraud:
Come therefore let us flye, while we may flye,
If Warwick take us, we are sure to dye. Exeunt.

Enter Richard, Lord Hastings, and Sir William Stanley.

Rich. Now my Lord Hastings, and Sir Will. Stanley
Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,
Into this chiefeft Thicket of the Park.
Thus stands the case: you know our King, my Brother,
Is prisoner to the Bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good usage, and great liberty,
And often but attended with weak guard,
Comes hunting this way to disport himself.
I have advertis'd him by secret means,
That if about this hour he make this way,
Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends with Horse and Men,
To set him free from his Captivity.

Enter King Edward, and a Huntsman with him.

Hunt. This way my Lord,
For this way lies the Game.

King Edw. Nay this way man,
See where the Huntsmen stand.

Now brother of Gloster, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Stand you thus close to steal the Bishops Deer?

Rich. Brother, the time and case, requireth hast,
Your horse stands ready at the Park-corner,

King Edw. But whither shall we then?

Hast. To Lyn my Lord,
And ship from thence to Flanders.

Rich. Well guest believe me, for that was my meaning.

King Edw. Stanley, I will require thy forwardnesse.

Rich. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talk.

King Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou?
Wilt thou go along?

Hunt. Better do so, then tarry and be hang'd.

Rich. Come then away, let's ha no more ado.

King Edw. Bishop farewell,
Shield thee from Warwick's frown,
And pray that I may re-possesse the Crown. Exeunt.

Enter King Henry the sixth, Clarence, Warwick, Somerset, young Henry, Oxford, Mountague, and Lieutenant.

King Hen. M. Lieutenant, now that God and Friends
Have shaken Edward from the Regal seat,
And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joyes,
At our enlargement what are thy due Fees?

Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their Sov'rains
But, if an humble prayer may prevail,
I then crave pardon of your Majesty.

King Hen. For what Lieutenant? For well using me?
Nay, be thou sure, I'll well requite thy kindnesse:
For that it made my imprisonment, a pleasure:
I, such a pleasure, as incaged Birds
Conceive; when after many moody Thoughts,
At last, by Notes of Household harmony,
They quite forget their losse of liberty.

But Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,
And chiefly therefore, I thank God, and thee,
He was the Author, thou the instrument.
Therefore that I may conquer Fortunes spight,
By living low, where Fortune cannot hurt me,
And that the people of this blessed Land
May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars,
Warwick, although my head still wear the Crown,
I here resign my Government to thee,
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

War. Your Grace hath still been fam'd for vertuous,
And now may seem as wise as vertuous,
By spying and avoiding Fortunes malice,
For few men rightly temper with the Stars:
Yet in this one thing let me blame your Grace,
For chusing me, when Clarence is in place.

Clar. No Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,
To whom the Heavens in thy Nativity,
Adjdg'd an Olive Branch, and Lawrell Crown,
As likely to be blest in Peace and War:
And therefore I yield thee my free consent.

War. And I choose Clarence only for Protector.

King. Warwick and Clarence, give me both your hands.
Now joyn your hands, and with your hands your hearts,
That no dissention hinder Government:
I make you both Protectors of this Land,
While I my self will lead a private Life,
And in devotion spend my latter dayes,
To sins rehuke, and my Creators praise.

Warw. What answers Clarence to his Soveraignes will?

Cl. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent,
For on thy fortune I repose my self.

Warw. Why then, though loth, yet must I be content:
We'll yoke together, like a double shadow
To Henries Body, and supply his place;
I mean, in bearing weight of Government,
While he enjoys the honor, and his ease.
And Clarence, now then is it more then needfull,
Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a Traitor,
And all his Lands and Goods confiscated.

Clar. What else? and that Succession be determined.

War. I, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

King. But with the first, of all your chief affairs,
Let me intreat (for I command no more)
That Margaret your Queen, and my Son Edward,
Be sent for, to return from France with speed:
For till I see them here, by doubtfull fear,
My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clar. It shall be done, my Soveraign, with all speed.

King. My Lord of Somerfer, what youth is that,
Of whom you seem to have so tender care?

Somer. My Liege, it is young Henry, Earle of Richmond.

King. Come hither, Englands Hope:

Layes his Hand on his Head

If secret Powers suggest but truth
To my divining thoughts,
This pretty Lad will prove our Countries blifs.
His looks are full of peacefull Majesty,
His head by nature fram'd to wear a Crown,
His hand to wield a Scepter, and himself
Likely in time to blesse a Regal Throne:
Make much of him, my Lords; for this is he Must help you more, then you are hurt by me.

Enter a Post.

Warw. What news, my friend?

Post. That Edward is escaped from your brother,
And fled (as he hears since) to Burgundy.

Warw. Unfavory news: but how made he escape?

Post. He was convey'd by Richard, Duke of Gloster,
And the Lord Hastings, who attended him
In secret ambush, on the Forrest side,
And from the Bishops Huntsmen rescu'd him:
For Hunting was his daily Exercise.

War. My Brother was too carelesse of his charge.
But let us hence, my Soveraign, to provide
A salve for any sore, that may betide.

Exeunt

Mauet Somerfer, Richmond, and Oxford.

Som. My Lord, I like not of this flight of Edwards:
For doubtlesse, Burgundy will yield him help,
And we shall have more Warrs befor't be long.
As Henries late presaging Prophecy
Did glad my heart, with hope of this young Richmond:
So doth my heart mis-give me, in these Conflicts
What may befall him, to his harme and ours.
Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
Forthwith we'll send him hence to Brittany,
Till stormes be past of Civill Enmity.

Oxf. I: for if Edward re-possesse the Crown,
'Tis like that Richmond, with the rest, shall down.

Som. It shall be so: he shall to Brittany.
Come therefore, let's about it speedily.

Exeunt.

Enter Edward, Richard, Hastings,
and Souldiers.

Edw. Now brother Richard, Lord Hastings and the Yet thus far Fortune maketh us amends, (rest,
And sayes, that once more I shall enterchange
My wained state, for Henries Regal Crown.
Well have we pass'd, and now re-pass'd the Seas,
And brought desired help from Burgundy.
What then remains, we being thus arriv'd
From Ravenspurgh Haven, before the Gates of York,
But that we enter, as into our Dukedome?

Rich. The Gates made fast?

Brother, I like not this.
For many men that stumble at the Threshold,
Are well fore-told, that danger lurks within.

Edw. Tush man, aboadments must not now affright us:
By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repair to us.

Hast. My Liege, I'll knock once more, to summon them.

Enter on the Walls, the Mayor of York,
and his Brethren.

Mayor. My Lords.

We were fore-warned of your comming,
And shut the Gates, for safety of our selves;
For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.

Edw. But, Master Mayor, if Henry be your King.
Yet Edward, at the least, is Duke of York.

Mayor. True, my good Lord, I know you for no lesse.

Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my Dukedome,
As being well contentent with that alone.

Rich.

Rich. But when the Fox hath once got in his Nose,
He'll soon find means to make the Body follow.

Hast. Why, Master Mayor, why stand you in a doubt?
Open the Gates, we are King Henries friends.

Mayor. I, say you so? the Gates shall then be opened.
He descends.

Rich. A wise stout Captain, and soon perswaded.

Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well.
So 'twere not long of him: but being entred,
I doubt not I, but we shall soon perswade
Both him, and all his Brothers, unto reason.

Enter the Mayor, and two Aldermen.

Edw. So, Master Mayor: these Gates must not be shut,
But in the Night, or in the time of War.

What, fear not man, but yield me up the Keys,
Takes his Keys.

For Edward will defend the Town, and thee,
And all those friends, that deign to follow me.

*March. Enter Mountgomery, with Drum
and Souldiers.*

Rich. Brother, this is Sir John Mountgomery,
Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd.

Edwar. Welcome Sir John: but why come you in Armes?

Mount. To help King Edward in his time of storm,
As every royal Subject ought to do.

Edw. Thanks good Mountgomery:
But we now forget the title to the Crown,
And onely claim our Dukedome,
Till God please to send the rest.

Mount. Then fare you well, for I will hence again,
I came to serve a King, and not a Duke:
Drummer strike up, and let us march away.

The Drum begins to March.

Edw. Nay stay, Sir John, a while, and we'll debate
By what safe means the Crown may be recover'd.

Mount. What talk you of debating? in few words,
If you'll not here proclaim your self our King,
I'll leave you to your fortune, and be gone,
To keep them back, that come to succour you.
Why shall we fight, if you pretend no Title?

Rich. Why Brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

Edw. When we grow stronger,
Then we'll make our Claim:

Till then, 'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning.

Hast. Away with scrupulous Wit, now Armes must rule.

Rich. And fearless minds climb soonest unto Crowns.
Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand,
The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.

Edw. Then be it as you will: for 'tis my right,
And Henry but usurps the Diadem.

Mount. I, now my Sovereign speaketh like himself,
And now will I be Edwards Champion.

Hast. Sound Trumpet, Edward shall be here proclaim'd:
Come, fellow Souldier, make thou Proclamation.

Flourish. Sound.

Soul. Edward the Fourth, by the Grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, &c.

Mount. And whosoever gainsayes King Edwards right,
By this I challenge him to single fight.

Throws down his Gantlet.

All. Long live Edward the Fourth.

Edw. Thanks brave Mountgomery.

And thanks unto you all:

If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindnesse.

Now for this Night, let's harbor here in York:

And when the Morning Sun shall raise his Car
Above the Border of this Horizon,

We'll forward towards Warwick, and his Mates;

For well I wot, that Henry is no Souldier,

Ah froward Clarence, how evill it becoms thee,

To flatter Henry, and forsake thy Brother?

Yet as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick,

Come on brave Souldiers: doubt not of the Day,

And that once gotten, doubt not of large Pay. Exeunt.

Enter the King, Warwick, Mountague, Clarence, Oxford, and Somerset.

War. What counsell, Lords? Edward from Belgia,
With hasty Germanes, and blunt Hollanders.
Hath pass'd in safety through the Narrow Seas,
And with his troupes doth march amain to London,
And many giddy people flock to him.

King. Let's levy men, and beat him back again.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out,
Which being suffer'd, Rivers cannot quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends,
Not mutinous in Peace, yet bold in War,
Those will I muster up: and thou Son Clarence
Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent,
The Knights and Gentlemen, to come with thee.
Thou brother Mountague, and Buckingham,
Northampton, and in Leicestershire shalt find
Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st
And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belov'd,
In Oxfordshire shalt muster up thy friends.
My Sovereign, with the loving Citizens,
Like to his Island, girt with the Ocean,
Or modest Dyan, circled with her Nymphs;
Shall rest in London, till we come to him:
Fair Lords take leave, and stand not to reply.
Farewell my Sovereign.

King. Farewell my Hector, and my Troyes true hope.

Clar. In sign of truth, I kisse your Highnesse hand.

King. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate.

Mount. Comfort, my Lord, and so I take my leave.

Oxf. And thus I seal my truth, and bid adieu.

King. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Mountague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell, sweet Lords, let's meet at Coventry.
Exeunt.

King. Here at the Pallace will I rest a while.
Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your Lordship?
Me thinks, the Power that Edward hath in field,
Should not be able to encounter mine.

Exet. The doubt is, that he will seduce the rest.

King. That's not my fear, my meed hath got me fame:
I have not stop't mine ears to their demands,
Nor posted of their suits with slow delays,
My pittie hath been balm to heal their wounds,
My mildnesse hath allay'd their swelling griefs,
My mercy dry'd their water-flowing tears.
I have not been desirous of their wealth,
Nor much oppress't them with great subsidies,
Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd.
Then why should they love Edward more than me?
No Exeter these Graces challenge Grace:

And

And when the Lion fawns upon the Lamb,
The Lamb will never cease to follow him,
Shout within, A Lancaster, A Lancaster.

Exc. Heark, heark, my Lord, what Shouts are these?

Enter Edward and his Souldiers.

Edw. Seize on the shamefac'd Henry, bear him hence,
And once again proclaim us King of England.
You are the Fount, that make small Brooks to flow,
Now stops thy spring, my Sea shall suck them dry,
And swell so much the higher, by their ebbe.
Hence with him to the Tower, let him not speak.

Exit with King Henry.

And Lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,
Where peremptory Warwick now remains:
The Sun shines hot, and if we use delay,
Cold biting Winter mairs our hop'd-for Hay.

Rich. Away betimes, before his forces joyn,
And take the great-grown Traitor unawares:
Brave Warriors, march amain towards Coventry.

Exeunt.

Enter Warwick, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and others upon the Walls.

War. Where is the Post that came from valiant Oxford?
How far hence is thy Lord, mine honest fellow?

Mes. 1. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our Brother Mountague?
Where is the Post that came from Mountague?

Mes. 2. By this at Daintry, with a puissant troop.

Enter Somerville.

War. Say Somerville, what sayes my loving Son?
And by thy guesse, how nigh is Clarence now?

Somerv. At Southam I did leave him with his forces,
And do expect him here some two hours hence.

War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his Drum.

Somer. It is not his, my Lord, here Southam lies:

The Drum your Honor hears, marcheth from Warwick,
War. Who should that be? belike unlook'd for friends.

Somer. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

March. Flourish. Enter Edward, Richard, and Rouldiers.

Edw. Go, Trumpet, to the Walls, sound a Parle:

Rich. Se how the surly Warwick mans the Wall.

War. Oh unbid spight, is sportfull Edward come?
Where slept our Scouts, or how are they seduc'd,
That we could here no news of his repair.

Edw. Now Warwick, wilt thou ope the City Gates,
Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy Knee,
Call Edward King, and at his hands beg Mercy,
And he shall pardon thee these Outrages?

War. Nay rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence,
Confesse who set thee up, and pluckt thee down,
Call Warwick Patron, and be penitent,
And thou shalt still remain the Duke of York.

Rich. I thought at least he would have said the King,
Or did he make the Jest against his will?

War. Is not a Dukedome, Sir, a goodly gift?

Rich. I, by my faith, for a poor Earle to give,
I'll do thee service for so good a gift.

Warm. 'Twas I that gave the Kingdome to thy Brother.

Edw. Why then 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight:
And Weakling, Warwick takes his gift again,
And Henry is my King, Warwick his Subject.

Edw. But Warwick's King is Edward's Prisoner:
And gallant Warwick, do but answer this,
Whar is the Body, when the head is off?

Rich. Alas, that Warwick had no more fore-cast,
But whiles he thought to steal the single Ten,
The King was slyly finger'd from the Deck:
You left poor Henry at the Bishops Pallace,
And ten to one you'll meet him in the Tower.

Edw. 'Tis even so, yet you are Warwick still.

Rich. Come Warwick,
Take the time, kneel down, kneel down:
Nay when: strike now, or else the Iron cools.

War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,
And with the other, fling it at thy face,
Then bear so low a sayl, to strike to thee.

Edw. Sayl how thou canst,
Have Wind and Tide thy friend,
This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,
Shall, whiles thy head is warm, and new cut off,
Write in the dust this Sentence with thy blood,
Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.

Enter Oxford, with Drum and Colours.

War. Oh chearfull Colours, see where Oxford comes.

Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster.

Rich. The Gates are open, let us enter too.

Edw. So other foes may set upon our backs,

Stand we in good array: for they no doubt

Will issue out again, and bid us battell;

If not, the City being but of small defence,

We'll quickly rowze the traitors in the same.

War. Oh welcome Oxford, for we want thy help.

Enter Mountague, with Drum and Colours.

Mount. Mountague, Mountague, for Lancaster.

Rich. Thou and thy Brother both shall buy this treason
Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.

Edw. The harder match'd, the greater Victory,
My mind presageth happy gain, and Conquest.

Enter Somerset, with Drum and Colours.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster.

Rich. Two of thy Name, both Dukes of Somerset,
Have sold their Lives unto the House of York,
And thou shalt be the third, if this Sword hold.

Enter Clarence, with Drum and Colours.

War. And loe, where George of Clarence sweeps along
Of force enough to bid his brother Battell:

With whom, an upright zeal to right, prevails
More then the nature of a Brothers love.

Come Clarence, come: thou wilt, if Warwick call.

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means?

Look here, I throw my infamy at thee:

I will not ruinate my Fathers House,

Who gave his blood to lyme the stones together,

And set up Lancaster. Why, trowest thou, Warwick,

That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,

To bend the fatal instruments of War

Against

Against his brother, and his lawfull King.
Perhaps thou wilt object my holy Oath:
To keep that Oath, were more impiety,
Then Jephthah, when he sacrific'd his Daughter.
I am so sorry for my Trespas made,
That to deserve well at my brothers hands,
I here proclaim my self thy mortal foe:
With resolution, wherefoe're I meet thee,
(As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad)
To plague thee for thy foul mis-leading me.
And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defie thee,
And to my brother turn my blushing Cheeks.
Pardon me Edward, I will make amends:
And Richard, do not frown upon my faults,
For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.

Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more below'd
Then if thou never had'st deseru'd our hate.

Rich. Welcome good Clarence, this is Brother-like.

War. Oh passing Traitor, perjur'd and unjust.

Edw. What Warwick,
Wilt thou leave the Town, and fight?
Or shall we beat the Stones about thine Ears?

Warw. Alas, I am not coop'd here for defence:
I will away towards Barnet presently,
And bid thee Battell, Edward, if thou dar'st.

Edw. Yes Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way:
Lords to the field: Saint George, and Victory. Exeunt.

March. Warwick and his company follows.

Alarum, and Excursions. Enter Edward bringing forth Warwick wounded.

Edw. So, lie thou there: die thou, and die our fear,
For Warwick was a Bug that fear'd us all.
Now Mountague sit fast, I seek for thee,
That Warwick's Bones may keep thine companie.

Exit.

War. Ah, who is nigh? come to me, friend, or foe,
And tell me who is Victor, York, or Warwick?
Why ask I that? my mangled body shews,
My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shews,
That I must yield my body to the Earth,
And by my fall, the conquest to my foe.
Thus yields the Cedar to the Axes edge,
Whose Armes gave shelter to the Princely Eagle,
Under whose shade the ramping Lion slept,
Whose top-branch over-peer'd Joves spreading tree,
And kept low Shrubs from Winters pow'rful wind.
These Eyes, that now are dim'd with Deaths black Veyl,
Have been as piercing as the Mid-day Sun,
To search the secret Treasons of the world:
The wrinkles in my Brows, now fill'd with blood,
Were lik'n'd oft to Kingly Sepulchers:
For who liv'd King, but I could dig his Grave?
And who durst smile, when Warwick bent his Brow?
Loe, now my Glory smear'd in dust and blood,
My Parks, my Walks, my Mannors that I had,
Even now forsake me; and of all my Lands,
Is nothing left me, but my bodies length.
Why, what is Pomp, Rule, Reign, but Earth and Dust?
And live we how we can, yet die we must.

Enter Oxford and Somerset.

Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick, wert thou as we are,
We might recover all our Losse again:

The Queen from France hath brought a puissant power
Even now we heard the news, ah, could'st thou flye.

Warw. Why then I would not flye. Ah Mountague,
If thou be there, sweet brother, takemy hand,
And with thy Lips keep in my soul a while.
Thou lov'st me not: for, brother, if thou didst,
Thy tears would wash this cold congealed blood,
That glews my Lips, and will not let me speak.
Come quickly Mountague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah Warwick, Mountague hath breath'd his last,
And to the latest gaspe, cry'd out for Warwick:
And said commend me to my valiant Brother.
And more he would have said, and more he spoke,
Which sounded like a Cannon in a Vault,
That mought not be distinguish'd: but at last,
I well might hear, delivered with a groan,
O farewell Warwick.

War. Sweet rest his soul:
Flye Lords, and save your selves,
For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven.

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the Queens great power.

Here they bear away his body. Exeunt

Flourish. Enter King Edward in triumph, with Richard, Clarence, and the rest.

King. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,
And we are grac'd with wreaths of Victory:
But in the midst of this bright-shining Day,
I spy a black suspicious threatening Cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious Sun,
E're he attain his easfull Western Bed:
I mean, my Lords, those powers that the Queen
Hath rais'd in Gallia, have arriv'd our Coast,
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that Cloud,
And blow it to the Source from whence it came,
Thy very Beams will dry those Vapours up,
For every Cloud engenders not a Storm.

Rich. The Queen is valued thirty thousand strong,
And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her:
If she hath time to breath, be well assur'd
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

King. We are advertis'd by our loving friends,
That they do hold their course toward Tewksbury.
We having now the best at Barnet field,
Will thither straight, for willingnesse rids way,
And as we march, our strength will be augmented:
In every County as we go along,
Strike up the Drum, cry courage, and away. Exeunt.

March. Enter the Queen, young Edward,
Somerset, Oxford, and Soldiers.

Q. Great Lords, wise men ne're sit and wail their losse
But chearly seek how to redresse their harms.
What though the Mast be now blown over-board,
The Cable broke, the holding-Anchor lost,
And half our Sailors swallow'd in the floud?
Yet lives our Pilot still. Is't meet, that he Should leave the Helm, and like a fearfull Lad,
With tearfull Eyes adde water to the Sea,
And give more strength to that which bath too much,
Whiles in hismoan, the Ship splits on the Rock,
Which industry and Courage might have sav'd?
Ah what a shame, ah what a fault were this,
Say Warwick was our Anchor: what of that?

And

And Mountague our top-Mast : what of him ?
 Our slaught' red friends, the Tackles : what of these ?
 Why is not Oxford here, another Anchor ?
 And Somerſet, another goodly Mast ?
 The friends of France our Shrowds and Tacklings ?
 And though unskilfull, why not Ned and I,
 For once allow'd the ſkilfull Pilots Charge ?
 We will nor from the Helm, to ſit and weep,
 But keep our Courſe (though the rough Wind ſay no)
 From Shelves and Rocks, that threaten us with Wrack.
 As good to chide the Waves, as ſpeak them fair,
 And what is Edward, but a ruthleſſe Sea ?
 What Clarence, but a Quick-ſand of Deceit ?
 And Richard, but a rag'd fatal Rock ?
 All theſe, the Enemies to our poor Bark.
 Say you can ſwim, alas 'tis but a while :
 Tread on the Sand, why there you quickly ſink,
 Beſtride the Rock, the Tyde will waſh you off,
 Or elſe you famiſh, that's a three-fold Death.
 This ſpeak I (Lords) to let you underſtand,
 If caſe ſome one of you would flye from us,
 That there's no hop'd-for Mercy with the Brothers,
 More then with ruthleſſe Waves, with Sands and Rocks.
 Why courage then, what cannot be avoided,
 'Twere childiſh weakneſſe to lament, or fear.

Prin. Me thinks a Woman of this valiant ſpirit,
 Should, if a Coward heard her ſpeak theſe words,
 Inſuſe his Breaſt with Magnanimity,
 And make him, naked, ſoyl a man at armes.
 I ſpeak not this, as doubting any here :
 For did I but ſuſpect a fearfull man,
 He ſhould have leave to go away betimes,
 Leaſt in our need he might infect another,
 And make him of like ſpirit to himſelf.
 Is any ſuch be here, as God forbid,
 Let him depart, before we need his help.

Oxf. Women and Children of ſo high a courage,
 And Warriors faint, why 'twere perpetual ſhame,
 Oh brave young Prince : thy famous Grandfather
 Doth live again in thee ; long may 'ſt thou live,
 To bear his Image, and renew his Glories.

Som. And he that will not fight for ſuch a hope,
 Go home to Bed, and like the Owle by day,
 If he ariſe, be mock'd and wondred at.

Que. Thanks gentle Somerſet, ſweet Oxford thanks.

Prin. And take his thanks, that yet hath nothing elſe.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. Prepare you Lords, for Edward is at hand,
 Ready to fight : therefore be reſolute.

Oxf. I thought no leſſe : it is his Policy,
 To haſt thus faſt, to find us unprovided.

Som. But he's deceiv'd, we are in readineſſe.

Qu. This cheers my heart, to ſee your forwardneſſe.

Oxf. Here pitch our Battell, hence we will not budge.

*March. Enter Edward, Richard, Clarence,
 and Souldiers.*

Edw. Brave followers, yonder ſtands the thorny Wood
 Which by Heavens aſſiſtance, and your ſtrength,
 Muſt by the Roots be hew'n up yet ere Night.
 I need not adde more fuel to your fire,
 For well I wot, ye blaze, to burn them out :
 Give ſignal to the fight, and to it Lords.

Qu. Lords, Knights, and Gentlemen, what ſhould I ſay,
 My tears gain-ſay : for every word I ſpeak,
 Ye ſee I drink the water of my eye.

Therefore no more but this : Henry your Sovereign
 Is Priſoner to the Foe, his State uſurp'd,
 His Realm a ſlaughter-houſe, his Subjects ſlain,
 His Statutes cancel'd, and his Treſure ſpent :
 And yonder is the Wolf, that makes this ſpoyl.
 You fight in Juſtice : then in Gods Name, Lords,
 Be valiant, and give ſignal to the fight.

Alarum, Retreat, Excursions.

Exeunt.

Enter Edward, Richard, Queen, Clarence, Oxford, Somerſet.

Edw. Now here's a period of tumultuous Broyls.
 Away with Oxford to Hames Caſtle ſtraight :
 For Somerſet, off with his guilty Head.
 Go bear them hence, I will not hear them ſpeak.

Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words.

Som. Nor I, but ſtoop with patience to my fortune.

Exeunt.

Que. So part we ſadly in this troblous World,
 To meet with Joy in ſweet Jeruſalem.

Edw. Is Proclamation made, That who finds Edward,
 Shall have a high Reward, and he his Life ?

Rich. It is, and loe where youthfull Edward comes.

Enter the Prince.

Edw. Bring forth the Gallant, let us hear him ſpeak.
 What ? can ſo young a Thorn begin to prick ?

Edward, what ſatiſfaction canſt thou make,
 For bearing Armes, for ſtirring up my ſubjects,
 And all the trouble thou haſt turn'd me to ?

Prin. Speak like a Subject, proud ambitious York.
 Suppose that I am now my Fathers Mouth,
 Reſign thy Chair, and where I ſtand kneel thou,
 Whil'ſt I propoſe the ſelf-ſame words to thee,
 Which (Traitor) thou would'ſt have me answer to.

Que. Ah, that thy Father had been ſo reſolv'd.

Rich. That you might ſtill have worn the Petticoat,
 And ne're have ſtole the Breech from Lancaster.

Prin. Let Aeſop fable in a Winters Night,
 His Curriſh Riddles ſorts not with this place.

Rich. By Heaven, Brat, I'll plague ye for that word.

Que. I thou waſt born to be a plague to men.

Rich. For Gods ſake, take away this Captive Scold.

Prin. Nay, take away this ſcolding Crook-back, rather.

Edw. Peace wiſfull Boy, or I will charm your tongue.

Clar. Untutor'd Lad, thou art too malapert.

Prin. I know my duty, you are all undutifull :
 Lascivious Edward, and thou perjur'd George,
 And thou miſ-ſhapen Dick, I tell ye all,
 I am your better, Traitors as ye are.

And thou uſurp'ſt my Fathers right and mine.

Edw. Take that, the likeneſſe of this Rayler here.

Stabs him.

Rich. Sprawl'ſt thou ? take that, to end thy agony.

Rich. Stabs him.

Clar. And there's for twitting me with perjury.

Clar. Stabs him.

Que. Oh, kill me too.

Rich. Marry, and ſhall.

Offers to kill her.

Edw. Hold, Richard, hold, for we have done too much.

Rich.

Rich. Why should we live, to fill the World with words?

Edw. What? doth she swoun? use means for her recovery.

Rich. Clarence excuse me to the King my Brother: I'll hence to London on a serious matter, Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news.

Clar. What? what?

Rich. Tower, the Tower.

Exit.

Qu. Oh Ned, sweet Ned, speak to thy Mother Boy.

Canst thou not speak? O Traitors, Murderers! They that stabb'd Cesar, shed no blood at all: Did not offend, nor were not worthy Blame, If this foul deed were by, to equall it.

He was a Man; this (in respect) a Child, And Men, ne're spend their fury on a Child. What's worse then Murderer, that I may name it? No, no, my heart will burst, and if I speak, And I will speak, that so my heart may burst. Butchers and Villains, bloody Canniballs, How sweet a Plant have you untimely cropt: You have no children (Butchers) if you had, The thought of them would have stir'd up remorse; But if you ever chance to have a Child, Look in his youth to have him so cut off.

As deathsmen you have rid this sweet young Prince.

King. Away with her, go bear her hence perforce

Qu. Nay, never bear me hence, dispatch me here: Here sheath thy sword, I'll pardon thee my death: What? wilt thou not? Then Clarence do it thou.

Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.

Qu. Good Clarence do, sweet Clarence do thou it.

Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it?

Qu. I but thou usest to forswear thy self.

'Twas sin before, but now 'tis Charity.

What wilt thou not? where is that devils butcher Richard, Hard favour'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?

Thou art not here; Murder is thy Almsdeed.

Petitioner for Blood, thou ne're pul'st back.

Edw. Away I say, I charge ye bear her hence.

Qu. So come to you, and yours, as to this Prince.

Exit Queen.

Edw. Where's Richard gone.

Cl. To London all in post, and as I guesse, To make a bloody Supper in the Tower?

Edw. He's sudden if a thing comes in his head, Now march we hence, discharge the common sort With Pay and thanks, and let's away to London, And see our gentle Queen how well she fares, By this (I hope) she hath a Son for me.

Exit.

Enter Henry the sixth, and Richard, with the Lieutenant on the Walls.

Rich. Good day, my Lord, what at your Book so hard?

Hen. I my good Lord: my Lord I should say rather, 'Tis sin to flatter, Good was little better:

Good Gloster, and Good devill, were alike, And both preposterous: therefore, not Good Lord.

Rich. Sirrah, leave us to our selves, we must confer.

Hen. So flies the wreakeless shepherd from the Wolf: So first the harmlesse Sheep doth yield his Fleece, And next his Throat unto the butchers Knife.

What Scene of death hath Rossius now to act?

Rich. Suspicion alwayes haunts the guilty mind,

The Thief doth fear each bush an Officer.

Hen. The Bird that hath been limed in a bush; With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush; And I the helplesse Male to one sweet Bird, Have now the fatal Object in my eye, Where my poor young was limb'd, was caught, and kild.

Rich. Why what a peevish Fool was that of Creet, That taught his Son the office of a Fowl, And yet for all his wings, the fool was drown'd.

Hen. I Dedalus, my poor Boy Icarus, Thy Father Minos, that deni'd our course, The Sun that sear'd the wings of my sweet Boy. Thy Brother Edward, and thy self, the Sea Whose envious Gulf did swallow up his life: Ah, kill me with thy Weapon, nos with words, My brest can better brook thy Daggers point, Then can my ears that Tragick History.

But wherefore dost thou come? Is't for my Life?

Rich. Think'st thou I am an Executioner?

Hen. A persecutor I am sure thou art, If murdering Innocents be Executing, Why then thou art an Executioner.

Rich. Thy Son I kill'd for his presumption.

Hen. Hadst thou bin kill'd when first thou didst presume, Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a Son of mine: (sime,

And thus I prophesie that many a thousand, Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear, And many an old mans sigh, and many a Widows, And many an Orphans water-standing-eye, Men for their Sons, Wives for their Husbands fate, And Orphans, for their Parents timelesse death, Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born. The Owle shriek'd at thy birth, an evill sign, The Night-Crow cry'd, aboding lucklesse time, Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down trees: The Raven rook'd her on the Chimnies top, And chatt'ring Pies in dismal Discords sung: Thy Mother felt more then a Mothers pain, And yet brought forth lesse then a Mothers hope, To wit, an indigested deformed lump, Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree.

Teeth hadst thou in thy head, when thou wast born, To signifie, thou cam'st to bite the world: And if the rest be true which I have heard, Thou cam'st-----

Rich. I'll hear no more:

Die Prophet in thy speech, Stabs him. For this (amongst the rest) was I ordain'd.

Hen. I, and for much more slaughter after this, O God forgive my sins, and pardon thee. Dies.

Rich. What? will the aspiring blood of Lancaster Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted. See how my sword weeps for the poor Kings death. O may such purple tears be alway shed From those that wish the downfall of our house. If any spark of life be yet remaining, Down, down to hell, and say I sent thee thither.

Stabs him again.

I that have neither pittie, love, nor fear. Indeed 'tis true that Henry told me of: For I have often heard my Mother say, I came into the world with my Legs forward. Had I not reason (think ye) to make haste, And seek their Ruine, that usurp'd our Right? The Midwife wonder'd, and the Women cride O Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth,

And

And so I was, which plainly signified,
That I should snarle, and bite, and play the dog:
Then since the Heavens have shap'd my body so,
Let hell make crook'd my Mind to answer it.
I have no brother, I am like no brother:
And this word [Love] which Gray-beards call Divine,
Be resident in men like one another,
And not in me: I am my self alone.
Clarence beware, thou keep'st me from the light,
But I will fort a pitchy day for thee:
For I will buz abroad such Prophecies,
That Edward shall be fearfull of his life,
And then to purge his fear, I'll be thy death.
King Henry, and the Prince his son are gone,
Clarence thy turn is next, and then the rest,
Counting my self but bad, till I be best
I'll throw thy body in another room,
And triumph Henry, in thy day of Doom.

Exit.

Enter King, Queen, Clarence, Richard, Hastings,
Nurse, and Attendants.

King. Once more we sit in Englands Royal Throne,
Re-purchac'd with the bloud of Enemies:
What valiant Foe-men, like to Autumns Corn,
Have we mow'd down in tops of all their pride?
Three Dukes of Somerset, threefold Renown,
For hardy and undoubted Champions:
Two Cliffords, as the Father and the Son,
And two Northumberlands: two braver men.
Ne're spurr'd their Coursers at the Trumpets sound.
With them, the two brave Bears, Warwick and Mounta-
That in their Chains fetter'd the Kingly Lion, (guc,
And made the Forrest treimble when they roar'd.

I hus have we swept Suspicion from our Seat,
And made our footstool of Security.
Come hither Best, and let me kisse my Boy:
Young Ned, for thee, thine Uncles, and my self,
Have in our armors watch'd the Winter night,
Went all afoot in Summers scalding heat,
That thou might'st repossesse the Crowne in peace,
And of our Labours thou shalt reap the gain.

Rich. I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid,
For I yet am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd so thick, to heave,
And heave it shall some waight, or break my back.
Work thou the way, and that shall execute.

King. Clarence and Gloster, love my lovely Queen,
And kisse your Princely Nephew Brothers both.

Clar. The duty that I owe your Majesty,
I Seal upon the lips of this sweet Babe.

King. Thanks Noble Clarence, worthy brother thanks.
Ri. And that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st
Witnesse the loving kisse I give the Fruit:

To say the truth, so Judas kist his master,
And cryed all hail, when as he meant all harm.

King. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
Having my Countries peace, and brothers loves.

Clar. What will your Grace have done with Margaret?
Reynard her Father, to the King of France
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransome.

King. Away with her, and wast her hence to France:
And now what rests, but that we spend the time
With Stately Triumphs, mirthfull Comick shews,
Such as befits the pleasure of the Court.
Sound Drums and Trumpets, farewell sowre annoy,
For here I hope begins our lasting joy. Exeunt omnes.

F I N I S.

The Tragedy of Richard the Third:

With the Landing of the Earl of Richmond, and the Battel at Bosworth Field.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Richard Duke of Gloster, solus.

Now is the Winter of our Discontent,
Made glorious Summer by this Son of York:
And all the clouds that low'r'd upon our house
In the deep bosome of the Ocean buried.

Now are our brows bound with Victorious Wreathes,
Our bruised armes hung up for Monuments;
Our stern Alarums chang'd to merry Meetings;
Our dreadfull Marches to delightfull Measures.
Grim-visag'd War, hath smooch'd his wrinkled Front:
And now, in stead of mounting Barbed Steeds,
To fright the Soules of fearfull Adversaries,
He capers nimbly in a Ladie's Chamber,
To the lascivious pleasing of a Lute.
But I, that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous Looking-glass:
I, that am Rudely stamp'd, and want Love's Majesty,
To strut before a wanton ambling Nymph:
I, that am curtail'd of this fair Proportion,
Cheated of Feature by dissembling Nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing World, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable,
That dogges bark at me, as I halt by them:
Why I (in this weak piping time of Peace)
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to see my Shadow in the Sun,
And descant on mine own Deformity.
And therefore, since I cannot prove a Lover,
To entertain these fair well-spoken dayes,
I am determin'd to prove a Villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these dayes.
Plots have I laid, Inductions dangerous,
By drunken Prophecies, Libels, and Dreams,
To set my Brother Clarence and the King
In deadly hate, the one against the other:
And if King Edward be as true and just,
As I am Subtle, False, and Treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up:
About a Prophecie, which sayes that G,
Of Edward's heirs the murderere shall be.

Dive thoughts down to my soul, here Clarence comes.

Enter Clarence, and Brakenbury, guarded.

Brother, good day: What means this armed guard

That waits upon your Grace?

Cl. His Majesty tending my persons safety,
Hath appointed this Conduct to convey me to th' Tower.

Rich. Upon what cause?

Cl. Because my name is George.

Rich. Alack my Lord, that fault is none of yours:
He should for that commit your Grandfathers.

O belike, his Majesty hath some intent,
That you should be new Christned in the Tower.
But what's the matter Clarence, may I know?

Cl. Yea Richard, when I know: but I protest
As yet I do not: But as I can learn,
He hearkens after Prophecies and Dreams,
And from the Cross-row plucks the letter G:
And sayes, a Wizard told him, that by G,
His issue dis-inherited should be.

And for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought that I am he.

These (as I learn) and such toys as these,
Hath mov'd his Highness to commit me now.

Rich. Why this it is, when men are rul'd by Women.

'Tis not the King that sends you to the Tower,
My Lady Grey his Wife, Clarence 'tis she.
That tempts him to this harsh Extremity.

Was it not she, and that good man of Worship,
Anthony Woodville her Brother there,

That made him send Lord Hastings to the Tower?
From whence this present day he is delivered.

We are not safe Clarence, we are not safe.

Cl. By heaven, I think there is no man secure
But the Queen's Kindred, and night-walking Heralds,
That trudge betwixt the King, and Mistress Shore.
Heard you not what an humble Suppliant
Lord Hastings was, for his delivery?

Rich. Humbly complaining to her Deitie,
Got my Lord Chamberlain his liberty.

I'll tell you what, I think it is our way,

If we will keep in favour with the King,

To be her man, and wear her Livery:

The jealous o're-worn Widow, and her self,
Since that our Brother dub'd them Gentlewomen,
Are mighty Gossips in our Monarchy.

Bra. I beseech your Graces both to pardon me,
His Majesty hath straightly given in charge,
That no man shall have private Conference
(Of what degree soever) with your Brother.

Rich. Even so, and please your worship Brakenbury,
You may partake of any thing we say :
We speak no Treason man ; we say the King
Is wise and virtuous, and his noble Queen
Well strook in years, fair and not jealous.
We say, that Shore's wife hath a pretty Foot,
A cherry Lip, a bonny Eye, a passing pleasing Tongue :
And that the Queen's Kindred are made Gentle-folks.
How say you, Sir ? can you deny all this ?

Bra. With this (my Lord) my self have nought to doc.

Rich. Naught to doe with Mistriss Shore ?
I tell thee Fellow, he that doth naught with her
(Excepting one) were best to do it secretly alone.

Bra. What one, my Lord ?

Rich. Her Husband Knave, would'st thou betray me ?

Bra. I do beseech your Grace
To pardon me, and withall forbear
Your Conference with the noble Duke.

Cla. We know thy charge Brakenbury, and will obey.

Rich. We are the Queen's abjects, and must obey.
Brother farewell, I will unto the King,
And whatsoe're you will employ me in,
Were it to call King Edward's widow, Sister,
I will perform it to infranchise you.
Mean time, this deep disgrace of Brotherhood,
Touches me deeper then you can imagine.

Cla. I know it pleaseth neither of us well.

Rich. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long,
I will deliver you, or else lye for you :
Mean time have patience.

Cla. I must perforce : farewell.

Exit Cla.

Rich. Go tread the path that thou shalt ne're return :
Simple plain Clarence, I do love thee so,
That I will shortly send thy Soul to Heaven,
If Heaven will take the present at our hands,
But who comes here ? the new delivered Hastings ?

Enter Lord Hastings.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious Lord.

Rich. As much unto my good Lord Chamberlain :
Well are you welcome to this open Air,
How hath your Lordship brook'd Imprisonment ?

Hast. With patience (noble Lord) as prisoners must :
But I shall live (my Lord) to give them thanks
That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Rich. No doubt, no doubt, and so shall Clarence too,
For they that were your Enemies, are his,
And have prevail'd as much on him, as you.

Hast. More pitie, that the Eagles should be mew'd, Whiles Kites and Buzzards play at liberty.

Rich. What newes abroad ?

Hast. No newes so bad abroad, as this at home :
The King is sickly, weak and melancholly,
And his Physicians fear him nightly.

Rich. Now by Saint John, that news is bad indeed.
O he hath kept an evil diet long,
And over-much consum'd his Royal Person :
'Tis very grievous to be thought upon.
Where is he, in his bed ?

Hast. He is.

Rich. Go you before, and I will follow you.

Exit Hastings.

He cannot live I hope, and must not dye,
Till George be pack'd with post-horse up to Heaven.

I'll in to urge his hatred more to Clarence,
Which lyes well steel'd with weighty arguments,
And if I fail not in my deep intent,
Clarence hath not another day to live :
Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy,
And leave the world for me to bussle in.
For then, I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter,
What though I kill'd her Husband, and her Father,
The readiest way to make the wench amends,
Is to become her husband and her father :
The which will I, not all so much for love,
As for another secret close intent,
By marrying her, which I must reach unto.
But yet I run before my horse to Market :
Clarence still breathes, Edward still lives and raigns,
When they are gone, then must I count my gaines. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Coarse of Henry the sixth, with Halberds to guard it, Lady Anne being the Mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,
If Honour may be shrowded in a Herse ;
Whil'st I a-while obsequiously lament
Th'untimely fall of Virtuous Lancasters,
Poor key-cold Figure of a holy King,
Pale ashes of the House of Lancaster ;
Thou bloudless Remnant of that Royal Bloud,
Be it lawfull that I invoke thy Ghost,
To hear the Lamentations of poor Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughtered Son,
Stab'd by the selfesame hand that made these wounds.
Loe, in these windows that let forth thy Life,
I pour the helpless Balm of my poor eyes.
O cursed be the hand that made these holes :
Cursed the heart, that had the heart to do it :
Curl'd the bloud, that let this bloud from hence,
More direfull hap betide that hated wretch
That makes us wretched by the death of thee,
Then I can wish to VVolves, to Spiders, Toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives.
If ever he have Child, Abortive be it,
Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,
VVhose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopesfull Mother at the view,
And that be Heir to his unhappiness.
If ever he have VVife, let her be made
More miserable by the death of him,
Then I am made by my young Lord, and thee.
Come now towards Chertsey with your holy Load,
Taken from Paules, to be interr'd there.
And still as you are weary of this weight,
Rest you, whiles I lament King Henri's Coarse.

Enter Richard Duke of Gloster.

Rich. Stay you that bear the Coarse, and set it down.

An. VVhat black Magician conjures up this Fiend,
To stop devoted charitable deeds ?

Rich. Villains set down the Coarse ; or by S. Paul,
I'll make a Coarse of him that disobeys.

Gen.

Gen. My Lord stand back, and let the Coffin pass.

Rich. Unmanner'd Dog,
Stand thou when I command:
Advance thy Halbert higher then my breast,
Or by S. Paul I'll strike thee to my Foot,
And spurn upon thee, Beggar, for thy boldness.

Anne. What do you tremble? are you all afraid?
Alas, I blame you not, for you are Mortal,
And Mortal eyes cannot endure the Devil.
Avant thou dreadful minister of Hell;
Thou had'st but power over his Mortal body,
His Soul thou canst not have: therefore be gone.

Rich. Sweet Saint, for Charity, be not so curst.

Anne. Foul Devil,
For God's sake hence, and trouble us not,
For thou hast made the happy earth thy Hell:
Fill'd it with cursing cries, and deep exclames:
If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy Butcheries.
Oh Gentlemen, see, see dead Henrie's wounds,
Open their congeal'd mouths, and bleed afresh.
Blush, blush, thou lump of foul Deformity:
For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood
From cold and empty Veins, where no blood dwells.
Thy deeds inhumane and unnatural,
Provokes this Deluge most unnatural.
O God! which this Blood mad'st, revenge his death:
O Earth! which this Blood drink'st, revenge his death.
Either Heav'n with Lightning strike the murth'rer dead,
Or Earth, gape open wide, and eat him quick,
As thou dost swallow up this good King's blood,
Which this Hell-govern'd arme hath butchered.

Rich. Lady, you know no Rules of Charity,
Which renders good for bad, Blessings for Curses.

Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God nor Man,
No Beast so fierce, but knows some touch of pitie.

Rich. But I know none, and therefore am no Beast.

Anne. O wonderfull, when Devils tell the truth!

Rich. More wonderfull, when Angels are so angry:
Vouchsafe (divine perfection of a Woman)
Of these supposed Crimes, to give me leave,
By circumstance, but to acquit my self.

Anne. Vouchsafe (diffus'd infection of a man)
Of these known evils, but to give me leave
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed Self.

Rich. Fairer then tongue can name thee, let me have
Some patient leisure to excuse my self.

Anne. Fouler then heart can think thee,
Thou can'st make no excuse currant,
But to hang thy self.

Rich. By such despair, I should accuse my self.

Anne. And by despairing shalt thou stand excused,
For doing worthy Vengeance on thy self,
That did'st unworthy slaughter upon others.

Rich. Say that I slew them not.

Anne. Then say they were not slain:
But dead they are, and, devillish slave, by thee.

Rich. I did not kill your Husband.

Anne. Why then he is alive.

Rich. Nay, he is dead, and slain by Edward's hands.

Anne. In thy foul Throat thou Ly'st,
Queen Margaret saw
Thy murd'rous Faulchion smocking in his blood:
The which, thou once did'st bend against her breast,
But that thy Brothers beat aside the point.

Rich. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue,

That laid their guilt, upon my guiltless shoulders.

Anne. Thou was't provoked by thy bloody mind,
That never dream'st on ought but butcheries:
Did'st thou not kill this King?

Rich. I grant ye.

Anne. Do'st grant me, Hedge-hog,
Then God grant me too
Thou may'st be damned for that wicked deed:
O he was gentle, milde, and virtuous.

Rich. The better for the King of heaven that hath him.

Anne. He is in heaven where thou shalt never come.

Rich. Let him thank me, that help to send him thither:

For he was fitter for that place then earth.

Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell.

Rich. Yes one place else, if you will hear me name it.

Anne. Some dungeon.

Rich. Your Bed-chamber.

Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou lyest.

Rich. So will it Madam, 'till I lye with you.

Anne. I hope so.

Rich. I know so. But gentle Lady Anne,
To leave this keen encounter of our wits,
And fall something into a slower method.
Is not the cause of the timeless deaths
Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,
As blamefull as the Executioner?

Anne. Thou was't the cause, and most accurst effect.

Rich. Your beauty was the cause of that effect:
Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleep,
To undertake the death of all the world,
So I might live one hour in your sweet bosome.

Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee Homicide,
These Nails should rent that beauty from my Cheeks.

Rich. These eyes could not endure that beauties wrack,
You should not blemish it, if I stood by;
As all the world is cheered by the Sun,
So I by that: it is my day, my life.

An. Black night o're-shade thy day, & death thy life.

Rich. Curse not thy self, fair Creature,
Thou art both.

Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.

Rich. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee.

Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my Husband.

Rich. He that bereft the Lady of thy Husband,
Did it to help thee to a better husband.

Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth.

Rich. He lives, that loves thee better then he could.

Anne. Name him.

Rich. Plantagenet.

Anne. Why that was he.

Rich. The self-same name, but one of better Nature.

Anne. Where is he?

Rich. Here:

Spits at him.

Why dost thou spit at me?

Anne. Would it were mortal poison, for thy sake.

Rich. Never came poison from so sweet a place.

Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler Toad.
Out of my sight, thou dost infect mine eyes.

Rich. Thine eyes (sweet Lady) have infected mine.

Anne. Would they were Basilisks, to strike thee dead.

Rich. I would they were, that I might dye at once:
For now they kill me with a living death.

Those eyes of thine, from mine have drawn salt Tears:

Sham'd their Aspects with store of childish drops :
 These eyes, which never shed remorsefull tear,
 No, when my Father Tork, and Edward wept.
 To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made
 When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword at him.
 Nor when my Warlike Father like a child,
 Told the sad story of my Father's death,
 And twenty times, made pause to sob and weep,
 That all the standers by had wet their cheeks
 Like Trees be'dash'd with rain : in that sad time,
 My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear :
 And what these sorrows could not thence exhale,
 Thy Beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.
 I never sued to Friend, nor Enemy :
 My Tongue could never learn sweet smoothing word.
 But now thy Beauty is propos'd my Fee,
 My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak.

She looks scornfully at him.

Teach not thy lip such Scorn ; for it was made
 For kissing Lady, not for such contempt.
 If thy revengefull heart cannot forgive,
 Lo, here I lend thee this sharp-pointed Sword,
 Which if thou please to hide in this true breast,
 And let the soul forth that adoreth thee,
 I lay it naked to thy deadly stroke,
 And humbly beg the death upon my knee.

He layes his breast open, she offers at it with his sword.
 Nay do not pause: for I did kill King Henry,
 But 'twas thy Beauty that provoked me.
 Nay now dispatch : 'Twas I that stab'd young Edward,
 But 'twas thy Heavenly face that set me on,

She falls the sword.

Take up the sword again, or take up me.

Anne. Arise Dissembler, though I wish thy death,
 I will not be thy Executioner.

Rich. Then bid me kill my self, and I will do it.

Anne. I have already.

Rich. That was in thy rage :
 Speak it again, and even with thy word,
 Th's hand, which for thy love, did kill thy Love,
 Shall for thy love, kill a far truer Love,
 To both their deaths shalt thou be accessary.

Anne. I would I knew thy heart.

Rich. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.

Anne. I fear me, both are false.

Rich. Then never Man was true.

Anne. Well, well, put up your Sword.

Rich. Say then my Peace is made.

Anne. That shalt thou know hereafter.

Rich. But shall I live in hope ?

Anne. All men I hope live so.

Vouchsafe to wear this Ring.

Rich. Look how thy Ring encompasseth my Finger,
 Even so thy Breast incloseth my poor heart :
 Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.
 And if thy poor devored Servant may
 But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,
 Thou dost confirm this happiness for ever.

Anne. What is it ?

Rich. That it may please you leave these sad designs,
 To him that hath most cause to be a Mourner,
 And presently repair to Crosbie House :
 Where (after I have solemnly interr'd
 At Chertsey Monast'ry this noble King,
 And wet his Grave with my Repentant Tears)
 I will with all expedient duty see you.

For diversunknown Reasons, I beseech you,
 Grant me this Boon.

Anne. With all my heart, and much it joyes me too,
 To see you are become so penitent.

Tressel and Barkley, go along with me.

Rich. Bid me farewell.

Anne. 'Tis more then you deserve :
 But since you teach me how to flatter you,
 Imagine I have said farewell already.

Exit two with Anne.

Gent. Towards Chertsey, Noble Lord ?

Rich. Now to White Fryers, there attend my coming.
Exit Coarse.

Was ever woman in this humour Woo'd ?
 Was ever woman in this humour wonne ?
 I'll have her, but I will not keep her long.
 What ? I have kill'd her husband, and his father,
 To take her in her hearts extreamest hate,
 With curses in her mouth, teares in her eyes,
 The bleeding witness of my hatred by,
 Having God, her Conscience, and these bars against me,
 And I no friends to back my suite withall,
 But the plain Devil and dissembling looks ?
 And yet to winne her ? All the world to nothing.
 Hah !

Hath she forgot already that brave Prince,
Edward, her Lord, whom I (some three months since)
 Stab'd in my angry mood, at Tewkesbury ?
 A sweeter and a lovelier Gentleman
 Fram'd in the prodigality of Nature ;
 Young, Valiant, Wise, and (no doubt) right Royal,
 The spacious world cannot again afford,
 And will she thus abase her eyes on me,
 That cropt the Golden prime of this sweet Prince,
 And made her Widow to a wofull Bed ?
 On me, whose All not equals Edward's Moytie ?
 On me, that halts, and am mishapen thus ?
 My Dukedome, to a beggarly denier ?
 I do mistake my person all this while :
 Upon my life she finds (although I cannot)
 My self to be a mar'vous proper man.
 I'll be at charges for a Looking-glass,
 And entertain a score or two of Taylors,
 To studie fashions to adorn my body :
 Since I am crept in favour with my self,
 I will maintain it with some little cost,
 But first I'll turn yon fellow in his Grave,
 And then return lamenting to my Love.
 Shine out fair Sun, 'till I have bought a Glass,
 That I may see my Shadow as I pass.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter the Queen Mother, Lord Rivers, and Lord Gray.

Riv. Have patience Madam, there's no doubt his Majesty
 Will soon recover his accustom'd health.

Gray. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse,
 Therefore for God's sake entertain good comfort,
 And cheer his Grace with quick and merry eyes.

Queen. If he were dead, what would betide on me ?

Gray.

Gray. No other harm, but loss of such a Lord.

Qu. The loss of such a Lord, includes all harms.

Gray. The Heavens have blest you with a goodly Son,
To be your Comforter, when he is gone.

Qu. Ah ! he is young ; and his minority
Is put unto the trust of Richard Gloster,
A man that loves not me, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded he shall be Protector ?

Qu. It is determin'd, not concluded yet :
But so it must be, if the King miscarry.

Enter Buckingham and Derby.

Gray. Here comes the Lord of Buckingham & Derby.

Buc. Good time of day unto your Royal Grace.

Derb. God make you Majesty joyfull, as you have bin.

Qu. The Countess Richmond, good my L. of Derby,
To your good prayer will scarcely say, Amen.
Yet Derby, notwithstanding she's your Wife,
And loves not me, be you, good Lord, assur'd,
I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Derb. I do beseech you, either not believe
The envious slanders of her false Accusers :
Or if she be accus'd on true report,
Bear with her weakness, which I think proceeds
From wayward sickness, and no grounded malice.

Qu. Saw you the King to day my Lord of Derby ?

Derb. But now the Duke of Buckingham and I,
Are come from visiting his Majesty.

Qu. What likelihood of his amendment Lords ?

Buc. Madam good hope, his Grace speaks cheerfully.

Qu. God grant him health, did you confer with him ?

Buc. I Madam, desires to make attonement,
Between the Duke of Gloster, and your Brothers,
And between them, and my Lord Chamberlain,
And sent to warn them to his Royal presence.

Qu. Would all were well, but that will never be,
I fear our happiness is at the height.

Enter Richard.

Rich. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it,
Who is it that complains unto the King,
That I (forsooth) am stern, and love them not ?
By holy Paul, they love his Grace but lightly,
That fill his cares with such dissentious Rumors.
Because I cannot flatter, and look fair,
Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cogge,
Duck with French nods, and Apish curtesie,
I must be held a rancorous Enemy.
Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abus'd,
With silken, flie, insinuating Jacks ?

Gray. To whom in all this presence speaks your Grace ?

Rich. To thee, that hast nor honesty, nor Grace :
When have I injur'd thee ? When done thee wrong ?
Or thee ? or thee ? or any of your Faction ?
A plague upon you all. His Royal Grace
(Whom God preserve better then you would wish)
Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing while,
But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Qu. Brother of Gloster, you mistake the matter :
The King on his own Royal disposition,
(And not provok'd by any Suitor else)
Aiming (belike) at your interior hatred,

That in your outward action shews it self
Against my Children, Brothers, and my Self,
Makes him to send, that he may learn the ground.

Rich. I cannot tell, the world is grown so bad,
That Wrens make prey, where Eagles dare not perch.
Since every Jack became a Gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Qu. Come, come, we know your meaning Brother
You envy my advancement, and my friends : (Gloster,
God grant we never may have need of you.

Rich. Mean time, God grants that I have need of you.
Our Brother is imprison'd by your means,
My self disgrac'd, and the Nobility
Held in contempt, while great Promotions
Are daily given to ennoble those
That scarce some two dayes since were worth a Noble.

Qu. By him that rais'd me to this carefull height,
From that contented hap which I enjoy'd.
I never did incense his Majesty
Against the Duke of Clarence, but have bin
An earnest advocate to plead for him.
My Lord you do me shamefull injury,
Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Rich. You may deny that you were not the mean
Of my Lord Hastings late imprisonment.

Riv. She may my Lord, for -----

Rich. She may Lord Rivers, why who knows not so ?
She may do more, sir, then denying that :
She may help you to many fair preferments,
And then deny her aiding hand therein,
And lay those honours on your high desert.

What may she not ? she may, I marry may she.

Riv. What marry may she ?

Rich. What marry may she ? Marrie with a King,
A batchellor, and a handsome stripling too,
I wis your Grandam had a worser match.

Qu. My Lord of Gloster, I have too long born
Your blunt upbraidings, and your bitter scoffs :
By heaven, I will acquaint his Majesty
Of those gross taunts that oft I have endur'd.
I had rather be a Country servant maid
Then a great Queen, with this condition,
To be so baited, scorn'd, and storm'd at,
Small joy have I in being England's Queen.

Enter old Queen Margaret.

Mar. And lesned be that small, God I beseech him,
Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me.

Rich. What ? threat you me with telling of the King ?
I will avouch't in presence of the King :
I dare adventure to be sent to th' Tower.
'Tis time to speak,
My pains are quite forgot.

Margaret. Out Devil,
I do remember them too well :
Thou killd'st my Husband Henry in the Tower
And Edward my poor Son, at Tewksbury.

Rich. E're you were Queen,
I, or your Husband King :
I was a pack-horse in his great affairs :
A weeder out of his proud Adversaries,
A liberal rewarder of his Friends,
To royalize his bloud, I spent mine own.

Margaret. I and much better bloud
Then his, or thine.

Rich. In all which time, you and your Husband Grey Were factious, for the House of Lancaster ; And Rivers, so were you : was not your Husband, In Margaret's Battel, at Saint Albans, slain ? Let me put in your minds, if you forget What you have been e're this, and what you are : Withall, what I have been and what I am.

Q. M. A murth'rous Villain, and so still thou art.

Rich. Poor Clarence did forsake his Father Wormick, I, and forswore himself (which Jesu pardon.)

Q. M. Which God revenge.

Rich. To fight on Edward's party, for the Crown, And for his need, poor Lord, he is mew'd up : I would to God my heart were Flint, like Edward's, Or Edward's soft and pitifull, like mine ; I am too childish foolish for this world.

Q. M. Hye thee to Hell for shame, and leave this world Thou Cacodæmon, there thy Kingdome is.

Riv. My Lord of Gloster : in those busie dayes, Which here you urge, to prove us Enemies, We follow'd then our Lord, our Sovereign King, So should we you, if you would be our King.

Rich. If I should be ? I had rather be a Pedler : Far be it from my heart, the thought thereof.

Qu. As little joy (my Lord) as you suppose You should enjoy, were you this Countries King, As little joy you may suppose in me, That I enjoy, being the Queen thereof.

Q. M. A little joy enjoyes the Queen thereof, For I am she, and altogether joyless. I can no longer hold me patient.

Hear me, you wrangling Pyrates that fall out, In sharing that which you have pill'd from me : Which of you trembles not, that looks on me ? If not, that I am Queen, you bow like Subjects ; Yet that by you depos'd, you quake like Rebels. Ah gentle Villain do not turn away.

Rich. Foul wrinkled Witch, what mak'st thou in my (sight ?

Q. M. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd, That will I make, before I let thee go.

Rich. Wert thou not banished on pain of death ?

Q. M. I was : but I do find more pain in banishment, Then death can yield me here, by abode. A Husband and a Son thou ow'st to me, And thou a Kingdome ; all of you allegiance : This Sorrow that I have, by right is yours, And all the Pleasures you usurp are mine.

Rich. The Curse my Noble Father laid on thee, When thou did'st Crown his warlike Brows with Paper, And with thy scornes drew'st rivers from his eyes, And then to dry them, gav'st the Duke a Clout, Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland : His Curses then, from bitterness of Soul, Denounc'd against thee, are fal'n upon thee : And God, not we, have plagu'd thy bloody deed.

Qu. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that Babe, And the most merciless that e're was heard of.

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported.

Dors. No man but prophesied revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. M. What ? were you snarling all before I came, Ready to catch each other by the throat, And turn you all your hatred now on me ? Did York's dread Curse prevail so much with Heaven, That Henrie's death, my lovely Edward's death,

Their Kingdomes loss, my wofull banishment, Should all but answer for that peevish brat ? Can curses pierce the Clouds and enter Heaven ? Why then give way dull Clouds to my quick Curses. Though not by war, by Surfet dye your King, As ours by Murther, to make him a King.

Edward thy Son, that now is Prince of Wales, For Edward our Son that was Prince of Wales, Dye in his youth, by like untimely violence.

Thy self a Queen, for me that was a Queen.

Out-live thy Glory, like my wretched self :

Long may'st thou live, to wait thy Children's death, And see another, as I see thee now,

Deck'd in thy Rights, as thou art stall'd in mine.

Long dye thy happy dayes, before thy death,

And after many length'ned houres of grief, Dye neither Mother, Wife, nor England's Queen.

Rivers and Dorset, you were standers by,

And so wast thou, Lord Hastings, when my Son Was stab'd with bloody Daggers : God, I pray him, That none of you may live his naturall age, But by some un-look'd-for accident cut off.

Ric. Have done thy Charm, thou hatefull wither'd Hag.

Q. M. And leave out thee ? stay Dog, for thou shalt hear (me.

If Heaven have any grievous plague in store,

Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,

O let them keep it, 'till thy sinnes be ripe,

And then hurle down their indignation

On thee, the troubler of the poor World's peace.

The worm of Conscience still be-gnaw thy Soul,

Thy Friends suspect for Traytors while thou liv'st,

And take deep Traytors for thy dearest Friends :

No sleep close up that deadly Eye of thine,

Unless it be while some tormenting Dream

Affright thee with a Hell of ugly Devils.

Thou elvish, mark'd, abortive rooting Hog,

Thou that wast seal'd in thy Nativity

The slave of Nature, and the Son of Hell :

Thou slander of thy heavy Mothers womb,

Thou loathed Issue of thy Fathers loyns,

Thou Rag of Honour, thou detested ----

Rich. Margaret.

Q. M. Richard.

Rich. Ha.

Q. M. I call thee not.

Rich. I cry thee mercy then : for I did think, That thou had'st call'd me all these bitter names.

Q. M. Why so I did, but look'd for no reply.

Oh let me make the Period to my Curse.

Rich. 'Tis done by me, and ends in Margaret.

Q. Thus have you breath'd your curse against your self.

Q. M. Poor painted Queen, vain flourish of my fortune,

Why strew'st thou Sugar on that Botrel'd Spider,

Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about ?

Fool, fool, thou whet'st a Knife to kill thy self :

The day will come, that thou shalt wish for me,

To help thee curse this poysonous Bunch-backt Toad.

Hast. False boading Woman, end thy frantick curse, Lest to thy harm, thou move our patience.

Q. M. Foul shame upon you, you have all mov'd mine.

Ri. Were you wel serv'd, you would be taught your duty.

Q. M. To serve me well, you all should do me duty,

Teach me to be your Queen, and you my Subjects :

O serve me well, and teach your selves that duty.

Dors. Dispute not with her, she is lunatick.

Q. M. Peace master Marquess, you are malapert,

Your fire-new stamp of Honour is scarce currant.

O that your young Nobility can judge
What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable.
They that stand high have many blasts to shake them,
And if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces.

Rich. Good counsell marry, learn it, learn it Marques.

Dor. It touches you my Lord, as much as me.

Rich. I, and much more: but I was born so high:
Our ayerie buildeth in the Cedar's top,
And dallies with the wind, and scorns the Sun.

Mar. And turns the Sun to shade: alas, alas,
Witness my Son now in the shade of death,
Whose bright out-shining beains, thy cloudy wrath
Hath in eternal Darkness folded up.

Your ayery buildeth in our ayeries Nest:

O God that seest it do not suffer it,

As it is won with blood, lost be it so.

Buc. Peace, peace for shame: If not for Charity.

Mar. Urge neither Charity, nor Shame to me:

Uncharitably with me have you dealt,

And shamefully my hopes (by you) are butcher'd.

My Charity is outrage, Life my shame,

And in that shame, still live my sorrows' rage.

Buc. Have done, have done.

Mar. O Princely Buckingham, I'll kiss thy hand,

In sign of League and amity with thee:

Now fair befall thee, and thy Noble house:

Thy Garments are not spotted with our blood:

Nor thou within the compass of my curse.

Buc. Nor no one here: for Curses never pass

The lips of those that breathe them in the air.

Mar. I will not think but they ascend the sky,

And there awake God's gentle sleeping peace.

O Buckingham, take heed of yonder Dog:

Look when he fawns, he bites; and when he bites,

His venom Tooth will rankle to the death:

Have not to do with him, beware of him,

Sin, death, and hell have set their marks on him,

And all their Ministers attend on him.

Rich. What doth she say, my Lord of Buckingham?

Buc. Nothing that I respect my gracious Lord.

Mar. What dost thou scorn me

For my gentle counsel?

And soothe the Devil that I warn thee from.

O but remember this another day:

When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow:

And say (poor Margaret) was a Prophetesse:

Live each of you the subjects to his hate,

And he to yours, and, all of you to Gods.

Exit.

Buc. My hair doth stand an end to hear her curses.

Riv. And so doth mine, I muse why she's at liberty.

Rich. I cannot blame her, by God's holy Mother,

She hath had too much wrong, and I repent

My part thereof, that I have done to her.

Dor. I never did her any to my knowledge.

Rich. Yet you have all the vantage of her wrong:

I was too hot, to do some body good,

That is too cold in thinking of it now:

Marry as for Clarence, he is well repayed:

He is frank'd up to fasting for his pains,

God pardon them that are the cause thereof.

Riv. A virtuous, and a Christian-like conclusion,

To pray for them that have done scath to us.

Rich. So do I ever, being well advis'd.

Speaks to himself.

For had I curst now, I had curst my self.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. Madam, his Majesty doth call for you,
And for your Grace, and yours my gracious Lord.

Qu. Catesby I come, Lords will you go with me?

Rive. We wait upon your Grace.

Exeunt all but Gloster.

Rich. I do thee wrong, and first begin to brawl.

The secret mischiefs that I set a-broach,

I lay unto the grievous charge of others.

Clarence, whom I indeed have cast in darkness,

I do beweepe to many simple Gulls,

Namely to Derby, Hastings, Buckingham,

And tell them 'tis the Queen, and her Allies,

That stirre the King against the Duke my Brother.

Now they believe it, and withall whet me

To be reveng'd on Rivers, Dorset, Grey.

But then I sigh, and with a piece of Scripture,

Tell them that God bids us do good for evil:

And thus I cloath my naked Villany

With odde old ends, stol'n forth of holy Writ,

And seem a Saint, when most I play the Devil.

Enter two Murderers.

But soft, here come my Executioners,

How now my hardy stout resolved Mates,

Are you now going to dispatch this thing?

Vill. We are my Lord, and come to have the Warrant,

That we may be admitted where he is.

Rich. Well thought upon, I have it here about me:

When you have done, repair to Crosby Place;

But first be sudden in the execution,

Withall obdurate, do not hear him plead;

For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps

May move your hearts to pitie, if you mark him.

Vill. Tut, tut, my Lord, we will not stand to prate,

Talkers are no good doers, be assur'd:

We go to use our hands, and not our tongues.

Rich. Your eyes drop Mill-stones, when Fools eyes

fall Teares,

I like you Lads, about your business straight.

Go, go, dispatch.

Vill. We will my Noble Lord.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Clarence and Keeper.

Keep. Why looks your Grace so heavily?

Cl. O, I have past a miserable night,

So full of fearfull Dreams, of ugly fights,

That as I am a Christian faithfull man,

I would not spend another such a night

Though 'twere to buy a world of happy dayes:

So full of dismall terrour was the time.

Keep. What was your dream, my Lord, I pray you tel me.

Cl. Me thoughts that I had broken from the Tower,

And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy,

And in my company my Brother Gloster,

Who from my Cabin tempted me to walk,

Upon the Hatches: There we look'd toward England,

And cited up a thousand heavy times,

During

During the Warres of York and Lancaster
That had befall'n us. As he pac'd along
Upon the giddy footing of the Hatches,
Me thought that Gloster stumbled, and in falling
Strook me (that thought to stay him) over-board,
Into the tumbling billows of the main.

O Lord, me thought what pain it was to drown,
What dreadfull noise of water in mine eares,
What sights of ugly death within mine eyes.
Me thoughts, I saw a thousand fearfull wracks :
A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon :
Wedges of Gold, great Anchors, heaps of Pearl,
Inestimable Stones, unvalued Jewels,
All scattered in the bottom of the Sea :
Some lay in dead-men's Sculls, and in the holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept
(As 'twere in scorn of Eyes) reflecting Gemmes,
That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep,
And inock'd the dead bones that lay scattred by.

Keep. Had you such leisure in the time of death,
To gaze upon these secrets of the deep ?

Cla. Me thought I had, and often did I strive
To yield the Ghost : but still the envious Floud
Stop'd in my soul, and would not let it forth
To find the empty, vast, and wand'ring air ;
But smother'd it within my panting bulk,
Who almost burst, to belch it in the Sea.

Keep. Awak'd you not in this sore Agony ?

Cla. No, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life.
O then, began the Tempest to my Soul,
I pass (me thought) the Melancholly floud,
With that sowre Ferry-man which Poets write of,
Unto the Kingdome of perpetual Night.
The first that there did greet my Stranger-soul,
Was my great Father-in-law renowned Warwick,
Who spake aloud : What scourge for Perjury,
Can this dark Monarchy afford false Clarence ?
And so he vanish'd. Then came wand'ring by,
A Shadow like an Angel, with bright hair
Dabbl'd in blood, and he shriek'd out aloud
Clarence is come, false, fleeting, perjur'd Clarence,
That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury :
Seize on him Furies, take him unto torment.
With that (me thought) a Legion of foul Fiends
Inviron'd me, and howled in mine eares
Such hideous cryes, that with the very Noise,
I (trembling) wak'd, and for a season after,
Could not believe, but that I was in Hell,
Such terrible Impression made my Dream.

Keep. No marvel, Lord, though it affrighted you,
I am afraid (me thinks) to hear you tell it.

Cla. Ah Keeper, Keeper, I have done these things
(That now give evidence against my Soul)
For Edward's sake, and see how he requites me.
O God ! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath in me alone :
O spare my guiltless Wife, and my poor children.
Keeper, I prethee sit by me a while,
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Keep. I wil my Lord, God give your Grace good rest.

Enter Brakenbury the Lieutenant.

Bra. Sorrow breaks Seasons, and reposing houres,
Makes the Night Morning, and the Noon-tide Night :

Princes have but their Titles for their Glories,
An outward Honour, for an inward Toil,
And for unfelt Imaginations
They often feel a world of restless Cares :
So that between their Titles, and low name,
There's nothing differs but the outward Fame.

Enter two Murtherers.

1. Mur. Ho, who's here ?

Bra. What would'st thou Fellow ? And how cam'st thou hither ?

2. Mur. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my Legges.

Bra. What so brief ?

1. 'Tis better (sir) then to be tedious :
Let him see our Commission, and talk no more. Reads.

Bra. I am in this, commanded to deliver
The Noble Duke of Clarence to your hands.
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless from the meaning.
There lies the Duke asleep, and there the Keyes.
I'll to the King, and signify to him,
That thus I have resign'd to you my charge. Exit.

1. You may, sir, 'tis a point of wisdome :
Fare you well.

2. What, shall we stab him as he sleeps ?

1. No : he'll say 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.

2. Why he shall never wake, until the great Judgement day.

1. Why then he'll say, we stab'd him sleeping.

2. The urging of that word Judgement, hath bred a kind of remorse in me.

1. What ? art thou afraid ?

2. Not to kill him, having a Warrant.

But to be damn'd for killing him, from the which
No Warrant can defend me.

1. I thought thou had'st bin resolute.

2. So I am, to let him live.

1. I'll back to the Duke of Gloster, and tell him so.

2. Nay, prethee stay a little :

I hope this passionate humor of mine, will change,
It was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty.

1. How do'st thou feel thy self now ?

2. Some certain dreggs of Conscience are yet within me.

1. Remember the Reward, when the deed's done.

2. Come, he dies : I had forgot the Reward.

1. Where's thy Conscience now ?

2. O, in the Duke of Gloster's purse.

1. When he opens his purse to give us our Reward, thy Conscience flies out.

2. 'Tis no matter, let it go : there's few or none will entertain it.

1. What if it come to thee again ?

2. I'll not meddle with it, it makes a man a Coward :
A man cannot steal, but it accuseth him : A man cannot Swear, but it Checks him : A man cannot lie with his Neighbour's Wife, but it detects him. 'Tis a blushing shamefac'd spirit, that mutinies in a man's bosome : It fills a man full of Obstacles. It made me once restore a Purse of Gold that (by chance) I found : It beggars any man that keeps it : It is turn'd out of towns and Cities for a dangerous thing, and every man that means to live well, endeavours to trust to himself, and live without it.

'Tis

1. 'Tis even now at my elbow, perswading me not to kill the Duke.

2. Take the Devil in thy minde, and believe him not: He would insinuate with thee but to make thee sigh.

1. I am strong fram'd, he cannot prevail with me.

2. Spoke like a tall man, that respect'th thy reputation. Come, shall we fall to work?

1. Take him on the Costard, with the hilts of thy Sword, and then throw him into the Malinsie-Butte in the next room.

2. O excellent device; and make a sop of him.

1. Soft, he wakes.

2. Strike.

1. No, we'll reason with him.

Cl. Where art thou Keeper? Give me a cup of wine.

2. You shall have Wine enough my Lord anon.

Clar. In God's name, what art thou?

1. A man, as you are.

Clar. But not as I am Royal.

1. Nor you as we are, Loyal.

Cl. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.

1. My voice is now the King's, my looks mine own.

Cl. How darkly, and how deadly do'st thou speak?

Your eyes do menace me: why look you pale?

Who sent you hither? wherefore do you come?

2. To, to, to -----

Cl. To murder me?

Both. I, I.

Cl. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so.

And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it.

Wherein my friends have I offended you?

1. Offended us you have not, but the King.

Cl. I shall be reconcil'd to him again.

2. Never my Lord, therefore prepare to dye.

Cl. Are you drawn forth among a world of men To slay the innocent? What's my offence?

Where is the Evidence that doth accuse me?

What lawfull Quest have given their Verdict up

Unto the frowning Judge? Or who pronounc'd

The bitter sentence of poor Clarence death?

Before I be convict by courie of Law,

To threaten me with death, is most unlawfull.

I charge you, as you hope for any goodness,

That you depart, and lay no hands on me:

The deed you undertake is damnable.

1. What we will do, we do upon command.

2. And he that hath commanded, is our King.

Cl. Erroneous Vassals, the great King of kings

Hath in the Table of his Law commanded

That thou shalt do no Murder, Will you then

Spurn at his Edicts, and fulfill a man's?

Take heed: for he holds Vengeance in his hand

To hurle upon their heads that break his Law.

2. And that same Vengeance doth he hurle on thee,

For false forswearing, and for murder too:

Thou did'st receive the Sacrament, to fight

In quarrel of the House of Lancaster.

1. And like a Traytor to the name of God, Did'st break that Vow, and with thy treacherous blade, Unrip't the Bowels of thy Sov'raign's Son.

2. Whom thou was't sworn to cherish and defend.

1. How canst thou urge God's dreadfull Law to us, When thou hast broke it in such high degree?

Cl. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed?

For Edward, for my Brother, for his sake.

He sends you not to murder me for this:

For in that sin he is as deep as I.

If God will be avenged for the deed,

O know you yet, he doth it publicly,

Take not the quarrel from his powerfull arme:

He needs no indirect, or lawless course,

To cut off those that have offended him.

1. Who made thee then a bloody minister,

When gallant springing brave Plantagenet,

That Princely Novice was struck dead by thee?

Cl. My Brother's love, the Devil, and my Rage.

1. Thy Brother's Love, our Duty, and thy Faults, Provoke us hither now, to slaughter thee.

Cl. If you do love my Brother, hate not me:

I am his brother, and I love him well.

If you are hir'd for meed, go back again,

And I will send you to my Brother Gloster:

Who shall reward you better for my life,

Then Edward will for tidings of my death.

2. You are deceiv'd,

Your Brother Gloster hates you.

Cl. Oh no, he loves me, and he holds me dear:

Go you to him from me.

1. I so we will.

Cl. Tell him, when that our Princely Father Tork

Blest his three Sonnes with his victorious Arme,

He little thought of this divided Friendship:

Bid Gloster think on this, and he will weep,

1. I, Millstones, as he lessoned us to weep.

Cl. O do not slander him, for he is kinde.

1. Right, as Snow in Harvest:

Come, you deceive your self,

'Tis he that sends us to destroy you here.

Cl. It cannot be, for he bewept my Fortune,

And bugg'd me in his armes, and swore with sobs,

That he would labour my delivery.

1. Why so he doth, when he delivers you From this earth's thraldome, to the joyes of heaven.

2. Make peace with God, for you must die, my Lord.

Cl. Have you that holy feeling in your soules,

To counsel me to make my peace with God,

And are you yet to your own soules so blind,

That you will warre with God, by murd'ring me?

O first consider, they that set you on

To do this deed, will hate you for the deed.

2. What shall we do?

Cl. Relent, and save your soules:

Which of you, if you were a Princes Son,

Being pent from Liberty, as I am now,

If two such murderers as your selves came to you,

Would not intreat for Life, as you would beg

Were you in my distress:

1. Relent? no: 'Tis cowardly and womanish.

Cl. Not to relent, is beastly, savage, devillish.

My Friend, I spy some pitie in thy looks:

O, if thine eye be not a flatterer,

Come thou on my side, and intreat for me,

A begging Prince, what beggar pities not?

2. Look behind you, my Lord.

1. Take that, and that, if all this will not do, Stabs him. I'll drown you in the Malinsie-Butte within. Exit.

2. A bloody deed, and desperately dispatcht:

How fair! (like Pilate) would I wash my hands

Of this most grievous murder. Enter 1. Murderer.

1. How now? what mean'st thou that thou help'st me not? By Heaven the Duke shall know how slack you have been.

2. Mur. I would he knew that I had sav'd his brother;
Take thou the Fee, and tell him what I say,
For I repent me that the Duke is slain. Exit.

1. Mur. So do not I: go Coward as thou art.
Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole,
'Till that the Duke give order for his burial:
And when I have my meed, I will away;
For this will out, and then I must not stay Exit.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Flourish.

*Enter the King sick, the Queen, Lord Marquess, Dorset, Rivers, Hastings, Catesby,
Buckingham, Woodvill.*

King. Why so: now have I done a good dayes work.
You Peers, continue this united League:
I, every day expect an Embassage
From my Redeemer, to redeem me hence.
And more to peace my soul shall part to heaven,
Since I have made my Friends at peace on earth.
Dorset and Rivers, take each others hand,
Dissemble not your hatred, Swear your love.

Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from bearing hate,
And with my hand I seal my true heart's-Love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like.

King. Take heed you dally not before your King,
Lest he that is the supreme King of kings
Confound your hidden falshood, and award
Either of you to be the others end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love.

Rivers. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart.

King. Madam, your self is not exempt from this:
Nor you son Dorset, Buckingham nor you;
You have been factious one against the other.
Wife, love Lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand,
And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Queen. There Hastings, I will never more remember
Our former hatred, so thrive I, and mine.

King. Dorset, embrace him:

Hastings, love Lord Marquess.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest
Upon my part, shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I.

King. Now Princely Buckingham, seal thou this league
With thy embracements to my wives Allies,
And make me happy in your unity.

Buc. When ever Buckingham doth turn his hate
Upon your Grace, but with all dutious love,
Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me
With hate in those where I expect most love,
When I have most need to imploy a Friend;
And most assured that he is a Friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
Be he unto me: this do I beg of Heaven,
When I am cold in love, to you, or yours. Embrace.

King. A pleasing Cordial, Princely Buckingham
Is this thy Vow, unto my sickly heart.
There wanteth now our brother Gloster here;
To make the blessed period of this peace.

Buc. And in good time,
Here comes Sir Richard Ratcliff, and the Duke.

Enter Ratcliff, and Gloster.

Rich. Good morrow to my Sovereign King and Queen,
And Princely Peers, a happy time of day.

King. Happy indeed, as we have spent the day:
Gloster, we have done deeds of Charity,
Made peace of Enmity, fair love of Hate,
Between these swelling wrong incensed Peers.

Rich. A blessed labour my most Sovereign Lord:
Among this Princely heap, if any here
By false intelligence, or wrong surmise
Hold me a Foe: if I unwillingly, or in my rage,
Have ought committed that is hardly born,
To any in this presence, I desire
To reconcile me to his friendly peace:

'Tis death to me to be at Enmity:
I hate it, and desire all good men's love,
First Madam, I intreat true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my dutious service,
Of you my Noble Cousin Buckingham,
If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us.
Of you and you, Lord Rivers and of Dorset,
That all without desert have frown'd on me:
Of you Lord Woodville, and Lord Scales of you,
Dukes, Earls, Lords, Gentlemen, indeed of all.
I do not know that Englishman alive,
With whom my soul is any jot at odds,
More then the infant that is born to night:
I thank my God for my Humility.

Queen. A holy day shall this be kept hereafter:
I would to God all strifes were well compounded.
My Sovereign Lord, I do beseech your Highness
To take our brother Clarence to your Grace.

Rich. Why Madam, have I off' red love for this,
To be so flouted in this Royal presence?
Who knows not that the gentle Duke is dead? They
You do him in jury to scorn his Coarse. all start.

King. Who knows not he is dead?
Who knows he is?

Queen. All-seeing Heaven, what a world is this?

Buc. Look I so pale Lord Dorset, as the rest?

Dor. I my good Lord, and no man in the presence,
But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.

King. Is Clarence dead? The order was revers'd.

Rich. But he (poor man) by your first order dyed,
And that a winged Mercury did bear:
Some tardy Cripple bare the Countermand,
That come too lagge to see him buried.
God grant, that some less Noble, and less Loyal,
Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not in bloud,
Deserve no worse then wretched Clarence did,
And yet go currant from suspicion.

Enter Earl of Derby.

Derb. A boon my Sovereign for my service done.

King. I prethee peace, my soul is full of sorrow.

Derb. I will not rise, unless your Highness hear me.

King. Then say at once, what is it thou request'st.

Derb. The forfeit (Sovereign) of my servants life,
Who slew to day a Riotous Gentleman,
Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk.

King. Have I a tongue to doom my Brothers death?
And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave?
My brother kill'd no man, his fault was Thought,
And yet his punishment was bitter death.

Who

Who sued to me for him? Who (in my wrath)
Kneel'd at my feet; and bid me be advis'd?
Who spoke of Brotherhood? who spoke in love?
Who told me how the poor soul did forsake
The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me:
Who told me in the Field at Tewksbury,
When Oxford had me down, he rescued me:
And said, dear Brother live, and be a King?
Who told me, when we both lay in the Field,
Frozen (almost) to death, how he did lap me
Even in his Garments, and did give himself
(All thin and naked) to the numme cold night?
All this from my Remembrance, brutish wrath
Sinfully pluckt, and not a man of you
Had so much grace to put it in my mind.
But when your Carters, or your waiting Vassals
Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd
The precious image of our dear Redeemer,
You straight are on your knees for Pardon, pardon,
And I (unjustly too) must grant it you.
But for my Brother, not a man would speak,
Nor I (ungracious) speak unto my self
For him poor Soul. The proudest of you all,
Have been beholding to him in his life:
Yet none of you, would once beg for his life.
O God! I fear thy justice will take hold
On me, and you; and mine, and yours for this.
Come Hastings help me to my Closet.
Ah poor Clarence. Exeunt some with K. and Queen.
Rich. This is the fruits of rashness: Markt you not,
How that the Kindred of the Queen
Look'd pale, when they did hear of Clarence death?
O! they did urge it still unto the King,
God will revenge it. Come Lords will you go.
To comfort Edward with our company?
Buc. We wait upon your Grace. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the old Duchess of York, with the two children of Clarence.

Edw. Good Grandam tell us, is our Father dead?
Duch. No Boy.
Daugh. Why do you weep so oft? and beat your Breast?
And cry, O Clarence, my unhappy Son?
Boy. Why do you look on us, and shake your head,
And call us Orphans, Wretches, Castaways,
If that our Noble Father were alive?
Duc. My pretty Cousins, you mistake me both,
I do lament the sickness of the King,
As loath to lose him, not your Father's death:
It were lost sorrow to wail one that's lost.
Boy. Then you conclude (my Grandam) he is dead:
The King mine Uncle is to blame for it.
God will revenge it, whom I will importune
With earnest prayers, all to that effect.
Daugh. And so will I.
Duc. Peace children, peace: the King doth love you well.
Incapable and shallow Innocents,
You cannot guess who caus'd your Fathers death.
Boy. Grandam we can: for my good Uncle Gloster

Told me, the King provok'd to it by the Queen,
Devis'd impeachments to imprison him;
And when my Uncle told me so, he wept,
And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek:
Bad me rely on him, as on my Father,
And he would love me dearly as a child.
Duc. Ah! that Deceit should steal such gentle shape,
And with a virtuous Vizard hide deep Vice.
He is my son, I, and therein my shame,
Yet from my dugges, he drew not this deceit.
Boy. Think you my Uncle did dissemble Grandam?
Duc. I Boy.
Boy. I cannot think it. Harke, what noise is this?

*Enter the Queen with her hair about her ears,
Rivers and Dorset after her.*

Queen. Ah! who shall hinder me to wail and weep?
To chide my Fortune, and torment my Self,
I'll joyn with black despair against my Soul,
And to my self become an enemy.
Duc. What means this Scene of rude impatience?
Queen. To make an act of Tragick violence.
Edward my Lord, thy Son, our King is dead.
Why grow the Branches, when the Root is gone?
Why wither not the leaves that want their sap?
If you will live, Lament: if dye, be brief,
That our swift-winged Soules may catch the Kings,
Or like obedient Subjects follow him,
To his new Kingdome of ne're-changing night.
Duc. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorrow,
As I had Title to thy Noble Husband:
I have bewept a worthy Husband's death,
And liv'd with looking on his Images:
But now two Mirrors of his Princely semblance,
Are crack'd in pieces, by malignant death,
And I for comfort, have but one false Glass,
That grieves me, when I see my shame in him.
Thou art a Widow: yet thou art a Mother,
And hast the comfort of thy Children left,
But death hath snatch'd my Husband from mine armes,
And pluckt two Crutches from my feeble hands,
Clarence, and Edward. O, what cause have I,
(Thine being but a moiety of my moan)
To over-go thy woes, and drown my cries.
Boy. Ah Aunt! you wept not for your Fathers death:
How can we aid you with our Kindred teares?
Daugh. Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd,
Your Widow-dolour likewise be unwept.
Queen. Give me no help in Lamentation,
I am not barren to bring forth Complaints:
All Springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I being govern'd by the waterie Moon,
May send forth plenteous tears to drown the World.
Ah, for my Husband, for my dear Lord Edward.
Chil. Ah for our Father, for our dear Lord Clarence.
Duc. Alas for both, both mine Edward and Clarence.
Queen. What stay had I but Edward? and he's gone.
Chil. What stay had we but Clarence? and he's gone.
Duc. What stayes had I but they? and they are gone.
Queen. Was never widow had so dear a loss.
Chil. Were never Orphans had so dear a loss.
Duc. Was never Mother had so dear a loss.
Alas! I am the Mother of these Grievs.
Their woes are parcell'd, mine is general.
She for an Edward weeps, and so do I:

I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she ;
These Babes for Clarence weep, so do not they.
Alas ! you three, on me threefold distrest :
Pour all your teares, I am your sorrows Nurse ,
And I will pamper it with Lamentation.

Dor. Comfort dear Mother, God is much displeas'd,
That you take with unthankfulness his doing.
In common worldly things 'tis call'd ungratefull,
With dull unwillingness to repay a debt,
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent :
Much more to be thus opposite with heaven,
For it requires the Royal debt it lent you,

Rivers. Madam, bethink you like a carefull Mother
Of the young Prince your son : send straight for him,
Let him be Crown'd, in him your comfort lives.
Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,
And plant your joyes in living Edward's Throne.

Enter Richard, Buckingham, Derby, Hastings, and Ratcliff.

Rich. Sister have comfort, all of us have cause
To wail the dimming of our shining Star :
But none can help our harms by wailing them.
Madam, my Mother, I do cry you mercy,
I did not see your Grace. Humbly on my knee,
I crave your Blessing.

Duc. God blefs thee, and put meekness in thy breast,
Love, Charity, Obedience, and true Dutie.

Rich. Amen, and make me die a good old man,
That is the butt end of a Mother's blessing ;
I marvel that her Grace did leave it out.

Buc. You cloudy-Princes, and heart-sorrowing-Peers,
That bear this heavy mutual load of Moan,
Now cheer each other, in each other's Love :
Though we have spent our Harvest of this King,
We are to reap the harvest of his Son.
The broken rancour of your high-swoln hates,
But lately splintred, knir, and joyn'd together,
Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept :
Me seemeth good, that with some little Train,
Forthwith from Ludlow, the young Prince be set
Hither to London, to be crown'd our King.

Rivers. Why with some little Train,
My Lord of Buckingham ?

Buc. Marry my Lord, left by a multitude
The new-heal'd wound of Malice should break out,
Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is green, and yet ungovern'd.
Where every Horse beares his commanding Rein,
And may direct his course as please himself,
As well the fear of harm, as hann apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Rich. I hope the King made peace with all of us,
And the compact is firm, and true in me.

Rivers. And so in me, and so (I think) in all,
Yet since it is but green, it should be put
To no apparent likelihood of breach,
Which haply by much company might be urg'd :
Therefore I say with Noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the Prince.

Hast. And so say I.

Rich. Then be it so, and go we to determine
Who they shall be that straight shall poste to London.
Madam, and you my Sister, will you go
To give your censures in this business ?

Exeunt.

Manent Buckingham, and Richard.

Buck. My Lord, whoever journies to the Prince,
For God's sake let not us two stay at home :
For by the way, I'll sort occasion,
As Index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the Queen's proud Kindred from the Prince.

Rich. My other self, my Counsel's Consistory,
My Oracle, my Prophet, my dear Cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction,
Toward London then, for we'll not stay behind. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter one Citizen at one door, and another at the other.

1. Cit. Good morrow Neighbour, whither away so fast ?

2. Cit. I promise you I hardly know my self :
Hear you the Newes abroad ?

1. Yes, the King is dead.

2. Ill newes byrlady, seldome comes the better :
I fear, I fear, 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

3. Neighbors, God speed.

1. Give you good morrow sir.

3. Doth the news hold of good King Edward's death ?

2. I sir, it is too true, God help the while.

3. Then Masters look to see a troublous world.

1. No, no, by God's good grace, his Son shall reign.

3. Woe to that Land that's govern'd by a Child.

2. In him there is a hope of Government.

Which in his non-age, Counsel under him,

And in his full and ripened yeares, himself

No doubt shall then, and 'till then govern well.

1. So stood the state when Henry the sixth
Was crown'd in Paris, but at nine months old.

3. Stood the State so ? No, no, good friends, God wot ;
For then this Land was famously enrich'd
With politick grave Counsel ; then the King
Had virtuous Uncles to protect his Grace.

1. Why so hath this, both by his Father and Mother.

3. Better it were they all came by his Father.

Or by his Father there were none at all :

For emulation, who shall now be nearest,

Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not.

O full of danger is the Duke of Gloster,

And the Queen's Sons, and Brothers, haught and proud :

And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,

This sickly Land, might solace as before.

1. Come, come, we fear the worst : all will be well.

3. When Clouds are seen, wisemen put on their cloaks ;

When great leaves fall, then Winter is at hand ;

When the Sun sets, who doth not look for night ?

Untimely stormes, make men expect a Dearth :

All may be well ; but if God sort it so,

'Tis more then we deserve, or I expect.

2. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear :

You cannot reason (almost) with a man,

That looks not heavily, and full of dread.

3. Before the dayes of Change, still is it so,

By a divine instinct, men's minds mistrust

Ensuing

Pursuing danger; as by proof we see
The Water swell before a boyst'rous storm:
But leave it all to God, Whither away?
2 Marry we were sent for to the Justices.
3 And so was I: I'll bear you company.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Arch-Bishop, young York, the Queen, and the Dutchesse.

Arch. Last night I heard they lay at Stony Stratford,
And at Northampton they do rest to night:
To morrow, or next day, they will be here.

Dut. I long withall my heart to see the Prince:
I hope he is much grown since last I saw him.

Qu. But I hear no, they say my son of York
Ha's almost overtane him in his growth.

Yor. I mother, but I would not have it so.

Dut. Why, my good Cousin, it is good to grow.

Yor. Grandam, one night as we did sit at supper,
My Unkle Rivers talk'd how I did grow
More then my Brother. I, quoth my Unkle Gloster,
Small Herbs have grace, great Weeds do grow apace.
And since, me thinks I would not grow so fast,
Because sweet Flowers are slow, and Weeds make hast.

Dut. Good faith, good faith, the saying did not hold
In him that did object the same to thee.

He was the wretched'st thing when he was young,
So long a growing, and so leisurely,
That if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

Yor. And so no doubt he is, my gracious Madam.

Dut. I hope he is, but yet let Mothers doubt.

Yor. Now by my troth, if I had been remembred,
I could have given my Unkles Grace, a flour,
To touch his growth, nearer then he touch'd mine.

Dut. How, my young York,
I prethee let me hear it.

Yor. Marry (they say) my Unkle grew so fast,
That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old,
'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth.
Grandam, this would have been a biting Jest.

Dut. I prethee, pretty York, who told thee this?

Yor. Grandam, his Nurse.

Dut. His Nurse? why she was dead, ere thou wast born.

Yor. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.

Qu. A parlous Boy: go to, you are too shrew'd.

Dut. Good Madam, be not angry with a Child.

Qu. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a Messenger: What News?

Mes. Such news my Lord, as grieves me to report.

Qu. How doth the Prince?

Mes. Well Madam, and in health.

Dut. What is thy News?

Mes. Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey,
Are sent to Pomfret, and with them,
Sir Thomas Vaughan, Prisoners.

Dut. Who hath committed them?

Mes. The mighty Dukes, Gloster and Buckingham.

Arch. For what offence?

Mes. The sum of all I can, I have disclos'd:
Why, or for what, the Nobles were committed,
Is all unknown to me, my gracious Lord.

Qu. Aye me! I see the ruine of my House:
The Tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle Hinde,
Insulting Tyranny begins to jut
Upon the innocent and awelesse Throne:
Welcome Destruction, Bloud, and Massacre,
I see (as in a Map) the end of all.

Dut. Accursed, and unquiet wrangling dayes,
How many of you have mine eyes beheld;
My Husband lost his life, to get the Crown,
And often up and down my sons were tost,
For me to joy, and weep, their gain and losse.
And being seated, and Domestick broyls
Clean over-blown, themselves (the Conquerers,)
Make war upon themselves, Brother to Brother;
Bloud to bloud; self against self: O preposterous
And frantick outrage! end thy damned spleen,
Or let me die, to look on earth no more.

Qu. Come, come, my Boy, we will to Sanctuary.
Madam, farewell.

Dut. Stay, I will go with you.

Qu. You have no cause.

Arch. My gracious Lady, go,
And thither bear your Treasure and your Goods,
For my part, I'll resign unto your Grace
The Seal I keep, and so betide it me,
As well I tender you, and all of yours.
Go, I'll conduct you to the Sanctuary.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

The Trumpets sound.

Enter young Prince, the Dukes of Gloucester and Buckingham, Lord Cardinal, with others.

Buc. Welcome sweet Prince to London,
To your Chamber.

Rich. Welcome dear Cofin, my thoughts Sovereign
The weary way hath made you Melancholly.

Prin. No Unkle, but our crosses on the way,
Have made it tedious, Wearisome and heavy.
I want more Unkles here to welcome me.

Rich. Sweet Prince, the untainted vertue of your years
Hath not yet divid into the Worlds deceit:
No more can you distinguish of a man,
Then of his outward shew, which God he knows,
Seldome or never jumpeth with the heart.
Those Unkles which you want, were dangerous:
Your grace attended to their Sugred words,
But look'd not on the poison of their hearts:
God keep you from them, and from such false Friends.

Prin. God keep me from false Friends,
But they were none.

Rich. My Lord, the Major of London comes to greet you.

Enter Lord Major.

Lo. Major. God blesse your Grace, with health and happy dayes.

Prin. I thank you, good my Lord, and thank you all:

I thought my Mother, and my Brother York,
Would long ere this, have met us on the way.
Fie, what a Slug is Hastings, that he comes not
To tell us, whether they will come, or no.

Enter Lord Hastings.

Buck. And in good time, here comes the sweating
Lord.

Prince. Welcome, my Lord: what, will our Mother
come?

Hast. On what occasion God he knows, not I,
The Queen your Mother, and your Brother York,
Have taken Sanctuary: The tender Prince
Would fain have come with me, to meet your Grace,
But by his mother was perforce with-held.

Buc. Fie, what an indirect and peevish course
Is this of hers? Lord Cardinal will your Grace
Perswade the Queen, to send the Duke of York
Unto his Princely Brother presently?
If she deny, Lord Hastings you go with him,
And from her jealous armes pluck him perforce.

Car. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak Oratory
Can from his Mother win the Duke of York,
Anon expect him here: but if she be obdurate
To mild entreaties, God forbid.
We should infringe the holy Priviledge
Of blessed Sanctuary: not for all this Land,
Would I be guilty of so great a sin.

Buc. You are too sencelesse obstinate, my Lord,
Too ceremonious, and traditional.
Weigh it but with the grossnesse of this Age,
You break not Sanctuary, in seizing him:
The benefit thereof is alwayes granted
To those, whose dealings have deserv'd the place,
And those who have the wit to claim the place:
This Prince hath neither claim'd it, nor deserv'd it,
Therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it.
Then taking him from thence, that is not there,
You break no Priviledge, nor Charter there:
Oft have I heard of sanctuary men,
But Sanctuary children, ne're till now.

Car. My Lord, you shall o're-rule my mind for once.
Come on, Lord Hastings, will you go with me?

Hast. I go my Lord. Exit Cardinal and Hastings.

Prin. Good Lords, make all the speedy hast you may.
Say, Uncle Glocester, if our Brother come,
Where shall we sojourn, till our Coronation?

Glo. Where it think't best unto your Royal self.
If I may counsell you, some day or two
Your Highnesse shall repose you at the Tower:
Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit
For your best health, and recreation.

Prin. I do not like the Tower of any place:
Did Julius Caesar build that place, my Lord?

Buc. He did, my gracious Lord, begin that place,
Which since, succeeding Ages, have re-edify'd.

Prin. It is upon record? or else reported
Successively from age to age, he built it?

Buc. Upon record, my gracious Lord.

Prin. But say, my Lord, it were not registred,
Me thinks the truth should live from age to age,
As 'twere retail'd to all posterity,
Even to the general ending day.

Glo. So wise, so young, they say do never live long.

Prin. What say you, Uncle?

Glo. I say, without Characters, Fame lives long.
Thus, like the formal Vice, Iniquity, aside.
I moralize two meanings in one word.

Prin. That Julius Caesar was a famous man;
With what his Valour did enrich his wit,
His Wit set down, to make his Valour live:
Death makes no Conquest of his Conqueror,
For now he lives in Fame, though not in Life.
I'll tell you what, Cousin Buckingham.

Buc. What, my gracious Lord?

Prin. And if I live untill I be a man,
I'll win our ancient Right in France again,
Or die a Souldier, as I liv'd a King.

Glo. Short Summers lightly have a forward Spring.

Enter young York, Hastings, and Cardinal.

Buck. Now in good time, here comes the Duke of York.

Prince. Richard of York, how fares our Noble Brother?

Yor. Well, my dear Lord, so must I call you now.

Prin. I, Brother, to our grief as it is yours:
Too late he dy'd, that might have kept that Title,
Which by his death hath lost much Majesty.

Glo. How fares our Cousin, Noble Lord of York?

Yor. I thank you, gentle Uncle. O my Lord,
You said, that idle Weeds are fast in growth:
The Prince my Brother, hath outgrown me far.

Glo. He hath, my Lord.

Yor. And therefore is he idle.

Glo. Oh my fair Cousin, I must not say so.

Yor. Then he is more beholding to you, then I.

Glo. He may command me as my Sovereign,
But you have power in me, as in a Kinsman.

Yor. I pray you, Uncle, give me this Dagger.

Glo. My Dagger, little Cousin? with all my heart.

Prin. A Beggar, Brother?

Yor. Of my kind Uncle, that I know will give,
And being a Toy, it is no grief to give.

Glo. A greater gift then that, I'll give my Cousin.

Yor. A greater gift? O, that's the Sword to it.

Glo. I, gentle Cousin, were it light enough.

Yor. O then I see, you will part but with light gifts,
In weightier things you'll say a Beggar nay.

Glo. It is too weighty for your Grace to wear.

Yor. I wegh it lightly, were it heavier.

Glo. What, would you have my Weapon, little Lord?

Yor. I would that I might thank you, as you call me.

Glo. How?

Yor. Little.

Prin. My Lord of York will ever be crosse in talk:
Uncle, your Grace knows how to bear with him.

Yor. You mean to bear me, not to bear with me:
Uncle, my Brother mocks both you and me,
Because that I am little, like an Ape,
He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Buc. With what a sharp provided wit he reasons:
To mitigate the scorn he gives his Uncle,
He prettily, and aptly taunts himself:
So cunning, and so young, is wonderfull.

Glo. My Lord, wilt please you passe along?
My self, and my good Cousin Buckingham,
Will to your Mother, to entreat of her
To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.

Yor. What

Yor. What, will you go unto the Tower my Lord?
Prin. My Lord Protector will have it so.
Yor. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.
Glo. Why, what should you fear?
Yor. Marry, my Uncle Clarence angry Ghost:
 My Grandam told me he was murder'd there.
Prin. I fear no Uncles dead.
Glo. Nor none that live, I hope,
Prin. And if they live, I hope I need not fear.
 But come my Lord: and with a heavy heart,
 Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.
Exeunt Prince, York, Hastings, and Dorset.

Manet Richard, Buckingham, and Catesby.

Buc. Think you, my Lord, this little prating York
 Was not incensed by his subtle Mother,
 To raunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?
Glo. No doubt, no doubt: Oh 'tis a perillous Boy,
 Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable:
 He is all the Mochers, from top to toe.

Buc. Well, let them rest: Come hither Catesby,
 Thou art sworn as deeply to effect what we intend,
 As closely to conceal what we impart:
 Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the way,
 What think'st thou? is it not an easie matter,
 To make William Lord Hastings of our mind,
 For the installment of this Noble Duke
 In the seat Royal of this famous Isle?

Cates. He for his fathers sake so loves the Prince,
 That he will not be won to ought against him.

Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley? Will not
 he?

Cates. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.

Buc. Well then, no more but this:
 Go gentle Catesby, and as it were far off,
 Sound thou Lord Hastings,
 How he doth stand affected to our purpose,
 And summon him to morrow to the Tower,
 To sit about the Coronation.
 If thou do'st finde him tractable to us,
 Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:
 If he be laden, icy, cold, unwilling,
 Be thou so too, and so break off the talk,
 And give us notice of his inclination:
 For we to morrow hold divided Councils,
 Wherein thy self shalt highly be employ'd.

Rich. Commend me to Lord William: tell him (Catesby)
 His ancient Knot of dangerous Adversaries
 To morrow are let bloud at Pomfret Castle,
 And bid my Lord, for joy of this good news,
 Give Miltisse Shore one gentle Kisse the more.

Buc. Good Catesby, go effect this businesse soundly.

Cates. My good Lords both, with all the heed I can.

Rich. Shall we hear from you Catesby, ere we sleep?

Cates. You shall, my Lord.

Rich. At Crosby House there shall you find us both.
Exit Catesby.

Buc. Now, my Lord,
 What shall we do, if we perceive
 Lord Hastings will not yield to our Complots?

Rich. Chop off his Head:
 Something we will determine:
 And look when I am King, claim thou of me
 The Earldome of Hereford, and all the moveables
 Whereof the King, my Brother, was possesse.

Buc. I'll claim that promise at your Graces hand.

Rich. And look to have it yielded with all kindnesse.
 Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards
 We may digest our complots in some forme.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter a Messenger to the door of Hastings.

Mes. My Lord, my Lord.

Hast. Who knocks?

Mes. One from the Lord Stanley.

Hast. What is't a Clock?

Mes. Upon the stroke of four.

Enter Lord Hastings.

Hast. Cannot my Lord Stanley sleep these tedious Nights?

Mes. So it appears by what I have to say:
 First, he commends him to your Noble self.

Hast. What then?

Mes. Then certifies your Lordship, that this Night
 He dreamt, the Bore had raised off his Helm:
 Besides, he sayes there are two Councils kept;
 And that may be determ'n'd at the one,
 Which may make you and him to rue at th'other.
 Therefore he sends to know your Lordships pleasure,
 If you will presently take Horse with him,
 And with all speed post with him toward the North,
 To shun the danger that his soul divines.

Hast. Go fellow, go return unto thy Lord,
 Bid him not fear the seperated counsell:
 His Honor and my self are at the one,
 And at the other is my good friend Catesby;
 Where nothing can proceed, that toucheth us,
 Whereof I shall not have intelligence:
 Tell him his fears are shallow, without instance.
 And for his Dreams, I wonder he's so simple,
 To trust the mock'ry of unquiet slumbers.
 To flye the Bore, before the Bore pursues,
 Were to incense the Bore to follow us,
 And make pursuit, where he did mean to chase.
 Go, bid thy Master rise, and come to me,
 And we will both together to the Tower,
 Where he shall see the Bore will use us kindly.

Mes. I'll go, my Lord, and tell him what you say.

Exit.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. Many good morrows to my Noble Lord.

Hast. Good morrow Catesby, you are early stirring:
 What news, what news in this our tottering State?

Cates. It is a reeling World indeed, my Lord:
 And I believe will never stand upright,
 Till Richard wear the Garland of the Realm.

Hast. How wear the Garland?
 Do'st thou mean the Crown?

Cates. I, my good Lord.

Ha. I'll have this Crown of mine cut from my shoulders,
 Before I'll see the Crown so foul mis-plac'd:
 But canst thou guess, that he doth aim at it?

X x 2

Cates. I.

Cates. I, on my life, and hopes to find you forward,
Upon his party, for the gain thereof:
And thereupon he sends you this good news,
That this same very day your enemies,
The Kindred of the Queen, must die at Pomfret.

Hast. Indeed I am no mourner for that news,
Because they have been still my adversaries:
But, that I'll give my voice on Richards side,
To bar my Masters Heirs in true Descent,
God knows I will not do it, to the death.

Cates. God keep your Lordship in that gracious minde.

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelve-month hence,
That they which brought me in my Masters hate,
I live to look upon their Tragedy.

Well Catesby, ere a fort-night make me older,
I'll send some packing, that yet think not on't.

Cates. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious Lord,
When men are unprepar'd, and look not for it.

Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls it out
With Rivers, Vaughan, Gray: and so 'twill do
With some men else, that think themselves as safe
As thou and I, who (as thou know'st) are dear
To Princely Richard, and Buckingham.

Cates. The Princes both make high account of you,
For they account his Head upon the Bridge.

Hast. I know they do, and I have well deserv'd it.

Enter Lord Stanley.

Come on, come on, where is your Boar-spear man?
Fear you the Boar, and go so unprovided?

Stan. My Lord Good morrow, good morrow Catesby:
You may jeast on, but by the holy Rood,
I do not like these several Counsels, I.

Hast. My Lord, I hold my Life as dear as yours,
And never in my dayes, I do protest,
Was it so precious to me, as 'tis now:
Think you, but that I know the state secure,
I would be so triumphant as I am?

St. The Lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London,
Were jocund, and suppos'd their states were sure,
And they indeed had no cause to mistrust:
But yet you see, how soon the day o're-cast.
This sudden stab of Rancour I misdoubt:
Pray God (I say) I prove a needlesse Coward.

What, shall we toward the Tower? the day is spent.

Hast. Come, come, have with you:

Wot you what, my Lord,

To day the Lords you talk of, are beheaded.
St. They, for their truth, might better wear their Heads,
Then some that have accus'd them, wear their Hats.
But come, my Lord, let's away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before, I'll talk with this good fellow.

Exit Lord Stanley and Catesby.

How now, Sirra? how goes the World with thee?

Purs. The better, that your Lordship please to ask.

Hast. I tell thee man, 'tis better with me now,
Then when thou met'st me last, where now we meet:
Then was I going Prisoner to the Tower,
By the suggestion of the Queens Allyes.
But now I tell thee (keep it to thy self)
This day those Enemies are put to death,

And I in better state then ere I was.

Purs. God hold it, to your Honors good content.

Hast. Gramercy fellow: there drink that for me.

Throws him his Purse.

Purs. I thank your Honor.

Exit Pursuivant.

Enter a Priest.

Priest. Well met, my Lord, I am glad to see your Honor.

Hast. I thank thee good Sir John, with all my heart.
I am in your debt, for your last Exercise:
Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Priest. I'll waite upon your Lordship.

Enter Buckingham.

Buck. What, talking with a Priest, Lord Chamberlain?
Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the Priest,
Your Honor hath no thriving work in hand.

Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy man,
The men you talk of, came into my mind.
What, go you toward the Tower?

Buck. I do, my Lord, but long I cannot stay there:
I shall return before your Lordship thence.

Hast. Nay like enough, for I stay Dinner there.

Buc. And Supper too, although thou know'st it not.
Come, will you go?

Hast. I'll wait upon your Lordship.

Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Richard Ratcliffe, with Halberds, carrying the Nobles to death at Pomfret.

Rivers. Sir Richard Ratcliffe, let me tell thee this,
To day shalt thou behold a Subject die,
For Truth, for Duty, and for Loyalty.

Grey. God blesse the Prince from all the Pack of you,
A Knot you are, of damned Bloud-suckers.

Vaugh. You live, that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Dispatch, the limit of your Lives is out,

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody Prison!

Fatall and ominous to Noble Peers:

Within the guilty Closure of thy Walls,

Richard the Second here was hackt to death:

And for more slander to thy dismal Seat,

We give to thee our guiltlesse bloud to drink.

Grey. Now Margarets Curse is fain upon our Heads,
When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I,
For standing by, when Richard stab'd her Son.

Riv. Then curs'd the Richard,

Then curs'd the Buckingham,

Then curs'd the Hastings. O remember God,

To hear her prayer for them, as now for us:

And for my Sister, and her Princely Sons,

Be satisfi'd, dear God, with our true bloud,

Which as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt.

Rat. Make hast, the hour of death is now expir'd,

Riv. Come Grey, come Vaughan, let us here embrace,
Farewell, untill we meet again in Heaven.

Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Quarta.

Enter Buckingham, Darby, Hastings, Bishop of Ely, Norfolk, Ratcliffe, Lovell, with others, at a Table.

Hast. Now Noble Peers, the cause why we are met, Is to determine of the Coronation :

In Gods Name speak, when is the Royal day ?

Buc. Is all things ready for the Royal time ?

Darb. It is, and wants but nomination.

Ely. To morrow then I judge a happy day.

Buc. Who knows the Lord Protectors mind herein ? Who is most inward with the Noble Duke ?

Ely. Your Grace, we think, should soonest know his minde.

Buc. We know each others Faces : for our Hearts, He knows no more of mine, then I of yours, Or I of his, my Lord, then you of mine : Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.

Hast. I thank his Grace, I know he loves me well : But for his purpose in the Coronation, I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd His gracious pleasure any way therein : But you, my Honorable Lord, may name the time, And in the Dukes behalf I'll give my Voice, Which I presume he'll take in gentle part.

Enter Gloucester.

Ely. In happy time here comes the Duke himself.

Rich. My Noble Lords, and Cousins all, good morrow : I have been long a sleeper : but I trust, My absence doth neglect no great designe, Which by my presence might have been concluded.

Buc. Had you not come upon your Q my Lord, William, Lord Hastings, had pronounc'd your part ; I mean your Voice, for Crowning of the King.

Rich. Then my Lord Hastings, no man might be bolder, His Lordship knows me well, and loves me well. My Lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn, I saw good Strawberries in your Garden there, I do beseech you, send for some of them.

Ely. Marry and will, my Lord, with all my heart.

Exit Bishop.

Rich. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you. Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business, And finds the testy Gentleman so hot, That he will lose his Head, ere give consent His Masters Child, as worshipfully he tearmes it, Shall lose the Royalty of Englands Throne.

Buc. Withdraw your self a while, I'll go with you.

Exeunt.

Dar. We have not yet set down this day of Triumph : To morrow, in my judgement, is too sudden, For I my self am not so well provided, As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Enter the Bishop of Ely.

Ely. Where is my Lord, the Duke of Gloster ? I have sent for these Strawberries :

Ha. His Grace looks chearfully & smooth this morning,

There's some conceit or other likes him well, When that he bids good morrow with such spirit. I think there's never a man in Christendome Can lesser hide his love, or hate then he, For by his Face straight shall you know his Heart.

Darb. What of his Heart perceive you in his Face, By any livelyhood he shew'd to day ?

Hast. Marry that with no man here he is offended : For were he, he had shewn it in his Looks.

Enter Richard, and Buckingham.

Rich. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve, That do conspire my death with divelish Plots Of damned Witchcraft, and that have prevail'd Upon my Body with their Hellish Charmes.

Hast. The tender love I bear your Grace, my Lord, Makes me most forward, in this Princely presence, To doom th' Offenders, whosoe're they be : I say, my Lord, they have deserved death.

Rich. Then be your eyes the witnesse of their cvill, Look how I am bewitch'd : behold, mine Arme Is like a blasted Sapling, wither'd up :

And this is Edwards Wife, that monstrous Witch, Consorted with that Harlot, Strumpet Shore, That by their Witchcraft thus have marked me.

Hast. If they have done this deed, my Noble Lord.

Rich. If ? thou Protector of this damned Strumpet, Talk'st thou to me of Iffs : thou art a Traitor, Off with his Head ; now by Saint Paul I swear, I will not dine, untill I see the same.

Lovell and Ratcliffe, look that it be done :

The rest that love me, rise, and follow me.

Exeunt.

Manet Lovell and Ratcliffe, with the Lord Hastings.

Hast. Woe, woe for England, not a whit for me, For I, too fond, might have prevented this : Stanley did dream, the Boar did rowze our Helmes, And I did scorn it, and disdain to flye : Three times to day my Foot-Cloth-Horse did stumble, And started, when he look'd upon the Tower, As loth to bear me to the slaughter-house.

O now I need the Priest, that spake to me :

I now repent I told the Pursuivant, As too triumphing, how mine Enemies

To day at Pomfret bloudily were butcher'd, And I my self secure, in grace and favour.

Oh Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy Curse Is lighted on poor Hastings wretched Head.

Ra. Come, come dispatch, the Duke would be at dinner : Make a short Shrift, he longs to see your Head.

Hast. O momentary grace of mortal men, Which we more hunt for, then the grace of God ! Who builds his hope in aire of your good Looks, Lives like a drunken Sailor on a Mast, Ready with every Nod to tumble down, Into the fatal Bowels of the Deep.

Lov. Come, come, dispatch, 'tis bootlesse to exclaim.

Hast. O bloody Richard : miserable England, I prophesie the fearfull'st time to thee, That ever wretched Age hath look'd upon. Come, lead me to the Block, bear him my Head, They smile at me, who shortly shall be dead.

Exeunt.

X x 3

Enter

Enter Richard, and Buckingham, in rotten Armor marvellous ill-favoured.

Rich. Come Cousin,
Canst thou quake, and change thy colour,
Murder thy breath in middle of a word,
And then again begin, and stop again,
As if thou were distraught, and mad with terror?

Buc. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep Tragedian,
Speak, and look back, and pric on every side,
Tremble, and start at wagging of a Straw:
Intending deep suspicion, gaskly Looks:
Are at my service, like enforced Smiles;
And both are ready in their Offices,
At any time to grace my Stratagems.
But what is Catesby, gone?

Rich. He is, and see he brings the Mayor along.

Enter the Mayor and Catesby.

Buc. Lord Mayor.

Rich. Look to the Draw-Bridge there.

Buc. Hark, a Drum.

Rich. Catesby, o're-look the Walls.

Buc. Lord Mayor, the reason we have sent.

Rich. Look back, defend there, here are enemies.

Buc. God and our Innocency defend, and guard us.

Enter Lovell and Ratcliffe, with Hastings Head.

Rich. Be patient, they are friends: Ratcliffe & Lovell.

Lov. Here is the Head of that ignoble Traitor,
The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

Rich. So dear I lov'd the man, that I must weep:
I took him for the plainest harmlesse Creature,
That breath'd upon the Earth, a Christian:
Made him my Book, wherein my Soul recorded
The History of her secret thoughts.
So smooth he daub'd his Vice with shew of Vertue,
That his apparent open Guilt omitted,
I mean his conversation with Shores Wife,
He liv'd from all attainder of suspects.

Buc. Well, well, he was the covert shelter Traitor
That ever liv'd.

Would you imagine, or almost believe,
Wer't not, that by great preservation
We live to tell it, that the subtle Traitor
This day had plotted, in the Counsell-House,
To murder me, and my good Lord of Gloster.

Ma. Had he done so?

Rich. What? think you we are Turks, or Infidels?
Or that we would, against the form of Law,
Proceed thus rashly in the Villains death,
But that the extreame perill of the case,
The Peace of England, and our Persons safety,
Enforc'd us to this Execution.

Ma. Now fair befall you, he deserv'd his death,
And your good Graces both have well proceeded,
To warn false Traitors from the like Attempts.

Buc. I never look'd for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with Mistris Shore.
Yet had we not determin'd he should die,
Untill your Lordship came to see his end,
Which now the loving haste of these our friends,
Something against our meanings, have prevented;
Because, my Lord, I would have had you heard
The traitor speak, and timorously confesse
The manner and the purpose of his Treasons:

That you might well have signify'd the same
Unto the Citizens, who haply may
Misconster us in him, and wail his death.

Ma. But, my good Lord, your Graces words shall serve,
As well as I had seen, and heard him speak:
And do not doubt, right Noble Princes both,
But I'll acquaint our dutious Citizens
With all your just proceedings in this case.

Rich. And to that end we wish'd your Lordship here,
To avoid the Censures of the carping World.

Buc. Which since you come too late of our intent,
Yet witness what you hear we did intend:
And so, my good Lord Mayor, we bid farewell.

Exit Mayor.

Rich. Go after, after, Cousin Buckingham.
The Mayor towards Guild-Hall hies him in all post:
There, at your meetest vantage of the time,
Infer the Bastardy of Edwards Children:
Tell them, how Edward put to death a Citizen,
Only for saying, he would make his Son
Heir to the Crown, meaning indeed his house,
Which, by the Signe thereof was termed so.
Moreover, urge his hatefull Luxury,
And bestial appetite in change of Lust,
Which stretch'd unto their Servants, Daughters, Wives,
Even where his raging eye, or savage heart,
Without controll, lusted to make a prey.

Nay for a need, thus far come near my Person:
Tell them, when that my Mother went with Child
Of that insatiate Edward, Noble Tork,
My Princely Father, then had Warrs in France,
And by true computation of the time,
Found, that the Issue was not his begot:
Which well appeared in his Lineaments,
Being nothing like the Noble Duke, my Father:
Yet touch this sparingly, as t'were far off,
Because, my Lord, you know my Mother lives.

Buc. Doubt not, my Lord, I'll play the Orator,
As if the Golden Fee, for which I plead,
Were for my self: and so, my Lord, adieu.

Rich. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynards Castle,
Where you shall find me well accompanied
With reverend Fathers, and well-learned Bishops.

Buc. I go, and towards three or four a Clock
Look for the News that the Guild-Hall affords.

Exit Buckingham.

Rich. Go Lovell with all speed to Doctor Shaw,
Go thou to Fryar Benker, bid them both
Meet me within this hour at Baynards Castle. Exit.
Now will I go to take some privy order,
To draw the Brats of Clarence out of sight,
And to give order, that no manner person
Have any time recourse unto the Princes. Exit.

Enter a Scrivener.

Scr. Here is the Indictment of the good Lord Hastings,
Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd,
That it may be to day read o're in Pauls.
And mark how well the sequell hangs together:
Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,
For yester-night by Catesby was it sent me,
The Precedent was full as long a doing,
And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd,
Untainted, unexamined, free, at liberty.
Here's a good World the while; who is so grosse,
That cannot see this palpable device?

Yet

Yet who so bold, but sayes he sees it not?
Bad is the World, and all will come to nought,
When such ill dealing must be seen in thought. Exit.

Enter Richard and Buckingham at several doors.

Rich. How now, how now, what say the Citizens?

Buc. Now by the holy Mother of our Lord,
The Citizens are mum, say not a word.

Rich. Toucht you the Bastardy of Edwards Children?

Buc. I did, with his Contract with Lady Lucy,

And his Contract by Deputy in France,

Th'unfatiare greedinesse of his desire,

And his enforcement of the City Wives,

His tyranny for Trifles, his own Bastardy,

As being got, your Father then in France,

And his resemblance, being not like the Duke.

Withall, I did infer your Lineaments,

Being the right Idea of your Father,

Both in your form, and Noblenesse of Mind:

Laid open all your Victories in Scotland,

Your Discipline in War, Wisdome in Peace;

Your Bounty, Vertue, fair Humility:

Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose,

Untoucht, or slightly handled in discourse.

And when my Oratory drew toward end,

I bid them that did love their Countries good,

Cry, God save Richard, Englands Royal King.

Rich. And did they so?

Buc. No, so God help me, they spake not a word,

But like dumb Statues, or breathing Stones,

Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale:

Which when I saw, I reprehended them,

And ask'd the Mayor, what meant this wilfull silence?

His answer was, the people were not used

To be spoke to, but by the Recorder.

Then he was urg'd to tell my Tale again:

Thus saith the Duke, thus hath the Duke inferr'd,

But nothing spoke, in warrant from himself.

When he had done, some followers of mine own,

At lower end of the Hall, hurl'd up their Caps,

And some ten voices cry'd, God save King Richard:

And thus I took the vantage of those few.

Thanks gentle Citizens, and friends, quoth I,

This general applause, and chearfull shout,

Argues your wisdome, and your love to Richard:

And even here brake off, and came away.

Rich. What tongue-lesse Blocks were they,

Would they not speak?

Will not the Mayor then, and his Brethren, come?

Buc. The Mayor is here at hand: intend some fear,

Be not you spoke with, but by mighty suit:

And look you get a Prayer-Book in you hand,

And stand between two Church-men, good my Lord,

For on that ground I'll make a holy Descant:

And be not easily won to our requests,

Play the Maids part, still answer nay, and take it.

Rich. I go: and if you plead as well for them,

As I can say nay to thee for my self,

No doubt we bring it to a happy issue.

Buc. Go, go up to the Leads, the Lord Mayor knocks.

Enter Lord Mayor, and Citizens.

Welcome my Lord, I dance attendance here,

I think the Duke will not be spoke withall.

Enter Catesby.

Buc. Now Catesby, what sayes your Lord to my request?

Cates. He doth entreat your Grace, my Noble Lord;

To visit him to-morrow, or next day:

He is within, with two right reverend Fathers,

Divinely bent to Meditation;

And in no worldly suits would he be mov'd,

To draw him from his holy Exercise.

Buc. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious Duke,

Tell him, my self, the Mayor and Aldermen,

In deep designs, in matter of great moment,

No lesse importing then our general good,

Are come to have some conference with his Grace.

Cates. I'll signifie so much unto him straight. Exit.

Buc. Ah ha, my Lord, this Prince is not an Edward,

He is not lulling on a lewd Love-Bed:

But on his Knees at Meditation:

Not dallying with a Brace of Curtizans,

But meditating with two deep Divines:

Not sleeping, to engrosse his idle Body,

But praying, to enrich his watchfull Soul.

Happy were England, would this vertuous Prince

Take on his Grace the Sovereignty thereof.

But sure I fear we shall not win him to it.

Mayor. Marry God defend his Grace should say us nay.

Buc. I fear he will: here Catesby comes again.

Enter Catesby.

Now Catesby, what sayes his Grace?

Cates. He wonders to what end you have assembled

Such troops of Citizens, to come to him.

His Grace not being warn'd thereof before:

He fears, my Lord, you mean no good to him.

Buc. Sorry I am, my Noble Cousin should

Suspect me, that I mean no good to him:

By Heaven, we come to him in perfect love,

And so once more return, and tell his Grace. Exit.

When holy and devout Religious men

Are at their Beads, 'tis much to draw them thence,

So sweet is zealous Contemplation.

Enter Richard aloft, between two Bishops

Ma. See where his Grace stands, 'tween two Clergy men.

Buc. Two Props of Vertue, for a Christian Prince,

To stay him from the fall of Vanity:

And see a Book of Prayer in his hand,

True Ornaments to know a holy man.

Famous Plantagenet, most gracious Prince,

Lend favourable ear to our requests,

And pardon us the interruption

Of thy Devotion, and right Christian Zeal.

Rich. My Lord, there needs no such Apology:

I do beseech your Grace to pardon me,

Who earnest in the service of th'high God,

Deferr'd the visitation of my friends.

But leaving this, what is your Graces pleasure?

Buc. Even that (I hope) which pleaseth God above,

And all good men, of this ungovern'd I'll.

Rich. I do suspect I have done some offence,

That seems disgracious in the Cities eye,

And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buc. You

Buc. You have, my Lord :
Would it might please your Grace,
On our entreaties, to amend your fault.

Rich. Else wherefore breath I in a Christian Land.

Buc. Know then, it is your fault, that you resigne
The Supream Seat, the Throne Majestical;
The Sceptred office of your Ancestors,
Your State of Fortune, and your Due of Birth,
The Lineal Glory of your Royal House,
To the corruption of a blemisht Stock :
Whiles in the mildnesse of your sleepey thoughts,
(Which here we waken to our Countries good,)
The Noble Isle doth want his proper Limbs :
His Face defac'd with skarrs of Infamy,
His Royal Stock grafft with ignoble Plants,
And almost shouldred in the swallowing Gulf
Of dark forgetfulnesse, and deep Oblivion.
Which to recure, we heartily sollicit
Your gracious self to take on you the charge
And Kingly Government of this your Land :
Not as Protector, Steward, Substitute,
Or lowly Factor, for anothers gain ;
But as successively, from Bloud to Bloud,
Your Right of Birth, your Empyre, your own.
For this, consoorted with the Citizens,
Your very Worthipfull and loving friends;
And by their vehement instigation,
In this just Cause come I to move your Grace.

Rich. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence,
Or bitterly to speak in your reproof,
Best fitteth my Degree, or your Condition.
For not to answer, you might haply think,
Tongue-ty'd Ambition, not replying, yielded
To bear the Golden Yoak of Sovereignty,
Which fondly you would here impose on me.
If to reprove you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithfull love to me,
Then on the other side I check'd my friends.
Therefore to speak, and to avoid the first,
And then in speaking, not to incur the last,
Definitively thus I answer you.

Your love deserves my thanks, but my desert
Unmeritable, shuns your high request.
First, if all Obstacles were cut away,
And that my Path were even to the Crown,
As the ripe Revenue, and due of Birth :
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty, and so many my defects,
That I would rather hide me from my Greatness,
Being a Bark to brook no mighty Sea ;
Then in my Greatnesse cover to be hid,
And in the vapour of my Glory smother'd.
But God be thank'd, there is no need of me,
And much I need to help you, were there need :
The Royal Tree hath left us Royal Fruit,
Which mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,
Will well become the Seat of Majesty,
And make us (no doubt) happy by his Reign.
On him I lay that, you would lay on me,
The Right and Fortune of his happy Starrs,
Which God defend that I should wring from him.

Buc. My Lord, this argues Conscience in your Grace,
But the respects thereof are nice, and trivial,
All circumstances well considered.

You say, that Edward is your Brothers Son,
So say we too, but not by Edwards Wife :

For first was he contract to Lady Lucy,
Your Mother lives a witnesse to his Vow,
And afterward by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, Sister to the King of France.
These both put off, a poor Petitioner,
A Care-cras'd Mother to a many Sons,
A Beauty-waining, and distressed Widow,
Even in the after-noon of her best dayes,
Made prize and purchase of his wanton Eye,
Seduc'd the pitch, and height of his degree,
To base declension, and loath'd Bigamie.
By her, in his unlawfull Bed, he got
This Edward, whom our Manner call the Prince.
More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that for reverence of some alive,
I give a sparing limit to my Tongue.
Then good my Lord, take to you Royal self
This proffer'd benefit of Dignity :
If not to blesse us and the Land withall,
Yet to draw forth your Noble Ancestry
From the corruption of abusing times,
Unto a Lineal true derived course:

Mayor. Do good my Lord, your Citizens entreat you.

Buc. Refuse not mighty Lord, this proffer'd love.

Cates. O make them joyfull, grant their lawfull suit.

Rich. Alas, why would you heap this Care on me?

I am unfit for State, and Majesty :

I do beseech you take it not amisse,

I cannot, nor I will not yield to you.

Buc. If you refuse it, as in love and zeal,
Loth to depose the Child your Brothers Son,
As well we know your tendernesse of heart,
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your Kindred,
And equally indeed to all Estates:
Yet know, where you accept our suit, or no,
Your Brothers Son shall never reign our King,
But we will plant some other in the Throne,
To the disgrace and down-fall of your House :
And in this resolution here we leave you.

Come Citizens, we will entreat no more.

Exeunt.

Cates. Call him again, sweet Prince, accept their suit:
If you deny them, all the Land will rue it.

Rich. Will you enforce me to a world of Cares?

Call them again, I am not made of Stones,
But penetrable to your kind entreaties,
Albeit against my Conscience and my Soul.

Enter Buckingham and the rest.

Cousin of Buckingham, and sage men,
Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burthen, whether, I will or no,
I must have patience to endure the Load:
But if black Scandal, or four-fac'd Reproach,
Attend the sequell of your Imposition,
Your meer enforcement shall acquaintance me
From all the impure blots and stains thereof,
For God doth know, and you may partly see,
How far I am from the desire of this.

Mayor. God blesse your Grace, we see it, and will say it.

Rich. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.

Buc. Then I salute you with this Royal Title,
Long live King Richard, Englands worthy King.

All. Amen.

Buc. To morrow may it please you to be Crown'd?

Rich. Even when you please, for you will have it so.

Buc. To

Buc. To morrow then we will attend your Grace,
And so most joyfully we take our leave.

Rich. Come, let us to our holy Work again.
Farewell my Cousins, farewell gentle friends. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Queen, Anne Duchess of Gloucester, the Duchess of York, and Marquess of Dorset.

Duch. York. Who meets us here?
My Niece Plantagenet,
Led in the hand of her kind Aunt of Gloster?
Now, for my Life, she's wandering to the Tower,
On pure hearts love, to greet the tender Prince.
Daughter, well met.

An. God give your Graces both a happy
And a joyfull time of day.

Qu. As much to you, good Sister: whither away?

An. No farther then the Tower, and as I guesse,
Upon the like devotion as your selves,
To gratulate the gentle Princes there.

Qu. Kind Sister thanks, we'll never enter all together:

Enter the Lieutenant.

And in good time, here the Lieutenant comes.
Master Lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,
How doth the Prince, and my young Son of York?

Lien. Right well, dear Madam: by your patience,
I may not suffer you to visit them,
The King hath strictly charg'd the contrary.

Qu. The King? who's that?

Lien. I mean the Lord Protector.

Qu. The Lord protect him from that Kingly Title.
Hath he set bounds between their love, and me?
I am their Mother, who shall bar me from them?

Duch. York. I am their Fathers Mother, I will see them.

An. Their Aunt I am in Law, in love their Mother:
Then bring me to their sights, I'll bear thy blame,
And take thy Office from thee, on my peril.

Lien. No, Madam, no, I may not leave it so:
I am bound by Oath, and therefore pardon me.

Exit Lieutenant.

Enter Stanley.

Stan. Let me but meet you Ladies one hour hence,
And I'll salute your Grace of York as Mother,
And reverend looker on of two fair Queens.
Come Madam, you must straight to Westminster,
There to be crowned Richards Royal Queen.

Qu. Ah, cut my Lace asunder,
That my pent heart may have some scope to beat,
Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news.

An. Despightfull tidings, O unpleasing news.

Dorf. Be of good cheer: Mother, how fares your Grace?

Qu. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee gone,
Death and Destruction dogs thee at thy heels,
Thy Mothers Name is ominous to Children.
If thou wilt out-strip Death, go crosse the Seas,

And live with Richmond, from the reach of Hell.
Go hie thee, hie thee from this slaughter-house,
Lest thou encrease the number of the dead,
And make me die the thrall of Margarets Curse,
Nor Mother, Wife, nor Englands counted Queen.

Stan. Full of wise care, is this your counsell, Madam:
Take all the swift advantage of the hours:
You shall have Letters from me to my Son,
In your behalf, to meet you on the way:
Be not ta'ne tardy by unwise delay.

Duc. York. O ill dispersing Wind of Misery,
O my accursed Womb, the Bed of Death:
A Cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the World,
Whose unavoyded Eye is murtherous.

Stan. Come, Madam, come, I in all haste was sent.

An. And I with all unwillingnesse will go.
O would to God, that the inclusive Verge
Of Golden Mettal, that must round my Brow,
Were red hot Steel, to sear me to the Brains,
Anointed let me be with deadly Venome,
And die ere men say, God save the Queen.

Qu. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory,
To feed my humor, with thy self no harme.

An. No: why? When he that is my Husband now,
Came to me, as I follow'd Henrie's Gorse,
When scarce the blood was well wash't from his hands,
Which issued from my other Angel Husband,
And that dear Saint, which then I weeping follow'd:
O, when I say, I look'd on Richards Face,
This was my Wish: Be thou (quoth I) accurst,
For making me, so young, so old a Widow:
And when thou wed'st, let sorrow haunt thy Bed:
And be thy Wife, if any be so mad,
More miserable, by the Life of thee,
Then thou hast made me, by my dear Lords death.
Loe, e're I can repeat this Curse again,
Within so small a time, my Womans heart
Grossely grew captive to his honey words,
And prov'd the subject of mine own Soules Curse,
Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest:
For never yet one hour in his Bed
Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,
But with his timerous Dreams was still awak'd.
Besides, he hates me for my Father Warwick,
And will (no doubt) shortly be rid of me.

Qu. Poor heart adieu, I pittie thy complaining.

An. No more, then with my soule I mourn for yours.

Dorf. Farewell, thou wofull welcommer of glory.

Anne. Adieu, poor soule, that tak'st thy leave of it.

Duc. York. Go to Richmond, to Dorset, to Anne, to the Queen, and good fortune guide thee,
Go thou to Richard, and good Angels tend thee,
Go thou to Sanctuary, and good thoughts possesse thee
I to my Grave, where peace and rest lye with me.
Eighty odde years of sorrow have I seen,
And each hours joy wrackt with a week of teen.

Qu. Stay, yet look back with me unto the Tower.
Pitty, you ancient Stones, those tender Babes,
Whom Envy hath immur'd within your Walls,
Rough Cradle for such little pretty ones,
Rude ragged Nurse, old sullen Play-fellow,
For tender Princes: use my Babies well;
So foolish Sorrows bids your Stones farewell.

Exeunt.

Sound.

Scena Secunda.

Sound a Sonnet. Enter Richard in pomp, Buckingham, Catesby, Ratcliffe, Lovel.

Rich. Stand all apart Cousin of Buckingham.

Buc. My gracious Sovereign.

Rich. Give me thy hand. Sound.

Thus high, by thy advice, and thy assistance,
Is King Richard seated:

But shall we wear these Glories for a day?

Or shall they last, and we rejoyce in them?

Buc. Still live they, and for ever let them last.

Rich. Ah Buckingham, now do I play the Touch,
To try if thou be current Gold indeed:

Young Edward lives, think now what I would speak.

Buc. Say on, my loving Lord.

Rich. Why Buckingham, I say I would be King.

Buc. Why so you are, my thrice-renowned Lord.

Rich. Ha? am I King? 'tis so: but Edward lives.

Buc. True, Noble Prince.

Rich. O bitter consequence!

That Edward still should live true noble Prince.

Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull.

Shall I be plain? I wish the Bastards dead,

And I would have it suddenly perform'd.

What say'st thou now? speak suddenly, be brief.

Buc. Your Grace may do your pleasure.

Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all Ice, thy kindnesse freezes:
Say, have I thy consent, that they shall die?

Bu. Give me some little breath, some pause, dear Lord,
Before I positively speak in this:

I will resolve you herein presently. Exit Buc.

Cates. The King is angry, see he gnaws his Lip,

Rich. I will converse with Iron-witted Fools,
And unrespective Boyes: none are for me,
That look into me with considerate eyes,
High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect.
Boy.

Page. My Lord.

Rich. Know'st thou not any, whom corrupting Gold
Will tempt unto a close exploit of Death?

Page. I know a discontented Gentleman,
Whole humble means match not his haughty spirit:
Gold were as good as twenty Orators,
And will (no doubt) tempt him to any thing.

Rich. What is his Name?

Page. His Name, my Lord, is Tirrell.

Rich. I partly know the man: go call him hither.
Boy. Exit

The deep revolving witty Buckingham,
No more shall be the neighbour to my counsells.
Hath he so long held out with me untyr'd,
And stops he now for breath? Well, be it so.

Enter Stanley.

How now, Lord Stanley, what's the news?

Stan. Know my loving Lord, the Marquess Dorset
As I hear, is fled to Richmond,
In the parts where he abides.

Rich. Come hither Catesby, rumor it abroad,
That Anne my Wife is very grievous sick,

I will take order for her keeping close.

Inquire me out some mean poor Gentleman,
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence Daughter:
The Boy is foolish, and I fear not him.

Look how thou dream'st: I say again, give out,
That Anne, my Queen, is sick, and like to die.
About it, for it stands me much upon
To stop all hopes, whose growth may damage me.
I must be married to my Brothers Daughter,
Or else my Kingdome stands on brittle Glasse:
Murther her Brothers, and then marry her,
Uncertain way of gain. But I am in
So far in bloud, that sin will pluck on sin,
Tear-falling Pity dwells not in this Eye.

Enter Tirrell.

Is thy thy Name Tirrell?

Tir. James Tirrell, and your most obedient subject.

Rich. Art thou indeed?

Tir. Prove me, my gracious Lord.

Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Tir. Please you:

But I had rather kill two enemies.

Rich. Why then thou hast it: two deep enemies,
Foes to my Rest, and my sweet sleeps disturbers,
Are they that I would have the deal upon:

Tirrell, I mean those Bastards in the Tower.

Tir. Let me have open means to come to them,
And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.

Rich. Thou sing'st sweet Musick:

Heark, come hither Tirrel, whispers.
Go by this token: rise, and lend thine Ear,
There is no more but so: say it is done,

And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.

Tir. I will dispatch it straight. Exit.

Enter Buckingham.

Buc. My Lord, I have consider'd in my mind,
The late request that you did sound me in.

Rich. Well, let that rest: Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Buc. I hear the news, my Lord.

Rich. Stanley, he is your Wives Son: well, look unto it.

Buc. My Lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise,
For which your Honour and your Faith is pawn'd.
Th'Earldome of Hereford, and the moveables,
Which you have promised I shall possess.

Rich. Stanley look to your Wife: if she convey
Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buc. What sayes your Highnesse to my just request?

Rich. I do remember me, Henry, the Sixth
Did prophesie, that Richmond should be King,
When Richmond was a little peevish Boy.
A King perhaps.

Buc. May it please you to resolve me in my suit.

Rich. Thou troublest me, I am not in the vein. Exit.

Buc. And is it thus? repayes he my deep service
With such contempt? made I him King for this?
O let me think on Hastings, and be gone
To Brecnock, while my fearfull Head is on. Exit.

Enter Tirrel.

Tir. The tyrannous and bloody Act is done,
The most arch deed of pittious massacre

The

That ever yet this Land was guilty of:
Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn
 To do this piece of ruthfull Butchery,
 Albeit they were flesht Villains, bloudy Dogs,
 Melted with tenderesse, and milde compassion,
 Wept like to Children, in their deaths sad Story,
 O thus (quoth Dighton) lay the gentle Babes:
 Thus, thus (quoth Forrest) girdling one another
 Within their Alabaster innocent armes:
 Their lips were four red Roses on a stalk,
 And their Summer Beauty kist each other.
 A Book of Prayers on their pillow lay,
 Which one (quoth Forrest) almost chang'd my mind:
 But oh the Devill, there the Villain stopt:
 When Dighton thus told on, we smothered
 The most replenished sweet work of nature,
 That from the prime Creation ere she framed.
 Hence both are gone with Conscience and Remorse,
 They could not speak, and so I left them both,
 To bear these tydings to the bloudy King.

Enter Richard.

And here he comes. All health my Sovereign Lord.

Rich. Kind Tirrel, am I happy in the News.

Tir. If to have done the thing you gave in charge,
 Beget your happinesse, be happy then,
 For it is done.

Rich. But did'st thou see them dead?

Tir. I did my Lord.

Rich. And buried, gentle Tirrel?

Tir. The Chaplain of the Tower hath buried them,
 But where (to say the truth) I do not know.

Rich. Come to me Tirrel soon, and after Supper,
 When thou there shalt tell the proesse of their death.
 Mean time, but think how I may do thee good.
 And be inheritor of thy desire.

Farewell till then.

Tir. I humbly take leave.

Rich. The Son of Clarence have I pent up close,
 His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage,
 The Sons of Edward sleep in Abrahams bosome,
 And Anne my wife hath bid this world good night.
 Now for I know the Brittain Richmond aims
 At young Elizabeth my Brothers daughter,
 And by that knot looks proudly on the Crown,
 To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord.

Rich. Good or bad news, that thou com'st in so bluntly?

Rat. Bad news my Lord, Mourton is fled to Richmond,
 And Buckingham backt with the hardy Welshmen
 Is in the field, and still his power encrease.

Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near,
 Then Buckingham and his rash levied Strength.
 Come, I have learn'd, that fearfull commenting
 Is leaden servitor to dull delay.

Delay leads impotent and Snail-pac'd Beggerly:
 Then fiery expedition be my wing,
 Joves Mercury, and Herald for a King:
 Go muster men: My counsell is my Shield,
 We must be brief, when Traitors brave the Field.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Old Queen Margaret.

Mar. So now prosperity begins to mellow,
 And drop into the rotten mouth of death:
 Here in these Confinde slyly have I lurk't,
 To watch the waning of mine enemies.
 A dire induction, am I witness to,
 And will to France, hoping the consequence
 Will prove as bitter, black, and Tragicall.
 Withdraw thee wretched Margaret, who comes here?

Enter Dutchesse and Queen.

Qu. Ah my poor Princes! ah my tender Babes!
 My unblown Flowers, new appearing sweets:
 If yet your gentle souls flye in the Aire,
 And be not fixt in doom perpetual,
 Hover about me with your airy wings,
 And hear your mothers Lamentation.

Mar. Hover about her, say that right for right
 Hath dim'd your Infant morn, to Aged night.

Dut. So many miseries have craz'd my voyce,
 That my woe-wearied tongue is still and mute.

Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?

Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet,
Edward for Edward, payes a dying debt.

Qu. Wilt thou, O God flye from such gentle Lambs,
 And throw them in the intrails of the Wolf?

Why didst thou sleep, when such a deed was done?

Mar. When holy Henry died, and my sweet Son.

Dut. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal living ghost,
 Woes Scene, Worlds shame, Graves due, by life usurpt,
 Brief abstract and record of tedious dayes,
 Rest thy unrest on Englands lawfull earth,
 Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood.

Qu. Ah that thou would'st as soon afford a Grave,
 As thou canst yield a melancholly seat:

Then would I hide my bones, not rest them here,
 Ah who hath any cause to mourn but we?

Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverent,
 Give mine the benefit of signeury,
 And let my griefs frown on the upper hand
 If sorrow can admit Society.

I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him:

I had a Husband, till a Richard kill'd him:

Thou had'st an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him:

Thou had'st a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

Dut. I had a Richard too, and thou did'st kill him;
 I had a Rutland too, thou help'st to kill him.

Mar. Thou had'st a Clarence too,
 And Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept

A Hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death:

That Dog, that had his teeth before his eyes,

To worry Lambs, and lap their gentle blood:

That foul defacer of Gods handy work:

That reigns in gauled eyes of weeping souls:

That excellent grand Tyrant of the earth,

Thy womb let loose to chase us to our graves.

O upright, just, and true disposing God,

How do I thank thee, that this carnal Cur

Preyes.

Preys on the issue of his mothers body,
And makes her Pue-fellow with others mone.

Dut. Oh Harries wife, triumph not in my woes:
God witnesse with me, I have wept for thine.

Mar. Bear with me: I am hungry for revenge,
And now I cloy me with beholding it.

Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward.
The other Edward dead, to quit my Edward:

Young York, he is but hoot, because both they Match'd not the high perfection of my losse.

Thy Clarence he is dead, that stab'd my Edward,
And the beholders of this frantick play,

Th'adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan, Gray,
Untimely smother'd in their dusky Graves.

Richard yet livss, Hells black Intelligencer,
Onely reserv'd their Factor, to buy souls,

And send then hither: But at hand, at hand
Insues his pittious and unpittied end.

Earth gapes, Hell burns, Fiends roar, Saints pray,
To have him suddenly convey'd from hence:

Cancell his bond of life, dear God, I pray,
That I may live and say, The Dog is dead.

Qu. O thou did'st prophesie, the time would come,
That I should wish for thee to help me curse
That bottel'd Spider, that foul bunch-back'd Toad.

Mar. I call'd thee then, vain flourish of my fortune:
I call'd thee then, poor Shadow, painted Queen,

The representation of but what I was;

The flattering Index of a direfull Pageant,
One heav'd a high, to be hurl'd down below:

A mother onely mockt with two fair Babes;
A dream of what thou wast, a garish Flag

To be the aim of every dangerous Shot;

A sign of Dignity, a Breath, a Bubble:

A Queen in-least, only to fill the Scene.

Where is thy Husband now? Where be thy Brothers?

Where be thy two Sons? Wherein dost thou Joy?

Who sues, and kneels, and saies, God save the Queen?

Where be the bending Peers that flattered thee?

Where be the thronging Troops that followed thee?

Decline all this, and see now what thou art.

For happy Wife, a most distressed Widow:

For joyfull Mother, one that wails the name:

For one being sued to, one that humbly sues:

For Queen a very Caytiffe, crown'd with care:

For she that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me:

For she being feared of all, now fearing one:

For she commanding all, obey'd of none.

Thus hath the course of Justice whirl'd about,

And left thee but a very prey to time,

Having no more but Thought of what thou wast.

To torture thee the more, being what thou art,

Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not

Usurp the just proportion of my Sorrow?

Now thy proud Neck, bears half my burthen'd yoke,

From which, even here I slip my wearied head,

And leave the burthen of it all, on thee.

Farewell Yorks wife, and Queen of sad mischance,

These English woes, shall make me smile in France.

Qu. O thou well skill'd in Curses, stay a while,
And teach me how to curse mine enemies.

Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast the day:
Compare dead happinesse, with living woe:

Think that thy Babes were sweeter then they were,

And he that slew them fouler then he is:

Bett'ring thy losse, makes the bad causer worse,

Revolving this, will teach thee how to Curse.

Qu. My words are dull, O quicken them with thine.

Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp,
And pierce like mine. Exit Margaret.

Dut. Why should calamity be full of words?

Qu. Windy Attornies to their Clients Woes,

Aiery succeders of intestine joyes,

Poor breathing Orators of miseries,

Let them have scope, though what they will impart,

Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart.

Dut. If so then, be not Tongue-ty'd: go with me,

And in the breath of bitter words, let's smother

My damhed Son, that thy two sweet Sons smother'd.

The Trumpet sounds, be copious in exclains.

Enter King Richard, and his Train.

Rich. Who intercepts me in my Expedition?

Dut. O she, that might have intercepted thee

By strangling thee in her accursed womb,

From all the slaughters (Wretch) that thou hast done.

Qu. Hid'st thou that Forhead with a Golden Crown

Where't should be branded, if that right were right?

The slaughter of the Prince that ow'd that Crown,

And the dyre death of my poor Sons and Brothers.

Tell me, thou Villain-slave, where are my Children?

Dut. Thou Toad, thou Toad,

Where is thy Brother Clarence?

And little Ned Plantagenet his Son?

Qu. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Gray?

Dut. Where is kind Hastings?

Rich. A flourish Trumpets, strike Alarum Drums:

Let not the Heavens hear these Tell-tale women.

Rail on the Lords Anointed. Strike I say.

Flourish

Alarums.

Either be patient, and intreat me fair,

Or with the clamorous reports of War,

Thus will I drown your exclamations.

Dut. Art thou my Son?

Rich. I, I thank God, my Father, and your self.

Dut. Then patiently hear my impatience.

Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,
That cannot brook the accent of reproof.

Dut. O let me speak.

Rich. Do then, but I'll not hear.

Dut. I will be mild, and gentle in my words.

Rich. And brief; good Mother) for I am in hast.

Dut. Art thou so hasty? I have staid for thee
(God knows) in torment and in agony.

Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you?

Dut. No by the holy Rood, thou know'st it well,
Thou cam'st on earth, to make the earth my Hell.

A grievous burthen was thy Birth to me,

Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy.

Thy School-dayes frightfull, desp'rate, wild, and furious,

Thy prime of Man-hood, daring, bold, and venturous:

Thy Age confirm'd, proud, subtle, slye, and bloody,

More mild, but yet more harmfull, Kind in hatred:

What comfortable hour canst thou name,

That ever grac'd me with thy company?

Rich. Faith none, but Humfrey Hower,

That call'd your Grace

To breakfast once, forth of my company.

If I be so disgraciös in your eye,

Let me march on, and not offend you Madam.

Strike up the Drum.

Dut. I prethee hear me speak.

Rich.

Rich. You speak too bitterly.

Duc. Hear me a word:

For I shall never speak to thee again.

Rich. So.

Duc. Either thou wilt die by Gods just ordinance
Ere from this warre thou turn a Conqueror:

Or I with grief and extreame age shall perish,
And never more behold thy face again.

Therefore take with thee my most grievous Curse,
Which in the day of Bartell tyre thee more

Then all the compleat Armour that thou wear'st.

My Prayers on the adverse Party fight,

And there the little soules of Edwards Children,

Whisper the Spirits of thine Enemies,

And promise them Successe and Victory:

Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end:

Shame serves thy life, and doth thy death attend. Exit.

Quee. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to Abides in me, I say Amen to her. (curse)

Rich. Stay, Madam, I must talk a word with you.

Quee. I have no more Sons of the Royall blood
For thee to slaughter. For my Daughters (Richard)
They shall be praying Nunnes, not weeping Queens:
And therefore leuell not to hit their lives.

Rich. You have a Daughter call'd Elizabeth,
Virtuous and Fair, Royall and Gracious.

Quee. And must she dye for this? O let her live,

And I'll corrupt her Manners, stain her Beauty,

Slander my self, as false to Edwards bed:

Throw over her the vaile of infamy,

So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,

I will confesse she was not Edwards Daughter.

Rich. Wrong not her Birth, she is a Royall Princess:

Quee. To save her life, I'll say she is not so.

Rich. Her life is safest onely in her Birth.

Quee. And onely in that safety di'd her Brothers.

Rich. Lo, at their Birth good starres were opposite.

Quee. No, to their lives ill friends were contrary.

Rich. All unavoided is the doom of Destiny.

Quee. True: when avoided Grace makes Destiny.

My Babes were destin'd to a fairer death,

If Grace had blest thee with a fairer life.

Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my Cousins?

Quee. Cousins indeed, and by their Uncle cozen'd,

Of Comfort, Kingdome, Kindred, Freedom, Life,

Whose hands soever lanch'd their tender hearts,

Thy head (all indirectly) gave direction.

No doubt the murd'rous Knife was dull and blunt,

Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart;

To revell in the intrailles of my Lambs.

But that still use of grief, makes wilde grief tame,

My tongue should to thy eares not name my Boyes,

Till that my Nails were anchor'd in thine eyes:

And I in such a desp'rate Bay of death,

Like a poor Bark, of sailes and tackling rest,

Rush all to pieces on thy Rocky bosome.

Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprize,

And dangerous successe of bloody warres,

As I intend more good to you and yours,

Then ever you and yours by me were harm'd.

Quee. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,

To be discovered, that can do me good?

Rich. Th'advancement of your Children, gentle Lady.

Quee. Up to some Scaffold, there to lose their heads.

Rich. Unto the dignity and height of fortune,

The high Imperiall Type of this earths glory.

Quee. Flatter my sorrow with report of it:

Tell me, what state, what dignity, what honour

Canst thou devise to any Childe of mine.

Rich. Even all I have; I, and my self and all,

Will I withall endow a Child of thine:

So in the Lethe of thy angry soule,

Thou drown the sad remembrance of those wrongs,

Which thou suppos'est I have done to thee.

Quee. Be brief, least that the proccess of thy kindnesse
Last longer telling then thy kindnesse date.

Rich. Then know,

That from my Soule I love thy Daughter.

Quee. My Daughters Mother thinks it with her Soule.

Rich. What doe you think?

Qu. That thou dost love my Daughter from thy Soule,

So from thy Soules love didst thou love her Brothers,

And from thy hearts love, I do thank thee for it.

Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning:

I mean that with my soule I love thy Daughter,

And doe intend to make her Queen of England.

Qu. Well then, who dost thou mean shall be her King.

Rich. Even he that makes her Queen.

Who else should be?

Quee. What, thou?

Rich. Even so: how think you of it?

Quee. How canst thou wooe her?

Rich. That I would learn of you,

As one being best acquainted with her humour.

Quee. And wilt thou learn of me?

Rich. Madam, with all my heart.

Quee. Send to her by the man that slew her Brothers,

A pair of bleeding hearts: thereon engrave

Edward and York, then haply will she weep:

Therefore present to her, as sometime Margaret:

Did to thy Father, steep't in Rutlands blood,

A Hand-kerchiffe, which say to her did drain

The purple sappe from her sweet Brothers body,

And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withall.

If this inducement move her not to love,

Send her a Letter of thy Noble deeds:

Tell her, thou mad'st away her Uncle Clarence,

Her Uncle Rivers; I, (and for her sake)

Rich. You mock me, Madam, this is not the way

To win your Daughter.

Quee. There is no other way,

Unlesse thou could'st put on some other shape,

And not be Richard, that hath done all this.

Rich. Say that I did all this for love of her.

Qu. Nay then indeed she cannot choose but hate thee,

Having bought love with such a bloody spoyle.

Rich. Look what is done, cannot be now amended:

Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes,

Which after-houres gives leisure to repent.

If I did take the Kingdome from your Sons,

To make amends, I'll give it to your Daughter:

If I have kill'd the issue of your wombe,

To quicken your encrease, I will beget

Mine issue of your blood, upon your Daughter:

A Grandams name is little lesse in love,

Then is the doting Title of a Mother;

They are as Children but one step below,

Even of your mettle, of your very blood:

Of all one pain, save for a night of groans

Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like sorrow.

Your Children were vexation to your youth,

But mine shall be a comfort to your Age,
The losse you have, is but a Son being King,
And by that losse, your Daughter is made Queen.
I cannot make you what amends I would,
Therefore accept such kindnesse as I can.

Dorset your Son, that with a fearfull soule,
Leads discontented Steps in forreign soyle,
This fair Alliance, quickly shall call home
To high Promotions, and great Dignity.
The King that calls your beauctious Daughter Wife,
Familiarly shall call thy Dorset Brother:
Again shall you be Mother to a King:
And all the Ruines of distressefull times,
Repair'd with double riches of Content.

What? we have many goodly dayes to see:
The liquid drops of teares that you have shed,
Shall come again, transform'd to Orient Pearle,
Advantaging their Love, with interest
Often-times double gain of happinesse.
Go then (my Mother) to thy Daughter, go,
Make bold her bashfull yeares, with your experience,
Prepare her eares to hear a Wooers tale.

Put in her tender heart, th'aspiring flame
Of golden Sovereignty: Acquaint the Princeesse
With the sweet silent houres of Marriage joyes;
And when this Arme of mine hath chastised
The petty Rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham,
Bound with triumphant Garlands will I come,
And lead thy Daughter to a Conquerors bed:
To whom I will retails my Conquest won,
And she shall be sole Victoreesse, Casars Cesar.

Quee. What were I best to say, her Fathers Brother
Would be her Lord? or shall I say her Uncle?
Or he that slew her Brothers? and her Unckles?
Under what Title shall I wooe for thee,
That God, the Law, my Honour, and her Love,
Can make seem pleasing to her tender yeares?

Rich. Inferre fair Englands peace by this Alliance.

Qu. which she shall purchase with still lasting warre.

Rich. Tell her, the King that may command, intreats.

Qu. That at her hands, which the Kings King forbids.

Rich. Say she shall be a high and mighty Queene.

Qu. To waile the Title, as her Mother doth.

Rich. Say I will love her everlastingly.

Qu. But how long, shall that title ever last?

Rich. Sweetly in force, unto her fair lives end.

Qu. But how long fairly shall her sweet life last?

Rich. As long as Heaven and Nature lengthens it.

Qu. As long as hell and Richard likes of it.

Rich. Say, I her Sovereign, am her Subject low.

Qu. But she your Subject loathes such Sovereignty.

Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her.

Qu. An honest tale speeds best, being plainly told.

Rich. Then plainly to her, tell my loving tale.

Qu. Plain and not honest, is too harsh a style.

Rich. Your Reasons are too shallow, and too quick.

Qu. O no, my Reasons are too deep and dead,
Too deep and dead (poor Infants) in their graves,
Harp on it still shall I, till heart-strings break.

Rich. Harp not on that string, Madam, that is past.
Now by my George, my Garter, and my Crown.

Qu. Profan'd, dishonour'd, and the third usurpt.

Rich. I swear.

Qu. By nothing, for this is no Oath:
Thy George profan'd, hath lost his Lordly honour;
Thy Garter blenish'd, pawn'd his Kingly Virtue;

Thy Crown usurpt, disgrac'd his Kingly Glory:
If something thou would'st swear to be believ'd,
Swear then by something that thou hast not wrong'd.

Rich. Then by my self.

Qu. Thy self, is self-misus'd.

Rich. Now by the World.

Qu. 'Tis full of thy foule wrongs.

Rich. My Fathers death.

Qu. Thy life hath it dishonour'd.

Rich. Why then, by Heaven.

Qu. Heavens wrong is most of all:

If thou didst fear to break an Oath with him,
The unity the King my Husband made,
Thou hadst not broken, nor my Brothers di'd,
If thou hadst fear'd to break an Oath by him,
Th'Imperiall Mettall, circling now thy head,
Had grac'd the tender Temples of my Child,
And both the Princes had been breathing here,
Which now two tender Bed-fellows for dust,
Thy broken Faith hath made the prey for Wormes.
What canst thou swear by now?

Rich. The time to come.

Qu. That thou hast wronged in the time o're-past:
For I my self have many teares to wash
Hereafter time, for time past wrong'd by thee.
The Children live, whose Fathers thou hast slaughter'd,
Ungovern'd youth, to waile it with their age:
The Parents live, whose Children thou hast butcher'd,
Old barren Plants, to waile it with their age.
Swear not by time to come, for that thou hast
Misus'd ere us'd, by times ill-us'd repast.

Rich. As I intend to prosper, and repent:
So thrive I in my dangerous Affaires
Of hostile Armes: My self, my self confound:
Heaven, and Fortune barre me happy houres:
Day, yield me not thy light? nor Night, thy rest.
Be opposite all Planets of good luck
To my proceeding, if with dear hearts love,
Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beauctious Princely Daughter.
In her consists my happinesse and thine:
Without her follows to my self and thee,
Her self, the Land, and many a Christian foule,
Death, Desolation, Ruine, and Decay:
It cannot be avoided, but by this:

It will not be avoided, but by this.

Therefore dear Mother (I must call you so)

Be the Attorney of my love to her:

Plead what I will be, not what I have been;

Not my deserts, but what I will deserve:

Urge the necessity and state of times,

And be not peevish found in great Designs.

Qu. Shall I be tempted of the Devil thus?

Rich. I, if the Devil tempt you to doe good.

Qu. Shall I forget my self to be my self?

Rich. I, if your selfs remembrance wrong your self.

Quee. Yet thou didst kill my Children.

Rich. But in your Daughters womb I bury them.
Where in that Nest of Spicery they will breed
Selves of themselves, to your recomforture.

Qu. Shall I go win my Daughter to thy will?

Rich. And be a happy Mother by the deed.

Qu. I go, write to me very shortly,
And you shall understand from me her mind. Exit Qu.

Rich. Bear her my true loves kisse, and so farewell.
Relenting Foole, and shallow-changing Woman.

How now, what newes ?

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. Most mighty Sovereign, on the Western Coast
rideth a puissant Navy : to our Shores
Throng many doubtfull hollow-hearted friends,
Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back,
'Tis thought, that Richmond is their Admirall :
And there they hull, expecting but the aid
of Buckingham, to welcome them ashore,

Ric. Some light-foot friend post to the Duke of Nor-Ratcliffe, thy self, or Catesby, where is he ? (folk,

Cat. Here, my good Lord.

Rich. Catesby, flye to the Duke.

Cat. I will, my Lord, with all convenient haste,

Rich. Catesby, come hither, post to Salisbury.

When thou com'st thither : Dull unimindfull Villain.

Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the Duke ?

Cat. First, mighty Liege, tell me your highnes pleasure,
What from your Grace I shall deliver to him.

Rich. O true, good Catesby, bid him levy straight
The greatest strength and power that he can make,
And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.

Cat. I go.

Exit.

Rat. What, may it please you, shall I doe at Salisbury.

Rich. Why, what would'st thou doe there before I go ?

Rat. Your Highnesse told me I should poste before.

Rich. My minde is chang'd :

Enter Lord Stanley.

Stanley, what newes with you ?

Sta. None, good my Liege, to please you with the hear-
Nor none so bad, but well may be reported. (ing,

Rich. Hoyday, a Riddle, neither good nor bad :

What need'st thou run so many miles about,

When thou may'st tell thy tale the nearest way ?

Once more, what newes ?

Stan. Richmond is on the Seas.

Rich. There let him sink, and be the Seas on him,
White-liver'd Run-a-gate, what doth he there ?

Stan. I know not, mighty Sovereign, but by guesse.

Rich. Well, as you guesse.

Stan. Stirr'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton.
He makes for England, here to claim the Crown.

Rich. Is the Chayre empty ? is the Sword unsway'd ?
Is the King dead ? the Empire unpossest ?

What heir of York is there alive, but we ?

And who is Englands King, but great York's heir ?

Then tell me, what makes he upon the Seas ?

Stan. Unlesse for that, my Liege, I cannot guesse.

Rich. Unlesse for that he comes to be your Liege,
You cannot guesse wherefore the Welch-man comes.

Thou wilt revolt, and flye to him, I fear.

Stan. No, my good Lord, therefore mistrust me not.

Rich. Where is thy power then to beat him back ?

Where be thy Tenants, and thy followers ?

Are they not now upon the Western shore,

Safe-conducting the Rebels from their Ships ?

Stanley. No, my good Lord, my friends are in the North.

Rich. Cold friends to me : what do they in the North,
When they should serve their Sovereign in the West ?

Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty King,
Pleaseth your Majesty to give me leave,
I'll muster up my friends, and meet your Grace,
Where, and what time your Majesty shall please.

Rich. I, thou would'st be gone, to joyn with Richmond :
But I'll not trust thee.

Stan. Most mighty Sovereign,
You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtfull,
I never was, nor never will be false.

Rich. Go then, and muster men : but leave behind
Your Son George Stanley : look your heart be firm,
Or else his heads assurance is but fraile.

Stan. So deale with him as I prove true to you.

Exit Stanley.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious Sovereign, now in Devon-shire,
As I by friends am well advertised,
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty Prelate,
Bishop of Exeter, his elder Brother,
With many more Confederates are in Armes.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. In Kent, my Liege, the Guilfords are in Armes,
And every hour more Competitors
Flock to the Rebels, and their power growes strong.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My Lord, the Army of great Buckingham.

Rich. Out on ye, Owles, nothing but Songs of Death.
He striketh him.

There, take thou that, till thou bring better newes,

Mess. The newes I have to tell your Majesty,
Is, that by sudden Floods, and fall of Waters,
Buckingham's Army is dispers'd and scatter'd,
And he himself wandred away alone,
No man knows whether.

Rich. I cry thee mercy ;

There is my Purse, to cure that blow of thine.

Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd

Reward to him that brings the Traytor in ?

Mess. Such Proclamation hath been made, my Lord.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. Sir Thomas Lovell, and Lord Marquesse Dorset,
'Tis said, my Liege, in York-shire are in Armes:
But this good comfort bring I to your Highnesse,
The Britain Navy is dispers'd by Tempest.
Richmond in Dorset-shire sent out a Boat
Unto the shore, to aske those on the Banks,
If they were his Assistants, yea, or no ?
Who answer'd him, they came from Buckingham,
Upon his party : he mistrusting them,
Hoy'd faile, and made his courie again for Britain.

Rich. March on, march on, since we are up in Armes,
If not to fight with Forreign Enemies,
Yet to beat down these Rebels here at home.

Enter Catesby.

Cat. My Liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken,
That is the best newes, that the Earl of Richmond

Is with a mighty power Landed at Milford,
Is colder newes, but yet they must be told.

Rich. Away towards Salisbury while we reason here,
A Royall Battell might be won and lost :
Some one take order Buckingham be brought
To Salisbury, the rest march on with me. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Derby, and Sir Christopher.

Der. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me,
That in the fye of the most deadly Boar,
My Son George Stanley is frankt up in hold :
If I revolt, off goes young George's head,
The fear of that holds off my present aide.
So get thee gone : commend me to thy Lord.
Withall say, that the Queen hath heartily consented
He should espouse Elizabeth her Daughter.

But tell me, where is Princely Richmond now ?

Chri. At Penbrook, or at Heriford West in Wales.

Der. What men of Name resort to him.

Chri. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned Souldier,
Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley,
Oxford, redoubted Penbrook, Sir James Blunt,
And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant Crew,
And many other of great name and worth :
And towards London do they bend their power,
If by the way they be not fought withall.

Der. Well hie thee to thy Lord : I kisse his hand,
My Letter will resolve him of my mind.
Farewell. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Buckingham with Halberds, led to Execution.

Buc. Will not King Richard let me speak with him ?

Sher. No, my good Lord, therefore be patient.

Buc. Hastings, and Edwards Children, Gray & Rivers,
Holy King Henry, and thy fair Son Edward,
Vaughan, and all that have miscarried
By under-hand corrupted foul injustice,
If that your moody discontented soules,
Do through the Clouds behold this present hour,
Even for revenge mock my destruction.
This is All-Soules Day (Fellow) is it not ?

Sher. It is.

Buc. Why then All Soules Day, is my bodies dooms-
This is the Day, which in King Edwards time (day)
I wisht might fall on me, when I was found
False to his Children, and his Wives Allies.
This is the day, wherein I wisht to fall
By the false Faith of him whom most I trusted.
This, this All-soules Day to my fearfull Soule,
Is the determin'd respice of my wrongs :
That high All-feer, which I dallied with,

Hath turn'd my feigned Prayer on my head,
And given in earnest, what I begg'd in jest.
Thus doth he force the Swords of wicked men
To turn their own points in their Masters bosomes.
Thus Margarets curse falls heavy on my neck :
When he (quoth she) will split thy heart with sorrow,
Remember Margaret was a Prophetesse :
Come lead me Officers to the Block of shame,
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame.
Exeunt Buckingham with Officers.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Richmond, Oxford, Blunt, Herbert, and others, with Drum and Colours.

Richm. Fellows in Armes, and my most loving Friends,
Bruis'd underneath the yoke of Tyranny,
Thus farre into the bowels of the Land,
Have we marcht on without impediment ;
And here receive we from our Father Stanley
Lines of fair comfort and encouragement :
The wretched, bloody, and usurping Boar,
(That spoyl'd your Summer-Fields, and Fruitfull Vines)
Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough
In your embowell'd bosomes : This foule Swine
Is now even in the Center of this Isle,
Near to the Town of Leicester, as we learn :
From Tamworth thither, is but one dayes march.
In Gods name cheerely on, couragious Friends,
To reap the Harvest of perpetuall peace,
By this one bloody tryall of sharp Warre.

Oxf. Every mans Conscience is a thousand men,
To fight against this guilty Homicide.

Her. I doubt not but his Friends will turn to us,

Blun. He hath no friends, but what are friends for fear,
Which in his dearest need will flye from him.

Rich. All for our vantage, then in Gods name march,
True hope is swift, and flyes with Swallows wings,
Kings it makes Gods, and meaner creatures Kings
Exeunt omnes.

Enter King Richard in Armes, with Norfolk, Ratcliffe, and the Earl of Surrey.

Rich. Here pitch our Tent, even here in Bosworth
My Lord of Surrey, why look you so sad ? (field ;

Sar. My heart is ten times lighter then my looks.

Rich. My Lord of Norfolk.

Nor. Here, most gracious Liege.

Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks :

Ha, must we not ?

Nor. We must both give and take my loving Lord.

Rich. Up with my Tent, here will I lie to night,
But where to morrow ? well, all's one for that.
Who hath descried the number of the Traytors ?

Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power.

Rich. Why our Battalia trebble that account :
Besides, the Kings name is a Tower of strength,
Which they upon the adverse Faction want.
Up with the Tent : Come Noble Gentlemen,
Let us survey the vantage of the ground.
Call for some men of sound direction :

Let's

Let's lack no Discipline, make no delay,
For, Lords, to morrow is a busie day.

Exeunt.

Enter Richmond, Sir William Brandon, Oxford, and Dorset.

Richm. The weary Sun hath made a Golden set,
And by the bright Tract of his fiery Carre,
Gives token of a goodly day to morrow.

Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my Standard:

Give me some Ink and Paper in my Tent:

I'll draw the Form and Modell of our Battell,

Limit each Leader to his severall Charge,

And part in just proportion our small Power.

My Lord of Oxford, you Sir William Brandon,

And you Sir Walter Herbert stay with me:

The Earl of Pembrook keeps his Regiment;

Good Captain Blunt, bear my good night to him,

And by the second hour in the Morning,

Desire the Earl to see me in my Tent:

Yet one thing more (good Captain) doe for me:

Where is Lord Stanley Quarter'd, doe you know?

Blunt. Unlesse I have mistane his Colours much,

(Which well I am assur'd I have not done)

His Regiment lies half a Mile at least

South, from the mighty power of the King.

Rich. If without perill it be possible,

Sweet Blunt, make some good means to speak with him,

And give him from me, this most needfull Note.

Blunt. Vpon my self, my Lord, I'll undertake it,

And so God give you quiet rest to night.

Rich. Good night, good Captain Blunt:

Come Gentlemen,

Let us consult upon to morrows Businesse;

Into my Tent, the Dew is raw and cold.

They withdraw into the Tent.

Enter Richard, Ratcliffe, Norfolk, and Catesby.

Rich. What is't a Clock?

Cat. It's Supper time, my Lord, it's nine a Clock.

King. I will not sup to night,

Give me some Ink and Paper:

What, is my Beaver easier then it was?

And all my Armour laid into my Tent?

Cat. It is, my Liege: and all things are in readinesse.

Rich. Good Norfolk hie thee to thy charge,

Use carefull Watch, chuse trusty Centinells.

Nor. I go, my Lord.

Rich. Stir with the Larke to morrow, gentle Norfolk.

Nor. I warrant you, my Lord.

Exit.

Rich. Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord.

Rich. Send out a Pursuivant at Armes

To Stanley's Regiment: bid him bring his power

Before Sun-rising, least his Son George fall

Into the blind Cave of eternall night.

Fill me a Bowle of Wine: give me a Watch:

Saddle white Surrey for the field to morrow:

Look that my staves be sound, & not too heavy. Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord.

Rich. Saw'st the melancholly Lord Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the Earl of Surrey, and himself,

Much about Cock shut time, from Troop to Troop

Went through the Army, cheering up the Souldiers.

King. So, I am satisfied: give me a Bowle of Wine,

I have not that alacrity of Spirit,

Nor cheer of Mind, that I was wont to have.

Set it down. Is Ink an Paper ready?

Rat. It is my Lord.

Rich. Bid my Guard watch. Leave me.

Ratcliffe, about the mid of night come to my Tent

And helpe to Arme. Leave me I say.

Exit Ratcliffe.

Enter Derby to Richmond in his Tent.

Derb. Fortune and Victory sit on thy Helme.

Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford,

Be to thy person, noble Father-in-law.

Tell me, how fares our Noble Mother?

Der. I, by Attourney, blesse thee from thy Mother,

Who prayes continually for Richmond's good:

So much for that. The silent houres steale on,

And flaky darknesse breaks within the East.

In brief, for so the season bids us be,

Prepare thy Battell early in the morning,

And put thy Fortune to th' Arbitrement

Of bloody stroaks, and mortall staring Warre:

I, as I may, that which I would, I cannot,

With best advantage will deceive the time,

And aide thee in this doubtfull shock of Armes.

But on thy side I may not be too forward,

Least being seen, thy Brother, tender George,

Be executed in his Fathers sight.

Farewell: the leisure, and the fearfull time

Cuts off the ceremonious Vows of Love,

And ample enterchange of sweet Discourse;

Which so long sundred Friends should dwell upon:

God give us leisure for these rites of Love.

Once more adieu, be valiant, and speed well.

Richm. Good Lords conduct him to his Regiment:

I'll strive with troubled noyse, to take a Nap.

Least leaden slumber poize me down to morrow,

When I should mount with wings of Victory:

Once more, good night kind Lords and Gentlemen.

Exeunt. Manet Richmond.

O thou, whose Captain I account my self,

Look on my Forces with a gracious Eye:

Put in their hands thy bruising Irons of wrath,

That they may crush down with a heavy fall,

Th' usurping Helms of our Adversaries:

Make us thy Ministers of Chastisement,

That we may praise thee in thy Victory:

To see thee I doe commend my watchfull soule,

Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes:

Sleeping, and waking, oh defend me still.

Sleeps.

Enter the Ghost of Prince Edward, Son to

Henry the Sixth.

Gh. to Ri. Let me sit heavy on thy soule to morrow:

Think how thou stabb'st me in the prime of youth,

At Tewksbury; despaire therefore, and die.

Ghost to Richm. Be cheerfull, Richmond,

For the wronged soules

Of Butcher'd Princes, fight in thy behalf:

King Henry's issue, Richmond comforts thee.

Enter the Ghost of Henry the sixth.

Ghost. When I was mortall, my Anointed body

By thee was punched full of holes;

Think on the Tower, and me: Despaire, and die.

Henry the sixth, bids thee despaire, and die.

To Richm. Virtuous and holy, be thou Conqueror:

Harry that prophesied thou should'st be King,

Doth comfort thee in sleep: live, and flourish.

Y y 3

Enter

Enter the Ghost of Clarence.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy in thy soule to morrow,
I that was wash'd to death in Fulsome Wine:
Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death:
To morrow in the Battell think on me,
And fall thy edgelesse Sword, despaire and dye.

To Richm. Thou off-spring of the House of Lancaster,
The wronged heires of York doe pray for thee,
Good Angels guard thy Battell, live and flourish.

Enter the Ghosts of Rivers, Gray, and Vaughan.

Riv. Let me sit heavy in thy soule to morrow,
Rivers, that di'd at Pomfret: despaire, and die.

Grey. Think upon Grey, and let thy soule despaire.

Vaugh. Think upon Vaughan, and with guilty fear
Let fall thy Lance, despair and die.

All to Richm. Awake.

And think our wrongs in Richard's Bosome,
Will conquer. Awake and win the day.

Enter the Ghost of Lord Hastings.

Ghost. Bloody and guilty: guilty awake,
And in a bloody Battell end thy dayes.
Think on Lord Hastings; despair, and die.

Hast. To Richm. Quiet untroubled soul,
Awake, awake:
Arise, fight, and conquer, for fair Englands sake.

Enter the Ghosts of the two young Princes.

Ghosts. Dream on thy Cousins
Smothered in the Tower:
Let us be laid within thy bosome Richard,
And weigh the down to ruine, shame, and death.
Thy Nephews soul bids thee despair and die.

Ghosts to Richm. Sleep Richmond,
Sleep in peace, and wake in joy,
Good Angels guard thee from the Boares annoy,
Live, and beget a happy race of Kings.
Edward's unhappy Sons, doe bid thee flourish:

Enter the Ghost of Anne his Wife.

Ghost to Rich. Richard, thy Wife,
That wretched Anne thy Wife,
That never slept a quiet hour with thee,
Now fills thy sleep with perturbations,
To morrow in the Battell think on me,
And fall thy edgelesse Sword, despaire and dye.

Ghost to Richm. Thou quiet soule,
Sleep thou a quiet sleep:
Dream of successe, and happy victory,
Thy Adversaries Wife doth pray for thee.

Enter the Ghost of Buckingham.

Ghost to Rich. The first was I
That help'd thee to the Crown:
The last was I that felt thy Tyranny.
O, in the Battell think on Buckingham,
And dye in terror of thy guiltinesse.
Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death,
Fainting despaire; despairing yield thy breath,

Ghost to Richm. I di'd for hope
Ere I could lend thee aide;
But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd:
God, and good Angels fight on Richmond's side,
And Richard fall in height of all his pride.

Richard starts out of his dreame.

Rich. Give me another Horse, bind up my Wounds:
Have mercy Jesu. Soft, I did but dreame.
O coward Conscience! how dost thou afflict me?
The Lights burn blew. It is not dead midnight,

Cold fearfull drops stand on my trembling flesh:
What? doe I fear my self? There's none else by,
Richard loves Richard, that is, I am I.
Is there a Murtherer here? No; Yes, I am:
Then flye? what from my self? Great reason: why?
Left I revenge. What? my self upon my self?
Alack, I love my self. Wherefore? For any good
That I my self, have done upon my self?
O no. Alas, I rather hate my self,
For hatefull Deeds committed by my self.
I am a Villain: yet I Lye, I am not.
Fool, of thy self speak well: Fool, do not flatter.
My Conscience hath a thousand severall Tongues,
And every tongue brings in a severall tale,
And every tale condemns me for a Villain;
Perjury, in the high'st Degree,
Murther, stern murther, in the dy'r'st degree,
All severall sins, all us'd in each degree,
Throng all to th' Barre, crying all, Guilty, Guilty,
I shall despair, there is no Creatures loves me;
And if I die, no soul shall pittie me.
Nay, wherefore should they? since that I my self,
Finde in my self, no pittie to my self.
Me thought, the soules of all that I had murther'd
Came to my Tent, every one did threat
To morrows vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord.

King. Who's there?

Rat. Ratcliffe my Lord, 'tis I: the early Village Cock
Hath twice done salutation to the Morn,
Your friends are up, and buckle on their Armour.

King. O Ratcliffe, I fear, I fear.

Rat. Nay, good my Lord, be not afraid of shadows.

King. By the Apostle Paul, shadows to night
Have stroke more terrour to the soule of Richard,
Then can the substance of ten thousand Souldiers
Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond.

'Tis not yet near day. Come go with me,
Under our Tents; I'll play the Ease-dropper,
To hear if any man shrink from me.

Exeunt Richard and Ratcliffe.

Enter the Lords to Richmond sitting in his Tent.

Lords. Good morrow Richmond.

Rich. Cry you mercy Lords, and watchfull Gentlemen,
That you have tane a tardy sluggard here?

Lords. How have you slept, my Lord?

Richm. The sweetest sleep,
And fairest boading Dreames,
That ever entred in a drowsie head,
Have I since your departure had my Lords.
Me thought their soules, whose bodies Richard murther'd,
Came to my Tent, and cried on Victory:
I promise you my heart is very jocond,
In the remembrance of so fair a Dream.
How farre into the Morning is it, Lords?

Lord. Upon the stroke of four.

Rich. Why then 'tis time to Arme, and give direction.

His Oration to his Souldiers.

More then I have said, loving Countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell upon: yet remember this,

God, and our good cause, fight upon our side,
The Prayers of holy Saints and wronged soules,
Like high rear'd Bulwarks, stand before our Faces,
(Richard except) those whom we fight against,
Had rather have us win, then him they follow.
For, what is he they follow? Truly Gentlemen,
A bloody Tyrant, and a Homicide:
One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd;
One that made means to come by what he hath,
And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him:
A base foule Stone, made precious by the soyle
Of Englands Chayre, where he is falsly set:
One that hath ever been Gods Enemy.
Then if you fight against Gods Enemy,
God will in justice ward you as his Souldiers.
If you do swear to put a Tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the Tyrant being slain:
If you do fight against your Countreys Foes,
Your Countreys Far shall pay your pains the hire.
If you doe fight in safeguard of your Wives,
Your Wives shall welcome home the Conquerors.
If you doe free your Children from the Sword,
Your Childrens Children quits it in your Age.
Then in the name of God and all these rights,
Advance your Standards, draw your willing Swords.
For me, the ransome of my bold attempt,
Shall be this cold Corps on the Earth's cold face.
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt,
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound Drummes and Trumpets boldly, and cheerfully,
God, and Saint George, Richmond, and Victory.

Enter King Richard, Ratcliffe, and Catesby.

King. What said Northumberland, as touching Richmond?
Ratc. That he was never trained up in Armes,
King. He said the truth: and what said Surrey then?
Ratc. He smil'd and said, the better for our purpose.
King. He was in the right, and so indeed it is.
Tell the Clock there. Clock strikes.
Give me a Kalender: who saw the Sun to day?
Ratc. Not I, my Lord.
King. Then he disdains to shine: for by the Book
He should have brav'd the East an hour ago,
A black day will it be to some body. Ratcliffe.
Rat. My Lord.
King. The Sun will not be seen to day,
Thesky doth frown, and lowre upon our Army.
I would these dewy teares were from the ground.
Not shine to day? why, what is that to me
More then to Richmond? for the self-same Heaven
That frowns on me, looks sadly upon him.

Enter Norfolk.

Nor. Arme, arme, my Lord, the foes vaunts in the field.
King. Come, bustle, bustle. Caparison my Horse.
Call up Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power,
I will lead forth my Soldiers to the plain,
And thus my Battell shall be ordered.
My foreward shall be drawn in length,
Consisting equally of Horse and Foot:
Our Archers shall be placed in the midst;
John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of Surrey,
Shall have the leading of the Foot and Horse.
They thus directed, we will follow

In the main Battell, whose puissance on either side
Shall be well wing'd with our chiefeft Horse:
This, and Saint George to boot.
What think'st thou, Norfolk?

Nor. A good direction, warlike Sovereign,
This found I on my Tent this Morning.
Jocky of Norfolk, be not so bold.
For Dickon thy Master is bought and sold.

King. A thing devised by the Enemy.
Go Gentlemen, every man to his Charge,
Let not our babling Dreames affright our Soules:
For conscience is a word that Cowards use,
Devis'd at first to keep the strong in awe,
Our strong Armes be our Conscience, Swords our Law.
March on, joyn bravely, let us too't pell mell,
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.
What shall I say more then I have inferr'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withall,
A sort of Vagabonds, Rascalls, Run-awayes,
A scum of Britains, and base Lackey-Pezants,
Whom their o're-cloyed Countrey vomits forth
To desperate Adventures, and assur'd Destruction.
You sleeping safe, they bring you to unrest:
You having Lands, and blest with beautilous Wives,
They would restrain the one, distain the other.
And who doth lead them, but a paltry Fellow?
Long kept in Britain at our Mothers cost,
A Milk-sop, one that never in his life
Felt so much cold, as over shooes in Snow:
Let's whip these straglers o're the Seas again,
Lash hence these over-weening Ragges of France,
These famish'd Beggars, weary of their lives,
Who (but for dreaming on this fond exploit)
For want of means (poor Rats) had hang'd themselves.
If we be conquered, let men conquer us,
And not these bastard-Britains, whom our Fathers
Have in their own Land beaten, bob'd, and thump'd,
And on Record, left them the heires of shame.
Shall these enjoy our Lands? lie with our Wives?
Ravish our Daughters? Drumme afar off.
Heark, I hear their Drumme,
Right Gentlemen of England, fight boldly yeomen,
Draw Archers, draw your Arrowes to the head,
Spurre your proud Horses hard, and ride in blood,
Amaze the welkin with your broken staves.

Enter a Messenger.

What sayes Lord Stanley, will he bring his power?
Mes. My Lord, he doth deny to come.
Kin. Off with his Son George's head.
Nor. My Lord, the Enemy is past the Marsh
After the Battell let George Stanley die.
King. A thousand hearts are great within my bosome.
Advance our Standards, set upon our Foes,
Our ancient word of Courage, fair Saint George
Inspire us with the spleen of fiery Dragons:
Upon them, Victory sits on our helps.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter Catesby.

Cat. Rescue, my Lord of Norfolk,
Rescue, Rescue:
The King enacts more wonders then a man,
Daring an opposite to every danger:
His Horse is slain, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death:
Rescue, fair Lord, or else the day is lost.

Alarums.

Enter.

Enter Richard.Rich. A Horse, a Horse, my Kingdome for a Horse.Cat. Withdraw, my Lord, I'll help you to a Horse.

Rich. Slave, I have set my life upon a cast,
 And I will stand the hazard of the Die :
 I think there be six Richmonds in the field,
 Five have I slain to day, in stead of him.
 A Horse, a Horse, my Kingdome for a Horse.

Alarum. Enter Richard and Richmond, they fight,
Richard is slain.

Retreat, and Flourish. Enter Richmond, Derby bearing the Crown, with divers other Lords.

Richm. God and your Armes
 Be prais'd, Victorious Friends ;
 This day is ours, the bloody Dog is dead.

Der. Courageous Richmond,
 Well hast thou acquit thee : Loe ,
 Here these long usurped Royalties,
 From the dead Temples of this bloody Wretch,
 Have I pluckt off, to grace thy Browes withall.
 Wear it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say Amen to all.
 But tell me, is young George Stanley living ?

Der. He is, my Lord, and safe in Leicester Town,
 Whether (if you please) we may with-draw us.

Richm. What men of note are slain on either side ?

Der. John Duke of Norfolk, Walter Lord Ferris,
Sir Robert Brokenbury, and Sir William Brandon.

Rich. Interre their Bodies, as become their Births,
 Proclaim a Pardon to the Souldiers fled,
 That in submission will return to us,
 And then, as we have eate the Sacrament,
 We will unite the White Rose, and the Red.
 Smile heaven upon this fair Conjunction,
 That long have frown'd upon their Enmity :
 What Traitor heares me, and sayes not Amen ?
England hath long been mad, and scarr'd her self ;
 The Brother blindly shed the Brothers blood ;
 The Father rashly slaughter'd his own Son ;
 The Sons compell'd, been Butcher to the Sire :
 All this divided York and Lancaster,
 Divided, in their dire Division.
 O now let Richmond and Elizabeth,
 The true Succeeders of each Royall House,
 By Gods fair ordinance, conjoyn together :
 And let thy Heires (God if thy will be so)
 Enrich the time to come, with Smooth-fac'd Peace,
 With smiling Plenty, and fair prosperous dayes.
 Abate the edge of Traitors, Gracious Lord,
 That would reduce these bloody dayes again ,
 And make poor England weep in streames of Blood.
 Let them not live to taste this Lands encrease,
 That would with Treason, wound this fair Lands peace
 Now Civil wounds are stopp'd, Peace lives agen ;
 That she may long live here, God say, Amen. Exeunt.

F I N I S.

The Famous History of the Life of King Henry the Eighth.

The Prologue.

I Come no more to make you laugh ; Things now,
That bear a Weighty, and a Serious Brow,
Sad, high, and working, fall of State and Woe :
Such Noble Scenes, as draw the Eye to flow
We now present. Those that can Pitty, here
May (if they think it well) let fall a Tear,
The Subject will deserve it. Such as give
Their Money out of hope they may believe,
May here find Truth too. Those that come to see
Onely a show or two, and so agree,
The Play may passe : If they be still, and willing,
I'll undertake may see away their shilling
Richly in two short houres. Onely they
That come to hear a merry, bawdy Play,
A noyse of Targets : Or to see a Fellow
In a long Motley Coat, garded with Yellow,

Will be deceiv'd : For gentle Hearers, know
To rank our chosen Truth with such a show
As Fool, and Fiege is, beside forfeiting
Our own Brains, and the Opinion that we bring
To make that onely true, we now intend,
Will leave us never an understanding Friend.
Therefore, for Goodnesse sake, and as you are known
The First and Happiest Hearers of the Town,
Be sad, as we would make ye. Think ye see
The very Persons of our Noble Story,
As they were Living : Think you see them Great,
And follow'd with the generall throng, and sweat
Of thousand Friends : then, in a moment, see
How soon this Mightinesse, meets Misery.
And if you can be merry then, I'll say,
A Man may weep upon his Wedding Day.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk at one door. At the other,
the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord
Aburgavenny.

Buckingham.

Good morrow, and well met. How have ye
Since last we saw y'in France ? (done
Nor. I thank your Grace :
Healthfull, and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely Ague
Staid me a Prisoner in my Chamber, when Those Sons of Glory, those two Lights of Men
Met in the vale of Arde.

Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Arde,
I was then present, saw them salute on Horse-back,
Beheld them when they lighted, how they clung
In their Embracement, as they grew together,
Which had they,
What four Thron'd ones could have weigh'd
Such a compounded one ?

Buck. All the whole time
I was my Chambers Prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory : Men might say
Till this time Pomp was single, but now married
To one above it self. Each following day
Became the next dayes master, till the last
Made former Wonders, it's. To day the French,
All Clinquant all in Gold, like Heathens Gods
Shone down the English ; and to morrow, they Made Britain, India : Every man that stood,
Shew'd like a Mine. Their Dwarfish Pages were
As Cherubins, all gilt : the Madams too,
Not us'd to toyle, did almost sweat to bear
The Pride upon them, that their very labour
Was to them, as a Painting. Now this Maske
Was cri'd incomparable ; and th'ensuing night
Made it a fool, and Beggar. The two Kings
Equall in lustre, were now best, now worst
As presence did present them : him in Eye,
Still him in praise, and being present both,
'Twas said they saw but one, and no Discerner
Durst wag his Tongue in censure, when these Suns
(For so they phrase 'em) by their Heralds challeng'd
The Noble spirits to Armes ; they did perform

Beyond

Beyond thoughts compasse, that former fabulous Story
Being now seen, possible enough, got credit
That Bevis was beleev'd.

Buc. Oh you go farre.

Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect
In honour, honesty, the tract of ev'ry thing,
Would by a good Discourser lose some life,
Which Actions self, was tongue to.

Buc. All was Royall,
To the disposing of it nought rebell'd,
Order gave each thing view. The Office did
Distinctly his full Function: who did guide,
I mean who set the Body, and the Limbs
of this great Sport together?

Nor. As you guesse:
Once certes, that promises no Element
In such a businesse.

Buc. I pray you who, my Lord?

Nor. All this was ordered by the good Discretion
Of the right Reverend Cardinall of York.

Buc. The devil speed him: No mans Pye is freed from his ambitious finger. What had he
To do in these fierce Vanities? I wonder,
That such a Keech can with his very bulk
Take up the Rayes oth' beneficiall Sun;
And keep it from the Earth.

Nor. Surely, Sir,
There's in him stuffe, that put's him to these ends:
For being not propt by Ancestry, whose grace
Chalks Successors their way; nor call'd upon
For high feats done to th' Crown; neither Allied
To eminent Assistants; but Spider-like
Out of his self-drawing Web. O! gives us note,
The force of his own merit makes his way,
A gift that heaven gives for him, which buyes
A place next to the King.

Abur. I cannot tell
What heaven hath given him: let some Graver eye
Pierce into that, but I can see his Pride
Peep through each part of him: whence has he that,
If not from Hell? the Devil is a Niggard,
Or has given him all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.

Buc. Why the Devil,
Upon this French going out, took he upon him
(Without the privy o'th' King) r'appoint
Who should attend on him? He makes up the File
Of all the Gentry; for the most part such
To whom as great a Charge, as little Honour
He meant to lay upon; and his own Letter
The Honourable Board of Council, out
Must fetch him in, he Papers.

Abur. I do know
Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
By this, so sicken'd their Estates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.

Buc. O many
Have broke their Backs with laying Mannors on 'em
For this great Journey. What did this vanity
But minister communication of
A most poor issue.

Nor. Grievingly, I think.
The Peace between the French and us, not values
The Cost that did conclude it.

Buc. Every man,
After the hideous storm that follow'd, was

A thing inspired, and not consulting, broke
Into a generall Prophesie; That this Tempest
Dashing the Garment of this Peace, aboarded
The sudden breach on't.

Nor. Which is budded out -
For France hath flaw'd the League, and hath attach'd
Our Merchants goods at Burdeaux.

Abur. Is it therefore
Th' Ambassador is silenc'd?

Nor. Marry is't.

Abur. A proper Title of a Peace, and purchas'd
At a superfluous rate.

Buc. Why all this businesse
Our Reverend Cardinall carried.

Nor. Like it your Grace,
The State takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you, and the Cardinall. I advise you
(And take it from a heart that wishes towards your Honour, and plentiful safety) that you read
The Cardinals Malice, and his Potency
Together: To consider further, that
What his high Hatred would effect, wants not
A Minister in his Power. You know his Nature,
That he's revengefull; and I know, his Sword
Hath a sharp edge: It's long, and't may be said
It reaches farre, and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bosome up my counsell,
You'll find it wholesome, Loe, where comes that Rock
That I advise your shunning.

Enter Cardinall Wolsey, the Purse born before him, certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with Papers: the Cardinall in his passage fixeth his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdain.

Car. The Duke of Buckingham's Surveyor? Ha?
Where's his Examination?

Secr. Here, so please you.

Car. Is he in person ready?

Secr. I, an't please your Grace.

Car. Well, we shall then know more, and Buckingham shall lessen his big look.

Exeunt Cardinall and his train.

Buc. This Butchers Curre is venom'd-mouth'd, and I
Have not the power to muzzle him, therefore best
Not wake him in his slumber. A Beggars book,
Out-worths a Nobles blood.

Nor. What, are you chaf'd?
Aske God for Tem'prance, that's th' appliance onely
Which your disease requires.

Buc. I read in's looks
Matter against me, and his eye revil'd
Me as his abject object, at this instant
He bores me with some trick; He's gone to th' King:
I'll follow, and out-stare him.

Nor. Stay, my Lord,
And let your Reason with your Choller question
What 'tis you go about: to climbe steep hills
Requires slow pace at first. Anger is like
A full hot Horse, who being allow'd his way
Self-mettle tires him: Not a man in England
Can advise me like you: Be to your self,
As you would to your Friend.

Buc. I'll to the King,
And from a mouth of Honour, quite cry down

This Ipswich fellows insolence ; or proclaim.
There's difference in no persons.

Norf. Be advis'd ;
Heat not a Furnace for your foe so hot
That it doe singe your self. We may out-run
By violent swiftnesse that which we run at ;
And lose by over-running : know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor til't run o're,
In seeming to augment it, waistes it : be advis'd ;
I say again, there is no English soule
More stronger to direct you then your self :
If with with the sap of reason you would quench,
Or but allay the fire of passion.

Buc. Sir,
I am thankfull to you, and I'll go along
By your prescription : but this top-proud fellow,
Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but
From sincere motions, by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as Founts in July, when
We see each grain of gravell ; I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Norf. Say not treasonous.

Buc. To th'King I'll say't, and make my vouch as
As shore of Rock : attend. This holy Fox, (strong
Or Wolf, or both (for he is equall rav'nous
And he is subtle, and as prone to mischief,
As able to perform't) his minde, and place
Infecting one another ; yea reciprocally,
Onely to shew his pomp, as well in France,
As here at home, suggests the King our Master
To this costly Treaty : Th'enterview,
That swallowed so much treasure, and like a glasse
Did break ith' wrenching.

Norf. Faith, and so it did.

Buc. Pray give me favour, Sir : This cunning Cardinal
The Articles oth' Combination drew
As himself pleas'd : and they were ratif'd
As he cri'd, thus let it be, to as much end,
As give a Crutch to th' dead. But our Count-Cardinall
Has done this, and 'tis well : for worthy Wolsey
(Who cannot erre) he did it. Now this follows,
(Which as I take it, is a kind of Puppy
To th' old damme Treason) Charles the Emperour,
Under pretence to see the Queen his Aunt,
(For 'twas indeed his Colour, but he came
To whisper Wolsey) here makes visitation,
His feares were that the Interview betwixt
England and France, might through their anity
Breed him some prejudice ; for from this League,
Peep'd harmes that menac'd him. He privily
Deales with our Cardinall, and as I trow,
Which I doe well ; for I am sure the Emperour
Paid ere he promis'd, whereby his suit was granted
Ere it was ask'd. But when the way was made,
And pay'd with Gold : the Emperour thus desir'd,
That he would please to alter the Kings course,
And break the foresaid peace. Let the King know
(As soon he shall by me) that thus the Cardinall
Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry
To hear this of him ; and could wish he were Something mistaken in't.

Buck. No, not a syllable :
I doe pronunce him in that very shape
He shall appear in proof.

Enter Brandon, a Serjeant at Armes before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Brandon. Your Office Serjeant : execute it.

Serjeant. Sir,
My Lord the Duke of Buckingham and Earl
Of Hertford, Stafford and Northampton, I
Arrest thee of high Treason, in the name
Of our most Sovereign King.

Buc. Loe you, my Lord,
The net has faln upon me, I shall perish
Under device and practice.

Bran. I am sorry,
To see you tane from liberty, to look on
The businesse present. 'Tis his Highnesse pleasure
You shall to th' Tower.

Buck. It will help me nothing
To plead mine Innocence : for that dye is on me,
Which makes my whit'st part black. The will of Heav'n
Be done in this and all things : I obey.
O my Lord Aburgany : Fare you well.

Bran. Nay, he must bear you company. The King
Is pleas'd you shall to th' Tower, till you know.
How he determines further.

Abur. As the Duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the Kings pleasure
By me obey'd.

Bran. Here is a warrant from
The King, to attach Lord Mountacute, and the bodies
Of the Dukes Confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Peck, his Counsellour.

Buck. So, so ;
These are the Limbs oth' Plot, no more I hope.

Bra. A Monk oth' Charrenux

Buck. O Michaell Hopkins.

Bra. He.

Buck. My Surveyor is false ; the o're great Cardinall
Hath shew'd him gold ; my life is spann'd already :
I am the shadow of poor Buckingham,
Whose Figure even this instant Cloud puts on,
By darkning my cleer Sun. My Lords, Farewell. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Cornees. Enter King Henry, leaning on the Cardinalls shoulder : the Nobles, and Sir Thomas Lovell : the Cardinall places him under the Kings feet on his right side.

King. My life it self, and the best heart of it,
Thanks you for this great care : I stood i'th' levell
Of a full-charg'd confederacy, and gives thanks
To you that choak'd it. Let be call'd before us
That Gentleman of *Buckingham*s, in person,
I'll hear him his Confessions justifie,
And point by point the Treasons of his Master,
He shall again relate.

A noise with crying room for the Queen, usher'd by the Duke of Norfolk. Enter the Queen, Norfolk and Suffolk : she kneels. King riseth from his State, takes her up, kisses and placeth her by him.

Quee. Nay, we must longer kneele ; I am a Suitor.

King. Arise, and take place by us ; half your Suit
Never name to us ; you have half our power :

The

The other moiety ere you aske is given,
Repeat your will, and take it.

Quee. Thank your Majesty
That you would love your self, and in that love
Not unconsidered leave your honour, nor
The dignity of your Office; is the point
Of my Petition.

King. Lady mine, proceed.

Quee. I am solicited not by a few,
And those of true condition; That your Subjects
Are in great grievance: There have been Commissions
Sent down among'em, which hath flaw'd the heart
Of all their Loyalties; wherein, although
My good Lord Cardinall, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as putter on
Of these exactions: yet the King, our Master, (not Whose honour heaven shield from soile; even he escapes
Language unmannerly: yea, such which breaks
The sides of Loyalty, and almost appears in loud Rebellion.

Nor. Not almost appears,
It doth appear: for, upon these Taxations,
The Clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them longing, have put off
The Spinsters, Carders, Fullers, Weavers, who
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger,
And lack of other meanes, in desperate manner
Daring th' event to th' teeth, are all in uprore,
And danger serves among them.

King. Taxation?
Wherein? and what Taxation? My Lord Cardinall,
You that are blam'd for it alike with us,
Know you of this Taxation?

Card. Please you, Sir,
I know but of a single part in ought
Pertains to th' State: and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.

Quee. No, my Lord?
You know no more then others? But you frame
Things that are known alike, which are not wholesome
To those which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions
(Whereof my Sovereign would have note) they are Most pestilent to th' hearing, and to bear'em,
The Back is Sacrifice to th' load; They say
They are devis'd by you, or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.

King. Still Exaction:
The nature of it, in what kind; let's know,
Is this Exaction?

Quee. I am much too venterous
In tempting of your patience, but am boldned
Under your promis'd pardon. The Subjects grief
Comes through Commissions, which compells from each
The sixth part of his Substance, to be levied
Without delay; and the pretence for this
Is nam'd, your Wars in France: this makes bold mouths,
Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegiance in them; their curses now
Live where their prayers did: and it's come to passe,
This tractable obedience is a slave
To each incens'd Will: I would your Highnesse
Would give it quick consideration; for
There is no primer basenesse.

King. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.

Card. And for me,
I have no further gone in this, then by
A single voyce, and that not past me, but
By learned approbation of the Judges: if I am
Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither know
My faculties nor person, yet will be
The Chronicles of my doing: Let me say,
'Tis but the fate of Place, and the rough Brake
That Virtue must go through; we must not stint
Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope malicious Censurers, which ever,
As ray'nous Fishes doe a Vessell follow
That is new trimm'd; but benefit no further
Then vainly longing. What we oft doe best,
By sick interpreters (once weak ones) is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft
Hitting a grosser quality, is cri'd up
For our best Act: if we stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd; or carp'd at;
We should take root here, where we sit;
Or fir State Statues onely.

King. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear:
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a President
Of this Commission? I believe, not any.
We must not rend our Subjects from our Lawes,
And stick them in our Will. Sixt part of each?
A trembling Contribution: why, we take
From every tree, lop, bark, and part oth' timber:
And though we leave it with a root thus hackt,
The Aire will drink the Sap. To every County
Where this is question'd, send our Letters, with Free pardon to each man that has deni'd
The Force of this Commission: pray look too't;
I put it to your care.

Card. A word with you.
Let there be Letters writ to every Shire,
Of the Kings grace and pardon: the griev'd Commons
Hardly conceive of me. Let it be nois'd,
That through our Intercession, this Revokement
And Pardon comes: I shall anon advise you
Further in the proceeding. Exit Secret.

Enter Surveyor.

Quee. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.

Quee. It grieves many:
The Gentleman is Learn'd, and a most rare Speaker,
To Nature none more bound, his training such,
That he may furnish and instruct great Teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself: yet see,
When these so Noble benefits shall prove
Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Then ever they were fair. This man so compleat,
Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders; and when we Almost with ravisht listning, could not find
His hour of speech, a minute: He, (my Lady)
Hath into monstrous habits put the Graces
That once were his, and is become as black,
As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by Us, you shall hear
(This was his Gentleman in trust) of him
Things to strike Honour sad. Bid him recount
The fore-recited practises, whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Card.

Card. Stand forth & with bold spirit relate what you
Most like a careful Subject have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

Kin. Speak freely.

Sur. First, it was usual with him ; every day
It would infect his Speech : That if the King
Should without issue dye ; hee'l carry it so
To make the Scepter his. These very words
I've heard him utter to his Sonne in Law,
Lord Aburgany, to whom by oath he menac'd
Revenge upon the Cardinall.

Card. Please your Highnesse, note
This dangerous conception in this point;
Not friended by his wish to your High person ;
His will is most malignant, and it stretches
Beyond you to your friends.

Queen. My learned Lord Cardinall,
Deliver all with Charity.

Kin. Speak on ;
How grounded he his Title to the Crown
Upon our faile ; to this point hast thou heard him,
At any time speak ought ?

Sur. He was brought to this,
By a vain Prophesie of Nicholas Henton.

Kin. What was that Henton ?

Sur. Sir, a Chartreux Fryer,
His Confessor, who fed him every minute
With words of Sovereignty.

Kin. How know'st thou this ?

Sur. Not long before your Highnesse sped to France,
The Duke being at the Rose, within the Parish
Saint Lawrence Poulteney, did of me demand
What was the speech among the Londoners,
Concerning the French Journey. I repli'd,
Men fear the French would prove perfidious
To the King's danger : presently, the Duke
Said, 'twas the fear indeed, and that he doubted
'Twould prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy Monk, that oft, sayes he,
Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my Chaplain, a choyce houre
To hear from him a matter of some moment :
Whom after under the Commissions Seale,
He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke
My Chaplain to no Creature living, but
To me, should utter, with demure Confidence,
This pawingly entu'd ; neither the King nor's Heires
(Tell you the Duke) shall prosper, bid him strive
To the love oth' Commonalty, the Duke
Shall govern England.

Queen. If I know you well,
You were the Duke's Surveyor, and lost your Office
On the complaint oth' Tenants ; take good heed
You charge not in your spleen a Noble person,
And spoyle your Noble Soule ; I say, take heed ;
Yes, heartily I beseech you.

Kin. Let him on. Go forward.

Sur. On my Soule, I'll speak but truth.
Itold my Lord the Duke, by th' Devils illusions
The Monk might be deceiv'd, and that 'twas dangerous
For this to ruminate on this so farre, untill
It forg'd him some design, which being believ'd
It was much like to doe : He answer'd, Tush,
It can doe me no damage ; adding further,
That had the King in his last sickness fail'd,
The Cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads

Should have gone off.

Kin. Ha ? What, so rank ? Ah, ha,
There's mischief in this man ; canst thou say further ?

Sur. I can, my Liege.

Kin. Proceed.

Sur. Being at Greenwich,
After your Highnesse had reprov'd the Duke
About Sir William Blumer. (vant,

Kin. I remember of such a time, being my sworn ser-
The Duke receiv'd him his. But on : what hence ?

Sur. If (quoth he) I for this had been committed,
As to the Tower, I thought ; I would have plaid
The Part my Father meant to act upon
Th' Usurper Richard, who being at Salisbury,
Made suit to come in's presence ; which if granted,
(As he made semblance of his duty) would
Have put his Knife into him.

Kin. A Gyant Traytor,

Card. Now, Madam, may his Highness live in freedome,
And this man out of Prison.

Queen. God mend all. (say'st ?

Kin. There's something more would out of thee ; what

Sur. After the Duke his Father, with the Knife
He stretch'd him, and with one hand on his Dagger,
Another spread on's breast, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible Oath, whose tenour
Was, were he evil us'd, he would out-go
His Father, by as much as a performance
Do's an irresolute purpose.

Kin. There's his period,
To sheath his Knife in us : he is attach'd,
Call him to present Triall : if he may Find mercy in the Law, 'tis his ; if none,
Let him not seek't of us : By day and night
He's Traytor to th' height.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter L. Chamberlain, and L. Sandys.

L. Ch. Is't possible the spells of France should juggle
Men into such strange Mysteries ?

L. San. New customes,
Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay let 'em be unmanly yet are follow'd.

L. Ch. As farre as I see, all the good our English
Have got by the late Voyage, is but meerly
A fit or two oth' face, (but they are shrewd ones)
For when they hold 'em, you would swear directly
Their very Noses had been Counsellours
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep State so.

L. San. They have all new legs,
And lame ones ; one would take it,
That never see 'em pace before, the Spaven
A Spring-halt reign'd among 'em.

L. Ch. Death, my Lord,
Their cloathes are after such a Pagan cut too',
That sure th' have worn out Christendome : how now ?
What newes, Sir Thomas Lovell ?

Enter Sir Thomas Lovell.

Lovell. Faith my Lord,
I hear of none but the new Proclamation,
That's clapt upon the Court Gate.

Z z

L. Cham.

L. Cham. What is't for?

Lov. The reformation of our travell'd Gallants,
That fill the Court with quarrels, talk, and Taylors,

L. Cham. I'me glad 'tis there;
Now I would pray our Mounseurs
To think an English Courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Lov. They must either,
(For so run the Conditions) leave those remnants
Of Foole and Feather, that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance
Pertaining thereunto; as Fights and Fire-works,
Abusing better men then they can be
Out of a forreign wisdom, renouncing clean
The faith they have in Tennis and tall Stockings,
Short blistred Breeches, and those types of Travell;
And understand again like honest men,
Or pack to their old Play-fellowes; there I take it,
They may Cum Privilegio, wear away
The Lag end of their lewdnesse, and be laugh'd at.

L. San. 'Tis time to give him Phylick, their diseases
Are grown so catching.

L. Cham. What a losse our Ladies
Will have of these trim vanities?

Lovell. I marry,
There will be woe indeed, Lords, the flye whorsons
Have got a speeding trick to lay down Ladies.
A French Song, and a Fiddle, has no Fellow.

L. San. The Devil fiddle 'em.
I am glad they are going,
For sure there's no converting of 'em: now
An honest Country Lord as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plain Song,
And have an hour of hearing, and by'r Lady
Held currant Musick too.

L. Cham. Well said Lord Sands,
Your Colts tooth is not cast yet?

L. San. No, my Lord,
Nor shall not while I have a stump.

L. Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whether were you a going?

Lov. To the Cardinalls;
Your Lordship is a guest too.

L. Cham. O, 'tis true;
This night he makes a Supper, and a great one,
To many Lords and Ladies; there will be
The Beauty of this Kingdom I'll assure you.

Lov. That Churchman
Beares a bounteous mind indeed,
A hand as fruitfull as the Land that feeds us,
His dewes fall every where,

L. Cham. No doubt he's Noble;
He had a black mouth that said other of him.

L. San. He may my Lord,
Ha's wherewithall in him;
Sparing would shew a worse sin, then ill Doctrine.
Men of his way, should be most liberall,
They are set here for exampples.

L. Cham. True they are so;
But few now give so great ones:

My Barge stayes;
Your Lordship shall along: Come, good Sir Thomas,
We shall be late else, which I would not be,
For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guilford
This night to be Comptrollers.

L. San. I am your Lordships.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Hoboyes. A small Table under a State for the Cardinall, a longer Table for the Guests. Then enter Anne Bullen, and divers other Ladies and Gentlemen, as Guests at one door; at another door enter Sir Henry Guilford.

S. Hen. Guilf. Ladies,
A generall welcome from his Grace
Salutes ye all: This night he dedicates
To fair content, and you: None here he hopes
In all this Noble Bevy, has brought with her
One care abroad: he would have all as merry:
As first, good Company, good Wine, good Welcome,
Can make good people.

Enter L. Chamberlain, L. Sands, and Lovell.
O my Lord, y'are tardy;
The very thought of this fair Company,
Clapt wings to me.

Cham. You are young, Sir Harry Guilford.
San. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the Cardinall
But half my Lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running Banket, ere they rested,
I think would better please 'em: by my life,
They are a sweet society of fair ones.

Lov. O that your Lordship were but now Confessor,
To one or two of these.

San. I would I were,
They should finde easie penance,

Lov. Faith how easie?

San. As easie as a down Bed would afford it.

Cham. Sweet Ladies will it please you sit; Sir Harry,
Place you that side, I'll take the charge of this:
His Grace is entring. Nay, you must not freeze,
Two women plac'd together, makes cold weather:
My Lord Sands, you are one will keep 'em waking:
Pray sit between these Ladies.

San. By my faith,
And thank your Lordship: by your leave, sweet Ladies
If I chance to talk a little wilde, forgive me:
I had it from my Father.

An. Bul. Was he mad, Sir?

San. O very mad, exceeding mad, in love too;
But he would bite none, just as I doe now,
He would kisse you twenty with a breath.

Cham. Well said, my Lord:
So now y'are fairly seated: Gentlemen,
The penance lies on you; if these fair Ladies
Passe away frowning.

San. For my little Cure,
Let me alone.

Hoboyes. Enter Cardinall Wolsey, and takes his State.

Card. Y'are welcome my fair Guests; that noble Lady
Or Gentleman that is not freely merry
Is not my Friend. This to confirm my welcome,
And to you all good health.

San. Your Grace is Noble,
Let me have such a Bowle may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking,

Card. My Lord Sands.

I am beholding to you : cheer your neighbour :
Ladies, you are not merry ; Gentlemen,
Whose fault is this ?

San. The red Wine first must rise
In their fair Cheeks, my Lord, then we shall have 'em
Talk us to silence.

An. Bu. You are a merry Gamester,
My Lord Sands.

San. Yes, if I make my play :
Here's to your Ladiship, and pledge it, Madam :
For 'tis to such a thing.

An. B. You cannot shew me.

Drumme and Trumpet, Chambers discharged.

San. I told your Grace, they would talk anon :

Card. What's that ?

Cham. Look out there, some of ye.

Car. What warlike voyce.

And to what end is this ? Nay, Ladies, fear not ;
By all the lawes of Warre y'are priviledg'd

Enter a Servant.

Cham. How now, what is't ?

Serv. A noble troupe of Strangers,
For so they seem ; th'have left their Barge and Landed,
And hither make, as great Embassadors
From forrain Princes.

Card. Good Lord Chamberlaine,
Go, give 'em welcome ; you can speak the French tongue
And pray receive 'em Nobly, and conduct 'em
Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty
Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend him.

All arise, and Tables remov'd.

You have now a broken Banket, but wee'l mend it.
A good digestion to you all ; and once more
I shewre a welcome on ye : welcome all

Hoboyes. Enter King and others as Maskers, habited like Shepheards, usher'd by the Lord Chamberlain. They passe directly before the Cardinall, and gratefully salute him.

A Noble Company : what are their pleasures ?

Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd
To tell your Grace : that having heard by fame
Of this so Noble and so fair assembly,
This night to meet here, they could doe no lesse,
(Out of the great respect they bear to beauty)
But leave their Flocks, and under your fair conduct
Crave leave to view these Ladies, and entreat
An hour of Revels with 'em.

Card. Say, Lord Chamberlain,
They have done my poor house grace :
For which I pay 'em a thousand thanks,
And pray 'em take their pleasures.

Choose Ladies, King and Anne Bullen.

King. The fairest hand I ever touch'd : O Beauty,
Till now I never knew thee.

Musick, Dance.

Card. My Lord.

Cham. Your Grace.

Card. Pray tell 'em thus much from me :
There should be one amongst 'em by his person
More worthy this place then my self, to whom
(If I but knew him) with my love and duty
I would surrender it. Whisper.

Cham. I will, my Lord.

Car. What say they ?

Cham. Such a one, they all confesse
There is indeed, which they would have your Grace
Find out, and he will take it.

Card. Let me see then,
By all your good leaves, Gentlemen, here I'll make
My royall choyce.

Kin. Ye have found him Cardinall,
You hold a fair Assembly, you doe well, Lord.
You are a Church-man, or I'll tell you Cardinall,
I should judge now unhappily.

Card. I am glad
Your Grace is grown so pleasant.

Kin. My Lord Chamberlain,
Prethee come hither, what fair Lady's that ?

Cham. An't please your Grace,
Sir Thomas Bullens Daughter, the Viscount Rochford,
One of her Highnesse women.

Kin. By Heaven she is a dainty one ; Sweet heart,
I were unmannerly to take you out,
And not to kisse you. A health Gentlemen,
Let it go round.

Card. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the Banquet ready Ith' Privy Chamber ?

Lov. Yes, my Lord.

Card. Your Grace
I fear, with dancing is a little heated.

Kin. I fear too much.

Card. There's fresh aire, my Lord,
In the next Chamber.

Kin. Lead in your Ladies every one : Sweet Partner,
I must not yet forsake you : let's be merry,
Good my Lord Cardinall : I have half a dozen healths
To drink to these fair Ladies, and a measure
To lead 'em once again, and then let's dreame
Who's best in favour. Let the Musick knock it.

Exeunt with Trumpets.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen at severall doors.

1. Whether away so fast ?

2. O, God save ye :

Even to the Hall, to hear what shall become
Of the great Duke of Buckingham.

1. I'll save you

That labour, Sir. All's now done but the Ceremony
Of bringing back the Prisoner.

2. Were you there ?

1. Yes indeed was I.

2. Pray speak what has happen'd.

1. You may guesse quickly what.

2. Is he found guilty ?

1. Yes truly is he,
And condemn'd upon't.

2. I am sorry for't

1. So are a number more.

2. But pray how past it ?

1. I'll tell you in a little. The great Duke
Came to the Barre ; where, to his accusations
He pleaded still not guilty, and alledged
Many sharp reasons to defeat the Law.
The King's Attorney on the contrary ;
Urg'd on the Examinations, proofs, confessions

Of divers witnessess, which the Duke desir'd
To him brought viva voce to his face ;
At which appear'd against him, his Surveyor,
Sir Gilbert Pecke his Chancellour, and John Car,
Confessor to him, with that Devill Monke,
Hopkins, that made this mischief.

2. That was he
That fed him with his prophecies.

1. The same,
All these accus'd him strongly which he fain
Would have flung from him ; but indeed he could not ;
And so his Peeres upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high Treason. Much
He spoke, and learnedly for life : But all
Was either pittied in him, or forgotten.

2. After all this, how did he bear himself ?

1. When he was brought agen to th' Bar, to hear
His Knell rung out, his Judgement, he was stirr'd
With such an Agony, he sweat extreemly,
And something spoke in choller, ill, and hasty :
But he fell to himself again, and sweetly,
In all the rest shew'd a most noble patience.

2. I doe not think he feares death.

1. Sure he does not,
He never was so womanish, the cause
He may a little grieve at.

2. Certainly,
The Cardinall is the end of this.

1. 'Tis likely,
By all conjectures : First Kildares Attaindure ;
Then Deputy of Ireland, who remov'd,
Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too.
Least he should help his Father.

2. That trick of State
Was a deep envious one.

1. At his return,
No doubt he will requite it ; this is noted
(And generally) who ever the King favours,
The Cardinall instantly will find employment,
And far enough from Court too.

2. All the Commons
Hate him perniciously, and o' my Conscience
With him ten faddom deep : This Duke as much
They love and doat on : call him bountious Buckingham,
The Mirror of all courtesie.

Enter Buckingham from his Arraignement. Tiptaves before him, the Axe with the edge towards him, Halberds on each side, accompanied with Sir Thomas Lovell ; Sir Nicholas Vaux, Walter Sands, and common people, &c.

1. Stay there Sir,
And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.

2. Let's stand close and behold him.

Buck. All good people,
You that thus have come to pittie me ;
Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me.
I have this day receiv'd a Traytors judgement,
And by that name must die ; yet heaven bear witness,
And if I have a Conscience, let it sink me,
Even as the Axe falls, if I be not faithfull.
To th' Law I bear no malice for my death,
'T has done upon the premises, but justice :
But those that sought it, I could wish more Christians :
(Be what they will) I heartily forgive 'em ;
Yet let 'em look they glory not in mischief ;

Nor build their evils on the Graves of great men ;
For then, my guiltlesse blood must cry again 'em.
For further life in this world I ne're hope,
Nor will I sue, although the King have mercies
More then I dare make faults.

You few that lov'd me,
And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham,
His Noble Friends and Fellowes ; whom to leave
Is onely bitter to him, onely dying :
Go with me like good Angels to my end,
And as the long divorce of Steele falls on me,
Make of your Prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my Soule to heaven.
Lead on a Gods name.

Lovell. I doe beseech your Grace for charity,
If ever any malice in your heart
Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.

Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive you
As I would be forgiven : I forgive all.
There cannot be those numberlesse offences
Gainst me, that I cannot take peace with :
No black envy shall make my Grave.
Commend me to his Grace :

And if he speak of Buckingham ; pray tell him,
You met him half in heaven : my voves and prayers
Yet are the Kings ; and till my Soule forsake,
Shall cry for blessings on him. May he live
Longer then I have time to tell his yeares ;
Ever belov'd and loving, may his Rule be ;
And when old time shall lead him to his end,
Goodnesse and he, fill up one Monument.

Lov. To th' water side I must conduct your Grace,
Then give my Charge up to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.

Vaux. Prepare there,
The Duke is comming : See the Barge be ready,
And fit it with such furniture as suits
The Greatnesse of his person.

Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas,
Let it alone ; my state now will but mock me.
When I came hither, I was Lord High Constable,
And Duke of Buckingham : now, poor Edward Bohun ;
Yet I am richer then my base Accusers,
That never knew what Truth meant : I now seale it ;
And with that blood will make 'em one day groan for't.
My Noble Father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first rais'd head against Usurping Richard,
Flying for succour to his Servant Banister,
Being distressed, was by that wretch betray'd,
And without Tryall, fell ; Gods peace be with him.
Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pittying
My Fathers losse ; like a most Royall Prince
Restor'd me to my Honours : and out of ruines
Made my Name once more Noble. Now his Son,
Henry the Eight, Life, Honour, Name, and all
That made me happy ; at one stroke has taken
For ever from the World. I had my Tryall,
And must needs say, a Noble one ; which makes me
A little happier then my wretched Father :
Yet thus farre are we one in Fortunes, both
Fell by our Servants, by those Men we lov'd most :
A most unnaturall and faithlesse Service.
Heaven has an end in all : yet, you that hear me,
This from a dying man receive as certain :
Where you are liberall of your loves and Counsells,
Be sure you be not loose ; for those you make friends,

And

The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive
The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they mean to sink ye: all good people
Pray for me, I must now forsake ye; the last hour
Of my long weary life is come upon me:
Farewell; and when you would say something that is sad,
Speak how I fell.

I have done; and God forgive me.

Exeunt Duke and train.

1. O, this is full of pitty; Sir it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the Authors.

2. If the Duke be guiltlesse,
'Tis full of woe: yet I can give you inckling
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater then this.

1. Good Angels keep it from us:
What may it be? you doe not doubt my faith, Sir?

2. This Secret is so weighty 'twill require
A strong faith to conceale it.

1. Let me have it;
I doe not talk much.

2. I am confident;
You shall, Sir: Did you not of late dayes hear
A buzzing of a Separation
Between the King and Katherine?

1. Yes, but it held not;
For when the King once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the Lord Mayor straight
To stop the rumour, and allay the tongues
That durst disperse it.

2. But that slander, Sir,
Is a sound truth now: for it growes agen
Fresher then e're it was; and held for certain
The King will venture at it. Either the Cardinall,
Or some about him near, have out of malice
To the good Queen, posselt him with a scruple
That will undoe her: To confirm this too,
Cardinall Campeius is arriv'd, and lately,
As all think, for this businesse.

1. 'Tis the Cardinall;
And meety to revenge him on the Emperour,
For not bestowing on him at his asking,
The Arch-Bishoprick of Toledo, this is purpos'd.

2. I think
You have hit the marke; but is't not cruell,
That she should feel the smart of this? the Cardinall
Will have his will, and she must fall.

1. 'Tis wofull.
We are too open here to argue this:
Let's think in private more.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lord Chamberlain, reading this Letter.

MY Lord, the Horse your Lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnish'd. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the North. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinalls, by Commission, and main power took 'em from me, with this reason:

His Master would be serv'd before a Subject, fore the King, which stopp'd our mouths, Sir.

I fear he will indeed; well, let him have them; he have all I think.

Enter to the Lord Chamberlain, the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk,

Norf. Well met, my Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your Graces.

Suf. How is the King employ'd?

Cham. I left him private,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Norf. What's the cause?

Cham. It seems the Marriage with his Brothers Wife
Has crept too near his Conscience.

Suf. No, his Conscience
Has crept too near another Lady.

Norf. 'Tis so;

This is the Cardinalls doing: the King-Cardinall,
That blind Priest, like the eldest Son of Fortune,
Turnes what he list. The King will know him one day.

Suf. Pray God he doe,
He'll never know himself else.

Norf. How holily he works in all his businesse,
And with what zeale? For now he has crackt the League
Between us and the Emperour (the Queens great Nephew)
He dives into the Kings Soule, and there scatters
Dangers, Doubts, wringing of the Conscience,
Feares, and Despaire, and all these for his Marriage.
And out of all these, to restore the King,
He counsells a Divorce, a losse of her,
That like a Jewell, has hung twenty yeares
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre;
Of her that loves him with that excellence,
That Angels love good men with: Even of her,
That when the greatest stroke of Fortune falls
Will blesse the King: and is not this course pious?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsell: 'tis most true,
These newes are every where, every tongue speaks 'em,
And every true heart weeps for't. All that dare
Look into these affaires, see this main end,
The French Kings Sister. Heaven will one day open
The Kinges eyes, that so long have slept upon
This bold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.

Norf. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliverance;
Or this Imperious man will work us all
From Princes into Pages: all mens honours
Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my Lords,
I love him not, nor fear him, there's my Creed:
And I am made without him, so I'll stand,
If the King please: his Curses and his Blessings
Touch me alike: th'are breath I not believe in.
I knew him, and I know him: so I leave him
To him that made him proud, the Pope.

Norf. Let's in;
And with some other businesse, put the King
From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon him:
My Lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me,
The King has sent me other-where: Besides
You'll find a most unfit time to disturbe him:
Health to your Lordships.

Norfolk. Thanks, my good Lord Chamberlain.
Exit Lord Chamberlain, and the King draws the Curtain, and sits reading pensively.

Suff. How sad he looks ; sure he is much afflicted.

Kin. Who's there ? Ha ?

Nor. Pray God he be not angry. (selves)

Kin. Who's there I say ? how dare you thrust your Into my private Meditations ?
 Who am I ? ha ?

Nor. A gracious King, that pardons all offences
 Malice ne're meant : Our breach of Duty this way,
 Is businesse of Estate ; in which, we come
 To know your Royall pleasure.

Kin. Ye are too bold :

Go to ; I'll make ye know your times of businesse :
 Is this an houre for temporall affaires ? ha ?

Enter Wolsey and Campeius with a Commission.

Who's there ? my good Lord Cardinall ? O my Wolsey,
 The quiet of my wounded Conscience ;
 Thou art a cure fit for the King ; you'r welcome,
 Most Learned Reverend Sir, into our Kingdome,
 Use us, and it : my good Lord, have great care,
 I be not found a Talker.

Wol. Sir, you cannot :

I would your Grace would give us but an houre
 Of private conference.

Kin. We are busie ; go.

Nor. This Priest has no pride in him ?

Suf. Not to speak of :

I would not be so sick though for his place :
 But this cannot continue.

Nor. If it doe, I'll venture one heave at him.

Suf. I another.

Exeunt Norfolk, and Suffolk,

Wol. Your Grace has given a President of wisdom
 Above all Princes, in committing freely
 Your scruple to the voyce of Christendome :
 Who can be angry now ? what Envy reach you ?
 The Spaniard tild by blood and favour to her,
 Must now confesse, if they have any goodnesse,
 The Triall just and noble. All the Clerks,
 (I mean the Learned ones in Christian Kingdomes)
 Have their free voyces. Rome (the Nurse of Judgement,
 Invited by your noble self hath sent

One generall Tongue unto us. This good man,
 This just and Learned Priest, Cardinall Campeius,
 Whom once more I present unto your Highnesse.

Kin. And once more in mine armes I bid him welcome,
 And thank the holy Conclave for their loves,
 They have sent me such a Man I would have wish'd for.

Cam. Your Grace must needs deserve all strangers loves,
 You are so Noble : To your Highnesse hand
 I tender my Commission ; by whose virtue,
 The Court of Rome commanding : You my Lord
 Cardinall of York, are joyn'd with me their Servant,
 In the impartiall judging of this businesse.

Kin. Two equall men : The Queen shall be acquainted
 Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner ?

Wol. I know your Majesty has alwayes lov'd her
 So dear in heart, not to deny her that
 A Woman of lesse Place might ask by Law ;
 Schollars allow'd freely to argue for her.

Kin. I, and the best she shall have ; and my favour
 To him that does best, God forbid else : Cardinall,
 Prethee call Gardiner to me, my new Secretary,
 I find him a fit fellow.

Enter Gardiner.

Wol. Give me your hand : much joy & favour to you ;
 You are the Kings now.

Gard. But to be commanded
 For ever by your Grace, whose hand has rais'd me.

Kin. Come hither Gardiner.

Walks and whispers.

Camp. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Pace
 In this man's place before him ?

Wol. Yes, he was.

Camp. Was he not held a Learned man ?

Wol. Yes surely.

Camp. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then
 Even of your self Lord Cardinall.

Wol. How ? of me ?

Camp. They will not stick to say, you envi'd him ;
 And fearing he would rise (he was so virtuous)
 Kept him a forreign man still, which so griev'd him,
 That he ran mad, and di'd.

Wol. Heavens peace be with him :

That's Christian care enough : for living murmurers,
 There's places of rebuke. He was a Foole ;
 For he would needs be virtuous. That good Fellow,
 If I command him, follows my appointment,
 I will have none so ne're else. Learn this Brother,
 We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons.

Kin. Deliver this with modesty to th' Queen.

Exit Gardiner.

The most convenient place that I can think of,
 For such receipt of Learning, is Black Fryers :
 There ye shall meet about this weighty businesse.
 My Wolsey, see it furnish'd. O my Lord,
 Would it not grieve an able man to leave
 So sweet a Bedfellow ? But Conscience, Conscience ;
 O 'tis a tender place, and I must leave her. (Exeunt.)

Scena Tertia.

Enter Anne Bullen, and old Lady.

An. Not for that neither, here's the pang that pinches.
 His Highnesse, having liv'd so long with her, and she
 So good a Lady, that no tongue could ever
 Pronounce dishonour of her ; by my life,
 She never knew harm-doing : Oh, now after
 So many courses of the Sun enthroned,
 Still growing in a Majesty and pomp, the which
 To leave, a thousand fold more bitter, then
 'Tis sweet at first t'acquire. After this Proesse,
 To give her the avant, it is a pitty
 Would move a Monster.

Old La. Hearts of most hard temper
 Melt and lament for her,

An. Oh Gods will, much better
 She ne're had known pomp ; though't be temporall,
 Yet if that quarrell, Fortune, doe divorce
 It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance, panging
 As soule and bodies severing.

Old La. Alas poor Lady,
 She's stranger now again.

An. So much the more
 Must pitty drop upon her ; verily
 I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born,

And

And range with humble livers in Content,
Then to be peck'd up in a glistening grief,
And wear a golden sorrow.

Old. L. Our content
Is our best having.

Anne. By my troth, and Maidenhead,
I would not be a Queen.

Old. L. Beshrew me, I would,
And venture Maidenhead for't, and so would you
For all this spice of your hypocrisie;
You that have so fair parts of Woman on you,
Have (too) a Womans heart, which ever yet
Affected Eminence, Wealth, Sovereignty;
Which, to say sooth, are blessings; and which gifts
(Saving your mincing) the capacity
Of your soft Chiverell Conscience, would receive,
If you might please to stretch it.

An. Nay, good troth.

Old. L. Yestroth & troth: you would not be a Queen?

An. No, not for all the riches under heaven.

Old. L. 'Tis strange; a three-pence bow'd now would Old as I am, to Queen it: but I pray you, (hire me,
What think you of a Dutchesse? have you limbs
To bear that load of Title?

An. No in truth.

Old. L. Then you are weakly made, pluck off a little.
I would not be a young Count in your way,
For more then blushing comes to: if your back
Cannot vouchsafe this burthen, 'tis too weak
Ever to get a Boy.

An. How you doe talk;
I swear again, I would not be a Queen,
For all the world.

Old. L. In faith for little England
You'll venture an emballing: I my self
Would for Carnarvanshire, although there long'd
No more to th' Crown but that: Lo, who comes here?

Enter Lord Chamberlain. (know

L. Cham. Good morrow, Ladies; what wer't worth to
The secret of your conference?

An. My good Lord,
Not your demand; it values not your asking:
Our Mistris Sorrowes we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle businesse, and becoming
The action of good women, there is hope
All will be well.

An. Now I pray God, Amen.

Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heav'nly blessings
Follow such Creatures. That you may, fair Lady,
Perceive I speak sincerely, and high notes
Tane of your many virtues; the Kings Majesty
Commends his good opinion of you, to you; and Do's purpose honour to you no lesse flowing,
Then Marchionesse of Pembrook; to which Title,
A thousand pound a year, Annuall support,
Out of his Grace, he addes.

An. I doe not know
What kind of my obedience, I should tender;
More then my All, is nothing: Nor my Prayers
Are not words duely hallowed, nor my Wishes
More worth then empty vanities: yet prayers and wishes
Are all I can return. 'Beseech your Lordship,
Vouchsafe to speak my thanks, and my obedience,
As from a blushing Handmaid, to his Highnesse;
Whose health and Royalty I pray for.

Cham. Lady;

I shall not fail t'approve the fair conceit
The King hath of you. I have perus'd her well,
Beauty and Honour in her are so mingled,
That they have caught the King: and who knowes yet
But from this Lady, may proceed a Jemme,
To lighten all this Isle? I'le to the King,
And say I spoke with you.

Exit Lord Chamberlain.

An. My honour'd Lord.

Old. L. Why this it is: See, see,
I have been begging sixteen yeares in Court
(Am yet a Courtier beggarly) nor could Come pat betwixt too early, and too late
For any suit of pounds: and you, (oh fate)
A very fresh Fish here; fie, fie, fie upon
This compell'd fortune: have your mouth fill'd up,
Before you open it.

An. This is strange to me.

Old. L. How tastes it? Is it bitter? Forty pence, no:
There was no Lady once ('tis an old Story)
That would not be a Queen, that would she not
For all the mud in Egypt; have you heard it?

An. Come, you are pleasant.

Old. L. With your Theame, I could
O're-mount the Larke: The Marchionesse of Pembrook?
A thousand pounds a year, for pure respect?
No other obligation? by my Life,
That promises mee thousands: Honours train
Is longer then his fore-skirt; by this time
I know your back will bear a Dutchesse. Say,
Are you not stronger then you were?

An. Good Lady,

Make your self mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on't. Would I had no being
If this salute my blood a jot; it faints me
To think what followes.

The Queen is comfortlesse, and we forgetfull
In our long absence: pray doe not deliver,
What here y' have heard to her.

Old. L. What doe you think me-----Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Trumpets, Sonnet, and Cornets.

*Enter two Vergers, with short silver wands; next them two Scribes in the habits of Doctors: after them, the Bishop of Canterbury alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, Rochester, and S. Asaph: next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the Purse, with the great Seale, and a Cardinals Hat: then two Priests, bearing each a Silver Crosse: then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Serjeant at Armes, bearing a Mace: then two Gentlemen, bearing two great Silver Pillars: after them, side by side, the two Cardinals, two Noble-men, with the Sword and Mace.
The King takes place under the Cloth of State. The two Cardinals sit under him as Judges. The Queen takes place some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the Court in manner of a Confi-story: Below them the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the Stage.*

Card.

Car. Whil'st our Commission from Rome is read,
Let silence be commanded.

King. What's the need?
It hath already publickly been read,
And on all sides th' Authority allow'd,
You may then spare that time.

Car. Bee't so, proceed.

Scri. Say, Henry K. of England, come into the Court.

Crier. Henry King of England, &c.

King. Here.

Scribe. Say, Katherine Queen of England,
Come into the Court.

Crier. Katherine Queen of England, &c.

The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her Chayre, goes about the Court, comes to the King, and kneeles at his Feet. Then speaks.

Sir, I desire you doe me right and Justice,
And to bestow your pittie on me; for
I am a most poor Woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your Dominions: having here
No Judge indifferent, nor no more assurance
Of equall Friendship and Proceeding. Alas, Sir,
In what have I offended you? What cause
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure
That thus you should proceed to put me off,
And take your good grace from me? Heaven witnesse,
I have been to you a true and humble Wife,
At all times to your will conformable:
Ever in fear to kindle your Dislike,
Yea, subject to your Countenance: Glad, or sorry,
As I saw it inclin'd? when was the hour
I ever contradicted your Desire?
Or made it not mine too? Or which of your Friends
Have I not strove to love, although I knew
He were mine Enemy? What Friend of mine,
That had to him deri'vd your Anger, did I
Continue in my Liking? nay, gave notice
He was from thence discharg'd? Sir, call to minde;
That I have been your Wife, in this Obedience,
Upward of twenty yeares, and have been blest
With many Children by you. If in the course
And proceesse of this time you can report,
And prove it too, against mine Honour ought;
My bond to Wedlock, or my love and duty
Against your Sacred Person; in Gods name
Turn me away: and let foul'st Contempt
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharpest kind of Justice. Please you, Sir,
The King your Father, was reputed for
A Prince most prudent; and an excellent
And unmatch'd Wit and Judgement. Ferdinand
My Father, King of Spain, was reckon'd one
The wisest Prince, that there had reign'd, by many
A year before. It is not to be question'd,
That they had gather'd a wise Council to them
Of every Realme, that did debate this businesse,
Who deem'd our Marriage lawfull. Wherefore I humbly
Beseech you, Sir, to spare me, till I may
Be by my Friends in Spain advis'd; whose Counsell
I will implore. If not, ith' name of God
Your pleasure be fulfill'd.

Wol. You have here, Lady,
(And of your choyce) these Reverend Fathers, men
Of singular Integrity and Learning:
Yea, the elect oth' Land, who are assembled
To plead your Cause. It shall be therefore bootlesse,

That longer you desire the Court, as well
For your own quiet, as to rectifie
What is unsetled in the King.

Camp. His Grace

Hath spoken well, and justly; Therefore, Madam,
It's fit this Royall Session doe proceed,
And that (without delay) their Arguments
Be now produc'd, and heard.

Queen. Lord Cardinall, to you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, Madam.

Qu. Sir, I am about to weep; but thinking that
We are a Queen (or long have dream'd so) certain
The Daughter of a King, my drops of teares,
I'll turn to sparkes of fire.

Wol. Be patient yet.

Qu. I will, when you are humble; nay before,
Or God will punish me. I doe believe (Induc'd by potent Circumstances) that
You are mine Enemy, and make my Challenge.
You shall not be my Judge. For it is you
Have blown this Coal, betwixt my Lord, and me;
(Which Gods dew quench) therefore, I say again,
I utterly abhorre; yea, from my Soule
Refuse you for my Judge, whom yet once more
I hold my most malicious Foe, and think not
At all a Friend to truth.

Wol. I doe professe

You speak not like your self: who ever yet
Have stood to Charity: and display'd th' effects
Of disposition gentle, and of wisdomes,
O're-topping womans power. Madam, you doe me wrong,
I have no spleen against you, nor in justice
For you, or any: how farre I have proceeded,
Or how farre further (shall) I warrant
By a Commission from the Consistory;
Yea, the whole Consistory of Rome. You charge me,
That I have blown this Coale: I doe deny it,
The King is present: If it be known to him,
That I gainsay my Deed, how may he wound,
And worthily, my Falshood, yea, as much
As you have done my Truth. If he know
That I am free of your Report, he knows
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lies to cure me, and the cure is to Remove these thoughts from you. The which before
His Highnesse shall speak in, I doe beseech
You (gracious Madam) to unthink your speaking,
And to say no more.

Quee. My Lord, my Lord,

I am a simple woman, much too weak
To oppose your cunning. Yare meek, & humble-mouth'd,
You sign your Place, and Calling, in full seeming,
With Meeknesse and Humility: But your heart
Is cramm'd with Arrogance, Spleen, and Pride.
You have by fortune, and his Highnesse favours,
Gone slightly o're low steps, and now are mounted:
Where Powers are your Retainers; and your words
(Domesticks to you) leave your will; as't please
Your self pronounce their Office. I must tell you,
You tender more your persons Honour, then
Your high profession Spirituall. That agen
I doe refuse you for my Judge, and here
Before you all, Appeale unto the Pope,
To bring my whole Cause fore his Holinesse,
And to be judg'd by him.

She curtsies to the King, and offers to depart.

Camp.

Camp. The Queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to Justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainfull to be tri'd by't; 'tis not well.
She's going away.

Kin. Call her again.

Cryer. Katherine Q. of England, come into the Court.

Gent. Ush. Madam, you are call'd back.

Que. What need you note it? pray you keep your way,
When you are call'd return. Now the Lord help,
They vex me past my patience, pray you passe on;
I will not tarry: no, nor ever more
Upon this businesse my appearence make,
In any of their Courts.

Exe: Queen, and her Attendants.

Kin. Go thy wayes Kate,
That man ith' world, who shall report he has
A better Wife, let him in nought be trusted,
For speaking false in that; Thou art alone
(If thy rare qualities, sweet gentlenesse,
Thy meeknesse Saint-like, Wife-like Government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Sovereign and Pious, could speak thee out)
The Queen of earthly Queens: She's Noble born:
And like her true Nobility, she has Carried her self towards me.

Wol. Most gracious Sir,
In humblest manner I require your Highnesse,
That it shall please you to declare in hearing
Of all these eares (for where I am robb'd and bound,
There must I be unloos'd, although not there
At once, and fully satisfi'd) whether ever I Did broach this businesse to your Highnesse, or Laid any scruple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on't: or ever
Have to you, but with thanks to God for such A Royall Lady, spake one, the least word that might Be to the prejudice of her present State,
Or touch of her good Person?

Kin. My Lord Cardinall,
I doe excuse you; yea, upon mine Honour,
I free you from't: You are not to be taught
That you have many Enemies, that know not
Why they are so, but like the Village Curres,
Bark when their fellows doe. By some of these
The Queen is put in anger; y'are excus'd:
But will you be more justifi'd? You ever
Have with'd the sleeping of this businesse, never desir'd
It to be stirr'd; but oft have hindred, oft
The passages made toward it; on my Honour,
I speak, my good Lord Cardinall to this point;
And thus farre clear him.
Now, what mov'd me too't,
I will be bold with time and your attention: (too't:
Then marke th'inducement. Thus it came; give heed
My Conscience first receiv'd a tenderesse,
Scruple, and prick, on certain Speeches utter'd
By th' Bishop of Bayon, then French Embassador,
Who had been hither sent on the debating
And Marriage' twixt the Duke of Orleance, and
Our Daughter Mary: Ich' Progressse of this businesse,
Ere a determinate resolution, he
(I mean the Bishop) did require a respite,
Wherein he might the King his Lord advertise,
Whether our Daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our Marriage with the Dowager,
Sometimes our Brothers Wife. This respite shooke

The bosome of my Conscience, enter'd me;
Yea with a splitting power, and made to tremble
The region of my Breast, which forc'd such way,
That many maz'd considerings, did throng
And prest in with this Caution. First, me thought
I stood not in the smile of Heaven, who had Commanded Nature, that my Ladies womb
If it conceiv'd a Male-child by me, should Doe no more Offices of life to't, then
The Grave does to th' dead: For her Male Issue,
Or dyed where they were made, or shortly after
This world had air'd them. Hence I took a thought,
This was a Judgement on me, that my Kiugdome
(Well worthy the best Heir oth' world) should not Be glad in't by me. Then follows, that I weigh'd the danger that my Realmes stood in
By this my Issues faile, and that gave tome
Many a groaning throw: thus hulling in
The wilde sea of my Conscience, I did steer
Towards this remedy, whereupon we are
Now present here together: that's to say,
I meant to rectifie my Conscience, which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,
By all the Reverend Fathers of the Land,
And Doctors Learn'd. First I began in private,
With you, my Lord of Lincoln; you remember
How under my oppression I did seek
When I first mov'd you.

B. Lin. Very well, my Liege.

Kin. I have spoke long, be pleas'd your self to say
How farre you satisfi'd me.

Lin. So please your Highnesse,
The question did at first so stagger me,
Bearing a state of mighty moment in't,
And consequence of dread, that I committed
The daringst Counsell which I had to doubt,
And did intreat your Highnesse in this course,
Which you are running here.

Kin. I then mov'd you,
My Lord of Canterbury, and got your leave
To make this present Summons unsolicited.
I left no reverend person in this Court,
But by particular consent proceeded
Under your Hands and Scales: therefore go on,
For no dislike ith' world against the person
Of our good Queen; but the sharp thorny points
Of my alledged reasons drives this forward:
Prove but our Marriage lawfull, by my Life
And Kingly Dignity, we are contented
To wear her mortall State to come, with her,
(Katherine our Queen) before the primest Creature
That's Parragon'd oth' World.

Camp. So please your Highnesse,
The Queen being absent, 'tis a needfull fitnesse,
That we adjourn this Court to a further day;
Mean while must be an earnest motion
Made to the Queen, to call back her appeale
She intends unto his Holinesse.

Kin. I may perceive
These Cardinals trifle with me: I abhorre
This dilatory sloth, and tricks of Rome.
My Learn'd and welbelov'd Servant Cranmer,
Prethee return, with thy approach: I know,
My comfort comes along: break up the Court;
I say, set on.

Exeunt, in manner as they enter'd

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Queen and her Woman, as at work.

Queen. Take thy Lute, Wench,
My Soule growes sad with troubles,
Sing, and disperse 'em if thou canst : leave working :

SONG.

O Rpheus with his Lute made Trees,
And the Mountain tops that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing.
To his Musick, Plants and Flowers
Ever spring ; as Sun and Showers,
There had made a lasting Spring.
Every thing that heard him play,
Even the Billowes of the Sea,
Hung their Heads, and then lay by.
In sweet Musick is such Art,
Killing care, and grief of heart,
Fall asleep, or hearing dye.

Enter a Gentleman.

Queen. How now ?

Gent. And't please your Grace, the two great Cardinals
Wait in the presence.

Queen. Would they speak with me ?

Gent. They will'd me say so, Madam.

Queen. Pray their Graces

To come near : what can be their businesse
With me, a poor weak woman, faine from favour,
I doe not like their comming ; now I think on't,
They should be good men, their affaires are righteous,
But, All Hoods make not Monks.

Enter the two Cardinals, Wolfsey and Campian.

Wolf. Peace to your Highnesse.

Qu. Your Graces find me here part of a Houwife,
(I would be all) against the worst may happen :
What are your pleasures with me, Reverend Lords ?

Wolf. May it please you, Noble Madam, to withdraw
Into your private Chamber ; we shall give you
The full cause of our comming.

Queen. Speak it here.

There's nothing I have done yet o' my Conscience
Deserves a Corner : would all other Women
Could speak this with as free a Soule as I doe,
My Lords, I care not (To much I am happy Above a number) If my actions
Were tri'd by every tongue, every eye saw 'em,
Envy and base opinion set against 'em,
I know my life so even. If your businesse
Seek me out, and that way I am Wife in ;
Out with it boldly : Truth loves open dealing.

Card. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas (Regina se-

Queen. Good my Lord, no Latine ; (renissima.)

I am not such a Traunt since my comming,
As not to know the Language I have liv'd in : (ous :
A strange Tongue makes my cause more strange, suspiti-
Pray speak in English ; here are some will thank you,
If you speak truth, for their poor Mistris sake ;
Believe me she has had much wrong. Lord Cardinall,
The willing'st sin I ever yet committed,
May be absolv'd in English :

Card. Noble Lady,

I am sorry my integrity should breed,
(And service to his Majesty and you)
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant ;
We come not by the way of Accusation,
To taint that honour every good Tongue blesses ;
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow ;
You have too much, good Lady : But to know
How you stand minded in the weighty difference
Between the King and you, and to deliver
(Like free and honest men) our just opinions,
And comforts to your cause.

Camp. Most honoured Madam,
My Lord of York, out of his Noble nature,
Zeale and obedience he still bore your Grace,
Forgetting (like a good man) your late Censure
Both of his truth and him (which was too farre)
Offers, as I doe, in a sign of peace,
His Service, and his Counsell.

Queen. To betray me.

My Lords, I thank you both for your good wills,
Ye speak like honest men, (pray God ye prove so)
But how to make ye suddenly an Answer
In such a point of weight, so near mine Honour,
(More near my Life I fear) with my weak wit ;
And to such men of Gravity and Learning ;
In truth I know not. I was set at work,
Among my Maids, full little (God knowes) looking
Either for such men, or such businesse ;
For her sake that I have been, for I feele
The last fit of my Greatnesse ; good your Graces
Let me have time and Council for my Cause :
Alas, I am a Woman friendlesse, hopelesse.

Wolf. Madam,

You wrong the Kings love with these feares,
Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Queen. In England,

But little for my profit : can you think, Lord,
That any English-man dare give me Counsell ?
Or be a known friend 'gainst his Highnesse pleasure,
(Though he be grown so desperate to be honest)
And live a Subject ? Nay forsooth my friends,
They that must weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow to, live not here,
They are (as all my other comforts) far hence
In mine own Country, Lords.

Camp. I would your Grace

Would leave your griefs, and take my Counsell.

Queen. How, Sir ?

Camp. Put your main cause into the Kings protection,
He's loving and most gracious. 'Twill be much,
Both for your Honour better and your Cause :
For if the Tryall of the Law o're-take ye,
You'll part away disgrac'd.

Wolf. He tells you rightly.

Queen. Ye tell me what ye wish for both, my ruine :
Is this your Christian Counsell ? Out upon ye.
Heaven is above all yet ; there sits a Judge,
That no King can corrupt.

Camp. Your rage mistakes us.

Queen. The more shame for ye ; holy men I thought ye,
Upon my Soule, two Reverend Cardinall Virtues :
But Cardinall Sins, and hollow hearts I fear ye :
Mend 'em for shame my Lords : Is this your comfort ?
The Cordiall that ye bring a wretched Lady ?
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd ?
I will not wish ye half my miseries,

I have more Charity. But say I warn'd ye ;
Take heed, for heavens sake take heed, least at once
The burthen of my sorrows fall upon ye.

Car. Madam, this is a meer distraction,
You turn the good we offer into envy.

Quee. Ye turn me into nothing. Woe upon ye,
And all such false professors. Would you have me
(If you have any Justice, any Pity,
If ye be any thing but Churchmens habit)
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me ?
Alas, ha's banisht me his bed already,
His Love, too long ago. I am old, my Lords,
And ail the fellowshipp I hold now with him
(s onely by obedience. What can happen
To me, above this wretchednesse ? All your Studies
Make me a Curse, like this :

Camp. Your feares are worse.

Qu. Have I liv'd thus long (let me speak my self,
Since Virtue finds no friends) a Wife, a true one ?
A Woman (I dare say without Vain-glory)
Never yet branded with suspicion ?
Have I, with all my full Affections

Still met the King ? Lov'd him next Heav'n ? Obey'd him ?

Bin (out of fondnesse) superstitious to him ?

Almost forgot my Prayers to content him ?

And am I thus rewarded ? 'tis not well, Lords.

Bring me a constant woman to her Husband,

One that ne're dream'd a Joy, beyond his pleasure ;

And to that Woman (when she has done most)

Yet will I adde an honour ; a great Patience.

Car. Madam, you wander from the good
We ayme at.

Quee. My Lord,
I dare not make my self so guilty,
To give up willingly that Noble Title
Your Master wed me to : nothing but death
Shall e're divorce my Dignities.

Card. Pray hearme.

Qu. Would I had never trod this English Earth,
O felt the Flatteries that grow upon it :
Ye have Angels Faces, but Heaven knowes your hearts.
What shall become of me now, wretched Lady ?
I am the most unhappy Woman living.
Alas (poor Wenches) where are now your Fortunes ?
Shipwrack'd upon a Kingdome, where no Pity,
No Friends, no Hope, no Kindred weep for me ?
Almost no Grave allow'd me ? Like the Lilly
That once was Mistris of the Field, and flourish'd,
I'll hang my head, and perish.

Car. If your Grace
Could but be brought to know our ends are honest,
You'd feel more comfort. Why should we (good Lady)
Upon what cause wrong you ? Alas, our Places,
The way of our Profession is against it ;
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow 'em.
For goodnes sake, consider what you doe,
How you may hurt your self : I, utterly
Grow from the Kings Acquaintance, by this Carriage.
The hearts of Princes kisse Obedience,
So much they love it. But to stubborn Spirits,
They swell and grow as terrible as stormes.
I know you have a gentle, noble temper,
A Soule as even as a Calme ; Pray think us,
Those we professe, Peace-makers, Friends, and Servants.

Camp. Madam, you'll find it so :
You wrong your Virtues

With these weak Womens feares. A Noble Spirit
As yours was, put into you, ever casts
Such doubts as false Coyn from it. The King loves you,
Beware you loose it not : For us (if you please
To trust us in your businesse) we are ready
To use our utmost Studies in your service.

Qu. Doe what you will, my Lords :
And pray forgive me ;
If I have us'd my self unmannerly,
You know I am a Woman lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.
Pray do my service to his Majesty,
He has my heart yet, and shall have my Prayers
While I shall have my life. Come reverend Fathers, Bestow your Countells on me. She now begs
That little thought when she set footing here,
She should have bought her Dignities so dear. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, Duke of Suffolk, Lord Surrey, and Lord Chamberlain.

Norf. If you will now unite in your Complaints,
And force them with a Constancy, the Cardinall
Cannot stand under them. If you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise,
But that you shall sustain moe new disgraces,
With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyfull
To meet the least occasion, that may give me
Remembrance of my Father-in-Law the Duke,
To be reveng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the Peeres
Have uncontentm'd gone by him, or at least
Strangely neglected ? When did he regard
The stamp of Noblenesse in any person
Out of himself ?

Cham. My Lords, you speak your pleasures :
What he deserves of you and me, I know :
What we can do to him (though now the time Gives way to us) I much fear. If you cannot Barre his access to th' King, never attempt
Any thing on him : for he hath a witchcraft
Over the King in's Tongue.

Nor. O fear him not,
His spell in that is out : the King hath found
Matter against him, that for ever marres
The Hony of his Language. No, he's settled
(Not to come off) in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir,
I should be glad to hear such Newes as this Once every houre.

Nor. Believe it, this is true.
In the Divorce, his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded : wherein he appears,
As I would wish mine Enemy.

Sur. How came
His practises to light ?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sur. O how ? how ?

Suf. The Cardinals Letters to the Pope miscarried,

And

And come to th' eye oth' King, wherein was read
How that the Cardinall did entreat his Holinesse
To stay the Judgement oth' Divorce; for if
It did take place, I doe (quoth he) perceive
My King is tangled in affection, to
A Creature of the Queens, Lady Anne Bullen.

Sur. Ha's the King this?

Suf. Beleeve it.

Sur. Will this work?

Cham. The King in this perceives him, how he coasts
And hedges his own way. But in this point,
All his tricks founder, and he brings his Physick
After his patients death; the King already Hath married the fair Lady.

Sur. Would he had.

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my Lord,
For I professe you have it.

Sur. Now all my joy
Trace the Conjunction.

Suf. My Amen too't.

Nor. All mens.

Suf. There's order given for her Coronation:
Marry this is yet but young, and may be left
To some eares unrecounted. But, my Lords,
She is a gallant Creature, and compleat
In minde and feature, I perswade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this Land, which shall
In it be memoriz'd.

Sur. But will the King
Digest this Letter of the Cardinals?
The Lord forbid.

Nor. Marry Amen.

Suf. No, no:

There be moe Wasps that buz about his Nose,
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinall Campeius,
Is stoln away to Rome, hath tane no leave,
Ha's left the cause to th' King unhandled, and
Is posted as the Agent of our Cardinall,
To second all his plot. I doe assure you,
The King cri'd Ha, at this.

Cham. Now God incense him.
And let him cry Ha, louder.

Nor. But, my Lord,
When returns Cranmer?

Suf. He is return'd in his opinions, which Have satisfi'd the King for his Divorce,
Together with all famous Colledges
Almost in Christendome: shortly (I believe)
His second Marriage shall be published, and
Her Coronation. Katherine no more
Shall be call'd Queen, but Princeesse Dowager,
A Widow to Prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's
A worthy Fellow, and hath tane much pain
In the Kings businesse.

Suf. He has, and we shall see him
For it, an Arch-Bishop.

Nor. So I hear.

Suf. 'Tis so.

Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.

The Cardinall.

Nor. Observe, observe, he's moody.

Car. The Packet, Cromwell,
Gav't you the King?

Crom. To his owne hand, in's Bed-chamber.

Card. Look'd he oth' in-side of the Paper?

Crom. Presently

He did unseale them, and the first he view'd.
He did it with a serious minde: a heed
Was in his countenance. You he bad
Attend him here this Morning.

Card. Is he ready to come abroad?

Crom. I think by this he is,

Card. Leave me a while.

Exit Cromwell.

It shall be to the Dutchesse of Alanson,
The French Kings Sister; He shall marry her.

Anne Bullen? No: I'le no Anne Bullens for him,
There's more in't then fair Visage. Bullen?

No, we'll no Bullens: Speedily I wish
To hear from Rome. The Marchionesse of Penbrook?

Nor. He's discontented.

Suf. May be he heares the King
Does whet his anger to him.

Sur. Sharp enough,
Lord for thy Justice.

Car. The late Queens Gentlewoman?
A Knights Daughter

To be her Mistis Mistis? the Queens Queen?
This Candle burns not cleer, 'tis I must snuffe it,
Then out it goes. What though I know her virtuous
And well-deserving? yet I know her for
A spleeny Lutheran, and not wholesome to
Our cause, that she should lie ich' bosome of Our hard rul'd King. Again, there is sprung up
An Heretick, an Arch-one; Cranmer, one
Hath crawl'd into the favour of the King,
And is his Oracle.

Nor. He is vex'd at something.

Enter King reading of a Schedule.

Sur. I would 'twere something that would fret the string
The Master cord on's heart.

Suf. The King, the King.

King. What piles of Wealth hath he accumulated
To his own portion? and what expence by th' hour
Seems to flow from him? how, ich' name of Thrift
Does he rake this together? Now, my Lords,
Saw you the Cardinall?

Nor. My Lord, we have Stood here observing him. Some strange Commotion
Is in his brain: he bites his lip and starts,
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then layes his finger on his Temple: straight
Springs out into fast gate, then stops again,
Strikes his brest hard, and anon, he casts
His eye against the Moon: in most strange Postures
We have seen him set himself.

King. It may well be,
There is a mutiny in's minde. This morning,
Papers of State he sent me, to peruse
As I requir'd: and wot you what I found
There (on my Conscience put unwittingly)
Forsooth an Inventory, thus importing
The severall parcels of his Plate, his Treasure, Rich Stuffles and Ornaments of Household, which I finde at such proud Rate, that it out-speaks
Possession of a Subject.

Nor. It's heavens will,
Some Spirit put this Paper in the Packet,
To blesse your eye withall.

King. If we did think

His Contemplations were above the earth,
And fixt on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his Musings, but I am afraid
His Thinkings are below the Moon, nor worth
His serious considering.

King takes his Seat, whispers Lovell, who goes to the Cardinal.

Car. Heaven forgive me,
Ever God blefs your Highness.

King. Good my Lord,
You are full of Heavenly stuff, and bear the Inventory,
Of your best Grace, in your minde; the which,
You were now running o're: you have scarce time
To steal from Spiritual leisure, a brief span
To keep your earthly Audit, sure in that
I deem you an ill Husband, and am glad
To have you therein my Companion.

Car. Sir,
For Holy Offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business, which I bear i'th' State: and Nature does require
Her times of preservation, which perforce
I her frail son, among't my Brethren mortal,
Must give my tendance to.

King. You have said well.

Car. And ever may your Highness yoke together,
(As I will lend you cause) my doing well,
With my well saying.

King. 'Tis well said agen,
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well,
And yet words are no deeds. My Father lov'd you,
He said he did, and with this deed did Crown
His sword upon you. Since I had my Office,
I have kept you next my Heart, have not alone
Imploy'd you where high Profits might come home,
But par'd my present Havings, to bestow
My Bounties upon you.

Car. What should this mean?

Sur. The Lord increase this business.

King. Have I not made you
The prime man of the State? I pray you tell me,
If what I now pronounce, you have found true:
And if you may confess it, say withall
If you are to bound to us, or no. What say you?

Car. My Sovereign, I confess your Royal graces
Shower'd on me daily, have been more than could
My studied purposes require, which went Beyond all man's endeavours. My endeavours,
Have ever come too short of my Desires,
Yet fill'd with my Abilities: Mine own ends,
Have been so, that evermore they pointed
To th'good of your most Sacred Person, and
The profit of the State. For your great Graces
Heap'd upon me (poor Undeserver) I
Can nothing render but Allegiant thanks,
My Prayers to heaven for you; my Loyalty
Which ever has, and ever shall be growing,
'Till death (that Winter) kill it.

King. Fairly answer'd:
A Loyal, and obedient Subject is
Therein illustrated, the Honour of it
Does pay the Act of it, as i'th' contrary
The foulness is the punishment. I presume,
That as my hand has open'd Bounty to you,
My heart drop'd Love, my pow'r rain'd Honour, more
On you, then any: So your Hand, and Heart.

Your Brain, and every Function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in Love's particular, be more
To me your Friend, then any.

Car. I do profess,
That for your Highness good, I ever labour'd
More then mine own: that am, have, and will be (Though all the world should crack their duty to you,
And throw it from their Soul; though perils did Abound, as thick as thought could make 'em, and Appear in forms more horrid, yet my Duty,
As doth a Rock against the chiding Floud,
Should the approach of this wild River break)
And stand unshaken, yours.

King. 'Tis Nobly spoken;
Take notice Lords, he has a Loyal breast,
For you have seen him open't. Read o're this,
And after this, and then to Breakfast with
What appetite you have.

Exit King, frowning upon the Cardinal, the Nobles throng after him whispering, and smiling.

Car. What should this mean?
What sudden Anger's this? How have I reap'd it?
He parted Frowning from me, as if Ruine
Leap'd from his Eyes. So looks the chafed Lyon
Upon the daring Huntsman that has gall'd him:
Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper:
I fear the Story of his Anger. 'Tis so:
This paper has undone me: 'Tis th'Account
Of all that world of Wealth I have drawn together.
For mine own ends, (Indeed to gain the Popedom
And see my Friends in Rome.) O Negligence!
Fit for a Fool to fall by: What croles Devil
Made me put this main Secret in the Packet
I sent the King? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beat this from his Brains?
I know 'twill stir him strongly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spite of Fortune
Will bring me off again. What's this? To th' Pope?
The Letter (as I live) with all the Business
I writ to's Holiness. Nay then, farewell:
I have touch'd the highest point of all my Greatness,
And from that full Meridian of my Glory,
I haste now to my Setting, I shall fall
Like a bright Exhalation in the Evening,
And no man see me more.

Enter to Woolsey, the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the King's pleasure Cardinal,
Who commands you
To render up the Great Seal presently
Into our hands, and to Confine your self
To Asher-house, my Lord of Winchester's,
Till you hear further from his Highness.

Car. Stay:
Where's your Commission? Lords, words cannot carry Authority so mighty.

Suff. Who dare cross 'em,
Bearing the King's will from his mouth expressly?

Car. 'Till I finde more then will, or words to do it,
(I mean your Malice) know, Officious Lords,
I dare, and must deny it. Now I feel
Of what course Mettal ye are molded, Envy:
How eagerly ye follow my Disgraces

As if it fed ye, and how sleek and wanton
 Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruine?
 Follow your envious courses, men of Malice;
 You have a Christian warrant for 'em, and no doubt
 In time will find their fit Rewards. That Seal
 You ask with such a Violence, the King
 (Mine, and your Master) with his own hand, gave me:]
 Bad me enjoy it, with the Place, and Honours
 During my life; and to confirm his Goodness,
 Tt de it by Letters Patents. Now, who'll take it?

Sur. The King that gave it.

Car. It must be himself then.

Sur. Thou art a proud Traytor, Priest.

Car. Proud Lord, thou lyest:

Within these fourty houres, Surrey durst better
 Have burnt that Tongue, then said so.

Sur. Thy Ambition
 (Thou Scarlet finner) robb'd this bemoaning Land
 Of Noble Buckingham, my Father-in-Law,
 The heads of all thy Brother Cardinals,
 (With thee, and all thy best parts bound together)
 Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy,
 You sent me Deputy for Ireland,
 Far from his succour; from the King, from all
 That might have mercy on the fault, thou gay'f't him:
 Whil'st your great Goodness, out of holy pitie,
 Absolv'd him with an Axe.

Wol. This, and all else
 This talking Lord can lay upon my credit,
 I answer, is most false. The Duke by Law Found his deserts. How innocent I was
 From any private malice in his end,
 His Noble Jury, and foul Cause can witness.
 If I lov'd many words, Lord, I should tell you,
 You have as little Honesty, as Honour,
 That in the way of Loyalty, and Truth,
 Toward the King, my ever Royal Master,
 Dare mate a sounder man then Surrey can be,
 And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my Soul,
 Your long Coat (Priest) protects you,
 Thou should'st feel
 My Sword i'th' life blood of thee else. My Lords,
 Can ye endure to hear this Arrogance?
 And from this Fellow? If we live thus tamely,
 To be thus Jaded by a piece of Scarlet,
 Farewell Nobility: let his Grace go forward,
 And dare us with his Cap, like Larks.

Car. All Goodness

Is poison to thy Stomack.

Sur. Yes, that Goodness
 Of gleaning all the Land's wealth into one,
 Into your own hands (Card'nal) by Extortion:
 The goodness of your intercepted Packets
 You writ to th' Pope, against the King: your goodness
 Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.
 My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly Noble,
 As you respect the common good, the State
 Of our dispis'd Nobility, our Issues,
 (Who if he live, will scarce be Gentlemen)
 Produce the grand summe of his finnes, the Articles
 Collected from his life. I'll startle you
 Worse then the Sacring Bell, when the brown Wench
 Lay kissing in your armes, Lord Cardinal.

Car. How much me thinks, I could despise this man,
 But that I am bound in Charity against it.

Nor. Those Articles, my Lord, are in the Kings hand:
 But thus much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much fairer
 And spotless, shall mine Innocence arise,
 When the King knows my Truth.

Sur. This cannot save you:
 I thank my Memory, I yet remember
 Some of these Articles, and out they shall.
 Now, if you can blush, and cry guilty Cardinal,
 You'll shew a little Honesty.

Wol. Speak on Sir,
 I dare your worst Objections: If I blush,
 It is to see a Nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want those, then my head;
 Have at you.

First, that without the King's assent or knowledge,
 You wrought to be a Legate, by which power
 You maim'd the Jurisdiction of all Bishops.

Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else
 To Foreign Princes, Ego & Rex meus,
 Was still inscrib'd: in which you brought the King
 To be your Servant.

Suff. Then, that without the knowledge
 Either of King or Council, when you went
 Ambassador to the Emperour, you made bold
 To carry into Flanders, the Great Seal.

Sur. Item, You sent a large Commission
 To Gregory de Cassado, to conclude
 Without the King's will, or the States allowance,
 A League between his Highness, and Ferrara.

Suff. That out of mere Ambition, you have caus'd
 Your holy-Hat to be stamp't on the King's Coin.

Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance,
 (By what means got, I leave to your own Conscience)
 To furnish Rome, and to prepare the wayes
 You have for Dignities, to the mere undoing
 Of all the Kingdome. Many more there are,
 Which since they are of you, and odious,
 I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my Lord,
 Press not a falling man too far: 'tis Virtue:
 His faults lye open to the Lawes, let them
 (Not you) correct him. My heart weeps to see him
 So little, of his great Self.

Sur. I forgive him.

Suff. Lord Cardinal, the King's further pleasure is,
 Because all those things you have done of late
 By your power Legantive within this Kingdome,
 Fall into th' compass of a Præmunire;
 That therefore such a Writ be sued against you,
 To forfeit all your Goods, Lands, Tenements,
 Castles, and whatsoever, and to be
 Out of the King's protection. This is my Charge.

Nor. And so we'll leave you to your Meditations
 How to live better. For your stubborn answer
 About the giving back the Great Seal to us,
 The King shall know it, and (no doubt) shall thank you.
 So fare you well, my little good Lord Cardinal.

Exeunt all but Wolsey.

Wol. So farewell, to the little good you bear me.
 Farewell? A long farewell to all my Greatness.
 This is the state of Man; to day he puts forth
 The tender Leaves of Hopes, to morrow Blossoms,
 And beares his blushing Honours thick upon him:
 The third day, comes a Frost; a killing Frost,
 And when he thinks, good easie man, full suely

His Greatness is a ripening, nips his Root,
And then he falls as I do. I have ventur'd
Like little wanton Boyes that swim on bladders :
This many Summers in a Sea of Glory,
But far beyond my depth : my high-blown Pride
At length broke under me, and now ha's left me
Weary, and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp, and glory of the World, I hate ye,
I feel my heart new open'd. Oh how wretched
Is that poor min, that hangs on Princes favours ?
There is betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet Aspects of Princes, and their ruine,
More pangs, and feares then warres, or women have ;
And when he falls, he falls like Lusifer,
Never to hope again.

Enter Cromwell, standing amazed.

Why how now Cromwell ?

Crom. I have no power to speak Sir.

Car. What, amaz'd

At my misfortunes ? Can the Spirit wonder
A great man should decline. Nay, and you weep
I am fall'n indeed.

Crom. How does your Grace ?

Card. Why well :

Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell,
I know my self now, and I feel within me,
A peace above all earthly Dignities,
A still, and quiet Conscience. The King has cur'd me,
I humbly thank his Grace : and from these shoulders
This ruin'd Piller, out of Pity, taken
A load, would sink a Navy, (too much Honour.)
O 'tis a burden Cromwell, 'tis a burden
Too heavy for a man, that hopes for Heaven.

Crom. I am glad your Grace,
Ha's made that right use of it.

Card. I hope I have :
I am able now (me thinks)
(Out of a fortitude of Soul, I feel)
To endure more Miseries, and greater far
Then my Weak-hearted Enemies, dare offer.
What Newes abroad ?

Crom. The heaviest, and the worst,
Is your displeasure with the King.

Card. God blefs him.

Crom. The next is, that Sir Thomas Moor is chosen
Lord Chancellor, in your place.

Card. That's somewhat sodain.
But he's a Learned man. May he continue
Long in his Highness favour, and do Justice
For truth's-sake, and his Conscience ; that his bones,
When he has run his course, and sleeps in Blessings,
May have a tombe of Orphan's teares wept on him.
What more ?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome ;
Install'd Lord Arch-bishop of Canterbury.

Card. That's Newes indeed.

Crom. Last, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the King hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open, as his Queen,
Going to Chappel : and the voice is now
Only about her Coronation.

Card. There was the weight that pull'd me down.
O Cromwell,
The King has gone beyond me : All my Glories
In that one woman, I have lost for ever.

No Sun, shall ever usher forth mine Honours,
Or gild again the Noble Troops that weigh'd.
Upon my smiles. Go get thee from me Cromwel,
I am a poor fall'n man, unworthy now
To be thy Lord, and Master. Seek the King
(That Sun, I pray may never set) I have told him,
What, and how true thou art ; he will advance thee ;
Some little memory of me, will stir him
(I know his Noble Nature) not to let
Thy hopefull service perish too. Good Cromwel, Neglect him not ; make use now, and provide
For thine own future safety.

Crom. O my Lord,
Must I then leave you ? Must I needs forgoe
So good, so Noble, and so true a Master ?
Bear witness, all that have not hearts of Iron,
With what a sorrow Cromwel leaves his Lord.
The King shall have my service ; but my prayers
For ever and for ever shall be yours.

Card. Cromwel, I did not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries : But thou hast forc'd me
(Out of thy honest truth) to play the Woman.
Let's dry our eyes : And thus far hear me Cromwel,
And when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull cold Marble, where no mention
Of me, more must be heard of : Say I taught thee ;
Say Wolsey, that once trod the ways of Glory,
And sounded all the Depths and Shoals of Honour,
Found thee a way (out of his wrack) to rise in :
A sure, and safe one, though thy Master mist it.
Mark but my Fall, and that that Ruin'd me :
Cromwel, I charge thee, fling away Ambition,
By that sin fell the Angels : how can man then
(The Image of his Maker) hope to win by it ?
Love thy self last, cherish those hearts that hate thee :
Corruption win not more then Honesty,
Still in thy right hand, carry gentle Peace
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not :
Let all the ends thou aim'st at, be thy Countries,
Thy God's, and truth's : then if thou fall'st (O Cromwel)
Thou fall'st a blessed Martyr.

Serve the King : and prethee lead me in :
There take an Inventory of all I have,
To the last penny, 'tis the King's. My Robe,
And my Integrity to Heaven, is all,
I dare now call mine own. O Cromwel, Cromwel
Had I but serv'd my God, with half the Zeal
I serv'd my King : he would not in mine Age
Have left me naked to mine Enemies.

Crom. Good Sir, have patience.

Card. So I have. Farewell
The Hopes of Court, my Hopes in Heaven do dwell.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting one another.

1. Y'are well met once again.

2. So are you.

1. You come to take your stand here, and behold
The Lady Anne pass from her Coronation.

A a a 2

2. Tis

2. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter,
The Duke of Buckingham came from his Trial.

1. 'Tis very true. But that time offer'd sorrow,
This general joy.

2. 'Tis well : the Citizens
I am sure have shewn at full their Royal minds,
As let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward
In Celebration of this day with Shewes,
Pageants, and Sights of Honour.

1. Never greater,
Nor I'll assure you better taken Sir.

2. May I be bold to ask what that contains,
That Paper in your hands ?

1. Yes, 'tis the List
Of those that claim their Offices this day,
By custome of the Coronation.
The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be high Steward ; next the Duke of Norfolk,
He to be Earl Marshal : you may read the rest.

1. I thank you Sir : Had I not known those customes,
I should have been bebolding to your Paper :
But I beseech you, what's become of Katherine
The Princess Dowager ? How goes her business ?

1. That I can tell you too : the Archbishop
Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
Learned, and Reverend Fathers of this Order,
Held a late Court at Dunstable ; six miles off
From Amphill, where the Princess lay, to which
She was often cited by them, but appear'd not :
And to be short, for not Appearance, and
The King's late Scruple, by the main assent
Of all these Learned men, she was divorc'd,
And the late Marriage made of none effect :
Since which, she was remov'd to Kimbolton,
Where she remains now sick.

2. Alas good Lady.
The trumpets sound : stand close,
The Queen is coming.

Ho-boys.

The Order of the Coronation.

1. A lively Flourish of Trumpets.
 2. Then two Judges.
 3. Lord Chancellor, with Purse and Mace before him.
 4. Quiristers singing. Musick.
 5. Mayor of London, bearing the Mace. Then Carter, in his Coat of Armes, and on his head he wore a Gilt Copper Crown.
 6. Marquess of Dorset, bearing a Scepter of Gold, on his head, a Demi-Coronet of Gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey bearing the Rod of Silver with the Dove, Crowned with an Earle's Coronet. Collars of Esses.
 7. Duke of Suffolk, in his Robe of Estate, his Coronet on his head, bearing a long white Wand, as High Steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the Rod of Marshalship, a Coronet on his head. Collars of Esses.
 8. A Canopy, borne by four of the Cinque-Ports, under it the Queen in her Robe, in her hair, richly adorned with Pearl, Crowned. On each side her the Bishops of London and Winchester.
 9. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a Coronal of Gold, wrought with Flowers, bearing the Queen's Train.
 10. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain Circlets of Gold, without Flowers.
- Excunt, first passing over the Stage in Order and State, and then, A great Flourish of Trumpets.*

2 A Royal Train believe me: these I know:
Who's that bears the Scepter ?

1. Marquess Dorset,
And that the Earl of Surrey, with the Rod.
2. A bold brave Gentleman, That should be The Duke of Suffolk.

1. 'Tis the same : high Steward.
2. And that my Lord of Norfolk ?

1. Yes.
2. Heaven blest thee,
Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.
Sir, as I have a Soul, she is an Angel ;
Our King has all the Indies in his Armes,
And more, & richer, when he strains that Lady,
I cannot blame his Conscience,

1. They that bear
The Cloath of Honor over her, are four Barons
Of the Cinque-Ports.

2. Those men are happy,
And so are all, are near her,
I take it, she that carries up the Train,
Is that old Noble Lady, Duchess of Norfolk,

1. It is, and all the rest are Countesses.
2. Their Coronets say so. These are Starres indeed,
And sometimes falling ones.

1. No more of that

Enter a third Gentleman.

1. God save you Sir. Where have you bin broiling ?
3. Among the crou'd i' th' Abbey, where a finger
Could not be wedg'd in more : I am stifled
With the mere rankness of their joy.

2. You saw the Ceremony ?

3. I did.

1. How was it ?

3. Well worth the seeing.

2. Good Sir, speak it to us.

3. As well as I am able. The rich stream
Of Lords, and Ladies, having brought the Queen
To a prepar'd place in the Quire, fell off
A distance from her ; while her Grace sat down
To rest a while, some half an hour, or so,
In a rich Chair of State, opposing freely
The Beauty of her Person to the People.

Believe me Sir, she is the goodliest Woman
That ever lay by man : which when the people
Had the full view of, such a Noise arose,
As the shrowds make at Sea, in a stiff tempest,
As loud, and to as many tunes. Hats, Cloaks, Doublets, I think) flew up, and had their Faces
Bin loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy
I never saw before. Great-belly'd Women,
That had not half a week to go, like Rammes
In the old time of War, should shake the prease
And make 'em reel before 'em. No man living
Could say this is my wife there, all were woven
So strangely in one piece.

2. But what follow'd ?

3. At length, her Glace rose, and with modest paces
Came to the Altar, where she kneel'd, and Saint-like
Cast her fair eyes to Heaven, and pray'd devoutly.
Then rose again, and bow'd her to the people :
When by the Arch-bishop of Canterbury,
She had all the Royal makings of a Queen ;
As holy Oyl, Edward Confessor's Crown,
The Rod, and Bird of Peace, and all such Emblems
Laid Nobly on her : which perform'd, the Quire

With

With all the choicest Musick of the Kingdome,
Together sung Te Deum. So she parted,
And with the same full State pac'd back again
To York-Place, where the Feast is held.

1. Sir.

You must no more call it York-place, that's past:
For since the Cardinal fell, that title's lost,
'Tis now the King's, and call'd Whitehall.

3. I know it:

But 'tis so lately alter'd, that the old name
Is fresh about me.

2. What two Reverend Bishops

Were those that went on each side of the Queen?

3. Stokeley and Gardiner, the one of Winchester,
Newly prefer'd from the King's Secretary:
The other London.

2. He of Winchester

Is held no great good lover of the Archbishop,
The virtuous Cranmer.

3. All the Land knows that:

How ever, yet there is no great breach, when it comes
Cranmer will find a Friend will not shrink from him.

2. Who may be that, I pray you.

3. Thomas Cromwel,

A man in much esteem with th'King, and truly
A worthy Friend, The King has made him
Master o'th' Jewel House,
And one already of the Privy Council.

2. He will deserve more.

3. Yes without all doubt.

Come Gentlemen, ye shall go my way,
Which is to th' Court, and there ye shall be my Guests:
Someth'ing I can command: as I walk thither
I'll tell ye more.

Both. You may command us Sir.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Katherine Dowager, sick, led between Griffith, her Gentleman-Usher, and Patience her Woman.

Grif. How do's your Grace?

Kath. O Griffith, sick to death:

My Legges like loaded Branches bow to th'Earth,
Willing to leave their burthen: Reach a Chair,
So, now (me thinks) I feel a little ease.
Did'st thou not tell me Griffith, as thou lead'st me,
That the great Child of Honour, Cardinal Wolsey
Was dead?

Grif. Yes Madam: but I think your Grace
Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to't.

Kath. Prythee good Griffith, tell me how he dy'd.
If well, he slept before me happily
For my example.

Grif. Well, the voice goes Madam,
For after the stout Earl Northumberland
Arrested him at York, and brought him forward
As a man sorely tainted, to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill
He could not sit his Mule.

Kath. Alas poor man.

Grif. At last, with easie Roads he came to Leicester,

Lodg'd in the Abbey; where the reverend Abbot
With all his Covent, honourably receiv'd him;
To whom he gave these words. O Father Abbot,
An old man, broken with the storms of State,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye:
Give him a little earth for Charity.

So went to bed; where eagerly his sickness
Pursu'd him still, and three nights after this,
About the hour of eight, which he himself
Foretold should be his last, full Repentance,
Continual Meditations, Tears, and Sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world agen,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest,

His faults lye on him.

Yet thus far Griffith, give me leave to speak him,
And yet with Charity: he was, a man
Of an unhounded stomach, ever ranking
Himself with Princes. One that by suggestion
Ty'd all the Kingdome, Simony was fair play,
His own Opinion was his Law. I'th' presence
He would say untruths, and be ever double
Both in his words, and meaning. He was never (But where he meant to Ruine) pitifull.

His Promises, were as he then was, Mighty:
But his Performance, as he is now, Nothing:
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The Clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble Madam:

Men's evil manners, live in Brasse, their Virtues
We write in Water. May it please your Highness
To hear me speak his good now?

Kath. Yes good Griffith,

I were malicious else.

Grif. This Cardinal,

Though from an humble Stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour. From his Cradle
He was a Scholar, and a ripe, and good one:
Exceeding wise, fair spoken, and perswading:
Lofty, and sower to them that lov'd him not:
But to those men that sought him, sweet as Summer.
And though he were unsatisfied in getting,
(Which was a sin) yet in bestowing, Madam,
He was most Princely: Ever witness for him
Those twinnes of Learning, that he rais'd in you,
Ipswich and Oxford: one of which, fell with him,
Unwilling to out-live the good that did it.
The other (though unfinish'd) yet so Famous,
So excellent in Art, and still so rising,
That Christendome shall ever speak his Virtue.
His Overthrow, heap'd Happiness upon him:
For then, and not 'till then, he felt himself,
And found the Blessedness of being little.

And to adde greater Honours to his Age
Then man could give him; he dy'd, fearing God.

Kath. After my death, I wish no other Herald,
No other speaker of my living Actions,
To keep mine Honour, from Corruption.
But such an honest Chronicler as Griffith.
Whom I most hated Living, thou hast made me
With thy Religious Truth, and Modesty,
(Now in his Ashes) Honour: Peace be with him.
Patience, be near me still, and set me lowet.

I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,
Cause the Musicians play me that sad note
I nam'd my Knell; whil'st I sit meditating.

On that Celestial Harmony I go to.

Sad and solemn Musick.

Grif. She is asleep : Good wench, let's sit down quiet,
For fear we wake her. Softly gentle Patience.

The Vision.

Enter solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white Robes, wearing on their head Garlands of Bayes, and golden Vizards on their faces, Branches of Bayes or Palm in their hands. They first Congee unto her, then Dance : and at certain Changes; the first two hold a spare Garland over her Head, at which the other four make reverend Curtsies. Then the two that held the Garland, deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their Charges, and holding the Garland over her head. Which done, they deliver the same Garland to the last two : who likewise observe the same Order. At which (as it were by inspiration) she makes (in her sleep) signes of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven. And so, in their Dancing vanish, carrying the Garland with them. The Musick continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye ? Are ye all gone ?
And leave me here in wretchedness, behind ye ?

Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for,
Saw ye none enter since I slept ?

Grif. None, Madam.

Kath. No ? Saw you not even now a blessed troop
Invite me to a Banquet, whose bright faces
Cast a thousand beams upon me, like the Sun ?
They promis'd me eternal Happiness,
And brought me Garlands (Griffith) which I feel
I am not worthy yet to wear : I shall assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyfull Madam, such good dreames Possess your Fancy.

Kath. Bid the Musick leave,
They are harsh and heavy to me. Musick ceases.

Patience. Do you note
How much her Grace is alter'd on the sodain ?
How long her face is drawn ? How pale she looks,
And of an earthy cold ? Mark her eyes.

Grif. She is going Wench. Pray, pray.

Pati. Heaven comfort her.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. And't like your Grace -----

Kat. You are a sawcy Fellow,
Deserve we no more Reverence ?

Grif. You are to blame,
Knowing she will not loose her wonted Greatness
To use so rude behaviour. Go to, kneel.

Mes. I humbly do intreat your Highness pardon,
My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying
A Gentleman sent from the King, to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance Griffith. But this Fellow
Let me ne're see again. Exit Messeng.

Enter Lord Capuchius.

If my sight fail me not,
You should be Lord Ambassador from the Emperor,
My Royal Nephew, and your name Capuchius.

Cap. Madam the same. Your Servant.

Kath. O my Lord,
The times and titles now are alter'd strangely
With me, since first you knew me.
But I pray you,
What is your pleasure with me ?

Cap. Noble Lady,

First mine own service to your Grace, the next
The King's request, that I would visit you,
Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me
Sends you his Princely commendations,
And heartily intreats you take good comfort.

Kath. O my good Lord, that comfort comes too late,
'Tis like a Pardon after Execution ;
That gentle Physick given in time, had cur'd me :
But now I am past all Comforts here, but Prayers.
How does his Highness ?

Cap. Madam, in good health.

Kath. So may he ever do, and ever flourish,
When I shall dwell with Wormes, and my poor name
Banish'd the Kingdome. Patience, is that Letter
I caus'd you write, yet sent away.

Pati. No Madam.

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my Lord the King.

Cap. Most willingly Madam.

Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness
The Model of our chaste loves : his young daughter,
The dewes of Heaven fall thick in Blessings on her,
Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding.
She is young, and of a Noble modest Nature,
I hope she will deserve well, and a little
To love her for her Mother's sake : that lov'd him :
Heaven knows how dearly.

My next poor Petition
Is, that his Noble Grace would have some pitie
Upon my wretched women, that so long
Have follow'd both my Fortunes, faithfully,
Of which there is not one, I dare avow
(And now I should not lye) but well deserve
For Virtue, and true Beauty of the Soul,
For honesty, and decent Carriage
A right good Husband (let him be a Noble)
And sure those men are happy that shall have 'em.
The last is for my men, they are the poorest,
(But poverty could never draw 'em from me)
That they may have their wages duly paid 'em,
And something over to remember me by.
If Heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life
And able means, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole Contents, and good my Lord,
By that you love the dearest in this world,
As you wish Christian peace to Soules departed,
Stand these poor peoples Friend, and urge the King
To do me this last right.

Cap. By Heaven I will.

Or let me loose the fashion of a man.

Kath. I thank you honest Lord. Remember me
In all humility unto his Highness :
Say his long trouble now is passing
Out of this world. Tell him in death I blest him
(For so I will :) mine eyes grow dimme. Farewell
My Lord. Griffith farewell. Nay Patience,
You must not leave me yet. I must to bed,
Call in more Women. When I am dead, good Wench,
Let me be us'd with Honour ; strew me over
With Maiden Flowers, that all the world may know
I was a chaste Wife to my Grave : Embalm me,
Then lay me forth (although un-Queen'd) yet like
A Queen, and Daughter to a King interr me.
I can no more.

Exeunt leading Katherine.

Alms

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gardiner Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a Torch before him, met by Sir Thomas Lovel.

Gard. It's one a clock Boy, is't not.

Boy. It hath strook.

Gard. These should be houres for necessities,
Not for delights: times to repair our Nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir Thomas:
Whither so late?

Lov. Came you from the King, my Lord?

Gard. I did, Sir Thomas, and left him at Primero
With the Duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too

Before he goe to Bed. I'll take my leave.

Gard. Not yet Sir Thomas Lovel: what's the matter?
It seems you are in haste: and if there be
No great offence belongs to't, give your Friend
Some touch of your late business: Affairs that walk
(As they say Spirits do) at midnight, have
In them a wilder Nature, then the business
That seeks dispatch by day.

Lov. My Lord, I love you;
And durst commend a secret to your ear
Much weightier then this work. The Queen's in Labor
They say in great Extremity, and fear'd
She'll with the Labour, end.

Gard. The fruit she goes with
I pray for heartily, that it may finde
Good time, and live: but for the Stock Sir Thomas,
I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Me thinks I could
Cry the Amen, and yet my Conscience sayes
She's a good Creature, and sweet Lady, do's
Deserve our better wishes.

Gard. But Sir, Sir,
Hear me, Sir Thomas, y'are a Gentleman
Of mine own way. I know you are Wise, Religious,
And let me tell you, it will ne're be well;
'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovel, tak't of me,
'Till Cranmer, Cromwel, her two hands, and she Sleep in their Graves.

Lov. Now Sir, you speak of two
The most remark'd i'th Kingdome: as for Cromwel,
Beside that of the Jewel-House, is made Master
O'th' Rolles, and the King's Secretary. Further Sir
Stands in the gap and trade of more Preferments,
With which the Lime will load him. Th' Archbishop
Is the King's hand, or tongue, and who dare speak
One syllable against him?

Gard. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that Dare, and I my self have ventur'd
To speak my mind of him: and indeed this day,
Sir (I may tell it you) I think I have Incens'd the Lords of the Councel, that he is (For so I know he is, they know he is)
A most Arch-Hereticke, a Pestilence
That does infect the Land: with which, they moved
Have broken with the King, who hath so far
Given ear to our Complaint, of his great Grace,
And Princely Care, fore-seeing those fell Mischiefs,

Our Reasons laid before him, hath commanded
To morrow morning to the Councel Board
He be convented. He's a rank weed, Sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your Affairs
I hinder you too long: Good night, Sir Thomas.

Exit Gardiner and Page.

Lov. Many good nights, my Lord, I rest your servant.

Enter King and Suffolk,

King. Charles, I will play no more to night,
My mind's not on't, you are too hard for me.

Suff. Sir, I did never win of you before.

King. But little Charles,
Nor shall not when my Fancie's on my Play.
Now Lovel, from the Queen what is the News.

Lov. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman,
I sent your Message, who return'd her thanks
In the great'st humbleness, and desir'd your Highness
Most heartily to pray for her.

King. What say'st thou? Ha?
To pray for her? What, is she crying out?

Lov. So said her woman, and that her suff'rance made
Almost each pang, a death.

King. Alas good Lady.

Suff. God safely quit her of her Burthen, and
With gentle travail, to the gladding of
Your Highness with an Heir.

King. 'Tis midnight, Charles.
Prythee to bed, and in thy Prayers remember
Th' estate of my poor Queen. Leave me alone,
For I must think of that, which company
Would not be friendly to.

Suff. I wish your Highness
A quiet night, and my good Mistress will Remember in my Prayers.

King. Charles, good night, Exit Suffolk.
Well Sir, what follows?

Enter Sir Anthony Denny.

Den. Sir, I have brought my Lord the Archbishop,
As you commanded me.

King. Ha? Canterbury?

Den. I my good Lord.

King. 'Tis true: where is he Denny?

Den. He attends your Highness pleasure.

King. Bring him to Us.

Lov. This is about that, which the Bishop spake,
I am happily come hither.

Enter Cranmer and Denny.

King. Avoid the Gallery. Lovel seemeth to stay.
Ha? I have said, be gone.

Exeunt Lovel and Denny.

Cran. I am fearfull: Wherefore frowns he thus?
'Tis his Aspect of terror. All's not well.

King. How now my Lord?
You do desire to know wherefore
I sent for you.

Cran. It is my duty
T'attend your Highness pleasure.

King. Pray you arise
My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury:
Come, you and I must walk a turn together:
I have News to tell you.

Come, come, give me your hand.
Ah my good Lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows,
I have, and most unwillingly of late

Heard

Heard many grievous ; I do say my Lord
Grievous complaints of you ; which being consider'd,
Have mov'd Us, and our Councel, that you shall
This morning come before us, where I know
You cannot with such freedome purge your self,
But that 'till further Trial, in those Charges
Which will require your Answer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Towre : you, a Brother of us
It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.

Cran. I humbly thank your Highness,
And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most throughly to be winnowed, where my Chaffe
And Coin shall flie afunder. For I know
There's none stands under more calumnious tongues,
Then I my self, poor man.

King. Stand up, good Canterbury,
Thy Truth, and thy Integrity is rooted
In us thy Friend. Give me thy hand, stand up,
Prythee let's walk. Now by my Holydame,
What manner of man are you ? My Lord, I look'd
You would have given me your Petition, that I should have ta'en some pains, to bring together
Your self, and your Accusers, and to have heard you
Without indurance further.

Cran. Most dread Liege,
The good I stand on, is my Truth and Honesty :
If they shall fail, I with mine Enemies
Will triumph o're my person, which I waigh not,
Being of those Virtues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be said against me.

King. Know you not
How your state stands i'th' world, with the whole world ?
Your Enemies are many, and not small ; their practices
Must bear the same proportion, and not ever
The Justice and the Truth o'th' question carries
The due o'th' Verdict with it ; at what ease
Might corrupt minds procure, Knaves as corrupt
To swear against you : Such things have been done.
You are potently oppos'd, and with a Malice
Of as great size. When you of better luck,
I mean in perjur'd Witness, then your Master,
Whose Minister you are, whiles here he liv'd
Upon this naughty Earth ? Go to, go to,
You take a Precipice for no leap of danger,
And woo your own destruction.

Cran. God, and your Majesty
Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
The trap is laid for me.

King. Be of good cheer,
They shall no more prevail, then we give way to :
Keep comfort to you, and this Morning see
You do appear before them. If they shall chance
In charging you with matters, to commit you :
The best persuasions to the contrary
Fail not to use ; and with what vehemencie
Th' occasion shall instruct you. If intreaties
Will render you no remedy, this Ring
Deliver them, and your Appeal to us
There make before them. Look, the good man weeps :
He's honest on mine Honour. God's blest Mother,
I swear he is true-hearted, and a soul
None better in my Kingdome. Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you. Exit Cranmer.
He has strangled all his Language in his tears.

Enter Old Lady.

Gent. within. Come back : what mean you ?

Lady. I'll not come back, the tidings that I bring
Will make my boldness in manners. Now good Angels
Fly o're thy Royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings.

King. Now by thy looks
I guess thy Message. Is the Queen deliver'd ?
Say I, and of a Boy.

Lady. I, I my Liege ;
And of a lovely Boy ; the God of heaven
Both now, and ever blest her : 'Tis a Girl
Promises Boyes hereafter. Sir, your Queen
Desires your Visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger ; 'tis as like you
As Cherry, is to Cherry

King. Lovel.

Lov. Sir.

King. Give her an hundred Marks.
I'll to the Queen.

Exit King.

Lady. An hundred Marks ? By this light, I'll ha' more.
An ordinary Groom is for such payment,
I will have more, or scold it out of him.
Said I for this, the Girl was like to him ? I'll
Have more, or else unsay't : and now, while 'tis hot,
I'll put it to the issue. Exit Lady.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury.

Cran. I hope I am not too late, and yet the Gentleman
That was sent to me from the Councel, pray'd me
To make great haste. All fast ? What means this ? Hoa ?
Who waits there ? Sure you know me ?

Enter Keeper.

King. Yes ; my Lord :
But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why ?

Keep. Your Grace must wait 'till you be call'd for.

Enter Doctor Butts.

Cran. So.

Butts. This is a piece of Malice : I am glad
I came this way so happily. The King
Shall understand it presently.

Exit Butts.

Cran. 'Tis Butts,
The King's Physician, as he past along
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me :
Pray heaven he found not my disgrace : for certain
This is of purpose laid by some that hate me,
(God turn their hearts, I never sought their malice)
To quench mine honour ; they would shame to make me
Wait else at door : a fellow Councillor
'Mong Boyes, Groomes, and Lackeyes.
But their pleasures
Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter the King, and Butts, at a Window above.

Butts. I'll shew your Grace the strangest sight.
King. What's that Butts ?

Butts.

Butts. I think your Highness saw this many a day.

King. Body a me : where is it ?

Butts. There my Lord :

The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury,
Who holds his State at door 'mongst Pursevants,
Pages, and Foot-boys.

King. Ha ? 'tis he indeed.

Is this the Honour they do one another ?

'Tis well there's one above'em yet ; I had thought
They had parted so much honesty among'em,
At least good manners ; as not thus to suffer
A man of his Place, and so near our favour
To dance attendance on their Lordships pleasures,
And at the door too, like a Poste with Packets :
By holy Mary (Butts) there's knavery ;
Let'em alone, and draw the Curtain close :
We shall hear more anon.

*A Councel Table brought in with Chairs and Stools, and placed under the State. Enter Lord Chancellour, places himself at the upper end of the Table, on the left hand:
A Seat being left void above him, as for Canterburies
Seat. Duke of Suffolk, Duke of Norfolk, Surrey, Lord Chamberlain, Gardiner, seat themselves in Order on each side. Cromwell at lower end, as Secretary.*

Char. Speak to the business, Mr. Secretary ;

Why are we met in Council ?

Crom. Please your Honours,

The chief cause concerns his Grace of Canterbury.

Gard. Ha's he had knowledge of it ?

Crom. Yes.

Norf. Who waits there ?

Keep. Without my Noble Lords.

Gard. Yes.

Keep. My Lord Archbishop :

And ha's done half an hour to know your pleasures.

Chan. Let him come in.

Keep. Your Grace may enter now.

Cranmer approaches the Councel Table.

Chan. My good Lord Archbishop, I'm very sorry
To sit here at this present, and behold
That Chair stand empty : But we all are men
In our own natures frail, and capable
Of our flesh, few are Angels ; out of which frailty
And want of wisdom, you that best should teach us,
Have misdean'd your self, and not a little :
Toward the King first, then his Lawes, in filling
The whole Realm, by your teaching and your Chaplains
(For so we are inform'd) with new opinions,
Divers and dangerous ; which are Heresies ;
And not reform'd, may prove pernicious.

Gard. Which Reformation must be sudden too
My Noble Lords, for those that tame wild Horses,
Pace'em not in their hands to make'em gentle ;
But stop their mouthes with stubborn Bits and spurre'em,
'Till they obey the manage. If we suffer
Out of our easiness and childish pitie
To one man's Honour, this contagious sickness ;
Farewell all Physick : and what follows then ?
Commotions, uproars, with a general taint
Of the whole State : of late dayes our neighbours,
The upper Germany can dearly witness :
Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

Cran. My good Lords ; Hitherto, in all the Progress
Both of my Life and Office, I have labour'd,
And with no little study, that my teaching

And the strong course of my Authority,
Might go one way, and safely ; and the end
Was ever to do well : nor is there living,
(I speak it with a single heart my Lords)
A man that more detests, more stirres against,
Both in his private Conscience, and his place,
Defacers of a publick Peace then I do :
Pray Heaven the King may never find a heart
With less Allegiance in it. Men that make
Envy, and crooked malice, nourishment ;
Dare bite the best. I do beseech your Lordships,
That in this case of Justice, my Accusers,
Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
And freely urge against me.

Suff. Nay, my Lord,

That cannot be ; you are a Counsellor,
And by that virtue no man dare accuse you. (ment,

Gard. My Lord, because we have business of more mo-
We will be short with you. 'Tis his Highness pleasure
And our content, for better tryal of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower,
Where being but a private man again,
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
More then (I fear) you are provided for.

Cran. Ah my good Lord of Winchester : I thank you,
You are alwayes my good Friend, if your will pass,
I shall both find your Lordship, Judge and Juror,
You are so mercifull. I see your end,
'Tis my undoing. Love and meekness, Lord
Become a Churchman better then Ambition :
Win straying Soules with modesty again,
Cast none away. That I shall clear my self,
Lay all the waight ye can upon my patience,
I make a little doubt as you do conscience,
In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,
But reverence to your calling, makes me modest.

Gard. My Lord, my Lord, you are a Sectary,
That's the plain truth ; your painted gloss discovers
To men that understand you, words and weakness.

Crom. My Lord of Winchester, y^e are a little,
By your good favour, too sharp ; Men so Noble,
How ever faulty, yet should find respect
For what they have been : 'tis a cruelty,
To load a falling man.

Gard. Good Mr. Secretary,
I cry your Honour mercy ; you may worst
Of all this table say so.

Crom. Why my Lord ?

Gard. Do not I know you for a Favourer
Of this new Sect ? ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound ?

Gard. Not sound I say.

Crom. Would you were half so honest :
Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.

Gard. I shall remember this bold Language.

Crom. Doe.

Remember your bold life too.

Chan. This is too much.
Forbear for shame my Lords.

Gard. I have done.

Crom. And I.

Chan. Then thus for you my Lord, it stands agreed
I take it, by all voices : that forthwith,
You be convey'd to th' Tower a Prisoner ;
There to remain till the Kings further pleasure
Be known unto us ; are you all agreed Lords.

All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,
But I must needs to th' Tower my Lords?

Gard. What other,
Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome:
Let some o'th' Guard be ready there.

Enter the Guard.

Cran. For me?
Must I go like a Traitor thither?

Gard. Receive him,
And see him safe i'th' Tower.

Cran. Stay good my Lords,
I have a little yet to say. Look there my Lords,
By virtue of that Ring, I take my cause
Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it
To a most Noble Judge, the King my Master.

Cham. This is the King's Ring.

Sur. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suff. 'Tis his right Ring, by Heav'n: I told ye all,
When we first put this dangerous stone a rowling,
'T would fall upon our selves.

Norf. Do you think my Lords
The King will suffer but the little finger
Of this man to be vex'd?

Cham. 'Tis now too certain,
How much more is his Life in value with him?
Would I were fairly out on't.

Crom. My mind gave me,
In seeking tales and Informations
Against this man, whose honesty the Devil
And his disciples only envy at,
Ye blew the fire that burns ye: now have at ye.

Enter King frowning on them, takes his Seat.

Gard. Dread Sovereign.

How much are we bound to Heaven,
In daily thanks; that gave us such a Prince;
Not only good and wise, but most Religious:
One that in all obedience, makes the Church
The chief aime of his Honour, and to strengthen
That holy duty of our dear respect,
His Royal self in Judgement comes to hear
The cause betwixt her, and this great offender.

King. You were ever good at sudden Commendations
Bishop of Winchester. But know I come not
To hear such flattery now; and in my presence,
They are too thin, and base to hide offences,
To me you cannot reach. You play the Spaniel,
And think with wagging of your tongue to win me:
But whatsoe'er thou tak'st me for; I'm sure
Thou hast a cruel Nature and a bloody.
Good man sit down: Now let me see the proudest
He, that dares most, but wag his finger at thee.
By all that's holy, he had better starve,
Then but once think his place becomes thee not.

Sur. May it please your Grace, -----

King. No Sir, it doe's not please me,
I had thought, I had had men of some understanding,
And wisdom of my Council; but I find none:
Was it discretion Lords, to let this man,
This good man (few of you deserve the title)
This honest man, wait like a lowlie Foot-boy
At Chamber door? and one, as great as you are?
Why, what a shame was this? Did my Commission
Bid ye so far forget your selves? I gave ye
Power, as he was a Counsellour to try him,

Not as a Groom: there's some of ye, I see,
More out of Malice then Integrity,
Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean,
Which ye shall never have while I do live.

Cham. Thus far

My most dread Sovereign, may it like your Grace,
To let my tongue excuse all. What was purpos'd Concerning his Imprisonment, was rather
(If there be faith in men) meant for his tryal,
And fair purgation to the world then malice,
I'm sure in me.

King. Well, well my Lords respect him,
Take him, and use him well, he's worthy of it.
I will say thus much for him, if a Prince
May be beholding to a Subject; I
Am for his love and service, so to him.

Make me no more a doe, but all embrace him;
Be friends for shame my Lords: My Lord of Canterbury
I have a Suite which you must not deny me.
That is, a fair young Maid that yet wants Baptisme,
You must be Godfather, and answer for her.

Cran. The greatest Monarch now alive may glory
In such an honour: how may I deserve it,
That am a poor and humble Subject to you?

King. Come, come my Lord, you'd spare your spoons:
You shall have two Noble Partners with you: the old
Duchess of Norfolk, and Lady Marquess of Dorset?
Will these please you?

Once more my Lord of Winchester, I charge you
Embrace, and love this man.

Gard. With a true heart,
And Brothers love I do it.

Cran. And let Heaven
Witness how dear, I hold this Confirmation. (heart,
King. Good Man, those joyfull teares shew thy true
The common voice I see is verified.

Of thee, which sayes thus: Do my Lord of Canterbury
A shrewd turn, and he's your friend for ever:
Come Lords, we trifle time away: I long
To have this young one made a Christian.
As I have made ye one Lords, one remain:
So I grow stronger, you more Honour gain. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Noise and Tumult within: Enter Porter and his man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon ye Rascals: do you take the Court for Parish Garden: ye rude Slaves, leave your gaping.

Within. Good Mr. Porter I belong to th' Larder.

Por. Belong to th' Gallows, and be hang'd ye Rogue,
Is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a dozen Crab-tree
Staves, and strong ones; these are but switches to 'em:
'le scratch your heads; you must be seeing Christenings?
Do you look for Ale, and Cakes here, you rude Rascalls?

Man. Pray Sir be patient; 'tis as much impossible,
Unless we swept them from the door with Cannons,
To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em sleep
On May-day Morning, which will never be:
We may as well push against Poule's as stir 'em.

Por. How got they in, and be hang'd?

Man.

Man. Alas I know not, how gets the Tide in ?
As much as one sound Cudgel of four foot,
(You see the poor remainder) could distribute,
I made no spare Sir

Port. You did nothing Sir.

Man. I am not Sampson; nor Sir Gay, nor Colebrand,
To mow'em down before me : but if I spar'd any
That had a head to hit, either young or old,
He or she, Cuckold or Cuckold-maker ;
Let me ne're hope to see a Chint again,
And that I would not for a Cow, God save her,

With. Do you hear, Mr. Porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, good Mr. Puppy.
Keep the door close Sirrha.

Man. What would you have me do?

Por. What should you do,
But knock 'em down by th' dozens ? Is this Moor-fields to muster in ? Or have we some strange Indian with the great Toole, come to Court, the women so besiege us ?
Bless me ! what a fry of Fonication is at the door ? On my Christian Conscience this one Christening will beget a thousand, here will be Father, God-father, and all together.

Man. The Spoons will be the bigger Sir : there is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a Brasier by his face, for o' my conscience twenty of the Dogdayes now reign in's Nose ; all that stand about him are under the Line, they need no other penance : that Fire-
Drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his Nose discharged against me ; he stands there like a Morter-piece to blow us up. There was a Habber-dasher's Wife of small Wit, near him, that rail'd upon me, till her pinck'd porrenger fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the State. I mist the Meteor once, and hit that Woman, who cryed our Clubbs, when I might see from far, some forty Truncheons draw to her succour, which were the hope o' th' Strond where she was quartered ; they fell on, I made good my place ; at length they came to th' broom-staff to me, I defi'de 'em still, when suddenly a File of Boyes behind 'em, loose shot, deliver'd such a shower of Pibbles, that I was fain to draw mine Honour in, and let 'em wunne the Work, the Devil was amongst 'em I think luredly.

Por. These are the youths that thunder at a Play-house, and fight for bitten Apples, that no Audience but the tribulation of Tower-Hill, or the Limbs of Lime-House, their dear Brothers are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum, and these they are like to dance these three dayes ; besides the running Banquet of two Beadles, that is to come.

Enter Lord Chamberlain.

L. Cham. Mercy o' me : what a Multitude are here ?
They grow still too ; from all Parts they are coming,
As if we kept a Fair here ? Where are these Porters ?
These lazy knaves ? Y' have made a fine hand fellows ?
There's a trim rabble let in : are all these
Your faithfull friends o' th' Suburbs ? We shall have Great store of room no doubt, left for the Ladies,
When they pass back from the Christening ?

Por. And't please your Honour,
We are but men, and what so many may doe,
Not being torn a peeces, we have done :
An Army cannot rule 'em.

Cham. As I live,
If the King blame me for't ; I'll lay ye all

By th' heels, and suddenly : and on your heads
Clap round Fines for neglect : y' are lazy knaves,
And here ye lye baiting of Bombards, when
Ye should do Service. Harke the Trumpets sound,
Th' are come already from the Christening,
Go break among the preas, and find a way out
To let the troop pass fairly ; or I'll find
A Marshallsey, shall hold ye play these two Moneths.

Por. Make way there, for the Princess.

Man. You great fellow,
Stand close up, or I'll make your head ake.

Por. You i' th' Chamblet, get up o' th' raile,
I'll peck you o're the pales else.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Trumpets sounding: Then two Aldermen, L. Mayor, Garter, Cranmer, Duke of Norfolk with his Marshall's Staff, Duke of Suffolk, two Noble men, bearing great standing Bowls for the Christening Gifts: Then four Noble men bearing a Canopy, under which the Duchess of Norfolk, God-mother, bearing the Child richly habited in a Mantle, &c. Trainborne by a Lady. The follows the Marchioness of Dorset, the other God-mother, and Ladies. The Troop pass once about the Stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven

From thy endless Goodness, send prosperous life,
Long, and ever happy, to the high and Mighty
Princess of England, Elizabeth.

Flourish. Enter King and Guard.

Cran. And to your Royal Grace, and the good Queen,
My Noble Partners, and my self thus pray
All comfort, joy in this most gracious Lady
Heaven ever laid up to make Parents happy,
May hourly fall upon ye.

King. Thank you good Lord Arch-bishop :
What is her Name ?

Cran. Elizabeth.

King. Stand up Lord,
With this Kiss, take my Blessing : God protect thee,
Into whose hand, I give thy Life.

Cran. Amen.

King. My Noble Gossips, y' have been too Prodigal,
I thank ye heartily : So shall this Lady.
When she has so much English.

Cran. Let me speak Sir,
For Heaven now bids me ; and the words I utter,
Let none think Flattery ; for they'll find 'em Truth.
This Royal Infant, Heaven still move about her,
Though in her Cradle ; yet now promises
Upon this Land a thousand thousand Blessings,
Which time shall bring to ripeness : She shall be,
(But few now living can behold that goodness)
A Pattern to all Princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed : Saba was never More covetous of Wisdom, and fair Virtue
Then this pure Soul shall be. All Princely Graces
That mould up a mighty Piece as this is,
With all the Virtues that attend the Good,
Shall still be doubled on her. Truth shall Nurse her,

Holy

Holy and heavenly thoughts still Counsel her :
 She shall be lov'd and fear'd. Her own shall bless her ;
 Her Foes shake like a Field of beaten Corn,
 And hang their heads with sorrow :
 Good growes with her.
 In her dayes, Every Man shall eat in safety,
 Under his own Vine what he plants ; and sing
 The merry Songs of Peace to all his Neighbours.
 God shall be truly known, and those about her,
 From her shall read the perfect way of honour,
 And by those claim their Greatness ; not by Bloud.
 Nor shall this peace sleep with her : But as when
 The Bird of Wonder dyes, the Maiden Phoenix,
 Her ashes new create another heir,
 As great in admiration as her self.
 So shall she leave her Blessedness to One,
 (When Heaven shall call her from this cloud of darknes)
 Who, from the sacred Ashes of her honour
 Shall Star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,
 And so stand fix'd. Peace, Plenty, Love, Truth, Terrour,
 That were the Servants to this chosen Infant;
 Shall then be his. and like a Vine grow to him ;
 Where ever the bright Sun of heaven shall shine,
 His honour, and the greatness of his name,
 Shall be, and make new Nations. He shall flourish,

And like a Mountain Cedar, reach his branches,
 To all the Plains about him : Our Children's Children
 Shall see this, and bless Heaven.

King. Thou speakest wonders.

Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England,
 An aged Princess ; many dayes shall see her,
 And yet no day without a deed to Crown it.
 Would I had known no more : But she must dye,
 She must, the Saints must have her ; yet a Virgin,
 A most unspotted Lilly shall she pass
 To th'ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

King. O Lord Archbishop
 Thou hast made me now a man : never, before
 This happy Child, did I get any thing.
 This Oracle of comfort, has so pleas'd me,
 That when I am in heaven, I shall desire
 To see what this child does, and praise my Maker,
 I thank ye all. To you my good Lord Mayor,
 And you good Brethren, I am much beholding :
 I have receiv'd much honour by your presence,
 And ye shall find me thankfull. Lead the way Lords,
 Ye must all see the Queen, and she must thank ye.
 She will be sick else. This day, no man think
 'Has business at his house ; for all shall stay :
 This little-One shall make it Holy-day. Exeunt.

The Epilogue.

TListen to one, this Play can never please
 All that are here : Some come to take their ease,
 And sleep out an Act or two ; but those we feare
 W' have affrighted with our Trumpets : so 'tis clear,
 They'll say it's naught. Others to hear the City
 Abus'd extremely, and to cry that's witty,
 Which we have not done neither ; that I fear

All the expected good w' are like to hear,
 For this Play at this time, is only in
 The mercifull construction of good Women;
 For such a one we shew'd 'em : If they smile,
 And say 'twill doe ; I know within a while,
 All the best men are ours ; for 'tis ill hap,
 If they hold, when their Ladies bid 'em clap.

F I N I S.

THE PROLOGUE.

IN Troy there lies the Scene: from Iles of Greece
 The Princes Orgillous, their high blood chaf'd,
 Have to the Port of Athens sent their ships
 Fraught with the ministers and instruments
 Of cruel Warr: Sixty and nine that wore
 Their Crownets Regal, from th' Athenian Bay
 Put forth toward Phrygia, and their vow is made
 To ransack Troy, within whose strong Immures
 The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus Queen,
 With wanton Paris sleeps, and that's the Quarrel.
 To Tenedos they come,
 And the deep-drawing Barks do there disgorge
 Their Warlike frautage: now on Dardan Plains
 The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
 Their brave Pavillions. Priams six-gated City,
 Dardan, and Timbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien,
 And Antenonidus with massy Staples
 And corresponsive and fulfilling Bolts
 Stirr up the Sons of Troy.
 Now Expectation tickling skittish spirits,
 On one and other side, Troian and Greek,
 Sets all on hazard. And hither am I come,
 A Prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
 Of Authors pen, or Actors voice; but suited
 In like conditions, as our Argument;
 To tell you (fair Beholders) that our Play
 Leaps ore the vaunt and firstlings of those broils,
 Beginning in the middle: starting thence away,
 To what may be digested in a Play:
 Like, or find fault, do as your pleasures are,
 Now good, or bad, 'tis but the chance of Warr.

THE TRAGEDY OF

Troilus and Cressida,

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Pandarus and Troilus.

Troilus.

C All here my Varlet, Ile unarm again.
Why should I warr without the walls of Troy
That find such cruel battel here within?
Each Troian that is master of his heart,
Let him to field, Troilus alas hath none.

Pan. Will this geer ne'r be mended? (strength,

Troi. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their Feitce to their skill, and to their feircenefs Valiant:
But I am weaker than a womans tear:
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance;
Lefs valiant than the Virgin in the night,
And skillefs as unpractis'd infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this: For my part, Ile not meddle nor make no farther. He that will have a Cake out of the Wheat, must needs tarry the grinding.

Troi. Have I not tarried?

Pan. I the grinding; but you must tarry the boulting.

Troi. Have I not tarried?

Pan. I the boulting; but you must tarry the leav'ning.

Troi. Still have I tarried.

Pan. I, to the leavening: but heres yet in the word hereafter, the Kneading, the making of the Cake, the heating of the Oven, and the Baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

Troi. Patience her self, what Goddes ere she be,
Doth lesser blench at sufferance, than I do:

At Priams Royal Table I sit;
And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,
So (Traitor) then she comes, when she is thence—

Pan. Well:

She look'd yesternight fairer, than ever I saw her look,
Or any woman else.

Troi. I was about to tell thee, when my heart,
As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain,
Left Hektor, or my father should perceive me:
I have (as when the Sun doth light a-scorn)
Buried this sigh, in wrinkle of a smile:
But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness,
Is like that mirth, Fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. And her hair were not somewhat darker than Helens, well go to, there were no more comparison between the Women. But for my part she is my Kinswoman, I would not (as they tearm it) praise it, but I would some-body had heard her talk yesterday as I did: I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but—

Troi. O Pandarus! I tell thee Pandarus;
When I do tell thee, there my hopes lye drown'd:
Reply not in how many Fadomes deep
They lye indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad in Cressids love. Thou answer'st she is Fair,
Powr'st in the open Ulcer of my heart,
Her Eyes, her Hair, her Cheek, her Gate, her Voice,
Handlest in thy discourse. O that her Hand
(In whose comparison, all whites are Ink
Writing their own reproach) to whose soft seizure,
The Cignets Down is harsh, and spirit of Sense
Hard as the Palm of Ploughman. This thou tell'st me;
As true thou tell'st me, when I say I love her:
But saying thus, instead of Oyl and Balm,
Thou lai'st in every gash that love hath given me,
The Knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Troi. Thou do'st not speak so much.

Pan. Faith, Ile not meddle in't. Let her be as she is, if she be fair, 'tis the better for her: and she be not, she ha's the mends in her own hands.

Troi. Good Pandarus; How now Pandarus?

Pan. I have had my labour for my travel, ill thought-on of her, and ill thought on of you: Gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Troi. What art thou angry Pandarus? what with me?

Pan. Because she is Kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen, and she were not Kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not and she were a Black-a-Moor, 'tis all one to me.

Troi. Say I she is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a Fool to stay behind her Father: Let her to the Greeks, and so Ile tell her the next time I see her: for my part,
Ile meddle nor make no more i'th' matter.

Troi. Pandarus?

Pan. Not I.

Troi. Sweet Pandarus.

Pan. Pray you speak no more to me, I will leave all as I found it, and there's an end Exit Pand.

Sound Alarm

Troi. Peace you ungracious Clamors, peace rude sounds,
Fools on both sides, Helen must needs be fair,
When with your blood, you daily paint her thus.

I cannot fight upon this Argument :
It is too Rar'd a subject for my Sword,
But Pandarus : O gods ! How do you plague me ?
I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar,
And he's as teachy to be woo'd to woe,
As she is stubborn, chaf't, against all sure.
Tell me Apollo for thy Daphnes Love
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we :
Her bed is India , there she lyes, a Pearl,
Between our Ilium, and where she resides
Let it be call'd the mild and wandering flood ,
Our self the Merchant, and this sayling Pandar,
Our doubtful hope, our convoy and our Bark.

Alarm. Enter Aeneas.

Aeneas. How now Prince Troilus ?
Wherefore not afield ?

Troi. Because not there ; this womans answer sorts,
For womanish it is to be from thence :
What news Aeneas from the field to day ?

Aeneas. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Troi. By whom Aeneas ?

Aeneas. Troilus by Menelaus.

Troi. Let Paris bleed, 'tis but a scar to scorn.

Paris is gor'd with Menelaus horn. Alarm.

Aeneas. Hark what good sport is out of town to day.

Troi. Better at home, if would I might were may ;
But to the sport abroad, are you bound thither ?

Aeneas. In all swift haste.

Troi. Come go we then together. Exeunt.

Enter Cressid and her man.

Cre. Who were those went by ?

Man. Queen Hecuba and Helen.

Cre. And whither go they ?

Man. Up to the Eastern Tower,
Whose height commands as subject all the vale,
To see the barrel ; Hektor whose patience,
Is as a Virtue fixt, to day was mov'd :
He chides Andromache, and strook his Armorer,
And like as there were husbandry in Warr
Before the Sun rose, he was harvest light,
And to the field goes he ; where every flower
Did as a Prophet weep what it foresay,
In Hektor's wrath.

Cre. What was his cause of anger ?

Man. The noise goes this ;

There is among the Greeks,
A Lord of Trojan blood, Nephew to Hektor.
They call him Ajax.

Cre. Good ; and what of him ?

Man. They say he is a very man per se and stands alone.

Cre. So do all men , unless they are drunk, sick , or have no legs.

Man. This man, Lady, hath robb'd many beasts of their particular additions, he is as valiant as the Lion, churlish as the Bear , slow as the Elephant : a man into whom nature hath so crowded humors, that his valour is crusht into folly , his folly sauced with discretion : there is no man hath a virtue, that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attaint, but he carries some stain of it. He is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair, he hath the joynts of every thing, but every thing so out of joynt, that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use ; or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cre. But how should this man that makes me smile, make Hektor angry ?

Man. They say he yesterday cop'd Hektor in the bat-tel and strook him down, the disdain and shame whereof, hath ever since kept Hektor fasting and waking.

Enter Pandarus.

Cre. Who comes here ?

Man. Madam, your Uncle Pandarus.

Cre. Hektor's a gallant man.

Man. As may be in the world Lady.

Pan. What's that ? what's that ?

Cre. Good morrow Uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow Cozen Cressid : what do you talk of ? good morrow Alexander : how do you Cozen ? when were you at Ilium ?

Cre. This morning Uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of when I came ? VVas Hektor arm'd and gone ere ye came to Ilium ? Helen was not up ? was she ?

Cre. Hektor was gone, but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'ne so ; Hektor was stirring early.

Cre. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry ?

Cre. So he sayes here.

Pan. True he was so ; I know the cause too, he'll lay about him to day I can tell them that, and there's Troilus will not come farr behind him , let them take heed of Troilus ; I can tell them that too.

Cre. What is he angry too ?

Pan. Who Troilus ?

Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cre. Oh Jupiter ; there's no comparison.

Pan. What not between Troilus and Hektor ? do you know a man if you see him ?

Cre. I, if I ever saw him before and knew him.

Pan. Well I say Troilus is Troilus.

Cre. Then you say as I say,

For I am sure he is not Hektor.

Pan. No, nor Hektor is not Troilus in some degrees.

Cre. 'Tis just, to each of them he is himself.

Pan. Himself ? alas poor Troilus I would he were.

Cre. So he is.

Pan. Condition I had gone bare-foot to India.

Cre. He is not Hektor.

Pan. Himself ? no ? he's not himself , would a were himself ; well, the gods are above, time must friend or end : well Troilus well, I would my heart were in her body ; no, Hektor is not a better man than Troilus.

Cre. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cre. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th'others not come too't, you shall tell me another tale when th'others come too't : Hektor shall not have his will this year.

Cre. He shall not need it if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities.

Cre. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cre. 'Twould not become him, his own's better.

Pan. You have no judgement Neece ; Helen her self swore th'other day, that Troilus for a brown favour (for so 'tis I must confes.) not brown neither.

Cre. No, but brown.

Pan. Faith to say truth, brown and not brown

Cre. To say the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cre. VVhy Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cre. Then Troilus should have too much, if she prais'd

Bbb 2

him

him above, his complexion is higher than his, he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion I had as lieve Helens golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you,
I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cre. Then she's a merry Greek indeed.

Pan. Nay I am sure she does, she came to him th'other day into the compass window, and you know he has not past three or four hairs on his chin.

Cre. Indeed a Tapsters Arithmetique may soon bring his particulars therein, to a total.

Pand. Why he is very young, and yet will he within three pound lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cre. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter?

Pan. But to prove to you that Helen loves him, she came and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin.

Cre. Juno have mercy, how came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know 'tis dimpled,
I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cre. Oh he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cre. Oh yes, and 'twere a clow'd in Autumn.

Pan. Why go to then, but to prove to you that Hellen loves Troilus.

Cre. Troilus will stand to the Proof, if you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus? why he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cre. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i'th'shell.

Pan. I cannot chuse but laugh to think how she tickled his chin, indeed she has a marvel's white hand I must needs confels.

Cre. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cre. Alas poor chin? many a wart is richer.

Pand. But there was such laughing, Queen Hecuba laugh't that her eyes run ore.

Cre. With Millstones.

Pan. And Cassandra laugh't.

Cre. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes: did her eyes run ore too?

Pan. And Hector laugh't.

Cre. At what was all this laughing?

Pand. Marry at the white hair that Hellen spied on Troilus chin.

Cre. And 'thad been a green hair, I should have laugh't too.

Pand. They laugh't not so much at the hair, as at his pretty answer.

Cre. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, here's but two and fifty hairs on your chin; and one of them is white.

Cre. This is her question.

Pand. That's true, make no question of that: two and fifty hairs quoth he, and one white, that white hair is my Father, and all the rest are his Sons. Jupiter quoth she, which of these hairs is Paris my husband? The forked one quoth he, pluck't out and give it him: but there was such laughing, and Helen so blusht, and Paris so chaf't, and all the rest so laugh't, that it past.

Cre. So let it now,
For it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well Cozen,
I told you a thing yesterday, think on't.

Cre. So I do.

Pand. Ile be sworn 'tis true, he will weep you an 'twere a man born in April. Sound a retreat.

Cre. And Ile spring up in his tears, an'twere a nettle against May.

Pan. Hark they are comming from the field, shall we stand up here and see them, as they pass toward Ilium? good Neece do, sweet Neece Cressida.

Cre. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place, here we may see most bravely, Ile tell you them all by their names, as they pass by, but mark Troilus above the rest.

Enter Aeneas.

Cre. Speak not so loud.

Pan. That's Aeneas, is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy I can tell you, but mark Troilus, you shall see anon.

Cre. Who's that? Enter Antenor.

Pan. That's Antenor, he has a shrew'd wit I can tell you, and he's a man good enough, he's one o'th' soundest judgment in Troy whosoever, and a proper man of person: when comes Troilus? Ile shew you Troilus anon, if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cre. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cre. If he do, the rich shall have more.

Enter Hector.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that there's a fellow. Go thy way Hector, there's a brave man Neece, O brave Hector! Look how he looks? there's a countenance; is't not a brave man?

Cre. O brave man!

Pan. Is a not? It does a mans heart good, look you what hacks are on his Helmet, look you yonder, do you see? Look you there? There's no jesting, laying on, tak't off who will, as they say, there be hacks.

Cre. Be those with swords?

Enter Paris.

Pan. Swords, any thing he cares not, and the Devil come to him, it's all one, by Godslid it does ones heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris: look ye yonder Neece, is't not a gallant man too, is't not? Why this is brave now: who said he came hurt home to day? He's not hurt, why this will do Helens heart good now, ha? Would I could see Troilus now, you shall see Troilus anon.

Cre. Whose that?

Enter Helenus.

Pan. That's Helenus, I marvel where Troilus is, that's Helenus, I think he went not forth to day: that's Helenus.

Cre. Can Helenus fight Uncle?

Pan. Helenus no: yes he'll fight indifferent well, I marvel where Troilus is; hark, do you not hear the people cry Troilus? Helenus is a Priest.

Cre. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

Enter Troilus.

Pan. Where? Yonder? That's Deiphobus. 'Tis Troilus! There's a man Neece, hem; Brave Troilus the Prince of Chivalry.

Cre. Peace, for shame peace.

Pand. Mark him, note him: O brave Troilus: look well upon him Neece, look you how his Sword is bloudied, and his Helm more hackt than Hectors, and how he looks looks, and how he goes, O admirable youth! he ne'r saw three and twenty. Goe thy way Troilus, go thy way, had I a sister were a Grace, or a daughter a Goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is durt to him, and I warrant, Hellen to change, would give money to boot.

Enter common Souldiers.

Cre. Here come more.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts, chaff and bran, chaff and bran; porridge after meat. I could live and dye i'th' eyes of Troilus. Ne'r look, ne'r look; the Eagles are gone, Crows and Daws, Crows and Daws: I had rather be such a man as Troilus, then Agamemnon, and all Greece.

Cre. There is among the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles? a Dray-man, a Porter, a very Camel.

Cre. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well? Why have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and so forth, the Spice, and salt that seasons a man?

Cre. I, a minc'd man, and then to be bak'd with no Date in the pye, for then the mans dates out.

Pan. You are such another woman, one knows not at what ward you lie.

Cre. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecie, to defend mine honesty; my Mask, to defend my beauty, and you to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cre. Nay Ile watch you for that, and that's one of the chiefest of them too; if I cannot ward what I would not have hir, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow, unless it swell past hiding, and then is past watching.

Enter Boy.

Pan. You are such another.

Boy. Sir, my Lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own house.

Pan. Good Boy tell him I come, I doubt he be hurt. Fare ye well good Neece.

Cre. Adieu Unkle.

Pan. Ile be with you Neece by and by.

Cre. To bring Unkle.

Pan. I, a token from Troilus.

Cre. By the same token, you are a Bawd. Exit Pand.

Words, vows, gifts, tears, and loves full sacrifice,
He offers in anothers enterprife:
But more in Troilus thousand fold I see,
Than in the glass of Pandarus's praise may be;
Yet hold I off. Women are Angels wooing,
Things won are done, the souls joy lyes in doing:
That she belov'd, knows nought, that knows not this:
Men prize the thing ungain'd, more than it is.
That she was never yet, that ever knew
Love go so sweet, as when desire did sue:
Therefore this maxim out of love I teach;
"Achievement, is command: ungain'd, beseech."
That though my hearts Contents firm love doth bear,
Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear. Exit.

Sonet. Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Ulysses, Diomedes, Menelaus, with others.

Agam. Princes:

What grief hath set the Jaundies on your cheeks?
The ample proposition that hopes makes
In all designs, begun on Earth below
Fails in the promist largenets: checks and disasters
Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd.
As knots by the conflux of meeting sap,
Infect the sound Pine, and diverts his Grain
Tortive and errant from his course of growth.
Nor Princes, is it matter new to us,
That we come short of our suppose so farr,
That after seven years siege, yet Troy walls stand,
Sith every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have Record, tryal did draw
Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,
And that unbodied figure of the thought
That gave't surmised shape. Why then (you Princes)
Do you with cheeks abash'd, behold our works,
And think them shame, which are (indeed) nought else
But the protractive trials of great Jove,
To find persistive constancy in men?
The fineness of which Metal is not found
In Fortunes love: for then, the Bold and Coward,
The Wise and Fool, the Artist and un-read,
The hard and soft, seem all affin'd, and kin.
But in the Wind and Tempest of her frown,
Distinction with a loud and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away;
And what hath mass, or matter by it self,
Lies rich in Virtue, and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godly fear,
Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
Thy latest words.

In the reproof of Chance,
Lies the true proof of men: The Sea being smooth,
How many shallow bauble Boats dare fail
Upon her patient breast, making their way
With those of noble bulk?
But let the Ruffian Boreas once enrage
The gentle Thetis, and anon behold
The strong ribb'd Bark, through liquid mountains cuts
Bounding between the two moist Elements
Like Persus Horse. Where's then the sawcy Boat,
Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
Co-rival'd Greatness? Either to harbour fled,
Or made a Toft for Neptune. Even so,
Doth valours shew, and valours worth divide
In storms of Fortune.

For, in her ray and brightness,
The Herd hath more annoyance by the Brize
Than by the Tyger: But, when the splitting wind
Makes flexible the knees of knotted Oaks,
And flies fled under shade, why then
The thing of Courage,
As rowz'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
And with an accent tun'd in self-same key,
Retires to chiding Fortune.

Ulys. Agamemnon.

Thou great Commander, Nerve, and Bone of Greece,
Heart of our Numbers, soul, and only spirit,
In whom the tempers, and the minds of all
Should be shut up; Hear what Ulysses speaks,
Besides th'applause and approbation
The which (most mighty) for thy place and may,

And thou most reverend for thy stretcht-out life,
I give to both your speeches : which were such,
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold up high in Brass : and such again
As venerable Nestor (hatch'd in Silver)
Should with a bond of ayre , strong as the Axeltree
On which the Heavens ride , knit all Greeks ears
To his experienc'd tongue : yet let it please both (Thou Great, and Wife) to hear Vlysses speak.

Aga. Speak Prince of Ithaca, and be't of less expect;
That matter needless of importless burthen
Divide thy lips : then we are confident
When rank Thersites opes his Mastick jaws,
We shall hear Musick, Wit, and Oracle.

Vlyss. Troy yet upon his basis had been down ,
And the great Hectors sword had lack'd a Master
But for these instances.

The speciality of Rule hath been neglected ;
And look how many Grecian Tents do stand
Hollow upon this Plain, so many hollow Factions.
When that the General is not like the Hive,
To whom the Forragers shall all repair,
What Hony is expected ? Degree being vizarded,
Th' unworthiest shews as fairly in the Mask.
The Heavens themselves, the Planets, and this Centre,
Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture, course, proportion, season; form,
Office, and custom, in all line of Order:
And therefore is the glorious Planet Sol
In noble eminence, enthron'd and sphear'd
Amidst the other, whose med'cinable eye
Corrects the ill Aspects of Planets evil,
And posts like the Command'ment of a King ,
Sans check, to good and bad: But when the Planets
In evil mixture to disorder wander,
What Plagues, and what portents, what mutiny?
What raging of the Sea ? shaking of Earth ?
Commotion in the Winds ? Frights, changes, horrors,
Divert, and crack, rend and deracinate
The unity, and married calm of States
Quite from their fixture ? O, when degree is shak'd ,
(Which is the Ladder to all high designs)
The enterprize is sick. How could Communities,
Degrees in Schools, and brother-hoods in Cities,
Peaceful Commerce from dividable shores ,
The Primogenitive, and due of Birth ,
Prerogative of Age, Crowns, Scepters, Lawrels,
(But by degree) stand in Authentique place ?
Take but degree away, un-tune that string,
And hark what Discord follows : each thing meets
In meer oppugnancy. The bounded Waters,
Should lift their bosomes higher than the Shores.
And make a sopp of all this solid Globe :
Strength should be Lord of imbecillity,
And the rude Son should strike his father dead :
Force should be right, or rather, right and wrong,
(Between whose endless jarr, justice resides)
Should lose their names, and so should justice too.
Then every thing includes it self in Power ,
Power into Will, Will into Appetite,
And Appetite (an universal Wolf ,
So doubly seconded with Will, and Power)
Must make perforce an universal prey ,
And last, eat up himself.

Great Agamemnon :

This Chaos, when degree is suffocate,

Follows the choaking :

And this neglect on of Degree, is it
That by a pace goes backward in a purpose
It hath to climb. The General's disdain'd
By him one step below ; he, by the next,
That next, by him beneath : so every step
Exampl'd by the first pace that is sick
Of his Superiour, grows to an envious Feaver
Of pale, and bloodless Emulation.

And 'tis this Feaver that keeps Troy on foot,
Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length ,
Troy in our weakness lives, not in her strength.

Nest. Most wisely hath Vlysses here discover'd
The Feaver, whereof all our power is sick.

Aga. The Nature of the sickness found (Vlysses)
What is the remedy ?

Vlyss. The great Achilles, whom Opinion crowns
The finew; and the fore-hand of our Host,
Having his ear full of his ayery Fame,
Grows dainty of his worth, and in his Tent
Lies mocking our designs. With him, Patroclus,
Upon a lazy Bed, the live-long day
Breaks scurril Jests,
And with ridiculous and aukward action,
(Which Slanderer, he imitation call's)
He Pageants us. Sometime great Agamemnon ,
Thy toplefs deputation he puts on ;
And like a strutting Player, whose conceit
Lies in his Ham-string, and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden Dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretcht footing, and the Seaffolage , (Such to-be-pitted, and ore-rested seeming
He acts thy Greatness in :) and when he speaks,
'Tis like a Chime a mending. With tearms unsquar'd ,
Which from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropt,
Would seem Hyperboles. At this fusty stuff ,
The large Achilles (on his prest-bed lolling)
From his deep Chest, laughs out a lowd applause,
Cries excellent, 'tis Agamemnon just.
Now play me Nestor ; hum; and stroke thy beard
As he, being drest to some Oration,
That's done, as neer as the extremest ends
Of paralels ; as like, as Vulcan and his wife,
Yet good Achilles still cries excellent,
'Tis Nestor right. Now play him (me) Patroclus,
Arming to answer in a night-Alarm,
And then (forsooth) the faint defects of Age
Must be the Scene of mirth, to cough and spit ,
And with a palsie fumbling on his Gorget,
Shake in and out the River : and at this sport
Sir Valour dies; cries, O enough Patroclus,
Or, give me ribs of Steel, I shall split all
In pleasure of my spleen. And in this fashion,
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Severals and generals of grace exact,
Atchievements, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
Success or loss, what is, or is not, serves
As stuff for these two, to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these twain,
Who (as Vlysses sayes) Opinion crowns
With an Imperial voyce, many are infect :
Ajax is grown self-will'd, and bears his head
In such a reign, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles, and keeps his Tent like him ;
Makes factious Feasts, rails on our state of Warr

Bold as an Oracle, and sets Thersites
A slave (whose Gall coins slanders like a Mint,)
To match us in comparisons with dirt,
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank soever rounded in with danger.

Ulys. They tax our Policy, and call it Cowardice,
Count Wisdom as no member of the Warr,
Fore-stall prescience, and esteem no act
But that of hand : The still and mental parts,
That do contrive how many hands shall strike
When fitness calls them on, and know by measure
Of their observant toyl, the Enemies waight,
Why this hath not a fingers dignity:
They call this Bedwork, Mapp'ry, Cloister-Warr:
So that the Ramm that batters down the wall,
For the great swing and rudeness of his poize,
They place before his hand that made the Engine,
Or those that with the fineness of their souls,
By Reason guide his execution.

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles horse
Makes many Thetis sons. Tucket

Aga. What Trumpet? Look Menelaus.

Men. From Troy. Enter Aeneas.

Aga. What would you 'fore our Tent?

Aene. Is this great Agamemnons Tent, I pray you?

Aga. Even this.

Aene. May one that is a Herald, and a Prince,
Do a fair message to his Kingly ears?

Aga. With fury stronger than Achilles arm,
'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voyce
Call Agamemnon Head and General.

Aene. Fair leave, and large security. How may
A stranger to those most Imperial looks,
Know them from eyes of other Mortals?

Aga. How?

Aene. I : I ask, that I might waken reverence,
And on the cheek be ready with a blush
Modest as morning, when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phæbus :

Which is that God in office guiding men?
Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

Aga. This Trojan scorns us, or the men of Troy
Are ceremonious Courtiers.

Aene. Courtiers as free, as debonnaire; unarm'd,
As bending Angels: that's their Fame, in peace:
But when they would seem Souldiers, they have galls,
Good arms, strong joynts, true swords, and Joves accord
Nothing so full of heart. But peace Aeneas,
Peace Trojan, lay thy finger on thy lips,
The worthiness of praise distains his worth,
If that he prais'd himself, bring the praise forth:
What the repining enemy commends,
That breath fame blows, that praise sole pure transcends.

Aga. Sir, you of Troy, call you your self Aeneas?

Aene. I Greek, that is my name.

Aga. What's your affair I pray you?

Aene. Sir pardon, 'tis for Agamemnons ears.

Aga. He hears nought privately
That comes from Troy.

Aene. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper him,
I bring a Trumpet to awake his ear,
To set his sense on the attentive beare,
And then to speak.

Aga. Speak frankly as the wind,
It is not Agamemnons sleeping hour;
That thou shalt know Trojan he is awake,

He tells thee so himself.

Aene. Trumpet blow loud.

Send thy brass voyce through all these lazy Tents,
And every Greek of metal, let him know,
What Troy means fairly, shall be spoke aloud.

The Trumpets sound.

We have great Agamemnon, here in Troy,
A Prince call'd Hector, Priam is his Father:
Who in this dull and long continu'd Truce
Is rusty grown, He bad me take a Trumpet,
And to this purpose speak: Kings, Princes, Lords,
If there be one among't the fayr 'st of Greece,
That holds his Honor higher than his ease,
That seeks his praise, more than he fears his peril,
That knows his Valour, and knows not his Fear,
That loves his Mistress more than in confession,
(With truant vows to her own lips he loves)
And dare avow her Beauty, and her Worth,
In other arms than hers: to him this Challenge.

Hector, in view of Troians, and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it.
He hath a Lady, wiser, fairer, truer,
Than ever Greek did compass in his arms,
And will to morrow with his Trumpet call,
Midway between your Tents, and walls of Troy,
To rowze a Grecian that is true in love.
If any come, Hector shall honour him:
If none, he'll say in Troy when he retires,
The Grecian Dames are sunburnt, and not worth
The splinter of a Lance: Even so much.

Aga. This shall be told our Lovers, Lord Aeneas.
If none of them have soul in such a kind,
We left them all at home: But we are Souldiers,
And may that Souldier a meer recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love;
If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meers Hector, if none, Ile be he.

Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man
When Hectors Granfire suckt; he is old now,
But if there be not in our Grecian mould,
One Noble man, that hath one spark of fire
To answer for his Love; tell him from me,
Ile hide my Silver beard in a Gold Beaver,
And in my Vantbrace put this wither'd brawn,
And meeting him, will tell him, that my Lady
Was fairer than his Grandame, and as chaste
As may be in the world: his youth in flood,
Ile pawn this truth with my three drops of blood.

Aene. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth.

Ulys. Amen.

Aga. Fair Lord Aeneas,

Let me touch your hand:

To our Pavillion shall I lead you first:

Achilles shall have word of this intent,

So shall each Lord of Greece from Tent to Tent;

Your self shall Feast with us before you goe,

And find the welcome of a Noble Foe.

Exeunt.

Manent Ulysses, and Nestor.

Ulys. Nestor.

Nest. What sayes Ulysses?

Ulys. I have a young conception in my brain,
Be you my time to bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is't?

Ulys. This 'tis:

Blunt wedges rive hard knots: the seeded Pride
That hath to this maturity blown up

In

In rank Achilles, must or now be cropt,
Or (shedding) breed a Nursery of like evil
To over-bulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how?

Vlyf. This challenge that the gallant Hektor sends,
How ever it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,
Whose grossness little characters sum up,
And in the publication make no strain,
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya, though (Apollo knows)
'Tis dry enough, will with great speed of judgement,
I, with celerity, find Hektor's purpose
Pointing on him.

Vlyf. And wake him to the answer, think you?

Nest. Yes, 'tis most meet; whom may you else oppose
That can from Hektor bring his Honor off,
If not Achilles; though't be a sportful Combate,
Yet in this tryal, much opinion dwells.
For here the Troians tast our deer'st repute
With their fin'st Palate: and trust to me Vlyf,
Our imputation shall be oddly poiz'd
In this wild action. For the success
(Although particular) shall give a scantling
Of good or bad, unto the General:
And in such Indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent Volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the Gyant-mass
Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd,
He that meets Hektor, issues from our choice;
And choice being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes Merit her election, and doth boyl
As 'twere, from forth us all: a man distill'd
Out of our Virtues; who miscarrying,
What heart from hence receives the conq'ring part
To steel a strong opinion to themselves
Which entertain'd, Limbs are his instruments,
In noless working, than are Swords and Bows
Directive by the Limbs.

Vlyf. Give pardon to my speech:

Therefore 'tis meet, Achilles meet not Hektor:
Let us (like Merchants) shew our fowlest Wares,
And think perchance they'll sell: if not,
The lustre of the better yet to shew,
Shall shew the better. Do not consent,
That ever Hektor and Achilles meet:
For both our Honour, and our Shame in this,
Are dogg'd with two strange Followers.

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes: what are they?

Vlyf. What glory our Achilles shares from Hektor,
(Were he not proud) we all should wear with him:
But he already is too insolent,
And we were better parch in Africk Sun,
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
Should he scape Hektor fair. If he were foyld,
Why then we did our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No, make a Lott'ry,
And by device let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hektor: Among our selves,
Give him allowance as the worthier man,
For that will physick the great Myrmidon
Who broyls in lowd applause, and make him fall
His Crest, that powder than blew Iris bends.
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
Wee'll dress him up in voyces: if he fail,

Yet go we under our opinion still,
That we have better men. But hit or miss,
Our projects life this shape of fence assumes,
Ajax imploy'd, plucks down Achilles Plumes.

Nest. Now Ulysses, I begin to rellish thy advice,
And I will give a tast of it forthwith
To Agamemnon, goe we to him straight;
Two Currs shall tame each other, Pride alone
Must tarr the Mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone, Exeunt.

Enter Ajax, and Therites.

Aja. Therites?

Ther. Agamemnon, how if he had Biles (full) all over generally.

Aja. Therites?

Ther. And those Biles did run, say so; did not the General run, were not that a botchy core?

Aja. Dogg.

Ther. Then there would come some matter from him:
I see none now.

Aja. Thou Bitch-Wolfs Son, canst thou not hear?
Feel then. Strikes him.

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee thou Mungrel beef-witted Lord.

Aja. Speak then you whinid'st leaven speak, I will beat thee into handfomness.

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness:
but I think thy horse will sooner con an Oration, than thou learn a prayer without book: Thou canst strike, canst thou? A red Murren o'thy Jades tricks.

Aja. Toads stool, learn me the Proclamation.

Ther. Doe'st thou think I have no sence thou strik'st

Aja. The Proclamation. (me thus?)

Ther. Thou art proclam'd a fool, I think.

Aja. Do not Porpentine, do not: my fingers itch.

Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee, I would make thee the lothsom'st scab in Greece.

Aja. I say the Proclamation.

Ther. Thou grumblest and raylest every hour on A- chilles, and thou art as full of envy at his greatness, as Cer- berus is at Proserpina's beauty. I, that thou bark'st at him.

Aja. Mistress Therites.

Ther. Thou should'st strike him.

Aja. Coblose.

Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a Sailor breaks a bisket.

Aja. You horfen Curr.

Ther. Doe, doe.

Aja. Thou stool for a Witch.

Ther. I doe, doe, thou sodden-witted Lord: thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows: An Afinico may tutor thee. Thou scurvy valiant Afs, thou art here but to thresh Troians, and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a Barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels thou.

Aja. You dogg.

Ther. You scurvy Lord.

Aja. You Curr.

Ther. Mars his Ideot: do rudeness, do Camel, do, do.

Enter Achilles, and Parroclus.

Achil. Why how now Ajax? wherefore do you this?
How now Therites? what's the matter man?

Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. I, what's the matter?

Ther. Nay look upon him.

Achil. So I do, what's the matter?

Ther.

Ther. Nay but regard him well.

Achil. Well, why I do so.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him: for whoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.

Achil. I know that fool.

Ther. I, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.

Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicum of wit he utters: his evasions have ears thus long. I have bobb'd his Brain more than he has beat my bones: I will buy nine Sparrows for a penny, and his Pianater is not worth the ninth part of a Sparrow. This Lord (Achilles) Ajax who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head, Ile tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What?

Ther. I say this Ajax——

Achil. Nay good Ajax.

Ther. Has not so much wit——

Achil. Nay I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Helens Needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace fool.

Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not be there, that he, look you there.

Ajax. O thou damn'd Curr, I shall——

Achil. Will you set your wit to a Fools?

Ther. No I warrant you, for a fools will shame it.

Pat. Good words Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I bad thee vile Owl, go learn me the tenure of the Proclamation, and he rails upon me.

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary.

Achil. Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary, no man is beaten voluntary: Ajax was here the voluntary and you as under an Impres.

Ther. E'ne so, a great deal of your wit too lies in your sinews, or else there be Liars: Hector shall have a great catch, if he knock out either of your brains, he were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel.

Achil. What with me too Thersites?

Ther. There's Ulysses, and old Nestor, whose Wit was mouldy ere their Grandfires had nails on their toes, yoke you like draft-Oxen, and make you plough up the wair.

Achil. What? what?

Ther. Yes good sooth, to Achilles, to Ajax, to——

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'Tis no matter, I shall speak as much as thou afterwards.

Pat. No more words Thersites.

Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles Brooch bids me, shall I?

Achil. There's for you Patroclus.

Ther. I will see you hang'd like Clotpoles ere I come any more to your Tents; I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools. Exit.

Pat. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry this Sir is proclam'd through all our host, That Hector by the fifth hour of the Sun, Will with a Trumpet, 'twixt our Tents and Troy To morrow morning call some Knight to Arms, That hath a stomach, and such a one that dare Maintain I know not what: 'tis trash. Farewel.

Ajax. Farewel? who shall answer him?

Achil. I know not, 'tis put to Lottery: otherwise

He knew his man.

Aja. O meaning you, I will go learn more of it. Exit.

Enter Priam, Hector, Troilus, Paris, and Helenus.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent, Thus once again sayes Nestor from the Greeks, Deliver Helen, and all damage else (As honour, loss of time, travel, expence, Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd In not digestion of this cormorant Warr.) Shall be stroke off. Hector, what say you too't.

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I, As far as touches my particular: yet dread Priam, There is no Lady of more softer bowels, More spongy, to suck in the sense of fear, More ready to cry out, who knows what follows, Than Hector is: the wound of peace is surety, Surety secure: but modest doubt is call'd The Beacon of the wise: the Tent that searches To'th'bottom of the worst. Let Helen go. Since the first sword was drawn about this question, Every tythe soul 'mongst many thousand dimes, Hath been as dear as Helen: I mean of ours: If we have lost so many tenths of ours To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to us (Had it our name) the value of one ten; What merit's in that reason which denies The yielding of her up?

Troi. Fye, fie, my Brother; Weigh you the worth and honour of a King (So great as our dread Father) in a Scale Of common Ounces? Will you with Counters sum The past proportion of his infinite? And buckle in a waist most fathomless, With spans and inches so diminutive, As fears and reasons? Fye for godly shame?

Hel. No marvel though you bite so sharp at reasons, You are empty of them, should not our father Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons, Because your speech hath none that tells him so?

Troi. You are for dreams and slumbers brother Priest, You furr your gloves with reason: here are your reasons You know an enemy intends you harm. You know, a sword imploy'd is perilous, And reason flies the object of all harm, Who marvels then when Helenus beholds A Grecian and his sword, if he do set The very wings of reason to his heels: Or like a Starr disorb'd. Nay, if we talk of reason, And flye like chidden Mercury from Jove, Let's shut our gates and sleep: Manhood and Honour Shold have hard hearts, would they but sat their thoughts With this cramm'd reason: reason and respect, Makes lovers pale, and lustyhood deject.

Hect. Brother, she is not worth What she doth cost the holding.

Troi. What's aught, but as 'tis valu'd?

Hect. But value dwells not in particular will, It holds his estimate and dignity As well, wherein 'tis precious of it self, As in the prizer: 'Tis made Idolatry, To make the service greater than the god, And the will dotes that is inclineable To what infectiously it self affects, Without some image of th'affected merit.

Troi. I take to day a Wife, and my election Is led on in the conduct of my will;

My

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
 Two traded Pylots 'twixt the dangerous shores
 Of Will and Judgement. How may I avoid
 (Although my will distast what it elected)
 The Wife I chose, there can be no evasion
 To blench from this, and to stand firm by honour.
 We turn not back the Silks upon the Merchant
 When we have spoil'd them; nor the remainder Viands
 We do not throw in unrespective place,
 Because we now are full. It was thought meet
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks;
 Your breath of full consent bellied his Sails,
 The Seas and Winds (old Wranglers) took a Truce,
 And did him service; he touch'd the Ports desir'd,
 And for an old Aunt whom the Greeks held Captive,
 He brought a Grecian Queen, whose youth and freshness
 Wrinkles Apolloes, and makes stale the morning.
 Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our Aunt:
 Is she worth keeping? Why she is a Pearl,
 Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand Ships,
 And turn'd Crown'd Kings to Merchants.
 If you'll avouch, 'twas wisdom Paris went,
 (As you must needs, for you all cri'd, Go, go:)
 If you'll confess, he brought home Noble prize,
 (As you must needs, for you all clapt your hands)
 And cri'd inestimable; why do you now
 The issue of your proper Wisdoms rate,
 And do a deed that Fortune never did?
 Begger the estimation which you priz'd,
 Richer than Sea and Land? O Theft most base!
 That we have stoln what we do fear to keep.
 But Thieves unworthy of a thing so stoln,
 That in their Country did them that disgrace,
 We fear to warrant in our Native place.

Enter Cassandra with her hair about her ears.

Cres. Cry Troians cry.

Priam. What noyse? what shreek is this?

Troi. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.

Cas. Cry Troians.

Hec. It is Cassandra.

Cas. Cry Troians Cry; lend me ten thousand eyes;
 And I will fill them with Prophetick tears.

Hec. Peace sister, peace.

Cas. Virgins and Boys; mid-age and wrinkled old,
 Soft infancy, that nothing can but cry,
 Add to my clamour: let us pay betimes
 A moiety of that mass of moan to come.
 Cry Troians cry, practise your eyes with tears,
 Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilium stand,
 Our fire-brand Brother Paris burns us all.
 Cry Troians cry, a Helen and a woe;
 Cry, cry, Troy burns, or else let Helen go. Exit.

Hec. Now youthful Troilus, do not these high strains
 Of divination in our Sister work
 Some touches of remorse? Or is your blood
 So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
 Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
 Can qualifie the same?

Troi. Why brother Hector,
 We may not think the justness of each act
 Such, and no other than event doth form it,
 Nor once deject the courage of our minds;
 Because Cassandra's mad, her brainfick raptures
 Cannot distast the goodness of a quarrel,

Which hath our several Honours all engag'd
 To make it gracious. For my private part,
 I am no more touch'd, than all Priams sons,
 And Jove forbid there should be done amongst us
 Such things as might offend the weakest spleen,
 To fight for, and maintain.

Par. Else might the world convince of levity,
 As well my under-takings as your counsels:
 But I attest the gods, your full consent
 Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
 All fears attending on so dire a project.
 For what (alas) can these my single arms?
 What propugnation is in one mans valour
 To stand the push and enmity of those
 This quarrel would excite? Yet I protest,
 Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
 And had as ample power, as I have will,
Paris should ne'r retract what he hath done,
 Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
 Like one be-fotted on your sweet delights;
 You have the Honey still, but these the Gall,
 So to be valiant, is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not meerly to my self,
 The pleasures such a beauty brings with it:
 But I would have the soyl of her fair Rape
 Wip'd off in honourable keeping her.
 What Treason were it to the ransack'd Queen,
 Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
 Now to deliver her possession up
 On terms of base compulsion? Can it be,
 That so degenerate a strain as this,
 Should once set foot in your generous bosomes?
 There not the meanest spirit on our party,
 Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
 When Helen is defended: nor none so Noble,
 Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death unfam'd,
 Where Helen is the subject. Then (I say)
 Well may we fight for her, whom we know well,
 The worlds large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris and Troilus, you have both said well:
 And on the cause and question now in hand,
 Have glaz'd, but superficially; not much
 Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
 Unfit to hear Moral Philosophy,
 The Reasons you allege, do more conduce
 To the hot passion of distemper'd blood,
 Than to make up a free determination
 'Twixt right and wrong: For pleasure and revenge,
 Have ears more deaf than Adders, to the voyce
 Of any true decision. Nature craves
 All dues be rendred to their Owners; now
 What nearer debt in all humanity,
 Than Wife is to the Husband? If this law
 Of nature be corrupted through affection,
 And that great minds of partial indulgence
 To their benumbed wills resist the same,
 There is a Law in each well-ordered Nation,
 To curb those raging appetites that are
 Most disobedient and refractory.
 If Helen then be wife to Sparta's King
 (As it is known she is) these Moral Laws
 Of Nature, and of Nation, speak aloud
 To have her back return'd. Thus to persist
 In doing wrong, extenuates not wrong,
 But makes it much more heavy. Hectors opinion

Is this in way of truth : yet nere the less,
My spritely brethren, I propend to you
In resolution to keep Helen still ;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependance,
Upon our joynt and several dignities.

Troi. Why? there you touch the life of our design :
Were it not glory that we more affected,
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Troian blood,
Spent more in her defence. But worthy Hector,
She is a theam of honour and renown,
A spurr to valiant and magnanimous deeds,
Whose present courage may beat down our foes,
And fame in time to come canonize us.
For I presume brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory,
As smiles upon the fore-head of this action,
For the wide worlds revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
You valiant off-spring of great Priamus,
I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks,
Will strike amazement to their drowsie spirits.
I was advertiz'd, their great General slept,
Whil'st emulation in the army crept :
This I presume will wake him.

Exeunt.

Enter Therites solus.

Now now Therites? what lost in the Labyrinth of thy fury? shall the Elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him : O worthy satisfaction, would it were otherwise: that I could beat him, whil'st he rail'd at me: Sfoot, Ile learn to conjure and raise Devils, but Ile see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then ther's Achilles, a rare Enginier. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove the King of gods: and Mercury, lose all the Serpentine craft of thy Caduceus, if thou take not that little little less than little wit from them that they have, which short-arm'd ignorance it self knows, is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a Fly from a Spider, without drawing the massie Irons and cutting the web: after this, the vengeance on the whole Camp, or rather the bone-ach, for that me thinks is the curse dependant on those that warr for a placket. I have said my prayers, and devil, Envy, say Amen: What ho?
my Lord Achilles?

Enter Patroclus.

Patr. Who's there? Therites. Good Therites come in and rail.

Ther. If I could have remembred a guilt counterfeit,
thou would'st not have slipt out of my contemplation, but it is no matter, thy self upon thy self. The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance be thine in great revenue; heaven blefs thee from a Tutor, and Discipline come not near thee. Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death, then if she that layes thee out sayes thou art a fair course, Ile be sworn and sworn upon't she never shrowded any but Lazars, Amen. Wher's Achilles?

Patr. What art thou devout? wast thou in a prayer?

Ther. I, the heavens hear me.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Therites, my Lord.

Achil. Where, where, art thou come? why my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not serv'd thy self into my
Table, so many meals? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy Commander Achilles; then tell me Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy Lord Therites: then tell me I pray thee, what's thy self?

Ther. Thy knower Patroclus: then tell me Patroclus
what art thou?

Patr. Thou maist tell that know'st.

Achil. O tell, tell.

Ther. Ile decline the whole question: Agamemnon commands Achilles, Achilles is my Lord, I am Patroclus
knower, and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal.

Ther. Peace fool I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileg'd man, proceed Therites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool, Achilles is a fool, Ther-sites is a fool, and as afore said, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this: come?

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles, Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamem-non, Therites is a fool to serve such a fool: and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Enter Agamemnon, Vlysses, Nestor, Diomedes, Ajax, and Chalcas.

Ther. Make that demand to the Creator, it suffices me thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Achil. Patroclus, Ile speak with no body: come in with me Therites. Exit.

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery: all the argument is a Cuckold and a Whore, a good quarrel to draw emulations factions, and bleed to death upon: Now the dry Serpego on the subject, and Warr and Lechery confound all.

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his Tent, but ill dispos'd my Lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here:

He sent our Messengers, and we lay by
Our appertainments, visiting of him:
Let him be told of, lest perchance he think
We dare not move the question of our place,
Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall so say to him.

Vlyf. We saw him at the opening of his Tent,
He is not sick.

Aja. Yes, Lion sick, sick of a proud heart: you may call it Melancholy if you will favour the man, but by my head, 'tis pride; but why, why, let him shew us the cause?
A word my Lord.

Nes. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

Vlyf. Achilles hath inveigled his Fool from him.

Nes. Who, Therites?

Vlyf. He.

Nes. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his Argument.

Vlyf. No, you see he is his argument that has his argument, Achilles.

Nes. All the better, their fraction is more our with than their faction; but it was a strong counsell that a Fool could disunite.

Vlyf. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie. Enter Patroclus.

Here

Here comes Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him?

Ulys. The Elephant hath joynts, but none for courtesie;
His legs are legs for necessity, not for flight.

Patro. Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry,
If any thing more than your sport and pleasure,
Did move your greatness, and this noble State,
To call upon him; he hopes it is no other,
But for your health, and your digestion sake;
An after Dinners breath.

Aga. Hear you Patroclus:

VVe are too well acquainted with these answers:
But his evasion wing'd thus swift with scorn,
Cannot outflye our apprehensions.
Much attribute he hath, and much the reason,
VVhy we ascribe it to him, yet all his virtues,
(Not virtuously of his own part beheld)
Do in our eyes, begin to lose their gloss;
And like fair Fruit in an unwholsome dish,
Are like to rot untasted; go and tell him,
VVe come to speak with him, and you shall not sin,
If you do say, we think him over proud,
And under honest: in self assumption greater (self.
Than in the note of judgement: and worthier than him.
Here tends the savage strangeness he puts on,
Disguise the holy strength of their command:
And under write in an observing kind
His humorous predominance, yea watch
His pettish lines, his ebs, his flows, as if
The passage and whole carriage of this action
Rode on his tyde. Go tell him this, and add,
That if he over-hold his price so much,
VVee'l none of him; but let him, like an Engine
Not portable, lye under this report.
Bring action hither, this cannot go to warr:
A stirring Dwarf, we do allowance give,
Before a sleeping Gyant: tell him so.

Pat. I shall, and bring his answer presently.

Aga. In second voice we'll not be satisfied,
VVe come to speak with him, Vlysses enter you.

Exit Vlysses.

Ajax. What is he more than another?

Aga. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax. Is he so much? do you not think, he thinks himself a better man than I am?

Aga. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?

Aga. No, Noble Ajax, you are as strong, as valiant, as wife, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.

Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what it is.

Aga. Your mind is the clearer Ajax, and your virtues the fairer; he that is proud, eats up himself, Pride is his own Glass, his own Trumpet, his own Chronicle, and what ever praises it self but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.

Enter Vlysses.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of Toads.

Nest. Yet he loves himself: is't not strange?

Vlyss. Achilles will not to the field to morrow,

Aga. What's his excuse?

Vlyss. He doth rely on none,
But carries on the stream of his dispose,
Without observance or respect of any,

In will peculiar, and in self admission.

Aga. Why, will he not upon our fair request,
Untent his person, and share the ayre with us?

Ulys. Things small as nothing, for requests sake only
He makes important: possess he is with greatness,
And speaks not to himself, but with a pride
That quarrels at self-breath. Imagin'd wrath
Holds in his blood such swoln and hot discourse,
That 'twixt his mental and his active parts,
Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages,
And batters 'gainst it self; what should I say?
He is so plaguy proud, that the death-tokens of it,
Cry no recovery.

Aga. Let Ajax go to him.

Dear Lord, go you and greet him in his Tent;
'Tis said he holds you well, and will be led
At your request a little from himself.

Ulys. O Agamemnon, let it not be so.
We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes,
When they go from Achilles; shall the proud Lord,
That baits his arrogance with his own seam,
And never suffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts, save such as do revolve
And ruminat himself; Shall he be worshipt,
Of that we hold an Idol, more than he?
No, this thrice worthy and right valiant Lord,
Must not so staul his Palm, nobly acquir'd,
Nor by my will assubjugate his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is, by going to Achilles,
That were to enlard his fat already pride,
And add more Coles to Cancer, when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion.

This L. go to him? Jupiter forbid,
And say in thunder, Achilles go to him.

Nest. O this is well, he rubs the vein of him.

Dio. And how his silence drinks up this applause.

Aja. If I go to him, with my armed fist Ile pash him ore the face.

Aga. O no, you shall not go.

Aja. And a be proud with me, ile phese his pride: let me go to him.

Vlyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.

Aja. A poultry insolent fellow.

Nest. How he describes himself.

Aja. Can he not be sociable?

Vlyss. The Raven chides blackness.

Aja. Ile let his humors blood.

Aga. He will be the Physician that should be the patient.

Aja. And all men were a my mind,

Ulys. Wit would be out of fashion.

Aja. A should not bear it so, a should eat Swords first: shall pride carry it?

Nest. And 'twould, you'd carry half.

Ulys. A would have ten shares.

Aja. I will kneade him, Ile make him supple, he's not yet through warm.

Nest. force him with praises, pour in, pour in, his ambition is dry.

Vlyss. My L. you feed too much on this dislike.

Nest. Our noble General, do not do so.

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Vlyss. Why, 'tis this naming of him doth him harm.
Here is a man, but 'tis before his face,
I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?

He

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Vlyf. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Aja. A horson dog, that shall palter thus with us, would he were a Trojan.

Nest. What a vice were it in Ajax now —

Vlyf. If he were proud.

Dio. Or covetous of praise.

Vlyf. I, or surly born.

Dio. Or strange, or self-affected.

VI. Thank the heavens L. thou art of sweet composure;

Praise him that got thee, she that gave thee suck :

Fame be thy Tutor, and thy parts of nature

Thrice fam'd beyond, beyond all erudition ;

But he that disciplin'd thy arms to fight,

Let Mars divide Eternity in twain,

And give him half, and for thy vigor,

Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield

To sinnowie Ajax : I will not praise thy wisdom,

Which like a bourn, a pale, a shore confines

Thy spacious and dilated parts ; here's Nestor

Instructed by the Antiquary times :

He must, he is, he cannot but be wise.

But pardon Father Nestor, were your dayes

As green as Ajax, and your brain so temper'd,

You should not have the eminence of him.

But he as Ajax.

Aja. Shall I call you Father ?

Vlyf. I my good Son.

Dio. Be rul'd by him Lord Ajax.

Vlyf. There is no tarrying here, the Hart Achilles

Keeps thicket : please it our General,

To call together all this state of warr ;

Fresh Kings are come to Troy ; to morrow

We must with all our main of power stand fast :

And here's a Lord (come Knights from East to West,

And cull their flower) Ajax shall cope the best.

Ag. Go we to Counsel, let Achilles sleep ;

Light Bores may sail swift, though greater bulks draw deep. Exeunt. Musick sounds within.

Enter Pandarus and a Servant.

Pan. Friend, you, pray you a word : Do not you follow the young Lord Paris ?

Ser. I sir, When he goes before me.

Pan. You depend upon him I mean ?

Ser. Sir, I do depend upon the Lord.

Pan. You depend upon a noble Gentleman : I must needs praise him.

Ser. The Lord be praised.

Pa. You know me, do you not ?

Ser. Faith sir, superficially.

Pa. Friend know me better, I am the Lord Pandarus.

Ser. I hope I shall know your Honour better.

Pa. I do desire it.

Ser. You are in the state of Grace ?

Pa. Grace, not so friend, Honour and Lordship are my titles : What Musick is this ?

Ser. I do but partly know sir : it is Musick in parts.

Pa. Know you the Musicians ?

Ser. Wholly sir.

Pa. Who play they to ?

Ser. To the hearers sir,

Pa. At whose pleasure Friend ?

Ser. At mine sir, and theirs that love Musick.

Pa. Command, I mean friend.

Ser. Who shall I command sir ?

Pa. Friend, we understand not one another : I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play ?

Ser. That's to't indeed sir : marry sir, at the request of Paris my L. who's there in person ; with him the mortal Venus, the heart blood of Beauty, loves invisible soul.

Pa. Who ? my Cofin Cressida.

Ser. No, sir, Helen, could you not find out that by her attributes ?

Pa. It should seem fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus : I will make a complemental assault upon him, for my business seethes.

Ser. Sudden business, there's a stewd phrase indeed.

Enter Paris and Helena.

Pan. Fair be to you my Lord, and to all this fair company : fair desires in all fair measure fairly guide them, especially to you fair Queen, fair thoughts be your fair pillow.

Hel. Dear L. you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure sweet Queen : fair Prince, here is good broken Musick.

Par. You have broken it Cofin : and by my life you shall make it whole again, you shall piece it out with a peece of your performance. Nel. he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly Lady no.

Hel. O sir.

Pan. Rude in sooth, in good sooth very rude.

Paris. Well said my Lord : well, you say so in fits,

Pan. I have business to my Lord, dear Queen : my Lord will you vouchsafe me a word ?

Hel. Nay, this shall not hedge us out, wee'l hear you sing certainly.

Pan. Well sweet Queen, you are pleasant with me ; but, marry thus my Lord, my dear Lord, and most esteemed friend your brother Troilus —

Hel. My Lord Pandarus, hony sweet Lord.

Pan. Go to sweet Queen, go to.

Commends himself most affectionately to you.

Hel. You shall not bob us out of our melody :

If you do, our melancholy upon your head.

Pan. Sweet Queen, sweet Queen, that's a sweet Queen I faith —

Hel. And to make a sweet Lady sad, is a sowre offence.

Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn, that shall it not in truth la. Nay, I care not for such words, no, no. And my Lord he desires you, that if the King call for him at Supper, you will make this excuse.

Hel. My Lord Pandarus.

Pan. What sayes my sweet Queen, my very, very sweet Queen ?

Par. What exploit's in hand, where sups he to night ?

Hel. Nay but my Lord.

Pan. What says my sweet Queen ? my Cofin will fall out with you.

Hel. You must not know where he sups.

Par. With my disposer Cressida ?

Pan. No, no, no such matter, you are wide, come your disposer is sick.

Par. Well, Ile make excuse.

Pan. I good my Lord : why should you say Cressida ? no, your poor disposer's sick.

Par. I spy.

C c c

Pan. You

Pan. You spie, what do you spie? come, give me an Instrument now sweet Queen.

Hel. Why this is kindly done.

Pan. My Neece is horrible in love with a thing you have sweet Queen.

Hel. She shall have it my Lord, if it be not my Lord Paris.

Pand. He? no she'l none of him, they two are twain.

Hel. Falling in after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come, Ile hear no more of this, Ile sing you a song now.

Hel. I, I, prithee now: by my troth sweet Lord thou hast a fine fore-head.

Pan. I you may, you may.

Hel. Let thy song be love: this love will undo us all. Oh Cupid, Cupid, Cupid.

Pan. Love? I that it shall yfaith.

Par. I, good now love, love, nothing but love.

Pan. In good troth it begins so.

Love, love, nothing but love, still more:

For O loves Bow,

Shoots both Buck and Doe:

The Shaft confounds not that it wounds,

But tickles still the sore:

These Lovers cry, oh ho they dye;

Yet that which seems they wound to kill,

Doth turn oh ho, to ha ha he:

So dying love lives still,

O ho a while, but ha ha ha;

O ho grones out for ha ha ha—hey ho.

Hel. In love yfaith to the very tip of the nose.

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love, and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.

Pan. Is this the generation of love? Hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds, why they are Vipers, is Love a generation of Vipers?

Sweet Lord whose a field to day?

Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy. I would fain have arm'd to day, but my Nell would not have it so.

How chance my brother Troilus went not?

Hel. He hangs the lip at something; you know all Lord Pandarus?

Pan. Not I honey sweet Queen: I long to hear how they sped to day:

You'll remember your brothers excuse?

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewel sweet Queen.

Hel. Commend me to your Neece.

Pan. I will sweet Queen.

Sound a retreat.

Par. They're come from field: let us to Priams Hall To greet the warriors. Sweet Hellen, I must woo you, To help unarm our Hector: his stubborn buckles, With these your white enchanting fingers toucht, Shall more obey than to the edge of Steel, Or force of Greekish sinews, you shall do more Than all the Iland Kings, disarm great Hector.

Hel. 'Twill make us proud to be your servant Paris: Yea what he shall receive of us in duty, Gives us more palm in beauty than we have: Yea overshines our self.

Sweet above thought I love thee.

Exeunt.

Enter Pandarus and Troilus Man.

Pan. How now, where's thy Master, at my Cousin Cressidas?

Man. No sir, he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter Troilus.

Pan. O here he comes: How now, how now?

Troi. Sirra walk off.

Pan. Have you seen my Cousin?

Troi. No Pandarus: I stalk about her door Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks Staying for waftage. O be thou my Charon, And give me swift transportance to those fields, Where I may wallow in the Lilly beds Propos'd for the deserver. O gentle Pandarus, From Cupids shoulder pluck his painted wings, And flie with me to Cressid.

Pan. Walk here i'th' Orchard, Ile bring her straight.

Exit Pandarus.

Troi. I am giddy; expectation whirles me round, Th' imaginary relish is so sweet, That it enchants my sense: what will it be When that the watry palats tast indeed Loves thrice reputed Nectar? Death I fear me Sounding destruction, or some joy too fine, Too subtle, potent, and too sharp in sweetness, For the capacitie of my ruder powers; I fear it much, and I do fear besides, That I shall lose distinction in my joyes, As doth a battel, when they charge on heaps The enemy flying.

Enter Pandarus.

Pan. She's making her ready, she'l come straight; you must be witty now, she does so blush & fetches her wind so short, as if she were fraid with a sprite: Ile fetch her; it is the prettiest villain, she fetches her breath so short as a new ta'en sparrow.

Exit Pand.

Troi. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosome: My heart beats thicker than a feavourous pulse, And all my powers do their bestowing lose, Like vassalage at unawares encountering The eye of Majesty.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush? Shames a babie; here she is now, swear the oaths now to her, that you have sworn to me. What are you gone again, you must be watcht ere you be made tame, must you? come your wayes, come your wayes, and you draw backward we'l put you i'th' files: why do you not speak to her? Come draw this Curtain, & lets see your picture. Alas the day, how loath you are to offend day light; and 'twere dark you'd cloze sooner. So, so, rub on, and kiss the mistress; how now, a kiss in fee-farm? build there Carpenter; the ayr is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The Faulcon, as the Tercel, for all the Ducks i'th' River: go to, go to.

Troi. You have bereft me of all words Lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts; giver her deeds: but she'l bereave you o'th' deeds too, if she call your activity in question: what billing again? here's in witness whereof the Parties interchangeably. Come in, come in, Ile go get a fire.

Exit Pand.

Cres. Will you walk in my Lord?

Troi. O Cressida, how often have I wisht me thus?

Cres. Wisht my Lord? the gods grant? O my Lord.

Troi. What should they grant; what makes this pretty abruption: what too curious dreg espies my sweet Lady in the fountain of our love?

Cres. More

Cres. More dregs than water, if my tears have eyes.
Troi. Fears make devils of Cherubins, they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing, than blind reason, stumbling without fear: to fear the worst, oft cures the worse.

Troi. Oh let my Lady apprehend no fear,
 In all Cupids Pageant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither?

Troi. Nothing but their undertakings, when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame Tygers, thinking it harder for our Mistress to devise imposition enough, than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstrositie in love (Lady,) that the will is infinite, and the execution confin'd; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit.

Cres. They say all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform: vowing more than the perfection of ten; and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of Lions, and the act of Hares, are they not monsters?

Troi. Are there such? such are not we: Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove: our head shall go bare till merit crown it: no perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present: we will not name desert before his birth, and being born, his addition shall be humble: few words to fair faith. Troilus shall be such to Cressid, as what envy can say worst, shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truest, not truer than Troilus.

Cres. Will you walk in my Lord?

Enter Pandarus.

Pan. What blushing still? have you not done talking yet?

Cres. Well Uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that: if my Lord get a Boy of you, you'll give him me: be true to my Lord, if he pinch, chide me for it.

Troi. You know now your hostages: your Unkles word and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, Ile give my word for her too: our kindred though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant being won: they are Burs I can tell you, they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart: Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day, for many weary months.

Troi. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?

Cres. Hard to seem won: but I was won my Lord With the first glance that ever: pardon me, If I confess much you will play the tyrant: I love you now, but not till now so much But I might master it; in faith I lye: My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown Too head-strong for their mother: see we fools, Why have I blab'd? who shall be true to us When we are so unsecret to our selves? But though I lov'd you well, I wooed you not, And yet good faith I wisht my self a man; Or that the women had mens privilege Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue, For in this rapture I shall surely speak The thing I shall repent: see, see your silence Comming in dumbness, from my weakness draws

My soul of counsel from me. Stop my mouth.

Trai. And shall, albeit sweet Musick issues thence.

Pan. Pretty yfaith.

Cres. My Lord, I do beseech you pardon me, 'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kiss: I am asham'd; O Heavens, what have I done! For this time will I take my leave my Lord.

Troi. Your leave sweet Cressid?

Pan. Leave! and you take leave till to morrow morning—

Cres. Pray you content you.

Troi. What offends you Lady?

Cres. Sir mine own company.

Troi. You cannot shun your self.

Cres. Let me go and try:

I have a kind of self resides with you:

But an unkind self, that it self will leave,

To be anothers fool. Where is my wit?

I would be gone: I speak I know not what.

Troi. Well know they what they speak, that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance my Lord, I show more craft than love.

And fell so roundly to a large confession,

To angle for your thoughts: but you are wise,

Or else you love not: for to be wise and love,

Exceeds mans might, that dwells with gods above.

Troi. O that I thought it could be in a woman:

And if it can, I will presume in you,

To feed for ay her lamp and flames of love,

To keep her constancie in plight and youth,

Out-living beauties outward, with a mind

That doth renew swifter than blood decayes:

Or that perswasion could but thus convince me,

That my integritie and truth to you,

Might be affronted with the match and waight

Of such a winnowed puritie in love:

How were I then up-lifted! but alas,

I am as true, as truths simplicitie,

And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that Ile warr with you.

Troi. O vertuous fight,

When right with right wars, who shall be most right?

True swains in love, shall in the world to come

Approve their truths by Troilus when their rimes,

Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,

Want similes: truth tir'd with iteration,

As true as steel, as plantage to the Moon,

As Sun to day, as Turtle to her mate,

As Iron to Adamant, as Earth to th' Center:

Yet after all comparisons of truth,

(As truths authentick author to be cited)

As true as Troilus, shall crown up the Verse,

And sanctifie the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be:

If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,

When time is old and hath forgot it self,

When water-drops have worn the stones of Troy,

And blind oblivion swallow'd Cities up,

And mighty states characterless are grated

To dustie nothing; yet let memory,

From false to false, among false Maids in love,

Upbraid my falsehood, when they've said as false,

As Air, as Water, as Wind, as sandie earth;

As Fox to Lamb; as Wolf to Heifers Calf;

Pard to the Hind, or Stepdame to her Son;

Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,

As false as Cressid.

Pand. Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it, Ile be the witness, here I hold your hand: here my Cousins, if ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pittiful goers between be call'd to the worlds end after my name: call them all Panders; let all constant men be Troilus, all false women Cressids, and all brokers between, Panders: say, Amen.

Troi. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen.

Whereupon I will shew you a Chamber, which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death: away.

And Cupid grant all tounge-tide Maidens here, Bed, Chamber, and Pander, to provide this geer. Exeunt.

Enter Vlysses, Diomedes, Nestor, Agamemnon, Menelaus and Calcas.

Cal. Now Princes for the service I have done you, Th' advantage of the time prompts me aloud, To call for recompence: appear it to your mind, That through the fight I bear in things to love, I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession, Incurr'd a Traytors name, expos'd my self, From certain and possess conveniences, To doubtful fortunes, sequestering from me all That time, acquaintance, custom and condition, Made tame, and most familiar to my nature: And here to do you service am become, As new into the world, strange, unacquainted. I do beseech you, as in way of taft, To give me now a little benefit: Out of those many registred in promise, Which you say live to come in my behalf.

Agam. What would'st thou of us Troian? make demand?

Cal. You have a Troian prisoner, call'd Antenor, Yesterday took: Troy holds him very dear. Oft have you (often have you, thanks therefore) Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange. Whom Troy hath still deni'd: but this Antenor, I know is such a wrest in their affairs, That their negotiations all must slack, Wanting his marriage: and they will almost, Give us a Prince of blood, a Son of Priam, In change of him. Let him be sent great Princes, And he shall buy my Daughter: and her presence, Shall quite strike off all service I have done, In most accepted pain.

Aga. Let Diomedes bear him, And bring us Cressid hither: Calcas shall have What he requests of us: good Diomed Furnish you fairly for this interchange; Withall bring word, if Hector will to morrow. Be answer'd in his challenge. Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake, and 'tis a burthen Which I am proud to bear. Exit.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus in their Tent.

Vlys. Achilles stands i'th' entrance of this Tent; Please it our General to pass strangely by him, As if he were forgot: and Princes all, Lay negligent and loose regard upon him; I will come last, 'tis like he'll question me,

Why such unplausive eyes are bent? why turn'd on him? If so, I have decision medicinable, To use between your strangeness and his pride, Which his own will shall have desire to drink; It may do good, pride hath no other glass To show it self, but pride: for supple knees, Feed arrogance, and are the proud mans fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on A form of strangeness as we pass along, So do each Lord, and either greet him not, Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more, Than if not lookt on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What comes the General to speak with me? You know my mind, Ile fight no more 'gainst Troy.

Aga. What sayes Achilles, would he ought with us?

Nes. Would you my Lord ought with the General?

Achil. No.

Nes. Nothing my Lord.

Aga. The better.

Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How do you? how do you?

Achi. What does the Cuckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now Patroclus?

Achil. Good morrow Ajax?

Ajax. Ha.

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. I, and good next day too, Exeunt.

Achil. What mean these fellows? know they not Achilles?

Patr. They pass strangely: they were us'd to bend, To send their smiles before them to Achilles: To come as humbly as they us'd to creep to holy Altars.

Achil. What am I poor of late?

'Tis certain, greatness once fall'n out with fortune, Must fall out with men too: what the declin'd is, He shall as soon read in the eyes of others, As feel in his own fall: for men like butter-flies, Shew not their mealie wings, but to the Summer; And not a man for being simple man, Hath any honor; but honor'd by those honors That are without him; as place, riches, favour, Prizes of accident, as oft as merit: Which when they fall (as being slippery standers) The love that lean'd on them as slippery too, Doth one pluck down another, and together Dye in the fall; But 'tis not so with me, Fortune and I are friends, I do enjoy At ample point all that I did possess, Save these mens looks: who do me thinks find out Something not worth in me such rich beholding, As they have often given. Here is Vlysses, Ile interrupt his reading: how now Vlysses?

Vlys. Now great Thetis Son.

Achil. What are you reading?

Vlys. A strange fellow here Writes me, that man, how dearly ever parted, How much in having, or without, or in, Cannot make boast to have that which he hath; Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection: As when his virtues shining upon others, Heat them, and they retort that heat again To the first giver.

Achil. This is not strange Vlysses: The beauty that is born here in the face, The bearer knows not, but commends it self, Not going from it self: but eye to eye oppos'd,

Salutes

Salutes each other, with each others form.
For speculation turns not to itself,
Till it hath travell'd and is married there
Where it may see it self; this is not strange at all.

Uly. I do not strain it at the position,
It is familiar; but at the Authors drift,
Who in his circumstance, expressly proves
That no man is the Lord of any thing,
(Though in and of him there is much consisting,)
Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himself know them for ought,
Till he behold them formed in th' applause,
Where they're extended: who like an arch reverberates
The voice again; or like a gate of steel,
Fronting the Sun, receives and renders back
His figure, and his heat. I was much rapt in this,
And apprehended here immediately
The unknown Ajax;
Heavens what a man is there? a very Horse, (are
That has he knows not what Nature, what things there
Most abject in regard, and dear in use;
What things again most dear in the esteem,
And poor in worth: now shall we see to-morrow,
And act that very chance doth throw upon him?
Ajax renown'd? O heavens, what some men do,
While some men leave to do!
How some men creep in skittish fortunes hall,
Whiles others play the Ideots in her eyes:
How one man eats into anothers pride,
While pride is feasting in his wantonness
To see these Grecian Lords; why, even already,
They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder,
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,
And great Troy shrinking.

Achil. I do believe it:
For they pass by me, as misers do by beggars,
Neither gave to me good word, nor good look:
What are my deeds forgot?

Uly. Time hath (my Lord) a wallet at his back,
Wherein he puts almes for oblivion:
A great siz'd monster of ingratitude:
Those scraps are good deeds past,
Which are devour'd as fast as they are made,
Forgot as soon as done: perseverance, dear my Lord,
Keeps honour bright: to have done, is to hang
Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail,
In monumental mockerie: take the instant way,
For honour travels in a straight so narrow,
Where one but goes abreast, keep then the path,
For emulation hath a thousand Sons,
That one by one pursue; if you give way
Or hedge aside from the direct forth right,
Like to an entered Tyde, they all rush by,
And leave you hindmost;
Or like a gallant Horse slain in first rank,
Lye there for pavement to the abject, near
Ore-run and trampled on: then what they do in present,
Though less than yours in past, must ore-top yours:
For time is like a fashionable Host,
That slightly shakes his parting Guest by th' hand;
And with his arms out-stretcht, as he would flye,
Grasps in the commor: the welcome ever smiles,
And farewells goes out sighing: O let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was: for beauty, wit,
High birth, vigor of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all

To envious and calumniating time:
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin;
That all with one consent praise new-born gauds,
Though they are made and moulded of things past,
And go to dust, that is a little gilt,
More laud in gilt ore-dusted.
The present eye praises the present object.
Then marvel not thou great and compleat man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax;
Since things in motion 'gin to catch the eye,
Than what not stirs: the cry went out on thee,
And still it might, and yet it may again,
If thou would'st not entomb thy self alive,
And case thy reputation in thy Tent;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods themselves,
And drove great Mars to faction.

Achil. Of this my privacy,
I have strong reasons.

Uly. But 'gainst your privacy,
The reasons are more potent and heroical:
'Tis known Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priamus daughters.

Achil. Ha? known?

Uly. Is that a wonder?
The providence that's in a watchful State,
Knows almost every grain of Pluto's gold;
Finds bottom in th' uncomprehensive deeps,
Keeps place with thought; and almost like the gods,
Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles:
There is a mystrie (with whom relation Durst never meddle) in the soul of State;
Which hath an operation more divine,
Than breath or pen can give expresseure too:
All the commerce that you have had with Troy,
As perfectly is ours, as yours, my Lord.
And better would it fit Achilles much,
To throw down Hector than Polixena,
But it must grieve young Pyrrius now at home,
When fame shall in her Island sound her trumpet;
And all the Greekish Girls shall tripping sing,
Great Hector's sister did Achilles win;
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him.
Farewell my Lord: I as your Lover speak;
The fool slides ore the Ice that you should break.

Patr. To this effect Achilles have I mov'd you:
A woman impudent and mannish grown,
Is not more loth'd, than an effeminate man,
In time of action: I stand condemn'd for this;
They think my little stomach to the warr,
And your great love to me, restrains you thus:
Sweet, rouse your self: and the weak wanton Cupid
Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And like a dew-drop from the Lions mane,
Be shook to airie air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patr. I, and perhaps receive much honour by him.

Achil. I see my reputation is at stake,
My fame is shrewdly gored.

Patr. O then beware:

Those wounds heal ill, that men do give themselves:
Omission to do what is necessary,
Seals a commission to a blank of danger,
And danger like an ague subtly taints
Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither sweet Patroclus,

He send the fool to Ajax, and desire him
 T'invite the Trojan Lords after the Combat
 To see us here unarm'd : I have a womans longing,
 An appetite that I am sick withall,
 To see great Hector in the weeds of peace; Enter Ther.
 To talk with him, and to behold his visage,
 Even to my full of view. A labour sav'd.

Ther. A wonder.

Achil. What?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself.

Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an heroical cudgelling, that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be?

Ther. Why he stalks up and down like a Peacock, a stride and a stand: ruminates like an hostess, that hath no Arithmerique but her brain to set down her reckoning: bites his lip with a politrique regard, as who should say, there were wit in his head and 'two'd out; and so there is; but it lyes as coldly in him, as fire in a flint, which will not shew without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck in i'th' Combat, hee'll break't himself in vain-glory. He knows not me: I said, good morrow Ajax; And he replies, thanks Agamemnon. What think you of this man, that takes me for the General? Hee's grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster: a plague of opinion, a man may wear it on both sides like a leather jerkin.

Achil. Thou must be my Ambassador to him Thersites.

Ther. Who I? why hee'll answer nobody: he professes not answering; speaking is for beggars: he wears his tongue in's arms: I will put on his presence; let Patroclus make his demands to me, you shall see the Pageant of Ajax.

Achil. To him Patroclus, tell him, I humbly desire the valiant Ajax, to invite the most valorous Hector, to come unarm'd to my Tent, and to procure safe conduct for his person, of the magnanimous and most illustrious, six or seven times honour'd Captain, General of the Grecian Armie Agamemnon, &c. do this.

Patro. Jove blefs great Ax.

Ther. Hum.

Patro. I come from the worthy Achilles.

Ther. Ha?

Patro. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his Tent.

Ther. Hum.

Patro. And to procure safe conduct from Agamemnon.

Ther. Agamemnon?

Patro. I my Lord.

Ther. Ha?

Patro. What say you to't.

Ther. God buy you with all my heart.

Patro. Your answer sir.

Ther. If to morrow be a fair day, by eleven a clock it will go one way or other; howsoever, he shall pay for me e'r he has me.

Patro. Your answer sir.

Ther. Fare you well with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out a tune thus: what musick will be in when Hector has knockt out his brains, I know not: but I am sure none, unless the Fidler Apollo get his sinews to make carlings on.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a Letter to him straight.

Ther. Let me carry another to his Horse; for that's the more capable creature.

Achil. My mind is troubled like a Fountain stirr'd, And I my self see nor the bottom of it.

Ther. Would the Fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an Ass at it: I had rather be a Tick in a Sheep, than such a valiant ignorance.

Enter at one door Aeneas with a Torch, at another Paris, Deiphobus, Anthenor, Diomed the Grecian, with Torches.

Patr. See ho, who is that there?

Deiph. It is the Lord Aeneas.

Aene. Is the Prince there in person?

Had I so good occasion to lie long
 As you Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business,
 Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Diom. That's my mind too: good morrow Lord Aeneas.

Par. A valiant Greek Aeneas, take his hand,
 Witness the process of your speech within;
 You told how Diomed, in a whole week by dayes
 Did haunt you in a Field.

Aene. Health to you valiant sir;
 During all question of the gentle truce:
 But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance,
 As heart can think, or courage execute.

Diom. The one and other Diomed embraces,
 Our bloods are now in calm; and so long health:
 But when contention, and occasion meet,
 By Jove, He play the hunter for thy life,
 With all my force, pursure and policy.

Aene. And thou shalt hunt a Lion that will flie
 With his face backward, in humane gentleness:
 Welcome to Troy; now by Anchises life,
 Welcome indeed: by Venus hand I swear,
 No man alive can love in such a sort,
 The thing he means to kill, more excellently.

Diom. We sympathize. Jove let Aeneas live
 (If to my sword his fate be not the glory)
 A thousand compleat courses of the Sun:
 But in mine emulous honor let him die,
 With every joynt a wound, and that to morrow.

Aene. We know each other well.

Dio. We do, and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most despihtfull't gentle greeting;
 The noblest hateful love, that e'r I heard of.
 What business Lord so early?

Aene. I was sent for to the King; but why, I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you; it was to bring this Greek to Calcha's house: and there to render him,
 For the enfrued Anthenor, the fair Cressid:
 Lets have your company; or if you please,
 Haste there before us, I constantly do think
 (Or rather call my thought a certain knowledge)
 My brother Troilus lodges there to night.
 Rouse him, and give him note of our approach,
 With the whole quality, whereof I fear
 We shall be much unwelcome.

Aene. That I assure you:
Troilus had rather Troy were born to Greece,
 Than Cressid born from Troy.

Par. There

Par. There is no help :
The bitter disposition of the time will have it so.
On Lord, weel follow you.

Anc. Good morrow all. Exit Aeneas

Par. And tell me noble Diomed ; faith tell me true,
Even in the soul of sound good fellowship,
Who in your thoughts merits fair Helen most ?
My self, or Menelaus ?

Diom. Both alike.

He merits well to have her, that doth seek her,
Not making any scruple of her soylure,
With such a hell of pain, and world of charge.
And you as well to keep her, that defend her,
Not pallating the tast of her dishonour,
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends ;
He like a puling Cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed peece ;
You like a lercher, out of whorish loyns,
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors :
Both merits poyz'd, each weighs no less nor more,
But he as he, which heavier for a whore.

Par. You are too bitter to your country-woman.

Dio. She's bitter to her country : hear me Paris,
For every false drop in her bawdy veins,
A Grecians life hath sunk : for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight,
A Trojan hath been slain. Since she could speak,
She hath not given so many good words breath,
As for her Greeks and Troians suffred death.

Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy :
But we in silence hold this virtue well ;
We'll not commend, what we intend to sell.
Here lyes our way. Exeunt.

Enter Troilus and Cressida.

Troi. Dear, trouble not your self : the morn is cold.

Cres. Then sweet my Lord, Ile call my Unkle down ;
He shall unbolt the Gates.

Troi. Trouble him not :
To bed, to bed : sleep kill those pretty eyes,
And give as soft attachment to thy senses,
As Infants empty of all thought.

Cres. Good morrow then.

Troi. I prithee now to bed.

Cres. Are you a weary of me ?

Troi. O Cressida ! but that the busie day
Wak'd by the Lark, hath rouz'd the ribald Crows,
And dreaming night will hide our eyes no longer :
I would not from thee.

Cres. Night hath been too brief. (staves)

Troi. Beshrew the witch ! with venomous wights she
As hideously as hell ; but flies the grasps of love,
With wings more momentary, swifter than thought :
You will catch cold and curse me.

Cres. Prithee tarry, you men will never tarry ;
O foolish Cressid, I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarried. Heark there's one up.

Pand. within. What's all the doors open here ?

Troi. It is your Unkle. Enter Pandarus.

Cres. A pestilence on him : now will he be mocking :
I shall have such a life.

Pan. How now, how now ? how go maiden-heads ?
Hear you Maid : where's my cozin Cressid ?

Cres. Go hang your self, you naughty mocking Unkle :

You bring me to do—and then you flout me too.

Pan. To do what? to do what? let her say what :
What have I brought you to do ?

Cres. Come, come, beshrew your heart: you'll ne'r be good, nor suffer others.

Pan. Ha, ha: alas poor wretch : a poor Chipschia, hast not slept to night ? would he not (a naughty man) let it sleep : a bug-bear take him. One knocks.

Cres. Did not I tell you? would he were knock'd ith' head. Who's that at door ? good Unkle go and see.

My Lord, come you again into my Chamber :

You smile and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Troi. Ha, ha.

Cres. Come you are deceiv'd, I think of no such thing.
How earnestly they knock : pray you come in. Knock.
I would not for half Troy have you seen here. Exeunt.

Pan. Who's there? what's the matter? will you beat down the door? How now, what's the matter ?

Anc. Good morrow Lord, good morrow.

Pan. Who's there, my Lord Aeneas? by my troth I knew you not : what news with you so early ?

Anc. Is not Prince Troilus here ?

Pan. Here? what should he do here ?

Anc. Come he is here, my Lord, do not deny him:
It doth import him much to speak with me.

Pan. Is he here say you? 'tis more than I know, Ile be sworn : For my own part I came in late ; what should he do here ?

Anc. Who, nay then : Come, come, you'll do him wrong, ere y'are ware : you'll be so true to him, to be false to him : Do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither, go.

Enter Troilus.

Troi. How now, what's the matter ?

Anc. My Lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,
My matter is so rash : there is at hand,
Paris your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Anthenor
Deliver'd to us, and for him forth-with,
Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,
We must give up to Diomedes hand
The Lady Cressida.

Troi. Is it concluded so ?

Anc. By Priam, and the general state of Troy,
They are at hand, and ready to effect it,

Troi. How may achievements mock me ?

I will go meet them: and my Lord Aeneas,
We met by chance : you did not find me here.

Anc. Good, good, my Lord, the secrets of nature
Have not more gift in taciturnity. Exeunt.

Enter Pandarus and Cressid.

Pan. Is't possible ? no sooner got but lost : the devil take Anthenor; the young Prince will go mad : a plague upon Anthenor; I would they had broke's neck.

Cres. How now? what's the matter? who was here ?

Pan. Ah, ah !

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? wher's my Lord ?
gone? tell me sweet Unkle what's the matter ?

Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am
above.

Cres. O the gods! what's the matter ?

Pan. Prethee get thee in: would thou hadst ne'r been born ; I knew thou wouldst be his death. O poor Gentleman : a plague upon Anthenor.

Cres.

Cres. Good Uncle, I beseech you, on my knees, I beseech you what's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone wench, thou must be gone; thou art chang'd for Anthenor: thou must to thy Father, and be gone from Troilus: 'twill be his death: 'twill be his bane, he cannot bear it.

Cres. O you immortal Gods! I will not go.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not Uncle: I have forgot my Father: I know no touch of consanguinity: No kin, no love, no blood, no soul, so neer me, As the sweet Troilus: O you gods divine! Make Cressida's name the very crown of falsehood! If ever she leave Troilus: rime, and death, Do to this body what extremity you can; But the strong base and building of my love, Is as the very Centre of the earth, Drawing all things to it. I will go in and weep.

Pan. Do, do.

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks, Crack my cleer voice with sobs, and break my heart With-sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy. Ex.

Enter Paris, Troilus, Aeneas, Deiphobus, Anthenor, and Diomedes.

Par. It is great morning, and the hour prefix Of her delivery to this valiant Greek Comes fast upon: good my brother Troilus, Tell you the Lady what she is to do, And haste her to the purpose.

Troi. Walk into her house: Ile bring her to the Grecian presently; And to his hand when I deliver her, Think it an Altar, and thy brother Troilus A Priest, there offering to it his heart.

Par. I know what 'tis to love, And would, as I shall pity, I could help. Please you walk in, my Lords.

Exeunt.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation? The grief is fine, full perfect that I taste, And no less in a sense as strong, as that Which causeth it. How can I moderate it? If I could temporise with my affection, Or brew it to a weak and colder palat, The like alaiment could I give my grief: My love admits no qualifying cros: Enter Troilus. No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes, a sweet duck.

Cres. O Troilus, Troilus.

Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here? let me embrace too: oh heart, as the goodly saying is; O heart, heavy heart, why sittest thou without breaking? where he answers again; because thou canst not ease thy smart by friendship, nor by speaking: there was never a truer rime; let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a Verse; we see it, we see it: how now Lambs?

Troi. Cressid, I love thee in so strange a purity; That the blest gods, as angry with my fancy, More bright in zeal, than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their Deities, take thee from me.

Cres. Have the Gods envy?

Pan. I, I, I, I, 'tis too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true, that I must go from Troy?

Troi. A harefull truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too?

Troi. From Troy, and Troilus.

Cres. Ist possible?

Troi. And suddenly, where injury of chance Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by All time of pause: rudely beguiles our lips Of all rejoindure: forcibly prevents Our lockt embrasures; strangles our dear vows, Even in the birth of our own labouring breath. We two that with so many thousand sighs Did buy each other, must poorly sell our selves, With the rude brevity and discharge of one; Injurious time, now with a robbers haste Crams his rich Thee every up, he knows not how. As many farewels as be stars in heaven, With distinct breath, and consign'd kisses to them, He fumbles up in a loose adieu: And scants us with a single famisht kiss, Dittasting with the salt of broken tears, Enter Aeneas.

Aeneas within. My Lord, is the Lady ready?

Troi. Hark, you are call'd: some say the genius so Cries, come, to him that instantly must die. Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the toot.

Cres. I must then to the Grecians?

Troi. No remedy.

Cres. A wofull Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks.

Troi. When shall we see again?

Hear me my love: be thou but true of heart.

Cres. I true? how now? what wicked deem is this?

Troi. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly, For it is parting from us:

I speak not, be thou true, as fearing thee: For I will throw my Glove to death himself, That there's no maculation in thy heart; But be thou true, say I, to fashion in My sequent protestation: be thou true, And I will see thee.

Cres. O you shall be expos'd my Lord to dangers As infinite, as imminent: but Ile be true.

Troi. And Ile grow friend with danger; Wear this Sleeve.

Cres. And you this Glove.

When shall I see you?

Troi. I will corrupt the Grecian Centinels, To give thee nightly visitation. But yet be true.

Cres. O heavens: be true again?

Troi. Hear why I speak it, Love: The Grecian youths are full of quality, Their loving well compos'd, with gift of nature, Flowing and swelling ore with Arts and exercise: How novelties may move, and parts with person, Alas, a kind of godly jealousy, Which I beseech you call a virtuous sin, Makes me affraid.

Cres. O heavens, you love me not!

Troi. Dye I a villain then:

In this I do not call your faith in question So mainly as my merit: I cannot sing, Nor heel the high Lavolt; nor sweeten talk; Nor play at subtille games; fair virtues all:

To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant :
But I can tell that in each grace of these,
There lurks a still and dumb-discourfivè devil,
That tempts most cunningly : but be not tempted.

Cres. Do not think I will.

Troi. No, but something may be done that we will not:

And sometimes we are devils to our selves,
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,
Presuming on their changeful porençie.

Aeneas within. Nay, good my Lord.

Troi. Come kifs, and let us part.

Paris within. Brother Troilus.

Troi. Good brother come you hither,
And bring Aeneas and the Grecian with you.

Cres. My Lord will you be true ?

Troi. Who I ? alas it is my vice, my fault :
Whiles other fish with craft for great opinion,
I, with great truth, catch meer simplicity,
Whil'st some with cunning gild their copper crowns,
With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.

Enter the Greeks.

Fear not my truth; the moral of my wit
Is plain and true, ther's all the reach of it.

Welcome sir Diomed, here is the Lady
Which for Antenor we deliver you.

At the port (Lord) Ile give her to thy hand,
And by the way possesse thee what she is.

Entreat her fair ; and by my soul, fair Greek,
If ere thou stand at mercy of my sword,

Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe
As Priam is in Ilion.

Diom. Fair Lady Cressid,

So please you, save the thanks this Prince expects :
The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,
Pleads your fair usage, and to Diomed
You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Troi. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously,
To shame the seal of my petition towards,
I praising her. I tell thee Lord of Greece,
She is as farr high soaring o're thy praises,
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant :
I charge thee use her well, even for my charge :
For by the dreadful Pluto, if thou do'st not,
(Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard)
Ile cut thy throat.

Diom. Oh be not mov'd Prince Troilus ;
Let me be privileg'd by my place and message,
To be a speaker free ; when I am hence,
Ile answer to my lust : and know my Lord,
Ile nothing do on charge: to her own worth
She shall be priz'd : but that you say be't so ;
Ile speak in my spirit and honor, no.

Troi. Come to the Port. Ile tell thee Diomed,
This brave, shall oft make thee to hide thy head :
Lady, give me your hand, and as we walk,
To our own selves bend we our needful talk.

Sound Trumpet.

Par. Hark, Hectors Trumpet.

Aene. How have we spent this morning ?
The Prince must think me tardy and remiss,
That swore to ride before him in the field.

Par. 'Tis Troilus fault: come, come, to field with him.

Exeunt.

Dio. Let us make ready straight.

Aene. Yea, with a bridegrooms fresh alacrity

Let us address to tend on Hectors heels :
The glory of our Troy doth this day lye
On his fair worth, and single Chivalry.

Enter Ajax armed, Achilles, Patroclus, Agamemnon, Menelaus, Vlysses, Nestor, Calcas, &c.

Aga. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair
Anticipating time. With starting courage,
Give with thy Trumpet a loud note to Troy
Thou dreadful Ajax, that the appauled ayr
May pierce the head of the great Combatant,
And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou, Trumpet, there's my purse ;
Now crack thy lungs and split thy brazen pipe :
Blow villain, till thy sphered Bias cheek
Out-swell the cholick of puffed Aquilon :
Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood :
Thou blowest for Hector.

Vlyf. No Trumpet answers.

Achil. 'Tis but early dayes.

Enter Dio. Cres.

Aga. Is't not young Diomed with Calcas daughter ?

Vlyf. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gate,
He rises on the toe : that spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Aga. Is this the Lady Cressid ?

Dio. Even she.

Aga. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet
Lady.

Nest. Our General doth salute you with a kifs.

Vlyf. Yet is your kindness but particular ; 'twere better she were kist in general.

Nest. And very courtly counsel : Ile begin. So much for Nestor.

Achil. Ile take that winter from your lips: fair Lady
Achilles bids you welcome.

Mene. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patro. But that's no argument for kissing now ;
For thus pop't Paris in his hardiment.

Vlyf. Oh deadly gall, and theam of all our scorns,
For which we lose our heads, to gild his horns.

Patro. The first was Menelaus kifs, this mine :
Patroclus kisses you.

Mene. Oh this is trim.

Patr. Paris and I kifs evermore for him.

Mene. Ile have my kifs fir : Lady by your leave.

Cres. In kissing do you render, or receive ?

Patr. Both take and give.

Cres. Ile make my match to give,
The kifs you take is better than you give : therefore no kifs.

Mene. Ile give you boot, Ile give you three for one.

Cres. You are an odd man, give even, or give none.

Mene. An odd man Lady? every man is odd.

Cres. No, Paris is not ; for you know 'tis true,
That you are odd, and he is even with you.

Mene. You fillip me a'th' head.

Cres. No, Ile be sworn.

Vlyf. It were no match, your nail against his horn:
May I sweet Lady beg a kifs of you ?

Cres. You may.

Vlyf. I do desire it.

Cres. Why beg then.

Vlyf. Why then for Venus sake, give me a kifs :
When Hellen is a maid again, and his——

Cres. I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due.

Vlyf. Never's

Ulys. Never's my day, and then a kiss of you.

Diom. Lady a word, Ile bring you to your Father.

Nest. A woman of quick sence.

Ulys. Fie, fie upon her :

There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip ;

Nay, her foot speaks, her wanton spirrils look out

At every joynt, and motive of her body :

Oh these encounters so glib of tongue ,

That give a coasting welcome ere it comes ;

And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts,

To every tickling reader : set them down,

For sluttish spoils of opportunitie ;

And daughters of the game.

Exeunt.

Enter all of Troy, Hector, Paris, Aeneas, Helenus, and Attendants.

All. The Troians Trumpet.

Aga. Yonder comes the Troop.

Aene. Hail all you state of Greece: what shall be done

To him that victorie commands? or do you purpose,

A victor shall be known: will you the Knights

Shall to the edge of all extremitie

Pursue each other; or shall be divided

By any voice, or order of the field: Hector bad ask?

Aga. Which way would Hector have it?

Aene. He cares not, he'l obey conditions.

Aga. 'Tis done like Hector, but securely done,

A little proudly, and great deal disprising

The Knight oppos'd.

Aene. If not Achilles sir, what is your name?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.

Aene. Therefore Achilles: but what ere, know this,

In the extremity of great and little :

Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector ;

The one almost as infinite as all ;

The other blank as nothing : weigh him well :

And that which looks like pride, is courtesie :

This Ajax is half made of Hectors blood,

In love whereof, half Hector staves at home :

Half heart, half hand, half Hector, comes to seek

This blended Knight, half Trojan and half Greek.

Achil. A maiden batel then? O I perceive you.

Aga. Here is sir Diomed: go gentle Knight,

Stand by our Ajax: as you and Lord Aeneas

Consent upon the order of their fight,

So be it; either to the uttermost,

Or else a breach: the Combatants being kin,

Half stints their strife, before their strokes begin.

Ulys. They are oppos'd already.

Aga. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?

Ulys. The youngest Son of Priam,

And a true Knight; they call him Troilus;

Not yet mature, yet matchless, firm of word,

Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue ;

Not soon provok't, nor being provok't, soon calm'd;

His heart and hand both open, and both free:

For what he has, he gives; what thinks, he shews;

Yet gives he not till judgement guide his bounty,

Nor dignifies an impair thought with breath :

Manly as Hector, but more dangerous ;

For Hector in his blaze of wrath subscribes

To tender objects ; but he, in heat of action

Is more vindicative than jealous love.

They call him Troilus ; and on him erect,

A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.

Thus sayes Aeneas, one that knows the youth,

Even to his inches: and with private soul,

Did in great Ilium thus translate him to me.

Alarum.

Aga. They are in action.

Nest. Now Ajax hold thine own.

Troi. Hector, thou sleep'st, awake thee.

Aga. His blows are well dispos'd there Ajax. trumpets

Diom. You must no more.

cease.

Aene. Princes enough, so please you.

Aja. I am not warm yet, let us fight again.

Diom. As Hector pleases.

Hect. Why then will I no more :

Thou art great Lord, my Fathers Sisters Son ;

A cousin german to great Priams seed :

The obligation of our blood forbids

A gorie emulation 'twixt us twain :

Were thy commixion, Greek and Trojan so,

That thou could'st say, this hand is Grecian all,

And this is Trojan : the sinews of this Leg,

All Greek, and this all Troy : my Mothers blood

Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister

Bounds in my fathers : by Jove multipotent,

Thou should'st not bear from me a Greekish member

Wherein my sword had not impresseure made

Of our rank feud : but the just Gods gainfay,

That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother,

My sacred Aunt, should by my mortal Sword

Be drain'd. Let me embrace thee Ajax :

By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms ;

Hector would have them fall upon him thus,

Cousin, all honor to thee.

Aja. I thank thee Hector :

Thou art too gentle, and too free a man :

I came to kill thee Cousin, and bear hence

A great addition, earned in thy death.

Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable,

On whose bright crest, fame with her lowd'st (O yes)

Cries, This is he ; could promise to himself,

A thought of added honor, torn from Hector.

Aene. There is expectance here from both the sides:

What further you will do.

Hect. We'l answer it :

The issue is embracement : Ajax, farewell,

Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success,

As feld I have the chance ; I would desire

My famous Cousin to our Grecian Tents.

Diom. 'Tis *Agamemnon*s wish, and great Achilles

Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.

Hec. Aeneas, call my brother Troilus to me :

And signifie this loving interview

To the exectors of our Trojan part :

Desire them home. Give me thy hand, my Cousin :

I will go eat with thee, and see your Knights.

Enter Agamemnon and the rest.

Aja. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.

Hec. The worthiest of them, tell me name by name:

But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes

Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Aga. Worthy of Arms : as welcome as to one,

That would be rid of such an enemy.

But that's no welcome: understand more clear

What's past and what's to come, is strew'd with husks

And formless ruine of oblivion :

But in this extant moment, faith and troth,

Strain'd purely from all hollow bias drawing :

Bids thee with most divine integritie,

From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hect. I thank thee most imperious Agamemnon.

Aga. My

Aga. My well-fam'd Lord of Troy, no less to you.

Men. Let me confirm my Princely brothers greeting,
You brace of-warlike brothers, welcome hither.

Hect. Whom must we answer?

Aene. The noble Menelaus.

Hect. O, you my Lord, by Mars his gauntlet thanks,
Mock not, that I affect th' untraded Oath,
Your quondam wife swears still by Venus Glove;
She's well, but bad me not commend her to you.

Men. Name her not now sir, she's a deadly Theam.

Hect. O pardon, I offend.

Nest. I have (thou gallant Trojan) seen thee oft
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way
Through ranks of Greekish youth: and I have seen thee
As hot as Persus, spurr thy Phrygian Steed,
And seen thee scorning forfeits and subduments,
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i'th' air.
Nor letting it decline on the declined:
That I have said unto my standers by,
Loe Jupiter is yonder, dealing life.

And I have seen thee pause, and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks, have hemm'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrastring. This have I seen,
But this thy countenance (still lockt in steel)
I never saw till now. I knew thy Grandfire,
And once fought with him; he was a Souldier good,
But by great Mars (the Captain of us all,)
Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee,
And (worthy Warrior) welcome to our Tents.

Aene. 'Tis the old Nestor.

Hect. Let me embrace thee good old Chronicle,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with Time:
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to claspe the.

N. I would my arms could match thee in contention
As they contend with thee in courtesie.

Hect. I would they could.

Nest. Ha? by this white beard I'd fight with thee to morrow. Well, welcom, welcom: I have seen the time—

Ulys. I wonder now, how yonder City stands,
When we have here her Base and Pillar by us.

Hect. I know your favour Lord Ulysses well.
Ah sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead;
Since first I saw your self, and Diomed
In Ilion, on your Greekish Embassie.

Ulys. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue,
My prophecie is but half his journey yet;
For yonder walls that partly front your Town,
Yond Towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.

Hect. I must not believe you:
There they stand yet: and modestly I think,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood: the end crowns all,
And that old common Arbitrator, Time,
Will one day end it.

Ulys. So to him we leave it.
Most gentle, and most valiant Hector, welcome;
After the General, I beseech you next
To feast with me, and see me at thy Tent.

Achil. I shall forestall thee Lord Ulysses, thou:
Now Hector I have fed mine eyes on thee,
I have with exact view perus'd thee Hector,
And quoted joynt by joynt.

Hec. Is this Achilles?

Achil. I am Achilles.

Hect. Stand fair I prithee, let me look on thee.

Achil. Behold thy fill.

Hect. Nay, I have done already.

Achil. Thou art too brief, I will the second time,
As I would buy thee, view thee, limb by limb.

Hect. O like a book of sport thou'lt read me ore:
But there's more in me than thou understand'lt.
Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?

Achil. Tell me you Heavens, in which part of his body
Shall I destroy him? Whether there, or there, or there,
That I may give the local wound a name,
And make distinct the very breach, where-out
Hectors great spirit flew. Answer me heavens.

Hect. It would discredit the blest gods, proud man,
To answer such a question: Stand again;
Think'lt thou to catch my life so pleasantly,
As to prenominate in nice conjecture
Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Achil. I tell thee yea.

Hect. Wert thou the Oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee: henceforth guard thee well,
For Ile not kill thee there, nor there, nor there,
But by the forge that stythied Mars his helm,
Ile kill thee every where, yea, ore and ore.
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag,
His insolence draws folly from my lips,
But Ile endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never—

Ax. Do not chafe thee Cofin:

And you Achilles, let these threats alone
Till accident, or purpose bring you too't.
You may have every day enough of Hector
If you have stomach. The general state I fear,
Can scarce intreat you to be odd with him.

Hect. I pray you let us see you in the field,
We have had pelting Warrs since you refus'd
The Grecians cause.

Achil. Do'st thou intreat me Hector?

To morrow do I meet thee fell as death,
To night, all Friends.

Hect. Thy hands upon that match.

Aga. First, all you Peers of Greece go to my Tent,
There in the full convive you: Afterwards,
As Hectors leisure, and your bounties shall
Concurr together, severally intreat him.
Beat loud the Taborines, let the Trumpets blow.
That this great Souldier may his welcom know Exeunt.

Troi. My Lord Ulysses, tell me I beseech you,
In what place of the Field doth Cilias keep?

Ulys. At Menelaus Tent, most Princely Troilus,
There Diomed doth feast with him to night,
Who neither looks on heaven, nor on earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the fair Cressid.

Troi. Shall I (sweet Lord) be bound to thee so much,
After we part from Agamemnons Tent,
To bring me thither?

Ulys. You shall command me sir:
As gentle tell me, of what Honour was
This Cressida in Troy, had she no Lover there
That waits her absence?

Troi. O sir, to such as boasting shew their scars,
A mock is due: will you walk on my Lord?
She was below'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth.
But still sweet Love is food for Fortunes tooth. Exeunt.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. Ile heat his blood with Greekish wine to night,
Which

Which with my Semitar Ile cool to morrow :

Patroclus, let us Feast him to the hight.

Pat. Here comes Thersites. Enter Thersites.

Achil. How now, thou core of Envy ?

Thou crusty batch of Nature, what's the news ?

Ther. Why thou picture of what thou seem'st, & Idoll of Ideot-worshippers, here's a Letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, Fragment ?

Ther. Why thou full dish of Fool, from Troy.

Pat. Who keeps the Tent now ?

Ther. The Surgeons box, or the patients wound.

Patr. Wel said adversity, and what need these tricks ?

Ther. Prethee be silent boy, I profit not by thy talk, thou art thought to be Achilles male Varlot, Patr. Male Varlot you Rogue ? What's that ?

Ther. Why his masculine Whore. Now the rotten diseases of the South, guts-gripping Ruptures, Catarres, Loads a gravell i'th' backs, Lethargies, cold Palfies, and the like, take and take again, such preposterous discoveries.

Pat. Why thou damnable box of envy thou, what mean'st thou to curse thus ?

Ther. Do I curse thee ?

Patr. Why no, you ruinous Butt, you whorson indistinguishable Curr.

Ther. No ? why art thou then exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of Sleyd silk ; thou green Sarcenet flap for a fore eye, thou tossell of a Prodigals purse thou ? Ah how the poor world is pestred with such water-flies, diminutives of Nature.

Pat. Out gall.

Ther. Finch Egg.

Ach. My sweet Patroclus, I am th'warted quite From my great purpose in to morrows battel: Here is a Letter from Queen Hecuba, A token from her daughter, my fair Love, Both taxing me, and gaging me to keep An Oath that I have sworn. I will not break it, Fall Greek, fall Fame, Honor or go, or stay, My major vow lyes here ; this Ile obey : Come, come Thersites, help to trim my Tent, This night in banquetting must all be spent. Away Patroclus. Exit.

Ther. With too much blood, and too little brain, these two may run mad : but if with too much brain, and too little blood, they do, Ile be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loves Quails, but he has not so much Brain as ear-wax ; & the good transformation of Jupiter there his Brother, the Bull, the primitive Statue, and oblique memorial of Cuc-kolds, a thrifty shooing-horn in a chain, hanging at his Brothers legg, to what form but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turn him to ? to an Ass were nothing, he is both Ass and Ox ; to an Ox were nothing, he is both Ox and Ass : to be a Dogg, a Mule, a Cat, a Fitchew, a Toad, a Lizard, an Owl, a Puttock, or a Herring without a Roe, I would not care : but to be Menelaus, I would conspire against Destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites : for I care not to be the Lowse of a Lazar, so I were not Menelaus. Hoy-day spirits and fires.

Enter Hector, Ajax, Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Diomed, with Lights.

Aga. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Aja. No yonder 'tis, there where we see the light.

Hect. I trouble you.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Enter Achilles.

Ulys. Here comes himself to guide you.

Achil. Welcome brave Hector, welcome Princes all.

Agam. So now fair Prince of Troy, I bid goodnight,

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hect. Thanks, and good night to the Greeks general,

Men. Good night my Lord.

Hect. Good night sweet Lord Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet draught ; sweet quoth a ? sweet sink, sweet fure.

Achil. Good night and welcom, both at once, to those that go, or tarry.

Aga. Good night.

Achil. Old Nestor tarries, and you too Diomed, Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot Lord, I have important business, The tide whereof is now, goodnight great Hector.

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulys. Follow his Torch, he goes to Chalcas Tent, Ile keep you company.

Troi. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so good night.

Achil. Come, come, enter my Tent. Exeunt.

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted Rogue, a most unjust Knave ; I will no more trust him when he leers, than I will a Serpent when he hisses: he will spend his mouth & promise, like Brabler the Hound; but when he performs, Astronomers foretell it, that it is prodigious, there will come some change : the Sun borrows of the Moon when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him : they say, he keeps a Trojan Drab, and uses the Traitor Chalcas his Tent. Ile after — Nothing but Letchery ? All incontinent Varlets. Exeunt.

Enter Diomed.

Dio. What are you up here ho ? speak.

Chal. Who calls ?

Dio. Diomed, Chalcas I think, where's your Daughter ?

Chal. She comes to you.

Enter Troilus and Ulysses.

Ulys. Stand where the Torch may not discover us.

Enter Cressid.

Troi. Cressid come forth to him.

Dio. How now my charge ?

Cres. Now my sweet guardian: heark, a word with you.

Troi. Yea, so familiar ?

Ulys. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may find her, if he can take her life : she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember ?

Cres. Remember ? yes.

Dio. Nay, but do then ; and let your mind be coupled with your words.

Troi. What should she remember ?

Ulys. Lift.

Cres. Sweet hony Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery.

Dio. Nay then.

Cres. Ile tell you what.

Dio. Fo, fo, come tell a pin, you are a forsworn —

Cres. In faith I cannot : what would you have me do ?

Ther. A juggling trick, to be secretly open.

Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me ?

Cres. I prethee do not hold me to mine oath.

Bid me do any thing but that sweet Greek.

Dio. Good

Dio. Good night.
Troi. Hold patience.
Ulys. How now Troian?
Cres. Diomed.
Dio. No, no, good night: Ile be your fool no more.
Troi. Thy better must.
Cres. Hark one word in your ear.
Troi. O plague and madness!
Ulys. You are moved Prince, let us depart I pray you,
 Left your displeasure should enlarge it self
 To wrathful terms: this place is dangerous;
 The time right deadly: I beseech you go.
Troi. Behold, I pray you.
Ulys. Nay, good my Lord go off:
 You flow to great distraction: come my Lord.
Troi. I pray thee stay?
Ulys. You have not patience, come.
Troi. I pray you stay; by hell and all hells torments,
 I will not speak a word.
Dio. And so good night.
Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.
Troi. Doth that grieve thee? O withered truth!
Ulys. VVhy, how now Lord?
Troi. By Jove I will be patient.
Cres. Guardian? why Greek?
Dio. Fo, fo, adieu, you palter.
Cres. In faith I do not: come hither once again.
Ulys. You shake my Lord at something; will you go?
 You will break out.
Troi. She Strokes his cheek.
Ulys. Come, come.
Troi. Nay stay, by Jove I will not speak a word.
 There is between my will, and all offences,
 A guard of patience, stay a little while.
Ther. How the devil Luxury with his fat rump and Porato finger, tickles these together: fry lechery, fry.
Dio. But will you then?
Cres. In faith I will go; never trust me else.
Dio. Give me some token for the surety of it.
Cres. Ile fetch you one.
Ulys. You have sworn patience.
Troi. Fear me not sweet Lord.
 I will not be my self, nor have cognition
 Of what I feel: I am all patience. Enter Cressid.
Ther. Now the pledge, now, now, now.
Cres. Here Diomed, keep this Sleeve.
Troi. O beauty! where is thy Faith?
Ulys. My Lord.
Troi. I will be patient, outwardly I will.
Cres. You look upon that Sleeve; behold it well:
 He lov'd me: O false wench: give't me again.
Dio. Whose was't?
Cres. It is no matter now I have't again.
 I will not meet with you to morrow night:
 I prithee Diomed visit me no more.
Ther. Now she sharpens: well said Whetstone.
Dio. I shall have it.
Cres. What, this?
Dio. I that.
Cres. O all you gods! O pretty, pretty pledge;
 Thy Master now lies thinking in his bed
 Of thee and me, and sighs, and takes my Glove,
 And gives memorial dainty kisses to it;
 As I kiss thee.
Dio. Nay, do not snatch it from me.
Cres. He that takes that, takes my heart withall.

Dio. I had you heart before, this follows it.
Troi. I did swear patience.
Cres. You shall not have it Diomed: faith you shall not Ile give you something else.
Dio. I will have this: whose was it?
Cres. It is no matter.
Dio. Come tell me whose it was?
Cres. 'Twas one that lov'd me better than you will.
 But now you have it, take it.
Dio. Whose was it?
Cres. By all Diana's waiting women yonder,
 And by her self, I will not tell you whose.
Dio. To morrow will I wear it on my Helm,
 And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge it.
Troi. Wert thou the devil, and wor'st it on thy horn,
 It should be challeng'd.
Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past; and yet it is not:
 I will not keep my word.
Dio. Why then farewell,
 Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.
Cres. You shall not go: one cannot speak a word,
 But it strait starts you.
Dio. I do not like this fooling.
Ther. Nor I by Pluto: but that that likes not me, pleas-ses me best.
Dio. What shall I come: the hour.
Cres. I, come: O Jove! do, come: I shall be plagu'd.
Dio. Farewel till then. Exit.
Cres. Good night: I prithee come:
Troilus farewell; one eye yet looks on thee,
 But with my heart, the other eye, doth see—
 Ah poor our sex; this fault in us I find:
 The error of our eye, directs our mind.
 What error leads must err: O then conclude,
 Minds sway'd by eyes, are full of turpitude. Exit.
Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more;
 Unless she say my mind is now turn'd whore.
Ulys. All's done my Lord.
Troi. It is.
Ulys. Why stay we then?
Troi. To make a recordation to my soul
 Of every syllable that here was spoke:
 But if I tell how these two did coast;
 Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?
 Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,
 An esperance so obstinately strong,
 That doth invert that rest of eyes and ears;
 As if those organs had deceptious functions,
 Created only to calumniate.
 Was Cressid here?
Ulys. I cannot conjure Troian.
Troi. She was not sure.
Ulys. Most sure she was.
Troi. Why my negation hath no tast of madness.
Ulys. Nor mine my Lord: Cressid was here but now.
Troi. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood:
 Think we had mothers; do not give advantage
 To stubborn Criticks, apt without a Theme
 For depravation, to square the general sex
 By Cressids rule. Rather think this not Cressid.
Ulys. What hath she done Prince, that can foyl our mothers?
Troi. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.
Ther. Will he swagger himself out on's own eyes?
Troi. This she? no, this is Diomed's Cressida;
 If beauty have a soul, this is not she:

If souls guide vows, if vows are sanctimony ;
 If sanctimony be the gods delight ;
 If there be rule in unity it self ,
 This is not she: O madness of discourse !
 That cause sets up, with, and against thy self ,
 By foul authority : where reason can revolt
 Without perdition, and loss, assume all reason,
 Without revolt. This is, and is not Cressid :
 Within my soul, there doth conduce a fight
 Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparate,
 Divides more wider than the skie and earth :
 And yet the spacious breadth of this division,
 Admits no Orifice for a point as subtle,
 As Ariachnes broken woof to enter ;
 Instance, O instance ! strong as Plutoes gates :
Cressid is mine, tyed with the bonds of heaven ;
 Instance, O instance ! strong as heaven it self :
 The bonds of heaven are slipt, dissolv'd, and loos'd :
 And with another knot five finger tyed,
 The strassions of her faith, ors of her love :
 The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy reliques,
 Of her ore-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.

Vlyf. May worthy Troilus be half attached
 With that which here his passion doth expresse ?

Troi. I Greek, and that shall be divulged well
 In Characters, as red as Mars his heart
 Inflam'd with Venus; never did young man fancy
 With so eternal, and so fixt a soul.

Heark Greek: as much as I do Cressida love ;
 So much by weight, hate I her Diomed:
 That sleeve is mine, that he'll bear in his Helm :
 Were it a Cask compos'd by Vulcans skill,
 My Sword should bite it : Not the dreadful spout,
 Which Shipmen do the Hurricano call,
 Constring'd in mafs by the Almighty Fenn,
 Shall dizzie with more clamour Neptunes ear
 In his descenr, than shall my prompted Sword
 Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'll tickle it for his Concupy.

Troi. O Cressid ! O false Cressid ! false, false, false :
 Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,
 And they'll seem glorious.

Vlyf. O contain your self :
 Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter Aeneas.

Aen. I have been seeking you this hour my Lord :
Hektor by this is arming him in Troy.

Ajax your Guard, stayes to conduct you home.

Troi. Have with you Prince: my courteous Lord adieu:
 Farewel revolted fair : and Diomed,
 Stand fast, and wear a Castle on thy head.

Vlyf. Ile bring you to the Gates.

Troi. Accept distracted thanks.

Exeunt Troilus, Aeneas, and Vlysses.

Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed, I would croke like a Raven: I would bode, I would bode :
Patroclus will give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore: the Partot will not do more for an Almond, than he for a commodious drab : Lechery, lechery, still warrs and lechery, nothing else holds fashion. A burning devil take them.

Exit.

Enter Hektor, and Andromache.

And. When was my Lord so much ungenrly temper'd,
 To stop his ears against admonishment ?
 Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to day.

Hekt. You train me to offend you : get you gone.

By the everlasting gods, Ile goe.

And. My dreams will sure prove ominous to the day.

Hekt. No more I say. Enter Cassandra.

Cas. Where is my brother Hektor ?

And. Here sister, arm'd, and bloody in intent :
 Confort with me in loud and dear petition :
 Pursue we him on knees : for I have dreamt
 Of bloody turbulence; and this whole night
 Hath nothing been but shapes, and forms of slaughter.

Cas. O, 'tis true.

Hekt. Ho ? bid my Trumpet sound.

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother.

Hekt. Begon I say : the gods have heard me swear.

Cas. The gods are deaf to hot, and peevish vows ;
 They are polluted offerings, more abhorr'd
 Than spotted Livers in the Sacrifice.

And. O be perswaded, do not count it holy,
 To hurt by being just; it is as lawful:
 For we would count give much to as violent thefts,
 And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the vow ;
 But vows to every purpose must not hold :
 Unarm sweet Hektor.

Hekt. Hold you still I say ;

Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate :
 Life every man holds dear, but the dear man
 Holds honor far more precious-dear, than life.

Enter Troilus.

How now young man? mean'st thou to fight to day ?

And. Cassandra, call my father to perswade.

Exit Cassandra.

Hekt. No faith young Troilus; doff thy harness youth:
 I am to day i'th' vein of Chivalry :
 Let grow thy Sinews till their knots be strong ;
 And tempt not yet the brushes of the warr.
 Unarm thee, go, and doubt thou not brave boy,
 Ile stand to day, for thee, and me, and Troy.

Troi. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you;
 Which better fits a Lion, than a man.

Hekt. What vice is that? good Troilus chide me for it.

Troi. When many times the captive Grecian falls,
 Even in the fann and wind of your fair Sword :
 You bid them rise, and live.

Hekt. O 'tis fair play.

Troi. Fools play, by heaven Hektor.

Hekt. How now? how now ?

Troi. For th' love of all the gods
 Let's leave the Hermit Pitty with our Mothers ;
 And when we have our Armors buckled on,
 The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords,
 Spur them to rueful work, reign them from ruth.

Hekt. Fie savage, fie.

Troi. Hektor, then 'tis warrs.

Hekt. Troilus, I would not have you fight to day.

Troi. Who should with-hold me ?

Not fare, obedience, nor the hand of Mars,
 Beckning with fiery truncheon my retire ;
 Not Priamus, and Hecuba on knees ;
 Their eyes ore-galled with recourse of tears ;
 Nor you my brother, with your true sword drawn
 Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way :
 But by my ruine.

Enter Priam and Cassandra.

Cas. Lay hold upon him Priam, hold him fast :
 He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay,
 Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,

Fall all together.

Priam. Come Hector, come, go back :
Thy wife hath dreamt, thy mother hath had visions,
Cassandra doth foresee ; and I my self,
Am like a Prophet suddenly enrapt,
To tell thee that this day is ominous :
Therefore come back.

Hect. Aeneas is a-field,
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Priam. I, but thou shalt not go.

Hect. I must not break my faith :
You know me dutiful, therefore dear sit,
Let me not shame respect ; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice,
Which you do here forbid me, Royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him.

And. Do not dear Father.

Hect. Andromache I am offended with you :
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

Exit Andromache.

Troi. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl,
Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O farewell, dear Hector :
Look how thou diest ; look how thy eye turns pale ;
Look how thy wounds do bleed at many vents ;
Hark how Troy roars ; how Hecuba cries out ;
How poor Andromache shrills her dolour forth ;
Behold distraction, frenzy, and amazement,
Like witless Anticks one another meet,
And all cry Hector, Hectors dead : O Hector !

Troi. Away.

Cas. Farewel : yet, soft : Hector I take my leave ;
Thou dost thy self, and all our Troy deceive. Exit.

Hect. You are amaz'd, my Liege, at her exclaim :
Go in and cheer the Town, we'll forth and fight :
Do deeds of praise, and tell you them at night.

Priam. Farewel : the gods with safety stand about thee.

Alarum.

Troi. They are at it, heark : proud Diomed, believe
I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

Enter Pandar.

Pand. Do you hear my Lord ? do you hear ?

Troi. What now ?

Pand. Here's a Letter come from yond poor girl.

Troi. Let me read.

Pand. A whorson tiffick, a whorson rascally tiffick,
So troubles me : and the foolish fortune of this girl, and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o'th'dayes ; and I have a rheum in mine eyes too, and such an ach in my bones, that unless a man were curst,
I cannot tell what to think on't. What sayes she there ?

Troi. Words, words, meer words, no matter from the heart :

Th'effect doth operate another way.
Go wind to wind, there turn and change together :
My love with words and errors still she feeds ;
But edifies another with her deeds.

Pand. Why, but hear you ?

Troi. Hence brother lacky ; ignomy and shame
Perfue thy life, and live aye with thy name.

Alarum.

Exeunt.

Enter Therites in excursion.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another, Ile go look on : that dissembeling abominable varlet Diomed, has got that same scurvy, doting, foolish young knaves Sleeve of Troy, there in his Helm : I would fain see them meet, that, that same young Troian ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whore-masterly villain, with the Sleeve, back to the dissembeling luxurious drab, of a sleeveless errant. O'th'tother side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals ; that stale old Mouse-eaten dry-cheese, Nestor : and that same dog-fox Ulysses is not prov'd worth a Black-berry. They set me up in policy, that mungril curr Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles. And now is the curr Aax prouder than the curr Achilles, and will not arm to day. Whereupon, the Grecians began to proclame barbarism ; and policy grows into an ill opinion.

Enter Diomed and Troilus.

Soft, here comes Sleeve, and th' other.

Troi. Fly not : for should'st thou take the River Styx,
I would swim after.

Diom. Thou dost miscall it :
I do not flye ; but advantageous care
Withdrew me from the odds of multitude :
Have at thee.

Ther. Hold thy whore Grecian : now for thy whore
Troian : Now the Sleeve, now the Sleeve.

Enter Hector.

Hect. What art thou Greek ? art thou for Hectors match ?
Art thou of blood, and honour ?

Ther. No, no : I am a rascal ; a scurvy railing knave ; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee, live.

Ther. God a mercy, that thou wilt believe me ; but a plague break thy neck—for frightening me : what's become of the wenching rogues ? I think they have swallowed one another. I would laugh at that miracle—yet in a sort, lechery eats itself : Ile seek them.

Exit.

Enter Diomed and Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus Horse ;
Present the fair Steed to my Lady Cressid :
Fellow, commend my service to her beauty :
Tell her I have chastis'd the amorous Troian,
And am her Knight by proof.

Ser. I go my Lord. Enter Agamemnon.

Aga. Renew, renew, the fierce Polidamus
Hath beat down Menon : bastard Margarelon
Hath Doreus Prisoner,
And stands Colossus wife waving his beam,
Upon the pashed courses of the Kings,
Epistropus and Cedus, Prolixines is slain ;
Amphimachus, and Thous deadly hurt ;
Patroclus ta'n or slain, and Palamedes
Sore hurt and bruised ; the dreadful Sagittary
Appalls our numbers, haste we Diomed
To re-inforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nestor.

Nest. Go bear Patroclus body to Achilles,
And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame,
There is a thousand Hectors in the field :
Now here he fights on Galathea his Horse ;
And there lacks work : anon he's there a-foot,
And there they flye or dye, like scaled sculs,

D d d 2

Before

Before the belching Whale ; then is he yonder,
And there the straying Greeks, ripe for his edge,
Fall down before him, like the mowers swath ;
Here, there, and every where, he leaves and takes ;
Dexterity so obeying appetite,
That what he will he does, and does so much,
That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulys. Oh, courage, courage Princes: great Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance ;
Patroclus wounds have rouz'd his drowfie blood,
Together with his mangled Myrmidons,
That noseless, handleless, hackt and chipt, come to him ;
Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend,
And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at it :
Roaring for Troilus ; who hath done to day,
Mad and fantastick execution ;
Engaging and redeeming of himself,
With such a careless force, and forceless care,
As if that luck in very sight of cunning, bad him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Aja. Troilus, thou coward Troilus. Exit.

Dio. I, there, there.

Nest. So, so, we draw together. Exit.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Where is this Hector ?
Come, come, thou boy-quiller, shew thy face :
Know what it is to meet Achilles angry.
Hector, wher's Hector ? I will none but Hector. Exit.

Enter Ajax.

Aja. Troilus, thou coward Troilus shew thy head.

Enter Diomed.

Diom. Troilus, I say, wher's Troilus ?

Aja. What would'st thou ?

Dio. I would correct him.

Aja. Were I the General,
Thou should'st have my office,
Ere that correction : Troilus I say, what Troilus ?

Enter Troilus.

Troi. Oh traitour Diomed !
Turn thy false face thou traitor,
And pay thy life thou owest me for my horse.

Dio. Ha, art thou there ?

Aja. Ile fight with him alone, stand Diomed.

Dio. He is my prize, I will not look upon.

Troi. Come both you cogging Greeks, have at you both. Exit Troilus.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Yea Troilus ? O well fought my youngest Brother.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Now do I see thee; have at thee Hector.

Hect. Pause if thou wilt.

Achil. I do disdain thy courtesie, proud Trojan ;
Be happy that my arms are out of use :
My rest and negligence befriend thee now,
But thou anon shalt hear of me again :
Till when, go seek thy fortune.

Hect. Fare thee well :

I would have been much more a fresher man,
Had I expected thee: how now my Brother ?

Enter Troilus.

Troi. Ajax hath ta'n Aeneas; shall it be ?
No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,
He shall not carry him : Ile be ta'n too,
Or bring him off : Fate hear me what I say ;

I wreak not, though thou end my life to day. Exit.

Enter one in Armour.

Hect. Stand, stand thou Greek,
Thou art a goodly mark :
No? wilt thou not? I like thy armour well,
Ile frush it, and unlock the rivets all,
But Ile be master of it : wilt thou not best abide ?
Why then flie on, Ile hunt thee for thy hide. Exit.

Enter Achilles with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come hear about me you my Myrmidons :
Mark what I say; attend me where I wheel :
Strike not a stroke but keep your selves in breath;
And when I have the bloody Hector found,
Empale him with your weapons round about :
In fellest manner execute your arms.
Follow me first, and my proceeding eye ;
It is decreed, Hector the great must die. Exit.

Enter Thersites, Menelaus, and Paris.

Ther. The Cuckold and the Cuckold-maker are at it:
now bull, now dog, low ; Paris low ; now my double hen'd sparrow, low Paris, low ; the bull has the game :
ware horns ho.

Exit Paris and Menelaus.

Enter Bastard.

Bast. Turn slave and fight.

Ther. What art thou ?

Bast. A Bastard Son of Priams.

Ther. I am a Bastard too, I love Bastards, I am a Bastard begot, Bastard instructed, Bastard in mind, Bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate: one Bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one Bastard ? take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us : if the Son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgment : farewell Bastard.

Bast. The devil take the coward. Exeunt.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Most purrified core so fair without :
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my days work done; Ile take good breath :
Rest Sword, thou hast thy fill of blood and death.

Enter Achilles and his Myrmidons.

Achil. Look Hector how the Sun begins to set :
How ugly night comes breathing at his heels,
Even with the veil and darking of the Sun.
To close the day up, Hectors life is done.

Hect. I am unarm'd, forgo this vantage Greek.

Achil. Strike fellows strike, this is the man I seek.
So Ilium fall thou : now Troy sink down :
Here lyes thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.
On Myrmidons, cry you all a main.

Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain. Retreat.

Gree. The Trojan Trumpets sounds the like my Lord.

Achi. The dragon wing of night ore-spreads the earth,
And stickler-like the Armies separates;
My half supt Sword, that frankly would have fed,
Pleas'd with this dainty bit, thus goes to bed.
Come, tye his body to my horses tail :
Along the field: I will the Trojan trail. Exeunt.

Sound Retreat.

Shout.

Enter Agamemnon, Ajax, Menelaus, Nestor, Diomed, and the rest marching.

Aga. Hark, hark, what shout is that ?

Nest. Peace Drums.

Sol. Achil.

Sold. Achilles, Achilles, Hector's slain Achilles.

Dio. The bruit is Hector slain, and by Achilles.

A a. If it be so, yet bragless let it be :

Great Hector was a man as good as he.

Agam. March patiently along; let one be sent To pray Achilles see us at our Tent.

If in his death the gods have us befriended,

Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended.

Exeunt.

Enter Aeneas, Paris, Antenor and Deiphobus.

*Aene. Stand hoe, yet are we masters of the field,
Never go home; here starve we out the night.*

Enter Troilus.

Troi. Hector is slain.

All. Hector; the gods forbid.

Troi. He's dead: and at the murderers Horses tail,

In beastly sort, drag'd through the shameful Field,

Frown on you heavens, effect your rage with speed:

Sit gods upon your throats, and smile at Troy.

I say at once, let your brief plagues be mercy,

And linger not our sure destructions on.

Aene. My Lord, you do discomfort all the Host.

Troi. You understand me not, that tell me so:

I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death,

But dare all imminence that gods and men,

Address their dangers in. Hector is gone :

Who shall tell Priam so? or Hecuba?

Let him that will a screechowl aye be call'd.

Go in to Troy, and say there, Hector's dead :

There is a word will Priam turn to stone ;

Make wells, and Niobes of the maids and wives;

Cool statues of the youth: and in a word,

Scare Troy out of it self. But march away,

Hector is dead: there is no more to say.

Stay yet: you vile abominable Tents,

Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains :

Let Titan rise as early as he dare,

Ile through, and through you: & thou great siz'd coward,

No space of Earth shall funder our two hates,

Ile haunt thee, like a wicked conscience still,

That mouldeth goblins swift as frensies thoughts.

Strike a free march to Troy, with comfort go :

Hope of revenge, shall hide our inward woe.

Enter Pandarus

Pand. But hear you? hear you?

Troi. Hence brothel, lacky, ignominy, and shame

Persue thy life, and live aye with thy name. Exeunt.

Pan. A goodly medicine for mine akingbones: oh world, world, world! thus is the poor agent despis'd: Oh traitors and bawds; how earnestly are you set a work, and how ill requited? why should our endeavour be so despir'd, and the performance so loath'd? What Verse for it? what instance for it? let me see,

Full merrily the humble Bee doth sing,

Till he hath lost his hony, and his sting;

And being once subdu'd in armed tail,

Sweet hony, and sweet notes together fail.

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloaths,

As many as be here of Pandarus hall,

Your eyes half out weep out at Pandarus fall :

Or if you cannot weep, yet give some grones ;

Though not for me, yet for your akingbones :

Brethren and sisters of the hold-dore trade,

Some two months hence, my will shall here be made :

It should be now, but that my fear is this,

Some galled Goose of Winchester would hiss :

Till then, Ile swear, and seek about for eases ;

And at that time bequeath you my diseases. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The Tragedy of Coriolanus

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter a Company of Mutinous Citizens, with Staves, Clubs, and other weapons.

1 Citizen.

BEfore we proceed any further, hear me speak.
All. Speak, Speak.
1 Cit. You are all resolv'd rather to die than to famish?

All. Resolv'd, resolv'd.

1 Cit. First you know, Caius Martius is chief enemy to the people.

All. We know't.

1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have Corn at our own price. Is't a Verdict?

All. No more talking on't, Let it be done, away, away.

2 Cit. One word, good Citizens.

1 Cit. We are accounted poor Citizens, the Patricians good: what Authority sursets on, would relieve us; If they would yield us but the superfluity while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely: But they think we are too dear; the leannefs that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance, our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our Pikes, ere we become racks. For the Gods know, I speak this in hunger for Bread, not in thirst for Revenge.

2 Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Martius?

All. Against him first: He's a very dog to the Commonalty.

2 Cit. Consider you what Services he ha's done for his Country?

1 Cit. Very well, and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

All. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1 Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done Famously, he did it to that end: though soft conscienc'd men can be content to say it was for his Country, he did it to please his Mother, and to be partly proud, which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

2 Cit. What he cannot help in his Nature, you account a Vice in him: You must in no way say he is covetous.

1 Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of Accusations, he hath faults (with surplus) to tire in repetition.

Shouts within.

What shouts are those? The other side a'th' City is risen: why stay we prating here? To th' Capitol.

All. Come, come,

1 Cit. Soft, who comes here?

Enter Menenius Agrippa.

2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa, one that hath alwayes lov'd the people.

1 Cit. He's one honest enough, would all the rest were so.

Men. VVhat works my Countrymen in hand?

VVhere go you with your Bats and Clubs? The matter, Speak I pray you.

2 Cit. Our business is not unknown to th' Senat, they have had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, which now we'll shew'm in deeds: they say poor Suters have strong breaths, they shall know we have strong arms too.

Men. VVhy Masters, my good Friends, mine honest Neighbours, will you undo your selves?

2 Cit. VVe cannot Sir, we are undone already.

Men. I tell you Friends, most charitable care

Have the Patricians of you for your wants,

Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well

Strike at the Heaven with your staves, as lift them

Against the Roman State, whose course will on

The way it takes: cracking ten thousand Curbs

Of more strong link'd a funder, than can ever

Appear in your impediment. For the Dearth,

The Gods, not the Patricians make it, and

Your knees to them (not arms) must help. Alack,

You are transported by Calamity

Thither where more attends you, and you slander

The Helms o'th' State; who care for you like Fathers,

VVhen you curse them, as Enemies.

2 Cit. Care for us? True indeed, they ne'r cared for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their Store-houses cramm'd with Grain: Make Edicts for Usury, to support Usurers; repeal daily any wholesome Act established against the rich, and provide more peircing Statutes daily, to chain up and restrain the poor. If the VVars eat us not up, they will, and ther's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must

Confess your selves wondrous Malicious,

Or be accus'd of Folly. I shall tell you

A prettry tale, it may be you have heard it,

But since it serves my purpose, I will venture

To scale't a little more.

2 Cit. Well,

Ile hear it fir: yet you must not think

To fobb off our disgrace with a tale:

But and't please you deliver.

Men. There was a time, when all the bodies members

Rebell'd against the belly; thus accused it:

That only like a Gulf it did remain

I'th'

I'th' midd'lt a'th'body, idle and unactive,
Still cubbording the Viand, never bearing
Like labour with the rest, where th'other Instruments
Did see, and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel,
And mutually participate, did minister
Unto the appetite; and affection common
Of the whole body; the Belly answers.

2 Cit. Well sir, what answer made the Belly.

Men. Sir, I shall tell you with a kind of Smile,
Which ne'r came from the Lungs, but even thus:
For look you I may make the belly smile,
As well as speak; it rantingly replied
To'th' discontented Members, the mutinous parts
That envied his receipt: even so most fitly,
As you malign our Senators, for that
They are not such as you.

2 Cit. Your Bellies answer: What
The Kingly crown'd head, the vigilant eye,
The Counsellor Heart, the Arm our Souldier,
Our Steed the Leg, the Tongue our Trumpeter;
With other Muniments and petty helps
In this our Fabrick, if that they——

Men. What then? Foreme, this fellow speaks.
What then? What then?

2 Cit. Should by the Cormorant belly be restrain'd,
Who is the sink a'th' body.

Men. Well, what then?

2 Cit. The former Agents, if they did complain,
What could the Belly answer?

Men. I will tell you,
If you'll bestow a small (of what you have little)
Patience a while; you'll hear the Bellies answer.

2 Cit. Y're long about it.

Men. Note me this good friend:
Your most grave Belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his Accusers, and thus answered;
True is it my Incorporate Friends (quoth he)
That I receive the general food at first
Which you do live upon: and fit it is,
Because I am the Store-house, and the Shop
Of the whole Body. But, if you do remember,
I send it through the Rivers of your blood
Even to the Court, the Heart, to th' seat o'th' Brain,
And through the Cranks and Offices of man,
The strongest Nerves, and small inferiour Veins
From me receive that natural competency
Whereby they live. And though that all at once
(You my good Friends, this sayes the Belly) mark me.

2 Cit. I sir, well, well.

Men. Though all at once, cannot
See what I do deliver out to each,
Yet I can make my Awdit up, that all
From me do back receive the flowr of all,
And leave me but the Bran. What say you to't?

2 Cit. It was an answer, how apply you this?

Men. The Senators of Rome, are this good Belly,
And you the mutinous Members: For examine
Their Counsels, and their Care; digest things rightly,
Touching the Weal a'th' Common, you shall find
No publike benefit which you receive
But it proceeds, or comes from them to you,
And no way from your selves. What do you think?
You, the great Toe of this Assembly?

2 Cit. I the great Toe? Why the great Toe?

Men. For that being one o'th' lowest, basest, poorest
Of this most wise Rebellion, thou goest foremost:

Thou Rascal, that art worst in blood to run,
Lead'st first to win some vantage.
But make you ready your stiff bars and clubs,
Rome, and her Rats, are at the point of battel,
The one side must have bail.

Enter Caius Martius.

Hayl, Noble Martius.

Mar. Thanks. What's the matter you dissentious rogues?
That rubbing the poor Itch of your Opinion,
Make your selves scabs.

2 Cit. We have ever your good word.

Mar. He that will give good words to thee, will flatter
Beneath abhorring. What would you have, you Curs,
That like not Peace, nor Warr? The one affrights you,
The other makes you proud. He that trusts to you,
Where he should find you Lions, finds you Hares:
Where Foxes, Geese you are: No surer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the Ice,
Or Hailstone in the Sun. Your virtue is,
To make him worthy, whose offence subdues him,
And curse that Justice did it. Who deserves Greatness,
Deserves your Hate: and your Affections are
A sickmans Appetite; who desires most that
Which would encrease his evil. He that depends Upon your favours, swims with finns of Lead,
And hews down Oaks, with rushes. Hang ye: trust ye?
With every Minute you do change a Mind,
And call him Noble, that was now your Hate:
Him vilde, that was your Garland. What's the matter,
That in these several places of the City,
You cry against the Noble Senate, who (Under the Gods) keep you in awe, which else
VVould feed on one another? VVhat's their seeking?

Men. For Corn at their own rates, whereof they say
The City is well stor'd.

Mar. Hang 'em: They say,
They'll sit by th' fire, and presume to know
What's done i'th' Capitol: Who's like to rise,
Who thrives, and who declines: Side factions, & give out
Conjectural Marriages, making parties strong,
And feebling such as stand not in their liking,
Below their cobled Shooes. They say ther's grain enough.
VVould the Nobility lay aside their ruth,
And let me use my Sword, I'de make a Quarry
VVith thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high
A I could pick my Lance.

Men. Nay these are almost thoroughly perswaded:
For though abundantly they lack discretion
Yet are they passing Cowardly. But I beseech you,
VVhat says the other Troop?

Mar. They are dissolv'd: Hang 'em;
They said they were an hungry, sigh'd forth Proverbs
That Hunger broke stone walls: that dogs must eat
That meat was made for mouths. That the gods sent not Corn for the Rich men only: VVith these shreds
They vented their Complaining, which being answer'd
And a petition granted them, a strange one,
To break the heart of generosity,
And make bold power look pale, they threw their caps
As they would hang them on the horns a'th' Moon,
Shooting their Emulation.

Men. What is granted them?

Mar. Five Tribunes to defend their vulgar wisdoms
Of their own choice. One's Junius Bruttus,
Sicinius velutus, and I know not. Sdeath,

The

The rabble should have first unrooted the City
Ere so prevail'd with me; it will in time
Win upon power, and throw forth greater Themes
For Insurrections arguing.

Menen. This is strange.

Mar. Go get you home you Fragments.

Enter a Messenger hastily.

Mes. Where's Caius Martius?

Mar. Here: what's the matter?

Mes. The news is fir, the Volcies are in Arms.

Mar. I am glad on't, then we shall ha means to vent
Our musty superfluity. See our best Elders.

Enter Sicinius Velutus, Annulus Brutus Cominius, Titus Lartius, with other Senators.

1 Sen. Martius tis true, that you have lately told us,
The Volcies are in Arms.

Mar. They have a Leader,
Tullus Aufidius that will put you too't:
I sin in envying his Nobility:
And were I any thing but what I am,
I would wish me only he.

Com. You have fought together?

Mar. Were half to half the world by th'ears, and he Upon my party, I'd revolt to make Onely my warres with him. He is a Lion
That I am proud to hunt.

1. Sen. Then worthy Martius,
Attend upon Cominius to these Wars.

Com. It is your former promise.

Mar. Sir it is,
And I am constant: Titus Lucius, thou
Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus face.
What art thou stiff? Stand'st out?

Tit. No Caius Martius,
He lean upon one Crutch, and fight with tother;
Ere stay behind this Business.

Men. Oh true-bred.

Sen. Your company to th'Capitol, where I know
Our greatest Friends attend us.

Tit. Lead you on: Follow Cominius, we must follow you, right worthy you Priority.

Com. Noble Martius.

Sen. Hence to your homes, be gone.

Mar. Nay let them follow,
The Volcies have much Corn: take these Rats thither,
To gnaw their Garners. Worshipfull Mutiners,
Your valour puts well forth: Pray follow. Exeunt.

Citizens steal away. Manent Sicin, and Brutus.

Sicin. Was ever man so proud as is this Martius?

Brn. He has no equal.

Sic. When we were chosen Tribunes for the people--

Brn. Mark'd you his lip and eyes.

Sic. Nay, but his taunts.

Brn. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the Gods.

Sic. Bemock the modest Moon.

Brn. The present Warrs devour him, he is grown
Too proud to be so valiant.

Sicin. Such a Nature, tickled with good success, dis-dains the shadow which he treads on at noon, but I do wonder, his insolence can brook to be commanded under Cominius?

Brn. Fame, at the which he aymes,
In whom already he is well grac'd, cannot Better be held, nor more attain'd than by

A place below the first: for what miscarries
Shall be the Generals fault, though he perform
To th' utmost of a man, and giddy censure
Will then cry out of Martius: Oh, if he Had born the business.

Sic. Besides, if things go well,
Opinion that so sticks on Martius, shall
Of his demerits rob Cominius.

Brn. Come: half all Cominius Honors are to Martius
Though Martius earn'd them not: and all his faults
To Martius shall be Honors, though indeed
In ought he merit not.

Sic. Let's hence and hear
How the dispatch is made, and in what fashion
More than his singularity, he goes
Upon this present Action.

Brn. Let's along. Exeunt.

Enter Tullus Aufidius with Senators of Coriolus.

1 Sen. So, your opinion is Aufidius,
That they of Rome are entred in our Counsails,
And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours?
What ever hath been thought on in this State
That could be brought to bodily act, ere Rome
Had circumvention? 'tis not four dayes gone
Since I heard thence, these are the words, I think
I have the Letter here: yes here it is;
They have prest a power, but it is not known
Whether for East or West: the Dearth is great,
The people Mutinous: And it is rumour'd
Cominius, Martius your old Enemy
(Who is of Rome worse hated than of you)
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman,
These three lead on this Preparation
Whither 'tis bent: most likely, 'tis for you:
Consider of it.

1 Sen. Our Armie's in the Field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly,
To keep your great pretences veil'd, till when
They needs must shew themselves, which in the hatching
It seem'd appear'd to Rome. By the discovery,
We shall be shortned in our aym, which was
To take in many Towns, ere (almost) Rome
Should know we are a-foot.

2 Sen. Noble Aufidius,
Take your commission, hie you to your Bands,
Let us alone to guard Coriolus
If they set down before's: for the remove Bring up your Army: but (I think) you'll find
Th'have not prepar'd for us.

Auf. O doubt not that,
I speak from certainties. Nay more,
Some parcels of their power are forth already,
And only hitherward. I leave your Honors.
If we, and Caius Martius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us, we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The Gods assist you.

Auf. And keep your Honors safe.

1 Sen. Farewel.

2 Sen. Farewel.

All. Farewel.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter

*Enter Volumnia and Virgilia, mother and wife to Martius
They set them down on two low stools and sow.*

Vol. I pray you daughter sing, or express your self in a more comfortable sort: If my Son were my Husband, I should freelier rejoyce in that absence wherein he wonn Honor, than in the embracements of his Bed, where he should show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only Son of my womb; when youth with comelines pluck'd all gaze his way; when for a day of Kings entreaties, a Mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding, I considering how Honour would become such a person, that it was no better than Picture-like to hang by th' wall, if renown made it not stir, was pleas'd to let him seek danger, where he was like to find fame: To a cruel Warr I sent him, from whence he return'd, his brows bound with Oak. I tell thee Daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a Man-child, than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Virg. But had he died in the Business Madam, how then?

Volum. Then his good report should have been my Son, I therein would have found issue. Here me profess sincerely, had I a dozen sons each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine, and my good Martius, I had rather had eleven dye Nobly for their Countrey, than one voluptuously surfeit out of Action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Virg. Beseech you give me leave to retire my self.

Volum. Indeed you shall not:

Me thinks, I hear hither your Husbands Drum:
See him pluck Aufidius down by th' hair:
(As children from a Bear) the Volcies shunning him:
Me think, I see him stamp thus, and call thus,
Come on ye Cowards, you were got in fear
Though you were born in Rome; his bloody brow
With his mail'd hand, then wiping, forth he goes
Like to a Harvest man, what's task'd to more
Or all, or lose his hire.

Virg. His bloody Brow? Oh Jupiter, no blood.

Volum. Away you Fool; it more becomes a man
Than gilt his Trophy. The breasts of Hecuba
When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier
Than Hector's forehead, when it spit forth blood
At Grecian swords Contending: tell Valeria
We are fit to bid her welcome. Exit Gent.

Vir. Heavens bless my Lord from fell Aufidius.

Vol. He'll bear Aufidius head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

Enter Valeria with an Usher, and a Gentlewoman.

Val. My Ladies both good day to you.

Vol. Sweet Madam.

Vir. I am glad to see your Ladyship.

Val. How do you both? You are manifest house-keepers. What are you sowing here? A fine spot in good faith. How does your little Son?

Vir. I thank your Ladyship: Well good Madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords, and hear a Drum, than look upon his Schoolmaster.

Val. A my word the Fathers Son: He swear 'tis a very pretty boy. A my troth, I look'd upon him a Wednesday half an hour together: ha's such a confirm'd countenance. I saw him run after a gilded Butterfly, and when he caught it, he let it go again, and after it again, and over and over he comes, and up again: catcht it again: or whether his fall enrag'd him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth, and tear it. Oh, I warrant how he mammockt it.

Vol. One on's Fathers moods.

Val. Indeed la, 'tis a noble child.

Virg. A Crack Madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stichery, I must have you play the idle Huswife with me this after noon.

Virg. No (good Madam)

I will not out of dores.

Val. Not out of dores?

Volum. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed no, by your patience; He not over the threshold, till my Lord return from the Wars.

Val. Fie, you confine your self most unreasonably:

Come, you must go visit the good Lady that lies in.

Virg. I will with her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers: but I cannot go thither.

Volum. Why I pray you?

Virg. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope: yet they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses absence, did but fill Ithaca full of Mothes. Come, I would your Cambrick were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pitty. Come you shall go with us.

Virg. No good Madam, pardon me, indeed I will not forth.

Val. In truch la go with me, and He tell you excellent news of your Husband.

Vir. Oh good Madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily I do not jest with you: there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed Madam?

Val. In earnest it's true; I heard a Senatour speak it. Thus it is: the Volcies have an Army forth, against whom Cominius the General is gone, with one part of our Roman power. Your Lord, and Titus Lartius, are set down before their City Corioli, they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief Wars. This is true on mine Honor, and so I pray go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse good Madam, I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone Lady, as she is now:
She will but disease our better mirth.

Val. In troth I think she would:
Fare you well then. Come good sweet Lady.
Prithee Virgilia turn thy solemnness out a dore,
And go along with us.

Virg. No

At a word Madam; indeed I must not,
I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well, then Farewel.

Exeunt Ladies.

Enter Martius, Titus Lartius, with Drum and Colours, with Captains and Souldiers, as before the City Corioli: to them a Messenger.

Mart. Yonder comes News:
A Wager they have met.

Lar. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lar. Agreed.

Mar.

Mar. Say, ha's our General met the Enemy?

Mess. They lye in view, but have not spoke as yet.

Lar. So, the good horse is mine.

Mart. Ile buy him of you.

Lar. No, Ile not sell, nor give him; Lend him you I wil
For half a hundred years; Summon the Town.

Mar. How farr off lies these Armies?

Mess. Within this mile and half.

Mar. Then shall we hear their Larum, and they Ours.
Now Mars, I prithe thee make us quick in work,
That we with smoaking swords may march from hence
To help our fielded Friends. Come, blow thy blatt.

They Sound a Parley: Enter two Senators with others on the Walls of Coriolus.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your Walls?

1 Senat. No, nor a man that fears you less than he,
That's lesser than a little: Drum a far off.

Heark, our Drums

Are bringing forth our youth: We'll break our Walls
Rather than they shall pound us up, our Gates,
Which yet seem shut, we have but pin'd with Rushes,
They'll open of themselves. Hark you farr off

Alarum farr off.

There is Aufidius. Lift what work he makes Amongst your cloven Army.

Mar. Oh they are at it.

Lar. Their noise be our instruction. Ladders hoe.

Enter the Army of the Volcians.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their City.
Now put your Shields before your hearts, and fight
With hearts more proof than Shields.

Advance brave Titus,

They do disdain us much beyond our Thoughts,
Which makes me sweat with wrath. Com on my fellows
He that retires, Ile take him for a Volcie,
And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum, the Romans are beat back to their Trenches.

Enter Martius Cursing.

Mar. All the contagion of the Sourh, light on you,
You shames of Rome: you Herd of Biles and Plagues
Plaister you o're, that you may be abhorr'd
Farther than feen, and one infect another
Against the Wind a mile: you souls of Geese,
That bear the shapes of men, how have you run
From Slaves, that Apes would beat? Pluto and Hell,
All hurt behind, backs red, and faces pale
With flight and agued fear! mend and charge home,
Or by the fires of heaven, Ile leave the Foe,
And make my Warrs on you: Look to't: Come on,
If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their Wives,
As they us to our Trenches followed.

Another Alarum, and Martius follows them to the gates, and is shut in.

So, now the gates are ope: now prove good Seconds,
'Tis for the followers, Fortune widens them,
Not for the flyers: Mark me, and do the like.

Enter the Gates.

1 Sol. Fool-hardiness, not I.

2 So. Nor I.

1 Sol. See they have shut him in. Alarum continues.

All. To th' pot I warrant him. Enter Titus Lartius.

Tit. What is become of Martius?

All. Slain (Sir) doubtless.

1 Sol. Following the Flyers at the very heels,

With them he enters; who upon the sodain
Clapt to their Gates: he is himself alone,
To answer all the City.

Lar. Oh Noble Fellow!

Who sensibly out-dares his senceless Sword,
And when it bows, stand't, up: Thou art left Martius,
A Carbuncle intire, as big as thou art,
Were not so rich a Jewel. Thou was't a Souldier
Even to Calves with, not fierce and terrible
Only in strokes, but with thy grim looks, and
The Thunder-like percussion of thy sounds
Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the World
Were feavorous, and did tremble.

Enter Martius bleeding, assaulted by the Enemy.

1 Sol. Look Sir.

Lar. O'tis Martius.

Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike.

They fight, and all enter the City.

Enter certain Romans with spoils.

1 Rom. This will I carry to Rome.

2 Rom. And I this.

3 Rom. A Murrain on't, I took this for Silver. Exeunt.
Alarum continues still a farr off.

Enter Martius, and Titus with a Trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers, that do prize their hours
At a crack'd Drachme: Cushions, Leaden Spoons,
Irons of a Doit, Dublets that Hangmen would
Bury with those that wore them, These base slaves,
Ere yet the fight be done, pack up, down with them.
And hark, what noise the General makes: To him,
There is the man of my souls hate, Aufidius,
Peircing our Romans: Then Valiant Titus take Convenient Numbers to make good the City,
Whil't I with those that have the spirit, will haste
To help Cominius.

Lar. Worthy Sir, thou bleed'st,
Thy exercise hath been too violent,
For a second course of Fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not:
My work hath yet not warm'd me. Fare you well:
The blood I drop, is rather Physical
Than dangerous to me. To Aufidius thus, I will appear
Lar. Now the fair Goddess Fortune, (and fight.
Fall deep in love with thee, and her great charms
Misguide thy Opposers swords, Bold Gentleman:
Prosperity be thy Page.

Mar. Thy Friend no less,
Than those she placeth highest: So farewell.

Lar. Thou worthiest Martius,
Go sound thy Trumpet in the Market place,
Call thither all the Officers a'th' Town,
Where they shall know our mind. Away. Exeunt.

Enter Cominius as it were in retire, with souldiers.

Com. Breath you my friends, well fought, we are come
Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands, (off
Nor Cowardly in retire: Believe me Sirs,
We shall be charg'd again. Whiles we have strook
By interims and conveying gusts, we have heard
The Charges of our Friends. The Roman Gods,
Lead their successes, as we wish our own,
That both our powers, with smiling Fronts encountering,
May give you thankful Sacrifice. Thy News?

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. The Citizens of Coriolus have issued,
And given to Lartius and to Martius Battel.

I saw our party to their Trenches driven,
And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speakest truth,
Me thinks thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?

Mef. Above an hour, my Lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile: briefly we heard their drums.
How could'st thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy News so late?

Mef. Spies of the Volcians
Held me in chace, that I was forc'd to wheel
Three or four miles about, else had I fir
Half an hour since brought my report.

Enter Martins.

Com. Whose yonder,
That does appear as he were Flead? O Gods,
He has the stamp of Martins, and I have Before time seen him thus.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. The Shepherd knows not Thunder from a Taber,
More than I know the found of Martins Tongue
From every meaner man.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. I, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your own.

Mar. Oh! let me clipye
In Arms as found, as when I woo'd in heart;
As merry, as when our Nuptial day was done,
And Tapers burnt to Bedward.

Com. Flower of Warriors, how is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile,
Ransoming him, or pitying, threatening th' other;
Holding Coriolanus in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning Grey-hound in the Leash,
To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that Slave,
Which told me they had beat you to your Trenches?
Where is he? Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone,
He did inform the truth: but for our Gentlemen,
The common file, (a plague Tribunes for them)
The Mouse ne'r shunn'd the Cat, as they did budge
From Rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you?

Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think:
Where is the enemy? Are you Lords a'th' Field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?

Com. Martins we have at disadvantage fought,
And did retire to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their battel? Know you on what side
They have plac'd their men of trust?

Com. As I guess Martins,
Their Bands I'th' Vaward are the Ancients
Of their best trust: O're them Aussidius,
Their very heart of Hope.

Mar. I do beseech you,
By all the Battels wherein we have fought,
By th' Blood we have shed together,
By th' Vows we have made
To endure Friends, that you directly set me
Against Aussidius, and his Antians,
And that you not delay the present (but Filling the air with Swords advanc'd) and Darts,
We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish,

You were conducted to a gentle Bath,
And Balms applyed to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking, take your choice of those
That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are they
That most are willing; if any such be here;
(As it were sin to doubt) that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd, if any fear
Lesser his person, than an ill report:
If any think, brave death out-weighs bad life,
And that his Countries dearer than himself,
Let him alone: or so many so minded,
Wave thus to express his disposition,
And follow Martins.

They all shout, and wave their swords, take him up in their Arms, and cast up their Caps.

Oh me alone, make you a sword of me:
If these shews be not outward, which of you
But is four Volcians? None of you, but is Able to bear against the great Aussidius
A Shield, as hard as his. A certain number
(Though thanks to all) must I select from all:
The rest shall bear the business in some other fight
(As cause will be obey'd:) please you to march,
And four shall quickly draw out my Command,
Which men are best inclin'd.

Com. March on my Fellows:
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all, with us.

Exeunt.

Titus Lartius, having set a guard upon Coriolanus, going with Drum and Trumpet toward Cominius, and Caius Martius, Enters with a Lieutenant, other Souldiers, and a Scout.

Lar. So, let the Ports be guarded; keep your Duties
As I have set them down. If I do send, dispatch
Those Centuries to our aid, the rest will serve
For a short holding; if we lose the Field,
We cannot keep the Town.

Lien. Fear not our care Sir.

Lar. Hence; and shut your gates upon's:
Our Guider come, to th' Roman Camp conduct us. Exit.
Alarum as in Battel.

Enter Martins and Aussidius at several doors.

Mar. Ile fight with none but thee, for I do hate thee
Worse than a Promise-breaker.

Auf. We hate alike:
Not Afrik owns a Serpent I abhor
More than thy Fame and Envy: Fix thy foot.

Mar. Let the first Budger die the others Slave,
And the Gods doom him after.

Auf. If I flie Martins, hollow me like a Hare.

Mar. Within these three hours Tullus
Alone I fought in your Coriolanus walls,
And made what work I pleas'd: 'Tis not my blood,
Wherein thou seest me maskt, for thy Revenge
Wrench up thy power to th' highest.

Auf. Wer't thou the Heitor,
That was the whip of your bragg'd Progeny,
Thou should'st not scape me here.

Here they fight, and certain Volcians come in the aid of Aussidius. Martins fights till they be driven in breathless.
Officious and not valiant, you have sham'd me
In your condemned Seconds.

Flourish

Flourish. Alarum. A Retreat is sounded. Enter at one Door Cominius, with the Romans: At another Door Martius, with his Arm in a Scarf.

Com. If I should tell thee o're this thy days work, Thou't not believe thy deeds: but Ile report it, Where Senators shall mingle tears with smiles, Where great Patricians shall attend, and shrug, I'th'end admire: where Ladies shall be frighted, And gladly quak'd, hear more: where the dull Tribunes, That with the suffy Plebeians, hate thine Honors, Shall say against their hearts, We thank the Gods Our Rome hath such a Souldier. Yet cam'st thou to a Moisel of this Feast, Having fully din'd before.

Enter Titus with his Power, from the Pursute.

Titus Lartius. Oh General: Here is the Steed, we the Caparison: Hadst thou beheld——

Mar. Pray now, no more: My Mother, who ha's a Charter to extoll her blood, When she do's praise me, grieves me: I have done as you have done, that's what I can, Induc'd as you have been, that's for my Country: He that has but effected his good will, Hath overta'n mine Act.

Com. You shall not be the Grave of your deserving, Rome must know the value of her own: 'Twere a Concealment worse than a Theft, No less than a Traducement, To hide your doings, and to silence that, Which to the spire, and top of praises vouch'd, Would seem but modest: therefore I beseech you, In sign of what you are, not to reward What you have done, before our Army hear me.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart To hear themselves remembred.

Com. Should they not: Well might they fester 'gainst Ingratitude, And tent themselves with death: of all the Horses, Whereof we have ta'n good, and good store of all, The Treasure in this field achiev'd, and City, We render you the Tenth, to be ta'n forth, Before the common distribution, At your only choice.

Mar. I thank you General: But cannot make my heart consent to take A Bribe, to pay my Sword: I do refuse it, And stand upon my common part with those, That have beheld the doing.

A long flourish. They all cry, Martius, Martius, cast up their Caps and Lances: Cominius and Lartius stand bare.

Ma. May these same Instruments, which you prophane, Never sound more: when Drums and Trumpets shall I'th'field prove flatterers, let Courts and Cities be Made of all false-fac'd soothing: When Steel grows soft, as the Parasites Silk, Let him be made an Overture for th' wars: No more I say, for that I have not wash'd

My Nose that bled, or foil'd some debile wretch, Which without note, here's many else have done, You shoot me forth in acclamations hyperbolic, As if I lov'd my little should be dieted In praises, lawc't with Lies.

Com. Too modest are you: More cruel to your good report, than grateful To us, that give you truly: by your patience, If against your self you be incens'd, we'l put you (Like one that means his proper harm) in Manacles, Then reason safely with you: Therefore be it known, As to us, to all the world, that Caius Martius Wears this wars garland: in token of the which, My noble Steed, known to the Camp, I give him, With all his trim belonging, and from this time, For what he did before Coriolus, call him; With all th'applause and clamor of the Host, Martius Caius Coriolanus. Bear th'addition Nobly ever?

Flourish. Trumpets sound, and Drums.

Omnes. Martius Caius Coriolanus.

Mar. I will go wash: And when my Face is fair, you shall perceive Whether I blush, or no: howbeit, I thank you. I mean to stride your Steed, and at all times To under-crest your good Addition, To th'fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our Tent: Where ere we do repose us, we will write To Rome of our success: you Titus Lartius Must to Coriolus back, send us to Rome The best, with whom we may articulate, For their own good, and ours.

Lar. I shall, my Lord.

Mar. The Gods begin to mock me: I that now refus'd most Princely gifts, Am bound to beg of my Lord General.

Com. Tak't, 'tis yours: what is't?

Mar. I sometime lay here in Coriolus, At a poor mans house: he us'd me kindly. He cry'd to me: I saw him Prisoner: But then Aufidius was within my view, And wrath o're-whelm'd my pitty: I request you To give my poor Host freedom.

Com. Oh well begg'd: VVere he the Butcher of my Son, he should Be free as is the wind: deliver him, Titus.

Lar. Martius, his Name.

Mar. By Jupiter forgot: I am weary, yea my memory is tyr'd: Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our Tent: The blood upon your Visage dries, 'tis time It should be lookt too: come.

Exeunt.

A flourish. Cornets. Enter Tullus Aufidius bloody, with two or three Souldiers.

Auf. The Town is ta'n,

Soul. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good Condition.

Auf. Condition?

I would I were a Roman, for I cannot, Being a Volcie, be, that I am. Condition? What good Condition can a Treaty find I'th'part that is at mercy? five times, Martius, I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat me. And would'st do so, I think, should we encounter

As

And often as we eat. By the Elements,
If ere again I meet him beard to beard,
He's mine, or I am his : Mine Emulation
Hath not that honor in't it had : For where
I thought to crush him in an equal Force,
True Sword to Sword : He pitch at him some way,
Or wrath, or Craft may get him.

Sol. He's the devil.

Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle: my valor's poison'd,
With only suffering stain by him : for him
Shall lie out of it self, nor sleep, nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick ; nor Phane, nor Capitol,
The Prayers of Priests, nor times of Sacrifice :
Embarquements all of Fury, shall lift up
Their rotten Privilege, and Custom 'gainst
My hate to Martius. Where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brothers Guard, even there
Against the hospitable Canon, would I
Wash my fierce hand in's heart. Go you to th' City, Learn how 'tis held, and what they are that must Be Hostages for Rome.

Sol. Will not you go ?

Auf. I am attended at the Cyprus grove. I pray you
('Tis South the City Mill) bring me word thither
How the world goes : that to the pace of it
I may spur on my journey.

Sol. I shall sir.

Actus Secundus

Enter Menenius with the two Tribunes of the people, Sicinius and Brutus.

Men. The Augurer tells me, we shall have news to night.

Brut. Good or bad ?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Martius.

Sicinius. Nature teaches Beasts to know their Friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the Wolf love ?

Sicinius. The Lamb.

Men. I, to devour him, as the hungry Plebeians would the Noble Martius.

Brut. He's a Lamb indeed, that baes like a Bear.

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a Lamb.
You two are old men, tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both. Well sir.

Men. In what enormity is Martius poor in, that you two have not in abundance ?

Brut. He's poor in no one fault, but stor'd with all.

Sicinius. Especially in Pride.

Brut. And topping all others in boast.

Men. This is strange now : Do you two know, how you are censured here in the City, I mean of us a'th' right hand File, do you ?

Brut. Why? how are we censured ?

Men. Because you talk of Pride now, will you not be angry ?

Both. Well, well sir, well.

Men. Why 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of Occasion, will rob you of a great deal of Patience :

Give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures (at the least) if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being so ; you blame Martius for being proud.

Brut. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can do very little alone, for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single : your abilities are too Infant-like, for doing much alone. You talk of Pride: Oh, that you could turn your eyes toward the Napes of your necks, and make but an interieur survey of your good selves. Oh that you could !

Both. What then sir ?

Men. Why then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy Magistrates (alias Fools) as any in Rome.

Sicinius. Menenius, you are known well enough too.

Men. I am known to be a humorous Patritian, and one that loves a cup of hot Wine, with not a drop of alaying Tiber in't: Said, to be something imperfect in favouring the first complaint, hasty and Tinder-like upon, to trivial motion: One, that converses more with the Buttock of the night, than with the forehead of the morning. What I think I utter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such Weals-men as you are (I cannot call your Licurgusses) if the drink you give me, touch my Palat adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I can say, your Worships have deliver'd the matter well, when I find the Als in compound, with the Major part of your syllables. And though I must be content to bear with those, that say you are reverend grave, yet they lye deadly, that tell you have good faces ; if you see this in the Map of my Microcosm, follows it that I am known well enough too ? What harm can your beesome Conspicuities glean out of this Character, if I be known well enough too ?

Brut. Come sir come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, your selves, nor any thing: you are ambitious, for poor knaves caps and legs: you wear out a good wholesome Fore-noon, in hearing a cause between an Orendge wife, and a Forset-feller, and then rejourne the Controversie of three-pence to a second day of Audience. When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinch'd with the Collick: you make faces like Mummers, set up the bloody Flagg against all Patience, and in roaring for a Chamber pot, dismiss the Controversie bleeding, the more intangled by your hearing : All the peace you make in their Cause, is calling both the parties Knaves. You are a pair of strange ones.

Brut. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter gyber for the Table, than a necessary Benchman in the Capitol.

Men. Our very Priests must become Mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous Subjects as you are, when you speak best unto the purpose, It is not worth the wagging of your Beards, and your Beards deserve not so honourable a grave, as to stuff a Botchers Cushion, or to be intomb'd in an Asses Pack-saddle ; yet you must be saying, Martius is proud : who in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion, though peradventure some of the best of 'em were hereditary hangmen. God den to your Worships, more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the Heards-men of the Beastly Plebeians. I will be bold to take my leave of you.

Brutus, and Sicinius.

E e e

Aside,

Enter

Enter Volumnia and Valeria.

How now (my as Fair as Noble) Ladies, and the Moon were she Earthly, no Nobler ; whither do you follow your Eyes so fast ?

Volum. Honorable Menenius, my Boy Martius approaches : for the love of Juno let's go.

Menen. Ha? Martius comming home ?

Volum. I, worthy Menenius, and with most prosperous approbation.

Menen. Take my Cap Jupiter, and I thank thee : hoo, Martius comming home ?

2 Ladies. Nay, 'tis true.

Volum. Look, here's a Letter from him, the State hath another, his Wife another, and (I think) there's one at home for you.

Menen. I will make my very house reel to night : A Letter for me ?

Virgil. Yes certain, there's a Letter for you, I saw't.

Menen. A Letter for me ? it gives me an Estate of seven years health ; in which time, I will make a Lip at the Physician : The most sovereign Prescription in Galen, is but Empericktique ; and to this Preservative, of no better report than a Horse-drench. Is he not wounded ? he was wont to come home wounded ?

Virgil. Oh no, no, no

Volum. Oh, he is wounded, I thank the gods for't.

Menen. So do I too, if it be not too much : brings a Victorie in his Pocket ? the wounds become him.

Volum. On's Brows : Menenius, he comes the third time home with the Oaken Garland.

Menen. Ha's he disciplin'd Aufidius soundly ?

Volum. Titus Lartius writes, they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Menen. And 'twas time for him too, Ile warrant him that : and he had stay'd by him, I would not have been so fiddious'd, for all the Chests in Coriolus, and the Gold that's in them. Is the Senate possest of this ?

Volum. Good Ladies let's go. Yes, yes, yes : The Senate ha's Letters from the General, wherein he gives my Son the whole Name of the Warr, he hath in this Action out done his former deeds doubly.

Valer. In troth there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Menen. Wondrous ? I, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Virgil. The gods grant them true.

Volum. True ? pow waw.

Mene. True ? Ile be sworn they are true : where is he wounded, God save your good Worship ? Martius is comming home : he ha's more cause to be proud : where is he wounded ?

Volum. I'th'Shoulder, and i'th'left Arm : there will be large Cicatrices to shew the People, when he shall stand for his place : he received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i'th'Body.

Men. One i'th'Neck, and two i'th' Thigh, there's nine that I know.

Volum. He had, before this last Expedition, twenty five Wounds upon him.

Men. Now it's twenty seven, every gash was an Enemies Grave. Hearn, the Trumpets.

A shout, and Flourish.

Volum. These are the Ushers of Martius : Before him, he carries Noise ; And behind him, he leaves Tears :

Death, thar dark Spirit, in's nerry Arm doth lye, Which being advanc'd, declines, and then men dye.

A Sonet. Trumpets sound.

Enter Cominius the General, and Titus Lartius : between them Coriolanus, crown'd with an Oaken Garland, with Captains and Souldiers, and a Herald.

Hera. Know Rome, that all alone Martius did fight Within Coriolus Gates : where he hath wonn, With Fame, a Name to Martius Caius : These in honor follows Martius Caius, Coriolanus. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus.

Sound. Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus.

Corio. No more of this, it does offend my heart ; pray now no more.

Com. Look, Sir, your Mother.

Corio. Oh ! you have, I know, petition'd all the gods for my prosperity. Kneels.

Volum. Nay, my good Souldier, up :

My gentle Martin, worthy Caius, And by deed-atchieving Honor newly nam'd, What is it (Coriolanus) must I call thee ? But oh, thy Wife.

Corio. My gracious silence, hail : Would'st thou have laugh'd, had I come Coffin'd home, That weep'st to see me triumph ? Ah my dear, Such eyes the Widows in Coriolus wear, And Mothers that lack Sons.

Men. Now the gods Crown thee.

Com. And live you yet ? Oh my sweet Lady, pardon.

Volum. I know not where to turn.

Oh welcome home : and welcome General, And y'are welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand Welcomes : I could weep, and I could laugh, I am light, and heavy ; welcome : A Curse begin at very root on's heart, That is not glad to see thee.

You are three, that Rome should dote on : Yet by the faith of men, we have Some old Crab-trees here at home, That will not be grafted to your Rellish. Yet welcome Warriors :

We call a Nettle, but a Nettle ; And the faults of fools, but folly.

Com. Ever right.

Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.

Hera. Give way there, and go on :

Cor. Your Hand, and yours ?

Ere in our own house I do shade my head, The good Patricians must be visited, From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings, But with them, change of honors.

Volum. I have lived,

To see inherited my very Wishe, And the Buildings of my Fancy : Only there's one thing wanting, Which (I doubt not) but our Rome. Will cast upon thee.

Cor. Know, good Mother, I had rather be their servant in my way, Than sway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol. Flourish. Cornets
Exeunt in State, as before.

Enter

Enter Brutus and Sicinius.

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights
Are spectacled to see him. Your prating Nurse
Into a rapture lets her Baby cry,
While she chats him: the Kitchin Malkin pinns
Her richest Lockram 'bout her reechy neck;
Clambring the Walls to eye him:
Stalls, Bulks, Windows, are smother'd up,
Leads fill'd, and Ridges hors'd
With variable Complexions; all agreeing
In earnestness to see him: seld-shown Flamins
Do press 'mong the popular Throngs, and puff
To win a vulgar station: our veil'd Dames
Commit the Warr of White and Damask
In their nicely gawded Cheeks, to th'wanton spoil
Of Phæbus burning Kisses: such a poother,
As if that whatsoever God, who leads him,
Were sily crept into his humane powers,
And gave him graceful posture.

Sici. On the suddain, I warrant him Consul.

Bru. Then our Office may, during his power, go sleep.

Sici. He cannot temp'rately transpore his honors,
From where he should begin, and end, but will Lose those he hath won.

Bru. In that there's comfort.

Sici. Doubt not,
The Commoners, for whom we stand, but they
Upon their antient malice, will forget
With the least cause, these his new honors,
Which that he will give them, make I as little question,
As he is proud to do't.

Bru. I heard him swear
Were he to stand for Consul, never would he Appear i' th' Market place, nor on him put
The Naples Vesture of humility,
Nor shewing (as the manner is) his Wounds
To th' people, beg their stinking Breaths.

Sici. 'Tis right.

Bru. It was his word:
Oh he would miss it, rather than carry it,
But by the sure of the Gentry to him,
And the desire of the Nobles.

Sici. I wish no better, than have him hold that purpose, and to put it in execution.

Bru. 'Tis most like he will.

Sici. It shall be to him then, as our good wills, a sure destruction.

Bru. So it must fall out
To him, or our Authorities, for an end.
We must suggest the People, in what hatred
He still hath held them: that to's power he would Have made them Mules, silenc'd their Pleaders,
And disproportioned their Freedoms; holding them,
In humane Action, and Capacity,
Of no more Soul, nor fitness for the world,
Than Camels in their Warr, who have their Provand
Only for bearing Burthens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sici. This (as you say) suggested,
At some time, when his soaring insolence
Shall teach the People, which time shall not want,
If he be put upon't, and that's as easie,
As to set Doggs on Sheep, will be his fire

To kindle their dry Stubble: and their Blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter?

Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol:
'Tis thought, that Martius shall be Consul:
I have seen the dumb men throng to see him,
And the blind to hear him speak: Matrons flung Gloves,
Ladies and Maids their Scarffs, and Handkerchers,
Upon him as he pass'd: the Nobles bended
As to Joves Statue, and the Commons made
A Shower, and Thunder, with their Caps, and Shouts:
I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol,
And carry with us ears and eyes for th'time,
But hearts for the event.

Sici. Have with you.

Exeunt.

*Enter two Officers, to lay Cushions, as it were,
in the Capitol.*

1 Off. Come, come, they are almost here: how many stand for Consulships?

2 Off. Three, they say: but 'tis thought of every one
Coriolanus will carry it.

1 Off. That's a brave fellow, but he's vengeance proud,
and loves not the common people.

2 Off. 'Faith, there hath been many great men that have flatter'd the people, who ne'r loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore:
so that if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love, or hate him, manifests the true knowledge he ha's in their disposition, and out of his Noble carelessness lets them plainly see't.

1 Off. If he did not care whether he had their love, or no, he wou'd indifferently, 'twixt doing them neither good, nor harm: but he seeks their hate with greater devotion, than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone, that may fully discover him their opposite. Now to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the People, is as bad, as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

2 Off. He hath deserved worthily of his Countrey,
And his ascent is not by such easie degrees as those, who,
having been supple and courteous to the People, Bon-netted, without any further deed, to have them at all into their estimation, and report: but he hath so planted his honors in their Eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their Tongues to be silent, and not confess so much;
were a kind of ingrateful injury: to report otherwise, were a Malice, that giving it self the Lye, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every Ear that heard it.

1 Off. No more of him, he's a worthy man: make way, they are coming.

*A Sonnet. Enter the Patricians, and the Tribunes of the People, Lictors before them; Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius the Consul: Sicinius and Brutus take their places by themselves:
Coriolanus stands.*

Men. Having determin'd of the Volcies,
And to send for Titus Lartius: it remains,
As the main Point of this our after-meeting,

E e c 2

To

To gratifie his Noble service, that hath
Thus flood for his Country. Therefore please you,
Most reverend and grave Elders, to desire
The present Consul, and last General,
In our well-sound Successes, to report
A little of that worthy Work perform'd
By Martius Caius Coriolanus: whom
We met here, both to thank, and to remember
With honors like himself.

Sen. Speak good Cominius:
Leave nothing out for length, and make us think
Rather our states defective for requital,
Than we to stretch it out. Masters a'th' People,
We do request your kindest ear, and after,
Your loving motion toward the common Body,
To yield what passes here.

Sicin. We are convented upon a pleasing Treaty, and have hearts inclinable to honor and advance the Theam of our Assembly.

Bru. Which the rather we shall be blest to do, if he remember a kinder value of the People, than he hath hereto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off: I would you rather had been silent: Please you to hear Cominius speak?

Bru. Most willingly: but yet my Caution was more pertinent than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people, but tye him not to be their Bedfellow: Worthy Cominius speak.

Coriolanus rises, and offers to go away.
Nay, keep your place.

Senat. Sir, Coriolanus, never shame to hear
What you have Nobly done.

Corio. Your honors pardon:
I had rather have my Wounds to heal again,
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope my words dis-bench'd you not?

Corio. No Sir: yet oft,
When blows have made me stay, I fled from words.
You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not: but your people,
I love them as they weigh——

Men. Pray now sit down.

Corio. I had rather have one scratch my Head i'th'Sun,
When the Alarm were struck, than idly sit
To hear my Nothings monster'd. Exit Coriolanus.

Men. Masters of the People,
Your multiplying Spawn, how can he flatter?
That's thousand to one good one, when you now see
He had rather venture all his Limbs for honor,
Than one on's Ears to hear it. Proceed Cominius.

Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be utter'd feebly: it is held,
That Valour is the chiefest Virtue, and
Most dignifies the haver: if it be,
The man I speak of, cannot in the World
Be singly counter-poys'd. At sixteen years,
When Tarquin made a Head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of others: our then Dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian Chin he drove
The brizled Lips before him: he bestrid
An o're-prest Roman, and i'th'Consuls view
Slew three opposers: Tarquins self he met,
And struck him on his Knee: in that days feats,
When he might act the woman in the Scene,
He prov'd best man i'th'field, and for his meed
Was Brow-bound with the Oak. His Pupil-age

Man-entred thus, he waited like a Sea,
And in the brunt of seventeen Battels since,
He lurcht all Swords o'th'Garland: for this last,
Before, and in Coriolus, let me say
I cannot speak him home: he stopt the flyers,
And by his rare example made the Coward
Turn terror into sport: as Waves before
A Vessel under sayl, so men obey'd,
And fell below his Stem: his Sword (Deaths stamp)
Where it did mark, it took from face to foot:
He was a thing of Blood, whose every motion
Was trimm'd with dying Cries: alone he entred
The mortal Gate o'th'City, which he painted
With shunlefs defamy: aidlefs came off,
And with a sudden re-inforcement struck
Coriolus like a Planet: now all's this,
When by and by the din of Warr 'gan peirce
His ready sence, then straight his doubled spirit
Requickned what in flesh was fatigate,
And to the Battel came he, where he did
Run reeking o're the lives of men, as if
'Twere a perpetual spoyl; and till we call'd
Both field and City ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with painting.

Men. Worthy man.

Senat. He cannot but with measure fit the honors which we devise him.

Com. Our spoys he kickt at,
And look'd upon things precious, as they were
The common Muck o'th'World: he covets less
Than Misery it self would give, rewards his deed.
With doing them, and is content
To spend the time, to end it.

Men. He's right Noble, let him be call'd for.

Senat. Call Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear.

Enter Coriolanus.

Men. The Senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd to make thee Consul.

Corio. I do owe them still my life, and Services.

Men. It then remains, that you do speak to the People.

Corio. I do beseech you,
Let me o're-leap that custom: for I cannot
Put on the Gown, stand naked, and entreat them
For my Wounds sake, to give their sufferage:
Please you that I may pass this doing.

Sicin. Sir, the people must have their Voices,
Neither will they bate one jot of Ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't:
Pray you go fit you to the Custom,
And take to you, as your Predecessors have,
Your honor with your form.

Corio. It is a part that I shall blush in acting,
And might well be taken from the People.

Bru. Mark you that.

Corio. To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus,
Shew them th'unaking Skarrs, which I should hide,
As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only.

Men. Do not stand upon't:
We recommend to you Tribunes of the People
Our purpose to them, and to our Noble Consul
Wish we all Joy, and Honor.

Senat.

Senat. To Coriolanus come all joy and honor.
Flourish Cornets.

Then Exeunt. Manet Sicinius and Brutus.

Brut. You see how he intends to use the People.

Sicinius. May they perceive's intent: he will require them
As if he did condemn what he requested,
Should be in them to give.

Brutus. Come, we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here on th' Market place,
I know they do attend us.

Enter seven or eight Citizens.

1 Cit. Once if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

2 Cit. We may Sir if we will.

3 Cit. We have power in our selves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do: For, if he shew us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speak for them: So if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful, were to make a Monster of the multitude; of the which, we being members, should bring our selves to be monstrous members.

1 Cit. And to make us no better thought of a little help will serve: for once we stood up about the Corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed Multitude.

3 Cit. We have been call'd so of many, not that our heads are some brown, some black, some Abram, some bald; but that our wits are so diversly Colour'd; and truly
I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one Scull, they would flye East, West, North, South, and their consent of one direct way, should be at once to all the points a'th' Compass.

2 Cit. Think you so? Which way do you judge my wit would flye?

3 Cit. Nay your wit will not so soon out as another mans will, 'tis strongly wedg'd up in a blockhead: but if it were at liberty, 'twould sure Southward.

2 Cit. Why that way?

3 Cit. To lose it self in a Fogg, where being three parts melted away with rotten Dews, the fourth would return for Conscience sake, to help to get thee a Wife.

2 Cit. You are never without your tricks, you may,
you may.

3 Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it, I say. If he would incline to the People, there was never a worthier
man.

Enter Coriolanus in a gown of Humility, with Menenius.

Here he comes, and in the Gown of humility, mark his behaviour: we are not to stay all together, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes.
He's to make his requests by particulars, wherein every one of us ha's a single Honor, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues, therefore follow me and
He direct you how you shall go by him.

All Content, content.

Men. Oh Sir, you are not right, have you not known
The worthiest men have don't?

Corio. What must I say, I pray Sir?

Plague upon't, I cannot bring
My tongue to such a pace. Look Sir, my wounds,
I got them in my Countries Service, when
Some certain of your Brethren roar'd, and ran

From the noise of our own drums,

Men. Oh me the gods, you must not speak of that,
You must desire them to think upon you.

Corio. Think upon me? Hang 'em,
I would they would forget me, like the Virtues
Which our Divines lose by 'em.

Men. You'll marr all,
He leave you: Pray you speak to 'em, I pray you
In wholesome manner.

Exit.

Enter three of the Citizens.

Corio. Bid them wash their Faces,
And keep their teeth clean: So here comes a brace,
You know the cause (Sir) of my standing here.

3 Cit. We do Sir, tell us what hath brought you to't.

Corio. Mine own desert.

2 Cit. Your own desert?

Corio. I, nor mine own desire.

3 Cit. How not your own desire?

Corio. No Sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

3 Cit. You must think if we give you any thing, we hope to gain by you.

Corio. Well then I pray, your price a'th' Consulship.

1 Cit. The price is, to ask it kindly.

Corio. Kindly sir, I pray let me ha't: I have wounds to shew you, which shall be yours in private: your good voice Sir, what say you?

2 Cit. You shall ha't worthy Sir.

Corio. A match Sir, there's in all two worthy voices begg'd: I have your Almes, Adieu.

3 Cit. But this is something odd.

2 Cit. And 'twere to give again: but 'tis no matter.

Exeunt. Enter two other Citizens.

Corio. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices, that I may be Consul, I have here the Customary Gown.

1. You have deserved Nobly of your Country, and you have not deserved Nobly.

Corio. Your Enigma?

1. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a Rod to her Friends, you have not indeed loved the Common People.

Corio. You should account me the more Virtuous, that I have not been common in my Love, I will fir flatter my sworn Brother the People to earn a dearer estimation of them, 'tis a condition they account gentle: & since the wisdom of their choice, is rather to have my hat, than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfitly, that is sir, I will counter-fit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountiful to the desires: Therefore beseech you, I may be Consul.

2 We hope to find you our friend: and therefore give you our voices heartily.

1. You have received many wounds for your Coun-treys.

Corio. I will not Seal your knowledge with shewing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no farther.

Both. The gods give you joy Sir heartily.

Corio. Most sweet Voices:

Better it is to dye, better to sterve,
Than crave the hire, which first we do deserve.
Why in this Woolvish gown should I stand here,
To beg of Hob and Dick, that does appear

Their heedless Vouches : Custom calls me to't :
 What Custom wills in all things, should we do't ?
 The Dust on antique Time would lie unswept,
 And mountainous Error be too highly heapt,
 For Truth to o're-peer. Rather than fool it so,
 Let the high Office and the Honor go,
 To one that would do thus. I am half through,
 The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.

Enter three Citizens more.

Here come more Voices.

Your Voices ? for your Voices I have fought,
 Watcht for your Voices : for your Voices, bear
 Of Wounds, two dozen odd : Battels thrice six
 I have seen, and heard of : for your Voices,
 Have done many things, some less, some more :
 Your Voices ? indeed I would be Consul.

1 Cit. He has done Nobly, and cannot go without any honest mans Voice.

2 Cit. Therefore let him be Consul : the Gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people.

All. Amen, Amen. God save thee, Noble Consul.

Corio. Worthy Voices.

Enter Menenius, with Brutus, and Sicinius.

Men. You have stood your Limitation :
 And the Tribunes endue you with the Peoples Voice,
 Remains, that in th'Official Marks invested,
 You anon do meet the Senate.

Corio. Is this done ?

Sici. The Custom of Request you have discharg'd :
 The People do admit you, and are summon'd
 To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Corio. Where ? at the Senate-house ?

Sici. There, Coriolanus.

Corio. May I change these Garments ?

Sici. You may Sir.

Cori. That Ile straight do: and knowing my self again
 Repair to th'Senate-house.

Men. Ile keep you company. Will you along ?

Brut. We stay here for the People.

Sici. Fare you well. Exeunt Coriol. and Men.
 He ha's it now : and by his Looks, me thinks
 'Tis warm at's heart.

Brut. With a proud heart he wore his humble Weeds:
 Will you dismiss the People ?

Enter the Plebeians.

Sici. How now, my Masters, have you chose this man ?

1 Cit. He ha's our Voices, Sir.

Brut. We pray the Gods, he may deserve your loves.

2 Cit. Amen, Sir : to my poor unworthy notice,
 He mock'd us, when he begg'd our Voices.

3 Cit. Certainly he flowted us down-right.

1 Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech, he did not mock us.

2 Cit. Not one amongst us, save your self, but sayes
 He us'd us scornfully : he should have shew'd us
 His Marks of Merit, Wounds receiv'd for's Countrey.

Sici. Why so he did, I am sure.

All. No, no; no man saw 'em.

3 Cit. He said he had Wounds,
 Which he could shew in private :
 And with his Hat, thus waving it in scorn,
 I would be Consul, sayes he : aged Custom,
 But by your Voices, will not so permit me.
 Your Voices therefore : when we granted that,
 Here was, I thank you for your Voices, thank you

Your most sweet Voices: now you have left your Voices
 I have no further with you. Was not this mockery ?

Sici. Why either were you ignorant to see't ?
 Or seeing it, of such Childish friendliness,
 To yield your Voices ?

Brut. Could you not have told him,
 As you were lesson'd ; When he had no Power,
 But was a petty servant to the State,
 He was your Enemy, ever spake against
 Your Liberties, and the Charters that you bear
 I'th'Body of the Weal : and now arriving
 A place of Potency, and sway o'th'State
 If he should still malignantly remain
 Fast Foe to th'Plebeij, your Voices might Be Curses to your selves. You should have said,
 That as his worthy deeds did claim no less
 Than what he stood for : so his gracious nature
 Would think upon you, for your Voices, and Translate his Malice towards you, into Love,
 Standing your friendly Lord.

Sici. Thus to have said,
 As you were fore-advis'd, had toucht his Spirit,
 And try'd his inclination : from him pluckt,
 Either his gracious Promise, which you might
 As cause had call'd you up, have held him to ;
 Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature ;
 Which easily endures not Article,
 Tying him to ought, so putting him to Rage,
 You should have ta'n th'advantage of his Choler,
 And pass'd him unelected.

Brut. Did you perceive,
 He did sollicit you in free Contempt,
 When he did need your Loves : and do you think,
 That his Contempt shall not be bruising to you,
 When he hath power to crush ? Why, had your Bodies
 No heart among you ? Or had you Tongues, to cry
 Against the Restorship of judgement ?

Sici. Have you, ere now, deny'd the asker :
 And now again, of him that did not ask, but mock,
 Bestow your su'd-for Tongues ?

3 Cit. He's not confirm'd, we may deny him yet.

2 Cit. And will deny him :

Ile have five hundred Voices of that sound.

1 Cit. I twice five hundred, & their friends, to piece 'em.

Brut. Get you hence instantly, and tell those friends,
 They have chose a Consul, that will from them take
 Their Liberties, make them of no more Voice
 Than Doggs, that are as often beat for barking,
 As therefore kept to do so.

Sici. Let them assemble : and on a safer judgement,
 All revoke your ignorant election : Enforce his Pride,
 And his old Hate unto you : besides, forget not
 With what Contempt he wore the humble Weed,
 How in his Sure he scorn'd you: but your Loves,
 Thinking upon his Services, took from you
 Th'apprehension of his present portance,
 Which most gibingly, ungravely, he did fashion
 After the inveterate Hate he bears you.

Brut. Lay a fault on us, your Tribunes,
 That we labour'd (no impediment between)
 But that you must cast your Election on him.

Sici. Say you chose him, more after our commandment,
 Than as guided by your own true affections, and that
 Your minds pre-occupi'd with what you rather must do
 Than what you should, made you against the grain
 To Voice him Consul. Lay the fault on us.

Brut.

Brut. I, spare us not: Say, we read Lectures to you,
How youngly he began to serve his Country,
How long continued, and what stock he springs of,
The Noble house o'th' Martians: from whence came
That Ancus Martius, Numa's Daughters Son:
Who after great Hostilius here was King,
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best Water, brought by Conduits hither,
And Nobly nam'd, so twice being Censor,
Was his great Ancestor.

Sicinius. One thus descended,
That hath beside well in his person wrought,
To beset high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have found,
Skaling his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemy; and revoke
Your suddain approbation.

Brut. Say you ne'r had don't,
(Harp on that still) but by our putting on:
And presently, when you have drawn your number,
Repair to th' Capitol.

All. We will so: almost all repent in their election.

Exeunt Plebeians.

Brut. Let them go on:
This Mutiny were better put in hazard,
Than stay past doubt, for greater:
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe, and answer
The vantage of his anger.

Sicinius. To th' Capitol, come:
We will be there before the stream o'th' People:
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,
Which we have goaded on-ward. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Cornets. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, all the Gentry, Cominius, Titus Lartius, and other Senators.

Corio. Tullus Aufidius then had made new head.

Lartius. He had my Lord, and that it was which caus'd
Our swifter Composition.

Corio. So then the Volcians stand but as at first,
Ready when time shall prompt them, to make road
Upon's again.

Com. They are worn (Lord Consul) so,
That we shall hardly in our ages see
Their Banners wave again.

Corio. Saw you Aufidius?

Lartius. On safeguard he came to me, and did curse
Against the Volcians, for they had so vildly
Yielded the Town: he is retired to Antium.

Corio. Spoke he of me?

Lartius. He did my Lord.

Corio. How? what?

Lartius. How often he had met you Sword to Sword:
That of all things upon the earth, he hated
Your person most: That he would pawn his fortunes
To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your Vanquisher.

Corio. At Antium lives he?

Lartius. At Antium.

Corio. I wish I had a cause to seek him there,
To oppose his hatred fully. Welcome home.

Enter Sicinius, and Brutus.

Behold, these are the Tribunes of the People,
The Tongues o'th' Common Mouth, I do despise them:

For they do prank them in Authority,
Against all Noble sufferance.

Sicinius. Pass no further.

Corio. Hah? what is that?

Brut. It will be dangerous to go on—No Further.

Corio. What makes this change?

Men. The matter?

Com. Hath he not pass'd the Noble, and the Commons?

Brut. Cominius, no.

Corio. Have I had Childrens Voices?

Senat. Tribunes give way, he shall to th' Market place.

Brut. The People are incens'd against him.

Sicinius. Stop, or all will fall in broyl.

Corio. Are these your herd?

Must these have Voices, that can yield them now,
And straight disclaim their tongues? what are your Offices?
You being their Mouths, why rule you not their Teeth?
Have you not set them on?

Men. Be calm, be calm.

Corio. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by Plot,
To curb the will of the Nobility:
Suffer't, and live with such as cannot rule,
Nor ever will be ruled.

Brut. Call't not a Plot:

The People cry you mockt them: and of late,
When Corn was given them gratis, you repin'd,
Scandall'd the Suppliants: for the People, call'd them
Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to Nobleness.

Corio. Why this was known before.

Brut. Not to them all.

Corio. Have you inform'd them sithence?

Brut. How? I inform them?

Com. You are like to do such business.

Brut. Not unlike each way to better yours.

Corio. Why then should I be Consul? by yond Clouds
Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow Tribune.

Sicinius. You shew too much of that,
For which the People stir: if you will pass
To where you are bound, you must enquire your way,
Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit,
Or never be so Noble as a Consul,
Nor yoke with him for Tribune.

Men. Lets be calm.

Com. The People are abus'd: set on, this palting
Becomes not Rome: nor has Coriolanus
Deserv'd this so dishonoured Rub, laid falsely
Ith' plain way of his Merit.

Corio. Tell me of Corn! this was my speech,
And I will speak't again.

Men. Not now, not now.

Senat. Not in this hear, Sir, now.

Corio. Now as I live, I will.

My Nobler friends, I crave their pardons:
For the mutable rank-sented Meiny,
Let them regard me, as I do not flatter,
And therein behold themselves: I say again,
In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our Senate
The Cockle of Rebellion, Insolence, Sedition,
Which we our selves have Plow'd for, sow'd & scatter'd,
By mingling them with us, the honor'd Number,
Who lack not Virtue, no, nor Power, but that
Which they have given to Beggars.

Men. VVell, no more.

Senat. No more words, we beseech you.

Corio. How? no more?

As for my Country, I have shed my blood,
Not fearing outward force: So shall my Lungs
Coin words till their decay, against those Meazels
Which we disdain should Tetter us, yet sought
The very way to catch them.

Brut. You speak a'th' People, as if you were a god,
To punish; Not a man of their infirmity.

Sicin. 'Twere well we let the People know't.

Men. What, what? his Choler?

Cor. Choler? Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By Jove, 'twould be my mind.

Sicin. It is a mind that shall remain a poison
Where it is: not poison any further.

Corio. Shall remain?

Here you this Triton of the Minnows? Mark you
His absolute shall?

Com. 'Twas from the Cannon.

Corio. Shall? O God! but most unwise Patricians! why
You grave, but wreakeless Senators, have you thus Given Hidra here to choose an Officer,
That with his peremptory shall, being but
The horn, and noise o'th' Monsters, wants not spirit
To say, he'll turn your Current in a ditch,
And make your Chanel his? if he have power,
Then vale your ignorance: if none, awake
Your dangerous Lenity: if you are Learn'd,
Be not as common Fools; if you are not,
Let them have Cushions by you. You are Plebeians,
If they be Senators: and they are no less,
When both your voices blended, the great'tt taft
Most pallats theirs. They choose their Magistrate,
And such a one as he, who puts his Shall,
His popular Shall, against a graver Bench
Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove himself,
It makes the Consuls base; and my soul akes
To know, when two Authorities are up,
Neither Supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of Both, and take
The one by th' other.

Com. Well, on to th' Market place.

Corio. Who ever gave that Counsel, to give forth
The Corn a'th' Store-house gratis, as 'twas us'd
Sometime in Greece—

Men. Well, well, no more of that.

Cor. Though there the People had more absolute power
I say they nourish disobedience: fed the ruine of the State.

Brut. Why shall the People give
One that speaks thus, their voice?

Corio. He give my Reasons,
More worthy than their Voices. They know the Corn
Was not our recompence, resting well assur'd
They ne'r did service for't; being prest to th' VVarr,
Even when the Navel of the State was touch'd,
They would not thred the Gates: This kind of Service
Did not deserve Corn gratis. Being i'th' VVarr,
Their Mutinies and Revolts, wherein they shew'd
Most Valour, spoke not for them. Th' Accusation
VVhich they have often made against the Senate,
All cause unborn, could never be the Native
Of our so frank Denotion. VVell, what then?
How shall this Bosome-multiplied, digest
The Senates courtesie? Let deeds exprefs
VVhat's like to be their words. VVe did request it,
VVe are the greater pole, and in true fear
Thy gave us our demands. Thus we debase
The Nature of our Seats, and make the Rabble

Call our Cares, Fears; which will in time
Break ope the Locks a'th' Senate, and bring in
The Crows to peck the Eagles.

Men. Come enough.

Brut. Enough, with over measure.

Corio. No, take more.

What may be sworn by, both Divine and Humane,
Seal what I end withall. This double worship,
Whereon part does disdain with cause, the other
Insult without all season; where Gentry, Title, wisdom,
Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance, it must omit
Real Necessities, and give way the while
To unstable Slightness: Purpose so barr'd, it follows,
Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore beseech you,
You that will be less fearful, than discreet,
That love the Fundamental part of State
More than you doubt the change of't: that prefer
A Noble life, before a Long, and Wish,
To jump a Body with a dangerous Physick,
That's sure of death without it: at once pluck out
The Multitudinous Tongue, let them not lick
The sweet which is their poyson. Your dishonor
Mangles true judgement, and bereaves the State
Of that Integrity which should become't:
Not having the power to do the good it would
For th' ill which dorth controul't.

Brut. Ha's said enough.

Sicin. Ha's spoken like a Traitor, and shall answer
As Traitors do.

Corio. Thou wretch, despight ore-whelm thee:
What should the people do with these bald Tribunes?
On whom depending, their obedience fails
To th' greater Bench, in a Rebellion:
When what's not meet, but what must be, was Law,
Then were they chosen: in a better hour,
Let what is meet, be said it must be meet,
And throw their power i'th' dust.

Brut. Manifest treason.

Sicin. This a Consul? No.

Enter an Ædile.

Brut. The Ædiles hoe; Let him be apprehended.

Sicin. Go call the People, in whose name my Self
Attach thee as a Traiterous Innovator:
A Foe to th' publike Weal. Obey I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.

Corio. Hence old Goat.

All. We'l Surety him.

Com. Ag'd sir, hands off.

Corio. Hence rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones
Out of thy Garments.

Sicin. Help me Citizens.

Enter a rabble of Plebeians with the Ædiles.

Men. On both sides more respect.

Sicin. Here's he, that would take from you all your power.

Brut. Seize him Ædiles.

All. Down with him, down with him.

2 Sena. Weapons, weapons, weapons:

They all bustle about Coriolanus.

Tribunes, Patricians, Citizens: what hoe:

Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, Citizens.

All. Peace, peace, peace, stay, hold, peace.

Men. What is about to be? I am out of Breath,
Confusion's near, I cannot speak. You Tribunes
To th' People: Coriolanus, patience: speak good Sicinius.

Sicin.

Sicin. Hear me, People peace.

All. Let's hear our Tribune : peace , speak , speak , speak .

Sici. You are at point to lose your Liberties :

Martius would have all from you ; Martius, Whom late you have nam'd for Consul.

Men. Fie, fie, fie , this is the way to kindle , not to quench.

Sena. To unbuild the City, and to lay all flat.

Sici. What is the City, but the People ?

All. True, the People are the City.

Bru. By the consent of all , we were established the Peoples Magistrates.

All. You so remain.

Men. And so are like to do.

Com. That is the way to lay the City flat, To bring the Roof to the Foundation, And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges, In heaps, and piles of Ruine.

Sicin. This deserves death.

Bru. Or let us stand to our Authority, Or let us lose it : we do here pronounce, Upon the part o'th'People, in whose power We were elected theirs, Martius is worthy Of present Death.

Sicin. Therefore lay hold of him : Bear him to th'Rock Tarpeian, and from thence Into destruction cast him.

Bru. Ediles seize him.

All Ple. Yield Martius, yield.

Men. Hear me one word , 'beseech you Tribunes , hear me but a word.

Ediles. Peace, peace.

Men. Be that you seem, truly your Countries friend, And temp'rately proceed to what you would Thus violently redress.

Bru. Sir, those cold wayes, That seem like prudent helps, are very poysonous, Where the Disease is violent. Lay hands upon him, And bear him to the Rock. Corio. draws his sword.

Corio. No, Ile dye here : There's some among you have beheld me fighting, Come try upon your selves, what you have seen me.

Men. Down with that Sword, Tribunes withdraw a while.

Bru. Lay hands upon him.

Men. Help Martius, help : you that be noble , help him young and old.

All. Down with him, down with him. Exeunt.

In this Mutiny, the Tribunes, the Ediles, and the People are beat in.

Men. Go, get you to our House : be gone, away, All will be naught else.

2 Senat. Get you gone.

Com. Stand fast, we have as many friends as enemies.

Men. Shall it be put to that ?

Sena. The Gods forbid :

I prithee noble friend, home to thy house, Leave us to cure this Cause.

Men. For 'tis a Sore upon us.

You cannot Tent your self : begon, 'beseech you.

Com. Come Sir, along with us.

Men. I would they were Barbarians, as they are, Though in Rome litter'd : not Romans, as they are not, Though calved i'th'Porch o'th'Capitol :

Be gone, put not your worthy Rage into your Tongue ,

One time will owe another.

Com. On fair ground, I could beat forty of them.

Men. I could my self take up a Brace o'th best of them, yea, the two Tribunes.

Com. But now 'tis odds beyond Arithmetick, And Manhood is call'd Foolry, when it stands Against a falling Fabrick. Will you hence, Before the Tag return ? whose Rage doth rend Like interrupted waters, and o're-bear What they are us'd to bear.

Men. Pray you be gone :

Ile try whether my old Wit be in request With those that have but little : this must be patcht With Cloth of any Colour.

Com. Nay, come away.

Exeunt Coriolanus and Cominius.

Patri. This man has marr'd his fortune.

Men. His nature is too noble for the World : He would not flatter Neptune for his Trident, Or Jove, for's power to thunder : his heart's his Mouth : What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent, And being angry, does forget that ever He heard the Name of death. A Noise within. Here's goodly work.

Patri. I would they were a bed.

Men. I would they were in Tyber.

VVhat the vengeance, could he not speak 'em fair ?

Enter Brutus, and Sicinius with the rabble again.

Sicin. VVhere is this Viper, That would depopulate the city, & be every man himself ?

Men. You worthy Tribunes.

Sicin. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian Rock With rigorous hands : he hath resisted Law, And therefore Law shall scorn him further Tryal Than the severity of the publick Power, VVhich he so sets at naught.

1 Cit. He shall well know the Noble Tribunes are The peoples mouths, and we their hands.

All. He shall sure out.

Men. Sir, sir.

Sicin. Peace.

Men. Do not cry havock, where you should but hunt VVith modest warrant.

Sicin. Sir, how com'st that you have help To make this rescue ?

Men. Hear me speak ; As I do know The Consuls worthiness, so can I name his Faults.

Sicin. Consul ? what Consul ?

Men. The Consul Coriolanus.

Bru. He Consul ?

All. No, no, no, no, no.

Men. If by the Tribunes leave, And yours good people, I may be heard, I would crave a word or two, The which shall turn you to no further harm, Than so much loss of time.

Sicin. Speak briefly then , For we are peremptory to dispatch This Viporous Traitor : to eject him hence VVere but one danger, and to keep him here Our certain death : therefore it is decreed, He dyes to night.

Men. Now the good gods forbid, That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude Towards her deserved Children, is enroll'd In Joves own Book, like an unnatural Dam Should now eat up her own.

Sicin.

Sicin. He's a Disease that must be cut away.

Men. Oh he's a Limb, that ha's but a Disease;
Mortal, to cut it off, to cure it, easie.
What ha's he done to Rome, that's worthy death?
Killing our Enemies, the blood he hath lost
(Which I dare vouch, is more than that he hath.
By many an Ounce) he dropp'd it for his Country:
And what is left, to lose it by his Country,
Were to us all that do't, and suffer it
A brand to th'end a'th'World.

Sicin. This is clean kamm,

Bru. Meerly awry:

When he did love his Country, it honour'd him.

Men. The service of the foot
Being once gangren'd, is not then respected
For what before it was.

Bru. We'll hear no more:

Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence,
Lest his infection being of catching nature,
Spread further.

Men. One word more, one word:
This Tiger-footed-rage, when it shall find
The harm of unskan'd swiftness, will (too late)
Tye Leaden pounds to's heels. Proceed by Process,
Lest parties (as he is belov'd) break out,
And sack great Rome with Romans.

Bru. If it were so——

Sici. What do ye talk?

Have we not had a taste of his Obedience?
Our Ediles smot, our selves resisted, come.

Men. Consider this: He ha's been bred i'th' Warrs
Since a could draw a Sword, and is ill-school'd
In boulted Language: Meal and Bran together
He throws without distinction. Give me leave,
He go to him, and undertake to bring him in peace,
Where he shall answer by a lawful Form
(In peace) to his utmost peril.

Sen. Noble Tribunes,

It is the humane way: the other course
Will prove too bloody: and the end of it,
Unknown to the beginning.

Sic. Noble Menenius, be you then as the peoples officer:
Masters, lay down your Weapons.

Bru. Go not home.

Sici. Meet on the Market place: we'll attend you there,
Where if you bring not Martius, we'll proceed
In our first way.

Men. He bring him to you.

Let me desire you company: he must come,
Or what is worst will follow.

Sena. Pray you let's to him.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Coriolanus with Nobles.

Corio. Let them pull all about mine ears, present me
Death on the Wheel, or at wild Horses heels,
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian Rock,
That the precipitation might down stretch
Below the beam of sight, yet will I still
Be thus to them.

Enter Volumnia.

Noble. You do the Nobler.

Corio. I muse my Mother

Do's not approve me further, who was wont
To call them Wollen Vassails, things creared
To buy and sell with Groats, to shew bare heads
In Congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance stood up

To speak of Peace, or Warr, I talk of you,
Why did you wish me milder? Would you have me
False to my Nature? Rather say, I play
The man I am.

Volum. Oh sir, sir, sir.

I would have had you put your power well on
Before you had worn it out.

Corio. Lets go.

Vol. You might have been enough the man you are,
With striving less to be so. Lesser had been
The things of your dispositions, if
You had not shew'd them how ye were dispos'd
Ere they lack'd power to cross you.

Corio. Let them hang.

Volum. I, and burn too.

Enter Menenius with the Senators.

Men. Come, come, you have been too rough, something too rough: you must return, and mend it.

Sen. There's no remedy,
Unless by not so doing, our good City
Cleave in the midd'lt, and perish.

Volum. Pray be counsell'd;

I have a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a brain, that leads my use of Anger
To better vantage.

Mene. Well said, Noble woman:

Before he should thus stoop to'th'heart, but that
The violent fit a'th'time craves it as Physick
For the whole state; I would put mine Armour on,
Which I can scarcely bear.

Corio. What must I do?

Men. Return to th'Tribunes.

Corio. Well, what then? what then?

Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Corio. For them? I cannot do it to the Gods,
Must I then do't to them?

Volum. You are too absolute,

Though therein you can never be too Noble,
But when extremities speak. I have heard you say,
Honor and Policy, like unsever'd friends,
I'th' Warr do grow together: Grant that, and tell me
In Peace, what each of them by th'other lose,
That they combine not there?

Corio. Tush, tush.

Men. A good demand.

Volum. If it be honor in your Warrs, to seem
The same you are not, which for your best ends
You adopt your policy: How is it less or worse
That it shall hold Companionship in Peace
With honor, as in Warr; since that to both
It stands in like request.

Corio. Why force you this?

Volum. Because, that

Now it lies you on to speak to th'people:
Not by your own instruction, nor by th'matter
Which your heart prompts you to, but with such words
That are but roared in your Tongue:
Though but Bastards, and Syllables
Of no allowance, to your bosoms truth.
Now, this no more dishonors you at all,
Than to take in a Town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.
I would dissemble with my Nature, where
My Fortunes and my Friends at stake, requir'd
I should do so in honor. I am in this

Your

Your Wife, your Son : these Senators, the Nobles,
And you, will rather shew our general Lowts,
How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon 'em,
For the inheritance of their loves, and safeguard
Of what that want might ruine.

Men. Noble Lady,
Come go with us, speak fair : you may salve so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

Volum. I prithee now, my Son,
Go to them, with this Bonner in thy hand,
And thus farr having stretcht it (here be with them)
Thy Knee bussing the stones : for in such business
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of th'ignorant
More learned than the ears, waving thy head,
Which often thus correcting thy stout heart,
Now humble as the ripest Mulberry,
That will not hold the handling : or say to them,
Thou art their Souldier, and being bred in broyls
Hast not the soft way, which thou do'st confess
Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim,
In asking their good loves, but thou wilt frame
Thy self (forsooth) hereafter theirs so farr,
As thou hast power and person.

Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why their hearts were yours :
For they have Pardons, being ask'd, as free,
As words to little purpose.

Volum. Prithee now,
Go, and be rul'd : although I know thou hadst rather Follow thine Enemy in a fiery Gulf,
Than flatter him in a Bower. Enter Cominius.
Here is Cominius.

Com. I have been i'th' Market place; and Sir 'tis fit
You make strong party, or defend your self
By calmness, or by absence : all's in anger.

Men. Only fair speech.

Com. I think 'twill serve, if he can thereto frame his spirit.

Volum. He must and will :
Prithee now say you will, and go about it.

Corio. Must I go shew them my unbarb'd Sconce?
Must I with my base Tongue give to my Noble heart
A Lye, that it must bear well ? I will do't :
Yet were there but this single plot, to lose
This Mould of Martius, they to dust should grind it,
And throw't against the Wind. To th' Market place :
You have put me now to such a part, which never
I shall discharge to th' Life.

Com. Come, come, we'll prompt you.

Volum. I prithee now sweet Son, as thou hast said
My praises made thee first a Souldier : so
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.

Corio. Well, I must do't :
Away my disposition, and possess me
Some Harlots spirit : My throat of Warr be turn'd,
Which quier'd with my Drum into a Pipe,
Small as an Eunuch, or the Virgin voice
That Babies lull a-sleep : The smiles of Knaves
Tent in my cheeks, and School boyes Tears take up
The Glasses of my sight : A Beggars Tongue
Make motion through my Lips, and my Arm'd knees
Who bow'd but in my Stitrop, bend like his
That hath receiv'd an Almes. I will not do't,
Left I surcease to honor mine own truth,

And by my bodies action, teach my Mind
A most inherent Baseness,

Volum. At thy choice then :
To beg of thee, it is my more dishonor,
Than thou of them. Come all to ruine, let Thy Mother rather feel thy Pride, than fear
Thy dangerous Stoutness : for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list,
Thy Valiantness was mine, thou suck'st it from me :
But own thy Pride thy self.

Corio. Pray be content :
Mother, I am going to the Market place.
Chide me no more. Ile Mountebank their Loves,
Cogg their hearts from them, and come home below'd
Of all the Trades in Rome. Look, I am going :
Commend me to my Wife, Ile return Consul,
Or never trust to what my Tongue can do
I'th' way of Flattery further.

Volum. Do your will.

Exit Volumina.

Com. Away, the Tribunes do attend you : arm your
To answer mildly : for they are prepar'd
With Accusations, as I hear more strong
Than are upon you yet.

Corio. The word is, Mildly. Pray you let us go,
Let them accuse me by invention : I
Will answer in mine Honor.

Men. I, but mildly.

Corio. Well mildly be it then, Mildly. Exeunt.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Br. In this point charge him home, that he affects Tyrannical power : if he evade us there,
Inforce him with his envy to the people,
And that the Spoil got on the Antians
Was ne'r distributed. What, will he come ?

Enter an Edile.

Edile. He's comming.

Br. How accompanied ?

Edil. With old Menenius, and those Senators
That alwayes favour'd him.

Sicin. Have you a Catalogue
Of all the Voices that we have procur'd, set down by th'
Edil. I have : 'tis ready. (Pole ?)

Sicin. Have you collected them by Tribes ?

Edil. I have : 'tis ready.

Sicin. Assemble presently the people hither :
And when they hear me say, it shall be so,
I'th' right and strength a'th' Commons : be it either
For death, for fine, or Banishment ; then let them
If I say Fine, cry Fine ; if Death, cry Death,
Insisting on the old prerogative
And power i'th' Truth a'th' Cause.

Edil. I shall inform them.

Br. And when such time they have begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd,
Inforce the present Execution
Of what we chance to Sentence.

Edil. Very well.

Sicin. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint
When we shall hap to giv't them.

Br. Go about it,
Put him to Choler strait, he hath been us'd
Ever to conquer, and to have his worth
Of contradiction. Being once chaf'd, he cannot Be reign'd again to Temperance ; then he speaks

What's

What's in his heart, and that is there which looks
With us to break his neck.

Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, and Cominius, with others.

Sicin. Well, here he comes.

Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.

Corio. I, as an Hostler, that for the poorest piece
Will bear the Knave by th' Volume :

Th'honor'd gods

Keep Rome in safety, and the Chairs of justice
Supplied with worthy men, plant love amongst you,
Through our large Temples with the shews of peace
And not our streets with Warr.

Sen. Amen, Amen.

Men. A Noble wish.

Enter the Edile with the Plebeians.

Sicin. Draw near ye people.

Edile. Lift to your Tribunes. Audience ;
Peace I say.

Corio. First hear me speak.

Both Tri. Well, say : Peace ho.

Corio. Shall I be charg'd no further than this present?
Must all determine here ?

Sici. I do demand,

If you submit you to the peoples voices,
Allow their Officers, and are content
To suffer lawful Censure for such faults
As shall be prov'd upon you.

Corio. I am content,

Mene. Lo Citizens, he sayes he is Content :
The warlike Service he ha's done, consider ; Think
Upon the wounds his body bears, which shew
Like Graves i'th' holy Church-yard.

Corio. Scratches with Briars, scars to move
Laughter only.

Men. Consider further :

That when he speaks not like a Citizen,
You find him like a Souldier : do not take
His rougher Actions for malicious founds :
But as I say, such as become a Souldier,
Rather than envy you.

Com. Well, well, no more.

Corio. What is the matter,
That being past for Consul with full voice :
I am so dishonour'd, that the very hour
You take it off again ?

Sici. Answer to us.

Corio. Say then : 'tis true, I ought so.

Sici. We charge you, that you have contriv'd to take
From Rome all season'd Office, and to wind
Your self into a power tyrannical,
For which you are a Traitor to the people.

Corio. How ? Traitor ?

Mene. Nay temperately : your promise.

Corio. The fires i'th' lowest hell, Fould in the people :
Call me their Traitor, thou injurious Tribune.
Within thine eyes sate twenty thousand deaths,
In thy hands clucht as many Millions, in Thy lying tongue, both numbers, I would say
Thou lyest unto thee, with a voice as free,
As I do pray the gods.

Sicin. Mark you this people ?

All. To th' Rock with him.

Sicin. Peace :

We need not put new matter to his charge :
What you have seen him do, and heard him speak,

Beating your Officers, cursing your selves,
Opposing Laws with stroaks, and here defying
Those whose great power must try him,
Even this so criminal, and in such capital kind,
Deserves th'extremest death.

Bru. But since he hath serv'd well for Rome—

Corio. What do you prate of Service ?

Bru. I talk of that, that know it.

Corio. You ?

Men. Is this the promise that you made your mother ?

Com. Know, I pray you.

Corio. Ile know no farther :

Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,
Vagabond exile, Fleaing, pent to linger
But with a grain a day, I would not buy
Their mercy, at the price of one fair word,
Nor check my courage for what they can give,
To have't with saying, Good morrow.

Sicin. For that he ha's

(As much as in him lies) from time to time
Envy'd against the people ; seeking means
To pluck away their power : as now at last,
Given Hostile strokes, and that not in the presence
Of dreaded justice, but on the Ministers
That do distribute it. In the name a'th' people,
And in the power of us the Tribunes, we (Ev'n from this instant) banish him our City
In peril of precipitation
From off the Rock Tarpeian, never more
To enter our Rome gates. I'th' peoples name,
I say it shall be so.

All. It shall be so, it shall be so : let him away :
He's banish'd, and it shall be so.

Com. Hear me my Masters, and my common friends.

Sicin. He's sentenc'd : No more hearing.

Com. Let me speak :

I have been Consul, and can shew from Rome
Her Enemies marks upon me. I do love
My Countries good, with a respect more tender,
More holy, and profound, than mine own life,
My dear Wives estimate, her wombs encrease,
And treasure of my Loyns : then if I would Speak that—

Sicin. We know your drift. Speak what ?

Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd
As Enemy to the people, and his Country.
It shall be so.

All. It shall be so, it shall be so.

Corio. You common cry of Curs, whose breath I hate,
As reek a'th' rotten Fenns : whose Loves I prize,
As the dead Carkasses of unburied men,
That do corrupt my Air : I banish you,
And here remain with your uncertainty.
Let every feeble Rumor shake your hearts :
Your Enemies, with nodding of their Plumes
Fan you into despair : Have the power still
To banish your Defenders, till at length
Your ignorance (which finds not till it feels,
Making but reservation of your selves,
Still your own Foes) deliver you
As most abated Captives, to some Nation
That won you without blows, despising
For you the City. Thus I turn my back ;
There is a world elsewhere.

Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, Cum aliis,
They all shout, and throw up their Caps.

Edile

Edile. The peoples Enemy is gone, is gone.

All. Our Enemy is banish'd, he is gone. Hoo hoo.

Sicin. Go see him out at Gates, and follow him
As he hath follow'd you, with all despight,
Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard
Attend us through the City.

All. Come, come, lets see him out at the gates, come.
The gods preserve our Noble Tribunes, come. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Coriolanus, Volumnia, Virgilia, Menenius, Cominius, with the young Nobility of Rome.

Corio. Come leave your tears: a brief farewell: the beast
VVith many heads butts me away Nay Mother,
VVhere is your antient Courage? You were us'd
To say, Extremity was the trier of spirits,
That common chances, common men could bear,
That when the Sea was calm, all Boats alike
Shew'd Mattership in floating. Fortunes blows,
When most strook home, being gentle wounded, craves
A Noble cunning. You were us'd to load me
VVith precepts that would make invincible
The heart that conn'd them.

Virg. Oh heavens! O heavens!

Corio. Nay, I prithee woman.

Vol. Now the Red Pestilence strike all Trades in Rome,
And Occupations perish.

Corio. VVhat, what, what:
I shall be lov'd, when I am lack'd. Nay Mother,
Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,
If you had been the VVife of Hercules,
Six of his Labours you'd have done, and sav'd
Your husband so much sweat. Cominius,
Droop not, Adieu: Farewel my VVife, my Mother,
Ile do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius,
Thy tears are saltier than a younger mans,
And venomous to thine eyes. My (sometime) General,
I have seen thee Stern, and thou hast oft beheld
Heart-hardning spectacles. Tell these sad women,
'Tis fond to wait inevitable strokes,
As 'tis to laugh at 'em. My Mother, you wot well
My hazards still have been your solace, and Believ't not lightly, though I go alone
Like to a lonely Dragon, that his Fen
Makes fear'd, and talk'd of more than seen: your Son
VVill or exceed the Common, or be caught
VVith cautelous baits and practice.

Volum. My first Son,
VVhether will you go? Take good Cominius
VVish thee a while; determine on some course
More than a wild exposure, to each chance
That starts i'th' way before thee.

Corio. O the gods!

Com. Ile follow thee a Month, devise with thee
VVhere thou shalt rest, that thou may'st hear of us,
And we of thee. So if the time thrust forth
A cause for thy Repeal, we shall not send
O're the vast world, to seek a single man,
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I'th' absence of the needer.

Corio. Fare ye well:
Thou hast years upon thee, and thou art too full

Of the wars sursets, to go rove with one
That's yet unbruise'd: bring me but out at gate.
Come my sweet VVife, my dearest Mother, and
My Friends of Noble touch: when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you come:
VVhile I remain above the ground, you shall Hear from me still, and never of me ought
But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily

As any ear can hear. Come, let's not weep,
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods
I'd with thee every foot.

Corio. Give me thy hand, come.

Exeunt.

Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius, and Brutus, with the Edile.

Sicin. Bid them all home, he's gone: and we'll no further,
The Nobility are vexed, whom we see have sided
In his behalf.

Brut. Now we have shewn our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done,
Than when it was a doing.

Sicin. Bid them home, say their great enemy is gone,
And they, stand in their antient strength.

Brut. Dismiss them home. Here comes his Mother.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Menenius.

Sicin. Let's not meet her.

Brut. VVhy?

Sicin. They say she's mad.

Brut. They have ta'en more of us: keep on your way.

Volum. Oh y'are well met:
Th'hoorded plague a'th' gods requite your love.

Menen. Peace, peace, be not so loud.

Volum. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,
Nay, and you shall hear some. VVill you be gone?

Virg. You shall stay too: I would I had the power
To say so to my Husband.

Sicin. Are you mankind?

Volum. I fool, is that a shame? Note but this Fool,
VVas not a man my Father? Had'st thou Foxship
To banish him that strook more blows for Rome
Than thou hast spoken words.

Sicin. Oh blessed Heavens!

Vol. More Noble blows, than ever thou wise words.
And for Romes good Ile tell thee what; yet go:
Nay but thou shalt stay too: I would my Son
VVere in Arabia, and thy Tribe before him,
His good Sword in his hand.

Sicin. VVhat then?

Virg. VVhat then? He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Volum. Bastards, and all.

Good man, the wounds that he do's bear for Rome!

Menen. Come, come, peace.

Sicin. I would he had continued to his Country
As he began, and not unknit himself
The noble knot he made.

Brut. I would he had.

Vol. I would he had: 'Twas you incens'd the rabble.
Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth,
As I can of those Mysteries which heaven
VVill not have earth to know.

Brut. Pray let's go.

Volum. Now pray sir get you gone.
You have done a brave deed: Ere you go, hear this:
As farr as doth the Capitol exceed
The meanest house in Rome: so farr my Son

FFF

This

This Ladies Husband here ; this (do you see)
Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all,

Bru. Well, well, we'll leave you.

Sicin. Why stay you to be baited
With one that wants her Wits? Exit Tribunes.

Volum. Take my Prayers with you.

I would the Gods had nothing else to do,
But to confirm my Curses. Could I meet 'em
But once a day, it would unclog my heart
Of what lies heavy to't.

Men. You have told them home,
And by my troth you have cause: you'll sup with me?

Volum. Angers my Meate: I sup upon my self,
And so shall starve with Feeding: Come, let's go,
Leave this faint-puling, and lament as I do,
In Anger, Juno-like: Come, come, come. Exeunt

Men. Fie, fie, fie. Exit.

Enter a Roman, and a Volcie.

Rom. I know you well sir, and you know me: your name I think is Adrian.

Volcie. It is so sir, truly I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman, and my Services are as you are against 'em. Know you me yet?

Volcie. Nicanor? no.

Rom. The same sir.

Volcie. You had more Beard when I last saw you, but your Favour is well appear'd by your Tongue. What's the News in Rome? I have a Note from the Volcean state to find you out here. You have well saved me a days journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange Insurrections:
the people, against the Senators, Patricians, and Nobles.

Vol. Hath been; is it ended then? Our State thinks not so, they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again. For the Nobles receive so to heart the Banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness, to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their Tribunes for ever.
This lyes glowing I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vol. Coriolanus Banish'd?

Rom. Banish'd sir.

Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence Micanor.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a mans Wife, is when she's fall'n out with her Husband. Your Noble Tullus
Aufidius will appear well in these VVars, his great Opposer Coriolanus being now in no request of his country.

Vol. He cannot choose: I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you. You have ended my Business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall between this and Supper, tell you most strange things from Rome: all tending to the good of their Adversaries. Have you an Army ready say you?

Vol. A most Royal one. The Centurions, and their charges dist'n'tly billeted already in th' entertainment, and to be on foot at an hours warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man I think, that shall set them in present Action.
So sir, heart'ly well met, and most glad of your Company.

Vol. You take my part from me sir, I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. VVell let us go together. Exeunt.

Enter Coriolanus in mean Apparel, Disguis'd and muffled.

Corio. A goodly City is this Antium. City,
'Tis I that made thy Widdowes: Many an heyr
Of these fair Edifices for my VVarrs
Have I heard groan, and drop: Then know me not,
Left thar thy VVives with Spits, and Boys with Stones
In puny Bartel slay me. Save you sir.

Enter a Citizen.

Cit. And you.

Corio. Direct me, if it be your will, where great Aufidius lies; Is he in Antium?

Cit. He is, and feasts the Nobles of the State, at his house this night.

Corio. VVhich is his house, beseech you?

Cit. This here before you.

Corio. Thank you sir, farewell. Exit Citizen.

Oh World, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast sworn,
Whose double bosomes seem wear on heart,
Whose Hours, whose Bed, whose Meal and Exercise
Are still together: who Twine (as 'twere) in Love,
Unseparable, shall within this hour,
On a dissention of a Doit, break out
To bitterest Enmity So fellest Foes,
Whose passions, and whose Plots have broke their sleep
To take the one the other, by some chance,
Some trick not worth an Egg, shall grow dear friends
And inter-joyn their issues. So with me,
My Birth-lace have I, and my lover upon
This Enemy Town Ile enter, if he slay me
He does fair Justice: if he give me way,
Ile do his Country Service. Exit.

Much playes. Enter a Servingman.

1 Ser. Wine, Wine, Wine: What service is here? I think our Fellows are a sleep.

Enter another Servingman.

2 Ser. Where's Cotus? my M. calls for him: Cotus. Exit.

Enter Coriolanus.

Corio. A goodly house;
The Feast smels; but I appear not like a Guest.

Enter the first Servingman.

1 Ser. What would you have Friend? whence are you?
Here's no place for you: Pray go to the dore. Exit.

Corio. I have deserv'd no better entertainment, in being Coriolanus. Enter second Servant.

2 Ser. Whence are you sir? Has the Porter his eyes in h's head, that he gives entrance to such Companions?
Pray get you out.

Corio. Away.

2 Ser. Away? Get you away.

Corio. Now th'troublesome.

2 Ser. Are you so brave? Ile have you talkt with anon.

Enter 3 Servingmen, the first meets him.

3. What Fellow's this?

1. A strange one as ever I look'd on: I cannot get him out o'th'house: Prithee call my Master to him.

3. What have you to do here fellow? Pray you avoid the house.

Corio. Let me but stand, I will not hurt your Harch.

3. What are you?

Corio. A Gentleman.

3. A marv'llous poor one.

Corio. True, so I am.

3. Pray you poor Gentleman, take up some other station, tion here's no place for you, pray you void : Come.

Corio. Follow your Function, go, and batten on cold bits.

Pushes him away from him.

3. What you will not? Prithce tell my Master, what a strange Guest he ha's here.

2. And I shall.

Exit second Servingman.

3. Where dwell'st thou ?

Corio. Under the Canopy.

3. Under the Canopy ?

Corio. I.

3. Where's that ?

Corio. I'th' City of Kites and Crows.

3. I'th' City of Kites and Crows. What an Ass it is, then thou dwell'st with Daws too ?

Corio. No, I serve not thy Master.

3. How fir? Do you meddle with my Master ?

Corio. I, tis an honest service, than to meddle with thy Mistris : Thou prat'st, and prat'st, serve with thy trencher : Hence.

Beats him away.

Enter Aufidius with a Servingman.

Auf. Where is this Fellow ?

2. Here sir, I'de have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the Lords within.

name?

Auf. Whence com'st thou? What would'st thou ? Thy Why speak'st not? Speak man: what's thy name ?

Corio. If Tullus not yet thou know'st me, and seeing me, dost not think me for the man I am, necessity commands me name my self.

Auf. What is thy name ?

Corio. A name unmusical to the Volceans ears, And harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name ?

Thou hast a Grim appearance, and thy Face Bears a Command in't : Though thy Tackles torn, Thou shew'st a noble Vessel : What's thy name ?

Corio. Prepare thy brow to frown: know'st thou me yet?

Auf. I know thee not; thy Name ?

Corio. My name is Caius Martius, who hath done To thee particularly, and to all the Volcies Great hurt and Mischief: thereto witness may My Surname Coriolanus. The painful Service, The extreme Dangers, and the drops of Blood Shed for thy thankless Country are requited : But with that Surname, a good memory And witness of the Malice and Displeasure Which thou could'st bear me, only that name remains.

The Cruelty and Envy of the people, Permitted by our dastard Nobles, who Have all forlook me, hath devour'd the rest :

And suffer'd me by th'voice of Slaves to be Hoop'd out of Rome. Now this extremity, Hath brought me to thy Harth, not out of hope

(Mistake me not) to save my life : for if I had fear'd death, of all the Men i'th' world I would have voided thee. But in meer spight

To be full quit of those my banishers, Stand I before thee here : Then if thou hast

A heart of wreak in thee, that wilt revenge Thine own particular wrongs, and stop those maims Of shame seen through thy Country, speed thee straight

And make my misery serve thy turn : So use it, That my revengeful Services may prove

As benefits to thee. For I will fight Against my Cankred Country, with the spleen Of all the under Fiends. But if so be,

Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more Fortunes

Th'art tyr'd, then in a word, I also am Longer to live most weary : and present My throat to thee, and to thy Antient Malice : Which not to cut, would shew thee but a Fool, Since I have ever followed thee with hate, Drawn Tunns of Blood out of thy Countries brest, And cannot live but to thy shame, unless It be to do thee service.

Auf. Oh Martius, Martius,

Each word thou hast spoke, hath weeded from my heart A root of Antient Envy. If Jupiter

Should from yon Clowd speak divine things,

And say 'tis true ; I'de not believe them more

Than thee all-Noble Martius. Let me twine

Mine arms about that body, where against

My grained Ash an hundred times hath broke,

And scarr'd the Moon with splinters : here I cleep

The Anvile of my Sword, and do contest

As hotly and as nobly with thy Love,

As ever in Ambitious strength, I did

Contend against thy Valour. Know thou first,

I lov'd the Maid I married : never man

Sigh'd truer breath. But that I see thee here

Thou Noble thing, more dances my rapt heart,

Than when I first my wedded Mistris saw

Befrid my Threshold. Why, thou Mars I tell thee,

We have a Power on foot : and I had purpose

Once more to hew thy Target from thy Brawn,

Or lose mine Arm for't : Thou hast beat me out

Twelve several times, and I have nightly since

Dreamt of encounters twixt thy self and me :

We have been down together in my sleep,

Unbuckling Helms, fistng each others Throat,

And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy Martius

Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that

Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all

From twelve to seventy : And powring Warr

Into the bowels of ungratefull Rome,

Like a bold Flood o're-beat. Oh come, go in,

And take our Friendly Senators by'th' hands

Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,

Who am prepar'd against your Territories,

Though not for Rome it self.

Corio. You blefs me Gods.

Auf. Therefore most absolute Sir, if thou wilt have

The leading of thine own revenges, take

Th'one half of my Commission, and set down

As best thou art experienc'd, since thou know'st

Thy Countries strength and weakness, thine own waies

Whether to knock against the Gares of Rome,

Or rudely visit them in parts remote,

To fright them, ere destroy. But come in,

Let me comment thee first, to those that shall Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcomes,

And more a friend, than ere an Enemy,

Yet Martius that was much. Your hand: most welcome.

Exeunt.

Enter two of the Servingmen.

1 Here's a strange alteration.

2 By my hand, I had thought to have stricken him with a Cudgel, and yet my mind gave me, his cloaths made a false report of him.

1 What an Arm he has, he turn'd me about with his finger, and his thumb, as one would set up a Top.

2 Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him. He had fir, a kind of face me thought. I cannot

F f f 2

tell

tell how to term it.

1 He had so, looking as it were, would I were hang'd but I thought there was more in him, than I could think.

2. So did I, Ile be sworn : He is simply the rarest man i'th' world.

1 I think he is : but a greater soldier than he, You wot one.

2 Who my Master ?

1 Nay it's no matter for that.

2 Worth six on him.

1 Nay not so neither : but I take him to be the greater Souldiour.

2 Faith look you, one cannot tell how to say that : for the defence of a Town, our General is excellent.

1 I, and for an assault too.

Enter the third Servingman.

3 Oh Slaves, I can tell you News, News you Rascals.

Both. What, what, what? Let's partake.

3 I would not be a Roman of all Nations; I had as Live be a condemn'd man.

Both. Wherefore? Wherefore?

3 Why here's he that was wont to thwack our General, Cains Martius.

1 Why do you say, thwack our General ?

3 I do not say thwack our General, but he was alwayes good enough for him

2 Come we are fellows and friends : he was ever too hard for him, I have heard him say so himself.

1 He was too hard for him directly, to say the Troth on't before Coriolanus; he scotcht him, and notchd him like a Carbinado.

2 And hee had been Cannibally given, hee might have boyld and eaten him too.

1 But more of thy News.

3 Why he is so made on here within, as if he were Son and Heir to Mars, set at upper end o'th' Table : No question askt him by any of the Senators, but they stand bald before him. Our General himself makes a mistress of him, Sanctifies himself with's hand, and turns up the white o'th' eye to his discourse. But the bottome of the News is, our General is cut i'th'middle, & but one half of what he was yesterday. For the other ha's half, by the intreaty and grant of the whole Table. Hee'll go hee sayes, and sole the Porter of Rome Gates by th'eares. He will mow all down before him, and leave his passage poul'd.

2 And he's as like to do't as any man I can imagine.

3 Do't? he will do't : for look you sir, he has as many Friends as Enemies: which Friends sir, as it were, durst not (look you sir) shew themselves (as we term it) his Friends, whilst he's in Directitude.

1 Directitude? Whats that?

3 But when they shall see sir, his Crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their Burroughes (like Conies after Rain) and revell all with him.

1 But when goes this forward?

3 To morrow, to day, presently, you shall have the Drum strook up this afternoon : 'Tis as it were a parcel of their Feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.

2 Why then we shall have a stirring World again : This peace is nothing, but to rust Iron, encrease Taylors, and breed Ballad-makers.

1 Let me have Warr say I, it exceeds peace as farr as day do's night : It's sprightly walking, audible, and full of Vent. Peace. is a very Apoplexy, Lethargie, mull'd, deaf, sleepy, insensible, a getter of more bastard Children, than Warrs a destroyer of men.

2 'Tis so, and as Warrs in some sort may bee said to be a Ravisher, so it cannot be denied, but peace is a great maker of Cuckolds.

1 I, and it makes men hate one another.

3 Reason, because they then less need one another: The Warres for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volcians. They are rising, they are rising.

Both. In, in, in, in.

Exeunt.

Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius, and Brutus.

Sicin. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him, His remedies are tame, the present peace, And quietness of the people, Which before Were in Wilde hurry. Here do We make his Friends Blush, that the world goes well : who rather had, Though they themselves did suffer by't, behold Dissentious numbers pestring streets, than see Our Tradefmen singing in their shops, and going About their Functions friendly.

Enter Menenius.

Brn. VVe stood too'r in good time. Is this Menenius?

Sicin. 'Tis he, 'tis he : O he is grown most kind of late: Hail Sir.

Mene. Haile to you both.

Sicin. Your Coriolanus is not much mist, but with his Friends : the Common wealth doth stand, and so would do, were he more angry at it.

Mene. All's well, and might have been much better, if he could have temporiz'd.

Sicin. VVhere is he, hear you?

Mene. Nay I hear nothing :

His Mother and his wife hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

All. The Gods preserve you both.

Sicin. Gooden Neighbours.

Brn. Gooden to you all, gooden to you all.

1 Our selves, our Wives and children, on our knees, Are bound to pray for you both.

Sicin. Live, and thrive.

Brn. Farewell kinde Neighbours : We wisht Coriolanus had lov'd you as we did.

All. Now the Gods keep you.

Both Tri. Farewell, farewell.

Exeunt Citizens.

Sicin. This is a happier and more comely time, Than when these Fellowes ran about the streets, Crying Confusion.

Brn. Cains Martius was

A worthy Officer i'th'Warr, but Insolent, O'recome with pride, Ambitious, past all thinking Self-loving.

Sici. And affecting one sole Throne, without assistance.

Mene. I think not so.

Sicin. VVe should by this to all out Lamentation, If he had gone forth Consul, found it so.

Brn. The Gods have well prevented it, and Rome Sits safe and still without him.

Enter Aedile.

Aedile. VVorthy Tribunes,

There is a Slave whom we have put in prison, Reports the Volces with two several Powers Are entred in the Roman Territories, And with the deepest malice of the VVarr, Destroy what lies before'em.

Mene. 'Tis Auffidius,

VVho hearing of our Martius Banishment, Thrusts forth his horns again into the VVorld VVhich were In-shell'd, VVhen Martius stood for Rome, And

And durst not once peep out.

Sicin. Come, what talk you of Martius?

Brn. Go see this Rumorer whipt, it cannot be,
The Volcies dare break with us.

Men. Cannot be?

We have record, that very well it can,
And three examples of the like hath been Within my Age. But reason with the fellow
Before you punish him, where he heard this,
Left you shall chance to whip your Information,
And beat the Messenger, who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.

Sicin. Tell not me: I know this cannot be.

Brn. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. The Nobles in great earnestness are going
All to the Senate-house: some news is coming
That turns their Countenances.

Sicin. 'Tis this Slave:

Go whip him 'fore the peoples eyes: His raising,
Nothing but his report.

Mes. Yes worthy Sir,
The Slaves report is seconded, and more,
More fearful is deliver'd.

Sicin. What more fearful?

Mes. It is spoke freely out of many mouths,
How probable I do not know, that Martius
Joyn'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome,
And vows Revenge as spacious, as between
The young't and oldest thing.

Sicin. This is most likely.

Brn. Rais'd only, that the weaker sort may with Good Martius home again.

Sicin. The very trick on't.

Men. This is unlikely,
He, and Aufidius can no more attone
Than violent't Contrariety.

Enter Messenger.

Mes. You are sent for to the Senate:
A fearful Army, led by Caius Martius,
Associated with Aufidius's Rages
Upon our Territories, and have already O're-born their way consum'd with fire, and took
What lay before them.

Enter Cominius.

Com. Oh you have made good work.

Men. What news? What news?

Com. You have help to ravish your own daughters, and
To melt the City Leads upon your pates,
To see your Wives dishonour'd to your Noses.

Men. What's the news? What's the news?

Com. Your Temples burned in their Ciment, and Your Franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an Augors boar.

Men. Pray now the news?

You have made fair work I fear me: pray your news?
If Martius should be joyn'd with Volceans.

Com. If? He is their God, he leads them like a thing
Made by some other Deity than Nature,
That shapen man Better: and they follow him
Against us Brats, with no less Confidence,
Than Boyes pursuing Summer Butter-flies,
Or Butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good work,
You and your Apron men: you, that flood so much
Upon the voice of occupation, and

The brearh of Garlike-eaters.

Com. He'll shake your Rome about your ears.

Men. As Hercules did shake down Mellow Fruit:
You have made fair work.

Brn. But is this true sir?

Com. I, and you'll look pale
Before you find it other. All the Regions
Do smilingly revolt, and who resists
Are mock'd for valiant Ignorance,
And perish constant fools: who is't can blame him?
Your Enemies and his, find something in him.

Men. We are all undone, unless
The Noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it?

The Tribunes cannot do't for shame; the people
Deserve such pittie of him, as the Wolf
Do's of the Shepherds; For his best friends if they Should say be good to Rome, they charg'd him even
As those should do that had deserv'd his hate,
And therein shew'd like Enemies.

Me. 'Tis true, if he were putting to my house, the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, beseech you cease. You have made fair hands,
You and your Crafts, you have crafted fair.

Com. You have brought
A Trembling upon Rome, such as was never S'incapable of help.

Tri. Say not, we brought it.

Men. How? Was't we? We lov'd him,
But like beasts, and Cowardly Nobles,
Gave way unto your Clusters, who did hoot
Him out o'th' City.

Com. But I fear
They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his Officer: Desperation,
Is all the policy, Strength, and Defence
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a Troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the Clusters.

And is Aufidius with him? You are they
That made the Ayr unwholsome, when you cast
Your stinking, greasie Caps, in hooting
At Coriolanus Exile. How he's coming,
And not a hair upon a Souldiers head
Which will not prove a whip: As many Coxcombes
As you threw Caps up, will he tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter,
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserv'd it.

Omnes. Faith, we hear fearful News.

1 Cit. For mine own part,
When I said banish him, I said 'twas pittie.

2. And so did I.

3. And so did I; and to say the truth, so did very many of us, that we did, we did for the best: and though we willingly consented to his Banishment, yet it was against our will.

Com. Y're goodly things, you Voices.

Men. You have made you good work
You and your cry. Shall's to the Capitol?

Com. Oh I, what else?

Exeunt both.

Sicin. Go Masters get you home, be not dismay'd,
These are a Side, that would be glad to have
This true, which they so seem to fear. Go home,
And shew no sign of Fear.

1 Cit. The Gods be good to us : Come Masters let's home, I ever said we were i'th wrong, when we banish'd him.

2 Cit. So did we all, but come, let's home. Exit Cit.

Bru. I do not like this News.

Sicin. Nor I.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol : would half my ealth Would buy this for a lye.

Sicin. Pray let's go. Exeunt Tribunes.

Enter Aufidius with his Lieutenant.

Auf. Do they still flie to th' Roman ?

Lien. I do not know what Witchcraft's in him : but Your Souldiers use him as the grace 'fore meate, Their talk at Table, and their Thanks at end, And you are darkned in this action Sir, Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help it now, Unless by using means I lame the foot Of our design. He bears himself more proudly, Even to my person, than I thought he would When first I did embrace him. Yet his Nature In that's no Changeling, and I must excuse What cannot be amended.

Lien. Yet I wish Sir, (I mean for your particular) you had not Joyn'd in Commission with him : but either have born The action of your self, or else to him had left it solely.

Auf. I understand thee well, and be thou sure, When he shall come to his account, he knows not What I can urge against him, although it seems And so he thinks, and is no less apparent To th' vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly, And shews good Husbandry for the Volcean State, Fights Dragon-like, and does atchieve as soon As draw his Sword : yet he hath left undone That which shall break his neck, or hazard mine, When ere we come to our account.

Lien. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome ?

Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down, And the Nobility of Rome are his : The Senators and Patricians love him too : The Tribunes are no Souldiers : and their people Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty To expell him thence. I think he'll be to Rome As is the Aspray to the Fish, who takes it By Sovereignty of Nature. First, he was A Noble servant to them, but he could not Carry his Honors even : whether 'twas Pride Which out of dayly Fortune ever taints The happy man ; whether defect of judgement, To fail in the disposing of those chances Which he was Lord of : or whether Nature, Not to be other than one thing, not moving From th' Cask to th' Cushion : but commanding peace Even with the same austerity and garb, As he controll'd the warr. But one of these (As he hath spices of them all) not all, For I dare so far free him, made him fear'd, So, hated, and so banish'd : but he ha's a Merit To choak it in the utterance : So our Virtues, Lie in th' interpretation of the time, And power unto it self most commendable, Hath not a Tomb so evident as a Chair T' extol what it hath done. One fire drives out one fire ; one Nail, one Nail ; Rights by rights fouler, strengths by strengths do fail.

Come let's away : when Cains Rome is thine, Thou art poor't of all ; then shortly art thou mine. Exeunt

Actus Quintus.

Enter Menenius, Cominius, Sicinius, Brutus, the two Tribunes, with others.

Menen. No, Ile not go : you hear what he hath said Which was sometime his General : who loved him In a most dear particular. He call'd me Father : But what o'that ? Go you that banish'd him A mile before his Tent, fall down and kneel The way into his mercy : Nay, if he coy'd To hear Cominius speak, Ile keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Menen. Do you hear ?

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name : I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops That we have bled together. Coriolanus He would not answer to : Forbad all Names, He was a kind of Nothing, Tittleless, Till he had forg'd himself a name a'th' fire Of burning Rome.

Menen. Why, so : you have made good work : A pair of Tribunes, that have wrack'd for Rome, To make Coals cheap : A Noble memory.

Com. I minded him, how Royal 'twas to pardon When it was less expected. He replied, It was a bare petition of a State To one whom they had punish'd.

Menen. Very well, could he say less ?

Com. I offered to awaken his regard For's private Friends. His answer to me was He could not stay to pick them, in a pile Of noysom musty Chaff. He said, 'twas folly For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt And still to nose th' offence.

Menen. For one poor grain or two ? I am one of those : his Mother, Wife, his Child, And this brave Fellow too : we are the Grains, You are the Musty Chaff, and you are smelt Above the Moon. We must be burnt for you.

Sicin. Nay, pray be patient : If you refuse your aid In this so never-needed help, yet do not Upbraid's with our distress. But sure if you Would be your Countries Pleader, your good tongue More than the instant Army we can make Might stop our Countryman.

Menen. No : Ile not meddle.

Sicin. Pray you go to him.

Menen. What should I do ?

Bru. Only make trial what your Love can do, For Rome, towards Martius.

Men. Well, and say that Martius return me, As Cominius is return'd, unheard : what then ? But as a discontented Friend, grief-shot With his unkindness. Say't be so ?

Sicin. Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure As you intended well.

Men. Ile undertak't : I think he'll hear me. Yet to bite his lip, And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me.

He was not taken well, he had not din'd,
The Veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then
We powt upon the Morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive; but when we have stufft
These Pipes, and these Conveyances of our blood
With Wine and feeding, we have suppler Souls
Than in our Priest-like Fasts: therefore Ile watch him
Till he be diere'd to my request,
And then Ile set upon him.

Bru. You know the very rode into his kindness,
And cannot lose your way.

Men. Good faith Ile prove him,
Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge
Of my success. Exit.

Com. He'll never hear him.

Sicin. Not?

Com. I tell you, he do's sit in Gold, his eye
Red as 'twould burn Rome: and his Injury
The Gaoler to his pittie I kneel'd before him,
'Twas very faintly he said Rise: dismiss me
Thus with his speechless hand. What he would do
He sent in writing after me: what he would not,
Bound with an Oath to yield to his conditions:
So that all hope is vain, unless his Noble Mother,
And his Wife (who as I hear) mean to sollicite him
For mercy to his Country: therefore let's hence,
And with our fair intreaties haist them on. Exeunt.

Enter Menenius to the Watch or Guard.

1 Wat. Stay: whence are you?

2 Wat. Stand, and go back.

Men. You guard like men, 'tis well. But by your leave
I am an Officer of State, & come to speak with Coriolanus.

1. From whence? Men. From Rome.

1. You may not pass, you must return: our General will no more hear from thence.

2. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire, before
You'll speak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my Friends,
If you have heard your General talk of Rome,
And of his Friends there, it is Lots to Blanks,
My name hath toucht your ears: it is Menenius.

1. Be it so, go back: the virtue of your name,
Is not here passable.

Men. I tell the Fellow,
Thy General is my Lover: I have been
The book of his good Acts, whence men have read
His Fame unparallel'd, happily amplified:
For I have ever verified my Friends,
(Of whom he's chief) with all the size that verity
Would without lapsing suffer: Nay, sometimes,
Like to a Bowl upon a subtil ground
I have tumbled past the throw: and in his praise
Have (almost) stamp't the Leasing. Therefore Fellow,
I must have leave to pass.

1. Faith Sir, if you had told as many lyes in his behalf, as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here; no, though it were as virtuous to lye, as to live chastly. Therefore go back.

Men. Prithee fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your General.

2. Howsoever you have been his Liar, as you say you have, I am one that telling true under him, must say you cannot pass. Therefore go back.

Men. Ha's he din'd can st thou tell? For I would not speak with him, till after dinner.

1. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am as thy General is.

1. Then you should hate Rome, as he do's. Can you, when you have pusht out your gates, the very Defender of them, and in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easie groans of old women, the Virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decay'd Dotant as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire, your City is ready to flame in, with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceiv'd, therefore back to Rome, and prepare for your execution: you are condemn'd, our General has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sitra, if the Captain knew I were here,
He would use me with estimation.

1. Come, my Captain knows you not.

Men. I mean thy General.

1. My General cares not for you. Back I say, go: left
I let forth your half pint of blood. Back, that's the utmost of your having, back.

Men. Nay but Fellow, Fellow.

Enter Coriolanus with Aufidius.

Corio. What's the matter?

Men. Now you Companion: Ile say an arrant for you:
you shall know now that I am in estimation: you shall perceive, that a Jack gardant cannot office me from my Son Coriolanus, guess but my entertainment with him: if thou stand'st not i'th' State of hanging, or of some death more long in Spectatorship, and crueller in suffering, behold now presently, and swoond for what's to come upon thee. The glorious Gods sit in hourly Synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old Father Menenius do's. O my Son, my Son! thou art preparing fire for us: look thee, here's water to quench it.
I was hardly moved to come to thee: but being assured none but my self could move thee, I have been blown out of your Gates with sighs: and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary Countrymen. The good Gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it, upon this Varlet here: This, who like a block hath denyed my access to thee.

Corio. Away.

Men. How? Away?

Corio. Wife, Mother, Child, I know not. My affairs
Are servanted to others: Though I owe
My revenge properly, my remission lies
In Volcean breasts. That we have been familiar,
Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison rather Than pittie: Note how much, therefore be gone.
Mine ears against your sutes, are stronger than
Your gates against my force. Yet for I loved thee,
Take this along, I writ it for thy sake,
And would have sent it. Another word Menenius,
I will not hear thee speak. This man Aufidius
Was my belov'd in Rome: yet thou behold'st—

Auf. You keep a constant temper. Exeunt.

Manent the Guard and Menenius.

1. Now sir, is your name Menenius?

2 'Tis a spell you see of much power:
You know the way home again.

1. Do you hear how we are shent for keeping your greatness back?

2. What cause do you think I have to swoond?

Men. I neither care for th' world, nor your General:
for such things as you, I can scarce think ther's any, y're so slight. He that hath a will to dye by himself, fears it not not from another: Let your General do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your misery encrease with your age. I say to you, as I was said to, Away. Exit.

1. A Noble Fellow I warrant him.

2 The worthy Fellow is our General. He's the Rock, The Oak not to be winde-shaken. Exit Watch.

Enter Coriolanus and Aufidius.

Corio. We will before the walls of Rome to morrow Set down our Host. My partner in this Action You must report to th' Volcian Lords, how plainly I have born this Business.

Auf. Only their ends you have respected. Stopt your ears against the general sure of Rome: Never admitted a privat whisper, no not with such friends That thought them sure of you.

Corio. This last old man, Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome, Lov'd me, above the measure of a Father, Nay godded me indeed. Their latest refuge, Was to send him for whose old love I have (Though I shew'd sowlly to him) once more offer'd The first Conditions which they did refuse, And cannot now accept, to grace him onely, That thought he could do more: A very little I have yeelded to. Fresh Embassies, and Sutes, Nor from the State, nor private friends heereafter Will I lend ear to. Ha? what shout is this? Shout within Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter Virgilia, Volumnia, Valeria, yong Martius; with Attendants.

My wife comes formost, then the honour'd mould Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand The Grandchilde to her blood. But our affection, All bond and privilege of nature break; Let it be Virtuous to be Obstinate. What is that Curt'sie worth? Or those Doves eyes, Which can make Gods forsworn? I melt, and am not Of stronger earth than others: my Mother bows, As if Olympus to a Mole-hill should In supplication Nod: and my young Boy Hath an aspect of intercession, which Great Nature cries, Deny not. Let the Volcies Plough Rome, and harrow Italy, Ile never Be such a Gosling to obey instinct: but stand As if a man were Author of himself, & knew no other kin.

Virgil. My Lord and Husband.

Corio. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Virg. The sorrow that delivers us thus chang'd Makes you think so.

Corio. Like a dull Actor now, I have forgot my part, And I am out, even to a full Disgrace. Best of my Flesh, Forgive my Tyranny: but do not say, For that forgive our Romans. O a kiss Long as my Exile, sweet as my Revenge! Now by the jealous Queen of Heaven, that kiss I carried from thee dear; and my true Lip Hath Virgin'd it ere since. You Gods, I pray, And the most Noble Mother of the world Leave unsaluted: Sink my knee ith' earth; Of thy deep duty, more impression shew Than that of common Sons.

Volum. Oh stand up blest!

Whil'st with no foster Cushion than the Flint I kneel before thee, and unproperly Shew duty as mistaken, all this while,

Between the Child, and Parent.

Corio. What's this? your knees to me?

To your Corrected Son?

Then let the Pibbles on the hungry beach Fillop the Starrs: Then, let the mutinous winds Strike the proud Cedars 'against the fiery Sun: Murd'ring impossibility, to make What cannot be, slight work.

Volum. Thou art my Warriour, I hope to frame thee, Do you know this Lady?

Corio. The Noble Sister of Publicola; The Moon of Rome: Chast as the Icfie That's curdied by the Frost, from purest Snow, And hangs on Diana's Temple: Dear Valeria.

Volum. This is a poor Epitome of yours, Which by th'interpretation of full time, May shew like all your self.

Corio. The God of Souldiers, With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with Nobleness, that thou maist prove To shame invulnerable, and strike i'th' Warrs Like a great Sea-mark standing every flaw, And saving those that eye thee.

Volum. Your knee, Sirrah.

Corio. That's my brave boy.

Volum. Even he, your wife, this Lady, and my self, Are Suters to you.

Corio. I beseech you peace: Or if you'd ask, remember this before; The thing I have forsworn to grant, may never Be held by your denials. Do not bid me Dismiss my Souldiers, or capitulate Again with Rome's Mechanicks. Tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: Desire not t'allay My Rages and Revenges, with your colder reasons.

Volum. Oh no more, no more: You have said you will not grant us any thing: For we have nothing else to ask, but that Which you deny already: yet we will ask, That if you fail in our request, the blame May hang upon your hardness, therefore hear us.

Corio. Aufidius, and you Volcies, mark, for we'll Hear nought from Rome in private. Your request?

Volum. Should we be silent & not speak, our Raiment And state of Bodies would bewray what life We have led since thy Exile. Think with thy self, How more unfortunate than living women Are we come hither; since that thy fight, which should Make our eys flow with joy: hearts dance with comforts, Constrains them weep, and shake with fear and sorrow, Making the Mother, Wife, and Child to see, The Son, the Husband, and the Father tearing His Countries Bowels out: and to poor we Thine enmities most capital: Thou barr'st us Our prayers to the Gods, which is a comfort That all but we enjoy. For how can we? Alas! how can we, for our Country pray? Whereto we are bound, together with thy victory, Whereto we are bound: Alack, or we must lose The Country our dear Nurse, or else thy person Our comfort in the Country. We must find An evident Calamity, though we had Our wish, which side should win. For either thou Must as a Forein Recreant be led With Manacles through our streets, or else Triumphantly tread on thy Countries ruine,

And

And bear the Palm, for having bravely shed
Thy Wife and Childrens blood : For my self, Sonn,
I purpose not to waite on Fortune, till
These warrs determin : if I cannot perswade thee
Rather to shew a Noble grace to both parts
Than seek the end of one ; thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy Country, than to tread
(Trust to't, thou shalt not) on thy Mothers wombe
That brought thee to this world.

Virg. I, and mine, brought you forth this boy,
To keep your name living to time.

Boy. A shall not tread on me : Ile run away
Till I am bigger, but then Ile fight.

Corio. Not of a womans tenderness to be Requires nor Childe, nor womans face to see:
I have sate too long.

Volm. Nay, go not from us thus:
If it were so, that our request did tend
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy
The Volces whom you serve, you might condemn us
As poysonous of your Honour. No, our sute
Is that you reconcile them: While the Volces
May say, this mercy we have shew'd : the Romans,
This we receiv'd, and each in either side
Give the All-haile to thee, and cry be Blest
For making up this peace. Thou know'st (great Sonn)
The end of Warr's uncertain: but this certain,
That if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap, is such a name
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with Curses :
Whose Chronicle thus writ, The man was Noble,
But with his last Attempt, he wip'd it out,
Destroy'd his Country, and his name remains
To th'insuing Age, abhorr'd. Speak to me Son:
Thou hast affected the five strains of Honor,
To imitate the graces of the Gods.

To tear with Thunder the wide Cheeks a'th' Ayre,
And yet to change thy Sulphure with a Boulr.
That should but rive an Oak. Why do'st not speak?
Think'st thou it honourable for a Noble man
Still to remember wrongs ? Daughter, Speak you :
He cares not for your weeping. Speak thou Boy,
Perhaps thy childishness will move him more
Than can our Reasons. There is no man in the world
More bound to's Mother, yet here he lets me prate
Like one i'th' Stocks. Thou hast never in thy life,
Shewed thy dear Mother any curtesie,
When she (poor Hen) fond of no second brood
Ha's cluck'd thee to the Warrs, and safely home
Loden with Honour. Say my Request's unjust,
And spurn me back : But if it be not so
Thou art not honest, and the Gods will plague thee
That thou restrain'st from me the Duty which
To a Mothers part belongs. He turns away :
Down Ladies : let us shame him with our knees
To his sur-name Coriolanus longs more pride
Than pitty to our Prayers. Down : an end,
This is the last. So, we will home to Rome,
And dye among our Neighbours : Nay behold's,
This Boy that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneels, and holds up hands for fellowship,
Doe's reason our Petition with more strength,
Than thou hast to deny't. Come, let us go :
This Fellow had a Volcan to his Mother :
His Wife is in Coriolus, and his Childe
Like him by chance : yet give us our dispatch:

I am husht until our City be afire, & then Ile speak a little.
Holds her by the hand silent.

Corio. O Mother, Mother !
What have you done ? Behold, the Heavens do ope,
The Gods look down, and this unnatural Scene
They laugh at. Oh my Mother, Mother : Oh !
You have wonn a happy Victory to Rome.
But for your Son, beleeve it : Oh beleeve it,
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd,
If not most mortal to him. But let it come :
Aufidius, though I cannot make true Warrs,
Ile frame convenient peace. Now good Aufidius,
Were you in my stead, would you have heard
A mother less? or granted less Aufidius ?

Auf. I was mov'd withall.

Corio. I dare be sworn you were
And fir, it is no little thing to make
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But (good fir)
What peace you'l make, advise me: For my part,
Ile not to Rome, Ile back with you, and pray you
Stand to me in this cause. O Mother! Wife!

Auf. I am glad thou hast set thy mercy, & thy Honor
A difference in thee : Out of that Ile work
My self a former Fortune.

Corio. I by and by: But we will drink together :
And you shall bear

A better witness back than words, which we
On like conditions, will have counter-seal'd.
Come enter with us : Ladies you deserve
To have a Temple built you : All the Swords
In Italy, and her Confederate Arms
Could not have made this peace.

Exeunt.

Enter Menenius and Sicinius.

(Stone?)

Mene. See you yon'd Coin a'th' Capitol, yon'd corner
Sicin. Why what of that?

Mene. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the Ladies of Rome, especially his Mother, may prevail with him. But I say, there is no hope in 't, our throats are sentenc'd, and stay upon execution.

Sicin. Is't possible, that so short a time can alter the condition of a man.

Mene. There is difference between a Grub & a Butterfly, yet your Butterfly was a Grub : this Martius, is grown from Man to Dragon : He has wings, hee's more than a creeping thing.

Sicin. He lov'd his Mother dearly.

Mene. So did he me : and he no more remembers his Mother now, than an eight years old horse, The tartness of his face, sours ripe Grapes. When he walks, he moves like an Engine, and the ground shrinks before his Treading. He is able to peirce a Corset with his eye : Talks like a knell, and his hum is a Battery. He sits in his State as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done is finisht with his bidding. He wants nothing of a God but Eternitie, and a Heaven to Throne in.

Sicin. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Mene. I paint him in the Character. Mark what mercy his Mother shall bring from him : There is no more mercy in him, than there is milk in a male-Tyger, that shall our poor City find : and all this is long of you.

Sicin. The Gods be good unto us.

Mene. No, in such a case the Gods will not bee good unto us. When we banish'd him, we respected not them :
and he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes.

Mef. Sir, if you'd save your life flye to your House,
The Plebeians have got your Fellow Tribune,
And hale him up and down; all swearing, if
The Roman Ladies bring not comfort home,
They'll give him death by Inches.

Enter another Messenger.

Sicin. What's the News? (prevayl'd,

Mef. Good News, good news, the Ladies have
The Volcians are dislodg'd, and Martius gone:
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not th' expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sicin. Friend, art thou certain this is true?
Is't most certain?

Mef. As certain as I know the Sun is fire:
Where have you lurk'd that you make doubt of it?
Ne're through an Arch so hurried the blown Tide
As the recomforted through th' gates. Why heark you?

Trumpets, Hoboyes, Drums beat, altogether.

The Trumpets, Sack-buts, Psalteries, and Fifes,
Tabors, and Cymbles, and the shouting Romans,
Make the Sun dance. Heark you. A shout within.

Mene. This is good News:
I will go meet the Ladies. This Volumnia,
Is worth of Consuls, Senators, Patricians,
A City full: Of Tribunes such as you,
A Sea and Land full: you have pray'd well to day:
This Morning, for ten thousand of your throats,
I'de not have given a doit. Heark, how they joy.

Sound still with the Shouts.

Sicin. First, the Gods bless you for your tydings:
Next, accept my thankfulness.

Mef. Sir, we have all great cause to give great thanks.

Sicin. They are neer the City?

Mef. Almost at point to enter.

Sicin. Wee'll meet them and help the joy. Exeunt.

Enter two Senators, with Ladies, passing over the Stage, with other Lords.

Sena. Behold our Patronness, the life of Rome:
Call all your Tribes together, praise the Gods,
And make triumphant fires, strow Flowers before them:
Vnshoot the noise that banish'd Martius;
Repeal him, with the welcome of his Mother:
Cry welcome Ladies, welcome.

All. Welcome Ladies, welcome. Exeunt.

A Flourish with Drums & Trumpets.

Enter Tullus Aufidius, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the Lords a'th' City, I am here:
Deliver them this Paper: having read it,
Bid them repair to th' Market place, Where I
Even in theirs, and in the Commons ears,
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse;
The City Ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends t'appear before the People, hoping
To purge himself with words. Dispatch.

Enter 3 or 4 Conspirators of Aufidius Faction.
Most Welcome.

1. Con. How is it with our General?

Auf. Even so, as with a man by his own Alms im-poysen'd, and with his Charity slain.

2. Con. Most Noble Sir, If you do hold the same intent
Wherein you wish't us parties: Wee'll deliver you
Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir I cannot tell,

We must proceed as we do finde the People.

3. Con. The people will remain uncertain, whil't
Twixt you there's difference: but the fall of either
Makes the Survivor heyr of all.

Auf. I know it:

And my pretext to strike at him, admits
A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd
Mine Honor for his truth: who being so heighten'd,
He watered his new Plants with dewes of Flatterie,
Seducing so my Friends: and to this end,
He bowd his Nature, never known before,
But to be rough, unswayable, and free.

3. Consp. Sir, his stoutness
When he did stand for Consul, which he lost
By lack of stooping.

Auf. That I would have spoke of:
Being banish'd for't, he came unto my Harth,
Presented to my knife his Throat: I took him,
Made him joynt-servant with me: Gave him way
In all his owne desires: Nay, let him choose
Out of my Files, his projects to accomplish,
My best and freshest men, serv'd his designements
In mine own person: hope to reap the Fame
Which he did end all his; and took some pride
To do my self this wrong; Till at the last
I seem'd his Follower, nor Partner; and
He wag'd me with his Countenance, as if I had been Mercenary.

1. Con. So he did my Lord:
The Army marveyled at it, and in the last
When he had carried Rome, and that we look'd
For no less Spoil, than Glory—

Auf. There was it:
For which my sinewes shall be stretcht upon him,
At a few drops of Womens rhevm, which are
As cheap as Lies; he sold the Blood and Labour
Of our great Action; therefore shall he dye,
And Ile renew me in his fall. But heark.

Drums and Trumpets sound, with great shouts of the people.

1. Con. Your Native Town you enter'd like a Poste,
And had no welcomes home, but he returns
Splitting the Ayre with noyse.

2. Con. And patient Fools,
Whose children he hath slain, their bafe throats tear
With giving him glory.

3. Con. Therefore at your vantage,
Ere he expresse himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feel your Sword:
Which he will second, when he lies along
After your way. His Tale pronounc'd, shall bury
His Reasons, with his Body.

Auf. Say no more. Here come the Lords.

Enter the Lords of the City.

All Lords. You are most welcome home.

Auf. I have not deserv'd it.
But worthy Lords, have you with heed perused
What I have written to you?

A l. We have.

1. Lord. And grieve to hear't.
What faults he made before the last, I thinke
Might have found easie Fines: But there to end
Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our Levies, answering us
With our own charge: making a Treatie, where
There was a yeelding; this admits no excuse.

Auf.

Auf. He approaches, you shall hear him.
Enter Coriolanus marching with Drum, and Colours. The Commoners being with him.

Corio. Hail Lords, I am return'd, your Souldier:
No more infested with my Countries love
Than when I parted hence: but still subsisting
Under your great Command. You are to know,
That prosperously I have attempted, and
With bloody passage led your Warrs, even to
The gates of Rome: Our spoils we have brought home
Doth more than Counterpoize a full third part
The charges of the Action. We have made peace
With no less Honour to the Antiates
Than shame to th'Romans. And we here deliver
Subscrib'd by th'Consuls, and Patricians,
Together with the Seal a'th' Senat, what
We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not Noble Lords,
But tell the Traitor in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your Powers.

Corio. Traitor? How now?

Auf. I Traitor, Martius.

Corio. Martius?

Auf. I Martius, Caius Martius: Do'st thou think
He grace thee with that Robbery, thy stoln name
Coriolanus in Corioli?

You Lords and Head a'th'State, perfidiously
He ha's betray'd your business, and given up
For certain drops of Salt, your City Rome,
I say your City, to his Wife and Mother,
Breaking his Oath and Resolution, like
A twist of rotten Silk, never admitting
Counsaile a'th'Warr: But at his Nurses tears
He whin'd and roar'd away your Victorie,
That Pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wond'ring each at others.

Corio. Hear'st thou Mars?

Auf. Name not the God, thou boy of Tears.

Corio. Ha?

Auf. No more,

Corio. Measureless Lyar thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it. Boy? Oh Slave.
Pardon me Lords, 'tis the first time that ever
I was forc'd to scould. Your judgements my grave Lords
Must give this Cutr the Lye: and his own Notion,
Who wears my stripes impress'd upon him, that Must bear my bearing to his Grave, shall joyn
To thrust the Lye unto him.

1 Lord. Peace both, and hear me speak.

Corio. Cut me to pieces Volcies, Men and Lads,
Stain all your edges on me. Boy, false Hound:
If you have writ your Annales true, 'tis there,
That like an Eagle in a Dove-coat, I

Flutter'd your Volcians in Corioli.

Alone I did it, Boy!

Auf. Why Noble Lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind Fortune,
Which was your shame, by this unholy Braggart:
Fore your own eyes, and ears?

All Consp. Let him dye for'r.

All. Peopl. Tear him to pieces, do it presently:
He kill'd my Son, my Daughter, he kill'd my Cofin
Marcus, he kill'd my Father.

2 Lord. Peace hoe: no outrage, peace:
The man is Noble, and his Fame folds in
This Orb o'th'earth: His last offences to us
Shall have Judicious hearing. Stand Aufidius,
And trouble not the peace.

Corio. O that I had him, with six Aufidiuses, or more:
His Tribe to use my lawful Sword.

Auf. Insolent Villain.

All Consp. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him.

Draw both the Conspirators, and kills Martius, who falls, Aufidius stands on him.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold.

Auf. My Noble Masters, hear me speak.

1 Lord. O Tullus.

2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed, whereat
Valour will weep.

3 Lord. Tread not upon him Masters, all be quiet,
Put up your Swords.

Auf. My Lords.

When you shall know (as in this Rage
Provok'd by him, you cannot) the great danger
Which this mans life did owe you, you'll rejoyce
That he is thus cut off. Please it your Honours
To call me to your Senate, Ile deliver
My self your loyal Servant, or endure
Your heaviest Censure.

1 Lord. Bear from hence his body,
And mourn you for him. Let him be regarded
As the most Noble Coarse, that ever Herald
Did follow to his Urn.

2 Lord. His own impatience,
Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame:
Let's make the Best of it.

Auf. My Rage is gone,
And I am struck with sorrow. Take him up:
Help three a'th'chiefest Souldiers; Ile be one.
Beat thou the Drum that it speak mournfully:
Trail your steel Pikes. Though in this City he Hath widdowed and unchilded many a one,
Which to this hour bewail the Injury,
Yet he shall have a Noble memory. Affist.

Exeunt bearing the Body of Martius. A dead March Sounded.

FINIS,

The Lamentable Tragedy of Titus Andronicus.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter the Tribunes and Senators aloft. And then enter Saturninus and his Followers at one dore, and Bassianus and his Followers at the other, with Drum & Colours.

Saturninus.

Noble Patricians, Patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my Cause with Arms.
And Country-men, my loving Followers,
Plead my Successive Title with your Swords.

I was the first-born Son, that was the last
That wore the Imperial Diadem of Rome:
Then let my Fathers Honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignitie.

Bassian. Romans, Friends, Followers,
Favourers of my Right :
If ever Bassianus, Cæsars Son,
Were gracious in the eyes of Royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol;
And suffer not Dishonour to approach
Th' Imperial Seat to Virtue : consecrate
To Justice, Continence, and Nobility :
But let Desert in pure election shine ;
And Romanes, fight for Freedom in your Choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus aloft with the Crown.

Princes, that strive by Factions, and my Friends,
Ambitiously for Rule and Emperie :
Know, that the people of Rome for whom we stand
A special Party, have by Common voice
In Election for the Romane Emperie,
Chosen Andronicus, Sur-nam'd Pius,
For many good and great deserts to Rome.
A Nobler man, a braver Warriour,
Lives not this day within the City Walls.
He by the Senate is accited home
From weary Warrs against the barbarous Gothes,
That with his Sons (a terror to our Foes)
Hath yok'd a Nation strong, train'd up in Arms.
Ten years are spent, since first he undertook
This Cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
Our Enemies pride. Five times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant Sons
In Coffins from the Field.
And now at last, laden with Honors Spoils,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in Arms.

Let us intreat, by Honour of his Name
Whom (worthily) you would have now succed,
And in the Capitol and Senates right,
Whom you pretend to honor and adore,
That you withdraw you, and abate your Strength,
Dismiss your Followers, and as Suters should,
Plead your Deserts in Peace and Humbleness.

Saturnin. How fair the Tribune speaks,
To calm my thoughts.

Bassia. Marcus Andronicus, so I do asse
In thy uprightness and Integrity :
And so I Love and honor thee, and thine,
Thy Noble Brother Titus, and his Sons,
And her (to whom my thoughts are humbled all)
Gracious Lavinia, Romes rich Ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving Friends :
And to my Fortunes, and the Peoples Favour,
Commit my Cause in ballance to be weigh'd.

Ex. Souldiers.

Saturnin. Friends that have been
Thus forward in my Right,
I thank you all, and here dismiss you all,
And to the Love and Favour of my Countrey ,
Commit my Self, my Person, and the Cause :
Rome, be as just and gracious unto me,
As I am confident and kind to thee.
Open the Gates, and let me in.

Bassia. Tribunes, and me, a poor Competitor.

They go up into the Senate-house.

Enter a Captain.

Cap. Romans make way : the good Andronicus,
Patron of Virtue, Romes best Champion,
Successful in the Battels that he fights,
With Honour and with Fortune is return'd,
From whence he circumscribed with his Sword,
And brought to yoke the Enemies of Rome.

Sound Drums and Trumpets. And then Enter two of Titus Sons ; After them, two men bearing a Coffin covered with black, then two other Sons. After them, Titus Andronicus, and then Tamora the Queen of Gothes, and her two Sons, Chiron and Demetrius, with Aaron the Moor, and others, as many as can be : They set down the Coffin, and Titus Speaks.

Andronicus. Hail Rome :
Victorious in thy mourning Weeds :

Loe as the Bark that hath discharg'd his freight,
Returns with precious lading to the Bay,
From whence at first she weigh'd her Anchorage:
Commeth Andronicus bound with Lawrel bowes,
To resalute his Country with his tears,
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome,
Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the Rites that we intend.
Romans, of five and twenty Valiant Sons,
Half of the number that King Priam had,
Behold the poor remains alive and dead!
These that Survive, let Rome reward with Love:
These that I bring unto their latest home,
VVith burial amongst their Ancestors.
Here Gothes have given me leave to sheath my Sword:
Titus unkind, and careless of thine own,
VVhy suffer'st thou thy Sons unburied yet,
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?
Make way to lay them by their Brethren.

They open the Tomb.

There greet in silence as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, slain in your Countries wars:
O sacred receptacle of my joyes,
Sweet Cell of virtue and Nobility,
How many Sons of mine hast thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more?

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Gothes,
That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile
Ad manes fratrum, sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthly prison of their bones,
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you, the Noblest that survives,
The eldest Son of this distressed Queen.

Tam. Stay Roman brethren, gracious Conqueror,
Victorious Titus, true the tears I shed,
A Mothers tears in passion for her son:
And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
Oh think my sons to be as dear to me.
Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome,
To beautifie thy Triumphs, and return
Captive to thee, and to thy Roman yoke;
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,
For Valiant doings in their Countries cause?
O! If to fight for King and Common-weal,
VVere piety in thine, it is in these:

Andronicus, stain not thy Tomb with blood.
VVilt thou draw near the nature of the Gods?
Draw near them then in being merciful,
Sweet mercy is Nobilities true badge,
Thrice Noble Titus, spare my first born-son.

Tit. Patient your self Madam, and pardon me.
These are the Brethren, whom you Gothes behold
Alive and dead, and for their Brethren slain,
Religiously they ask a sacrifice:
To this your son is markt, and die he must,
To appease their groaning shadows that are gone.

Luc. Away with him, and make a fire straight.
And with our Swords upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd.

Exit Sons with Alarbus.

Tam. O cruel irreligious piety.

Chi. VVas ever Scythia half so barbarous?

Dem. Oppose me Scythia to ambitious Rome,

Alarbus go to rest, and we survive,
To tremble under Titus threatening looks,
Then Madam stand resolv'd, but hope withall,
The self same Gods that arm'd the Queen of Troy
VVith opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian Tyrant in his Tent,
May favour Tamora the Queen of Gothes,
(VVhen Gorhes were Gothes, and Tamora was Queen)
To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Enter the Sons of Andronicus again.

Luc. See Lord and Father, how we have perform'd
Our Roman rites, Alarbus limbs are lop't,
And intrals feed the sacrificizing fire,
VVhose smoke like incense doth perfume the skie.
Remaineth nought but to inerr our Brethren,
And with loud Larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

Then Sound Trumpets, and lay the Coffins in the Tomb.
In peace and honour rest you here my Sons,
Romes readiest Champions, repose you here in rest,
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps:
Here lurks no Treason, here no envie swells,
Here grow no damned grudges, here no storms,
No noise, but silence and Eternal sleep:
In peace and Honour rest you here my sons.

Enter Lavinia.

Lav. In peace and honour, live Lord Titus long.
My Noble Lord and Father, live in Fame:
Loe at this Tomb my tributary tears,
I render for my Brethrens Obsequies:
And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy
Shed on the earth for thy return to Rome.
O bless me here with thy victorious hand,
VVhose Fortune Romes best Citizens applau'd.

Tit. Kind Rome,
That hast thus lovingly reserv'd
The Cordial of mine age to glad my hearr,
Lavinia live, out-live thy Fathers days:
And Fames eternal date for virtues praise.

Mar. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious Triumpher in the eyes of Rome.

Tit. Thanks gentle Tribune,
Noble brother Marcus.

Mar. And welcome. Nephews from successful wars,
You that survive, and you that sleep in Fame:
Fair Lords your Fortunes are all alike in all,
That in your Countries service drew your Swords.
But safer Triumph is this Funeral Pomp,
That hath aspir'd to Solons happiness,
And Triumphs over chance in honors bed.
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,
Send thee by me their Tribune, and their trust,
This Palliament of white and spotless Hue,
And name thee in Election for the Empire
With these our late deceased Emperors Sons:
Be Candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her Glorious body fits,
Then his that shakes for age and feebleness:

Ggg

What

What should I d'on this Robe and trouble you?
Be chosen with proclamations to day,
To morrow yeeld up rule; resigne my life,
And set abroach new business for you all.
Rome I have bene thy Souldier forty years,
And led my Countries strength successfully,
And buried one and twenty Valiant Sonns,
Knighted in Field, slain manfully in Arms,
In right and Service of their Noble Country:
Give me a staff of Honour for mine age,
But not a Scepter to controul the world,
Vpright he held it Lords, that held it last.

Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the Empiry.

Sat. Proud and ambitious Tribune can'st thou tell?

Titus. Patience Prince Saturninus.

Sat. Romans do me right.

Patricians draw your Swords, and sheath them not Till Saturninus be Romes Emperour:

Andronicus would thou werest shipt to hell,
Rather than rob me of the peoples hearts.

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good
That Noble-minded Titus means to thee.

Tit. Content thee Prince, I will restore to thee
The peoples hearts, and wean them from themselves.

Bass. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But Honour thee, and will doe till I die:
My Faction if thou strengthen with thy Friends
I will most thankful be, and thanks to men
Of Noble mindes, is Honourable Meed.

Tit. People of Rome, and Noble Tribunes here,
I ask your voices and your Suffrages,
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?

Tribu. To gratifie the good Andronicus,
And Gratulate his safe return to Rome
The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes I thank you, and this sure I make,
That you Create your Emperours eldest sonne,
Lord Saturnine, whose Virtues will, I hope,
Reflect on Rome as Tytans Rays on earth,
And ripen Iustice in this Common-weal:
Then if you will elect by my advise,

Crown him, and say, Long live our Emperour.

Mar. An. With Voices and applause of every sort,
Patricians and Plebeians, we Create
Lord Saturninus Romes Great Emperour.

And say, Long live our Emperour Saturnine.

A long Flourish till they come down.

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy Favours done,
To us in our Election this day,
I give thee thanks in part of thy Deserts,
And will with Deeds requite thy gentleness:
And for an Onset Titus to advance
Thy Name, and Honourable Family,
Lavinia will I make my Empress,
Romes Royal Mistris, Mistris of my heart,
And in the Sacred Pantheon her espouse:

Tell me Andronicus doth this motion please thee?

Tit. It doth my worthy Lord, and in this match,
I hold me Highly Honoured of your Grace,
And here in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,
King and Commander of our Common-weal,
The wide-worlds Emperour, do I Consecrate,
My Sword, my Chariot, and my Prisoners,
Presents well Worthy Romes Imperial Lord:
Receive them then, the Tribute that I owe,
Mine Honours Ensignes humbled at my feet.

Sat. Thanks Noble Titus, Father of my life,
How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts,
Rome shall record, and when I do forget
The least of thes unspeakable Deserts,
Romans forget your Fealty to me.

Tit. Now Madam, are you prisoner to an Emperour,
To him that for your Honour and your State,
Will use you Nobly and your Followers.

Sat. A goodly Lady, trust me of the Hue
That I would choos, were I to choos a new:
Cleer up Fair Queen that cloudy countenance,
Though chance of warr hath wrought this change of Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome: (cheer,
Princely shall be thy usage every way.

Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: Madam he comforts you,
Can make you Greater than the Queen of Gothes?
Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this?

Lav. Not I my Lord, fith true Nobility,
Warrants these words in Princely curreisie.

Sat. Thanks sweet Lavinia, Romans let us goe:

Ransomless here we set our Prisoners free,
Proclaim our Honours Lords with Trumpet and Drum,
Bass. Lord Titus by your leave this Maid is mine.

Tit. How fir? Are you in earnest then my Lord?

Bass. I Noble Titus, and resolv'd withall,
To doe my self this reason, and this right.

Marc. Suum cuique, is our Romane Iustice:
This Prince in Iustice ceazeth but his own.

Luc. And that he will and shall if Lucius live.

Tit. Traytors avant, where is the Emperours Guard?
Treason my Lord, Lavinia is surpris'd.

Sat. Surpris'd, by whom?

Bass. By him that justly may
Bear his Betroth'd, from all the world away.

Mut. Brothers help to convey her hence away,
And with my Sword Ile keep this door safe.

Tit. Follow my Lord, and Ile soon bring her back.

Mut. My Lord you pass not here.

Tit. What villain Boy, barr'st me my way in Rome?

Mut. Help, Lucius help. He kills him.

Luc. My Lord you are unjust, and more than so,
In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sonns of mine.
My sonns would never so dishonour me.

Traitor restore Lavinia to the Emperour.

Luc. Dead if you will, but not to be his wife,
That is anothers lawful promist Love.

Enter aloft the Emperour with Tamora and her two sonns and Aaron the Moor.

Emp. No Titus, no, the Emperour needs her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock:
Ile trust by Leisure him that mocks me once,
Thee never: nor thy Traiterous haughty sonns,
Confederates all, thus to dishonour me.

Was there none els in Rome to make a stale of
But Saturnine? Full well Andronicus
Agree these Deeds, with that proud bragg of thine,
That said'st, I beg'd the Empire at thy hands.

Tit. O monstrous, what reproachfull words are these?

Sat. But goe thy ways, goe give that changing peece,
To him that flourisheth for her with his Sword:

A Valiant sonn in-law thou shalt enjoy:

One, fit to bandy with thy lawless Sonns,

To ruffle in the Common-wealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are Razors to my wounded heart.

Sat. And therefore lovely Tamora Queen of Gothes,
That like the stately Phoebe mong'rt her Nymphs,
Dost over-shine the Gallant't Dames of Rome,
If thou be pleas'd with this my sodain choice,
Behold I choose thee Tamora for my Bride,
And will Create thee Emperers of Rome.
Speak Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?
And here I swear by all the Roman Gods,
Sith Priest and Holy-water are so neer,
And Tapers burn so bright, and every thing
In readines for Hymeneus stand,
I will not refuse the streets of Rome,
Or climb my Palace, till from forth this place,
I lead espous'd my Bride along with me.

Tamo. And here in sight of heaven to Rome I swear,
If Saturnine advance the Queen of Gothes,
She will a Hand-maid be to his desires.
A loving Nurse, a Mother to his youth.

Sat. Ascend Fair Queen,
Pantheon Lords, accompany
Your Noble Emperour and his lovely Bride,
Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine,
Whose wisdom hath her Fortune Conquered,
There shall we Consummate our Spousal rites.

Exeunt omnes.

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this Bride.
Titus when wer't thou wont to walk alone,
Dishonoured thus and Challenged of wrongs?

Enter Marcus and Titus Sons.

Mar. O Titus see! O see what thou hast done!
In a bad quarrel, slain a Vertuous Son.

Tit. No foolish Tribune, no: No Son of mine,
Nor thou, nor these Confederates in the deed,
That hath dishonoured all our Family,
Unworthy Brother, and unworthy Sons.

Luc. But let us give him burial as becomes.
Give Mutius burial with our Bretheren.

Tit. Traitors away, he rests not in this Tombe:
This Monument five hundred years hath stood,
Which I have sumptuously re-edified:
Here none but Souldiers, and Romes Servitors,
Repose in Fame: None basely slain in brawls.
Bury him where you can, he comes not here.

Mar. My Lord this is impiety in you,
My Nephew Mutius deeds do plead for him,
He must be buried with his bretheren.

Titus two sons speak.

And shall, or him we will accompany.

Ti. And shall! What villain was it spake that word?

Titus son speaks.

He that would vouch'd it in any place but here.

Tit. What would you bury him in my despight?

Mar. No Noble Titus, but intreat of thee,
To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my Crest,
And with these Boys mine Honour thou hast wounded,
My foes I doe repute you every one.
So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

1. Son. He is not himself, let us withdraw.

2. Son. Not I till Mutius bones be buried.

The Brother and the sons kneel.

Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead.

2. Son. Father, and in that name doth nature speak.

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Mar. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,

Luc. Dear Father, soul and substance of us all.

Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to interr
His Noble Nephew here in virtues nest,
That died in Honour and Lavinias cause.

Thou art a Romain, be not barbarous:
The Greeks upon advise did bury Ajax
That slew himself: And Laertes son
Did graciously plead for his Funerals:
Let not young Mutius then that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise Marcus, rise,
The dismall't day is this that ere I saw,
To be dishonored by my Sons in Rome:
Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

They put him in the Tomb.

Luc. There lie thy bones sweet Mutius with thy Till we with Trophees do adorn thy Tomb. (friends,

They all kneel and say.

No man shed tears for Noble Mutius.

He lives in Fame that di'd in virtues cause. Exit.

Mar. My Lord, to step out of these sudden dumps,
How comes it that the subtle Queen of Gothes,
Is of a sodain thus advanc'd in Rome?

Ti. I know not Marcus: but I know it is,
(Whether by devise or no) the heavens can tell,
Is the not then beholding to the man,
That brought her for this high good turn so farr?
Yes, and will Nobly him remunerate.

Flourish.

*Enter the Emperor, Tamora, and her two sons, with the Moor at one door. Enter at the other door Bassianus and

Sat. So Bassianus, you have plaid your prize,
God give you joy Sir of your Gallant Bride.

Bas. And you of yours my Lord: I say no more,
Nor wish no less, and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, If Rome have law, or we have power,
Thou and thy Faction shall repent this Rape.

Bas. Rape call you it my Lord, to seize my own,
My true betrothed Love, and now my wife?
But let the lawes of Rome determine all,
Mean while I am posselt of that is mine.

Sat. Tis good sir: you are very short with us,
But if we live, we'll be as sharp with you.

Bas. My Lord, what I have done, as I may,
Answer I must, and shall do with my life,
Onely thus much I give your grace to know,
By all the duties that I ow to Rome,

This Noble Gentleman Lord Titus here,
Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd,
That in the rescue of Lavinia,
With his own hand did slay his youngest Son,
In zeal to you, and highly mov'd to wrath,
To be controll'd in that he frankly gave:
Receive him then to favour Saturnine,
That hath exprest himself in all his deeds,
A Father and a friend to thee, and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus leave to plead my Deeds,
Tis thou, and those; that have dishonoured me,
Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,
How I have lov'd and Honour'd Saturnine.

Tam. My worthy Lord, if ever Tamora,

G g 2

Were

Were gracious in those Princely eyes of thine,
Then hear me speak indifferently for all :
And at my sute (sweet) pardon what is past.

Sat. What Madam, be dishonoured openly,
And basely put it up without revenge ?

Tam. Not so my Lord,
The Gods of Rome fore-fend,
I should be Author to dishonour you,
But on mine honour dare I undertake
For good Lord Titus innocence in all :
Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs :
Then at my sute look graciously on him,
Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,
Nor with sower looks afflict his gentle heart.
My Lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last,
Dissemble all your griefs and discontents,
You are but newly planted in your Throne,
Lest then the people, and Patricians too,
Upon a just survey take Titus part,
And so supplant us for ingratitude,
Which Rome reputes to be a heynous sin.
Yield at intreats, and then let me alone :
He find a day to massacre them all,
And raze their faction, and their family.
The cruel Father, and his trayt'rous sons,
To whom I sued for my dear sons life;
And make them know what 'tis to let a Queen
Kneel in the streets, and beg for grace in vain.
Come, come, sweet Emperour (come Andronicus)
Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart,
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise Titus, rise,
My Empress hath prevail'd.

Tit. I thank your Majesty,
And her my Lord.
These words, these looks,
Infuse new life in me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily :
And must advise the Emperour for his good,
This day all quarrels die Andronicus,
And let it be my honour good my Lord,
That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.
For you Prince Bassianus, I have past
My word and promise to the Emperour,
That you will be more mild and tractable.
And fear not Lords :

And you Lavinia,
By my advise all humbled on your knees,
You shall ask pardon of his Majesty.

Sen. We do,
And vow to heaven, and to his Highness,
That what we did, was mildly, as we might,
Tending our sisters honour and our own.

Mar. That on mine honour here I do protest.

Sat. Away and talk not, trouble us no more.

Tam. Nay, nay,
Sweet Emperour, we must all be friends,
The Tribune and his Nephews kneel for grace,
I will not be denied, sweet heart look back.

Sat. Marcus,
For thy sake and thy brothers here,
And at my lovely Tamora's intreats,
I do remit these young mens heynous faults.
Stand up Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend, and sure as death I swear,

I would not part a Batchelor from the Priest.
Come, if the Emperours Court can feast two Brides,
You are my guest Lavinia, and your friends :
This day shall be a Love-day Tamora.

Tit. To morrow and it please your Majesty,
To hunt the Panther and the Hart with me,
With Horn and Hound,
Wee'll give your Grace Bon jour,

Sat. Be it so Titus, and Gramercy too.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Aron alone.

Aron. Now climberth Tamora Olympus top,
Safe out of Fortunes shot, and sits aloft,
Secure of Thunders crack or lightning flash,
Advanc'd above pale envies threatning reach :
As when the golden Sun salutes the morn,
And having gilt the Ocean with his beams,
Gallops the Zodiack in his glistening Coach,
And over-looks the highest piring hills :

So Tamora.

Upon her wit doth early honour wait,
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then Aron arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts,
To mount aloft with thy Imperial Mistress,
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long
Hast prisoner held, fettered in amorous chains,
And faster bound to Arons charming eyes,
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.
Away with slavish weeds, and idle thoughts,
I will be bright, and shine in Pearl and Gold,
To wait upon this new made Emperess,
To wait said I ? To wanton with this Queen,
This Goddess, this Semiramis, this Queen,
This Syren, that will charm Romes Saturnine,
And see his shipwrack, and his Common weals.
Holla, what storm is this ?

Enter Chiron and Demetrius braving.

Dem. Chiron thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge
And manners to intrude where I am grac'd,
And may for ought thou knowst affected be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou do'st over-ween in all,
And so in this, to bear me down with braves,
'Tis not the difference of a year or two
Makes me less gracious, or thee more fortunate :
I am as able, and as fit as thou,
To serve, and to deserve my Mistress grace,
And that my sword upon thee shall approve,
And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Ar. Clubs, clubs, these lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why Boy, although our mother (unadvised)
Gave you a dancing Rapier by your side,
Are you so desperate grown to threat your friends ?
Go to : have your Lath glued within your sheath,
Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Mean while Sir, with the little skill I have,
Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. I Boy, grow ye so brave ?

They draw.

Ar. Why now Lords ?

So near the Emperours Palace dare you draw ?

And

And maintain such a quarrel openly?
Full well I wot, the ground of all this grudge.
I would not for a million of Gold,
The cause were known to them it most concerns.
Nor would your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonoured in the Court of Rome.
For shame put up.

Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosom, and withall
Thrust these reproachful speeches down his throat,
That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd, and full resolv'd,
Foul spoken Coward,
That chundrest with thy tongue,
And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.

Ar. Away I say.
Now by the Gods that warlike Goths adore,
This pretty brable will undo us all:
Why Lords, and think you not how dangerous
It is to set upon a Princes right?
What is Lavinia then become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate,
That for her love such quarrels may be broacht,
Without controulment, Justice or revenge?
Young Lords beware, and should the Empress know
This discord ground, the musick would not please.

Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world,
I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling,
Learn thou to make some better choice,
Lavinia is thine elder brothers hope.

Ar. Why are ye mad? Or know ye not in Rome
How furious and imparient they be,
And cannot brook Competitors in love?
I tell you Lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this devise.

Chi. Aron, a thousand deaths would I propose,
To atchieve her whom I do love.

Ar. To archieve her, how?

Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange?
She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd,
She is a woman, therefore may be won,
She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.
What inan, more water glideth by the Mill
Than wors the Miller of, and easie it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a slave we know:
Though Bassianus be the Emperours Brother,
Better than he have yet worn Vulcanus badge.

Ar. I, and as good as Saturninus may.

Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to
With words, fair looks, and liberality? (court it
What hast thou not full often struck a Doe,
And born her cleanly by the Keepers nose?

Ar. Why then it seems some certain snatch or so
Would serve your turns.

Chi. I so the turn were served.

Dem. Aron thou hast hit it.

Ar. Would you had hit it too,
Then should not we be tir'd with this ado:
Why hark yee, hark yee, and are you such fools,
To square for this? Would it offend you then?

Chi. Faith not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I were one.

Ar. For shame be friends, and joyn for that you jar:
'Tis policy and stratagem must do
That you affect, and so must you resolve,

That what you cannot as you would atchieve,
You must perforce accomplish as you may:
Take this of me, Lucrece was not more chaste
Than this Lavinia, Bassianus love,
A speedier course this lingring languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path:
My Lords, a solemn hunting is in hand,
There will the lovely Roman Ladies troop:
The Forest walks are wilde and spacious,
And many unfrequented plots there are,
Fitted by kind for rape and villany:
Single you thither then this dainty Doe,
And strike her home by force, if not by words:
This way or not at all, stand you in hope.
Come, come, our Empress with her sacred wit
To villany and vengeance consecrate,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend,
And she shall file our engines with advise,
That will not suffer you to square your selves,
But to your wishes height advance you both.
The Emperours Court is like the house of Fame,
The Palace full of tongues, of eyes, of ears:
The Woods are ruthlesse, dreadful, deaf, and dull:
There speak, and strike brave Boyes, and take your turns.
There serve your lusts, shadow'd from heavens eye,
And revel in Lavinia's Treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel Lad smells of no cowardise.

Dem. Si fas aut nefas, till I find the streams
To cool this heat, a Charm to calm their fits,
Per Stygia per manes Vehor.

Exeunt.

Enter Titus Andronicus and his three sons, making a noise with hounds and horns, and Marcus.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and gray,
The fields are fragrant, and the Woods are green,
Uncouple here, and let us make a bay,
And wake the Emperour and his lovely Bride,
And rouse the Prince, and ring a hunters peal,
That all the Court may eccho with the noise.
Sons let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the Emperours person carefully:
I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

Wind Horns.

*Here a cry of hounds, and wind horns in a peal, then Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Bassianus, Lavinia, Chiron,
Demetrius, and their Attendants.*

Tit. Many good morrows to your Majesty,
Madam to you as many and as good.
I promised your Grace a hunters peal.

Sat. And you have rung it lustily my Lords,
Somewhat too early for new married Ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you?

Lav. I say no:

I have been awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on then, horse and Chariots let us have,
And to our sport: Madam, now shall ye see
Our Roman hunting.

Mar. I have dogs my Lord,
Will rouse the proudest Panther in the Chase,
And climb the highest Promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game
Makes away, and run like Swallows o're the plain.

Ggg 3

Dem. Chiron.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with Horse nor Hound,
But hope to pluck a dainty Doe to ground. Exeunt.

Enter Aron alone.

Ar. He that had wit, would think that I had none,
To bury so much Gold under a Tree,
And never after to inherit it.
Let him that thinks of me so abjectly,
Know that this Gold must coin a stratagem,
Which cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villany :
And so repose sweet Gold for their unrest,
That have their Alms out of the Empress Chest.

Enter Tamora to the Moor.

Tam. My lovely Aron,
Wherefore look'st thou sad,
When every thing doth make a Glee-ful boast ?
The Birds chaunt melody on every bush,
The Snake lies rolled in the chearful Sun,
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
And make a checquer'd shadow on the ground :
Under their sweet shade, Aron let us sit,
And whil'st the babling Eccho mocks the Hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd Horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let us sit down, and mark their yelping noise :
And after conflict, such as was suppos'd
The wandering Prince and Dido once enjoy'd,
When with a happy storm they were surpriz'd,
And Curtain'd with a counsel-keeping Cave,
We may each wreathed in the others arms,
(Our pastimes done) possess a Golden slumber,
Whiles Hounds and Horns, and sweet Melodious Birds
Be unto us, as is a Nurses Song
Of Lullaby, to bring her Babe asleep.

Ar. Madam,
Though Venus govern your desires,
Saturn is Dominator over mine :
What signifies my deadly standing eye,
My silence, and my Cloudy Melancholy,
My fleece of Woolly hair, that now uncurls,
Even as an Adder when she doth unrowl
To do some fatal execution ?
No Madam, these are no Venereal signs,
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are Hammering in my head,
Hark Tamora, the Empress of my Soul,
Which never hopes more heaven, than rests in thee,
This is the day of Doom for Bassianus ;
His Philome! must lose her tongue to day,
Thy Sons make Pillage of her Chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus blood.
See'st thou this Letter, take it up I pray thee,
And give the King this fatal plotted Scrowl ;
Now question me no more, we are espied,
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful Booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives destruction

Enter Bassianus and Lavinia.

Tam. Ah my sweet Moor,
Sweeter to me than life.

Ar. No more great Empress, Bassianus comes,
Be cross with him, and I'll go fetch thy Sons
To back thy quarrels whatsoe're they be.

Bas. Whom have we here ?
Romes Royal Empress,

Unfurnish'd of our well-beseeming troop ?
Or is it Dian habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy Groves,
To see the general Hunting in this Forest ?

Tam. Sawcy controller of our private steps :
Had I the power that some say Dian had,
Thy Temples should be planted presently
With Horns, as was Actæons, and the Hounds
Should drive upon his new transformed limbs,
Unmannerly Intruder as thou art.

Lav. Under your patience gentle Empress,
'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in Hornings,
And to be doubted, that your Moor and you
Are singled forth to try experiments :
Jove shield your Husband from his Hounds to day,
'Tis pity they should take him for a Stag.

Bas. Believe me Queen, your swarth Cymmerian
Doth make your Honour of his bodies Hue,
Spotted, defected, and abominable.
Why are you sequestred from all your train ?
Dismounted from your Snow-white goodly Steed,
And wandred hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied with a barbarous Moor,
If foul desire had not conducted you ?

Lav. And being intercepted in your sport,
Great reason that my Noble Lord be rated
For Sauciness; I pray you let us hence,
And let her joy her Raven-coloured love,
This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Bas. The King my brother shall have notice of this.

Lav. I, for these slips have made him noted long,
Good King, to be so mightily abused.

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this ?

Enter Chiron and Demetrius.

Dem. How now dear Sovereign
And our gracious Mother,
Why doth your Higness look so pale and wan ?

Tam. Have I not reason think you to look pale ?
These two have tic'd me hither to this place,
A barren, detested vale you see it is.
The Trees (though Summer) yet forlorn and lean,
Ore-come with Moss, and baleful Mistletoe.
Here never shines the Sun, here nothing breeds,
Unless the nightly Owl, or fatal Raven.
And when they shew'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me, here at dead time of the night,
A thousand Fiends, a thousand hissing Snakes,
Ten thousand swelling Toads, as many Urchins,
Would make such fearful and confused cries,
As any mortal body hearing it,
Should strait fall mad, or else die suddenly.
No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
But strait they told me they would bind me here,
Unto the body of a dismal yew,
And leave me to this miserable death.
And then they call'd me foul Adulterers,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms
That ever ears did hear to such effect.
And had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had they executed :
Revenge it, as you love your Mothers life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my Children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy Son. Stab him.

Chi. And this for me,
Strook home to shew my strength.

Lav. I come Semiramis, nay Barbarous Tamora,

For no name fits thy nature but thy own.

Tam. Give me thy poygnard: you shall know my boys
Your Mothers hand shall right your Mothers wrong.

Dem. Stay Madam, here is more belongs to her,
First thrash the Corn, then after burn the straw :
This Minion stood upon her chastity,
Upon her Nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted hope she braves your Mightiness,
And shall she carry this unto her grave ?

Chi. And if she do,
I would I were an Eunuch.

Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead Trunk-Pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when ye have the hony ye desire,
Let not this Whasp our-live us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you Madam we will make that sure :
Come Mistress, now perforce we will enjoy,
That nice-preserved honesty of yours.

Lav. O Tamora thou bear'st a womans face.

Tam. I will not hear her speak, away with her.

Lav. Sweet Lords intreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen fair Madam, let it be your glory
To see her tears, but be your heart to them,
As unrelenting flints to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the Tygers young-ones teach the dam?
O do not learn her wrath, she taught it thee,
The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to Marble,
Even at thy Teat thou had'st thy Tyranny,
Yet every Mother breeds not Sons alike,
Do thou intreat her shew a woman pitty.

Chi. What,
VWould'st thou have me prove myself a bastard ?

Lav. 'Tis true,
The Raven doth not hatch a Lark,
Yet have I heard, O could I find it now,
The Lyon mov'd with pitty, did indure
To have his Princely paws par'd all away.
Some say, that Ravens foster forlorn children,
The whil'st their own birds famish in their nests :
Oh be to me though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind but something pittiful.

Tam. I know not what it means, away with her.

Lav. Oh let me teach thee for my Fathers sake.
That gave thee life when well he might have slain thee:
Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears.

Tam. Had'st thou in person been offended me,
Even for his sake am I now pittiless :
Remember Boys I powr'd forth tears in vain,
To save your brother from the sacrifice,
But fierce Andronicus would not relent,
Therefore away with her, and use her as you will,
The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.

Lav. Oh Tamora,
Be call'd a gentle Queen,
And with thine own hands kill me in this place,
For 'tis not life that I have begg'd so long,
Poor I was slain, when Bassianus dy'd.

Tam. What begg'st thou then? fond woman, let me go.

Lav. 'Tis present death I beg, and one thing more,
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell :
Oh keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit,
VWhere never mans eye may behold my body:
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet Sons of their fec,
No, let them satisfy their lust on thee.

Dem. Away.

For thou hast staid us here too long.

Lav. No grace ?

No woman-hood ? Ah beastly creature,
The blot and enemy to our general name,
Confusion all ———

Chi. Nay then Ile stop your mouth,
Bring thou her husband,
This is the Hole where Aron bid us hide him. Exeunt.

Tam. Farewel my Sons, see that you make her sure,
Nere let my heart know merry cheer indeed,
Till all the Andronici be made away :
Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful Sons this Trul destour. Exit.

Enter Aron with two of Titus Sons.

Aron. Come on my Lords, the better foot before,
Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit,
VWhere I espied the Panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull what ere it bodes.

Mar. And mine I promise you, were it not for shame,
VVell could I leave our sport to sleep a while.

Quin. VWhat art thou fallen ?

VWhat subtle Hole is this,
VVhose mouth is covered with Rude growing Briers,
Upon whose leavs are drops of new-shed-blood,
As fresh as mornings dew distill'd on flowers ?
A very fatal place it seems to me :
Speak Brother hast thou hurt thee with the fall ?

Mar. Oh Brother,
VVith the dismall'st object
That ever eye with sight made heart lament.

Ar. Now will I fetch the King to find them here,
That he thereby may have a likely guess,
How these were they that made away his brother.

Exit Aron.

Mar. VWhy dost not comfort me and help me out,
From this unhallow'd and blood-stained Hole ?

Quin. I am surprized with an uncouch fear,
A chilling sweat ore-runs my trembling joynts,
My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.

Mar. To prove thou hast a true divining heart,
Aron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

Quin. Aron is gone,
And my compassionate heart
VVill not permit mine eyes, once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise :
Oh tell me how it is, for nere till now
VVas I a child, to fear I know not what.

Mar. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap like to the slaughtred Lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be dark, how do'st thou know 'tis he ?

Mar. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious Ring, that lightens all the Hole :
VVhich like a Taper in some Monument,
Doth shine upon the dead mans earthly cheeks,
And shews the ragged intrails of the pit :
So pale did shine the Moon on Piramus,
VVhen he by night lay bath'd in Maiden blood :
O Brother help me with thy fainting hand,
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,
As hateful as Cocitus mistie mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out,

Or

Or wanting strength to do thee so much good,
I may be pluckt into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus grave:
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Mar. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.

Quin. Thy hand once more, I will not loose again,
Till thou art here aloft, or I below:

Thou canst not come to me, I come to thee. Both fall in.

Enter the Emperour, Aron the Moor.

Sat. Along with me, I'll see what hole is here,
And what he is that now is leapt into it.
Say, who art thou that lately didst descend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Mar. The unhappy son of old Andronicus,
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.

Sat. My brother dead? I know thou dost but jest,
He and his Lady both are at the Lodg,
Upon the North-side of this pleasant Chase,
'Tis not an hour since I left him there.

Mar. We know not where you left him all alive,
But out alas, here have we found him dead.

Enter Tamora, Andronicus, and Lucius.

Tam. Where is my Lord the King?

Sat. Here Tamora, though griev'd with killing grief.

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound,
Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ,
The complot of this timeless Tragedy,
And wonder greatly that mans face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous Tyranny.

She giveth Saturnine a Letter.

Saturninus reads the Letter.

*And if we miss to meet him handsomly,
Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis we mean,
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him,
Thou know'st our meaning, look for thy reward
Among the Nettles at the Elder tree:
Which over-shades the mouth of that same pit,
Where we decreed to bury Bassianus;
Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.*

Sat. Oh Tamora, was ever heard the like?
This is the pit, and this the Elder tree,
Look first, if you can find the huntsman out,
That should have murdered Bassianus here.

Ar. My gracious Lord, here is the bag of Gold.

Sat. Two of thy whelps, fell Curs of bloody kind
Have here bereft my brother of his life:
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison,
There let them bide until we have devis'd
Some never heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What are they in this pit?
Oh wondrous thing!
How easily murder is discovered?

Tit. High Emperour, upon my feeble knee,
I beg this boon, with tears, not lightly shed,
That this fell fault of my accursed Sons,
Accursed, if the faults be prov'd in them—

Sat. If it be prov'd? you see it is apparent,

Who found this Letter, Tamora was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did my Lord,
Yet let me be their bail.

For by my Fathers reverent Tomb I vow
They shall be ready at your Higness will,
To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them, see thou follow me:
Some bring the murdered body, some the murderers,
Let them not speak a word, the guilt is plain,
For by my soul, were there worse end than death,
That end upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus I will intreat the King,
Fear not thy Sons, they shall do well enough.

Tit. Come Lucius, come,
Stay not to talk with them.

Exeunt.

*Enter the Emperors Sons, with Lavinia, her hands cut off,
and her tongue cut out, and ravishd.*

Dem. So now go tell, and if thy tongue can speak,
Who 'twas that cut thy tongue and ravishd thee.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so,
And if thy stumps will let thee play the Scribe.

Dem. See how with signs and tokens she can scowl.

Chi. Go home,
Call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash.
And so let's leave her to her silent walks.

Chi. And 'twere my cause, I should go hang my self.

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord.

Exeunt.

Wind Horns.

Enter Marcus from hunting to Lavinia.

Who is this, my Niece, that flies away so fast?
Cosen, a word, where is your husband?

If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me,
If I do wake, some Planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep.

Speak gentle Niece, what stern ungente hands
Hath lop'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare
Of her two branches, those sweet Ornaments,
Whose circling shadows, Kings have sought to sleep in,
And might not gain so great a happiness
As half thy love? Why dost not speak to me?

Alas, a Crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubling fountain stir'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy Rosed lips,
Comming and going with thy hony breath.
But sure some Tereus hath deflowered thee,
And lest thou shouldst detect them, cut thy tongue;

Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame!
And notwithstanding all this loss of blood,
As from a Conduit with their issuing Spouts,
Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titans face,
Blushing to be encountred with a Cloud,
Shall I speak for thee? Shall I say 'tis so?

Oh that I knew thy heart, and knew the beast,
That I might rail at him to ease my mind.
Sorrow concealed, like an Oven stop'd,
Doth burn the heart to Cinders where it is.

Fair Philomela she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious Sampler sowed her mind.
But lovely Niece, that mean is cut from thee,
A craftier Tereus hast thou met withall,
And he hath cut those pretty fingers off

That

That could have better sewed than Philomel.
 Oh had the monster seen those Lilly hands
 Tremble like Aspen leaves upon a Lute,
 And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,
 He would not then have toucht them for his life.
 Or had he heard the heavenly Harmony
 Which that sweet tongue hath made ;
 He would have dropt his knife and fell asleep,
 As Cerberus at the Thracian Poets feet.
 Come, let us go, and make thy father blind,
 For such a sight will blind a fathers eye.
 One howers storm will drown the fragrant Meads,
 What will whole months of tears thy Fathers eyes ?
 Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee :
 Oh could our mourning ease thy misery. Exeunt

Actus Tertius.

Enter the Judges and Senators, with Titus's two Sons bound, passing on the Stage to the place of execution, and Titus going before pleading.

Tit. Hear me grave Fathers, noble Tribunes stay,
 For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
 In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept :
 For all my blood in Romes great quarrel shed,
 For all the frosty nights that I have watcht,
 And for these bitter tears, which now you see
 Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks,
 Be pitiful to my condemned Sons,
 Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought :
 For two and twenty sons I never wept,
 Because they died in honours lofty bed.

Andronicus lyeth down, and the Judges pass by him.
 For these, these Tribunes, in the dust I write
 My hearts deep languor, and my souls sad tears :
 Let my tears stench the earths dry appetite,
 My sons sweet blood, will make it shame and blush :
 O earth ! I will befriend thee more with rain, Exeunt.
 That shall distill from these two ancient ruines,
 Than youthful April shall with all his showers
 In Summers drought : I'll drop upon thee still,
 In Winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow,
 And keep eternal Spring-time on thy face,
 So thou refuse to drink my dear sons blood.

Enter Lucius with his weapon drawn.

Oh reverend Tribunes, oh gentle aged men,
 Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death,
 And let me say (that never wept before)
 My tears are now prevailing Oratours.

Lu. Oh noble father, you lament in vain,
 The Tribunes hear you not, no man is by,
 And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead,
 Grave Tribunes, once more I intreat of you --

Lu. My gracious Lord, no Tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why 'tis no matter man, if they did hear,
 They would not mark me : oh if they did hear,
 They would not pity me.
 Therefore I tell my sorrows bootless to the stones,

Who though they cannot answer my distress,
 Yet in some sort they are better than the Tribunes,
 For that they will not intercept my tale ;
 When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
 Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me,
 And were they but attired in grave weeds,
 Rome could afford no Tribune like to these.
 A stone is as soft wax,
 Tribunes more hard than stones :
 A stone is silent, and offendeth not,
 And Tribunes with their tongues doom men to death.
 But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn ?
Lu. To rescue my two brothers from their death,
 For which attempt the Judges have pronounc'd
 My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man, they have befriended thee :
 Why foolish Lucius, do'st thou not perceive
 That Rome is but a wilderness of Tigers ?
 Tigers must prey, and Rome affords no prey
 But me and mine : how happy art thou then,
 From these devourers to be banished ?
 But who comes with our brother Marcus here ?

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy noble eyes to weep,
 Or if not so, thy noble heart to break :
 I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me ? Let me see it then.

Mar. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why Marcus so she is.

Lu. Aye me, this object kills me.

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her,
 Speak my Lavinia, what accursed hand
 Hath made thee handleless in thy Fathers sight ?
 What fool hath added water to the Sea ?
 Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy ?
 My grief was at the height before thou cam'st,
 And now like Nylus it disdaineth bounds :
 Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too,
 For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain :
 And they have nur'd this woe,
 In feeding life :

In bootless prayer have they been held up,
 And they have serv'd me to effectless use.
 Now all the service I require of them,
 Is, that the one will help to cut the other :
 'Tis well Lavinia, that thou hast no hands,
 For hands to do Rome service, is but vain.

Lu. Speak gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee ?

Mar. O that delightful engine of her thoughts,
 That blab'd them with such pleasing eloquence,
 Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,
 Where like a sweet melodious bird it sung,
 Sweet various notes inchanting every ear.

Luc. Oh say thou for her,
 Who hath done this deed ?

Mar. Oh thus I found her straying in the Park,
 Seeking to hide her self, as doth the Deer
 That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound.

Tit. It was my Dear,
 And he that wounded her,
 Hath hurt me more, than had he kill'd me dead :
 For now I stand as one upon a Rock,
 Inviron'd with a wilderness of Sea,
 Who makes the waxing tide
 Grow wave by wave,

Expecting

Expecting ever when some envious surge,
Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.
This way to death my wretched sons are gone:
Here stands my other son, a banisht man,
And here my brother weeping at my woes.
But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.

Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,
It would have maddened me. What shall I do?
Now I behold thy lively body so?
Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears,
Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee;
Thy husband he is dead, and for his death
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.
Look Marcus, ah son Lucius look on her:
When I did name her brothers, then fresh teares
Stood on her cheeks, as doth the hony dew,
Vpon a gath'ed Lillie almost withered.

Mar. Perchance she weeps becaus they kil'd her husband,
Perchance becaus she knows him innocent.

Ti. If they did kill thy husband then be joyfull,
Because the law hath tane revenge on them.
No, no, they would not doe so foul a deed,
Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.

Gentle Lavinia let me kiss thy lips,
Or make some signes how I may do thee ease:
Shall thy good Vncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou and I sit round about some Fountain,
Looking all downwards to behold our cheeks
How they are stain'd in meadows yet not dry
With miery slime left on them by a flood:
And in the Fountain shall we gaze so long,
Till the fresh taste be taken from that cleerness,
And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?
Or shall we cut away our hands like thine?
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shews
Pass the remainder of our hatefull dayes?
What shall we doe? Let us that have our tongues
Plot some devise of further miseries
To make us wondred at in time to come.

Lu. Sweet Father cease your tears, for at your grief
See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Ma. Patience dear Neece, good Titus drie thine eyes.

Ti. Ah Marcus, Marcus, Brother, well I wot,
Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine,
For thou poor man hast drown'd it with thine own.

Lu. Ah my Lavinia I will wipe thy cheeks.

Ti. Mark Marcus, mark, I understand her signs,
Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee.
His Napkin with her true teares all bewet,
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
Oh what a sympathy of woe is this!
As farr from help as Limbo is from blifs.

Enter Aaron the Moor alone.

Moor. Titus Andronicus, my Lord the Emperor,
Sends thee this word, that if thou love thy sons,
Let Marcus, Lucius, or thy self old Titus,
Or any one of you chop off your hand,
And send it to the King: he for the same,
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive,
And that shall be the ransome for their fault.

Ti. Oh gracious Emperour, oh gentle Aaron.
Did ever Raven sing so like a Lark,
That gives sweet tydings of the Suns uprise?
With all my heart, Ile send the Emperour my hand,
Good Aaron wilt thou help to chop it off?

Lu. Stay Father, for that noble hand of thine
That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent: my hand will serve the turn.
My youth can better spare my blood than you,
And therefore mine shall save my brothers lives.

Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,
And rear'd aloft the bloody Battelax,
Writing destruction on the enemies Castle?
Oh none of both but are of high desert:
My hand hath been but idle, let it serve
To ransome my two Nephewes from their death,
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Moo. Nay come agree, whose hand shall goe along,
For fear they die before their pardon come.

Mar. My hand shall goe.

Lu. By heaven it shall not goe.

Ti. Sirs strive no more, such withered herbs as these
Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Lu. Sweet Father, if I shall be thought thy son,
Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Mar. And for our fathers sake, and mothers care,
Now let me shew a brothers love to thee.

Ti. Agree between you, I will spare my hand.

Lu. Then Ile goe fetch an Ax.

Mar. But I will use the Ax.

Exeunt.

Ti. Come hither Aaron, Ile deceive them both,
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Moo. If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,
And never whilst I live deceive men so:
But Ile deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say ere half an hower pass.

He cuts off Titus hand.

Enter Lucius and Marcus again.

Ti. Now stay your strife, what shall be, is dispatch:
Good Aaron give his Majesty my hand,
Tell him, it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers: bid him bury it:
More hath it merited: That let it have.
As for my sons, say I account of them,
As jewels purchast at an easie price,
And yet dear too, because I bought mine owne.

Aaron. I goe Andronicus, and for thy hand
Look by and by to have thy sons with thee:
Their heads I mean: Oh how this villany
Doth fat me with the very thought of it.
Let fools doe good, and fair men call for grace,
Aaron will have his soul black like his face.

Exit.

Ti. O hear I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruine to the earth,
If any power pitties wretched tears,
To that I call: what wilt thou kneel with me?
Doe then dear heart, for heaven shall hear our prayers,
Or with our sighs weel breath the welkin dimm,
And stain the Sun with fogg as sometime clouds,
When they do hug him in their melting bosomes
Mar. Oh brother speak with possibilities.
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Ti. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottome?

Then

Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Mar. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes :
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth ore-flow ?
If the winds rage, doth not the Sea wax mad,
Threatning the welkin with his big-swoln face ?
And wilt thou have a reason for this coil ?
I am the Sea. Heark how her sighs do blow :
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth :
Then must my Sea be moved with her sighs,
Then must my earth with her continual tears,
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd :
For why, my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them :
Then give me leave, for losers will have leave,
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger with two heads and a hand.

Mes. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid,
For that good hand thou sent'st the Emperour :
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons.
And here's thy hand in scorn to thee sent back :
Thy griefs, their sports : Thy resolution mockt,
That woe is me to think upon thy woes,
More than remembrance of my fathers death. Exit.

Mar. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily,
And be my heart an ever-burning hell :
These miseries are more than may be born.
To weep with them, that weep, doth ease some deal,
But sorrow flouted at, is double death.

Luc. Ah that this sight should make so deep a wound,
And yet detested life not shrink thereat :
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breath.

Mar. Alas poor heart that kifs is comfortless,
As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end ?

Mar. Now farewell flattery, die Andronicus,
Thou dost not slumber, see thy two sons heads,
Thy warlike hands, thy mangled daughter here :
Thy other banisht sons with this dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless, and thy brother I,
Even like a stony Image, cold and numm.
Ah now no more will I controul my griefs,
Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand
Gnawing with thy teeth, and be this dismal sight
The closing up of our most wretched eyes :
Now is a time to storm, why art thou still ?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha.

Mar. Why dost thou laugh ? it fits not with this hour.

Tit. Why I have not another tear to shed :
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watry eyes,
And make them blind with tributary tears,
Then which way shall I find Revenges Cave ?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threat me, I shall never come to bliss,
Till all these mischiefs be return'd again,
Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come let me see what task I have to do ;
You heavy people circle me about,
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.
The vow is made, come Brother take a head,

And in this hand the other will I bear.

Lavinia thou shalt be employ'd in these things :
Bear thou my hand sweet wench between thy teeth :
As for thee boy, go get thee from my sight,
Thou art an Exile, and thou must not stay,
Hie to the Gothes, and raise an army there,
And if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kifs and part, for we have much to do. Exeunt.

Manet Lucius.

Luc. Farewell Andronicus my noble Father :
The woful't man that ever liv'd in Rome :
Farewell proud Rome, till Lucius come again,
He loves his pledges dearer than his life :
Farewell Lavinia my noble sister,
O would thou wert as thou to fore hast been,
But now, nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives
But in oblivion and hateful griefs :
If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs,
And make proud Saturninus and his Empress
Beg at the gates like Tarquin and his Queen.
Now will I to the Gothes and raise a power,
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine. Exit Lucius.

A Banquet.

Enter Andronicus, Marcus, Lavinia, and the boy.

An. So, so, now sit, and look you eat no more
Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
Marcus unknit that sorrow-wreathen knot :
Thy Neece and I (poor Creatures) want our hands
And cannot passionate our tenfold grief,
With foul'd Arms. This poor right hand of mine,
Is left to tyrannize upon my breast
Who when my heart all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down.
Thou Map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs,
When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating ;
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still :
Wound it with sighing girl, kill it with groans :
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole,
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall
May run into that sink, and soaking in,
Drown the lamenting fool, in Sea-salt tears.

Mar. Fie brother fie, teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands upon her tender life.

An. How now ! Has sorrow made thee doat already ?
Why Marcus no man should be mad but I :
What violent hands can she lay on her life ?
Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands,
To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o're
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable ?
O handle not the theam, to talk of hands,
Lest we remember still that we have none.
Fie, fie, how Frantiquely I square my talk
As if we should forget we had no hands :
If Marcus did not name the word of hands ?
Come, lets fall too, and gentle girl eat this,
Here is no drink : Heark Marcus what she says,
I can interpret all her martyr'd signs,
She saies, she drinks no other drink but tears
Brew'd with her sorrows : mesh'd upon her cheeks.

Speech-

Speechless complaint, O I will learn thy thought.
In thy dumb action, will I be as perfect
As begging Hermits in their holy prayers.
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to heaven,
Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I (of these) will wrest an Alphabet,
And by still practice, learn to know thy meaning.

Boy. Good Grandfire leave these bitter deep laments,
Make my Aunt merry, with some pleasing tale.

Mar. Alas, the tender boy in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his Grandfires heaviness.

An. Peace tender sapling, thou art made of tears,
And tears will quickly melt thy life away.

Marcus strikes the dish with a knife.

What do'st thou strike at Marcus with thy knife?

Mar. At that that I have kill'd my Lord, a Fly.

An. Out on thee murderour: thou kill'st my heart.
Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of Tyranny:
A deed of death done on the Innocent
Becomes not Titus brother; get thee gone,
I see thou art not for my company.

Mar. Alas (my Lord) I have but kill'd a Fly.

An. But? How if that fly had a father and Mother?
How would he hang his slender gilded wings,
And buz lamenting doings in the Ay?
Poor harmless Fly,
That with his pretty buzzing melody,
Came here to make us merry,
And thou hast kill'd him.

Mar. Pardon me sir,
It was a black ill-favour'd Fly,
Like to the Empress Moor, therefore I kill'd him.

An. O, o, o,
Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a Charitable deed:
Give me thy knife, I will insult on him,
Flattering my self, as if it were the Moor,
Come hither purposely to poison me.
There's for thy self, and that's for Tamora; Ah firra,
Yet I think we are not brought so low,
But that between us, we can kill a Fly,
That comes in likeness of a Cole-black Moor.

Mar. Alas poor man, grief ha's so wrought in him,
He takes false shadows, for true substances.
And, Come, take away; Lavinia, go with me,
Ile to thy cloister, and go read with thee
Sad stories, chanced in the times of old.
Come boy, and go with me, thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read, when mine begin to dazel. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter young Lucius and Lavinia running after him, and the Boy flies from her with his books under his arm. Enter Titus and Marcus.

Boy. Help Grandfire help, my Aunt Lavinia,
Follows me every where, I know not why.
Good Uncle Marcus see how swift she comes,
Alas sweet Aunt, I know not what you mean.

Mar. Stand by me Lucius, do not fear thy Aunt.

Tit. She loves thee boy too well to do thee harm.

Boy. I when my Father was in Rome she did,

Ma. What means my Niece Lavinia by these signs?

Tit. Fear not Lucius, somewhat doth she mean:

See Lucius see, how much she makes of thee:
Some whither would she have thee go with her.

Ah boy, Cornelia never with more care
Read to her sons, than she hath read to thee,
Sweet Poetry, and Tullies Oratour:

Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?

Boy. My Lord I know not, nor can I guess,
Unless some fit or frensy do possess her:

For I have heard my Grandfire say full oft,
Extremity of griefs would make men mad.

And I have read that Hecuba of Troy,
Ran mad through sorrow, that made me to fear,

Although my Lord, I know my noble Aunt,
Loves me as dear as ere my Mother did,

And would not but in fury fright my youth,
Which made me down to throw my books, and fly

Causless perhaps, but pardon me sweet Aunt,
And Madam, if my Uncle Marcus go,

I most willingly attend your Ladyship.

Mar. Lucius I will.

Tit. How now Lavinia? Marcus what means this?

Som book there is that she desires to see,
Which is it girl of these? Open them boy,

But thou art deeper read and better skill'd,
Come and take choice of all my Library,

And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens
Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed:

What book?

Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Mar. I think she means that there was more than one
Confederate in the fact, I more there was:

Or else to heaven she heaves them to revenge.

Tit. Lucius what book is that she tosseth so?

Boy. Grandfire tis Ovids Metamorphosis,
My mother gave it me.

Mar. For love of her that's gone,
Perhaps she cull'd it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft, so busily she turns the leaves.

Help her, what would she find? Lavinia shall I read?
This is the tragick tale of Philomel?

And treats of Tereus treason and his rape,
And rape I fear was root of thine annoy.

Mar. See brother see, note how she quotes the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpriz'd sweet girl,
Ravish'd and wrong'd as Philomela was,

Forc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?

See, see, I such a place there is where we did hunt,
(O had we never, never hunted there)

Patern'd by that the Poet here describes,
By nature made for murders and for rapes.

Mar. O Why should nature build so foul a den,
Unless the Gods delight in tragedies?

Tit. Give signs sweet girl, for here are none but friends,
What Roman Lord it was durst do the deed?

Or sunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,
That left the Camp to sin in Lucrece bed?

Mar. Sit down sweet Niece, brother sit down by me,
Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,

Inspire me that I may this treason find.

My Lord look here, look here Lavinia.

He writes his Name with his Staff, and guides it with feet and mouth.

This sandy plot is plain, guide if thou canst

This

This after me, when I have writ my name,
Without the help of any hand at all.
Curst be that heart that forc'd us to this shift :
Write thou good Neece, and here display at last,
What God will have discover'd for revenge,
Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,
That we may know the Traytors and the truth.

She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her fumps and writes.

Tit. Oh do you read my Lord what she hath writ ?
Stuprum, Chiron, Demetrius.

Mar. What, what, the lustful Sons of Tamora,
Performers of this hainous bloody deed ?

Tit. Magni Dominator poli,
Tam lentus audis scelera ! tam lentus vides !

Mar. Oh calm thee gentle Lord : Although I know
There is enough written upon this earth,
To stir a murmur in the mildest thoughts,
And arm the minds of infants to exclams.

My Lord kneel down with me : Lavinia kneel,
And kneel sweet boy, the Roman Hectors hope,
And swear with me, as with the woful Peer
And father of that chaste dishonoured Dame,
Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece rape,
That we will prosecute (by good advice)
Mortal revenge upon these trayterous Goths,
And see their blood, or dye with this reproach.

Tit. 'Tis sure enough, and you knew how.
But if you hunt these Bear-whelps, then beware
The Dam will wake, and if she wind you once,
She's with the Lyon deeply still in league,
And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,
And when he sleeps will she do what she list.
You are a young huntsman Marcus, let it alone :
And come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a Gad of steel will write these words,
And lay it by : the angry Northern wind
Will blow these sands like Sybils leaves abroad,
And where's your lesson then ? Boy what say you ?

Boy. I say my Lord, that if I were a man,
Their mothers bed-chamber should not be safe,
For these bad bond-men to the yoke of Rome.

Mar. I that's my boy, thy father hath full oft,
For his ungrateful country done the like.

Boy. And Uncle so will I, and if I live.

Tit. Come go with me into mine Armory,
Lucius Ile fit thee, and withall, my boy
Shall carry from me to the Empress Sons,
Presents that I intend to send them both,
Come, come, thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou not ?

Boy. I with my dagger in their bosome Grandfire.

Tit. No boy nor so, Ile teach thee another course,
Lavinia come, Marcus look to my house,
Lucius and Ile go brave it at the Court,
I marry will we sit, and we'll be waited on. Exeunt.

Mar. O heavens ! Can you hear a good man grone
And not relent, or not compassion him ?
Marcus attend him in his extasie,
That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart,
Than foe-mens marks upon his battered shield,
But yet so just, that he will not revenge,
Revenge the heavens for old Andronicus. Exit.

Enter Aron, Chiron and Demetrius at one dore : and at another dore young Lucius and another, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius here's the Son of Lucius,
He hath some message to deliver us.

Aron. I some mad message from his mad Grandfather.

Boy. My Lords, with all the humbleness I may,
I greet your honours from Andronicus,
And pray the Roman Gods confound you both.

Dem. Gramercy lovely Lucius, what's the news ?

Boy. For villains mark'd with Rape. May it please you,
My Grandfire well advis'd hath sent by me,
The goodliest weapons of his Armory,
To gratifie your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome, for so he bad me say :
And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your Lordships, when ever you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well,
And so I leave you both : like bloody villains. Exit.

Dem. What's here, a scrole, and written round about ?
Let's see.

Integer vita scelerisque purus, non eget Mauri jaculis nec arcu.

Chir. O 'tis a verse in Horace, I know it well.
I read it in the Grammar long ago.

Moor. I just, a verse in Horace : right, you have it,
Now what a thing it is to be an Ass ?
Here's no sound jest, th'old man hath found their guilt,
And sends the weapons wrapt about with lines,
That wound (beyond their feeling) to the quick :
But were our witty Empress well a foot,
She would applaud Andronicus conceit :

But let her rest, in her unrest a while.
And now young Lords, was't not a happy starr
Led us to Rome's strangers, and more than so,
Captives, to be advanced to this height ?
It did me good before the Palace gate
To brave the Tribune in his brothers hearing.

Dem. But me more good, to see so great a Lord
Basely insinuate, and send us gifts.

Moor. Had he not reason Lord Demetrius ?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly ?

Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman Dames
At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish, and full of love.

Moor. Here lacks but your Mother for to say, Amen.

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.

Dem. Come, let us go, and pray to all the gods
For our beloved Mother in her pains.

Moor. Pray to the devils, the gods have given us over.
Flourish.

Dem. Why do the Emperors trumpets flourish thus ?

Chi. Belike for joy the Emperour hath a son.

Dem. Soft, who comes here ?

Enter Nurse with a black-a-Moor Child.

Nurse. Good morrow Lords :
O tell me, did you see Aron the Moor ?

Aron. Well, more or less, or ne'r a whit at all,
Here Aron is, and what with Aron now ?

Nurse. Oh gentle Aron, we are all undone.
Now help, or woe betide thee evermore.

Aron. Why, what a cattervalling dost thou keep ?
What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms ?

Nurse. O that which I would hide from heavens eye,
Our Empress shame, and stately Rome's disgrace,
She is delivered Lords, she is delivered.

Aron. To whom ?

Nurse. I mean she is brought to bed ?

Aron. Well God give her good rest.

H h h

V What

What hath he sent her ?

Nurse. A devil.

Aaron. Why then she is the devils Dam: a joyful issue.

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black and sorrowful issue,
Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad,
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime,
The Empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee Christen it with thy daggers point.

Aaron. Out you whore, is black so base a hue ?
Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossome sure.

Deme. Villain, what hast thou done ?

Aaron. That which thou can'st not undo.

Chir. Thou hast undone our Mother.

Deme. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone---
Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choice,
Accur'd the off-spring of so foul a fiend.

Chir. It shall not live.

Aaron. It shall not dye.

Nurse. Aaron it must, the mother wills it so.

Aaron. What, must it Nurse ? Then let no man but I
Do execution on my flesh and blood.

Deme. I'll broach the Tadpole on my Rapiers point :
Nurse give it me, my sword shall soon dispatch it.

Aaron. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up.
Stay murderous villains, will you kill your brother ?
Now by the burning Tapers of the sky
That shone so brightly when this Boy was got,
He dies upon my Semitars sharp point,
That touches this my first-born son and heir.
I tell you younglings, not Enceladus
With all his threatening band of Typhons brood,
Nor great Alcides, nor the god of War,
Shall seize this prey out of his fathers hands :
What, what, ye sanguin shallow-hearted Boyes,
Ye white-lim'd walls, ye Ale-house painted signes,
Cole-black is better than another hue,
In that it scorns to bear another hue :
For all the water in the Ocean
Can never turn the Swans black legs to white,
Although the lave them hourly in the flood.
Tell the Empress from me, I am of age
To keep mine own, excuse it how she can.

Deme. Wilt thou betray thy noble Mistress thus ?

Aaron. My mistress is my mistress : this my self,
The vigour, and the picture of my youth :
This, before all the world do I prefer,
This, maugre all the world, will I keep safe,
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.

Deme. By this our mother is for ever sham'd.

Chir. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Nur. The Emperour in his rage will doom her death.

Chir. I blush to think upon this ignominy.

Aaron. Why there's the privilege your beauty bears :
Fie treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing
The close enacts and counsels of the heart :
Here's a young Lad fram'd of another leer,
Look how the black slave smiles upon the father ;
As who should say, old Lad, I am thine own.
He is your brother, Lords, sensibly fed
Of that self blood that first gave life to you,
And from that womb where you imprisoned were,
He is enfranchised and come to light :
Nay, he is your brother by the surer side,
Although my seal be stamped in his face.

Nurse. Aaron, what shall I say unto the Empress ?

Deme. Advise thee Aaron, what is to be done,

And we will all subscribe to thy advise :

Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.

Aaron. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.

My son and I will have the wind of you :

Keep there, now talk at pleasure of your safety.

Deme. How many women saw this child of his ?

Aaron. Why so brave Lords, When we all joyn in
I am a Lamb : but if you brave the Moor, (league

The chafed Boar, the mountain Lioness,

The Ocean swells not so as Aaron storms :

But say again, how many saw the child ?

Nurse. Cornelia the midwife, and my self,
And none else but the delivered Empress.

Aaron. The Empress, the Midwife, and your self,
Two may keep counsel, when the third's away :
Go to the Empress, tell her this I said, He kills her.
Week, week, so cries a Pig prepar'd to the spit.

Deme. What mean'st thou Aaron ?

Wherefore did'st thou this ?

Aaron. O Lord sir, 'tis a deed of policy :

Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours ?

A long-tongu'd babling Gossip ? No Lords, no :

And now be it known to you my full intent.

Not far, one Muliteus my Country-man
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed,
His child is like to her, fair as you are :

Go pack with him, and give the mother gold,

And tell them both the circumstance of all,

And how by this their child shall be advanc'd,

And be receiv'd for the Emperours heir,

And substituted in the place of mine,

To calm this tempest whirling in the Court,

And let the Emperour dandle him for his own.

Hark ye Lords, ye see I have given her Physick,

And you must needs bestow her funeral,

The fields are neer, and you are gallant Grooms :

This done, see that you take no longer dayes

But send the Midwife presently to me.

The Midwife and the Nurse well made away,

Then let the Ladies tattle what they please.

Chir. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the ayr with se-

Deme. For this care of Tamora, (crets.
Her self, and hers are highly bound to thee. Exeunt.

Aaron. Now to the Goths, as swift as Swallow flies,

There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,

And secretly to greet the Empress friends :

Come on you thick-lipt-slave, I'll bear you hence,

For it is you that puts us to our shifts :

I'll make you feed on berries, and on roots,

And feed on curds and whay, and suck the Goat,

And cabin in a Cave, and bring you up

To be a warriour, and command a Camp. Exit.

Enter Titus, old Marcus, young Lucius, and other gentlemen with bows, and Titus bears the arrows with Letters on the end of them.

Tit. Come Marcus, come, kinsmen this is the way.

Sir Boy, now let me see your Archery,

Look yee draw home enough, and 'tis there straight :

Terras Astra reliquit, be you remembered Marcus.

She's gone, she's fled, first take you to your tools,

You cousens shall go sound the Ocean :

And cast your nets, haply you may find her in the Sea,

Yet there's as little justice as at Land :

No Publius and Sempronius, you must do it,

Tis you must dig with Mattock and with Spade,
And pierce the inmost Center of the earth:
Then when you come to Plutoes Region,
I pray you to deliver him this petition,
Tell him it is for Justice, and for aid,
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.
Ah Rome! Well, well, I made thee miserable,
What time I threw the peoples suffrages
On him that thus doth tyrannize ore me.
Go get you gone, and pry be carefull all,
And leave you not a man of war unsearcht,
This wicked Emperour may have shipt her hence,
And kinsmen then we may goe pipe for Justice.

Marc. O Publius, is not this a heavy case
To see thy Noble Vncle thus distraſt?

Pub. Therefore my Lord it highly us concerns,
By day and night t'attend him carefully:
And feed his humour kindly as we may,
Till time beget some carefull remedy.

Marc. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
Joyn with the Goths, and with revengefull war,
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the Traytor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius how now? how now my masters?
What have you met with her?

Publ. No my good Lord, but Pluto sends you word,
If you will have revenge from hell you shall,
Marry for Justice she is so imploy'd,
He thinks with Iove in heaven, or some where else:
So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays,
He dive into the burning Lake below,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.

Marcus we are but shrubs, no Cedars we,
Nobig-bon'd-men, fram'd of the Cyclops size,
But metal Marcus, steel to the very back,
Yet wrung with wrongs more than our back can bear.
And sith there's no justice in earth nor hell,
We will sollicit heaven, and move the Gods
To send down justice for to wreak our wrongs:
Come to this gear, you are a good Archer Marcus.

He gives them the Arrows.

Ad Iovem, thats for you: here ad Apollonem,

Ad Martem thats for my self,

Here Boy to Pallas, here to Mercury,

To Saturnine, to Caius, not to Saturnine,

You were as good to shoot against the wind.

To it Boy, Marcus loose when I bid:

Of my word, I have written to effect,

Theres not a God left unsolicited.

Marc. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the Court,
We will afflict the Emperour in his pride.

Tit. Now masters draw, Oh well said Lucius:
Good boy in Virgoes lap, give it Pallas.

Marc. My Lord, I ay'm a Mile beyond the Moon.
Your letter is with Iupiter by this.

Tit. Ha, ha Publius, Publius, what hast thou done?
See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus horns.

Marc. This was the sport my Lord, when Publius shor,
The Bull being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock,
That down fell both the Rams horns in the Court,
And who should find them but the Emperess villain:
She laught, and told the Moor he should not choose
But give them to his Master for a present.

Tit. Why there it goes, God give your Lordship joy.

Enter the Clown with a basket and two Pigeons.

Tit. News, news, from heaven.

Marcus the Poast is come.

Sirrah, what tydings? have you any letters?

Shall I have Justice, what says Iupiter?

Clow. Ho he Jibbetmaker, he says that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hang'd till the next week.

Tit. Tut what says Iupiter I ask thee?

Clow. Alas sir I know not Iupiter:

I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why villain art nor thou the Carrier?

Clow. I of my Pigeons sir, nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clow. From heaven? Alas sir, I never came there,
God forbid I should be so bold to prefs to heaven in my young days. Why I am going with my pigeons to the Tribunal Plebs, to take up a matter of brawl, betwixt my vncle, and one of the Emperials men.

Mar. Why sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your Oration, and let him deliver the Pigeons to the Emperour from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an Oration to the Em-perour with a Grace?

Clow. Nay truly sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah come hither, make no more ado,
But give your Pigeons to the Emperour.

By me thou shalt have Justice at his bands.

Hold, hold, mean while her's money for thy charges.

Give me a pen and ink.

Sirrah, can you with a Grace deliver a Supplication?

Clow. I sir.

Tit. Then here is a Supplication for you, and when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel, then kiss his foot, then deliver up your Pigeons, and then look for your reward. He be at hand sir, see you do it bravely.

Clow. I warrant you sir, let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah hast thou a knife? Come let me see it.

Here Marcus fold it in the Oration,

For thou hast made it like an humble Suppliant,

And when thou hast given it the Emperour,

Knock at my dore, and tell me what he sayes.

Clow. God be with you sir, I will.

Tit. Come Marcus let us go, Publius follow me.

Exeunt.

Enter Emperour and Emperess, and her two sons, the Emperour brings the Arrows in his hand that Titus shot at him.

Satur. Why Lords,
What wrongs are these? was ever seen
An Emperour in Rome thus overborn,
Troubled, Confronted thus, and for the extent
Of equal Justice, us'd in such contempt?
My Lords, you know the might'full Gods
(How ever these disturbers of our peace
Buz in the peoples ears) there nought hath past,
But even with law against the wilfull Sons
Of old Andronicus. And what and if
His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits,
Shall we be thus afflicted in his wreaks,
His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness?
And now he writes to heaven for his redress,
See, heres to Iove, and this to Mercury,

H h h 2

This

This to Apollo, this to the god of warr:
Sweet scrowls to flie about the streets of Rome:
What's this but Libelling against the Senate,
And blazoning our injustice every where?
A goodly humour, is it not my Lords?
As who would say, in Rome, no justice were.
But if I live, his feigned extasies
Shall be no shelter to these outrages:
But he and his shall know, that Justice lives
In Saturninus health, whom if he sleep,
He'll so awake, as he in fury shall
Cut off the proud'st Conspirator that lives.

Tamo. My gracious Lord, my lovely Saturnine,
Lord of my life, Commander of my thoughts,
Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus age,
Th'effects of sorrow for his valiant Sons,
Whose loss hath peirc'd him deep, and scarr'd his heart;
And rather comfort his distressed plight,
Then prosecute the meanest or the best
For these contempts. Why thus it shall become High witted Tamora to glose witha ll:
But Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,
Thy life blood on't: if Aron now be wise,
Then is all safe, the Anchor's in the Port.

Enter Clown.

How now good fellow, would'st thou speak with us?

Clow. Yea forsooth, and your Mistership be Imperial.

Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the Emperour.

Clow. Tis he: God and Saint Stephen give you good den,
I have brought you a Letter, and a couple of Pigeons here.

He reads the Letter.

Satur. Go take him away, and hang him presently.

Clow. How much money must I have?

Tam. Come sirrah thou must be hang'd.

Clow. Hang'd? bir Lady, than I have brought up a neck to a fair end. Exit.

Satur. Despightful and intollerable wrongs,
Shall I endure this Monstrous villany?
I know from whence this same devise proceeds:
May this be born? As if his Traytrous Sons,
That dy'd by law for murther of our brother,
Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully?
Go drag the villain hither by the hair,
Nor Age, nor Honor, shall shape privilege:
For this proud mock, Ile be thy slaughter man:
Sly frantick wretch, that holp'st to make me great,
In hope thy self should govern Rome and me.

Enter Nuntius Emilius.

Satur. What news with thee Emilius?

Emil. Arm my Lords, Rome never had more cause,
The Gothes have gather'd head, and with a power
Of High resolved men, bent to the spoyl
They hither march again, under the conduct
Of Lucius, Son to old Andronicus:
VWho threats in course of this revenge to do
As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Satur. Is warlike Lucius General of the Gothes?
These tydings nip me, and I hang the head
As flowers with frost, or grafs beat down with storms.
I, now begin our sorrows to approach,
'Tis he the common people love so much,
My self bath often heard them say,
(VWhen I have walked like a private man)
That Lucius banishment was wrongfully,
And they have wish'd that Lucius were their Emperour.

Tam. VWhy should you fear? Is not our City strong?

Satur. I, but the Citizens favour Lucius,
And will revolt from me, to succour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious like thy name.
Is the Sun dim'd, that Gnats do flie in it?
The Eagle suffers little Birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby,
Knowing that with the shadow of his wings,
He can at pleasure stint their melody.
Even so may'st thou, the giddy men of Rome;
Then cheer thy spirit, for know thou Emperour,
I will enchant the old Andronicus,
VWith words more sweet, and yet more dangerous
Than baits to fish, or hony stalks to sheep,
VWhen as the one is wounded with the bait,
The other rotted with delicious food.

King. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora intreat him, then he will,
For I can smooth and fill his aged ear,
VWith golden promises, that were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.
Go thou before to our Embassador,
Say, that the Emperour requests a parly
Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting.

King. Emilius do this message Honourably,
And if he stand in Hostage for his safety,
Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.

Emil. Your bidding shall I do effectually. Exit.

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
And temper him with all the Art I have,
To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Gothes.
And now sweet Emperour be blith again,
And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Satur. Then go successfully and plead for him. Exit.

Actus Quintus.

*Enter Lucius with an Army of Gothes,
with Drum and Souldiers.*

Luci. Approved warriours, and my faithful Friends,
I have received Letters from great Rome,
VWhich signifies what hate they bear their Emperour,
And how desirous of our sight they are.
Therefore great Lords, be as your Titles witness,
Imperious and impatient of your wrongs,
And wherein Rome hath done you any scathe,
Let him make treble satisfaction.

Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the Great Andronicus,
VWhose name was once our terrour, now our comfort,
VWhose high exploits, and honourable Deeds,
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt:
Be bold in us, we'll follow where thou lead'st,
Like stinging Bees in hottest Summers day,
Led by their Master to the flowred fields,
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.

Omni. And as he saith, so say we all with him.

Luci. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.
But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth leading Aron with his child in his arms.

Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troup I straid
To gaze upon a ruinous Monastery,

And

And as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Vpon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall :
I made unto the noise, when soon I heard,
The crying babe control'd with this discourse:
Peace Tawny slave, half me, and half thy Dam,
Did not thy Hue bewray whose brat thou art,
Had nature lent thee but thy Mothers look,
Villain thou mightst have been an Emperour.
But where the Bull and Cow are both milk-white,
They never doe beget a cole-black Calf.
Peace, villain peace (even thus he rates the babe)
For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth ,
Who when he knows thou art the Empress babe,
Will hold thee dearly for thy Mothers sake.
With this, my weapon drawn I rusht upon him,
Surpriz'd him suddenly, and brought him hither,
To use, as you think needfull of the man.

Luci. Oh worthy Goth, this is the incarnat devill ,
That rob'd Andronicus of his good hand :
This is the Pearl that pleas'd your Empress eye,
And here's the Base Fruit of his burning lust.
Say wall-cy'd slave, whither wouldst thou convey
This growing Image of thy fiend-like face ?
Why dost not speak? what deaf? no ! Not a word ?
A halter Souldiers, hang him on this Tree,
And by his side his Fruit of Bastardy.

Aaron. Touch not the Boy, he is of Royal blood.

Luci. Too like the Syre for ever being good.
First hang the Child, that he may see it sprall,
A sight to vex the Fathers soul withall.

Aaron. Get me a Ladder Lucius, save the Child,
And bear it from me to the Emperess :
If thou doe this, Ile shew thee wondrous things,
That highly may advantage thee to hear;
If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
Ile speak no more: but vengeance rot you all.

Luci. Say on, and if it please me which thou speak'st,
Thy child shall live, and I will see it Nourish.

Aaron. And if it please thee? why assure thee Lucius,
Twill vex thy soul, to hear what I shall speak :
For I must talk of Murthers, Rapes, and Massacres,
Acts of Black-night, abominable Deeds,
Complots of Mischief, Treason, Villanies
Ruthfull to hear, yet pitiouly perform'd,
And this shall all be buried by my death,
Vnless thou swear to me my Child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind,
I say thy Child shall live.

Aaron. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin.

Luci. Who should I swear by?
Thou beleevest no God,
That granted, how can'st thou beleeve an oath ?

Aaron. What if I do not, as indeed I do not,
Yet for I know thou art Religious,
And hast a thing within thee called Conscience,
With twenty Popish tricks and Ceremonies,
Which I have seen thee carefull to observe :
Therefore I urge thy oath, for that I know
An Ideot holds his Bauble for a God,
And keeps the oath, which by that God he swears,
To that Ile urge him : therefore thou shalt vow
By that same God, what God so ere it be
That thou adorest, and hast in reverence,
To save my Boy, nourish and bring him up,
Ore else I will discover nought to thee.

Luci. Even by my God I swear to thee I will.

Aaron. First know thou,
I begot him on thy Emperess.

Luci. Oh most insatiate luxurious Woman!

Aaron. Tut Lucius, this was but a deed of Charity,
To that which thou shalt hear of me anon,
Twas her two Sons that murdered Bassianus,
They cut thy Sisters tongue, and Ravisht her,
And cut her hands off, and trimm'd her as thou sawst.

Luci. Oh detestable villain !
Call'st thou that Trimming?

Aaron. Why she was washt, and cut, and trimm'd ,
And twas trim sport for them that had the doing of it.

Luci. Oh barbarous beastly villains like thy self !

Aaron. Indeed, I was their Tutor to instruct them,
That Coddling spirit had they from their Mother,
As sure a Card as ever won the Set:
That bloody mind I think they learn'd of me,
As true a Dog as ever fought at head.

Well, let my Deeds be witness of my worth:
I trayn'd thy Bretheren to that guilefull Hole,
Where the dead Corps of Bassianus lay:

I wrote the Letter that thy Father found,
And hid the Gold within the Letter mention'd.
Confederate with the Queen, and her two Sons,
And what not done that thou hast cause to rue,
Wherein I had no stroke of Mischief in it.

I plaid the Cheater for thy Fathers hand,
And when I had it, drew my self apart,
And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

I pried me through the Crevice of a Wall,
When for his hand, he had his two Sons heads,
Beheld his tears, and laught so heartily,
That both mine eyes were rainy like to his:
And when I told the Empress of this sport,
She swooned almost at my pleasing tale,
And for my tydings, gave me twenty kisses.

Goth. What canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aaron. I, like a black Dog, as the saying is.

Luc. Art thou not sorry for these hainous deeds?

Aaron. I, that I had not done a thousand more.

Even now I curse the day, and yet I think
Few come within the compass of my curse,
Wherein I did not some Notorious ill,
As kill a man, or else devise his death,
Ravish a Maid, or plot the way to doe it,
Accuse some innocent, and forswear my self ;
Set deadly Enmity between two Friends,
Make poor mens Cattell break their necks,
Set fire on Barns and Haystacks in the night,
And bid the owners quench them with their tears :
Oft have I dig'd up dead men from their graves,
And set them upright at their dear Friends doors,
Even when their sorrow almost was forgot,
And on their skins, as on the Bark of trees,
Have with my knife carved in Roman Letters,
Let not your sorrow dye, though I am dead.
Tut, I have done a thousand dreadfull things,
As willingly, as one would kill a fly,
And nothing grieves me heartily indeed,
But that I cannot do ten thousand more.

Luci. Bring down the devil, for he must not dye
So sweet a death as hanging presently.

Aaron. If there be devils, would I were a devill,
To live and burn in everlasting fire,
So I might have your company in hell,

H h h 3

But

But to torment you with my bitter tongue.

Luc. Sirs stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter Emilius.

Goth. My Lord there is a Messenger from Rome Desires to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come near.

Welcome Emilius, whats the news from Rome?

Emi. Lord Lucius, and you Princes of the Goths, The Roman Emperour greets you all by me, And for he understands you are in Arms, He craves a parly at your Fathers house, Willing you to demand your Hostages, And they shall be immediately delivered.

Goth. What sayes our General?

Luc. Emilius, let the Emperour give his pledges Vnto my Father, and my Vncle Marcus, And we will come: march away.

Exeunt.

Enter Tamora, and her two Sons disguised.

Tam. Thus in this strange, and sad Habiliments, I will encounter with Andronicus, And say, I am Revenge sent from below, To joyn with him and right his heynous wrongs: Knock at his study where they say he keeps, To ruminat strange plots of dire Revenge, Tell him Revenge is come to joyn with him, And work confusion on his Enemies.

They knock and Titus opens his study doore.

Tit. Who doth molest my Contemplation?

Is it your trick to make me ope the dore, That so my sad decrees may flye away, And all my study be to no effect? You are deceiv'd, for what I mean to do, See here in bloody lines I have set down: And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.

Tit. No nor a word: how can I grace my talk, Wanting a hand to give it action? Thou hast the ods of me, therefore no more.

Tam. If thou did'st know me, Thou would'st talk with me.

Tit. I am not mad, I know thee well enough, Witnes this wretched stump, Witnes these crimson lines, Witnes these Trenches made by grief and care, Witnes the tyring day, and heavy night, Witnes all sorrow, that I know thee well For our proud Empress, Mighty Tamora: Is not thy comming for my other hand?

Tam. Know thou sad man, I am not Tamora, She is thy Enemy, and I thy friend, I am Revenge sent from th' infernal Kindome, To ease the gnawing Vulture of thy mind, By working wreakfull vengeance on thy Foes: Come down and welcome me to this worlds light, Confer with me of Murder and of Death, There's not a hollow Cave or lurking place, No Vast obscurity or Misty vale, Where bloody Murther or detested Rape, Can couch for fear, but I will find them out, And in their ears tel them my dreadfull name, Revenge, which makes the foul offenders quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me, To be a torment to mine Enemies?

Tam. I am, therefore come down and welcome me.

Tit. Doe me some service ere I come to thee: Loe by thy side where Rape and Murder stands, Now give some surance that thou art Revenge, Stab them or tear them on thy Chariot wheels, And then Ile come and be thy Waggoner, And whirl along with thee about the Globes, Provide thee two proper Palfries, black as Ier, To hale thy vengefull Waggon swift away, And find out Murder in their guilty Caves. And when thy Car is loaden with their heads, I will dismount, and by the Waggon wheel Trot like a Servile footman all day long, Even from Hiperious rising in the East, Vntill his very downfall in the Sea. And day by day Ile do this heavy task, So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my Ministers, and come with me.

Tit. Are they thy Ministers, what are they call'd?

Tam. Rapine and Murder, therefore called so, Cause they take vengeance of such kinde of men.

Tit. Good Lord how like the Empresss Sons they are, And you the Empress: But we worldly men, Have miserable mad mistaking eyes: Oh sweet Revenge, now doe I come to thee, And if one arms imbracement will content thee, I will imbrace thee in it by and by.

Tam. This closing with him, fits his Lunacy, What ere I forge to feed his brain-sick fits, Doe you uphold, and maintain in your speeches, For now he firmly takes me for Revenge, And being credulous in this mad thought, Ile make him send for Lucius his Son, And whilst I at a Banquet hold him sure, Ile find some cunning practice out of hand To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths, Or at the least make them his Enemies: See here he comes, and I must play my theam.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee, Welcome dread Fury to my woefull house, Rapine and Murther, you are welcome too, How like the Empress and her Sons you are. Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor, Could not all hell afford you such a devil? For well I wore the Empress never wags; But in her company there is a Moor, And would you represent our Queen aright It were convenient you had such a devill: But welcome as you are, what shall we doe?

Tam. What would'st thou have us doe Andronicus?

Dem. Shew me a Murtherer, Ile deal with him.

Chir. Shew me a Villain that hath done a Rape, And I am sent to be reveng'd on him.

Tam. Shew me a thousand that have done thee wrong And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome, And when thou find'st a man that's like thy self, Good Murder stab him, he's a Murtherer. Goe thou with him, and when it is thy hap To find another that is like to thee, Good Rapine stab him, he is a Ravisher. Goe thou with them, and in the Emperours Court, There is a Queen attended by a Moor, Well maist thou know her by thy own proportion, For up and down she doth resemble thee, I pray thee do on them some violent death, They have been violent to me and mine.

Tamora.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us, this shall we do.
But would it please the good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius thy thrice Valiant Son,
VVho leads towards Rome a Band of VVarlike Gothes,
And bid him come and Banquet at thy house.
VVhen he is here, even at thy solemn Feast,
I will bring in the Empress and her Sons,
The Emperour himself, and all thy Foes,
And at thy mercy shall they stopp, and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart:
VVhat says Andronicus to this devise?

Enter Marcus.

Tit. Marcus my brother, 'tis sad Titus calls,
Go gentle Marcus to thy Nephew Lucius,
Thou shalt enquire him out among the Gothes,
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefeft Princes of the Gothes,
Bid him encamp his Souldiers where they are,
Tell him the Emperour, and the Empress too,
Feasts at my house, and he shall Feast with them;
This do thou for my love, and so let him,
As he regards his aged Fathers life.

Mar. This will I do, and soon return again. Exit.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my Ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me,
Or else Ile call my Brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. What say you Boys, will you bide with him,
Whiles I go tell my Lord the Emperour,
How I have govern'd our determined jest?
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair,
And tarry with him till I turn again.

Tit. I know them all though they suppose me mad,
And will ore-reach them in their own devises,
A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their Dam.

Dem. Madam depart at pleasure, leave us here.

Tam. Farewel Andronicus, Revenge now goes
To lay a complor to betray thy Foes.

Tit. I know thou do'st, and sweet Revenge farewell.

Chi. Tell us old man, how shall we be employ'd?

Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to do,
Publius come hither, Caius, and Valentine.

Pub. What is your will?

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. The Empress Sons
I take them, Chiron, Demetrius.

Tit. Fie Publius fie, thou art too much deceiv'd,
The one is Murder, Rape is the others name,
And therefore bind them gentle Publius,
Caius, and Valentine, lay hands on them,
Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,
And now I find it, therefore bind them sure.

Chi. Villains forbear, we are the Empress Sons.

Pub. And therefore do we, what we are commanded.
Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a word.
Is he sure bound? look that you bind them fast. Exeunt.

Enter Titus Andronicus with a knife, and Lavinia with a Basin.

Tit. Come, come Lavinia, look, thy Foes are bound,
Sirs stop their mouths, let them not speak to me,
But let them hear what fearful words I utter.

Oh Villains, Chiron, and Demetrius,
Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud,
This goodly Summer with your VVinter mixt,
You kill'd her husband, and for that vil'd fault,
Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death,
My hand cut off, and made a merry jest,
Both her sweet hands, her Tongue, and that more dear
Than hands or tongue, her spotless Chastity,
Inhumane Traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.
VVhat would you say, if I should let you speak?
Villains for shame you could not beg for grace.
Heark VVretches how I mean to martyr you,
This one Hand yet is left, to cut your throats,
VVhil'st that Lavinia tween her stumps doth hold,
The Basen that receives your guilty blood.
You know your Mother means to feast with me,
And calls her self Revenge, and thinks me mad.
Heark Villains, I will grind your bones to dust,
And with your blood and it, Ile make a Past,
And of the Past a Coffin will I rear,
And make two Pasties of your shameful heads,
And bid that strumpet your unhallowed Dam,
Like to the earth swallow her own increase.
This is the Feast that I have bid her to,
And this the Banquet she shall surfet on,
For worse than Philomel you us'd my Daughter,
And worse than Progne, I will be reveng'd,
And now prepare your throats: Lavinia come,
Receive the blood, and when that they are dead
Let me go grind their Bones to powder small,
And with this hateful Liquor temper it,
And in that Past let their wild Heads be bak'd.
Come, come, be ever one officious,
To make this Banquet, which I wish might prove,
More stern and bloody than the Centaures Feast.

He cuts their throats.

So now bring them in, for Ile play the Cook,
And see them ready, 'gainst the Mother comes. Exeunt.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and the Gothes.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my Fathers mind
That I repair to Rome, I am content.

Goth. And ours with thine befall, what fortune will.

Luc. Good Unkle take you in this barbarous Moor
This Ravenous Tiger, this accursed devil,
Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,
Till he be brought unto the Emperors face,
For testimony of his foul proceedings.
And see the Ambush of our Friends be strong,
If ere the Emperour means no good to us.

Aron. Some devil whisper curses in my ear,
And prompt me that my tongue may utter forth,
The Venemous Malice of my swelling heart.

Luc. Away inhumane Dogg, Unhallowed Slave,
Sirs help our Unkle, to convey him in, Flourish
The Trumpets shew the Emperour is at hand.

Sound Trumpets. Enter Emperour, and Empress, with Tribunes and others.

Sat. VVhat, hath the firmament more Suns than one?

Luc. VVhat boots it thee to call thy self a Sun?

Mar. Romes Emperour and Nephew break the party
These quarrels must be quietly debated,
The Feast is ready which the careful Titus,

Hath

Hath ordained to an honourable end,
For Peace, for Love, for League, and good to Rome :
Please you therefore draw nigh and take your places.

Satur. Marcus we will .

Hoboy.

A Table brought in.

Enter Titus like a Cook, placing the meats on the Table, and Lavinia with a veil over her face.

Titus. Welcome my gracious Lord,
Weldome Dread Queen ,
Welcome ye Warlike Gothes, welcome Lucius,
And welcome all : although the cheer be poor,
Twill fill your stomachs, please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd Andronicus?

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well,
To entertain your Highness, and your Empress.

Tam. We are beholding to you good Andronicus.

Tit. And if your Highness knew my heart, you were :
My Lord the Emperour resolve me this,
Was it will done of rash Virginus,
To slay his daughter with his own right hand,
Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflower'd ?

Satur. It was Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, Mighty Lord ?

Sat. Because the Girl should nor survive her shame,
And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual ,
A pattern, president, and lively warrant,
For me (most wretched) to perform the like :
Dye, dye, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee,
And with thy shame, thy Fathers sorrow dye.

He kills her.

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind ?

Tit. Kill'd her for whom my tears have made me blind.
I am as wofull as Virginus was ,
And have a thousand times more cause than he.

Sat. What was she ravish't ? tell who did the deed.

Tit. Wilt please you eat,
VVilt please your Highness feed ?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine onely Daughter thus ?

Tit. Not I, twas Chiron, and Demetrius.
They ravish't her, and cut away her tongue,
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Satur. Goe fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why there they are both, baked in that pye,
Whereof their Mother dantly hath fed,
Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.
Tis true, tis true, witness my knives sharp point.

He stabs the Empress.

Satur. Dye frantick wretch, for this accursed deed.

Luc. Can the Sons eyes, behold his Father bleed ?
There's meed for meed, death for a deadly deed.

Mar. You sad-fac'd men, people, and Sons of Rome,
By uprore sever'd like a flight of Fowle,
Scattered by winds and high tempestuous gusts ,
Oh let me teach you how, to knit again
This scattered Corn into one mutual sheaf,
These broken limbs again into one body.

Goth. Let Rome herself be bane unto herself ,
And the whom mighty kingdoms curse to,
Like a forlorn and desperate castaway,
Do shamefull execution on her self.
But if my frosty signes and chaps of age,
Grave witnesses of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,
Speak Romes dear friend, as'erst our Ancestor ,

When with his solemn tongue he did discourse
To love-sick Didoes sad attending ear,
The story of that balefull burning night,
When subtle Greeks surpriz'd King Priams Troy:
Tell us what Sinon hath bewicht our ears,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in,
That gives our Troy, our Rome the civil wound.
My heart is not compact of flint nor steel,
Nor can I utter all our bitter grief ,
But floods of tears will drown my Oratory,
And break my very utterance, even in the time
When it should move you to attend me most,
Lending your kind hand Commiseration.
Here is a Captain , let him tell the tale.
Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him speak.

Luc. This Noble Auditory, be it known to you,
That cursed Chiron and Demetrius
Were they that murther'd our Emperours Brother,
And they it were that ravished our Sister,
For their fell faults our Brothers were beheaded,
Our fathers tears despis'd, and basely couzen'd
Of that true hand that fought Romes quarrell out,
And sent her enemies unto the grave.
Lastly, my self unkindly banished,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,
To beg relief among Romes Enemies,
Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears ,
And op'd their arms to imbrace me as a Friend :
And I am turned forth, be it known to you,
That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood,
And from her bosome took the Enemies point,
Sheathing the steel in my adventrous body.

Alas you know, I am no Vaunter I,
My scars can witness, dumb although they are ,
That my report is just and full of truth:
But soft, methinks I do digress too much,
Citing my worthless praise: Oh pardon me ,
For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.

Marc. Now is my turn to speak: Behold this Child,
Of this was Tamora delivered,
The issue of an Irreligious Moor ,
Chief Architect and plotter of these woes,
The Villain is alive in Titus house,
And as he is, to witness this is true.
Now judge what course had Titus to revenge
These wrongs, unspeakable past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.
Now you have heard the truth, what say you Romans ?
Have we done ought amiss? shew us wherein,
And from the place where you behold us now,
The poor remainder of Andronicus,
Will hand in hand all headlong cast us down ,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains ,
And make a mutual closure of our house:
Speak Romans speak, and if you say we shall,
Lo hand in hand Lucius and I will fall.

Emili. Come come, thou reverent man of Rome ,
And bring our Emperour gently in thy hand ,
Lucius our Emperour : for well I know,
The common voice do cry it shall be so.

Mar. Lucius, all hail Romes Royal Emperour,
Go, go into old Titus sorrowfull house,
And hither hale that misbelieving Moor ,
To be adjudg'd some direfull slaughtering death,
As punishment for his most wicked life.
Lucius all hail to Romes gracious Governour.

Lucius

Luc. Thanks gentle Romans, may I govern so,
To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her wo.
But gentle people, give me ayme a-while,
For Nature puts me to a heavy task:
Stand all aloof, but Vnckle draw you neer
To shed obsequious tears upon this Trunk:
Oh take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,
These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd face,
The last true Duties of thy Noble Son.

Mar. A tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy Lips:
O were the sum of these that I should pay
Countless, and infinit, yet would I pay them.,

Luc. Come hither Boy, come, come, and learn of us
To melt in shows: thy Grandfire lov'd thee well,
Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee:
Sung thee asleep, his Loving Brest, thy Pillow.
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Meet, and agreeing with thine Infancy
In that respect then, like a loving Child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender Spring,
Because kind Nature doth require it so:
Friends should associat Friends, in Grief and Woe;
Bid him farwel, commit him to the Grave,
Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Boy. O Grandfire, Grandfire: even with all my heart
Would I were Dead, so you did Live again
O Lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping,
My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth:

Romans. You sad Andronici, have done with woes,
Give sentence on this execrable Wretch,
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him brest deep in earth, and famish him:
There let him stand, and rave, and cry for food:
If any one relieves, or pitties him,
For the offence, he dyes. This is our doom:
Some stay, to see him fastned in the earth.

Aaron. O why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?
I am no Baby I, that with base Prayers
I should repent the Evils I have done.
Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did,
Would I perform if I might have my will:
If one good Deed in all my life I did,
I doe repent it from my very Soul.

Luci. Some loving Friends convey the Emperor hence,
And give him buriall in his fathers grave.
My Father, and Lavinia, shall forthwith
Be closed in our Housholds Monument:
As for that heynous Tyger Tamora,
No funeral Rite, nor man in mournful Weeds,
No mournful Bell shall ring her Burial:
But throw her forth to Beast and Birds of prey:
Her life was Beast-like, and devoid of pitty,
And being so, shall have like want of pitty.
See justice done on Aaron that damn'd Moor,
From whom, our heavy haps had their beginning:
Then afterwards, to Order well the State.
That like Events may ne'r it ruinate. Exeunt Omnes.

FINIS,

THE TRAGEDIE OF ROMEO and JULIET.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, with Swords and Bucklers, of the House of Capulet.

Sampson.

Gregory: A my word we'll not carry coals.

Greg. No, for then we should be Colliers.

Samp. I mean, if we be in choler, we'll draw.

Greg. I while you live, draw your neck out o'th' Collar.

Samp. I strike quickly, being mov'd.

Greg. But thou art not quickly mov'd to strike.

Samp. A dog of the house of Mountague, moves me.

Greg. To move, is to stir: and to be valiant, is to stand:
Therefore, if thou art mov'd, thou runst away.

Samp. A dog of that house shall move me to stand:

I will take the wall of any Man or Maid of Mountagues.

Greg. That shews thee weak slave, for the weakest goes to the wall.

Samp. True, and therefore women being the weakest
Vessells, are ever thrust to the wall: therefore I will push Mountagues men from the wall, and thrust his Maids to the wall. (their men.)

Greg. The Quarrell is between our Masters, and us

Samp. 'Tis all one, I will shew my self a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will be civil with the Maids, and cut off their heads.

Greg. The heads of the Maids?

Samp. I, the heads of the Maids, or their maiden-heads;
Take it in what sense thou wilt.

Greg. They must take it in sense that feel it.

Samp. Me they shall feel while I am able to stand:
And 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Greg. 'Tis well thou art not Fish: if thou had'st, thou had'st been poor John. Draw thy Tool, here comes of the House of the Mountagens.

Enter two other Servingmen.

Samp. My naked weapon is out: quarrel, I will back thee.

Greg. How? Turn thy back and run?

Samp. Fear me not.

Greg. No marry: I fear thee.

Samp. Let us take the Law of our sides: let them begin.

Gr. I wilfrown as I pass by, & let them take it as they list.

Samp. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my Thumb at them, which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.

Abra. Doe you bite your Thumb at us sir?

Samp. I do bite my Thumb, sir.

Abra. Do you bite your Thumb at us sir?

Samp. Is the Law of our side, if I say I? Gre. No.

Samp. No sir, I do not bite my Thumb at you sir: but I bite my Thumb sir.

Greg. Do you quarrel sir?

Abra. Quarrel sir? no sir.

(as you.)

Samp. If you do sir, I am for you, I serve as good a man

Abra. No better?

Samp. Well sir.

Enter Benvolio.

Gre. Say better: here comes one of my masters kinsmen.

Samp. Yes better.

Abra. You Lye.

Samp. Draw if you be men. Gregory, remember thy washing blow. They fight.

Ben. Part Fools, put up your Swords, you know not what you do.

Enter Tibalt.

Tyba. What art thou drawn, among these heartless
Hinds? Turn thee Benvolio, look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace, put up thy Sword,
Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What draw, and talk of peace? I hate the word
As I hate hell, all Mountagues, and thee:
Have at thee Coward. Fight.

Enter three or four Citizens with Clubs.

Offic. Clubs, Bils, and Partisons, strike, beat them down,
Down with the Capulets, down with the Mountagues.

Enter old Capulet in his Gown, and his Wife.

Cap. What noise is this? Give me my long Sword ho?

Wife. A crutch, a crutch: why call you for a Sword?

Cap. My Sword I say: Old Mountague is come,
And flourishes his Blade in spight of me.

Enter old Mountague, and his wife.

Moun. Thou villain Capulet. Hold me not, let me go.

Wife. Thou shalt not stirr a foot to seek a Foe.

Enter Prince Eskales with his Train.

Prin. Rebellious Subjects, Enemies to peace,
Prophaners of this Neighbor-stained Steel,
Will they not hear? What ho, you Men, you Beasts,
That quench the fire of your pernicious Rage,
With purple Fountains issuing from your Veins:
On pain of Torture, from these bloody hands
Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground,
And hear the Sentence of your moved Prince.
Three civil Broyls, bred of an Ayery word,
By thee old Capulet and Mountague
Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets,
And made Verona's ancient Citizens
Cast by their Grave beseeching Ornament,
To wield old Partizans, in hands as old,

Cankred.

Cankred with peace, to part your Cankred hate,
If ever you disturb our streets again,
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
For this time all the rest depart away :
You Capulet shall go along with me,
And Mounague come you this afternoon,
To know our Fathers pleasure in this case :
To old Free-town, our common judgement place :
Once more on pain of death, all men depart. Exeunt.

Moun. Who set this antient quarrell new abroad ?
Speak Nephew, were you by when it began ?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary,
And yours close fighting ere I did approach,
I drew to part them, in the instant came
The fiery Tibalt, with his sword prepar'd,
Which as he breath'd defiance to my ears,
He swung about his head, and cut the winds,
Who nothing hurt withall, hiss'd him in scorn,
While we were enterchanging thrusts and blows,
Came more and more, and fought on part and part,
Till the Prince came, who parted either part.

Wife. O where is Romeo, saw you him to day ?
Right glad am I, he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipt Sun
Peer'd forth the golden window of the East,
A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad,
Where underneath the grove of Sycamour,
That West-ward rooteth from this City side,
So early walking did I see your Son ;
Towards him I made, but he was ware of me,
And stole into the covert of the wood ;
I measuring his affections by my own,
Which then most sought, where most might not be found,
Being one too many by my weary self,
Persued my honour, not pursuing his,
And gladly shun'd, who gladly fled from me.

Moun. Many a morning hath he there been seen,
With tears augmenting the fresh morning dew,
Adding to clouds, more clouds with his deep sighs,
But all so soon as the all-cheering Sun,
Should in the farthest East begin to draw
The shady Curtains from Auroras bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy Son,
And private in his Chamber pens himself,
Shuts up his windows, locks fair day-light out,
And makes himself an artificial night :
Black and portentous must this humour prove,
Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble Uncle do you know the cause ?

Moun. I neither know it, nor can learn of him.

Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means ?

Moun. Both by myself, and many other Friends,
But he his own affections Counsellor,
Is to himself (I will not say how true)
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm,
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the same.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,
We would as willingly give cure, as know.

Enter Romeo.

Fen. See where he comes, so please you step aside,
He know his grievance, or be much deny'd.

Moun. I would thou wert so happy by thy stay,
To hear true shrift. Come Madam let's away. Exeunt.

Ben. Good morrow Cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young ?

Ben. But new strook nine.

Rom. Ay me, sad hours seem long :

Was that my Father that went hence so fast ?

Ben. It was : what sadness lengthens Romeo's hours ?

Ro. Not having that, which having, makes them short.

Ben. In love.

Rom. Out.

Ben. Of love.

Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.

Ben. Alas that love so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof.

Rom. Alas that love, whose view is muffled still,
Should without eyes, see path-ways to his will :

Where shall we dine ? O me : what fray was here ?
Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all :

Here's much to do with hate, but more with love :

Why then, O brawling love, O loving hate,

O any thing of nothing first create :

O heavy lightness, serious vanity,

Mishapen Chaos of well-seeming forms,

Feather of lead, bright smoak, cold fire, sick health,

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is :

This love feel I, that feel no love in this,

Dost thou not laugh ?

Ben. No Couze, I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart, at what ?

Ben. At thy good hearts oppression.

Rom. Why such is loves transgression.

Griefs of mine own lye heavy in my breast ;

Which thou wilt propagate to have it prest

With more of thine, this love that thou hast shown,

Doth ad more grief, to too much of mine own.

Love is a smoak made with the fume of sighs,

Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in Lovers eyes,

Being vext, a Sea nourisht with loving tears,

What is it else ? a madness most discreet,

A choking gall, and a preserving sweet :

Farewell my Couze.

Ben. Soft, I will go along.

And if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. But I have lost my self, I am not here,

This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadness, who is that you love ?

Rom. What shall I grone and tell thee ?

Ben. Grone ? why no : but sadly tell me who.

Rom. A sick man in good sadness makes his will :
O, word ill urg'd to one that is so ill :

In sadness Cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near, when I suppos'd you lov'd.

Rom. A right good marks-man, and she's fair I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair Couze, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well in that hit you miss, she'll not be hit
With Cupids arrow, she hath Dians wit :

And in strong proof of chastity well arm'd :

From loves weak childish Bow, she lives uncharm'd.

She will not stay the siege of loving terms

Nor bide th'incounter of assailing eyes,

Nor ope her lap to Saint-seducing Gold :

O she is rich in beauty, only poor,

That when she dyes, with beauty dyes her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will still live chaste ?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste ?

For beauty serv'd with her severity,

Cuts beauty off from all posterity.

She

Shee is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,
To merit blifs by making me despair :
She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow
Doe I live dead, that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be ral'd by me, forget to think of her.

Rom. O teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes;
Examine other beauties. (more,

Rom. 'Tis the way to call hers (exquisite) in question
Those happy masks that kiss fair Ladies brows,
Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair :
He that is stricken blind, cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eye-sight lost :
Shew me a Mistress that is passing fair :
What doth her beauty serve but as a note,
Where I may read who past that passing fair.
Farewel, thou can'st not teach me to forget.

Ben. Ile pay that doctrine, or else die in debt. Exeunt.

Enter Capulet, County Paris, and the Clown.

Capu. Mountague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike, and 'tis not hard I think,
For men so old as we, to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckning are you both,
And pittty 'tis you liv'd at ods so long :
But now my Lord, what say you to my sute ?

Capu. But saying ore what I have said before,
My Child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years,
Let two more Summers wither in their pride
Ere we may think her ripe to be a Bride.

Par. Younger than she, are happy mothers made.

Capu. And too soon marr'd are those so early made :
Earth up hath swallowed all my hopes but she,
She is the hopeful Lady of my earth :
But wooe her gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent, is but a part,
And she agree, within her scope of choice,
Lies my consent, and fair according voice :
This night I hold an old accustom'd feast,
Whereto I have invited many a Guest,
Such as I love, and you among the store,
One more, most welcome makes my number more :
At my poor house, look to behold this night,
Earth-treading stars, that make dark heaven light,
Such comfort as do lusty young men feel,
When well apparell'd April on the heel
Of limping Winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh Female buds shall you this night
Inherit at my house : hear all, all see :
And like her most, whose merit most shall be :
Which one more view, of many, mine being one,
May stand in number, though in reck'ning none.
Come, go with me : go firrah trudge about
Through fair Verona, find those persons out,
Whose names are written there, and to them say,
My house and welcome, on their pleasure stay. Exit.

Ser. Find them out whose names are written. Here it is written, that the Shoemaker should meddle with his Yard, and the Tayler with his Last, the Fisher with his Penfil, and the Painter with his Nets. But I am sent to find those persons whose names are writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ (I must to the learned) in good time.

Enter Benvolio and Romeo.

Ben. Tut man, one fire burns out anothers burning,
One pain is less'ned by anothers anguish :

Turn giddy, and be holp by backward turning :
One desperate grief, cures with anothers languish :
Take thou some new infection to the eye,
And the rank poyson of the old will die.

Rom. Your Plantan leaf is excellent for that.

Ben. For what I pray thee ?

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why Romeo art thou mad ?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a mad man is :
Shut up in prison, kept without my food,
VVhipt and tormented : and Godden good fellow.

Ser. Godgigoden, I pray sir can you read ?

Rom. I mine own fortune in my misery.

Ser. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book.

But I pray can you read any thing you see ?

Rom. I, if I know the Letters and the Language.

Ser. Yesay honestly, rest you merry.

Rom. Stay fellow, I can read.

He reads the Letter.

*S*eigneur Martino, and his wife and daughter: County Anselm and his beauctious sisters: the Lady widdow of Vitru-vio, Seigneur Placentio, and his lovely Neeces: Mercutio and his brother Valentine, mine Uncle Capulet, his wife and daughters : my fair Neece Rosaline, Livia, Seigneur Valen-tio, and his Cosen Tybalt : Lucio, and the lively Helena.
A fair assembly, whether should they come ?

Ser. Up.

Rom. VVhither? to supper ?

Ser. To our house.

Rom. VVhose house ?

Ser. My Matters.

Rom. Indeed I should have askt you that before.

Ser. Now Ile tell you without asking. My Matter is the great rich Capulet, and if you be not of the house of Mountagues, I pray come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry. Exit.

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulets,
Supps the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lovest :
VVith all the admired Beauties of Verona,
Go thither, and with unattainted eye,
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy Swan a Crow.

Rom. VVhen the devout religion of mine eye
Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fire :
And these who often drown'd could never die,
Transparent Heretiques be burnt for liers.
One fairer than my love ! the all-seeing Sun
Nere saw her match, since first the world begun.

Ben. Tut, tut, you saw her fair, none else being by,
Her self poys'd with her self in either eye :
But in that Crystal scales, let there be wai'd,
Your Ladies love against some other Maid,
That I will shew you, shining at this Feast,
And she'll shew scant well, that now shews best.

Rom. Ile go along, no such sight to be shewn,
But to rejoyce in splendor of mine own.

Enter Capulets Wite and Nurse.

Wife. Nurse where's my daughter? call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now by my Maidenhead, at twelve year old
I bad her come, what Lamb, what Lady-bird, God forbid,
Where's this Girl ? what Juliet ?

Enter Juliet.

Juliet. How now, who calls ?

Nur. Your Mother.

Juliet. Madam I am here, what is your will ?

Wife. This is the matter: Nurse give leave a while, we must must talk in secret. Nurse come back again, I have remembered me, thou'lt hear our counsel. Thou knowest my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. Faith I can tell her age unto an hour.

Wife. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. He lay fourteen of my teeth,
And yet to my teeth be it spoken,
I have but four, she's not fourteen,
How long is it now to Lammas tide?

Wife. A fortnight and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all daies in the year come Lammas Eve at night shall she be fourteen. Susan, and she, God rest all Christian soules, were of an age. Well Susan is with God, she was too good for me. But as I said, on Lammas Eve at night shall she be fourteen, that shall she marrie, I remember it well. 'Tis since the Earthquake now eleven years, and she was wean'd, I never shall forget it, of all the daies in the year, upon that day: for I had then laid Worm-wood to my Dug sitting in the Sun under the Dove-house wall, my Lord and you were then at Mantua, nay I do bear a brain. But as I said, when it did cast the Worm-wood on the Nipple of my Dug, and felt it bitter, pretty fool, to see it reachy, and fall out with the Dug, Shake quoth the Dove house, 'twas no need I trow to bid me trudge: and since that time it is eleven yeares, for then she could stand alone, nay bi'th' Rood she could have run, and waddled all about: for even the day before she broke her brow, and then my Husband God be with his soul, a was a merry man, took up the Child, yea quoth he, dost thou fall upon thy face? thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more wit, wilt thou not Juliet? And by my holy-dam, the pretty wretch left crying, and said I: to see now how a Jest shall come about. I warrant, and I should live a thousand yeares, I never should forget it: wilt thou not Juliet quoth he? and pretty fool it stinted, and said I.

Old La. Enough of this, I pray thee hold thy peace.

Nur. Yes Madam, yet I cannot chuse but laugh, to think it should leave crying, and say I: and yet I warrant it had upon its brow, a bump as big as a young Cockrels stone: A perillous knock, and it cryed bitterly. Yea quoth my husband, fall'st upon thy face, thou wilt fall backward when thou comest to age: wilt thou not Juliet? It stinted, and said I.

Julie. And stent thee too I pray thee Nurse, say I.

Nur. Peace I have done: God mark thee to his grace, thou wast the prettiest Babe that ere I nurs't, and I might live to see thee married once, I have my wish.

Old La. Marry that marry is the very theam I came to talk of, tell me daughter Juliet, How stands your disposition to be Married?

Julie. 'Tis an hour that I dream not of.

Nur. An hour, were not I thine only Nurse, I would say that thou hadst suck't wisdom from thy teat.

Old La. Well think of marriage now, younger then you Here in Verona, Ladies of esteem, Are made already Mothers. By my count, I was your Mother, much upon these yeares. That you are now a maid, thus then in brief: The valiant Paris seeks you for his Love.

Nurse. A man young Lady, Lady, such a man as all the world. Why hee's a man of waxe.

Old La. Verona's Summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay he's a flower, in faith a very flower.

Old La. What say you, can you love the Gentleman? This night you shall behold him at our Feast,

Read ore the volume of young Paris face,
And find delight, writ there with Beauties pen:
Examine every several lineament,
And see how one another lends content:
And what obscur'd in this fair volume lies,
Find written in the Margent of his eyes,
This precious Book of Love, this unbound Lover,
To beautifie him, only lacks a Cover.

The fish lives in the Sea, and ris much pride
For fair without, the fair within to hide:
That Book in manies eyes doth share the glory,
That in Gold claspes, Lockes in the Golden story:
So shall you share all that he doth possess,
By having him, meking your self no less.

Nurse. No less, nay bigger: women grow by men.

Old La. See briefly, can you like of Paris love?

Julie. He look to like, if looking liking move.
But no more deep will I endart mine eye,
Then your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter a Servingman.

Ser. Madam, the Guests are come, supper serv'd up, you call'd, my young Lady ask't for, the Nurse curst in the Pantery, and every thing in extremity: I must hence to wait, I beseech you follow straight.

Exit.

Mo. We follow thee, Juliet, the County stiaies.

Nurse. Go Girl, seek happy nights to happy daies.

Exeunt.

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, with five or six other Maskers, Torch-bearers.

Rom. What shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?
Or shall we on without Apology?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity,
Weel have no Cupid hood-winkt with a Scarf,
Bearing a Tartars painted Bow of lath,
Skating the Ladies like a Crow-keeper.
But let them measure us by what they will.

Weele measure them a measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a Torch, I am not for this ambling.
Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I believe me, you have dancing shoes
With nimble soles, I have a sole of Lead,
So stikes me to the ground, I cannot move.

Mer. You are a Lover, borrow Cupid's wings,
And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore impeaced with his shaft,
To soar with his light feathers, and to bond:
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe,
Under loves heavy burden do I sink.

Hora. And to sink in it should you burden love,
Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough,
Too rude, too boysterous, it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love,
Prick love for pricking, and you beat love down,
Give me a Case to put my visage in,
A Visor for a Visor, what care I

What curious eye doth quote deformities:
Here are the Beetle-browes shall blush for me.

Ben. Come knock and enter, and no sooner in,
But every man berake him to his legs.

Rom. A Torch for me, let wantrons light of heart
Tickle the fenceless rushes with their heels:
For I am proverb'd with a Grandfier Phrase,
He be a Candle-holder and look on,
The Game was nere so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut, 'dun's the Mause, the Constables own word,
If thou art dun, weele draw thee from the mire.
Or save your reverence love, wherein thou stickest
Up to the eares, come we burn day-light ho.

Rom. Nay that's not so.

Mer. I mean sir I. delay.

We wast our lights in vain, lights, lights, by day;
Take our good meaning, for our Judgement sits
Five times in thar, ere once in our fine wits.

Rom. And we mean well in going to this Mask,
But 'tis no wit to go.

Mer. Why may one ask?

Rom. I dreamt a dream to night.

Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Well what was yours?

Mer. That Dreamers often lie.

Rom. In bed asleep while they do dream things true.

Mer. O then I see Queen Mab hath been with you:
She is the Fayries Midwife, and she comes in shape no bigger then an Agat-stone, on the fore-finger of an Alderman, drawn with a team of little Atomies, over mens noses as they lie asleep: her Waggon Spoke's made of long Spinners legs: the Cover of the wings of Grasshoppers, her Trace of the smallest Spiders web, her Collars of the Moon-shines warry beames, her Whip of Creakers bone,
the Lash of filme, her Waggoner, a small gray-coated Gnat, not half so big as a round little worm, prickt from the Lazy-finger of a woman. Her Chariot is an empty Halfelmut, made by the Joyner Squirrel or old Grub, time out of mind, the Fayries Coach-makers: and in this state she gallops night by night, through Lovers braines: and then they dream of Love. On Countries knees, that dream on Curfies strait: ore Lawyers fingers, who strait dream on Fees, ore Ladies lips, who strait on kisses dream, which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues, because their breath with Sweet meats tainted are. Sometime she gallops ore a Courtiers nose, and then dreames he of smelling out a suit: and sometime comes she with a Tich-pigs tale, tickling a Parsons nose as he lies asleep, then he dreams of another Benefice. Sometime she driverh ore a Souldiers neck, and then dreams he of cutting Forraign throats, of Breaches, Ambuscadoes, Spanish Blades: Of Healths five Fadom deep, and then anon drums in his eares, at which he starts and wakes, and being thus frighted, swears a prayer or two, and sleeps again: this is that very Mab that plats the Manes of Horses in the night: and bakes the Elflocks in foul fluttish haïres, which once entangled, much misfortune bodes.

This is the hag, when Maids lie on their backs,
That presses them, and learns them first to bear,
Making them women of good carriage:
This is she—

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace.

Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True I talk of dreames:

Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing, but vain phantasie,
Which is as thin of substance as the Air,
And more unconstant then the wind, who woos
Even now the frozen bosom of the North:
And being anger'd, puffes away from thence,
Turning his side to the dew dropping South.

Ben. This wind you talk of blowes us from our selves,
Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear too early, for my mind misgives,
Some consequence yet hanging in the stars,

Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this nights revels, and expire the term
Of a despised life clos'd in my brest:
By some vile forfeit of untimely death,
But he that hath the stirrage of my course,
Direft my sute: On lusty Gentlemen,

Ben. Strike Drum.

They march about the Stage, and Servingmen come forth with their napkins.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Where's Porpan, that he helps not to take away?
He shift a Trencher? He scrape a Trencher.

1. When good Manners, shall lie in one or two mens hands, and they unwasht too, 'tis a foul thing.

Ser. Away with the Joyn-stooles, remove the Court-cubbord, look to the Plate: good thou, save me a piece of Marchpane, and as thou lovest me, let the Porter let in Susan Grindstone, and Nell, Anthony and Porpan.

2. I Boy ready.

Ser. You are lookt for, cal'd for, askt for, and sought for,
in the great Chamber.

1. We cannot be here and there too, chearly Boyes,
Be brisk a while, and the longer liver take all.

Exeunt.

Enter all the Guests and Gentlemen to the Maskers.

1 Capu. Welcome Gentlemen,
Ladies that have their toes
Unplagu'd with Cornes, will walk about with you:
Ah me Mistresses, which of you all
Will now deny to dance? She that makes dainry,
She Ile swear hath Cornes: am I come neer ye now?
Welcome Gentlemen, I have seen the day
That I have worn a Visor, and could tell
A whispering tale in a fair Ladies eare:
Such as would please: 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone,
You are welcom Gentlemen, come Musicians play:

Musick plaies: and they dance.

A Hall, hall, give room, and foot it Girles,
More light ye Knaves, and turn the Tables up:
And quench the fire, the Room is grown too hot.
Ah sirrah, this unlookt for sport comes well:
Nay sit, nay sit, good Cozin Capulet,
For you and I, are past our dancing daies:
How long 'ist now since last your self and I
Were in a Mask?

2. Capu. Berlady thirty yeares.

1 Capu. What man! 'is not so much, 'tis not so much,
'Tis since the Nuptial of Lucentio,
Come Penticost as quickly as it will,
Some five and twenty years, and then we Maskt.

2. Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more, his Son is elder sir:
His Son is thirty.

3. Cap. Will you tell me that?

His Son was but a Ward two years ago.

Rom. What Lady is that which doth enrich the hand of yonder Knight?

Ser. I know not sir.

Rom. O she doth teach the Torches to burn bright:
Her beauty hangs upon the cheek of night,
Like a rich Jewel in an Æthiops ear.
Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear:
So shews a Snowy Dove trooping with Crowes,
As yonder Lady ore her fellowes showes:
The measure done, Ile watch her place of stand,
And touching hers, make blessed my rude hand.

Did my heart love till now, forswear it sight,
For I never saw true beauty till this night.

Tib. This by his voice should be a Montague.
Fetch me my Rapier, Boy, what dares the Slave
Come hither cover'd with an antique face,
To sleet and scorn at our Solemnity?
Now by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

Cap. Why how now kinsman,
Wherefore storm you so?

Tib. Uncle this is a Montague, our foe:
A Villain that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our Solemnity this night.

Cap. Young Romeo is it?

Tib. 'Tis he, that Villain Romeo.

Cap. Content thee gentle Coz, let him alone,
A bears him like a portly Gentleman:
And to say truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a verruous and well govern'd youth:
I would not for the wealth of all the town,
Here in my house do him disparagement:
Therefore be patient, take no note of him,
It is my will, the which if thou respect,
Shew a fair presence, and put off these frowns,
An ill becoming semblance for a Feast.

Tib. It fits vvhen such a Villain is a guest,
He not endure him.

Cap. He shall be endur'd.
What Goodman-boy. I say he shall, go to,
Am I the Master here or you? go to,
Youle not endure him, God shall mend my soul,
Youle make a mutiny among the Guests:
You will set cock a hoop, youle be the man!

Tib. Why Uncle 'tis a shame.

Cap. Go to, go to.
You are a saucy Boy, 'tis so indeed?
This trick may chance to scath you, I know what,
You must contrary me, marry 'tis time.
Well said my hearts, you are a princ Cox, goe,
Be quiet or more light, for shame,
He make you quiet. What, cheerly my hearts.

Tib. Patience perforce, with wilful choller meeting,
Makes my flesh tremble in their different greeting:
I will withdraw, but this intrusion shall
Now seeming sweet, convert to bitter gall.

Rom. If I prophane with my unworthiest hand,
This holy shrine, the gentle sin is this,
My lips two blushing pilgrims ready stand,
To smooth that rough touch, with a tender kisse.

Jul. Good Pilgrim,
You do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly devotion shews in this,
For Saints have hands, the Pilgrims hand, do touch,
And palme to palme, is holy Palmers kisse.

Rom. Have not Saints Lipps, and holy Palmers too?

Jul. I Pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.

Rom. O then dear Saint let lips do what hands do,
They pray (grant thou) least faith turn to despair.

Jul. Saints do not move,
Though grant for prayers sake.

Rom. Then move not while my prayers effect do take:
Thus from my lips, by thine my sin is purg'd.

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took,

Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly urg'd:
Give me my sin again.

Jul. You kisse by th'book.

Nur. Madam your Mother craves a word with you.

Rom. What is her Mother?

Nur. Marry Batchler,
Her Mother is the Lady of the house,
And a good Lady, and a wise, and verruous,
I Nur'st her Daughter that you talk withall:
I tell you, he that can lay hold of her,
Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?

O dear account! my life is my foes debt.

Ben. Away, be gone, the sport is at the best.

Rom. I, so I fear, the more is my unrest.

Cap. Nay Gentlemen prepare not to be gone,
We have a trifling foolish Banquet towards:
Is it e'ne so? why then I thank you all.

I thank you honest Gentlemen, good night:
More Torches here come on, then let's to bed.
Ah firrah, by my faie it waxes late.

He to my rest.

Exeunt.

Jul. Come hither Nurse,
What is yond Gentleman?

Nur. The Sonne and Heir of old Tyberis.

Jul. What's he that now is going out of door?

Nur. Marry that I think to be young Petruchio.

Jul. What's he that follows here, that would not dance?

Nur. I know not.

Jul. Go aske his name; if he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedding bed.

Nur. His name is Romeo, and a Montague,
The only Son of our great Enemy.

Jul. My onely Love sprung from my onely hate,
Too early seen, unknown, and known, too late,
Prodigious birth of Love it is to me,
That I must love a loathed Enemy.

Nur. What's this? what's this?

Jul. A rime I learn'd even now
Of one I danc'd withall.

One calls within, Juliet.

Nur. Anon, anon:
Come let's away, the strangers all are gone.

Exeunt.

Chorus.

Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young affection gapes to be his Heir,
That fair, for which Love groan'd for and would die,
With tender Juliet matcht, is now not fair
Now Romeo is beloved, and Loves again,
A like bewitched by the charm of looks:
But to his foe suppos'd he must complain,
And she steal Loves sweet bait from fearful hooks
Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breath such vows, as Lovers use to swear;
And she as much in Love, her means much lesse,
To meet her new Beloved any where:
But passion lends them Power, time, means to meet,
Tempting extremities with extream sweet.

Enter Romeo alone.

Rom. Can I go forward when my heart is here?
Turn back Dull earth, and find my Centor out.

Enter Benvolio with Mercutio.

Ben. Romeo, my Cozen Romeo, Romeo.

Mer. He is wise,

And on my life hath stoln him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leapt this Orchard wall.

Call good Mercutio:

Nay, he conjure too.

I i i 2

Mer.

Mer. Romeo Humours, Madam, Passion, Lover,
Appear thou in the likeness of a fight,
Speak but one time, and I am satisfied :
Cry me but ayme, Couply but Love and day,
Speak to my Goship Venus one fair word,
One Nickname for her putblind Son and her,
Young Abraham Cupid he that shot so true,
When King Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid,
He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth not,
The Ape is dead, and I must conjure him,
I conjure thee by Rosalines bright eies,
By her high forehead, and her Scarlet lip,
By her fine foot, straight leg, and Quivering thigh,
And the Demeans that there adjacent lie,
That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. And if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him, 'twould anger him,
To raise a spirit in his Mistress circle,
Of some strange nature, letting it there stand
Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down,
That were some spight.

My invocation is fair and honest, and in his Mistress name
I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these Trees
To be comforted with the Humerous night :
Blind is his Love, and best befits the dark.

Mer. If Love be blind, Love cannot hit the mark,
Now will he sit under a Medler tree,
And with his Mistress were that kind of Fruit,
As Maids call Medlers when they laugh alone,
O Romeo that she were, O that she were
An open, or thou a Poprin Pear,
Romeo goodnight, ile to my Trundle-bed,
This Field-bed is too cold for me to sleep
Come shall we go ?

Ben. Go then, for 'tis in vain to seek him here —
That means not to be found.

Exeunt.

Rom. He jests at scarres that never felt a wound,
But soft, what light through yonder window breaks ?
It is the East, and Juliet is the Sun,
Arise fair Sun, and kill the envious Moon,
Who is already sick and pale with grief,
That thou her Maid, art farre more fair then she :
Be not her Maid since she is envious,
Her vestall Livery is but sick and green,
And none but fools do wear it, cast it off :
It is my Lady, O it is my Love, O that she knew she were,
She speaks, yet she saies nothing ; what of that ?
Her eye discourfes, I will answer it :
I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks :
Two of the fairest Starrs in all the heaven,
Having some businesse do entreat her eies,
To twinkle in their Spheres till they return.
What if her eies were there, they in her head,
The brightnesse of her cheek would shame those starres,
As day-light dorth a Lamp, her eye in heaven,
Would through the airy Region stream so bright,
That Birds would sing and think it were not night :
See how she leans her cheek upon her hand.
O that I were a Glove upon that hand.
That I might touch that cheek.

Jul. Ayme.

Rom. She speaks.

Oh speak again bright Angell, for thou art
As glorious to this night being ore my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven

Unto the white upturned wondring eies
Of mortalls that fall back to gaze on him,
When he bestrids the lazy puffing Clouds,
And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo, wherefore art thou Romeo ?
Deny thy Father, and refuse thy name :
Or if thou wilt not, be but sworn my Love,
And ile no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Shall I hear more, or shall I (peak at this ?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my Enemy :
Thou art thy self, though nor a Mountague,
What's Mountague ? it is nor hand nor foot,
Nor arme, nor face, O be some other name
Belonging to a man.

What's in a name ? that which we call a Rose,
By any other word would smell as sweet,
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd
Retain that dear perfection which he owes,
Without that title Romeo, doffe thy name,
And for thy name which is no part of thee,
Take all my self.

Rom. I take thee at thy word :
Call me but Love, and ile be new baptiz'd,
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that thus bescreen'd in night
So stumblest on my counsell ?

Rom. By a name,
I know not how to tell thee who I am :
My name dear Saint, is hateful to my self,
Because it is an enemy to thee,
Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words
Of thy tongues uttering, yet I know the sound.
Art thou not Romeo, and a Mountague ?

Rom. Neither fair Maid, if either thee dislike.

Jul. How cam'st thou hither.

Tell me, and wherefore ?
The Orchard walls are high, and hard to climb,
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With Loves light wings
Did I ore-perch these Walls,
For stony Limits cannot hold Love out,
And what Love can do, that dares Love attempt :
Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder thee.

Rom. Alack there lies more peril in thine eie,
Then twenty of their swords, look thou but sweet,
And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee here.

Rom. I have nights cloak to hide me from their eies
And but thou love me, let them find me here,
My life were better ended by their hate,
Then death proroged wanting of thy Love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place ?

Rom. By Love that first did prompt me to enquire,
He lent me counsel, and I lent him eies,
I am no Pilot, yet wert thou as far
As that vast shore : wash'd with the farthest Sea,
I should adventure for such Merchandise.

Jul. Thou knowest the maske of night is one my face,
Else would a Maiden blush bepaint my cheek,
For that which thou hast heard me speak to night,
Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain, deny
What I have spoke, but farewell Complements
Dost thou Love ? O I know thou wilt say I,

And

And I will take thy word, yet if thou swear'st,
Thou mayest prove false, at Lovers perjuries
They say Love laughs, oh gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:
Or if thou thinkest I am too quickly won,
Ile frown and be perverse, and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo: But else not for the world.
In truth fair Mountague I am too fond:
And therefore thou maist think my haviour light,
But trust me Gentleman, Ile prove more true,
Then those that have more coynng to be strange,
I should have been more strange I must confess,
But that thou overheard'st ere I was ware
My true Loves passion, therefore pardon me,
And not impute this yielding to light Love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder Moon I vow:
That tips with silver all these Fruit-tree tops.

Jul. O swear not by the Moon, th'unconstant Moon,
That monthly changes in her circled Orbe,
Lest that thy Love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all:
Or if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the God of my Idolatry,
And Ile believe thee.

Rom. If my hearts dear love —

Jul. Well do not swear although I joy in thee,
I have no joy of this contract to night,
It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden,
Too like the lightning which doth cease to be
Ere one can say, it lightens, Sweet good night:
This bud of Love by Summers ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous Flower when next we meet:
Goodnight: goodnight, as sweet repose and rest,
Come to thy heart, as that within my breast.

Rom. O wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have to night?

Rom. Th'exchange of thy Loves faithful vow of mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou did'st request it:

And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Would'st thou withdraw it?

For what purpose Love?

Jul. But to be frank and give it thee again,
And yet I wish but for the thing I have,
My bounty is as boundless as the Sea,
My Love as deep, the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite.
I hear some noise within, dear Love adieu.

Anon good Nurse, sweet Mountague be true:
Stay but a little, I will come again.

Rom. O blessed blessed night, I am afeard
Being in night, all this is but a dream,
Too flattering sweet to be substantial.

Jul. Three words dear Romeo,
And goodnight indeed,
If that thy bent of love be Honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to morrow,
By one that Ile procure to come to thee,
Where, and what time thou wilt perform the Rite,
And all my Fortunes at thy foot Ile lay,
And follow thee my Lord, throughout the world.

Within: Madam.
I come, anon: but if thou meanest not well,
I do beseech thee.

Within: Madam

(By and by I come.)

To cease thy strife, and leave me to my grief,
To morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul.

Jul. A thousand times good night.

Exit.

Rom. A thousand times the worse to want thy light,
Love goes toward Love as school boys from their books,
But Love from Love, towards school with heavy looks,

Enter Juliet again.

Jul. Hift Romeo hift: O for a Falkners voice,
To lure this Tassel gentle back again,
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud,
Else would I tear the Cave where Echo lies,
And make her ayry tongue more hoarse, then with
The repetition of my Romeo.

Rom. It is my soul that calls upon my name.
How silver sweet, sound Lovers tongues by night,
Like softest Musick to attending eares.

Jul. Romeo.

Rom. My sweet.

Jul. What a clock to morrow
Shall I send to thee?

Rom. By the hour of Nine.

Jul. I will not fail, 'tis twenty years till then,
I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember'st.

Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,
Remembring how I love thy company.

Rom. And Ile still stay, to have thee still forget,
Forgetting any other name but this.

Jul. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee gone.

And yet no further then a wantons Bird,
That lets it hop a little from his hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted Gyves,
And with a silken thred plucks it again,
So loving jealous of his liberty.

Rom. I would I were thy bird.

Jul. Sweet so would I,
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing:
Goodnight, goodnight.

Rom. Parting is such sweet sorrow,
That I shall say goodnight till it be morrow.

Jul. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast.

Exit.

Rom. Would I were sleep and peace so sweet to rest,
The gray-ey'd morn smiles on the frowning night,
Checking the Eastern Clouds with streaks of light,
And darkness fleckel'd like a drunkard reeles,
From forth dayes pathway, made by Titans wheelles,
Hence will I to my Ghostly Friers close Cell,
His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell.

Exit.

Enter Frier alone with a basket.

Fri. Now ere the Sun advance his burning eye,
The day to chear, and nights dank dew to dry,
I must up-fill this Oser Cage of ouths,
With baleful weeds, and precious juyced flowers,
The earth that's Natures mother, is her Tomb,
What is her burying grave that is her womb:
And from her womb children of divers kind

We sucking on her natural bosom find :
 Many for many vertues excellent :
 None but for some, and yet all different.
 O mickle is the powerful grace that lies
 In Plants, Herbs, Stones, and their true qualities :
 For nought so vile, that on the earth doth live,
 But to the earth some special good doth give.
 Nor ought so good, but strain'd from that fair use,
 Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse.
 Vertue it self turnes vice being misapplied.
 And vice sometime by action dignified.

Enter Romeo.

Within the infant rind of this weak flower,
 Poyson hath residence, and medicine power :
 For this being smelt, with that part cheares each part,
 Being tasted slayes all senses with the heart.
 Two such oppos^t Kings encamp them still,
 In man as well as he rbs grace and rude will:
 And where the worser is predominant,
 Full soon the Canker death eats up that Plant.

Rom. Good morrow Father.

Fri. Benedicite.

What early tongue so sweet salute them ?
 Young Son, it argues a distempered head,
 So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed ;
 Care keeps his watch in every old mans eye,
 And where Care lodgeth, sleep will never lie :
 But where unbrused youth with unstuff'd brain
 Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign ;
 Therefore thy carlines doth me assure,
 Thou art up-rouz'd with some distemperature ;
 Or if not so, then here I hit it right.

Our Romeo hath not been in bed to night,

Rom. That last is true, the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. God pardon sin : wast thou with Rosaline ?

Rom. With Rosaline, my Ghostly Father ? No,
 I have forgot that name, and that Names woe.

Fri. That's my good Son, but where hast thou been then ?

Rom. He tell thee ere thou ask it me agen :

I have been feasting with mine enemy,
 Where on a sudden one hath wounded me,
 That's by me wounded : both our remedies
 Within thy help and holy physick lies :
 I bear no hatred, blessed man : for lo
 My intercession likewise reads my foe.

Fri. Be plain good Son, rest homely in thy drift,
 Ridling confession, finds but ridling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know my hearts dear Love is set,
 On the fair daughter of rich Capulet :

As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine ;
 And all combin'd, save what thou must combine
 By holy marriage : when, and where, and how,
 We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow :
 He tell thee as we pass, but this I pray,
 That thou consent to marry us to day.

Fri. Holy S. Francis, what a change is here ?
 Is Rosaline that thou didst love so dear

So soon forsaken ? young mens Love then lies
 Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.

Jesu Maria, what a deal of brine
 Hath wast thy fallow cheeks for Rosaline ?

How much salt water thrown away in wast,
 To season Love, that of it doth not tast.

The Sun not yet thy sighes, from heaven clears,
 Thy old groans yet ring in my ancient eares ;
 Lo here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit,

Of an old tear that is not wast off yer.

If ere thou wast thy self, and these woes thine,

Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline.

And art thou chang'd ? pronounce this sentence then
 Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.

Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And bad'st me bury Love.

Fri. Not in a grave,

To lay one in, another out to have.

Rom. I pray thee chide me not, her I Love now

Doth grace for grace, and Love for Love allow :

The other did not so.

Fri. Oh she knew well,

Thy Love did read by rote, that could not spell :

But come young waverer, come go with me,

In one respect, Ile thy assistant be :

For this alliance may so happy prove,

To turn your household rancord to pure Love.

Rom. O let us hence, I stand on sudden haste.

Fri. Wisely and slow, they stumble that run fast.

Exeunt.

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be ? came he not home to night ?

Ben. Not to his Fathers, I spoke with his man.

Mer. Why that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman to old Capulet, hath sent a Letter to his Fathers house.

Mer. A challenge on my life.

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man that can write, may answer a Letter.

Ben. Nay he will answer the Letters Master how he dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas poor Romeo, he is already dead, stab'd with a white wenches black eye, run through the ear with a Love-song, the very pin of his heart, cleft with the blind Bow-boys-bur-shaft, and is he a man to encounter Tybalt ?

Ben. Why what i Tybalt ?

Mer. More then Prince of Cats. Oh he's the Courageous
 Captain of Complements : he fights as you sing pricksong, keeps time, distance, and proportion, he rests his minum, one, two, and the third in your Bosom : the very butcher of a silk button, a Dualist, a Dualist : a Gentleman of the very first house of the first and second cause : ah the immortal passado, the punto rever so, the Hay.

Ben. The what ?

Mer. The Pox of such antique lispings affecting phantasies, these new tuners of accent : Jesu a very good blade,
 a very tall man, a very good whore. Why is not this a lamentable thing Grandfire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies : these fashion-mongers, these pardon-me's, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench. O their bones, their bones.

Enter Romeo.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his Roe, like a dried Herring. O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified ? Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flow'd in : Laura to his Lady was a Kitchen wench, marry she had a better Love to berime her : Dido a dowdy, Cleopatra a Gipsie, Hellen and Hero, hildings and harlots : Thisby a gray eye or so, but not to the purpose
 Signior Romeo, Bonjour, there's a French salutation to your French

French flop : you gave us the counterfeit fairly last night :

Romeo. Good morrow to you both, what counterfeit did I give you ?

Mer. The slip sir, the slip, can you not conceive ?

Rom. Pardon Mercutio, my businesse was great, and in such a case as mine, a man may strain courtesie.

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning to courtesie.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pinck of courtesie.

Rom. Pinke for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why then is my Pump well flow'd.

Mer. Sure wit, follow me this jeaft, now till thou hast worn out thy Pump, that when the single sole of it is worn, the jeaft may remain after the wearing, sole-fingular.

Rom. O single sol'd jeft,
Soly singular, for the singlenesse.

Mer. Come between us good Benvolio, my wit faints.

Rom. Swits and Spurres,
Swits and Spurs, or ile cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if our wits run the wild-Goose chase, I am done : For thou hast more of the Wild-Goose in one of thy wits, then I am sure I have in my whole five. Was I with you there for the Goose ?

Rom. Thou was never with me for any thing, when thou wast not there for the Goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jeft.

Rom. Nay, good Goose bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter-sweeting,
It is a most sharp sawce.

Rom. And is it not well serv'd into a sweet Goose ?

Mer. Oh here's a wit of Cheverell, that stretches from an ynch narrow, to an ell broad.

Rom. I stretch it out for that word, broad, which added to the Goose, proves the farre and wide, abroad Goose.

Mer. Why is not this better now, then groaning for Love, now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo : now art thou what thou art, by Art as well as by Nature, for this driveling Love is like a great Natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bable in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desir'st me to stop in my Tale against the

Ben. Thou would'st else have made thy tale large.

Mer. O thou art deceiv'd, I would have made it short, or I was come to the whole depth of my Tale, and meant indeed to occupy the argument no longer.

Enter Nurse and her man.

Rom. Here's goodly geare.
A sayle, a sayle.

Mer. Two, two : a Shirt and a Smock.

Nur. Peter ?

Peter. Anon.

Nur. My Fan Peter ?

Mer. Good Peter to hide her face :
For her Fan's the fairer face ?

Nur. God ye good morrow Gentlemen.

Mer. God ye gooden fair Gentewomen,

Nur. Is it gooden ?

Mer. 'Tis no lesse I tell you : for the bawdy hand of the Dyall is now upon the prick of Noon.

Nur. Out upon you : what a man are you ?

Rom. One Gentlewoman,
That God hath made, himself to, mar.

Nur. By my troth it is said, for himself to, mar quotha Gentleman, can any of you tell me whete I may find the young Romeo ?

Romeo. I can tell you : but young Romeo will be older when you have found him, then he was when you sought him : I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nur. You say well.

Mer. Yea is the worst well.

Very well took : Ifaith, wisely, wisely.

Nur. If you be he sir,
I desire some confidence with you ?

Ben. She will invite him to some Supper.

Mer. A baud, a baud, a baud. So ho.

Rom. What hast thou found ?

Mer. No Hare sir, unlesse a Hare sir in a Lenten pie, that is something stale and hoare ere it be spent.

An old Hare hoar, and an old Hare hoar is very good meat in Lent.

But a hare that is hoar, is too much for a score, when it hoars ere it be spent,

Romeo will you come to your Fathers ? Wee'l to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell auncient Lady :
Farewell Lady, Lady, Lady.

Exit. Mercutio, Benvolio.

Nur. I pray you sir, what sawcy Merchant was this that was so full of his ropery ?

Rom. A Gentleman Nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute, then he will stand to in a Mone:h.

Nur. And a speak any thing against me, ile take him down, and a were lustier then he is, and twenty such Jacks : and if I cannot, ile find those that shall : scurvy knave, I am none of his flurt-gils, I am none of his skains mates and thou must stand by too and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure.

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure : if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you, I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrell, and the Law on my side.

Nur. Now afore God, I am so vext, that every part about me quivers, skurvy knave : pray you sir a word : and as I told you, my young Lady bid me enquire you our, what she bid me say I will keep to my self : but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her in a fools paradise, as they say, it were a very grosse kind of behaviour, as they say : for the Gentlewoman is young, and therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offered to any Gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse commend me to thy Lady and Mistris, I, protest unto thee——

Nur. Good heart, and Ifaith I will tell her as much :
Lord, Lord she will be a joyful woman :

Rom. What wilt thou tell her Nurse ? thou dost not mark me ?

Nur. I will tell her sir, that you do protest, which as I take it, is a Gentleman-like offer.

Rom. Bid her devise some means to come to shrift this
And there she shall at Frier Lawrence Cell
Beshtiev'd and married : here is for thy pains.

Nur. No truly sir not a penny.

Rom. Go to I say you shall.

Nurse

Nur. This afternoon Sir? well she shall be there.

Rom. And stay thou good Nurse behind the Abby-wall,
Within this hour my man shall be with thee,
And bring the Cords made like a rackled stair,
Which to the high top gallant of my joy,
Must be my convoy in the secret night.
Farewell, be trusty, and ile quite thy pains:
Farewell, commend me to thy Mistress.

Nur. Now God in heaven bleste thee: haik you sir,

Rom. What saist thou my dear Nurse?

Nur. Is your man secret, did you nere hear say two may keep counsel putting one away.

Rom. I warrant thee my man as true as steel.

Nur. Well sir, my Mistress is the sweetest Lady, Lord,
Lord, when 'twas a little prating thing. O there is a Noble man in Town one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard: but she good soul, had as leewe see a Toad, a very Toad as see him: I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man, but ile warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clour in the versal world, doth not Rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom. I Nurse, what of that? both with an R.

Nur. A mocker that's the dogs name. R. is for the no,
I knowv it begins vvith some other letter, and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and Rosemary, that it vvould do you good to hear it.

Rom. Commend me to thy Lady.

Nur. I a thousand times. Peter?

Pet. Anon.

Nur. Before and apace. Exit Nurse and Peter.

Enter Juliet.

Jul. The clock strook nine, vvhen I did send the Nurse,
In half an hour she promised to return,
Perchance she cannot meet him: that's not so:
Oh she is lame, Loves Herauld should be thoughts,
Which ten times faster glides then the Sunnes beams,
Driving back shadows over lowring hills.
Therefore do nimble Pinnion'd Doves draw Love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings:
Now is the Sun upon the highmost hill
Of this daies journey, and from nine till twelve,
I three long hours, yet she is not come:
Had she affections and warm youtbful blood,
She'd be as swift in motion as a ball,
My words would bandy her to my sweet Love,
And his to me, but old folks,
Many fain as they were dead,
Unwieldy, slow, heavy, and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse.

O God she comes, O honey Nurse what news?
Hast thou met with him? send thy man away.

Nur. Peter stay at the gare.

Jul. Now good sweet Nurse:

O Lord why looks thou sad?

Though news, be sad, yet tell them merrily.
If good thou sham'st the musick of sweet news,
By playing it to me, with so sower a face.

Nur. I am a weary, give me leave a while,
Fie how my bones ake, what a jaunt have I had?

Jul. I would thou hadst my bones and I thy news:
Nay come I pray thee speak, good Nurse speak.

Nur. Jesu what haste? can you not stay a while?
Do you not see how I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath
To say to me, that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou dost make in this delay,

Is longer then the tale thou dost excuse.

Is thy news good or bad? answer to that,
Say either, and ile stay the circumstance:
Let me be satisfied, ist good or bad?

Nur. Well, you have made a simple choice, you know not how to chuse a man: Romeo, no not he though his face be better then any mans, yet his legs excells all mens, and for a hand and a foot, and a bawdy, though they be not to be talkt on, yet they are past compare: he is not the flower of courtesie, but I warrant him as gentle as a Lamb: go thy waies wench, serve God, what have you din'd at home.

Jul. No, no: but all this did I know before
What saies he of our marriage? what of that?

Nur. Lord how my head akes, what a head have I:
It bears as it would fall in twenty peeces.
My back a torther side: O my back, my back.
Besfrew your heart for sending me about
To carch my death with jaunting up and down.

Jul. I faith I am sorry that thou art so ill,
Sweet, sweet, sweet Nurse, tell me what saies my Love?

Nur. Your Love saies like an honest Gentleman,
And a courteous, and a kind, and a handfom
And I warrant a vertuous: where is your Mother?

Jul. Where is my Mother?
Why she is vvithin where should she be?
How oddly thou reply'st:

Your Love saies like an honest Gentleman:
Where is my Mother?

Nur. O Gods Lady dear,
Are you so hot? marry come up I trow,
Is this the Poultis for my aking bones?
Hence forward do your messages your selfe.

Jul. Here's such a coil, come what saies Romeo?

Nur. Have you got leave to go to shrift to day?

Jul. I have.

Nur. Then high you hence to Frier Lawrence Cell,
There staies a Husband to make you a wife:
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks,
They'll be in Scarlet straight at any news:
Hie you to Church, I must another way,
To fetch a Ladder by the which your Love:
Must climb a birds nest soon when it is dark:
I am the drudge, and toil in your delight:
But you shall bear the burthen soon at night,
Go ile to dinner, hie you to the Cell

Jul. Hie to high Fortune, honest Nurse, farewell.

Exeunt.

Enter Frier and Romeo.

Fri. So smile the heavens upon this holy act,
That after hours, with sorrow chide us not.

Rom. Amen, amen, but come what sorrow can,
It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight:
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then Love devouring death do vvhat he dare,
It is enough. I may but call her mine.

Fri. These violent delights have violent ends,
And in their triumph die like fire and povvder;
Which as they kisse consume. The sweetest honey
Is loathsome in his ovvn delicioufnesse,
And in the taste confounds the appetite.
Therefore Love moderately, long Love doth so,
Too svift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter Juliet.

Here comes the Lady. Oh so light a foot
Will nere vwear out the everlasting flint;

A Lover may bestride the Gossamours,
That idles in the wanron Summer ayr,
And yet not fall, so light is vanity.

Jul. Good even to my ghostly Confessor.

Fri. Romeo shall thank thee Daughter, for us both.

Jul. As much to him, else in his thanks too much.

Rom. Ah Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
Be heapt like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blason it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour ayr, and let rich Musickes tongue,
Unfold the imagin'd happines that both
Receive in either, by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit more rich in matter then in words,
Braggs of his substance, not of Ornament:
They are but beggars that can count their worth,
But my true Love is grown to such excess,
I cannot sum up some of half my wealth.

Fri. Come, come with me, & we will make short work,
For by your leaves, you shall not stay alone,
Till holy Church incorporate two in one.

Exeunt.

Enter Mercutio, Benuolio, and men.

Ben. I pray thee good Mercutio lets retire,
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad:
And if we meet, we shall not scape a brawl, for now these hot dayes is the mad bloud stirring.

Mer. Thou art like one of these fellows, that when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table, and saies, God send me no need of thee: and by the operation of the second Cup, drawes him on the Drawer, when indeed there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood, as any in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be mov'd.

Ben. And what too?

Mer. Nay, and there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other: thou, why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less in his beard, then thou hast: thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking Nuts, having no other reason, but because thou hast hasel eyes; what eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egge is full of meate, and yet thy head hath bin beaten as addle as an egge for quarrelling: thou hast quarrell'd with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the Sun. Did'st thou not fall out with a Tailor for wearing his new Doub-
let before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoos, with old Ribband, and yet thou wilt Tutor me from quar-
relling?

Ben. And I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the Fee-simple of my life, for an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The Fee-simple? O simple!

Enter Tybalt, Petruchio, and others.

Ben. By my head here come the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel I care not.

Tib. Follow me close, for I will speak to them.
Gentlemen, Good den, a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us? couple it with something, make it a word and a blow.

Tib. You shall find me apt enough to that sir, and you will give me occasion.

Mercu. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tib. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo.

Mer. Consort? what dost thou make us Minstrels? and thou make Minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but Discords: here's my Fiddlestick, here's that shall make you dance. Come consort.

Ben. We talk here in the publick haunt of men:
Either withdraw unto some private place,
Or reason coldly of your grievances:
Or else depart, here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Mens eyes were made to look, and let them gaze;
I will not budge for no mans pleasure.

Enter Romeo.

Tib. Well peace be with you sir, here comes my man.

Mer. But Ile be hang'd sir if he wear your Livery:
Marry go before to field, hee'l be your follower,
Your worship in that sense may call him man.

Tib. Romeo, the love I bear thee, can afford
No better term then this. Thou art a Villain.

Rom. Tibalt, the reason that I have to love thee,
Doth much excuse the appertaining rage
To such a greeting:

Therefore farewell, I see thou know'st me not.

Tib. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries
That thou hast done me, therefore turn and draw.

Rom. I do protest I never injur'd thee,
But lov'd thee better than thou can'st devise:
Till thou shalt know the reason of my love,
And so good Capulet, which name I tender
As dearly as my own, be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!
Allastucatho carries it away.

Tibalt, You Rat-catcher: will you walk?

Tib. What woulds thou have with me?

Mer. Good King of Cats, nothing but one of your nine lives, that I mean to make bold withal, and as you shall use me hereafter dry beat the rest of the eight, Will you pluck your sword out of his Pilcher by the eares? Make hast, lest mine be about your eares ere it be out.

Tib. I am for you.

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy Rapier up.

Mer. Come sir, your Passado.

Rom. Draw Benuolio, beat down their weapons:
Gentlemen, for shame forbear this outrage,
Tibalt, Mercutio, the Prince expressly hath Forbidden bandying in Verona streets.
Hold Tybalt, good Mercutio.

Exit Tybalt.

Mer. I am hurt.
A plague of both the houses, I am sped:
Is he gone and hath nothing?

Ben. What art thou hurt?

Mer. I, I, a scratch, a scratch, marry 'tis enough,
Where is my Page? go Villain fetch a Surgeon.

Rom. Courage man, the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a Church-door, but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me tomorrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am pepper'd
I warrant for this world: a plague of both your houses.
What, a Dog, a Rat, a Mouse, a Cat to scratch a man to death! a Braggart, a Rogue, a Villain: that fights by the book of Arithmetick, why the dev'l came you between us?
I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house Benuolio,
Or I shall faint: a plague a both your houses.
They have made wormes meat of me,

I have it, and soundly too, your Houses.

Rom. This Gentleman the Princes near Allie,
My very friend hath got his mortal hurt
In my behalf, my reputation stain'd
With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt that an hour
Hath been my Cozen : O Sweet Juliet,
Thy Beauty hath made me Effeminate,
And in my temper softened Valours steel.

Enter Benvolio.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's dead,
That Gallant spirit hath aspir'd the Cloudes,
Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This daies black Fate, on mo daies do depend,
This but begins, the woe others must end.

Enter Tybalt.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.

Rom. He gone in triumph, and Mercutio slain ?
Away to Heaven respective Lenity,
And fire, and Fury be my conduct now.
Now Tybalt take the Villain back again
That late thou gav'st me, for Mercutio's soul,
Is but a little way above our heads,
Straying for thine to keep him company :
Either thou or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou wretched Boy that didst consort him here,
Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

They fight. Tybalt falls.

Ben. Romeo, away be gone :
The Citizens are up, and Tybalt slain,
Stand not amaz'd, the Prince will doom thee death
If thou art taken : hence, be gone, away.

Rom. O I am Fortunes fool.

Ben. Why dost thou stay ?

Exit Romeo.

Enter Citizens.

Citi. Which way ran he that kild Mercutio ?
Tybalt that Murderer, which way ran he ?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

Citi. Up sir, go with me :
I charge thee in the Princes name obey.

Enter Prince, old Mountague, Capulet, their Wives and all.

Prin. Where are the vild beginners of this Fray ?

Ben. O Noble Prince, I can discover all
The unlucky mannage of this fatal brall :
There lies the man slain by young Romeo,
That slew thy kinsman brave Mercutio.

Cap. Wi. Tybalt my Cozin ? O my Brothers Child,
O Prince, O Cozin, Husband, O the blood is spill'd,
Of my dear Kinsman, Prince as thou art true,
For blood of ours, shed blood of Mountague.
O Cozin, Cozin.

Prin. Benvolio, Who began this Fray ?

Ben. Tybalt here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay,
Romeo that spoke him fair, bid him berhink
How nice the quarrel was, and urg'd withal
Your high displeasure: all this uttered,
With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd
Could not take truce with the unruly spleen
Of Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he Tilts
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's brest,
Who all as hot, turnes deadly point to point,
And with a Martial scorn, with one hand beats
Cold death aside, and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity

Exit.

Retorts it : Romeo he cries aloud,
Hold Friends, Friends part, and swifter then his tongue,
His able arm, bears down their fatal points,
And twixt them rushes, underneath whose arm,
An envious thrust from Tybalt, hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled.
But by and by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertained revenge,
An to't they go like lightning, for ere I
Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt slain :
And as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly :
This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

Cap. Wi. He is a Kinsman to the Mountague,
Affection makes him false, he speaks not true.
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife,
And all those twenty could but kill one life.
I beg for Justice, which thou Prince must give :
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio,
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe.

Cap. Not Romeo Prince, he was Mercutio's Friend,
His fault concludes but what the Law should end,
The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And for that offence,
Immediately we do exile him hence :
I have an interest in your hearts proceeding.
My blood for your rude brawles doth lie a bleeding.
But Ile amerce you with so strong a fine,
That you shall all repent the loss of mine.
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses,
Nor tears, nor prayers shall purchase our abuses.
Therefore use none, let Romeo hence in haste,
Else when he is found, that hour is his last.
Bear hence this body, and attend our will :
Mercy but Murders, pardoning those that kill.

Exeunt.

Enter Juliet alone.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery footed steeds,
Toward Phaebus lodging, such a Wagoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately,
Spred thy close Curtain Love-performing night,
That run-awaies eyes may wink, and Romeo
Leapt to these armes, untalkt of and unseen,
Lovers can see to do their Amorous rights,
By their own Beauties : or if Love be blind,
It best agrees with night : come civil night,
Thou sober suted Matron all in black,
And learn me how to loose a winning match,
Playd for a pair of stainless Maydenheads,
Hood my unmann'd blood bayting in my Cheekes,
With thy black mantle, till strange Love grow bold,
Think true Love acted simple modesty :
Come night, come Romeo, come thou day in night,
For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night,
Whiter then new Snow on a Ravens back :
Come gentle night, come loving black-brow'd night.
Give me my Romeo, and when I shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine,
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the Garish Sun.
O I have bought the Mansion of a Love,
But not possess'd it, and though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd, so tedious is this day,
As is the night before some Festival,

To an impatient child that hath new robes
And may not wear them, O here comes my Nurse :

Enter Nurse with cords.

And she brings news and every tongue that speaks
But Romeos, name, speaks heavenly eloquence:
Now Nurse, what news ? what hast thou there ?
The Cords that Romeo bid thee fetch ?

Nur. I, I, the Cords.

Jul. Ay me, what news ?

Why dost thou wring thy hands.

Nur. A weladay he's dead, he's dead,
We are undone Lady, we are undone.
Alack the day, he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead.

Jul. Can heaven be so envious ?

Nur. Romeo can,
Though heaven cannot. O Romeo, Romeo,
Who ever would have thought it Romeo.

Jul. What devil art thou,
That dost torment me thus ?
This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell,
Hath Romeo slain himself ? say thou but I :
And that bare vowel I shall poyson more
Then the death-darting eye of Cockatrice,
I am not I, if there be such an I.
Or those eies shot that makes the answer I,
If he be slain say I, or if not, no.

Brief, sounds, determine of my weal or woe.

Nur. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eies
God save the mark here on his manly breast.
A pitteous Coarse, a bloody pitteous Coarse :
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedawb'd in blood
All in gore blood I sounded at the sighr.

Jul. O break my heart,
Poor Bankrout break at once,
To prison eies nere look on liberty.
Vile earth to earth resigne, end motion here,
And thou and Romeo presse one heavy beer.

Nur. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had :
O courteous Tybalt honest Gentleman,
That ever I should live to see thee dead.

Jul. What storm is this that bowes so contrary ?
Is Romeo slaugtered ? and is Tybalt dead ?
My dearest Cozen, and my dearer Lord :
Then dreadful Trumpet sound the generall doome,
For who is living, if those two are gone ?

Nur. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished,
Romeo that kill'd him, he is banished.

Jul. O God !

Nur. Did Romeos hand shed Tybalts blood
It did, it did, alas the day, it did.

Jul. O Serpent heart, hid with a flowring face.
Did ever Dragon keep so fair a Cave ?
Beautiful Tyrant, fiend Angellicall :
Ravenous Dove, feather'd Raven,
Wolvish-ravening Lamb,
Dispis'd substance of Divinest show :
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
A damned Saint, an Honourable Villain :
O Nature ! what hadst thou to do in hell,
When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh ?
Was ever book containing such vile matter
So fairly bound ? O that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous Pallace.

Nur. There's no trust, no faith, no honesty in men,
All perjur'd, all forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers,

Ah where's my man ? give me some Aqua-vita ?
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old !
Shame come to Romeo.

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue
For such a wish, he was not born to shame :
Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit ;
For 'tis a throan where honour may be Crown'd
Sole Monarch of the universal earth :

O what a beast was I to chide him so ?

Nur. Will you speak well of him
That kill'd your Cozen ?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband ?
Ah poor my Lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name,
When I thy three hours wife have mangled it.
But wherefore villain didst thou kill my Cozen ?
That villain Cozen would have kill'd my husband :
Back foolish tears, back to your native spring,
Your tributary drops belong to woe,

Which your mistaking offer up to joy :
My husband lives that Tybalt would have slain,
And Tybalt dead that would have kill'd my husband :

All this is comfort. wherefore weep I then ?
Some word there was worser then Tybalts death

That murdered me, I would forget it fain,
But oh it presses to my memory,

Like damned guilty deeds to sinners minds,
Tybalt is dead and Romeo banished :

That banished, that one word banished,
Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts : Tybalts death
Was woe enough if it had ended there :

Or if sower woe delights in fellowship,
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,
Why followed not when she said Tybalts dead,
Thy Father or thy Mother, nay or both.

Which modern lamentation might have mov'd.
But with a rere-ward following Tybalts death,
Romeo is banished to speak that word,
Is Father, Mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All slain, all dead : Romeo is banished,
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that words death, no words can that woe sound.
Where is my Father and my Mother Nurse ?

Nur. Weeping and wailing over Tybalts Coarse.
Will you go to them ? I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears : mine shal be spent
When theirs are dry for Romeos banishment.

Take up those Cords, poor ropes you are beguil'd.
Both you and I, for Romeo is exil'd :

He made you for a high way to my bed,
But I a Maid, dye Maiden widdowed.

Come Cord, come Nurse, ile to my wedding-bed,
And death not Romeo, take my Maiden-head.

Nur. Hye to your Chamber, ile find Romeo
To comfort you, I wot well vvhether he is :
Hark ye your Romeo vwill be here at night,
Ile to him, he is hid at Lawrence Cell.

Jul. O find him ; give this Ring to my true Knight,
And bid him come, to take his last farevvell.

Exit.

Enter Friar, and Romeo.

Fri. Romeo come forth,
Come forth thou fearful man,
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts :
And thou art vvedded to calamity.

Romeo. Father vvhether nevs ?

What

What is the Princes Doom?

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?

Fri. Too familiar

Is my dear Son with such sower company :
I bring thee tydings of the Princes doom.

Rom. What lette then Doo ns-day,

Is the Princes Doome?

Fri. A gentler judgement vanisht from his lips,
Not bodies death, but bodies banishment.

Rom. Ha, banishment? be merciful, say death :
For exile hath more terror in his look,

Much more then death, do not say banishment.

Fri. Here from Verona art thou banished :
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,
But Purgatory, Torture, hell it self :

Hence banished, is banisht from the world,
And worlds exile is death. Then banished,
Is death, mistearm'd, calling death banished,
Thou cutst my head off with a Golden Axe,
And smilst upon the stroak that murders me.

Fri. O deadly sin, O rude unthankfulnesse!
Thy fault our Law calls death, but the kind Prince
Taking thy part hath rusht aside the Law,
And turn'd that black word death, to banishment.
This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'Tis torture and not mercy, heaven is here
Where Juliet lives, and every Cat and Dog,
And little Mouse, every unworthy thing
Live here in heaven, and may look on her,
But Romeo may not. More Validity,
More Honourable state, more Courtship lives
In carrion Flies, then Romeo : they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips,
Who even in pure and vestal modesty
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin.
This may Flies do, when I from this must flye,
And saist thou yet, that exile is not death?

But Romeo may not, he is banished.
Hadst thou no poison mixt, no sharp ground knife,
No sudden mean of death, though nere so mean,
But banished to kill me? Banished?

O Frier, the damned use that word in hell :
Howlings attend it, how hast thou the heart
Being a Divine, a Ghostly Confessor,
A Sin-Absolver, and my friend profest :
To mangle me with that word banished?

Fri. Fond Mad man, hear me speak.

Rom. O thou wilt speak again of banishment.

Fri. Ile give thee Armour to keep off that word,
Adversities sweet Milk, Philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banished? hang up Philosophy :
Unless Philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a Town, reverse a Princes Doome,
It helps not, it prevails nor, talk no more :

Fri. O then I see that mad-men have no ears.

Rom. How should they,
When wise-men have no eyes?

Fri. Let me despair with thee of thy estate.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel,
Wert thou as young, as Juliet my Love :
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,

Then might'st thou speak,
Then might'st thou tear thy hair,
And fall upon the ground as I do now,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.

Enter Nurse and knocks.

Fri. Arise one knocks,
Good Romeo hide thy self.

Rom. Not I,
Unlesse the breath of Heart sick groans
Mist-like infold me from the search of eyes.

Knock.

Fri. Hark how they knock
(Who's there) Romeo arise,
Thou wilt be taken stay a while stand up :

Knock.

Run to my study : by and by, Gods will ?
What simpleness is this : I come, I come.

Knock.

Who knocks so hard?

Whence come you? what's your will?

Enter Nurse.

Nur. Let me come in.
And you shall know my errand :
I come from Lady Juliet.

Fri. Welcome then.

Nur. O holy Frier, O tell me holy Frier,
Where's my Ladies Lord? wheres Romeo?

Fri. There on the ground,
With his own tears made drunk.

Nur. O he is even in my Mistressse cause,
Just in her case, O woful sympathy :
Piteous predicament, even so lies she,
Blubbring and weeping, weeping and blubbring,
Stand up, stand up, stand and you be a man,
For Juliet's sake, for her sake rise and stand :
Why should you fall into so deep an O.

Rom. Nurse.

Nur. Ah sir, ah sir, death's the end of all.

Rom. Speak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?
Doth not she think me an old murtherer,
Now I have stain'd the Childhood of our joy,
With blood removed, but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what saies
My conceal'd Lady to our conceal'd Love?

Nur. Oh she saies nothing sir, but weeps and weeps,
And now falls on her bed, and then starts up.
And Tybalt calls, and then Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.

Ro. As if that name shot from the deadly level of a Gun,
Did murder her, as that names cursed hand
Murdered her kinsman. Oh tell me Frier, tell me,
In what vile part of this Anatomy
Doth my name lodge? Tell me, that I may sack
The hateful Mansion.

Fri. Hold thy desperate hand :
Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art :
Thy tears are womanish, thy wild acts do note
The unreasonable fury of a beast.

Unseemly woman, in a seeming man,
And ill beseeeming beast in seeming both,
Thou hast amaz'd me. By my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thy self?
And slay thy Lady, that in thy life lies,
By doing damned hate upon thy self?

Why rail'st thou on thy birth? the heaven and earth?

Since

Since birth, and heaven and earth, all three do meet
In thee at once, which thou at once would'st lose
Fie, fie, thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy wit,
Which like a Usurer abound'st in all :
And usest none in that true use indeed,
Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit :
Thy Noble shape, is but a form of waxe,
Digressing from the valour of a man,
Thy dear Love sworn, but hollow perjury,
Killing that Love which thou hast vow'd to cherish,
Thy wit, that Ornament, to shape and Love,
Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both :
Like powder in a skilless Souldiers flaske,
Is set a fire by thine own ignorance,
And thou dismembred with thine own defence.
What, rowse thee man, thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead.
There art thou happy. Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt, there art thou happy too
The Law that threatned death became thy friend,
And turn'd it to exile, there art thou happy.
A pack of blessings light upon thy back,
Happinesse Courts thee in her best array,
But like a misshapen and a fullen wench,
Thou putt'st up thy Fortune and thy Love :
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Go get thee to thy Love as was decreed,
Ascend her Chamber, hence and comfort her :
But look thou stay not till the Watch be set,
For then thou canst not passe to Mantua,
Where thou shalt live till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of thy Prince, and call thee back,
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Then thou went'st forth in Lamentation.
Goe before Nurse, commend me to thy Lady,
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto.

Romeo is coming.

Nur. O Lord, I could have staid here all night,
To hear good counsell : oh what learning is !
My Lord ile tell my Lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my Sweet prepare to chide.

Nur. Here sir, a Ring she bid me give you sir :
Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.

Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this.

Fri. Go hence.

Goodnight, and here stands all your state :
Either be gone before the Watch be set,
Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence,
Sojourn in Mantua, ile find out your man,
And he shall signifie from time to time,
Every good hap, to you that chances here :
Give me thy hand, 'tis late, farewell Goodnight.

Rom. But that a joy, past joy, calls out on me,
It were a grief, so brief to part with thee :
Farewell.

Exeunt.

Enter old Capulet, his wife, and Paris

Cap. Things have faln out sir so unluckily,
That we have no time to move our daughter :
Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I. Well, we were born to die.
Tis very late, she'll not come down to night :
I promise you, but for your company,

I would have bin a bed an hour agoe.

Par. These times of woe, afford no times to wooe :
Madam goodnight, commend me to your Daughter.

Lad. I will, and know her mind early to morrow.
To night, she is mew'd up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender
Of my Childs love : I think she will be rul'd
In all respects by me, nay more, I doubt it not,
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed,
Acquaint her here of my Son Paris Love,
And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next,
But soft, what day is this ?

Par. Monday my Lord.

Cap. Monday, ha, ha, well Wednesday is too soon,
A Thursday let it be : a Thursday tell her,
She shall be married to this Noble Earle :
Will you be ready ? do you like this haste ?
Wee'l keep no great a do, a friend or two,
For hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much :
Therefore wee'l have some half a dozen Friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday ?

Par. My Lord,

I would that Thursday were to morrow.

Cap. Well, ger you gone, a Thursday be it then :

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,

Prepare her wife, against this wedding day.

Farewell my Lord, light to my chamber ho,

Afore me, it is so late, that we may call it early by and by,
Exeunt.

Enter Romeo and Juliet aloof.

Juli. Wilt thou be gone ?

It was the Nightingale, and not the Lark,
That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear,
Nightly she sings on yond Pomegranet tree,
Believe me Love, it was the Nightingale,

Rom. It was the Lark, the Herald of Morn :
No Nightingale : look Love what envious streaks
Do lace the severing Clouds in yonder East :
Nights Candles are burnt out, and joyous day
Stands tipto on the misty Mountain tops,
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Juli. Yond light is not day light, I know it I :
It is some Meteor that the Sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a Torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua.
Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be tane, let me be put to death,
I am content, so thou wilt have it so.

Ile say yon gray is not the mornings eye,
Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow.
Nor that is not the Lark whose notes do beat
The vaultry heavens so high above our heads,
I have more care to stay, then will to go :
Come death and welcome. Juliet wills it so.
How ist my soul, let's talk, it is not day

Juli. It is, it is, hie hence be gone away :

It is the Lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh Discords, and displeasing Sharps.
Some say the Lark makes sweet Division ;
This doth not so : for she divideth us.

Some say, the Lark, and loathed Toad change eies,
O now I would they had chang'd voices too :

K k k

Since

Jul. The teares have got small victory by that :
For it was bad enough before their spight.

Pa. Thou wrong'st it more then tears with that report

Jul. That is no slander sir, which is truth,
And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slandered it.

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.

Are you at leisure, Holy Father now,

Or shall I come to you at evening Mass?

Fri. My leisure serves me penfive daughter now.
My Lord I must intreat the time alone.

Par. God shield: I should disturb Devotion:

Juliet, on Thursday early will I rowse ye,
Till then adue, and keep this holy kiss. Exit Paris.

Jul. O shut the door, and when thou hast done so,
Come weep with me, past hope, past care, past help.

Fri. O Juliet, I already know thy grief,
It straines me past the compass of my wits:
I hear thou must, and nothing may prorogue it,
On Thursday next be married to this Count.

Jul. Tell me not Frier that thou hearest of this,
Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:
If in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help,
Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife, Ile help it presently.
God joynd my heart, and Romeo's, thou our hands,
And ere this hand by thee to Romeo seal'd:
Shall be the Label to another Deed,
Or my true heart with trecherous revolt,
Turn to another, this shall slay them both:
Therefore out of thy long experien't time,
Give me some present counsel, or behold
Twixt my extreames and me, this bloody knife
Shall play the umpire, arbitrating that,
Which the commission of my yeares and Arr,
Could to no issue of true honour bring:
Be not so long to speak, I long to die,
If what thou speak'st, speak not of remedy.

Fri. Hold Daughter, I do spie a kind of hope,
Which craves as desperate an execution,
As that is desperate which we would prevent.
If rather then to marry County Paris
Thou hast the strength of will to slay thy self,
Then it is likely thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That coap'st with death him self, to scape fro it:
And if thou dar'st, Ile give thee remedy.

Jul. O bid me leap, rather then marry Paris,
From off the Battlements of any Tower,
Or walk in thievish waies, or bid me lurk
Where Serpents are: chain me with roaring Beares
Or hide me nightly in a Charnel house,
Ore-covered quite with dead mens ratling bones,
With recky shankes, and yellow chaple's skuls:
Or bid me go into a new made grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his grave,
Things that to hear them told, have made me tremble,
And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet Love.

Fri. Hold then: go home, be merry, give consent,
To marry Paris: Wensday is to morrow,
To morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy Nurse lie with thee in thy Chamber:
Take thou this Vial being then in bed,
And this distilling liquor drink thou off,
When presently through all thy veines shall run,

A cold and drowfie humour: for no pulse
Shall keep his native progress, but surcease:
No warmth, no breath shall testifie thou livest.
The Roses in thy lips and cheekes shall fade
To mealy ashes, the eyes windows fall
Like death when he shuts up the day of life:
Each part depriv'd of supple government,
Shall stiffe and stark, and cold appear like death,
And in this borrowed likeness of shrunk death,
Thou shalt continue two and forty houres,
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
Now when the Bridegroom in the morning comes,
To rowse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:
Then as the manner of our Countrey is,
In thy best Robes uncover'd on the Beer,
Be born to burial in thy kindreds grave:
Thou shalt be born to that same ancient vault,
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie,
In the mean time, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my Letters know our drift,
And hither shall he come, and that very night
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present shame,
If no unconstant toy nor womanish fear,
Abare thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, give me, O tell not me of fear.

Fri. Hold, get you gone, be strong and prosperous
In this resolve, Ile send a Frier with speed
To Mantua with my Letters to thy Lord.

Jul. Love give me strength,
And strength shall help afford:
Farewel dear Father.

Exit.

Enter Father Capulet, Mother, Nurse, and serving men, two or three.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ,
Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning Cookes.

Ser. You shall have none ill sir, for Ile try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

Ser. Marry sir, 'tis an ill Cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he that cannot lick his fingers, goes not with me.

Cap. Go be gone, we shall be much unfurnisht for this time: What is my Daughter gone to Frier Lawrence?

Nur. I forsooth.

Cap. Well he may chance to do some good on her,
A peevish self-wild harlotry it is.

Enter Juliet.

Nur. See where she comes from shrift
With merry look.

Cap. How now my headstrong,
Where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learnt me to repent the sin
Of disobedient opposition:

To you and your behests, and am enjoyn'd
By holy Lawrence, to fall prostrate here,
To beg your pardon: pardon I beseech you,
Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.

Cap. Send for the Count, go tell him of this
Ile have this knot knit up to morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful Lord at Lawrence Cell,
And gave him what becomed Love I might,
Not stepping ore the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why I am glad on't, this is well, stand up,

This

This is as't should be, let me see the County :

I marry go I say, and fetch him hither.

Now afore God, this reverend holy Frier,

All our whole City is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse will you go with me into my Closer,

To help me sort such needful ornaments,

As you think fit to furnish me to morrow ?

Mo. No not till Thursday, there is time enough.

Fa. Go Nurse, go with her,

Wee'l to Church to morrow.

Exeunt Juliet and Nurse.

Mo. We shall be short in our provision,

Tis now neer night.

Fa. Tush, I will stirre about,

And all things shall be well, I warrant thee wife :

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her,

Ile not to bed to night, let me alone :

Ile play the huswife for this once. What ho ?

They are all forth, well I will walk my self

To County Paris, to prepare him up

Against to morrow, my heart is wondrous light,

Since this same way-ward Girl is so reclaim'd.

Exeunt Father and Mother.

Enter Juliet and Nurse.

Jul. I, those attires are best, but gentle Nurse

I pray thee leave me to my self to night :

For I have need of many Orisons.

To move the heavens to smile upon my state,

Which well thou know'st is cross'd and full of sin.

Enter Mother.

Mo. What are you busie ho ? need you my help ?

Jul. No Madam, we have cull'd such necessities

As are behoo'veful for our state to morrow :

So please you, let me now be left alone ;

And let the Nurse this night sit up with you,

For I am sure, you have your hands full all,

In this so sudden businesse.

Mo. Goodnight.

Get thee to bed and rest, for thou hast need.

Exeunt.

Jul. Farewell :

God knows when we shall meet again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,

That almost freezes up the heat of fire :

Ile call them back again to comfort me.

Nurse, what should she do here ?

My dismall Scean, I needs must act alone :

Come Viall, what if this mixture do not work at all ?

Shall I be married then to morrow morning ?

No, no, this shall forbid it. Lie thou there,

What if it be a poison which the Frier

Subtilly hath ministr'd to have me dead.

Left in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,

Because he married me before to Romeo ?

I fear it is, and yet me thinks it should not.

For he hath still been try'd a holy man.

How, if when I am laid into the Tomb,

I wake before the time that Romeo

Come to redeem me ? There's a fearful point :

Shall I not then be stifled in the Vault ?

To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breaths in,

And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes.

Or if I live, is it not very like,

The horrible conceit of death and night,

Together with the terror of the place,

As in a Vault, an ancient receptacle,

Where for these many hundred years the bones

Of all my buried Aunceltors are pack'd,

Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,

Lies festring in his shrow'd, where as they say,

At some hours in the night, Spirits resort :

Alack, alack is it not like that I

So early waking, what with loathsome smells,

And shrieks like Mandrakes torn out of the earth,

That living mortals hearing them, run mad.

Or if I walk, shall I not be distraught,

Invironed with all these hideous fears,

And madly play with my fore-fathers joynts ?

And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shrow'd ?

And in this rage, with some great kinsmans bone,

As (with a club) dash out my desperate brains.

O look, me thinks I see my Cozins Ghost,

Seeking out Romeo that did spit his body

Upon his Rapiers point : stay Tybalt, stay ;

Romeo, Romeo, Romeo, here's drink : I drink to thee.

Enter Lady of the house and Nurse.

Lady. Hold,

Take these keies and fetch more spices Nurse

Nur. They call for Dates and Quinces in the Pastry,

Enter old Capulet.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir,

The second Cock hath Crow'd,

The Curfew Bell hath rung, 'tis three a clock :

Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica,

Spare not for coill.

Nur. Go you Cot-quean, go,

Get you to bed, faith you'll be sick to morrow

For this nights watching.

Cap. No not a whit, what ? I have watch'd ere now

All night for a lesse cause, and nere been sick.

La. I, you have been a Mouse-hunt in your time,

But I will warch you from such watching now.

Exit Lady and Nurse.

Cap. A jealous hood, a jealous hood,

Now fellow, what's there ?

Enter three or four with spits, and logs, and baskets.

Fel. Things for the Cook sir, but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste, sirrah, fetch drier Logs.

Call Peter, he will shew thee where they are.

Fel. I have a head sir, that will find out logs,

And never trouble Peter for the matter.

Cap. Masse and well said, a merry horson, ha.

Thou shalt be logger-head, good Faith, 'tis day.

Play Musick.

The Country will be here with Musick straight,

For so he said he would, I hear him near,

Nurse, wife, what ho ? what Nurse I say ?

Enter Nurse.

Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up,

Ile go and chat with Paris : hie, make haste,

Make haste, the Bridegroom, he is come already :

Make haste I say.

Nur. Mist'riss, what Mist'riss ? Juliet ? Fast I warrant her.

Why Lamb, why Lady ? fie you sluggabed,

Why Love I say ? Madam, sweet heart : why Bride ?

What not a word ? You take your penniworths now.

Sleep for a week, for the next night I warrant

The Country Paris hath set up his rest,

That you shall rest but little, God forgive me :

Marry and Amen : how sound is the sleep ?

I must needs wake her : Madam, Madam, Madam,
 I, let the County take you in your bed ;
 Hee'l fright you up yfaith. Will it not be ?
 What drest, and in your cloths, and down again ?
 I must needs wake you : Lady, Lady, Lady ?
 Alas, alas, help, help, my Lady's dead.
 Oh weladay, that ever I was born,

Some Aqua-vite ho, my Lord, my Lady ?

Mo. What noise is here ?

Enter Mother.

Nur. O lamentable day.

Mo. What is the matter ?

Nur. Look, look, oh heavy day.

Mo. O me, O me, my Child, my only life :

Revive, look up, or I will die with thee :

Help, help, call help.

Enter Father.

Fa. For shame bring Juliet forth, her Lord is come.

Nur. She's dead : decess't, she's dead : alack the day.

Mo. Alack the day, she's dead, she's dead, she's dead,

Fa. Ha ? Let me see her : out alas she's cold,

Her blood is fetled, and her joynts are stiffe :

Life and these lips have long been separated :

Death lies on her like an untimely frost

Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

Nur. O lamentable day !

Mo. O woful time.

Fa. Death that hath tane her hence to make me waile,
 Ties up my tongue and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar and the County.

Fri. Come, is the Bride ready to go to Church ?

Fa. Ready to go, but never to return.

O Sonne, the night before thy wedding day,

Hath death lain with thy wife : see there she lies,

Flower as she was, deflowr'd now by him.

Death is my Son in law, death is my Heir,

My Daughter he hath wedded. I will die,

And leave him all life living, all is deaths.

Pa. Have I thought long to see this mornings face,
 And doth it give me such a sight as this ?

Mo. Accurst, unhappy, wretched, hateful day,
 Most miserable hour, that ere time saw
 In lasting labour of his Pilgrimage.

But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,

But one thing to rejoyce and solace in,

And cruel death hath catcht it from my sight,

Nur. O wo, O woful, woful, woful day,

Most lamentable day, most woful day,

That ever, ever, I did yet behold.

O day, O day, O day, O hateful day,

Never was seen so black a day as this :

O woful day, O woful day.

Pa. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spighted, slain,

Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,

By cruel, cruel thee quite overthrown :

O love, O life ; not life, but love in death.

Fa. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd,

Uncomfortable time, why cam'st thou now

To murder, murder our Solemnity ?

O Child, O Child ; my Soul and not my Child,

Dead art thou, alack my Child is dead,

And with my Child, my joyes are buried.

Fri. Peace ho for shame, confusions : Care lives not

In these confusions, heaven and your self

Had part in this fair Maid, now heaven hath all,

And all the better is it for the Maid :

Your part in her, you could not keep from death,

But heaven keeps his part in eternal life :

The most you sought was her promotion,

For 'twas your heaven that she should be advanc'd.

And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd

Above the Clouds, as high as Heaven it self ?

O in this love, you love your Child so ill,

That you run mad, seeing that she is well :

She's not well married, that lives married long,

But she's best married, that dies married young.

Drie up your tears, and stick your Rosemary

On this fair Coarse, and as the custom is

And in her best array bear her to Church :

For though fond Nature bids all us lament,

Yet Natures tears are Reasons merriment.

Fa. All things that we ordained Festival,

Turn from their office to black Funeral :

Our instruments to melancholly Bells

Our wedding cheare, to a sad burial Feast :

Our solemn Hymnes, to sullen Dyrges change ;

Our Bridal Flowers serve for a buried Coarse :

And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. Sir go you in, and Madam, go with him,

And go sir Paris, every one prepare

To follow this fair Coarse unto her grave :

The heavens do lowre upon you, for some ill :

Move them no more, by crossing their high will. Exeunt.

Mu. Faith we may put up our Pipes and be gone.

Nur. Honest good fellows : Ah put up put up,

For well you know this is a pittiful case.

Mu. I by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter Peter.

Pet. Musitians, oh Musitians,

Hearts ease, hearts ease,

O, and you will have me live, play hearts ease.

Mu. Why hearts ease ;

Pet. O Musitians,

Because my heart it self plaies, my heart is full.

Mu. Not a dump we, tis no time to play now.

Pet. You will not then ?

Mu. No.

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

Mu. What will you give us ?

Pet. No money on my faith, but the gleeke.

I will give you the Ministrell.

Mu. Then will I give you the Serving creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving creatures Dagger on your pate. I will carry no Crotchets, Ile Re you, Ile Fa you, do you note me ?

Mu. And you Re us, and Fa us, you Note us.

2. Mu. Pray you put up your Dagger,
 And put out your wit.

Then have at you with my wit.

Pet. I will drie-beat you with an iron wit,

And put up my iron Dagger.

Answer me like men :

When griping griefs the heart doth wound, then Musick with her silver sound.

Why silver sound ? why Musick with her silver sound ?

What say you Simon Catling ?

Mu. Marry sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pratest, What say you Hugh Rebick ?

2. Mu. I say silver sound, because Musicians sound for sil-

Pet. Pratest too, what say you James Sound-Post ? (ver

3. Mu. Faith I know not what to say.

Pet. O I cry you mercy, you are the Singer.

I will say for you, it is Musick with her silver sound,

Be-

Because Musicians have no gold for sounding :
Then Musick with her silver sound, with speedy help doth lend redress. Exit.

Mu. What a pestilent knave is this same ?

M. 2. Hang him Jack, come weele in here, rarry for the Mourners, and stay dinner. Exit.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,
My dreames preface some joyful newes at hand :
My bosomes Lord sits lightly in his throne :
And all this winged unaccustom'd spirit,
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.
I dreamt my Lady came and found me dead,
(Strange dream that gives a dead man leave to think)
And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips.
That I reviv'd, and was an Emperour.
Ah me, how sweet is love it self posselt,
When but loves shadows are so rich in joy.

Enter Romeo's man.

News from Verona, how now Balthazar ?
Dost thou not bring me Letters from the Frier ?
How doth my Lady ? Is my Father well ?
How doth my Lady Juliet ? that I ask again,
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Ma. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill.
Her body sleepes in Capels Monument,
And her immortal part with Angels lives
I saw her laid low in her Kindreds Vault.
And presently took post to tell it you :
O pardon me for bringing these ill newes,
Since you did leave it for my office Sir.

Rom. Is it even so ?

Then I deny you Stars.

Thou knowest my Lodging, get me Ink and Paper,
And hire post-horses, I will hence to night.

Ma. I do beseech you sir, have patience :
Your lookes are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd,
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do :
Hast thou no Letters to me from the Frier ?

Ma. No, my good Lord.

Exit Ma.

Rom. No matter : Get thee gone,
And hire those horses, Ile be with thee straighr.
Well Juliet, I will lie with thee to night :
Lets see for means : O mischief thou art swift,
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men :
I do remember an Apothecary,
And hereabouts he dwels, which late I noted
In tattered weeds, with overwhelming browes,
Culling of Simples, meager were his lookes,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones :
And in his needy shop a Tortois hung,
An Allegator stuf, and other skins
Of ill shap'd fishes, and about his shelves,
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, Bladders, and musty seeds,
Remnants of packthred, and old cakes of Roses
Were thinly scattered, to make up a shew.
Noring this penury, to my self I said,
And if a man did need a poyson now,
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a Caitiffe wretch would sell it him.
O this same thought did but fore-run my need,
And this same needy man must sell it me.

As I remember, this should be the house,
Being holy day, the beggers shop is shut.
What ho ? Apothecary ?

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. V Who call's so lowd ?

Rom. Come hither man, I see that thou art poor,
Hold, there is forty Dukets, let me have
A dram of poyson, such soon speeding gear,
As will disperse it self through all the veines,
That the life-weary-taker may fall dead,
And that the Trunk may be discharg'd of breath,
As violently, as hasty powder fier'd
Doth hurry from the fatal Cannons womb.

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have, but Mannas Law
Is death to any he, that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare and full of wretchedness,
And fear'st to die ? Famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes,
Contempt and beggery hang on thy back !
The world is not thy friend, nor the worlds law :
The world affords no law to make thee rich.
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Ap. My poverty, but not my will consents.

Rom. I pray thy poverty, and not thy will.

Ap. Pur this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off, and if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straighr.

Rom. There's thy Gold,
VVorse poyson to mens soules,
Doing more murder in this loathsome world,
Then these poor compounds that thou maist not sell.
I sell thee poyson, thou hast sold me none,
Farewel, buy food, and get thy self in flesh.
Come Cordial, and not poyson, go with me
To Juliets grave, for there must I use thee.

Exeunt.

Enter Frier John to Frier Lawrence

John. Holy Franciscan Frier, Brother, ho ?

Enter Frier Lawrence.

Law. This same should be the voyce of Frier John.
VVelcome from Mantua, what saies Romeo ?
Or if mind be writ, give me his Letter.

Joh. Going to find a bare foot brother our.
One of our order to associate me,
Here in this Ciry visiting the sick,
And finding him, the Searchers of the Town
Suspecting that we both were in a house
VVhere the infectious Pestilence did reign,
Seal'd up the doores, and would not let us forth,
So that my speed to Mantua there was staid.

Law. V Who bare my Letter then to Romeo ?

Joh. I could not send it, here it is again ;
Nor get a Messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection.

Law. Unhappy Fortune ! by my Brotherhood
The Letter was not nice, but full of charge,
Of dear import, and the neglecting it
May do much danger : Frier John go hence,
Get me an Iron Crow, and bring it straight
Unto my Cell.

Joh. Brother, Ile go and bring it thee.

Law. Now must I to the Monument alone ;
VVithin this three houres will fair Juliet wake,
She will beshrew me much that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these Accidents :
But I will write again to Mantua,

Exit.

And

And keep her at my Cell till Romeo come,
Poor living Coarse, clos'd in a dead mans Tombe.

Exit.

Enter Paris and his Page.

Par. Give me thy Torch, Boy, hence and stand aloft,
Yet put it out, for I would not be seen:
Under yond young trees lay thee all alone,
Laying thy ear close to the hollow ground.
So shall no foot upon the Church-yard tread,
Being loose, unfirm with digging up of Graves,
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hearest some thing approach,
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the Churchyard, yet I will adventure.

Exit.

Pa. Sweet Flower, with flowers thy Bridal bed I strew:
O woe, thy Canopy is dust and stones,
Which with sweet water nightly I will dew,
Or wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans;
The obsequies that I for thee will keep,
Nightly shall be, to strew thy grave, and weep.

Whistle Boy.

The Boy gives warning, something doth approach,
What cursed foot wanders this way to night,
To cross my obsequies, and true loves right?
What with a Torch? Muffle me night a while.

Enter Romeo and Peter.

Rom. Give me that Mattock, and the wrenching Iron,
Hold take this Letter, early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my Lord and Father,
Give me the Light: upon thy life I charge thee,
What ere thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of death,
Is partly to behold my Ladies face:
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger,
A precious Ring: a Ring that I must use,
In dear employment, therefore hence be gone:
But if thou jealous dost return to pry
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven I will tear thee joyn't by joyn't,
And strew this hungry Churchyard with thy limbs:
The time, and my intents are savage wild:
More fierce, and more inexorable far,
Than empty Tygers, or the roaring Sea.

Pet. I will be gone sir, and not trouble you.

Ro. So shalt thou shew me friendship: take thou that,
Live and be prosperous, and farewell good fellow.

Pet. For all this same, Ile hide me here about,
His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt.

Exit.

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth:

Thus I enforce thy rotten Jawes to open,
And in despite, Ile cram thee with more food

Par. This is that banisht haughty Montague,
That murdered my Loves Cozin; with which grief.

It is supposed the fair Creature died,
And here is come to do some villanous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.

Stop thy unhallowed toyl, vile Montague:
Can vengeance be pursued further then death?
Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee.
Obey and go with me, for thou must die,

Rom. I must indeed, and therefore came I hither.

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man,
Flie hence and leave me, think upon those gone,
Let them affright thee. I beseech thee Youth,
Put not another sin upon my head,
By urging me to fury. O be gone,
By heaven I love thee better then my self,
For I come hither arm'd against my self:
Stray not, be gone, live, and here. I say,
A mad mans mercy bid thee run away.

Par. I do desire thy commiseration,
And apprehend thee for a Fellow here.

Ro. Wilt thou provoke me? Then have at thee Boy.

Pet. O Lord they fight, I will go call the Watch.

Pa. O I am slain, if thou be merciful.

Open the Tomb, lay me with Juliet.

Rom. In faith I will, let me peruse this face,

Mercutius Kinsman, Noble County Paris,
What said my man, when my betroffed soul
Did not attend him as we rode? I think
He told me Paris should have married Juliet.

Said he not so? Or did I dream it so?

Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,

To think it was so? O give me thy hand,
One, writ with me in sour misfortunes book,
Ile bury thee in a triumphant grave.

A Grave, O no a Lanthorn; slaughterd Youth:

For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes

This Vault a feasting presence full of light.

Death be thou there, by a dead man inter'd.

How oft when men are at the point of death,

Have they been merry? which their Keepers call

A lightning before death? Oh how may I

Call this a lightning? O my Love, my Wife,

Death that hath suckt the honey of thy breath,

Hath had no power yet upon thy Beauty:

Thou art not conquer'd, Beauties ensign yet

Is Crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheekes,

And Deaths pale flag is not advanced there.

Tybalt, ly'st thou there in thy bloody sheet?

O what more favour can I do to thee,

Then with that hand that cut thy youth in twain,

To funder his that was thy enemy?

Forgive me Cozen. Ah dear Juliet:

Why art thou yet so fair? I will believe,

Shall I believe, that unsubstantial death is amorous?

And that the lean abhorred Monster keeps

Thee here in dark to be his Paramour?

For fear of that, I still will stay with thee,

And never from this Palace of dim night

Depart again: come lie thou in my Armes,

Here's to thy health, where ere thou tumblest in.

O true Apothecary!

Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die,

Depart again; here, here will I remain,

With Wormes that are thy Chamber-maides: O here

Will I set up my everlasting rest:

And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars

From this worlds wearied flesh: Eyes look your last:

Armes take your last embrace: And lips, O you

The doores of breath, seal with a righteous kiss

A dateless bargain to engrossing death:

Come bitter conduct, come unfavoury guide,

Thou desperate Pilot, now at once run on

The dashing Rocks, thy Sea-sick weary Bark:

Here's to my Love. O true Apothecary:

Thy

Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kisse I die.

Enter Frier with Lanthorn, Crow, and Spade,

Fri. St. Francis be my speed, how oft to night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves? Who's there?

Man. Here's one, a Friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. Blisse be upon you, Tell me good my friend
What Torch is yond, that vainly lends his light
To grubs and eyelesse Sculls? As discern,
It burneth in the Capels Monument.

Man. It doth so holy fir,
And there's my Master, one that you love.

Fri. Who is it?

Man. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he been there?

Man. Full half an hour.

Fri. Go with me to the Vault.

Man. I dare tno Sir.

My Master knows not but I am gone hence,
And fearfully did menace me with death,
If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. Stay, then ile goe alone, fears come upon me.
O much I fear some ill unlucky thing.

Man. As I did sleep under this young tree here,
I dreamt my Master and another fought,
And that my Master slew him.

Frier. Romeo.

Alack, alack, what blood is this which stains
The stony entrance of this Sepulchre?
What mean these Misterlesse and goary Swords
To lie discolout'd by this place of peace?
Romeo, oh pale: who else? what Paris too?
And steep'd in blood? Ah what an unkind hour
Is guilty of this lamentable chance?
The Lady stirs.

Julie. O comfortable Frier, where's my Lord?
I do remember well where I should be:
And there I am, where is my Romeo?

Fri. I hear some noise Lady, come from that nest
Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep,
A greater power then we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents, come, come away,
Thy Husband in thy bosom there lies dead:
And Paris too: come ile dispose of thee,
Among a Sisterhood of holy Nunnes:
Stay not to question, for the Watch is coming,
Come, go good Juliet, I dare no longer stay.

Julie. Go get thee hence, for I will not away,
What's here? a cup clos'd in my true loves hand?
Poison I see hath been his timelesse end
O churle, drink all? and left no friendly drop,
To help me after, I will kisse thy lips,
Happly some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative.
Thy lips are warm.

Enter Boy and Watch.

Watch. Lead Boy, which way?

Julie. Yea noise?

Then ile be brief. O happy Dagger.

Tis in thy sheath, there rust and let me die. Kills her self.

Boy. This is the place,
There where the Torch doth burn.

Watch. The ground is bloody,
Search about the Churchyard.
Go some of you, where ere you find attach.
Pittyful sight, here lies the County slain,
And Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead

Who here hath lain these two daies buried.

Go tell the Prince, run to the Capules,
Raife up the Mountagues, some others search,
We see the ground whereon these woes do lye.
But the true ground of all these pitteous woes,
We cannot without circumstance descry.

Enter Romeo's man.

Wat. Here's Romeo's man,
We found him in the Churchyard.

Con. Hold him in safety, till the Prince comes hither.

Enter Frier and another Watchman.

3. Wat. Here is a Frier that trembles, sighs, and weeps:
We took this Mattock and this Spade from him,
As he was coming from this Church-yard sicer.

Con. A great suspition, stay the Frier too.

Enter the Prince.

Pri. What misadventure is so early up,
That calls our person from our mornings rest?

Enter Capulet and his wife.

Cap. What should it be that they so shrike abroad?

Wif. O the people in the street cry Romeo.
Some Juliet, and some Paris, and all run
With open out-cry toward our Monument.

Pri. What fear is this which startles in your ears?

Wat. Sovereigne, here lies the County Paris slain,
And Romeo dead, and Juliet dead before,
Warm and new kill'd.

Pri. Search,
Seek, and know how, this foul murder comes.

Wat. Here is a Frier, and slaughter'd Romeo's man,
With instruments upon them fit to open
These dead mens Tombs.

Cap. O heaven!

O wife look how our daughter bleeds!
This Dagger hath mistain, for loe his house
Is empty on the back of Mountague,
And is misheathed in my Daughters bosom.

Wif. O me, this sight of death, is as a Bell
That warns my old age to a Sepulcher.

Enter Mountague.

Pri. Come Mountague, for thou art early up
To see thy Son and Heir now early down.

Mount. Alas my Liege my wife is dead to night,
Grief of my Sons exile hath stopt her breath:
What further woe conspires against my age?

Pri. Look: and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught, what manners is in this,
To presse before thy Father to a Grave?

Pri. Seal up the mouth of out-rage for a while,
Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent,
And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death, mean time forbear,
And let mischance be slave to patience,
Bring forth the parties of suspition.

Fri. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected as the time and place
Doth make against me, of this direful murder:
And here I stand both to impeach and purge
My self condemned, and my self excus'd.

Pri. Then say at once what thou dost know in this?

Fri. I will be brief, for my short date of breath
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.

Romeo there dead, was husband to that Juliet,
And she there dead, that's Romeo's faithful wife:

I married them ; and their stoln marriage day
 Was Tybalis Doomesday : whose untimely death
 Banish'd the new-made Bridegroom from this City :
 For whom (and not for Tybalis) Juliet pin'd.
 You, to remove that siege of grief from her,
 Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce
 To County Paris. Then comes she to me,
 And (with wild looks) bid me devise some means
 To rid her from this second marriage,
 Or in my Cell there would she kill her self.
 Then gave I her (so tutor'd by my Art)
 A sleeping Potion, which so took effect
 As I intended, for it wrought on her
 The form of death. Mean time I writ to Romeo,
 That he should hither come, as this dire night,
 To help to take her from her borrowed grave.
 Being the time the Potions force should cease.
 But he which bore my Letter, Frier John,
 Was stay'd by accident; and yesternight
 Return'd my Letter back, then all alone,
 At the prefixed hour of her waking,
 Came I to take her from her kindreds vault,
 Meaning to keep her closely at my Cell,
 Til I conveniently could send to Romeo.
 But when I came (some Minute ere the time
 Of her awaking) here untimely lay
 The Noble Paris and true Romeo dead.
 She wakes, and I intreated her come forth,
 And bear this work of Heaven, with patience:
 But then, a noise did scare me from the Tomb,
 And she (too desperate) would not go with me,
 But (as it seems) did violence on her self.
 All this I know, and to the Marriage her Nurse is privy:
 And if ought in this miscarried by my fault,
 Let my old life be sacrific'd some hour before the time,
 Unto the rigor of severest Law.

Pri. We still have known thee for a holy man.
 Where's Romeo's man? What can he say to this?

Bey. I brought my Master news of Juliet's death,

And then in posse he came from Mantua
 To this same place, to this same Monument.
 This Letter he early bid me give his Father,
 And threatned me with death, going in the Vault,
 If I departed not, and left him there.

Prin. Give me the Letter, I will look on it.
 Where is the Counties Page that rais'd the Watch?
 Sirrah, what made your Master in this place?

Pag. He came with Flowers to strew his Ladies grave
 And bid me stand aloof. and so I did:
 Anon comes one with light to ope the Tomb
 And by and by my Master drew on him,
 And then I ran away to call the Watch.

Prin. This Letter doth make good the Friers words,
 Their course of Love, the tidings of her death:
 And here he writes, that he did buy a poyson
 Of a poor Pothecary, and there withall
 Came to this Vault to die, and lie with Juliet,
 Where be these enemies? Capulet Mountague,
 See what a scourge is laid upon your hate,
 That Heaven finds means to kill your joyes with Love;
 And I, for winking at your discords too,
 Have lost a brace of kinsmen: All are punish'd.

Cap. O Brother Mountague, give me thy hand,
 This is my Daughters joyniture, for no more
 Can I demand.

Moun. But I can give thee more:
 For I will raise her Statue in pure Gold,
 That whiles Verona by that name is known,
 There shall no figure at that Rate be set,
 As that of True and Faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his Lady lie,
 Poor sacrifices of our enmity.

Prin. A glooming peace this morning with it brings,
 The Sun for sorrow will not shew his head;
 Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things,
 Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished.
 For never was a Story of more woe
 Then this of Juliet, and her Romeo.

EXEUNT OMNES.

FINIS.

THE LIFE OF TYMON OF A THENS.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Mercer, at several doores

Poe.

Ood day Sir.

Pain. I am glad y're well.

Poe. I have not seen you long, how goes the World?

Pain. It weares fir, as it growes.

Poe. I thai's well known.

But what patticular Rarity? What strange,
Which manifold record not marches: see
Magick of Bounty, all these spirits thy power
Hath conjur'd to attend.

I know the Merchant.

Pai. I know them both: th'others a Jeweller.

Mer. Oh 'tis a worthy Lord.

Jew. Nay that's most fixt.

Mer. A most incomparable man, breath'd as it were,
To an uncytable and continue goodness:
He passes.

Jew. I have a Jewel here.

Mer. O pray let's see't. For the Lord Tymon, sir?

Jew. If he will touch the estimate, but for that—

Poe. When we for recompence have prais'd the vild,
It stains the glory in that happy Verse,
Which aptly sings the good.

Mer. 'Tis a good forme.

Jew. And rich: here is a Water look ye.

Pai. You are rapt sir, in some work, some Decication to the great Lord.

Poe. A thing slipt idly from me.

Our Poesie is as a Gown, which uses
From whence 'tis nourtisht: the fire i'th' Flint
Shewes not, till it be struck: our gentle flame
Provokes it self, and like the current flies
Each bound it chases. What have you there?

Pai. A Picture sir: when comes your Book forth?

Poe. Upon the heels of my presentment sir.

Let's see your piece.

Pai. 'Tis a good Piece.

Poe. So 'tis, this comes off well, and excellenr.

Pain. Indifferenr.

Poe. Admirable! How this grace
Speakes his own standing: what a mental power
This eye shoors forth? How big imagination
Moves in this Lip; to th' dumbness of the gesture,

One might interpret.

Pai. It is a pretty mocking of the life:
Here is a touch: Is't good?

Poe. I will say of it,
It Tutors Nature, Artificial strife
Lives in these touches, livelier then life.

Enter certain Senators.

Pai. How this Lord is followed.

Poe. The Senators of Athens, happy men.

Pain. Look mee.

Poe. You see this confluence, this great floud of visitors,
I have in this rough work shap'd out a man
Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hugg
With amplest entertainment: My free drift
Halts not particularly, but moves it self
In a wide Sea of Wax, no levell'd malice
Infects one comma in the course I hold,
But flies an Eagle flight, bold, and forth on,
Leaving no Tract behind.

Pai. How shall I understand you?

Poe. I will unbolt to you.

You see how all Conditions, how all Minds,
As well of glib and slipp'ry Creatures, as
Of Grave and austere quality, tender down
Their services to Lord Tymon: his large Fortune,
Upon his good and gracious Nature hanging,
Subdues and properties to his love and tendance
All sorts of hearts; yea from the glass-fac'd Flatterer
To Apemantus, that few things loves better
Then to abhor himself, even he drops down
The knee before him, and returns in peace
Most rich in Timons nod.

Pai. I saw them speak together.

Poe. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill
Fain'd Fortune to be thron'd.

The Base o'th' Mount

Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of Natures
That labour on the bosom of this Sphere,
To propagate their states: among't them all,
Whose eyes are on this Sovereign Lady fixt,
One do I personate of Lord Timons frame,
Whom Fortune with her Ivory hand wafts to her,
Whose present grace, to present slaves and servants
Translates his Rivals.

Pai. 'Tis conceiv'd, to scope
This Throne, this Fortune, and this Hill me thinks

With

With one man becken'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy Mount
To climbe his happiness, would be well exprest
In our Condition.

Poe. Nay Sir, but hear me on :

All those which were his Fellowes but of late,
Some better then his value ; on the moment
Follow his strides, his Lobbies fill with tendance,
Rain Sacrificial whisperings in his eare,
Make Sacred even his Styrop, and through him
Drink the free Ayr.

Pai. I marry, what of these ?

Poe. When fortune in her shift and change of mood
Spurnes down her late beloved ; all his Dependants
Which labour'd after him to the Mountaines top,
Even on their knees and hands, let him sit down,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pai. 'Tis common :

A thousand moral Paintings I can shew,
That shall demonstrate these quick blowes of Fortune,
More pregnantly then words. Yet you do well,
To shew Lord Timon, that mean eyes have seen
The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound.

Enter Lord Timon, addressing himself curiously to every Smiler.

Tim. Imprisoned is he, say you ?

Mef. I my good Lord, five Talents is his debt,
His meanes most short, his Creditors most strait :
Your honourable Letter he desires
To those have shut him up, which failing to him,
Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius well :

I am not of that Feather, to shake off
My friend when he most needs me. I do know him
A Gentleman, that well deserves a help,
Which he shall have. He pay the debt, and free him.

Mef. Your Lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Commend me to him, I will send his ransom,
And being enfranchized, bid him come to me ;
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mef. All happiness to your Honour.

Enter an old Athenian.

Oldm. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely good Father.

Old. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so : What of him ?

Old. Most Noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or no ? Lucilius.

Luc. Here at your Lordships service.

Old. This fellow here, L. Timon, this thy Creature,
By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been enclin'd to thrift,
And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd,
Then one which holds a Trencher.

Tim. Well : what further ?

Old. One only Daughter have I, no Kin else,
On whom I may confer what I have got :
The Maid is fair, a'th'youngest for a Bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost
In Qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love : I prythee (Noble Lord)

Joyn with me to forbid him her resort,
My self have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old. Therefore he will be Timon,
His honesty rewards him in it self,
It must not bear my Daughter.

Tim. Does she love him ?

Old. She is young and apt :

Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

Tim. Love you the Maid ?

Luci. I my good Lord, and she accepts of it.

Old. If in her Marriage my consent be missing,
I call the Gods to witness, I will chuse
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endowed,
If she be mated with an equal Husband ?

Old. Three Talents on the present, in future, all.

Tim. This Gentleman of mine

Hath serv'd me long :

To build his Fortune, I will strain a little,
For 'tis a Bond in men. Give him thy Daughter,
What you bestow, in him He counterpoize,
And make him weigh with her.

Old. Most Noble Lord,

Pawn me to this your Honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee,

Mine Honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your Lordship, never may
That state or Fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not owed to you.

Poe. Vouchsafe my Labour,

And long live your Lordship.

Tim. I thank you, you shall hear from me anon :
Go not away. What have you there, my Friend ?

Pai. A piece of Painting, which I do beseech
Your Lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.

The Painting is almost the Natural man :
For since Dishonour Traffickes with mans Nature,
He is but outside : The Pensil'd Figures are Even such as they give out. I like your work,
And you shall find I like it ; Wait attendance
Till you hear further from me.

Pai. The Gods preserve ye.

Tim. Well fare you Gentleman : give me your hand.
We must needs dine together : fir your Jewel
Hath suffered under praise.

Jew. What my Lord, dispraise ?

Tim. A meer faciety of Commendations,
If I should pay you for't as 'tis extold,
It would unclaw me quite.

Jew. My Lord, 'tis rated

As those which sell would give : but you well know,
Things of like value differing in the Owners,
Are prized by their Masters. Believ't dear Lord,
You mend the Jewel by the wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd.

Enter Apermantus.

Mer. No my good Lord, he speaks the common tongue
VWhich all men speak with him.

Tim. Look who comes here, will you be chid ?

Jew. VVee'l bear with your Lordship.

Mer. Hee'l spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee,
Gentle Apermantus.

Aper.

Ape. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow.
When thou art Timons dog, and these Knaves honest.

Tim. Why dost thou call them Knaves, thou know'st them not?

Ape. Are they not Athenians?

Tim. Yes.

Ape. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus?

Ape. Thou know'st I do, I call'd thee by thy name.

Tim. Thou art proud Apemantus.

Ape. Of nothing so much, as that I am not like Timon.

Tim. Whether art going?

Ape. To knock out an honest Athenians braines.

Tim. That's a deed thou't die for.

Ape. Right, if doing nothing be death by th' Law.

Tim. How lik'st thou this Picture Apemantus?

Ape. The best, for the innocence.

Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it?

Ape. He wrought better that made the Painter, and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. Y'are a Dog.

Ape. Thy Mothers of my generation: what's she, if I be a Dog?

Tim. Wilt dine with me Apemantus?

Ape. No, I eat not Lords.

Tim. And thou should'st, thou'd'st anger Ladies.

Ape. O they eat Lords;

So they come by great bellies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension.

Ape. So thou apprehend'st it.

Take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this Jewel, Apemantus?

Ape. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a Doit.

Tim. What dost thou think tis worth?

Ape. Not worth my thinking.

How now Poet?

Poet. How now Philosopher?

Ape. Thou lyest.

Poet. Art not one?

Ape. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.

Ape. Art not a Poet?

Poet. Yes.

Ape. Then thou liest:

Look in thy last work, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy Fellow.

Poet. That's not feign'd, he is so.

Ape. Yes he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour. He that loves to be flattered, is worthy o'th flatterer. Heavens, that I were a Lord.

Tim. What wouldst do then Apemantus?

Ape. Ene as Apemantus does now, hate a Lord with my heart.

Tim. What thy self?

Ape. I.

Tim. Wherefore?

Ape. That I had no angry wit to be a Lord.

Art not thou a Merchant?

Mer. I Apemantus.

Ape. Traffick confound thee, if the gods will not.

Mer. If Traffick do it, the gods do it.

Ape. Traffickes thy god, and thy god confound thee.

Trumpet sounds. Enter a Messenger.

Tim. What Trumpet's that?

Mes. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse

All of Companionship.

Tim. Pray entertain them, give them guide to us,
You must needs dine with me: go not you hence
Till I have thank't you: and when dinner's done
Shew me this piece, I am joyful of your sights.

Enter Alcibiades with the rest.

Most welcom Sir.

Ape. So, so; their Aches contract, and starve your supple Joynts: that there should be small love amongst these sweet Knaves, and all this Curtesie. The strain of man's bred out into Baboon and Monkey.

Alci. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed Most hungerly on your sight.

Tim. Right welcom Sir.

Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time
In different pleasures.

Pray you let us in.

Exeunt.

Enter two Lords.

1 Lord. What time a day is't Apemantus?

Ape. Time to be honest.

1 That time serves still.

Ape. The most accursed thou that still omitst it.

2 Thou art going to Lord Timons Feast.

Ape. I, to see meat fill Knaves, and Wine heat fooles.

2 Farthee well, farthee well.

Ape. Thou art a foole to bid me farewell twice.

2 Why Apemantus?

Ape. Shouldst have kept one to thy self, for I mean to give thee none.

1 Hang thy self.

Ape. No I will do nothing at thy bidding:
Make thy requests to thy Friend.

2 Away unpeaceable Dog,

Or Ile spurn thee hence.

Ape. I will fly like a dog, the heeles a'th' Ass.

1 Hees opposite to humanity.

Come shall we in,

And tast Lord Timons bounty: he outgoes
The very heart of kindness.

2 He powres it out: Plutus the god of gold
Is but his Steward; no meed but he repaies
Seven-fold above it self: No gift to him,
But breeds the giver a return: exceeding
All use of quittance.

1 The Noblest mind he carries,
That ever govern'd man.

2 Long may he live in Fortunes: Shall we in?
Ile keep you company.

Exeunt.

Hoboyes Playing, Lord Musick.

A great Banquet serv'd in: and then, Enter Lord Timon, the States, the Athenian Lords, Ventigins which Timon redeemed from prison. Then comes dropping after all, Apemantus discontentedly like himself.

Ventig. Most honoured Timon,
It hath pleas'd the gods to remember my fathers age,
And call him to long peace:
He is gone happy, and has left me rich:
Then, as in grateful Vertue I am bound
To your free heart, I do return those Talents
Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help
I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O by no meanes,
Honest Ventigins: you mistake my Love,

L 11

I gave

I gave it freely ever, and there's none
Can truly say he gives, if he receives :
If our betters play at that game, we must not dare
To imitate them. Faults that are rich are fair.

Vent. A Noble spirit.

Tim. Nay my Lords, Ceremony was but devis'd at first
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodness, forty ere 'tis shown :
But where there is true friendship, there needs none.
Pray sit, more welcome are ye to my Fortunes,
Then my Fortunes to me.

1 Lord. My Lord, we alwaies have confest it.

Ape. Ho, ho, confest it? hang'd it? have you not?

Tim. O Apemantus, you are welcome.

Ape. No : you shall not make me welcome.
I come to have thee thrust me out of doores.

Tim. Fye, th'art a Churle, ye have got a humour there
Does not become a man, tis much to blame :
They say my Lords, Ira furor brevis est,
But yond man is very angry.
Go, let him have a Table by himself :
For he does neither affect company,
Nor is he fit for't indeed.

Ape. Let me stay at thine apperil Timon,
I come to observe, I give thee warning on't.

Tim. I take no heed of thee ; Th'art an Athenian, therefore welcom : I my self would have no power, prethee let my meat make thee silent.

Ape. I scorn thy meat, 'twould choak me : for I should nere flatter thee. Oh you gods! What a number of men eates Timon, and he sees em not? It grieves me to see so many dip their meat in one mans blood, and all the madness is, he cheeres them up too.
I wonder men dare trust themselves with men.
Methinks they should invire them without knives,
Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.
There's much example for't, the fellow that sits next him now parts bread with him, pledges the breath of him in a divided draught : is the readiest man to kill him. 'Tas been proved, if I were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meales, lest they should spy my wind-pipes dangerous notes, great men should drink with harness on their throats.

Tim. My Lord in heart : and let the health go round.

2 Lord. Let it flow this way my good Lord.

Ape. Flow this way? A brave fellow. He keeps his tides well, those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon.

Heres that which is too weak to be a sinner,
Honest water, which nere lest man i'th'mire :
This and my food are equal, theres no ods,
Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

Apemantus Grace.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf,
I pray for no man but my self,
Grant I may never prove so fond,
To trust man on his Oath or Bond.
Or a Harlot for her weeping.
Or a Dog that seems a sleeping.
Or a keeper with my freedom,
Or my friends if I should need em.

Amen. So fall too's :

Rich men sin, and I eat roor.

Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus.

Tim. Captain,

Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

Alci. My heart is ever at your service, my Lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of Enemies, then a dinner of Friends.

Alci. So they were bleeding new my Lord, there's no meat like em, I could wish my friend at such a Feast.

Ape. Would all those flatterers were thine Enemies then, that then thou mightst kill em : and bid me to em.

1 Lord. Might we but have that happiness my Lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeales, we should think our selves for ever perfect.

Tim. Oh no doubt my good Friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you:
how had you been my Friends else? Why have you that charitable title from thousands? Did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to my self, then you can with modesty speak in your own behalf.
And thus far I confirm you. Oh you gods (think I) what need we have any Friends; if we should nere have need of em? They were the most needless Creatures living; should we nere have use for em? And would most resemble sweet Instruments hung up in Cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why I have often wish't my self poorer, that I might come neerer to you :
we are born to do benefits. And what better or prop-
ter can we call our own, then the riches of our friends?
Oh what a precious comfort tis to have so many like Brothers commanding one anothers Fortunes! Oh joyes, e'ne made away ere't can be born, mine eyes cannot hold out water me thinkes to forget their faults. I drink to you.

Ape. Thou weep'st to make them drink Timon.

2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes,
And at that instant, like a babe sprung up.

Ape. Ho, ho : I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

3 Lord. I promise you my Lord you mov'd me much.

Ape. Much.

Sound Tucket. Enter the Maskers of Amazons with Lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Tim. What meanes that Trumpe? How now?

Enter Servant.

Ser. Please you my Lord, there are certain Ladies
Most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies? What are their wills?

Ser. There comes with them a fore-runner my Lord, which beares that office, to signifie their pleasures.

Tim. I pray let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid with the Mask of Ladies.

Cup. Hail to thee worthy Timon and to all that of his Bounties tast : the five best Sences acknowledge thee their Patron, and come freely to gratulate thy plenteous Bosom.

There tast, touch all, pleas'd from thy Table rise :
They only now come but to Feast thine eyes.

Tim. Their welcom all, let em have kind admittance.
Musick make their welcom.

Luc. You see my Lord, how ample ye are below'd.

Ape. Hoyday,
What a sweep of vanity comes this way.
They dance? They are mad women.

Like

Like Madnesse is the glory of this life,
As this pomp shews to a little oyle and roor.
We make our selves fools, to disport our selves,
And spend our Flatteries, to drink those men,
Upon whose age we void it up agen
With poisonous Spight and Envy.
Who lives, that's not depraved, or depraves :
Who dies, that bears not one spurn to their graves
Of their friends gift :
I should fear, those that dance before me now,
Would one day stamp upon me : 'Tas been done,
Men shut their doors against a setting Sunne.

The Lords rise from Table, with much adoring of Timon, and to shew their loves, each single out an Amazon, and all Dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the Hoboyes, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures
Much grace (fair Ladies)
Sets a fair fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not half so beautiful, and kind :
You have added worth unto'r, and lively luster,
And entertain'd me with mine own device.
I am to thank you for't.

1. Lord. My Lord you take us even at the best.

Ape. Faith for the worst is filthy, and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquer attends you.
Please you to dispose your selves.

All La. Most thankfully, my Lord.

Exeunt.

Tim. Flavius.

Fla. My Lord.

Tim. The little Casket, bring me hither.

Fla. Yes, my Lord. More Jewels yet ?
There is no crossing him in's humour,
Else I should tell him well, ifaith I should,
When all's spent, he'd be crost then, and he could :
Tis pittie Bounty had not eies behind,
That man might nere be wretched for his mind.

1. Lord. Where be our men ?

Ser. Here my Lord in readinesse.

2. Lord. Our horses.

Tim. O my Friends ;
I have one word to say to you : Look you, my good Lord :
I must intreat you honour me so much,
As to advance this Jewel, accept, and wear it,
Kind my Lord.

1. Lord. I am so farre already in your gifts,

All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. My Lord, there are certain Nobles of the Senat newly alighred, and come to visit you.

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Enter Flavius.

Fla. I beseech your Honour, vouchsafe me a word, it does concern you neer.

Tim. Neer ? why then another time Ile hear thee.
I prethee let's be provided to shew them entertainment.

Fla. I scarce know how.

Enter another Servant.

Ser. May it please your honour, Lord Lucius
(Our of his free Love) hath presented to you
Four Milk-white Horses, trapt in Silver.

Tim. I shall accept them fairly : let the Presents
Be worthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Servant.

How now ? What news ?

3. Ser. Please you my Lord, that honourable Gentleman Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to morrow, to hunt with him, and ha's sent your honor two brace of Grey-hounds.

Tim. Ile hunt with him.

And let them be received, not without fair Reward.

Fla. What will this come to ?

He commands us to provide, and give great gifts, and all out of an empty Coffer :

Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this,

To shew him what a Beggar his heart is,

Being of no power to make his wishes good,

His promises flye so beyond his state,

That what he speaks is all in debt, owes for ev'ry word :

He is so kind, that he now paises interest for't ;

His Lands put to their Books. Well, would I were

Gently put out of office, ere I were forc'd :

Happier is he that has no friend to feed,

Then such that do e'ne Enemies exceed.

I bleed inwardly for my Lord.

Exit.

Tim. You do your selves much wrong,

You bate too much of your own merits.

Here my Lord, a trifle of our love.

2. Lord. With more then common thanks
I will receive it.

3. Lord. O has the very soul of bounty.

Tim. And now I remember my Lord, you gave good words the other day of a Bay Courser I rode on. Tis yours because you lik'd it.

1. L. Oh, I beseech you, pardon me, my Lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word my Lord : I know no man can justly praise, but what he does affect. I weigh my friends affection with mine own ? Ile tell you true,
Ile call to you.

All Lor. O none so welcome.

Tim. I take all, and your several visitations
So kind to heart, tis not enough to give :
Me thinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends,
And nere be weary. Alcibiades,
Thou art a Souldier, therefore seldom rich,
It comes in charity to thee ; for all thy living
Is 'mongst the dead : and all the Lands thou hast
Lye in a pircht-field.

Alci. I desie Land, my Lord.

1. Lord. We are so verriuously bound.

Tim. And so am I to you.

2. Lord. So infinitely endeet'd.

Tim. All to you. Lights, more Lights, more Light.

1. Lord. The best of Happines, Honour, and Fortunes,
Keep with you Lord Timon.

Tim. Ready for his friends.

Exeunt Lords.

Aper. What a coils here, serving of becks, and jutting out of bummes, I doubt whether their leggs be worth the summes that are given for 'em.

Friendships full of dreggs,

Me thinks false hearts should never have sound leggs.

Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on Court'fies.

Tim. Now Apermantus (if thou wert not sullen)
I would be good to thee

Aper. No, ile nothing ; for if I should be brib'd too, there would be none left to rail upon thee, and then thou wouldst sinne the faster. Thou giv'st so long Timon (I fear me) thou wilt give away thy self in paper shortly.
What need these Feasts, Poms, and Vain-glories ?

L 11 a

Tim.

Tim. Nay, and you begin to rail on Society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you. Farewell, and come with better Musick. Exit.

Aper. So: thou wilt not hear me now, thou shalt not then. Ile lock thy heaven from thee:
Oh that mens ears should be
To Counsell deaf, but not to flattery. Exit.

Enter a Senator.

Sen. And late five thousand: to Varro and to Isidore
He owes nine thousand, besides my former summe,
Which makes it five and twenty. Still in motion
Of raging waste? it cannot hold, it will not.
If I want Gold, steal but a Beggers Dog,
And give it Timon, why the Dogge coyne Gold.
If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty more
Better then be; why give my horse to Timon.
Aske nothing, give it him, it Foals me straight
An able Horse: No Porter at his gate,
But rather one that smiles, and still invites
All that passe by. It cannot hold, no reason
Can sound his state in safety. Caphis hoa.
Caphis I say.

Enter Caphis.

Caph. Here sir, what is your pleasure?

Sen. Get on your cloak. and haste you to Lord Timon
Importune him for my monies, be not ceast
With slight denial; nor then silenc'd, then
Commend me to your Master, and the Cap
Plaies in the right hand, thus: but tell him firrah
My uses cry to me; I must serve my turn
Out of mine own, his daies and times are past,
And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have smit my credit. I love and honour him,
But must not break my back, to heal his finger.
Immediate are my needs, and my relief
Must not be tost and turn'd to me in words,
But find supply immediate. Get you gone,
Put on a most importunate aspect,
A visage of demand: for I do fear
When every feather sticks in his own wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a Phenix, get you gone.

Ca. I go sir.

Sen. I goe sir?

Take the Bonds along with you,
And have the dates in. Come.

Ca. I will Sir.

Sen. Goe. Exeunt.

Enter Steward, with many Bills in his hand.

Stew. No care, no stop, so senselesse of expence,
That he will neither know how to maintain it,
Nor cease his flow of Rior. Takes no account
How things go from him, nor resume no care
Of what is to continue: never mind
Was to be sounwise, to be so kind.
What shall be done, he will not hear, till feel:
I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting.
Fie, fie, fie, fie.

Enter Caphis, Isidore, and Varro.

Ca. Good even Varro, what, you come for money?

Var. Is't not your businesse too?

Cap. It is, and yours too, Isidore?

Isid. It is so.

Cap. Would we were all discharg'd.

Var. I fear it.

Cap. Here comes the Lord.

Enter Timon, and his Train.

Tim. So soon as dinners done, wee'l forth again
My Alcibiades. With me, what is your will?

Cap. My Lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues? whence are you?

Cap. Of Athens here: my Lord.

Tim. Goe to my Steward.

Cap. Please it your Lordship, he hath put me off
To the succession of new daies this moneth:
My Master is awak'd by great occasion,
To call upon his own, and humbly prays you,
That with your other Noble parts, you'll suit,
In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend,
I prethee but repair to me next morning.

Cap. Nay good my Lord.

Tim. Contain thy self good friend.

Var. One Varro's servant, my good Lord.

Isid. From Isidore, he humbly prays your speedy payment.

Cap. If you did know my Lord, my Masters wants.

Var. Twas due on forfeiture my Lord, six weeks, and past.

Isid. Your Steward puts me off my Lord, and I Am sent expressly to your Lordship.

Tim. Give me breath:

I do beseech you good my Lords keep on,
Ile wait upon you instantly. Come hither: pray you
How goes the world that I am thus encountred
With clamorous demands of debt, broken Bonds,
And the detention, long since due debts
Against my Honour?

Stew. Please you Gentlemen,
The time is unagreeable to this businesse:
Your importunacy cease, till after dinner,
That I may make his Lordship understand
Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so my friends, see them well entertain'd.

Stew. Pray draw neere. Exit.

Enter Apemantus and Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the Fool with Apemantus, lets ha some sport with em.

Var. Hang him, hee'l abuse us.

Isid. A plague upon him dog.

Var. How dost Fool?

Ape. Dost Dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. I speak not to thee.

Ape. No tis to thy self. Come away.

Isid. There's the Fool hangs on your back already.

Ape. No thou standst single, thou art not on him yet.

Cap. Where's the fool now?

Ape. He last ask'd the question. Poor Rogues and Usurers men, Bauds between Gold and want.

All. What are we Apemantus?

Ape. Asses.

All. Why?

Ape. That you aske me what you are, and do not know your selves. Speak to em fool.

Fool. How do you Gentlemen?

All. Gramercies good Fool:

How does your Mistrifs?

Fool.

Fool. She's e'ne setting on water to scald such Chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth.

Ape. Good, Gramercy.

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my Masters Page.

Page. Why how now Captain? what do you in this wife company?

How dost thou Apermantus?

Ape. Would I had a Rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably,

Boy. Prethee Apermantus read me the superscription of these Letters, I know not which is which.

Ape. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Ape. There will little Learning die then that day thou art hang'd. This is to Lord Timon, this to Alcibiades. Go thou wast born a Bastard, and thou't die a Bawd.

Page. Thou wast whelp'd a Dog, and thou shalt famish a Dogs death.

Answer not, I am gone.

Exit.

Ape. E'ne so thou out-runst grace,

Fool I will go with you to Lord Timons.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Ape. If Timon stay at home.

You three serve three Usurers?

All. I would they serv'd us.

Aper. So would I:

As good a trick as ever Hangman serv'd thief.

Fool. Are you three Usurers men?

All. I Fool.

Fool. I think no Usurer, but has a fool to his Servant.
My Mistress is one, and I am her fool: when men come to borrow of your Masters, they approach sadly, and go away merrily: but they enter my Masters house merrily, and go away sadly. The reason of this?

Var. I could render one.

Ape. Do it then, that we may account thee a Whoremaster, and a Knave, which notwithstanding thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. What is a Whoremaster fool?

Fool. A fool in good cloathes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit, sometime 't appears like a Lord, sometime like a Lawyer, sometime like a Philosopher, with two stones more then's artificial one. He is very often like a Knight; and generally, in all shapes that man goes up and down in, from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walkes in.

Var. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a Wife man,

As much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lack'st.

Ape. That answer might have become Apermantus.

All. Aside, aside, here comes Lord Timon.

Enter Timon, and Steward.

Ape. Come with me (fool) come.

Fool. I do not alwaies follow Lover, elder Brother, and Woman, sometime the Philosopher.

Stew. Pray you walk near,

He speak with you anon.

Exeunt.

Tim. You make me marvel wherefore ere this time
Had you not fully laid my state before me,
That I might so have rated my expence
As I had leave of means.

Stew. You would not hear me:

At many leisures I propos'd.

Tim. Go to:

Perchance some single vantages you took,
VVhen my indisposition put you back,
And that unaptness made you minister
Thus to excuse your self.

Stew. O my good Lord,
At many times I brought in my accomps,
Laid them before you, you would throw them off,
And say you found them in mine honesty,
VVhen for some trifling present you have bid me
Return so much, I have shook my head, and wept:
Yea against th' Authority of manners, pray'd you
To hold your hand more close: I did endure
Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you in the ebbe of your estate,
And your great flow of debts; my dear lov'd Lord,
Though you here now (too late) yet now's a time
The greatest of your having, lacks a half,
To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my Land be sold.

Stew. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and gone,
And what remains will hardly stop the mouth
Of present dues; the future comes apace:
VVhat shall defend the interim, and at length
How goes our reck'ning?

Tim. To Lacedemon did my Land extend.

Stew. O my good Lord, the world is but a world,
Vere it all yours, to give it in a breath,
How quickly were it gone?

Tim. You tell me true.

Stew. If you suspect my Husbandry or Falshood,
Call me before the exactest Auditors,
And set me on the proof. So the gods blefs me,
VVhen all our Offices have been oppress'd
VVith riotous Feeders, when our Vaults have wept
VVith drunken spilch of VVine; when every Room
Hath blaz'd with Lights, and braid with Minstrelsie,
I have retir'd me to a wastful cocke,
And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prethee no more.

Stew. Heavens have I said, the bounty of this Lord!
How many prodigal bits have Slaves and Peazants
This night englutted: who is not Timons,
What heart, head, sword, force meanes, but is L. Timons:
Great Timon, Noble, Worthy, Royal Timons:
Ah, when the meanes are gone, that buy this praise,
The breath is gone, whereof this praise is made:
Feast won, fast lost; one cloud of Winter showers,
These flies are coucht.

Tim. Come sermon me no further.

No villanous bounty yet hath past my heart,
Unwisely, not ignobly have I given.
Why dost thou weep, canst thou the conscience lack,
To think I shall lack friends: secure thy heart,
If I would broach the vessels of my love,
And try the argument of hearts, by borrowing,
Men, and mens fortunes could I frankly use
As I can bid thee speak.

Stew. Assurance blefs your thoughts.

Tim. And in some sort these wants of mine are crown'd
That I account them blessings. For by these Shall I try friends. You shall perceive
How you mistake my fortunes:
I am wealthy in my friends.
Within there, Flavius, Servilius?

Enter three Servants.

Ser. My Lord, my Lord.

Tim. I will dispatch you severally.

You to Lord Lucius, to Lord Lucullus you, I hunted with his Honour to day; you to Sempronius; commend me to their loves, and I am proud say, that my occasions have found time to use 'em toward a supply of money: let the request be fifty Talents.

Flam. As you have said, my Lord.

Stew. Lord Lucius and Lucullus? Humh.

Tim. Go you fir to the Senators;

Of whom, even to the States best health, I have Deserv'd this hearing; bid'em send o'th' instant A thousand Talents to me.

Stew. I have been bold

(For that I knew it the most general way)
To them, to use your Signet, and your Name,
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? Can't be?

Stew. They answer in a joynt and corporate voyce,
That now they are at fall, want Treasure, cannot Do what they would, are sorry: you are Honourable,
But yet they could have wish'd, they know not,
Something hath been amiss; a Noble Nature
May catch a wrench; would all were well; 'tis pity
And so intending other serious matters,
After distastful lookes; and these hard Fractions,
With certain half-caps, and cold moving nods,
They froze me into Silence.

Tim. You gods reward them:

Prythee man look cheerly. These old Fellowes
Have their ingratitude in them Hereditary:
Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it seldom flowes,
'Tis lack of kindly warmth, they are not kind;
And Nature, as it growes again toward earth,
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and heavy.
Go to Venidius (prythee be not sad,
Thou art true, and honest: ingeniously I speak,
No blame belongs to thee:) Venidius lately
Buried his Father, by whose death he's stepp'd
Into a great estate: when he was poor,
Imprison'd, and in scarcity of Friends,
I cleer'd him with five Talents: Greet him from me,
Bid him suppose, some good necessity
Touches his Friend, which craves to be remembred
With those five Talents; that had, give't these Fellowes
To whom 'tis instant due. Nev'r speak, or think,
That Timons fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Stew. I would I could not think it:

That thought is Bounties Foe:

Being free it self, it thinkes all others so. Exeunt.

Flaminus waiting to speak with a Lord from his Master, enters a servant to him.

Ser. I have told my Lord of you, he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you Sir.

Enter Lucullus.

Ser. Heres my Lord.

Luc. One of Lord Timons men? A Gift I warrant.
Why this hits right: I dream'd of a Silver Bason and Ewre to night. Flaminus, honest Flaminus, you are very respectfully welcome sir. Fill me some Wine. And how does that honourable, Complear, Free-hearted

Gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good Lord and Master.

Flam. His health is well sir.

Luc. I am right glad that his health is well sir: and what hast thou there under thy Cloak, pretty Flaminus?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box Sir, which in my Lords behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply, who having great and instant occasion to use fifty Talents, hath sent to your Lordship to furnish him: nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Luc. La, la, la, la: Nothing doubting sayes he? Alas good Lord, a Noble Gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha din'd with him, and told him on't, and co ne again to supper to him on purpose, to have him spend less, and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming, every man has his fault, and honesty is his. I ha told him on't, but I could nere get him from't.

Enter Servant, with Wine.

Ser. Please your Lordship, here is the Wine.

Luc. Flaminus, I have noted thee alwaies wise. Heres to thee.

Flam. Your Lordship speakes your pleasure.

Luci. I have observed thee alwaies for a towardly prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and one that knowes what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well. Good parts in thee; get you gone firrah. Draw nearer honest Flaminus. Thy Lord's a bountiful Gentleman, but thou art wise, and thou knowest well enough (although thou com'st to me) that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship without security. Heres three Solidares for thee, good Boy wink at me, and say thou saw'st me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible the world should so much differ And we alive that liv'd? Fly damned baseness To him that worships thee.

Luc. Ha? Now I see thou art a Fool, and fit for thy Master. Exit Lucullus.

Fla. May these add to the number that may scald thee: Let molten Coyn be thy damnation, Thou disease of a Friend, and not himself: Has friendship such a faint and milky heart, It turnes in less then two nights? O you gods! I feel my Matters passion. This Slave unto his honour, Has my Lords meat in him: VVhy should it thrive, and come to Nutriment, VVhen he is turn'd to poyson? O may diseases only work upon't: And when he's sick to death, let not that part of Nature Which my Lord paid for, be of any power, To expel sickness, but prolong his hour. Exit.

Enter Lucius, with three strangers.

Luc. Who the Lord Timon? He is my very good friend, and an honourable Gentleman.

1. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell yon one thing my Lord, and which I hear from common rumours, now Lord Timons happy houres are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fye no, do not believe it: he cannot want for money.

2. But believe you this my Lord, that not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus, to borrow so many Talents, nay urg'd extremly for't, and shewed whar what necessity belong'd to't, and yet was deny'd.

Luc. How?

2. I tell you, deny'd my Lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that? Now before the gods I am asham'd on't. Denied that honourable man? There was very little honour shew'd in that. For my own part, I must needs confesse, I have received some small kindneses from him, as Money, Plate, Jewels, and such like Trifles; nothing comparing to his: yet had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should nere have denyed his occasion so many Talents.

Enter Servilius.

Servil. See, by good hap yonders my Lord, I have swet to see his honour. My honour'd Lord.

Luc. Servilius? You are kindly met sir. Farthewell, commend me to thy honourable vertuous Lord, my very exquisite friend.

Servil. May it please your Honor, my Lord hath sent Luci. Ha? what has he sent? I am so much endeered to that Lord; he's ever sending: how shall I thank him think'st thou? And what has he sent now?

Servil. Has only sent his present occasion now my Lord: requesting your Lordship to supply his instant use with so many Talents.

Luci. I know his Lordship is but merry with me, He cannot want fifty five hundred Talents.

Servil. But in the mean time he wants lesse my Lord. If his occasion were not vertuous, I should not urge it halfe so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously Servilius.

Servil. Upon my soul 'tis true Sir.

Luc. What a wicked Beast was I to disfurnish my self against such a good time, when I might ha shewn my self honourable? how unluckily it hapned, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undoe a great deal of honor? Servilius, now before the gods I am not able to do (the more beast I say) I was sending to use Lord Timon my self, these gentlemen can witnesse; but I would not for the wealth of Athens I had don't now. Commend me bountifully to his good Lordship, and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind. And tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions say, that I cannot pleasure such an honorable Gentleman. Good Servilius will you befriend me so far, as to use mine own words to him?

Servil. Yes sir, I shall.

Exit Servilius.

Luci. Ile look you out a good turn Servilius.

True as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed, And he tha'ts once deny'd will hardly speed.

Exit.

1. Doe you observe this Hofilins?

2. I, too well.

1. Why this is the worlds soul, And just of the same peece
Is every Flatterers sport: who can call him his friend
That dips in the same dish? For in my knowing
Timon has been this Lords Father,
And kept his credit with his purse:
Supported his estate, nay Timons money
Has paid his men their wages. He nere drinks,
But Timons Silver treads upon his Lip,
And yet, oh see the monstroufnesse of man,
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape:
He does deny him (in respect of his)

What charitable men afford to Beggars.

3. Religion groans at it.

1. For mine own part, I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend. Yet I protest,
For his right Noble mind, illustrious vertue,
And honourable Carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into Donation,
And the best half should have return'd to him,
So much I love his heart: But I perceive,
Men must learn now with pitty to dispence.
For policy fits above Conscience.

Exeunt.

Enter a third servant with Sempronius, another of Timons Friends.

Semp. Must he needs trouble me in't? Hum.
'Bove all others?

He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus,
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prison. All these Owe their Estates unto him.

Servil. My Lord,
They have all been touch'd, and all are found base-Mettle,
For they have all denied him.

Semp. How? have they deny'd him?
Has Ventidius and Lucullus deny'd him,
And does he send to me? Three? Humh?
It shews but little love or judgement in him.
Must I be his last Refuge? his Friend: (like Physicians)
That thriv'd, give him over. Must I take th' Cure upon me?
Has much disgrac'd me in't, I'me angry at him,
That might have known my place, I see no sense for't.
But his occasions might have wooed me first:
For in my conscience I was the first man
That ere received gift from him.
An does he think so backwardly of me now,
That ile require it last? No:

So it may prove an argument of laughter
To th'rest, and 'mongst Lords I be thought a fool:
Ide rather then the worth of thrice the summe,
Had sent to me first, but for my minds sake:
Ide such a courage to do him good. But now return,
And with their faint reply, this answer joyne;
Who bates mine Honour, shall not know my Coyn. Exit.

Servil. Excellent: Your Lordships a goodly Villain, the divel knew not what he did, when he made man Politick; he crossed himself by't: and I cannot think, but in the end, the villanies of man will set him clear. How fairly this Lord strives to appear foul? Takes vertuous Copies to be wicked: like those, that under hot ardent zeale, would set whole Realms on fire, of such a nature is his politick love.

This was my Lords best hope, now all are fled,
Save onely the Gods. Now his friends are dead,
Doors that were nere acquainted with their Wards
Many a bounteous year must be employ'd
Now to guard sure their Master:
And this is all a liberal course allows,
Who cannot keep his wealth, must keep his house. Exit.

Enter Varro's man, meeting others. All Timons Creditors to wait for his coming out. Then enter Lucius and Hortensius.

Var.man. Well met, good morrow Timus and Hortensius.
Timus

Tit. The like to you kind Varro.

Hort. Lucius, what do we meet together?

Luc. I, and I think one businesse do's command us all.
For mine is money.

Tit. So is theirs, and ours.

Enter Philotus.

Luci. And sir Philotus too.

Phi. Good day at once.

Luci. Welcome good Brother.

What do you think the hour?

Phil. Labouring for Nine.

Luci. So much?

Phil. Is not my Lord seen yet?

Luci. Not yet.

Phil. I wonder on't, he was wont to shine at seven.

Luci. I, but the daies are waxt shorter with him:

You must consider, that a prodigal course
Is like the Sunnes, but not like his recoverable, I fear:
Tis deepest Winter in Lord Timons purse, that is: One may reach deep enough, and yet find little.

Phil. I am of your fear for that.

Tit. Ile shew you how t' observe a strange event:
Your Lord sends now for Money?

Hort. Most true, he does.

Tit. And he wears Jewels now of Timons gift,
For which I wait for money.

Hort. It is against my heart.

Luci. Mark how strange it shows,
Timon in this, should pay more then he owes:
And e'ne as if your Lord should wear rich Jewels,
And send for money for 'em.

Hort. I'm weary of this Charge,
The gods can witness:
I know my Lord hath spent of Timons wealth,
And now ingratitude, makes it worse then stealth.

Varro. Yes mine's three thousand Crowns:
What's yours?

Luci. Five thousand mine.

Var. Tis much deep, and it should seem by th'sum
Your Masters confidence was above mine,
Else surely his had equall'd.

Enter Flaminius.

Tit. One of Lord Timons men.

Luc. Flaminius? Sir, a word: pray is my Lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed he is not.

Tit. We attend his Lordship: pray signifie so much.

Flam. I need not tell him that, he knows you are too diligent.

Enter Steward in a Cloak, muffled.

Luci. Ha, is not that his Steward muffled so?
He goes away in a Cloud: Call him, call him.

Tit. Do you hear, sir?

2. Varro. By your leave, sir.

Stew. What do ye aske of me, my friend.

Tit. We wait for certain Money here, sir.

Stew. I, if money were as certain as your waiting,
Twere sure enough.

Why then prefer'd you not your summes and Bills
When your false Masters eat of my Lords meat?
Then they would smile, and fawn upon his debts,
And take down th'intrest into their glutt'nous Mawes.
You do your selves but wrong, to stirre me up,
Let me passe quietly:
Beleev't, my Lord and I have made an end,
I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luci. I, but this answer will not serve.

Stew. Ift twill not serve, 'tis not so base as you,
For you serve knaves.

1. Varro. How? what does his cashierd worship mutter?

2. Varro. No matter what, he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader, then he that has no house to put his head in? Such may raile against great buildings.

Enter Servilius.

Tit. Oh here's Servilius, now we shall know some answer.

Serv. If I might beseech you Gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from't. For tak'g of my soul, my Lord leans wondrously to discontent: his comfortable temper has forsooke him, he's much out of health, and keeps his Chamber.

Luci. Many do keep their Chambers, are not sick:
And if it be so farre beyond his health,
Me thinks he should the sooner pay his debts,
And make a clear way to the gods.

Servil. Good gods.

Tit. We cannot take this for answer, sir.

Flaminius within. Servilius help, my Lord, my Lord.

Enter Timon in a rage.

Tim. What, are my doores oppos'd against my passage?
Have I bin ever free, and must my house
Be my retentive enemy? My Goal?
The place which I have Feasted, does it now
(Like all Mankind) shew me an Iron heart?

Luci. Put in now Titus.

Tit. My Lord, here is my Bill.

Luci. Heres mine.

1. Varro. And mine, my Lord.

2. Var. And ours, my Lord.

Philo. All our Bills.

Tim. Knock me down with em, cleave me to the Girdle.

Luc. Alas my Lord.

Tim. Cut out my heart in summes:

Tit. Mine, fifty Talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Five thousand Crowns, my Lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops paies that,
What yours? and yours?

1. Var. My Lord.

2. Var. My Lord.

Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you.

Exit Timon.

Hort. Faith I perceive our Masters may throw their caps at their money, these debts may well be call'd desperate ones, for a madman owes em.

Exeunt.

Enter Timon.

Tim. They have e'ne put my breath from me the Slaves,
Creditors? Divels.

Stew. My deere Lord.

Tim. What if it should be so?

Stew. My Lord.

Tim. Ile have it so. My Steward?

Stew. Here my Lord.

Tim. So fitly? Goe, bid all my friends again,
Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius: All,
Ile once more feast the Rascals.

Stew. O my Lord, you only speak from your distracted soul; there's not so much left to furnish out a moderate Table.

Timon.

Tim. Be it not in thy care:
Go I charge thee, invite them all, let in the tide
Of Knaves once more: my Cook and Ile provide. Exeunt.

Enter three Senators at one door, Alcibiades meeting them, with Attendants.

1 Sen. My Lord, you have my voyce to't,
The fault's Bloody;
'Tis necessary he should die:

Nothing emboldens sin so much, as Mercy.

2. Most true; the Law shall bruise em.

Alci. Honour, health and compassion to the Senate.

1. Now Captain.

Alci. I am an humble Sutor to your Vertues;
For pity is the vertue of the Law,
And none but Tyrants use it cruelly.
It pleases time and Fortune to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine, who in hot blood
Hath stept into the Law: which is past depth
To those that (without heed) do plunge into't.
He is a man (setting his Fate aside) of comely Vertues,
Nor did he soyl the fact with Cowardise.
(And honour in him, which buies out his fault)
But with a Noble Fury, and fair spirit
Seeing his Reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his Foe;
And with such sober and unnoed passion
He did behoove his anger ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but prov'd an Argument.

2 Sen. You undergo too strict a Paradox,
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:
Your words have took such paines, as they labour'd
To bring Man-slaughter into form, and set Quarrelling
Upon the head of Valour; which indeed
Is Valour mis-begot, and came into the world,
When Sects and Factions were newly born.
He's truly valiant, that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breath,
And make his wrongs, his Out-sides,
To wear them like his Rayment, carelessly,
And ne'r prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.
If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill,
What Folly 'tis, to hazard life for ill.

Alci. My Lord.

1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear,
To revenge is no Valour, but to bear.

Alci. My Lords, then under favour, pardon me.
If I speak like a Captain.

Why do fond men expose themselves to Battel,
And not endure all threats? Sleep upon't,
And let the Foes quietly cut their throats
Without repugnancy? if there be Such Valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad? Why then, Women are more valiant
That stay at home, if bearing carry it:
And the Ass, more Captain then the Lion? the fellow
Loaden with Irons, wiser then the Judge?
If VVifdom be in suffering. Oh my Lords,
As you are great, be pitifully good,
VVho cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?
To kill, I grant, is sin extreamest Guilt,
But in defence, by Mercy, 'tis most just.
To be in Anger, is impiety:
But who is man, that is not Angry?
VVeigh but the Crime with this.

2 Sen. You breath in vain.

Alci. In vain?

His service done at Lacedemon, and Bizantium,
VVere a sufficient briber for his life.

1. VVnat's that?

Alci. VVhy I say my Lords ha's done fair service,
And slain in fight many of your enemies:
How full of valour did he bear himself
In the last Conflict, and made plenteous wounds?

2 He has made too much plenty with em
He's a sworn Rioror, he has a sin
That often drownes him, and takes his valour prisoner.
If there were no Foes, that were enough
To overcome him. In that beastly fury,
He has been known to commit outrages,
and cherish Factions. 'Tis inferr'd to us,
His daies are foul, and his drink dangerous.

1. He dies.

Alci. Hard fate: he might have died in war.
My Lords, if not for any parts in him,
Though his right arm might purchase his own time,
And be in debt to none: yet more to move you,
Take my deserts to his, and joyn em both.
And for I know, your reverend Ages love Security,
Ile pawn my Victories, all my honours to you,
Upon his good returns.

If by this Crime, he owes the Law his life,
VVhy let the war receiv't in valiant gore,
For Law is strict, and war is nothing more.

1 VVe are for Law, he dies, urge it no more
On height of our displeasure: Friend, or Brother,
He forfeits his own blood, that spils another.

Alci. Must it be so? It must not be:

My Lords, I do beseech you know me.

2 How?

Alci. Call me to your remembrances.

3. VVhat.

Alci. I cannot think but your Age hath forgot me,
It could not else be, I should prove so base,
To sue and be deni'd such common Grace.
My wounds ake at you.

1 Do you dare our anger?
'Tis few words, but spacious in effect.
VVe banish thee for ever.

Alci. Banish me?

Banish your dorage, banish usury,
That makes the Senate ugly.

1 If after two dayes shine, Athens contain thee,
Attend our weightier Judgment.
And not to swell our Spirit,
He shall be executed presently.

Exeunt.

Alci. Now the gods keep you old enough,
That you may live
Only in bone, that none may look on you.
I'm worse then mad: I have kept back their Foes
While they have told their Money, and let out
Their Coyn upon large interest. I my self Rich only in large hurts. All those, for this?
Is this the B Isom, that the usuring Senate
Powres into Caprains wounds? ha Banishment.
It comes not ill: I hate not to be banisht,
It is a Cause worthy my Spleen and Fury,
That I may strike at Athens. Ile chear up
My discontented Troupes, and lay for hearts:
'Tis honour with most Lands to be at ods,
Souldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods.

*Exit.
Enter*

Enter divers Friends at several doores.

- 1 The good time of day to you, sir.
- 2 I also wish it to you: I think this honourable Lord did but try us this other day.
1. Upon that were my thoughts tying when we encountered. I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the tryal of his several Friends.
- 2 It should not be, by the perswasion of his new Feasting.
- 1 I should think so: He hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off: but he hath conjur'd me beyond them, and I must needs appear.
- 2 In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my Provision was out.
- 1 I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.
- 2 Every man heare so: what would he have borrowed of you?
- 1 A thousand Pieces.
- 2 A thousand Pieces?
- 1 What of you?
- 2 He sent to me sir—Here he comes.

Enter Timon and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart Gentlemen both; and how fare you?

- 1 Ever at the best, hearing well of your Lordship.
 - 2 The Swallow followes not Summer more willing, Then we your Lordship.
- Tim.* Nor more willingly leaves winter, such Summer Birds are men. Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompence this long stay: Feast your cares with the Musick a while: if they will fare so harshly o'th Trumpets sound: we shall too't presently.

1 I hope it remains not unkindly with your Lordship, that I return'd you an empty Messenger.

Tim. O sir, let it not trouble you.

2. My Noble Lord.

Tim. Ah my good friend, what cheer?

The Banquet brought in.

2 My most honourable Lord, I am e'ne sick of shame, that when your Lordship the other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a Beggar.

Tim. Think not on't, sir.

2 If you had sent but two houres before.

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance. Come bring in all together.

2 All cover'd Dishes.

1 Royal Chear, I warrant you.

3 Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

1 How do you? What's the newes?

3 Alcibiades is banish'd: hear you of it?

Both. Alcibiades banish'd?

3 'Tis so, be sure of it.

1. How? How?

2. I pray you upon what?

Tim. My worthy Friends, will you draw near?

3 He tell you more anon. Here's a Noble feast toward.

2 This is the old man still.

3 Wilt hold? Wilt hold?

2 It does, but time will, and so.

3. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his Mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a City Feast of it, to let the meat cool, ere we can agree upon the first plate. Sir, sir.

The gods require our Thankes.

You great Benefactors, sprinkle our Society with Thankfulness. For your own gifts, make your selves prais'd: But reserve still to give, lest your Deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another. For were your god-heads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved, more then the man that gives it. Let no Assembly of Twenty, be without a score of Villaines. If there sit twelve Women at the Table, let a dozen of them be as they are. The rest of your Fees, O gods, the Senators of Athens, together with the common legges of People, what is amiss in them, you Gods, make suteable for destruction, For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing blest them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Uncover Dogs, and lap.

Some speak. What do'es his Lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better Feast never behold You knot of Mouth-friends: Smoak, and luke-warm water Is your perfection. This is Timons last, Who stuck and spangled you with flatteries, Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces Your reeking villany. Live loath'd, and long Most smiling, smooth, detested Parasites, Curteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek Beares: You fooles of Fortune, Trencher-friends, Time flies, Cap and knee Slaves, Vapours, and Minute Jackes Of Man and Beast, the infinite Malady Crust you quite o're. VVhat do'st thou go? Soft, take thy Physick first; thou too, and thou; Stay I will lend thee money, borrow none. VVhat? All in motion? Henceforth be no Feast, VVhereat a Villain's not a welcome Guest. Burn house, sink Athens, henceforth hated be Of Timon, Man, and all humanity.

Exit.

Enter the Senators, with other Lords.

1 How now, my Lords?

2. Know you the quality of Lord Timons fury?

3. Push, did you see my Cap.

4. I have lost my Gown.

1 He's but a mad Lord, and nought but humour swaies him. He gave me a Jewel th'other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat.

Did you see my Jewel?

3 Did you see my Cap?

3 Here 'tis.

4 Here lies my Gown.

1. Lets make no stay.

2. Lord Timon's mad.

3. I feel't upon my bones.

4. One day he gives us Diamonds, next day Stones.

Exeunt the Senators.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee. O thou VVall That girdles it those VVolves, dive in the earth, And fence not Athens. Matrons, turn incontinent, Obedience fail in Children: Slaves and Fooles

Pluck

Pluck the grave wrinkled Senate from the Bench,
And minister in their steeds to general Filthes.
Convert o'th' instant green Virginitie,
Do't in your Parents eies. Bankrupts, hold fast
Rather then render back; out with your knives,
And cut your Trusters throats. Bound Servants, steal,
Large-handed Robbers your grave Masters are,
And pill by Law. Maid to thy Masters bed,
Thy Mistress is o'th' Brothell. Sonne of sixteen,
Pluck the lyn'd Crutch from thy old limping Sire,
With it, beat out his Brains. Piety, and fear,
Religion to the gods, Peace, Justice, Truth,
Domestick awe, Night-rest, and Neighbour-hood,
Instruction Manners, Mysteries, and Trades,
Degrees, Observances, Customs, and Laws.
Decline to your confounding contraries.
And yet confusion live: Plagues incident to men,
Your potent and infectious Feavors, heap
On Athens ripe for stroke. Thou cold Sciatica,
Cripple our Senators, that their limbs may halt
As lamely as their Manners. Lust and liberty
Creep in the Minds and Marrows of our youth,
That 'gainst the stream of verue they may strive,
And drown themselves in Riot. Itches, Blains,
Sowe all th'Athenian bosoms, and their crop
Be general Leprosie: Breach, insect breath,
That their Society (as their friendship) may
Be meerly poison. Nothing ile bear from thee
But nakednesse, thou detestable Town.
Take thou that too, with multiplying Bannes:
Timon will to the Woods, where he shall find
Th'unkindest Beast, more kinder than Mankind.
The gods confound (hear me you good gods all)
Th'Athenians both within and out that Wall:
And grant as Timon grows, his hate may grow
To the whole race of Mankind, high and low,
Amen.

Enter Steward with two or three Servants.

1. Hear you Master Steward, where's our Master?
Are we undone, cast off, nothing remaining?

Stew. Alack my fellowes, what should I say to you?
Let me be Recorded by the righteous gods,
I am as poor as you.

1. Such a house broke?
So Noble a Master slain, all gone, and not
One Friend to take his fortune by the arme,
And goe along with him.

2. As we do turn our backs
From our Companion, thrown into his grave,
So his Familiars to his buried Fortunes
Slink all away, leave their false vows with him
Like empty purses pickt. And his poor self
A dedicated Beggar to the Air,
With his disease, of all shunn'd poverty,
Walks like contempt alone. More of our Fellowes.

Enter other Servants.

Stew. All broken Implements of a ruin'd house.

3. Yet do our hearts wear Timons Livery,
That see I by our faces: we are Fellowes still,
Serving alike in sorrow: Leak'd is our Barke,
And we poor Mates stand on the dying deck,
Hearing the Surges threat: we must all part
Into this Sea of Air.

Stew. Good fellowes all.

The latest of my wealth ile share amongst you.
Where ever we shall meet, for Timons sake,
Let's yet be fellowes. Let's shake our heads, and say
As twere a Knell unto our Masters Fortunes,
We have seen better daies. Let each take some:
Nay put out all your hands: Not one word more,
Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.

Embrace and part several waies.

Oh the fierce wretchednesse that glory brings us!
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
Since Riches point to Misery and Contempt?
Who would be so mock'd with glory, or to live
But in a Dream of friendship,
To have his pomp, and all what state compounds,
But only painted like his varnisht friends:
Poor honest Lord, brought low by his own heart,
Undone by goodnesse: strange unusual blood,
When man's worst sinne is, he do's too much good.
Who then dares to be halfe so kind agen?
For Bounty that makes gods, do still marre men,
My dearest Lord, blest to be most accurst,
Rich only to be wretched; thy great fortunes
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas (kind Lord)
He's slung in Rage from this ungrateful Seat
Of monstrous Friends:
Nor has he with him to supply his life,
Or that which can command it:
Ile follow and enquire him out.
Ile ever serve his mind, with my best will,
Whilst I have gold, ile be his Steward still.

Exit.

Enter Timon in the Woods.

Tim. O blessed breeding Sun, draw from the earth
Rotten humidity: below thy Sisters Orbe
Infect the air. Twin'd Brothers of one womb,
Whose procreation, residence, and birth,
Scarce is dividant; touch them with several fortunes,
The greater scorns the lesser. Not Nature
(To whom all fores lay siege) can bear great Fortune
But by contempt of Nature.
Raise me this Begger, and deny't that Lord,
The Senators shall bear contempt Hereditary,
The Beggar Native honor.
It is the Pastor Lords, the Brothers sides,
The want that makes him lean: who dares? who dares
In purity of Manhood, stand upright
And say, this man's a flatterer. If one be,
So are they all, for every grize of fortune
Is smoothe'd by that below. The Learned pate
Ducks to the Golden fool. Alls obliquy:
There's nothing level in our cursed Natures
But direct villany. Therefore be abhorr'd,
All Feasts, Societies, and Throngs of men.
His semblable, yea himself Timon disdains,
Destruction phang mankind, Earth yield me Roots,
Who seeks for better of thee, sawce his pallate
With thy most operant poison. What is here?
Gold? Yellow, glittering, precious Gold?
No gods, I am no idle Votarist,
Roots you clear Heavens. Thus much of this will make
Black, white; fowl, fair; wrong, right;
Base, Noble; Old, young; Coward, valiant.
Ha you gods! why this? what this you gods? why this
Will lugge your Priests and Servants from your sides:
Pluck stout mens pillows from below the heads.

This

This yellow Slave,
Will knit and break Religions, blesse th'accurst,
Make the hoar Leprosie ador'd, place Theeves.
And give them title, knee, and approbation
With Senarors on the Bench? This is it
That makes the wapen'd Widdow wed again;
She, whom the Spittle-house, and ulcerous sores,
Would cast the gorge at. This Embalmes and Spices
To th'April day again. Come damn'd earth,
Thou common whore of Mankind, that puts oddes
Among the rout of Nations, I will make thee
Do thy right Nature. March as farre off.
Ha? a Drumm? Th'art quick,
But yet ile bury thee: Thou'rt go (strong Thief)
When Gouty keepers of thee cannot stand:
Nay stay thou out for earnest.

Enter Alcibiades with Drum and Fife in warlike manner and Phrynia, and Timandra.

Alci. What art thou there? speak.

Tim. A beast as thou art. The Canker gnaw thy heart
For shewing me again the eies of man.

Alci. What is thy name? is man so hateful to thee,
That art thy self a man?

Tim. I am Misanthropos, and hate Mankind.
For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,
That I might love thee something.

Alci. I know thee well:

But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd, and strange.

Tim. I know thee too, and more then that I know thee
I not desire to know, Follow thy Drumme,
With mans blood paint the ground Gules, Gules:
Religious Cannons, civil Laws are cruel,
Then what should warre be? This fell whore of thine,
Hath in her more destruction then thy Sword,
For all her Cherubin look.

Phrin. Thy lips rot off.

Tim. I will not kisse thee, then the rot returns
To thine own lips again.

Alci. How came the Noble Timon to this change?

Tim. As the Moon do's, by wanting light to give:
But then renew I could not, like the Moon,
There were no Sunnes to borrow of.

Alci. Noble Timon, what friendship may I do thee?

Tim. None, but to maintain my opinion.

Alci. What is it Timon?

Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none.
If thou wilt not promise, the Gods plague thee, for thou art a man: if thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man.

Alci. I have heard in some sort of thy Miseries.

Tim. Thou sawst them when I had prosperity.

Alci. I see them now, then was a blessed time.

Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of Harlots.

Timan. Is this th'Athenian Minion, whom the world,
Voyc'd so regardfully?

Tim. Art thou Timandra?

Timan. Yes.

Tim. Be a whore still, they love thee not that use thee, give them diseases, leaving with thee their Lust. Make use of thy salt hours, season the slaves for Tubbes and Bathes, bring down Rose-checkt youth to the Fubfast, and the Diet.

Timan. Hang thee Monster.

Alci. Pardon him sweet Timandra, for his wits
Are drown'd and lost in his Calamities.

I have but little Gold of late, brave Timon,
The want whereof, doth daily make revolt
In my penurious Band. I have heard and griev'd
How curst Athens, mindlesse of thy worth,
Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour stares
But for thy Sword and Fortune trode upon them.

Tim. I prethee beat thy Drum, and get thee gone.

Alci. I am thy friend, and pity thee dear Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pity him, whom thou dost trouble,
I had rather be alone. (ble,

Alci. Why fare thee well:

Here is some Gold for thee.

Tim. Keep it, I cannot ear it.

Alci. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap.

Tim. Warri'st thou 'gainst Athens?

Alci. I Timon, and have cause.

Tim. The gods confound them all in thy Conquest,
And thee after, when thou hast conquer'd.

Alci. Why me, Timon?

Tim. That by killing of Villains
Thou was't born to conquer my Countrey.
Put up thy Gold. Go on, here's Gold, go on;
Be as a Planetary plague, whom Jove
Will ore some high-vic'd City hang his poison
In the sick air: let not thy sword skip one.
Pitty nor honour'd Age for his white Beard,
He is an Usurer. Strike me the counterfeit Matron,
It is her habit only, that is honest,
Her self's a Bawd. Let not the Virgins, cheek
Make soft thy trenchant sword: for those Milk-papps
That through the window Barn bore at mens eies,
Are not within the Leaf of pitty writ,
But set them down horrible Traitors. Spare not the Babe
Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their mercy;
Think it a Bastard, whom the Oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounced, the throat shall cut,
And mince it sans remorse. Swear against Objects,
Put Armour on thine ears, and on thine eies,
Whose proof, nor yels of Mothers, Maids, nor Babes
Nor sight of Priests in holy vestments bleeding,
Shall pierce a jot. There's Gold to pay thy Souldiers.
Make large confusion: and thy fury spent,
Confounded be thy self. Speak not, be gone.

Alci. Hast thou gold yet, ile take the gold thou givest me, not all thy Counsell.

Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, Heavens curse upon thee.

Both. Give us some Gold good Timon, hast thou more?

Tim. Enough to make a Whore forswear her Trade,
And to make Whores, a Bawd. Hold up you Sluts
Your aprons mountant, you are not Othable,
Although I know you'll swear, terribly swear
Into strong shudders, and to heavenly Agues
Th'immortal gods that hear you. Spare your Oaths:
Ile trust to your conditions, be whores still.
And he whose pious breath seeks to convert you,
Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up,
Let your close fire predominate his smoak,
And be no turn-coats: yet may your pains six months
Be quite contrary. And Thatch
Your poor thin Roofs, with burthens of the dead,
(Some that were hang'd) no matter:
VVeare them, betray with them, Whore still.
Paint till a horse may mire upon your face:
A pox of wrinkles.

Both. Well, more Gold, what then?

Beleev't that wee'l do any thing for Gold.

Tim. Consumptions sow
In hollow bones of man, strike their sharp shinnes,
And marre mens spurring. Crack the Lawyers voice,
That he may never more false Title plead.
Nor sound his Quilllets shrilly, Hoar the Flamen,
That scold'tt against the quality of flesh,
And not beleeves himself, Down with Nose,
Down with it flat, take the Bridge quite away
Of him, that his particular to foresee (bald
Smels from the general weal. Make curl'd pate Ruffians
And let the unscarr'd Braggarts of the Warre
Derive some pain from you. Plague all,
That you activity may defeat and quell
The source of all Erektion. There's more Gold.
Do you damne others, and let this damne you,
And ditches grave you all.

Both. More counsel with more Money, bounteous
Timon.

Tim. More whore, more mischief first, I have given you earnest.

Alci. Strike up the Drum towards Athens, farewell
Timon: if I thrive well, ile visit thee again.

Tim. If I hope well, ile never see thee more.

Alci. I never did thee harm.

Tim. Yes, thou spok'tt well of me.

Alci. Call'tt thou that harm?

Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away,
And take thy Beagles with thee.

Alci. We but offend him, strike. Exeunt.

Tim. That Nature being sick of mans unkindnesse
Should yet be hungry: Common Mother, thou
Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast
Teems and feeds all: whose selfe same merkle
Whereof thy proud Child (arrogant man) is puffed,
Engenders the black Toad, and Adder blew,
The gilded Newt, and eyelesse venom'd worm,
With all th'abhorred Births below Crispe heaven,
Whereon Hyperions quickning fire doth shine:
Yield him, who all the humane Sonnes do hate,
From forth thy plentious bosom, one poor root.
Ensear thy Fertile, and Conceptions womb,
Let it no more bring out ingratefull man.
Goe great with Tygers, Dragons, Wolves, and Bears,
Teem with new Monsters, whom thy upward face
Hath to the Marbled Mansion all above
Never presented. O, a Root, dear thanks:
Dry up thy Marrowes, Vines, and Plough-torn Leas,
Whereof ingratefull man with Liquorish draughts
And Morfels Unctions, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips——

Enter Apemantus.

More man? Plague, plague.

Ape. I was directed hither. Men report,
Thou dost affect my Manners, and dost use them.

Tim. 'Tis then, because thou dost not keep a dog
Whom I would imitate, consumption catch thee.

Ape. This is in thee a Nature but infected,
A poor unmanly Melancholly sprung
From change of future. Why this Spade? this place?
This Slave like Habit, and these looks of Care?
Thy Flatterers yet wear Silk, drink Wine, lye soft,
Hugge their diseased Perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these Woods,
By putting on the cunning of a Carper.
Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive

By that which has undone thee; hindege thy knee,
And let his very breath whom thou'lt observe
Blow off thy Cap: praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent: thou wast told thus:
Thou gav'st thine ears (like Tappers, that bid welcome)
To knaves, and all approachers: 'Tis most just
That thou turn Rascal, hadst thou wealth again,
Rascalls should hav't. Do not assume my likeness.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'de throw away my self.

Ape. Thou hast cast away thy self, being like thy self
A Madman so long, now a Fool: what think'st
That the bleak Air, thy boisterous Chamberlain
Will put thy Shirt on warm? VVill these moist Trees,
That have out-liv'd the Eagle, page thy heels
And skip when thou point'st it out? VVill the cold Brook
Candied with Ice, Cawdle thy Morning taste
To cure thy o're-nights surfet? Call the Creatures,
Whose naked Natures live in all the spight
Of wreekful Heaven, whose bare unhoused Trunks,
To the conflicting Elements expos'd
Answer meer Nature: bid them flatter thee.
O thou shalt find.

Tim. A fool of thee: depart.

Ape. I love thee better now then ere I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Ape. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Ape. I flatter not, but say thou art a Caytiffe.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Ape. To vex thee.

Tim. Alwaies a Villains Office, or a Fools.
Dost please thy self in't?

Ape. I.

Tim. VVhat, a knave too?

Ape. If thou didst put this sowe cold habit on
To castigate thy pride, 'twere well: but thou
Dost it enforcedly: Thou'dst Countier be again
VVere thou not Beggar: willing misery
Out-lives: in certain pomp, is crown'd before:
The one is filling still, never compleat:
The other, at high wish: best state Contentlesse,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
VVorse then the worst, content.
Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.
Tim. Not by his breath, that is more miserable.
Thou art a Slave, whom Fortunes tender arme
VVith favour never claspt: but bred a Dogge.
Hadst thou like us from our first swath proceeded,
The sweet degrees that this brief world affords,
To such as may the passive druggs of it
Freely command'tt: thou wouldst have plung'd thy self
In general Rior, melted down thy youth
In different beds of Lust, and never learn'd
The Icie precepts of respect, but followed
The Sugred game before thee. But my self
VVho had the world as my Confectionary,
The mouths, the tongues, the eies, the hearts of men,
At duty more then I could frame employments:
That numberlesse upon thee stuck, as leaves
Do on the Oak, have with one VVinters brush
Fell from their boughs, and left me open bare,
For every storm that blows. I to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burthen
Thy Nature did commence in sufferance, Time
Hath made thee hard in't. VVhy shouldst thou hate men?
They never flatter'd thee. VVhat hast thou given?

M m m

If

If thou wilt curse: thy Father (that poor ragge)
Must be thy subject; who in spight put stusse
To some she-Begger, and compounded thee
Poor Rogue, hereditary. Hence be gone,
If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.

Ape. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. I, that I am nor thee.

Ape. I, that I was no Prodigall.

Tim. I, that I am one now.

VVere all the wealth I have shut up in thee,
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone:
That the whole life of Athens were in this,
Thus would I eat it.

Ape. Here, I will mend thy feast.

Tim. First mend thy company, take away thy self.

Ape. So I shall mend mine own, by th'lack of thine.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botcht;
If not, I would it were.

Ape. VVhat wouldst thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind: if thou wilt,
Tell them there I have Gold, look, so I have.

Ape. Here is no use for Gold.

Tim. The best, and truest:
For here it sleeps, and do's no hyred harm.

Ape. Where ly'st a nights Timon?

Tim. Under that's above me.

Where feed'st thou a daies Apemantus?

Ape. Where my stomack finds meate, or rather where
I eat it.

Tim. Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind.

Ape. Where wouldst thou send it?

Tim. To sawce thy dishes.

Ape. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends. When thou wast in thy Gilt, and thy Perfume, they mockt thee, for too much curiosity:
in thy Rags thou knowest none, but art despis'd for the contrary. There's a Medler for thee, eat it.

Tim. On what I hate, I feed not.

Ape. Dost hate a Medler?

Tim. I, though it look like thee.

Ape. And th'hadst hated Medlers sooner, thou should'st have loved thy self better now. What man did'st thou ever know unthrift, that was beloved after his means?

Tim. Who without those means thou talk'st of, didst thou ever know belov'd?

Ape. My self.

Tim. I understand thee, thou hadst some means to keep a Dog.

Ape. What things in the world canst thou neereft compare to thy flatterers?

Tim. Women neereft, but men: men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world Ape- manus, if it lay in thy power?

Ape. Give it the Beasts, to be rid of the men.

Tim. Wouldst thou have thy self fall in the confusion of men, and remain a Beast with the Beasts.

Ape. I Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the Gods grant thee t'attain to. If thou wert the Lyon, the Fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the Lamb, the Fox would eat thee: if thou wert the Fox, the Lyon would suspect thee, when peradventure thou wert accus'd by the Asse:
If thou wert the Asse, thy dullnesse would torment thee:
and still thou liv'dst but as a Breakfast to the Wolfe. If thou wert the Wolfe, thy greedinesse would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner. Wert thou the Unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury.

Wert thou a Bear, thou wouldst be kill'd by the Horse:
wert thou a Horse, thou wouldst be seiz'd by the Leopard: wert thou a Leopard, thou wert German to the Lion, and the spots of thy kindred, were Jurors on thy life.
All thy safety were remotion, and thy defence absence.
What Beast couldst thou be, that were not subject to a Beast: and what a Beast art thou already, that see'st not thy losse in transformation.

Ape. If thou couldst please me.

With speaking to me thou might'st

Have hit upon it here.

The Common-wealth of Athens is become

A Forrest of Beasts.

Tim. How has the Asse broke the wall, that thou art out of the City.

Ape. Yonder comes a Poet and a Painter:

The Plague of Company light upon thee:

I will fear to catch it, and give way.

When I know not what else to do,

Ile see thee again.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee,

Thou shalt be welcome.

I had rather be a Beggars Dog

Then Apemantus.

Ape. Thou art the Cap

Of all the Fools alive.

Tim. VVould thou wert clean enough
To spit upon.

Ape. A plague on thee,

Thou art too bad to curse.

Tim. All Villains

That do stand by thee, are pure:

Ape. There is no Leprosie,

But what thou speak'st.

Tim. If I name thee, ile beat thee;

But I should infect my hands.

Ape. I would my tongue

Could rot them off.

Tim. Away thou issue of a mangy dog,

Choller does kill me,

That thou art alive, I swound to see thee.

Ape. VVould thou would'st burst.

Tim. Away thou tedious Rogue, I am sorry I shall lose a stone by thee.

Ape. Beast.

Tim. Slave.

Ape. Toad.

Tim. Rogue, Rogue, Rogue.

I am sick of this false world, and will love nought
But even the meer necessities upon't:

Then Timon presently prepare thy grave:

Lye where the light Foam of the Sea may beat

Thy grave-stone daily, make thine Epitaph,

That death in me, at others lives may laugh.

O thou sweet King-killer, and dear divorce

Twixt natural Sunne and fire: thou bright defiler

Of Himens purest bed, thou valiant Mars

Thou ever, young, fresh, loved, and delicate wooer,

VVhose blush doth thawe the consecrated Snow

That lies on Dians lap.

Thou visible God,

That souldrest close Impossibilities.

And mak'st them kisse; that speak'st with every Tongue

To every purpose ; O thou touch of hearts,
Think thy slave-man rebels, and by thy virtue
Set them into confounding oddes, that Beasts
May have the world in Empire.

Ape. VVould 'twere so,
But not till I am dead. Ile say th' hast Gold :
Thou wilt be throng'd too shortly.

Tim. Throng'd too ?

Ape. I.

Tim. Thy back I prythee.

Ape. Live, and love thy misery.

Tim. Long live so, and so die. I am quit.

Ape. Mo things like men ;
Eat Timon, and abhor then.

Exit Apeman.

Enter the Banditti.

1. VVhere should he have this Gold ? It is some poor Fragment, some slender Ort of his remainder : the meer want of Gold, and the falling from of his Friends, drove him into this Melancholly.

2 It is nois'd
He hath a Mass of Treasure.

3. Let us make the assay upon him, if he care not for't, he will supply us easily : if he covetously reserve it, how shall's get it ?

2 True : for he bears it not about him :
'Tis hid.

1 Is not this he ?

All. VVhere ?

2 'Tis his description.

3 He ? I know him.

All. Save thee Timon.

Tim. Now Thieves.

All. Soldiers, not Thieves.

Tim. Both too, and womens Sons.

All. VVe are not thieves, but men
That much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat :
VVhy should you want ? Behold, the Earth hath Roots :
Within this Mile break forth an hundred Springs :
The Oakes bear Mast, the Briers Scarlet Hips,
The bounteous Huswife Nature, on each bush,
Lays her full Mefs before you. VVant ? why want ?

1 VVe cannot live on Grass, on Beries, VVater,
As Beasts, and Birds, and Fishes.

Tim. Nor on the Beasts themselves, the Birds and Fishes,
You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con,
That you are thieves protest : that you work not
In holier shapes : for there is boundless theft
In limited professions. Rascal thieves
Here's Gold. Go, suck the subtle bloud o'th Grape,
Till the high Feaver seeth your Bloud to Froth,
And so scape hanging. Trust not the Physician,
His Antidotes are poyson, and he slayes
More then you Rob : Take wealth, and live together,
Do Villain do, since you protest to do't.

Like workmen, Ile example you with Theevery :
The Sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Robs the vast Sea. The Moon's an artant thief,
And her pale fire, she snatches from the Sun.
The Sea's a thief, whose liquid Surge, resolves
The Moon into Salt reares. The Earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a composture stoln
From gen'ral excrement : Each thing's a thief.
The Lawes, your curb and whip, in their rough power

Ha's uncheck'd theft. Love not your selves, away,
Rob one another, there's more Gold, cut throates,
All that you meet are thieves : to Athens go,
Break open shops, nothing can you steal
But thieves do lose it : steal less, for this I give you
And Gold confound you howsoere : Amen.

3 H'as almost charm'd me from my Profession, by perswading me to it.

1 'Tis in the malice of mankind, that he thus advises us not to have us thrive in our mystery.

2 Ile believe him as an Enemy,
And give over my Trade.

1 Let us first see peace in Athens, there is no time so miferable but a man may be true.

Exeunt Thieves.

Enter the Steward to Timon.

Stew. Oh you Gods !

Is yon'd despis'd and ruinous man my Lord :
Full of decay and failing ? Oh Monument
And wonder of good deeds, evilly bestow'd !
What an alteration of honour has desp'rate want made ?
What vilder thing upon the earth, then Friends,
Who can bring Noblest minds, to basest ends,
How rarely does it meet with this times guise,
When man was wisht to love his Enemies :
Grant I may ever love, and rather woo
Those that would mischief me, then those that do.
His caught me in his eye, I will present my honest grief
Unto him ; and as my Lord, still serve him with my life.
My dearest Master.

Tim. Away : what art thou ?

Stew. Have you forgot me, Sir ?

Tim. Why dost ask that ? I have forgot all men.
Then if thou grunt'st th' art a man,
I have forgot thee.

Stew. An honest poor Servant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not :
I nev'r had honest man about me, I all,
I kept were Knaves, to serve in meat to Villaines.

Stew. The Gods are witness,
Never did poor Steward wear a truer grief
For his undone Lord, then mine eyes for you.

Tim. What dost thou weep ?

Come nearer, then I love thee
Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st
Flinty mankind : whose eyes do never give,
But through Lust and Laughter : pitie's sleeping :
Strange times that weep with laughing, not with weeping.

Stew. I beg of you to know me, good my Lord,
T'accept my grief, and whilst this poor wealth lasts,
To entertain me as your Steward still.

Tim. Had I a Steward
So true, so just, and now so comfortable ?
It almost turnes my dangerous Nature wild :
Let me behold thy face : Surely, this man
Was born of woman.

Forgive my general, and exceptless rashness
You perpetual sober Gods. I do proclaim
One honest man : Mistake me not, but one :
No more I pray, and he's a Steward.

How fain would I have hated all mankind,
And thou redeem'st thy self : But all save thee,
I sell with Curses.

Me thinks thou art more honest now then wise :
For, by oppressing and betraying me,

M m m 2

Thou

Thou might'st have sooner got another Service :
For many so arrive at second Masters ,
Upon their first Lords neck. But tell me true,
(For I must ever doubt, though ne're so sure)
Is not thy kindness subtle, coverous,
If not a Usuring kindness, and as rich men deal Gifts,
Expecting in return twenty for one?

Stew. No my most worthy Master, in whose breast
Doubt, and suspect (alas) are plac'd too late :
You should have fear'd false times, when you did Feast.
Suspect still comes where an estate is least.

That which I shew, Heaven knows, is merely Love,
Duty, and Zeal, to your unmatched mind,
Care of your Food and Living, and believe it,
My most honour'd Lord,

For any benefit that points to me,
Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange
For this one wish, that you had power and wealth
To require me, by making rich your self.

Tim. Look thee 'tis so : thou singly honest man,
Here take : the Gods out of my misery,
Ha's sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy.
But thus condition'd : Thou shalt build from men :
Hate all, curse all, shew Charity to none,
But let the famisht flesh slide from the bone,
Ere thou relieve the Beggar. Give to dogs
What thou denyest to men. Let Prisons swallow'em,
Debts wither'em to nothing, be men like blasted woods
And may Diseases lick up their false blouds,
And so farewell, and thrive.

Stew. O let me stay and comfort you my Master :

Tim. If thou hat'st Curses
Stay not : flee, whilst thou art blest and free :
Ne're see thou man, and let me ne're see thee. Exit.

Enter Poet and Painter.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far
Where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him ?
Does the Rumour hold for true,
That he's so full of Gold ?

Pain. Certain.
Alcibiades reports it : Phrinia and Timandra
Had Gold of him, he likewise enrich'd
Poor stragling Soldiers, with great quantity.
'Tis said, he gave unto his Steward
A mighty Sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his,
Has been but a try for his Friends.

Pain. Nothing else :
You shall see him a Palm in Athens again,
And flourish with the highest :
Therefore, 'tis not amiss, we tender our loves
To him, in this suppos'd distress of his :
It will shew honesty in us,
And is very likely to load our purposes
With what they travail for,
If it be a just and true report, that goes
Of his having.

Poet. What have you now
To present unto him ?

Painter. Nothing at this time
But my Visitation : only I will promise him
An excellent Piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too ;
Tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

Painter. Good as the best
Promising, is the very Ayre o'th' Time ;
It opens the eyes of Expectation.
Performance, is ever the duller for his act,
And but in the plainer and simpler kind of people,
The deed of Saying is quite out of use.
To promise, is most Courteously and fashionable ;
Performance, is a kind of Will or Testament
Which argues a great sickness in his judgment
That makes it.

Enter Timon from his Cave.

Timon. Excellent Workman.
Thou canst not paint a man so bad
As is thy self.

Poet. I am thinking
What I shall say I have provided for him :
It must be a personating of himself :
A Satyre against the softness of Prosperity,
With a Discovery of the infinite Flatteries
That follow youth and opulency.

Timon. Must thou needs
Stand for a Villain in thine own Work ?
Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men ?
Do so, I have Gold for thee.

Poet. Nay let's seek him.
Then do we sin against our own estate.
When we may profit meet, and come too late.

Painter. True :
When the day serves before black-corner'd night ;
Find what thou want'st, by free and offer'd light.
Come.

Tim. He meet you at the turn :
What a God's Gold, that he is worshippt.
In a baser Temple, then where Swine feed ?
'Tis thou that rigg'st the Bark, and plow'st the Fome,
Serleest admired reverence in a Slave,
To thee be worshippt, and thy Saints for aye :
Be crown'd with Plagues, that thee alone obey.
Fit I meet them.

Poet. Hail worthy Timon.

Pain. Our late Noble Master.

Timon. Have I once liv'd
To see two honest men ?

Poet. Sir :

Having often of your open Bounty tasted,
Hearing you were retyr'd, your Friends faln off,
Whose rattleless Natures (O abhorred Spirits)
Not all the whips of Heaven, are large enough,
What, to you,
Whose Star-like Nobleness gave life and influence
To their whole being ? I am rapt, and cannot cover
The monstrous bulk of this Ingratitude
With any size of words.

Timon. Let it go,
Naked men may see't the better :
You that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seen, and known.

Pain. He, and my self
Have travel'd in the great shower of your gifts,
And sweetly felt it.

Timon. I, you are honest men.

Pain. We are hither come
To offer you our service.

Timon. Most honest men :

Why how shall I requite you?

Can you eat Roots, and drink cold water, no?

Both. What we can do,
Wee'l do, to do you service.

Tim. Y'are honest men,
Y'have heard that I have Gold
I am sure you have, speak truth, y'are honest men.

Pain. So it is said my Noble Lord, but therefore Came not my Friend, nor I.

Tim. Good honest man: thou draw'st a counterfeit
Best in all Athens, that's indeed the best,
Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my Lord.

Tim. E'ne so fir as I say. And for thy fiction,
Why thy Verse swells with stuffe so fine and smooth,
That thou art even Naturall in thine Arr.

But for all this (my honest Natur'd friends)
I must needs say you have a little fault,
Marry 'tis not monstrous in you, neither with I
You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your Honour
To make it known to us.

Tim. You'l take it ill.

Both. Most thankfully, my Lord.

Tim. Will you indeed?

Both. Doubt it not worthy Lord.

Tim. There's never a one of you but trusts a knave,
That mightily deceives you.

Both. Do we my Lord?

Tim. I, and you hear him cogge,
See him dissemble,

Know his grosse patchery, love him, feed him,
Keep in your bosom, yet remain assur'd
That he's a made-up Villain.

Paip. I know none such, my Lord.

Poet. Nor I.

Tim. Look you,

I love you well, ile give you Gold
Rid me these Villains from your companies;
Hang them, or stab them, drown them in draught,
Confound them by some course, and come to me,
Ile give you Gold enough

Both. Name them my Lord, let's know them.

Tim. You that way, and you this:
But two in company:
Each man apart, all single, and alone,
Yet an arch Villain keeps him company:
If where thou art, two villains shall not be,
Come not neer him. If thou would'st not recide
But where one villain is, then him abandon.
Hence, pack, there's Gold, ye came for Gold ye slaves:
You have work for me,; there's payment, thence,
You are an Alcumist, make Gold of that:
Out Rascall dogges.

Exeunt.

Enter Steward, and two Senators.

Stew. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon:
For he is set so onely to himself,
That nothing but himself, which looks like man,
Is friendly with him.

1 Sen. Bring us to his Cave.
It is our part and promise to th' Athenians
To speak with Timon.

2 Sen. At all times alike
Men are not still the same: 'twas Time and Greefs

That fram'd him thus. Time with his fairer hand,
Offering the Fortunes of his former daies,
The former man may make him: bring us to him
And chance it as it may.

Stew. Here is his Cave:
Peace and content be here, Timon, Timon,
Look out, and speak to friends: Th'Athenians
By two of their most reverend Senate greet thee:
Speak to them Noble Timon.

Enter Timon out of his Cave.

Tim. Thou Sun that comfort burn,
Speak and be hang'd:
For each true word, a blister, and each false
Be as a Catherizing to the root o'th tongue
Consuming it with speaking.

1 Worthy Timon.

Tim. Of none but such as you,
And you of Timon.

1. The Senators of Athens greet thee Timon.

Tim. I thank them,
And would send them back the plague,
Could I but catch it for them,

1. O forget

What we are sorry for our selves in thee:
The Senators, with one consent of love,
Intreat thee back to Athens, who have thought
On special Dignities, which vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing.

2. They confesse

Toward thee, forgetfulnesse too general grosse;
Which now the publike Body, which doth seldom,
Play the re-carter, feeling in it self
A lack of Timons aid, hath since withall
Of it own fall, restraining aid to Timon,
And send forth us to make theirorrowed render,
Together, with a recompence more fruitful
Then their offence can weigh down by the Dramme,
I even such heaps and summes of Love and Wealth,
As shall to thee blot out, what wrongs were theirs,
And write in thee, the figures of their Love,
Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it;
Surprize me to the very brink of tears;
Lend me a fools heart, and a womans eies,
And ile beweepe these comforts, worthy Senators.

1. Therefore so please thee to return with us,
And of our Athens, thine and ours to take
The Captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,
Allowed with absolute power, and thy good name
Live with authority: so soon we shall drive back
Of Alcibiades h'approaches wild
Who like a Boar too savage, doth root up
His Countreys peace.

2. And shakes his threatening Sword
Against the walls of Athens.

1. Therefore Timon.

Tim. Well fir, I will: therefore I will fir thus:
If Alcibiades kill my Countreymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,
That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens,
And take our goodly aged men by th'Beards,
Giving our holy Virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd warre:
Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks it.

M m m 3

In

In pitty of our aged, and our youth,
I cannot choose but tell him that I care not,
And let him tak't at worst: For their knives care not,
While you have throats to answer. For my self,
There's not a whittle in th'unruly Camp,
But I do prize it at my love, before
The reverendst Throat in Athens. So I leave you
To the protection of the prosperous Gods,
As Theeves to Keepers.

Stew. Stay not, all's in vain.

Tim. Why I was writing of my Epitaph,
It will be seen to morrow. My long sicknesse
Of Health, and Living, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still,
Be Alcibiades your plague; you his,
And last so long enough.

1. We speak in vain,

Tim. But yet I love my Countrey, and am not
One that rejoyces in the common wrack,
As common bruit doth put it.

1. That's well spoke.

Tim. Commend me to my loving Countrey-men.

1. These words become your lips as they passe thorow
them.

2. And enter into our ears, like great Triumphers
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them,
And tell them, that to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of Hostile strokes, their Aches losses,
Their pangs of Love, with other incident throwes
That Natures fragile vessell doth sustaine
In lifes uncertain voyage, I will some kindnesse do them,
He teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades wrath.

1. I like this well, he will return again.

Tim. I have a Tree which grows here in my Close,
That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it. Tell my Friends,
Tell Athens, in the frequency of degree,
From high to low throughout, that who so please
To stop Affliction, let him take his haste;
Come hither ere my Tree hath felt the Axe,
And hang himself, I pray you do my greeting.

Stew. Trouble him no further, thus you still shall Find him.

Tim. Come not to me again, but say to Athens,
Timon hath made his everlasting Mansion
Upon the Beached Verge of the salt Flood,
Which once a day with his embossed Froth
The turbulent Surge shall cover; thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your Oracle:
Lips, let four words go by, and Language end:
What is amisse, Plague and Infection mend.
Graves onely be mens works, and Death their gain;
Sunne, hide thy beams, Timon hath done his Raign.

Exit Timon.

1. His discontents are unremoveably coupled to Nature.

2. Our hope in him is dead: let us return,
And strain what other means is left unto us
In our deer peril.

1. It requires swift foot.

Exeunt.

Enter two other Senators, with a Messenger.

1. Thou hast painfully discover'd: are his Files
As full as thy report?

Mes. I have spoke the least.

Besides his expedition promises present approach.

2. We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.

Mes. I met a Currier, one mine ancient friend,
Whom though in general part we were oppos'd,
Yet our old love made a particular force,
And made us speak like Friends. This man was riding
From Alcibiades to Timons Cave,
With Letters of intreaty, which imported
His Fellowship i'th' cause against your City,
In part for his sake mov'd.

Enter the other Senators.

1. Here come our Brothers.

3. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect,
The Enemies Drumme is heard and fearful scouting
Doth choak the air with Dust: In, and prepare,
Ours is the fall I fear, our foes the Snare. Exeunt.

Enter a Souldier in the woods seeking Timon.

Sol. By all description this should be the place.
Who's here? Speak ho. No answer? What is this?
Timon is dead, who hath out-streht his span,
Some Beast read this; There do's not live a Man.
Dead sure, and this his Grave, what's on this Tomb?
I cannot read: the Character ile take with wax,
Our Captain hath in every figure skill,
An ag'd interpreter, though young in daies:
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. Exit.

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades with his powers before Athens.

Alc. Sound to this Coward and lascivious Town,
Our terrible approach.

Sounds a parly.

The Senators appear upon the walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all Licencious measure, making your wills
The scope of Justice. Till now my self and such As slept within the shadow of your power
Have wander'd with our travest Arms, and breath'd
Our sufferance vainly. Now the time is flush,
When crouching Marrow in the bearer strong
Cries (of it self) no more: Now breathlesse wrong,
Shall sit and pant in your great Chairs of ease,
And purse Insolence shall break his wind
With fear and horrid flight.

1 Sen. Noble and young;
When thy first griefs were but a meer conceit,
Ere thou hadst power, or we had cause to fear,
We sent to thee, to give thy rages Balme,
To wipe our our ingratitude, with Loves
Above their quantity.

2. So did we wooc
Transformed Timon to our Cities love
By humble Message, and by promist means:
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of warre.

1. These walls of ours,
Vere nor erected by their hands, from whom
You have receiv'd your grief: Nor are they such,
That these great Towres, Trophies, & Schools should fall
For private faults in them.

2. Nor are they living

Who were the motives that you first went out,
Shame (that they wanted cunning in excess)
Hath broke their hearts, March, Noble Lord,
Into our City with thy Banners spread,
By decimation and a tythed death;
If thy Revenges hunger for that Food
Which Nature loathes, take thou the destin'd tenth,
And by the hazard of the spotted dye,
Let die the spotted.

1. All have not offended:

For those that were, it is not square to take,
On those that are, Revenge: Crimes, like Lands
Are not inherited, then dear Countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage,
Spare thy Athenian Cradle, and those Kin
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended, like a Shepherd,
Approach the Fold, and cull th' infected forth,
But kill not all together.

2. What thou wilt,

Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Then hew to't with thy Sword.

1. Set but thy foot

Against our rampyr'd gates, and they shall ope:
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say thou'rt enter Friendly.

2. Throw thy Glove,

Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our Confusion: All thy Powers
Shall make their harbour in our Town till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alc. Then there's my Glove,
Descend and open your uncharged Ports,

Those Enemies of Timon, and mine own
Whom you your selves shall set out for reproof,
Fall and no more; and to atone your feares
With my more Noble meaning, nor a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of Regular Justice in your Cities bounds,
But shall be remedied by your publick Lawes
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most Nobly spoken.

Alc. Descend, and keep your words.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Noble General, Timon is dead,
Entomb'd upon the very hem o'th' Sea,
And on his Gravestone, this Insculpture which
With wax I brought away: whose soft Impression
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcibiades reads the Epitaph.

Here lies a wretched Coarse, of wretched Soul bereft,
Seek not my name: A Plague consume you, Catiffs left:
Here lie I Timon, who all living men did hate,
Pass by, and curse thy fill, but slay not here thy gate.
These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhord'st in us our humane griefes,
Scorn'd it our Braines flow, and those our droplets, which
From niggard Nature fall; yet Rich Conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low Grave: on faults forgiven. Dead
Is Noble Timon, of whose Memory
Hereafter more. Bring me into your City,
And I will use the Olive with my Sword:
Make war breed peace; make peace stint war, make each
Prescribe to other, as each others Leach.
Let our Drums strike.

Exeunt.

THE TRAGEDY OF JULIUS CÆSAR.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Flavius, Murellus, and certain Commoners over the Stage.

Flavius.

Hence : home you idle Creatures, get you home :
Is this a Holiday ? What, know you not (Being Mechanicall) you ought not walk
Upon a labouring day, without the signe
Of your Profession ? Speak, what Trade art thou ?

Car. Why Sir, a Carpenier.

Mur. Where is thy Leather apron, and thy Rule ?
What dost thou with thy best apparel on ?
You sir, what Trade are you ?

Cobl. Truly Sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but as you would say, a Cobl.

Mur. But what Trade art thou ? answer me directly.

Cobl. A Trade Sir, that I hope I may use with a safe
Conscience, which is indeed Sir, a mender of bad fowls.

Fla. What Trade thou knave ? Thou naughty knave, what Trade ?

Cobl. Nay I beseech you Sir, be not out with me : yet
if you be our Sir I can mend you.

Mur. What meanst thou by that : Mend me, thou fawcy Fellow ?

Cobl. Why sir, Cobble you.

Fla. Thou art a Cobl. art thou ?

Cobl. Truly sir, all that I live by is with the Aule : I meddle with no Tradesmans matters, nor womans matters ; but withall I am indeed Sir a Surgeon to old Shooes, when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trode upon Neats-Leather, have gone upon my handy work.

Fla. But wherefore art not in thy Shop to day ?
Why dost thou lead these men about the streets ?

Cobl. Truly sir, to wear out their shooes, to get my self into more work. But indeed sir we make Holy-day to see Cæsar, and to rejoyce in his Triumph.

Mur. Wherefore rejoyce ?

What Conquest brings he home ?

What Tributaries follow him to Rome,

To grace in Captive bonds his Chariot wheels.

You Blocks, you stones, you worse then senselesse things :

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,

Knew you not Pompey many a time and oft ?

Have you climb'd up to Walls and Battlements,

To Towers and Windows ? Yea to Chimney tops ;

Your Infants in your Arms, and there have sat

The live-long day with patient expectation,

To see great Pompey passe the streets of Rome :
And when you saw his Chariot but appear,
Have you not made an Universal shout,
That Tyber trembled underneath her banks
To hear the replication of your sounds,
Made in her Concave Shores ?
And do you now put on your best attire ?
And do you now cull out a Holy-day ?
And do you now strew Flowers in his way,
That comes in Triumph over Pompey's blood ?
Be gone,

Runne to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the Gods to intermit the Plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Fla. Go, go, good Countrey-men, and for this fault
Assemble all the poor men of your sort ;
Draw them to Tyber banks, and weep your tears
Into the Channell, till the lowest stream
Do kisse the most exalted Shores of all.

Exeunt all the Commoners.

See where their basest mettle be not mov'd,
They vanish tongue-ty'd in their guiltinesse :
Go you down that way towards the Capitoll,
This way will I : Disrobe the Images,
If you do find them deckt with Ceremonies.

Mur. May we do so ?

You know it is the Feast of Lupercall.

Fla. It is no matter, let no Images
Be hung with the Cæsars Trophies : Ile about,
And drive away the Vulgar from the streets ;
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing Feathers, pluckt from Cæsars wing,
Will make him flye an ordinary pitch,
VVho else would fore above the view of men.
And keep us all in servile fearfulness.

Exeunt.

Enter Cæsar, Antony for the Course, Calphurnia, Portia, Dé-cius, Cicero, Brutus, Cassius, Caska, a Soothsayer : after them Murellus and Flavius.

Cæs. Calphurnia.

Cask. Peace ho, Cæsar speaks.

Cæs. Calphurnia.

Calp. Here my Lord.

Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonio's way,
VVhen he doth run his course. Antonio.

Ant. Cæsar, my Lord.

Cæs. Forget not in your speed Antonio,
To touch Calphurnia : for our Elders say,

The Barren touched in, this holy chafe,
Shake off their sterill curse.

Ant. I shall remember

VVhen Caesar saies Do this; it is perform'd.

Cas. Set on, and leave no Ceremony out.

Sooth. Caesar.

Cas. Ha? VVho calls?

Cas. Bid every noise be still: peace yet again.

Cas. VVho is it in the presse, that calls on me?

I hear a Tongue shriller then all the Musick

Cry, Caesar: Speak, Caesar is turn'd to hear.

Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.

Cas. VVhat man is that?

Br. A Sooth-fayer bids you beware the Ides of March.

Cas. Set him before me, let me see his face,

Cass. Fellow, come from the throng, look upon Caesar.

Cas. VVhat saist thou to me now? Speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.

Cas. He is a Dreamer let us leave him: Passe.

Sennet. Exeunt. Manet Brut. & Cass.

Cass. Will you go see the order of the course?

Brut. Not I.

Cass. I pray you do.

Brut. I am not Gamesom: I do lack some part

Of that quick Spirit that is in Antony:

Let me not hinder Cassius your desires;

Ile leave you.

Cass. Brutus, I do observe you now of late:

I have not from your eies that gentlenesse

And shew of Love, as I was wont to have:

You bear too stubborn, and too strange a hand

Over your Friends, that loves you.

Brut. Cassius.

Be not deceiv'd: if I have veyl'd my look,

I turn the trouble of my Countenance

Meerly upon my self. Vexed I am

Of late, with passions of some difference,

Conceptions onely proper to my self,

Which give some soyle (perhaps) to my Behaviours:

But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd

(Among which number Cassius be you one)

Nor contrive any further my neglect,

Then that poor Brutus with himself at warre,

Forgets the shews of Love to other men.

Cass. Then Brutus, I have much mistook your passion,

By means whereof, this Brest of mine hath buried

Thoughts of great value, worthy Cogitations.

Tell me good Brutus, can you see your face?

Brut. No Cassius:

For the eye sees not himself, but by reflection,

By some other things.

Cassius. 'Tis juil,

And it is very much lamented Brutus,

That you have no such Mirrors, as will turn

Your hidden worthinesse into your eye,

That you might see your shadow:

I have heard,

Where many of the best respect in Rome,

(Except immortal Caesar) speaking of Brutus,

And groaning underneath this ages yolk,

Have wish'd that Noble Brutus had his eies.

Brut. Into what dangers would you

Lead me Cassius?

That you would have me seek into my self,

For that which is not in me?

Cas. Therefore good Brutus be prepar'd to hear;

And since you know you cannot see your self

So well as by Reflection, I your Glasse,

Will modestly discover to your self

That of your self, which yet you know not of,

And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus

Were I a common Laughter, or did use

To stale with ordinary Oaths my Love

To every new Prorester: if you know,

That I do fawn on men, and hug them hard,

And after scandall them: or if you know,

That I professe in Banqueting

To all the Rour, then hold me dangerous.

Flourish and Shouts.

Brut. What means this Showting?

I do fear the people choose Caesar

For their King.

Cass. I do you fear it?

Then must I think you would not have it so.

Brut. I would not Cassius, yet I love him well:

But wherefore do you hold me here so long?

What is it, that you would impart to me?

If it be ought toward the general good,

Set Honour in one eye, and death i'th'other,

And I will look on both indifferently:

For let the Gods so speed me, as I love

The name of Honour, more then I fear death.

Cass. I know that vertue to be in you Brutus,

As well as I do know your outward favour,

Well, Honor is the subject of my Story:

I cannot tell, what you and other men

Think of this life: But my single self,

I had as lief not be, as live to be

In awe of such a thing, as I my self.

I was born free as Caesar, so were you,

We both have fed as well, and we can both

Endure the Winters cold, as well as he.

For once upon a Raw and Gustly day,

The troubled Tyber chafing with her Shores,

Caesar saies to me, dar'st thou Cassius now

Leap in with me into this angry Flood,

And swim to yonder Point? Upon the word,

Accounted as I was, I plunged in,

And bad him follow: so indeed he did.

The Torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it

With lusty Sinews, throwing it aside,

And stemming it with hearts of Controversie.

But ere we could arrive the Point propos'd,

Caesar cry'd. Help me Cassius, or I sink.

I (as Aeneas, our great ancestor,

Did from the Flames of Troy, upon his shoulder

The old Anchises bear) so, from the waves of Tyber

Did I the tired Caesar: And this Man

Is now become a God, and Cassius is

A wretched Creature, and must bend his body,

If Caesar carelessly but nod on him.

He had a Feaver when he was in Spain

And when the Fit was on him, I did mark

How he did shake: 'Tis true, this God did shake,

His Coward lips did from their colour flye,

And that same eye, whose bend doth awe the World,

Did loose his Lustre: I did hear him groan:

I, and that tongue of his that bad the Romans

Mark him, and writ his Speeches in their Books,

Alas, it cryed, Give me some drink Titinius,

As a sick Girdle: Ye Gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the Majestick world,
And bear the Palm alone.

Shout.

Flourish.

Bru. Another general shout?
I do believe, that these applauses are
For some new Honours, that are heap'd on Caesar.

Cassi. Why man, he doth bestride the narrow world
Like a Colossus, and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find our selves dishonourable Graves.
Men at some time, are Masters of their Fates.
The fault (dear Brutus) is not in our Stars,
But in our Selves, that we are underlings.

Brutus and Caesar: What should be in that Caesar?
Why should that name be sounded more then yours
Write them together: yours is as fair a Name:
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well.
Weigh them, it is as heavy: Conjure with'em man,
Brutus will start a Spirit as soon as Caesar.

Now in the names of all the Gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed,
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd.
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble Blouds.
When went there by an Age, since the great Flood,
But it was fam'd with more then with one man?
VVhen could they say (till now) that talk'd of Rome,
That her wide walks incompart but one man?
Now is it Rome indeed, and Room enough
When there is in it but one only man.

O! you and I, have heard our Fathers say,
There was a Brutus once, that would have brook'd
Th' eternal Devil to keep his State in Rome,
As easily as a King.

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous:
VVhat you would work me to, I have some aim:
How I have thought of this, and of these times
I shall recount hereafter: For this present,
I would not so (with love I might entreat you)
Be any further mov'd: VVhat you have said,
I will consider: what you have to say
I will with patience hear, and find a time
Both meet to hear, and answer such high things.
Till then my Noble Friend, chew upon this:
Brutus had rather be a Villager,
Then to repute himself a Son of Rome
Under these hard Conditions, as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cassi. I am glad that my weak words
Have struck but thus much shew of fire from Brutus.

Enter Caesar and his Train.

Bru. The Games are done,
And Caesar is returning.

Cassi. As they pass by,
Pluck Caesar by the Sleeve,
And he will (after his sower fashion) tell you
VVhat hath proceeded worthy note to day.

Bru. I will do so: but look you Cassius,
The angry spot doth blow on Caesars brow,
And all the rest look like a chidden train;
Calphurnia's Cheek is pale, and Cicero
Lookes with such Ferret, and such fiery eyes
As we have seen him in the Capitol

Being crost in Conference, by some Senators.

Cassi. Caesar will tell us what the matter is.

Cas. Antonio.

Ant. Caesar.

Cas. Let me have men about me that are far,
Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep a nights:
Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look,
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.

Ant. Fear him not Caesar, he's not dangerous,
He is a Noble Roman, and well given.

Cas. VVould he were fatter; But I fear him not:
Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid,
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much,
He is a great Observer, and he looks
Quite through the Deeds of men. He loves no Playes,
As thou dost Antony: he heares no Musick:
Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort
As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit
That could be mov'd to smile at any thing,
Such men as he, be never at hearts ease
VVhiles they behold a greater then themselves,
And therefore are they very dangerous.
I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd,
Then what I fear: for alwaies I am Caesar,
Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly, what thou think'st of him.

Sennit.

Exeunt Caesar and his Train.

Cas. You pul'd me by the Cloak, would you speak with me?

Bru. I Caesar, tell us what hath chanc'd to day
That Caesar looks so sad.

Cas. VVhy you were with him, were you not?

Bru. I should not then ask Caesar what had chanc'd.

Cas. VVhy there was a Crown offer'd him; and being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand thus,
and then the people fell a shouting.

Bru. VVhat was the second noyse for?

Cas. VVhy for that too.

Cassi. They shouted thrice: what was the last cry for?

Cas. VVhy for that too.

Bru. VVas the Crown offer'd him thrice?

Cas. I marry was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler then other; and at every putting by, mine honest
Neighbours shouted.

Cas. VVho offer'd him the Crown?

Cas. VVhy Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Caesar.

Cas. I can as well be hang'd as tell the manner of it:
It were meer Foolery, I did not mark it. I saw Mark
Antony offer him a Crown, yet 'twas not a Crown neither, 'twas one of these Coronets: and as I told you, he put it by once: but for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offered it to him again:
then he put it by again: but to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time: he put it the third time by, and still as he refus'd it, the rabblement howted, and clapp'd their chopt hands, and threw up their sweaty Night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath, because Caesar refus'd the Crown, that it had (almost) choaked Caesar: for he swooned, and fell down at it: And for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my Lips, and receiving the bad
Ayr.

Cassi.

Cassi. But soft I pray you : what did Caesar swoond ?

Cask. He fell down in the Market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechless.

Brut. 'Tis very like he hath the falling sickness.

Cassi. No, Caesar hath it not: but you, and I. And honest Caska, we have the falling sickness.

Cask. I know not what you mean by that, but I am sure Caesar fell down, if the rag rag people did not clap him; and hiss him, according as he pleas'd, and displeas'd them, as they use to do the Players in the Theatre, I am no true man.

Brut. What said he, when he came unto himself?

Cask. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common Heard was glad he refus'd the Crown, he pluckt me ope his Doubler, and offer'd them his Throat to cut: and I had been a man of any Occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to Hell among the Rogues, and so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, If he had done, or said any thing amiss, he desir'd their worships to think it was his infirmity. Three or four Wenches where I stood, cryed, Alas good Soul, and forgave him with all their hearts: But there's no heed to be taken of them; if Caesar had stab'd their Mothers, they would have done no less.

Brut. And after that, he came thus sad away.

Cask. I.

Cassi. Did Cicero say any thing?

Cask. I, he spoke Greek.

Cassi. To what effect?

Cask. Nay, and I tell you that, Ile ne're look you i'th' face again. But those that understood him, smil'd at one another, and shook their heads: but for mine own part it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Murellus and Flavius, for pulling Scarffes off Caesar's Images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more Foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cassi. Will you sup with me to night, Caska?

Cask. No, I am promis'd forth.

Cassi. Will you dine with me to morrow?

Cask. I, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.

Cassi. Good, I will expect you.

Cask. Do so: farewell both.

Exit.

Brut. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be? He was quick Mettle, when he went to School.

Cassi. So is he now, in execution Of any bold or noble Enterprize, How-ever he puts on this tardy form: This Rudeness is a Sawce to his good wir, Which gives men stomack to digest his words With better Appetites.

Brut. And so it is:

For this time I will leave you:

To morrow if you please to speak with me,

I will come home to you: or if you will,

Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Cassi. I will do so: till then, think of the world.

Exit Brutus.

VVell Brutus, thou art Noble: yet I see Thy honourable Metal may be wrought From that it is dispos'd, therefore 'tis meet, That Noble minds keep ever with their likes: For who so firm, that cannot be seduc'd? Caesar doth bear me hard, but he loves Brutus.

If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius, He should not humor me. I will this night, In several hands, in at his windows throw, As if they came from several Citizens, VVritings, all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his Name: wherein obscurely Caesar's ambition shall be glanced at. And after this, let Caesar seat him sure, For we will shake him, or worse daies endure.

Exit.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter Caska, and Cicero.

Cic. Good even, Caska: brought you Caesar home? VVhy are you breathless, and why stare you so?

Cask. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of Earth Shakes, like a thing unfirm? O Cicero, I have seen Tempests, when the scolding winds Have riv'd the knotty Oakes, and I have seen Th'ambitious Ocean swell, and rage, and foam, To be exalted with the threatening Clouds: But never till to night, never till now, Did I go through a Tempest-dropping-fire. Either there is a Civil strife in heaven, Or else the world, too sawcy with the Gods, Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. VVhy, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Cask. A common slave, you know him well by sight, Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn Like twenty Torches joyn'd; and yet his hand, Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd. Besides, I ha' not since put up my Sword, Against the Capitol I met a Lion, VVhose glaz'd upon me, and went surely by, VVithout annoying me. And there were drawn Upon a heap, a hundred gasty women, Transformed with their fear, who swore, they saw Men, all in fire, walk up and down the streets. And yesterday, the Bird of Night did sit, Even at Noon day, upon the Market place, Howling, and shrieking. VVhen these Prodigies Do so conjoyn'tly meet, let not men say, These are their Reasons they are Natural: For I believe, they are portentous things Unto the Climate, that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange disposed time: But men may construe things after their fashion, Clean from the purpose of the things themselves, Comes Caesar up the Capitol to morrow?

Cask. He doth: for he did bid Antonio Send word to you, he would be there to morrow.

Cic. Good-night then, Caska: This disturbed Sky is not to walk in.

Cask. Farewel Cicero.

Exit Cicero.

Enter Cassius.

Cas. VVho's there?

Cask. A Romane.

Cas. Caska, by your voyce.

Cask. Your Ear is good.

Cassius. VVhat night is this?

Cassi. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Cask. VVho ever knew the Heavens menace so?

Cassi. Those that have known the Earth so full of faults.

For

For my part I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perillous Night:
And thus unbraced, Caska, as you see,
Have bar'd my Bosom to the Thunder-stone:
And when the crosse blew Lightning seem'd to open
The Brest of Heaven, I did present my self
Even in the aime, and very flash of it. (vens?)

Cask. But wherefore did you so much tempt the Hea-
It is the part of men, to fear and tremble,
When the most Mighty Gods by tokens send
Such dreadful Heraulds, to astonish us.

Cassi. You are dull, Caska:
And those sparks of Life that should be in a Roman,
You do want, or else you use not,
You look pale, and gaze, and put on fear,
And cast your self in wonder,
To see the strange impatience of the Heavens:
But if you would consider the true cause,
Why all these fires, why all these gliding Ghosts,
Why Birds and Beasts, from quality and kind,
Why Old men, Fools, and Children calculate,
Why all these things change from their Ordinance,
Their Natures, and pre-formed Faculties,
To monstrous quality; why you shall find,
That Heaven hath infus'd them with these Spirits,
To make them instruments of fear, and warning,
Unto some monstrous State.

Now could I (Caska) name to thee a man,
Most like this dreadful Nighr,
That Thunders, Lightens, opens Graves, and tears,
As doth the Lyon in the Capitol;
A man no mightier then thy self, or me,
In personal action; yet prodigious grown
And fearful as these strange eruptions are.

Cask. Tis Caesar that you mean,
Is it not, Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now
Have Sinews and Limbs like to their Ancestors;
But woe the while, our Fathers minds are dead,
And we are govern'd with our Mothers spirits,
Our yolk, and sufferance, shew us womanish.

Cask. Indeed, they say, the Senators to morrow
Mean to establish Caesar as a King:
And he shall wear his Crown by Sea, and Land,
In every place, save here in Italy.

Cas. I know where I will weare this Dagger then;
Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius:
Therein, ye Gods, you make the weak most strong;
Therein, ye Gods, you Tyrants do defeat.
Nor Stony Tower, nor Walls of beaten Brasse,
Nor air-lesse Dungeon, nor strong Links of Iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of Spirit:
But Life being weary of these worldly Barres,
Never lacks power to dismisse it self.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of Tyranny that I do bear,
I can shake off at pleasure. Thunder still.

Cask. So can I:
So every Bond-man in his own hand bears
The power to Cancel his Captivity.

Cas. And why should Caesar be a Tyrant then?
Poor man, I know he would not be a Wolfe,
But that he sees the Romans are but Sheep;
He were no Lyon, were not Romans Hinds.
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire,
Begin it with weak Straws. What trash is Rome?

What Rubbish, and what Offall? when it serves
For the base matter, to illuminate
So vile a thing as Caesar. But oh grief,
Where hast thou led me? I (perhaps) speak this Before a willing Bond-man: then I know
My answer must be made. But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Cask. You speak to Caska, and to such a man,
That is no fleering Tell-tale. Hold, my hand:
Be factious for redresse of all these Grievs,
And I will set this foot of mine as farre,
As who goes farthest.

Cas. There's a Bargain made.
Now know you, Caska, I have mov'd already
Some certain of the Noblest minded Romans
To under-goe, with me, an enterprize,
Of Honourable dangerous consequence;
And I do know by this, they stay for me
In Pompeys Porch; for now this fearful night,
There is no stirre, or walking in the streets,
And the Complexion of the Element
Is Favours, like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

Enter Cinna.

Cask. Stand close a while, for here comes one in haste.

Cas. Tis Cinna, I do know him by his Gate,
He is a friend. Cinna, where haste you so?

Cinna. To find out you: Who's thar, Metellus
Cymbre?

Cas. No, it is Caska, one incorporate
To our Attempts. Am I not staid for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on't.

What a fearful Night?

There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.

Cas. Am I not staid for? tell me.

Cin. Yes, you are, O Cassius,
If you could but winne the Noble Brutus
To our party——

Cas. Be you content. Good Cinna take this paper,
And look you lay it in the Pretors Chair,
Where Brutus may but find it: and throw this
In at his Window; set this up with waxe
Upon old Brutus Statue: all this done,
Repair to Pompeys Porch, where you shall find us.
Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?

Cin. All, but Metellus Cymbre, and he's gone
To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie,
And so bestow these papers as you bad me.

Cas. That done, repair to Pompeys Theater.

Exit Cinna.

Come Caska, you and I will yet, ere day,
See Brutus at his house: three parts of him
Is ours already, and the man entire
Upon the next encounter, yields him ours.

Cask. O, he sits high in all the peoples hearts:
And that which would appear offence in us,
His Countenance, like richest Alchymie,
Will change to Vertue, and to Worthinesse.

Cas. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him,
You have right well conceited: let us go,
For it is after Mid-night, and ere day,
We will awake him, and be sure of him.

Actus Secundus.Enter Brutus in his Orchard.

Bru. What Lucius, hoe?
I cannot, by the progresse of the Starres,
 Give guesse how neer to day-- Lucius, I say?
I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly.
 VVhen Lucius, when? awake, I say: what Lucius?

Enter Lucius.Luc. Call'd you, my Lord?

Bru. Ger me a Taper in my Study, Lucius:
 When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my Lord.Exit.

Bru. It must be by his death: and for my part,
I know no personal cause, to spurn at him,
 But for the general. He would be crown'd:
 How that might change his Nature, there's the question?
 It is the bright day, that brings forth the Adder,
 And that craves wary walking: Crown him that,
 And then I grant we put a sting in him,
 That at his will he may do danger with.
 Th'abuse of Greatnesse, is, when it disjoynes
 Remorse from power: And to speak truth of Cæsar,
I have not known, when his affections sway'd
 More then his Reason. But tis a common prooffe,
 That Lowlinesse is young Ambitions Ladder,
 VVhereto the Climber upward turns his face:
 But when he once attains the upmost Round,
 He then unto the Ladder turns his back.
 Looks in the Clouds, scorning the base degrees
 By which he did ascend: so Cæsar may;
 Then lest he may, prevent. And since the quarrel
 VVill bear no colour, for the thing he is,
 Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented,
 VVould run to these, and these extremities:
 And therefore think him as a Serpents egge,
 VVhich hatch'd, would as his kind grow mischievous;
 And kill him in the shell.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. The Taper burneth in your Closet, Sir:
 Searching the window for a Flint, I found
 This Paper, thus seal'd up, and I am sure
I did not lye there when I went to bed.

Gives him the Letter.

Bru. Get you to bed again, it is not day:
 Is not to morrow (Boy) the first of March?

Luc. I know not, Sir.Bru. Look in the Callender, and bring me word.Luc. I will, Sir.Exit.

Bru. The exhalations, whizzing in the air.
 Give so much light: that I may read by them.

Opens the Letter and reads.Bru. thou sleep'st; awake, and see thyself:Shall Rome, &c. speak, strike, redresse.Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake.

Such inligations have been often dropt.

VVhere I hwe took them up:Shall Rome, &c. Thus must I piece it out:Shall Rome stand under one mans awe? VVhat Rome?My Ancestors did from the Streets of *Rome*The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a King.Speak, strike, redresse, Am I entreated

To speak, and strike? O Rome, I make the promise,
 If the redresse will follow, thou receivest
 Thy full Petition at the hand of Brutus.

Enter Lucius.Luc. Sir, March is wait'd fifteen daies.Knock within.

Bru. Tis good. Go to the Gate, some body knocks:
 Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar,
I have not slept.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing,
 And the first motion, all the Interim is Like a Phantasma, or a hideous Dream:
 The Genius, and the mortal instruments
 Are then in councill; and the stire of man,
 Like to a little Kingdom, suffers then
 The nature of an insurrection.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, tis your brother Cassius at the door,
 VVho doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?Luc. No, Sir, there are moe with him.Bru. Do you know them?

Luc. No, Sir, their Hats are pluckt about their ears,
 And half their Faces buried in their Cloaths,
 That by no means I may discover them,
 By any mark of favour.

Bru. Let'em enter:

They are the Faction. O Conspiracy,
 Sham'st thou to shew thy dang'rous Brow by Night,
 VVhen evils are most free? O then, by day
 VVhere wilt thou find a Cavern dark enough,
 To mask thy monstrous Visage? Seek none Conspiracy,
 Hide it in Smiles, and Affability:
 For if thou path thy native semblance on,
 Not Erebus it self were dimme enough,
 To hide thee from prevention.

Enter the Conspirators, Cassius, Caska, Decius, Cinna, Metellus, and Trebonius.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your Rest:
 Good morrow Brutus, do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all Night:
 Know I these men, that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man here
 But honors you: and every one doth wish,
 You had but that opinion of your self,
 VVhich every Noble Roman bears of you.
 This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither.Cas. This, Decius Brutus.Bru. He is welcome too.

Cas. This, Caska; this Cinna; and this Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome.

VVhat watchful Cares doe interpose themselves
 Berwixt your Eies and Night?

Cas. Shall I intreat a word? They whisper.Dec. Here lies the East: doth not the day break here?Cas. No.

Cin. O pardon, Sir, it doth, and yon grey Lines,
 That fret the Clouds, are Messengers of Day.

Cas. You shall confesse that you are both deceiv'd:
 Here as I point my Sword, the Sunne arises,
 VVhich is a great way growing on the South,

VVeigh-

Weighing the youthful Season of the year.
Some two moneths hence, up higher toward the North
He first presents his fire, and the high East
Stands as the Capitol, directly here.

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one.

Cass. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an Oath: if not the Face of men,
The sufferance of our soules, the times abuse;
If these be Motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence, to his idle bed:
So let high-sighted Tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by Lottery. But if these
(As I am sure they do) bear fire enough
To kindle Cowards, and to steel with valour
The melting Spirits of women; Then Country men,
What need we any spur, but our own cause
To prick us to redress? What other Bond,
Then secret Romans, that have spoke the word,
And will not palter? And what other Oath,
Then Honesty to Honesty engag'd,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it.

Swear Priests and Cowards, and men cautelous,
Old feeble Carrions, and such suffering soules
That welcom wrongs: Unto bad causes, swear
Such Creatures as men doubt; but do not stain
The even vertue of our Enterprize,
Nor th'insuppressive Mettle of our Spirits,
To think, that or our Cause, or our Performance
Did need an Oath. When every drop of blood
That every Roman beares, and Nobly beares
Is guilty of a several Bastardy,
If he do break the smallest Particle
Of any promise that hath past from him.

Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?
I think he will stand very strong with us.

Cas. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means.

Met. O let us have him, for his Silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion.
And buy mens voyces, to commend our deeds:
It shall be said, his judgment rul'd our hands,
Our youths, and wildness, shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity.

Bru. O name him not; let us not break with him.
For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin.

Cas. Then leave him out.

Cas. Indeed, he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd, but only Caesar?

Cas. Decius, well urg'd: I think it is not meet,
Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Caesar,
Should out-live Caesar, we shall find of him
A shrewd Contriver. And you know, his means
If he improve them, may well stretch so far
As to annoy us all: which to prevent,
Let Antony and Caesar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius,
To cut the Head off, and then hack the Limbs:
Like wrath in death, and Envy afterwards.
For Antony, is but a Limb of Caesar.
Let's be Sacrificers, but not Butchers Caius:
We all stand up against the spirit of Caesar,
And in the Spirit of men, there is no blood:
O that we then could come by Caesar's Spirits,
And not dismember Caesar! But (alas)
Caesar must bleed for it. And gentle Friends,

Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully:
Let's carve him, as a Dish fit for the Gods,
Not hew him as a Carcase fit for Hounds;
And let our hearts, as subtle Masters do,
Stir up their Servants to an act of rage,
And after seem to chide em. This shall make
Our purpose necessary, and not envious,
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd Purgers, not Murderers.
And for Mark Antony, think not of him:
For he can do no more then Caesar's Arm,
When Caesar's head is off.

Cas. Yet I fear him,
For in the ingrafted Love he beares to Caesar.

Bru. Alas good Cassius, do not think of him:
If he love Caesar, all that he can do
Is to himself, take thought; and die for Caesar.
And that were much he should: for he is given
To sports, to wildness, and much company.

Treb. There is no fear in him; let him not die,
For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.

Clock strikes.

Bru. Peace, count the Clock.

Cas. The Clock hath stricken three.

Treb. 'Tis time to part.

Cas. But it is doubtful yet,
Whether Caesar will come forth to day, or no:
For he is superstitious grown of late,
Quite from the main Opinion he held once,
Of Fantasie, of Dreams, and Ceremonies:
It may be, these apparent Prodigies,
The unaccustom'd terror of this Night,
And the perswasion of his Augurers,
May hold him from the Capitol to day.

Dec. Never fear that: if he be so resolv'd,
I can ore-sway him: for he loves to hear,
That Unicornes may be betray'd with trees,
And Bears with Glasses, Elephants with Holes,
Lions with Toiles, and men with Flatterers.
But, when I tell him, he hates Flatterers,
He saies, he does; being then most flattered.
Let me work:

For I can give his humour the true bent;
And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.

Bru. By the eight hour, is that the uttermost?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.

Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Caesar's hatred,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey,
I wonder none of you have thought of him.

Bru. Now good Metellus go along by him:
He loves me well, and I have given him Reasons,
Send him but hither, and Ile fashion him.

Cas. The Morning comes upon's:
Wee'l leave you Brutus,
And friends disperse yourselves; but all remember
VVhat you have said, and shew your selves true Romans.
Bru. Good Gentlemen, look fresh and merrily,
Let not our looks put on our purposes,
But bear it as our Roman Actors do,
VVith untir'd spirits, and formal Constancy,
And so good morrow to you every one.

Exeunt.

Manet Brutus.

Boy: Lucius: Fast asleep? It is no matter,
Enjoy the hony-heavy-dew of Slumber:
Thou hast no Figures, nor no Fantasies,

VVhich

Which busie care drawes, in the braines of men ;
Therefore thou sleepest so sound.

Enter Portia.

Por. Brutus. my Lord.

Brut. Portia, What mean you ? wherefore rise you now ?
It is not for your health, thus to commit
Your weak condition, to the raw cold morning.

Por. Not for yours neither. Y^e have ungently Brutus
Stole from my Bed : and yesternight at Supper
You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing, and sighing, with your armes a-crosse :
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You star'd upon me, with ungentle lookes.
I urg'd you further, then you scratch'd your head,
And too impatiently stamp't with your foot :
Yet I insist'd, yet you answer'd nor,
But with an angry wafter of your hand
Gave sign for me to leave you : So I did,
Fearing to strengthen that impatience
Which seem'd too much inkindled, and withal ;
Hoping it was but an effect of Humor,
Which sometime hath his hour with every man.
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep ;
And could it work so much upon your shape,
As it hath much prevail'd on your Condition,
I should not know you Brutus. Dear my Lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Brut. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Brutus is wise, and were he not in health,
He would embrace the meanes to come by it.

Brut. Why so I do : good Portia go to bed.

Por. Is Brutus sick ? and is it Physical
To walk unbraced, and suck up the humors
Of the dark Morning ? What, is Brutus sick ?
And will he steal out of his wholesom bed,
To dare the vile contagion of the Night ?
And tempt the Rheumy, and unpurg'd Ayr
To add unto his sickness ? No my Brutus,
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which by the Right and Vertue of my place
I ought to know of : And upon my knees,
I charm you, by my once commended Beauty,
By all your vows of Love, and that great Vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, your self ; your half ;
Why you are heavy, and what men to night
Have had resort to you : for here have been
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Brut. Kneel not gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.
Within the bond of Marriage, tell me Brutus,
Is it excepted, I should know no Secrets
That appertain to you ? Am I your self,
But as it were in sort, or limitation ?
To keep with you at meales, comfort your Bed,
And talk to you sometimes ? Dwell I but in the Suburbs
Of your good pleasure ? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus Harlot, not his wife.

Brut. You are my true and honourable wife,
As dear to me, as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret.
I grant I am a woman ; but withal,
A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife :
I grant I am a woman ; but withal,

A woman well reputed : Cato's Daughter.
Think you, I am no stronger then my Sex
Being so Father'd, and so Husbanded ?
Tell me your Counsels, I will not disclose em :
I have made strong proof of my Constancy,
Giving my self a voluntary wound
Here, in the Thigh : Can I bear that with patience,
And not my Husbands Secrets ?

Brut. O ye Gods !

Render me worthy of this Noble wife. Knock.
Heark, heark, one knocks : Portia go in a while,
And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart.
All my engagements, I will contrue to thee,
All the Character of my sad browes :
Leave me with hast,

Exit Portia.

Enter Lucius, and Ligarius.

Lucius, who's that knockes ?

Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak with you.

Brut. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.
Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius, how ?

Cai. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Brut. O what a time have you chose out brave Caius
To wear a Kerchief ? Would you were not sick.

Cai. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of Honour.

Brut. Such an exploit have I in hand Ligarius,
Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Cai. By all the Gods that Romans bow before,
I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome,
Brave Son, deriv'd from honourable Loynes,
Thou like an Exorcist, hast conjur'd up
My mortified Spirit. Now bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible,
Yea get the better of them. What's to do ?

Brut. A piece of work,
That will make sick men whole.

Cai. But are not some whole, that we must make sick ?

Brut. That must we also. What it is my Caius,
I shall unfold to thee, as we are going,
To whom it must be done.

Cai. Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-fir'd, I follow you,
To do I know not what : but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on.

Brut. Follow me then.

Thunder.
Exeunt.

Thunder and Lightning.

Enter Julius Caesar in his Night-Gown.

Caesar. Nor Heaven, nor Earth,
Have been at peace to night :
Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cry'd out ;
Help, ho : they murder Caesar. Who's within ?

Enter a Servant.

Ser. My Lord.

Cas. Go bid the Priests do present Sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of Success.

Ser. I will my Lord.

Exit.

Enter Calphurnia.

Cal. What mean you Caesar ? Think you to walk forth ?
You shall not stir out of your house to day.

Cas. Caesar shall forth ; the things that threaten'd me,
He's lookt but on my back : When they shall see
The face of Caesar, they are vanished.

Calp.

Calp. Caesar, I never stood on Ceremonies,
Yet now they fright me: There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the Watch.
A Lioness hath whelped in the streets,
And Graves have yawn'd, and yielded up their dead;
Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the Clouds
In Ranks and Squadrons, and right form of war
Which drizzel'd blood upon the Capitol:
The noise of Battel hurried in the Ay:
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan,
And Ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.
O Caesar, these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

Cas. What can be avoidd
Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty Gods?
Yet Caesar shall go forth: for these Predictions
Are to the world in general, as to Caesar.

Calp. When Beggars die, there are no Comets seen,
The Heavens themselves blaze forth the death of Princes.

Cas. Cowards die many times before their deaths,
The valiant never taste of death but once:
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seemes to me most strange that men should fear,
Seeing that death, a necessary end
Will come, when it will come.

Enter a Servant.

What say the Augurers?

Ser. They would not have you to stir forth to day.
Plucking the Entrails of an Offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.

Cas. The Gods do this in shame of Cowardise:
Caesar should be a Beast without a heart
If he should stay at home to day for fear:
No, Caesar shall not; Danger knowes full well
That Caesar is more dangerous then he.
VVe hear two Lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible,
And Caesar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas my Lord,
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence:
Do not go forth to day: Call it my fear,
That keepes you in the house, and not your own.
VVe'll send Mark Antony to the Senate house,
And he shall say, you are not well to day:
Let me upon my knee prevail in this

Cas. Mark Antony shall say I am not well,
And for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter Decius.

Here's Decius Brutus he shall tell them so.

Dec. Caesar, all hail: Good morrow worthy Caesar,
I come to fetch you to the Senate house.

Cas. And you are come in very happy time,
To bear my greeting to the Senators,
And tell them that I will not come to day:
Cannor, is false: and that I dare not, falser:
I will not come to day, tell them so Decius.

Cal. Say he is sick.

Cas. Shall Caesar send a Lye?
Have I in Conquest stretcht mine Arm so far,
To be afraid to tell Gray-beards the truth:
Decius, go tell them, Caesar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Caesar, let me know some cause,
Left I be laugh'd at when I tell them so.

Cas. The cause is in my will, I will not come,
That is enough to satisfie the Senate.

But for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know.

Calphurnia here my wife, staies me at home:
She dream't to night she saw my Statue,
Which like a Fountain, with an hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood: and many lusty Romans
Came smiling, and did bath their hands in it:
And these does she apply, for warnings and portents,
And evils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg'd, that I will stay at home to day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted,
It was a vision, fair and fortunate:
Your Statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood, and that great men shall press
For Tinctures, Straines, Reliques, and Cognifance.
This by Calphurnia's dream is signified.

Cas. And this way have you well expounded it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say,
And know it now, the Senate have concluded
To give this day a Crown to mighty Caesar.
If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock
Apt to be render'd, for some one to say,
Break up the Senate, till another time,
When Caesars wife shall meet with better Dreames:
If Caesar hide himself, shall they not whisper
Lo Caesar is afraid?

Pardon me Caesar, for my dear dear love
To your Proceeding bids me tell you this:
And reason to my love is liable.

Cas. How foolish do your fears seem now Calphurnia?
I am ashamed I did yield to them.
Give me my Robe, for I will go.

Enter Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Caska, Trebonius, Cinna, and Publius.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good morrow Caesar.

Cas. Welcom Publius.

What Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?
Good morrow Caska, Cains Ligarius,
Caesar was ne're so much your enemy,
As that same Ague which hath made you lean.
What is't a Clock?

Bru. Caesar, tis stricken eight.

Cas. I thank you for your paines and curtesie.

Enter Antony.

See Antony, that Revels long a-nights
Is notwithstanding up. Good morrow Antony.

Ant. So to most Noble Caesar.

Cas. Bid them prepare within:
I am to blame to be thus waited for.
Now Cinna, now Metellus: what Trebonius,
I have an houres talk in store for you:
Remember that you call on me to day:
Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Caesar, I will; and so near will I be,
That your best Friends shall wish I had been further.

Cas. Good Friends go in, and tast some wine with me
And we (like Friends) will straightway go together.

Bru. That every like is not the same, O Caesar,
The heart of Brutus earnest to think upon.

Exeunt.

Enter Artemidorus.

Caesar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Caska, have an eye to Cynna. trust not Trebonius, mark well Metellus Cymbel, Decius Brutus loves thee not: Thou hast wrong'd Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Caesar: If thou beest not Immortal, look about you: Security gives way to Conspiracy. The mighty Gods defend thee.

Thy Lover Artemidorns.

Here will I stand, till Caesar pass along,
And as a Sutor will I give him this:
My heart laments, that Vertue cannot live
Out of the reach of Emulation.
If thou read this, O Caesar, thou maiest live;
If not, the Fates with Traytors do contrive.

Enter Portia and Lucius.

Por. I prythee Boy, run to the Senate-house,
Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone,
Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand Madam.

Por. I would have had thee there and here again
Ere I can tell thee what thou should'st do there:
O Constancy, be strong upon my side,
Set a huge Mountain 'tween my Heart and Tongue:
I have a mans mind, but a womans might:
How hard it is for women to keep counsel.
Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?
Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?

And so return to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes, bring me word Boy, if thy Lord look well,
For he went sickly forth: and take good note
What Caesar doth, what Sutors press to him.
Heark Boy, what noyse is that?

Luc. I hear none Madam.

Por. Prythee listen well:

I heard a bussling Rumour like a Fray,
And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth Madam, I hear nothing.

Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither Fellow, which way hast thou been?

Sooth. At mine own house, good Lady.

Por. What is't a clock?

Sooth. About the ninth hour Lady.

Por. Is Caesar yet gone to the Capitol?

Sooth. Madam not yet, I go to take my stand,
To see him pass on to the Capitol.

Por. Thou hast some suite to Caesar, hast thou not?

Sooth. That I have Lady; if it will please Caesar
To be so good to Caesar, as to hear me:
I shall beseech him to befriend himself.

Por. Why know'st thou any harm's intended towards him?

Sooth. None that I know will be,
Much that I fear may chance:
Good morrow to you: here the street is narrow:
The throng that follows Caesar at the heeles,
Of Senators, of Prætors, common Sutors,
Will crowd a feeble man (almost) to death:
He get me to a place more voyd, and there
Speak to great Caesar as he comes along.

Por. I must go in:

Aye me! How weak a thing
The heart of woman is? O Brutus,
The Heavens speed thee in thine enterprize.
Sure the Boy heard me: Brutus hath a suit
That Caesar will not grant. O, I grow faint:
Run Lucius, and commend me to my Lord,

Exit.

Say I am metty; Come to me again,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee.

Actus Tertius.

Flourish.

Enter Caesar, Brutus, Cassius, Caska, Decius, Metellus, Trebonius, Cynna, Antony, Lepidus, Artemidorns, Popilius, and the Soothsayer.

Cas. The Ides of March are come.

Sooth. I Caesar, but not gone.

Art. Hail Caesar: read this Schedule.

Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to ore-read
(At your best leisure) this his humble suit.

Art. O Caesar, read mine first: for mine's a suit
That touches Caesar nearer. Read it great Caesar.

Cas. What touches us our self, shall be last serv'd.

Art. Delay not Caesar, read it instantly.

Cas. What, is the fellow mad?

Pub. Sirra, give place.

Cas. What, urge you your Petitions in the street?
Come to the Capitol.

Pop. I wish your Enterprize to day may thrive.

Cas. VVhat enterprize Popilius?

Pop. Fare you well.

Bru. What said Popilius Lena?

Cas. He wisht to day our enterprize might thrive:
I fear our purpose is discovered.

Bru. Look how he makes to Caesar: mark him.

Cas. Caska be sudden, for we fear prevention.

Brutus what shall be done? If this be known,
Cassius or Caesar never shall turn back,
For I will slay my self.

Bru. Cassius be constant:

Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes.

For look he smiles, and Caesar doth not change.

Cas. Trebonius knowes his time: for look you Brutus
He drawes Mark Antony out of the vway.

Dec. VVhere is Metellus Cimper, let him go,
And presently prefer his suit to Caesar.

Bru. He is addrest: press near, and second him.

Cin. Caska, you are the first that reates your hand.

Cas. Are vve all ready? VVhat is now amiss,
That Caesar and his Senate must redress?

Metel. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Caesar,
Metellus Cimper throwes before thy Seat
An humble hearr.

Cas. I must prevent thee Cymber:

These couchings, and these lovly curtesies
Might fire the bloud of ordinary men,
And turn pre-Ordinance, and first Decree,
Into the lane of Children. Be not fond,
To think that Caesar beates such Rebel bloud
That vwill be thav'd from the true quality
VVith that vvich melteth Fooles, I mean sweet vvords,
Lovv-crooked-curtesies, and base Spaniel favvning:
Thy Brother by decree is banished:
If thou dost bend, and pray, and favvn for him,
I spurn thee like a Cur out of my vway:
Know, Caesar doth not vvrong, nor vvithout cause
VVill he be satisfied.

Met. Is there no voyce more vvorthy then my ovvn,

To

To sound more sweetly in great Cæsar's ear,
For the repealing of my banish'd Brother?

Brn. I kisse thy hand, but not in flattery Cæsar :
Desiring thee that Publius Cimber may
Have an immediate freedom of repeal.

Cas. VVhat Brutus?

Cas. Pardon Cæsar : Cæsar pardon :
As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,
To begge enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

Cas. I could be well mov'd, if I were as you,
If I could pray to move, Prayers would move me :
But I am constant as the Northern Starre,
Of whose true fixt, and resting quality,
There is no fellow in the firmament,
The Skies are painted with unnumbred sparks,
They are all fire, and every one doth shine :
But, there's but one in all doth hold his place.
So, in the world, 'tis furnish'd well with men,
And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive ;
Yet in the number, I do know but one
That unassailable holds on his rank,
Unshak'd of motion : and that I am he,
Let me a little shew it, even in this :
That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,
And constant do remain to keep him so.

Cin. O Cæsar.

Cas. Hence : wilt thou lift up Olympus?

Dec. Great Cæsar.

Cas. Do not Brutus bootlesse kneel?

Cas. Speak hands for me.

They stab Cæsar.

Cas. Et tu Brute. — Then fall Cæsar.

Cin. Liberty, Freedom ; Tyranny is dead,
Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

Cas. Some to the common Pulpits, and cry out
Liberty, freedom, and Enfranchisement

Brn. People and Senators, be not affrighted :
Fly not, stand still, ambitious debt is paid.

Cas. Go to the Pulpit Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too.

Brn. VVhere's Publius?

Cin. Here quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsars
Should chance —

Brn. Talk not of standing. Publius good cheer,
There is no harm intended to your person,
Nor to no Roman else : so tell them Publius.

Cas. And leave us Publius, lest that the people
Rushing on us, should do your Age some mischief.

Brn. Do so, and let no man abide this deed,
But we the Doers.

Enter Trebonius.

Cas. Where is Antony?

Treb. Fled to his house amaz'd,
Men, VVives, and Children, stare, cry out, and run,
As it were Doomesday.

Brn. Fates, we will know your pleasures:
That we shall die we know, tis but the time
And drawing daies out, that men stand upon.

Cas. VVhy he that cuts off twenty years of life,
Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

Brn. Grant that, and then is death a Benefit :
So are we Cæsars friends, that have abridg'd
His time of fearing death. Stoop Romans, stoop,
And let us bathe our hands in Cæsars blood
Up to the Elbowes, and besmear our Swords :

Then walk we forth even to the Market place,
And waving our red weapons o're our heads,
Let's all cry Peace; Freedom, and Liberty.

Cas. Stoop then, and wath. How many Ages hence
Shall this our lofty Scene be acted over,
In States unborn, and Accents yet unknown?

Brn. How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport,
That now on Pompey's Basis lies along,
No worthier then the dust?

Cas. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of us be call'd,
The men that gave their Countrey liberty.

Dec. What, shall we forth?

Cas. I, every man away.
Brutus shall lead, and we will grace his heels
With the molt boldest, and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Brn. Soft, who comes here? a friend of Antonies.

Ser. Thus Brutus, did my Master bid me kneel ;
Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down,
And being prostrate, thus he bad me say,
Brutus is Noble, Wise, Valiant, and Honest,
Cæsar was Mighty, Bold, Royal, and Loving :
Say, I love Brutus, and I honor him ;
Say, I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd him.

If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony
May safely come to him, and be resolv'd
How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death,
Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead
So well as Brutus living ; but will follow
The Fortunes and Affairs of Noble Brutus,
Thorough the hazards of this untrod State,
With all true Faith. So saies my Master Antony

Brn. Thy Master is a Wise and Valiant Roman,
I never thought him worse :
Tell him, so please him come unto this place
He shall be satisfied, and by my honour
Depart untouch'd.

Ser. He fetch him presently.

Exit Servant.

Brn. I know that we shall have him well to Friend.

Cas. I wish we may : But yet have I a mind
That fears him much : and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Enter Antony.

Brn. But here comes Antony :
Welcome Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cæsar ! dost thou lye so low ?
Are all thy Conquests, Glories, Triumphs, Spoils,
Shrunk to this little Measure? Fare thee well.
I know not Gentlemen, what you intend,
Who else must be let blood; who else is rank :

If I my self, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsars deaths hour; nor no instrument
Of half that worth, as those your Swords; made rich
With the most Noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,
Now, whil't your purpled hands do reek and smock
Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find my self so apt to die.
No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,
The Choice and Master Spirits of this age.

Brn. O Antony! Beg not your death of us :
Though now we must appear bloody and cruell,
As by our hands, and this our present Act
You see we do : yet see you but our hands,

And

And this, the bleeding businesse they have done :
Our hearts you see not, they are pitiful :
And pittie to the general wrong of Rome,
As fire drives out fire, so pittie, pittie,
Hath done this deed on Caesar. For your part,
To you, our Swords have leaden points Mark Antony;
Our Arms in strength of malice, and our Hearts
Of Brothers temper, do receive you in,
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any mans,
In the disposing of new Dignities.

Brn. Onely be patient till we have appeas'd
The multitude, beside themselves with fear,
And then we will deliver you the cause,
Why I, that did love Caesar when I strook him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom :
Let each man render me his bloody hand.
First Marcus Brutus will I shake with you ;
Next Caius Cassius do I take your hand ;
Now Decius Brutus yours, now yours Metellus ;
Yours Cinna ; and my valiant Caska, yours ;
Though last, not least in love, yours good Trebonius,
Gentlemen all : alas, what shall I say,
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad waies you must conceit me,
Either a Coward, or a flatterer.

That I did love thee Caesar, O tis true :
If then thy Spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer then thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes ?
Most Noble in the presence of thy Coarse,
Had I as many eies, as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better, then to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me Julius, here was't thou bay'd brave heart.
Here didst thou fall, and here thy Hunters stand
Sign'd in thy spoil, and Crimson'd in thy Lethe.
O world ! thou wast the Forrest to this Hart,
And this indeed, O world, the Hart of thee.
How like a Deer, stricken by many Princes,
Dost thou here lye ?

Cas. Mark Antony.

Ant. Pardon me Caius Cassius :
The enemies of Caesar, shall say this :
Then, in a friend, it is cold Modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Caesar so,
But what compact mean you to have with us ?
Will you be prick't in number of our friends,
Or shall we on ; and not depend on you ?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands, but was indeed
Sway'd from the point, by looking down on Caesar.
Friends am I with you all, and love you all,
Upon this hope, that you shall give me Reasons,
VVhy, and wherein Caesar was dangerous.

Brn. Or else were this a savage spectacle :
Our Reasons are so full of good regard,
That were you Antony the Son of Caesar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek,
And am moreover suitor that I may
Produce his body to the Market-place,
And in the Pulpit as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his Funeral.

Brn. You shall Mark Antony

Cas. Brutus, a word with you :
You know not what you do ; do not consent
That Antony speak in his Funeral :
Know you how much the people may be mov'd
By that which he will utter.

Brn. By your pardon :
I will my self into the Pulpit first,
And shew the reason of our Caesars death,
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave, and by permission :
And that we are contented Caesar shall
Have all true Rites, and lawful Ceremonies.
It shall advantage more, then do us wrong.

Cas. I know not what may fall, I like it not.

Brn. Mark Antony, here take you Caesars body :
You shall not in your Funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Caesar,
And say you doo't by our permission :
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his Funeral. And you shall speak
In the same Pulpit whereto I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so :

I do desire no more.

Brn. Prepare the body then, and follow us. Exeunt.

Manet Antony.

O pardon me, thou bleeding peece of Earth :
That I am meek and gentle with these Butchers.
Thou art the Ruines of the Noblest man
That ever lived in the Tide of Times.
Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood.
Over thy wounds, now do I prophesie,
(Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby lips,
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue)
A Curse shall light upon the limbs of men ;
Domestick fury, and fierce civil strife,
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy :
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That Mothers shall but smile, when they behold
Their Infants quartered with the hands of Warre :
All pity choak'd with custome of fell deeds,
And Caesars Spirit ranging for Revenge,
With Aie by his side, come hot from Hell,
Shall in these Confines, with a Monarks voice,
Cry havock, and let slip the Dogs of Warre,
That this foul deed, shall smell above the earth
With Carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter Octavius's Servant.

You serve Octavius Caesar, do you not ?

Ser. I do Mark Antony.

Ant. Caesar did write for him to come to Rome.

Ser. He did receive his Letters, and is coming,
And bid me say to you by word of mouth——
O Caesar !

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee a-part and weep :
Passion I see is catching, for mine eies,
Seeing those Beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy Master coming ?

Ser. He lies to night within seven Leagues of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed,
And tell him what hath chanc'd :
Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet,
Hie hence, and tell him so. Yet stay a while,

Thou

Thou shalt not back, till I have born this Coarse
Into the market place : There shall I try
In my Oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men,
According to the which, thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.
Lend me your hand.

Exeunt.

Enter Brutus and goes into the Pulpit, and Cassius with the Plebeians.

Ple. We will be satisfied : let us be satisfied.

Bru. Then follow me, and give me Audience friends.

Cassius go you into the other street,

And part the Numbers :

Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here ;

Those that will follow Cassius, goe with him,

And publike Reasons shall be rendred

Of Casars death.

1 Ple. I will hear Brutus speak.

2. I will hear Cassius, and compare their Reasons,
When severally we hear them rendred.

3. The Noble Brutus is ascended : Silence.

Bru. Be patient till the last.

Romans, Countrey-men, and Lovers, hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear. Beleeve me for mine Honor, and have respect to mine Honor, that you may beleeve. Censure me in your wisdom, and awake your Senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this Assembly, any deer friend of Casars, to them
I say, that Brutus love to Cesar, was no lesse then his. If then, that Friend demand, why Brutus rose against Cesar, this is my answer : Not that I lov'd Cesar lesse, but that I lov'd Rome more. Had you rather Cesar were living, and die all Slaves ; then that Cesar were dead, to live all Free-men ? As Cesar lov'd me, I weep for him ;
as he was Fortunate, I rejoyce at it ; as he was valiant, I honour him : But, as he was Ambitious, I slew him. There is Tears for his Love : Joy, for his Fortune : Honour, for his Valour : and Death for his Ambition. Who is here, so base that would be a Bondman ? If any, speak, for him have I offended. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman ? If any, speak, for him have I offended. Who is here so vile, that will not love his Countrey ? If any, speak, for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

All. None Brutus, none.

Brutus. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cesar then you shall do to Brutus. The Question of his death, is intoll'd in the Capitoll : his Glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy ; nor his offences enforc'd, for which he suffered death.

Enter Mark Antony, with Casars body.

Here comes his body, mourn'd by Mark Antony, who though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the Common-wealth, as which of you shall not. With this I depart, that as I slew my best Lover for the good of Rome, I have the same Dagger for my self, when it shall please my Countrey to need my Death.

All. Live Brutus, live, live.

1. Bring him with Triumph home unto his house,

2. Give him a Statue with his Ancestors.

3. Let him be Cesar.

4. Casars better parts,

Shall be Crown'd in Brutus.

1. Wee'l bring him to his house,
With Showrs and Clamors.

Bru. My Countrey-men.

2. Peace, silence, Brutus speaks.

1. Peace ho,

Bru. Good Countrey-men, let me depart alone,
And (for my sake) stay here with Antony :

Do grace to Casars Corps, and grace his speech
Tending to Casars Glories, which Mark Antony
(By our permission) is allow'd to make.

I do intreat you, not a man depart.

Save I alone, till Antony have spoke.

Exit.

1. Stay ho, and let us hear Mark Antony.

3. Let him go up into the publique Chair,
Wee'l hear him : Noble Antony go up.

Ant. For Brutus sake I am beholding to you.

4. What does he say of Brutus !

3. He saies for Brutus sake
He finds himself beholding to us all.

4. 'Twere best speak no harme of Brutus here ?

1. This Cesar was a Tyrant.

3. Nay that's certain :

We are glad that Rome is rid of him,

2. Peace, let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans.

All. Peace hoe, let us hear him.

Ant. Friends, Romans, Countrey-men, lend me your ears :

I come to bury Cesar, not to praise him :

The evil that men do, lives after them,

The good is oft enterred with their bones,

So let it be with Cesar. The Noble Brutus,

Hath told you Cesar was Ambitious :

If it were so, it was a grievous fault,

And grievously hath Cesar answer'd it

Here, under leave of Brutus, and the rest,

(For Brutus is an honourable man,
So are they all, all Honourable men)

Come I to speak in Casars funeral.

He was my Friend, faithful, and just to me ;

But Brutus saies, he was Ambitious,

And Brutus is an Honourable man.

He hath brought many Captives home to Rome,

Whose Ransomes did the general Coffers fill :

Did this in Cesar seem Ambitious ?

When that the poor have cry'd, Cesar hath wept :

Ambition should be made of sterner stuffe,

Yet Brutus saies, he was Ambitious :

And Brutus is an Honourable man.

You all did see, that on the Lupercall,

I thrice presented him a Kingly Crown,

Which he did thrice refuse. Was this Ambition ?

Yet Brutus saies he was Ambitious :

And sure he is and Honourable man.

I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,

But here I am to speak what I do know ;

You all did love him once, not without cause,

What cause with-holds you then, to mourn for him ?

O Judgement ! thou art fled to brutish Beasts,

And Men have lost their Reason. Bear with me,

My heart is in the Coffin there with Cesar.

And I must pause till it come back to me.

1. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.

If thou consider rightly of the matter,

Cesar ha's had great wrong.

(his place.

3. Ha's he Masters ? I fear there will a worse come in

4. Mark'd

4. Mark'd ye his words? he would not take the Crown,
Therefore tis certain, he was not Ambitious.

1. If it be found so, some will deer abide it.
2. Poor soul, his eies are red as fire with weeping.
3. There's not a Nobler man in Rome then Antony.
4. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday, the word of Caesar might Have stood against the world: Now lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence.
O Masters! If I were dispos'd to stirre
Your hearts and minds to mutiny and Rage,
I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong:
Who (you all know) are Honourable men.
I will not do them wrong: I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong my self and you,
Then I will wrong such Honourable men.
But here's a Parchment, with the Seal of Caesar,
I found it in his Closet, tis his Will:
Let but the Commons hear this Testament:
(Which pardon me) I do not mean to read,
And they would goe and kisse dead Caesars wounds,
And dip their Napkins in his Sacred blood:
Yea, beg a hair of him for Memory,
And dying, mention it within their Wills,
Bequeaching it as a rich Legacy
Unto their issue.

4. Wee'l hear the VVill, read it Mark Antony.

All. The VVill, the VVill; we will hear Caesars Will.

Ant. Have patience gentle Friends, I must not read it.
It is not meet you know how Caesar lov'd you:
You are not VVood, you are not Stones, but men:
And being men, hearing the VVill of Caesar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad;
Tis good you know not that you are his Heirs,
For if you should, O what would come of it?

4. Read the VVill, wee'l hear it Antony:
You shall read us the VVill, Caesars VVill.

Ant. VVill you be Patient? will you stay a while?
I have o're shot my self to tell you of it,
I fear I wtong the Honourable men,
Whose Daggers have stabb'd Caesar: I do fear it.

4. They were Traitors, Honourable men?

All. The VVill, the Testament.

2. They were Villains, Murderers: the VVill, read the VVill.

Ant. You will compell me then to read the VVill;
Then make a Ring about the Corps of Caesar,
And let me shew you him that made the will:
Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?

All. Come down.

2. Descend.

3. You shall have leave.

4. A Ring, stand round.

1. Stand from the Hearse, stand from the Body.

2. Room for Antony, most Noble Antony.

Ant. Nay presse not so upon me, stand farre off.

All. Stand back, room, bear back.

Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.
You all do know this Mantle, I remember
The first time ever Caesar put it on,
Twas on a Summers evening in his Tent,
That day he overcame the Nervii
Look, in this place ran Cassius Dagger through:
See what a Rent the envious Caska made:
Through this, the welbelov'd Brutus stab'd
And as he pluck'd his cursed Steel away.

Mark how the blood of Caesar followed it.

As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd

If Brutus so unkindly knock'd, or no:

For Brutus as you know, was Caesars Angel.

Judge, O you Gods, how dearly Caesar lov'd him:

This was the most unkindest cut of all.

For when the Noble Caesar saw him stab,

Ingratitude, more strong then Traitors armes,

Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his Mighty heart,

And in his Mantle, muttling up his face,

Even at the Base of Pompey's Statue

(Which all the while ran blood) great Caesar fell.

O what a fall was there, my Countrey-men?

Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,

Whilst bloody Treason flourish'd over us.

O now you weep, and I perceive you feel

The dint of pity: These are gracious drops.

Kind Souls, what weep you, when you but behold

Our Caesar's Vesture wounded? Look you here,

Here is Himself, marr'd as you see with Traitors.

1. O pittreous spectacle!

2. O Noble Caesar!

3. Owoful day!

4. O Traitors, Villains!

1. O most bloody sight!

2. We will be reveng'd: Revenge

About, seek, burn, fire, kill, slay,

Let not a Traitor live.

Ant. Stay Countrey-men.

1. Peace there, hear the Noble Antony,

2. Wee'l hear him, wee'l follow him, wee'l dye with him. (you up)

Ant. Good Friends, sweet Friends, let me not stirre
To such a suddain Flood of Mutiny:

They that have done this Deed, are Honourable,

What private griefs they have, alas I know not,

That made them do it: They are wise and honourable,

And will no doubt with reasons answer you.

I come not (Friends,) to steal away your hearts;

I am no Orator, as Brutus is;

But (as you know me all) a plain blunt man:

That love my friend, and that they know full well,

That give me publick leave to speak of him:

For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,

Action nor utterance, nor the power of speech,

To stirre mens Blood. I onely speak right on:

I tell you that, which you your selves do know,

Shew you sweet Caesars wounds, poor, poor dumb mouths

And bid them speak for me: But were I Brutus,

And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony

Would ruffle up your Spirits, and put a Tongue

In every Wound of Caesar, that should move

The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

All. Wee'l Mutiny.

1. Wee'l burn the house of Brutus.

3. Away then, come seek the Conspirators.

Ant. Yet hear me Countrey-men, yet hear me speak.

All. Peace hoe, hear Antony, most Noble Antony.

Ant. Why Friends, you go to do you know not what.
Wherein hath Caesar thus deceiv'd your loves?

Alas you know not, I must tell you then:

You have forgot the Will I told you of.

All. Most true, the Will, let's stay and hear the Will.

Ant. Here is the Will, and under Caesars Seal:

To every Roman Citizen he gives,

To every severall man, seventy five Drachmaes.

2 Ple. Most Noble Caesar, wee'l revenge his death.

3 Ple. O Royal Caesar.

Ant. Hear me with patience.

All. Peace ho.

Ant. Moreover he hath left you all his Walkes,
His private Arbours, and new-planted Orchards.

On this side Tyber, he hath left them you,
And to your heires for ever: common pleasures
To walk abroad, and recreate your selves.

Here was a Caesar: when comes such another?

1 Ple. Never, never: come, away, away:
Wee'l burn his body in the holy place,
And with the Brands fire all the Traytors houses.
Take up the body.

2 Ple. Go fetch fire.

3 Ple. Pluck down Benches.

4 Ple. Pluck down Formes, Windowes, any thing.

Exeunt Plebeians.

Ant. Now let it work: Mischief thou art a-foot,
Take thou what course thou wilt.
How now Fellow?

Enter Servant.

Ser. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. VVhere is he?

Ser. He and Lepidus are at Caesars house.

Ant. And thither will I straight, to visit him:
He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry,
And in this mood will give us any thing.

Ser. I heard him say, Brutus and Cassius
Are rid like Madmen through the Gates of Rome.

Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people
How I had moved them. Bring me to Octavius. Exeunt.

Enter Cinna the Poet, and after him the Plebeians.

Cin. I dreamt to night, that I did feast with Caesar,
And things unluckily charge my Fantacie:
I have no will to wander forth of doores,
Yet something leads me forth.

1 VVhat is your name?

2 VVhither are you going?

3 VVhere do you dwell?

4 Are you a married man, or a bachelor?

2 Answer every man directly.

1 I, and briefly.

4 I, and wisely.

3 I, and truly, you were best.

Cin. VVhat is my name? VVhither am I going? vvhether do I dwell? am I a married man, or a bachelor? Then to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly: wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

2 That's as much as to say, they are fooles that marry:
you'l bear me a bang for that I fear: Proceed directly.

Cin. Directly I am going to Caesars Funeral.

1 As a Friend, or an Enemy?

Cin. As a Friend.

2 That matter is answered directly.

4. For your dwelling: briefly.

Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.

3 Your name sir, truly.

Cin. Truly my name is Cinna.

1 Tear him to pieces, he's a Conspirator.

Cin. I am Cinna the Poet, I am Cinna the Poet.

4 Tear him for his bad Verses, tear him for his bad Verses.

Cin. I am not Cinna the Conspirator.

4 It is no matter, his name's Cinna, pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.

3 Tear him, tear him; Come Brands hoe, Firebrands: to Brutus, to Cassius, burn all. Some to Decius houses, and some to Caska's, some to Ligarius: Away, go.

Exeunt all the Plebeians.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Antony, Octavius, and Lepidus.

Ant. These many then shall die, their names are prick't.

Oct. Your Brother too must die: consent you Lepidus?

Lep. I do consent.

Oct. Prick him down Antony.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live,
Who is your Sisters son, Mark Antony.

Ant. He shall not live: look, with a spot I dam him.

But Lepidus, go you to Caesars house:

Fetch the Will hither, and we shall determine
How to cut off some charge in Legacies.

Lep. What? shall I find you here?

Oct. Or here, or at the Capitol.

Exit Lepidus.

Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man,
Meet to heston on Errands; is it fit
The three-fold world divided, he should stand
One of the three to share it?

Oct. So you thought him
And took his voyce who should be prick't to die
In our black Sentence and Proscription.

Ant. Octavius, I have seen more daies then you;
And though we lay these honours on this man,
To ease our selves of divers stand'rous loads,
He shall but bear them, as the Ass bears Gold,
To groan and sweat under the Business,
Either led or driven, as we print the way:
And having brought our treasure, where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off
(Like to the empty Ass) to shake his eares,
And gaze in Commons.

Oct. You may do your will:

But he's a tri'd, and valiant Souldier.

Ant. So is my Horse Octavius, and for that I do appoint him store of Provender.

It is a Creature that I teach to fight;
To wind, to stop, to run directly on:
His corporal Motion, govern'd by my Spirit,
And in some cast, is Lepidus but so:

He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth:
A barren spirited Fellow, one that feeds

On Objects, Arts, and Imitations.

Which out of use, and stal'd by other men

Begin his fashion. Do not talk of him,

But as a property: and now Octavius,

Listen great things. Brutus and Cassius

Are levying Powers; We must straight make head:

Therefore let our Alliance be combin'd,

Our best Friends made, and our best means stretcht out,

And let us presently go sit in Council,

How covert matters may be best disclos'd,

And open Perils surest answered.

Oct. Let us do so: for we are at the stake,

And

And bayed about with many Enemies,
And some that smile have in their hearts I fear
Millions of Mischiefs.

Exeunt.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Lucilius, and the Army. Titinius and Pindarus meet them.

Brut. Stand ho.

Luc. Give the word ho, and Stand.

Brut. What now Lucilius, is Cassius near?

Luc. He is at hand, and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his Master.

Brut. He greets me well. Your Master Pindarus
In his own change, or by ill Officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done, undone: But if he be at hand
I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt

But that my Noble Master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard, and Honour.

Brut. He is not doubted. A word Lucilius,
How he receiv'd you: let me be resolv'd.

Luc. With curtesie, and with respect enough,
But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly Conference
As he hath us'd of old.

Brut. Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend, cooling: Ever note Lucilius,
When Love begins to sicken and decay
It useth an enforced Ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple Faith:
But hollow men, like Horses hot at hand,
Make gallant shew, and promise of their Mettle:

Low March within.

But when they should endure the bloody Spur,
They fall their Crest, and like deceitful Jades
Sink in the Trial. Comes his Army on?

Luc. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd:
The greater part, the Horse in general
Are come with Cassius.

Enter Cassius, and his Powers.

Brut. Hark, he is arriv'd:
March gently on to meet him.

Cas. Stand ho.

Brut. Stand ho, speak the word along.

Stand.

Stand.

Stand.

Cas. Most Noble Brother; you have done me wrong.

Brut. Judge me you Gods; wrong I mine Enemies?
And if not so, how should I wrong a Brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours, hides wrongs,
And when you do them——

Brut. Cassius, be content,
Speak your griefs softly, I do know you well.
Before the eyes of both our Armies here.
(Which should perceive nothing but Love from us)
Let us nor wrangle. Bid them move away:
Then in my Tent Cassius enlarge your Griefs
And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus,

Bid our Commanders lead their Charges off
A little from this ground.

Brut. Lucilius, do you the like, and let no man
Come to our Tent, till we have done our Conference.
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.

Exeunt.

Mænent Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me, doth appear in this
You have condemn'd, and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my Letter, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, was slighted off.

Brut. You wrong'd your self to write in such a case

Cas. In such a time as this, it is not meet.

That every nice offence should bear his Comment.

Brut. Let me tell you Cassius, you your self,
Are much condemn'd to have an itching Palm,
To sell, and Mart your Offices for Gold
To Undeservers.

Cas. I, an itching Palm?

You know that you are Brutus that speaks this,
Or by the Gods, this speech were else your last.

Brut. The name of Cassius honours this Corruption,
And Chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement?

Brut. Remember March, the Ides of March remember:
Did not great Julius bleed for Justice sake?

What Villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for Justice? What, shall one of us,
That struck the Formost man of all this world,
But for supporting Robbers: shall we now,
Contaminate our fingers, with base bribes?
And sell the mighty space of our large Honours
For so much trash, as may be grasped thus?
I had rather be a Dog, and bait the Moon,
Then such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bait not me.

He not endure it: you forget your self,
To hedge me in, I am a Souldier, I,
Older in practise, abler then your self
To make Conditions.

Brut. Go to: you are not Cassius.

Cas. I am.

Brut. I say, you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget my self:
Have mind upon your health: Tempt me no farther.

Brut. Away slight man.

Cas. Is't possible?

Brut. Hear me, for I will speak.

Must I give way, and room to your rash Choler?
Shall I be frighted, when a mad man stares?

Cas. O ye Gods, ye Gods, must I endure all this?

Brut. All this? I more. Fret till your proud heart break,
Go shew your Slaves how Cholerick you are,
And make your Bondmen tremble. Must I boudge?
Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour? By the Gods
You shall digest the Venom of your spleen
Though it do split you. For from this day forth,
He use you for my Mirth, yea for my Laughter,
When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this?

Brut. You say, you are a better Souldier:
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well. For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of Noble men.

Cas. You wrong me every way:

You wrong me Brutus:
I said, an Elder Souldier, not a Better.
Did I say Better?

Brut. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Cæsar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me.
Brut. Peace, peace, you durst not so have tempted him.

Cas.

Cassi. I durst not.

Brn. No.

Cassi. What? durst not tempt him?

Brn. For your life you durst no.

Cassi. Do not presume too much upon my love,
I may do that I shall be sorry for.

Brn. You have done that you should be sorry for.
There is no terror Cassius in your threats.

For I am arm'd so strong in honesty,
That they passe by me, as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain summes of Gold, which you deny'd me,
For I can raise no money by vile means:
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for Drachmaes, then to wring
From the hard hands of Pezants, their vile trash
By any indirection. I did send
To you for Gold to pay my Legions,
Which you deny'd me: was that done like Cassius?
Should I have answer'd Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus growes so covetous,
To lock such Rascal Counters from his friends,
Be ready gods with all your Thunder-bolts,
Dash him to peeces.

Cas. I deny'd you not.

Brn. You did.

Cassi. I did not. He was but a Fool
That brought my answer back. Brutus hath riv'd my heart
A friend should bear his friends infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater then they are.

Brn. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cassi. You love me not.

Brn. I do not like your faults.

Cassi. A friendly eye could never see such faults.

Brn. A flatterers would not, though they do appear
As huge as high Olympus.

Cassi. Come Antony, and young Octavius come,
Revenge your selves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is a-weary of the world:
Hated by one he loves, brav'd by his brother,
Check'd like a bondman, all his faults observ'd,
Set in a Note-book, learn'd, and con'd by rote
To cast into my Teeth. O I could weep
My Spirit from mine eies: There is my Dagger,
And here my naked Breast: Within a heart
Deerer then Pluto's Mine: Richer then Gold:
If that thou beest a Roman, take it forth.
I that deny'd thee Gold, will give my heart:
Strike as thou didst at Cæsar, for I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lovedst him better
Then ever thou lovedst Cassius.

Brn. Sheath your Dagger:
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope,
Do what you will, dishonour, shall be humour.
O Cassius, you are yoked with a Lamb
That carries anger, as the Flint bears fire,
Who much inforced, shews a hasty spark,
And straight is cold agen.

Cassi. Hath Cassius liv'd
To be but Mirth and Laughter to his Brutus.
When grief and blood ill temper'd, vexeth him?

Brn. When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd too.

Cassi. Do you confesse so much? Give me your hand.

Brn. And my heart too.

Cassi. O Brutus!

Brn. What's the matter?

Cassi. Have not you love enough to bear with me,
When that rash humour which my Mother gave me
Makes me forgetful?

Brn. Yes Cassius and from henceforth
When you are over-earnest with your Brutus,
Hee'l think your Mother chides, and leave you so.

Enter a Post.

Pa. Let me go in to see the Generals,
There is some grudge between em, tis not meet
They be alone.

Luci. You shall not come to them.

Post. Nothing but death shall stay me.

Cassi. How now? What's the matter?

Post. For shame you Generals? what do you mean?
Love, and befriends, as two such men should be,
For I have seen more years Ime sure then ye.

Cassi. Ha, ha, how vildly doth this Cynick rhyme:

Brn. Get you hence sirrah: Sawcy fellow, hence.

Cassi. Bear with him Brutus, tis his fashion.

Brn. He know his humour, when he knows his time:
What should the Warres do with these jiggling fools?
Companion, hence.

Cassi. Away, away be gone.

Exit Post.

Brn. Lucilius and Titinius bid the Commanders
Prepare to lodge their Companies to night.

Cassi. And come your selves, and bring Messala with you
Immediately to us

Brn. Lucius, a bowl of Wine.

Cassi. I did not think you could have been so angry.

Brn. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.

Cassi. Of your Philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.

Brn. No man bears sorrow better. Portia is dead.

Cassi. Ha? Portia?

Brn. She is dead.

Cassi. How scap'd I killing, when I crost you so?
O insupportable, and touching losse!
Upon what sicknesse?

Brn. Impatient of my absence.

And grief, that young Octavius with Mark Antony,
Have made themselves so strong: For with her death
That tydings came. With this the fell distract,
And (her Attendants absent) swallow'd fire.

Cassi. And dy'd so?

Brn. Even so.

Cassi. O ye immortal Gods!

Enter Boy with wine, and Tapers.

Brn. Speak no more of her: Give me a bowle of wine
In this I bury all unkindnesse Cassius.

Drinks.

Cassi. My heart is thirsty for that Noble pledge,
Fill Lucius, till the Wine ore-swell the Cup:
I cannot drink too much of Brutus love.

Enter Titinius, and Messala.

Brn. Come in Titinius:
Welcome good Messala:
Now sit we close about this Taper here,
And call in question our necessities.

Cassi. Portia, art thou gone?

Brn. No more I pray you.

Messala, I have here received Letters,
That young Octavius, and Mark Antony
Come down upon us with a mighty power,
Bending their expedition toward Philippi.

O o o

Mess.

Mess. My self have Letters of the self same tenure.

Bru. With what Addition.

Mess. That by proscription, and bills of Outlary,
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,
Have put to death an hundred Senators.

Bru. Therein our Letters do not well agree :
Mine speak of seventy Senators, that dy'd
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cassi. Cicero one?

Mess. Cicero is dead, and by that order of proscription.
Had you your Letters from your wife my Lord?

Bru. No Messala.

Mess. Nor nothing in you Letters writ of her?

Bru. Nothing Messala.

Mess. That me thinks is strange.

Bru. Why aske you?

Hear you ought of her, in yours?

Mess. No my Lord.

Bru. Now as you are a Roman tell me true.

Mess. Then like a Roman, bear the truth I tell,
For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Bru. Why farewell Porcia: we must die Messala:
With meditating that she must die once,
I have the patience to endure it now.

Mess. Even so great men, great losses should endure.

Cassi. I have as much of this in Art as you,
But yet my Nature could not bear it so.

Bru. Well, to our work alive. VVhat do you think
Of marching to Philippi presently.

Cassi. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason?

Cassi. This it is:

Tis better that the enemy seek us
So shall he waste his means, weary his Souldiers,
Doing himself offence, whilst we lying still,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Bru. Good reasons must of force give place to better:
The people 'twixt Philippi, and this ground
Do stand but in a forc'd affection:
For they have grudg'd us Contribution.
The Enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresht, new added, and encourag'd;
From which advantage shall we cut him off.
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.

Cassi. Hear me good brother.

Bru. Under your pardon. You must note beside,
That we have try'd the utmost of our friends:
Our Legions are brim full, our caule is ripe,
The Enemy encreaseth every day,
We at the height, are ready to decline.
There is a Tide in the affairs of men,
Which taken at the Flood, leads on to Fortune:
Omitted, all the voyage of their life,
Is bound in Shallowes, and in Miseries.
On such a full Sea, are we now a-float,
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or loose our ventures.

Cassi. Then with your will go on: we'll along
Our selves, and meet them at Philippi.

Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our talk,
And Nature must obey Necessity,
Which we will niggard with a little rest:
There is no more to say.

Cassi. No more, good night,

Early to morrow will we rise, and hence.

Enter Lucius.

Bru. Lucius my Gown: farewell good Messala,
Good night Tuinius: Noble, Noble Cassius,
Good night, and good repose.

Cassi. O my deer brother:
This was an ill beginning of the night:
Never come such division tween our souls:
Let it not Brutus.

Enter Lucius with the Gown.

Bru. Every thing is well.

Cassi. Good night my Lord.

Bru. Good night good brother.

Tit. Messa. Good night Lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewel every one.

Exeunt.

Give me the Gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the Tent.

Bru. What thou speak'st drowsily?

Poor knave I blame thee, thou art ore-watch'd.

Call Claudio, and some other of my men,

He have them sleep on Cushions in my Tent.

Luc. Varrus and Claudio.

Enter Varrus and Claudio.

Var. Calls my Lord?

Bru. I pray you sirs, lie in my Tent and sleep,
It may be I shall raise you by and by
On businessse to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand,
And watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will not have it so: lie down good sirs,
It may be I shall otherwise bethink me.

Look Lucius, here's the book I sought for so:
I put it in the pocket of my Gown.

Luc. I was sure your Lordship did not give it me.

Bru. Bear with me good boy, I am much forgetful.
Canst thou hold up thy instrument a strain or two.
And touch thy heavy eies a while.

Luc. I my Lord an't please you.

Bru. It does my Boy;

I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty Sir.

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might,
I know young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept my Lord already.

Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleep again:
I will not hold thee long. If I do live,
I will be good to thee.

Musick and a Song.

This is a sleepy Tune: O murderous slumber!
Layest thou thy Leaden Mace upon my boy,
That plaies thee Musick? Gentle knave good night:
I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee:
If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument,
He take it from thee, and (good boy) good night.
Let me see, let me see? is not the Leaf turn'd down
Where I left reading? Here it is I think.

Enter the Ghost of Caesar.

How ill this Taper burns. Ha! Who comes here?
I think it is the weaknesse of mine eies
That shapes this monstrous Apparition.
It comes upon me: Art thou any thing?
Art thou some God, some Angell, or some Devil,
That mak'st my blood cold, and my hair to stare?
Speak to me, what thou art.

Ghost. Thy evil Spirit Brutus.

Bru. Why com'st thou?

Ghost.

Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi.
Brut. Well : then I shall see thee again ?
Ghost. I, at Philippi.
Brut. Why I will see thee at Philippi then :
 Now I have taken heart, thou vanishest.
 Ill Spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.
Boy, Lucius, Varrus, Claudio, Sirs : awake :
Claudio.
Luci. The strings my Lord are false.
Brut. He thinks he still is at his Instrument.
Lucius, awake.
Luci. My Lord.
Brut. Didst thou dream Lucius, that thou so cryedst out ?
Luc. My Lord, I do not know that I did cry.
Brut. Yes that thou didst ; Didst thou see any thing ?
Luc. Nothing my Lord.
Brut. Sleep again Lucius : Sirra Claudio, fellow,
 Thou, awake.
Var. My Lord,
Clau. My Lord.
Brut. Why did you so cry out first in your sleep ?
Both. Did we my Lord ?
Brut. I : saw you any thing ?
Var. No my Lord, I saw nothing.
Clau. Nor I my Lord.
Brut. Go, and commend me to my brother Cassius :
 Bid him set on his powers betimes before,
 And we will follow.
Both. It shall be done my Lord. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Octavius, Antony, and their Army.
Octa. Now Antony, our hopes are answered,
 You said the Enemy would not come down,
 But keep the hills and upper regions :
 It proves not so : their battels are at hand,
 They mean to warn us at Philippi here :
 Answering before we do demand of them.
Ant. Tut I am in their bosomes, and I know
 Wherefore they do it : They could be content
 To visit other places, and come down
 With fearful bravery : thinking by this face
 To fasten in our thoughts that they have Courage :
 But tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.
Mes. Prepare you Generals,
 The Enemy comes on in gallant shew :
 Their bloody sign of Battel is hung out,
 And something to be done immediately.
Ant. Octavius, lead your Battel softly on
 Upon the left hand of the even field.
Octa. Upon the right hand I, keep thou the left.
Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent ?
Octa. I do not cross you : but I will do so. March.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, and their Army.

Brut. They stand, and would have parley.
Cas. Stand fast Tullius, we must out and talk.
Octa. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of Battel ?
Ant. No Cæsar, we will answer on their Charge.

Make forth, the Generals would have some words.
Octa. Stir not until the Signal.
Brut. Words before blowes : is it so Countreymen ?
Octa. Not that we love words better, as you do.
Brut. Good words are better then bad stroakes Octavius.
Ant. In your bad stroakes Brutus, you give good words,
 Witness the hole you made in Cæsar's heart,
 Crying long live, hail Cæsar.
Cassi. Antony,
 The posture of your blowes are yet unknown ;
 But for your words, they rob the Hibla bees,
 And leave them honey-less.
Ant. Not stingle's too.
Brut. O yes, and soundless too :
 For you have stoln their buzzing Antony,
 And very wisely threat before you sting.
Ant. Villaines : you did not so, when your vile daggers
 Hack one another in the sides of Cæsar :
 You shew'd your teeth like Apes,
 And fawn'd like hounds,
 And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cæsar's feet :
 Whilst damned Cæsar, like a Cur, behind
 Struck Cæsar on the neck. O you flatterers !
Cassi. Flatterers ? Now Brutus thank your self
 This tongue had not offended so to day,
 If Cassius might have rul'd.
Octa. Come, come, the cause. If arguing inake us swer,
 The proof of it will turn to redder drops :
 Look, I draw a Sword against Conspirators,
 When think you that the Sword goes up again ?
 Never till Cæsar's three and thirty wounds
 Be well aveng'd ; or till another Cæsar
 Have added Slaughter to the Sword of Traytors.
Brut. Cæsar, Thou canst not die by Traytors hands,
 Unless thou bringst them with thee.
Octa. So I hope :
 I was not born to die on Brutus's Sword.
Brut. O if thou wert the Noblest of thy Strain,
 Young-man, thou couldst not die more honourable.
Cassi. A peevish School-boy, worthies of such honour
 Joyn'd with a Masker and a Reveller.
Ant. Old Cassius kill.
Octa. Come Antony : away :
 Defiance Traytors, hurle we in your teeth.
 If you dare fight to day, come to the field :
 If not, when you have stomackes.

Exit Octavius, Antony, and Army.
Cassi. Why now blow wind, swell billow,
 And swim Barke :
 The Storm is up, and all is on the hazard.
Brut. Ho Lucillius, heark, a word vvith you.
Lucillius, and Messala stand forth.

Luc. My Lord.
Cas. Messala.
Messa. What saies my General ?
Cas. Messala, this is my Birth-day : as this very day
 Vvas Cassius born. Give me thy hand Messala :
 Be thou my vvitness, that against my vvill,
 (As Pompey vvas) am I compel'd to set
 Upon one battel all our Liberties.
 You know that I held Epicurus strong,
 And his opinion : Now I change my mind,
 And partly credit things that do presage.
 Coming from Sardis, on our former Ensign
 Two mighty Eagles fell, and there they perch'd,
 Gorging and feeding from our Souldiers hands,

Who to Philippi here conformed us :
This Morning are they fled away, and gone,
And in their steads, do Ravens, Crows and Kites
Fly ore our heads, and downward look on us
As we were sickly prey ; their shadowes seem
A Canopy most fatal, under which
Our Army lies, ready to give up the Ghost.

Messa. Believe not so.

Cassi. I but believe it partly,
For I am fresh of spirit, and resolv'd
To meet all peril, very constantly.

Bru. Even so Lucilius.

Cassi. Now most Noble Brutus,
The gods to day stand friendly, that we may
Lovers in peace, lead on our dayes to age.
But since the affaires of men rests still incertain,
Lets reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this Battel, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together :

What are you then determined to do ?

Bru. Even by the rule of that Philosophy,
By which I did blame Cato, for the death
Which he did give himself, I know not how :
But I do find it Cowardly, and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life, arming my self with patience,
To stay the providence of some high Powers,
That govern us below.

Cassi. Then if we lose this Battel,
You are contented to be led in triumph
Through the streets of Rome.

Bru. No Cassius, no :
Think not thou Noble Roman,
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome
He bears too great a mind, But this same day
Must end that work, that Ides of March begun.
And whether we shall meet again, I know not :
Therefore our everlasting farewell take :
For ever, and for ever, farewell Cassius,
If we do meet again, why we shall smile :
If not, why then this parting was well made.

Cassi. For ever, and for ever, farewell Brutus :
If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed ;
If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made.

Bru. Why then lead on. O that a man might know
The end of this daies business, ere it come :
But it sufficeth, that the day will end,
And then the end is known. Come ho, away. Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter Brutus and Messala.

Bru. Ride, ride Messala, ride and give these Bills
Unto the Legions, on the other side.

Lowd Alarums.

Let them set on at once : for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius's wing :
And sudden push gives them the overthrow :
Ride, ride Messala, let them all come down. Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter Cassius and Titinius.

Cassi. O look Titinius, look, the Villaines fly :
My self have to mine own turn'd Enemy :
This Ensign here of mine was turning back,
I slew the Coward, and did take it from him.

Titin. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early,

Who having some advantage on Octavius
Took it too eagerly : his Souldiers fell to spoyl,
VVhilst we by Antony are all inclos'd.

Enter Pindarus.

Pind. Fly further off my Lord : fly further off,
Mark Antony is in your Tents my Lord :
Fly therefore Noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cassi. This hill is far enough. Look, look Titinius
Are those my Tents where I perceive the fire ?

Tit. They are, my Lord.

Cassi. Titinius, if thou lovest me,
Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him,
Till he have brought thee up to yonder Troops
And here again, that I may rest assur'd
VVhether yond Troups, are Friend or Enemy.

Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought. Exit.

Cassi. Go Pindarus, get thither on that hill,
My sight was ever thick : regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou not'st about the field.
This day I breath'd first, time is come round,
And where I did begin, there shall I end,
My life is run his compass. Sirra, what newes ?

Pind. Above. O my Lord.

Cassi. VVhat newes ?

Pind. Titinius is enclosed round about
VVith horsemen, that make to him on the Spur,
Yet he spurs on. Now they are almost on him :
Now Titinius, Now some light : O he lights too.
He's tane. Shout.

And hark, they shout for joy.

Cassi. Come down, behold no more :
O Coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend tane before my face !

Enter Pindarus.

Come hither sirrah ; In Parthia did I take thee Prisoner,
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do,
Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath,
Now be a Freeman, and with this good Sword
That ran through Cæsars bowels, search this bosom.
Stand not to answer : Here, take thou the Hilt,
And vvhhen my face is cover'd, as tis now,
Guide thou the Sword—Cæsar thou art reveng'd,
Even vvhith the Sword that kill'd thee. Kills him.

Pin. So, I am free,
Yet vvhould not so have been
Durst I have done my vwill. O Cassius,
Far from this Contry Pindarus shall run,
VVhere never Roman shall take note of him.

Enter Titinius, and Messala.

Messa. It is but change. Titinius : for Octavius
Is overthrow'n by Noble Brutus power,
As Cassius Legions are by Antony.

Titin. These tidings vwill vvell comfort Cassius.

Messa. VVhere did you leave him ?

Titin. All disconsolate,
VVith Pindarus his Bondman, on this hill.

Messa. Is not that he that lies upon the ground ?

Titin. He lies not like the Living. O my heart !

Messa. Is not that he ?

Titin. No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more. O setting Sun :
As in thy red Rayes thou dost sink to night ;

So in his red blood Cassius day it set.
The Son of Rome is set. Our day is gone,
Clouds, Dewes, and Dangers come; our deeds are done:
Mistrust of my successe hath done this deed.

Messa. Mistrust of good successe hath done this deed.
O hatefull Error, Melanchollies Child:
VWhy dost thou shew to the apt thoughts of men
The things that are not? O Error soon conceiv'd,
Thou never com'st unto a happy birth,
But kill'st the Mother that engendred thee.

Tit. VWhat Pindarus? VWhere art thou Pindarus?

Messa. Seek him Titinius: whilst I go to meet
The Noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears; I may say, thrusting it:
For piercing Steel, and Darts invenomed
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus,
As tydings of this fight.

Tit. Hye you Messala,
And I will seek for Pindarus the while:
VWhy didst thou send me forth brave Cassius?
Did I not meet thy friends, and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of Victory,
And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their Alas, thou hast misconstrued every thing. (Howts?)
But hold thee, take this Garland on thy Brow,
Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
VWill do his bidding. Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius:
By your leave gods: This is a Romans part,
Come Cassius Sword, and find Titinius heart. Dyes.

Alarm. Enter Brutus, Messala, young Cato, Sirato, Volumnius, and Lucillius.

Brn. VWhere, where Messala, doth his body lie?

Messa. Loe yonder, and Titinius mourning it.

Brn. Titinius face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Brn. O Julius Cæsar thou art mighty yet,
Thy Spirit walkes abroad, and turns our Swords
In our own proper Entrails. Low Alarums.

Cato. Brave Titinius,

Look where he have not Crownd dead Cassius.

Brn. Are yet two Romans living such as these?

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well:

It is impossible, that ever Rome

Should breed thy fellow: friends I owe moe tears

To this dead man, then you shall see me pay.

I shall find time, Cassius: I shall find time.

Come therefore, and to Thursus send his body,

His funerals shall not be in our Camp,

Least it discomfort us. Lucillius come,

And come young Cato, let us to the field,

Labio and Flavius set our Battails on:

Tis three a clock, and Romans yet ere night,

VVe shall try fortune in a second fight. Exeunt.

Alarm. Enter Brutus, Messala, Cato, Lucillius, and Flavius.

Brn. Yet Countreymen: O yet, hold up your heads.

Cato. VWhat Bastard doth not? who will goe with me?

I will proclaim my name about the field.

I am the Sonne of Marcus Cato, hoe.

A Foe to Tyrants, and my Countreys friend,

I am the Sonne of Marcus Cato, hoe.

Enter Souldiers and fight.

And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I.

Brutus my Countries friend: know me for Brutus.

Luc. O young and Noble Cato, art thou down?

Why now thou dyest, as bravely as Titinius,

And may'st be honour'd being Cato's Son.

Sold. Yield, or thou dyest.

Luc. Onely I yield to die:

There is so much, that thou wilt kill me straight:

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death

Sold. We must not: a Noble Prisoner.

Enter Antony.

2 Sold. Roome hoe: tell Antony, Brutus is tane.

1 Sold. He tell thee news, here comes the General,
Brutus is tane, Brutus is tane my Lord.

Ant. Where is he?

Luc. Safe Antony, Brutus is safe enough:

I dare assure thee, that no enemy

Shall ever take alive the Noble Brutus:

The gods defend him from so great a shame,

When you do find him or alive, or dead,

He will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus friend, but I assure you,

A prize no lesse in worth: keep this man safe,

Give him all kindnesse. I had rather have Such men my friends, then enemies. Go on,

And see where Brutus be alive or dead,

And bring us, unto Octavius Tent,

How every thing is chang'd.

Exeunt.

Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Sirato, and Volumnius.

Brn. Come poor remains of friends, rest on this Rock.

Clit. Statilius shew'd the Torch-light, but my Lord
He came not back, he is or tane, or slain.

Brn. Sit thee down, Clitus: slaying is the word,
It is a deed in fashion. Harke thee, Clitus.

Clit. What I, my Lord? No, not for all the world.

Brn. Peace then, no words.

Clit. He rather kill myself.

Brn. Hark thee, Dardanius

Dard. Shall I do such a deed?

Clit. O Dardanius.

Dard. O Clitus.

Clit. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?

Dard. To kill him, Clitus: look he meditates.

Clit. Now is that Noble Vessel full of grief,
That it runs over even at his eies.

Brn. Come hither, good Volumnius, list a word.

Volum. What saies my Lord?

Brn. Why this, Volumnius:

The Ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me

Two severall times by night: at Sardis, once;

And this last night, here in Philippi-fields:

I know my hour is come.

Volum. Not so, my Lord.

Brn. Nay I am sure it is, Volumnius.

Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes,

Our enemies have beat us to the Pit: Low Alarums.

It is more worthy, to leap in our selves,

Then tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius

Thou knowest that we two went to school together:

Even for that our love of old, I prethee

Hold thou my Swords Hilt, while I run on it.

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my Lord.

Alarm still.

O o o 3

Clit.

Cl. Fly, fly my Lord, there is no tarrying here.

Br. Farewell to you, and you, and you Volumnius.

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep:

Farewell to thee, to Strato, Countreymen:

My heart doth joy, that yet all my life,

I found no man, but he was true to me.

I shall have glory by this losing day

More then Octavius and Mark Antony,

By this vile Conquest shall attain unto.

So fare you well at once, for Brutus tongue

Hath almost ended his lives History:

Night hangs upon mine eyes, my bones would rest,

That have but labour'd, to attain this hour.

Alarum. Crywihiu. Fly, flye, flye.

Cl. Flye my Lord, flye:

Br. Hence: I will follow:

I prethee Strato, stay thou by thy Lord,

Thou art a fellow of a good respect:

Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it.

Hold then my Sword, and turn away thy face,

While I do run upon it. Wilt thou Strato?

Strat. Give me your hand first. Fare you well my Lord.

Br. Farewell good Strato.——Caesar, now be still,

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will. Dies.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter Antony, Octavius, Messala, Lucillius, and the Army.

Octa. What man is that?

Messa. My Masters man. Strato, where is thy Master?

Stra. Free from the bondage you are in Messala,
The Conquerors can but make a fire of him:

For Brutus onely overcame himself,

And no man elie hath honor by his death.

Luci. So Brutus should be found. I thank thee Brutus,
That thou hast prov'd Lucillius saying true.

Octa. All that serv'd Brutus I will entertain them,
Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Stra. I, if Messala will preferre me to you.

Octa. Do so, good Messala.

Messa. How dyed my Lord, Strato?

Stra. I held the Sword, and he did run on it.

Messa. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my Master.

Ant. This was the Noblest Roman of them all:

All the Conspirators save onely he,

Did that they did, in envy of great Caesar:

He, onely in a general honest thought,

And common good to all, made ore of them.

His life was gentle, and the Elements

So mixt in him, that Mature might stand up,

And say to all the world; This was a man.

Octa. According to his Vertue, let us use him

With all respect, and rites of Burial.

Within my Tent his bones to night shall lye,

Most like a Souldier ordered honorably:

So call the field to rest, and let's away,

To part the glories of this happy day.

Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDY OF MACBETH.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter three Witches.

When shall we three meet again?
In Thunder, Lightning, or in Rain?
2 When the Hurly-burly's done,
When the Battel's lost and won.
3 That will be ere the set of Sun.

- 1 Where the place?
- 2 Upon the Heath.
- 3 There to meet with Macbeth.

1 I come, Gray-Malkin.

*All. Paddocke calls anon: fair is foul, and foul is fair,
Hover through the fog and filthy air.* Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Alarm within. Enter King, Malcolm, Donalbaine, Lenox, with attendants, meeting a bleeding Captain.

King. What bloody man is that? he can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.

Mal. This is the Serjeant,
Who like a good and hardy Souldier fought
Gainst my Captivity: Hail, hail brave friend;
Say to the King, the knowledge of the broyl,
As thou didst leave it.

Cap. Doubtful it stood,
As two spent Swimmers, that do cling together,
And choke their Art: The merciless Macdonnell
(V Vorthy to be a Rebel, for to that
The multiplying Villaines of Nature
Do swarm upon him) from the western Isles
Of Kernes and Gallow glasses is supply'd,
And Fortune on his dammed Quarry smiling,
Shew'd like a Rebels whore: but all's too weak:
For brave Macbeth (well he deserves that name)
Disdaining Fortune, with his brandisht Steel,
V Which smoak'd with bloody execution
(Like Valours Minion) cutt'd out his passage,
Till he fac'd the Slave:
V Which nev'r shook hands, nor bad farewell to him,
Till he unseam'd him from the Nave to th' Chops,
And fix'd his head upon our Battlements.

King. O valiant Cousin, worthy Gentleman.

Cap. As whence the Sun gins his reflection,
Shipwracking Stormes, and direful Thunders breaking
So from that Spring, whence comfort seem'd to come,
Discomfort swells: Mark King of Scotland, mark,
No sooner justice had, with Valour arm'd,
Compell'd these skipping Kernes to trust their heeles,
But the Norweyan Lord, surveying vantage,
V With farushst Armes, and new supplies of men,
Began a fresh assault.

King. Dismaid not this our Captaines, Macbeth and Banquo?

Cap. Yes, as Sparrowes Eagles;
Or the Hare, the Lyon.

If I say sooth, I must report they were
As Cannons overcharg'd with double Crackes
So they doubly redoubled stroaks on the Foe:
Except they meant to bath in reeking V Vounds,
Or memor zeianother Golgotha,
I cannot tell: but I am faint,
My Gashes cry for help.

King. So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds
They smack of Honour both: Go get him Surgeons.

Enter Ross and Angus.

V Vho comes here?

Mal. The worthy Thane of Rosse.

Lenox. V Vhat hast lookes through his eyes?
So should he look, that seemes to speak things strange.

Rosse. God save the King.

King. V Vhence cam'st thou, worthy Thane?

Rosse. From Fife, great King.

V Vhere the Norweyan Banners flout the Sky,
And fan our people cold.
Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal Traynor,
The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismal Conflict,
Till that Bellona's Bridegroom, lapt in proof
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against Point, rebellious arm gainst arm,
Curbing his lavish spirit: and to conclude,
The Victory fell on us.

King. Great happiness.

Rosse. That now Sveno, the Norwayes King,
Craves composition:
Nor would we deign him burial of his men,
Till he disbursed, at Saint Colmer-hill,
Ten thousand Dollars, to our general use.

King.

King. No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive
Our bosom interest : Go pronounce his present death,
And with his former Title great Macbeth.

Rosse. He see it done.

King. What he hath lost, noble Macbeth hath won.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Where hast thou been, Sister ?
2 Killing Swine.
3 Sister, where thou ?
1 A Saylor's wife had Chestnuts in her Lap,
And mouncht, and mouncht, and mouncht :
Give me, quoth I.
Anoynt thee, Witch, the Rump-fed Ronyon cries.
Her husband's to Aleppo gone, Master oth' Tiger :
But in a Syve Ile thither sayle,
And like a Rat without a tayl,
Ile do, Ile do, and Ile do.
2 Ile give thee a wind.
1 Th'art kind.
3 And I another.
1 I my self have all the other,
And the very Ports they blow,
All the quarters that they know.
Ith' Shipmans Card.
I'll drain him dry as Hay :
Sleep shall neither night nor day
Hang upon his Pent-house Lid :
He shall live a man forbid :
Weary Seu'nights, nine times nine,
Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine :
Though his Bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be Tempest-toft.
Look what I have.
2 Shew me, shew me.
1 Here I have a Pilots Thumb,
Wrackt, as homeward he did come.
3 A Drum, a Drum :
Macbeth doth come.

Drums within.

All. The weyward Sisters, hand in hand,
Posters of the Sea and Land.
Thus dogo, about, about,
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice again, to make up nine.
Peace, the Charm's wound up.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.

Banq. How far is't call'd to Soris ? What are these,
So wither'd, and so wild in their attire,
That look not like th'inhabitants oth' Earth,
And yet are on't ? Live you, or are you aught
That man may question ? you seem to understand me,
By each at once her choppy finger laying
Upon her skinny Lips : you should be Women,
And yet your Beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.

Mac. Speak if you can : what are you ?

1 All hail Macbeth, hail to thee Thane of Glamis.

2 All hail Macbeth, hail to thee Thane of Cawdor.

3 All hail Macbeth, that shalt be King hereafter.

Banq. Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear
Things that do sound so fair ? i'ch name of truth
Are ye fantastical, or that indeed
Which outwardly ye shew ? Ny Noble Partner
You greet with present Grace, and great prediction
Of Noble having, and of Royal hope,
That he seems wrapt withal ; to me you speak not.
If you can look into the Seeds of Time,
And say, which Grain will grow, and which will nor,
Speak then to me, who neither beg, nor fear
Your favours, nor your hate.

1 Hayl.

2 Hayl.

3 Hayl.

1 Lesser then Macbeth, and greater.

2 Not so happy, yet much happier.

3 Thou shalt get Kings, though thou be none :
So all hail Macbeth, and Banquo.

1 Banquo, and Macbeth, all hail.

Macb. Stay you imperfect Speakers, tell me more :
By Sinels death, I know I am Thane of Glamis,
But how of Cawdor ? the Thane of Cawdor lives
A prosperous Gentleman : And to be King,
Stands not within the prospect of belief,
No more then to be Cawdor. Say from whence
You owe this strange intelligence, or why
Upon this blasted heath you stop our way
With such Propherique greeting ?
Speak, I charge you. Witches vanish.

Banq. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
And these are of them : whither are they vanish'd ?

Macb. Into the Ayr : and what seem'd corporal,
Melted, as breath into the wind.
Would they had staid.

Banq. Were such things here, as we do speak about ?
Or have we eaten on the insane Roor,
That takes the Reason Prisoner ?

Macb. Your Children shall be Kings.

Banq. You shall be King.

Macb. And Thane of Cawdor too : went it not so ?

Banq. Toth' self-same tune, and words : who's here ?

Enter Rosse, and Angus.

Ross. The King hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,
The news of thy success : and when he reads
Thy personal Venture in the Rebels fight,
His wonders and his Praises do contend,
Which should be thine, or his : silenc'd with thar,
In viewing o're the rest o'th' self-same day,
He finds thee in the stout Norweyan Ranks,
Nothing afraid of what thy self didst make
Strange Images of death, as thick as tale
Can post with post, and every one did bear
Thy praises in his Kingdoms great defence,
And pow'r'd them down before him.

Ang. VVe are sent,
To give thee from our Royal Master thanks,
Only to herra'd thee into his fight,
Not pay thee,

Ross. And for an earnest of a greater honour,
He bad me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor :

In which addition hail most worthy Thane,
For it is thine.

Banq. What can the Devil speak true?

Macb. The Thane of Cawdor lives:
Why do you dresse me in his borrowed Robes?

Aug. Who was the Thane, lives yet,
But under heavy judgement bears that life,
Which he deserves to loose:
Whether he was combin'd with those of Norway
Or else did line the Rebel with hidden help,
And vantage; or that with both he labour'd
In his Countreys wrack, I know not:
But Treasons Capital, confess'd, and prov'd,
Have overthrow'n him.

Macb. Glamis, and Thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behind. Thanks for your pains.
Do you not hope your Children shall be Kings,
When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to me,
Promis'd no lesse to them.

Banq. That trusted home,
Might yet enkindle you unto the Crown,
Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But tis strange:
And oftentimes, to winne us to our harme,
The instruments of Darknesse tell us Truths,
Winne us with honest trifles, to betray's
In deepest consequence.

Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. Two truths are told,
As happy Prologues to the swelling Aet
Of the imperial Theam. I thank you Gentlemen:
This supernatural soliciting
Cannot be ill; cannot be good.

If ill? why hath it given me earnest of sucresse,
Commencing in a Truth? I am Thane of Cawdor.
If good? why do I yield to that suggestion,
Whose horrid Image doth unfix my heire,
And make my feared heart knock at my Ribbs,
Against the use of nature? present fears
Are lesse then horrible imaginings:
My thought, whose Murther yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man,
That function is smother'd in surmise,
And nothing is, but what is nor.

Banq. Look how our Partners rapr.

Macb. If chance will have me King,
Why Chance may Crown me.
Without my stirre.

Banq. New honors come upon him
Like our strange Garments, cleave not to their mould,
But with the aid of use.

Macb. Come what come may,
Time, and the hour, runs through the roughest day.

Banq. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

Macb. Give me your favour:
My dull brain was wrought with things forgotten.
Kind Gentlemen, your pains are registred,
Where every day I turn the Leaf,
To read them.

Let us toward the King; think upon
What hath chanc'd: and at more time,
The Interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.

Banq. Very gladly.

Macb. Till then enough:
Come friends.

Scena Quarta.

Flourish. Enter King, Lenox, Malcolm,
Donalbain, and Attendants.

King. Is execution done on Cawdor?
Are not those in Commission yet return'd?

Mal. My Liege, they are not yet come back.
But I have spoke with one that saw him die:
Who did report, that very frankly he
Confess'd his Treasons, implor'd your Highnesse pardon
And set forth a deep Repentance:
Notbing in his life became him,
Like the leaving it. He dy'd,
As one that had been studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
As twere a carelesse trifle.

King. There's no Art,
To find the minds construction in the face:
He was a Gentleman, on whom I built
An absolute Trust.

Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Ross, and Angus.
O worthyest Cousin,
The sinne of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me: Thou art so farre before,
That swiftest Wine of Recompence is slow:
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst lesse deserv'd,
That the proportion both of thanks, and payment,
Might have been mine: onely I have left to say,
More is thy due, then more then all can pay.

Macb. The service, and the loyalty I owe;
In doing it paises it self
Your Highnesse part, is to receive our Duties:
And our Duties are to your Throne and State.
Children, and Servants; which do but what they should
By doing every thing safe toward your love
And honor.

King. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo
That hast no lesse deserv'd, nor must be known
No lesse to have done so: Let me enfold thee,
And hold thee to my heart.

Banq. There if I grow,
The Harvest is your own.

King. My plentious joyes,
Wanton in fulnesse, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow. Sons, Kinsman, Thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
VVe will establish our Estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter,
The Prince of Cumberland: which honor must
Not unaccompanied, invest him only.
But signes of Noblenesse, like Starrs shall shine
On all deservers. From hence to Envernes
And bind us further to you.

Ma. The Rest is labour, which is not us'd for you:
He be my self the Herbeneger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife, with your approach:
So humbly take my leave.

King. My worthy Cawdor.

Macb. The Prince of Cumberland: that is a step,
On which I must fall down, or else o're leap,

Exeunt.

For

For in my way it lies. Starrs hide your fires,
Let not light see my black and deep desires:
The eye wink at the hand: yet let that be,
Which the eie fears, when it is done to see. Exit.

King. True, worthy Banquo: he is full so valiant,
And in his commendations, I am fed:
It is a Banquet to me, Lets after him,
Whose care is gone before, to bid us welcome:
It is a peerlesse kinsman. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Macbeths wife alone with a Letter.

Lady. They met me in the day of success: and I have learn'd by the perfect'st report, they have more in them, then mortal knowledge. When I burnt in desire to question them further, they made themselves Air. into which they vanish'd. Whiles
I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came Missives from the King, who all hail'd me Thane of Cawdor, by which Title before, these weyward Sisters saluted me, and referr'd me to the coming on of times, with hail King that shalt be. This have I thought good to deliver thee (my dearest partner of greatness) that thou might'st not lose the dues of rejoicing by being ignorant of what Greatnesse is promis'd thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor, and shalt be
What thou art promis'd: yet do I fear thy Nature,
It is too full o' th' Milk of humane kindnesse,
To catch the neereft way. Thou wouldst be great,
Art not without ambition: but without
The illnesse should attend it. What thou wouldst highly,
That wouldst thou holily: wouldst not play false,
And yet wouldst wrongly winne.
Thouldst have, great Glamis, that which cries,
Thus thou must do if thou have it;
And that which rather thou dost fear to do,
Then wishest should be undone. High thee hither,
That I may powre my Spirits in thine ear,
And chasteise with the valour of my tongue
All that thee hinders from the Golden Round,
Which Fate and Metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd withall. Enter Messenger.

What is your tidings?

Mess. The King comes here to night,

Lady. Thou'rt mad to say it.

Is not thy Master with him? who, wert so,
Would have inform'd for preparation.

Mess. So please you, it is true: our Thane is coming
One of my fellows had the speed of him;
Who almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Then would make up his Message.

Lady. Give him tending,

He brings great news.

Exit Messenger.

The Raven himself is hoarse,
That croakes the farall entrance of Duncane
Under my Battlements. Come you Spirits,
That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here,
And fill me from the Crown to the Toe, top-full
Of direst Cruelty: make thicke my blood,
Stop up th'accesse and passage to Remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of Nature

Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between Th'effect, and it. Come to my Womans Brests,
And take my Milk for Gall, you Murth'ring Ministers,
VWhere-ever in your sightlesse substances,
You wait on Natures Mischief. Come thick Nighr,
And pall thee in the dunnest smoak of hell,
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes,
Nor heaven peep through the Blanket of the dark,
To cry, hold, hold. Enter Macbeth.

Great Glamis, worthy Cawdor,
Greater then both, by the all-hail hereafter,
Thy Letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest Love,

Duncane comes here to nighr.

Lady. And when goes hence?

Macb. To morrow, as he purposes.

Lady. O never,

Shall Sunne that morrow see.

Your Face, my Thane is as a book, where men
May read strange matters to beguile the time.
Look like the time, bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower,
But be the Serpent under't. He that's coming,
Must be provided for: and you shall put
This Nights great businesse into my dispatch,
VWhich shall to all our Nights and Daies to come,
Give solely Sovereign sway and Masterdom.

Macb. VVe will speak further.

Lady. Onely look up cleer:

To alter favour ever is to fear:

Leave all the rest to me. Exeunt

Scena Sexta.

Hoboyes, and Torches. Enter King, Malcolm, Donalbrin, Banquo, Lenox, Macduffe, Rosse, Angus, and Attendants.

King. This Castle hath a pleasant fear,
The air nimbly and sweetly recommends it self
Unto our gentle senses.

Banq. This Guest of Summer,
The Temple-haunting Barlet does approve,
By his loved Mansourey, that the Heavens breath,
Smells wooingly here: no Jutty frieze,
Buttrice, nor Coigne of Vantage, but this Bird
Hath made his pendant bed, and procreant Cradle,
VWhere they must breed, and haunt: I have observ'd
The air is delicate, Enter Lady.

King. See, see, our honor'd Hostesse:
The love that follows us, sometime is our trouble,
VWhich still we thank as Love. Herein I teach you,
How you shall bid god-eyld us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady. All our service,
In every point twice done, and then done double,
VWere poor, and single Businesse, to contend
Against those honors deep, and broad,
VWherewith your Majesty loads our house:
For those of old, and the late Dignities,
Heap'd up to them, we rest your Hermits.

King.

King. Where's the Thane of Cawdor?
 VVe courtst him at the heeles, and had a purpose
 To be his Purveyor: But he rides vvell,
 And his great Love (sharp as his Spur) hath holp him
 To his home before us: Fair and Noble Hostes
 VVe are your guest to night.

Lady. Your Servants ever,
 Have theirs, themselves, and vvhhat is theirs in compt,
 To make their Audit at your highness pleasure,
 Still to return your ovvn.

King. Give me your hand:
 Conduct me to mine Host, vve love him highly,
 And shall continue, our Graces towards him.
 By your leave Hostes. Exeunt.

Scena Septima.

Ho boyes. Torches.
Enter a Sewer, and divers Servants with Dishes and Service over the Stage. Then enter Macbeth.

Macb. If it vvhere done, vvhen tis done, then 'vvhere vvell,
 It were done quickly: if the Assassination
 Could trammel up the Consequence, and catch
 With his surcease, Success: that but this blow
 Might be the be all, and the end all. Here,
 But here, upon this Bank and School of time,
 We'd jump the life to come. But in these Cases,
 We still have judgment here, that we but teach
 Bloody instructions, which being taught, return
 To plague th'ingredience of our poylon'd Challice
 To our own lips. He's here in double trust;
 First, as I am his Kinsman, and his Subject,
 Strong both against the Deed: then, as his Host,
 Who should against his Murderer shut the door,
 Not bear the knife my self. Besides this Duncan
 Hath born this Faculty so meek: hath been
 So clear in his great Office, that his Vertues
 Will plead like Angels, Trumper-congu'd against
 The deep damnation of his taking off:
 And Pity, like a naked new-born-babe,
 Striding the blast, or heavens Cherubin, hors'd
 Upon the sightless Curriers of the Ay,
 Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
 That tears shall drown the wind. I have no Spur
 To prick the sides of my intent, but only
 Vaulting Ambition, which ore-leapes it self,
 And falls on th'other. Enter Lady.
 How now? What Newes?

La. He has almost sup: why have you left the chamber?

Mac. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady. Know you not, he has?

Mac. We will proceed no further in this Business:
 He hath honour'd me of late, and I have bought
 Golden Opinions from all sorts of people,
 Which would be worn now in their newest glos,
 Not cast aside so soon.

Lady. Was the hope drunk,
 Wherein you dress'd your self? hath it slept since?
 And wakes it now to look so green and pale?
 At what it did so freely? From this time,
 Such I account thy love. Art thou affear'd
 To be the same in thine own Aft, and Valour,
 As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that

Which thou esteem'st the Ornament of Life,
 And live a Coward in thine own esteem?
 Letting I dare not, wait upon I would,
 Like the poor Cat i'th'Addage.

Macb. Prethee peace:

I dare do all that may become a man,
 Who dares no more, is none.

Lady. What beast wast thou then
 That made you break this Enterprize to me?
 When you durst do it, then you were a man:
 And to be more then what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor place
 Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
 They have made themselves, and that their fitness now
 Do's unmake you. I have given Suck, and know
 How tender 'tis to love the Babe that milkes me,
 I would, while it was smiling in my face,
 Have pluckt my Nipple from his boneless Gummes,
 And dasht the Braines out, had I but so sworn
 As you have doneto this.

Macb. If we should fail?

Lady. We fail?

But screw your courage to the sticking place,
 And we'll not fail: when Duncan is asleep,
 (Where to the rather shall his daies hard Journey Soundly invite him) his two Chamberlaines
 Will I with wine, and wassel, so convince,
 That Memory, the warder of the Brain,
 Shall be a Fume, and the Receit of Reason
 A Lymbeck only, when in Svinish sleep,
 Their drenched Natures lie as in a Death,
 What cannot you and I perform upon Th'unguarded Duncan? What not put upon
 His spongy Officers? who shall bear the guilt
 Of our great quell.

Macb. Bring forth Men-Children only:
 For thy undaunted Mettle should compose
 Nothing but Males. VVill it not be receiv'd,
 VVhen we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two
 Of his own Chamber, and us'd their very Diggers,
 That they have don't?

Lady. VVho dares receive it other,
 As we shall make our Griefes and Clamor rore,
 Upon his Death?

Macb. I am secl'd, and bend up
 Each corporal Agent to this terrible Fear,
 Away, and mock the time with fairest show,
 False Face must hide what the false heart doth know.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Banquo, and Fleance, with a Torch before him.

Banq. How goes the Night, Boy?

Fleance. The Moon is down: I have not heard the Clock.

Banq. And she goes down at Twelve,

Fleanc. I tak't, 'tis later, Sir.

Banq. Hold, take my Svword:
 There's Husbandry in Heaven,
 Their Candles are all out: take thee that too.

See, and then speak your selves : awake, awake,

Exeunt Macbeth and Lenox.

Ring the Alarm-Bell : Murder, and Treason,
Banquo, and Donalbaine : Malcolme awake,
Shake off this Downy sleep, Death's counterfeit,
And look on Death it self : up, up, and see
The great Doom's Image . Malcolme, Banquo,
As from your Graves rise up, and walk like Sprights,
To countenance this horror. Ring the Bell.

Bell rings. Enter Lady.

Lady. What's the business?

That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the House ? speak, speak.

Macd. O gentle Lady,
'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak :
The repetition in a Woman's ear,
Would murder as it fell.

Enter Banquo.

O Banquo, Banquo, Our Royal Matter's murder'd.

Lady. VVoe, alas :
What, in our house ?

Ban. Too cruel, any where.
Dear Duff, I prythee contract thy self,
And say, it is not so.

Enter Macbeth, Lenox, and Ross.

Macb. Had I but dy'd an hour before this chance,
I had liv'd a blessed time : for from this instant,
There's nothing serious in Mortality :
All is but toys : Renown and Grace is dead,
The Wine of Life is drawn, and the mere Lees
Is left this Vault to brag of.

Enter Malcolme, and Donalbaine.

Donal. What is amiss ?

Macb. You are, and do not know't :
The Spring, the Head, the Fountain of your Bloud
Is stop't ; the very Source of it is stop't.

Macd. Your Royal Father's murder'd.

Mal. Oh, by whom ?

Lenox. Those of his Chamber, as it seem'd, had don't :
Their Hands and Faces were all badg'd with bloud,
So were their Daggers, which unwip'd, we found
Upon their Pillows : they star'd, and were distracted,
No man's life was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury,
That I did kill them.

Macd. VVherefore did you so ?

Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temp'rate, & furious,
Loyal, and Neutral, in a moment ? No man :
Th'expedition of my violent Love
Out-run the pauser, Reason. Here lay Duncan,
His silver skin, lac'd with his Golden Bloud,
And his gash'd Stabs, look'd like a Breach in Nature,
For Ruines wastfull entrance : there the Murderers,
Steep'd in the Colours of their Trade ; their Daggers
Unmannerly breech'd with gore : who could refrain,
That had a heart to love, and in that heart,
Courage, to make's love known ?

Lady. Help me hence, ho.

Macd. Look to the Lady.

Mal. Why do we hold our tongues,
That most may claim this argument for ours ?

Donal. What should be spoken here,

VVhere our Fate hid within an awger-hole,
May rush, and seize us ? Let's away,
Our tears are not yet brew'd.

Mal. Nor our strong Sorrow
Upon the foot of Motion,

Banq. Look to the Lady :
And when we have our naked Frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure ; let us meet,
And question this most bloody piece of work,
To know it further. Feares and scruples shake us :
In the great Hand of God I stand, and thence,
Against the un-divulg'd pretence I fight
Of treasonous Malice.

Macd. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readines,
And meet i'th' Hall together.

All. Well contented. Exeunt.

Malc. VVhat will you do ?
Let's not consort with them :
To shew an unfelt Sorrow, is an Office
Which the false man do's easie.

It's to England.

Don. To Ireland, I :

Our separated fortune shall keep us both the safer :
Where we are, there's Daggers in mens Smiles ;
The near in bloud, the nearer bloody.

Malc. This murderous shaft that's shot,
Hath not yet lighted : and our safest way,
Is to avoid the aime. Therefore to house,
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
But shift away : there's warrant in that Theft
VVhich steals it self, when there's no mercy left.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Ross, with an Old man.

Old man. Threescore and ten I can remember well,
VVithin the volume of which time, I have seen
Houres dreadfull, and things strange : but this fore Night
Hath trifled former knowings.

Rosse. Ha, good Father,
Thou seest the heavens, as troubled with man's Act,
Threatens his bloody Stage : by th'Clock 'tis Day,
And yet dark Night strangles the travelling Lamp :
Is't Night's predominance, or the Day's shame,
That Darknes do's the face of Earth intombe,
VVhen living Light should kiss it ?

Old man. 'Tis unnatural,
Even like the deed that's done : on Tuesday last,
A Faulcon trowing in her pride of place,
VVas by a Mowling Owle hawk'd at, and kill'd.

Rosse. And Duncan's horses,
(A thing most strange, and certain)
Beauteous, and swift, the Minions of their Race,
Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung out,
Contending 'gainst Obedience, as they would Make war with Mankind.

Old man. 'Tis said, they eat each other.

Rosse. They did so :

To th'amazement of mine eyes that look'd upon't.

Enter Macduff.

Here comes the good Macduff.

How goes the world Sir, now?

Macd. VVhy see you not?

Rosse. Is't known who did this more then bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.

Rosse. Alas the day,

What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were suborned,

Malcolm, and Donalbain the King's two Sonnes
Are stolne away and fled, which puts upon them
Suspicion of the deed.

Rosse. 'Gainst Nature still,
Thriftless Ambition, that will raven upon
Thine own lives means: then 'tis most like,
The Sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone
To be invested.

Rosse. Where is Duncan's body?

Macd. Carried to Colmekill,

The Sacred Store-house of his Predecessors,
And Guardian of their Bones.

Rosse. Will you to Scone?

Macd. No Cousin, I'll to Fife.

Rosse. Well, I will thither.

Macd. Well may you see things well done there: Adieu.
Lest our old Robes sit easier then our new.

Rosse. Farewell, Father.

Old. M. God's benison go with you Sir, and with those
That would make good of bad, and Friends of Foes.

Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Banquo.

Banq. Thou hast it now, King, Cawdor, Glamis, all,
As the weyward Woman promis'd, and I fear
Thou play'd'st most foulely for't: yet it was said
It should not stand in thy Posterity,
But that my self should be the Root, and Father
Of many Kings. If there come truth from them,
As upon thee Macbeth, their Speeches shine,
Why by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my Oracles as well,
And set me up in hope. But hush, no more.

Senit sounded. Enter Macbeth as King, Lady Lenox, Rosse, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief Guest.

La. If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great Feast,
And all things unbecoming.

Macb. To night we hold a solemn Supper, sir,
And I'll request your presence.

Banq. Let your Highness
Command upon me, to the which my duties
Are with a most indissoluble tye
For ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?

Banq. I, my good Lord.

Macb. We should have else desir'd your good advice

(Which still hath been both grave, and prosperous)
In this dayes Councel: but we'll take to morrow.
Is't far you ride?

Banq. As far, my Lord, as will fill up the time
'Twixt this, and Supper. Go not my Horse the better,
I must become a borrower of the Night,
For a dark hour or twain.

Macb. Fail not our Feast.

Ban. My Lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear our bloody Cousins are bestow'd
In England, and in Ireland, not confessing
Their cruel Parricide, filling their hearers
With strange invention. But of that to morrow,
When therewithall we shall have cause of State,
Craving us jointly. Hye you to horse:
Adieu, till you return at Night.

Goes Fleance with you?

Ban. I, my good Lord: our time does call upon's.

Macb. I wish your Horses swift, and sure of foot:
And so do I commend you to their backs.
Farewell.

Exit Banquo.

Let every man be master of his time,
'Till seven at Night, to make society
The sweeter welcome:

We will keep our self till Supper time alone:

While then, God be with you.

Exeunt Lords.

Sirra, a word with you: Attend those men
Our pleasure?

Servant. They are, my Lord, without the Pallace Gate.

Macb. Bring them before us. Exit Servant.

To be thus, is nothing, but to be safely thus:

Our feares in Banquo stick deep,
And in his Royalty of Nature reigns that
Which would be fear'd. 'Tis much he dares,
And to that dauntless temper of his Mind,
He hath a Wisdome, that doth guide his Valour,
To act in safety. There is none but he,
Whose being I do fear: and under him,
My Genius is rebuk'd, as it is said
Mark Anthony's was by Caesar, He chid the Sisters,
When first they put the Name of King upon me
And bad them speak to him. Then Prophet-like,
They hayl'd him Father to a Line of Kings.
Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless Crown,
And put a barren Scepter in my Gripe,
Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal Hand,
No Son of mine succeeding: if't be so,
For Banquo's Issue have I fill'd my Mind,
For them, the gracious Duncan have I murder'd,
Put Rancours in the Vessel of my Peace
Only for them, and mine eternal Jewel
Given to the common Enemy of Man,
To make them Kings, the Seeds of Banquo Kings:
Rather then so, come Fate into the List,
And champion me to th'utterance.
Who's there?

Enter Servant, and two Murderers.

Now go to the Door, and stay there 'till we call.

Exit Servant.

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

Murth. It was, so please your Highness.

Macb. Well then,

Now you have consider'd of my speeches?

Know, that it was he, in the times past,
Which held you so under fortune,
Which you thought had been our innocent self,
This I made good to you, in our last conference,
Past in probation with you:
How you were born in hand, how crost:
The Instruments: who wrought with them!
And all things else, that might
To half a Soul, and to a Notion craz'd,
Say, thus did Banquo.

1. Murth. You made it known to us.

Macb. I did so:

And went further, which is now
Our point of second meeting.
Do you find your patience so predominant
In your nature, that you can let this go?
Are you so Gossip'd to pray for this good man,
And for his Issue, whose heavy hand
Hath bow'd you to the Grave, and begger'd
Yours for ever?

1. Murth. We are men, my Liege.

Macb. I, in the Catalogue ye go for men,
As Hounds, and Greyhounds, Mungrels, Spaniels, Currs,
Showghes, Water-Rugs, and Demy-Wolves are clipt
All by the Name of Doggs: the valued file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The House-keeper, the Hunter, every one
According to the gift, which bounteous Nature
Hath in him clos'd: whereby he does receive
Particular addition, from the Bill,
That writes them all alike: and so of men.
Now, if you have a station in the file,
Not l'th'worst rank of Manhood, say't,
And I will put the business in your Bosomes,
Whose execution takes your Enemy off,
Grapples you to the heart; and love of us,
Who wear our Health but sickly in his Life,
Which in his Death were perfect.

2. Murth. I am one my Liege,
Whom the vile Blowes and Biffets of the world
Hath so incens'd that I am reckless what I doe,
To spight the World.

1. Murth. And I another,
So weary with Disasters, tugg'd with Fortune,
That I would set my Life on any Chance,
To mend it or be rid on't.

Macb. Both of you know Banquo was your Enemy.

Murth. True, my Lord.

Macb. So is he mine: and in such bloody distance,
That every minute of his being, thrusts
Against my near't of Life: and though I could
With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight,
And bid my will avouch it; yet I must not,
For certain friends that are both his, and mine,
Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall,
Who I my self struck down: and thence it is,
That I to your assistance do make love,
Masking the business from the common Eye,
For sundry weighty Reasons.

2. Murth. We shall, my Lord,
Perform what you command us.

1. Murth. Though our Lives -----

Macb. Your Spirits shine through you.
Within this hour, at most,
I will advise you where to plant your selves,
Acquaint you with the perfect Spy o'th'time,

The moment on't, for't must be done to Night,
And something from the Palace: alwayes thought,
That I require a clearness; and with him,
To leave no Rubs nor Botches in the VVork:
Fleans, his Son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me,
Then is his Fathers, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour: resolve your selves a-parr,
I'll come to you anon.

Murth. VVe are resolv'd, my Lord.

Macb. I'll call upon you straight: abide within,
It is concluded: Banquo, thy Soule's flight,
If it find Heaven, must find it out to Night.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Macbeth's Lady, and a Servant.

Lady. Is Banquo gone from Court?

Servant. I, Madam, but returns again to Night.

Lady. Say to the King, I would attend his leisure,
For a few words.

Servant. Madam, I will.

Exit.

Lady. Nought's had, all's spent,
VWhere our desire is got without content:
'Tis safer, to be that which we destroy,
Then by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my Lord, why do you keep alone?
Of sorryest Fancies your Companions making,
Using those Thoughts, which should indeed have dy'd
VWith them they think on: things without all remedie
Should be without regard: what's done, is done.

Macb. We have scorch'd the Snake, not kill'd it:
She'll close, and be her self, whilst our poor Malice
Remains in danger of her former Tooth.
But let the frame of things dis-joynt,

Both the Worlds suffer,
E're we will eat our Meal in fear, and sleep
In the affliction of these terrible Dreames,
That shake us Nightly: Better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gain our place, have sent to peace:
Then on the torture of the Mind to lie
In restless extasie:

Duncan is in his Grave:

After Life's fitfull Fever, he sleeps well,
Treason has done his worst: nor Steel nor Poison
Malice domestick, foreign Levie, nothing
Can touch him further.

Lady. Come on:

Gentle my Lord, sleek o're your rugged Looks,
Be bright and Jovial'mong your Guests to Night.

Macb. So shall I, Love, and so I pray be you:
Let your remembrance still apply to Banquo,
Present him Eminence, both with Eye and Tongue:
Unsafe the while, that we must lave
Our Honours in these flattering streames,
And make our Faces Vizards to our Hearts,
Disguising what they are.

Lady. You must leave this.

Macb. O, full of Scorpions is my Mind, dear Wife:
Thou know'st, that Banquo and his Fleans lives.

Lady. But

Lady. But in them, Nature's Coppie's not eterne.

Macb. There's comfort yet, they are assailable,
Then be thou jocund: e're the Bat hath flown
His Cloyster'd flight, e're to black Hecar's summons
The shard-born Beetle, with his drowsie hums,
Hath rung Night's yawning Peale,
There shall be done a deed of dreadfull note.

Lady. What's to be done?

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest Chuck,
'Till thou applaud the deed: Come, feeling Night,
Skarf up the tender Eye of pittifull Day,
And with thy bloody and invisible Hand
Cancell and tear to pieces that great Bond,
Which keeps me pale. Light thickens,
And the Crow makes wing to th'Rookie Wood:
Good things of Day begin to droop, and drowze,
Whiles Night's black Agents to their Preys do rowze.
Thou marvell'st at my words: but hold thee still:
Things bad begun, make strong themselves by ill:
So prythee go with me. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter three Murtherers.

1. But who did bid thee joyn with us?

3. Macbeth.

2. He needs not our mistrust, since he delivers
Our Offices, and what we have to doe,
To the direction just.

1. Then stand with us.

The west yet glimmers with some streaks of Day.
Now spurs the latest traveller apace,
To gain the timely Inn, and near approaches
The subject of our Watch.

3. Hark, I hear Horses.

Banquo within. Give us a Light there, ho.

2. Then 'tis he:

The rest, that are within the note of expectation,
Already are i'th'Court.

1. His Horses go about.

3. Almost a mile: but he does usually,
So all men do, from hence to th'Palace Gate
Make it their walk.

Enter Banquo and Fleans, with a Torch.

2. A Light, a Light.

3. 'Tis he.

1. Stand to't.

Ban. It will be Rain to Night.

1. Let it come down.

Ban. O, Treachery!

Flie good Fleans, flie, flie, flie,
Thou may'st revenge. O Slave!

3. Who did strike out the Light?

1. Was't not the way?

3. There's but one down: the Son is fled.

2. VVe have lost

Best half of our Affair.

1. Well, let's away, and say how much is done.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Banquet prepar'd. Enter Macbeth, Lady, Rosse, Lenox, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees, sit down:
At first and last, the hearty welcome.

Lords. Thanks to your Majesty.

Macb. Our self will mingle with Society,
And play the humble Host:
Our Hostess keeps her State, but in the best time
We will require her welcome.

Lady. Pronounce it for me, Sir, to all our Friends,
For my heart speaks, they are welcome.

Enter first Murtherer.

Macb. See they encounter thee with their hearts thanks
Both sides are even: here I'll sit i'th'mid'st,
Be large in Mirth, anon we'll drink a Measure
The table round. There's blood upon thy face.

Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.

Macb. 'Tis better thee without, then he within.
Is he dispatch'd?

Mur. My Lord his throat is cut, that I did for him.

Macb. Thou art the best o'th'Cut-throats,
Yet he's good that did the like for Fleans:
If thou did'st it, thou art the Non-pareil.

Mur. Most Royal Sir

Fleans is scap'd,

Macb. Then comes my Fit again:
I had else been perfect;

Whole as the Marble, founded as the Rock,
As broad, and general, as the casing Air:
But now I am cabin'd, crib'd, confin'd, bound in
To sawcy doubts, and feares. But Banquo's safe?

Mur. I, my good Lord: safe in a ditch he bides,
With twenty trenched gashes on his head;
The least a Death to Nature.

Macb. Thanks for that,
There the grown Serpent lies, the worm that's fled
Hath Nature, that in time will Venom breed,
No teeth for th'present. Get thee gone, to morrow
Well hear our selves again. Exit Murtherer.

Lady. My Royal Lord,
You do not give the Cheer, the Feast is sold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis making:
'Tis given with welcome: to feed were best at home:
From thence, the sawce to meat is Ceremony,
Meeting were bare without it

Enter the Ghost of Banquo, and sits in Macbeth's place.

Macb. Sweet Remembrancer:
Now good digestion wait on Appetite,
And health on both.

Lenox. May't please your Highness sit.

Macb. Here had we now our Countrie's Honour, roof'd,
VVe're the grac'd person of our Banquo present:
VWho may I rather challenge for unkindness,
Then pitie for Mischance.

Rosse. His absence (Sir)
Layes blame upon his promise. Pleas't your Highness
To grace us with your Royal Company?

Macb. The table's full.

Lenox. Here is a place reserv'd, Sir.

Macb. Where?

Lenox. Here my good Lord.

What is't that moves your Highness?

Macb. Which of you have done this?

Lords. What, my good Lord?

Macb. Thou canst not say I did it; never shake Thy goary locks at me.

Rosse. Gentlemen rise; his Highness is not well.

Lady. Sit worthy Friends: my Lord is often thus, And hath been from his youth. Pray you keep fear, The fit is momentary, upon a thought

He will again be well. If much you note him You shall offend him, and extend his Passion, Feed, and regard him not. Are you a man?

Macb. I, and a bold one, that dare look on that Which might appall the Devil.

Lady. O, proper stuff!

This is the very painting of your fear:

This is the Air-drawn-Dagger which you said Led you to Duncan. O, these flaves and Starts

(Impostors to true fear) would well become

A woman's story at a winter's fire

Authoriz'd by her Grandsire: shame it self,

Why do you make such faces? When all's done

You look but on a stool.

Macb. Prythee see there:

Behold, look, loe, how say you:

Why what care I, if thou canst nod, speak too.

If Charnel-houses, and our Graves must send

Those that we bury, back; our Monuments

Shall be the Mawes of Kites. Exit Ghost.

Lady. What? quite unman'd in folly.

Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

Lady. Fie for shame.

Macb. Bloud hath been shed e're now, i'th'olden time

E're humane Statue purg'd the gentle Weal:

I, and since too, Murthers have been perform'd

Too terrible for the ear: the times have been,

That when the Brains were out, the man would die,

And there an end; But now they rise again

With twenty mortal murthers on their crowns,

And push us from our stools: this is more strange

Then such a Murder is.

Lady. My worthy Lord

Your Noble Friends do lack you.

Macb. I do forget:

Do not muse at me my most worthy Friends,

I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing

To those that know me. Come, love and health to all,

Then I'll sit down: Give me some wine, fill full:

Enter Ghost.

I drink to th'general joy o'th' whole Table,

And to our dear Friend Banquo, whom we miss:

Would he were here: to all; and him we thirst,

And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.

Macb. Avant, and quit my sight, let the earth hide thee:

Thy bones are marrowless: thy bloud is cold:

Thou hast no speculation in those eyes

Which thou dost glare with.

Lady. Think of this good Peers

But as a thing of Custome: 'tis no other,

Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare:

Approach thou like the rugged Russian Bear,
The arm'd Rhinoceros, or th' Hyrcan tyger,
Take any shape but that, and my firm Nerves
Shall never tremble. Or be alive again,
And dare me to the Desert with thy Sword:

If trembling I inhabit, then protest me

The Baby of a Girl. Hence horrible shadow,

Unreal mock'ry hence. Why so, be gone

I am a man again: pray you sit still.

Lady. You have displac'd the mirth,

Broke the good meeting, with most admir'd disorder.

Macb. Can such things be,

And overcome us like a Summer's Cloud

Without our special wonder? You make me strange

Even to the disposition that I owe,

When now I think you can behold such sights,

And keep the natural Rubie of your Cheeks,

When mine is blanch'd with fear.

Rosse. VVhat signes, my Lord?

La. I pray you speak not: he grows worse and worse,

Question enrages him: at once, goodnight.

Stand not upon the order of your going,

But go at once.

Lenox. Good night, and better health

Attend his Majesty.

La. A kind goodnight to all.

Exeunt Lords.

Macb. It will have bloud they say:

Bloud will have Bloud:

Stones have been known to move, and trees to speak:

Augures, and understood Relations, have

By Maggot Pyes, & Choughes, and Rooks brought forth

The secret'st man of bloud. What is the night?

La. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.

Macb. How say'st thou that Macduff denies his person

At our great bidding?

La. Did you send to him, Sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way: But I will send:

There's not a one of them but in his house

I keep a Servant Fee'd. I will to morrow

(And betimes I will) to the wizard Sisters.

More shall they speak: for now I am bent to know

By the worst means, the worst, for mine own good,

All causes shall give way, I am in bloud

Spent in so far, that should I wade no more,

Returning were as tedious as go o're:

Strange things I have in head, that will to hand,

Which must be acted, e're they may be scann'd.

Lady. You lack the season of all Natures, sleep.

Macb. Come, we'll to sleep; My strange and self-abuse

Is the initiate fear, that wants hard use:

We are yet but young indeed.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting
Hecate.

1. Why how now Hecate, you look angerly?

Hec. Have I not reason (Beldames) as you are?

Sawcy, and over-bold, how did you dare

To trade, and traffick with Macbeth,

In Riddles, and Affairs of death;

And

And I the Mistress of your Charms,
The close contriver of all harines,
Was never call'd to bear my part,
Or shew the glory of our Art ?
And which is worse, all you have done
Hath been but for a wayward Son,
Spightfull, and wrathfull, who (as others do)
Loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now : Get you gon,
And at the pit of Acheron
Meet me i'th' Morning: thither he
Will come, to know his Destinie,
Your Vessels, and your Spells provide,
Your Charms, and every thing beside ;
I am for th' Air : this night I'll spend
Unto a dismal, and a Fatal end.
Great business must be wrought e're Noon.
Upon the Corner of the Moon
There hangs a vap'rous drop, profound,
I'll catch it e're it come to ground ;
And that distill'd by Magick flights,
Shall raise such Artificial Sprights,
As by the strength of their illusion,
Shall draw him on to his Confusion.
He shall spurn Fate, scorn Death, and bear
His hopes 'bove Wisedome, Grace, and Fear:
And you all know, Security
Is mortals chiefeft Enemy.

Musick, and a Song.

Heark, I am call'd : my little Spirit see
Sits in a Foggy cloud, and staves for me.

Sing within. Come away, come away, &c.

1. Come, let's make haste, she'll soon be Back again.

Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Lenox, and another Lord.

Lenox. My former Speeches,
Have but hit your Thoughts,
Which can interpret farther : Onely I say Things have been strangely borne. The gracious Duncan
Was pittied of Macbeth : marry he was dead :
And the right valiant Banquo walk'd too late.
Whom you may say (if't please you) Fleance kill'd,
For Fleance fled : Men must not walk too late.
Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous
It was for Malcolm, and for Donalbane
To kill their gracious Father ? Damned Fact,
How it did grieve Macbeth ? Did he not straight
In pious rage, the two delinquents tear,
That were the Slaves of drink, and thralls of sleep ?
Was that not Nobly done ? I, and wisely too :
For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive
To hear the men deny't. So that I say,
He ha's borne all things well, and I do think,
That had he Duncan's Sonnes under the Key,
(As and't please Heaven he shall not) they shall find
What 'twere to kill a Father : So should Fleance.
But peace ; for from broad words, and cause he fail'd
His presence at the Tyrant's Feast ; I hear
Macduffe lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell

Where he bestowes himself ?

Lord. The Sonnes of Duncan

(From whom this Tyrant holds the due of Birth)
Live in the English Court, and is receiv'd
Of the most Pious Edward, with such grace,
That the malevolence of Fortune, nothing
Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduffe
Is gone, to pray the holy King, upon his aid
To wake Northumberland, and warlike Seyward,
That by the help of these (with him above
To ratifie the Work) we may again
Give to our Tables meat) sleep to our Nights :
Free from our Feasts, and Banquets bloody knives ;
Do faithfull Homage, and receive free Honours ;
All which we pine for now. And this report
Hath so exasperate their King, that he Prepares for some attempt of War.

Lenox. Sent he to Macduffe ?

Lord. He did : and with an absolute, Sir, not I,
The cloudy Messenger turns me his back,
And hums ; as who should say, you'll rue the time
That cloggs me with this Answer.

Lenox. And that well might Advise him to a Caution, t'hold what distance
His wisdome can provide. Some holy Angel
Flie to the Court of England, and unfold
His Message e're he come, that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering Countrey,
Under a hand accurs'd.

Lord. I'll send my Prayers with him. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1. Thrice the brinded Cat hath mew'd.
2. Thrice, and once the Hedges Pig whin'd.
3. Harpier cries, 'tis time, 'tis time.
1. Round about the Cauldron go :
In the poison'd Entrails throw
Toad, that under cold stone,
Dayes and Nights, has thirty one :
Sweltred Venom sleeping got,
Boil thou first i'th' charmed por.
All. Double, double, toil and trouble ;
Fire burn, and Cauldron bubble.
2. Filler of a Fenny Snake,
In the Cauldron boil and bake :
Eye of Newt, and Toe of Frog :
Wooll of Bat, and Tongue of Dog ;
Adders Fork, and Blind-worms Scing,
Lizards Leg, and Howler's Wing :
For a Charm of powerfull trouble,
Like a Hell-broth, boil and bubble.
All. Double, double, toil and trouble,
Fire burn, and Cauldron bubble.
3. Scale of Dragon, Tooth of Wolf,
Witches Mummy, Maw, and Gulf
Of the ravin'd salt Sea Shark :
Root of Hemlock, digg'd i'th' dark :
Liver of Blaspheming Jew,
Gall of Goat, and Slips of Yew,
Sliver'd in the Moon's Eclipse :

Noise

Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips,
Finger of Birth-strangled Babe,
Dirch-deliver'd by a Drab,
Make the Gruel thick, and slab.
Add thereto a Tyger's Chawdron,
For th'Ingredience of our Cauldron.

All. Double, double, toil and trouble,
Fire burn, and Cauldron bubble.

2. Cool it with a Baboon's blood,
Then the Charm is firm and good.

Enter Hecate, and the other three Witches.

Hec. O well done: I commend your paines,
And every one shall share i'th'gaines:
And now about the Cauldron sing
Like Elves and Fairies in a Ring,
Inchanting all that you put in.

Musick and a Song. Black Spirits, &c.

2. By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes:
Open Locks, whoever knocks.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. How now you secret, black, and midnight Hags?
What is't you do?

All. A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you, by that which you Profess,
(How-e're you come to know it) answer me:
Though you untie the windes, and let them fight
Against the Churches: Though the yetty Waves
Confound and swallow Navigation up:
Though bladed Corn be lodg'd, and trees blown down,
Though Castles topple on their Warders heads:
Though Palaces, and Pyramids do slope
Their heads to their Foundations: though the treasure
Of Natures Germain, tumble altogether,
Even 'till destruction sicken: Answer me
To what I ask you.

1. Speak.
2. Demand.

3. We'll answer.

1. Say, if th'had'st rather hear it from our mouthes,
Or from our Masters.

Macb. Call'em: let me see'em.

1. Pour in Sowes blood, that hath eaten
Her nine Farrow: Greace that's sweaten
From the Murderers Gibbet, throw
Into the Flame.

All. Come high or low:

Thy Self and Office deftly show. Thunder.

1. Apparition, an Armed Head.

Macb. Tell me thou unknown power.

1. He knowes thy thought:

Hear his speech, but say thou nought.

1. Appar. Macbeth, Macbeth, Macbeth:

Beware Macduff,

Beware the Thane of Fife: disinis me. Enough.

He Descends.

Macb. What-e're thou art, for thy good caution, thanks.
Thou hast harp'd my fear aright. But one word more.

1. He will not be commanded: here's another
More potent then the first. Thunder.

2. Apparition, a Bloody Child.

2. Appar. Macbeth, Macbeth, Macbeth.

Macb. Had I three eares, I'd hear thee.

2. Appar. Be bloody, bold, and resolute:

Laugh to scorn

The power of man: For none of woman borne Shall harm Macbeth. Descends.

Macb. Then live Macduff: what need I fear of thee?

But yet I'll make assurance, double sure,
And take a Bond of Fate: thou shalt not live,
That I may tell pale-hearted Fear, it lies;
And sleep in spite of thunder. Thunder.

3. Apparition, a Child crowned, with a Tree in his hand.

What is this, that rises like the issue of a King,
And weares upon his Baby-brow, the round
And top of Sovereignty?

All. Listen, but speak not to't.

3. Appar. Be Lyon metled, proud, and take no care:
Who chafes, who frets, or where Conspirers are:

Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be, until
Great Byrnam wood, to high Dunfinane Hill
Shall come against him. Descend.

Macb. That will never be:

Who can impress the Forrest, bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound Root? Sweet boadments, good:
Rebellious dead, rise never 'till the Wood

Of Byrnam rise, and our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the Lease of Nature, pay his breath
To time, and mortal Custome. Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing: tell me, if your Art
Can tell so much: Shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this Kingdome?

All. Seek to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied. Deny me this,
And an eternal Curse fall on you: Let me know,
Why sinks that Cauldron? & what noise is this? Hoboyes.

1. Shew.

2. Shew.

3. Shew.

All. Shew his Eyes, and grieve his Heart,
Come like shadows, so depart.

A shew of eight Kings, and Banquo last, with a glass in his hand.

Macb. Thou art too like the Spirit of Banquo: Down:
Thy Crown do's sear mine Eye-balls. And thy hair
Thou other Gold-bound-brow, is like the first:
A third, is like the former. Filthy Hags,
Why do you shew me this? ---- A fourth? Start eye!
What will the Line stretch out to th'crack of Doom?
Another yet? A seventh? I'll see no more:
And yet the eighth appears, who beares a glass,
Which shewes me many more: and some I see,
That two-fold Balls, and treble Scepters carry.
Horrible sight: Now I see 'tis true,
For the Bloud-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his. What is this so?

1. I Sir, all this is so. But why

Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?

Come Sisters, cheer we up his sprights,
And shew the best of our delights.

I'll Charm the Air to give a sound,
While you perform your Antique round:

That this great King may kindly say,
Our duties, did his welcome pay. Musick.

The Witches Dance, and vanish.

Macb. Where are they? Gone?

Let this pernicious hour,
Stand aye accursed in the Kalender.

Come in, without there. Enter Lenox.

Lenox. What's your Graces will?

Macb.

Macb. Saw you the Wizard Sisters ?
Lenox. No my Lord.
Macb. Came they not by you ?
Lenox. No indeed my Lord.
Macb. Infected be the Air whereon they ride,
 And damn'd all those that trust them. I did hear
 The galloping of Horse. Who was't came by ?
Len. 'Tis two or three my Lord, that bring you word :
Macduff is fled to England.
Macb. Fled to England ?
Len. I, my good Lord.
Macb. Time, thou anticipat'st my dread exploits :
 The flighty purpose never is o're-took
 Unless the deed go with it. From this moment,
 The very firstling of my heart shall be
 The firstlings of my hand. And even now
 To Crown my thoughts with Acts: be it thought & done:
 The Castle of Macduff, I will surprize.
 Seize upon Fife ; give to th'edge o'th Sword
 His Wife, his Babes, and all unfortunate Soules
 That trace him in his Line. No boasting like a Fool,
 This deed I'll do, before this purpose cool,
 But no more sights. Where are these Gentlemen ?
 Come bring me where they are. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Macduff's Wife, her Son, and Ross.

Wife. What had he done, to make him fly the Land ?
Rosse. You must have patience Madam.
Wife. He had none :
 His flight was madness : when our Actions do not,
 Our feares do make us traytors.
Rosse. You know not
 Whether it was his wisdome, or his fear.
Wife. Wisdome ? to leave his wife, to leave his Babes,
 His Mansion, and his titles, in a place
 From whence himself does flie ? He loves us not.
 He wants the natural touch : for the poor Wren
 (The most diminutive of Birds) will fight,
 Her young ones in her Nest, against the Owle :
 All is the Fear, and nothing is the Love ;
 As little is the Wisdome, where the flight
 So runs against all reason.
Rosse. My dearest Couz,
 I pray you school your self ; But for your Husband,
 He is Noble, Wile, Judicious, and best knowes
 The fits o'th' Season. I dare not speak much further,
 But cruel are the times, when we are traytors
 And do not know our selves : when we hold Rumour
 From what we fear, yet know not what we fear,
 But float upon a wild and violent Sea
 Each way, and move. I take my leave of you :
 Shall not be long but I'll be here again :
 Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward,
 To what they were before. My pretty Cousin,
 Blessing upon you.
Wife. Father'd he is,
 And yet he's Fatherless.
Rosse. I am so much a Fool, should I stay longer
 It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort.
 I take my leave at once. Exit Rosse.

Wife. Sirra, your Father's dead,
 And what will you do now ? How will you live ?
Son. As Birds do, Mother.
Wife. What with woimes and flies ?
Son. With what I get, and so do they.
Wife. Poor Bird,
 Thoud'lt never fear the Net, nor Line,
 The Pitfall, nor the Gin.
Son. Why should I Mother ?
 Poor Birds they are not set for :
 My Father is not dead for all your saying.
Wife. Yes, he is dead :
 How wilt thou do for a Father ?
Son. Nay how will you do for a Husband ?
Wife. Why I can buy me twenty at any Market.
Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.
Wife. Thou speak'st with all thy wit,
 And yet i' faith with wit enough for thee.
Son. Was my Father a traitor, Mother ?
Wife. I, that he was.
Son. What is a traitor ?
Wife. Why one that sweares, and lyes.
Son. And be all traitors that do so ?
Wife. Every one that do's so, is a traitor,
 And must be hang'd.
Son. And must they all be hang'd, that swear and lye ?
Wife. Every one.
Son. Who must hang them ?
Wife. Why, honest men.
Son. Then the Lyars and Swearers are Fools: for there are Lyars and Swearers enow, to beat the honest men, and hang up them.
Wife. Now God help thee, poor Monkey :
 But how wilt thou do for a Father ?
Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him: if you would not it were a good signe, that I should quickly have a new Father.
Wife. Poor pratler, how thou talk'st ?
Enter a Messenger.
Mes. Bless you fair Dame : I am not to you known,
 Though in your state of honour I am perfect ;
 I doubt some danger does approach you nearly.
 If you will take a homely man's advice,
 Be not found here : hence with your little ones :
 To fright you thus, Me thinks I am too savage :
 To do worse to you, were fell Cruelty,
 Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you,
 I dare abide no longer. Exit Messenger.
Wife. Whither should I flie ?
 I have done no harm. But I remember now
 I am in this earthly world : where to do harm
 Is often laudable, to do good sometime
 Accounted dangerous folly. Why then (alas)
 Do I put up that womanly defence,
 To say I had done no harm ?
 What are these faces ?
Enter Murderers.
Mur. Where is your Husband ?
Wife. I hope in no place so unsanctified,
 Where such as thou may'st find him.
Mur. He's a Traitor.
Son. Thou ly'st thou shag-car'd Villain.
Mur. What you Egg ?
 Young fry of treachery ?
Son. He has kill'd me Mother,
 Run away I pray you. Exit, crying Murder.

Scena Tertia.Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there
Weep our sad bosomes empty.

Macd. Let us rather
Hold fast the mortal Sword: and like good men,
Beside our downfall Birthdome: each new Morn,
New Widows howl, new Orphans cry, new sorrows
Strike Heaven on the face, that it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland, and yell'd out
Like Syllable of Dolour.

Mal. What I believe, I'll wail;
What know, believe; and what I can redress,
As I shall find the time to friend, I will.
What you have spoke, it may be so perchance.
This Tyrant, whose sole Name blisters our tongues,
Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him well,
He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young, but something
You may discern of him through me, and wisdom
To offer up a weak, poor innocent Lamb
To appease an angry God.

Macd. I am not treacherous.

Mal. But Macbeth is.

A good and virtuous Nature may recoil
In an Imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon:
That which you are, my thoughts cannot transpoise;
Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell.
Though all things foul would wear the brows of Grace,
Yet Grace must still look so.

Macd. I have lost my Hopes.

Malc. Perchance even there
Where I did find my doubts
Why in that rawness left you Wife, and Children?
Those precious Motives, those strong knots of Love,
Without leave-taking. I pray you,
Let not my Jealousies, be your Dishonours,
But mine own Safeties: you may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think.

Macd. Bleed, bleed poor Country,
Great Tyranny, lay thou thy Basis sure,
For goodness dares not check thee: wear thou thy wrongs
The Title is afear'd. Fare thee well Lord,
I would not be the Villain that thou think'st,
For the whole Space that's in the Tyrant's Grasp,
And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended:

I speak not as in absolute fear of you:
I think our Country sinks beneath the yoke,
It weeps, it bleeds, and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds. I think withall,
There would be hands uplifted in my right:
And here from gracious England have I offer
Of goodly thousands. But for all this,
When I shall tread upon the Tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my Sword; yet my poor Country
Shall have more vices then it had before,
More suffer, and more sundry wayes then ever,
By him that shall succeed.

Macd. What should he be?

Mal. It is my self I mean, in whom I know
All the particulars of Vice so grafted,

That when they shall be open'd black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as Snow, and the poor State
Esteem him as a Lamb, being compar'd
With my confineless harms.

Macd. Not in the Legions
Of horrid Hell, can come a Devil more damn'd
In evils, to top Macbeth.

Macb. I grant him Bloudy,
Luxurious, Avaricious, False, Deceitfull,
Sudden, Malicious, smoaking of every sinne
That has a name. But there's no bottom, none
In my Voluptuousness: Your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up
The Cistern of my Lust, and my Desire
All continent Impediments would o're-bear
That did oppose my will. Better Macbeth,
Then such an one to reign.

Macd. Boundless intemperance
In Nature is a Tyranny: It hath been Th'untimely emptying of the happy Throne,
And fall of many Kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold. The time you may so hoodwink:
We have willing Danies enough: there cannot be
That Vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to Greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin'd.

Mal. With this, there grows
In my most ill-compos'd Affection, such
A stanchless Avarice, that were I King,
I should cut off the Nobles for their Lands,
Desire his Jewels, and this others House,
And my more-having would be as a Sawce
To make me hunger more, that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the Good and Loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Macd. This Avarice
Sticks deeper: grows with more pernicious root
Then Summer-seeming Lust: and it hath bin
The Sword of our slain Kings: yet do not fear,
Scotland hath Poisons to fill up your will
Of your mere Own. All these are portable,
With other Graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none. The King-becoming Graces,
As Justice, Verity, Temp'rance, Stableness,
Bounty, Perseverance, Mercy, Lowliness,
Devotion, Patience, Courage, Fortitude;
I have no relish of them, but abound
In the division of each several Crime,
Acting it many wayes. Nay had I power I should Pour the sweet Milk of Concord, into Hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Macd. O Scotland, Scotland!

Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

Mac. Fit to govern? No not to live. O Nation miserable!
With an untitled Tyrant, bloudy Sceptred,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome dayes again?
Since that the truest Issue of thy Throne
By his own Interdiction stands accurst,
And do's blaspheme his breed? thy Royal Father
Was a most Sainted-King: the Queen that bore thee,
Often upon her knees, then on her feet,
Dy'd every day she liv'd. Fare thee well,

These

These Evils thou repeat'st upon thy self,
Hath banisht me from Scotland. O my Breast,
Thy hope ends here.

Mal. Macduff, this Noble passion
Child of Integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the black Scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts
To thy good truth, and honour. Devillish Macbeth,
By many of these traines, hath fought to win me
Into his power : and modest Wisdome plucks me
From over-credulous haste : but God above
Deal between thee and me ; For even now
I put my self to thy direction, and Unspeake mine own detraction. Here abjure
The taints, and blames I laid upon my self,
For strangers to my Nature, I am yet
Unknown to women, never was forswore,
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own,
At no time broke my Faith, would not betray
The Devil to his Fellow, and delight
No less in truth then life. My first false speaking
Was this upon my self, what I am truly
Is thine, and my poor Countries to command :
Whither indeed, before thy here approach,
Old Seyward with ten thousand warlike men
Already at a point, was setting forth ?
Now we'll together, and the chance of goodness
Be like our warranted Quarrel. Why are you silent ?

Macd. Such welcome, and unwelcome things at once
'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well, more anon. Comes the King forth
I pray you ?

Doct. I Sir : there are a crew of wretched Soules
That stay his Cure : their malady convinces
The great assay of Art. But at his touch,
Such sanctity hath Heaven given his hand,
They presently amend.

Exit.

Mal. I thank you Doctor.

Macd. What's the Disease he means ?

Mal. 'Tis call'd the Evil,
A most miraculous work in this good King,
Which often since my here remain in England,
I have seen him doe : How he solicits heaven
Himself best knows : but strangely visited people
Allswolne and Ulcerous, pittifull to the eye,
The mere despair of Surgery, he cures,
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy Prayers, and 'tis spoken
To the succeeding Royalty he leaves
The healing Benediction : with this strange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of Prophecie,
And sundry Blessings hang about his Throne,
That speak him full of Grace.

Enter Ross.

Macd. See who comes here.

Mal. My Countreyman : but yet I know him not.

Macd. My ever gentle Cousin, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now. Good God betimes remove
The means, the means that makes us strangers.

Rosse. Sir, Amen.

Macd. Stands Scotland where it did ?

Ross. Alas poor Countrey,
Almost afraid to know it self. It cannot
Be call'd our Mother, but our Grave ; where nothing
But who knows nothing is once seen to smile :
Where sighes and groans, and shrieks that rent the air

Are made, not mark'd : Where violent sorrow seems
A Modern extasie : the Dead-man's knell,
Is there scarce ask'd for who, and good men's lives
Expire before the Flowers in their Caps,
Dying, or e're they sicken.

Macd. Oh relation ; too nice, and yet too true.

Mal. What's the newest grief ?

Rosse. That of an houres age, doth hiss the speaker,
Each minute teems a new one.

Macd. How does my Wife ?

Rosse. Why well.

Macd. And all my Children ?

Rosse. Well too.

Macd. The Tyrant has not batter'd at their peace ?

Rosse. No, they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech : how gos't ?

Rosse. When I came hither to transport the Tidings
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a Rumour
Of many worthy Fellows, that were out,
Which was to my belief witness the rather,
For that I saw the Tyrant's Power a-foot,
Now is the time of help : your eye in Scotland
Would create Souldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.

Mal. Be't their comfort
We are coming thither : Gracious England hath Lent us good Seyward, and ten thousand men,
An older, and a better Souldier, none
That Christendome gives out.

Rosse. Would I could answer
This comfort with the like. But I have words
That would be howl'd out in the desert air,
Where hearing should not latch them.

Macd. What concern they,
The general cause, or is it a Fee-grief
Due to some single Breast ?

Rosse. No mind that's honest
But in it shares some woe, though the main part
Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine
Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it.

Rosse. Let not your eares despise my tongue for ever,
Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound
That ever yet they heard.

Macd. Humh : I guess at it.

Rosse. Your Castle is surpriz'd : your Wife, and Babes
Savagely slaughter'd : to relate the manner
Were on the Quarry of these murther'd Deer
To add the death of you.

Mal. Mercifull Heaven :
What man, ne're pull your hat upon your brows :
Give sorrow words ; the grief that do's not speak,
Whispers the o're-fraught heart, and bids it break.

Macd. My Children too ?

Ros. Wife, Children, Servants, all that could be found.

Macd. And I must be from thence ? My wife kill'd too ?

Rosse. I have said.

Mal. Be comforted.

Let's make us Med'cines of our great Revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.

Macd. He has no Children. All my pretty ones ?
Did you say All ? O Hell-Kite ! All ?

What, All my pretty Chickens, and their Damm
At one fell swoop ?

Mal. Dispute it like a man.

Macd. I shall do so.

But

But I must also feel it as a man ;
I cannot but remember such things were
That were most precious to me : Did heaven look on,
And would not take their part ? Sinfull Macduff,
They were all strook for thee : Naught that I am ,
Not for their own demerits , but for mine
Fell slaughter on their souls : Heaven rest them now.

Mal. Be this the Whetstone of your sword , let grief
Convert to anger : blunt not the heart , enrage it.

Macd. O I could play the woman with nine eyes,
And Braggart with my tongue. But gentle Heavens,
Cut short all intermission : Front to Front,
Bring thou this Fiend of Scotland, and my self Within my Swords length set him, if he scape
Heaven forgive him too.

Mal. This time goes manly :
Come go we to the King , our Power is ready,
Our lack is nothing but our leave. Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the Powers above
Put on their Instruments : Receive what cheer you may,
The Night is long that never finds the Day. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Doctor of Physick, and a waiting Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two Nights watch'd with you , but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walk'd ?

Gent. Since his Majesty went into the Field , I have seen her rise from her bed , throw her Night-Gown upon her , unlock her Closet , take forth Paper , fold it, write upon't , read it , afterwards seal it , and again return to bed ; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in Nature , to receive at once the benefit of sleep and do the effects of watching.
In this slumbry agitation, besides her walking , and other actual performances , what (at any time) have you heard her say ?

Gent. That Sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may to me, and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you, nor any one, having no witness to confirm my speech. Enter Lady with a Taper.

Lo you, here she comes : This is her very guise , and upon my life fast asleep ; observe her, stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light ?

Gent. Why it stood by her : she has light by her continually, 'tis her command.

Doct. You see her eyes are open.

Gent. I but their sense are shut.

Doct. What is it she do's now ?

Look how she rubbs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustom'd action with her , to seem thus washing her hands : I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lad. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Hark , she speaks , I will set down what comes from her , to satisfie my remembrance the more strongly.

La. Out damned spot : out I say. One : Two : Why then 'tis time to do't : Hell is murky. Fie, my Lord , fie, a Souldier, and afeard ? what need we fear ? who knows it, when none can call our power to account : yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much bloud in him.

Doct. Do you mark that ?

Lad. The Thane of Fife, had a wife: where is she now?
What will these hands ne're be clean ? No more o'that my Lord , no more o'that : you marre all with starting.

Doct. Goto, go to :

You have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not , I am sure of that : Heaven knows what she has known.

La. Here's the smell of bloud still : all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand.

Oh, oh, oh.

Doct. What a sigh is there? The heart is sorely charg'd.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosome, for dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well.

Gent. Pray God it be Sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practise : yet I have known those which have walkt in their sleep , who have died holyly in their beds.

Lad. Wash your hands , put on your Night-Gowne, look not so pale : I tell you yet again Banquo's buried ;
he cannot come out on's grave.

Doct. Even so ?

Lady. To bed, to bed : there's knocking at the Gate :
Come, come, come, come, give me your hand : What's done, cannot be undone. To bed, to bed, to bed.

Exit Lady.

Doct. Will she go now to bed ?

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisp'rings are abroad : unnatural deeds
Do breed unnatural troubles : infected minds
To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets :
More needs she the Divine , then the Physician :
God, God forgive us all. Look after her,
Remove from her the means of all annoyance,
And still keep eyes upon her : So good night :
My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight.
I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good night good Doctor.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Drum and Colours. Enter Menteth, Cathnes, Angus, Lenox, Souldiers.

Men. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm,
His Uncle Seyward, and the good Macduff.
Revenge burn in them : for their dear causes
Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Neer Byrnam wood

Shall we meet them, that way are they coming.

Cath. Who knows if Donalbaine be with his brother?

Lenox. For certain Sir, he is not : I have a File

Of all the Gentry ; there is Seyward's Son,

And many unruff Youths, that even now

Protest their first of Manhood.

Ment. What do's the Tyrant.

Cath. Great Dunsinane he strongly Fortifies,
Some say he's mad : Others, that lesser hates him,
Do call it valiant Fury , but for certain

He

He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause
Within the belt of Rule.

Ang. Now do's he feel
His secret Murthers sticking on his hands,
Now minutely Revolts upbraid his faith-breach:
Those he commands, move only in command,
Nothing in love: Now do'es he feel his Title
Hang loose about him, like a Giants Robe
Upon a Dwarfish Thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame
His pester'd Senses to recoyl, and start,
When all that is within him, do's condemne.
It self, for being there.

Cath. Well, march we on,
To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd:
Meet we the Med'cine of the sickly Weal,
And with him pour we in our Countries purge,
Each drop of us.

Lenox. Or so much as it needs,
To dew the Sovereign Flower, and drown the Weeds
Make we our March towards Birnam. Exeunt Marching.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Mac. Bring me no more Reports, let them flye all:
Till Birnam Wood remove to Dunsinane,
I cannot taint with Fear. What's the Boy Malcolme?
Was he not born of Woman? The Spirits that know
All mortal Consequences, have pronounc'd me thus:
Fear not Macbeth, no man that's born of woman
Shall e're have power upon thee. Then flye false Thanes,
And mingle with the English Epicures,
The mind I sway by, and the heart I bear,
Shall never sag with doubt, nor shake with fear.

Enter a Servant.

The Devil damne thee black, thou cream-fac'd Loon:
Where got'st thou that Goose-look.

Ser. There is ten thousand.

Macb. Geese Villain?

Ser. Souldiers sir.

Macb. Go prick thy face, and over-red thy fear
Thou Lilly-liver'd Boy. What Souldiers, Patch?
Death of thy soul, those linnen cheeks of thine
Are Counsellors to fear. What Souldiers Whay-face?

Ser. The English Force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence. Seyton, I am sick at heart,
When I behold: Seyton, I say, this push
Will cheer me ever, or disease me now.
I have liv'd long enough: my way of life
Is fain into the Sear, the yellow Leaf,
And that which should accompany Old Age,
As honor, love, obedience, troops of Friends,
I must not look to have: but in their stead,
Curses, not loud but deep, Mouth-honor, breath
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.
Seyton?

Enter Seyton.

Sey. What's your Gracious pleasure?

Mac. What news more?

Sey. All is confirm'd my Lord, which was reported.

Mac. I'll fight, till from my bones, my flesh is hackt.

Give me my Armor.

Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.

Mac. I'll put it on:

Send out more horses, skir the Country round,
Hang those that stand in fear. Give me mine Armor:
How do's your Patient, Doctor?

Doct. Not so sick my Lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming Fancies
That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her from that:
Canst thou not Minister to a mind diseas'd,
Pluck from the Memory a rooted Sorrow,
Raife out the written troubles of the Brain,
And with some sweet oblivious Antidote
Cleanse the stuff bosome, of that perillous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart?

Doct. Therein the Patient
Must Minister unto himself.

Macb. Throw Physick to the Dogs, I'll none of it.
Come, put mine Armor on: give me my Staffe:
Seyton, send out: Doctor, the Thanes flye from me:
Come sir, dispatch. If thou could'st Doctor, cast
The water of my Land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine Health,
I would applaud thee to the very Echo,
That should applaud again. Pull't off I say,
What Rubarb, Cæny, or what Purgative drug
Would scour these English hence: hearst thou of them?

Doct. I my good Lord: your Royal preparation
Makes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me:
I will not be afraid of Death and Bane,
Till Birnam Forrest come to Dunsinane.

Doct. Were I from Dunsinane away, and clear,
Profit again should hardly draw me here. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Drum and Colours. Enter Malcolme, Seyward, Mac-duffe, Seywards Son, Menteth, Cathnes, Angus, and Souldiers Marching.

Malc. Cousin I hope the dayes are near at hand
That Chambers will be safe.

Ment. We doubt it nothing.

Seyw. What Wood is this before us?

Ment. The Wood of Birnam.

Malc. Let every souldier hew him down a Bough,
And bear't before him, thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our Hoast, and make discovery
Erre in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done.

Seyw. We learn no other, but the confident Tyrant,
Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down befor't.

Malc. 'Tis his main hope:
For where there is advantage to be given,
Both more and lesse have given him the Revolt,
And none serve with him, but constrained things,
Whose hearts are absent too.

Macd. Let our best Censures
Before the true event, and put we on Industrious Souldiership.

Sey. The time approaches,
That will with due decision make us know
What we shall say we have, and what we owe:
Thoughts speculative, their unsure hopes relate,
But certain issue, strokes must arbitrate,
Towards which, advance the war. Exeunt marching.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Macbeth, Seyton, and Souldiers, with Drum and Dolours.

Macb. Hang out our Banners on the outward walls,
The Cry is still, they come: Our Castles strength
Will laugh a Siege to scorn: Here let them lie,
Till Famine and the Ague eat them up:
Were they not forc'd with those that should be ours,
We might have met them darefull, beard to beard,
And beat them backward home. What is that noyse?

A cry within of Women.

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good Lord.

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of Fears:
The time has been, my senses would have cool'd
To hear a Night-shrick, and my Fell of hair
Would at a dismal Treatise rouze, and stir
As life were in't. I have sapt full with horrors,
Direnesse familiar to my slaughterous thoughts
Cannot once start me. Wherefore was that cry?

Sey. The Queen (my Lord) is dead.

Macb. She should have dy'd hereafter;
There would have been a time for such a word:
To morrow, and to morrow, and to morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
To the last Syllable of Recorded time:
And all our yesterdaies, have lighted Fooles
The way to study death. Out, out, brief Candle,
Life's but a walking Shadow, a poor Player,
That struts and frets his hour upon the Stage,
And then is heard no more. It is a tale
Told by an Ideot, full of sound and fury
Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue: thy story quickly.

Mes. My Gracious Lord,
I should report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to do't.

Macb. Well, say sir.

Mes. As I did stand my watch upon the hill
I look'd toward Byrnam, and anon me thought
The Wood began to move.

Macb. Lyar, and Slave.

Mes. Let me endure your wrath, if't be not so:
Within this three mile you may see it coming.
I say, a moving Grove.

Macb. If thou speak'st false,
Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive
Till Famine cling thee: If thy speech be sooth,
I care not if thou do'st for me as much.
I pull in Resolution, and begin
To doubt the Equivocation of the Fiend,
That lies like truth. Fear not, till Byrnam Wood
Do come to Dunfinane, and now a Wood

Comes toward Dunfinane. Arme, arme, and out,
If this which he avouches do's appear,
There is no flying hence, nor tarrying here,
I'gin to be a weary of the Sun,
And wish th' estate o'th' world were now undone.
Ring the alarum Bell, blow Wind, come wrack,
At least we'll die with Harnes on our back. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Drum and Colours.

Enter Malcolme, Seyward, Macduffe, and their Army, with Boughes.

Mal. Now near enough:
Your Leavy Screens throw down,
And shew like those you are: You (worthy Uncle)
Shall with my Cousin, your right Noble son,
Lead our first Battell. Worthy Macduffe, and we Shall take upon's what else remains to do
According to our order.

Sey. Fare you well:
Do we but find the Tyrants power to night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macd. Make all our Trumpets speak, give them all breath,
Those clamorous Harbingers of blood, & death. Exeunt.
Alarums continued.

Scena Septima.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have ty'd me to a stake, I cannot flye,
But Bear-like I must fight the course. What's he
That was not born of woman? Such a one
Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young Seyward.

Y. Sey. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.

Y. Sey. No: though thou call'st thy self a hotter name
Then any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Y. Sey. The Devill himself could not pronounce a Title
More hatefull to mine ear.

Macb. No: nor more fearfull.

Y. Sey. Thou liest thou abhorred tyrant, with my sword
I'll prove the lye thou speak'st.

Fight, and young Seyward's slain,

Macb. Thou wast born of Woman;
But swords I smile at, Weapons laugh to scorn.
Brandish'd by man thar's of a Woman born. Exit.

Alarums. Enter Macduffe.

Macd. That way the noise is: tyrant shew thy face,
If thou beest slain, and with no stroak of mine,
My Wife and Childrens Ghosts will haunt me still:
I cannot strike at wretched Kernes, whose armes
Are hyr'd to bear their Staves; either thou Macbeth,
Or else my sword with an unbattered edge
I sheath again undeeded. There thou should'st be,
By this great clatter, one of greatest note

Scems

Seems bruited. Let me find him Fortune,
And more I beg not. Exit. Alarums.

Enter Malcolme and Seyward.

Seyw. This way my Lord, the Castles gently rendred :
The tyrants people, on both sides do fight,
The Noble Thanes do bravely in the War,
The day almost it self professes yours,
And little is to do.

Malc. We have met with Foes
That strike beside us.

Sey. Enter, sir, the Castle. Exeunt. Alarum.
Enter Macbeth.

Mac. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die
On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Enter Macduffe.

Macd. Turn Hell-hound, turn.

Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee :
But get thee back, my soul is too much charg'd
With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words,
My voice is in my sword, thou bloudiet Villain
Then tearmes can give the out. Fight, Alarums.

Macb. Thou lofest labour,
As easie may'st thou the intrenchant Aire
With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed :
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable Crests,
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macd. Dispair thy Charme,
And let the Angell whom thou still hast serv'd
Tell thee, Macduffe was from his Mothers wombe
Untimely ript.

Macb. Accursed be that tongue that tells me so ;
For it hath Cow'd my better part of man :
And be these Jugling Fiends no more believ'd,
That palter with us in a double sense,
That keep the word of promise to our eare,
And break it to our hope. I'll not fight with thee.

Macd. Then yield thee Coward,
And live to be the shew, and gaze o'th'time.
We'll have thee, as our Rarer Monsters are Painted upon a Pole, and under-writ,
Here may you see the Tyrant.

Macb. I will not yield
To kisse the ground before young Malcolmes feet,
And to be baited with the Rabbles curse,
Though Byrnam Wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last. Before my body,
I throw my warlike Shield : Lay on Macduffe,
And damn'd be him, that first cries hold, enough
Exeunt fighting. Alarums.

Enter fighting, and Macbeth slain.
Retreat and Flourish. Enter with Drum and Colours.
Malcolme, Seyward, Rosse, Thanes, and Souldiers.

Mal. I would the Friends we misse, were safe arriv'd.

Sey. Some must go off : and yet by these I see,
So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduffe is missing, and your noble Son.

Ross. Your son my Lord, ha's paid a Souldiers debt,
He only liv'd but till he was a man,
The which no sooner had his prowesse confirm'd
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he dy'd.

Sey. Then he is dead?

Ross. I, and brought off the Field : your cause of sorrow
Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Sey. Had he his hurts before.

Ross. I, on the Front.

Sey. Why then, Gods Souldier be he :
Had I as many sons, as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death :
And so his Knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.

Sey. He's worth no more,
They say he parted well, and paid his score,
And so God be with him. Here comes newer comfort.

Enter Macduffe, with Macbeths head.

Macd. Hail King, for so thou art.
Behold where stands
Th'Usurpers curs'd head : the time is free :
I see thee compass't with thy Kingdomes Pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds ;
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine.
Hail King of Scotland.

All. Hail King of Scotland. Flourish.

Mal. We shall not spend a large expence of time,
Before you reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My Thanes and Kinsmen
Henceforth be Earls, the first that ever Scotland
In such an honor nam'd. What's more to do
Which would be plant'd newly with the time,
As calling home our exil'd Friends abroad,
That fled the Snares of watchfull tyranny,
Producing forth the cuell Ministers
Of this dead Butcher, and his Fiend-like Queen ;
Who (as 'tis thought) by self and violent hands,
Took off her life. This, and what needfull else
That calls upon us, by the Grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time and place :
So thanks to all at once, and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us Crown'd at Scone.

Flourish. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.

Qqq 2

THE

The Tragedy of HAMLET, Prince of Denmark.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Barnardo and Francisco, two Centinels.

Barnardo.

Ho's there?

Fran. Nay answer me : Stand and unfold your self.

Bar. Long live the King.

Fran. Barnardo?

Bar. He.

Fran. You come most chearfully upon your hour.

Bar. 'Tis now struck twelve, get thee to Bed Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks : 'tis bitter cold,
And I am sick at heart.

Bar. Have you had quiet Guard?

Fran. Not a Mouse stirring.

Barn. Well, goodnight. If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, the Rivals of my Watch, bid them make hast.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Fran. I think I hear them. Stand who's there?

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And Liege-men to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O farewell honest Souldier, who hath reliev'd you?

Fran. Barnardo has my place: give you good night.

Exit Francisco.

Mar. Holla Barnardo.

Bar. Say, what is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.

Bar. Welcome Horatio; welcome good Marcellus.

Mar. What, has this thing appear'd again to night.

Bar. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio sayes, 'tis but our phantasie,
And will not let belief take hold of him
Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us,
Therefore I have intreated him along
With us, to watch the minutes of this night,
That if again this Apparition come,
He may approve our eyes, and speak to it.

Hor. Tush, tush, 'twill not appear.

Bar. Sit down a while,

And let us once again assail your eares,
That are so fortified against our story,
What we two nights have seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down,
And let us hear Barnardo speak of this.

Bar. Last night of all,
When yon same Star, that's westward from the Pole
Had made his course t'illumine that part of heaven.

Where now it burns, Marcellus and my self,
The Bell then beating one.

Mar. Peace, break thee off: Enter the Ghost.
Look where it comes again.

Bar. In the same figure like the King that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a Scholler; speak to it Horatio.

Bar. Looks it not like the King? Mark it Horatio.

Hor. Most like: It harrows me with fear and wonder

Bar. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Question it Horatio.

Hor. What art thou that usurp'st this time of night,
Together with that fair and warlike forme
In which the Majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march: By heaven I charge thee speak.

Mar. It is offended.

Bar. See, it stalks away.

Hor. Stay: speak; speak: I charge thee, speak.

Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Bar. How now Horatio? You tremble and look pale:
Is not this something more then fantasie?
What think you on't?

Hor. Before my God I might not this believe
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the King?

Hor. As thou art to thy self,

Such was the Armor he had on,
When th'ambitious Norway combatted:
So fround he once, when in an angry parle
He smot the fledded Polax on the Ice.
'Tis strange.

Mar. Thus twice before, and just at this same hour,
With Martial stalk, hath he gone by our Watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not:
But in the grosse and scope of my opinion,
This boads some strange eruption to our State.

Mar. Good now sit down, and tell me he that knows
Why this same strict and most observant Watch,
So nightly toils the subject of the Land,
And why such daily cast of Brazon Cannon
And forraign Mart for Implements of War:
Why such impresse of Shipwrights, whose fore Task
Dost not divide the Sunday from the week,
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Doth make the night joynt-labourour with the day:
Who ist that can informe me?

Hor. That can I,

At least the whisper goes so : Our last King,
Whose Image even but now appear'd to us,
Was (as you know by Fortinbras of Norway,
(There to prick'd on by a most emulate pride)
Dai'd to the Combate. In which, our valiant Hamlet,
(For so this side of our known world esteem'd him)
Did slay this Fortinbras, who by a seal'd Compact,
Well ratified by Law, and Heraldry,
Did forfeit (with his life) all those his Lands
Which he stood seiz'd on, to the Conqueror :
Against the which, a Moity competent
Was gaged by our King : which had return'd
To the Inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he bin Vanquisher, as by the same Cov'nant
And carriage of the Article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet. Now fir, young Fortinbras,
Of unimproved mettle, hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,
Shark'd up a List of Landleffe Resolutes,
For food and Dyet, to some enterprize
That hath a stomach in't : which is no other
(And it doth well appear unto our State)
But to recover of us by strong hand
And termes compulsative, those foresaid Lands
So by his father lost : and this (I take it)
Is the main motive of our Preparations,
The sourse of this our Watch, and the chief head
Of this post-haste, and Romage in the Land.

Enter Ghost again.

But soft, behold : Lo, where it comes again :
I'll crosse it, though it blast me. Stay Illusion :
If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,
Speak to me. If there be any good thing to be done,
That may to thee do ease, and grace to me ; speak to me.
If thou art privy to thy Countries Fate
(Which happily foreknowing may avoid) Oh speak.
Or, if thou hast uphoorded in thy life
Extorted Treasure in the wombe of Earth,
(For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death)
Speak of it. Stay, and speak. Stop it Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my Partizan ?

Hor. Do if it will not stand,

Barn. 'Tis here

Hor. 'Tis here.

Mar. 'Tis gone.

Exit Ghost.

We do it wrong, being so Majestical
To offer it the shew of Violence,
For it is as the aire, invulnerable,
And our vain blows, malicious mockery.

Barn. It was about to speak, when the Cock crew.

Hor. And then it started, like a guilty thing
Upon a fearfull Summons. I have heard,
The Cock that is the Trumpet to the day,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the God of Day : and at his warning.
Whether in Sea, or Fire, in Earth, or Aire,
Th'extravagant and erring Spirit, hies
To his Confine. And of the truth herein,
This present Object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the Cock.
Some sayes, that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviours Birth is celebrated,
The Bird of Dawning singeth all night long :
And (they say) no spirit can walk abroad,
The nights are wholesome, then no Planets strike,
No fairy talks, nor Witch hath power to Channe :

So hollow'd, and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it,
But look, the Morn in Ruffet Mantle clad,
Walks o're the Dew of yon high Eastern hill,
Break we our Watch up, and by my advice
Let us impart what we have seen to night
Unto young Hamlet. For upon my life,
This spirit dumb to us, will speak to him :
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needfull in our Loves, fitting our duty ?

Mar. Let's do't I pray, and I this morning know
Where we shall find him most conveniently. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Clandius, King of Denmark, Gertrude the Queen, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes, and his Sister Ophelia, Lords Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear Brothers death,
The Memory be green : and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole Kingdome
To be contracted in one brow of woe :
Yet so far hath Discretion fought with Nature,
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of our selves.
Therefore our sometimes Sister, now our Queen,
Th'Imperial Joyntrousse of this warlike State,
Have we, as 'twere, with a defeated joy,
With one Auspicious, and one Dropping eye,
With mirth in Funeral, and with Dirge in Marriage,
In equal Scale weighing Delight and Dole
Taken to wife ; nor have we herein barr'd
Your better Wisdomes, which have freely gone
With this affair along, for all our thanks.
Now follows, that you know young Fortinbras,
Holding a weak supposal of our worth ;
Or thinking by our late dear Brothers death,
Our State to be disjoynt, and out of Frame,
Colleagu'd with the dream of his Advantage ;
He hath not fail'd to pester us with Message,
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his Father, with all Bonds of Law
To our most valiant Brother. So much for him.

Enter Voltimand and Cornelius.

Now for our self, and for this time of meeting
Thus much the businesse is. We have here writ
To Norway, Uncle of young Fortinbras,
Who impotent and bedrid, scarcely hears
Of this his Nephews purpose, to suppress
His further gate herein. In that he Levies,
The Lifts, and full proportions are all made
Out of his subjeet : and we here dispatch
You good Cornelius, and you Voltimand,
For bearing of this greeting to old Norway,
Giving to you no further personal power
To businesse with the King, more then the scope
Of these dilated Articles allow :
Farewell, and let your haste commend your duty.

Volt. In that, and all things, will we shew our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing, heartily farewell.

Exit Voltimand and Cornelius.

And now Laertes, what's the news with you ?

You told us of some suit. What is't Laertes ?
 You cannot speak of Reason to the Dane,
 And loose your voice. What would'st thou beg, Laertes,
 That shall not be my Offer, nor thy Asking ?
 The head is not more Native to the heart,
 The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
 Then is the Throne of Denmark to thy father.
 What would'st thou have Laertes ?

Laer. Dread my Lord,
 Your leave and favour to return to France.
 From whence, though willingly I came to Denmark
 To shew my duty in your Coronation,
 Yet now I must confesse, that duty done,
 My thoughts and wishes bend again towards France,
 And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon,

King. Have you your Fathers leave ?
 What sayes Polonius.

Pol. He hath my Lord :

I do beseech you give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes, time be thine,
 And thy best graces spend it at thy will :

But now my Cofin Hamlet, and my Son ?

Ham. A little more then kin, and lesse then kind.

King. How is it that the Clouds still hang on you ?

Ham. Not so my Lord, I am too much i'th' Sun,

Que. Good Hamlet cast thy nightly colour off,
 And let thine eye look like a Friend on Denmark,
 Do not for ever with thy veiled lids
 Seek for thy Noble Father in the dust ;
 Thow know'st 'tis common, all that live must die,
 Passing through Nature, to Eternity.

Ham. I Madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be ;

Why seems it so particular with thee.

Ham. Seems Madam ? Nay, it is : I know not Seems :
 'Tis not alone my Inky Cloak (good Mother)
 Nor Customary suits of solemne Black,
 Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
 No, nor the fruitfull River in the Eye,
 Nor the dejected haviour of the Visage,
 Together with all Formes, Moods, shews of Grief,
 That can denote me truly. These indeed Seem,
 For they are actions that a man might play :
 But I have that Within, which passeth shew ;
 These, but the Trappings, and the Suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable
 In your Nature Hamlet,
 To give these mourning duties to your Father :
 But you must know, your father lost a father,
 That father lost, lost his, and the Survivor bound
 In filial Obligation, for some terme
 To do obsequious Sorrow. But to persever
 In obstinate Condolement, is a course
 Of impious stubbornnesse. 'Tis unanly grief,
 It shews a will most incorrect to Heaven,
 A heart unfortified, a mind impatient,
 An Understanding simple, and unschool'd :
 For, what we know must be, and is as common
 As any the most vulgar thing to sence,
 Why should we in our peevish Opposition
 Take it to heart ? Fie, 'tis a fault to heaven,
 A fault against the Dead, a fault to Nature,
 To Reason most absurd, whose common theam
 Is death of Fathers, and who still hath cried,
 From the first Coarse, till he that died to day,
 This must be so. We pray you throw to earth

This unprevailing woe, and think of us,
 As of a Father ; For let the world take note,
 You are the most immediate to our Throne,
 And with no lesse Nobility of Love,
 Then that which dearest Father bears his Son,
 Do I impart towards you. For your intent
 In going back to School in Wittenberg,
 It is most retrogarde to our desire :

And we beseech you, bend you to remain
 Here in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
 Our chiefeft Courtier Cofin, and our Son.

Que. Let not thy Mother lose her Prayers Hamlet :
 I prethee stay with us, go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best
 Obey you Madam.

King. Why 'tis a loving, and a fair Reply.
 Be as our self in Denmark, Madam come,
 This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet
 Sits smiling to my heart, in grace whereof,
 No jocund health that Denmark drinks to day,
 But the great Cannon to the Clouds shall tell,
 And the Kings Rouse, the heavens shall bruit again,
 Respeaking earthly Thunder. Come away. Exeunt.

Manet Hamlet.

Ham. Oh that this too too solid Fleish, would melt,
 Thaw, and resolve it self into a Dew :
 Or that the Everlasting had not fixt
 His Cannon 'gainst self-slaughter. O God, O God ?
 How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
 Seems to me all the uses of this world ?
 Fie on't ? Oh fie, 'tis an unweeded Garden
 That grows to Seed : things rank, and grosse in Nature
 Possesse it meerly. That it should come to this :
 But two months dead : Nay, not so much ; not two,
 So excellent a King, that was to this
Hyperion to a Satyre : so loving to my Mother,
 That he might not between the winds of heaven
 Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and Earth
 Must I remember : why she would hang on him,
 As if encrease of Appetite had grown
 By what it fed on ; and yet within a month ?
 Let me not think on't : Frailty, thy name is woman :
 A little Month, or ere those shoos were old,
 With which she followed my poor Fathers body
 Like Niobe, all tears. Why she, even she,
 (O heaven ! A beast that wants discourse of Reason
 Would have mourn'd longer) married with mine Uncle,
 My fathers brother : but no more like my father,
 Then I to Hercules. Within a Month ?
 Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
 Had left the flushing of her gauled eyes,
 She married. O most wicked speed, to post
 With such dexterity to incestuous sheets :
 It is not, nor it cannot come to good.
 But break my heart, for I must hold my tongue.

Enter Horatio, Barnard, and Marcellus.

Hor. Hail to your Lordship.

Ham. I am glad to see you well.

Horatio, or I do forget my self.

Hor. The same my Lord,
 And your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend,
 I'll change that name with you :
 And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio ?

Marcellus.

Marcellus.

Mar. My good Lord.

Ham. I am very glad to see you : good even sir.
But what in faith make you from Wittenberg.

Hor. A Truant disposition, good my Lord.

Ham. I would have your enemy say so ;
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,

To take it truster of your own report
Against your self. I know you are no Truant :
But what is your affair in Elseneur ?

We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.

Hor. My Lord, I came to see your Fathers Funeral.

Ham. I prithee do not mock me (fellow Student)
I think it was to see my Mothers wedding.

Hor. Indeed my Lord, it followeth hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio: the Funeral Bak'd meats,
Did coldly furnish forth the Marriage tables ;
Would I had met my dearest Foe in heaven,
E're I had ever seen that day Horatio.

My father, me thinks I see my father.

Hor. O where, my Lord ?

Ham. In my mindseye (Horatio)

Hor. I saw him once, he was a goodly King.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all:
I should not look upon his like again.

Hor. My Lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw ? Who ?

Hor. My Lord, the King your Father.

Ham. The King my Father !

Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attentive ear : till I may deliver
Upon the witnesse of these Gentlemen,
This marvel to you.

Ham. For heavens love let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together, had these Gentlemen
(Marcellus and Barnardo) on their Watch
In the dead waste and middle of the night
Been thus encountred. A figure like your father,
Arm'd at all points exactly, Cap a Pe,
Appears before them, and with solemn March
Goes slow and stately : By them thrice he walk'd,
By their oppress'd and fear-surprized eyes,
Within his Truncheons length ; whilst they be still'd
Almost to Jelly with the Act of fear,
Stand dumb and speak not to him. This to me
In dreadfull secrecy impart they did,
And I with them the third night kept the Watch,
Whereas they had deliver'd both in time,
Forme of the thing ; each word made true and good,
The Apparition comes. I knew your Father :
These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this ?

Mar. My Lord upon the platforme where we watcht.

Ham. Did you not speak to it ?

Hor. My Lord, I did ;

But answer made it none : yet once me thought
It lifted up its head, and did addresse
It self to motion, like as it would speak :
But even then, the morning Cock crew loud ;
And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,
And vanisht from our sight.

Ham. 'Tis very strange.

Hor. As I do live, my honorable Lord, 'tis true ;
And we did think it writ down in our duty
To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.

Hold you the Watch to night ?

Both. We do my Lord ?

Ham. Arm'd, say you ?

Both. Arm'd, my Lord.

Ham. From top to toe ?

Both. My Lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then saw you not his face ?

Hor. O yes, my Lord, he wore his Beaver up.

Ham. What, lookt he frowningly ?

Hor. A countenance more in sorrow then in anger.

Ham. Pale, or red ?

Hor. Nay, very pale.

Ham. And fixt his eyes upon you ?

Hor. Most constantly.

Ham. I would I had been there.

Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.

Ham. Very like, very like : staid it long ?

Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hun-

All. Longer, longer. (dred.

Hor. Not when I saw't.

Ham. His Beard was grisly ?

Hor. It was, I have seen it in his life,
A Sable Silver'd.

Ham. I'll watch to night ; perchance 'twill walk again.

Hor. I warrant you it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble fathers person,
I'll speak to it, though hell it self should gape
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto concealed this sight ;
Let it be trebble in your silence still :
And whatsoever else shall hap to night,
Give it an understanding but no tongue ;
I will require your loves ; so, fare ye well :
Upon the Platforme 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your Honor.

Exeunt.

Ham. Your love, as mine to you : farewell.

My fathers spirit in Armes ? All is not well :
I doubt some foul play : would the night were come ;
Till then sit still my soul ; foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'rewhelm them to mens eyes. Exit

Scena Tertia.

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.

Laer. My necessities are imbarck'd, farewell :
And sister, as the Winds give benefit,
And Convoy is assistant ; do not sleep,
But let me hear from you,

Ophe. Do you doubt that ?

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favours,
Hold it a fashion and a toy in Bloud ;
A Violet in the youth of Primy Nature ;
Forward, not permanent ; sweet, not lasting
The suppliance of a minute ; No more.

Ophe. No more but so.

Laer. Think it no more :
For nature creffant does not grow alone,
In thews and Bulk : but as his Temple waxes,
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withall. Perhaps he loves you now,
And now no foyle nor cautell doth besmerch
The vertue of his fear : but you must fear

His

His greatnesse weigh'd, his will is not his own:
 For he himself is subject to his Birth:
 He may not, as unvalued persons do,
 Carve for himself; for, on his choyce depends
 The sanctity and health of the whole State.
 And therefore must his choyce be circumscrib'd
 Unto the voyce and yielding of that body,
 Whereof he is the head. Then if he sayes he loves you,
 It fits your wisdome so far to believe it;
 As he in his peculiar Sect and force
 May give his saying deed: which is no further,
 Then the main voice of Denmark goes withall.
 Then weigh that losse your honor may sustain,
 If with two credent ear you list his Songs;
 Or lose your heart; or your chaste treasure open
 To his unmaistred importunity.

Fear it Ophelia, fear it my dear Sister,
 And keep within the rear of your affection;
 Out of the shot and danger of desire.
 The chariest maide is prodigal enough,
 If she unmask her beauty to the Moone:
 Vertue it self escapes not calumnious stroaks,
 The Canker galls the infant of the Spring
 Too oft before the Buttons be disclos'd,
 And in the morn and liquid dew of Youth,
 Contagious blastments are most imminent.
 Be wary then, best safety lies in fear;
 Youth to it self rebels, though none else near.

Ophe. I shall th' effect of this good Lesson keep,
 As watchmen to my heart: but good my Brother
 Do not as some ungracious Pastors do,
 Shew me the steep and thorny way to heaven;
 Whilest like a puffed and recklesse Libertine
 Himself, the Primrose path of dalliance treads,
 And reaks not his own read.

Laer. Oh, fear me not.

Enter Polonius.

I stay too long; but here my Father comes:
 A double blessing is a double grace;
 Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Polon. Yet here Laertes? Aboard, aboard for shame,
 The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
 And you are staid for there: my blessing with you:
 And these few Precepts in thy memory,
 See thou Character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,
 Nor any unproportion'd thought his Act:
 Be thou familiar; but by no means vulgar:
 The friends thou hast, and their adoption try'd,
 Grapple them to thy soul, with hoops of steel:
 But do not dull thy palm, with entertainment
 Of each unhatch'd, unfledg'd Comrade. Beware
 Of entrance to a quarrel: but being in
 Bear't that th' opposed may beware of thee.
 Give every man thine ear; but few thy voice:
 Take each mans censure: but reserve thy judgement:
 Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy;
 But not exprest in fancy; rich, not gaudy:
 For the apparel oft proclaims the man.
 And they in France of the best rank and station,
 Are of a most select and generous cheff in that.
 Neither a borrower, nor a lender be:
 For Loan oft loses both it self and friend:
 A borrowing dulls the edge of Husbandry.
 This above all; to thine own self be true:
 And it must follow, as the Night the Day,
 Thou canst not then be false to any man.

Farwell: my blessing season this in thee.

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my Lord.

Polon. The time invites you, go, your servants tend.

Laer. Farewell Ophelia, and remember well
 What I have said to you.

Ophe. 'Tis my memory lockt,

And you your self shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell.

Exit Laer.

Polon. What is't Ophelia, he said to you?

Ophe. So please you, something touching the L. Hamlet.

Polon. Marry, well bethought:

'Tis told me he hath very oft of late

Given private time to you; and you your self

Have of your audience been most free and bounteous,
 If it be so, as so it is put on me;

And that in way of caution: I must tell you,

You do not understand your self so clearly,

As it behooves my Daughter, and your honour.

What is between you, give me up the truth?

Ophe. He hath my Lord of late, made many tenders of his affection to me.

Polon. Affection, puh. You speak like a green Girle,
 Unstifted in such perillous circumstance.

Do you believe his tenders as you call them?

Ophe. I do not know, my Lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry I'll teach you; think your self a Baby,
 That you have tane his tenders for true pay,
 Which are not startling. Tender your self more dearly;
 Or not to crack the wind of the poor Phrase,
 Roaming it thus, you'll tender me a fool.

Ophe. My Lord, he hath importun'd me with love,
 In honorable fashion.

Polon. I, fashion you may call it, go to, go to.

Ophe. And hath given countenance to his speech,
 My Lord, with all the vows of heaven.

Polon. I, Springs to catch Woodcocks. I do know
 When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
 Gives the tongue vows: these blasés, daughter,
 Giving more light then heat; extinct in both,
 Even in their promise, as it is a making;
 You must not take for fire. For this time Daughter,
 Be somewhat scanter of your Maiden presence,
 Set your entreatments at a higher rate,
 Then a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet,
 Believe so much in him, that he is young,
 And with a larger tether may he walk,
 Then may be given you. In few, Ophelia,
 Do not believe his vows; for they are Broakers,
 Not of the eye, which their investments shew:
 But meer implorators of unholy Suits,
 Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds,
 The better to beguile. This is for all:
 I would not, in plain termes, from this time forth,
 Have you so slander any moment leisure,
 As to give words or talk with the Lord Hamlet:
 Look too't, I charge you; come your way.

Ophe. I shall obey my Lord.

Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, Marcellus.

Ham. The aire bites shrew'dly: it is very cold?

Hor. It is a nipping and eager aire.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No; it ha's strook.

(season,

Hor. Indeed I heard it not: then it drawes near the Wherein the Spirit held his wont to walk.

What

What do's this mean my Lord?

Ham. The King doth wake to night, and takes his rouse,
Keeps wassels, and the swaggering upspring reels,
And as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The Kettle Drum and Trumpet thus Bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custome?

Ham. I marry is't:

And to my mind, though I am native here,
And to the manner born: It is a custome
More honour'd in the breach, then the observance,

Enter Ghost.

Hor. Look my Lord, it comes.

Ham. Angels and Ministers of grace defend us:
Be thou a spirit of health, or Goblin damn'd,
Bring with thee aires from heaven, or blasts from hell,
Be thy events wicked or charitable,
Thou com'st in such a questionable shape
That I will speak to thee. I'll call thee Hamlet,
King, Father, Royal Dane: Oh, oh, answer me,
Let me not burst in ignorance; but tell
Why thy Canoniz'd bones hearse'd in death,
Have burst their Cearments, why the Sepulcher
Wherein we saw thee quietly Inurn'd,
Hath op'd his ponderous and Marble jaws,
To cast thee up again? What may this mean?
That thou dead Coarse again in compleat steel,
Reviv'st thus the glimpses of the Moon,
Making night hideous? and we fools of Nature,
So horribly to shake our disposition,
With thoughts beyond thee; reaches of our souls,
Say, why is this, wherefore? what should we do?

Ghost Beckens Hamlet.

Hor. It beckens you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire
To you alone.

Mar. Look with what curteous action
It wafts you to a more removed ground:
But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means,

Ham. It will not speak: then will I follow it.

Hor. Do not my Lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear?
I do not set my life at a Pins fee?
And for my soul what can it do to that?
Being a thing immortal as it self:
It waves me forth again; I'll follow it.

Hor. What if it tempt you toward the Floud my Lord?
Or to the dreadfull Sonnet of the Cliffe,
That beetles o're his base into the Sea,
And there assumes some other horrible forme,
Which might deprive your Sovereignty of Reason,
And draw you into madnesse? think of it.

Ham. It wafts me still: go on, I'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go my Lord.

Ham. Hold off your hand.

Hor. Be rul'd, you shall not go,

Ham. My fate cries out,
And makes each petty Artire in his body,
As hardy as the Nemean Lions Nerve:
Still am I call'd? Unhand me Gentlemen:
By heav'n, I'll make a Ghost of him that lets me:
I say away, go on, I'll follow thee.

Exeunt Ghost and Hamlet.

Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.

Mar. Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey him.

Hor. Have after, to what issue will this come?

Mar. Something is rotten in the State of Denmark.

Hor. Heaven will direct it.

Mar. Nay, let's follow him.

Exeunt.

Enter Ghost and Hamlet.

Ham. Where wilt thou lead me? speak; I'll go no
Ghost. Mark me. (further.)

Ham. I will.

Ghost. My hour is almost come,
When I to sulphurous and tormenting Flames
Must render up my self.

Ham. Alas poor Ghost.

Ghost. Pitty me not, but lend thy serious hearing
To what I shall unfold.

Ham. Speak, I am bound to hear.

Gho. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

Ham. What?

Ghost. I am thy fathers spirit.
Doom'd for a certain terme to walk the night;
And for the day confin'd to fast in fiers,
Till the foul crimes done in my dayes of Nature,
Are burnt and purg'd away: But that I am forbid
To tell the secrets of my Prison-house;
I could a Tale unfold, whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul, freez thy young blood,
Make thy two eyes like Starrs, start from their Spheres,
Thy knotty and combined locks to part,
And each particular hair to stand an end
Like Quills upon the fretfull Porpentine:
But this eternal blazon must not be
To ears of flesh and blood; list Hamlet, oh list,
If thou didst ever thy dear father love.

Ham. Oh heaven!

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural Murther.

Ham. Murther?

Gho. Murther most foul, as in the best it is;
But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.

Ham. Haste, haste me to know it,
That I with wings as swift
As Meditation, or the thoughts of Love,
May sweep to my Revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt,
And duller should'st thou be then the fat weed
That rots it self in ease, on Lethe Wharfe,
Would'st thou not stir in this. Now Hamlet hear:
It's given out, that sleeping in mine Orchard,
A Serpent stung me: so the whole ear of Denmark,
Is by a forged proceffe of my death
Rankly abus'd: But know thou noble youth,
The Serpent that did sting thy fathers life,
Now wears his Crown.

Ham. O my Prophetick soul: mine Uncle?

Ghost. I, that incestuous, that adulterate Beast
With witchcraft of his wits, hath traiterous gifts,
Oh wicked wit, and gifts, that have the power
So to seduce? Won to his shamefull Lust
The will of my most seeming vertuous Queen:
Oh Hamlet, what a falling off was there,
From me, whose love was of that dignity,
That it went hand in hand, even with the Vow
I made to her in Marriage; and to decline
Upon a Wretch, whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine. But Vertue, as it never will be moved,
Though Ledwnesse court it in a shape of heaven:
So Lust, though to a radiant Angell link'd,
Will seat it self in a Celestial bed, and prey in Garbage.

But

But soft, me thinks I sent the mornings Aire:
Brief let me be: sleeping within mine Orchard,
My custome alwayes in the afternoon;
Upon my secure hour thy Uncle stole
With juyce of curfed Hebenon in a Viol,
And in the Porches of mine ears did pour
The leaporous Distilment; whose effect
Holds such an enmity with bloud of Man,
That swift as Quick-silver it courses through
The natural Gates and Allies of the body;
And with a sudden vigour it doth posset
And curd, like Aygre droppings into Milk,
The thin and wholsome bloud: so did it mine
And a most instant Tetter bak'd about,
Most Lazar-like, with vile and loathsome cruft,
All my smooth body.

Thus was I, sleeping by a Brothers hand,
Of Life, of Crown, and Queen at once dispatcht:
Cut off even in the blossomes of my Sin,
Unhouzzled, disappointed, unnaneld,
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head,
Oh horrible, Oh horrible, most horrible:
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
Let not the Royal Bed of Denmark be
A Couch for Luxury and damned Incest,
But howsoever thou pursuest this Act,
Taint not thy mind: nor let thy soul contrive
Against thy Mother ought; leave her to heaven,
And to those thorns that in her bosome lodge,
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once,
The Glow-worme shews the Matine to be near,
And gins to pale his uneffectual Fire:
Adieu, adieu, Hamlet: remember me.

Exit.

Ham. Oh all you host of heaven! Oh Earth; what else?
And shall I couple hell? Oh fie: hold my heart;
And you my sinews, grow not instant Old;
But bear me stiffly up: remember thee?
I, thou poor Ghost, while memory holds a seat
In this distracted Globe: Remember thee?
Yea, from the table of my memory,
I'll wipe away all trivial fond Records,
All saws of books, all formes, all pressuures past,
That youth and observation coppied there;
And thy Commandment all alone shall live
Within the book and Volume of my brain,
Unmixt with baser matter; yes, yes, by heaven:
Oh most pernicious woman!
Oh Villain, Villain, smiling damned Villain!
My Tables, my Tables: meet it is I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile and be a Villain;
At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark;
So Uncle there you are: now to my word;
It is; adieu, adieu, Remember me: I have sworn't.

Hor. & Mar. within. My Lord, my Lord.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Mar. Lord Hamlet.

Hor. Heaven secure him.

Mar. So be it.

Hor. Illo, ho, ho, my Lord.

Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy; come bird, come.

Mar. How is't my Noble Lord?

Hor. What news, my Lord?

Ham. Oh wonderfull!

Hor. Good my Lord tell it.

Ham. No, you'll reveal it.

Hor. Not I, my Lord, by heaven.

Mar. Nor I, my Lord.

Ham. How say you then, would heart of man once
But you'll be secret? (think it?)

Both. I, by heav'n, my Lord.

Ham. There's ne're a villain dwelling in all Denmark
But he's an arrant Knave.

Hor. There needs no Ghost my Lord, come from the Grave to tell us this.

Ham. Why right, you are i'th'right;
And so without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands, and part:
You as your businesse and desires shall point you:
For every man has businesse and desire,
Such as it is: and for mine own poor part,
Look you, I'll go pray.

Hor. These are but wild and hurling words, my Lord.

Ham. I'm sorry they offended you heartily:
Yes faith, heartily:

Hor. There's no offence my Lord.

Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is my Lord,
And much offence too, touching this Vision here:
It is an honest Ghost, that let me tell you:
For your desire to know what is between us,
O're-master't as you may. And now good friends,
As you are Friends, Schollers, and Souldiers,
Give me one poor request.

Hor. What is't my Lord? we will.

Ham. Never make known what you have seen to night.

Both. My Lord we will not.

Ham. Nay, but swear't.

Hor. In faith my Lord, not I.

Mar. Nor I my Lord, in faith.

Ham. Upon my Sword.

Mar. We have sworn my Lord already.

Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.

Gho. Swear. Ghost cries under the Stage.

Ham. Ah ha boy, say'st thou so. Art thou there true-penny? Come on, you hear this fellow in the selleridge.
Consent to swear.

Hor. Propose my oath my Lord.

Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen.
Swear by my Sword.

Gho. Swear.

Ham. Hic & ubique? Then we'll shift for ground,
Come hither Gentlemen.

And lay your hands again upon my sword.
Never to speak of this that you have heard:
Swear by my Sword.

Gho. Swear.

Ham. Well said old Mole, can't work i'th'ground so
A worthy Pioner, once more remove good friend.

Hor. Oh day and night, but this is wondrous strange.

Ham. And therefore as a stranger bid it welcome.

There are more things in heaven and earth Horatio,
Then are dream't of in our Philosophy. But come,
Here as before, never so help you mercy,
How strange or odde so ere I bear my self:
(As I perchance hereafter shall think meet
To put an antick disposition on:)

That you at such time seeing me, never shall
With armes encombred thus, or thus, head shake;
Or by pronouncing of some doubtfull phrase;

As well, we know, or we could, and if we would,
Or if we list to speak; or there be and if there might,
Or such ambiguous giving out to note,

That

That you know ought of me ; this not to do :
So grace and mercy at your most need help you :
Swear.

Ghost. Swear.

Ham. Rest, rest perturbed Spirit : so Gentlemen,
With all my love commend me to you ;
And what so poor a man as Hamlet is,
May do t'expresse his love and friending to you,
God willing shall not lack : let us go in together,
And still your fingers on your lips I pray,
The time is out of joynt : Oh cursed spight,
That ever I was born to see it right.
Nay, come, let's go together.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Polonius and Reynoldo.

Pol. Give him his money, and those notes Reynoldo.

Reynol. I will my Lord.

Pol. You shall do marvels wisely : good Reynoldo.
Before you visit him you make inquiry
Of his behaviour.

Reyn. My Lord, I did intend it.

Polon. Marry, well said :

Very well said. Look you sir,
Enquire me first what Danskers are in Paris ;
And how, and who ; what means ; and where they keep :
What company, at what expence : and finding
By this encompassment and drift of question,
That they do know my son : Come you more near
Then your particular demands will touch it,
Take you as 'twere some distant knowledge of him,
And thus, I know his father and his friends,
And in part him. Do you mark this Reynoldo ?

Reynol. I, very well my Lord,

Polon. And in part him, but you may say not well ;
But if't be he I mean, he's very wilde ;
Addicted so and so ; and there put on him
What forgeries you please : marry, none so rank,
As may dishonor him : take heed of that :
But sir, such wanton, wilde, and usual slips,
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.

Reynol. As gaming my Lord.

Polon. I, or drinking, fencing, swearing,
Quarrelling, Drabbing. You may go so far.

Rey. My Lord that would dishonour him.

Polon. Faith no, as you may season it in the charge ;
You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to Incontinency ;
That's not my meaning ; but breath his faults so quaintly,
That they may seem the taints of liberty ;
The flash and out-break of a fiery mind,
A savagenesse in unreclaim'd bloud of general assault.

Reynol. But my good Lord.

Polon. Wherefore should you do this ?

Reynol. I my Lord, I would know that.

Polon. Marry sir, here's my drift,
And I believe it is a fetch of warrant :
You laying these slight sulleyes on my Son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i'th'working :
Mark you your party in converse ; him you would sound,
Having ever seen. In the prenominate crimes,

The youth you breath of guilty, be assur'd
He closes with you in this consequence :
Good sir, or so, or friend, or Gentleman.
According to the Phrase and the Addition,
Of man and Country.

Reynol. Very good my Lord.

Polon. And then sir do's he this ?

He do's : what was I about to say ?
I was about to say nothing : where did I leave ?

Reynol. At closes in the consequence :
At friend, or so, and Gentleman.

Polon. At closes in the consequence, I marry,
He closes with you thus. I know the Gentleman,
I saw him yesterday, or 'tother day ;
Or then, or then, with such and such, and as you say,
There was he gaming, there o'retook in's Rouse,
Their falling out at Tennis ; or perchance,
I saw him enter such a house of sail ;

Videlicet, a Brothel, or so forth. See you now ;
Your bait of falshood, takes this Cape of truth ;
And thus do we of wisdom and of reach
With Windleses, and with assaies of Byas,
By indirections find directions out :
So by my former Lecture and advice
Shall you my son ; you have me, have you not ?

Reynol. My Lord, I have.

Polon. God buy you ; fare you well.

Reynol. Good my Lord.

Polon. Observe his inclination in your self.

Reynol. I shall my Lord.

Polon. And let him ply his Musick.

Reynol. Well, my Lord.

Exit.

Enter Ophelia.

Polon. Farewell :

How now Ophelia, what's the matter ?

Ophe. Alas my Lord, I have been so affrighted.

Pol. With what, in the Name of Heaven ?

Ophe. My Lord, as I was sowing in my Chamber,
Lord Hamlet with his doublet all unbrac'd,
No Hat upon his head, his stockings foul'd,
Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his Ankle,
Pale as his shirt, his knees knocking each other,
And with a look so pitteous in purport,
As if he had been loosed out of Hell,
To speak of horrors : he comes before me.

Polon. Mad for thy love ?

Ophe. My Lord, I do not know : but truly I do fear it.

Polon. What said he ?

Ophe. He took me by the wrist.

Then goes he to the length of all his Arme ;
And with his other hand, thus o're his brow,
He falls to such perusal of my face,
As he would draw it. Long staid he so,
At last, a little shaking of my arme,
And thrice his head thus waving up and down,
He rais'd a sigh, so hideous and profound,
That it did seem to shatter all his bulk,
And end his being. That done, he lets go,
And with his head over his shoulders turn'd,
He seem'd to find his way without his eyes,
For out adoors he went without their help ;
And to the last, bended their light on me.

Polon. Go with me, I will go seek the King,
This is the very extasie of Love,
Whose violent property foredoes it self,

And

And leads the will to desperate Undertakings,
As oft as any passion under heaven,
That do's afflict our Natures. I am sorry,
What have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No my good Lord: but as you did command,
I did repell his Letters, and deny'd
His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.
I am sorry that with better speed and judgement
I had not quoted him. I fear he did but trifle,
And meant to wrack thee: but beshrew my jealousy:
It seems it is as proper to our Age,
To cast beyond our selves in our opinions,
As it is common for the younger sort
To lack discretion. Come go we to the King,
This must be known, which being kept close might move
More grief to bide, then hate to utter love. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrosse, and Guildenstare cum aliis.

King. Welcome dear Rosencrosse and Guildenstare.
Moreover, that we much did long to see you,
The need we have to use you, did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlet's transformation: so I call it,
Since not th'exterior, nor the inward man
Resembles that it was. What it should be
More then his fathers death, that thus hath put him:
So much from th'understanding of himself,
I cannot deem of. I intreat you both,
That being of so young dayes brought up with him
And since so Neighbour'd to his youth, and humor,
That you vouchsafe your rest here in our Court
Some little time: so by your Companies
To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather
So much as from Occasions you may glean,
That open'd lies within our remedy,

Qu. Good Gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you,
And sure I am, two men there are not living,
To whom he more adheres. If it will please you
To shew us so much gentry and good will,
As to expend your time with us a while,
For the supply and profit of our hope,
Your Visitation shall receive such thanks,
As fits a Kings remembrance.

Rosin. Both your Majesties
Might by the Sovereign power you have of us,
Put your dread pleasures, more into command
Then to Entreaty.

Guil. We both obey,
And here give up our selves, in the full bent,
To lay our services freely at your feet,
To be commanded.

King. Thanks Rosencrosse, and gentle Guildenstare.

Que. Thanks Guildenstare and gentle Rosencrosse,
And I beseech you instantly to visit
My too-much changed son.

Go some of ye,
And bring the Gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heavens make our presence and our practises,
Pleasant and helpfull to him. Exeunt.

Queen. Amen.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. The Ambassadors from Norway, my good Lord,
Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good News.

Pol. Have I, my Lord? Assure you, my good Liege,
I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,
Both to my God, one to my gracious King:
And I do think, or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of Policy, so be sure
As I have us'd to do, that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet's Lunacy.

King. O speak of that, that I do long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to th' Ambassadors,
My News shall be the News to that great Feast.

King. Thy self do grace to them, and bring them in.
He tells me my sweet Queen, that he hath found
The head and source of all your sons distemper.

Qu. I doubt it is no other, but the main,
His fathers death, and our o're-hasty Marriage.

Enter Polonius, Voltimand, and Cornelius.

King. Well, we shall sift him. Welcome good Friends:
Say Voltimand, what from our Brother Norway?

Volt. Most fair return of Greetings, and Desires.
Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His Nephews Levies, which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polak:
But better look'd into, he truly found
It was against your Highnesse, whereat grieved,
That so his Sicknesse, Age, and Impotence
Was falsely born in hand, sends out Arrests
On Fortinbras, which he (in brief) obeys,
Receives rebuke from Norway: and in fine,
Makes Vow before his Uncle, never more
To give th'assay of armes against your Majesty.
Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,
Gives him three thousand Cronws in annual Fee,
And his commission to imploy those Souldiers
So levied as before, against the Polak:
With an intreaty herein further shewn,
That it might please you to give quiet passe
Through your Dominions for his enterprize.
On such regards of safety and allowance,
As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well:
And at our more consider'd time we'll read,
Answer, and think upon this Businesse.
Mean time we thank you, for your well-look't labor.
Go to your rest, at night we'll Feast together.
Most welcome home. Exit Ambas.

Pol. This businesse is very well ended.
My Liege and Madam, to expostulate
What Majesty should be, what Duty is,
Why day is day; night, night; and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste Night, Day, and Time.
Therefore, since Brevity is the soul of Wit,
And tediousnesse, the limbs and outward flourishes,
I will be brief. Your Noble Son is mad:
Mad call I it; for to define true Madnesse,
What is't, but to be nothing else but mad.
But let that go.

Qu. More matter, with lesse Art.

Pol. Madam, I swear I use no Art at all:
That he is mad 'tis true: 'Tis true, 'tis pittie,
And pittie it is true: A foolish figure,
But farewell it: for I will use no Art.

Mad

Mad let us grant him then : and now remains
That we find out the cause of this effect,
Or rather say, the cause of this defect ;
For this effect defective, comes by cause,
Thus it remaines, and the remainder thus. Perpend.
I have a Daughter : have, whilst she is mine,
Who in her Duty and Obedience, marke,
Hath given me this : now gather, and surmise.

The Letter.

To the Celestiall, and my Soules Idoll, the most beautified Ophelia.

That's an ill Phrase, a vilde Phrase, beautified is a vilde
Phrase : but you shall hear these in her excellent white bosome, these.

Quee. Came this from Hamlet to her.

Pol. Good Madam stay awhile, I will be faithfull.

Doubt thou, the Starres are fire,

Doubt, that the Sun doth move :

Doubt Truth to be a Liar,

But never Doubt, I love.

O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these Numbers : I have not Art to reckon my groanes ; but that I love thee best, oh most Best believe it. Adieu.

Thine evermore, most dear Lady, whilst this Machine is to him, Hamlet.

This in Obedience hath my Daughter shew'd me :
And more above hath his soliciting,
As they fell out by Time, by meanes, and place,
All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she receiv'd his Love ?

Pol. What doe you think of me ?

King. As of a man, faithfull and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so, But what might you think?

When I had seen his hot love on the wing,
As I perceived it, I must tell you that
Before my Daughter told me, what might you
Or my dear Majesty your Queen here, think,
If I had play'd the Deske or Table-book,
Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumbe,
Or look'd upon this Love, with idle sight,
What might you think ? No, I went round to work,
And my young Mistris thus I did bespeak ;
Lord Hamlet is a Prince out of thy Sphere,
This must not be : and then, I precepts gave her,
That she should lock her self from his Resort,
Admit no Messengers, receive no Tokens :
Which done, she took the fruits of my Advice,
And he repulsed, a short Tale to make,
Fell into a Sadnesse, then into a Fast,
Thence to a Watch, thence into a Weaknesse,
Thence to a Lightnesse, and by this declension
Into the Madnesse whereon now he raves,
And all we waile for.

King. Doe you think 'tis this ?

Quee. It may be very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time, I'de fain know that,
That I have positively said, 'tis so,
When it prov'd otherwise ?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise,
If Circumstances lead me, I will find
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
Within the Center.

King. How may we try it further ?

Pol. You know sometimes
He walkes four houres together, here

In the Lobby.

Quee. So he has indeed.

Pol. At such a time I'le loose my Daughter to him,
Be you and I behind an Arras then,
Marke the encounter : If he love her not,
And be not from his reason faine thereon ;
Let me be no Assistant for a State,
And keep a Farme and Carters,

King. We will try it.

Enter Hamlet reading on a Book.

Quee. But look where sadly the poor wretch
Comes reading.

Pol. Away I doe beseech you, both away,
I'le boord him presently. Exit King and Queen.

Oh give me leave. How does my good Lord Hamlet ?

Ham. Well, god-a-mercy.

Pol. Doe you know me, my Lord ?

Ham. Excellent, excellent well : y'are a Fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my Lord.

Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man.

Pol. Honest, my Lord ?

Ham. I, Sir, to be honest as this world goes, is to be one pick'd out of two thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my Lord.

Ham. For if the Sun breed Maggots in a dead Dog, being a good kissing Carrion-----

Have you a Daughter ?

Pol. I have, my Lord.

Ham. Let her not walk ith' Sun : Conception is a blessing, but not as your Daughter may conceive. Friend look too't.

Pol. How say you by that ? Still harping on my Daughter : yet he knew me not at first ; he said I was a Fishmonger : he is far gone, far gone : and truly in my youth, I suffered much extremity for love : very near this. I'le speak to him again. What doe you read, my Lord ?

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my Lord ?

Ham. Between whom ?

Pol. I mean the matter you mean, my Lord.

Ham. Slanders, Sir : for the Satyricall slave sayes here, that old men have gray Beards ; that their faces are wrinkled ; their eyes purging thick Amber, or Plum-Tree
Gumme : and that they have a plentifull lock of Wit.
together with weak Hammes. All which, Sir, though I most powerfully, and potently believe, yet I hold it not Honesty to have it thus set down : For you yourself,
Sir, should be old as I am, if like a Crab you could go backward.

Pol. Though this be madnesse.

Yet there is Method in't : will you walke
Out of the ayre, my Lord ?

Ham. Into my Grave ?

Pol. Indeed that is our oth' Ayre :

How pregnant (sometimes) his replies are ?
A happinesse,

That often Madnesse hits on,
Which Reason and Sanity could not
So prosperously be deliver'd of.

I will leave him,

And suddenly contrive the meanes of meeting
Between him, and my Daughter.

My honourable Lord, I will most humbly
Take my leave of you.

R r r

Ham.

Ham. You cannot, Sir, take from me any thing, that I will more willingly part withall, except my life, my life.

Polon. Fare you well, my Lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools.

Polon. You go to seek my Lord Hamlet; there he is.

Enter Rosincros and Guildenstar.

Rosin. God save you, Sir.

Guild. Mine honour'd Lord?

Rosin. My most dear Lord?

Ham. My excellent good friends? How dost thou Guildenstar? Oh, Rosincros, good Lads: How doe ye both?

Rosin. As the indifferent Children of the earth.

Guild. Happy, in that we are not over-happy: on Fortunes Cap, we are not the very Button.

Ham. Nor the Soales of her Shooe?

Rosin. Neither, my Lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waste, or in the middle of her favour?

Guild. Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of Fortune? Oh, most true: she is a Strumpet. Whats the newes.

Rosin. None, my Lord, but that the World's grown honest.

Ham. Then is Doomes day near: but your newes is not true. Let me question inore in particular: what have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Guild. Prison, my Lord?

Ham. Denmark's a Prison.

Rosin. Then is the World one.

Ham. A goodly one, in which there are many Confines, Wards, and Dungeons; Denmark being one o' th' worst.

Rosin. We think not so, my Lord.

Ham. Why then 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so: to me it is a prison.

Rosin. Why then your Ambition makes it one: 'tis too narrow for your minde.

Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a Nut-shell, and count my self a King of infinite space; were it not that I have had dreames.

Guild. Which dreames indeed are Ambition: for the very substance of the Ambitious, is meerly the shadow of a Dreame.

Ham. A dreame it self is but a shadow.

Rosin. Truly, and I hold Ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadowes shadow.

Ham. Then are our Beggars bodies; and our Monarchs, and out stretcht Heroes, the Beggars shadowes: shall we to th' Court: for, by my fey I cannot reason?

Both. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter. I will not sort you with the rest of my servants: for to speak to you like an honest man: I am most dreadfully attended; but in the beaten way of friendship. What make you at Elfsnoore?

Rosin. To visit you, my Lord, no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halspenny; were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, deale justly with me: come, come; nay speak.

Guild. What should we say, my Lord?

Ham. Why any thing. But to the purpose; you were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks; which your modesties have not craft enough to colour, I know the good King and Queen have sent for you.

Rosin. To what end, my Lord?

Ham. That you must teach me: but let me conjure you by the rights of your fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear, a better proposer could charge you withall; be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for or no.

Rosin. What say you?

Ham. Nay then I have an eye of you: if you love me, hold not off.

Guild. My Lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery of your secrecy to the King and Queen: moult no feather, I have of late, but wherefore I know not, lost all my mirth, forgone all custome of exercise; and indeed, it goes so heavenly with my disposition; that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterill Promontory; this most excellent Canopy the Ayre look you this brave o're-hanging, this Majestickall Roof, fretted with golden fire; why, it appeared no other thing to me, then a foule and peitilient congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How Noble in Reason? how infinite in faculty? in forme and moving how expresse and admirable? in Action, how like an Angel? in apprehension, how like a god? the beauty of the world, the Parragon of Animals; und yet to me, what is this Quintessence of Dust? Man delights not me; no, nor Woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so.

Rosin. My Lord, there was no such stufte in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, when I said, Man delights not me?

Rosin. To think my Lord, if you delight not in Man, what Lenton entertainment the Players shall receive from you: we coated them on the way, and hither are they comming to offer you Service.

Ham. He that playes the King shall be welcome; his Majesty shall have Tribute of me: the adventurous Knight shall use his Foyle and Target: The Lover shall not sigh gratis, the humorous man shall end his part in peace: the Clown shall make those laugh, whose lungs are tickled ath' sere: and the Lady shall say her mind freely; or the blank Verse shall halt for't: what Players are they?

Rosin. Even those you were wont to take delight in the Tragedians of the City.

Ham. How chanches it they travell? their residence both in reputation and profit was better both wayes.

Rosin. I think their Inhibition comes by the meanes of the late innovation?

Ham. Doe they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the City? Are they so follow'd?

Rosin. No indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? doe they grow rusty?

Rosin. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace; But there is, Sir, an airy of Children, little Yases, that cry out on the top of question; and are most tyrannically clapt for't: these are now the fashion, fashion, and so be-rattle the common Stages (so they call them) that many wearing Rapiers, are afraid of Goose Quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What are they Children? Who maintains 'em? How are they escoted? Will they pursue the Quality no longer then they can sing? Will they not say afterwards if they should grow themselves to common Players (as it is like most if their meanes are no better) their Writers doe them wrong to make them exclaim against their own Succession.

Rosin. Faith there has been much to doe on both sides: and the Nation holds it no sin, to tarre them to controversy. There was for a while, no money bid for argument, unlesse the Poet and the Player went to Cuffes in the Question.

Ham. Is't possible?

Guild. Oh there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Doe the Boyes carry it away?

Rosin. I that they doe my Lord, Hercules & his load too.

Ham. It is not strange for mine Unkle is King of Denmark, and those that would make mowes at him while my Father lived; give twenty, forty, an hundred Ducates a piece, for his picture in Little. There is something in this more then Naturall, if Philosophy could find it out.

Flourish for the Players.

Gild. There are the Players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elfsinore: your hands, come: The appurtenance of Welcome, is Fashion and Ceremony. Let me comply with you in the Garbe, lest my extent to the Players (which I tell you must shew fairly outward) should more appear like entertainment then yours. You are welcome: but my Unkle Father, and Aunt Mother are deceiv'd.

Guild. In what, my dear Lord?

Ham. I am but mad North, North-West: when the Wind is Southerly, I know a Hawke from a Handsaw.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be with you, Gentlemen,

Ham. Heark you Guildestar, and you too: at each ear a hearer: that great Baby you see there, is not yet out of his swathing clouts.

Rosin. Happily he's the second time come to them: for they say, an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will Prophesie, He comes to tell me of the Players. Mark it, you say right, Sir: for a Munday morning 'twas so indeed.

Pol. My Lord, I have newes to tell you.

Ham. My Lord, I have newes to tell you, When Roscius an Actor in Rome-----

Pol. The Actors are come hither, my Lord.

Ham. Buzze, buzze.

Pol. Upon mine honour.

Ham. Then can each Actor on his Asse-----

Pol. The best Actors in the world, either for Tragedy, Comedy, History, Pastorall: Pastorall-Comickall-Historicall-Pastorall: Tragicall-Historicall; Tragicall-Comickall-Historicall-Pastorall: Scène indivible, or Poem unlimited. Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light, for the law of Writ, and the Liberty. These are the onely men.

Ham. O Jephtha, Judge of Israel, what a Treasure hadst thou?

Pol. What a Treasure had he, my Lord?

Ham. Why one fair Daughter, and no more.

The which he loved passing well.

Pol. Still on my Daughter.

Ham. Am I not ith' right, old Jephtha?

Pol. If you call me Jephtha, my Lord, I have a Daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay that followes not.

Pol. What followes then, my Lord?

Ham. Why, as by lot, God wot? and then you know, It came to passe, as most like it was: the first row of the Pans Chançon will shew you more. For look where my Abridgements come.

Enter four or five Players.

Y'are welcome Masters, welcome all. I am glad to see thee well; welcome good friends. Oh my old friend? Thy face is valiant since I saw thee last: Com'st thou to heard me in Denmark? what my young Lady and Mistress? Berlady your Lordship is nearer heaven, then when I saw you last, by the altitude of a Choppine. Pray God your voyce, like a piece of uncurrant gold, be not crack'd within the Ring. Masters, you are all welcome: we'll c'ne to't like French Faulconers, flye at any thing we see: we'll have a speech straight. Come, give us a taste of your quality: come, a passionate speech.

1. Play. What speech, my Lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never Acted: or if it was, not above once, for the Play I remember pleas'd not the Million, 'twas Cantary to the Generall: but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgement in such matters, cryed in the top of mine) an excellent Play; well digested in the Scènes, set down with as much modesty, as cunning. I remember one said, there was no Sallers in the lines, to make the matter favoury; nor no matter in the phrase, that might indite the Author of affectation, but call'd it an honest method. One chief speech in it, I chiefly lov'd, 'twas Aneas Tale to Dido, and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priams slaughter. If it live in your memory, begin at this Line, let me see, let me see: The rugged Pyrrhus, like th Hyrcean Beast. It is not so: it begins with Pyrrhus.

The rugged Pyrrhus, he whose Sable Armes Black as he purpose, did the night resemble When his lay couched in the Ominous Horse, Hath now this dread and black Complexion smear'd With Heraldry more dismal: head to foot Now is he to take Geules, horridly Trick'd With blood of Fathers, Mothers, Daughters, Sons, Bak'd and impasted, with the parching streets, That lend a tyrannous, and damned light To their vilde Murthers, roasted in wrath and fire, And thus o'refizd with coagulate gore, Witheyes like Carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old Grandfire Priam seeks.

Pol. Fore God, my Lord, well spoken, with good accent, and good discretion.

1. Play. Anon he findes him, Striking too short at Greeks. His antick Sword, Rebellious to his Arme, lies where it falls Repugnant to command: unequall match, Pyrrhus at Priam drives, in rage strikes wide: But with the whiffe and winde of his fell Sword, Th'unnerved father falls. Then senselesse Illium, Seeming to feele his blow, with flaming top Stoops to his Bace, and with a hideous crash Takes Prisoner Pyrrhus care. For loe, his Sword Which was declining on the Milky head Of Reverend Priam, seem'd ith' Aire to Rick:

So

So as a Tirant Pyrrhus stood,
And lik'd a Newtrall to his will and matter, did nothing.
But as we often see against some storme,
A silence in the heavens, the Rack stand still,
The bold windes speechlesse, and the Orbe below
As hush as death : Anon the dreadfull Thunder
Doth rend the Region. So after Pyrrhus pause,
A rowfed Vengeance sets him new a work,
And never did the Cyclops hammers fall
On Mars his Armour, forg'd for proof Eterne,
With lesse remorse then Pyrrhus bleeding sword
Now falls on Priam,
Out, out, thou Strumpet-Fortune, all you gods,
In generall Synod take away her power :
Break all the Spokes and Fallies from her wheele,
And bowle the round Nave down the hill of heaven.
As low as to the fiends.

Pol. This is two long.

Ham. It shall to th' Barbers with your Beard. Pre-thee say on : He's for a Jigge, or a tale of Bawdry, or he sleeps. Say on ; come to Hecuba.

1. Play. But who, O who, had seen the Mobled Queen.

Ham. The Mobled Queen ?

Pol. That's good : Mobled Queen is good.

1. Play. Run bare-foot up and down,
Threatning the flame
With Biffon Rheume : a clout about that head,
VVhere late the Diadem stood, and for a Robe
About her lank and all o're-teamed Loynes,
A Blanket in th' alarum of fear caught up.
VVho this had seen, with tongue in Venome steep'd,
Gainst fortunes State, would Treason have pronounc'd ?
But if the gods themselves did see her then,
VVhen she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport
In mincing with his Sword her Husbands limbes.
The instant Burst of Clamour that she made
(Unless things mortall meant them not all)
VVould have made milche the burning eyes of heaven,
And passion in the Gods.

Pol. Look where he has not turn'd his colour, and has teares in's Eyes. Pray you no more.

Ham. 'Tis well, I'll have thee speak out the rest soon.
Good my Lord, will you see the Players well bestow'd.
Doe ye hear, let them be well us'd : for they are the abstracts, and brief Chronicles of the time. After your death, you were better have a bad Epitaph, then their ill report while you lived.

Pol. My Lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. Godsbodykins man, better. Use every man after his desert, and who should scape whipping : use them after your own Honour and Dignity. The lesse they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.

Exit Polonius.

Ham. Follow him friends : we'll hear a Play to morrow. Dost thou hear me, old friend, can you play the murder of Gonzago ?

Play. I, my Lord.

Ham. We'll ha't to morrow night. You could for a need study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down, and insert in't ? Could ye not ?

Play. I, my Lord.

Ham. Very well. Follow that Lord, and look you mock him not. My good friends, I'll leave you till night, you are welcome to Elfinore.

Rein. Good my Lord.

Manet Hamlet.

Exeunt.

Ham. I so, god buy'ye : Now I am alone.
Oh what a Rogue and Pezant slave am I ?
Is it not monstrous that this Player here,
But in a Fiction, in a dreame of Passion,
Could force his Soule so to his whole conceit,
That from her working, all his visage warm'd ;
Teares in his eyes, distraction in's aspect,
A broken voyce, and his whole Function suiting
With formes, to his conceit ? and all for nothing ?
For Hecuba ?
What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,
That he should weep for her ? what would he doe,
Had he the motive and the Cue for passion
That I have, he would drown the Stage with teares,
And cleave the generall eare with horrid speech :
Make mad the guilty, and apale the free.
Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed,
The very faculty of Eyes and Eares. Yet I,
A dull and muddy-metled Rascall, peake
Like John-a-deames, unpregnant of my cause,
And can say nothing : No, not for a King,
Upon whose property, and most dear life,
A damn'd defeat was made. Am I a Coward ?
Who calls me Villain ? breaks my pate a-crosse ?
Plucks off my Beard, and blowes it in my face ?
Tweaks me by th' Nose, gives me the Lye ith' Throat,
As deep as to the Lungs ? who does me this ?
Ha ? Why should I take it ? for it cannot be,
But I am Pigeon-Liver'd, and lack Gall
To make Oppression bitter, or ere this,
I should have fatted all the Region Kites
With this Slaves Offall, bloody : a Bawdy villain, Remorselesse, Treacherous, Lecherous, kindlesse villain !
Oh Vengeance !
Who ? what an Ass am I ? I sure, this is most brave,
That I, the Son of the dear murdered,
Prompted to my revenge by heaven, and hell,
Must (like a Whore) unpack my heart with words,
And fall a cursing like a very Drab,
A Scullion ? Fye upon't. Foh. About my Brain.
I have heard, that guilty Creatures sitting at a Play,
Have by the very cunning of the Scene,
Been struck so to the soule, that presently
They have proclaim'd their Malefactions.
For Murder, though it have no tongue, will speak
With most miraculous Organ. I'll have these Players,
Play something like the murder of my Father,
Before mine Unkle. I'll observe his looks,
I'll rent him to the quick : if he but blench
I know my course. The Spirit that I have seen
May be the Devil, and the Devil hath power
T'assume a pleasing shape, yea, and perhaps
Out of my weaknesse, and my melancholly,
As he is very potent with such Spirits,
Abuses me to damn me. I'll have grounds
More Relative then this : The Play's the thing,
Wherein I'll catch the Conscience of the King. Exit.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosincros, Guildenstar, and Lords.

King. And can you by no drift of circumstance
Get from him why he puts on this Confusion,
Grating so harshly all his dayes of quiet

With

With turbulent and dangerous Lunacy.

Rosin. He does confesse he fees himself distracted,
But from what cause he will by no meanes speak.

Guild. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded,
But with a crafty Madnesse keeps aloof:
When we would bring him on to some Confession
Of his true state,

Quee. Did he receive you well?

Rosin. Most like a Gentleman.

Guild. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Rosin. Niggard of question, but of our demands
Most free in his reply.

Quee. Did you assay him to any pastime?

Rosin. Madam, it so fell out, that certain Players
Weo're-took on the way: of these we told him,
And there did seem in him a kind of Joy
To hear of it: They are about the Court,
And (as I think) they have already order
This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true:

And he beseech'd me to intreat your Majesties
To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart, and it doth much content me
To hear him so inclin'd. Good Gentlemen,
Give him a further edge, and drive his purpose on
To these delights.

Rosin. We shall, my Lord,

Exeunt.

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too,
For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither,
That he, as 'twere by accident, may there
Affront Ophelia. Her Father, and my self (lawfull espials)
Will so bestow our selves, that seeing unseen
We may of their encounter frankly judge,
And gather by him, as he is behaved,
If 't be th'affliction of his love, or no.
That thus he suffers for.

Quee. I shall obey you:

And for your part, Ophelia, I doe wish
That your good beauties be the happy cause
Of Hamlets wildnesse: so shall I hope your Virtues
Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your Honours.

Ophe. Madam, I wish it may.

Pol. Ophelia, walk you here. Gracious so please ye
We will bestow our selves: Read on this Book,
That shew of such an exercise may colour
Your loneliness. We are oft to blame in this
'Tis too much prov'd, that with Devotions visage,
And pious Action, we do surge o're
The Devil himself.

King. Oh 'tis true:

How smart a lash that speech doth give my Conscience?
The Harlots Cheek beautied with plaistring Art
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it,
Then is my deed, to my most painted word,
Oh heavy burthen!

Pol. I hear him coming, let's withdraw, my Lord.

Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the Question:
Whether 'tis Nobler in the mind to suffer
The Slings and Arrowes of outrageous Fortune,
Or to take Armes against a Sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them: to dye, to sleep
No more: and by a sleep, to say we end
The heart-ake, and the thousand naturall shocks

That flesh is heir to? 'Tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die to sleep,
To sleep, perchance to dreame; I, there's the rub,
For in that sleep of death, what dreames may come,
When he hath shuffled off this mortall coyle,
Must give us pause. There's the respect
That makes Calamity of so long life:
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The Oppressors wrong, the poor mans Contumely,
The pangs of dispriz'd Love, the Lawes delay,
The insolence of Office, and the spurnes
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his Quietus make
With a bare Bodkin? Who would these Fardles bear
To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,
The undiscovered Country, from whose Borne
No Traveller returns, puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Then flye to others that we know not of.
Thus Conscience does make Cowards of us all,
And thus the Native hue of Resolution
Is sicklied o're, with the pale cast of thought,
And enterprizes of great pith and moment,
With this regard their Currants turn away,
And loose the name of Action. Soft you now,
The fair Ophelia? Nymph, in thy Horizons
Be all my sins remembered.

Ophe. Good my Lord,

How does your honour for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thank you: well, well, well.

Ophe. My Lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to redeliver.

I pray you now, receive them.

Ham. No, no, I never gave you ought.

Ophe. My honour'd Lord, I know right well you did,
And with them words of so sweet breath compos'd,
As made the things more rich, then perfume left:
Take these again, for to the Noble mind
Rich gifts wax poor, when givers prove unkind.
There, my Lord.

Ham. Ha, ha: are you honest?

Ophe. My Lord.

Ham. Are you faire?

Ophe. What meanes your Lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest and fair, your Honesty should admit no discourse to your Beauty.

Ophe. Could beauty, my Lord, have better Commerce
then your honesty?

Ham. I truly: for the power of beauty, will sooner transforme honesty from what it is, to a Bawd, then the force of honesty can translate Beauty into his likeness.
This was sometimes a Paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Ophe. Indeed, my Lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me. For virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it. I loved you not.

Ophe. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a Nunnery. Why would'st thou be a breeder of Sinners? I am my self indifferent honest, but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were bet-te, my Mother had not born me. I am very proud, revengefull. Ambitious, with more offenses at my beck, then I have thoughts to put them in imagination, to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such

Fellowes. as I do crawling between Heaven and Earth. We are arrant Knaves all, believe none of us. Go thy wayes to a Nunnery. Where's your Father?

Ophe. At home, my Lord.

Ham. Let the doores be shut upon him, that he may play the Fool no way, but in's own house. Farewell.

Ophe. O help him, you sweet heavens.

Ham. If thou do'st Marry, I'll give thee this Plague for thy Dowry. Be thou as chaste as Ice, as pure as Snow, thou shalt not escape Calumny. Get thee to a Nunnery. Go, farewell. Or if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool: for wife men know well enough, what monsters you make of them. To a Nunnery, go, and quickly too. Farewell.

Ophe. O heavenly Powers, restore him.

Ham. I have heard of your prating too, well enough. God has given you one pace, and you make your self another: you gidge, you amble, and you lisse, and nick-name Gods Creatures, and make your wantonnesse, your ignorance. Go, I'll no more on't, it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more Marriages. Those that are married already, all but one shall, the rest shall keep as they are, To a Nunnery, go. Exit Hamlet.

Ophe. O what a Noble mind is here o're-thrown?
The Courtiers, Soldiers, Schollars? Eye, tongue, sword,
Th'expectancy and Rose of the fair State,
The glasse of fashion, and the mould of forme,
Th'observ'd of all Observers, quite, quite down.
I am of Ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the Honey of his Musick Vowes:
Now see that Noble, and most Sovraign Reason,
Like sweet Bells jangled out of tune, and harsh,
That unmatch'd fortune and feature of blown youth,
Blasted with extasie. Oh woe is me,
T'have seen what I have seen: see what I see.

Enter King, and Polonius.

King. Love? his affections doe not that way tend,
Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,
Was not like Madnesse. There's something in his soule,
O're which his Melancholly sits on brood,
And I doe doubt the hatch, and the disclose
Will be some danger, which how to prevent,
I have in quick determination.

Thus set it down. He shall with speed to England
For the demand of our neglected Tribute:
Haply the Seas and Countreys different
With variable Objects, shall expell

This something settled matter in his heart:
Whereon his brains still beating, puts him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you on't?

Pol. It shall doe well. But yet do I believe
The Origin and Commencement of this grief
Sprung from neglected love. How now, Ophelia?

You need not tell u, what Lord Hamlet said,
We heard it all. My Lord, doe as you please,
But if you hold it fit after the Play,
Let his Queen Mother all alone intreat him
To shew his Grievs: let her be round with him,
And I'll be plac'd, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference. If she find him not,
To England send him: Or confine him where Your wisdoms best shall think.

King. It shall be so:
Madnesse in great Ones, must not unwatch'd go.

Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet, and two or three of the Players.

Ham. Speak the Speech I pray you, as I pronounc'd it to you trippingly on the Tongue. But if you mouth it, as many of your Players do, I had as lieve the Town-Cryer had spoke my Lines: Nor do not saw the aire too much with your hand thus, but use all gently; for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) the whirl-wind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothnesse. O it offends me to the Soule, to see a robustious Perriwig-parted fellow, tear a Passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the eares of the Groundlings: who (for the most part) are capable of nothing, but inexplicable dumb shewes, and noyse: I could have such a fellow whipt for o're-doing Termagant: it out-Herods Herod. Pray you avoid it.

Player. I warrant your Honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither: but let your own Discretion be your Tutor. Sute the Action to the word, the word to the Action, with this speciall observance: That you o're-stop not the modesty of Nature; for any thing so over-done, is from the purpose of Playing, whose end both at the first and now, was and is, to hold as 'twere the Mirrour up to Nature; to shew Virtue her own Feature, Scorn her own Image, and the very Age and Body of the Time, his form and pressure. Now, this over-done, or come tardy off, though it make the unskillfull laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one, must in your allowance o're-sway a whole Theatre of others, Oh, there be Players that I have seen Play, and heard others praise, and that highly (not to speak it prophanely) that neither having the accent of Christians, nor the gate of Christian, Pagan, or Norman, have so strutted and bellowed, that I have thought some of Natures Journey-men had made men, and not made them well, they imitated Humanity so abominably.

Play. I hope we have reform'd that indifferently with us, Sir.

Ham. O reform it altogether. And let those that play your Clowns, speak no more then is set down for them. For there be of them, that will of themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren Spectators to laugh too, though in the mean time, some necessary question of the Play be then to be considered: that's Villanous, and shews a most pittifull Ambition in the Fool that uses it. Go make you ready. Exeunt Players.

Enter Polonius, Rosencros, and Guildenstar.

How now, my Lord?
Will the King hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the Queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the Players make haste. Exit Polonius.
Will you two help to hasten them?

Both. We will, my Lord. Exeunt.

Enter Horatio.

Ham. What hoa, Horatio?

Hora. Here, sweet Lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'ne as just a man
As e're my Conversation coap'd withall.

Hora. O my dear Lord.

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter:
For what advancement may I hope from thee,
That no Revenue hast, but thy good spirits

To feed and cloathe thee. Why should the poor be flat-
No, let the Candied tongue, like absurd pomp, (ter'd ?
And crook the pregnant Hinges of the knee,
Where thrift may follow faining ? Dost thou hear,
Since my dear Soule was Mistris of my choyse,
And could of men distinguish, her election
Hath seal'd thee for her self. For thou hast been
As one in suffering all, that suffers nothing.
A man that fortune buffets, and rewards
Hath tane with equall thanks. And blest are those,
Whose blood and Judgement are so well co-mingled,
That they are not a Pipe for fortunes finger.
To sound what stop she please. Give me that man,
That is not Passions Slave, and I will wear him
In my hearts Core : I, in my heart of heart,
As I doe thee. Something too much of this.
There is a Play to night before the King,
One Scene of it comes near the Circumstance
Which I have told thee, of my Fathers death.
I prethee, when thou seest that Act a-foot,
Even with the Comment of my Soule
Observe mine Unkle : if his occulted guilt,
Do not it self unkennell in one speech,
It is a damned Ghost that we have seen :
And my imaginations are as soule
As Vulcan's Styth. Give him needfull note,
For I mine eyes will rivet to his face,
And after we will both our judgements joyn,
To censure of his seeming.

Hora. Well, my Lord.
If he steale ought the whil't this Play is playing,
And scape detecting, I will pay the Theft.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosincros, Guildenstar, and other Lords attendant, with his Guard carrying Torches. Danish March. Sound a Flourish.

Ham. They are comming to the Play : I must be idle.
Get you a place.

King. How fares my Cousin Hamlet ?

Ham. Excellent ifaith, of the Camelions dish : I eat the Aire promise-cramm'd, you cannot feed Capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet, these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine. Now my Lord, you plaid once ith' University, you say ?

Polon. That I did, my Lord, and was accounted a good Actor

Ham. And what did you enact ?

Polon. I did enact Julius Caesar, I was kill'd ith' Capitoll : Brutus kill'd me.

Ham. It was a bruit part of him, to kill so Capitall a Calf there. Be the Players ready ?

Rosin. I, my Lord, they stay upon your patience.

Quee. Come hither, my good Hamlet, sit by me.

Ham. No, good Mother, here's Mettle more attractive.

Polon. Oh ho, doe you mark that ?

Ham. Lady, shall I lye in your Lap ?

Ophe. No, my Lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your Lap ?

Ophe. I, my Lord.

Ham. Do you think I meant Country matters ?

Ophe. I think nothing, my Lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between Maids Legs.

Ophe. What is, my Lord ?

Ham. Nothing.

Ophe. You are merry, my Lord ?

Ham. Who I ?

Ophe. I, my Lord.

Ham. Oh God, your onely Jigge-maker : what should a man doe, but be merry. For look you how cheerfully my Mother looks, and my Father di'd within's two houres.

Ophe. Nay, 'tis twice two moneths, my Lord.

Ham. So long ? Nay then let the Devil wear black, for I'll have a Suit of Sables. Oh heavens ! dye two moneths ago, and not forgotten yet ? then there's hope,
a great mans Memory may out-live his life half a year :
But berlady he must build Churches then : or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the Hobby-horse, whose Epitaph is, for o, for o, the Hobby-horse is forgot.

Hoboyes play. The dumbe shew enters.

Enter a King and Queen, very lovingly ; the Queen embracing him. She kneeles ; and makes shew of Protection unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck. Lays him down upon a Bank of Flowers. She seeing him a-sleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a Fellow, takes off his Crown, kisses it, and poures poyson in the Kings eares, and Exits. The Queen returns, findes the King dead, and makes passionate Action. The Poysoner, with some two or three Mutes comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away : The Poysoner woos the Queen with Gifts, she seems loth and unwilling a while, but in the end accepts his love. Exeunt.

Ophe. What means this, my Lord ?

Ham. Marry this is Miching Malicho, that means Mischief.

Ophe. Belike this shew imports the Argument of the Play ?

Ham. We shall know by these fellowes : the Players cannot keep counsell, they'll tell all.

Ophe. VVill they tell us what this shew meant ?

Ham. I, or any shew that you'll shew him. Be not you asham'd to shew, he'll not shame to tell you what it meanes.

Ophe. You are naught, you are naught, I'll make the Play.

Enter Prologue.

*For us, and for our Tragedy,
Here stooping to your Clemency ;
We beg your hearing patiently.*

Ham. Is this a Prologue, or the Poesie of a Ring ?

Ophe. 'Tis brief, my Lord.

Ham. As Womans love.

Enter King, and Queen.

King. Full thirty times hath Phæbus Cart gon round,
Neptunes salt Wash, and Tellus Orbed ground :
And thirty dozen Moons with borrowed sheen,
About the world have time, twelve thirties been,
Since Love our hearts, and Hymen did our hands
Unite co-mutuall, in most sacred Bands.

Quee. So many Journeys may the Sun and Moon
Make us again count o're, ere love be done.

But woe is me, you are so sick of late,
So farre from cheer, and from your former state,
That I distrust you : yet though I distrust,
Discomfort you (My Lord) it nothing must :
For womens Fear and Love, holds quantity,

In neither ought, or in extremity :
Now what my love is, proof hath made you know,
And as my love is fixt, my fear is so.

King. Faith I must leave thee, Love, and shortly too :
My operant Powers my functions leave to doe
And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
Honour'd, belov'd, and haply, one as kind.
For Husband shalt thou-----

Quee. Oh confound the rest :
Such Love must needs be Treason in my brest :
In second Husband let me be accurst,
None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. Wormwood, Wormwood.

Quee. The instances that second Marriage move,
Are base respects of Thrift, but none of Love.
A second time, I kill my Husband dead,
When second Husband kisses me in Bed.

King. I do believe you. Think what now you speak :
But what we do determine, oft we break ;
Purpose is but the slave to Memory,
Of violent Birth, but poor validity :
Which now like fruit unripe sticks on the Tree,
But fall unshaken, when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis, that we forget
To pay our selves, what to our selves is debt :
What to our selves in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of other Grief or Joy,
Their own enactors with themselves destroy :
Where Joy most revels, Grief doth most lament ;
Grief joyes, Joy grieves on slender accident.
This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange
That even our Loves should with our Fortunes change.
For 'tis a question left us yet to prove,
Whether Love lead Fortune, or else Fortune Love.
The great man down, you mark his favourite flies,
The poor advanc'd makes friends of Enemies :
And hitherto doth Love on Fortune tend,
For who not needs, shall never lack a friend ?
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his Enemy.
But orderly to end where I begun,
Our Wills and Fates doe so contrary run,
That our Devices still are overthrown,
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own.
So think thou wilt no second husband wed.
But dye thy thoughts, when thy first Lord is dead.

Quee. Nor Earth to give me food, nor heaven light,
Sport and repose lock from me day and night :
Each opposite that blankes the face of joy,
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy :
Both here, and hence, pursue me lasting strife,
If once a Widdow, ever I be Wife.

Ham. If she should break it now.

King. 'Tis deeply sworn ;
Sweet, leave me here a while,
My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep.

Quee. Sleep rock thy brain,
And never come mischance between us twain.

Ham. Madam, how like you the Play ?

Quee. The Lady protests too much me thinkes.

Ham. Oh but she'll keep her word,

King. Have you heard the Argument, is there no Offence in't ?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poyson in jest, no Offence in' world.

King. What do you call the Play ?

Ham. The Mousetrap : Marry how ? Tropically :
This Play is the image of a murder done in Vienna : Gon-zago is the Dukes name, his wife Baptista : you shall see anon : 'tis a knavish piece of work : but what o' that ?
Your Majesty, and we that have free soules, it touches us not : let the gall'd jade winch : our withers are unwrung,

Enter Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the King.

Ophe. You are a good Cborus, my Lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love :
if I could see the Puppets dallying.

Ophe. You are keen, my Lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.

Ophe. Still better and worse.

Ham. So you mistake Husbands,

Begin Murderer. Pox, leave thy damnable Faces, and begin. Come, the croaking Raven doth bellow for Revenge.

Lucian. Thoughts black, hands apt,
Drugs fir, and Time agreeing :
Confederate season, else no Creature seeing :
Thou mixture rank, of Midnight-Weeds collected,
With Hecates Ban, thrice blasted, thrice infected,
Thy naturall Magick, and dire property,
On wholesome life, usurp immediately.

Poures the poyson in his eares.

Ham. He poysons him ith' Garden for's estate : His names Gonzago : the Story is extant, and writ in choyce Italian. You shall see anon how the Murtherer gets the love of Gonzago's Wife.

Ophe. The King rises.

Ham. What, frighted with false fire.

Quee. How fares my Lord ?

Pol. Give o're the Play.

King. Give me some Light. Away,

All. Lights, Lights, Lights.

Exeunt.

Manet Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. Why let the stricken Deer go weep,
The Heart ungalled play :
For some must watch, while some must sleep ?
So runs the world away.

Would not this, Sir, and a Forrest of Feathers, if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me ; with two Provin-ciall Roses on my rac'd Shooes, get me a Fellowship in a cry of Players, fir.

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one I,

For thou dost know : Oh Damon dear,
This Realme dismantled was of Jove himself,
And now reigns here,
A very very Pajock.

Hora. You might have Rim'd.

Ham. Oh good Horatio, I'll take the Ghosts word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive ?

Hora. Very well, my Lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poysoning ?

Hora. I did very well note him.

Enter Rosincros and Guildenstar.

Ham. Oh, ha ? come some Musick. Come the Recorders
For if the King like not the Comedy.
Why then belike he likes it not perdy.
Come, some Musick.

Guild. Good my Lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham.

Ham. Sir, a whole History.

Guild. The King, sir.

Ham. I, sir, what of him.

Guild. Is in his retirement, marvellous distemper'd.

Ham. With drink, Sir?

Guild. No, my Lord, rather with choller.

Ham. Your wisdom should shew it self more rich to signifie this to his Doctor; for me to put him to his Purgation, would perhaps plunge him into farre more Choller.

Guild. Good my Lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affaire.

Ham. I am tame, Sir, pronounce.

Guild. The Queen your Mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guild. Nay, good my Lord, this courtesie is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will doe your Mothers commandement: if not, your pardon, and my return shall be the end of my businesse.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guild. What my Lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer: my wits disteas'd. But sir, such answers as I can make, you shall command: or rather you say, my mother: therefore no more but to the matter. My mother you say.

Rosin. Then thus she sayes: your behaviour hath stroke her into amazement, and admiration.

Ham. Oh wonderfull Son, that can so astonish a Mother. But is there no sequell at the heeles of this Mother admiration?

Rosin. She desires to speak with you in her Closet ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our Mother. Have you any further Trade with us?

Rosin. My Lord, you once did love me.

Ham. So I doe still, by these pickers and stealers.

Rosin. Good my Lord, what is your cause of distemper? You do freely bar the door of your own Liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Rosin. How can that be, when you have the voyce of the King himself, for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. I, but while the grassie growes, the Proverbe is something musty.

Enter one with a Recorder.

O the Recorder. Let me see to withdraw with you, why doe you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a coile?

Guild. O my Lord, if my Duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly.

Ham. I doe not well understand that. Will you play upon this Pipe?

Guild. My Lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guild. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I doe beseech you.

Guild. I know no touch of it, my Lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easie as lying: govern these Ventiges with your finger and thumbe, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most excellent Musick.

Look you, these are the stops.

Guild. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony, I have not the skill.

Ham. Why look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me: you would play upon me: you would seem to know my stops: you would pluck out the heart of my Mystery; you would sound me from my lowest Note, to the top of my compasse: and there is much Musick, excellent Voyce, in this little Organ, yet cannot you make it. Why doe you think, that I am easier to be plaid on then a Pipe? Call me what Instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me. God blesse you, Sir.

Enter Polonius.

Polon. My Lord, the Queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Doe you see that Cloud, thats almost in shape like a Camell.

Polon. By th' Misse, and it's like a Camell indeed.

Ham. Me thinks it is like a Weazell.

Polon. It is back'd like a Weazell.

Ham. Or like a Whale?

Polon. Very like a Whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my Mother by and by: They foole me to the top of my bent. I will come by and by.

Polon. I will say so.

Exit.

Ham. By and by is easily said. Leave me friends: 'Tis now the very witching time of night, When Church yards yawn, and Hell it self breathes out Contagion to this world. Now could I drink hot blood, And do such bitter businesse as the day Would quake to look on. Soft now, to my Mother: Oh heart, loose not thy Nature; let not ever The Soule of Nero enter this firm bosome: Let me be cruell, not unnaturall, I will speak Daggers to her, but use none: My tongue and Soule in this be Hypocrites. How in my words somever she be shent, To give them scales, never my soule consent.

Enter King, Rosincros, and Guildenstar.

King. I like him not, nor stands it safe with us, To let his madnesse range. Therefore prepare you, I your Commission will forthwith dispatch, And he to England shall along with you, The termes of our estate, may not endure Hazard so dangerous as doth hourly grow Out of his Lunacies.

Guild. We will our selves provide: Most holy and Religious fear it is To keep those many bodies safe That live and feed upon your Majesty.

Rosin. The single And peculiar life is bound With all the strength and Armour of the minde, To keep it self from noyance: but much more, That Spirit, upon whose spirit depends and rests The lives of many, the cease of Majesty Dies not alone: but like a Gulf doth draw What's near it, with it, It is a massie wheele Fixt on the Somnet of the highest Mount, To whose huge Spokes, ten thousand lesser things Are mortiz'd and adjoin'd: which when it falls, Each small annexment, petty consequence Attends the boystrous Ruine. Never alone Did the King sigh, but with a generall groan.

King. Arme you, I pray you to this speedy Voyage; For we will Fetters put upon this fear,

Which

Which now goes too free-footed.

Both. We will haste us.

Exeunt Gent.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My Lord, he's going to his Mothers Closet :
Behind the Arras I'll convey my self
To hear the Proceſſe. I'll warrant ſhe'll tax him home.
And as you ſaid, and wiſely was it ſaid,
'Tis meet that ſome more audience than a Mother,
Since Nature makes them partiall, ſhould o're-hear
The ſpeech of vantage, Fare you well my Liege,
I'll call upon you ere you go to bed,
And tell you what I know.

Exit.

King. Thanks, dear my Lord.

Oh my offence is rank, it ſmells to heaven,
It hath the primall eldeſt curſe upon't,
A brothers murder. Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as ſharp as will :
My ſtronger guilt, defeats my ſtrong intent,
And like a man to double buſineſſe bound,
I ſtand in pauſe where I ſhall firſt begin,
And both neglect ; what if this curſed hand
Were thicker then it ſelf with brothers blood,
Is there not Rain enough in the ſweet heavens
To waſh it white as Snow ? whereto ſerves mercy,
But to confront the viſage of Offence ?
And whats in Prayer, but this two-fold force,
To be fore-ftalled ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd being down ? Then I'll look up,
My fault is paſt. But oh, what forme of Prayer
Can ſerve my turn ? Forgive me my foule Murther :
That cannot be, ſince I am ſtill poſſeſt
Of thoſe effects for which I did the Murther
My Crown, mine own Ambition, and my Queen :
May one be pardon'd, and retain th' offence ?
In the corrupted currants of this world,
Offences guilded hand may ſhove by Juſtice,
And oft 'tis ſeen, the wicked prize it ſelf
Buyes out the Law ; but 'tis not ſo above,
There is no ſhuffling, there the Action lies
In his true Nature, and we our ſelves compell'd
Even to the teeth and fore-head of our faults,
To given in evidence. What then ? what reſts ?
Try what Repentance can. What can it not ?
Yet what can it, when one cannot repent ?
Oh wretched ſtare ? oh boſome, black as death !
Oh limed ſoule, that ſtrugling to be free,
Art more ingag'd : Help Angels, make aſſay :
Bow ſtubborn knees, and heart with ſtrings of Steele,
Be ſoft as ſinewes of the new-born Babe,
All may be well.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I doe it pat, now he is praying,
And now I'll do't, and ſo he goes to heaven,
And ſo am I reveng'd : that would be ſcann'd,
A Villain kills my Father, and for that
I his foule Son, doe this ſame Villain ſend
To heaven. O this is hire and Sallery, not Revenge.
He took my Father groſſely, full of bread,
With all his Crimes broad blown, as freſh as May,
And how his Audit ſtands, who knowes, ſave heaven :
But in our circumſtance and courſe of thought
'Tis heavy with him : and am I then reveng'd,
To take him in the purging of his Soule,
When he is fit and ſeaſon'd for his paſſage ? No.
Up Sword, and know thou a more horrid hent

When he is drunk aſleep : or in his Rage,
Or in th'inceſtuons pleaſure of his bed,
At gaming, ſwearing, or about ſome aſt
That has no relliſh of Salvation in't,
Then trip him, that his heeles may kick at heaven,
And that his Soule may be as damn'd and black
As hell, whereto it goes. My Mother ſtayes,
This Phyſick but prolongs thy ſickly dayes.

Exit.

King. My words flye up, my thoughts remain below,
Words without thoughts, never to heaven go.

Exit.

Enter Queen and Polonius.

Pol. He will come ſtraight :

Look you lay home ro him,
Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
And that your Grace hath ſoree'nd, and ſtood between Much heat and him. I'll ſilence me e'ne here :
Pray you be round with him.

Ham. within. Mother, mother, mother.

Quee. I'll warrant you, fear me not.
Withdraw, I hear him coming.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now, Mother, what's the matter ?

Que. Hamlet, thou haſt thy Father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my Father much offended.

Que. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Come, go, you queſtion with an idle tongue.

Quee. Why how now, Hamlet ?

Ham. What's the matter now ?

Quee. Have you forgot me ?

Ham. No, by the Rood, not ſo :

You are the Queen, your Husbands Brothers wife,
But would you were not ſo. You are my Mother.

Quee. Nay, then I'll ſet thoſe to you that can ſpeak.

Ham. Come, come, and ſit you down, you ſhall not budge :

You go not till I ſet up a glaſſe.

Where you may ſee the inmoſt part of you ?

Quee. What wilt thou doe ? thou wilt not murder me ?
Help, help, hoa.

Pol. What hoa, help, help, help.

Ham. How now, a Rat ? dead for a Ducate, dead.

Pol. Oh I am ſlain.

Kills Polonius.

Quee. Oh me, haſt thou done ?

Ham. Nay I know not, is it the King ?

Quee. Oh what a raſh and blood deed is this ?

Ham. A bloody deed, almoſt as bad good Mother,
As kill a King, and marry with his Brother.

Quee. As kill'd a King ?

Ham. I, Lady, 'twas my word.

Thou wretched, raſh, intruding fool, farewell,
I took thee for thy Betters, take thy fortune,
Thou find'ſt to be too buſie, is ſome danger.
Leave wringing of your hands, peace, ſit you down,
And let me wring your heart, for ſo I ſhall
If it be made of penetrable ſtuffe ;
If damned Cuſtome have not braz'd it ſo,
That it is proof and bulwarke againſt Senſe.

Qu. What have I done, that thou dar'ſt wag thy
In noyſe ſo rude againſt me ?

(tongue,

Ham. Such an Aſt

That blurres the grace and bluſh of Modeſty,
Calls Virtue Hypocrite, takes off the Roſe
From the fair fore-head of an innocent love,
And makes a bliſter there. Makes marriage vowes
As falſe as Dicers Oathes. O ſuch a Deed,

As

As from the body of contraction plucks
The very soule, and sweet Religion makes
A rapsody of words. Heavens face doth glow,
Yea this solidity and compound masse.
With tristfull visage as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.

Quee. Aye me, what act, that roares so loud, and thunders in the Index.

Ham. Look here upon this Picture, and on this,
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers:
See what a grace seated on his Brow,
Hyperions curls, the front of Jove himself,
An eye like Mars, to threaten or command
A Station like the Herald Mercury,
Now lighted on a heaven-kissing hill:
A Combination, and a forme indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his Seale,
To give the world assurance of a man.
This was your Husband. Look you now what followes.
Here is your Husband, like a Mildew'd Deer
Blasting his wholsome breath. Have you eyes?
Could you on this fair Mountain leave to feed,
And batten on this Moore? Ha? have you eyes?
You cannot call it Love: For at your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgement: and what judgement
Would step from this to this? What Devil was't,
That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?
O Shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious Hell,
If thou canst mutine in a Matrons bones,
To flaming youth, let Virtue be as wax.
And melt in her own fire. Proclaime no shame,
When the compulsive Ardure gives the charge,
Since Frost it self, as actively doth burn,
As Reason panders VVill.

Quee. O Hamlet, speak no more.
Thou turnst mine eyes into my very soule,
And there I see such black and grained spots.
As will not leave their Tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed,
Stew'd in Corruption; honying and making love
Over the nasty Stye.

Quee. Oh speak to me, no more,
These words like Daggers enter in mine eares.
No more, sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A Murderer, and a Villain:
A Slave, that is not twentieth part the tythe
Of your precedent Lord. A vice of Kings,
A Cutpurse of the Empire and the Rule.
That from a shelf, the precious Diadem stole,
And put it in his Pocket.

Quee. No more.

Enter Ghost.

Ham. A King of shreds and patches.
Save me: and hover o're me with your wings
You heavenly Guards. VVhat would you gracious figure?

Quee. Alas he's mad.

Ham. Doe you not come your tardy Son to chide,
That laps'd in Time and Passion, let's go by Th'important acting of your dread command? Oh say.

Ghost. Doe not forget: this Visitation
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
But look Amazement on thy Mother fits;
O step between her, and her fighting Soule,
Conceit in weakest bodies, strongest works.

Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, Lady?

Quee. Alas, how is't with you?

That thus you bend your eye on vacancy,
And with the Corporall ayre doe hold discourse.
Forth at your eyes, your spirits wildly peep,
And as the sleeping Souldiers in th'Alarme,
Your bedded hair, like life in Excrements,
Start up, and stand an end. O gentle Son,
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle coole patience. VVhereon doe you look?

Ham. On him, on him, look you how pale he glares,
His form and cause conjoyn'd, preaching to stones,
VVould make them capable. Doe not look upon me,
Least with this pittious action you convert
My stern effects: then what have I to doe,
VVill want true colour; teares perchance for blood.

Quee. To whom doe you speak this?

Ham. Doe you see nothing there?

Quee. Nothing at all, yet all that is I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?

Quee. No, nothing but our selves.

Ham. VVhy look you there: look how it steales away;
My Father in his habite, as he lived.

Look where he goes even now out at the Portall. Exit.

Quee. This is the very coynage of your brain,
This bodiless Creation extasie is very cunning in.

Ham. Extasie?

My Pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
And makes as healthfull Musick. It is not madnesse
That I have uttered; bring me to the Test
And I the matter will re-word: which madnesse
VVould gamboll from, Mother, for love of Grace,
Lay not a flattering Unction to your soule,
That not your trespassse, but my madnesse speaks:
It will but skin and filme the Ulcerous place,
Whilst rank Corruption running all within,
Infects unseen. Confesse your self to heaven,
Repent whats past, avoid what is to come,
And doe not spread the Compost or the Weeds,
To make them rank. Forgive me this my Virtue,
For in the fatnesse of these pursie times,
Virtue it self, of Vice must pardon beg,
Yea curbe, and wooe, for leave to doe him good.

Quee. Oh Hamlet,

Thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Ham. O throw away the worser part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
Good night, but go not to mine Unkle's bed,
Assume a Virtue, if you have it not, refrain to night,
And that shall lend a kind of easinesse
To the next abstinence. Once more good night,
And when you are desirous to be blest,
I'll blessing beg of you. For this same Lord,
I doe repent: but heaven hath pleas'd it so.
To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their Scourge and Minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gave him: so again, good night.
I must be cruell, onely to be kind;
Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind.

Quee. What shall I doe?

Ham. Not this by no means that I bid you doe:
Let the blunt King tempt you again to bed,
Pinch Wanton on your cheek, call you his Mousse,
And let him for a pair of reechy kisses,

Or

Or padding in your neck with his damn'd fingers,
Make you to ravell all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madnesse,
But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him know,
For who thats but a Queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a Paddock, from a Bat, a Gibbe,
Such dear concernings hide? Who would doe so?
No, in despite of Sense and Secrecy,
Unpeg the Basket on the houses top:
Let the Birds flie, and like the famous Ape,
To try Conclusions, in the Basket creep,
And break your own neck down.

Que. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life: I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England, you know that?

Quee. Alack, I had forgot: 'Tis so concluded on.

Ham. This man shall set me packing:
I'll lug the Guts into the Neighbour room;
Mother, good night. Indeed this Counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating Knave.
Come, Sir, to draw toward an end with you.
Good night, Mother.

Exit Hamlet tugging in Polonius.

Enter King.

King. There's matters in these sighes.
These profound heaves
You must translate: 'tis fit we understand them.
Where is your Son?

Quee. Ah, my good Lord, what have I seen to night?

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Quee. Mad as the Seas, and winde, when both contend
Which is the Mightier, in his lawlesse-fit
Behind the Arras, hearing something stirre,
He whips his Rapier out, and cries a Rat, a Rat,
And in his brainish apprehension kills
The unseen good old man.

King. Oh heavy deed.
It had been so with us had we been there:
His Liberty is full of threats to all,
To you your self, to us, to every one.
Alas, how shall this bloody deed be answered?
It will be laid to us, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,
This Mad young man. But so much was our love,
We would not understand what was most fit,
But like the Owner of a foule disease,
To keep it from divulging, let's it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Quee. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd,
O're whom his very madnesse like some Oare
Among a Minerall of Mettalls base
Shewes it self pure. He weeps for what is done.

King. Oh Gertrude, come away:
The Sun no sooner shall the Mountains touch,
But we will ship him hence, and this vilde deed,
We must with all our Majesty and Skill
Both countenance, and excuse. Enter Rosincros, and Ho Guildenstar: Guildenstar.
Friends both, go joyn you with some further aide:
Hamlet in madnesse hath Polonius slain,
And from his Mothers Closet hath he dragg'd him.
Go seek him out, speak fair, and bring the body
Into the Chappell. I pray you haste in this. Exit. Gent.
Come Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends,

To let them know both what we mean to doe,
And what's untimely done. Oh come away,
My soule is full of discord and dismay.

Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Safely stowed.

Gentlemen within. Hamlet, Lord Hamlet.

Ham. What noyse? who calls on Hamlet?

Oh here they come. Enter Rosincros, and Guildenstar.

Ros. What have you done my Lord with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.

Rosin. Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence,
And bear it to the Chappell.

Ham. Doe not believe it.

Rosin. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your Counsell, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a Sponge, what replication should be made by the Son of a King.

Rosin. Take you me for a Sponge, my Lord?

Ham. I, sir, that fokes up the Kings Countenance, his Rewards, his Authorities (but such Officers doe the King best service in the end.) He keeps them like an Ape in the corner of his jaw, first mouth'd to be last swallowed, when he needs what you have glean'd, it is but squeezing
you, and Sponge you shall be dry again.

Rosin. I understand you not, my Lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish eare.

Rosin. My Lord, you must tell us where the body is,
and go with us to the King.

Ham. The body is with the King, but the King is not with the body. The King, is a thing-----

Guild. A thing, my Lord?

Ham. Of nothing? bring me to him, hide Fox, and all after. Exeunt.

Enter King.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body:
How dangerous is it that this man goes loose:
Yet must not we put the strong Law on him:
He's lov'd of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgement, but their eyes:
And where 'tis so, th'Offenders scourge is weigh'd:
But nearer the offence: to bear all smooth, and even,
This sudden sending him away, must seem
Deliberate pawse, diseases desperate grown,
By desperate appliance are relieved,
Or not at all. Enter Rosincros.

How now? what hath befalln?

Rosin. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my Lord,
We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?

Rosin. Without, my Lord, guarded to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us.

Rosin. Hoa, Guildenstar? bring in my Lord.

Enter Hamlet, and Guildenstar.

King. Now Hamlet, where's Polonius?

Ham. At Supper.

King. At Supper? Where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten, a certain convocation of Wormes are e'ne at him. Your worm is your onely Emperor for diet. We eat all creatures else to fat us, and we eat our selves for Magots. Your fat King and your lean Beggar is but variable service, two dishes, but to one Table, that's the end.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham.

Ham. Nothing but to shew you how a King may go a Progress through the gut of a Beggar.

King. Where is Polonius.

Ham. In heaven, send thither to see. If your Messenger find him not there, seek him i'th'other place your self: but indeed, if you find him not this moneth, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the Lobby.

King. Go seek him there.

Ham. He will stay 'rill ye come.

K. Hamlet, this deed of thine, for thine especial safety Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve For that which thou hast done, must send thee hence With fiery quickness: therefore prepare thy self, The Bark is ready, and the wind at help, Th' Associates tend, and every thing at bent For England.

Ham. For England?

King. I, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a Cherub that sees him: but come, for England. Farewell dear Mother.

King. Thy loving Father Hamlet.

Hamlet. My Mother: Father and Mother is Man and Wife: Man and Wife is one flesh, and so my Mother. Come, for England. Exit.

King. Follow him at foot, Tempt him with speed aboard: Delay it not, I'll have him hence to night. Away, for every thing is seal'd and done That else leans on th'Affair, pray you make haste. And England, if my love thou hold'st at ought, As my great power thereof may give thee sense, Since yet thy Cicatrice looks raw and red After the Danish Sword, and thy free awe Payes homage to us; thou may'st not coldly set Our Sovereign Process, which imports at full By letters conjuring to that effect The present death of Hamlet. Do it England, For like the Hedstick in my bloud he rages, And thou must cure me: 'till I know 'tis done, How-e're my haps, my joyes were ne're begun. Exit.

Enter Fortinbras with an Army.

For. Go Captain, from me to the Danish King, Tell him that by his license, Fortinbras Claims the conveyance of a promis'd March Over his Kingdom. You know the Rendevouz: If that his Majesty would ought with us, We shall expresse our dutie in his eye, And let him know so.

Cap. I will do't, my Lord.

For. Go safely on. Exit.

Enter Queen and Horatio.

Qu. I will not speak with her.

Hor. She is importunate, indeed distract, her mood will needs be pitied.

Qu. What would she have?

Hor. She speaks much of her Father; says she heares There's tricks i'th'world, and hems, and beats her heart, Spurns enviously at Straws, speaks things in doubt, That carry but half sense: Her speech is nothing, Yet the unshaped use of it doth move The hearers to Collection; they aim at it, And both the words up fit to their own thoughts, Which at her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them, Indeed would make one think there would be thoughts

Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

Qu. 'Twere good she were spoken with, For she may strow dangerous conjectures In ill breeding minds. Let her come in To my sick Soul (as sin's true nature is) Each toy seems Prologue, to some great amiss, So full of Artless jealousy is guilt, It spills it self in fearing to be spilt.

Enter Ophelia distracted.

Oph. Where is the beauteous Majesty of Denmark?

Qu. How now Ophelia.

Oph. How should I your true love know from another By his cockle hat and staff, and his sandal shoon, (one?)

Qu. Alas sweet Lady: what imports this Song?

Oph. Say you? Nay pray you mark. He is dead and gone, Lady, he is dead and gone, At his head a grass-green Turfe, at his heels a stone.

Enter King.

Qu. Nay but Ophelia,

Oph. Pray you mark. White his Shroud as the Mountain-Snow.

Qu. Alas, look here my Lord.

Oph. Larded with sweet flowers: Which be-wept to the grave did not go, With True-love flowers.

King. How do ye, pretty Lady?

Oph. Well, God dil'd you. They say the Owle was a Baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your Table.

King. Conceit upon her Father.

Oph. Pray you let us have no words of this: but when they ask you what it means, say you this: To-morrow is S. Valentine's day, all in the morn betime, And I a Maid at your window, to be your Valentine. Then up he rose, and don'd his clothes, and dup'd the chamber dore.

Let in a Maid, that out a Maid never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia.

Oph. Indeed I? without an oath, I'll make an end on't. By Gis, and by S. Charity:

Alack, an fie for shame.

Young men will do't, if they come to't,

By Cock they are to blame.

Quoth she, before you tumbled me,

You promis'd me to wed:

So would I ha done, by yonder Sun,

And thou had'st not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient, but I cannot chuse but weep, to think they should lay him i'th'cold ground: My Brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my Coach: Goodnight Ladies: Goodnight sweet Ladies: Goodnight, goodnight. Exit.

King. Follow her close,

Give her good watch I pray you:

Oh this is the poison of deep grief, it springs

All from her Father's death. Oh Gertrude, Gertrude,

When Sorrows come, they come not single spies,

But in Battels. First, her Father slain,

Next your son gone, and he most violent author

Of his own just remove: the people muddied,

Thick and unwholsome in their thoughts and whispers,

For good Polonius death; and we have done but greenly,

In hugger mugger to interr him. Poor Ophelia

Divided from her self, and her fair judgement,

Without the which we are Pictures, or mere Beasts,
 Last, and as much containing as all these,
 Her Brother is in secret come from France,
 Keeps on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds
 And wants not Buzzers to infect his eare
 With pestilent speeches of his fathers death,
 Where in necessity of matter Beggar'd
 Will nothing stick our persons to arraign
 In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this,
 Like to a murdering Piece in many places,
 Gives me superfluous death. A Noise within.

Enter a Messenger.

Que. Alack, what noise is this?

King. Where are my Switzers?

Let them guard the door. What is the matter?

Mes. Save your self, my Lord.

The Ocean (over-peering of his List)
 Eats not the Flats with more impetuous haste
 Then young Laertes, in a Riotous head,
 O're-beares your Officers, the rabble call him Lord,
 And as the world were now but to begin,
 Antiquity forgot, Custome not known,
 The Ratifiers and props of every word,
 They cry choose we? Laertes shall be King.
 Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,
 Laertes shall be King, Laertes King.

Quee. How chearfully on the false Trail they cry,
 Oh this is the Counter, you false Danish Doggs.

Noise within. Enter Laertes.

King. The doors are broke.

Laer. Where is the King, Sirs? Stand you all without.

All. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you give me leave.

All. We will, we will.

Laer. I thank you: Keep the door.

Oh thou vild King, give me my father.

Quee. Calmely, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood, that calmes
 Proclaims me Bastard:

Cries Cuckold to my Father, brands the Harlot
 Even here between the chaste unsmitted brow
 Of my true Mother.

King. What is the cause Laertes,
 That thy Rebellion looks so Giant-like?
 Let him go Gertrude: Do not fear our person:
 There's such Divinity doth hedge a King,
 That treason can but peep to what it would,
 Acts little of his will. Tell me Laertes,
 Why art thou thus incens'd? Let him go Gertrude,
 Speak man.

Laer. Where's my Father?

King. Dead.

Quee. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be Juggl'd with
 To hell Allegiance: Vows, to the blackest Devil.
 Conscience and Grace, to the Profoundest Pit.
 I dare Damnation: to this point I stand,
 That both the worlds I give to negligence,
 Let come what comes: only I'll be reveng'd
 Most thoroughly for my Father.

King. Who shall stay you?

Laer. My Will, not all the world.
 And for my means, I'll husband them so well,
 They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes:

If you desire to know the certainty
 Of your dear father's death, if writ in your revenge,
 That Soop-stake you will draw both friend and foe,
 Winner and Loofer.

Laer. None but his Enemies.

King. Will you know them then.

Laer. To his good Friends thus wide I'll ope my
 And like the kind life-rendring Pelican, (Armes,
 Repast them with my blood.

King. Why now? what noise is that?
 Like a good child, and a true Gentleman.
 That I am guiltless of your Father's death,
 And am most sensible in grief for it,
 It shall as level to your Judgement pierce
 As day do's to your eye.

A noise within. Let her come in.

Enter Ophelia.

Laer. How now? what noise is that?

Oh heat dry up my brains, teares even times salt,
 Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye.
 By heaven thy madness shall be paid by weight,
 'Till our Scale turns the beam. Oh Rose of May,
 Dear Maid, kind Sister, sweet Ophelia:
 Oh heavens, is't possible, a young Maid's wits,
 Should be as mortal as an old man's life?
 Nature is fine in Love, and where 'tis fine,
 It sends some precious instance of it self
 After the thing it loves.

Oph. They bore him bare-fac'd on the Beer.

Hey non noney, noney, hey noney:

*And on his grave rains many a tear,
 Fare you well my Dove.*

Laer. Had'st thou thy wits, and did'st perswade Revenge, it could not move thus.

Oph. You must sing down a-down, and you call him a-down-a. Oh, how the wheels become? It is the false Steward that stole his Master's daughter.

Laer. This nothing's more then matter.

Oph. There's Rosemary, that's for Remembrance
 Pray Love remember: and there's Pancies, that's for Thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness, thoughts and remembrance fitted.

Oph. There's Fennel for you, and Columbines: there's Rew for you, and here's some for me. We may call it
 Herb-Grace a Sundayes: Oh you must wear your Rue with a difference. There's a Daffie, I would give you some Violets, but they wither'd all when my Father dyed:
 They say, he made a good end;

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.

Laer. Thought, and Affliction, Passion, Hell it self:
 She turns to favour; and to prettiness.

Oph. And will he not come again.

And will he not come again?

No, no, he is dead, go to thy Death-bed,

He never will come again.

His Beard as white as Snow.

All Flaxen was his Pole:

He is gone, he is gone, and we cast away mone, Gramercy on his Soul.

And of all Christian Soules, I pray God.
 God bu'ye.

Exit Ophelia.

Laer. Do you see this, you gods?

King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief,
 Or you deny me right: goe but a-part,

Make

Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will,
And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me;
If by direct or by Collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our Kingdome give,
Our Crown, our Life, and all that we call Ours
To you in satisfaction. But if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to us,
And we shall joyntly labour with your soul
To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so:
His means of death, his obscure burial:
No Trophee, Sword, nor Hatchment o're his bones,
No Noble rite, nor formal ostentation,
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
That I must call in question.

King. So you shall:
And where th' offence is, let the great Axe fall.
I pray you go with me. Exeunt.

Enter Horatio, with an Attendant.

Hora. What are they that would speak with me?

Ser. Sailors Sir, they say they have letters for you.

Hora. Let them come in,
I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Saylor.

Sayl. God blefs you Sir.

Hora. Let him blefs thee too.

Sayl. He shall Sir, and't please him. There's a Letter for you Sir: it comes from th' Ambassadors that was bound for England, if your name be Horatio: as I am let to know it is.

Reads the Letter.

HOratio, when thou shalt have overlook'd this, give these fellows some means to the King: They have Letters for him. E're we were two dayes old at Sea, a Py-rate of very Warlike appointment gave us Chace. Finding ourselves too slow of Sail, we put on a compelled Vi-lour. In the Grapple, I boarded them: On the instant they got clear of our Ship, so I alone became their Prisoner.
They have dealt with me, like Thieves of Mercy, but they knew what they did. I am to do a good turn for them. Let the King have the Letters I have sent, and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou wouldst flee death. I have words to speak in your ear, will make thee dumb, yet are they much too light for the bore of the Matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am.
Rosencroß and Guiltenstar hold their course for England.
Of them I have as much to tell thee, Farewell.

*He that thou knowest thine,
Hamlet.*

Come, I will give you way for these your Letters,
And do't the speedier, that you may direct me
To him from whom you brought them. Exit.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for friend,
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he which hath your Noble Father slain,
Pursued my life.

Laer. It well appears. But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So crimefull, and so Capital in Nature,
As by your Safety, Wisdome, all things else,

You mainly were stirr'd up?

King. O for two special Reasons,
Which may to you (perhaps) seem much unfinewed,
And yet to me they are strong. The Queen his Mother,
Lives almost by his looks: and for my self,
My Virtue or my Plague, be it either which,
She's so conjunctive to my life and Soul;
That as the Star moves not but in his Sphere,
I could not but by her. The other Motive,
Why to a publick count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him,
Who dipping all his faults in their affection,
Would like the Spring that turneth Wood to Stone,
Convert his Gyves to Graces. So that my Arrows
Too slightly timbred for so loud a Wind,
Would have reverted to my Bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a Noble father lost,
A Sister driven into desperate termes,
Who was (if praises may go back again)
Stood Challenger on mount of all the Age
For her perfections. But my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that,
You must not think
That we are made of stuff, so flat and dull,
That we can let our Beard be shook with danger,
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more,
I lov'd your father, and we love your self,
And that I hope will teach you to imagine -----

Enter a Messenger.

How now? What Newes?

Mes. Letters my Lord from Hamlet. This to your Majesty: this to the Queen.

King. From Hamlet? Who brought them?

Mes. Sailors my Lord they say, I saw them not:
They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them.

King. Laertes you shall read them:
Leave us. Exit Messenger.

High and Mighty, you shall know I am set naked on your Kingdome. To morrow shall I beg leave to see your Kingly Eyes. When I shall (first asking your Pardon thereunto) recount th' Occasions of my sudden, and more strange return. Hamlet.

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back?
Or is it some abuse? Or no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's Character, naked, and in a Postscript here he sayes alone: Can you advise me?

Laer. I'm lost in it, my Lord, but let him come,
It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth:
Thus diddest thou.

King. If it be so Laertes, as how should it be so?
How otherwise? will you be rul'd by me?

Laer. If so you'll not o're-rule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace: if he be now return'd,
As checking at his Voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it; I will work him
To an exploit now ripe in my Device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall:
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe,
But even his Mother shall uncharge the practice,
And call it accident: Some two Moneths hence
Here was a Gentleman of Normandy.
I've seen my self and serv'd against the French,
And they ran well oh horse-back; but this Gallant

Had witchcraft in't; he grew into his Seat,
And to such wondrous doing brought his Horfe,
As had he been incorps't and demy-Natur'd
With the brave Beast, so far he past my thought,
That I in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did:

Laer. A Norman was't?

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life Lamound.

King. The very same.

Laer. I know him well, he is the Brooch indeed
And Gemme of all our Nation.

King. He made confession of you,
And gave you such a Masterly report,
For Art and exercise in your defence;
And for your Rapier most especially,
That he cry'd out, 'twould be a fight indeed,
If one could match you Sir: This report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his Envy,
That he could nothing do but wish and beg,
Your sudden coming over to play with him;
Now out of this.

Laer. Why out of this, my Lord?

King. Laertes, was your Father dear to you?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think you did not love your father,
But that I know Love is begun by Time:
And that I see in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it:
Hamlet come back, what would you undertake,
To shew your self your Father's son indeed,
More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i'th' Church.

King. No place indeed should Murther Sanctuarize;
Revenge should have no bounds: but good Laertes,
Will you do this, keep close within your Chamber?
Hamlet return'd, shall know you are come home:
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
And set a double varnish on the same
The Frenchman gave you, bring you in fine together,
And wager on your heads, he being remiss,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not peruse the Foils? So that with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A Sword un-baited, and in a pass of practice,
Requite him for your Father.

Laer. I will do't,

And for that purpose I'll anoint my Sword:
I bought an Unction of a Mountebank
So mortal, I but dipt a knife in it,
Where it draws blood, no Cataplasme so rare,
Collected from all Simples that have Virtue
Under the Moon, can save the thing from death,
That is but scratcht withall: I'll touch my point,
With this contagion, that if I gall him slightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this,
Weigh what convenience both of time and means
May fit us to our shape, if this should fail;
And that our drift look through our bad performance,
'Twere better not affai'd; therefore this Project
Should have a back or second, that might hold,
If this should blast in proof: Soft, let me see,
We'll make a solemn wager on your commings,

I ha't: when in your motion you are hot and dry,
As make your bouts more violent to the end,
And that he calls for drink; I'll have prepar'd him
A Chalice for the nonce; whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
Our purpose may hold there; how now sweet Queen.

Enter Queen.

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they'll follow: your Sister's drown'd Laertes.

Laer. Drown'd! O where?

Queen. There is a Willow grows aslant a Brook,
That shews his hoar leaves in the glassie stream:
There with fantastick Garlands did she come,
Of Crow-flowers, Nettles, Daisies, and long Purples,
That liberal Shepheards give a grosser name;
But our cold Maids do Dead Men's Fingers call them:
There on the pendant boughes, her Coronet weeds
Clambring to hang; an envious sliwer broke,
When down the weedy Trophies, and her self,
Fell in the weeping Brook, her cloathes spred wide
And Mermaid-like, a while they bore her up,
Which time she chaunted snatches of old tunes,
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature Native, and deduced
Unto that element: but long it could not be,
'Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious by,
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas then, is she drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my teares: but yet
It is our trick, Nature her custome holds,
Let shame say what it will; when these are gone
The woman will be out: Adieu my Lord,
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly drowns it.

Exit.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude:
How much I had to do to calm his rage?
Now fear I this will give it start again,
Therefore let's follow.

Exeunt.

Enter two Clowns.

Clown. Is she to be buried in Christian burial, that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

Other. I tell thee she is, and therefore make her Grave straight, the Crowner hath fate on her, and finds it
Christian burial.

Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned her self in her own defence?

Other. Why 'tis found so.

Clo. It must be Se offendendo, it cannot be else: for here lies the point: If I drown my self wittingly, 'it argues an Act: and an Act hath three branches. It is an Act to do, and to perform; argall she drown'd her self wittingly.

Other. Nay but hear you Goodman Delver.

Clown. Give me leave; here lies the water, good:
here stands the man, good: if the man go to his water and drown himself: it is will he, nill he, he goes; mark you that? But if the water come to him and drown him; he drowns not himself. Argall, he that is not guilty of his own death, shortens not his own life.

Other. But is this Law?

Clo. I marry is't, Crowner's Quest Law.

Other.

Other. Will you ha' the truth on't: if this had not been a Gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of Christian Burial.

Clo. Why there thou say'st. And the more pitie that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even Christian. Come, my Spade; there is no ancient Gentlemen, but Gardiners, Ditchers and Grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.

Other. Was he a Gentleman?

Clo. He was the first that ever bore Armes,

Other. Why he had none.

Clo. What, art a Heathen? how dost thou understand the Scripture? the Scripture sayes Adam digg'd; could he dig without Armes? I'll put another question to thee; if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confest thy self-----

Other. Go to.

Clo. What is he that builds stronger then either the Mason, the Ship-wright, or the Carpenter?

Other. The Gallows-maker, for that Frame out-lives a thousand Tenants.

Clo. I like thy wit well in good faith, the Gallows does well; but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: now thou do'st ill to say the Gallows is built stronger then the Church: Argall, the Gallows may do well to thee. To't again, Come.

Other. Who builds stronger than a Mason, a Ship-wright, or a Carpenter?

Clo. I, tell me that, and unyoke.

Other. Marry, now I can tell.

Clo. To't.

Other. Mafs, I cannot tell.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio a far off.

Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it; for your dull As will not mend his pace with beating; and when you are askt this question next, say a Grave-maker: the Houses that he makes, lasts till Dooms-day: go, get thee to Yaughan, fetch me a stoap of Liquor.

Sings.

In youth when I did love, did love,

me thought it was very sweet,

To contralt O the for a my behove,

O me thought there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at Grave-making?

Hor. Custome hath made it in him a property of easiness,

Ham. 'Tis e'en so; the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

Clown sings.

But Age with his stealing steps

hath caught me in his clutch:

And hath shipped me intill the Land,

as if I never had bin such.

Ham. That Scull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: how the Knave jowles it to th'ground, as if it were Cain's Jaw-bone, that did the first murder: It might be the Pate of a Polititian which this As o're-Offices: one that could circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my Lord.

Ham. Or of a Courtier, which could say, Good Morrow sweet Lord: how dost thou, good Lord? this might be my Lord such a one, that prais'd my Lord such a ones horse, when he meant to beg it; might it not?

Hor. I, my Lord.

Ham. Why e'en so: and now my Lady Worme's, Chap-les, and knockt about the Mazzard with a Sexton's Spade, here's fine Revolution, if we had the trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at Loggets with'em? mine ake to think on't.

Clown sings.

A Pick-axe and a Spade, a Spade,

for and a shrowding-sheet:

O a Pit of Clay for to be made,

for such a Guest is meet.

Ham. There's another: why might not that be the Scull of a Lawyer? where be his Quiddits now? his Quillers? his Cases? his Tenures, and his Tricks? why doe's he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the Sconce with a dirty Shovel, and will not tell him of his Action of Battery? hum. This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of Land, with his Statutes, his Recognizances, his Fines, his double Vouchers, his Recoveries: Is this the fine of his Fines, and the recovery of his Recoveries, to have his fine Pate full of fine Dirt? will his Vouchers vouch him no more of his Purchases, and double ones too, then the length and breadth of a pair of Indentures? the very Conveyances of his Lands will hardly lye in this Box; and must the Inheritor himself have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a jot more my Lord.

Ham. Is not Parchment made of Sheep-skinnes?

Hor. I my Lord, and of Calve-skinnes too.

Ham. They are Sheep and Calves that seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow: whose Grave's this Sir?

Clo. Mine Sir:

O a pit of Clay for to be made,

for such a Guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine indeed: for thou liest in't.

Clo. You lie out on't Sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part I do not lie in't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lye in't, to be in't, and say 'tis thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quick, therefore thou lyest.

Clo. 'Tis a quick lye, Sir, 'twill away again from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

Clo. For no man Sir.

Ham. What woman then?

Clo. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

Clo. One that was a Woman Sir; but rest her Soul she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the Knave is? we must speak by the Card, or equivocation will follow us: by the Lord, Horatio, these three yeares I have taken note of it, the Age is grown so picked, and the toe of the Peasant comes so near the heel of our Courtier, he galls his Kibe. How long hast thou been a Grave-maker?

Clo. Of all the dayes i'th' year, I came to't that day that our last King Hamlet o'recame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: It was the very day that young Hamlet was born, he that was mad and sent into England.

Ham. I marry, why was he sent into England?

Clo. Why, because he was mad; he shall recover his wits there; or if he do not, it's no great matter there.

Stf 3

Ham

Ham. Why ?

Clown. 'Twill not be seen in him, there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad ?

Clo. Very strangely they say.

Ham. How strangely ?

Clo. Faith e'en with loosing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground ?

Clo. Why here in Denmark: I have been Sexton here, Man and Boy thirty yeares.

Ham. How long will a man lie i'th'earth ere he rot ?

Clo. Ifaith, if he be rotten before he dye (as we have many pocky Coarces now adayes, that will scarce hold the laying in) he will last you some eight year, or nine year. A Tanner will last you nine yeares.

Ham. Why he, more than another ?

Clo. Why Sir, his hide is tann'd with his Trade, that he will keep out water a great while. And your water is a sore Decayer of your whorson dead body, here's a Scull now: this Scull has lain in the Earth three and twenty yeares.

Ham. Whose was it ?

Clo. A whorson mad Fellow's it was: Whose do you think it was ?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad Rogue, a pour'd a Flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same Scull Sir, this same Scull Sir, was Torick's Scull, the Kings Jester.

Ham. This ?

Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see. Alas poor Torick, I knew him Horatio, a fellow of infinite Jest; of most excellent fancy, he hath borne me on his back a thousand times: And how abhorred my imagination is, my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lippes, that I have kist I know not how oft. Where be your Jibes now? Your Gambals? Your Songs? Your flashes of Merriment that were wont to set the Table on a Roar? No one now to mock your own Jeering? Quite chop-fall'n? Now get you to my Ladies Chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come. Make her laugh at that: pry-thee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my Lord ?

Ham. Do'st thou think Alexander lookt o'this fashion i'th'earth ?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so ? Puh.

Hor. E'en so my Lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return Horatio. Why may not imagination trace the Noble dust of Alexander, 'till he find it stopping a bung-hole ?

Hor. 'Twere to consider: too curiously to consider so.

Ham. No faith, not a jot. But to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelyhood to lead it; as thus, Alexander dyed: Alexander was buried: Alexander reurneth into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make Lome, and why of that Lome (whereto he was converted) might they not stop a Beer-barrel? Imperial Cesar, dead and turn'd to clay, Might stop a hole to keep the wind away. Oh, that that earth, which kept the world in awe, Should patch a Wall, to expell the Winter's flaw. But soft, but soft, aside; here comes the King.

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, and a Coffin, with Lords attendant.

The Queen, the Courtiers. What is't that they follow,

And with such maimed rights? This doth betoken, The Coarse they follow, did with desperate hand, Foredoe it's own life; 'twas some Estate. Cough we a while, and mark.

Laer. What Ceremony else ?

Ham. That is Laertes, a very Noble youth: Mark.

Laer. What Ceremony else ?

Priest. Her Obsequies have been as far enlarg'd, As we have warrantie, her death was doubtfull, And but that great command, o'reswayes the order, She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd, 'Till the last Trumpet. For charitable prayer, Shards, Flints, and Pebbles, should be thrown on her: Yet here she is allowed her Virgin Rires, Her Maiden strewments, and the bringing home Of Bell and Burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done ?

Priest. No more be done:

We should prophane the service of the dead, To sing sage Requiem, and such rest to her As to peace-departed Soules.

Laer. Lay her i'th'earth, And from her fair and unpolluted flesh, May Violets spring. I tell thee (churlish Priest) A Ministring Angel shall my Sister be, When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia ?

Queen. Sweets, to thee sweet farewell, I hop'd thou would'st have been my Hamlet's wife: I thought thy Bride-bed to have deckt (sweet Maid) And not to have strew'd thy Grave.

Laer. Oh terrible wooer, Fall ten times treble on that cursed head, Whose wicked deed, thy most ingenious sense Depriv'd thee of. Hold off the earth a while, 'Till I have caught her once more in mine armes:

Leaps in the Grave.

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead, 'Till of this flat a mountain you have made, To o're-top old Pelion, or the skyish head Of blew Olympus.

Ham. What is he, whose griefs Bears such an Emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow Conjures the wandring Starres, and makes them stand Like wonder-wounded hearers? This is I, Hamlet the Dane.

Laer. The Devil take thy soul.

Ham. Thou pray'st not well,

I prythee take thy fingers from my throat; Sir, though I am not spleenative and rash, Yet have I something in me dangerous, Which let thy wiseness fear. Away thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet, Hamlet.

Gen. Good my Lord be quiet.

Ham. Why I will fight with him upon this Theme. Until my eye-lids will no longer wag.

Queen. Oh my Son, what Theme ?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia; forty thousand brothers Could not (with all their quantity of love) Make up my summe. What wilt thou do for her ?

King. Oh he is mad, Laertes.

Qu. For love of God forbear him.

Ham. Come shew me what thou'lt do.

Woo't weep? woo't fight? woo't tear thy self? Woo't drink up Eggle, eat a Crocodile ?

I'll do't. Do'st thou come hither to whine;
To out-face me with leaping in her Grave?
Be buried quick with her, and so will I.
And if thou prate of Mountains; let them throw
Millions of Acres on us, 'till our ground
Sindging his pate against the burning Zone,
Make Ossa like a Wart. Nay, and thou'lt mouthe,
I'll rant as well as thou.

King. This is mere madness:
And thus a while the fit will work on him:
Anon as patient as the female Dove,
When that her golden Cuplet are disclos'd;
His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you sir:
What is the reason that you use me thus?
I lov'd you ever; but it is no matter:
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The Cat will mew, and Dog will have his day. Exit.

King. I pray you good Horatio wait upon him,
Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech,
We'll put the matter to the present pith.
Good Gertrude set some watch over your Son,
This Grave shall have a living Monument:
An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;
'Till then in patience our proceeding be. Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, Sir; now let me see the other,
You do remember all the circumstance.

Hor. Remember it my Lord.

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting,
That would not let me sleep; me thought I lay
Worse then the mutines in the Bilboes, rashly,
(And praise be rashness for it) let us know,
Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well,
When our dear plots do pause, and that should teach us,
There's a Divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my Cabin
My Sea-gown scarf'd about me in the dark,
Grop'd I to find out them; had my desire,
Finger'd their Packet, and in fine, withdrew
To mine own room again, making so bold,
(My teares forgetting manners) to unseal
Their grand Commission, where I found, Horatio,
Oh royal knavery: An exact command,
Larded with many several sorts of reason:
Importing Denmark's health, and England's too,
With hoo, such Buggs and Goblins in my life,
That on the supervise no leasure bated,
No not to stay the grinding of the Axe,
My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible?

Ham. Here's the Commission, read it at more leisure:
But wilt thou hear how I did proceed?

Hor. I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with Villains,
E're I could make a Prologue to my brains,
They had begun the Play. I fate me down,
Devis'd a new Commission, wrote it fair,
I once did hold it as our Statists doe,
A baseness to write fair; and laboured much
How to forget that learning: but Sir now,
It did me yeoman's service: wilt thou know
The effects of what I wrote?

Hor. I, good my Lord.

Ham. An earnest Conjuraton from the King,
As England was his faithfull Tributary,
As love between them, as the Palm should flourish,
As Peace should still her wheaten Garland wear,
And stand a Comma 'tween their amities,
And many such like Assis of great charge,
That on the view and know of these Contents,
Without debatement further, more or less,
He should the bearers put to sudden death,
Not thriving time allowed.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinate;
I had my Father's Signet in my Purse,
Which was the modell of that Danish Seal:
Folded the Writ up in forme of the other,
Subscrib'd it, gav'th' Impression, plac'd it safely,
The changling never known: Now, the next day
Was our Sea-fight, and what to this was sement,
Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstar and Reginocrö, go to't.

Ham. Why man, they did make love to this employment
They are not near my conscience; their debate
Doth by their own insinuation grow:
'Tis dangerous when baser nature comes
Between the pafs, and fell incensed points
Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a King is this?

Ham. Does it not, think'st thee, stand me now upon,
He that hath kill'd my King, and whor'd my Mother,
Popt in between th' election and my hopes,
Thrown out his Angle for my proper life,
And with such cozenage; is't not perfect conscience,
To quit him with his arme? And is't not to be damn'd
To let this Canker of our nature come
In further evil.

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England,
What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short.

The interim's mine, and a man's life's no more
Than to say one: but I am very sorry, good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot my self;
For by the image of my cause I see
The pourtraiture of his; I'll count his favours:
But sure the bravery of his grief did put me
Into a Towing passion.

Hor. Peace, who comes here?

Enter Osrick. (mark.

Osr. Your Lordship is right welcome back to Den-

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir; do'st know this waterfly?

Hor. No my good Lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious; for 'tis a Vice to know him: he hath much Land, and fertile; let a Beast be Lord of Beasts, and his Crib shall stand at the King's Messe; 'tis a Chough; but as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Osr. Sweet Lord, if your friendship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his Majesty.

Ham. I will receive it with all diligence of spirit; put your Bonnet to his right use, 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your Lordship, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold, the wind is Northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my Lord, indeed.

Ham. Me thinks it is very foultry, and hot for my Complexion.

Osrick.

Ofr. Exceedingly, my Lord, it is very foultry, as 'twere I cannot tell how: but my Lord, his Majesty bad me signify to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head: Sir, this is the matter.

Ham. I beseech you remember.

Ofr. Nay, in good faith, for mine ease in good faith: Sir, you are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is at his weapon.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Ofr. Rapier and Dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons; but well.

Ofr. The King Sir has wag'd with him six Barbary horses, against the which he impon'd, as I take it, six French Rapiers and Poinards, with their assignes, as Girdle, Hangers, or so: three of the carriages in faith are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the Carriages?

Ofr. The Carriages Sir, are the Hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more germane to the matter: If we could carry Cannon by our sides; I would it might be Hangers 'till then; but on, six Barbary Horses, against six French Swords: their Assignes and three liberal conceited carriages, that's the French, but against the Danish; why is this impon'd as you call it?

Ofr. The King Sir, hath laid that in a dozen passes between you and him, he shall not exceed you three hits; He hath one twelve for mine, and that would come to immediate tryal, if your Lordship would vouchsafe the Answer.

Ham. How if I answer no?

Ofr. I mean my Lord the opposition of your person in tryal.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the Hall; if it please his Majesty, 'tis the breathing time of day with me; let the Foyles be brought, the Gentleman willing, and the King hold his purpose; I will win for him if I can: if not, I'll gain nothing but my shame, and the odde hits.

Ofr. Shall I redeliver you e'en so?

Ham. To this effect Sir, after what flourish your nature will.

Ofr. I commend my duty to your Lordship. Exit.

Ham. Yours, yours; he does well to commend it himself, there are no tongues else for's tongue.

Hor. This Lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did Comply with his Dug before he suck't it: thus had he and nine more of the same Beavy that I know the drossie Age doats on; only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter, a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions; and doe but blow them to their Tryals, the Bubbles are out.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my Lord.

Ham. I do not think so, since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall winne at the oddes; but thou wouldst not think how all here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my Lord.

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey. I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we desire Augury; there's a special Providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come: if it be not to come, it will be now: if it be not now; yet it will come; the readines is all, since no man has ought of what he leaves. What is't to leave be-times?

Enter King, Queen, Laertes and Lords, with other Attendants with Foyles, and Gantlets, a Table and Flagons of Wine on it.

King. Come Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

Ham. Give me your pardon Sir, I've done you wrong, But pardon't as you are a Gentleman.

This presence knows,
And you must needs have heard how I am punish'd
With sore distraction? What have I done
That might your natures honour, and exception
Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness:
Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet:
If Hamlet from himself be tane away:

And when he's not himself, do's wrong Laertes,
Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it:

Who does it then? His madness? If't be so,
Hamlet is of the Faction that is wrong'd,
His Madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.

Sir, in this Audience,
Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil,
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,
That I have shot mine Arrow o're the house,
And hurt my Mother.

Laer. I am satisfied in Nature,
Whose Motive in this case should stir me most
To my Revenge. But in my terms of honour
I stand aloof, and will no reconciliation,
'Till by some elder Masters of known honour,
I have a voice, and president of peace
To keep my name ungorg'd. But 'till that time,
I do receive your offer'd love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I do embrace it freely,
And will this brother's wager frankly play.
Give us the Foyles: Come on.

Laer. Come on for me.

Ham. I'll be your Foyle Laertes, in mine ignorance,
Your skill shall like a Star i'th'brightest night.
Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me Sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give the Foyles young Osrick,
Cousin Hamlet, you know the wager.

Ham. Very well my Lord,

Your Grace hath laid the oddes a'th'weaker side.

King. I do not fear it,
I have seen you both:
But since he is better'd, we have therefore oddes.

Laer. This is too heavy,
Let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well,
These Foyles have all a length.

Prepare to Play.

Ofr. I my good Lord.

King. Set me the Stopes of Wine upon that Table:
If Hamlet give the first, or second hit,
Or quit in answer of a third exchange,
Let all the Battlements their Ordnance fire,
The King shall drink to Hamlet's better breath,
And in the Cupan Union shall he throw
Richer than that, which four successive Kings
In Denmark's Crown have worn.

Give

Give me the Cups,
And let the Kettle to the Trumpets speak,
The trumpets to the Canoneer without,
The Cannons to the Heavens, the Heaven to Earth,
Now the King drinks to Hamlet. Come, begin,
And you the Judges bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on sir.

Laer. Come on sir. They play.

Ham. One.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgement.

Ofr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer. Well: again.

King. Stay, give me drink.

Hamlet, this Pearl is thine,
Here's to thy health. Give him the Cup.

Trumpet sound, shot goes off.

Ham. I'll play this bout first, set by a while.

Come: another hit; what say you?

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our Son shall win.

Qu. He's fat, and scant of breath.

Here's a Napkin, rub thy brows,
The Queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good Madam.

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Qu. I will my Lord;

I pray you pardon me.

King. It is the poison'd Cup, it is too late.

Ham. I dare not drink yet Madam,

By and by.

Qu. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My Lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think't.

Laer. And yet 'tis almost 'gainst my conscience.

Ham. Come, for the third.

Laertes, you but dally,

I pray you pass with your best violence,

I am afraid you make a wanton of me.

Laer. Say you so? Come on. Play.

Ofr. Nothing neither way.

Laer. Have at you now.

In scuffling they change Rapiers.

King. Part them, they are incens'd.

Ham. Nay, come again.

Ofr. Look to the Queen there ho.

Hor. They bleed on both sides. How is't my Lord?

Ofr. How is't Laertes?

Laer. Why as a Woodcock

To my Sprindge, Ofrick,

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the Queen?

King. She swounds to see them bleed.

Qu. No, no, the drink, the drink,

Oh my dear Hamlet, the drink, the drink,
I am poison'd.

Ham. Oh Villany! How? Let the door be lock'd:
Treachery, seek it out.

Laer. It is here Hamlet.

Hamlet, thou art slain,

No medicine in the world can do thee good.

In thee there is not half an hour of life;

The treacherous Instrument is in thy hand,

Unbated and envenom'd: the foul practice

Hath turn'd it self on me. Lo, here I lie,

Never to rise again: thy Mother's poison'd:

I can no more, the King, the King's to blame.

Ham. The point envenom'd too,
Then venom to thy work.

Hurts the King.

All. Treason, treason.

King. O yet defend me Friends, I am but hurt.

Ham. Here thou incestuous, murd'rous
Damned Dane.

Drink off this Potion: Is thy Union here?

Follow my Mother.

King dyes.

Laer. He it justly serv'd.

It is a poison temp'ed by himself:

Exchange forgiveness with me, Noble Hamlet;

Mine and my Father's death come not upon thee,

Nor thine on me.

Dyes.

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it, I follow thee.

I am dead Horatio, wretched Queen adieu,

You that look pale and tremble at this chance,

That are but Mutes or audience at this act:

Had I but time (as this fell Serjeant Death

Is strict in this Arrest) oh I could tell you,

But let it be: Horatio, I am dead,

Thou liv'st, report me and my causes right

To be unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it.

I am more an Antick Roman then a Dane:

Here's yet some Liquor left.

Ham. As th'art a man, give me the Cup,

Let go, by heaven I'll hav't.
