Oh good Horatio, what a wounded name,

(Things standing thus unknown) shall live behind me.

If thou did'st ever hold me in thy heart,

Absent thee from felicitie a while,

And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,

To tell my Story.

March a far off, and shout within.

What warlike noise is this?

Enter Ofrick.

(land,

Ofr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Po.
To th' Ambassadors of England gives this warlike volley.

Ham. O I dye Horatio:

The potent poison quite o're-crows my spirit,

I cannot live to hear the Newes from England.

But I do prophesie th' election lights

On Fortinbras, he has my dying voice,

So tell him with the occurents more and less,

Which have solicited. The rest is silence, O, o, o. Dies.

Hor. Now cracks a Noble heart:

Goodnight sweet Prince,

And flights of Angels sing thee to thy rest,

Why do's the Drumme come hither?

Enter Fortinbras & English Ambassador, with Drumme, Colours, and Attendants.

Fort. Where is the sight?

Hor. What is it you would see;

If ought of woe or wonder, cease your search.

For. His quarry cries on Havock. Oh proud death,

What Feast is toward in thine eternall Cell.

That thou so many Princes at a shoot,

So bloudily hast strook.

Amb. The sight is dismal,

And our affairs from England come too late,

The cares are senseless that should give us hearing.

To tell him his command'ment is fulfill'd,

That

That Rosincroß and Guiltenstar are dead :
Where should we have our thanks ?

Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it th'ability of life to thank you :
He never gave command'ment for their death.
But since so jump upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack warres, and you from England
Are here arrived. Give order that these bodies
High on a Stage be placed to the view,
And let me speak to th'yet unknowing world,
How these things came about. So shall you hear
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts,
Of accidental judgements, casual slaughters,
Of deaths put on by cunning, and forc'd cause,
And in his upshot, purposes mistook,
Fal'n on the Inventor's heads. All this can I Truly deliver.

For. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the Noblest to the Audience.
For me, with sorrow, I embrace my Fortune,
I have some Rites of memory in this Kingdome,

Which are to claim, my vantage doth
Invite me.

Hor. Of that I shall alwayes cause to speak
And from his mouth
Whose voice will draw on more :
But let this same be presently perform'd,
Even whiles men's minds are wild,
Lest more mischance

On plots, and errors happen.

For. Let four Captaines
Bear Hamlet like a Souldier off the Stage,
For he was likely, had he been put on
To have prov'd most royally :
And for his passage,
The Souldiers Musick, and the rites of War
Speak loudly for him.
Take up the body ; Such a sight as this,
Becomes the Field, but here shews much amiss.
Goe, bid the Souldiers shoot.

Exeunt Marching : after which, a Peale of Ordnance are shot off.

F I N I S.

The Tragedy of King L E A R.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Kent, Gloucester, and Edmond.

Kent.

Thought the King had more affected the Duke of Albany, then Cornwall.

Glou. It did alwayes seem to us : But now in the division of the Kingdome, it appears not which of the Dukes he values most, for qualities are so weigh'd, that curiosity in neither, can make choise of either moiety.

Kent. Is not this your Son, my Lord ?

Glou. His breeding, Sir, hath been at my charge. I have so often blush'd to acknowledge him, that now I am braz'd to't.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glou. Sir, this young Fellows Mother could ; where-upon she grew round womb'd ; and had indeed (Sir) a Son for her Cradle , e're she had a Husband for her Bed. Do you smell a fault ?

Kent. I cannot with the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glou. But I have a Son, Sir, by order of Law, some year elder then this ; who, yet is no dearer in my account, though this Knave came somewhat sawcily to the world before he was sent for : yet was his Mother fair, there was good sport at his making, and the whorson must be acknowledged. Do you know this Nobleman, Edmond ?

Edm. No, my Lord.

Glou. My Lord of Kent :

Remember him hereafter, as my honourable Friend.

Edm. My services to your Lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glou. He hath been out nine yeares, and away he shall again. The King is coming.

Sennet. Enter King Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Gonerill, Regan, Cordelia, and attendants.

Lear. Attend the Lords of France & Burgundy, Gloster

Glou. I shall my Lord. Exit.

Lear. Mean time we shall express our darker purpose. Give me the Map here. Know, that we have divided In three, our Kingdome : and 'tis our fast intent, To shake all cares and business from our Age, Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburthen'd crawl toward death. Our son of Cornwall, And you our no less loving son of Albany,

We have this hour a constant will to publish Our Daughter's several Dowers, that future strife May be prevented now. The Prince, France & Burgundy. Great Rivals in our younger Daughter's Love, Long in our Court, have made their amorous sojourn, And here are to be answer'd. Tell my Daughters (Since now we will divest us both of Rule, Interest of Terrority, Cares of State) Which of you shall we say doth love us most, That we, our largest bounty may extend Where nature doth with merit challenge. Gonerill, Our eldest born, speak first.

Gon. Sir, I love you more then word can weild the Dearer then eye-sight, space, and liberty, (matter, Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare, No less then life, with grace, health, beauty, honour : As much as Child e're lov'd, or Father found. A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable, Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. What shall Cordelia speak ? Love, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this Line, to this, With shadowy Forrests, and with Champions rich'd With plenteous Rivers, and wide-skirted Meads We make the Lady. To thine and Albanie's issues Be this perpetual. What sayes our second Daughter. Our dearest Regan, wife of Cornwall ?

Reg. I am made of that self-metal as my sister, And prize me at her worth. In my true heart, I find she names my very deed of love : Only she comes too short, that I profess My self an enemy to all other joyes, Which the most precious square of sense professes, And find I am alone felicitate In your dear Highness love.

Cor. Then poor Cordelia, And yet not so, since I am sure my love's More ponderous than my tongue.

Lear. To thee, and thine hereditary ever : Remain this ample third of our fair Kingdome, No less in space, validity, and pleasure Than that confer'd on Gonerill. Now our Joy, Although our last and least ; to whose young love, The Vines of France, and Milk of Burgundy, Strive to be interest. What can you say, to draw A third, more opulent then your Sisters ? speak, Cor. Nothing my Lord.

Lear. Nothing ?

Cor

Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing, speak again.

Corn. Unhappy that I am, I cannot have
My heart into my mouth : I love your Majesty
According to my bond, no more nor less.

Lear. How, how Cordelia? Mend your speech a little,
Left you may marre your fortunes.

Cor. Good my Lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me.
I return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, Love you, and most honour you.
Why have my Sisters husbands, if they say
They love you all? happily when I shall wed.
That Lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry
Half my Love with him, half my Care, and Duty,
Sure I shall never marry like my Sisters.

Lear. But goes thy heart with this?

Cor. I my good Lord.

Lear. So young, and so untender?

Cor. So young my Lord, and true.

Lear. Let it be so, the truth then be thy dowre :
For by the sacred radiance of the Sun,
The mysteries of Hecate, and the night :
By all the operations of the Orbes,
From whom we do exist, and cease to be,
Here I disclaim all my Paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me,
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,
Or he that makes his Generation Messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosome
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
As thou my sometime Daughter.

Kent. Good my Liege.

Lear. Peace Kent.

Come not between the Dragon and his wrath,
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery. Hence and avoid my sight ;
So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her father's heart from her ; call France, who stirs ?
Call Burgundy, Cornwall, and Albany,
With my two Daughters Dowres, digest the third,
Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her :
I do invest you jointly with my power,
Preheminence, and all the large effects
That troop with Majesty. Our self by Monthly course
With reservation of an hundred Knights,
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode
Make with you by due turn, only we shall retain
The name, and all th' addition to a King : the Sway, Revenut, Execution of the rest,
Beloved Sonnes be yours which to confirm,
This Coronet part between you.

Kent. Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honour'd as my King,
Love'd as my Father, as my Master follow'd,
As my Patron thought on in my prayers.

Lear. The Bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.

Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart, be Kent unmannerly,
When Lear is mad, what wouldst thou do old man ?
Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to speak
When power to flattery bowes ?
To plainness honour's bound,
When Majesty fall to folly, reserve thy state,
And thy best consideration check

This hideous rashness, answer my life, my judgement :
Thy youngest Daughter do's not love thee least,
Nor are those empty hearted, whose low sounds
Reverbe no hollowness.

Lear. Kent, on my life no more.

Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage against thine enemies, ne're fear to lose it,
Thy safety being motive.

Lear. Out of my sight.

Kent. See better Lear, and let me still remain
The true blank of thine eye.

Lear. Now by Apollo.

Kent. Now by Apollo, King
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.

Lear. O Vassal ! Miscreant.

Alb. Corn. Dear Sir forbear.

Kent. Kill thy Physician, and thy fee bestow
Upon the foul disease, revoke the gift,
Or whil'st I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'll tell thee thou do'st evil.

Lear. Hear me recreant, on thine allegiance hear me ;
That thou hast sought to make us break our vowes,
Which we durst never yet ; and with strain'd pride,
To come betwixt our sentence, and our power.
Which, nor our nature, nor our place can bear ;
Our potency made good, take thy reward.
Five dayes we do allot thee for provision,
To shield thee from disasters of the world,
And on the sixth to turn thy hated back
Upon our Kingdom ; if the tenth day following,
Thy banisht trunk be found in our Dominions,
The moment is thy death, away. By Jupiter
This shall not be revok'd.

Kent. Fare thee well King, sith thus thou wilt appear,
Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here ;
The gods to their dear shelter take thee Maid,
That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said :
And your large speeches may your deeds approve,
That good effects may spring from words of love :
Thus Kent, O Princes, bids you all adieu,
He'll shape his old course in a Countrey new. Exit.

Enter Gloster with France, and Burgundy Attendants.

Cor. Here's France and Burgundy, my Noble Lord.

Lear. My Lord of Burgundy,
We first address toward you, who with this King
Hath rivall'd for our Daughter ; what in the least
Will you require in present Dower with her,
Or cease your quest of Love ?

Bur. Most Royal Majesty,
I crave no more then what your Highness offer'd
Nor will you tender less ?

Lear. Right Noble Burgundy,
When she was dear to us, we held her so,
But now her price is fall'n : Sir, there she stands,
If ought within that little seeming substance,
Or all of it with our displeasure piec'd,
And nothing more may fitly like your Grace,
Shee's there, and she is yours.

Bur. I know no answer.

Lear. Will you with those infirmities she owes,
Unfriended, new adopted to our hate,
Dow'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,
Take leave, or leave her.

Bur. Par.

Bur. Pardon me Royal Sir,
Election makes not up in such conditions.

Lear. Then leave her, Sir, for by the power that made
I tell you all her wealth. For you great King,
I would not from your love make such a stray,
To match you where I hate, therefore beseech you
T'avert your liking a more worthier way,
Then on a wretch whom Nature is ashamed
Almost t'acknowledge hers.

Fra. This is most strange,
That the who even but now, was your best object,
The argument of your praise, balm of your age,
The best, the dearest, should in this trice of time
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle
So many folds of favour: sure her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree,
That monsters it: Or your fore-voucht affection
Fall into Taint; which to believe of her
Must be a faith, that reason without miracle
Should never plant in in me.

Cor. I yet beseech your Majesty,
If for I want that glib and oylie Art,
To speak and purpose not, since what I will intend,
I'll do't before I speak, that you make known
It is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness,
No unchaste action, or dishonoured step
That hath depriv'd me of your Grace and favour,
But even for want of that, for which I am richer,
A still soliciting eye, and such a tongue,
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it,
Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou had'st
Not been born, then not t'have pleas'd me better.

Fra. Is it but this? A tardiness in nature,
Which often leaves the history unspoke
That it intends to do; my Lord of Burgundy,
What say you to the Lady? Love's not love
When it is mingled with regards, that stands
Aloof from th'intire point, will you have her?
She is her self a Dowry.

Bur. Royal King,
Give but that portion which your self propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duteefs of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing, I have sworn, I am firm.

Bur. I am sorry then you have so lost a father.
That you must loose a Husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy,
Since that respect and fortunes are his love,
I shall not be his wife.

Fra. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich being poor,
Most choice forsaken, and most lov'd despis'd,
Thee and thy Virtues here I seize upon,
Be it lawfull I take up what's cast away,
Gods, gods! 'Tis strange, that from their cold'st neglect
My love should kindle to enflam'd respect.
Thy dowreless Daughter, King, thrown to my chance,
Is Queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
Not all the Dukes of warrish Burgundy,
Can buy this unpris'd precious Maid of me.
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind,
Thou loofest here a better where to find.

Lear. Thou hast her France, let her be thine, for we Have no such Daughter, nor shall ever see
That face of her's again, therefore be gone,
Without our Grace, our Love, our Benizon:

Come Noble Burgundy.

Flourish.

Exeunt.

Fra. Bid farewell to your Sisters.

Cor. The Jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes
Cordelia leaves you, I know you what you are,
And like a Sister am most loth to call
Your faults as they are named. Love well our Father:
To your professed bosomes I commit him,
But yet alas, stood I within his Grace,
I would prefer him to a better place,
So farewell to you both.

Reg. Prescribe not us our duty.

Gon. Let your study

Be to content your Lord, who hath receiv'd you,
At fortunes almes, you have obedience scantied,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides,
Who covers faults, at last with shame derides.
Well may you prosper.

Fra. Come my fair Cordelia. Exeunt France & Cor.

Gon. Sister, it is not little I have to say,
Of what most nearly appertains to us both,
I think our father will hence to night. (with us.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you: next monech

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is, the observation we have made of it hath been little: he alwayes lov'd our Sister most, and with what poor judgement he hath now cast her off, appears too too grossely.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age, yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash, then must we look from his age, to receive not alone the imperfections of long engrafted condition, but therewithall the unruly waywardness, that infirm and chole-rick years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further complement of leave-taking, between France and him, pray you let us sit together, if our father carry authority with such disposition as he beares this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and i'th'hear. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Bastard.

Bast. Thou Nature art my Goddess, to thy Law
My services are bound, wherefore should I
Stand in the plague of custome, and permit,
The curiosity of Nations, to deprive me?
For that I am some twelve, or fourteen Moonshines Lag of a brother? Why Bastard? Wherefore base?
When my Dimensions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true
As honest Madam's issue? Why brand they us
With Base? With baseness Bastardy? Base, Base?
Who in the lusty stealth of Nature, take
More composition, and fierce quality,
Then doth within a dull stale tyred bed
Go the creating a whole tribe of Fops
Got 'tween a sleep, and wake? Well then,
Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land,
Our Father's love, is to the Bastard Edmund,
As to th'legitimate: fine word: Legitimate.

T r r

Well

Well, my Legitimate, if this Letter speed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base
Shall to th' Legit mate : I grow, I prosper :
Now gods, stand up for Bastards,

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus? and France in choler parted?
And the King gone to night? Prescrib'd his power,
Confin'd to exhibition? All this gone
Upon the gad? Edmund, how now? what newes?

Bast. So please your Lordship, none.

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that Letter?

Bast. I know no news, my Lord.

Glo. What Paper were you reading?

Bast. Nothing my Lord.

Glo. No? what needed then that terrible dispatch of it into your Pocket? the quality of nothing, hath not such need to hide it self. Let's see: come, if it be nothing, I shall not need Spectacles.

Bast. I beseech you Sir, pardon me; it is a Letter from my Brother, that I have not all o're-read; and for so much as I have perus'd, I find it not fit for your o're-looking.

Glo. Give me the Letter, Sir.

Bast. I shall offend, either to detain, or give it :
The Contents, as in part I understand them,
Are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Bast. I hope for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay, or taste of my Virtue.

Glo. reads. *This policy, and reverence of Age, makes the world bitter to best of our times : keeps our Fortunes from us, 'till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage, in the oppression of aged tyran-ny, who sways not as it hath power, but as it is suffer'd.
Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our Father would sleep till I wak'd him, you should enjoy half his Revenue for ever, & live the beloved of your brother.* Edgar.
Hum? Conspiracy? Sleep 'till I wake him, you should enjoy half his Revenue : my Son Edgar, had he a hand to write this? A heart and brain to breed it in? When came this to you? who brought it?

Bast. It was not brought me, my Lord; there's the cunning of it. I found it thrown in at the Casement of my Clofset.

Glo. You know the character to be your Brother's?

Bast. If the matter were good my Lord, I durst swear it were his: but in respect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Bast. It is his hand, my Lord: I hope his heart is not in the Contents.

Glo. Has he never before sounded you in this business?

Bast. Never my Lord, But I have heard him oft maintain it to be fit, that Sonnes at perfect age; and Fathers declin'd, the Father should be as Ward to the Son, and the Son manage his Revenue.

Glo. O Villain, villain; his very opinion in the Letter.
Abhorred Villain, unnatural, detested, brutish Villain;
worse then brutish: Go sirrah, seek him: I'll apprehend him. Abominable Villain, where is he?

Bast. I do not well know, my Lord; if it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother, 'till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you should run a certain course: where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger.

Glo. Think you so?

Bast. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer this, and by an Auricular assurance have your satisfaction, and that without any further delay, then this very Evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a Monster. Edmund seek him out: wind me into him, I pray you: frame the Business after your own wisdom. I would unstate my self, to be in a due resolution.

Bast. I will seek him, Sir, presently: convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withall.

Glo. These late Eclipses in the Sun and Moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of Nature can reason it thus, and thus, yet Nature finds it self scourg'd by the sequent effects. Love cools, Friendship falls off, Brothers divide. In Cities, mutinies; in Countries, discord: in Palaces, Treason; and the Bond crack'd, 'twixt Son and Father. This Villain of mine comes under the prediction: there's Son against Father, the King falls from byas of Nature, there's Father against Child. We have seen the best of our time. Machinations, hollownes, treachery, and all ruinous disorders follow us disquietly to our Graves. Find out this Villain, Edmund, it shall lose thee nothing, do it carefully: & the Noble and true-hearted
Kent banish'd; his offence, honesty. 'Tis strange. Exit.

Bast. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that when we are sick in fortune, often the sursets of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our disasters, the Sun, the Moon, and Starres, as if we were Villains on necessity, Fools by heavenly compulsion, Knaves, Thieves, and Traachers by Spherical predominance, Drunkards, Lyars, and Adulterers by an inforc'd obedience of Planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on. An admirable evasion of Whore-master-man, to lay his Goatish disposition on the charge of a Star, My father compounded with my mother under the Dragon's tail, and my Nativity was under Ursa major, so that it follows, I am rough and Lecherous. I should have bin that I am, had the Maidenliest Star in the Firmament twinkled on my Bastardizing.

Enter Edgar.

Pat: he comes like the Catastrophe of the old Comedy :
my Cue is villanous Melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam ----- O these Eclipses do portend these divisions: Fa, Sol, La, Me.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund, what serious contemplation are you in?

Bast. I am thinking, brother, of a Prediction I read this other day, what should follow these Eclipses.

Edg. Do you busie your self with that?

Bast. I promise, the effects he writes of, succeed un-happily.

When saw you my Father last?

Edg. The night gone by.

Bast. Spake you with him?

Edg. I, two hours together.

Bast. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him, by word, nor countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Bast. Bethink your self wherein you have offended him: and at my entreary forbear his presence, until some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief

chief of your person, it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some Villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear, I pray you have a continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower: and as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my Lord speak: pray ye go, there's my key: if you do stir abroad, go arm'd.

Edg. Atin'd, Brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best, I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning toward you: I have told you what I have seen, and heard: But faintly. Nothing like the image, and horror of it, pray you away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Exit.

Edm. I do serve you in this business:
A Credulous Father, and a Brother Noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms,
That he suspects none: on whose foolish honesty
My practises ride easie: I see the business.
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit,
All with me's meet, that I can fashion fit.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Gonerill, and Steward.

Gon. Did my Father strike my Gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Stew. I, Madam.

Gon. By day and night, he wrongs me; every hour
He flashes into one gross crime, or other,
That sets us all at oddes: I'll not endure it;
His Knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us
On every trifle. When he returns from hunting,
I will not speak with him, say I am sick,
If you come slack of former services
You shall do well, the fault of it I'll answer.

Stew. He's coming, Madam, I hear him.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please.
You and your Fellows: I'd have it come to question;
If he distaste it, let him to my Sister,
Whose mind and mine I know in that are one,
Remember what I have said.

Stew. Well Madam.

Gon. And let his Knights have colder looks among you: what grows of it no matter, advise your fellows so, I'll write straight to my Sister to hold my course:
prepare for dinner.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Kent.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my speech defuse, my good intent
May carry through it self to that full issue
For which I rais'd my likeness. Now banish'd Kent
If thou canst serve where thou dost stand condemn'd,
So may it come, thy Master whom thou lov'st,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Hornes within. Enter Lear and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner, go get it ready: how now, what art thou?

Kent. A man, Sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? what would'st thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; to serve him truly that will put me in trust, to love him that is honest, to converse with him that is wise and sayes little, to fear judgement, to fight when I cannot chuse, and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest hearted Fellow, and as poor as the King.

Lear. If thou be'st as poor for a Subject, as he's for a King, thou art poor enough. What would'st thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Whom would'st thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Do'st thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No Sir, but you have that in your countenance, which I would fain call Master.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsels, ride, run, marre a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in, and the best of me, is Diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, Sir, to love a woman for singing, nor so old to doat on her for any thing. I have years on my back forty eight.

Lear. Follow me, thou shalt serve me, if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet. Dinner ho, dinner, where's my knave? my fool? go you and call my fool hither. You, you, Sirrah, where's my Daughter?

Enter Steward.

Stew. So please you -----

Exit.

Lear. What sayes the fellow there? Call the Clot-pole back: where's my Fool? Ho, I think the world's asleep, how now? where's that Mungrel?

Knigh. He sayes, my Lord, your Daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me when I call'd him?

Knigh. Sir, he answered in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not?

Knigh. My Lord, I know not what the matter is, but to my judgement your highness is not entertain'd with that Ceremonious affection as you were wont, there's a great abatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants, as in the Duke himself also, and your Daughter.

Lear. Ha? say'st thou so?

Knigh. I beseech you pardon me, my Lord, if I be mistaken, for my duty cannot be silent, when I think your highness is wrong'd.

Lear. Thou but remembrest me of my own Conception, I have perceived a most faint neglect of late, which I have rather blam'd as mine own jealous curiosity, then as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness; I will look further into't: but where's my Fool? I have not seen him this two dayes.

Knigh. Since my young Ladies going into France,

T t t 2

Sir,

Sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that, I have noted it well; go you and tell my Daughter, I would speak with her. Go you call hither my Fool; Oh you Sir, come you hither Sir, who am I Sir?

Enter Steward.

Stew. My Ladies Father.

Lear. My Ladies Father? my Lords knave, you whorson dog, you slave, you cur.

Stew. I am none of these, my Lord, I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you Rascal?

Stew. I'll not be stricken, my Lord.

Kent. Nor tript neither, you base Foot-ball Player.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow.

Thou serv'st me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come sir, arise, away, I'll teach you differences: away, away, if you will measure your lubbers length again, carry, but away, go to, have you wisdom, so.

Lear. Now my friendly knave I thank thee, there's earnest of thy service.

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too, here's my Coxcomb.

Lear. How now my pretty knave, how dost thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my Coxcomb.

Kent. Why, my Boy?

Fool. Why? for taking one's part that's out of favour; nay, and thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly, there take my Coxcomb; why this fellow has banish'd two on's daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will; if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my Coxcomb. How now Nuncle? would I had two Coxcombs, and two Daughters.

Lear. Why, my Boy?

Fool. If I give them all my living, I'd keep my Coxcomb my self, there's mine, beg another of thy Daughters.

Lear. Take heed, Sirrah, the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel, he must be whipt out, when the Lady Brach may stand by th'fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me.

Fool. Sirra, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Doe,

Fool. Mark it Nuncle;
Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou trowest,
Set less than thou throwest:
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in dore,
And thou shalt have more,
Then two tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfee'd Lawyer, you give me nothing for't, can you make no use of nothing, Nuncle?

Lear. Why no, Boy,
Nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Prythee tell him, so much the rent of his Land comes to, he will not believe a Fool.

Lear. A bitter Fool.

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my Boy, between a bitter Fool, and a sweet one?

Lear. No Lad; teach me.

Fool. Nuncle, give me an egg, and I'll give thee two Crowns.

Lear. What two Crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why after I have cut the egg i'th'middle and eat up the meat, the two Crowns of the egg: when thou clovest thy Crown i'th'middle, and gav'st away both parts, thou boar'st thine Afs on thy back o're the dirt, thou had'st little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gav'st thy golden one away: if I speak like my self in this, let him be whipt that first finds it so.

Fools had ne're less grace in a year,

For wisemen are grown foppish,

And know not how their wits to wear,

Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of Songs, sirra?

Fool. I have used it Nuncle, e're since thou mad'st thy Daughters thy Mothers, for when thou gav'st them the rod, and put'st down thine own breeches, then they

For sudden joy did weep,

And I for sorrow sung,

That such a King should play bo-peep,

And go the Fools among.

Prythee Nuncle keep a School-Master that can teach thy Fool to lye, I would fain learn to lye.

Lear. And you lye, sirrah, we'll have you whipt.

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipt for speaking true: thou'lt have me whipt for lying, and sometimes I am whipt, for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o'thing than a fool, and yet I would not be thee, Nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o'both sides, and left nothing i'th'middle; here comes one o'the parings.

Enter Gonerill.

Lear. How now Daughter? what makes that Frontlet on? You are too much of late i'th frown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou had'st no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure, I am better then thou art now, I am a fool, thou art nothing. Yes forsooth I will hold my tongue, so your face bids me, though you say nothing.

*Mum, mum, he that keeps nor crust, nor crum,
Weary of all, shall want some.* That's a sheal'd Pescod.

Gon. Not onely, Sir, this, your all-licenc'd Fool,
But other of your insolent retinue
Do hourly Carp and Quarrel, breaking forth
In rank, (and not to be endured) riots, Sir.
I had thought by making this well known unto you,
To have found a safe redress, but now grow fearfull
By what your self too late have spoke and done,
That you protect this course, and put it on
By your allowance, which if you should, the fault
Would not scape censure, nor the redresses sleep,
Which in the tender of a wholesome weal,
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which else were shame, that then necessity
Will call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For you know, Nuncle, the Hedge-Sparrow fed the Cuckoo so long, that it had it's head bit off by it's young, so out went the Candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our Daughter?

Gon. I would you would make use of your good wisdom, (Whereof I know you are fraught) and put away These dispositions, which of late transport you From what you rightly are.

Fool,

Fool. May not an As know, when the Cart draws the Horse?

Whoop Jug I love thee.

Lear. Do's any here know me?

This is not Lear :

Do's Lear walk thus? Speak thus? Where are his eyes?

Either his Notion weakens, his Discernings

Are Lethargied. Ha! Waking? 'Tis not so;

Who is it that can tell me who I am?

Fool. Lear's shadow.

Lear. Your name, fair Gentlewoman?

Gon. This admiration, Sir, is much o'th'favour
Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you
To understand my purposes aright:

As you are Old, and Reverend, should be Wise.

Here do you keep a hundred Knights and Squires,
Men so disorder'd, so debosh'd, and bold,

That this our Court infested, with their manners,
Shews like a riotous Inn; Epicurisme and Lust

Makes it more like a Tavern, or a Brothell,

Then a grac'd Palace. The shame it self doth speak

For instant remedy. Be then desir'd,

By her that else will take the thing she begs,

A little to disquantity your Train,

And the remainders that shall still depend,

To be such men as may besort your Age,

Which know themselves, and you.

Lear. Darknes, and Devils,

Saddle my horses: call my Train together.

Degenerate Bastard, I'll not trouble thee;

Yet have I left a Daughter.

Gon. You strike my people, and your disorder'd rabble, make servants of their Betters.

Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents:

Is it your will, speak, Sir? Prepare my Horses,

Ingratitude! thou Marble-hearted Fiend,

More hideous when thou shew'st thee in a Child,

Then the Sea-monster.

Alb. Pray, Sir, be patient.

Lear. Detested Kite, thou lyest.

My Train are men of choice, and rarest parts,

That all particulars of duty know,

And in the most exact regard, support

Their worships of their name. O most small fault,

How ugly did'st thou in Cordelia shew?

Which like an Engine, wrencht my frame of Nature

From the fixt place: drew from my heart all love,

And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!

Beat at this gate that let thy Folly in,

And thy dear Judgement out. Go, go, my people.

Alb. My Lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
Of what hath moved you.

Lear. It may be so, my Lord,

Hear Nature, hear dear Goddesses, hear:

Suspend thy purpose, if thou did'st intend

To make this Creature fruitfull:

Into her Womb convey sterility,

Dry up in her the Organs of increase,

And from her derogate body, never spring

A Babe to honour her. If she must teem,

Create her Child of Spleen, that it may live

And be a thwart, disnatur'd torment to her.

Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth,

With cadent Teares fret Channels in her Cheeks,

Turn all her Mother's pains, and benefits

To laughter, and contempt: That she may feel,

How sharper then a Serpent's tooth it is,

To have a thankless Child. Away, away.

Exit.

Alb. Now gods that we adore,

Whereof comes this?

Gon. Never afflict your self to know of it:

But let his disposition have that scope

As dotage gives it.

Enter Lear.

Lear. What fifty of my followers at a clap?

Within a fortnight?

Alb. What's the matter, Sir?

Lear. I'll tell thee:

Life and death, I am asham'd

That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus,

That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,

Should make thee worth them,

Blasts and Fogs upon thee:

Th'untented woundings of a Father's curse

Pierce every sense about thee. Old fond eyes,

Bewep thee once again, I'll pluck ye out,

And cast you with the waters that you lose

To temper Clay. Ha? Let it be so.

I have another daughter,

Who I am sure is kind and comfortable:

When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails

She'll flea thy Wolvish visage. Thou shalt find,

That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think

I have cast off for ever.

Gon. Do you mark that?

Alb. I cannot be so partial, Gonerill,

To the great love I bear you.

Gon. Pray you content. What Oswald hoa?

You Sir, more Knave then Fool, after your Master.

Fool. Nuncle Lear, Nuncle Lear,

Tarry, take the Fool with thee:

A Fox, when one has caught her,

And such a daughter,

Should sure to the slaughter,

If my Cap would buy a Halter,

So the Fool follows after.

Exit.

Gon. This man hath had good counsel,

A hundred Knights?

'Tis politick, and safe to let him keep

At point a hundred Knights: yes, that on every dream,

Each, buz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,

He may enguard his dotage with their powers,

And hold our lives in mercy. Oswald, I say.

Alb. Well, you may fear too far;

Gon. Safer then trust too far;

Let me still take away the harms I fear,

Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart,

What he hath utter'd, I have writ my sister:

If she'll sustain him, and his hundred Knights

When I have shew'd th'unfitness.

Enter Steward.

How now Oswald?

What have you writ that letter to my Sister?

Stew. I, Madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse;

Inform her full of my particular fear,

And thereto add such reasons of your own,

As may compact it more. Get you gone,

T t t 3

And

And hasten your return ; no , no, my Lord,
This milky gentleness, and course of yours
Though I condemn not, yet under pardon
You are much more at task for want of wisdom,
Then prais'd for harmful mildness.

Alb. How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell ;
Striving to better, oft we marre what's well.

Gon. Nay then -----

Alb. Well, well, the' vent.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Lear, Kent, Gentleman, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these Letters ; acquaint my daughter no further with any thing you know , then comes from her demand out of the Letter, if your diligence be not speedy , I shall be there afore
you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my Lord , till I have delivered your Letter. Exit.

Fool. If a man's brains were in his heels, wert not in danger of kibes ?

Lear. I, boy.

Fool. Then I prythee be merry, thy wit shall not go slip-shod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha.

Fool. Shalt see thy other Daughter will use thee kindly, for though she's as like this , as a Crab's like an Apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. What canst tell, Boy ?

Fool. She will taste as like this , as a Crab do's to a Crab : canst thou tell why ones Nose stands i'th' middle on's face ?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why to keep ones eyes of either side's nose, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong.

Fool. Canst tell how an Oyster makes his shell ?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither ; but I can tell why a Snail has a house.

Lear. Why ?

Fool. Why to put's head in , not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his hornes without a case.

Lear. I will forget my Nature, so kind a Father ? Be my horses ready ?

Fool. Thy Asses are gone about'em ; the reason why the Seven starres are no more than seven, is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight.

Fool. Yes indeed, thou would'st make a good fool.

Lear. To tak't again perforce ? Monster ingratitude !

Fool. If you were my fool, Nuncle , I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that ?

Fool. Thou should'st not have bin old, till thou had'st bin wife.

Lear. O let me not be mad, not mad sweet heaven :
keep me in temper , I would not be mad. How now, are the horses ready ?

Gent. Ready , my Lord.

Lear. Come Boy.

Fool. She that's a Maid now, and laughs at my departure,
Shall not be a Maid long, unless things be cut shorter.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Bastard, and Curan, severally.

Bast. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, Sir, I have bin
With your Father, and given him notice
That the Duke of Cornwall, and Regan his Dutches
Will be here with him this night.

Bast. How comes that ?

Cur. Nay I know not, you have heard of the news abroad , I mean the whisper'd ones , for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments.

Bast. Not I : pray you what are they ?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely Warres toward,
'Twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany ?

Bast. Not a word.

Cur. You may do then in time,

Fare you well, Sir.

Exit.

Bast. The Duke be here to night ? the better best,
This weaves it self perforce into my business,
My father hath set guard to take my brother,
And I have one thing of a queazie question
Which I must act, briefness, and Fortune work.

Enter Edgar.

Brother, a word, descend ; brother I say,
My father watches ; O Sir, flye this place,
Intelligence is given where you are hid ;
You have now the good advantage of the night,
Have you not spoken 'gainst the Duke of Cornwall ?
He's coming hither, now i'th' night, i'th' haste,
And Regan with him, have you nothing said
Upon his party 'gainst the Duke of Albany ?
Advise your self.

Edg. I am sure on't, not a word.

Bast. I hear my father coming, pardon me :
In cunning, I must draw my Sword upon you :
Draw, seem to defend your self,
Now quit you well.

Yield, come before my father, light ho, here,
Flye Brother, Torches, so farewell, Exit Edgar.
Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion
Of my more fierce endeavour. I have seen drunkards
Do more then this in sport ; Father, father,
Stop, stop, no help ?

Enter Gloster, and Servants with Torches.

Glo. Now Edmund, where's the villain ?

Bast. Here stood he in the dark , his sharp Sword out,
Mumbling of wicked Charms, conjuring the Moon
To stand his auspicious Mistress.

Glo. But where is he ?

Bast. Look, Sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund ?

Bast. Fled this way, Sir, when by no means he could ---

Glo. Pursue him, ho : go after. By no means, what ?

Bast. Perswade me to murder of your Lordship,

But

But that I told him the revenging gods,
'Gainst Parricides did all the thunder bend,
Spoke with how manifold, and strong a Bond
The Child was bound toth' Father. Sir, in fine,
Seeing how lothly opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion
With his prepared Sword, he charges home
My unprovided body, larch'd mine arme:
And when he saw my best alarm'd spirits
Bold in the quarrels right, rous'd to th' encounter,
Or whether gasted by the noise I made,
Full suddenly he fled.

Glo. Let him flye far:

Not in this Land shall he remain uncaught
And found; dispatch, the Noble Duke my Master,
My worthy Arch and Patron comes to night,
By his authority I will proclaim it,
That he which finds him shall deserve our thanks,
Bringing the murderous Coward to the stake:
He that conceals him, death.

Bast. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him pight to do it, with curst speech
I threatned to discover him; he replied;
Thou unpossessing Bastard, dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposal
Of any trust, virtue, or worth in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No, what should I deny
(As this I would, though thou did'st produce
My very Character) I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice:
And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spirits
To make thee seek it.

Tucket within.

Glo. O strange and fastned Villain!
Would he deny his Letter, said he?
Heark, the Duke's trumpets, I know not where he comes,
All Ports I'll bar, the villain shall not scape,
The Duke must grant me that: besides, his picture
I will send far and near, that all the Kingdome
May have due note of him, and of my land,
(Loyal and natural Boy) I'll work the means
To make thee capable.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my Noble friend, since I came hither (Which I can call but now) I have heard strangeness.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes to short
Which can pursue th' offender: how does my Lord?

Glo. O Madam, my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd.

Reg. What, did my Father's Godson seek your life?
He whom my father nam'd, your Edgar:

Glo. O Lady, Lady, shame would have it hid.

Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous Knights
That tended upon my father?

Glo. I know not, Madam, 'tis too bad, too bad.

Bast. Yes, Madam, he was of that consort.

Reg. No marvel then, though he were ill-affected,
'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,
To have th' experience and wast of Revenues;
I have this present evening from my Sister
Been well inform'd of them, and with such cautions,
That if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.

Cor. Nor I, assure thee, Regan;

Edmund, I hear that you have shewn your Father
A Child-like Office.

Bast. It is my duty, Sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practice, and receiv'd
This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursued?

Glo. I, my good Lord.

Cor. If he be taken, he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm, make your own purpose,
How in my strength you please: as for you Edmund,
Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend it self, you shall be ours,
Natures of such deep trust, we shall much need:
You we first seize on.

Bast. I shall serve you, Sir, truly, how ever else.

Glo. For him I thank your Grace.

Cor. You know not why we came to visit you.

Reg. Thus out of season, chredding dark-ey'd night,
Occasions Noble Gloster of some prize,
Wherein we must have use of your advice.
Our Father he hath writ, so hath our Sister,
Of differences, which I best thought it fit
To answer from our home: the several Messengers
From hence attend dispatch, our good old friend
Lay comforts to your bosome, and bestow
Your needfull counsel to our businesses,
Which craves the instant use.

Glo. I serve you, Madam,
Your Graces are right welcome.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Kent, and Steward, severally.

Stew. Good dawning to thee, friend, art of this house?

Kent. I.

Stew. Where may we set our horses?

Kent. I th'mire.

Stew. Prythee if thou lov'st me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Stew. Why then I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury Pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Stew. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Stew. What dost thou know me for?

Kent. A Knave, a Rascal, an eater of broken meats, a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred pound, filthy woofed-stocking knave, a Lilly-livered, action-taking, whorson glass-gazing, super-serviceable finical Rogue, one-Trunk-inheriting slave, one that would'st be a Bawd in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a Knave, Beggar, Coward, Pandar, and the Son and Heir of a Mungrel Bitch, one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou deny'st the least syllable of thy addition.

Stew. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one, that is neither known of thee, nor knows thee?

Kent. What a brazen-fac'd Varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me? Is it two dayes since I tript up thy heels, and beat thee before the King? Draw you regue, for

for though it be night, yet the Moon shines, I'll make a sop o'th' Moonshine of you, you whorson Cullinly Barbar-monger, draw.

Stew. Away, I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you Rascal, you come with Letters against the King, and take Vanity the puppet's part, against the Royalty of her father: draw, you Rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks, draw you Rascal, come your wayes.

Stew. Help, ho, murther, help.

Kent. Strike you slave: stand rogue, stand you neat slave, strike.

Stew. Help ho, murther, murther.

Enter Bastard, Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, Servant.

Bast. How now, what's the matter? Part.

Kent. With you, Goodman boy, if you please, come, I'll flesh ye, come on young Master.

Glo. Weapons? Armes? what's the matter here?

Corn. Keep peace upon your lives, he dyes that strikes again, what is the matter?

Reg. The Messengers from our Sister, and the King?

Cor. What is your difference, speak?

Stew. I am scarce in breath, my Lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestir'd your Valour, you cowardly Rascal, nature disclaims in thee: a Taylor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow, a Taylor make a man?

Kent. A Taylor, Sir; a Stone-cutter, or a Painter, could not have made him so ill, though they had bin but two yeares o'th' trade.

Cor. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Stew. The ancient Russian, Sir, whose life I have spar'd at sute of his gray beard.

Kent. Thou whorson Zed, thou unnecessary letter, my Lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a Jakes with him, Spare my gray-beard, you wag-tail?

Cor. Peace, sirrah,

You beastly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent. Yes, Sir, but anger hath a priviledge.

Cor. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a Sword, Who wears no honesty: such smiling rogues as these, Like Rats oft bite the holy cords a-twain, Which art t' intrince, t' unloose: smooth every passion That in the natures of their Lords rebell, Being oil to fire, snow to the colder moods, Renege, affirm, and turn their Halcyon beaks With every gale, and vary of their Masters, Knowing naught (like dogges) but following: A plague upon your Epileptick visage, Smoile you my speeches, as I were a fool? Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.

Corn. What art thou mad, old fellow?

Glo. How fell you out, say that?

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy, Then I, and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him Knave? What is his fault?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Cor. No more perchance do's mine, nor his, nor hers.

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain, I have seen better faces in my time,

Then stands on any shoulder that I see Before me, at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow, Who having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect A sawcy roughness, and constrains the garb Quite from his Nature. He cannot flatter, he, An honest mind and plain, he must speak truth, And they will take it so, if not, he's plain. These kind of Knaves I know, which in this plainness, Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends, Then twenty silly-ducking observants, That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good faith, in sincere verity, Under th' allowance of your great aspect, Whose influence like the wreath of radiant fire On flicking Phæbus front.

Corn. What mean'st by this?

Kent. To go out of my dialect: which you discommend so much; I know, Sir, I am no flatterer, he that beguill'd you in a plain accent, was a plain Knave, which for my part I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to't.

Corn. What was th' offence you gave him?

Stew. I never gave him any:

It pleas'd the King his Master very late To strike at me upon his misconstruction, When he compact, & flattering his displeasure Tript me behind: being down, insulted, rail'd. And put upon him such a deal of Man, That worthied him, got praises of the King, For him attempting, who was self-subdued, And in the fleshment of this dead exploit, Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these Rogues, and Cowards But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the Stocks?

You stubborn ancient Knave, you reverent Braggart, We'll teach you.

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn: Call not your Stocks for me, I serve the King; On whose imployment I was sent to you, You shall do small respects, shew too bold malice Against the Grace, and Person of my Master, Stocking his Messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the Stocks;

As I have life and honour, there shall he sit 'till Noon.

Reg. 'Till noon? 'till night my Lord, and all night too.

Kent. Why Madam, if I were your Father's dog, You should not use me so.

Reg. Sir, being his Knave, I will. Stocks brought out.

Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour, Our Sister speaks of. Come, bring away the Stocks.

Glo. Let me beseech your Grace, not to do so, The King his Master, needs must take it ill That he's so slightly valued in his Messenger, Should have him thus restrained.

Corn. I'll answer that.

Reg. My Sister may receive it much more worse, To have her Gentleman abus'd, assaulted.

Corn. Come, my Lord, away.

Exit.

Glo. I am sorry for thee friend, 'tis the Dukes pleasure, Whose disposition all the world well knows Will not be rubb'd nor stop't, I'll intreat for thee.

Kent. Pray do not, sir, I have watch'd and travel'd hard, Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle: A good man's fortune may grow out at heels:

Give

Give you good morrow.

Glo. The Duke's to blame in this,
'Twill be ill taken.

Exit.

Kent. Good King, that must approve the common saw,
Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st
To the warm Sun.

Approach thou Beacon to this under Globe,
That by thy comfortable Beams I may Peruse this Letter. Nothing almost sees miracles
But misery. I know tis from Cordelia,
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd
Of my obscured course. And shall find time
From this enormous State, seeking to give Losses their remedies. All weary and o're-watch'd,
Take vantage heavy eyes, not to behold
This shamefull lodging. Fortune goodnight,
Smile once more, turn thy wheel.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard my self proclaim'd,
And by the happy hollow of a Tree,
Escap'd the hunt. No Port is free, no place
That guard, and most unittual vigilance
Do's not attend my taking. Whiles I may scape
I will preserve my self: and am bethought
To take the basest, and most pooreit shape
That ever penury in contempt of man,
Brought near to beast: my face I'll grime with filth,
Blanket my loins, put all my hairs in knots,
And with presented nakedness out-face
The Winds, and persecutions of the sky:
The Countrey gives me proof and president
Of Bedlam beggars, who with roaring voices
Strike in their numm'd and mortified Armes,
Pins, Wooden-pricks, Nails, Sprigs of Rosemary:
And with this horrible object, from low Farms,
Poor pelting Villages, Sheep's-Coats, and Mills,
Sometimes with Lunatick bans, sometimes with Prayers
Inforce their charity: poor Turligod, poor Tom.
That's something yet: Edgar! nothing am. Exit.

Enter Lear, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis strange that they should so depart from
And not send back my Messenger. (home,

Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before, there was no purpose in them
Of this remove.

Kent. Haile to thee, Noble Master.

Lear. Ha? Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent. No, my Lord.

Fool. Ha, ha, he wears Crewel Garters; horses are ti'de by the heads, Dogs and Bears by th'neck, Monkies by th'loins, and Men by th'legs; when a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.

Lear. What's he,
That hath so much thy place mistook
To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she,
Your Son, and Daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No I say.

Kent. I say yea.

Lear. By Jupiter I swear no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear I.

Lear. They durst not do't:

They could not, would not do't: 'tis worse then murder
To do upon respect such violent outrage:
Resolve me with all modest haste, which way
Thou might'st deserve, or they impose this usage,
Coming from us.

Kent. My Lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness Letters to them,
E're I was risen from the place, that shewed
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking Poste,
Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting forth
From Gonerill his Mistress, salutation;
Deliver'd Letters spight of intermission,
Which presently they read; on those contents
They summon'd up their meiny, straight took horse,
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer, gave me cold looks,
And meeting here the other Messenger,
Whose welcome I perceiv'd had poison'd mine,
Being the very fellow which of late
Displai'd so sawcily against your highness,
Having more man then wit about me, drew;
He rais'd the house, with loud and coward cryes,
Your son and daughter found this trespass worth
The shame which here it suffers. (way,

Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild Geese fly that Fathers that wear rags, do make their Children blind,
But fathers that bear bags, shall see their children kind.
Fortune that arrant whore, ne're turns the key to th'poor.
But for all this thou shalt have as many Dolours for thy Daughters, as thou canst tell in a year. (dear

Lear. Oh how this Mother swells up toward my heart I
Hystorica passio, down thou climbing sorrow,
Thy Element's below; where is this daughter?

Kent. With the Earl, Sir, here within.

Lear. Follow me not, stay here.

Exit.

Gent. Made you more offence,

But what you speak of.

Kent. None;

How chance the King comes with so small a number?

Fool. And thou had'st been set i'th'Stocks for that question, thou'd'st well deserv'd it.

Kent. Why fool?

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an Ant, to teach thee there's no labouring i'th'winter. All that follow their noses, are led by their eyes, but blind men, and there's not a nose among twenty, but can smell him that's stinking;
let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill, left it break thy neck with following. But the great one that goes upward, let him draw thee after: when a wiseman gives thee better counsel, give me mine again, I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.
That Sir, which serves, and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form;
Will pack, when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm,

And I will tarry, the fool will stay,
And let the wiseman flie:
The knave turns fool that runs away,
The fool no knave perdy.

Enter Lear, and Gloucester.

Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool?

Fool. Not i'th'Stocks, fool.

Lear.

Lear. Deny to speak with me ?
They are sick, they are weary,
They have travel'd all the night ? mere fetches,
The Images of revolt and flying off.
Get me a better answer.

Glo. My dear Lord,
You know the fiery quality of the Duke,
How unremoveable and fixt he is
In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance, Plague, Death, Confusion :
Fiery ? What quality ? Why Gloster, Gloster,
I'll speak with the Duke of Cornwall, and his wife.

Glo. Well, my good Lord, I have inform'd them so.

Lear. Inform'd them ? Dost thou understand me man ?

Glo. I, my good Lord.

Lear. The King would speak with Cornwall,
The dear Father
Would with his Daughter speak, commands, tends, service,
Are they inform'd of this ? My breath and blood :
Fiery ? The fiery Duke, tell the hot Duke that ---
No, but not yet, may be he is not well,
Infirmity doth still neglect all office,
Whereto our health is bound, we are not our selves,
When Nature being oppress'd, commands the mind
To suffer with the body : I'll forbear,
And am fall'n out with my more headier will,
To take the indispos'd and sickly fit,
For the sound man. Death on my state : wherefore
Should he sit here ? This Act persuades me,
That this remotion of the Duke and her
Is practice onely, Give me my servant forth ;
Go tell the Duke, and's wife, I'll speak with them :
Now presently : bid them come forth and hear me,
Or at their chamber door I'll beat the Drum,
'Till it cry sleep to death.

Glo. I would have all well betwixt you. Exit.

Lear. Oh me my heart ! my rising heart ! but down.

Fool. Cry to it Nunkle, as the Cockney did to the Eels, when he put 'em i'th' Paste alive, she knapt 'em o'th' Coxcombs with a stick, and cryed down wantons, down ; 'twas his brother, that in pure kindness to his Horse buttered his Hey.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Corn. Hail to your Grace. Kent here set at liberty.

Reg. I am glad to see your Highness.

Lear. Regan, I think you are, I know what reason,
I have to think so, if thou should'st not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy Mother's Tombe,
Sepulchring an Adulterers. O are you free ?
Some other time for that. Beloved Regan
Thy sister's naught : Oh Regan, she hath tyed
Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture here,
I can scarce speak to thee, thou'lt not believe
With how deprav'd a quality. Oh Regan.

Reg. I pray you, Sir, take patience, I have hope
You'll know how to value her desert,
Than she to scant her duty.

Lear. Say ? how is that ?

Reg. I cannot think my sister in the least
Would fail her Obligation. If Sir perchance
She have restrain'd the Riots of your Followers,
'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end,
As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her.

Reg. O Sir, you are old,
Nature in you stands on the very Verge
Of her confine : you should be rul'd, and led
By some discretion, that discerns your state
Better then you your self : therefore I pray you,
That to our Sister, you do make return,
Say you have wrong'd her.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness ?

Do you but mark how this becomes the house ?
Dear daughter, I confess that I am old ;
Age is unnecessary : on my knees I beg,
That you'll vouchsafe me Rayment, Bed, and Food.

Reg. Good Sir, no more : these are unsightly tricks :
Return you to my Sister.

Lear. Never, Regan :

She hath abated me of half my Train :
Look'd black upon me, strook me with her Tongue
Most Serpent-like, upon the very heart.
All the stor'd Vengeances of heaven, fall
On her ingratefull top : strike her young bones
You taking Airs with Lameness.

Corn. Fie Sir, fie.

Lear. You nimble Lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her scornfull eyes : infect her Beauty,
You Fen-suck'd Fogs, drawn by the powerfull Sun
To fall, and blister.

Reg. O the blest gods !

So will you wish on me, when the rash mood is on.

Lear. No Regan, thou shalt never have my curse :
Thy tender-hefted Nature shall not give Thee o're to harshness : Her eyes are fierce, but thine
Do comfort, and not burn. 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my Train,
To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,
And in conclusion, to oppose the bolt
Against my coming in. Thou better know'st
The Offices of Nature, bond of Childhood,
Effects of Curtesie, dues of Gratitude :
Thy half o'th' Kingdome hast thou not forgot,
Whereto I thee endow'd,

Reg. Good Sir, to'th' purpose. Tucket within.

Lear. Who put my man i'th' Stocks ?

Enter Steward.

Corn. What Trumpet's that ?

Reg. I know't my Sister's : this approves her Letter,
That she would soon be here. Is your Lady come ?

Lear. This is a Slave, whose easie borrowed pride
Dwells in the sickly grace of her he follows.
Out Varler, from my sight.

Corn. What means your Grace ?

Enter Gonerill.

Lear. Who stockt my Servant ? Regan, I have good hope
Thou did'st not know on't.

Who comes here ? O heavens !
If you do love old men ; if your sweet sway
Allow Obedience : if you your selves are old,
Make it your cause : Send down, and take my part.
Art not asham'd to look upon this Beard ?

O Regan, will you take her by the hand ?

Gon. Why not by th' hand, Sir ? How have I offended ?
All's not offence that indiscretion finds
And dotage terms so.

Lear. O sides, you are too tough !
Will you yet hold ?

How came my man i'th' Stocks ?

Corn. I set him there ; Sir : but his own Disorders

Deserv'd

Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You? Did you?

Reg. I pray you Father, being weak, seem so.
If 'till the expiration of your Moneth
You will return and sojourn with my Sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me,
I am now from home, and out of that provision,
Which shall be needfull for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her? and fifty men dismiss'd?
No, rather I abjure all roofs, and chuse
To wage against the enmity o'th'air,
To be a Comrade with the Wolf and Owle,
Necessities sharp pinch. Return with her?
Why? the hot-bloudied France, that dowerless took
Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To knee his throne, and, Squire-like, pension beg,
To keep base life a-foot; return with her?
Perswade me rather to be slave and sumpter
To this detested groom.

Gon. At your choice, Sir.

Lear. I prythee Daughter do not make me mad,
I will not trouble thee, my Child: farewell:
We'll no more meet, no more see one another,
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter,
Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine. Thou art a Bile,
A plague-sore, or imbossed Carbuncle
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee.
Let shame come when it will, I do not call it,
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove,
Mend when thou canst, be better at thy leisure,
I can be patient, I can stay with Regan,
I and my hundred Knights.

Reg. Not altogether so,
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome, give ear Sir to my Sister,
For those that mingle reason with your passion,
Must be content to think you old, and so,
But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken?

Reg. I dare avouch it, Sir, what fifty Followers?
Is it not well? what should you need of more?
Yea, or so many? Sith that both charge and danger,
Speak 'gainst so great a number: How in one house
Should many people, under two commands
Hold amity? 'tis hard, almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you my Lord, receive attendance
From thole that she calls Servants, or from mine?

Reg. Why not, my Lord?
If then they chanc'd to slack ye,
We could controll them; if you will come to me,
(For now I spy a danger) I intreat you
To bring five and twenty, to no more
Will I give place or notice.

Lear. I gave you all.

Reg. And in good time you gave it.

Lear. Made you my Guardians, my Depositaries,
But keep a reservation to be followed
With such a number? what, must I come to you
With five and twenty? Regan, said you so?

Reg. And speak't again, my Lord, no more with me.

Lear. Those wicked Creatures yet do look well favor'd,
When others are more wicked, not being the worst
Stands in some rank of praise; I'll go with thee,
Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty.

And thou art twice her Love.

Gon. Hear me, my Lord;

What need you five and twenty? Ten? or five?
To follow in a house, where twice so many.
Have a command to tend you?

Reg. What need one?

Lear. O reason not the need: our basest Beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous,
Allow not Nature, more then Nature needs:
Man's life is cheap as Beasts. Thou art a Lady;
If only to go warm were gorgeous.
Why Nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,
Which scarcely keeps thee warm, but for true need,
You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need,
You see me here (you gods) a poor old man,
As full of grief as age, wretched in both,
If it be you that stirres these Daughters hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much.
To bear it tamely: touch me with Noble anger,
And let not women's weapons, water drops,
Stain my man's cheeks. No you unnatural Hags,
I will have such revenges on you both,
That all the world shall ----- I will do such things,
What they are yet, I know not, but they shall be,
The terrors of the earth; you think I'll weep,
No, I'll not weep, I have full cause of weeping.

Storm and Tempest.

But this heart shall break into a hundred thousand flaws,
Or e're I weep. O fool, I shall go mad.

Exeunt.

Corn. Let us withdraw, 'twill be a storm.

Reg. This house is little, the old man and's people
Cannot be well bestow'd.

Gon. 'Tis his own blame hath put himself from rest,
And must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly,
But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purpos'd,
Where is my Lord of Gloster?

Enter Gloster.

Corn. Followed the old man forth, he is return'd.

Glo. The King is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he going?

Glo. He calls to horse, but will I know not whither.

Corn. 'Tis best to give him way, he leads himself.

Gon. My Lord, intreat him by no means to stay.

Glo. Alack the night comes on: and the high winds
Do sorely ruffle, for many Miles about
There's scarce a Bush.

Reg. O Sir, to wilfull men,
The injuries that they themselves procure,
Must be their School-Masters: shut up your doors,
He is attended with a desperate train,
And what they may incense him to, being apt,
To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids fear.

Corn. Shut up your doors, my Lord, 'tis a wild night,
My Regan counsels well: come out o'th' storm. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Storm still. Enter Kent, and a Gentleman, severally.

Kent. Who's there besides foul weather?

Gon. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent.

Kent. I know you : where's the King ?

Gent. Contending with the fretfull Elements,
Bids the wind blow the Earth into the Sea,
Or swell the curled Waters 'bove the Main,
That things might change, or cease.

Kent. But who is with him ?

Gent. None but the fool, who labours to out-jest
His heart-strook injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you,
And dare upon the warrant of my note
Commend a dear thing to you. There is division
(Although as yet the face of it is cover'd
With mutual cunning) 'twixt Albany, and Cornwall :
Who have, as who have not, that their great Starres
Thron'd and set high ; Servants who seem no less,
Which are to France the Spies and Speculations Intelligent of our State. What hath bin seen,
Either in snuffs, and packings of the Dukes,
Or the hard Rein which both of them have borne
Against the old kind King ; or something deeper,
Whereof (perchance) these are but furnishings.

Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent. No, do not :
For confirmation that I am much more
Then my out-wall ; open this Purse, and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,
(As fear not but you shall) shew her this Ring,
And she will tell you who that fellow is
That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm,
I will go seek the King.

Gent. Give me your hand,
Have you no more to say ?

Kent. Few words, but to effect more then all yet ;
That when we have found the King, in which your pain
That way, I'le this : He that first lights on him, Holla the other. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Storm still. Enter Lear, and Fool.

Lear. Blow winds, and crack your cheeks ; Rage, blow
You Cataracts, and Hurricano's spout.
'Till you have drench'd our Steeples, drown the Cocks.
You Sulph'rous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt-curriers of Oak-cleaving Thunder-bolts,
Sindge my white head. And thou all-shaking Thunder,
Strike flat the thick Rotundity o'th' world,
Crack Nature's moulds, all germanes spill at once
That makes ingratefull Man.

Fool. O Nunkle, Court holy-water in a dry house, is better then the Rain-water out o'door. Good Nunkle, in, ask thy Daughter' blessing, here's a night pities neither Wife-men, nor Fools.

Lear. Rumble thy belly full : spit Fire, spout Rain ;
Nor Rain, Wind, Thunder, Fire are my Daughters,
I tax not you, you Elements with unkindness,
I never gave you Kingdome, call'd you Children ;
You owe me no subscription. Then let fall
Your horrible pleasure. Here I stand your Slave,
A poor, infirm, weak, and despis'd old man :
But yet I call you servile Ministers,
That will with two pernicious Daughters join
Your high-engender'd Battels, 'gainst a head

So old and white as this. O, ho ! 'tis foul.

Fool. He that has a house to put's head in, has a good
Head-piece :

The Codpiece that will house, before the Head has any ;
The Head, and he shall Lowse : so Beggars marry many.
That man that makes his toe, what he his heart should make,

Shall of a Corn cry woe, and turn his sleep to wake.

For there was never yet fair woman, but she made mouthes in a glass. Enter Kent.

Lear. No, I will be the patience of all patience.
I will say nothing.

Kent. Who's there ?

Fool. Marry here's Grace, and a Codpiece, that's a Wife-man, and a Fool.

Kent. Alas Sir, are you here ? things that love night,
Love not such nights as these : the wrathfull Skies
Gallow the very wanderers of the dark
And makes them keep their Caves : Since I was man,
Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder,
Such groans of roaring Wind, and Rain, I never Remember to have heard. Man's Nature cannot carry Th'affliction, nor the fear.

Lear. Let the great gods
That keep this dreadfull pudder o're our heads,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble thou Wretch,
That hast within thee undivulged Crimes
Unwhipt of Justice. Hide thee, thou bloody hand ;
Thou Perjur'd, and thou Simular of Virtue
That art incestuous. Caitiff, to pieces shake
That under covert and convenient seeming
Has practis'd on man's life. Close pent-up guilts,
Rive your concealing Continents, and cry
These dreadfull Summoners grace. I am a man,
More sinn'd against, then sinning.

Kent. Alack, bare-headed ?
Gracious my Lord, hard by here is a Hovel,
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest :
Repose you there, while I to this hard house
(More harder then the stones whereof 'tis rais'd,
Which even but now, demanding after you,
Deny'd me to come in) return, and force
Their scantied curtesie.

Lear. My wits begin to turn.
Come on my boy. How dost my boy ? Art cold ?
I am cold my self. Where is this straw, my fellow ?
The Art of our Necessities is strange,
And can make vild things precious. Come, your hovel ;
Poor Fool, and Knave, I have one part in my heart
That's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. He that has and a little-tyne wit,
With height-ho, the Wind and the Rain,
Must make content with his fortunes fit,
Though the Rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True Boy : Come bring us to this Hovel. Exit

Fool. This is a brave night to cool a Curtizan :
I'le speak a Prophecie e're I go :

When Priests are more in words, then matter :
When Brewers marre their Malt with water ;
When Nobles are their taylor's tutors,
No Hereticks burn'd but wenches Sutors,
When every Cafe in Law is right :
No Squire in debt, nor no poor Knight :
When Slanders do not live in tongues ;
Nor Cut-purses come not to throngs ;
When Usurers tell their Gold i'th' field,

And

And Bauds, and Whores, do Churches build.
Then shall the Realm of Albion, come to great confusion,
Then comes the time, who lives to see't,
That going shall be us'd with feet.
This prophecy Mertin shall make,
For I do live before his time.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Gloster and Edmund.

Glo. Alack, alack Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing; when I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house, chaig'd me on pain of perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, or any way sustain him.

Bast. Most savage and unnatural.

Glo. Go too; say you nothing. There is division between the Dukes, and a worse matter then that: I have received a Letter this night, 'tis dangerous to be spoken, I have lock'd the Letter in my Closset, these injuries the King now bears, will be revenged home; there is part of a Power already footed, we must incline to the King, I will look him, and privily relieve him; go you and maintain talk with the Duke, that my charity be not of him perceived; if he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed, if I die for it, (as no lesse is threatned me) the King my old Master must be relieved. There is strange things toward, Edmund, pray you be carefull.

Exit.

Bast. This Curse forbid thee, shall the Duke Instantly know, and of that Letter too; This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me That which my father loses: no lesse then all, The younger rises, when the old doth fall.

Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my Lord, good my Lord, enter, The tyranny of the open night's too rough For Nature to endure.

Storm still.

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my Lord, enter here.

Lear. Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I had rather break mine own, Good my Lord enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much that this contentious Invades us to the skin so: 'tis to thee, But where the greater malady is fix, The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a Bear, But if thy flight lay toward the roaring Sea, Thou'dst meet the Bear i'th' mouth, when the minds free The bodies delicate, the tempest in my mind, Doth from my senses take all feeling else, Save what beats there, Filial ingratitude, Is it not as this mouth should tear his hand For lifting food to't: But I will punish home; No, I will weep no more. In such a night,

(Storm)

To shut me out? Pour on, I will endure: In such a night as this? O Regan, Gonerill, Your old kind Father, whose frank heart gave all, O that way madnesse lies, let me shun that: No more of that.

Kent. Good my Lord, enter here.

Lear. Prithee go in thy self, seek thine own ease, This tempest will not give me leave to ponder On things would hurt me more, but I'll go in, In Boy, go first. You houselesse poverty, Nay, get thee in; I'll pray, and then I'll sleep. Poor naked wretches, where so ere you are That bide the pelting of this piteous storm, How shall your houselesse heads, and unfed sides, Your lop'd, and window'd raggednesse defend you From seasons such as these? O! have tane Too little care of this: take Physick, Pompe, Expose thy self to feel, what wretches feel, That thou may'st shake the superflux to them, And shew the heavens more just.

Exit.

Enter Edgar, and Fool.

Edg. Fathom and half, Fathom and half? poor Tom Fool. Come not in here Nuncle, heres a spirit, help me, help me.

Kent. Give me thy hand, who's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit, he sayes his name's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that do'st gumble there i'th' straw? Come forth.

Edg. Away, the foul Fiend follows me, through the sharp Hawthorn blow the winds. Humh, go to thy bed and warme thee.

Lear. Didst thou give all to thy daughters? And art thou come to this?

Eg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? Whom the foul Fiend hath led through Fire, and through Flame, through Sword, and Whirle Poole, ore Bog, and Quagmire, that hath laid Knives under his Pillow, and Halters in his Puc, set Rats-bane by his Porredge; made him Proud of heart, to ride on a Bay trotting horse, over four arch'd Bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor, Blisse thy five Wits, Tom's a cold. O do, de, do, de, do, de, blisse thee from Whirle-winds, Star-blasting, and taking, do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes. There could I have him now, and there, and there again, and there.

Storm still.

Lear. Has his Daughters brought him to this passe? Could'tt thou save nothing? Would'st thou give'em all?

Fool. Nay, he reserv'd a Blanket, else we had been all sham'd, Lear. Now all the plagues that in the pendulous aire Hang fated o're mens faults, light on thy daughters.

Kent. He hath no Daughters, Sir.

Lear. Death traitor, nothing could have subdu'd Na- To such a lownesse, but his unkind Daughters. (ture Is it the fashion, that discarded Fathers, Should have thus little mercy on their flesh Judicious punishment; 'twas this flesh begot Those Pelican Daughters.

Edg. Pillcock sat on Pillcock hill, alow: alow, loo, loo.

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools, and Madmen.

Edgar. Take heed oth'foule fiend, obey thy Parents, keep thy word, justice, swear not, commit not,

V u u

with

with mans sworn Spouse ; set on thy Sweet-heart on proud array. Tom's a cold.

Lear. What hast thou been ?

Edg. A servingman. Proud in heart, and mind : that curl'd my hair ; wore Gloves in my cap ; serv'd the Lust of my Mist'ris heart, and did the act of darknesse with her. Swore as many Oaths, as I spake words, and broak them in the sweet face of heaven. One, that slept in the contriving of Lust, and wak'd to do it. Wine lov'd I dearly ; Dice dearly ; and in Woman, out-Paramour'd the Turk. False of heart, light of ear, bloody handed. Hog in sloth, Fox in stealth, Wolf in greedinesse, Dog in madnesse, Lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shooes, Nor the rustling of Silks, betray thy poor heart to woman. Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of Plackers, thy pen from Lenders Books, and defie the foule fiend. Still through thy Hawthorn blowes the cold wind : Sayes sum, mun, nonny, Dolphin my Boy, Boy Sessey : let him trot my. Storm still.

Lear. Thou wert better in a Grave, then to answer with thy uncover'd body, this extremity of the Skies. Is man no more then this ? Consider him well. Thou ow'st the Worme no Silk : the Beast, no Hide : the Sheep, no Wooll : the Cat no perfume. Ha ? Here's three on's are sophist'icated. Thou art the thing it self, unaccommodated man, is no more but such a poor, bare, forked Animal as thou art. Off, off you Lendings : Come, unbutton here.

Enter Gloucester, with a Torch.

Fool. Prethee Nuncle be contented, 'tis a naughty night to swim in. Now a little fire in a wild field, were like an old Letchers heart, a small spark, all the rest on's body, cold : Look, here comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foul Flibbertigibbet ; he begins at Curfew, and walks at first Cock : He gives the Web And the Pin, squints the eye, and make the Hare-lip ; Mildews the white Wheat, and hurts the poor Creature of the earth.

Swit'hold footed thrice the old.

He met the Night-Mare, and her ninefold,

Bid her a-light, and her troth-plight,

And aroynt the Witch, aroynt thee.

Kent. How fares your grace ?

Lear. What's he ?

Kent. Who's there ? What is't you seek ?

Glou. What are you there ? Your Names ?

Edg. Poor Tom, that eats the swimming Frog, the Toad, the Tod-pool, the wall-Neut, and the water : that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats Cow-dung for Sallers ; swallows the old Rat, and the ditch-Dog ; drinks the green Mantle of the standing Pool : who is whipt from Tything to Tything, and stockt, punish'd, and imprison'd : who hath three Suits to his back, six shirts to his Body :

Horse to ride, and weapon to wear :

But Mice, and Rats, and such small Dear,

Have been Tom's food for seven long year :

Beware my follower. Peace Smulkin, peace thou fiend.

Glou. What, hath your Grace no better company ?

Edg. The Prince of Darknesse is a Gentleman. Modo he's call'd, and Mahn.

Glou. Our flesh and blood, my Lord, is grown so vild, that it doth hate what it gets.

Edg. Poor Tom's a cold.

Glou. Goin with me ; my duty cannot suffer

T'obey in all your daughters hard commands :

Though all their injunction be to bar my doors,

And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you,

Yet have I ventured to come to seek you out,

And bring you where both fire, and food is ready,

Lear. First let me talk with this Philosopher,

What is the cause of Thunder ?

Kent. Good my Lord take his offer,

Go into th'house.

Lear. I'll take a word with this same learned Theban :

What is your study ?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill Vermin.

Lear. Let us ask you one word in private.

Kent. Importune him once more to go my Lord, His wits begin t'unsettle.

Glou. Can'st thou blame him ?

Storm still.

His Daughters seek his death : Ah, that good Kent,

He said it would be thus : poor banish'd man :

Thou sayest the King grows mad, I'll tell thee friend

I am almost mad my self, I had a Son,

Now out-law'd from my blood : he fought my life

But lately : very late : I lov'd him (friend)

No father his Son dearer : true to tell thee,

The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a nights this ?

I do beseech your grace.

Lear. O cry you mercy, sir :

Noble Philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a cold.

Glou. In fellow there, into th' Hovel ; keep thee warme

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my Lord.

Lear. With him ;

I will keep still with my Philosopher.

Kent. Good my Lord, sooth him :

Let him take the fellow.

Glou. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirra, come on : go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glou. No words, no words, hush.

Edg. Child Rowland to the dark Tower came,

His word was still, fie, foh, and fum

I smell the blood of a British man.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cornwall, and Edmund.

Corn. I will have revenge, ere I depart his house.

Bast. How my Lord, I may be censured, that Nature thus gives way to Loyalty, something fears me to think of.

Cornw. I now perceive, it was not altogether your Brothers cvill disposition made him seek his death : but a provoking merit set a work by a reprovabable badnesse in himself.

Bast. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just ? This is the Letter which he spoke of ; which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O Heavens ! that this Treason were not ; or not I the detector.

Cornw. Go with me to the Dutchesse.

Bast. If the matter of this Paper be certain, you have mighty businesse in hand.

Corn.

Corn. True or false, it hath made thee Earl of Gloucester: seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

Bast. If I find him comforting the King, it will stuff his suspicion more fully. I will persevere in my course of Loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dear father in my Love. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Kent and Gloucester.

Glou. Here is better then the open aire, take it thankfully: I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you. Exit.

Kent. All the power of his wits, have given way to his impatience: the gods reward your kindnesse.

Enter Lear, Edgar, and Fool.

Edg. Fraterretto calls me, and tells me Nero is an Angler in the Lake of Darknesse: pray innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prethee Nunkle tell me, whether a madman be a Gentleman, or a Yeoman.

Lear. A King, a King.

Fool. No, he's a Yeoman, that has a Gentleman to his Son: for he's a Yeoman that see's his Son a Gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits Come hissing in upon'em.

Edg. Bless thy five wits.

Kent. O pittie: Sir, where is the patience now That you so oft have boasted to remain?

Edg. My tears begin to take his part so much, They mar my counterfeiting.

Lear. The little dogs, and all; Trey, Blanch, and Sweet-heart: see, they bark at me,

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them: Avaunt you Curses, be thy mouth or black or white:

Tooth that poisons if it bite:

Mastiffe, Grey-hound, Mongrill, Grim,

Hound or Spaniel, Brache, or Hym:

Or Bobtail tight, or Troudle tail,

Tom will make him weep and wail,

For with throwing thus my head;

Dogs leapt the hatch, and all are fled.

Do, de, de, de: sefe; Come, march to Wakes and Faires, And Market Towns: poor Tom thy horn is drye. Exit.

Lear. Then let them Anatomize Regan: See what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in Nature that make these hard hearts. You sir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments. You will say they are Persian; but let them be chang'd,

Enter Gloster.

Kent. Now good my Lord, lie here, and rest a while.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise, draw the Curtains: so, so, we'll go to supper ith'morning.

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Glou. Come hither friend;

Where is the King my Master?

Kent. Here Sir, but trouble him not, his wits are gone.

Glou. Good friend, I prethee take him in thy armes; I have o'reheard a plot of death upon him:

There is a Litter ready, lay him in't,

And drive toward Dover friend, where thou shalt meet

Both welcome, and protection. Take up thy Master,

If thou should'st dally half an hour, his life

With thine, and all that offer to defend him,

Stand in assured losse. Take up, take up,

And follow me, that will to some provision

Give thee quick conduct. Come, come, away. Exeunt.

Scena Septima.

Enter Cornwall, Gonerill, Bastard, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my Lord your husband, shew him this Letter, the Army of France is landed: seek out the traitor Gloster.

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure. Edmund, keep you our Sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father, are not fit for your beholding. Advise the Duke where you are going, to a most festinate preparation: we are bound to the like. Our Posts shall be swift, and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell dear Sister, farewell my Lord of Gloster.

Enter Steward.

How now? Where's the King?

Stew. My Lord of Gloster hath convey'd him hence.

Some five or six and thirty of his Knights

Hot Questrists after him, met him at gate,

Who, with some other of the Lords dependants,

Are gone with him toward Dover; where they boast

To have well armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your Mistress.

Gon. Farewell sweet Lord, and Sister. Exit.

Corn. Edmund farewell: go seek the traitor Gloster, Pinnion him like a Thief, bring him before us:

Though well we may not passe upon his life

Without the forme of Justice: yet our power

Shall do a cur'sie to our wrath, which men

May blame, but not controll.

Enter Gloucester, and Servants.

Who's there? the traitor?

Reg. Ingratefull Fox, 'tis he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky armes,

Glou. What means your Graces?

Good my friends consider you are my Guests:

Do me no foul play, friends,

Corn. Bind him I say.

Reg. Hard, hard: O filthy traitor.

Glou. Unmercifull Lady, as you are, I'm none.

Corn. To this Chair bind him,

Villain, thou shalt find.

Glou. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done

To pluck me by the Beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor?

Glou. Naughty Lady,

These hairs which thou do'st ravish from my chin

Will quicken and accuse thee. I am your Host,

With Robbers hands, my hospitable favours

You should not ruffle thus. What will you do

Corn. Come Sir.

What Letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple answer'd, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you with the traitors, late footed in the Kingdom?

Reg. To whose hands

You have sent the Lunatick King: speak,

Glou. I have a Letter guessingly set down

Which came from one that's of a newtrall heart,

And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Cunning.

Reg. And false.

Cor. Where hast thou sent the King?

Glou. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Was't thou not charg'd at peril.

Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer that.

Glou. I am tyed to th'Stake,

And I must stand the Course.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Glou. Because I would not see thy cruell Nails
Pluck out his poor old eyes: nor thy fierce Sister,
In his Annointed flesh, stick boarish phangs.
The Sea, with such a storme as his bare head,
In hell-black-night indur'd, would have buoy'd up
And quench'd the Stelled fires:

Yet poor old heart, he help the heavens to rain.
If Wolves had at thy Gate howl'd that stern time,
Thou should'st have said, good Porter turn the Key:
All Cruells else subscribe: but I shall see
The winged Vengeance overtake such Children.

Corn. See't shalt thou never. Fellows hold the Chair.
Upon these eyes of thine, I'll set my foot.

Glou. He that will think to live, till he be old,
Give me some help,----O cruell! O you gods.

Reg. One side will mock another: th'other too.

Corn. If you see vengeance.

Serv. Hold your hand, my Lord?

I have serv'd you ever since I was a Child:
But better service have I never done you,
Then now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog?

Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin,
I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean?

Corn. My Villain?

Serv. Nay then come on, and take the chance of anger.

Reg. Give me thy sword. A pezant stand up thus?

Kills him

Serv. Oh I am slain: my Lord, you have one eye left
To see some mischief on him. Oh.

Corn. Left it see more, prevent it; Out vild gelly:
Where is thy luster now?

Glou. All dark and comfortlesse?

Where's my Son Edmund?

Edmund. enkindle all the sparks of Nature
To quit this horrid act.

Reg. Out treacherous Villain,

Thou call'st on him, that hates thee, It was he
That made the overture of thy Treasons to us:
Who is too good to pity thee.

Glou. O my follies! then Edgar was abus'd.
Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him.

Reg. Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell
His way to Dover.

Exit with Gloster.
How is't my Lord? How look you?

Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt: follow me Lady:
Turn out that eyelesse Villain: throw this Slave
Upon the Dunghill: Regan, I bleed apace, Untimely comes this hurt. Give me your arme: Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be contemn'd,
Then still contemn'd and flatter'd, to be worst:
The lowest, and most deject thing of Fortune,
Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear.
The lamentable change is from the best,
The worst returns to laughter. Welcome then,
Thou unsubstantiall aire that I embrace:
The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst,
Ows nothing to thy blasts.

Enter Gloster led by an old man.

But who comes here? My Father poorly led?
World, World, O World!
But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee,
Life would not yield to age.

Oldm. O my good Lord, I have been your Tenant,
And your Fathers Tenant, these fourscore years.

Glo. Away, get thee away: good friend be gone,
Thy comforts can do me no good at all,
Thee they may hurt.

Oldm. You cannot see your way.

Glou. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes:
I stumbled when I saw. Full oft 'tis seen,
Our means secure us, and our meer defects
Prove our Commodities. Oh dear Son Edgar,
The food of thy abused fathers wrath:
Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
I'd say I had eyes again.

Oldm. How now? who's there?

Edg. O gods! Who is't can say I am at the worst?
I am worse then ere I was.

Oldm. 'Tis poor mad Tom.

Edg. And worse I may be yet: the worst is not,
So long as we can say this is the worst.

Oldm. Fellow, where goest?

Glou. Is it a Beggar-man?

Oldm. Madman, and beggar too.

Glou. He has some reason, else he could not beg.
Ith'last nights storm, I such a fellow saw;
Which made me think a Man, a Worm. My Son
Came then into my mind, and yet my mind
Was then scarce Friends with him.

I have heard more since:
As Flies to th'wanton Boyes, are we to th'gods,
They kill us for their sport.

Edg. How should this be?

Bad is the Trade that must play the fool to sorrow,
Ang'ring it self, and others. Bless'd thee Master.

Glou. Is that the naked fellow?

Oldm. I my Lord.

Glou. Get thee away: if for my sake
Thou wilt o're-take us hence a mile or twain
I'th'way toward Dover, do it for ancient love,
And bring some covering for this naked Soul,
Which I'll intreat to lead me.

Oldm. Alack sir, he is mad.

Glou

Glon. 'Tis the times plague,
When Madmen lead the blind:
Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure:
Above the rest, begone.

Oldm. I'll bring him the Best Parrell that I have Come on't, what will, Exit.

Glon. Sirrah, naked fellow.

Edg. Poor Tom's a cold. I cannot daub it further.

Glon. Come hither fellow.

Edg. And yet I must:

Blesse thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glon. Know'st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile, and gate, horse-way, and foot-path:
poor Tom hath been scar'd out of his good wits. Blesse thee good mans son, from the foul fiend. (plagues)

Glon. Here take this purse, thou whom the heav'n's
Have humbled to all stroaks: that I am wretched Makes thee the happier: heavens deal so still:
Let the superfluous, and Lust-dieted man,
That slaves your ordinance, that will not see
Because he do's not feel, feel your power quickly:
So distribution should undo excess,
And each man have enough. Do'st thou know Dover?

Edg. I matter.

Glon. There is a Cliffe, whose high and bending head
Looks fearfully in the confined Deep:
Bring me but to the very brim of it,
And I'll repair the misery thou do'st bear
With something rich about me: from that place,
I shall no lending need.

Edg. Give me thy arme;
Poor Tom shall lead thee.

Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Gonerill, Bastard, and Steward.

Gon. Welcome my Lord, I marvel our mild husband
Not met us on the way. Now, where's your Master?

Stew. Madam within, but never man so chang'd:
I told him of the Army that was Landed:
He smil'd at it. I told him you were coming,
His answer was, the worse. Of Glosters treachery,
And of the loyal service of his Son
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me Sot,
And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out:
What most he should dislike, seems pleasant to him;
What like, offensive.

Gon. Then shall you go no further.
It is the Cowish terror of his spirit
That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrongs
Which tye him to an answer; our wishes on the way
May prove effects. Back Edmund to my Brother,
Hasten his Musters, and conduct his powers.
I must change names at home, and give the Distaffe
Into my Husbands hands. This trusty Servant
Shall passe between us: ere long you are like to hear
(If you dare venture in your own behalf)
A Mistresses command. Wear this; spare speech,
Decline your head. This kisse, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy Spirits up into the aire:
Conceive, and fare thee well.

Bast. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloster.

Oh, the difference of man, and man,
To thee a Womans services are due,
My fool usurps my body.

Stew. Madam, here comes my Lord.

Enter Albany.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.

Alb. Oh Gonerill.

You are not worth the dust which the rude wind
Blows in your face.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man.

That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head of wrongs,
Who hast not in thy brows an eye-discerning,
Thine honor, from thy suffering.

Alb. See thy self devill:

Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
So horrid as in woman.

Gon. Oh vain fool.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Oh my good Lord, the Duke of Cornwall's dead,
Slain by his Servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloster.

Alba. Glosters eyes?

Mes. A Servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,
Oppos'd against the act: bending his Sword
To his great Master, who, thereat enrag'd
Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him dead,
But not without that harmful stroke, which since
Hath pluck'd him after.

Alba. This shews you are above
You Justices, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge. But (O poor Gloster)
Lost he his other eye?

Mes. Both, both, my Lord.
This Letter Madam, craves a speedy answer:
'Tis from your Sister,

Gon. One way I like this well,
But being widow, and my Gloster with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck
Upon my hatefull life. Another way
The News is not so tart. I'll read, and answer.

Alba. Where was his Son,
When they did take his eyes?

Mes. Come with my Lady hither.

Alba. He is not here.

Mes. No my good Lord, I met him back again.

Alba. Knows he the wickednesse?

Mes. I my good Lord: 'twas he inform'd against him
And quit the house of purpose, that their punishment
Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloster, I live
To thank thee for the love thou shew'd'st the King,
And to revenge thine eyes. Come hither friend,
Tell me what more thou know'st.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Cordelia, Gentlemen, and Souldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he: why he was met even now
As made the next Sea, singing aloud,
Crown'd with rank Fenitar, and furrow weeds,
With Hardocks, Hemlock, Nettles, Cuckow flowers,

V u u 3

Darnell

Damell, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining Corn. A Century send forth;
Search every Acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye. What can mans wisdom
In the restoring his bereaved Sense: he that helps him,
Take all my outward worth.

Gent. There is means, Madam:
Our foster Nurse of Nature, is repose,
The which he lacks: that to provoke in him,
Are many Simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of Anguish.

Cord. All blest Secrets,
All you unpublish'd Vertues of the earth
Spring with my tears; be aidant, and remediate
In the good mans desires: seek, seek for him,
Left his ungovern'd rage, dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. News Madam,
The Brittish Powers are marching hitherward.

Cord. 'Tis known before. Our preparation stands
In expectation of them. O dear father,
It is thy business that I go about: therefore great France
My mourning, and importun'd tears hath pittied:
Now blown Ambition doth our Arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd Fathers Right:
Soon may I hear, and see him. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Regan, and Steward.

Reg. But are my Brothers Powers set forth?

Stew. I Madam.

Reg. Himself in person there?

Stew. Madam, with much ado
Your Sister is the better Souldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your Lord at home;

Stew. No Madam.

Reg. What might import my Sisters Letter to him?

Stew. I know not, Lady.

Reg. Faith he is posted hence on serious matter:
It was great ignorance. Glosters eyes being out
To let him live. Where he arrives, he moves
All hearts against us: Edmund, I think is gone
In pitty of his misery, to dispatch
His nighted life: Moreover to defcry
The strength oth'Enemy.

Stew. I must needs after him, Madam, with my Letter.

Reg. Our troops set forth tomorrow, stay with us:
The wayes are dangerous.

Stew. I may not Madam:

My Lady charg'd my duty in his business.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund?
Might not you transport her purposes by word? Belike,
Some things, I know not what. I'll love thee much
Let me unseal the Letter.

Stew. Madam, I had rather----

Reg. I know your Lady do's not love her husband,
I am sure of that: and at her late being here,
She gave strange Iliads, and most speaking looks
To Noble Edmund. I know you are of her bosome.

Stew. I Madam?

Reg. I speak in understanding: Y'are: I know't,
Therefore I do advise you take this note:
My Lord is dead: Edmund, and I have talk'd,
And more convenient is he for my hand
Then for your Ladies: You may gather more:
If you do find him, pray you give him this;
And when your Mistress hears thus much from you,
I pray desire her call her wisdom to her.
So fare you well:

If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,
Preferment falls on him, that cuts him off.

Stew. Would I could meet him, Madam, I should shew
What party I do follow.

Reg. Fare thee well.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Gloucester, and Edgar.

Glow. When shall I come to th'top of that same hill?

Edg. You do climb up it now. Look how we labour.

Glow. Me thinks the ground is even.

Edg. Horrible steep.

Hark, do you hear the Sea?

Glow. No truly.

Edg. Why then your other Senses grow imperfect
By your eyes anguish,

Glow. So may it be indeed.

Me thinks thy voice is alter'd, and thou speak'st
In better phrase, and matter then thou did'st.

Edg. Y'are much deceiv'd: in nothing am I chang'd
But in my Garments.

Glow. Me thinks y'are better spoken.

Edg. Come on sir,

Heres the place: stand still: how fearfull
And dizzy 'tis, to cast ones eyes so low,
The Crows and Choughs, that wing the midway aire
Shew scarce so grosse as Beetles Half way down:
Hangs one that gathers Sampire: dreadfull trade:
Me thinks he seems no bigger then his head.
The Fishermen that walk'd upon the beach
Appear like Mice: and yond tall Anchoring Bark, Diminish'd to her Cock: her Cock, a Buoy
Almost to small for sight. The murmuring Surge,
That on th'unnumbred idle Pebble chafes
Cannot be heard so high. I'll look no more,
Left my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple down headlong.

Glow. Set me where you stand.

Edg. Give me your hand:

You are now within a foot of th'extream Verge:
For all beneath the Moon would I not leap upright.

Glow. Let go my hand:

Here friends, another purse: in it, a Jewell
Well worth a poor mans taking. Fairies, and gods
Prosper it with thee. Go thou further off,
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare ye well, good sir.

Glow. With all my heart.

Edg. Why do I trifle thus with his despair,
'Tis done to cure it.

Glow. O you mighty gods!
This world I do renounce, and in your fights

Shake

Shake patiently my great affliction off:
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrell with your great opposessle wills,
My snuff, and loathed part of Nature should Burn it self out. If Edgar live; O bless him.
Now fellow, fare the well.

Edg. Good Sir, farewell.
And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The Treasure of life, when life it self
Yields to the Theft. Had he bin where he thought,
By this had thought bin past. Alive, or dead?
Hoe, you sir: friend, here you sir, speak:
Thus might he passe indeed: yet he revives.
What are you sir?

Glou. Away, and let me die.
Edg. Had'st thou been ought
But Gozmore, feathers and aire,
(So many fathome down precipitating)
Thoud'st shiver'd like an Egge: but thou do'st breath:
Hast heavy substance, bleed'st not, speak, art sound.
Ten Masts at each, make not the altitude
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell,
Thy life's a Miracle. Speak yet again.

Glou. But have I saine, or no?
Edg. From the dread Summet of this Chalky Bourn
Look up a height, the shrill-gor'd Lark so far
Cannot be seen or heard: Do but look up.

Glou. Alack, I have no eyes:
Is wretchednesse depriv'd that benefic
To end it self by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,
When misery could beguile the tyrants rage,
And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arme.
Up, so: How is't? Feel you your Legs? You stand.

Glou. Too well, too well.
Edg. This is above all strangenessse,
Upon the Crown oth' Cliffe. What thing was that
Which parted from you?

Glou. A poor unfortunate Beggar.
Edg. As I stood here below, me thought his eyes
Were two full Moons: he had a thousand Noses,
Horns walk'd, and way'd like the enraged Sea:
It was some fiend: therefore thou happy father,
Think that the clearest gods, who make them honors
Of mens impossibilities, have preserved thee.

Glou. I do remember now: henceforth I'll bear Affliction, till it do cry out it self Enough, enough, and die. That thing you speak of,
I took it for a man: often 'twould say
The fiend, the fiend, he led me to that place,
Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts.

Enter Lear.

But who comes here?
The safer sense will ne're accomodate
His Master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for crying. I am the King himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!
Lear. Natures above Art, in that respect. There's your Presse-money. That fellow handles his Bow like a Crow-keeper: draw me a Cloathiers yard. Look, look, a Mouse: peace, peace, this piece of roasted Cheese will doo't. There's my Gauntlet, I'll prove it on a Gyant.
Bring up the brown Bills. O well flown Bird: ith' clout, ith'clout: Hewgh. Give the word.

Edg. Sweet Marjoram.

Lear. Passe.

Glou. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Gonerill with a white beard? They flatter'd me like a Dog, and told me I had the white hairs in my Beard, ere the black ones were there. To say I, and no, to every thing that I said: I, and no too, was no good Divinity. When the raigin came to wet me once, and wind to make me chatter: when the Thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Goto, they are not men o'their words; they told me, I was every thing: 'Tis a Lie, I am not Agu-proof.
Glou. The trick of that voice, I do well remember.
Is't not the King?

Lear. I, every inch a King.
When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.
I pardon that mans life. What was thy cause?
Adultery? thou shalt not die: die for Adultery?
No, the wren goes too't, and the small guilded Flie
Do's lercher in my sight. Let Copulation thrive:
For Glosters bastard Son was kinder to his father,
Then my Daughters got 'tween the lawfull sheets.
Too't Luxury pell-mell, for I lack Souldiers.
Behold yon sumpring Dame, whose face between her Forks presages Snow; that minces Vertue, and do's shake the head to hear of pleasures name. The Fitchew, not the soyled horse goes too't with a more riotous appetite: down from the waste they are Centaures, though Women all above: but to the Girdle do the gods inher-rit, beneath is all the fiends. There's hell, there's dark-nesse, there is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption: Fie, fie, fie; pah, pah: Give me an Ounce
Of Civer; good Apothecary sweeten my imagination:
There's money for thee.

Glou. O let me kiss that hand.

Lear. Let me wipe it first,
It smells of Mortality.

Glou. O ruin'd piece of Nature, this great world
Shall so wear out to naught.
Do'st thou know me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough: do'st thou squiny at me? No, do thy worst blind Cupid, I'll not love. Read thou this challenge, mark but the penning of it.

Glou. Were all thy Letters Suns, I could not see one.

Edg. I would not take this from report,
It is, and my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glou. What with the Case of eyes?

Lear. Oh ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in heavy case, your purse in a light, yet you see how this world goes.

Glou. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes, with no eyes. Look with thine ears: See how yond Justice rails upon yond simple thief. Hark in thine ear: Change places, and handy-dandy, which is the Justice, which is the thief: Thou hast seen a Farmers dog bark at a Beggar?

Glou. Sir.

Lear. And the Creature run from the Cur: there thou might'st behold the great image of Authority, a Dog's obey'd in Office. Thou, Rascal Beadle, hold thy bloody hand: why do'st thou lash that Whore? Strip thy own back, thou hotly lusts to use her in that kind, for which thou whip'st her. The Usurer hangs the Cozener. Thoroug

rough and tatter'd cloaths, great Vices do appear: Robes, and furr'd gowns hide all. Place sinns with gold, and the strong Lance of justice, hurtlesse breaks: Arme it in rags, a Pigmies straw doth pierce it. None does offend, none, I say none, I'll able 'em; take that of me my friend, Who have the power to seal th'accusers lips. Get thee glasse eyes, and like a scurvy Politician, seem to see the things thou do'st not. Now, now, now, now, Pull off my Boots: harder, harder, so.

Edg. O matter, and impertinency mixt, Reason in Madnesse.

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes. I know thee well enough, thy name is Gloster: Thou must be patient; we came crying hither: Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the aire We wawle, and cry. I will preach to thee: Mark.

Glon. Alack, alack the day.

Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come To this great stage of fools. This a good block: It were a delicate stratagem to shooe A Troop of horse with felt: I'll put't in prooffe, And when I have stoln upon these Sons in Laws: Then kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Oh here he is: lay hand upon him, Sir. Your most dear Daughter.-----

Lear. No rescue? What, a Prisoner? I am even The Natural Fool of fortune. Use me well, You shall have rancome. Let me have Surgeons, I am cut to th' Brains.

Gent. You shall have any thing.

Lear. No Seconds? All my self? Why, this would make a man, a man of Salt; To use his eyes for Garden water-pots. I will die bravely, Like a smug Bridegroom. What? I will be Jovial: Come, come, I am a King. Masters, know you that?

Gent. You are a Royal one, and we obey you.

Lear. Then there's life in't. Come, and you get it, You shall get it by running: Sa, sa, sa, sa. Exit.

Gent. A sight most pittifull in the meanest wretch, Past speaking of in a King. Thou hast a Daughter Who redeems Nature from the general curse Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail gentle Sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you: what's your will?

Edg. Do you hear ought (Sir) of a Battell toward.

Gent. Most sure, and vulgar:

Every one hears that, which can distinguish sound.

Edg. But by your favour:

How near's the other Army?

Gent. Near, and on speedy foot: the main disery Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg. I thank you sir, that's all.

Gent. Though that the Queen on special cause is here, Her Army is mov'd on. Exit.

Edg. I thank you Sir.

Glon. You ever gentle gods, take my breath from me, Let not my worse Spirit tempt me again To die before you please.

Edg. Well pray you father.

Glon. Now good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame to Fortunes blows Who, by the Art of known, and feeling sorrows, Am pregnant to good pittie. Give me your hand, I'll lead you to some biding.

Glon. Hearty thanks:

The bounty, and the benizon of heaven To boot, and boot.

Enter Steward.

Stew. A proclaim'd prize: most happy: That eyelesse head of thine, was first fram'd flesh To raise my fortunes. Thou old, unhappy traitor, Briefly thy self remember: the Sword is out That must destroy thee.

Glon. Now let thy friendly hand Put strength enough to't.

Stew. Wherefore, bold Pezant, Darst thou support a publish'd Traitor? hence, Lest that th'infection of his fortune take Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Chill not let go Zir, Without vurther cation.

Stew. Let go Slave, or thou dy'st.

Edg. Good Gentleman go your gate, and let poor volk passe: and chud ha'bin zwagged out of my life, 'twould ha'bin zo long as 'tis, by a vortnight. Nay, come not near th'old man: keep out che vor'ye, or ice try Whither your Costard, or my Ballow be the harder; chill be plain with you.

Stew. Out Dunghill.

Edg. Chill pick your teeth Zir: come, no matter vor your foyns.

Stew. Slave thou hast slain me: villain, take my purse; If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body, And give the Letters which thou find'st about me, To Edmund Earl of Gloster: seek him out Upon the English party. Oh untimely death, death.

Edg. I know thee well. A serviceable Villain, As dutious to the vices of thy Mistris, As badnesse would desire.

Glon. What, is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down Father: rest you. Let's see these Pockets; the Letters that he speaks of May be my friends: he's dead; I am only sorry He had no other Deathsman. Let us see: Leave gentle wax, and manners: blameus not To know our enemies minds, we rip their hearts, Their Papers are more lawfull.

Reads the Letter.

Let our reciprocall vows be remembred. You have many opportunities to cut him off: if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offer'd. There is nothing done. If he return the Conqueror, then am I the Prisoner, and his bed, my Goal, from the loathed warmth whereof, deliver me, and supply the place of our Labour.

Your (Wife, so I would say) affectionate Servant. Gonerill.

Of indistinguish'd space of Womans will, A plot upon her vertuous husbands life, And the exchange my brother: here, in the sands Thee I'll rake up, the post unsanctified Of murderous Letchers: and in the mature time, With this ungracious paper strike the sight Of the death-practis'd Duke: for him 'tis well, That of thy death, and businesse, I can tell.

Glon. The King is mad: How stiffe is my wilde sense

That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling Of my huge sorrows? Better I were distract, So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs, Drum afar off.

And woes, by wrong imaginations loose

The

The knowledge of themselves.

Edg. Give me your hand :
Far off me thinks I hear the beaten Drum.
Come father, I'll bestow you with a friend.

Exeunt.

Scena Septima.

Enter Cordelia, Kent and Gentleman.

Cor. O thou good Kent,
How shall I live and work
To match thy goodnesse ?
My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledg'd Madam is o're-paid,
All my reports go with the modest truth,
Nor more, nor clipt, but so.

Cor. Be better suited,
These weeds are memories of those worser hours :
I prethee put them off.

Kent. Pardon dear Madam,
Yet to be known shortens my made intent,
My boon I make it, that you know me not,
Till time, and I think meet.

Cor. Then be't so my good Lord :
How do's the King ?

Gent. Madam sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods !
Cure this great breach in his abused Nature,
Th'untun'd and jarring senses, O wind up,
Of this child-changed Father.

Gent. So please your Majesty,
That we may wake the King, he hath slept long ?

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed
I'th' sway of your own will : is he array'd ?

Enter Lear in a Chair, carried by Servants

Gent. I Madam : in the heaviness of sleep,
We put fresh garments on him.
Be by, good Madam, when we do awake him,
I doubt not of his Temperance,

Cor. O my dear father, restoration hang
Thy medicine on my lips, and let this kisse
Repair those violent harmes, that my two Sisters
Have in thy Reverence made.

Kent. Kind and dear Princess.

Cor. Had you not bin their father, these white flakes
Did challenge pitty of them. Was this face
To be oppos'd against the jarring winds ?
Mine Enemies dog, though he had bit me,
Should have stood that night against my fire,
And was't thou fain (poor Father)
To hovell thee with Swine and Rogues forlorn,
In short, and musty straw ? Alack, alack,
'Tis wonder that my life and wits, at once
Had not concluded all. He wakes, speak to him.

Gent. Madam do you, 'tis fittest.

Cor. How does my Royal Lord ?
How fares your Majesty ?

Lear. You do me wrong to take me out oth'grave ;
Thou art a soul in blisse, but I am bound

Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald, like molten Lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me ?

Lear. You are a spirit I know, when did you die ?

Cor. Still, still, far wide.

Gent. He's scarce awake,
Let him alone a while.

Lear. Where have I bin ?
Where am I ? fair day light ?
I am mightily abus'd ; I should even die with pitty
To see another thus. I know not what to say :
I will not swear these are my hands : let's see,
I feel this pin prick, would I were assur'd
Of my condition,

Cor. O look upon me, sir,
And hold your hand in benediction o're me,
You must not kneel.

Lear. Pray do not mock me ;
I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward,
Not an hour more, nor lesse :
And to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind.
Me thinks I should know you, and know this man,
Yet I am doubtfull : for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is, and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments : nor I know not Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me,
For (as I am a man) I think this Lady
To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am : I am,

Lear. Be your tears wet ?
Yes faith : I pray weep not.
If you have poison for me, I will drink it :
I know you do not love me, for your Sisters
Have (as I do remember) done me wrong.
You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France ?

Kent. In your own kingdome, Sir,

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Gent. Be comforted good Madam, the great rage
You see is kill'd in him : desire him to go in,
Trouble him no more till further settling.

Cor. Wilt please your highnesse walk ?

Lear. You must bear with me :
Pray you now forget, and forgive,
I am old and foolish.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Edmund, Regan, Gentlemen, and Souldiers.

Bast. Know of the Duke if his last purpose hold,
Or whether since he is advis'd by ought
To change the course, he's full of alteration,
And self-reproving, bring his constant pleasure.

Reg. Our Sisters man is certainly miscarried.

Bast. 'Tis to be doubted Madam.

Reg. Now sweet Lord,

You

You know the goodnesse I intend upon you :
Tell me but truly, but then speak the truth.
Do you not love my Sister ?

Bast. In honour'd Love.

Reg. But have you never found my Brothers way,
To the fore-fended place ?

Bast. No by mine honour, Madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her, dear my Lord,
Be not familiar with her.

Bast. Fear not, she and the Duke her husband.

Enter with Drum & Colours, Albany, Goneril, Souldiers.

Alba. Our very loving Sister, well be-met :
Sir, this I heard, the King is come to his Daughter
With others, whom the rigour of our State
Fore'd to cry out.

Reg. Why is this reason'd ?

Gone. Combine together 'gainst the Enemy :
For these domestick, and particular broils,
Are not the question here.

Alb. Let's then determine with th'ancient of war
On our proceeding.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us ?

Gon. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient, pray go with us.

Gon. Oh, ho, I know the Riddle, I will go.

Exeunt both the Armies.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. If ere your Grace had speech with man so poor,
Hear me one word.

Alb. I'll overtake you, speak.

Edg. Before you fight the Battel, ope this Letter :
If you have victory, let the Trumpet sound
For him that brought it : wretch though I seem,
I can produce a Champion, that will prove
What is avouched there. If you miscarry,
Your businesse of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune loves you.

Alb. Stay till I have read the Letter.

Edg. I was forbid it.

When time shall serve, let but the Herald cry.
And I'll appear again.

Exit.

Alb. Why fare thee well, I will o're-look thy paper.

Enter Edmund.

Bast. The Enemy's in view, draw up your powers,
Here is the guesse of their true strength and forces,
By diligent discovery, but your haist
Is now urg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the time.

Exit.

Bast. To both these Sisters have I sworn my love :
Each jealous of the other, as the stung
Are of the Adder. Which of them shall I take ?
Both ? One ? Or neither ? Neither can be enjoy'd
If both remain alive : To take the Widow,
Exasperates, makes mad her sister Gonerill,
And hardly shall I carry out my side,
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use
His countenance for the Battel, which being done,
Let her who would be rid of him, devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,
The Battel done, and they within our power ;

Shall never see his pardon : for my state,
Stands on me to defend, not to debate.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Alarm within. Enter with Drum and Colours, Lear Cordelia, and Souldiers, over the Stage, & Exeunt.

Enter Edgar, and Gloucester.

Edg. Here Father, take the shadow of this tree
For your good haist : pray that the right may thrive :
If ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.

Glo. Grace be with you Sir.

Exit.

Alarm and Retreat within.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Away old man, give me thy hand, away :
King Lear hath lost, he and his Daughter tane, Give me thy hand. Come on.

Glo. No further Sir, a man may rot even here.

Edg. What in ill thoughts again ?
Men must endure

Their going hence, even as their coming hither, Ripeness is all, come on.

Glo. And that's true too.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter in conquest with Drum & Colours, Edmund, Lear, and Cordelia, as prisoners, Souldiers, Captain.

Bast. Some Officers take them away : good guard,
Untill their greater pleasures first be known
That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first,
Who with best meaning have incurr'd the worst :
For thee oppressed King I am cast down.
My self could else out-frown false fortunes frown.
Shall we not see these Daughters, and these Sisters ?

Lear. No, no, no, no : come lets away to prison :
We two alone will sing like Birds in th' Cage :
When thou do'st ask me blessing, I'll kneel down
And ask of thee forgiveness : So we'll live,
And pray and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At guilded Butterflies : and hear poor Rogues
Talk of Court news, and we'll talk with them too,
Who looses, and who wins ; who's in, who's out :
And take upon's the mystery of things,
As if we were Gods spies : And we'll wear out
In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones
That ebbe and flow by th' Moon.

Bast. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense.
Have I caught thee ?
He that parts us, shall bring a Brand from heaven,
And fire us hence, like Foxes : wipe thine eye,
The good years shall devour them, flesh and fell,

E're

Ere they shall make us weep?
We'll see 'em starv'd first: come.

Bast. Come hither Captain, hark
Take thou this note, go follow them to prison,
One step I have advanc'd thee, if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To Noble Fortunes: know thou this, that men
Are as the time is; to be tender minded
Do's not become a Sword, thy great employment
Will not bear question: either say thou'lt do't,
Or thrive by other means,

Capt. I'll do't my Lord.

Bast. About it, and write happy, when th'ast done,
Mark I say instantly, and carry it so
As I have set it down.

Exit Captain.

Enter Albany, Gonerill, Regan, Souldiers.

Alb. Sir, you have shew'd to day your valiant strain
And fortune led you well: you have the Captives
Who were the opposites of this dayes strife:
I do require them of you so to use them,
As we shall find their merits, and our safety
May equally determine.

Bast. Sir, I thought it fit,
To send the old and miserable King to some retention,
Whose age had Charms in it, whose Title more,
To pluck the common bosome on this side,
And turn our imprest Launces in our eyes
Which do command them. With him I sent the Queen
My reason all the same, and they are ready
To morrow, or at further space, to appear
Where you shall hold your Session.

Alb. Sir, by your patience.
I hold you but a subject of this War,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him.
Me thinks our pleasure might have bin demanded
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our Powers,
Bore the Commission of my place and person,
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call it self your Brother.

Gon. Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More then in your addition.

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.

Alb. That were the most, if he should husband you.

Reg. Jesters do oft prove Prophets.

Gon. Holla, holla,
That eye that told you so, look'd but a squint.

Reg. Lady I am not well, else I should answer
From a full flowing stomach. Generall,
Take thou my souldiers, prisoners, patrimony,
Dispose of them, of me, the walls are thine:
Witnesse the world, that I create thee here
My Lord, and Master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let alone lies not in your good will.

Bast. Nor in thine, Lord.

Alb. Half-blounded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the Drum strike, and prove my title thine.

Alb. Stay yet, hear reason: Edmund, I arrest thee
On capitall Treason; and in thy arrest,
This guilded Serpent: for your claim fair Sisters,
I bare it in the interest of my wife,

Exit.

'Tis she is sub-contracted to this Lord,
And I her husband contradict your Banes.
If you will marry, make your loves to me,
My Lady is bespoken.

Gon. An enterlude.

Alb. Thou art armed, Gloster,
Let the Trumpet sound:
If none appear to prove upon thy person,
Thy heynous, manifest, and many Treasons,
There is my pledge: I'll make it on thy heart
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing lesse
Then I have here proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Sick, O sick.

Gon. If not, I'll ne're trust medicine.

Bast. There's my exchange, what in the world he is
That names me Traitor, villain-like he lies,
Call by the Trumpet: he that dares approach;
On him, on you, who not, I will maintain
My truth and honor firmly.

Enter a Herald.

Alb. A Herald, ho.
Trust to thy single vertues, for thy Souldiers
All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharge.

Reg. My sicknesse grows upon me.

Alb. She is not well, convey her to my Tent,
Come hither Herald, let the Trumpet sound,
And read out this.

A Trumpet sounds.

Herald reads.

IF any man of quality or degree within the lists of the Army, will maintain upon Edmund supposed Earl of Gloster, that he is a manifold Traitor, let him appear by the third sound of the Trumpet: he is bold in his defence.

Her. Again.

Her. Again.

1 Trumpet.

2 Trumpet.

3 Trumpet.

Trumpet answers him within.

Enter Edgar armed.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears
Upon this Callo'th' Trumpet.

Her. What are you?

Your name, your quality, and why you answer
This present Summons?

Edg. Know my name is lost

By treasons tooth: bare-gnawn, and Canker-bit,
Yet am I Noble as the Adversary
I come to cope.

Alb. Which is that Adversary?

Edg. What's he that speaks for Edmund Earl of Glo-

Bast. Himself, what saist thou to him?

(After?)

Edg. Draw thy Sword.

That if my speech offend a Noble heart,
Thy arme may do thee Justice, here is mine:
Behold it is my priviledge,
The priviledge of mine honors,
My oath, and my profession. I protest,
Maugre thy strength, place, youth, and eminence,
Despise thy victor-Sword, and fire new fortune,
Thy valour, and thy heart, thou art a traitor:
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father,
Conspirant gainst this high illustrious Prince,
And from th'extreamest upward of thy head,
To the discent and dust below thy foot,

A most Toad-spotted traitor. Say thou no,
This Sword, this arme, and my best spirits are bent
To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak, Thoulyest.

Bast. In wisdom I should ask thy name,
But since thy out-side looks so fair and Warlike,
And that thy tongue (some say) of breeding breaths,
What safe, and nicely I might well delay,
By rule of Knight-hood, I disdain and spurn:
Back do I toss these Treasons to thy head,
With the hell-hated Lie, ore-whelm thy heart,
Which for they yet glance by, and scarcely bruise,
This sword of mine shall give them instant way,
Where they shall rest for ever. Trumpets speak.

Alb. Save him, save him.

Alarums. Fights.

Gon. This is practise Gloster,
By th'law of War, thou wast not bound to answer
An unknown opposite: thou art not vanquish'd, but cozen'd, and beguil'd.

Alb. Shut your mouth Dame,
Or with this paper shall I stop it: hold Sir,
Thou worse then any name, read thine own evil:
No tearing Lady, I perceive you know it.

Gon. Say if I do, the Laws are mine not thine,
Who can arraign me for't? Exit.

Alb. Most monstrous! O, know'st thou this paper?

Bast. Ask me not what I know.

Alb. Go after her, she's desperate, govern her.

Bast. What you have charg'd me with,
That have I done,
And more, much more, the time will bring it out.
'Tis past, and so am I: But what art thou
That hast this fortune on me? If thou'rt Noble,
I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity:
I am no less in blood then thou art Edmund.
If more, the more th'hast wrong'd me.
My name is Edgar, and thy Fathers son,
The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to plague us:
The dark and vitious place, where thee he got,
Cost him his eyes.

Bast. Th'hast spoken right, 'tis true,
The Wheel is come full circle, I am here.

Alb. Me thought thy very gate did prophesie
A Royal Noblenesse: I must embrace thee,
Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I
Did hate thee, or thy father.

Edg. Worthy Prince I know't.

Alb. Where have you hid your self?
How have you known the miseries of your father?

Eag. By nursing them my Lord. List a brief tale,
And when 'tis told, O that my heart would burst.
The bloody proclamation to escape
That follow'd me so neer, (O our lives sweetnesse!
That we the pain of death would hourly die,
Rather then die at once) taught me to shift
Into a mad-mans rags, t'assume a semblance
That very Dogs disdain'd: and in this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding Rings,
Their precious Stones newlost: became his guide,
Led him, beg'd for him, sav'd him from despair,
Never (O fault) reveal'd my self unto him,
Untill some halfe hour past, when I was arm'd,
Not sure, though hoping of this good successe,
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last

Told him our Pilgrimage. But his flaw'd heart (Alack too weak the conflict to support)
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
Burst smilingly.

Bast. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall perchance do good, but speak you on,
You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more, more wofull, hold it in,
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Help, help; O help.

Edg. What kind of help?

Alb. Speak man.

Edg. What means this bloody Knife?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it smoaks, came even from the heart of-----O she's dead.

Alb. Who dead? Speak man.

Gent. Your Lady Sir, your Lady; and her Sister
By her is poyson'd: she confesses it.

Bast. I was contracted to them both, all three
Now marry in an instant.

Edg. Here comes Kent.

Enter Kent.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they live or dead.

Gonerill and Regans bodies brought out.

This judgement of the heavens that makes us tremble.
Touches us not with pity. O! is this she?
The time will not allow the complement
Which very manners urges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my King and Master aye good night,
Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot,
Speak Edmund, where's the King? and where's Cordelia?
Seest thou this object Kent.

Kent. Alack, why thus?

Bast. Yet Edmund was belov'd:
The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after, slew her self.

Alb. Even so: cover their faces.

Bast. I pant for life: some good I mean to do Despight of mine own Nature. Quickly send,
(Be brief in it) to th'Castle for my Writ
Is on the life of Lear, and Cordelia:
Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run, O run?

Edg. To whom my Lord? Who has the Office?
Send thy token of reprieve.

Bast. Well thought on, take my Sword,
Give it the Captain.

Edg. Haste thee for thy life.

Bast. He hath Commission from thy Wife and me,
To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she fore-did her self.

Alb. The gods defend her, bear him hence a while.

Enter Lear with Cordelia in his armes.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl: O you are men of stones,
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so,
That heavens vault should crack: she's gone for ever.
I know when one is dead, and when one lives,
She's dead as earth: Lend me a Looking-glasse,

If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
Why then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end ?

Edg. Or image of that horror.

Alb. Fall and cease.

Lear. This feather stirs, she lives : if it be so,
It is a chance which do's redeem all sorrows
That ever I have felt.

Kent. Oh my good Master.

Lear. Prethee away.

Edg. 'Tis noble Kent your friend.

Lear. A plague upon you murderers, Traitors all,
I might have sav'd her, now she's gone for ever :

Cordelia, Cordelia, stay a little. Ha.

What is't thou saist ? her voyce was ever soft,
Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman.
I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee.

Gent. 'Tis true (my Lords) he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow ?

I have seen the day, with my good biting Faulchion
I would have made him skip : I am old now,
And these same crosses spoyle me. Who are you ?
Mine eyes are o'th' best, I'll tell you straight.

Kent. If Fortune brag of two, she lov'd and hated,
One of them we behold.

Lear. This is a dull sight, are you not Kent ?

Kent. The same : your servant Kent ,
Where is your servant Caius ?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that,
He'll strike, and quickly too, he's dead and rotten.

Kent. No, my good Lord, I am the very man.

Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That from your first of difference and decay,
Have follow'd your sad steps.

Lear. You are welcome hither.

Kent. Nor no man else :

All's cheerlesse, dark, and deadly :
Your eldest Daughters have fore-done themselves,
And desperately are dead.

Lear. I, so I think.

Alb. He knowes not what he sayes, and vain is it

That we present us to him.

Enter a Messenger.

Edg. Very bootlesse.

Mes. Edmund is dead, my Lord.

Alb. That's but a trifle here :

You Lords and noble friends know our intent,
What comfort to this great decay may come,
Shall be appli'd. For us we will resign,
During the life of this old Majesty,
To him our absolute power, you to your rights,
With boot, and such addition as your Honours
Have more then merited. All Friends shall Taste the wages of their virtue, and all Foes
The Cup of their deservings : O see, see.

Lear. And my poor Fool is hang'd : No, no, no life ?
Why should a Dog, a Horse, a Rat have life,
And thou no breath at all ? Thou'lt come no more ,
Never, never, never, never, never.

Pray you undoe this Button. Thank you, Sir,
Do you see this ? look on her, look on her lips,
Look there, look there.

He Dies.

Edg. He faints, my Lord, my Lord.

Kent. Break heart, I prethee break.

Edg. Look to my Lord.

Kent. Vex not his Ghost, O let him passe, he hates him,
That would upon the wrack of this rough world
Stretch him out longer.

Edg. He is gone indeed.

Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur'd so long,
He but usurpt his life.

Alb. Bear them from hence, our present businesse
Is generall woe : Friends of my Soule, you 'twain,
Rule in this Realm, and the gor'd state sustain.

Kent. I have a Journey, Sir, shortly to go,
My Master calls me, I must not say no.

Dies.

Edg. The weight of this sad time we must obey,
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say :
The oldest hath born most, we that are young,
Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

Exeunt with a dead march.

The Tragedy of OTHELLO, the Moore of Venice.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Rodorigo, and Iago.

Rodorigo.

NEver tell me, I take it very unkindly
That thou (Iago) who hast had my purse, (this.
As if the strings were thine, should'st know of Iago. But you'll not hear me. If ever I did
Of such a matter, abhor me. (dreame

Rodo. Thou told'st me,
Thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me
If I doe not. Three great ones of the City,
(In personall suit to make me his Lieutenant)
Off capt to him : and by the faith of man
I know my price, I am worth no worse a place.
But he (as loving his own pride and purposes)
Evades them, with a Bumbast Circumstance,
Horribly stuf't with Epichets of Warre,
Non-suits my Mediators. For certes, sayes he,
I have already chose my Officer. And what was he ?
Forsooth, a great Arithmetician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,
(A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife)
That never set a Squadron in the Field,
Nor the division of a Battell knows
More then a Spinster : Unlesse the Bookish Theorick :
Wherein the Tongued Consuls can propose
As Masterly as he, meer prattle (without practice)
In all his Souldiership. But he (Sir) had th' election
And I (of whom his eyes had seen the proof
At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on others grounds
Christian, and Heathen) must be be-lee'd, and calm'd
By Debitor, and Creditor. This Counter-Caster,
He (in good time) must his Lieutenant be ;
And I (blessed the mark) his Moore-ships Ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hang-Iago. Why there's no remedy, (man.

'Tis the curse of Service ;
Preferment goes by Letter, and affection,
And not by old gradation, where each second
Stood heir to th' first. Now, Sir, be Judge your self, Whether I in any just terme am Affin'd
To love the Moore ?

Rod. I would not follow him then.

Iago. O, Sir, content you.
I follow him to serve my turn upon him.
We cannot all be Masters, nor all Masters

Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall marke
Many a dutious and knee-crooking Knave,
That (doting on his own obsequious bondage)
Weares out his time, much like his Masters Asse,
For nought but Provender, and when he's old Casheer'd.
Whip me such honest Knaves. Others there are
Who trimm'd in Formes, and Visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves.
And throwing but shewes of service on their Lords,
Doe well thrive by them.
And when they have lin'd in their Coats
Doe themselves Homage.
These Fellowes have some soule,
And such a one doe I professe my self. For (sir)
It is as sure as you are Rodorigo,
Were I the Moore, I would not be Iago :
In following him, I follow but my self.
Heaven is my Judge, not I, for love and duty,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end :
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act, and figure of my heart
In complement externe, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For Dawes to peck at ; I am not what I am.

Rod. What a fall Fortune do's the thick-lips owe
If he can carry't thus ?

Iago. Call up her Father :
Rowse him, make after him, poyson his delight,
Proclaime him in the streets. Incense her kinsmen,
And though he in a fertile Clymate dwell,
Plague him with Flyes : though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such chances of vexation on't,
As it may loose some colour.

Rodo. Here is her Fathers house, I'll call aloud.

Iago. Doe, with like timorous accent, and dire yell,
As when (by night and negligence) the fire
Is spied in populous Cities.

Rod. VVhat hoa : Brabantio, Signior Brabantio, hoa.

Iago. Awake, what hoa, Brabantio : Thieves, thieves.
Look to your House, your Daughter, and your Bags,
Thieves, thieves.

Bra. Above. VVhat is the reason of this terrible Summons ? what is the matter there ?

Rodo. Signior, is all your Family within ?

Iago. Are your doores lock'd ?

Bra. VVhy ? wherefore aske you this ?

Iago. Sir, y'are robb'd, for shame put on your Gown,
Your

Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soule
Even now, very now, an old black Ramme
Is Tipping your white Ewe. Arise, arise,
Awake the snorting Citizens with the Bell,
Or else the Devil will make a Grand-fire of you.
Arise I say.

Bra. What, have you lost your wits ?

Rod. Most Reverend Signior, do you know my voyce?

Bra. Not I : what are you ?

Rod. My name is Rodorigo.

Bra. The worse welcome :

I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doores :
In honest plainnesse thou hast heard me say,
My Daughter is not for thee. And now in madnesse
(Being full of supper, and distempering draughts)
Upon malicious knavery, dost thou come
To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, Sir, Sir.

Bra. But thou must needs be sure,
My Spirits and my place have in their power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good Sir.

Bra. What tell'st thou me of Robbing ?
This is Venice : my house is not a Grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soule, I come to you.

Iag. Sir, you are one of those that will not serve God, if the Devil bid you. Because we come to do you service, and you think we are Ruffians, you'll have your Daughter cover'd with a Barbary Horse, you'll have your Nephews neigh to you, you'll have Coursers for Cousins, and Gennets for Germans.

Bra. What profane wretch art thou ?

Iag. I am one, Sir, that comes to tell you, your Daughter and the Moore, are making the Beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a Villain.

Iago. You are a Senator.

Bra. This thou shalt answer. I know thee, Rodorigo.

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I beseech you,
If't be your pleasure, and most wise consent,
(As partly I find it is) that your fair Daughter,
At this odde Even and dull Watch oth' night
Transported with no worse or better guard,
But with a Knave of common hire, a Gundelicker,
To the grosse clasps of a Lascivious Moore :
If this be known to you, and your Allowance,
We then have done you bold and sawcy wrongs.
But if you know not this, my manners tell me,
We have your wrong rebuke. Doe not believe
That from the sense of all Civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your Reverence.
Your Daughter (if you have not given her leave)
I say again, hath made a grosse revolt,
Tying her Duty, Beauty, Wit, and Fortunes
In an extravagant, and wheeling Stranger,
Of here, and every where : straight satisfie your self.
If she be in your Chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the Justice of the State
For thus deluding you.

Bra. Strike on the Tinder, ho :
Give me a Taper : call up all my people,
This Accident is not unlike my dreame,
Belief of it oppresses me already.

Light, I say, light.

Iago. Farewell : for I must leave you.
It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place.

To be produced, as if I stay, I shall,
Against the Moore. For I doe know the state,
(However this may gall him with some check)
Cannot with safety cast him. For he's embark'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprian warres,
(Which even now stands in Act) that for their soules
Another of his sadome, they have none,
To lead their businesse. In which regard,
Though I doe hate him as I doe hell,
Yet, for necessity of present life,
I must shew out a Flag, and sign of Love,
(Which is indeed but sign) that you shall surely find him
Lead to the Sagitary the raised Search :
And there will I be with him. So farewell. Exit.

Enter Brabantio, with Servants and Torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil. Gone she is,
And what's to come of my despised time,
Is naught but bitternesse. Now, Rodorigo,
Where didst thou see her ? (Oh unhappy Girl)
With the Moore saist thou ? (Who would be a Father ?)
How didst thou know 'twas she ? (Oh she deceives me Past thought :) what said she to you ? Get mee Tapers :
Raife all my Kinred. Are they married think you ?

Rod. Truly I think they are.

Bra. Oh heaven : how got she out ?
Oh treason of my blood.

Fathers, from hence trust not your Daughters minds
By what you see them Act. Are there not charmes,
By which the property of Youth and Maidhood
May be abus'd ? Have you not read, Rodorigo,
Of some such thing ?

Rod. Yes, sir : I have indeed.

Bra. Call up my brothers : oh would you had had her.
Some one way, some another. Doe you know
Where we may apprehend her, and the Moore ?

Rod. I think I can discover him, if you please
To get good Guard, and go along with me.

Bra. Pray you lead on. At every House I'll call,
(I may command at most) get Weapons (ho)
And raife some speciall Officers of might :
On good Rodorigo, I will deserve your pains. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, Iago, Attendants, with Torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of warre I have slain men,
Yet doe I hold it very stufte oth' Conscience
To do no contriv'd murder : I lake iniquity
Sometime to doe me service. Nine or ten times
I had thought to have yeik'd him here under the Ribbes.

Othel. 'Tis better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such scurvy, and provoking termes
Against your Honour, that with the little godlines I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But I pray you, sir,
Are you fast married ? Be assur'd of this,
That the Magnifico is much belov'd,
And hath in his effect a voyce potentiall
As double as the Dukes : He will divorce you.
Or put upon you, what restraint or grievance,

The Law (with all his might, to enforce it on)
Will give him Cable.

Othe. Let him do his spight;
My services, which I have done the Signory
Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,
Which when I know, that boasting is an honour,
I shall promulgate. I fetch my life and being,
From men of Royall Siege. And my demerits
May speak (unbonnetted) to as a proud a Fortune
As this that I have reach'd. For know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into Circumscription, and Confine,
For the Seas worth. But look, what Lights come yond?

Enter Cassio with Torches.

Iago. Those are the raised Father, and his friends:
You were best go in.

Othel. Not I: I must be found.
My parts, my title, and my perfect soule
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Othel. The servants of the Dukes?
And my Lieutenant?

The goodnesse of the night upon you (friends)
What is the Newes?

Cassio. The Duke does greet you (Generall)
And he requires your haste, Post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.

Othel. What is the matter think you?

Cassio. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine
It is a businesse of some heat. The Gallies
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night, at one anothers heeles:
And many of the Consuls (rais'd and met,)
Are at the Dukes already. You have been hotly call'd for,
When being not at your lodging to be found,
The Senate hath sent about three severall Quests,
To search you out.

Othel. 'Tis well I am found by you:
I will spend but a word here in the house,
And go with you.

Cassio. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. Faith, he to night hath boarded a Land Carrac,
If it prove lawfull prize, he's made for ever.

Cassio. I doe not understand.

Iago. He's married.

Cassio. To whom?

Iago. Marry to-----Come Captain, will you go?

Othel. Have with you.

Cassio. Here comes another Troop to seek for you:

Enter Brabantio, Rodorigo, with Officers and Torches.

Iago. It is Brabantio: Generall be advis'd,
He comes to bad intent.

Othel. Holla, stand there.

Rod. Signior, it is the Moore.

Bra. Down with him, Thief.

Iago. You Rodorigo? Come, sir, I am for you.

Othe. Keep up your bright Swords, for the dew will rust them. Good Signior, you shall more command with yeares, than with your Weapons.

Bra. Oh thou foule Thief,
Where hast thou stow'd my Daughter?
Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her

For I'll erre me to all things of sense,
(If she in chaines of Magick were not bound)
Whether a Maid, so tender, fair, and happy,
So opposite to Marriage, that she shunn'd
The wealthy curled Dearing of our Nation,
Would ever have (c'encurre a generall mock)
Run from her Guardage to the sooty bosome,
Of such a thing as thou: to fear, not to delight?
Judge me the world, if 'tis not grosse in sense,
That thou hast practis'd on her with foule Charmes,
Abus'd her delicate youth, with Drugs or Minerals,
That weakens motion. I'll have't disputed on,
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking;
I therefore apprehend and doe attach thee,
For an abuser of the world, a practiser
Of Arts inhibited, and out of warrant;
Lay hold upon him, if he doe resist
Subdue him at his peril.

Othe. Hold your hands,
Both you of my inclining, and the rest.
Were it my Cue to fight, I should have known it Without a Prompter. Whither will you that I go
To answer this your charge?

Bra. To prison, till fit time
Of Law, and course of direct Session
Call thee to answer.

Othe. What if I doe obey?
How may the Duke be therewith satisfied,
Whose Messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present businesse of the State,
To bring me to him.

Officer. 'Tis true, most worthy Signior,
The Duke's in Council, and your Noble self,
I am sure is sent for.

Bra. How? The Duke in Council?
In this time of the night? bring him away;
Mine's not an idle cause. The Duke himself,
Or any of my Brothers of the State,
Cannot but feel this wrong, as 'twere their own
For if such Actions may have passage free, Bondslaves and Pagans shall our Statesmen be. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Duke, Senators, and Officers.

Duke. There is no composition in this newes,
That gives them credit.

1. Sen. Indeed, they are disproportioned;
My Letters say, a hundred and seven Gallies.

Duke. And mine a hundred forty.

2. Sen. And mine two hundred:
But though they jump not on a just account,
(As in these Cases where the ayme reports,
'Tis oft with difference) yet doe they all confirm
A Turkish Fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus,

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgement:
I doe not so secure me in the error,
But the main Article I doe approve
In fearfull sense.

Saylor within. What hoa, what hoa, what hoa.

Enter Saylor.

Officer.

Officer. A Messenger from the Gallies.

Duke. Now? What's the businesse?

Saylor. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes,
So was I bid report here to the State,
By Signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

1. Sen. This cannot be
By no assay of Reason. 'Tis a Pageant
To keep us in false gaze, when we consider Th'importancy of Cyprus to the Turk:
And let our selves again but understand,
That as it more concerns the Turk then Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks th'abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in. If we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turk is so unskillfull,
To leave that latest, which concerns him first,
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,
To wake and wage a danger profitlesse.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence he's not for Rhodes.

Officer. Here is more Newes.

Enter a Messenger.

Messen. The Ottomites, Reverend, and Gracious,
Steering with due course toward the Isle of Rhodes,
Have there injoynted them with an after Fleet.

1. Sen. I, so I thought: how many, as you guess?

Mess. Of thirty Sail: and now they do re-stem
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance
Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,
Your trusty and most valiant Servitour,
With his free duty, recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain then for Cyprus:
Marcus Luccicos, is he not in Town?

1. Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from us,
To him, Post, Post-haste, dispatch.

1. Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the Moore.

Enter Brabantio, Othello, Cassio, Iago, Rodorigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you,
Against the generall Enemy Ottoman.

I did not see you: welcome, gentle Signior,
We lack't your Counsell, and your help to night.

Bra. So did I yours: Good your Grace pardon me.
Neither my place, for ought I heard of busines
Hath rais'd me from my Bed; nor doth the generall care
Take hold on me. For my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate, and o're-bearing Nature,
That it ingluts, and swallows other sorrows,
And it is still it self.

Duke. Why? what's the matter?

Bra. My Daughter: oh my Daughter!

Sen. Dead.

Bra. I, to me.

She is abus'd, stoln from me, and corrupted
By Spells and Medicines, bought of Mountebanks;
For Nature so preposterously to erre,
(Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,)
Sans witch-craft could not.

Duke. Who e're he be, that in this foule proceeding
Hath thus beguil'd your Daughter of her self,

And you of her; the bloody Book of Law,
You shall your self read in the bitter Letter,
After your own sense: yea, though our proper son
Stood in your Action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your Grace,
Here is the man; this Moore, whom now it seems
Your speciall Mandate, for the State Affaires, Hath hither brought.

All. We are very sorry for't.

Duke. What in your own part can you say to this?

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Othe. Most Potent, Grave, and Reverend Signiors,
My very Noble, and approv'd good Masters;
That I have tane away this old mans Daughter,
It is most true: true I have married her;
The very head, and front of my offending,
Hath this extent; no more. Rude am I in my speech,
And little bless'd with the soft phrase of Peace;
For since these Armes of mine had seven yeares pith,
Till now, some nine Moons wasted, they have us'd
Their dearest action, in the tented field:
And little of this great world can I speak,
More then pertains to Feats of Broyls, and Battel,
And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for my self. Yet, (by your gracious patience)
I will a round un-varnish'd tale deliver,
Of my whole course of Love.
What Drugs? what Charmes?
What Conjurat'ns? & what mighty Magick,
(For such proceeding I am charg'd withall)
I won his Daughter with.

Bra. A Maiden, never bold:
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her Motion
Blush'd at her self, and she in spite of Nature,
Of Yeares, of Countrey, Credit, every thing,
To fall in Love with what she fear'd to look on;
It is a judgement maim'd, and most imperfect.
That will confesse Perfection so could erre
Against all rules of Nature, and must be driven
To find out practises of cunning hell
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again,
That with some mixtures powerfull o're the blood,
Or with some Dram (conjur'd to this effect)
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this, is no proof,
Without more wider, and more over-Test
Then these thin habits, and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming, do preferre against him.

Sen. But Othello, speak,
Did you, by indirect, and forced courses
Subdue, and poyson this young Maids affections?
Or came it by request, and such fair question,
As soule to soule affordeth?

Othel. I doe beseech you,
Send for the Lady to the Sagitary,
And let her speak of me before her Father;
If you doe find me foule in her report,
The trust, the office, I doe hold of you,
Not onely take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.

Othello. Ancient, conduct them:
You best know the place.
And till she come, as truly as to heaven,
I doe confesse the vices of my blood,
So justly to your Grave eares, I'll present

How I did thrive in this fair Ladies Love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it Othello.

Othe. Her Father lov'd me, oft invited me :
Still question'd me the story of my life,
From year to year : the Battells, Sieges, Fortune,
That I have past.
I ran it through, even from my Boyish dayes,
To th' very moment that he bad me tell it.
Wherein I spoke of most disastrous chances :
Of moving Accidents by Flood, and Field,
Of hair-breadth scapes ich' imminent deadly breach ;
Of being taken by the insolent foe ,
And sold to slavery. Of my redemption thence,
And portance in my Travellers history.
Wherein of Antars vast, and Desarts wilde, (ven,
Rough Quarries, Rocks, & Hills, whose heads touch hea-
It was my hint to speak. Such was my Proceffe,
And of the Canibals that each other eate,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Grew beneath their shoulders. These things to hear,
Would Desdemona seriously incline :
But still the house affaires would draw her hence :
Which ever as she could with haste dispatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy eare
Devoure up my discourse. Which I observing,
Took once a pliant houre, and found good meanes
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart,
That I would all my Pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not distinctively : I did consent ,
And often did beguile her of her teares,
When I did speak of some distressfull stroke
That my youth suffer'd : My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of kisses :
She swore in faith 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange.
'Twas pittisfull : 'twas wondrous pittisfull.
She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man. She thank'd me,
And bad me if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would wooe her. Upon this hint I spake,
She lov'd me for the dangers I have past,
And I lov'd her, that she did pittie them.
This onely is the witch-craft I have us'd.
Here comes the Lady, let her witness it.

Enter Desdemona, Iago, Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my Daughter too,
Good Brabantio take up this mangled matter at the best :
Men doe their broken Weapons rather use,
Then their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you hear her speak :
If she confesse that she was half the wooer,
Destruction on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man. Come hither gentle Mistris,
Doe you perceive in all this Noble company,
Where most you owe obedience ?

Des. My Noble Father,
I doe perceive here a divided duty,
To you I am bound for life, and education :
My life and education both doe learn me,
How to respect you. You are the Lord of duty,
I am hitherto your Daughter. But here's my husband ;
And so much duty, as my Mother shew'd

To you, preferring you before her Father :
So much I challenge, that I may professe
Due to the Moore, my Lord.

Bra. God be with you : I have done.
Please it your Grace, on to the State affaires ;
I had rather to adopt a child than get it.
Come hither, Moore,
I here doe give thee that with all my heart,
Which but thou hast already, with all my heart
I would keep from thee. For your sake (Jewell)
I am glad at soule, I have no other child ;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny
To hang clogs on them. I have done, my Lord.

Duke. Let me speak like your self :
And lay a Sentence,
Which like a grise, or step may help these Lovers.
When remedies are past, the griefs are ended
By seeing worst, which late on hopes depended.
To mourn a mischief that is past and gone,
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.
What cannot be preserv'd when Fortune takes :
Patience, her Injury a mockery makes.
The robb'd that smiles, steales something from the Thief,
He robs himself, that spends a bootlesse grief.

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile,
We lose it not so long as we can smile :
He beares the sentence well, that nothing beares,
But the free comfort which from thence he heares.
But he heares both the sentence, and the sorrow,
That to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
These Sentences, to Sugar, or to Gall,
Being strong on both sides, are Equivocall.
But words are words : I never yet did hear,
That the brui'd heart was pierced through the eare.
I humbly beseech you to proceed to th' Affaires of State.

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus : Othello, the Fortitude of the place is best known to you. And though we have there a Substitute of most allowed sufficiency ; yet opinion, a more Sovereign Mistris of Effects, throwes a more safe voyce on you : you must therefore be content to slubber the grofs of your new Fortunes, with this more stubborn, and boysterous expedition..

Othe. The Tyrant Custome, most Grave Senators,
Hath made the flinty and Steel Coach of War
My thrice-driven bed of Down. I doe agnize
A naturall and prompt Alacrity,
I find in hardnesse : and do undertake
This present War against the Ottomites.
Most humbly therefore bending to your State,
I crave fit disposition for my Wife,
Due reverence of Place, and Exhibition,
VVith such accommodation and besort
As levels with her breeding.

Duke. VVhy, at her Fathers.

Bra. I will not have it so.

Othe. Nor I.

Des. Nor would I there reside,
To put my Father in impatient thoughts
By being in his Eye. Most gracious Duke,
To my unfolding, lend your prosperous ear,
And let me find a Character in your voyce
T'affist my simpleness.

Duke. VVhat would you, Desdemona ?

Des. That I love the Moore, to live with him,
My down-right violence, and storm of Fortunes,

May trumpet to the world. My heart's subdu'd
Even to the very quality of my Lord ;
I saw Othello's visage in his minde,
And to his honours and his valiant parts,
Did I my soule and fortunes consecrate.

So that (dear Lords) if I be left behind
A Moth of Peace, and he go to the War,
The Rites for why I love him, are bereft me :
And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

Othe. Let her have your voyce.
Vouch with me heaven, I therefore beg it not
To please the Palate of my Appetite :
Nor to comply with heat the young effects
In my defunct, and proper satisfaction.
But to be free, and bounteous to her mind :
And heaven defend your good soules, that you think
I will your serious and great businesse scant
When she is with me. No when light wing'd Toys
Of feather'd Cupid, feeble with wanton dulnesse
My speculative, and offic'd Instrument :
That my Disports corrupt, and taint my businesse :
Let Housewives make a Skillet of my Helme ,
And all indigne, and base adversities,
Make head against my Estimation.

Duk. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay, or going : th' Affaire cries haste :
And speed must answer it.

Sen. You must away to night.

Othe. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine ith' morning here we'll meet again.
Othello, leave some Officer behind
And he shall our Commission bring to you :
And such things else of quality and respect
As doth import to you.

Othe. So please your Grace, my Ancient,
A man he is of honesty and trust :
To his conveyance I assign my wife.
With what else needfull, your good Grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so :
Good night to every one. And Noble Signior.
If Virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your Son-in-Law is farre more fair than black.

Sen. Adieu, brave Moore, use Desdemona well.

Bra. Look to her (Moore) if thou hast eyes to see :
She has deceiv'd her Father, and may thee. Exit.

Othe. My life upon her faith. Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee :
I prethee let thy wife attend on her,
And bring them after in their best advantage.
Come Desdemona, I have but an houre
Of Love, of worldly matter, and direction
To speak with thee. We must obey the time. Exit.

Rod. Iago.

Iago. What saist thou, noble heart ?

Rod. What wilt I doe, think'st thou ?

Iago. Why go to bed and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinently drown my self.

Iago. If thou dost, I shall never love thee after. Why thou silly Gentleman ?

Rod. It is sillinesse to live, when to live is torment :
and then have we a prescription to die, when death is our Physitian.

Iago. Oh villanous : I have look'd upon the world for four times seven yeares, and since I could distinguish betwixt a Benefit and an Injury, I never found man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown my self for the love of a Gynney Hen, I would change my humanity with a Baboon.

Rod. What should I doe, I confesse it is my shame to be so fond, but it is not in my virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue ? a Fig, 'tis in our selves that we are thus, or thus. Our Bodies are our Gardens, to the which, our Wills are Gardiners. So that if we will plant Nettles, or sow Lettice : Set Hyssop, and weed up Time :
Supply it with one gender of Hearbs, or distract it with many : either have it sterill with idlenesse, or manured with Industry, why the power and Corrigitable authority of this lies in our wills. If the brain of our lives had not one scale of Reason, to payse another of Sensuality, the blood and basenesse of our Natures would conduct us to most preposterous Conclusions. But we have reason to coole our raging Motions, or carnall Stings, or unbitted Lusts : whereof I take this, that you call Love, to be a Sect, or Seyen.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is meerly a Lust of the Blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man : drown thy self ?
Drown Cats, and blinde Puppies. I have profest me thy Friend, and I confesse me knit to thy deserving, with Cables of perdurable toughnesse. I could never better steed thee than now. Put money in thy purse : follow thou the Warres, defeat thy favour, with an usurped Beard. I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be long that Desdemona should continue her love to the Moore. Put Money in thy purse : nor he his to her. It was a violent Commencement in her, and thou shalt see an answerable Sequestration, but put money in thy purse. These Moores are changeable in their wills : fill thy purse with money.
The food that to him now is as luscious as Locusts, shall to him shortly be as bitter as Coloquintida. She must change for youth : when she is sated with his body, she will finde the errors of her choyce. Therefore put money in thy purse. If thou wilt needs damn thy self, doe it a more delicate way then drowning. Make all the money thou canst : If Sanctimony and a fraile vow, betwixt an erring Barbarian, and super-subtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits, and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her : therefore make money : a pox of drowning thy self, it is clean out of the way. Seek thou rather to be hang'd in compassing thy joy, then to be drown'd, and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, If I depend on the issue ?

Iago. Thou art sure of me : Go make money : I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again, and again, I hate the Moore. My cause is hearted ; thine hath no lesse reason. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge, against him. If thou canst Cuckold him, thou dost thy self a pleasure, me a sport. There are many Events in the Wombe of Time, which will be delivered. Traverse, go, provide thy money. We will have more of this to morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meet ith' morning ?

Iago. At my Lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to, farewell. Doe you here, Roderigo ?

Rod. I'll sell all my Land. Exit.

Iago. Thus doe I ever make my Foole, my purse :
For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane,
If I would time expend with such a Swain,

But

But for my Sport, and Profit: I hate the Moore,
And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my sheets
He has done my Office. I know not if't be true,
But I, for meer suspicion in that kinde,
Will doe, as if for Surety. He holds me well,
The better shall my purpose work on him:
Cassio's a proper man: Let me see now,
To get this place, and plume up my will
In double Knavery. How? how? Let's see.
After some time, to abuse Othello's eares,
That he is too familiar with his wife:
He hath a person, and a smooth dispose
To be suspected: fram'd to make women false.
The Moore is of a free, and open Nature,
That thinks men honest, that but seem to be so,
And will as tenderly be led by th' Nose
As Asses are:
I hav't: it is engendred: Hell, and Night,
Must bring this monstrous Birth to the worlds light.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Montano, and Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the Cape, can you discern at Sea?

1. Gen. Nothing at all, it is a high wrought Flood:
I cannot 'twixt the heaven and the Main,
Descry a Sail.

Mon. Me thinks the wind hath spoke aloud at Land,
A fuller blast ne're shook our Battlements:
If it hath ruffiand so upon the Sea,
What ribs of Oak, when Mountains melt on them,
Can hold the Morties. What shall we hear of this?

2. A Segregation of the Turkish Fleet:
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chidden Billow seems to pelt the clouds,
The wind-shak'd Surge, with high and monstrous Main,
Seems to cast water on the burning Bear,
And quench the Guards of th'ever-fixed Pole:
I never like molestation view
On the enchaufed Flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish Fleet
Be not inselter'd, and embay'd, they are drown'd,
It is impossible to bear it out.

Enter a Gentleman.

3. Newes Lads: our Wars are done:
The desperate Tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,
That their designment halts. A Noble ship of Venice,
Hath seen a grievous wrack and sufferance
On most part of their Fleet.

Mon. How? Is this true?

3. The Ship is here put in: A Veronesio, Michael Cassio
Lieutenant to the warlike Moore, Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moore himself at Sea,
And is in full Commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't:
'Tis a worthy Governour.

3. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort,
Touching the Turkish losse, yet he looks sadly,
And prays the Moore be safe; for they were parted
With foule and violent Tempest.

Mon. Pray heavens he be:

For I have serv'd him, and the man commands
Like a full Souldier. Let's to the Sea side (ho)
As well to see the Vessell that comes in,
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello,
Even till we make the Main, and th' Eriall blew,
And indistinct regard.

Gen. Come, let's do so;
For every minute is expectancy
Of more Arrivancy.

Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks you, the valiant of the warlike Isle,
That so approve the Moore: Oh let the heavens
Give him defence against the Elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous Sea,

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His Bark is stoutly Timber'd, and his Pilot
Of very expert, and approv'd Allowance;
Therefore my hopes (not surfett'd to death)
Stand in bold Cure.

Within. A Sail, a Sail, a Sail.

Cas. What noyse?

Gen. The Town is empty; on the brow oth' Sea
Stand ranks of People, and they cry, a Sail.

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the Governour,

Gen. They do discharge their shot of courtesie,
Our friends, at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth.

And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd.

Gen. I shall.

Exit.

Mon. But good Lieutenant, is your Generall wiv'd?

Cas. Most fortunately, he hath achiev'd a Maid
That paragon's description, and wilde Fame:
One that excells the quirks of blazoning Pens,
And in th' essentiall Vesture of Creation,
Do's tire the Ingeniver.

Enter Gentleman.

How now? who has put in?

Gen. 'Tis one Iago, Ancient to the Generall.

Cas. Ha's had most favourable, and happy speed:
Tempests themselves, high Seas, and howling winds,
The gutter'd Rocks, and Congregated Sands,
Traitors ensteep'd, to enlogge the guiltlesse Keel,
As having sense of Beauty do omit
Their mortall Natures, letting go safely by
The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of:
Our great Captain's Captain,
Left in the Conduct of the bold Iago,
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,
A Sennights speed. Great Jove, Othello guard,
And swell his Sail with thine own powerfull breath,
That he may blesse this Bay with his tall Ship,
Make loves quick pants in Desdemona's armes,
Give renew'd fire to our extinctest Spirits.

Enter Desdemona, Iago, Rodorigo, and Amilia.

Oh behold,
The riches of the ship is come on shore:
You men of Cyprus, let her have your knees,
Hail to thee, Lady: and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand
Enwheele thee round.

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio,
What tidings can you tell me of my Lord?

Cassio.

Cas. He is not arriv'd, nor know I ought
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. Oh but I fear :
How lost you company ?

Cas. The great contention of the Sea and Skies,
Parted our Fellowship. But hark, a Saile.
Within. A Saile, a Saile.

Gent. They give this greeting to the Cittadell :
This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the Newes :
Good Ancient, you are welcome. Welcome Mistris :
Let it not gall your patience (good Iago)
That I extend my Manners. 'Tis my breeding,
That gives me this bold shew of Courtesie,
Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips,
As of her tongue she oft bestowes of me,
You would have enough.

Des. Alas: she has no speech.

Iago. Infaith, too much :
I find it still, when I have leave to sleep,
Marry before your Ladiship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.

Iago. Come on, come on: you are Pictures out of doores:
Bells in your Parlors: Wilde-Cats in your Kitchens :
Saints in your injuries: Devils being offended :
Players in your Huswifery, and Huswives in your Beds.

Des. Oh, fie upon thee, slanderer.

Iago. Nay, it is true: or else I am a Turk,
You rise to play, and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What would'st write of me, if thou should'st praise me.

Iago. Oh, gentle Lady, doe not put me to't,
For I am nothing, if not Criticall.

Des. Come on, assay.
There's one gone to the Harbour ?

Iago. I, Madam.

Des. I am not merry: but I doe beguile
The thing I am, by seeming otherwise,
Come, how would'st thou praise me ?

Iago. I am about it, but indeed my invention comes from my Pate, as Birdlime does from Freeze, it plucks out Braines and all. But my Muse labours, and thus she is delivered.

*If she be fair, and wise; fairnesse and wit,
The one's for use, the other useth it.*

Des. Well prais'd :
How if she be black and witty ?

Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit,
She'll find a white, that shall her blacknesse fit,

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How if fair and foolish.

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair,
For even her folly helpt her to an heir.

Desd. These are old fond Paradoxes, to make Fooles laugh it? Alchouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foule and foolish.

Iago. There's none so foule and foolish thereunto,
But does foule pranks, which fair, and wise ones doe.

Desd. Oh heavy ignorance: thou praisest the worst best. But what praise could'st thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed? One, that in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice it self.

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud,
Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud:
Never lackt gold, and yet went never gay,
Fled from her wish, and yet said now I may.
She that being angred, her revenge being nigh,
Bad her wrong stay, and her displeasure fly.
She that in wisdom never was so fraile,
To change the Cod's Head for the Salmon's Taile :
She that could think, and ne're disclose her mind,
See Suitors following, and not look behind :
She was a wight, (if ever such wights were)

Des. To doe what ?

Iago. To suckle Fooles, and chronicle small Beer.

Desd. Oh most lame and impotent conclusion. Doe not learn of him, Amilia, though he be thy Husband.
How say you (Cassio) is he not a most profane, and liberall Counsellor ?

Cassio. He speaks home (Madam) you may relish him more in the Souldier, than in the Scholler.

Iago. He takes her by the palme: I, well said, whisper. With as little a web as this, will I ensnare as great a Fly as Cassio. I, smile upon her, doe: I will give thee in thine own Courtship. You say true, 'tis so indeed.
If such tricks as these strip you out of your Lieutenan-try, it had been better you had not kiss'd your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the Sir in. Very good: well kissd, and excellent Curt-sie: 'tis so indeed. Yet again, your fingers to your Lips? Would they were Clister-pipes for your sake,

The Moore, I know his Trumpet.

Cassio. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cassio. Lo, where he come.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair Warriour.

Des. My dear Othello.

Oth. It gives me wonder, great as my content
To see you here before me.

Oh my soules joy :

If after every Tempest, come such calmes,
May the windes blow, till they have waken'd death :
And let the labouring Barke climbe hills of Seas
Olympus high: and duck again as low,
As hell's from heaven. If it were now to dye,
'Twere now to be most happy. For I fear,
My soule hath her content so absolute,
That not another comfort like to this,
Succeeds in unknown Fate.

Des. The heavens forbid
But that our Loves
And Comforts should encrease
Even as our dayes doe grow.

Oth. Amen to that (sweet Powers)
I cannot speak enough of this content,
It stops me here: it is too much of joy,
And this, and this the greatest discords be
That e're our hearts shall make.

Iago. Oh you are well tun'd now: But I'll set down the Pegs that make this Musick, as honest as I am.

Oth.

Oth. Come, let us to the Castle.
 Newes, (Friends) our warres are done :
 The Turks are drown'd.
 How do's my old acquaintance of this Isle ?
 (Hony) you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus,
 I have found great love amongst them. O my Sweet,
 I prattle out of fashion, and I doat
 In mine own comforts. I prethee, good Iago,
 Goto the Bay, and disembarke thy Coffers :
 Bring thou the Master to the Cittadell,
 He is a good one, and his worthinesse
 Do's challenge much respect. Come Desdemona,
 Once more well met at Cyprus.

Exit Othello and Desdemona.

Iago. Do you meet me presently at the harbour. Come thither; if thou be'st valiant, (as they say, base men being in love, have then a Nobility in their Natures, more than is native to them) list-me; the Lieutenant to night watches on the Court of Guard. First, I must tell thee this: Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him? why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger thus: and let thy soule be instructed. Marke me with what violence she lov'd the Moore, but for bragging, and telling her fantastick lies. To love him still for pratings, let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed. And what delight shall she have to look on the Devil? When the blood is made dull with the Act of Sport, there should be a game to enflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite. Loveliness in favour, sympathy in yeares, Manners, and Beauties: all which the Moore is defective in. Now for want of these requir'd Conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find it self abus'd, begin to heave the gorge, disrellish and abhorre the Moore, very Nature will instruct her in it, and compell her to some second choyce. Now, sir, this granted (as it is a most pregnant and unforc'd position) who stands so eminent in the degree of this Fortune, as Cassio do's: a Knave very voluble: no further conscionable, than in putting on the meer form of Civil, and humane seeming, for the better compasse of his Salt, and most hidden loose affection? Why none, why none: A slippery, and subtle Knave, a finder of occasion: that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present it self. A Devilish Knave: besides, the Knave is handsome, young: and hath all those requisites in him, that folly and green minds look after. A pestilent compleat Knave, and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her, she's full of most blest condition.

Iago. Blest Figs-end. The Wine she drinks is made of Grapes. If she had been blest'd, she would never have lov'd the Moore: Blest'd pudding. Didst thou not see her paddle with the palme of his hand? Didst not marke that?

Rod. Yes, that I did: but that was but courtesie.

Iago. Leachery by this hand: an Index, and obscure prologue to the History of Lust and foule Thoughts. They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embrac'd together. Villanous Thoughts Roderigo, when these mutabilities so marshall the way, hard at hand comes the Master, and main exercise, th'incorporate conclusion: Pish. But, sir, be you rul'd by me. I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to night: for the command, I'll lay't upon you. Cassio knowes you not: I'll not be farre from you. Doe you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline, or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he's rash, and very sudden in Choller: and happily may strike at you, provoke him that he may: for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to Mutiny. Whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the meanes I shall then have to preferre them. And the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will doe this, if you can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the Cittadell. I must fetch his necessaries ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu.

Exit.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I doe well believ't: That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credite. The Moore (howbeit that I endure him not) Is of a constant, loving, noble Nature, And I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona, A most dear Husband. Now I doe love her too, Not out of absolute Lust, (though peradventure I stand accountant for as great a sin) But partly led to diet my Revenge, For that I doe suspect the lusty Moore Hath leapt into my seat. The thought whereof, Doth (like a poysonous Minerall) gnaw my Inwards: And nothing can, or shall content my Soule Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife. Or failing so, yet that I put the Moore, At least into a Jealousie so strong, That Judgement cannot cure. Which thing to doe, If this poor Trash of Venice, whom I trace For his quick hunting, stand the putting on, I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip, Abuse him to the Moore, in the right garbe (For I fear Cassio with my Night-Cap too) Make the Moore thank me, love me, and reward me, For making him egregiously an Ass, And practising upon his peace and quiet, Even to madness. 'Tis here: but yet confus'd, Knaveries plain face, is never seen, till us'd. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello's Herald with a Proclamation.

Herald. It is Othello's pleasure, our Noble and Valiant Generall; That upon certain tydings now arriv'd, importing the meer perdition of the Turkish Fleet, every man put himself into Triumph. Some to dance, some to make Bonfires, each man to what Sport and Revels his addition leads him. For besides these beneficiall Newes, it is the Delebration of his Nuptiall. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All Offices are open, and there is full liberty of Feasting from this pre-present house of nve, till the Bell have toll'd eleven.

Blesse the Isle of Cyprus, and our Noble Generall Othello.
Exit.

Enter Othello, Desdemona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Othel. Good Michael, look you to the Guard to night.
Let's teach our selves that honourable stop,
Not to our sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to doe.
But notwithstanding with my personall eye
Will I look to't.

Othe. Iago is most honest:
Michael, good night. To morrow with your earliest,
Let me have speech with you. Come my dear Love,
The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue,
That profit's yet to come 'tween me and you.
Good night. Exit.

Enter Iago.

Cas. Welcome Iago; we must to the Watch.

Iago. Not this houre Lieutenant: 'tis not yet ten oth' Clock. Our Generall cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona: Whom, let us not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her: and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite Lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of Game.

Cas. Indeed she's a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an Eye she has?

Me thinks it sounds a parley to provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye:

And yet me thinks right modest.

Iago. And when she speaks,

Is it not an Alarm to Love?

Cas. She is indeed perfection.

Iago. Well: happinesse to their sheets. Come Lieutenant, I have a stope of Wine, and here without are a brace of Cyprus Gallants, that would fain have a measure to the health of black Othello.

Cas. Not to night, good Iago: I have very poor, and unhappy Brains for drinking. I could well wish cour-tesie would invent some other custome of entertainment.

Iago. Oh, they are our Friends: but one Cup, I'll drink for you.

Cassio. I have drunk but one Cup to night, and that was craftily qualified too: and behold what innovation it makes here. I am infortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weaknesse with any more.

Iago. What man? 'tis a night of Revels, the Gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here, at the door: I pray you call them in.

Cas. I'll do't, but it dislikes me.

Iago. If I can fasten but one Cup upon him
With that which he hath drunk to night already,
He'll be as full of Quarrell, and Offence
As my young Mistis's Dog,
Now my sick Foole, Roderigo,
Whom Love hath turn'd almost the wrong side out,
To Desdemona hath to night Carrows'd,
Potations, pottle-deep; and he's to watch.
Three else of Cyprus, Noble swelling spirits,
(That hold their honours in a wary distance,
The very Elements of this warlike Isle)
Have I to night slutter'd with flowing Cups,
And they Watch too.
Now 'mongst this Flock of Drunkards,

And I to put our Cassio in some Action
That may offend the Isle. But here they come.

Enter Cassio, Montano, and Gentlemen.

If consequence doe but approve my dreame,
My Boat sailes freely, both with wind and streame.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, they have given me a rowle already.

Mon. Good faith a little one: not past a Pint, as I am a Souldier.

Iago. Some Wine hoa,

And let me the Cannakin clink, clink:

And let me the Cannakin clink,

A Souldier's a man: Oh, mans life's but a span,

Why then let a Souldier drink,

Some Wine Boyes.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, an excellent Song.

Iago. I learn'd it in England: where indeed they are most potent in Porting. Your Dane, your Germane, and your swag-belly'd Hollander, (drink hoa) are nothing to your English.

Cassio. Is your English-man so exquisite in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you with facility, your Dane dead Drunk. He sweares not to overthrow your Al-main. He gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the next Pottle can be fill'd.

Cas. To the health of our Generall.

Mon. I am for it, Lieutenant: and I'll do you Justice.

Iago. Oh sweet England.

King Stephen was and a worthy Peer,

His Breeches cost him but a Crown,

He held them six pence all too dear,

With that he call'd the Taylor Lown:

He was a Wight of high Renown,

And thou art but of low degree:

'Tis Pride that pulls the Countrey down,

And take thy awl'd Cloak about thee.

Some Wine hoa.

Cassio. Why this is a more exquisite Song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear't again?

Cas. No: for I hold him to be unworthy of his place, that do's those things. Well: heaven's above all: and there be soules must be saved, and there be soules must not be saved.

Iago. It's true, good Lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part, no offence to the Generall, nor any man of quality: I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, Lieutenant.

Cassio. I: (but by your leave) not before me. The Lieutenant is to be saved before the Ancient. Lets have no more of this: lets to our affaires. Forgive our sins:
Gentlemen, lets look to our businesse. Do not think Gentlemen, I am Drunk: this is my Ancient, this is my right hand, and this is my left. I am not drunk now: I can stand well enough, and I speak well enough.

Gent. Excellent well.

Cas. Why very well then: you must not think then,
that I am drunk.

Montan. To th' Platforme (Masters) come, lets see the Watch.

Iago. You see this fellow that is gone before,
He is a Soldier, fit to stand by Cesar,
And give direction. And doe but see his vice,
'Tis to his Virtues a just Equinox,

The one as long as th'other. 'Tis pity of him ;
I fear the trust Othello puts him in,
On some odde time of his infirmity
Will shake this Island.

Mont. But is he often thus

Iago. 'Tis evermore his prologue to his sleep,
He'll watch the Horologue a double Set,
If drink rock not his Cradle.

Mont. It were well

The Generall were put in mind of it :
Perhaps he sees it not, or his good nature
Prizes the Virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils : is not this true ?

Enter Rodorigo.

Iago. How now, Rodorigo ?

I pray you after the Lieutenant, go.

Mont. And 'tis great pity that the Noble Moore
Should hazard such a place, as his own Second,
With one ingraft Infirmity,
It were an honest Action, to say so
To the Moore.

Iago. Not I, for this fair Island,
I do love Cassio well : and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hark, what noyse ?

Enter Cassio pursuing Rodorigo.

Cas. You Rogue : you Rascal.

Mon. What's the matter Lieutenant ?

Cas. A Knave teach me my duty ? I'll beat the Knave into a Twiggan Bottle.

Rod. Beat me.

Cas. Dost thou prate, Rogue ?

Mon. Nay, good Lieutenant :
I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go (sir)

Or I'll know you o're the Mazzard.

Mon. Come, come, you're Drunk.

Cassio. Drunk ?

Iago. Away I say : go out and cry a Mutiny.
Nay, good Lieutenant. Alas, Gentlemen :
Help ho. Lieutenant. Sir Montano :
Help masters. Here's a goodly Watch indeed.
Who's that which rings the Bell : Diablo, ho :
The Town will rise. Pie, fie, Lieutenant,
You'll be ashamed for ever.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Othe. What is the matter here ?

Mon. I bleed still, I am hurt, but not to th' death.

Othe. Hold for your lives.

Iago. Hold ho : Lieutenant, Sir Montano, Gentlemen :
Have you forgot all place of sense and duty ?

Hold. The Generall speaks to you : hold for shame.

Oth. Why how now ho ? From whence ariseth this ?
Are we turn'd Turks ? and to our selves do that
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites.

For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawle :

He that stirres next to carve for his own rage,
Holds his foule light : He dies upon his Motion.

Silence that dreadfull Bell, it frights the Isle

From her propriety. What is the matter, Masters.

Honest Iago, that looks dead with grieving,

Speak : who began this ? On thy love I charge thee ?

Iago. I do not know : Friends all, but now, even now
In Quarter, and in termes like Bride and Groom
Devesting them for Bed : and then, but now :
(As if some Planet had unwitting men)

Sword out, and tilting one at others breasts,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish oddes.
And would in Action glorious, I had lost
Those legs that brought me to a part of it.

Othe. How comes it (Michael) you are thus forgot ?

Cas. I pray you pardon me, I cannot speak.

Othe. Worthy Montano, you were wont to be civil :
The gravity and stilnesse of your youth
The world hath noted. And your name is great
In mouthes of wisest Censure. Whats the matter
That you unlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a night-brawler ? Give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger,
Your Officer Iago can inform you,
While I spare speech, which something now offends me.
Of all that I do know, nor know I ought
By me ; that's said, or done amisse this night,
Unlesse self-charity be sometimes a vice,
And to defend our selves it be a sin,
When violence assailes us.

Othe. Now by heaven,
My blood begins my safer Guides to rule,
And passion (having my best judgement collied)
Assayes to lead the way. If I once stirre,
Or doe but lift this Arme, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foul Rout began : Who set it on,
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Thou he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall loose me. What in a Town of warre,
Yet wilde, the peoples hearts brim-full of fear,
To manage private, and domestick Quarrell ?
In night, and on the Court and Guard of safety ?
'Tis monstrous : Iago, who began't ?

Mon. If partially Assi'nd, or league in office,
Thou dost deliver more, or lesse, than truth,
Thou art no Souldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near,
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,
Than it should doe offence to Michael Cassio.
Yet I perswade my self, to speak so the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. This it is Generall :
Montano and my self being in speech,
There comes a Fellow, crying out for help,
And Cassio following him with determin'd Sword,
To execute upon him. Sir, this Gentleman,
Steps in to Cassio, and intreats his pawse :
My self, the crying fellow did pursue,
Left by his clamour (as it so fell out)
The Town might fall in fright. He, (twist of foot)
Out-ran my purpose : and I return'd the rather
For that I heard the clink and fall of Swords,
And Cassio high in oath : which till to night
I ne're might say before. When I came back
(For this was brief) I found them close together
At blow, and thrust, even as again they were
When you your self did part them :
More of this matter, cannot I report,
But men are men : the best sometimes forget,
Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,
As men in rage strike those that with them best,
Yet surely Cassio, I believe, receiv'd
From him that fled, some strange indignity,
Which patience could not passe.

Othe.

Orhe. I know, Iago,
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio: Cassio, I love thee,
But never more be Officer of mine.

Enter Desdemona attended.

Look if my gentle Love be not rais'd up :
I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter (Dear ?)

Orhe. All's well, Sweeting :

Come away to bed. Sir, for your hurts,
My self will be your Surgeon. Lead him off :

Iago, look with care about the Town,
And silence those whom this vile brawle distracted,
Come, Desdemona, 'tis the Souldiers life,
To have their Balmy slumbers wak'd with strife. Exit.

Iago. What, are you hurt, Lieutenant ?

Cas. I, past all Surgery.

Iago. Marry heaven forbid.

Cas. Reputation, Reputation, Reputation : Oh I have lost my Reputation. I have lost the immortall part of my self, and what remains is bestiall. My Reputation, Iago, my Reputation.

Iago. As I am an honest man, I had thought you had received some bodily wound ; there is more sence in that then in Reputation. Reputation is an idle, and most false imposition ; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving. You have lost no Reputation at all, unlesse you repute your self such a looser. What man, there are more ways to recover the Generall again. You are but now cast in his mood, (a punishment more in policy, than in malice) even so as one would beat his offencelesse dog, to affright an Imperious Lyon. Sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despis'd, then to deceive so good a Commander, with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an Officer. Drunk ? and speak Parrat ? and squabble ? swagger ? swear ? and discourse Fustian with ones own shadow ? O thou invisible spirit of Wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee
Devil.

Iago. What was he that you follow'd with your sword ?
what had he done to you ?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible ?

Cas. I remember a masse of things, but nothing distinctly : a Quarrell, but nothing wherefore. Oh, that men should put an Enemy in their mouthes, to steale away their Brains ? that we should with joy pleaseance, revel and applause, transform our selves into Beasts.

Iago. Why ? But you are now well enough : how came you thus recovered ?

Cas. It hath pleas'd the Devil Drunkenesse, to give place to the Devil Wrath, one unperfectnesse shewes me another, to make me frankly despise my self.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a Moraller. As the Time, the Place, and the Condition of this Countrey stands, I could heartily wish this had not befalln : but since itis, as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my Place again, he shall tell me, I am a Drunkard : had I as many mouthes as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a Foole, and presently a Beast. Oh strange ! Every inordinate Cup is unblest'd, and the Ingredient is a Devil.

Iago. Come, come : good Wine is a good familiar Creature, if it be well us'd : exclaim no more against it. And good Lieutenant, I think, you think I love
you.

Cassio. I have well approved it, Sir, I drunk ?

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at a time, man. I tell you what you shall do : Our Generals Wife is now the Geuerall. I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted, and given up himself to the contemplation, marke : and devotement of her parts and Graces. Confesse your self freely to her : Importune her help to put you in your place again. She is of so free, so kinde, so apt, so blessed a disposition, she holds it a vice in her goodnesse, not to do more then she is requested.
This broken joynt between you and her Husband, cntreat her to splinter. And my Fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love, shall grow stronger then it was before.

Cassio. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest in the sincerity of Love, and honest kindnesse.

Cassio. I think it freely : and betimes in the morning,
I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me : I am desperate of my Fortunes if they check me.

Iago. You are in the right : good night, Lieutenant, I must to the Watch.

Cassio. Good night, honest Iago.

Exit Cassio.

Iago. And what's he then,
That sayes I play the Villain ?

When this advice is free I give, and honest,
Proball to thinking, and indeed the course
To win the Moor again.

For 'tis most easie

Th'inclining Desdemona to subdue
In any honest Suit. She's fram'd as fruitfull
As the free Elements. And then for her
To win the Moore, were to renounce his Baptisme,
All Seales, and Symbols of redeemed sin :

His Soule is so enfetted to her Love,
That she may make, unmake, doe what she list :
Even as her appetite shall play the god
With his weak Function. How am I then a Villain,
To counsell Cassio to this paralell course.

Directly to his good ? Divinity of Hell,
When Devils will the blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shewes,
As I doe now. For while this honest Foole
Plies Desdemona, to repair his Fortune,
And she for him, pleads strongly to the Moore,
I'll poure this pestilence into his eare :

That she repeales him, for her bodies Lust,
And by how much she strives to doe him good,
She shall undoe her Credit with the Moore.

So will I turn her virtue into pitch,
And out of her own goodnesse make the Net,
That shall enmashe them all.

How now, Roderigo ?

Enter Roderigo.

Roderigo. I doe follow here in the Chace, not like a Hound that Hunts, but one that fills up the Cry. My money is almost spent ; I have been to night exceedingly well Cudgell'd : And I think the issue will be, I shall have

Y y y

have so much experience for my pains; and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they that have not Patience? What wound did ever heal but by degrees? Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft; And wit depends on dilatory time: Dost not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee, And thou by that small hurt hast casheer'd Cassio: Though other things grow fair against the Sun, Yet Fruits that blossom first, will first be ripe: Content thy self a while. Introth 'tis Morning; Pleasure and Action make the hours seem short. Retire thee: go where thou art Billited: Away, I say, thou shalt know more hereafter: Nay, get thee gone. Exit Roderigo. Two things are to be done: My Wife must move for Cassio to her Mistress: I'll set her on my self a while, to draw the Moore apart, And bring him jump, when he may Cassio find Soliciting his wife: I, that's the way: Dull not Device, by coldness and delay. Exit.

Iago. I'll tend her to you presently: And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moore Out of the way, that your converse and business May be more free. Exit.

Cassio. I humbly thank you for't. I never knew A Florentine more kind and honest. Enter Emilia.

Emil. Good morrow (good Lieutenant) I am sorry For your displeasure; but all will sure be well. The Generall and his wife are talking of it, And she speaks for you stoutly. The Moore replies, That he you hurt is of great Fame in Cyprus, And great Affinity: and that in wholesome wisdom He might not but refuse you. But he protests he loves you, And needs no other Suitor but his likings, To bring you in again.

Cassio. Yet I beseech you, If you think fit, or that it may be done, Give me advantage of some brief Discourse With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray come in: I will bestow you where you shall have time To speak your bosome freely.

Cassio. I am much bound to you. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Cassio, Musicians, and Clown.

Cassio. Masters, play here, I will content your pains, Something that's brief: and bid good morrow Generall.

Clo. Why Masters, have your Instruments bin in Naples, that they speak it? Nose thus?

Mus. How, Sir? how?

Clo. Are these; I pray you, wind Instruments?

Mus. I marry are they, sir.

Clo. Oh, thereby hangs a tale.

Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind Instrument that I know. But, Masters, here's money for you: and the Generall so likes your Musick, that he desires you for loves sake to make no noyse with it.

Mus. Well, Sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any Musick that may not be heard, too't again. But (as they say) to hear Musick, the Generall do's not greatly care.

Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clo. Then put up your Pipes in your bag, for I'll away. Go, vanish into ayre, away. Exit Mus.

Cassio. Dost thou hear me, mine honest Friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest Friend:

I hear you.

Cassio. Prethee keep up thy Quillets, there's a poor piece of Gold for thee: if the Gentlewoman that attends the Generall be stirring, tell her, there's one Cassio entertains her a little favour of speech. Wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir: if she will stirre hither, I shall seem to notify unto her. Exit Clo.

Enter Iago.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not bin a bed then?

Cas. Why no: the day had broke before we parted. I have made bold (Iago) to send in to your wife: My suit to her is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona Procure me some access.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These Letters give (Iago) to the Pilot, And by him do my duties to the Senate:

That done, I will be walking on the Works, Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good Lord, I'll do't.

Oth. This Fortification (Gentlemen) shall we see't?

Gent. We'll wait upon your Lordship. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Emilia.

Des. Be thou assur'd (good Cassio) I will doe All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good Madam, doe: I warrant it grieves my Husband, As if the cause were his.

Des. Oh that's an honest Fellow: do not doubt, Cassio But I will have my Lord and you again, As friendly as you were.

Cassio. Bounteous Madam, What ever shall become of Michael Cassio, He's never any thing but your true Servant.

Des. I know't: I thank you: you do love my Lord: You have known him long, and be you well assur'd, He shall in strangeness stand no farther off, Then in a politick distance.

Cassio. I, but Lady, That policy may either last so long, Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet, Or breed it self so out of Circumstances, That I being absent, and my place suppli'd, My Generall will forget my Love, and Service.

Des. Doe not doubt that: before Emilia here,

I give thee warrant of thy place. Assure thee,
If I doe vow a friendship, I'll perform it
To the last Article. My Lord shall never rest,
I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of patience;
His Bed shall seem a Schoole, his Boord a Shrift,
I'll intermingle every thing he do's
With Cassio's suit: Therefore be merry Cassio,
For thy solicitor shall rather die,
Then give thy cause away.

Enter Othello, and Iago.

Amil. Madam, here comes my Lord.

Cassio. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why stay, and hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease.
Unfit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, doe your discretion.

Exit Cassio.

Iago. Hah? I like not that.

Othe. What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my Lord; or if---I know not what.

Othe. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?

Iago. Cassio, my Lord? No sure, I cannot think it,
That he would steale away so guilty-like,
Seeing you coming.

Oth. I do believe 'twas he.

Des. How now, my Lord?

I have bin talking with a Suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't you mean?

Des. Why your Lieutenant Cassio. Good my Lord,
If I have any grace, or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take.
For if he be not one that truly loves you,
That erres in ignorance, and not in cunning,
I have no judgement in an honest face.
I prethee call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. I, Sooth; so humbled,
That he hath left part of his grief with me
To suffer with him. Good Love, call him back.

Oth. Not now (sweet Desdemon) some other time.

Des. But shal't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner (sweet) for you.

Des. Shal't be to night, at Supper?

Oth. No, not to night.

Des. To morrow Dinner then?

Oth. I shall not dine at home:

I meet the Captains at the Cittadell.

Des. Why then to morrow night, on Tuesday morn,
On Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday morn.

I prethee name the time, but let it not Exceed three dayes. Infaith he's penitent:

And yet his Trespasse, in our common reason
(Save that they say the warres must make example)

Out of her best, is not almost a fault

T'incurre a private check. When shall he come?

Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my Soule

What you would aske me, that I would deny,

Or stand so man'ring on? What? Michael Cassio,

That came a wooing with you? and so many a time

(When I have spoke of you dispraisingly)

Hath tane your part, to have so much to doe

To bring him in? Trust me, I could do much.

Oth. Prethee no more: Let him come when he will:

I will deny thee nothing.

Des. Why, this is not a Boon:

'Tis as I should entreat you wear your Gloves,
Or feed on nourishinig Dishes, or keep you warm,
Or sue to you, to doe a peculiar profit
To your own person. Nay, when I have suit,
Wherein I mean to touch your Love indeed,
It shall be full of poize, and difficult weight,
And fearfull to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing.

Whereon, I doe beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to my self.

Des. Shall I deny you? no: Farewell, my Lord.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemon, I'll come to thee straight

Des. Amilia, come; be as your Fancies teach you:
Whate're you be, I am obedient. Exit.

Oth. Excellent wretch: Perdition catch my Soule,
But I doe love thee: and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come again.

Iago. My Noble Lord.

Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?

Iago. Did Michael Cassio

When you woo'd my Lady, know of your love?

Oth. He did, from first to last:

Why dost thou aske?

Iago. But for a satisfaction of my Thought,
No further harme.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?

Iago. I did not think he had bin acquainted with it.

Oth. O yes, and went between us very oft.

Iago. Indeed?

Oth. Indeed? I indeed. Discern'st thou ought in that?
Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my Lord?

Oth. Honest? I, honest.

Iago. My Lord, for ought I know

Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my Lord?

Oth. Think, my Lord? Alas, thou eccho'st me;

As if there were some Monster in thy thought
Too hideous to be shewn. Thou dost mean something:

I heard thee say even now, thou lik'st not that,

When Cassio left my wife. What did'st not like?

And when I told thee, he was of my Counsell,

Of my whole course of wooing; thou cried'st, Indeed?

And didd'st contract, and purse thy brow together,

As if thou then had'st shut up in thy brain

Some horrible conceit, if thou dost love me

Shew me thy thought.

Iago. My Lord, you know I love you.

Oth. I think thou dost:

For I know thou'r't full of Love and Honesty,

And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath,

Therefore these stops of thine, fright me the more:

For such things in a false disloyall Knave

Are tricks of Custome: but in a man that's just,

They're cold dilations working from the heart,

That passion cannot rule.

Iago. For Michael Cassio,

I dare be sworn, I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem,

Or those that be not, would they might seem none.

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.

Iago. Why then I think Cassio's an honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this?

I pray thee speake to me as to thy thinkings,
As thou dost ruminate, and give thy worst of thoughts

The worst of words.

Iago. Good my Lord, pardon me.

Though I am bound to every Act of duty,
I am not bound to that : All Slaves are free :
Utter my thoughts ? Why say they are vild, and false ?
As where's that Palace, whereinto foule things
Sometimes intrude not ? who has that breast so pure,
Wherein uncleanly apprehensions
Keep Leers, and Law-dayes, and in Sessions sit
With meditations lawfull ?

Oth. Thou do'st conspire against thy Friend (Iago)
If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his care
A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. I doe beseech you,
Though I perchance am vicious in my guess
(As I confesse it is my Natures plague
To spie into abuses, and of my jealousie
Shapes faults that are not) that your wisdom
From one, that so imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice, nor build your self a trouble
Out of his scattering, and unsure observance :
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty and wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean ?

Iago. Good name in man and woman (dear my Lord)
Is the immediate Jewel of their Soules ;
Who steales my purse steales trash :
'Tis something, nothing ;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has bin slave to thousands :
But he that filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. I'll know thy Thoughts.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand,
Nor shall nor, whilst 'tis in my custody.

Oth. Ha ?

Iago. Oh, beware, my Lord, of jealousie,
It is the green-ey'd Monster, which doth mock
The meat it feeds on. That Cuckold lives in blisse,
Who certain of his Fate, loves not his wronger :
But oh, what damned minutes tells he o're,
Who dotes, yet doubts : Suspects, yet soundly loves ?

Oth. O misery.

Iago. Poor, and Content, is rich, and rich enough,
But riches fineless, is as poor as Winter,
To him that ever feares he shall be poor :
Good Heaven, the Soules of all my Tribe defend
From jealousie.

Oth. Why ? why is this ?
Think'st thou, I'd make a Life of Jealousie ;
To follow still the changes of the Moon
With fresh suspicions ? No : to be once in doubt,
Is to be resolv'd : Exchange me for a Goat,
When I shall turn the businesse of my Soule
To such exufficate, and blowed Surmises,
Matching the inference. 'Tis not to make me Jealous,
To say my wife is faire, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, Sings, Playes, and Dances :
Where Virtue is, these are most virtuous.
Nor from mine own weak merits, will I draw
The smallest feare, or doubt of her revolt,
For she had eyes, and chose me. No, Iago,
I'll see before I doubt ; when I doubt, prove ;
And on the proof, there is no more but this,
Away at once with Love, or Jealousie.

Iago. I am glad of this : for now I shall have reason
To shew the Love and Duty that I bear you
With franker spirit. Therefore (as I am bound)
Receive it from me. I speak not yet of proof :
Look to your wife, observe her well with Cassio,
Wear your eyes, thus : not Jealous, nor Secure :
I would not have your free, and Noble Nature,
Out of self-bounty be abus'd, look to't :
I know our Country disposition well :
In Venice, they doe let Heaven see the pranks
They dare not shew their Husbands.
Their best Conscience,
Is not to leav't undone, but kept unknown.

Oth. Dost thou say so ?

Iag. She did deceive her Father, marrying you,
And when she seem'd to shake, and fear your looks,
She lov'd them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. VVhy, go to then :
She that so young could give out such a Seeming
To seale her Fathers eyes up, close as Oake,
He thought 'twas witchcraft,
But I am much too blame :
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago. I see this hath a little dash'd your Spirits :

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago. Trust me, I fear it has :
I hope you will consider what is spoke
Comes from my Love.
But I doe see y'are mov'd :
I am to pray you, not to strain my speech
To grosser issues, nor to larger reach,
Then to Suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you doe so (my Lord)
My speech should fall into such vilde successe, VVhich my thoughts aim'd not.

Cassio's my worthy friend :

My Lord, I see y'are mov'd :

Oth. No, not much mov'd :
I doe not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago. Long live she so ;
And long live you to think so.

Oth. And yet how Nature erring from it self-----

Iago. I there's the point :
As (to be bold with you)
Not to affect many proposed Matches
Of her own Clime, Complexion and Degree,
VVhereto we see in all things, Nature tends :
Foh, one may smell in such, a will most rank,
Foule disproportions, thoughts unnaturall.
But (pardon me) I doe not in position
Distinctly speak of her, though I may fear
Her will, recoyling to her better judgement,
May fall to match you with her Countrey formes,
And happily repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell :
If more thou dost perceive, let me know more :
Set on thy wife to observe.

Leave me, Iago.

Iago. My Lord, I take my leave.

Oth. VVhy did I marry ?
This honest Creature (doubtlesse)
Sess, and knowes more, much more then he unfolds.

Iago.

Iago. My Lord, I would I might entreat your Honour
To scan this thing no farther : Leave it to time,
Although 'tis fit that Cassio have his place ;
For sure he fills it up with great ability ;
Yet if you please to put him off a while,
You shall by that perceive him, and his meanes :
Note if your Lady strain his Entertainment
With any strong, or vehement importunity,
Much will be seen in that : In the mean time,
Let me be thought too busie in my feares,
(As worthy cause I have to feare I am)
And hold her free, I doe beseech your Honour :

Oth. Feare not my government.

Iago. I once more take my leave.

Oth. This Fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knowes all Quantities with a learn'd Spirit
Of humane dealings. If I doe prove her Haggard,
Though that her Jesses were my dear heart-strings,
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the winde
To prey at Fortune. Haply, for I am black,
And have not those soft parts of Conversation
That Chamberers have : Or for I am declin'd
Into the vale of yeares (yet that's not much)
She's gone. I am abus'd, and my relief
Must be to loathe her. Oh Curse of Marriage !
That we can call these delicate Creatures ours,
And not their Appetites ? I had rather be a Toad,
And live upon the Vapour of a Dungeon,
Then keep a corner in the thing I love
For others uses. Yet 'tis the plague to Great-ones, Prerogativ'd are they lesse then the Base ;
'Tis destiny unshunnable like death :
Even then, this forked plague is Fated to us,
V When we do quicken. Look where she comes :

Enter Desdemona, and Emilia.

If she be false, Heaven mock'd it self :
I'll not believ't.

Des. How now, my dear Othello ?
Your Dinner, and the generous Islanders
By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am too blame.

Des. VVhy doe you speak so faintly ?
Are you not well ?

Oth. I have a pain upon my Forehead here.

Des. VVhy that's with watching, 'twill away again.
Let me but binde it hard, within this houre
It will be well.

Oth. Your Napkin is too little :

Let it alone : Come, I'll go in with you. Exeunt.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.
Emil. I am glad I have found this Napkin :
This was her first remembrance from the Moore,
My wayward Husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to steale it. But she so loves the Token,
(For he conjur'd her, she should ever keep it)
That she reserves it evermore about her,
To kisse, and talke to. I'll have the work tane out,
And giv't Iago : what he will doe with it
Heaven knowes, not I :
I nothing, but to please his Fantasie.

Enter Iago.

Iago. How now ? what doe you here alone ?

Emil. Doe not you chide : I have a thing for you.

Iago. You have a thing for me ?

It is a common thing-----

Emil. Hah ?

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. Oh, is that all ? what will you give me now
For that same Handkerchiffe ?

Iago. What Handkerchiffe ?

Emil. What Handkerchiffe ?

Why that the Moore first gave to Desdemona,
That which so often you did bid me steale.

Iago. Hast stoln it from her ?

Emil. No : but she let it drop by negligence,
And to th' advantage, I being here, took't up :
Look, here 'tis.

Iago. A good wench, give it me.

Emil. What will you doe with't, you have been so earnest to have me filch it ?

Iago. Why, what is that to you ?

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import,
Giv't me again. Poor Lady, she'll run mad
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not acknown on't :

I have use for it. Go, leave me, Exit Emil.

I will in Cassio's Lodging loose this Napkin,
And let him finde it. Trifles light as aire
Are to the jealous, confirmations strong,
As proofs of holy Writ. This may doe something.
The Moore already changes with my poysons :
Dangerous conceits, are in their natures poysons,
Which at the first are scarce found to distaste :
But with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the Mines of Sulphure. I did say so.

Enter Othello.

Look where he comes : Not Poppy nor Mandiagora,
Nor all the drowfie Syrrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday.

Oth. Ha, ha, false to me ?

Iago. Why how now, Generall ? no more of that.

Oth. Avant, he gone : thou hast set me on the Rack :
I swear 'tis better to be much abus'd,
Then but to know a little.

Iago. How now, my Lord ?

Oth. What sent had I, in her stoln houres of Lust ?
I saw't not, thought it not : it harm'd not me :
I slept the next night well, fed well, was free, and merry.
I found not Cassio's kisses on her Lips :
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stoln,
Let him not know't, and he's not robb'd at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this ?

Oth. I had been happy if the generall Camp,
Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet Body,
So I had nothing known. Oh now, for ever
Farewell the Tranquill minde ; farewell Content ;
Farewell the plumed Troops, and the big Warres,
That make Ambition Virtue ! Oh farewell,
Farewell the neighing Steed, and the shrill Trump ;
The Spirit-stirring Drum, th' Eare-piercing Fife,
The Royall Banner, and all Quality,
Pride, Pomp and Circumstance of glorious Warre :
And O you mortall Engines, whose rude throats
Th'immortall Jove's dread Clamours counterfeit, Farewell : Othello's Occupation's gone.

Iago. Is't possible, my Lord ?

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my Love a Whore ;
Be sure of it : Give me the Ocular proof,

Or by the worth of mine eternall Soule,
Thou hadst bin better have bin born a Dog
Then answer my wak'd wrath.

Iago. Is't come to this?

Oth. Make me to see't : or (at the least) so prove it,
That the probation bear no Hindge, nor Loop,
To hang a doubt on : Or woe upon thy life.

Iago. My Noble Lord.

Oth. If thou dost slander her, and torture me,
Never pray more : abandon all remorse
On horrors head, horrors accumulate,
Doe deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd;
For nothing canst thou to damnation adde,
Greater then that.

Iago. O Grace ! O heaven forgive me !
Are you a man ? have you a soule ? or sense ?
God buy you : take mine Office. Oh wretched Foole,
That lov'st to make thine honesty a vice !
Oh monstrous world ! Take note, take note (O World)
To be direct and honest, is not safe.

I thank you for this profit, and from hence
I'll love no friend, sith love breeds such offence.

Oth. Nay stay : thou shouldst be honest.

Iago. I should be wise, for honesty's a Foole,
And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world,

I think my Wife is honest, and think she is not :
I think that thou art just, and think thou art not :
I'll have some proof. My name that was as fresh
As Dians Visage, is now begrim'd and black
As mine own face. If there be Cords or Knives,
Poyson, or Fire, or suffocating streames,
I'll not endure it. Would I were satisfied.

Iago. I see you are eaten up with passion :
I doe repent me that I put it to you,
You would be satisfied ?

Oth. Would, Nay, and I will.

Iago. And may : but now ? how satisfied, my Lord ?
Would you the super-vision grossely gaze on ?
Behold her topp'd ?

Oth. Death, and damnation. Oh !

Iago. It were a tedious difficulty I think,
To bring to that prospect : Damn them then,
If ever mortall eyes doe see them boulder
More then their own. What then ? how then ?
What shall I say ? Where's Satisfaction ?
It is impossible you should see this,
Were they as prime as Goats, as hot as Monkeys,
As salt as Wolves in pride, and Fooles as grosse
As Ignorance, made drunk. But yet, I say,
If imputation and strong circumstances,
Which lead directly to the door of truth,
Will give you satisfaction, you might have't.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyall.

Iago. I doe not like the Office ;
But sith I am entred in this cause so farre
(Prick'd to't by foolish Honesty, and Love)
I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately,
And being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep. There are a kind of men,
So loose of Soule, that in their sleeps will mutter
Their Affaires : one of this kinde is Cassio :
In sleep I heard him say, sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our Loves,
And then (Sir) would he gripe, and wring my hand :
Cry, oh sweet Creature : then kisse me hard,

As if he pluckt up kitties by the roots,
That grew upon my lips, laid his Leg o're my Thigh,
And sigh and kisse, and then cry curst Fate,
That gave thee to the Moore.

Oth. O monstrous ! monstrous ?

Iago. Nay this was but his Dreame.

Oth. But this denoted a fore-gone conclusion,
'Tis a shrewde doubt, though it be but a Dreame.

Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs,
That doe demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll teare her all to pieces.

Iago. Nay yet be wise ; yet we see nothing done,
She may be honest yet : Tell me but this,
Have you not sometimes seen a Handkerchiffe
Spotted with Straw-berries, in your Wives hand ?

Oth. I gave her such a one : 'twas my first gift.

Iago. I know not that : but such a Handkerchiffe
(I am sure it was your Wives) did I to day
See Cassio wipe his Beard with.

Cassio. If it be that.

Iago. If it be that, or any, if 'twas hers,
It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth. O that the slave had forty thousand lives :
One is too poor, too weak for my revenge.
Now doe I see 'tis true. Look here, Iago,
All my fond love thus doe I blow to heaven. 'Tis gone,
Arise black vengeance from the hollow hell,
Yield up (O Love) thy Crown and hearted Throne
To tyrannous Hate. Swell bosome with thy fraught,
For 'tis of Aspics tongues.

Iago. Yet be content.

Oth. Oh blood, blood, blood.

Iago. Patience I say : your minde may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick Sea,
Whose Icie Current, and compulsive Course,
Ne're keeps retiring ebbe, but keeps due on
To the Propontick, and the Hellefont :
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace
Shall ne're look back, ne're ebbe to humble Love,
Till that a capable, and wide Revenge
Swallow them up. Now by yond Marble Heaven,
In the due reverence of a Sacred vow,
I here engage my words-----

Iago. Doe not rise yet :

Witnesse you ever-burning Lights above,
You Elements, that clip us round about.
Witnesse that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's Service. Let him command,
And to obey shall be in me remorse,
What bloody businesse ever.

Oth. I greet thy love,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bountious,
And will upon the instant put thee to't :
Within these three dayes let me hear thee say,
That Cassio's not alive.

Iago. My friend is dead:

'Tis done at your request.
But let her live.

Oth. Damn her lewde Minx :

O damn her, damn her.
Come go with me apart, I will withdraw
To furnish me with some swift meanes of death
For the fair Devil.
Now art thou my Lieutenant.

Iago. I am your own for ever.

Exeunt.
Scena.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, Sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lyes ?

Clow. I dare not say he lies any where.

Des. Why man ?

Clow. He's a Soldier, and for me to say a Soldier lyes, 'tis stabbing.

Des. Go to : where lodges he ?

Clow. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lye.

Des. Can any thing be made of this ?

Clow. I know not where he lodges, and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here, or he lies there, were to lye in mine own throat.

Des. Can you enquire him out ? and be edified by report ?

Clow. I will Catechize the world for him, that is, make Questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither : tell him, I have mov'd my Lord on his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clow. To doe this, is within the compasse of mans wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it. Exit Clow.

Des. Where should I loose the Handkerchiffe, Emilia ?

Emil. I know not, Madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse Full of Cruzadoes. And but my Noble Moore Is true of minde, and made of no such baseness, As jealous Creatures are, it were enough To put him to ill-thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous ?

Des. Who he ? I think the Sun where he was born, Drew all such humours from him.

Emilia. Look where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio be Call'd to him. How is't with you, my Lord ?

Oth. Well, my good Lady. Oh hardnesse to dissemble ! How doe you, Desdemona ?

Des. Well, my good Lord.

Oth. Give me your hand, This hand is moist, my Lady.

Des. It hath felt no age, nor known no sorrow.

Enter Othello.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness, and liberall heart : Hot, hot, and moist. This hand of yours requires A sequester from Liberty : Fasting, and Prayer, Much Castigation, Exercise devout, For here's a young and sweating Devil here, That commonly rebels : 'Tis a good hand. A frank one.

Des. You may (indeed) say so :

For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberall hand. The hearts of old, gave hands : But our new Heraldry is hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this :

Come, now your promise.

Oth. What promise, Chuck ?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sorry Rheume offends me : Lend me thy Handkerchiffe.

Des. Here, my Lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not ?

Des. No indeed, my Lord.

Oth. That's a fault : That Handkerchiffe Did an Egyptian to my Mother give :

She was a Charmer, and could almost read The thoughts of people : She told her, while she kept it, 'Twould make her amiable, subdue my Father Intirely to her love : but if she lost it, Or made a Gift of it, My Fathers eye Should hold her loathed, and his Spirits should hunt After new Fancies. She dying gave it me, And bid me (when my Fate would have me Wiv'd) To give it her. I did so, and take heed on't, Make it a Darling, like your precious eye : To loos't, or give't away, were such perdition, As nothing else could match.

Des. Is't possible ?

Oth. 'Tis true, there's Magick in the web of it : A Sybill that had numbred in the world The Sun to course two hundred compasses, In her prophetick fury sow'd the work : The Wormes were hallowed, that did breed the Silk, And it was di'd in Mummey, which the skilfull Conserv'd of Maidens hearts.

Des. Indeed ? is't true ?

Oth. Most veritable, therefore look to't well.

Des. Then would the heaven, that I had never seen't.

Oth. Ha ? wherefore ?

Des. Why doe you speak so staringly, and rash ?

Oth. Is't lost ? is't gone ? Speak, is't out oth' way ?

Des. Blesse us.

Oth. Say you ?

Des. It is not lost : but what and if it were ?

Oth. How ?

Des. I say it is not lost.

Oth. Fetcht', let me see't.

Des. Why so I can : but I will not now : This is a trick to put me from my suit, Pray you let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me the Handkerchiffe, My minde mis-gives.

Des. Come, come : you'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The Handkerchiffe.

Des. A man that all histime Hath founded his good Fortunes on your love ; Shar'd dangers with you.

Oth. The Handkerchiffe.

Des. Insooth, you are too blame,

Oth. Away.

Exit Othello.

Emil. Is not this man jealous ?

Des. I never saw this before.

Sure there's some wonder in this Handkerchiffe, I am most unhappy in the losse of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a yeare or two shewes us a man : They are all but stomachs, and we all but Food, They eat us hungerly, and when they are full They belch us.

Enter Iago, and Cassio.

Look you, Cassio and my Husband.

Iago. There is no other way : 'tis she must do't : And loe the happinesse : go and importune her.

Des.

Des. How now, (good Cassio) what's the newes with you?

Cassio. Madam, my former suit. I doe beseech you, That by your virtuous meanes, I may again Exist, and be a member of his love, Whom I, with all the Office of my heart Intirely honour, I would not be delay'd. If my offence be of such mortall kinde, That not my Service past, nor present Sorrowes, Nor purpos'd merit in futurity, Can ransom me into his love again, But to know so, must be my benefit: So shall I cloathe me in a forc'd content, And thut my self up in some other course To Fortunes Almes.

Des. Alas (thrice-gentle Cassio) My Advocation is not now in tune; My Lord, is not my Lord; nor should I know him, Were he in favour, as in humour alterd. So help me every spirit sanctified, As I have spoken for you all my best, And stood within the blank of his displeasure For my free speech. You must a while be patient: What I can doe, I will: and more I will Then for my self I dare. Let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my Lord angry?

Amil. He went hence but now: And certainly in strange inquietnesse.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the Cannon, When it hath blown his Ranks into the aire, And like the Devil from his very Arme Pust his own Brother: And is he angry? Something of moment then; I will go meet him, There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry

Exit.

Des. I prethee doe so. Something sure of State, Either from Venice, or some unhatch'd practice, Made demonstrable here in Cyprus, to him, Hath puddled his clear Spirit: and in such cases, Mens Natures wrangle with inferiour things, Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even so. For let our finger ake, and it endues Our other healthfull members, even to a sense Of pain. Nay, we must think men are not Gods, Nor of them look for such observance As fits the Bridall. Befrew me much, Amilia, I was (unhandsome Warriour as I am) Arraigning his unkindnesse with my soule: But now I finde, I had suborn'd the Witnesse, And he's Indited falsely.

Amil. Pray heaven it be State matters, as you think, and no Conception, Nor no jealous toy concerning you.

Des. Alas-the-day, I never gave him cause.

Amil. But Jealous soules will not be answer'd so; They are not ever jealous for the cause, But jealous, for they're jealous. It is a Monster Begot upon it self, Born on it self.

Des. Heaven keep the Monster from Othello's minde.

Amil. Lady, Amen.

Des. I will go seek him. Cassio, walk hereabout: If I doe finde him fit, I'll move your suit, And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Exit.

Cas. I humbly thank your Ladiship.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. 'Save you (Friend Cassio.)

Cassio. What make you from home?

How is't with you, my most fair Bianca?

Indeed (sweet Love) I was comming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your Lodging, Cassio. What? keep a week away? Seven dayes, and nights? Eight score eight houres? And Loves absent houres More tedious then the Diall, eight score times? Oh weary reck'ning.

Cassio. Pardon me, Bianca: I have this while with leaden thoughts been prelt, But I shall in a more continuat time Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca, Take me this work out.

Bianca. Oh Cassio, whence came this? This is some token from a newer Friend, To the felt-absence: now I feel a Cause: Is't come to this? Well, well.

Cassio. Go to, woman: Throw your vild guesse in the Devils teeth, From whence you have them. You are jealous now That this is from some Mistris, some remembrance; No, in good troth, Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it?

Cassio. I know not neither: I found it in my Chamber, I like the work well: Ere it be demanded (As like enough it will) I would have it coppied: Take it, and do't, and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you? wherefore?

Cassio. I doe attend here on the Generall, And think it no addition, nor my wish To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cassio. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you doe not love me, I pray you bring me on the way a little, And say, if I shall see you soon at night?

Cassio. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring you, For I attend here. But I'll see you soon.

Bian. 'Tis very good: I must be circumstanc'd.

Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima

Enter Othello, and Iago.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago?

Iago. What, to kisse in private?

Oth. An unauthoriz'd kisse?

Iago. Or to be naked with her Friends in bed, An houre, or more, not meaning any harme?

Oth. Naked in bed (Iago) and not mean harme? It is hypocrisie against the Devil:

They that mean virtuously, and yet do so, The Devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt Heaven.

Iago. If they do nothing, 'tis a Veniall slip: But I give my wife a Handkerchiffe.

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why then 'tis hers (my Lord) and being hers, She may (I think) bestow't on any man, Oth. She is Protectresse of her honour too: May she give that?

Iago

Iago. Her Honour is an Essence that's not seen,
They have it very oft that have it not.
But for the Handkerchiffe.

Oth. By heaven I would most gladly have forgot it :
Thou saidst (oh, it comes o're my memory,
As doth the Raven o're the infectious house :
Boading to all) he had my Handkerchiffe.

Iago. I : what of that ?

Oth. That's not so good now :

Iago. What if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?
Or hear him say, as Knaves be such abroad,
Who having by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dorage of some Mistris,
Convinced or supplid them cannot chuse
But they must blab.

Oth. Hath he said any thing ?

Iago. He hath (my Lord) but be you well assur'd,
No more then he'll unwear.

Oth. What hath he said ?

Iago. Why, that he did : I know not what he did.

Oth. What ? what ?

Iago. Lye,

Oth. With her ?

Iago. With her ? on her : what you will.

Oth. Lie with her ? lie on her ? we say, lie on her,
when they be-lye her. Lie with her ? that's fullome :
Handkerchiffe : Confessions : Handkerchiffe. To con-fesse, and be hang'd for his labour. First, to be hang'd, and then to confesse : I tremble at it. Nature would not invest her self in such shadowing passion, without some instruction. It is not words that shakes me thus, (pish) Noses, Eares, and Lips : is't possible. Confesse ? Hand-kerchiffe ? O Devil. Falls in a Trance.

Iago. Work on,
My Medicine works. Thus credulous Fooles are caught,
And many worthy, and chaste Dames even thus (All guiltlesse) meet reproach : what hoa ? My Lord ?
My Lord, I say Othello.

Enter Cassio.

How now, Cassio ?

Cas. What's the matter ?

Iago. My Lord is fain into an Epilepsie,
This is his second Fit : he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the Temples.

Iago. The Lethargy must have his quiet course :
If not, he foames at mouth : and by and by Breaks out to savage madnesse : Look, he stirres :
Doe you withdraw your self a little while,
He will recover straight : when he is gone,
I would on great occasion, speak with you.
How is it Generall ? Have you not hurt your hand ?

Oth. Dost thou mock me ?

Iago. I mock you not, by Heaven :
Would you would bear your Fortune like a Man.

Oth. A Horned man's a Monster and a Beast.

Iago. There's many a Beast then in a populous City,
And many a civil Monster.

Oth. Did he confesse it ?

Iago. Good Sir, be a man :
Think every bearded fellow that's but yoa'k'd
May draw with you. There's millions now alive,
That nightly lie in those unproper beds,
Which they dare swear peculiar. Your cause is better.
Oh, 'tis the spight of hell, the Fiends Arch-mock,
To lip a wanton in a secure Cowch ;

And to suppose her chaste. No, let me know,
And knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. Oh, thou art wise : 'tis certain.

Iago. Stand you a while apart,
Confin your self but in a patient List,
Whil'st you were here, o're-whelmed with your grief
(A passion most resulting such a man)

Cassio came hither. I shifted him away,
And laid good scuses on your Extasie,
Bad him anon return, and here speak with me,
The which he promis'd. Doe but encave your self,
And marke the Fleeres, the Cybes and notable Scoins,
That dwell in every Region of his face.
For I will make him tell the tale anew ;
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when
He hath, and is again to cope your wife.
I say, but marke his gesture : marry Patience,
Or I shall say y'are all in all in Splen,
And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago,
I will be found most cunning in my Patience :
But (dost thou hear) most bloody.

Iago. That's not amiss.
But yet keep time in all : will you withdraw ?
Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A Huswife, that by selling her desires,
Buyes her self Bread and Cloth. It is a Creature
That dotes on Cassio, (as 'tis the Strumpets plague
To beguile many, and be beguil'd by one)
He, when he heares of her, cannot restrain
From the excessse of Laughter. Here he comes.

Enter Cassio.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad :
And his unbookish Jealousie must conserve,
Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures and light behaviours
Quite in the wrong. How doe you, Lieutenant ?

Cas. The worse, that you gave me the addition,
Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on't :
Now, if this Sure lay in Bianca's dowre,
How quickly should you speed ?

Cas. Alas, poor Caitiffe.

Oth. Look how he laughs already.

Iago. I never knew woman love man so.

Cas. Alas, poor Rogue, I think indeed she loves me.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly : and laughs it out,

Iago. Doe you hear, Cassio ?

Oth. Now he importunes him
To tell it o're : go to, well said, well said.

Iago. She gives it out, that you shall marry her.
Doe you intend it ?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha.

Oth. Doe ye triumph, Roman ? doe you triumph ?

Cas. I marry. What ? a customer ; prethee bear
Some Charity to my wit, doe not think it
So unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha.

Oth. So, so : they laugh, that winnes.

Iago. Why, the cry goes, that you shall marry her.

Cas. Prethee say true.

Iago. I am a very Villain else.

Oth. Have you scoar'd me ; well.

Cas. This is the Monkies own giving out :
She is perswaded I will marry her
Out of her own love & flattery, not out of my promise.

Othello

Oth. Iago beckon's me: now he begins the story.

Cassio. She was here even now: she haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking on the Sea bank with certain Venetians, and thither comes the Bauble, and falls me thus about my neck.

Oth. Crying, oh dear Cassio, as it were: his gesture imports it.

Cas. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me: So shakes, and pulls me. Ha, ha, ha.

Oth. Now he tells how she pluckt him to my Chamber: oh, I see that Nose of yours, but now that Dog, I shall throw it to:

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Iago. Before me: look where she comes.

Enter Bianca.

Cas. 'Tis such another Fitchew: marry a perfum'd one: What doe you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his damme haunt you: what did you mean by that same Handkerchiffe you gave me even now? I was a fine Foole to take it: I must take out the work? A likely piece of work, that you should finde it in your Chamber, and know not who left it there. This is some Minxes token, and I must take out the work? There, give it your Hobbey-horse: wheresoever you had it, I'll take out no work on't.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca?
How now? how now?

Oth. By Heaven, that should be my Handkerchiffe.

Bian. If you'll come to supper to night you may, if you will not, come when you are next prepar'd for. Exit.

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. I must, she'll raile in the streets else.

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. Yes, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you: for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Prethee come, will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more. Exit.

Oth. How shall I murder him, Iago?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laugh'd at his vice?

Oth. Oh, Iago.

Iago. And did you see the Handkerchiffe?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours by this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife: she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine yeares a killing: A fine woman, a fair woman, a sweet woman?

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. I, let her rot and perish, and be damn'd to night, for she shall not live. No, my heart is turn'd to stone: I strike it, and it hurts my hand. Oh, the world hath not a sweeter Creature: she might lye by an Emperours side, and command him Taskes.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her, I do but say what she is: so delicate with her Needle: an admirable Musitian. Oh, she will sing the Savagenesse out of a Bear: of so high a plentious wit, and invention?

Iag. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. Oh, a thousand, a thousand times:
And then of so gentle a condition?

Iago. I, too gentle.

Oth. Nay, that's certain.

But yet the pittie of it, Iago: oh Iago, the pittie of it, Iago.
Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity: give her pattennt to offend, for if it touch not you, it comes near no body.

Oth. I will chop her into Messes: Cuckold me?

Iago. Oh, 'tis foul in her.

Oth. With mine Officer?

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poyson, Iago, this night. I'll not expostulate with her: left her body and her beauty unprovide my minde again: this night, Iago.

Iago. Doe it not with poyson, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good:

The justice of it pleases: very good.

Iago. And for Cassio, let me be his undertaker:
You shall hear more by midnight.

Enter Lodovico, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Oth. Excellent good: what Trumpet is that same?

Iago. I warrant something from Venice,

'Tis Lodovico, this comes from the Duke.

See, your wife's with him.

Lodo. Save you, worthy Generall.

Oth. With all my heart, Sir.

Lod. The Duke, and the Senators of Venice greet you.

Oth. I kisse the Instrument of their pleasures.

Des. And what's the newes, good cousin Lodovico?

Iago. I am very glad to see you, Signior,
Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you: how do's Lieutenant Cassio?

Iago. Lives, Sir.

Des. Cousin, there's faln between him and my Lord,
An unkind breach: but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My Lord?

Oth. This faile you not to do, as you will-----

Lod. He did not call: he's busie in the paper,
Is there division 'twixt my Lord and Cassio?

Des. A most unhappy one: I would do much
T'atone them for the love I bear to Cassio.

Oth. Fire and Brimstone.

Des. My Lord.

Oth. Are you wise?

Des. What, is he angry?

Lod. May be the Letter mov'd him.

For as I think they do command him home,
Deputing Cassio in his Government.

Des. Trust me, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed?

Des. My Lord?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Des. Why, sweet Othello?

Oth. Devil.

Des. I have not deserv'd this.

Lod. My Lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,
Though I should swear I saw't. 'Tis very much,
Make her amends: she weeps.

Oth. Oh Devil, Devil:

If that the Earth could teem with womans teares,
Each drop she falls would prove a Crocodile:
Out of my sight.

Des. I will not stay to offend you:

Lod. Truly obedient Lady:

I do beseech your Lordship call her back.

Oth.

Othe. Mistris.

Des. My Lord.

Othe. What would you with her, Sir?

Lod. VVho I, my Lord?

Othe. I, you did wish that I would make her turn :
Sir, she can turn, and turn : and yet go on
And turn again. And she can weep, Sir, weep.
And she's obedient : as you say obedient.
Very obedient : proceed you in your teares.
Concerning this, Sir, (oh well painted passion)
I am commanded home : get you away :
I'll send for you anon. Sir, I obey the Mandate.
And will return to Venice. Hence, avant :
Cassio shall have my Place. And, Sir, to night
I do entreat, that we may sup together.
You are welcome, Sir, to Cyprus.

Goats and Monkeys.

Exit.

Lod. Is this the Noble Moore, whom our full Senate
Call all in all sufficient? Is this the Nature
VVhom Passion could not shake? whose solid virtue
The shot of Accident, nor dart of Chance
Could neither graze, nor pierce?

Iago. He is much chang'd.

Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not of light Brain?

Iago. He's that he is : I may not breathe my censure.
VVhat he might be : if what he might, he is not,
I would to heaven he were.

Lod. VVhat, strike his wife?

Iago. 'Faith that was not so well; yet would I knew
That stroke would prove the worst.

Lod. Is it his use?

Or did the Letters work upon his blood,
And new create his fault?

Iago. Alas, alas:

It is not honesty in me to speak
VVhat I have seen and known. You shall observe him,
And his own courses will denote him so,
That I may save my speech : do but go after
And mark how he continues.

Lod. I am sorry that I am deceiv'd in him. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, and Emilia.

Othe. You have seen nothing then?

Emil. Nor ever heard : nor ever did suspect.

Othe. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.

Emil. But then I saw no harme : and then I heard
Each syllable that breath made up between them.

Othe. VVhat? Did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my Lord.

Othe. Nor send you out oth' way?

Emil. Never.

Othe. To fetch her Fan, her Gloves, her Mask, nor Emil. Never, my Lord, (nothing?)

Othe. That's strange.

Emil. I durst (my Lord) to wager she is honest,
Lay down my Soule at stake : If you think other,
Remove your thought. It doth abuse your bosome,
If any wretch hath put this in your head,
Let heaven requite it with the Serpents curse,

For if she be not honest, chaste, and true,
There's no man happy, the purest of their Wives
Is foul as Slander.

Othe. Bid her come hither : go. Exit Emilia.

She saies enough : yet she's a simple Baud
That cannot say as much. This is a subtle Whore :
A Closset Lock and Key of Villanous Secrets,
And yet she'll kneel, and pray : I have seen her do't.

Enter Desdemona, and Emilia.

Des. My Lord, what is your will?

Othe. Pray you Chuck come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Othe. Let me see your eyes : look in my face.

Des. What horrible Fancie's this?

Othe. Some of your Function, Mistris,
Leave Procreants alone, and shut the door :

Cough, or cry hem ; if any body come :

Your Mystery, your Mystery ; Nay dispatch. Exit Emi.

Des. Upon my knee, what doth your speech import?
I understand a Fury in your words.

Othe. Why? What art thou?

Des. Your wife my Lord : your true and loyal wife.

Othello. Come swear it : damne thy self, being like one of Heaven, the devills themselves should fear to ceise thee. Therefore be double damn'd : swear thou art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly know it.

Othe. Heaven truly knows, that thou art false as hell.

Des. To whom, my Lord?

With whom? How am I false?

Othe. Ah Desdemon, away, away, away.

Des. Alas the heavy day : why do you weep?

Am I the motive of these tears, my Lord?

If happily you my Father do suspect,

An Instrument of this your calling back,

Lay not your blame on me : if you have lost him,
I have lost him too.

Othe. Had it pleas'd Heaven,
To try me with Affliction, had they rain'd
All kind of sores, and shames on my bare-head :

Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips.

Given to Captivity, me and my utmost hopes.

I should have found in some place of my soul
A drop of patience. But alas, to make me

The fixed Figure for the time of Scorn,

To point his slow, and moving finger at.

Yet could I bear that too, well, very well :

But there where I have garner'd up my heart,

Where either I must live, or bear no life,

The fountain from the which my currant runs,

Or else dries up : to be discarded thence,

Or keep it as a Cestern, for foul Toads

To knot and gender in. Turn thy complexion there :

Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd Cherubin,

I here look grim as hell.

Des. I hope my Lord esteems me honest.

Othe. O I, as Sommer Flies are in the Shambles,

That quicken even with blowing. Oh thou weed :

Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet,

That the Sence asks at thee,

Would thad't never been born.

Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?

Othe. Was this fair Paper? this most goodly Book
Made to write Whore upon? What committed,

Com-

Committed? Oh, thou publick Commoner,
I should make very Forges of my Cheeks,
That would to Cynders burn up Modesty,
Did but I speak thy deeds. What committed?
Heaven stops the Nose at it, and the Moon winks:
The bawdy wind that kisses all it meets,
Is hush'd within the hollow Myne of Earth
And will not hear't. What committed?

Des. By Heaven you doe me wrong.

Othe. Are not you a Strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a Christian.

If to preserve this Vessell for my Lord,
From any other foule unlawfull touch
Be not to be a Strumpet, I am none.

Othe. What, not a Whore?

Des. No, as I shall be sav'd.

Othe. Is't possible?

Des. Oh Heaven forgive us.

Othe. I cry you mercy then.

I took you for that cunning Whore of Venice,
That married with Othello. You Miltris,

Enter Emilia.

That have the Office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keeps the gate of hell. You, you: I you.
We have done our course: there's money for your pains:
I pray you turn the key and keep our counsell. Exit.

Emil. Alas, what do's this Gentleman conceive?

How doe you, Madam? how doe you, my good Lady?

Des. Faith, half a sleep.

Emil. Good Madam,

What's the matter with my Lord?

Des. With whom?

Emil. Why, with my Lord, Madam?

Des. Who is thy Lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet Lady.

Des. I have none: doe not talk to me, Emilia,

I cannot weep: nor answers have I none,
But what should go by water. Prethee to night,
Lay on my bed my wedding sheets, remember,
And call thy Husband hither.

Emil. Here's a change indeed.

Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so: very meet.
How have I bin behav'd, that he might stick
The small'st opinion on my least misuse?

Enter Iago, and Emilia.

Iago. What is your pleasure, Madam?
How is't with you?

Des. I cannot tell: those that doe teach your Babes
Doe it with gentle meanes, and easie taskes.
He might have chid me so: for in good faith
I am a Child to chiding.

Iago. What is the matter, Lady?

Emil. Alas (Iago) my Lord hath so bewhor'd her,
Thrown such despight, and heavy termes upon her,
That true hearts cannot bear it.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name (fair Lady?)

Des. Such as she said my Lord did say I was.

Emil. He call'd her whore: a Beggar in his drink,
Could not have laid such termes upon his Caller.

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I doe not know: I am sure I am none such.

Iago. Doe not weep, doe not weep: alas-the-day.

Emil. Hath she forsook so many Noble Matches?
Her Father? and her Countrey? and her Friends?

To be call'd Whore? would it not make one weep?

Des. It is my wretched Fortune.

Iago. Bethrew him for't:

How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternall Villain,
Some busie and insinuating Rogue,

Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some Office,
Has not devis'd this Slander: I will be hang'd else.

Iago. Fie, there is no such man: it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him.

Emil. A halter pardon him:

And hell gnaw his bones.

Why should he call her Whore?

Who keeps her company?

What Place? what Time?

What Form? what Likelihood?

The Moore's abus'd by some most villanous Knave,
Some base notorious Knave, some scurvy Fellow.

Oh heavens, that such companions thoud'ft unfold,

And put in every honest hand a whip

To lash the Rascall naked through the world,

Even from the East to th' West.

Iago. Speak within door.

Emil. Oh fie upon them: some such Squire he was
That turn'd your wit, the seamy side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moore.

Iago. You are a Foole: go to.

Des. Alas, Iago.

What shall I do to win my Lord again?

Good Friend, go to him: for by this light of Heaven,

I know not how I lost him. Here I kneele:

If e're my will did trespassse 'gainst his Love,

Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed,

Or that mine Eyes, mine Ears, or any Sence

Delighted them: or any other Form:

Or that I do not yet, and ever did,

And ever will, (though he do shake me off

To beggerly divorcement) Love him dearly,

Comfort forswear me. Unkindnesse may do much,

And his unkindnesse may defeat my life,

But never taint my Love. I cannot say Whore,

It do's abhorre me now I speak the word,

To do the Act, that might the addition earn,

Not the worlds Masse of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you be content: 'tis but his humour:
The businesse of the State do's him offence.

Des. If 'twere no other.

Iago. It is but so, I warrant:

Heark how these Instruments summon to supper:

The Messenger of Venice stayes the Meat;

Go in, and weep not: all things shall be well.

Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.

Enter Rodorigo.

How now, Rodorigo?

Rod. I do not finde

That thou deal'st justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rodo. Every day thou dost me with some device, Iago, and rather as it seems to me now, keep'st from me all conveniency, then suppliest me with the least advantage of hope: I will indeed no longer endure it. Nor am I yet perswaded to put up in peace, what already I have foolishly suffer'd.

Iago. Will you hear me, Rodorigo?

Rodo.

Rodo. I have heard too much : and your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rodo. With naught but truth : I have wasted my self out of my meanes. The Jewels you have had from me to deliver Desdemona, would half have corrupted a Votarist. You have told me she hath receiv'd them, and return'd me expectations and comforts of sudden respect, and acquaintance, but I find none.

Iago. Well, go to : very well.

Rodo. Very well, go to : I cannot go to, (man) nor 'tis not very well : nay, I think it is scurvy : and begin to find my self sopt in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rodo. I tell you, 'tis not very well : I will make my self known to Desdemona. If she will return me my Jewels, I will give over my Suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation. If not, assure your self, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. I, and said nothing but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee : and even from this instant doe build on thee a better opinion then ever before : give me thy hand Rodorigo. Thou hast taken against me a most just exception : but yet I protest I have dealt most directly in thy Affaire.

Rod. It hath not appear'd.

Iago. I grant indeed it hath not appear'd : and your suspicion is not without wit and judgement. But, Rodorigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now then ever (I mean purpose, Courage, and Valour) this night shew it. If thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with Treachery, and devise Engines for my life.

Rod. Well : what is it ? Is it within reason and compasse ?

Iago. Sir, there is especiall Commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true ? Why then Othello and Desdemona, return again to Venice.

Iago. Oh no : he goes into Mauritania, and taketh away with him the fair Desdemona, unlesse his abode be lingred here by some accident. Wherein none can be so determinate, as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How doe you mean removing him ?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place : knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me to doe.

Iago. I : if you dare doe your self a profit, and a right. He sups to night with a Harlotry : and thither will I go to him. He knowes not yet of his honourable fortune, if you will watch his going thence (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one) you may take him at your pleasure. I will be near to second your Attempt, and he shall fall betwen us. Come, stand not amaz'd at it, but go along with me : I will shew you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think your self bound to put it on him. It is now high supper time : and the night growes to waste. About it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this,

Iago. And you shall be satisfied.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desmona, Emilia and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble your self no further.

Orhe. Oh pardon : 'twill do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night : I humbly thank your Lady.

Des. Your honour is most welcome. (ship,

Orhe. Will you walk sir ? Oh Desdemona.

Des. My Lord.

Orhe. Get you to bed on th' instant, I will be return'd forthwith : dismisse your Attendant there : look't be done. Exit.

Des. I will, my Lord.

Emi. How goes it now ? he looks gentler then he did.

Des. He sayes he will return incontinent, And hath commanded me to go to bed, And bid me to dismisse you.

Emil. Dismisse me ?

Des. It was his bidding : therefore good Emilia, Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu. We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would you had never seen him.

Des. So would not I : my love doth so approve him, That even his stubbornness, his checks, his frowns, (Prithee un-pin me) have grace and favour.

Emi. I have laid those sheets you bad me on the bed.

Des. All's one : good Father, how foolish are our minds ? If I do die before thee, prithee throwd me In one of these same sheets.

Emil. Come, come : you talk.

Des. My Mocher had a Maid call'd Barbara, She was in love : and he she lov'd prov'd mad.

And did forsake her. She had a Song of Willow, An old thing 'twas : but it express'd her Fortune.

And she dy'd singing it. That song to night, Will not go from my mind : I have much to do, But to go hang my head all at one side

And sing it like poor Barbara : prithee dispatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your Night-gown ?

Des. No, unpin me here, This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. He speaks well.

Emil. I know a Lady in Venice would have walk'd bare-foot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.

Des. The poor Soul sat singing, by a Sicamore tree.

Sing all a green Willough :

Her hand on her bosome, her head on her knee,

Sing Willough, Willough, Willough.

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans
Sing Willough, &c.

Her salt tears fell from her, and softened the stones,
Sing willow, &c. (Lady by these)

Willough, Willough. (Prithe high thee, he'll come anon)

Sing all a green Willough must be my Garland.

Let no body blame him, his scorn I approve.

(Nay that's not next. Hark who is't that knocks ?

Emil. It's the wind.

Des. I call'd my Love false Love : but what said he then ?

Sing Willough, &c.

If I court no women, you'll conch with me men.

Z z z

So

So get thee gone, good night: mine eyes do itch:
Doth that boad weeping?

Amil. 'Tis neither here, nor there,

Des. I have heard it said so, O these Men, these men!
Dost thou in conscience think (tell me Amilia)
That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such grosse kind?

Amil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the world:

Amil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light.

Amil. Nor I neither, by this heavenly light.
I might do't as well ith' dark.

Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the world?

Amil. The world's a huge thing:
It is a great price, for a small vice.

Des. In troth I think thou would'st not.

Amil. In troth I think I should, and undo't when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joynt Rring, nor for measures of Lawn, nor for Gowns, Petticoats, nor Caps, nor any petty exhibition. But for all the whole world: why, who would not make her husband a Cuckold, to make him a Monarch? I should venture Purgatory for't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong
For the whole world.

Amil. Why, the wrong, is but a wrong ith' world; and having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

Amil. Yes, a dozen: and as many to th'vantage, as would store the world they plaid for.

But I do think it is their husbands faults
If Wives do fall: (Say, that they slack their duties,
And pour our treasures into forraign laps;
Or else break out in peevish Jealousies,
Throwing restraint upon us: Or say they strike us,
Or scant our former having in despight)

Why we have galls: and though we have some Grace,
Yet have we some Revenge. Let husbands know,
Their wives have sense like them: They see and smell,
And have their Palats both for sweet and sowre,
As husbands have. What is it that they do
When they change us for others? Is it sport?
I think it is: and doth affection breed it?

I think it doth: Is't frailty that thus erres?
It is so too. And have not we affections?
Desires for sport? and frailty as men have?
Then let them use us well: else let them know,
The ills we do, their ills instruct us to.

Des. Good night, good night:
Heaven me such uses send,
Not to pick bad, from bad; but hy bad, mend. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Iago, and Rodorigo.

Iago. Here, stand behind this Bark,
Straight will he come:
Wear thy good Rapier bare, and put it home:
Quick, quick, fear nothing; I'll be at thy Elbow,
It makes us, or it marris us, think on that,
And fix most firm thy Resolution;

Rod. Be near at hand, I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand: Behold, and take thy stand.

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed,
And yet he hath given me satisfying Reasons:
'Tis but a man gone. Forth my Sword: he dies.

Iago. I have rub'd this young Quat almost to the sense,
And he growes angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio,
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain. Live Rodorigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of Gold, and Jewels, that I bob'd from him,
As gifts to Desdemona.

It must not be: if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
That makes me ugly: and besides, the Moor
May unfold me to him: there stand I in much perill:
No, he must die. But so, I hear him coming.

Enter Cassio.

Rod. I know his gate, 'tis he: Villain thou dyest.

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed,
But that my Coat is better then thou know'st:
I will make proof of thine.

Rod. Oh, I am slain.

Cas. I am maim'd for ever:
Help ho: Murther, murthrr.

Enter Othello.

Othe. The voice of Cassio, Iago keeps his word.

Rod. O Villain that I am.

Oth. It is even so.

Cas. Oh help ho: Light, a Surgeon.

Othe. 'Tis he: O brave Iago, honest, and just,
That hast such Noble sense of thy friends wrong,
Thou teachest me. Minion, your dear lies dead,
And your unblest Fate hinges: Strumpet I come:
For off my heart, those Charms thine Eyes, are blotted.
Thy Bed-left-stain'd, shall with Lusts bloud be spotted.

Exit Othello.

Enter Lodovico, and Gratiano.

Cas. What ho? no Watch? no passage?
Murther, Murther.

Gra. 'Tis some mischance, the voice is very direfull.

Cas. Oh help.

Lodo. Hark.

Rod. Oh wretched Villain.

Lod. Two or three groan. 'Tis heavy night;
These may be counterfeits: Let's think't unsafe
To come into the cry, without more help.

Rod. No body come: then shall I bleed to death.

Enter Iago.

Lod. Hark.

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with Light, and Weapons.

Iago. Who's there?
Whose noise is this that cryes out murther?

Lodo. We do not know.

Iago. Do not you hear a cry?

Cas. Here, here: for heaven sake help me.

Iago. What's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's Ancient as I take it.

Lodo. The same indeed, a very valiant Fellow.

Iago. What are you here, that cry so grievously?

Cas. Iago? Oh I am spoyl'd, undone by Villains:
Give me some help.

Iago. O me, Lieutenant?

What Villains have done this?

Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout,

And

And cannot make away.

Iago. Oh trecherous Villains:

What are you there? Come in, and give some help.

Rod. O help me there:

Cassio. That's one of them.

Iago. Oh murd'rous Slave! O Villain;

Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhumane Dog!

Iago. Kill men i'th' dark?

Where be these bloody Thieves?

How silent is this Town? Ho, murder murder.

What may you be? Are you of good or evil?

Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico.

Lod. He, Sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy: here's Cassio hurt by Villains.

Gra. Cassio.

Iago. How is't, brother?

Cas. My Leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry heaven forbid:

Light Gentlemen, I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter here? Who is't that cry'd?

Iago. Who is't that cry'd?

Bian. Oh my dear Cassio,

My sweet Cassio: Oh Cassio, Cassio, Cassio.

Iago. O notable Strumpet. Cassio, may you suspect Who they should be, that have thus mangled you?

Cas. No.

Gra. I am sorry to find you thus;

I have been to seek you.

Iago. Lend me a Garter. So:-----Oh for a Chair To bear him easily hence.

Bian. Alas he faints. Oh Cassio, Cassio, Cassio.

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this Trash To be a party in this injury.

Patience a while, good Cassio. Come, come;

Lend me a Light: know we this face, or no?

Alas my friend, and my dear Countryman

Roderigo? No: Yes sure: Yea, 'tis Roderigo.

Gra. What, of Venice?

Iago. Even he, Sir: did you know him?

Gra. Know him? I.

Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry your gentle pardon: These bloody accidents must excuse my Manners, That so neglected you.

Gra. I am glad to see you.

Iago. How do you, Cassio? Oh a Chair, a Chair.

Gra. Roderigo?

Iago. He, he, 'tis he:

Oh that's well said, the Chair.

Some good man bear him carefully from hence, I'll fetch the Generals Surgeon. For you, Mistress, Save you your labour. He that lies slain here (Cassio) Was my dear friend. What malice was between you?

Cas. None in the world: nor do I know the man?

Iago. What look you pale? Oh bear him out oth' Airc. Stay you good Gentlemen. Look you pale Mistress?

Do you perceive the gastness of her eye?

Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon.

Behold her well: I pray you look upon her:

Do you see, Gentlemen? Nay, guiltiness will speak Though tongues were out of use.

Amil. Alas, what is the matter?

What is the matter, husband.

Iago. Cassio hath here bin set on in the dark By Roderigo, and Fellows that are scap'd:

He's almost slain, and Roderigo quite dead.

Amil. Alas good Gentleman: alas good Cassio.

Iago. This is the fruits of whoring. Prithce Amilia, Go know of Cassio where he sapt to night.

What do you shake at that?

Bian. He sapt at my house, but I therefore shake not.

Iago. O did he so? I charge you go with me.

Amil. Oh fie upon thee, Strumpet.

Bian. I am no Strumpet, but of life as honest, As you that thus abuse me.

Amil. As I? Fie upon thee.

Iago. Kind Gentlemen:

Let's go see poor Cassio drest.

Come Mistress, you must tell's another Tale.

Amilia, run you to the Cittadell,

And tell my Lord and Lady, what hath hap'd:

Will you go on afore? This is the night

That either makes me, or foredoes me quite. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, and Desdemona in her bed.

Oth. It is the Cause, it is the Cause (my soul)

Let me not name it to you, you chaste Starrs,

It is the Cause. Yet I'll not shed her blood,

Nor fear that whiter skin of hers then Snow,

And smooth as Monumental Alabaster:

Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men:

Put out the Light, and then put out the Light:

It I quench thee, thou flaming Minister,

I can again thy former light restore,

Should I repent me. But once put out thy light,

Thou cunning'st Pattern of excelling Nature,

I know not where is that Promethean heat

That can thy Light re-Lume.

When I have pluck'd thy Rose,

I cannot give it vital growth again,

It needs must wither. I'll smell thee on the tree:

Oh Balmy breath, that do'st almost persuade

Justice to break her sword. One more, one more;

Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,

And love thee after. One more, and that's the last

So sweet, was ne're so fatal. I must weep,

But they are cruel tears: this forrows heavenly,

It strikes, where it doth love. She wakes:

Des. Who's there? Othello?

Othe. I, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my Lord?

Othe. Have you pray'd to night, Desdemona?

Des. I, my Lord.

Othe. If you bethink your self of any Crime Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven, and Grace, Solicit for it straight.

Des. Alack, my Lord,

What may you mean by that?

Othe. Well, do it, and be brief, I will walk by:

I would not kill thy unprepared spirit,

No, (Heavens fore-fend) I would not kill thy soul.

Des. Talk you of killing?

Othe. I, I do.

Des. Then heaven have mercy on me.

Z z z z

Othe.

Oth. Amen, with all my heart.

Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.

Oth. Humh.

Des. And yet I fear you : for you're fatal then.
When your eyes rowl so.

Why I should fear I know not,

Since guiltineffe I know not : But yet I feel I fear,

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. They are love I bear to you.

Oth. I, and for that thou dy'lt.

Des. That death's unnatural, that kills for loving.

Alas, why gnaw you so your nether-lip?

Some bloody passion shakes your very frame :

These are portents : but yet I hope, I hope,

They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still.

Des. I will so : What's the matter?

Oth. That Handkerchief

Which I so lov'd, and gave thee, thou gav'st Cassio.

Des. No by my life, and soul : send for the man,
And ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed, take heed of Perjury,
Thou art on thy death-bed.

Des. I, but not yet to die.

Oth. Presently.

Therefore confesse thee freely of thy sin :

For to deny each Article with Oath,

Cannot remove, nor choak the strong Conception

That I do groan withall. Thou art to die.

Des. Oh heaven have mercy on me.

Oth. I say, Amen.

Des. And have you mercy too, I never did

Offend you in my life : never lov'd Cassio,

But with such general warranty of heaven,

As I might love. I never gave him Token.

Oth. By heaven I saw my Handkerchief in's hand.

O perjur'd woman, thou do'st stone my heart,

And makest me call, what I intend to do

A Murder, which I thought a Sacrifice.

I saw the Handkerchief.

Des. He found it then :

I never gave it him : Send for him hither :

Let him confesse a truth.

Oth. He hath confest :

Des. What, my Lord?

Oth. That he hath us'd thee.

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. I.

Des. He will not say so.

Oth. No : his mouth is stopp'd :

Honest Iago hath rane order for't.

Des. Oh, my fear interprets. What is he dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great Revenge
Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas, he is betray'd, and I undone.

Oth. Our Strumpet : weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O banish me, my Lord, but kill me not.

Oth. Down Strumpet.

Des. Kill me to morrow, let me live to night.

Oth. Nay, if you strive.

Des. But half an hour.

Oth. Being done, there is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late.

Smother's her.

Amilia at the door.

Amil. My Lord, my Lord? What hoa?

My Lord, my Lord.

Oth. What noise is this? not dead? not yet quite dead

I that am cruel, am yet mercifull,

I would not have thee linger in thy pain?

So, so.

Amil. within. What hoa? my Lord, my Lord?

Oth. Who's there?

Amil. Oh, my good Lord, I would speak a word with you.

Oth. Yes: 'tis Amilia : by and by. She's dead.

'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death :

The noise was high. Hah, no more mooving?

Still as the Grave. Shall she come in? wer't good?

I think she stirs again, No, what's best to do?

If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife :

My wife, my wife, what wife? I have no wife.

Oh insupportable! O heavy hour!

Me thinks, it should be now a huge Eclipse

Of Sun and Moon : and that th'affrighted Globe

Did yawn at Alteration.

Amil. I do beseech you

That I may speak with you. Oh, good my Lord.

Oth. I had forgot thee : oh come in Amilia.

Soft, by and by, let me the Curtains draw,

Where art thou? What's the matter with thee now?

Enter Amilia.

Amil. Oh, my good Lord, yonders foule Murthers done.

Oth. What? now?

Amil. But now, my Lord,

Oth. It is the very error of the Moon,

She comes more nearer Earth then she was wont,

And makes men mad.

Amil. Cassio, my Lord, hath kill'd

A young Venetian, call'd Rodorigo.

Oth. Rodorigo kill'd? and Cassio kill'd?

Amil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd? Then Murthers out of tune,

And sweet Revenge grows harsh.

Des. O falsely, falsely murder'd.

Amil. Alas! what cry is that?

Oth. That? what?

Amil. Out, and alas, that was my Ladies voice,

Help, help hoa, help, Oh Lady speak again,

Sweet Desdemona, oh sweet Mistris, speak.

Des. A guiltlesse death I die.

Amil. Oh who hath done this deed?

Des. No body : I my self, farewell :

Commend me to my kind Lord : oh farewell.

Oth. Why, how should she be murd'red?

Amil. Alas : who knows?

Oth. You hear her say her self, it was not I.

Amil. She said so : I must needs report the truth.

Oth. She's like a Lyar gone to burning hell,

'Twas I that kill'd her.

Amil. Oh the more Angel she, and you the blacker
Devil.

Oth. She turn'd to folly : and she was a whore.

Amil. Thou do'st bely her, and thou art a devil.

Oth. She was false as water.

Amil. Thou art rash as fire, to say

That she was false. Oh she was heavenly true.

Oth. Cassio did top her : ask thy husband else.

O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell :

But that I did proceed upon just grounds

To this extremity. Thy husband knew it all.

Amil.

Amil. My husband ?

Oth. Thy husband.

Amil. That she was false to Wedlock ;

Oth. I, with Cassio : had she bin true,
If heaven would make me such another world,
Of one entire and perfect Chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it.

Amil. My husband ?

Oth. I, 'twas he that told me on her first,
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Amil. My husband ?

Oth. What needs this iterance, woman ?
I say thy husband.

Amil. Oh Mistress,
Villany hath made mocks with love :
My husband say she was false ?

Oth. He, woman ;
I say thy husband : do'st understand the word ?
My friend, thy husband ; honest, honest Iago.

Amil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul
Rot half a grain a day : he lies to'th' heart,
She was too fond of her most filthy Bargain.

Oth. Hah ?

Amil. Do thy worst :
This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,
Then thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace, you were best.

Amil. Thou hast not halfe that power to do me harme
As I have to be hurt. Oh gull, oh dolt,
As ignorant as dirt : thou hast done a deed
(I care not for thy sword) I'll make thee known,
Though I lost twenty lives, Help, help, ho, help :
The Moor hath kill'd my Mistress. Murther, murther.

Enter Montano, Gratiano, and Iago.

Mon. What is the matter ? How now General ?

Amil. Oh, are you come, Iago : you have done well,
That men must lay their Murthers on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter ?

Amil. Disprove this Villain, if thou be'st a man,
He sayes, thou told'st him that his wife was false :
I know thou did'st not : thou'rt not such a Villain.
Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought,
And told no more
Then what he found himself was apt, and true.

Amil. But did you ever tell him,
She was false ?

Iago. I did.

Amil. You told a Lie, an odious damned Lie :
Upon my soul, a Lye ; a wicked Lie.
She false with Cassio ?

Did you say with Cassio ?

Iago. With Cassio, Mistress,
Go to, charme your tongue.

Amil. I will not charme my tongue ;
I am bound to speak,
My Mistress here lies murdered in her bed.

All. Oh heavens, forefend.

Amil. And your reports have set the Murther on.

Oth. Nay stare not Masters,
It is true indeed.

Gra. 'Tis a strange Truth.

Mont. O monstrous Act.

Amil. Villany, villany, villany :

I think upon't, I think : I smel't : O Villany :
I thought so then : I'll kill my self for grief,
O villany ! villany ?

Iago. What, are you mad ?

I charge you get you home.

Amil. Good Gentlemen, let me have leave to speak :
'Tis proper I obey him ; but not now :
Perchance Iago, I will ne're go home.

Oth. Oh, oh, oh.

Amil. Nay, lay thee down and roar :
For thou hast kil'd the sweetest innocent,
That e're did lift up eye.

Oth. Oh she was foul !

I scarce did know you Uncle, there lies your Niece,
Whose breath (indeed) these hands have newly stopp'd :
I know this act shews horrible and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona :

I am glad thy father's dead,
Thy Match was mortal to him ; and pure grief
Shore his old thred in twain. Did he live now,
This sight would make him do a desperate turn :
Yea, curse his better Angel from his side,
And fall to Reprobance.

Oth. 'Tis pittifull ; but yet Iago knows,
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed. Cassio confest it,
And she did gratifie his amorous works
With that Recognizance and pledg of Love
Which I first gave her : I saw it in his hand :
It was a Handkerchief, an Antick Token
My father gave my mother.

Amil. Oh heaven ! oh heavenly Powers !

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Amil. 'Twill out. 'Twill out, I peace ;
No, I will speak as liberal as the North,
Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wife and get you home.

Amil. I will not.

Gra. Fie, your sword upon a woman.

Amil. Oh thou dull Moor,
That Handkerchief thou speak'st of
I found by fortune, and did give my husband,
For often, with a sollemn earnestness,
(More then indeed belong'd to such a Trifle)
He begg'd of me, to steal't.

Iago. Villanous Whore.

Amil. She give it Cassio ? alas I found it,
And I did giv't my husband.

Iago. Filth thou lie'st.

Amil. By heaven I do not, I do not Gentlemen :
Oh murd'rous Coxcomb, what should such a fool
Do with so good a wife ?

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven,
But what serves for the Thunder ?
Precious Villain.

Gra. The woman falls :
Sure he hath kill'd his Wife.

Amil. I, I ; oh lay me by my Mistress side.

Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.

Mont. 'Tis a notorious Villain : take you this weapon
Which I have recover'd from the Moor :
Come guard the door without, let him not passe,
But kill him rather : I'll after that same villain,
For 'tis a damned Slave.

Exit.
Oth.

Oth. I am not valiant neither :
But every Puny whipster gets my sword.
But why should honour out-live honesty ?
Let it go all.

Amil. What did thy Song boad, Lady ?
Hark canst thou hear me ? I will play the Swan,
And die in Musick : Willow, willow, willow.
Moor, she was chaste : she lov'd thee, cruel Moor :
So come my soul to blisse, as I speak true :
So speaking as I think, alas, I die.

Oth. I have another weapon in this Chamber,
It was a sword of Spain, the Ice brooks temper :
Oh here it is : Uncle I must come forth.

Gra. If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear ;
Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak with me,
Or naked as I am I will assault thee.

Gra. What is the matter ?

Oth. Behold, I have a weapon :
A better never did it self sustain
Upon a Souldiers Thigh, I have seen the day,
That with this little Aime, and this good sword,
I have made my way through more impediments
Then twenty times you stop. But (oh vain boast)
Who can controll his fate ? 'tis not so now.
Be not affraid, though you do see me weapon'd :
Here is my journey's end, here is my But,
And very Sea-mark of my utmost Sail.
Do you go back dismay'd ? 'Tis a lost fear,
Man but a Rush against Othello's brest,
And he retires. Where should Othello go ?
Now : how do'st thou look now ? oh ill-Starr'd wench,
Pale as thy Smock : when we shall meet at compt,
This look of thine will hurle my soul from Heaven,
And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my Girl ?
Even like thy Chastity. O cursed, cursed Slave !
Whip me, ye Devils,
From the possession of this heavenly sight :
Blow me about in winds, and roast me in Sulphure,
Wash me in steep-down gulfs of Liquid Fire.
Oh Desdemona ! dead Desdemona : dead, dead, Oh, oh !

Enter Lodovico, Cassio, Montano, and Iago with Officers.

Lod. Where is this rash, and most unfortunate man ?

Oth. That's he that was Othello : here I am.

Lod. Where is that Viper ?

Bring the Villain forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet ; but that's a fable,
If that thou beest a devil, I cannot kill thee.

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir, but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither, I'd have thee live :
For in my sense, 'tis happinesse to die.

Lod. Oh thou, Othello, that was once so good,
Faln in the practise of a cursed Slave,
What shall be said to thee.

Oth. Why any thing :
An honorable Murderer, if you will :
For nought I did in hate, but all in Honor.

Lod. This wretch hath part confest his Villany :
Did you and he consent in Cassio's death.

Oth. I.

Cas. Dear General, I never gave you cause,

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon :
Will you, I pray, demand that demy-Devil,

Why he hath thus enlar'd my soul and body.

Iag. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know:
From this time forth, I never will speak word.

Lod. What ? not to pray ?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou do'st best.

Lod. Sir,

You shall understand what hath befalln,
(Which as I think, you know not) here is a Letter
Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo,
And here another, the one of them imports
The death of Cassio, to be undertook
By Roderigo.

Oth. O Villain !

Cassio. most heathenish, and most grosse.

Lod. Now, here's another discontented paper
Found in his pocket too : and this it seems Roderigo meant t'have sent this damned villain :
But that (belike) Iago in the interim
Came in, and satish'd him.

Oth. Oh thou pernicious Cairisse ;
How came you (Cassio) by that Handkerchief
That was my wives ?

Cas. I found it in my Chamber :
And he himself confest it but even now,
That there he dropt it for a special purpose,
Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool, fool, fool !

Cas. There is besides, in Roderigo's Letter,
How he upbraids Iago, that he made him
Brave in upon the Watch : whereon it came
That I was cast : and even but now he spake
(After long seeming dead) Iago hurt him,
Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room, and go with us:
Your power, and your command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this Slave,
If there be any cunning Cruelty,
That can torment him much, and hold him long,
It shall be his. You shall close Prisoner rest,
Till that the Nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian State. Come, bring away.

Oth. Soft you ; a word or two before you go :
I have done the State some service, and they know't :
No more of that. I pray you in your Letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me, as I am. Nothing extenuate,
Nor set down ought in malice.

Then must you speak,
Of one that lov'd not wisely, but too well :
Of one, not easily Jealous, but being wrought,
Perplexed in the extream : Of one, whose hand
(Like the base Indian) threw a Pearle away
Richer then all his Tribe : Of one, whose subdu'd Eyes,
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees.
Their Medicinable gumme. Set you down this :
And say besides, that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant, and a Turbond-Turk
Beat a Venetian, and traduc'd the State,
I took by th' throat the circumcised Dog,
And smote him, thus.

Lod. Oh bloody period.

Gra. All that is spoke is marr'd.

Oth. I kiss thee, ere I kill'd thee : No way but this,
Killing my self, to die upon a kiss.

Dies.
Cassio.

Caf. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon :
For he was great of heart.

Lod. Oh Spartan Dog :
More fell then Anguish, Hunger, or the Sea :
Look on the Tragick Loading of this bed :
This is thy work :
The Object poysons sight,

Let it be hid. Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the Fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you. To you, Lord Governor,
Remains the Censure of this hellish villain :
The time, the place, the torture, oh inforce it.
My self will straight aboard, and to the State,
This heavy Act, with heavy heart relate.

Exeunt.

THE TRAGEDY OF ANTHONY and CLEOPATRA.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Demetrius, and Philo.

Philo.

Nay, but this dotage of our General
Ore-flows the measure: those his goodly eyes
That o're the Files and Musters of the War,
Have glow'd like plated Mars,
Now bend, now turn
The Office and Devotion of their view
Upon a Tawny Front. His Captains heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The Buckles on his breast reneages all temper,
And is become the Bellows and the Fan
To cool a Gypsies Lutt..

*Enter Anthony, and Cleopatra, her Ladies;
the Train, with Eunuchs fanning her.*

Look where they come :
Take but good note, and you shall see him
The tripple Pillar of the world transform'd
Into a Strumpets Fool. Behold and see.

Cleo. If it be Love indeed, tell me how much ?

Ant. There's beggery in the love that can be reckon'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be below'd.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. News (my good Lord) from Rome.

Ant. Rate me, the summe.

Cleo. Nay hear them Anthony.

Fulvia perchance is angry : or who knows,
If the scarce-bearded Cesar have not sent
His powerfull Mandate to you. Do this, or this ;
Take in that Kingdome, and infranchise that :
Perform't, or else we damne thee.

Ant. How, my Love ?

Cleo. Perchance ? Nay, and most like ;
You must not stay here longer, your dismissal
Is come from Cesar, therefore hear it Anthony.
Where's Fulvia's Proesse ? (Cesars I would say) both ?
Call in the Messengers : as I am Egypt's Queen,
Thou blushest Anthony, and that bloud of thine
Is Cesars homager : else so thy cheeks payes shame,
When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds. The Messengers.

Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt, and the wide Arch
Of the raign'd Empire fall : Here is my space,
Kingdomes are clay : Our duncy earth alike

Feeds beast as Man ; the Noblenesse of life
Is to do thus: when such a mutual pair,
And such a twain can do't, in which I bind,
On pain of punishment, the world to weet
We stand up Peerlesse.

Cleo. Excellent falshood :

Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her ?

I'll seem the fool I am not. Anthony will be himself,

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.

Now for the love of love, and her soft hours,
Let's not confound the time with Conference harsh ;
There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleasure now. What sport to night ?

Cleo. Hear the Ambassadors.

Ant. Fie wrangling Queen :

Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep : whose every passion fully strives
To make it self (in Thee) fair, and admir'd.
No Messenger but thine, and all alone, to night
We'll wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come my Queen,
Last night you did desire it. Speak not to us.

Exeunt with the Train.

Dem. Is Cesar with Anthony priz'd so slight ?

Philo. Sir, sometimes when he is not Anthony,
He comes too short of that great Property
Which still should go with Anthony.

Dem. I am full sorry, that he approves the common Liar, who thus speaks of him at Rome : but I will hope of better deeds to morrow. Rest you happy. Exeunt.

*Enter Enobarbus, Lamprinus, a Soothsayer, Rannius, Lucilius, Charmian, Iras, Mardian
the Eunuch, and Alexas,*

Char. L. Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the Soothsayer that you prais'd to th'Queen ? Oh that I knew this Husband, which you say, must change his horns with Garlands.

Alex. Soothsayer.

Sooth. Your will ?

Char. Is this the Man ? Is't you, sir, that know things ?

Sooth. In Natures infinite book of Secrecy, a little I can read.

Alex. Shew him your hand.

Enob. Bring in the Banquet quickly : Wine enough,
Cleo.

Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good Fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer then you are.

Char. He means in flesh.

Irás. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid.

Alex. Vex not his patience, be attentive.

Char. Hush.

Sooth. You shall be more loving, then beloved.

Char. I had rather heat my Liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now some excellent Fortune. Let me be married to three Kings in a forenoon, and Widow them all: Let me have a Child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do Homage. Finde me to marry me with Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my Mistris.

Sooth. You shall out-live the Lady whom you serve.

Char. Oh excellent, I love long life better then Figs.

Sooth. You have seen and proved a fairer former fortune, then that which is to approach.

Char. Then belike my Children shall have no names: Prithee how many Boyes and Wenches must I have.

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb, and fore-tell every wish, a Million.

Char. Out Fool, I forgive thee for a Witch.

Alex. You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay come, tell Irás hers.

Alex. We'll know all our Fortunes.

Enob. Mine, and most of our Fortunes to night, shall be drunk to bed.

Irás. There's a Palm presages Chastity, if nothing else.

Char. E'ne as the o're-flowing Nylus presageth Famine.

Irás. Go you wild Bedfellow, you cannot Soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oyle Palme be not a fruitfull Prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear. Prithee tell her but a workyday Fortune.

Sooth. Your Fortunes are alike.

Irás. But how, but how, give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Irás. Am I not an inch of Fortune better then she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of Fortune better then I: where would you choose it.

Irás. Not in my husbands Nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend.

Alexas. Come, his Fortune, his Fortune. Oh let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee, and let her die too, and give him a worse, and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a Cuckold. Good Isis, hear me this Prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight: good Isis, I beseech thee.

Char. Amen, dear Goddesse, hear that prayer of the people. For, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wiv'd, so it is a deadly sorrow, to behold a foul Knave uncuckold'd: therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and Fortune him accordingly.

Char. Amen.

Alex. Loe now, if it lay in their hands to make me a Cuckold, they would make themselves Whores, but they'd do't.

Enter Cleopatra.

Eno. Hush, Here comes Anthony,

Char. Not he, the Queen.

Cleo. Saw you my Lord?

Eno. No Lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No Madam.

Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth, but on the sudden A Roman thought hath struck him.

Enobarbus?

Enob. Madam.

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither: where's Alexas?

Alex. Here at your service.

My Lord approaches.

Enter Anthony with a Messenger.

Cleo. We will not look upon him: Go with us.

Exeunt.

Mess. Fulvia thy Wife, First came into the Field.

Ant. Against my Brother Lucius.

Mess. I, but soon that War had end, And the times state

Made friends of them, joyn'ting their force 'gainst Caesar. Whose better issue in the war of Italy, Upon the first encounter drave them.

Ant. Well, what worst.

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the Teller.

Ant. When it concerns the Fool or Coward: On. Things that are past, are done, with me. 'Tis thus, Who tells me true, though in his Tale lye death, I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labiennus (this is stiffe-news)

Hath with his Parthian Force

Extended Asia: from Euphrates his conquering

Banner shook: from Syria to Lydia,

And to Ionia, whilst-----

Ant. Anthony thou would'st say.

Mess. Oh my Lord.

Ant. Speak to me home, Mince not the general tongue, name Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome:

Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase, and taunt thy faults With such full License, as both Truth and Malice Have power to utter. Oh then we bring forth weeds, When our quick winds lye still, and our ills told us Is as our ear-ring: fare thee well a while.

Mess. At your Noble pleasure. Exit Messenger.

Enter another Messenger.

Ant. From Scicion how the news? speak there.

1 Mess. The man from Scicion, Is there such an one?

2 Mess. He staves upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear: These strong Egyptian Fetters I must break, Or loose my self in dotage.

Enter another Messenger with a Letter.

What are you?

3 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where died she.

Mess. In Scicion, her length of sicknesse, With what else more serious,

Importe to thee to know, this bears,

Ant. Forbear me

There's a great spirit gone, thus did I desire it: What our contempts do often hurle from us,

We wish it ours again, the present pleasure,
By revolution lowring, does become
The opposite of it self: she's good being gon,
The hand could pluck her back, that shov'd her on.
I must from this Queen break off,
Ten thousand harmes, more then the ill I know
My idlenesse doth hatch

Enter Enobarbus.

How now Enobarbus.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?

Ant. I must with hast from hence.

Eno. Why then we kill all our Women. We see how mortall an unkindnesse is to them, if they suffer our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone,

Eno. Under a compelling an occasion, let women die.
It were pittie to cast them away for nothing, though between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly: I have seen her, die twenty times upon far poorer moment: I do think there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying,

Ant. She is cunning past mans thought.

Eno. Alack, sir, no, her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters, sighes and tears: they are greater stormes and Tempells then Almanacks can report. This cannot be cunning in her: if it be, she makes a showre of Rain as well as Jove.

Ant. Would I had never seen her.

Eno. Oh sir, you had then left unseen a wonderfull piece of work, which not to have bin blest withall, would have discredited your Travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia?

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why sir, give the gods a thankfull Sacrifice:
when it pleaseth their Deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shews to man the Tailors of the earth: comforting therein, that when old Robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more Women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crown'd with Consolation, your old Smock brings forth a new Petticoat, and indeed the tears live in an Onion, that should wate this sorrow.

Ant. The businesse she hath broached in the State,
Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the businesse you have broach'd here cannot be without you, especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abroad.

Ant. No more like Answers:

Let our Officers

Have notice what we propose. I shall break
The cause of our Expedience to the Queen,
And get her love to part. For not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches
Do strongly speak to us: but the letters too
Of many our contriving friends in Rome,
Petition us at home. Sextus Pompeius
Hath given thee dare to Cesar, and commands
The Empire of the Sea. Our slippery people
Whose love is never link'd to the deserter,

I ill his deserts are past, begin to throw
Pompey the great, and all his dignities
Upon his Son, who high in Name and Power,
Higher then both in bloud and life, stands up
For the main Souldier. Whose quality going on,
The sides oth' world may danger. Much is breeding,
Which like the Coursers hare, hath yet but life,
And not a Serpents poison. Say our pleasure,
To such whose place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.

Eno. I shall do't.

Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Alexas, and Iras.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is,

Who's with him, what he do's:

I did not send you. If you find him sad,

Say I am dancing: if in mirth, report

That I am sudden sick. Quickly, and return.

Char. Madam, me thinks if you did love him dearly
You do not hold the method, to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?

Ch. In each thing give him way, crosse him in noth ing

Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool: the way to lose him.

Char. Tempt him not so too far. I wish forbear,
In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter Anthony.

But here comes Anthony.

Cleo. I am sick, and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose.

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall,
It cannot be thus long, the sides of Nature
Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest Queen.

Cleo. Pray you stand farther from me,

Ant. What's the matter?

Cleo. I know by that same eye there's some good news
What saies the married woman you may go?
Would she had never given you leave to come,
Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here,
I have no power upon you: Hers you are.

Ant. The gods best know.

Cleo. Oh never was there Queen
So mightily betrayed: yet at the first
I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra.

Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine, and true
(Though you swearing shake the Throned gods)
Who have bin false to Fulvia?

Riotous madnesse,

To be entangled with those mouth-made vows,
Which break themselves in swearing.

Ant. Most sweet Queen.

Cleo. Nay pray you seek no colour for your going,
But bid farewell, and go:
When you sued staying,
Then was the time for words: No going then,
Eternity was in our Lips, and Eyes.
Blisse in our brows bent: none our parts so poor,
But was a race of heaven. They are so still,
Or thou the greatest Souldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greater Lyar.

Ant. How now, Lady?

Cleo.

Cleo. I would I had thy inches, thou should'st know
There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me Queen:

The strong necessity of time, commands
Our Services a while: but my full heart
Remains in use with you. Our Italy,
Shines o're with civill Swords; Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the Port of Rome,
Equality of two Domestick powers,
Breed scrupulous faction: the hated grown to strength
Are newly grown to Love: the condemn'd Pompey,
Rich in his Father's honour, creeps apace
Into the hearts of such, as have not thrived
Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten,
And quietnesse grown sick of rest, would purge
By any desperate change: My more particular,
And that which most with you should save my going
Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom
It does from childishnesse. Can Fulvia die?

Ant. She's dead, my Queen,
Look here, and at thy Sovereign leisure read
The Garboyls she awak'd: at the last, best,
See when, and where she died.

Cleo. O most false love!
Where be the sacred Viols thou should'st fill
With sorrowfull water? now I see, I see,
In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall be.

Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know
The purposes I bear: which are, or cease,
As you shall give th'advice. By the fire
That quickens Nilus slime, I go from hence
Thy Souldier, Servant, making Peace or War,
As thou affect'st it.

Cleo. Cut my Lace, Charmain come,
But let it be, I am quickly ill, and well,
So Anthony loves.

Ant. My precious Queen forbear,
And give true evidence to his Love, which stands
An honorable Triall.

Cleo. So Fulvia told me.
I prithee turn aside, and weep for her,
Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt. Good now, play one Scene
Of excellent dissembling, and let it look
Like perfect honour.

Ant. You'll heat my blood no more?

Cleo. You can do better yet: but this is meetly.

Ant. Now by my Sword.

Cleo. And Target. Still he mends.
But this is not the best. Look prithee Charman,
How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe.

Ant. I'll leave you Lady.

Cleo. Courteous Lord, one word:
Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have lov'd, but there's not it:
That you know well, something it is I would:
Oh, my oblivion is a very Anthony.
And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your Royalty
Holds idlenesse your subject, I should take you
For idlenesse it self.

Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour,
To bear such idlenesse so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, Sir, forgive me,

Since my becoming kill me, when they do not
Eye well to you. Your honour calls you hence.
Therefore be deaf to my unpitied Folly,
And all the gods go with you. Upon your Sword
Sit Lawrell'd victory, and smooth successe
Be strew'd before your feet.

Ant. Let us go.

Come: Our separation so abides and flies,
That thou residing here, goest yet with me;
And I hence fleeing, here remain with thee.
Away.

Exeunt

Enter Octavius reading a Letter, Lepidus, and their Train.

Cas. You may see Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It is not Casars Natural vice, to hate
One great Competitor. From Alexandria
This is the news: he fishes, drinks, and wastes
The Lamps of night in revells: Is not more manlike
Then Cleopatra: nor the Queen of Ptolemy
More Womanly then he. Hardly gave audience
Or did vouchsafe to think he had Partners. You Shall find there a man, who is the abstract of all faults;
That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think
There are, evils enow to darken all his goodness,
His faults in him, seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blacknesse; Hereditary,
Rather then purchas'd: what he cannot change,
Then what he chooses.

Cas. You are too indulgent. Let's grant it is Amisse to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy,
To give a Kingdom for a Mirth, to sit
And keep the turn of Tipling with a Slave,
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the Buffet
With knaves that smell of sweat: Say this becomes him
(As his composure must be rare indeed, Whom these things cannot blemish) yet must Anthony
No way excuse his foys, when we do bear
So great waight in his Lightnesse. If he fill'd
His vacancy with his Voluptuousnesse,
Full surfets, and the drinnesse of his bones,
Call on him for't. But to confound such time,
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud
As his own State, and ours, 'tis to be chid:
As we rate Boyes, who being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebell to judgement.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Here's more news.

Mes. Thy biddings have been done, and every hour
Most Noble Cesar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at Sea,
And it appears, he is belov'd of those
That only have fear'd Cesar: to the Ports
The discontents repair, and mens reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Cas. I should have known no lesse,
It hath bin taught us from the primal state,
That he which is, was wish'd, untill he were:
And the ebb'd man,
Ne're lov'd, till ne're worth love,
Comes fear'd, by being lack'd. This common body
Like to a Vagabond Flag upon the stream,
Goes too, and back, lacking the varying tyde

To rot it self with motion.

Mef. Caesar I bring thee word,
Menacrates and Menas, famous Pyrates
Makes the Sea serve them, which they ear and wound
With knees of every kind. Many hot inrodes
They make in Italy, the borders Maritime
Lack blood to think on't, and flesh youth to revolt,
No Vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen: for Pompey's name strikes more
Then could his War resisted.

Caesar. Anthony.

Leave thy lascivious Vassails. When thou once
Wert beaten from Medena, where thou flew'st
Hirfius, and Pansa Consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow, whom thou faught'st against,
(Though daintily brought up) with patience more
Than Savages could suffer. Thou didst drink
The stale of horses, and the gilded Puddle
Which Beasts would cough at. Thy pallat then did dain
The roughest Berry, on the rudest Hedge.
Yea, like the Stag, when Snow the Pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thou browsed'st. On the Alps,
It is reported thou did'st eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on: and all this
(It wounds thine honor that I speak it now)
Was born so like a Souldier, that thy cheek
So much as I lank'd not.

Lep. 'Tis pitty of him.

Ces. Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome, 'tis time we twain
Did shew our selves ith' Field, and to that end Assemble we immediately council, Pompey
Thrives in our Idleness.

Lep. To morrow Caesar,
I shall be furnish'd to informe you rightly
Both what by Sea and Land I can be able
To front this present time.

Ces. Till which encounter, it is my business too. Fare- (well)

Lep. Farewell my Lord, what you shall know mean (time)
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you sir,
To let me be partaker.

Ces. Doubt not sir, I knew it for my bond. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmain, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. Charmain.

Char. Madam.

Cleo. Ha, ha, give me to drink Mandragoras.

Char. Why Madam?

Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time:
My Anthony is away.

Char. You think of him too much.

Cleo. O 'tis treason.

Char. Madam, I trust not so.

Cleo. Thou, Eunuch Mardian?

Mar. What's your highness pleasure?

Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing. I take no pleasure
In ought an Eunuch has: 'Tis well for thee,
That being unfeminari'd, thy freer thoughts
May not flye forth of Egypt, Hast thou Affections?

Mar. Yes gracious Madam.

Cleo. Indeed?

Mar. Not indeed Madam, for I can do nothing
But what indeed is honest to be done:
Yet have I fierce Affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. Oh Charmain;

Where think'st thou he is now? Stands, or sits he?

Or does he walk? Or is he on his horse?
Oh happy horse to bear the weight of Anthony!
Do bravely horse, for worst thou whom thou moov'st,
The demy Atlas of this Earth, the Arme
And Burgonet of man. He's speaking now.
Or murmuring, wheres my Serpent of old Nile,
(For so he call's me: Now I feed my self
With most delicious poyson. Think on me
That am with Phebus amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time. Broad-fronted Caesar,
When thou wast here above the ground, I was
A morsel of a Monark; and great Pompey
Would stand and make his eyes grow in my brow.
There would he anchor his aspect, and die
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexas from Caesar.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail.

Cleo. How much art thou like Mark Anthony?
Yet coming from him, that great Med'cine hath
With his Tinct gilded thee.

How goes it with my brave Mark Anthony?

Alex. Last thing he did (dear Queen)
He kist the last of many doubled kisses,
This Orient Pearl. His speech sticks in my heart.

Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.

Alex. Good friend, quoth he:
Say the firm Roman to great Egypt sends
This treasure of an Oyster: at whose foot
To mend the petty present, I will piece
Her opulent Throne, with Kingdomes. All the East, (Say thou) shall call her Mistress. So he nodded,
And soberly did mount an Arme-gaunt Steed,
Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have spoke,
Was beastly dumb by him.

Cleo. What was he sad or merry?

Alex. Like to the time oth' year, between the extremes
Of hot and cold, he was not sad nor merry.

Cleo. Oh well divided disposition: Note him:
Note him good Charmain, 'tis the man; but note him.
He was not sad, for he would shine on those
That make their looks by his. He was not merry,
Which seem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy, but between both.
Oh heavenly mingle? Be'st thou sad, or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes,
So do's it no man else. Mer'st thou my Posts?

Alex. I madam, twenty several Messengers,
Why do you send so thick?

Cleo. Who's born that day, when I forget to send to Anthony, shall die a Beggar. Ink and paper, Charmi- an. Welcome my good Alexas. Did I, Charmian, ever love Caesar so?

Char. Oh that brave Caesar.

Cleo. Be choak'd with such another Emphasis,
Say the brave Anthony.

Char. The valiant Caesar.

Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Caesar Paragon again
My man of men.

Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.

Cleo. My Sallad dayes,
When I was green in judgement, cold in blood,
To say, as I said then. But come, away,
Get me Ink and Paper,

he shall have every day several greeting, or I'll unpeople Egypt.

Exeunt.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas in warlike manner.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know worthy Pompey, that which they do delay, they not deny

Pom. While we are suitors to their Throne, decays the thing we sue for.

Mene. We, ignorant of our selves,
Beg often our own harmes, which the wise Powers
Deny us for our good: so find we profit
By losing of our Prayers.

Pom. I shall do well:
The People love me, and the Sea is mine;
My powers are Crescent, and my Auguring hope
Says it will come to th'full. Mark Anthony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make No warres without doors. Caesar gets money where He looses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd: but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

Mene. Caesar and Lepidus are in the field,
A mighty strength they carry.

Pom. Where have you this? 'Tis false.

Mene. From Silvius, Sir.

Pom. He dreams: I know they are in Rome together
Looking for Anthony: but all the charmes of Love,
Salt Cleopatra soften thy wand lip,
Let witchcraft join with beauty: Lust with both,
Tie up the Libertine in a field of Feasts,
Keep his Brain fuming. Epicurean Cooks,
Sharpen with cloyless sawce his Appetite.
That sleep and feeding may prorogue his Honour,
Even 'till a Lethied dulness -----

Enter Varrinus.

How now Varrinus?

Var. This is most certain, that I shall deliver:

Mark Anthony is every hour in Rome
Expected. Since he went from Egypt, 'tis
A space for farther travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear. Menas, I did not think
This amorous Surfetter would have donn'd his Helm
For such a petty War: His Souldiership
Is twice the other twain: But let us rear
The higher our Opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt's Widdow pluck
The near Lust-wearied Anthony.

Mene. I cannot hope,
Caesar and Anthony shall well greet together;
His Wife that's dead, did trespasses to Caesar,
His Brother warr'd upon him, although I think
Not mov'd by Anthony.

Pom. I know not, Menas,
How lesser Enmities may give way to greater,
Were't not that we stand up against them all:
'Twere pregnant they should square between themselves,
For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords: but how the fear of us
May Cement their divisions, and bind up
The petty difference, we yet not know:
Be't as our gods will have't; it onely stands
Our lives upon, to use our strongest hands,
Come Menas.

Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to intreat your Captain
To soft and gentle speech.

Enob. I shall intreat him
To answer like himself: if Caesar move him,
Let Anthony look over Caesar's head,
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonio's Beard,
I would not shave't to day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time for private stomacking.

Eno. Every time serves for the matter that is then born in't.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Enob. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion: but pray you stir
No Embers up. Here comes the Noble Anthony.

Enter Anthony and Ventidius.

Enob. And yonder Caesar.

Enter Caesar, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia.
Hark Ventidius.

Caesar. I do not know, Mecenas, ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble Friends,
That which combin'd us was most great, and let not
A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard. When we debate
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
Murder in healing wounds. Then noble Partners,
The rather, for I earnestly beseech,
Touch you the sowrest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curstness grow to th'inatter.

Ant. 'Tis spoken well:

Were we before our Armies and to fight,
I should do thus.

Flourish.

Ces. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Ces. Sit.

Ant. Sit, sir.

Ces. Nay then.

Ant. I learn you take things ill, which are not so:
Or being, concern you not.

Ces. I must be laugh'd at, if, or for nothing, or a little,
Should say my self offended, and with you Chiefly i'th'world. More laugh'd at, that I should Once name you derogately: when to found your name
It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Caesar, what was't to you?

Ces. No more then my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt: yet if you there
Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd?

Ces. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent,
By what did here befall me. Your Wife and Brother
Made warres upon me, and their contestation
Was Theme for you, you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business, My brother never Did urge me in his Act: I did inquire it,
And have my learning from some true reports
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours,
And make the warres alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause? Of this, my Letters
Before did satisfie you. If you patch a quarrel:
As matter whole you have to take it with,

A a a a

It

It must not be with this.

Cas. You praise your self, by laying defects of judgement to me: but you patch up your excuses.

Anth. Not so, not so:

I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with gracefull eyes attend those Warres
Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife,
I would you had her Spirit, in such another,
The third o'th' world is yours, which with a Snaffle,
You may pace easie, but not such a wife.

Enobar. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to warres with the women.

Anth. So much uncurbable, her Garboiles (Cesar)
Made out of her impatience: which not wanted
Shrewdness of policy too: I grieving grant,
Did you too much disquiet, for that you must,
But say I could not help it.

Cas. I wrote to you, when rioting in Alexandria you
Did pocket up my Letters: and with taunts
Did gibe my Missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir, he fell upon me, ere admitted, then:
Three Kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was i'th' morning: but next day
I told him of my self, which was as much
As to have askt him pardon. Let this Fellow
Be nothing of our strife: if we contend
Out of our question wipe him.

Cas. You have broken the Article of your Oath, which you shall never have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Cesar.

Ant. No, Lepidus, let him speak,
The Honour is Sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lackt it: but on, Cesar,
The Article of my oath.

Cas. To lend me Armes, and aid when I requir'd them, the which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected rather.

And then when poisoned houres had bound me up
From mine own knowledge, as nearly as I may,
I le play the penitent to you. But mine honesty,
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power
Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made Warres here,
For which my self, the ignorant motive, doe
So far ask pardon, as befits mine Honour
To stoop in such a case.

Lep. 'Tis Nobly spoken.

Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no further
The griefs between ye: to forget them quite.
Were to remember, that the present need,
Speaks to attone you.

Lep. Worthily spoken, Mecenas.

Enobar. Or if you borrow one anothers Love for the instant, you may when you hear no more words of Pompey return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a Souldier, only speak no more.

Enobar. That truth should be silent, I had almost forgot.

Anth. You wrong this presence, therefore speak no more.

Enob. Go to then: your Considerate stone.

Cesar. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech: for't cannot be,

We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet if I knew,
What Hoop should hold us staunch from edge to edge
Ath' world, I would pursue it.

Agri. Give me leave, Cesar.

Cas. Speak, Agrippa.

Agri. Thou hast a Sister by thy Mother's side, admir'd Octavia? Great Mark Anthony is now a widdower.

Cas. Say not, say Agrippa; if Cleopatra heard you, your proof were well deserved of rashness.

Anth. I am not married, Cesar: let me hear Agrippa further speak.

Agri. To hold you in perpetual amitie,
To make you Brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an un-slipping knot, take Anthony
Octavia to his wife: whose beauty claims
No worse a husband then the best of men:
Whose virtue, and whose general graces speak
That which none else can utter. By this marriage,
All little Jealousies which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing. Truths would be tales,
Where now half tales be truths: her love to both,
Would each to other, and all loves to both
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke,
For 'tis a studied, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Anth. Will Cesar speak?

Cas. Not 'till he hears how Anthony is toucht
With what is spoken already.

Anth. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say Agrippa, be it so,
To make this good?

Cas. The power of Cesar,
And his power unto Octavia.

Anth. May I never
(To this good purpose, that so fairly shews)
Dream of impediment: let me have thy hand
Further this act of Grace: and from this hour,
The heart of Brothers govern in our Loves,
And sway our great Designs.

Cas. There's my hand:
A Sister I bequeath you, whom no Brother
Did ever love so dearly. Let her live
To join our Kingdoms, and our hearts, and never Fly off our Loves again.

Lep. Happily. Amen.

Ant. I did not think to draw my Sword against Pompey,
For he hath strange courtesies, and great
Of late upon me. I must thank him onely,
Lest my remembrance, suffer ill report:
At heel of that desie him.

Lepi. Time calls upon's,
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.

Anth. Where lies he?

Cas. About the Mount-Mesena.

Anth. What is his strength by land?

Cas. Great, and increasing:
But by Sea he is an absolute Master.

Anth. So is the Frame,
Would we had spoke together. Hasten we for it,
Yet e're we put our selves in Armes, dispatch we
The business we have talkt of.

Cas. With most gladness,
And do invite you to my Sisters view,

VWhither straight I'll lead you.

Anth. Let us, Lepidus, not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Anthony, not sickness should detain me.

Exeunt omnes.

Manent Enobarbus, Agrippa, Mecenas.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, Sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Cesar, worthy Mecenas. My honourable Friend Agrippa.

Agri. Good Enobarbus.

Mec. We have cause to be glad, that matters are so well digested: you stay'd well by't in Egypt.

Eno. I Sir, we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild-Boars roasted whole at a breakfast: and but twelve persons there. Is this true?

Eno. This was but as a Fly by an Eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of Feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mecenas. She's a most triumphant Lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Anthony, she purst up his heart upon the river of Cydus.

Agrip. There she appear'd indeed: or my reporter devis'd well for her.

Eno. I will tell you,
The Barge she sat in, like a burnisht Throne
Burnt on the water; the Poop was beaten Gold,
Purple the Sails: and so perfumed that
The Windes were Love-sick.
With them the Oars were Silver,
Which to the tune of Flutes kept stroke, and made
The water which they beat, to follow faster:
As amorous of her strokes. For her own person,
It beggar'd all description, she did lye
In her Pavillion, cloth of Gold, of Tissue,
O're-picturing that Venus, where we see
The fancie our-work Nature. On each side her Stood pretty Dimpled Boyes, like smiling Cupids,
With divers colour'd' Fannes, whose wind did seem
To glove the delicate cheeks which they did cool,
And what they undid did.

Agrip. Oh rare for Anthony.

Eno. Her Gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many Mere-maids tended her i'th'eyes,
And made their bends adornings. At the Helm,
A seeming Mere-maid steers: the Silken Tackles
Swell with the touches of those Flower-soft hands,
That yearly frame the office. From the Barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent Wharfs. The City cast
Her people out upon her: and Anthony
Enthron'd i'th' Market-place, did sit alone,
Whistling to th'air: which but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in Nature.

Agrip. Rare Egyptian.

Eno. Upon her landing, Anthony sent to her,
Invited her to Supper: she replied,
It should be better, he became her guest:
Which she entreated, our Courteous Anthony,
Whom nere the word of no woman heard speak,
Being barber'd ten times o're, goes to the Feast:
And for his ordinary, payes his heart,
For what his eyes eat onely.

Agrip. Royal wench:

She made great Cesar lay his Sword to bed,
He ploughed her, and she cropt.

Eno. I saw her once

Hop forty Paces through the publick Street,
And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted
That she did make defect, perfection,
And breathless power breathe forth.

Mec. Now Anthony, must leave her utterly

Eno. Never, he will not:

Age cannot wither her, nor custome steal
Her infinite variety: other women cloy
The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry,
Where most she satisfies. For vilest things
Become themselves in her, that the holy Priests
Bless her, when she is Riggish.

Mec. If Beauty, Wisedome, Modesty, can settle
The heart of Anthony: Ostavia's

A blessed Lottery to him.

Agrip. Let us go. Good Enobarbus, make your self my guest, whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, Sir, I thank you.

Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, Cesar, Ostavia between them.

Anth. The world, and my great office, will Sometimes divide me from your bosome.

Ost. All which time, before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers to them for you.

Anth. Goodnight Sir. My Ostavia
Read not my blemishes in the world's report:
I have not kept my square, but that to come
Shall all be done by th' Rule: good night, dear Lady.

Ost. Good night, sir.

Cesar. Goodnight.

Exit.

Enter Soothsayer.

Ant. Now sirrah: do you wish your self in Egypt?

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you thither.

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see it in my motion: have it not in my tongue,
But yet hie you to Egypt again.

Antho. Say to me, whose Fortunes shall rise higher,
Cesar's or mine?

Soot. Cesar's. Therefore (oh Anthony) stay not by his side.
Thy Demon (that's thy spirit which keeps thee) is Noble, Courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Cesar's is not. But near him thy Angel Becomes a fear: as being o're-pow'r'd, and therefore Make space enough between you.

Anth. Speak this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee no more, but when to thee,
If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thau art sure to lose: And of that Natural luck
He beats thee 'gainst the odds. Thy Luster thickens,
When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him:
But he alway is Noble.

Anth. Get thee gone:

Say to Ventidius I would speak with him.

Exit.

He shall to Parthia, be it art or hap,
He hath spoken true. The very Dice obey him,
And in our sports my better cunning faints,
Under his chance, if we draw lots, he speeds,
His Cocks do win the Battel, still of mine,
When it is all to naught: and his Quails ever
Beat mine (in hoop) at odd's. I will to Egypt

And though I make this marriage for my peace,
I'th'East my pleasure lies. Oh come, Ventidius.

Enter Ventidius.

You must to Parthia, your Commission's ready :
Follow me and, receiv't. Exeunt.

Enter Lepidus, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Lepidus. Trouble your self no farther: pray you hasten your generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Anthony will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

Lep. 'Till I shall see you in your Souldier's dress,
Which will become you both : Farewell.

Mec. We shall, as I conceive the journey, be at the Mount before you Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter, my purposes do draw me much about, you'll win two dayes upon me.

Both. Sir, good success.

Lep. Farewell. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras and Alexas.

Cleo. Give me some Musick : Musick, moody food of us that trade in love.

Omnes. The Musick, ho.

Enter Mardian the Eunuch.

Cleo. Let it alone, let's to Billiards: come Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore, best play with Mardian.

Cleopa. As well a woman with an Eunuch play'd, as with a woman. Come, you'll play with me, Sir?

Mardi. As well as I can, Madam.

Cleo. And when good will is shewed,
Though't come too short
The Actor may plead pardon. I'le none now,
Give me mine Angle, we'll to th'River, there
My Musick playing far off. I will betray
Tawny-fine fishes, my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimie jaws: and, as I draw them up,
I'le think them every one an Anthony,
And say, ah ha; y'are caught.

Char. 'Twas merry when you wagét'd on your Angling, when your diver did hang a salt fish on his hook, which he with fervencie drew up.

Cleo. That time? Oh times :
I laught him out of patience, and that night
I laught him into patience, and next morn,
E're the ninth hour I drunk him to his bed :
Then put my Tires and Mantels on him, whil't
I wore his Sword Philippian. Oh from Italie

Enter a Messenger.

Ramme thou thy fruitfull tidings in mine eares,
That long time have bin barren.

Mes. Madam, Madam.

Cleo. Anthony's dead,
If thou say so, Villain, thou kil'st thy Mistress :
But well and free, if thou so yield him.
There is Gold and here
My blewest veins to kiss : a hand that Kings
Have lipt, and trembled kissing.

Mes. First, Madam, he is well,

Cleo. Why there's more Gold.

But, sirrah, mark, we use
To say, the dead are well : bring me to that,
The Gold I give thee, will I melt and powre
Down thy ill-uttering throat.

Mes. Good Madam, hear me.

Cleo. Well, go to I will :

But there's no goodness in thy face, if Anthony
Be free and healthfull ; so tart a favour
To trumpet such good tidings. If not well,
Thou should'st come like a Furie crown'd with Snakes,
Not like a formal man.

Mes. Wilt please you hear me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee e're thou speak'st,
Yet if thou say, Anthony lives, 'tis well,
Or friends with Cesar, or not Captain to him,
I'le see thee in a shower of Gold, and haile
Rich Pearls upon thee.

Mes. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mes. And Friends with Cesar.

Cleo. Th'art an honest man.

Mes. Cesar, and he, are greater Friends then ever.

Cleo. Mark thee a Fortune from me.

Mes. But yet, Madam.

Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does allay
The good precedence, sic upon but yet,
But yet is as a Jaylor to bring forth
Some monstrous Malefactor. Prythee, Friend,
Powre out the pack of matter to mine ear,
The good and bad together : he's friends with Cesar,
In state of health thou say'st, and thou sayest, free.

Mes. Free, Madam ! no : I made no such sport,
He's bound unto Octavia.

Cleo. For what good turn ?

Mes. For the best turn i'th'bed.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmian.

Mes. Madam, he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. The most infectious Pestilence upon thee.

Strikes him down.

Mes. Good Madam, patience.

Cleo. What say you ? Strikes him.
Hence horrible Villain, or I'le spurn thine eyes
Like balls before me : I'le unhair thy head :

She hales him up and down.

Thou shalt be whipt with Wyer, and stew'd in brine,
Smarting in lingring pickle.

Mes. Gracious Madam,

I, that do bring the newes, made not the match.

Cleo. Say 'tis not so, a Province I will give thee,
And make thy Fortunes proud : the blow thou had'st
Shall make thy peace, for moving me to rage,
And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg.

Mes. He's married, Madam.

Cleo. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long. Draw a knife.

Mes. Nay then I'le run :

What mean you, Madam, I have made no fault. Exit.

Char. Good Madam, keep your self within your self,
The man is innocent.

Cleo. Some Innocents scape not the thunderbolt :
Melt Agypt into Nile ; and kindled creatures
Turn all to Serpents. Call the slave again,
Though I am mad, I will not bite him : Call.

Char. He is afeard to come.

Cleo. I will not hurt him,
These hands do lack Nobility, that they strike
A meaner then my self : since I my self
Have given my self the cause. Come hither, Sir.

Enter the Messenger again.

Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad newes : give to a gracious Message

An host of tongues, but let ill tidings tell
Themselves when they be felt.

Mes. I have done my duty.

Cleo. Is he married?

I cannot hate thee worser then I do,
If thou again say yes.

Mes. He's married, Madam.

Cleo. The gods confound thee,

Dost thou hold there still?

Mes. Should I lye, Madam?

Cleo. Oh, would thou didst:

So half my Egypt were submerg'd and made
A Cistern for scald Snakes. Go get thee hence,
Had'st thou Narcissus in thy face, to me
Thou would'st appear most ugly: He is married?

Mes. I crave your highness pardon.

Cleo. He is married?

Mes. Take no offence, that I would not offend you;
To punish me for what you make me doe,
Seems much unequal: he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. Oh that his fault should make a knave of thee,
That art not what thou art'sure of. Get thee hence,
The Merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome
Are all too dear for me:

Lie they upon thy hand, and be undone by'em.

Char. Good your Highness patience.

Cleo. In praising Anthony, I have disprais'd Cesar.

Char. Many times, Madam.

Cleo. I am paid for't now: lead me from hence,
I faint, oh Iras, Charmian: 'tis no matter.
Go to the fellow, good Alexas, bid him
Report the feature of Octavia, her yeares,
Her inclination, let him not leave out
The colour of her hair. Bring me word quickly.
Let him for ever go, let him not, Charmian,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
The other wayes a Mars. Bid you Alexas
Bring me word, how tall she is: pity me, Charmian,
But do not speak to me. Lead me to my Chamber.

Exeunt.

Enter Pompey, at one door with Drum and Trumpet: at another Cesar, Lepidus. Anthony, Enobarbus, Mece-nas, Agrippa, Menas with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your Hostages I have, so have you mine:
And we shall talk before we fight.

Cas. Most meet that first we come to words,
And therefore have we
Our written purposes before us sent,
Which if thou hast considered, let us know,
If't will tie up thy discontented Sword
And carry back to Sicily much tall youth,
That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three,
The Senators alone of this great world,
Chief Factors for the gods. I do not know,
Wherefore my Father should revengers want,
Having a Son and Friends, since Julius Cesar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,
There saw you labouring for me. What was't
That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? And what Made the all-honour'd, honest Roman Brutus,
With the arm'd rest, Courtiers of beauteous freedom,
To drench the Capitol, but that they would
Have one man but a man, and that is it
Hath made me rigge my Navie. At whose burthen,
The anger'd Ocean foams, with which I meant

To scourge th'ingratitude, that despightfull Rome
Cast on my Noble Father.

Cesar. Take your time.

Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sailes,
We'll speak with thee at Sea. At land thou know'st
How much we do o're-count thee.

Pom. At Land indeed
Thou dost o're-count me of my father's house.
But since the Cuckoo builds not for himself,
Remain in't as thou may'st.

Lepi. Be pleas'd to tell us,
(For this is from the present now you talk)

The offers we have sent you.

Cesar. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be intreated to,
But weigh what it is worth embrac'd.

Cesar. And what may follow to try a larger Fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia: and I must Rid all the Sea of Pirats: then, to send Measures of Wheat to Rome: this 'greed upon,
To part with unhack'd edges, and bear back
Our targes undinted.

Omnes. That's our offer.

Pom. Know then I came before you here,
A man prepar'd
To take this offer. But Mark Anthony,
Put me to some impatience: though I lose
The praise of it by telling. You must know
When Cesar and your Brother were at blowes,
Your Mother came to Sicily, and did find
Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey,
And am well studied for a liberal thanks,
Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand:
I did not think, Sir, to have met you here.

Ant. The beds i'th' East are soft, and thanks to you,
That call'd me timelier then my purpose hither:
For I have gained by't.

Cas. Since I saw you last, there's a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know not,
What counts hard Fortune casts upon my face,
But in my bosome she shall never come,
To make my heart a vassal.

Lepi. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so, Lepidus, thus we are agreed:
I crave our composition may be written
And seal'd between us.

Cas. That's the next to doe.

Pom. We'll feast each other, e're we part, and let's
Draw lots who shall begin.

Anth. That will I, Pompey.

Pompey. No, Anthony, take the lot: but first or last, your fine Egyptian cookery shall have the fame, I have heard that Julius Cesar grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much.

Pom. I have fair meaning, Sir.

Ant. And fair words to them.

Pom. Then so much have I heard.
And I have heard Apollodorus carried -----

Eno. No more of that: he did so.

Pom. What, I pray you?

Eno. A certain Queen to Cesar in a Materice.

Pom. I know thee now, how far'st thou Souldier?

Eno. Well, and well am like to do, for I perceive

Four Feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand,
I never hated thee : I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behaviour.

Enob. Sir, I never lov'd you much, but I ha'prais'd ye,
When you have well-deserv'd ten times as much,
As I have said you did.

Pom. Injoy thy plainness,
It nothing ill becomes thee :
Aboard my Gally, I invite you all.
Will you lead, Lords ?

All. Shew s the way, Sir.

Pom. Come. Exeunt. Manent Enob. & Menas.

Menas. Thy Father, Pompey, would ne're have made Treaty. You, and I have known, Sir.

Eno. At Sea, I think.

Menas. We have, Sir.

Eno. You have done well by Water.

Menas. And you by Land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me, though it cannot be denied what I have done by Land.

Menas. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes, some-thing you can deny for your own safety : you have bin a good Thief by Sea.

Menas. And you by Land.

Eno. There I deny my Land service : but give me your hand Menas, if our eyes had authority, here they might have two Thieves kissing.

Menas. All mens faces are true, whatsoe're their hands are.

Eno. But there is ne're a fair Woman, ha's a true Face.

Menas. No slander, they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Menas. For my part, I am sorry it is turn'd to a Drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his Fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure he cannot weep't back again.

Menas. Y'have said, Sir, we look'd not for Mark Anthony here, pray you, is he married to Cleopatra ?

Eno. Cesar's Sister is call'd Octavia.

Menas. True, Sir, she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But now she is the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Menas. Pray ye, Sir.

Eno. 'Tis true.

Menas. Then is Cesar and he, for ever knit together.

Eno. If I were bound to Divine of this unity, I would not Prophesie so.

Menas. I think the policy of that purpose, made more in the Marriage then the Love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find the band that seems to tie their friendship together, will be the very stranger of their Amitie : Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Menas. Who would not have his wife so ?

Eno. Not he that himself is not so : which is Mark Anthony : he will to his Egyptian dish again : then shall the sighes of Octavia blow the fire up in Cesar, and (as I said before) that which is the strength of their Amity, shall prove the immediate Author of their variance. Anthony will use his affection where it is. He married but his occasion here.

Menas. And thus it may be. Come, Sir, will you a-board ?
I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir : we have us'd our Throats in Agypt.

Menas. Come, let's away.

Exeunt.

Musick plays.

Enter two or three Servants with a Banquet.

1. Here they'll be, man : some o' their Plants are ill rooted already, the least wind i'th' world will blow them down.

2. Lepidus is high-colour'd.

1. They have made him drink Almes drink.

2. As they pinch one another by the disposition he cries out, no more ; reconciles them to his entreatie, and himself to th' drink.

1. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2. Why this it is to have a name in great men's Fellowship : I had as lieve have a Reed that will do me no service, as a Partizan I could not heave.

1. To be call'd into a huge Sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pittifully disfigure the cheeks.

A Sonnet sounded.

Enter Cesar, Anthony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrippa, Mecenas, Enobarbus, Menas, with other Captains.

Ant. Thus do they, Sir : they take the flow o'th' Nile
By certain scale, i'th' Pyramid : they know
By th' height, the lowness, or the mean : If dearth
Or Foizon follow. The higher Nilus swells
Themore it promises as it ebbs, the Seedsmen
Upon the slime and Ooze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to Harvest.

Lep. Y'have strange Serpents there ?

Ant. I, Lepidus.

Lep. Your Serpent of Egypt, is bred now of your nud by the operation of the Sun : so is your Crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sir, and some Wine : A health to Lepidus.

Lep. I am not so well as I should be :
But I'll ne're out.

Eno. Not 'till you have slept : I fear me you'll be in 'till then.

Lep. Nay certainly, I have heard the Ptolemie's Pyramis is very goodly things : without contradiction I have heard that.

Menas. Pompey, a word.

Pom. Say in mine ear, what is't ?

Menas. Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, Captain,
And hear me speak a word.

Pom. For me 'till anon. Whisper in's Ear.
This Wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o' thing is your Crocodile ?

Ant. It is shap'd, sir, like it self, and it is as broad as it hath bredth ; It is just so high as it is, and moves with it's own organs. It lives by that which nourisheth it, and the Elements once out of it, it Transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of ?

Ant. Of it's own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange Serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so, and the teares of it are wet.

Cas. Will this description satisfie him ?

Ant. With the Health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very Epicure.

Pom. Go hang, sir, hang : tell me of that ? Away :
Do as I bid you. Where's the Cup I call'd for ?

Menas. If for the sake of Merit thou wilt hear me,

Rise

Rise from thy stool.

Pom. I think th'art mad : the matter ?

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy Fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith : what's else to say ? Be jolly, Lords.

Anth. These Quick-sands, Lepidus,
Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be Lord of all the world ?

Pom. What saist thou ?

Men. Wilt thou be Lord of the whole world ?
That's twice.

Pom. How should that be ?

Men. But entertain it, and though thou think me poor, I am the man will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well ?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.

That if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove :

What e're the Ocean pales, or skie inclippes,
Is thine, if thou wilt ha't.

Pom. Shew me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these Competitors
Are in thy vessel. Let me cut the Cable.

And when we are put off, fall to their throats :
All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou should'st have done,
And not have spoken on't. In me 'tis villanie,
In thee, 't had bin good service : thou must know,
'Tis not my profit that does lead mine Honour :
Mine Honour is, Repent that e're thy tongue,
Hath so betrai'd thine act. Being done unknown,
I should have found it afterwards well done :
But must condemn it now : desist, and drink.

Men. For this I'll never follow
Thy pall'd Fortunes more,
Who seeks and will not take, when once 'tis offer'd,
Shall never find it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus.

Ant. Bear him a-shoar,

I'll pledge it for him, Pompey.

Eno. Here's to thee, Menas.

Men. Enobarbus, welcome,

Pom. Fill 'till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strange Fellow, Menas.

Men. Why ?

Eno. A beares the third part of the world, man : seest not ?

Men. The third part, then he is drunk : would it were all, that it might go on wheels.

Eno. Drink thou, encrease the Reels.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian Feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it : strike the Vessels hoar.
Here's to Cesar.

Cesar. I could well forbear't, it's monstrous labour when I wash my brain, and it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a Child o'th'time.

Cesar. Possess it, I'll make answer : but I had rather fast from all, four dayes, then drink so much in one.

Eno. Ha, my brave Emperour, shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals, and celebrate our drink ?

Pom. Let's ha't, good Souldier.

Ant. Come, let's all take hands,
'Till that the conquering Wine hath steep't our sense,
In soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno. All take hands :
Make battery to our eares with the loud Musick;

The while, I'll place you, then the Boy shall sing.
The holding every man shall beat as loud,
As his strong sides can volly.

Musick Playes. Enobarbus places them hand in hand.

The Song.

Come thou Monarch of the Vine,

Plumpie Bacchus with pink eyne :

In thy Fattes our cares be drown'd.

With thy Grapes our haires be crown'd.

Cup us 'till the world go round,

Cup us 'till the world go round.

Ces. What would you more ?

Pompey, goodnight. Good Brother

Let me request you of our graver business

Frowns at this levity. Gentle Lords let's part,

You see we have burnt our cheek. Strong Enobarbe

Is weaker then the wind, and mine own tongue

Spleets what it speaks : the wild disguise hath almost Antickt us all. What needs more words ? goodnight.

Good Anthony, your hand.

Pom. I'll try you on the shoar.

Ant. And shall, Sir, give's your hand.

Pom. Oh, Anthony, you have my Father's house.
But what, we are Friends ?

Come down into the Boat.

Eno. Take heed you fall not, Menas ; I'll not on shoar,

No, to my Cabin : these Drummes

These Trumpets, Flutes : what

Let Neptune hear, we bid aloud farewell

To these great Fellows. Sound and be hang'd, sound out.

Sound a Flourish with Drummes.

Eno. Hoo saies a, there's my Cap.

Men. Hoa, Noble Captain, come. Exeunt.

Enter Ventidius as it were in a triumph, the dead body of Pacorus borne before him.

Ven. Now darting Parthia art thou strook, and now

Pleas'd Fortune does of Marcus Crassus death

Make me revenger. Beare the King's Son's body,

Before our Army, thy Pacorus Orades,

Payes this for Marcus Crassus.

Roman. Noble Ventidius,

Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy Sword is warm,

The Fugitive Parthians follow. Spurn through Media,

Mesopotamia, and the shelters, whither

The routed flie. So thy grand Captain Anthony

Shall set thee on triumphant Charriots, and Put Garlands on thy head.

Ven. Oh Silius, Silius,

I have done enough. A lower place, note well

May make too great an act. For learn this, Silius,

Better to leave undone, then by our deed

Acquire too high a Fame, when him we serve's away.

Cesar and Anthony, have ever won

More in their officer, then person. Sossius

One of my place in Syria, his Lieutenant,

For quick accumulation of renown,

Which achiev'd by th' minute, lost his favour.

Who does i'th' Warres more then his Captain can,

Becomes his Captain's Captain : and Ambition

(The Souldier's virtue) rather makes choice of loss

Then gain, which darkens him.

I could do more to doe Antonius good,

But 'twould offend him. And in his offence,

Should

Should my performance perish.

Rom. Thou hast, Ventidius, that, without the which a Souldier and his Sword grants scarce distinction : thou wilt write to Anthony.

Ven. I'll humbly signifie what in his name, That magical word of War we have effected, How with his Banners, and his well pai'd ranks, The ne're-yet beaten Horse of Parthia, We have jaded out o'th Field.

Rom. Where is he now?

Ven. He purposeth to Athens, whither with what hast The weight we must convey with's, will permit : We shall appear before him. On there, pass along.

Exeunt.

Enter Agrippa at one door, Enobarbus at another.

Agri. What are the Brother's parted?

Eno. They have dispatcht with Pompey, he is gone, The other three are Sealing. Octavia weeps To part from Rome : Cesar is sad, and Lepidus Since Pompey's feast, as Menas sayes, is troubled With the Green-Sickness.

Agri. 'Tis a Noble Lepidus.

Eno. A very fine one : oh, how he loves Cesar.

Agri. Nay but how dearly he adores Mark Anthony.

Eno. Cesar ? why he's the Jupiter of men.

Ant. What's Anthony, the god of Jupiter ?

Eno. Speak you of Cesar ? Oh ? the non-pareil ?

Agri. Oh Anthony, oh thou Arabian Bird !

Eno. Would you praise Cesar, say Cesar, go no further.

Agri. Indeed he plied them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Cesar best, yet he loves Anthony :

Hoo, Hearts, Tongues, Figure, Scribes, Bards, Poets, cannot Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number : hoo, His love to Anthony. But as for Cesar, Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agri. Both he loves.

Eno. They are his Shards, and he their Beetle, so ; This is to horse : Adieu, Noble Agrippa.

Agri. Good Fortune worthy Souldier, and farewell.

Enter Cesar, Anthony, Lepidus, and Octavia.

Antho. No farther, Sir.

Cesar. You take from me a great part of my self : Use me well in't. Sister, prove such a wife As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest Band Shall pass on thy approof : most Noble Anthony, Let not the piece of Virtue which is set Betwixt us, as the Cement of our love To keep it builded, be the Ram to batter The Fortune of it : for better might we Have lov'd without this mean, if on both parts This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended in your distrust.

Ces. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find,

Though you be therein curious, the least cause For what you seem to fear, so the gods keep you, And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends : We will here part.

Ces. Farewell, my dearest Sister, fare thee well, The Elements be kind to thee, and make Thy spirits all of comfort : fare thee well.

Octa. My Noble Brother.

Anth. The April's in her eyes, it is Loves spring, And these the showers to bring it on : be chearfull.

Octa. Sir, look well to my Husband's house : and ----

Cesar. What Octavia.

Octa. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can Her heart inform her tongue.

The Swan's down feather

That stands upon the Swell at full of tide :

And neither way inclines.

Eno. Will Cesar weep ?

Agri. He ha's a cloud in's face.

Eno. He were the worse for that were he a Horse, so is he being a man.

Agri. Why Enobarbus :

When Anthony found Julius Cesar dead, He cryed almost to roaring : And he wept, When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

Eno. That year indeed, he was troubled with a rheum, What willingly he did confound, he wail'd, Believ't 'till I weep too.

Ces. No, sweet Octavia,

You shall hear from me still : the time shall not Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come Sir, come,

I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love :

Look here I have you : thus I let you go,

And give you to the gods.

Ces. Adieu, be happy.

Lep. Let all the number of the Starres give light To thy fair way.

Ces. Farewell, farewell.

Kisses Octavia.

Ant. Farewell.

Trumpets sound.

Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is the Fellow ?

Alex. Half afeard to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to : Come hither, Sir.

Enter the Messenger as before.

Alex. Good Majestie, Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you, but when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head, I'll have : but how ? When Anthony is gone, through whom I might command it : Come thou near.

Mes. Most gracious Majesty.

Cleo. Did'st thou behold Octavia ?

Mes. I, dread Queen.

Cleo. Where ?

Mes. Madam, in Rome, I lookt her in the face : and saw her led between her Brother, and Mark Anthony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me ?

Mes. She is not, Madam.

Cleo. Did'st hear her speak ?

Is she shrill tongu'd or low ?

Mes. Madam, I heard her speak, she is low voic'd.

Cleo. That's not so good : he cannot like her long.

Char. Like her ? Oh Isis : 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so Charmian : dull of tongue, & dwarfish, What Majesty is in her gate, remember If e're thou look'st on Majesty.

Mes. She creeps ; her motion and her station are as one : She shews a body, rather than a life, A Statue, then a Breather.

Mes. Is this certain ?

Cleo. Or I have no observance.

Cha. Three in Egypt cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing, I do perceiv't, There's nothing in her yet.

The Fellow has good judgement.

Char. Excellent.

Cleo. Guess at her yeares, I prythee.

Mef. Madam, she was a widdow.

Cleo. VViddow? Charman, hark.

Mef. And I do think she's thirty.

Cle. Bear'st thou her face in mind? is't long or, round?

Mef. Round even to faultiness.

Cleo. For the most part too, they are foolish that are so.
Her hair what colour?

Mef. Brown, Madam : and her forehead.

As low as she would wish it.

Cleo. There's Gold for thee,
Thou must not take my former sharpness ill,
I will employ thee back again : I find thee
Most fit for business. Go, make thee ready,
Our Letters are prepar'd.

Char. A proper man.

Cleo. Indeed he is so : I repent me much
That so I harried him. VVhy me thinks by him,
This Creature's no such thing.

Char. Nothing, Madam.

Cle. The man hath seen some Majesty, and should know.

Char. Hath he seen Majesty? Isis else defend : and ferveng you so long.

Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Char- man: but 'tis no matter, thou shalt bring him to me where
I will write ; all may be well enough.

Char. I warrant you, Madam.

Exeunt.

Enter Anthony and Octavia.

Ant. Nay, nay Octavia, not onely that,
That were excusable, that and thousands more
Of semblable import, but he hath wag'd
New Warres 'gainst Pompey, Made his will, and read it,
To publick ear, spoke scantily of me,
When perforce he could not
But pay me termes of Honour : cold and sickly
He vented then most narrow measure : lent me,
When the best hint was given him : he had lookt,
Or did it from his teeth.

Octavi. Oh, my good Lord,
Believe not all, or if you must believe,
Stomack not all. A more unhappy Lady,
If this division chance, ne're stood between Praying for both parts :
The good gods will mock me presently,
When I shall pray : oh blest my Lord and husband,
Undo that prayer - by crying out as loud,
Oh blest my Brother. Husband winne, winne Brother,
Prayes, and destroyes the prayer, no midway
'Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. Gentle Octavia,
Let your best love draw to that point which seeks
Best to preserve it : if I lose mine Honour,
I lose my self : better I were not yours
Then yours so branchless. But as you requested,
Your self shall go between's, the mean tyme, Lady,
I'll raise the preparation of a War
Shall stain your Brother, make your soonest haste
So your desires are yours.

Octa. Thanks to my Lord,
The Jove of Power make me most weak, most weak,
Your reconciler : Warres 'twixt you twain would be,
As if the world should cleave, and that slain men
Should sodder up the Rift.

Anth. When it appears to you where this begins,
Turn your displeasure that way, for our faults
Can never be so equal, that your love
Can equally move with them. Provide your going,
Chooise your own company, and command what cost
Your heart has mind to.

Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus, and Eros.

Enob. How now, friend Eros?

Eros. There's strange Newes come, Sir.

Eno. What man?

Ero. Cesar and Lepidus have made War upon Pompey.

Eno. This is old, what is the success?

Eros. Cesar having made use of him in the warres
'gainst Pompey : presently denyed him rivalry, would not let him partake of the glory of the action, and not resting here, accuses him of Letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey. Upon his own appeal seizes him, so the poor third is up, 'till death enlarge his Confine.

Eno. Then would thou hadst a pair of Chaps no more, and throw between them all the food thou hast, they'll grind the other. Where's Anthony?

Eros. He's walking in the garden thus, and spurns
The rush that lies before him. Cries, Fool Lepidus,
And threatens the throat of that his Officer,
That mured Pompey.

Eno. Our great Navie's rigg'd.

Eros. For Italy and Cesar, more Domitius,
My Lord desires you presently : my Newes
I might have told hereafter.

Eno. 'Twill be naught, but let it be: bring me to Anthony.

Eros. Come, sir.

Exeunt.

Enter Agrippa, Mecenas, and Cesar.

Ces. Contemning Rome he has done all this, and more
In Alexandria : here's the matter of it :
I'th' Market-place on a a Tribunal silver'd
Cleopatra and himself in Chairs of Gold
Were publickly enthron'd : at the feet sat
Cesarion whom they call my father's Son,
And all the unlawfull issue, that their lust
Since then hath made between them. Unto her,
He gave the stablishment of Egypt, made her
Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, absolute Queen.

Mece. This is the publick eye?

Ces. I'th' common shew place where they exercise,
His Sonns hither proclaim'd the King of Kings,
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia
He gave to Alexander. To Ptolemy he assign'd, Syria, Sicilia, and Phœnicia: she
In th'abiliments of the goddess Isis
That day appear'd, and oft before gave audience,
As 'tis reported, so.

Mece. Let Rome be thus inform'd.

Agrip. Who queasie with his insolence already,
Will their good thoughts call from him.

Ces. The people know it,

And have now receiv'd his accusations.

Agri. Whom do's he accuse?

Ces. Cesar, and that having in Sicily
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him
His part o'th' Isle. Then does he say, he lent me
Some shipping unrestored. Lastly he frets
That Lepidus of the Triumvirate, should be depos'd,
And being that we detain all his Revenue.

Agri. Sir, this should be answered.

Cesar. 'Tis done already, and his Messenger gone :
I have told him Lepidus was grown too cruel,

Tha

That his high Authority abus'd,
And did deserve his chance for what I have conquer'd,
I grant him part : but then in his Armenia,
And other of his conquer'd Kingdomes, I demand the like
Mec. He'll never yield to that.

Cas. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter Octavia with her Train.

Octa. Hail Cesar, and my Lord; hail, most dear Cesar.

Cesar. That ever I should call thee Cast-away.

Octa. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.

Cas. Why hast thou stolne upon me thus? you came not Like Cesar's Sister; the wife of Anthony
Should have an Army for an Usher, and
The neighs of horse to tell of her approach,
Longe e're she did appear. The trees by th' way
Should have born men, and expectation fainted
Longing for what it had not. Nay, the dust
Should have ascended to the Roof of Heaven,
Rais'd by your populous Troops: But you are come
A Market-maid to Rome, and have prevented
The ostentation of our love; which left unshewn,
Is often left unlov'd: we should have met you
By Sea, and Land, supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting.

Octa. Good my Lord,
To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it
On my free-will. My Lord Mark Anthony,
Hearing that you prepar'd for War, acquainted
My grieving ear withall: whereon I begg'd
His pardon for return.

Cas. Which soon he granted,
Being an abstract 'tween his Lust, and him,

Octa. Do not say so, my Lord.

Cas. I have eyes upon him.

And his affairs come to me on the wind: where is he now?

Octa. My Lord, in Athens.

Cas. No, my most wronged Sister, Cleopatra.
Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his Empire
Up to a Whore, who now are levying
The Kings o'th' earth for War. He hath dissembled, Bochus the King of Lybia, Archilans
Of Cappadocia, Philadelphos King
Of Paphlagonia: the Thracian King Adullas,
King Mauchus of Arabia, King of Pont,
Herod of Jerry, Mithridates King
Of Comageat, Polemon and Amintas.
The King of Mede, and Lycaonia,
With a more larger List of Scepters.

Octa. Aye me most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two Friends,
That do afflict each other. (breaking forth)

Cas. Welcome hither, your letters did with-hold our 'Till we perceiv'd both how you were wrong'd,
And we in negligent danger: cheer your heart.
Be you not troubled with the time which drives
O're your content, these strong necessities,
But let determin'd things to destinie
Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome:
Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd
Beyond the mark of thought: and the high gods
To do you Justice, make his Ministers
Of us, and those that love you. Best of comfort,
And ever welcome to us. Agrip. Welcome Lady.

Mec. Welcome, dear Madam,
Each heart in Rome does love and pity you,
Onely th' adulterous Anthony, most large

In his abominations, turns you off,
And gives his potent Regiment to a Trull
That noises it against us.

Octa. Is it so, sir?

Cas. Most certain: Sister welcome; pray you
Be ever known to patience. My dear'st Sister. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.

Cleo. I will be even with thee: doubt it not.

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cleo. Thou hast forespoke my being in these warres;
And say'st it is not fit.

Eno. Well: is it, is it?

Cleo. If not, denounc'd against us, why should not we be there in person?

Eno. Well, I could reply: if we should serve with Horse and Mares together, the Horse were merely lost:
the Mares would bear a Souldier and his Horse.

Cleo. What is't you say?

Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Anthony,
Take from his heart, take from his brain, take from's time,
What should not then be spar'd. He is already Traduc'd for Levity, and 'tis said in Rome,
That Photinus an Eunuch, and your Maids
Mannage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot
That speak against us. A Charge we bear i'th' War,
And as the president of my Kingdome will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it,
I will not stay behind.

Enter Anthony and Camidius.

Eno. Nay I have done, here comes the Emperour.

Ant. Is it not strange, Camidius,
That from Tarentum, and Brundisium,
He could so quickly cut the Ionian Sea,
And take in Toryne. You have heard on't (Sweet?)

Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd
Then by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well becom'd the best of men
To taunt at slackness. Camidius, we,
Will fight with him by Sea.

Cleo. By Sea, what else?

Cam. Why will my Lord do so?

Ant. For that he dares us to't.

Eno. So hath my Lord, dar'd him to single fight.

Cam. I, and to wage his Battel at Pharsalia,
Where Cesar fought with Pompey. But these offers
Which serves not for his vantage, he shakes off,
And so should you.

Enob. Your Shippes are not well mann'd,
Your Mariners are Muliters, Reapers, people,
Ingross'd by swift Imprefs. In Cesar's Fleet,
Are those, that often have 'gainst Pompey fought,
Their shippes are yare, yours heavy: no disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at Sea,
Being prepar'd for Land.

Ant. By Sea, by Sea.

Eno. Most worthy Sir, you therein throw away
The absolute Souldiership you have by Land,
Distract your Army, which doth most consist
Of war-markt-footmen, leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge, quite forgoe
The way which promises assurance, and Give up your self merely to chance and hazard,
From firm Security.

Ant. I'll fight at Sea.

Cleo.

Cleo. I have sixty Sailes, Cesar none better.

Ant. Our over-plus of shipping will we burn,
And with the rest full-mann'd, from th'heart of Actium
Beat th'approaching Cesar. But if we fail,
We then can do't at Land. Enter a Messenger.
Thy business?

Mes. The newes is true, my Lord, he is discried,
Cesar has taken Toryne.

Ant. Can he be there in person? 'Tis impossible
Strange, that his power should be so, Camidius,
Our nineteen Legions thou shalt hold by Land,
And our twelve thousand Horse. We'll to our Ship,
Away my Tiberis.

Enter a Souldier.

How now, worthy Souldier?

Sould. Oh Noble Emperour, do not fight by Sea,
Trust not to rotten planks: Do you misdoubt
This Sword, and these my Wounds; let th'Egyptians
And the Phœnicians go a ducking: we Have us'd to conquer standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well, away. Exeunt Ant. Cleo. & Enob.

Soul. By Hercules I think I am i'th'right.

Cam. Souldier thou art: but the whole action grows
Not in the power on't: so our Leaders lead,
And we are Womens men.

Soul. You keep by Land the Legions and the Horse whole, do you not?

Ven. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Julius,
Publicola, and Celiu, are for Sea:
But we keep whole by Land. This speed of Cesar's
Carries beyond belief.

Soul. While he was yet in Rome
His power went out in such distractions,
As beguil'd all Spies.

Cam. Who's his Lieutenent, hear you?

Soul. They say, one Towrus.

Cam. Well, I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. The Emperour calls Camidius.

Cam. With Newes the time's with Labour,
And throwes forth each minute, some. Exeunt.

Enter Cesar with his Army, marching.

Ces. Towrus?

Tow. My Lord.

Ces. Strike not by Land.

Keep whole, provoke not Battel
'Till we have done at Sea. Do not exceed
The Prescript of this Scroul: Our fortune lyes Upon this jump. Exit.

Enter Anthony, and Enobarbus.

Ant. Set we our Squadrons on yond side o' th' Hill,
In eye of Cesar's battel; from which place
We may the number of the Ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. Exit.

Camidius Marching with his Land army one way over the stage, and Towrus the Lieutenant of Cesar the other way: after their going in, is heard the noise of a Sea-fight. Alarum. Enter Enobarbus & Scarus.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught, I can behold no longer:
Thantoniad, the Egyptian Admiral,
With all their sixty flye, and turn the Rudder:

To see't, mine eyes are blasted.

Enter Scarus.

Scar. Gods, and goddesses, all the whole synod of them!

Eno. What's thy passion?

Scar. The greater Cattle of the world is lost
With very ignorance, we have kist away
Kingdomes, and Provinces.

Enob. How appears the fight?

Scar. On our side like the Token'd Pestilence,
Where death is sure. Your ribaudred Nagge of Egypt,
(Whom Leprosie o're) i'th'mid'st o'th'fight,
When vantage like a pair of Twinnes appear'd
Both of the same, or rather ours the elder;
(The Breeze upon her) like a Cow in June,
Hoists Sailes, and flies.

Enob. That I beheld:

Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not Indure a further view.

Scar. She once being loose,
The Noble ruine of her Magick, Anthony,
Claps on his Sea-wing, and (like a doating Mallard)
Leaving the Fight in height, flies after her:
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, Man-hood, Honour ne're before,
Did violate so it self.

Enob. Alack, alack.

Enter Camidius

Cam. Our Fortune on the Sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our General
Bin what he knew himself, it had gone well:
Oh he has given example for our flight;
Most grossely by his own.

Enob. I, are you thereabouts? Why then goodnight indeed.

Cam. Toward Peloponnesus are they fled.

Scar. 'Tis easie to't,
And there I will attend what further comes.

Camid. To Cesar will I render
My Legions and my horse, six Kings already Shew me the way of yielding.

Enob. I'll yet follow
The wounded chance of Anthony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me.

Enter Anthony with attendants

Ant. Hark, the Land bids me tread no more upon't,
It is atham'd to bear me. Friends, come hither,
I am so lated in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever. I have a ship,
Laden with Gold, take that, divide it: flye,
And make your peace with Cesar.

Omnes. Fly? Not we.

Ant. I have fled my self, and have instructed cowards
To run, and shew their shoulders. Friends, be gone,
I have my self, resolv'd upon a course,
Which has no need of you. Be gone,
My Treasure's in the Harbour. Take it: Oh,
I follow'd that I blush to look upon,
My very hairs do mutiny: for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear, and doating. Friends be gone, you shall Have Letters from me to some Friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you look not sad:
Nor make replies of loathness, take the hint
Which my despair proclaims. Let them be left
Which leaves it self, to Sea-side straightway;
I will possess you of that ship and Treasure.

Leave

Leave me, I pray, a little: pray you now,
Nay do so: for indeed I have lost command,
Therefore I pray you, I'll see you by and by. Sits down.

Enter Cleopatra, led by Charmian and Eros.

Eros. Nay, gentle Madam, to him, comfort him.

Iras. Do, most dear Queen.

Char. Do, why, what else?

Cleo. Let me sit down: Oh Junio.

Ant. No, no, no, no, no.

Eros. See you here, Sir?

Ant. Oh fie, fie, fie.

Char. Madam.

Iras. Madam, oh good Empress.

Eros. Sir, sir.

Ant. Yes, my Lord, yes; he at Philippi kept
His sword e'en like a dancer, while I strook
The lean and wrinkled Cassius, and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on Lieutenantry, and no practise had
In the brave squares of War: yet now: no matter.

Cleo. Ah stand by.

Eros. The Queen, my Lord, the Queen.

Iras. Go to him, Madam, speak to him,
He is unqualified with very shame.

Cleo. Well then, sustain me: Oh.

Eros. Most Noble Sir, arise, the Queen approaches,
Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her, but
Your comfort makes the rescue.

Ant. I have offended Reputation;
A most unnoble swerving.

Eros. Sir, the Queen.

Ant. O whither hast thou led me Egypt, see
How I convey my shame, out of thine eyes,
By looking back what I have left behind
Stroy'd in dishonour.

Cleo. Oh, my Lord, my Lord;
Forgive my fearfull fails, I little thought
You would have followed,

Ant. Egypt, thou knew'st too well,
My heart was to thy Rudder tyed by th'ftrings,
And thou should'st stowe me after. O're my spirit
The full supremacie thou knew'st, and that Thy beck, might from the bidding of the gods Command me.

Cleo. Oh, my pardon.

Ant. Now I must

To the young man send humble Treaties, dodge
And palter in the shifts of lowliness, who,
With half the bulk o'th'world plai'd as I pleas'd,
Making, and marring Fortunes. You did know
How much you were my Conqueror, and that My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cause.

Cleo. Pardon, pardon.

Ant. Fall not a tear I say, one of them rates
All that is won and lost: Give me a kiss,
Even this repays.

We sent our Schoolmaster, is a come back?

Love I am full of Lead: some Wine

Within there, and our Viands: Fortune knowes,

We scorn her most, when most she offers blows. Exeunt.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, Dolabella, with others.

Ces. Let him appear that's come for Anthony.
Know you him?

Dolla. Caesar, 'tis his Schoolmaster,

An argument that he is pluckt, when hither
He sends so poor a Pinnion of his Wing,
Which had superfluous Kings for Messengers,
Not many Moons gone by.

Enter Ambassador from Anthony.

Caesar. Approach, and speak.

Amb. Such as I am, I come from Anthony:
I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the Morn-dew on the Myrtle leaf
To his grand Sea.

Ces. Be't so, declare thine office.

Amb. Lord of his Fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt, which not granted
He lessens his requests, and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the Heavens and Earth
A private man in Athens: this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness:
Submits her to thy might, and of thee craves
The Circle of the Ptolomies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy Grace.

Ces. For Anthony,
I have no eares to his request. The Queen,
Of Audience, nor desire shall fail, so she
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced Friend.
Or take his life there. This if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Amb. Fortune pursue thee.

Ces. Bring him through the Bands:
To try thy Eloquence, now 'tis time, dispatch,
From Anthony win Cleopatra, promise
And in our Name, when she requires, adde more
From thine invention, offers. Women are not
In their best Fortunes strong; but want will perjure
The ne're touch'd Vestal. Try thy cunning, Thidias, Make thine own Edict for thy pains, which we Will answer as a Law.

Thid. Caesar, I go.

Ces. Observe how Anthony becomes his slave,
And what thou thinkest his very Action speaks
In every power that moves.

Thid. Caesar, I shall.

Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and dye.

Cleo. Is Anthony, or we in fault for this?

Eno. Anthony onely, that would make his will Lord of his Reason. What though you fled,
From that great face of War, whose several ranges
Frighted each other? Why should he follow?
The itch of his Affection should not then
Have nickt his Captain-ship, at such a point,
When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
The meered question? 'Tis a shame no less
Then was his loss, to curse your flying Flaggs,
And leave his Navy gazing.

Cleo. Prythee peace.

Enter the Ambassador, with Anthony.

Ant. Is this his answer?

Amb. I, my Lord.

Ant. The Queen shall then have courtesy,
So she will yield us up.

Amb. He says so.

Ant. Let her know'r. To the Boy Caesar send this grizled head, and he will fill thy wishes to the brim,
With Principalities;

Cleo. That head, my Lord?

Ant.

Ant. To him again, tell him he weares the Rose
Of youth upon him : from which, the world should note
Something particular : His Coyn, Ships, Legions,
May be a Cowards, whose Ministers would prevaile
Under the service of a Child, as soon
As ith' Command of Cesar. I dare him therefore To lay his gay comparisons apart
And answer me declin'd, sword against sword,
Our selves alone ; I'll write it, Follow me.

Eno. Yes, like enough : hye-battell'd Cesar will Unstate his happinesse, and be Stag'd to th' shew Against a Swordsman. I see mens judgements are
A parcell of their Fortunes, and things outward
Doe draw the inward quality after them
To suffer all alike, that he should dreame,
Knowing all measures, the full Cesar will Answer his emptinesse ; Cesar thou hast subdu'd
His judgement too.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. A Messenger from Cesar.

Cleo. What, no more Ceremony ? See my women,
Against the blown Rose may they stop their Nose,
That kneel'd unto the Buds. Admit him, sir.

Eno. Mine honesty, and I, begin to square,
The Loyalty well held to Fooles, does make
Our Faith meer Folly : yet he that can endure
To follow with Allegiance a faine Lord,
Do's conquer him that did his Master conquer,
And earns a place ith' Story.

Enter Thidias.

Cleo. Cesar's will.

Thid. Here it apart.

Cleo. None but friends : say boldly.

Thid. So haply are they friends to Anthony.

Eno. He needs as many (sir) as Cesar has.
Or needs not us. If Cesar please, our Master
Will leap to be his friend : For as you know,
Whose he is, we are, and that is Casars.

Thid. So. Thus then thou most renown'd, Cesar intreats
Not to consider in what case thou stand'st
Further than he is Cesar.

Cleo. Go on, right Royall.

Thid. He knows that you embrace not Anthony
As you did love, but as you feared him.

Cleo. Oh.

Thid. The scarres upon your honour, therefore he Do's pitty, as constrained blemishes,
Not as deserved.

Cleo. He is a god,
And knows what is most right. Mine honour
Was not yielded, but conquer'd meerly.

Eno. To be sure of that, I will ask Anthony.
Sir, sit, thou art so leaky
That we must leave thee thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee.

Exit Eno.

Thid. Shall I say to Cesar,
What you require of him : for he partly begs
To be desir'd to give. It much would please him,
That of his fortunes you should make a staffe
To lean upon. But it would warm his spirits
To hear from me you had left Anthony,
And put your self under his shrowd, the universall Landlord.

Cleo. What's your name ?

Thid. My name is Thidias.

Cleo. Most kind Messenger,
Say to great Cesar this in disputation,

I kisse his conqu'ring hand : Tell him, I am prompt
To lay my Crown at's feet, and there to kneele.
Tell him from his all-obeying breath, I hear
The doom of Egypt.

Thid. 'Tis your noblest course :
Wisedome and Fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Casars Father oft,
(When he hath mus'd of taking Kingdomes in)
Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kisses.

Enter Anthony, and Enobarbus.

Ant. Favours ? By Jove that thunders. What art thou, Thid. One that but performs (Fellow ?
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest
To have command obey'd.

Eno. You will be whipt.

Ant. Approach there : ah you Kite. Now gods and devils,
Authority melts from me of late. When I cri'd ho,
Like Boyes unto a muffle, Kings would start forth,
And cry your will. Have you no cares ?
I am Anthony yet. Take hence this Jack and whip him.

Enter a Servant.

Eno. 'Tis better playing with a Lyons whelp,
Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and Starres,
Whip him : were twenty of the greatest Tributaries
That doe acknowledge Cesar, should I find them
So sawey with the hand of she here, what's her name
Since she was Cleopatra ? Whip him, Fellowes,
Till like a Boy you see him crindge his face,
And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.

Thid. Marke Anthony.

Ant. Tug him away : being whipt,
Bring him again, the Jack of Casars shall Bear us an arrant to him. Exeunt with Thidias.
You were half blasted ere I knew you : Ha ?
Have I my pillow left unprest in Rome,
Forborn the getting of a lawfull Race,
And by a Jemme of Women, to be abus'd
By one that looks on Feeders ?

Cleo. Good my Lord.

Ant. You have been a boggler ever,
But when we in our viciousnesse grew hard
(Oh misery on't) the wise gods seale our eyes
In our own filth, drop our clear judgements, make us
Adore our errors, laugh at's while we strut
To our confusion.

Cleo. Oh, is't come to this ?

Ant. I found you as a Morfell, cold upon
Dead Cesar's Trencher : Nay, you were a Fragment
Of Cneius Pompey, besides what hotter houres
Unregistred in vulgar Fame, you have Luxuriously pickt out. For I am sure,
Though you can guesse what Temperance should be,
You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this ?

Ant. To let a Fellow that will take rewards,
And say, God quit you, be familiar with
My play-fellow, your hand ; this Kingly Seale,
And plighter of high hearts. O that I were
Upon the Hill of Babylon, to out-roare
The horned Heard, for I have Savage cause,
And to proclaime it civilly, were like

A halter'd neck, which do's the Hangman thank,
For being yare about him. Is he whipt?

Enter a Servant with Thidias.

Ser. Soundly, my Lord.

Ant. Cryed he? and begg'd a pardon?

Ser. He did aske favour.

Ant. If that thy Father live, let him repent
Thou wast not made his Daughter, and be thou sorry
To follow Cesar in his triumph, since
Thou hast been whipt. For following him, henceforth
The white hand of a Lady Fever thee,
Shake to look on't. Get thee back to Cesar,
Tell him thy entertainment: look thou say
He makes me angry with him. For he seems Proud and disdainfull, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry,
And at this time most easie 'tis to do't:
When my good starres, that were my former guides
Have empty left their Orbes, and shut their Fires
Into the Abisme of Hell. If he mislike,
My speech, and what is done, tell him he has Hiparchus, my enfranchised Bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like to quit me. Urge it thou:
Hence with thy stripes, be gone.

Exit Thid.

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack, our Terene Moon is now Eclipse,
And it portends alone the fall of Anthony.

Cleo. I must stay his time.

Ant. To flatter Cesar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points.

Cleo. Not know me yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah (Dear) if I be so,
From my cold heart, let heaven ingender Haile,
And poyson it in the source, and the first stone
Drop in my neck: as it determines so
Dissolve my life, the next Cæsarian smile,
Till by degrees the memory of my wombe,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discandring of this pelleted storme,
Lye gravelesse, till the Flies and Gnats of Nyle
Have buried them for prey.

Ant. I am satisfied:

Cesar sets down in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his Fate. Our force by Land,
Hath nobly held, and sever'd Navy too
Have knit again, and Fleet, threatening most Sea-like.
Where hast thou been my heart? Dost thou hear, Lady?
If from the Field I shall return once more
To kisse these lips, I will appear in blood,
I, and my Sword, will earn my Chronicle,
There's hope in't yet.

Cleo. That's my brave Lord.

Ant. I will be trebble-sinewed, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine houres
Were nice and lucky, men did ransoine lives
Of me for jests: but now, I'll set my teeth,
And send to darknesse all that stop me. Come,
Lets have one other gawdy night: Call to me
All my sad Captains, fill our Bowles once more:
Let's mock the midnight Bell.

Cleo. It is my Birth-day,
I had thought t'have held it poor. But since my Lord
Is Anthony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We will yet doe well.

Cleo. Call all his noble Caprains to my Lord,

Ant. Doe so, we'll speak to them,
And to night I'll force
The Wine, peep through their scarres,
Come on (my Queen)

There's sap in't yet. The next time I doe fight
I'll make death love me: for I will contend
Even with his pestilent Syche.

Exeunt.

Enob. Now he'll out-stare the Lightning, to be furious
Is to be frighted out of fear, and in that mood
The Dove will peck the Estridge; and I see still
A diminution in our Captains brain,
Restores his heart; when valour prays in reason,
It eats the Sword it fights with: I will seek
Some way to leave him.

Exeunt.

Enter Cesar, Agrippa, and Mecnas with his Army, Cesar reading a Letter.

Ces. He callme Boy, and chides as he had power
To beat me out of Egypt. My Messenger
He hath whipt with Rods, dares me to personall Combat.
Cesar to Anthony: let the old Ruffian know,
I have many other wayes to dye: mean time
Laugh at this Challenge.

Mece. Cesar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boot of his distraction: Never anger
Made good guard for it self.

Ces. Let our best heads know,
That to morrow, the last of many Battels
We mean to fight. Within our Files there are,
Of those that serv'd Marke Anthony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done,
And feast the Army, we have store to do't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Anthony. Exeunt.

Enter Anthony and Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, Iras, Alexas, with others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitian.

Enob. No?

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To morrow, Souldier,
By Sea and Land I'll fight: or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood,
Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight well.

Enob. I'll strike, and cry, take all.

Ant. Well said, come on:

Call forth my household servants, let's to night

Enter three or four Servitours.

Be bountious at our Meale. Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest, so hast thou,
Thou, and thou, and thou: you have serv'd me well,
And Kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. What meanes this?

En. 'Tis one of those odde tricks which sorrow shoots
Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too:
I wish I could be made so many men,
And all of you clapt up together, in
An Anthony: that I might doe you service,
So good as you have done.

Omnes.

Omnes. The Gods forbid.

Ant. Well, my good Fellowes, wait on me to night :
Scant not my Cups, and make as much of me
As when mine Empire was your Fellow too,
And suffered my command.

Cleo. What does he mean ?

Eno. To make his followers weep.

Ant. Tend me to night ;

May be it is the period of your duty,
Haply you shall not see me more, or if,
A mangled shadow. Perchance to morrow,
You'll serve another Master. I look on you,
As one that takes his leave. Mine honest Friends,
I turn you not away, but like a Master
Married to your good service, stay till death :
Tend me to night two houres, I ask no more,
And the gods yield you for't.

Enob. What mean you (sir)

To give them this discomfort ? Look, you weep,
And I, an Asse, am Onion-ey'd ; for shame,
Transforme us not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho, ho :

Now the Witch take me, if I meant it thus.
Grace grow where those drops fall (my hearty Friends)
You take me a too dolorous a sence ;
For I spake to you for your comfort, did desire you
To burn this night with Torches : know (my hearts)
I hope well of to morrow, and will lead you,
Where rather I'll expect victorious Life,
Then Death, and Honour. Let's to Supper, come,
And drown consideration. Exeunt.

Enter a company of Souldiers.

1. Sol. Brother, good night : to morrow is the day.

2. Sol. It will determine one way : Fare you well.

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets.

1. Nothing : what newes ?

2. Belike 'tis but a Rumour, good night to you.

1. Well sir, good night.

They meet with other Souldiers.

2. Souldiers, have carefull Watch.

1. And you : Good night, good night.

They place themselves in every corner of the Stage.

2. Here we, and if to morrow

Our Navy thrive, I have an absolute hope

Our Landmen will stand up.

1. 'Tis a brave Army, and full of purpose.

Musick of the Hoboyes is under the Stage.

2. Peace, what noyse ?

1. Lift, lift.

2. Harke.

1. Musick ith' Aire.

3. Under the earth.

It singes well, do's it not ?

3. No.

1. Peace I say : what should this mean ?

2. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Anthony loved,
Now leaves him.

1. Walke, let's see if other Watchmen

Doe hear what we doe ?

2. How now, Masters ?

Speak together.

Omnes. How now ? how now ? doe you hear this ?

1. Is't not strange ?

3. Doe you hear, Masters ? Doe you hear ?

1. Follow the noyse so farre as we have quarter.

Let's see how it will give off.

Omnes. Content : 'Tis strange.

Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, and Cleopatra, with others.

Ant. Eros, mine Armour, Eros.

Cleo. Sleep a little.

Ant. No, my Chuck : Eros, come, mine Armour, Eros.

Enter Eros.

Come, good fellow, put thine Iron on,
If Fortune be not out to day, it is Because we brave her. Come.

Cleo. Nay, I'll help too, Anthony.
What's this for ? Ah, let be, let be, thou art
The Armourer of my heart : False, false : This, this, Sooth-law I'll help : Thus it must be.

Ant. Well, well, we shall thrive now.
See'st thou my good Fellow. Go put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly, sir.

Cleo. Is not this buckled well ?

Ant. Rarely, rarely :

He that unbuckles this, till we doe please
To doft for our repose, shall hear a storme.
Thou fumblest Eros, and my Queen's a Squire
More tight at this : Dispatch. O Love,
That thou could'st see my warres to day, and knew'st
The Royall Occupation, thou should'st see
A workman in't.

Enter an armed Souldier.

Good morrow to thee, welcome,
Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike charge :
To businesse that we love, we rise betime,
And go to't with delight.

Soul. A thousand, Sir, early thought be, have on their Riveted trim, and at the Port expect you. Shout.

Trumpets flourish.

Enter Captains and Souldiers.

Alex. The Morn is fair : Good morrow Generall.

All. Good morrow Generall.

Ant. 'Tis well blown, Lad.

This morning like the spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.
So, so : Come give me that, what ere becomes of me,
Fare thee well, Dame, what ere becomes of me,
This is a Souldiers kisse : rebukeable,
And worthy shamefull check it were, to stand
On more Mechannick Complement, I'll leavethee.
Now like a man of Steele, you that will fight,
Follow me close, I'll bring you to't : Adieu. Exeunt.

Char. Please you retire to your Chamber ?

Cleo. Lead me :

Hegoes forth gallantly : that he and Cesar might Determine this great Warre in single fight ;
Then Anthony ; but now. Well on. Exeunt.

Trumpets sound. Enter Anthony, and Eros.

Eros. The gods make this a happy day to Anthony.

Ant. Would thou, and those thy scarres had once pre-
To make me fight at Land. (vail'd,

Eros. Hadst thou done so,

The Kings that have revolted, and the Souldier
That has this morning left thee, would have still Followed thy heeles.

Ant. Who's gone this morning ?

Eros. Who ? one ever near thee, call for Enobarbus.

B b b b 2

He

He shall not hear thee, or from Cesar's Camp,
Say I am none of thine.

Ant. What sayest thou?

Sold. Sir, he is with Cesar.

Eros. Sir, his Chests and Treasure he has not with him.

Ant. Is he gone?

Sol. Most certain.

Ant. Go, Eros, send his Treasure after, doe it;
Detain no jot I charge thee: write to him,
(I will subscribe) gentle adieus, and greetings:
Say, that I wish he never find more cause
To change a Master. Oh my fortunes have Corrupted honest men. Dispatch, Eros.

Exit.

Enter Agrippa, Cesar, with Enobarbus, and Dolabella.

Cas. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:
Our will is Anthony be took alive:
Make it so known.

Agrip. Cesar, I shall.

Cas. The time of universall peace is near,
Prove this a prosp'rous day, the three-nook'd world
Shall bear the Olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Anthony is come into the field.

Cas. Go charge Agrippa,
Plant those that have revolted in the Van,
That Anthony may seem to spend his Fury
Upon himself.

Exeunt.

Enob. Alexas did revolt, and went to Jewry on Affaires of Anthony; there did dissuade
Great Herod to incline himself to Cesar,
And leave his Master Anthony. For this pains
Cesar hath hang'd him: Camsidius and the rest
That fell away, have entertainment, but
No honourable trust: I have done ill,
Of which I doe accuse my self so sorely,
That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of Casars.

Sol. Enobarbus, Anthony
Hath after thee sent all thy Treasure, with His bounty over-plus. The Messenger
Came on my guard, and at thy Tent is now
Unloading of his Mules.

Eno. I give it you.

Sol. Mock not, Enobarbus,
I tell you true: Best you satisfie the bringer
Out of the hoast, I must attend mine Office,
Or would have done't my self. Your Emperor Continues still a Jove.

Exit.

Enob. I am alone the Villain of the Earth,
And feeble I am so most. Oh Anthony,
Thou Mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have payed
My better service, when my turpitude
Thou dost so Crown with Gold. This blowes my heart
If swift thought break it not: a swifted mean
Shall out-strike thought, but thought will do't. I feeble
I fight against thee: No, I will go seek
Some Ditch, where to dye: the foul't best fits
My latter part of life.

Exit.

Alarum. Drummes and Trumpets.

Enter Agrippa.

Agrip. Retire, we have engag'd our selves too farre:
Cesar himself has work, and our oppression
Exceeds what we expected.

Exit.

Alarums.

Enter Anthony, and Scarus wounded.

Scar. O my brave Emperour, this is fought indeed,
Had we done so at first, we had droven them home
With Clouts about their head.

Farre off.

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace.

Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T;
But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They doe retire.

Scar. We'll beat'em into Bench-holes, I have yet
Room for six scotches more.

Enter Eros.

Eros. They are beaten, Sir, and our advantage serves
For a fair victory.

Scar. Let us score their backs,
And snatch'em up, as we take Hares behind,
'Tis a sport to maule a Runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.

Scar. I'll halt after.

Exeunt.

*Alarum. Enter Anthony again in a March,
Scarus, with others.*

Ant. We have beat him to his Camp: Run one
Before, and let the Queen know of our guests: to-morrow
Before the Sun shall see's, we'll spill the blood
That has to day escap'd. I thank you all,
For doughty handed are you, and have fought
Not as you serv'd the Cause, but as't had been
Each mans like mine: you have shewn all Hectors,
Enter the City, clip your Wives, your Friends,
Tell them your feats, whil't they with joyfull teares
Wash the congealement from your wounds, and kisse
The honour'd gashes whole.

Enter Cleopatra:

Give me thy hand,
To this great Faiery, I'll commend thy acts,
Make her thanks blisse thee. O thou day oth' world,
Chain mine arm'd neck, leap thou, Attire and all
Through proof of Harnesse to my part, and there
Ride on the paints triumphing.

Cleo. Lord of Lords,
Oh infinite Virtue, com'st thou smiling from
The worlds great snare uncaught.

Ant. My Nightingale,
We have beat them to their Beds.
What, Girl, though gray

Do something mingle with our younger brown, yet ha we
A brain that nourishes our Nerves, and can Get gale for gale of youth. Behold this man,
Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand,
Kisse it my Warriour: He hath fought to day,
As if a god in hate of Mankind, had Destroyed in such a shape.

Cleo. I'll give thee, Friend,
An Armour all of Gold: it was a Kings.

Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it Carbunkled
Like holy Phæbus Carre. Give me thy hand,
Through Alexandria make a jolly March,
Bear our hackt Targets, like the men that owe them.
Had our great Palace the capacity
To Camp this hoast, we all would sup together,
And drink Carowfes to the next dayes Fate

Which

Which promises Royall perill. Trumpeters
With brazen dinne blast you the Cities eare.
Make mingle with our ratling Tabourines,
That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together,
Applauding our reproach. Exeunt.

Enter a Century, and his Company, Enobarbus follows.

Cent. If we be not reliev'd within this houre,
We must return to th' Court of Guard: the night
Is shiny, and they say, we shall embattle
By th' second houre ith' Morn.

1. Watch. This last day was a shrewde one to's.

Enob. Oh bear me witnesse night.

2. What man is this?

1. Stand close, and list him.

Enob. Be witnesse to me (O thou blessed Moon)
When men revolted shall upon Record
Bear hatefull memory: poor Enobarbus did
Before thy face repent.

Cent. Enobarbus?

3. Peace: harke further.

Enob. Oh Sovereign Mistris of true Melancholly,
The poysonous damp of night dispunge upon me,
That life, a very Rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me. Throw my heart
Against the flint and hardnesse of my fault,
Which being dried with grief, will break to powder,
And finish all foule thoughts: Oh Anthony,
Nobler then my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular,
But let the world rank me in Register
A Master leaver, and a fugitive:
Oh Anthony! Oh Anthony!

1. Let's speak to him.

Cent. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks
May concern Cesar.

2. Let's doe so, but he sleeps.

Cent. Swoonds rather, for so bad a Prayer as his
Was never yet for sleep.

1. Go we to him.

2. Awake, sir, awake, speak to us.

1. Hear you, sir?

Cent. The hand of death hath raught him.

Drummes afarre off.

Harke how the Drummes demurely wake the sleepers:
Let us bear him to th' Court of Guard: he is of note:
Our hour is fully out.

2. Come on then, he may recover yet. Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, and Scarus, with their Army.

Ant. Their preparation is to day by Sea,
We please them not by Land.

Scar. For both, my Lord.

Ant. I would they'd fight ith' Fire, or ith' Aire,
We'd fight there too. But this it is, our Foot
Upon the hills adjoining to the City
Shall stay with us. Order for Sea is given,
They have put forth the haven:
Where their appointment we may best discover,
And look on their endeavour. Exeunt.

Enter Cesar, and his Army.

Ces. But being charg'd, we will be still by Land,
Which as I tak't we shall, for his best force
Is forth to Man his Gallies. To the Vales,

And hold our best advantage.

Exeunt.

Alarum afarre off, as at a Sea-fight.

Enter Anthony, and Scarus

Ant. Yet they are not joyn'd:

Where yond Pine does stand, I shall discover all.
I'll bring the word straight, how 'tis like to go. Exit

Scar. Swallowes have built

In Cleopatras Sailes their nests. The Auguries
Say, they know not, they cannot tell, look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge. Anthony
Is valiant, and dejected, and by starts
His fretted Fortunes give him hope and fear
Of what he has, and has not.

Enter Anthony.

Ant. All is lost:

This foule Egyptian hath betrayed me:
My Fleet hath yielded to the Foe, and yonder,
They cast their Caps up, and Carowse together
Like friends long lost. Tripple-turn'd Whore, 'tis thou Hast sold me to this Novice, and my heart
Makes onely Warres on thee. Bid them all flye:
For when I am reveng'd upon my Charme,
I have done all. Bid them all flye, begone.
Oh Sun, thy uprise shall I see no more;
Fortune and Anthony part here, even here
Doe we shake hands? All come to this? The hearts
That pannelled me at heeles, to whom I gave
Their wishes, doe dis-Candy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Cesar: and this Pine is barkt,
That over-top't them all. Betray'd I am.
Oh this false soule of Egypt! this grave Charme,
Whose eye beck'd forth my Wars, and call'd them home:
Whose Bosome was my Crowner, my chief end,
Like a right Gypsie, hath at fast and loose
Beguil'd me, to the very heart of losse.
What Eros, Eros?

Enter Cleopatra.

Ah, thou Spell! Avant.

Cleo. Why is my Lord enrag'd againk his Love?

Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving,
And blemish Casars Triumph. Let him take thee,
And hoist thee up to th' shouting Plebeians,
Follow his Chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy Sex. Most Monster-like be shewn
For poor't Diminutives, for Dolts, and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nailes. Exit Cleopatra.

'Tis well th'art gone,
If it be well to live. But better 'twere
Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many. Eros, hoa?
The shirt of Nessus is upon me, teach me
Aleides, thou mine Ancestor, thy rage.
Let me lodge Licas on the horns oth' Moon,
And with those hands that graspt the heaviest Club,
Subdue my worthiest self: the Witch shall dye:
To the young Roman Boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under his plot: she dyes fort. Eros, hoa? Exit.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, Mardian.

Cleo. Help me, my Womau: Oh he is more mad
Then Telamon for his Shield, the Boar of Theffaly
Was never so imboist.

Char. To th' Monument, there lock your self,
And send him word you are dead:

B b b b 3

The

The soule and body rive not more in parting,
Then greatnesse going off.

Cleo. To th' Monument :

Mardian, go tell him I have slain my self :

Say, that the last I spoke was Anthony,

And word it (prethee) pittiously. Hence, Mardian,

And bring me how he takes my death to th' Monument.

Exeunt.

Enter Anthony, and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me ?

Eros. I, Noble Lord.

Ant. Sometime we see a cloud that's Dragonish,

A vapour sometime, like a Bear, or Lyon,

A toward Cittadell, a pendant Rock,

A forked Mountain, or blew Promontory

With Trees upon't, that nodde unto the world,

And mock our eyes with Aire.

Thou hast seen these signes,

They are black Vesper's Pageants.

Eros. I, my Lord.

Ant. That which is now a Horse, even with a thought

The Rack dissimes, and makes it indistinct

As water is in water.

Eros. It do's, my Lord.

Ant. My good Knave, Eros, now thy Captain is Even such a body : here I am Anthony,

Yet cannot hold this visible shape (my Knave)

I made these warres for Agypt, and the Queen,

Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine :

Which whil'st it was mine, had annex unto't

A Million moe (now lost :) she, Eros, has

Packt Cards with Casars, and false plaid my Glory

Unto an Enemy's triumph.

Nay, weep not, gentle Eros, there is left us

Our selves to end our selves.

Enter Mardian.

Oh thy vilde Lady, she has robb'd me of my Sword.

Mar. No, Anthony,

My Mistris lov'd thee, and her Fortunes mingled

With thine intirely.

Ant. Hence, sawcy Eunuch, peace, she hath betraid me,
And shall dye the death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once,

And that she has discharg'd. What thou would'st doe

Is done unto thy hand : the last she spake

Was Anthony, most Noble Anthony :

Then in the midst a tearing groan did break

The name of Anthony : it was divided

Between her heart and lips : she tendred life

Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead then ?

Mar. Dead.

Ant. Unarme, Eros, the long dayes taske is done,

And we must sleep : that thou depart'st hence safe

Does pay thy labour richly : go. Exit Mardian.

Oh, pluck off,

The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep

The battery from my heart. Oh cleave my sides.

Heart, once be stronger then thy Continent,

Crack thy fraile Case. Apace, Eros, apace :

No more a Souldier : bruised peeces go,

You have bin Nobly born. From me awhile. Exit Eros

I will o're-take thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now

All length is Torture : since the Torch is out,

Lye down and stray no farther. Now all labour

Marres what it does : yea, very force entangles
It self with strength : Seale then and all is done.

Eros ? I come, my Queen. Eros ? Say for me,

Where Soules doe couch on Flowers ; we'll hand in hand,

And with our sprightly Port make the Ghostes gaze :

Dido, and her Aeneas shall want Troops,

And all the haunt be ours. Come Eros, Eros.

Enter Eros.

Eros. What would my Lord ?

Ant. Since Cleopatra died,

I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the gods

Detest my basenesse. I, that with my Sword,

Quarter'd the World, and o're-green Neprunes back

With Ships, made Citties ; condemn my self, to lack

The Courage of a Woman, lesse Noble minde

Then she which by her death, our Cesar tells

I am Conqueror of my self. Thou art sworn Eros,

That when the exigent should come, which now

Is come indeed : when I should see behind me

Th' inevitable prosecution of disgrace and horror,

That on my command, thou then would'st kill me.

Do't, the time is come : thou strik'st not me,

'Tis Cesar thou defeat'st. Put colour in my cheek.

Eros. The gods with-hold me,

Shall I doe that which all the Parthian Darts,

(Though Enemy) lost ayme, and could not.

Ant. Eros,

Would'st thou be window'd in great Rome, and see

Thy Master thus with pleacht Armes, bending down

His corrigible neck, his face subdu'd

To penetrative shame ; whil'st the wheel'd seat

Of fortunate Cesar drawn before him, branded

His basenesse that ensued.

Eros. I would not see't.

Ant. Come then : for with a wound I must be cur'd.

Draw that thy honest Sword which thou hast worn

Most usefull for thy Country.

Eros. Oh, sir, pardon me.

Ant. VVhen I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then

To doe this when I bad thee ? Doe it at once.

Or thy precedent Services are all

But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come.

Eros. Turn from me then that Noble countenance,

VVherein the worship of the whole world lies.

Ant. Loe thee.

Eros. My Sword is drawn.

Ant. Then let it doe at once

The thing why thou hast drawn it.

Eros. My dear Master,

My Captain, and my Emperour. Let me say

Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.

Ant. 'Tis said man, and farewell.

Eros. Farewell great Chief. Shall I strike now ?

Ant. Now, Eros.

Kills himself.

Eros. VVhy there then :

Thus I doe escape the sorrow of Anthony's death.

Ant. Thrice-Nobler then my self,

Thou teachest me : Oh valiant Eros, what

I should, and could'st not, my Queen and Eros

Have by their brave instruction got upon me

A Noblenesse in Record. But I will be

A Bride-groom in my death, and run into't

As to a Lovers bed. Come then, and Eros,

Thy Master dies thy Schollar : to doe thus

I learnt of thee. How, not dead ? not dead ?

The Guard, how ? oh dispatch me.

Enter

Enter a Guard.

1. Guard. VVhat's the noyse?

Ant. I have done my work, ill friends:
Oh make an end of what I have begun.

2. The Starre is faln.

1. And time is at his Period.

All. Alafs, and woe.

Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead.

1. Not I.

2. Nor I.

3. Nor any one.

Exeunt.

Decr. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers flye.
This Sword but shewn to Cesar with this tidings,
Shall enter me with him.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. VVhere's Anthony?

Decr. There, Diomed, there.

Diom. Lives he? wilt thou not answer man?

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed?

Draw thy sword, and give me
Sufficing strokes for death.

Dio. Most absolute Lord,
My Mistris Cleopatra sent me to thee.

Ant. VVhen did she send thee?

Diom. Now, my Lord.

Ant. VVhere is she?

(feare)

Diom. Lockt in her Monument: she had a Propheying
Of what hath come to passe: for when she saw (VVhich never shall be found) you did suspect
She had dispos'd with Cesar, and that your rage
VVould not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead:
But fearing since how it might work, hath sent Me to proclaime the truth, and I am come
I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed: call my Guard I prethee.

Dio. VVhat hoa: the Emperours Guard.
The Guard, what hoa? Come, your Lord calls.

Enter four or five of the Guard of Anthony.

Ant. Bear me, good Friends, where Cleopatra bides,
'Tis the last service that I shall command you.

1. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear
All your true Followers out.

All. Most heavy day.

Ant. Nay, good my fellowes, do not please sharp fate
To grace it with your sorrowes. Bid that welcome
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it
Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up,
I have led you oft, carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all. Exeunt bearing Anthony.

Enter Cleopatra, and her Maids aloft, with Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. Oh Charmian, I will never go from hence.

Char. Be comforted, dear Madam.

Cleo. No, I will not:
All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great
As that which makes it.

Enter Diomed.

How now? is he dead?

Diom. His deaths upon him, but not dead.
Look out oth' other side your Monument,
His Guard have brought him hither.

Enter Anthony, and the Guard.

Cleo. O Sun,

Burn the great Sphere thou mov'st in, darkling stand
The varying shore oth' world. O Anthony, Anthony, Anthony,
Help, Charmian, help, Irás, help: help, friends,
Below, let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace,

Not Casars Valour hath o're-thrown Anthony,
But Anthony hath Triumpht on it self.

Cleo. So it should be,

That none but Anthony should conquer Anthony,
But woe 'tis so.

Ant. I am dying, Agypt, dying: onely
I here importune death awhile, untill
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips.

Cleo. I dare not, Dear,

Dear my Lord pardon: I dare not,
Least I be taken: not th' Imperious shew
Of the full-fortun'd Cesar, ever shall Be broach'd with me, if Knife, Drugs, Serpents have Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe:
Your Wife Octavia, with her modest eyes,
And still conclusion, shall acquire honour
Demuring upon me: but, come, come, Anthony,
Help me, my women, we must draw thee up:
Assist, good friends.

Ant. Oh quick, or I am gone,

Cleo. Here's sport indeed:
How heavy weighs my Lord?
Our strength is all gone into heaviness,
That makes the weight. Had I great Juno's power,
The strong wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up,
And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,
Wishers were ever Fooles. Oh come, come, come.

They heave Anthony aloft to Cleopatra.

And welcome, welcome. Dye when thou hast liv'd,
Quickened with kissing: had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.

All. A heavy sight.

Ant. I am dying, Agypt, dying.
Give me some Wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak, and let me raile so high,
That the false Huswife, Fortune, break her Wheele,
Provok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word (sweet Queen)

Of Cesar seek your honour, with your safety. Oh.

Cleo. They doe not go together.

Ant. Gentle, hear me,

None about Cesar trust, but Proculeius.

Cleo. My Resolution, and my hands, I'll trust,
None about Cesar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end,
Lament nor sorrow at: but please your thoughts
In feeding them with those my former Fortunes
Wherein I lived. The greatest Prince oth' world,
The Noblest: and doe not basely dye,
Not Cowardly put of my Helmet to My Countryman. A Roman, by a Roman
Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my spirit is going,
I can no more.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die?
Hast thou no care of me, shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is No better then a Styx? Oh see, my women:
The Crown oth' earth doth melt. My Lord?
Oh wither'd is the Garland of the Warre.

The

The Souldiers pole is faine : young Boyes and Girles
Are leuell now with men : The oddes is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable
Beneath the visiting Moon.

Char. Oh quietnesse, Lady.

Iras. She's dead too, our Sovereign.

Char. Lady.

Iras. Madam.

Char. Oh Madam, Madam, Madam.

Iras. Royall Agypt : Empreffe.

Char. Peace, peace, Iras.

Cleo. No more but in a Woman, and commanded
By such poor passion, as the Maid that Milks,
And does the meanest chares. It were for me
To throw my Scepter at the injurious gods,
To tell them that this World did equall theirs,
Till they had stoln our Jewel. All's but naught :
Patience is fottish, and impatience does
Become a Dog that's mad : then is it sin,
To rush into the secret house of death,
Ere death dare come to us ? How doe you, Women ?
What, what good cheer ? Why how now, Charmian ?
My Noble Girles ? Ah women, women ! Look,
Our Lamp is spent, it's out. Good sirs, take heart,
We'll bury him : And then, what's brave, what Noble,
Let's do't after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come, away,
This case of that huge Spirit now is cold.
Ah women, women ! Come, we have no friend
But Resolution, and the briefest end.

Exeunt, bearing of Antonies body.

Enter Cesar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Menas, with his Counsel of Warre.

Cesar. Go to him Dolabella, bid him yield,
Being so frustrate, tell him,
He mocks the pawfes that he makes.

Dol. Cesar, I shall.

Enter Decretas with the sword of Anthony.

Cas. Wherefore is that ? and what art thou that dar'st Appear thus to us ?

Dec. I am call'd Decretas,

Mark Anthony I serv'd, who best was worthy
Best to be serv'd : whil'st he stood up, and spoke
He was my Master, and I wore my life
To spend upon his haters. If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him,
I'll be to Cesar : if thou pleasest not, I yield thee up my

Cas. What is't thou say'st ? (life.)

Dec. I say (Oh Cesar) Anthony is dead.

Cas. The breaking of so great a thing, should make
A greater crack. The round World
Should have shook Lyons into civil streets,
And Citizens to their dennes. The death of Anthony
Is not a single doome, in the name lay
A moiety of the world.

Dec. He is dead, Cesar,
Not by a publick minister of Justice,
Nor by a hired Knife, but that self-hand
Which writ his honour in the Acts it did,
Hath with the Courage which the heart did lend it,
Splitted the heart. This is his Sword,
I robb'd his wound of it : behold it stain'd
With his most Noble blood.

Cas. Look you, sad friends,

The gods rebuke me, but it is a Tidings
To wash the eyes of Kings.

Dol. And strange it is,
That Nature must compell us to lament
Our most persisted deeds.

Men. His taints and honours may, equall with him.

Dol. A Rarer spirit never Did steere humanity : but you gods will give us
Some faults to make us men. Cesar is touch'd.

Men. When such a spacious Mirror's set before him,
He needs must see himself.

Cas. Oh Anthony,
I have followed thee to this, but we do launch
Diseases in our Bodies. I must perforce
Have shewn to thee such a declining day,
Or look on thine : we could not stail together,
In the whole world. But yet let me lament
With teares as Sovereign as the blood of hearts,
That thou my brother, my Competitor,
In top of all design ; my Mate in Empire,
Friend and Companion in the front of Warre,
The Arme of mine own Body, and the heart
Where mine his thoughts did kindle ; that our Starres Unreconcilable, should divide our equalnesse to this.
Hear me, good friends,
But I will tell you at some meete Season,
The businesse of this man looks out of him,
We'll hear him what he sayes.

Enter an Egyptian.

Whence are you ?

Agyp. A poor Egyptian yet, the Queen my Mistris
Confin'd in all, she has her Monument
Of thy intents, desires, instruction,
That she preparedly may frame her self
To th' way she's forc'd to.

Cas. Bid her have good heart,
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honourable, and how kindly we Determine for her. For Cesar cannot leave to be ungentle

Agyp. So the gods preserve thee.

Exit.

Cas. Come hither Proculeius, go and say
We purpose her no shame : give her what comforts
The quality of her passion shall require ;
Least in her greatnesse, by some mortall stroke
She doe defeat us. For her life in Rome
Would be eternall in our triumph : go,
And with your speediest bring us what she sayes,
And how you find of her.

Pro. Cesar, I shall.

Exit Proculeius.

Cas. Gallus, go you along : where's Dolabella, to second Proculeius ?

All Dolabella.

Cas. Let him alone : for I remember now
How he's employ'd : he shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my Tent, where you shall see
How hardly I was drawn into this Warre,
How calme and gentle I proceeded still
In all my Writings. Go with me, and see
What I can shew in this.

Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life : 'Tis paltry to be Cesar :
Not being fortune, he's but fortunes knave,
A minister of her will : and it is great

To

To doe that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which shackles accidents, and bolts up change ;
Which sleeps, and never pallats more the dung,
The Beggar's Nuiſe, and Caſars.

Enter Proculeius.

Pro. Caſar ſends greeting to the Queen of Egypt,
And bids thee ſtudy on what fair demands
Thou mean'ſt to have him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name ?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. Anthony

Did tell me of you, bad me truſt you, but
I doe not greatly care to be deceiv'd
That have no uſe for truſting. If your Maſter
Would have a Queen his Beggar, you muſt tell him,
That Maſteſty, to keep decorum, muſt
No leſſe begge then a Kingdome : if he pleaſe
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my Son,
He gives me ſo much of mine own, as I
Will kneele to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer :
Y'are ſain into a Princely hand, fear nothing.
Make your full reference freely to my Lord,
Who is full of Grace, that it flowes over
On all that need. Let me report to him
Your ſweet dependency, and you ſhall find
A Conqueror that will pray in aid for kindneſſe,
Where he for Grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. Pray you tell him,
I am his Fortunes Vaſſall, and I ſend him
The greatneſſe he has got. I hourly learn
A Doctrin of Obedience. And would gladly
Look him ith' Face.

Pro. This I'll report (dear Lady)
Have comfort, for I know your plight is pittied
Of him that cauſ'd it.

Char. You ſee how eaſily ſhe may be ſurpris'd :
Guard her till Caſar come.

Iras. Royall Queen.

Char. Oh Cleopatra, thou art taken Queen.

Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

Pro. Hold, worthy Lady, hold :
Doe not your ſelf ſuch wrong, who are in this Reliev'd, but not betray'd.

Cleo. What of death too that rids our dogs of languish ?

Pro. Cleopatra, doe not abuſe my Maſters bounty, by Th'undoing of your ſelf : Let the world ſee
His Nobleneſſe well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, Death ?
Come hither, come : Come, and take a Queen
VVorth many Babes and Beggars.

Pro. Oh temperance, Lady.

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, ſir ;
If idle talk will once be neceſſary
I'll not ſleep neither. This mortall houſe I'll ruine, Doe Caſar what he can. Know, ſir, that I
VVill not wait pinnion'd at your Maſters Court,
Not once to be chaſtis'd with the ſober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up,
And ſhew me to the ſhouting Varlotry
Of cenſuring Rome ? rather a ditch in Egypt.
Be gentle, grave, unto me : rather on Nylus mudde
Lay me ſtark nak'd, and let the water-Flies
Blow me into abhorring ; rather make My Countreys high Pyramids my Gibbet,

And hang me up in Chains.

Pro. You doe extend
Theſe thoughts of horroure further then you ſhall
Finde cauſe in Caſar.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. Proculeius,
VVhat thou haſt done, thy Maſter Caſar knowes,
And he hath ſent for thee : as for the Queen,
I'll take her to my Guard.

Pro. So Dolabella

It ſhall content me beſt : be gentle to her :
To Caſar I will ſpeak what you ſhall pleaſe,
If you'll employ me to him. Exit Proculeius.

Cleo. Say, I would dye.

Dol. Moſt Noble Empreſſe, you have heard of me.

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Affuredly you know me.

Cleo. No matter, ſir, what I have heard or known :
You laugh when Boyes or VVomen tell their Dreames,
Is't not your trick ?

Dol. I underſtand not, Madam.

Cleo. I dreamt there was an Emperour Anthony,
Oh ſuch another ſleep, that I might ſee
But ſuch another man.

Dol. If it might pleaſe ye.

Cleo. His face was as the heavens, and therein ſtuck
A Sun and Moon, which kept their courſe, and lighted
The little oth' Earth.

Dol. Moſt Sovereign Creature.

Cleo. His Legs beſtrid the Ocean, his rear'd Arme
Crested the world : his voyce was propertied
As all the tuned Spheres, and that to friends :
But when he meant to quail, and ſhake the Orbe,
He was as ratling Thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in't. An Anthony it was,
That grew the more by reaping : his delights
VVere Dolphin-like, they ſhew'd his back above
The Element they liv'd in ; In his Livery
VValk'd Crowns and Crownets : Realmes and Iſlands
As plates dropt from his pocket.

Dol. Cleopatra.

Cleo. Think you there was, or might be ſuch a man
As this I dreamt of ?

Dol. Gentle Madam, no.

Cleo. You Lye up to the hearing of the gods :
But if there be, or ever were one ſuch
Its paſt the ſize of dreaming : Nature wants ſtuffe
To vye ſtrange formes with fancy, yet t' imagine
An Anthony with Natures piece, 'gainſt Fancy, Condemning ſhadowes quite.

Dol. Hear me, good Madam :

Your loſſe is as you ſelf, great ; and you bear it
As anſwering to the weight, would I might never O're-take purſu'd ſucceſſe : but I doe feel
By the rebound of yours, a grief that ſuits
My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, ſir :

Know you what Caſar meanes to doe with me ?

Dol. I am loth to tell you what, I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, ſir.

Dol. Though he be honourable.

Cleo. He'll lead me then in triumph.

Dol. Madam, he will, I know't.

Enter Proculeius, Caſar, Gallus, Mecenas, and others of his Train.

All. Make way there, Caſar.

Caſar

Cas. Which is the Queen of Egypt.

Dol. It is the Emperor, Madam.

Cas. Arise, you shall not kneele :

I pray you rise, rise Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods will have it thus,
My Master and my Lord I much obey,

Cas. Take to you no hard thoughts,
The Record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole Sir oth' world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well
To make it clear, but doe confesse I have Been laden with like frailties, which before
Have often sham'd our Sex.

Cas. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather then inforce :
If you apply your self to our intents,
Which towards you are most gentle, you shall finde
A benefit in this change, but if you seek
To lay on me a Cruelty, by taking Anthony's course, you shall bereave your self
Of my good purposes, and put your Children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from.
If thereon you relye. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may through all the world: 'tis yours, and we Your Scutcheons, and your signs of Conquest shall Hang in what place you please. Here, my good Lord.

Cas. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the brief: of Money, Plate, and Jewels
I am possess'd of, 'tis exactly valued,
Nor petty things admitted. Whereas Seleucus ?

Selen. Here, Madam.

Cleo. This is my Treasurer, let him speak (my Lord)
Upon his perill, that I have reserv'd
To my self nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.

Selen. Madam, I had rather seale my lips,
Then to my perill speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back ?

Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Cas. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra, I approve
Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See *Cas*ar : Oh behold,
How pomp is followed : mine will now be yours,
And should we shift Estates, yours would be mine,
The ingratitude of this Seleucus, do's
Even make me wilde. Oh Slave, of no more trust
Then love that's hir'd ? What, goest thou back, thou shalt
Go back I warrant thee : but I'll catch thine eyes
Though they had wings. Slave, soule-lesse, Villain, Dog,
O rarely base !

Cas. Good Queen, let us entreat you.

Cleo. O *Cas*ar, what a wounding shame is this,
That thou vouchsafing here to visit me,
Doing the honour of thy Lordlinesse
To one so meek, that mine own Servant should Parcel the summe of my disgraces, by Addition of his Envy ! Say (good *Cas*ar)
That I some Lady-trifles have reserv'd,
Immoment toyes, things of such Dignity
As we greet modern friends withall, and say
Some Nobler token I have kept apart
For Livia and Octavia, to induce
Their meditation, must I be unfolded
With one that I have bred : the gods ! it smites me
Beneath the fall I have. Prethee go hence,

Cleo. kneeles.

Or I shall shew the Cynders of my spirits
Through th' ashes of my chance : Wer't thou a man,
Thou would'st have mercy on me.

Cas. Forbear, Seleucus.

Cleo. Be it known, that we the greatest are mis-thought
For things that others doe : and when we fall,
We answer others merits, in our name
Are therefore to be pittied.

Cas. Cleopatra,

Nor what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd
Put we ith' Roll of Conquest : still be't yours,
Bestow it at your pleasure, and believe
*Cas*ar's no Merchant, to make prize with you
Of things that Merchants fold. Therefore be cheer'd,
Make not your thoughts your prisons : No, dear Queen,
For we intend so to dispose you, as
Your self shall give us counsell : Feed, and sleep :
Our care and pitty is so much upon you,
That we remain your friend, and so adieu.

Cleo. My Master, and my Lord.

Cas. Not so : Adieu.

*Exeunt Cas*ar, and his train.

Cleo. He words me, Girles, he words me,
That I should not be noble to my self.

But haike thee, Charmian.

Iras. Finish, good Lady, the bright day is done,
And we are for the darke.

Cleo. Hye thee again.
I have spoke already, and it is provided,
Go put it to the haste.

Charm. Madam, I will.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. Where's the Queen ?

Char. Behold, sir.

Cleo. Dolabella.

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn, by your command
(Which my love makes Religion to obey)
I tell you this : *Cas*ar through Syria
Intends his journey, and within three dayes,
You with your Children will be send before,
Make your best use of this. I have perform'd
Your pleasure, and my promise.

Clo. Dolabella, I shall remain your debtor.

Dol. I your Servant :

Adieu, good Queen. I must attend on *Cas*ar. Exit.

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks.

Now, Iras, what think'st thou ?
Thou, an Egyptian Puppet, shalt be shewn
In Rome as well as I : Mechanick Slaves
With greasie Aprons, Rules, and Hammers shall Uplift us to the view. In their thick breaths,
Rank of grosse Diet, shall we be enclouded,
And forc'd to drink their vapour.

Iras. The gods forbid.

Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras : sawcy Lictors
Will catch at us like Strumpets, and scall'd Rimers Ballad us out a tune. The quick Comedians
Extemporally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandria Revels : Anthony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see
Some speaking-Cleopatra-Boy my greatnesse
Ith' posture of a Whore.

Iras. O the good gods !

Cleo. Nay that's certain.

Iras. I'll never see't ; for I am sure my Nails
Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo.

Cleo. Why that's the way to foole their preparation,
And conquer their most absurd intents.

Enter Charmian.

Now Charmian.

Shew me my Women like a Queen : Go fetch
My best Attires. I am again for Cidrus
To meet Marke Anthony. Sirrah Irás, go,
(Now, noble Charmian, we'll dispatch indeed,)
And when thou hast done this chare. I'll give thee leave
To play till Doomes-day : bring our Crown, and all.

A noyse within.

Wherefore this noyse ?

Enter a Guardsman.

Guardf. Here is a rurall Fellow,
That will not be deni'd your Highnesse presence,
He brings you Figs.

Cleo. Let him come in.

Exit Guardsman.

How poor an Instrument
May doe a noble deed : he brings me liberty :
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me : Now from head to foot
I am Marble constant : now the fleeting Moon
No Planet is of mine.

Enter Guardsman and Clown.

Guardf. This is the Man.

Cleo. Avoid and leave him.

Exit Guardsman.

Hast thou the pretty worme of Nylus there,
That kills and pains not ?

Clow. Truly I have him : but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortall : those that doe dye of it, doe seldome or never recover.

Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have di'd on't ?

Clow. Very many men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday, a very honest woman, but something given to lye, as a woman should not doe, but in the way of honesty, how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt : Truly, she makes a very good report oth' worme : but he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they doe : but this is most fallible, the Worme's an odde Worme.

Cleo. Get thee hence, farewell.

Clow. I wish you all joy of the Worme.

Cleo. Farewell.

Clow. You must think this (look you) that the Worm will doe his kinde.

Cleo. I, I, farewell.

Clow. Look you, the Worme is not to be trusted, but in the keeping of wise people : for indeed, there is no goodnesse in the Worme.

Cleo. Take no care, it shall be heeded.

Clow. Very good : give it nothing I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me ?

Clow. You must not think I am so simple, but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman : I know, that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dresse her not.
But truly, these same whorson devils doe the gods great harme in their women : for in every ten that they make,
the devils marre five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone, farewell.

Clow. Yes forsooth, I wish you joy oth' worme. Exit.

Cleo. Give me my Robe, put on my Crown, I have Immortall longings in me. Now no more
The juice of Egypt's Grape shall moist his lip.
Yare, yare, good Irás, quick : me thinks I hear

Anthony call : I see him rowle himself
To praise my Noble Aét. I hear him mock
The luck of Cesar, which the gods give men
To excuse their after wrath. Husband, I come :
Now to that name, my courage prove my Title.
I am Fire, and Aire ; my other Elements
I give no baser life. So, have you done ?
Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips.
Farewell kinde Charmian, Irás, long farewell.
Have I the Aspick in my lips ? Dost fall ?
If thou and Nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a Lovers pinch,
Which hurts, and is desir'd. Dost thou lie still ?
If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world
It is not worth leave taking.

Char. Dissolve thick Cloud and Rain, that I may say,
The gods themselves doe weep.

Cleo. This proves me base :

If she proves the curld Anthony,
He'll make demand of her, and spend that kisse
Which is my heaven to have. Come thou mortal wretch,
With thy sharp teeth this knot intricate,
Of life at once untie : Poor venomous Foole,
Be angry and dispatch. Oh could'st thou speak,
That I might hear thee call great Cesar Aét, unpolicied.

Char. Oh Eastern starre.

Cleo. Peace, peace :

Dost thou not see my Baby at my breast,
That sucks the Nurse asleep.

Char. O break ! O break !

Cleo. As sweet as Balme, as soft as Aire, as gentle.
O Anthony ! Nay I will take thee too.

What should I stay-----

Dies.

Char. In this wild world ? So fare thee well :
Now boast thee death, in thy possession lies
A Lasse unparalell'd. Downy Windows cloze,
And golden Phœbus never be beheld
Of eyes again so Royall : your Crowns away,
I'll mend it, and then play-----

Enter the Guard rustling in, and Dolabella.

1. Guard. Where's the Queen ?

Char. Speak softly, wake her not.

1. Cesar hath sent.

Char. Too slow a Messenger.

Oh come apace, dispatch, I partly feel thee.

1. Approach hoa,

All's not well : Cesar's beguil'd.

2. There's Dolabella sent from Cesar : call him.

1. What work is here, Charmian ?

Is this well done ?

Char. It's well done, and fitting for a Princessle Descended of so many Royall Kings.

Ah Souldier.

Charmian dyes.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it here ?

2. Guard. All dead.

Dol. Cesar, thy thoughts

Touch their effects in this : thy self art comming
To see perform'd the dreaded Aét which thou
So sought'st to hinder.

Enter Cesar and all his train, marching.

All. Make way there, make way for Cesar.

Dol.

Dol. Oh, Sir, you are too sure an Augurer:
That you did fear, is done.

Cesar. Bravest at the last,
She levell'd at our purposes, and being Royall
Took her own way: the manner of their deaths,
I doe not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?

1. Guard. A simple Countryman, that brought her Figs:
This was his Basket.

Cas. Poyson'd then.

1. Guard. Oh Cesar:
This Charmian liv'd but now, she stood and spake:
I found her trimming up the Diadem,
On her dead Mistris, tremblingly she stood,
And on the sudden dropt.

Cesar. Oh noble weaknesse:
If they had swallowed poyson, 'twould appeare.
By externall swelling: but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Anthony
In her strong toyle of Grace.

Dol. Here on her brest,
There is a vent of blood, and something blown,
The like is on her Arme.

1. Guard. This an Aspects traile
And these Fig-leaves have slime upon them such
As th'Aspick leaves upon the Caves of Nyle.

Cas. Most probable

That so she dyed: for her Physician tells me
She hath pursu'd Conclusions infinite
Of easie wayes to dye. Take up her Bed,
And bear her Women from the Monument,
She shall be buried by her Anthony.
No Grave upon the earth shall clip in it
A pair so famous: high events as these Strike those that make them: and their story is No lesse in pittie, than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our Army shall
In Solemn shew, attend this Funerall,
And then to Rome. Come Dolabella, see
High Order in this great Solemnity. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.

The Tragedy of CYMBELINE.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent.

You do not meet a man but frowns,
Our blouds no more obey the heavens
Then our Courtiers:
Still seem as do's the Kings.

2. Gent. But what's the matter?

1. His daughter, and the heir of's Kingdome (whom
He purpos'd to his wives sole son, a Widow
That late he married) hath referr'd her self Unto a poor, but worthy Gentleman. She's wedded.
Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd, all
Is outward sorrow, though I think the King
Be touch'd at very heart.

2. None but the King?

1. He that hath lost her too: so is the Queen,
That most desir'd the Match. But not a Courtier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the Kings looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the the thing they scoule at.

2. And why so?

1. He that hath mis'd the Princess, is a thing
Too bad, for bad report: and he that hath her,
(I mean, that married her, alack good man,
And therefore banish'd) is a Creature, such,
As to seek through the Regions of the earth
For one, he like; there would be something failing
In him, that should compare. I do not think,
So fair an Outward, and such stuffe within Endows a man, but he.

2. You speak him fair.

1. I do extend him (Sir) which himself,
Crush him together, rather then unfold
His measure dully.

2. What's his name and Birth?

1. I cannot delve him to the root: his father
Was call'd Sicillius, who did joyn his honour
Against the Romans, with Cassibelan,
But had his Titles by Tenantius, whom
He serv'd with Glory and admir'd Success:
So gain'd the Sur-addition, Leonatus.
And had (besides this Gentleman in question)
Two other Sons, who in the Warrs o'th'time
Dy'd with their swords in hand. For which their father
Then old, and fond of issue, took such sorrow
That he quit Being; and his gentle Lady

Big of this Gentleman (our Theam) decest
As he was born. The King he takes the Babe
To his protection, calls him Posthumus Leonatus,
Breeds him, and makes him of his Bed-chamber,
Puts to him all the Learnings that his time
Could make him the receiver of, which he took
As we do aire, fast as 'twas ministred,
And in's Spring, became a Harvett: Liv'd in Court
(Which rare it is to do) most prais'd, most lov'd,
A sample to the youngest: to th'more Mature,
A glasse that feated them: and to the graver,
A child that guided Dorards. To his Mistris,
(For whom he now is banish'd) her own price
Proclaims how she esteem'd him; and his Vertue
By her election may be truly read, what kind of man he is.

2. I honor him, even out of your report.

But pray you tell me, is she sole child to th'King?

1. His only child?

He had two Sons (if this be worth your hearing, Mark it) the eldest of them, at three years old
I' th'wathing cloathes, the other from their Nursery
Were stoln, and to this hour, no guesse in knowledge
Which way they went.

2. How long is this ago?

1. Some twenty years.

2. That a Kings Children should be so convey'd,
So slackly guarded, and the search so slow
That could not trace them.

1. Howsoere 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at:
Yet is it true sir.

2. I do well believe you,

1. We must forbear. Here comes the Gentleman,
The Queen, and Princess. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Queen, Posthumus, and Imogen

Que. No, be assur'd you shall not find me (Daughter)
After the slander of most Steep-Mothers,
Evil-ey'd unto you. You're my Prisoner, but Your Goaler shall deliver you the keys

Cccc

That

That lock up your restraint. For you Posthumus,
So soon as I can win th'offended King,
I will be known your Advocate: marry yet
The fire of Rage is in him, and 'twere good
You lean'd unto his Sentence, with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your Highnesse,
I will from hence to day.

Que. You know the perill:
I'll fetch a turn about the Garden, pitting
The pangs of barr'd Affections, though the King
Hath charg'd you should not speak together. Exit.

Imo. O dissembling Curtesie! How fine this tyrant
Can tickle where she wounds? My dearest Husband,
I something fear my fathers wrath, but nothing (Always reserv'd my holy duty) what
His rage can do on me. You must be gone,
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes: not comforted to live,
But that there is this Jewell in the world,
That I may see again.

Post. My Queen, my Mistris:
O Lady, weep no more, lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tendernesse
Then doth become a man. I will remain
The loyall'st husband, that did ere plight troth.
My residence in Rome, at one Florio's,
Who, to my Father was a friend, to me
Known but by Letter; thither write (my Queen)
And with mine eyes, I'll drink the words you send,
Though Ink be made of Gall.

Enter Queen.

Que. Be brief, I pray you:
If the King come, I shall incur, I know not
How much of his displeasure: yet I'll move him
To walk this way: I never do him wrong,
But he do's buy my injuries, to be friends.
Payes dear for my offences.

Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a terme as yet we have to live,
The loathnesse to depart, would grow: Adieu.

Imo. Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to aire your self,
Such parting were too petty. Look here (Love)
This Diamond was my Mothers; take it (Heart)
But keep it till you wooe another Wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post. How, how? Another?
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And seare up my embracements from a next,
With bonds of death. Remain, remain thou here,
While sense can keep it on: And sweetest, fairest,
As I (my poor self) did exchange for you
To your so infinite losse: so in our trifles
I still win of you. For my sake wear this,
It is a Manacle of Love, I'll place it
Upon this fairest Prisoner.

Imo. O the gods!
When shall we see again?

Enter Cymbeline, and Lords.

Post. Alack, the King.

Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid hence, from my sight:
If after this command thou fraught the Court
With thy unworthynesse, thou dyest. Away,
Thou'rt poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you,

And blesse the good Remainders of the Court:
I am gone.

Exit.

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp then this is.

Cym. O disloyal thing,
That should'st repair my youth, thou heap'st
A years age on me.

Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harme not your self with your vexation,
I am senselesse of your wrath; a touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past Grace? Obedience?

Imo. Past hope, and in despair, that way past Grace.

Cym. That might'st have had
The sole Son of my Queen.

Imo. O blessed that I might not: I chose an Eagle,
And did avoid a Puttock.

Cym. Thou took'st a Beggar, would'st have made my Throne, a Seat for basenesse.

Imo. No, I rather added a lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vild one!

Imo. Sir,

It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus:
You bred him as my Play-fellow, and he is
A man, worth any woman: Over-buys me
Almost the sum he payes.

Cym. What? art thou mad?

Imo. Almost, Sir: heaven restore me: would I were A Neat-heards Daughter, and my Lecnatius
Our Neighbour-Shepherds Son.

Enter Queen.

Cym. Thou foolish thing;
They were again together: you have done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.

Que. Beseech your patience: Peace
Dear Lady daughter, peace. Sweet Sovereign,
Leave us to our selves, and make your self some comfort
Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay let her languish
A drop of blood a day, and being aged Dye of this Folly. Exit.

Enter Pisanio.

Que. Fie, you must give away:
Here is your Servant. How now, Sir? What news?

Pis. My Lord your Son, drew on my Master.

Que. Hah?

No harme I trust is done?

Pisa. There might have been,
But that my Master rather plaid, then fought,
And had no help of Anger: they were parted
By Gentlemen, at hand.

Que. I am very glad on't.

Imo. Your Son's my fathers friend, he takes his part
To draw upon an Exile, O brave Sir,
I would they were in Affrick both together,
My self by with a Needle, that I might prick
The goer back. Why came you from your Master?

Pisa. On his command: he would not suffer me
To bring him to the haven: left these Notes
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When't please you to employ me.

Que. This hath been
Your faithfull Servant: I dare lay mine honour
He will remain so.

Pisa. I humbly thank your Highnesse.

Que.

Qu. Pray walk a while
Imo. About some half hour hence,
 Pray you speak with me;
 You shall (at least) go see my Lord aboard.
 For this time leave me.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clotten, and two Lords.

1. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the Violence of Action hath made you reek as a Sacrifice: where aire comes out, aire comes in: there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clot. If my Shirt were bloody, then to shift it.
 Have I hurt him?

2. No faith: not so much as his patience.

1. Hurt him? His bodie's a passable Carkasse if he be not hurt. It is a thorough-fate for Steel if it be not hurt.

2. His Steel was in debt, it went oth' Back-side the Town.

Clot. The Villain would not stand me.

2. No, but he fled forward still, toward your face.

1. Stand you? you have Land enough of your own: But he added to your having, gave you some ground.

2. As many Inches, as you have Oceans (Puppies.)

Clot. I would they had not come between us.

2. So would I, till you had measur'd how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clot. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me.

2. If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damn'd.

1. Sir, as I told you alwayes: her Beauty and her Brain go not together. She's a good signe, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2. She shines not upon Fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

Clot. Come, I'll to my Chamber: would there had been some hurt done.

2. I wish not so, unless it had bin the fall of an Ass, which is no great hurt.

Clot. You'll go with us?

1. I'll attend your Lordship.

Clot. Nay come, let's go together.

2. Well, my Lord.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Imogen, and Pisanio.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores oth'haven,
 And questioned'st every Sail: if he should write,
 And I not have it, 'twere a Paper lost
 As offer'd mercy is: What was the last
 That he spake to thee?

Pisa. It was his Queen, his Queen.

Imo. Then waw'd his Handkerchief?

Pisa. And kist it, Madam.

Imo. Senselesse Linnen, happier therein than I:
 And that was all?

Pisa. No, Madam: for so long

As he could make me with his eye, or ear,
 Distinguish him from others, he did keep
 The Deck, with Glove, or Hat, or Handkerchief,
 Still waving, as the fits and stirrs of's mind
 Could best expresse how slow his soul sail'd on,
 How swift his Ship.

Imo. Thou should'st have made him
 As little as a Crow, or lesse, ere left
 To after-eye him.

Pisa. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings;
 Crack'd them, but to look upon him, till the diminution
 Of space, had pointed him sharp as my Needle:
 Nay, followed him, till he had melted from
 The smallnesse of a Gnat, to aire: and then
 Have turn'd mine eye, and wept. But, good Pisanio,
 When shall we hear from him.

Pisa. Be assur'd, Madam,
 With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had
 Most pretty things to say: Ere I could tell him
 How I would think on him at certain hours,
 Such thoughts, and such: Or I could make him swear,
 The She's of Italy should not betray
 Mine Interest, and his Honour: or have charg'd him
 At the sixt hour of Morn, at Noon, at Midnight,
 T'encounter me with Orisons, for then
 I am in heaven for him: Or ere I could,
 Give him that parting kisse, which I had set
 Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,
 And like the tyrannous breathing of the North,
 Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lad. The Queen (Madam)
 Desires your highnesse Company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd,
 I will attend the Queen.

Pisa. Madam, I shall.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Philario, Iachimo, Frenchman, Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, Sir, I have seen him in Britain; he was then of a Cressent none, expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of. But I could then have look'd on him, without the help of Admiration, though the Catalogue of his endowments had bin tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by Items.

Phil. You speak of him when he was lesse furnish'd, then now he is, with that which makes him both without and within,

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there, could behold the Sun, with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his Kings Daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her value, then his own, words him (I doubt not) a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment.

Iach. I, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours, are wonderfully to extend him, be it but to fortifie her judgement, which else an easie battery might lay flat, for taking a Beggar without lesse quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? how creeps acquaintance?

Phil. His father and I were Souldiers together, to whom I have bin often bound for no lesse then my life.

Enter Posthumus.

Here comes the Britain. Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suits with Gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality. I beseech you all be better known to this Gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a Noble Friend of mine. How Worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather then story him in his own hearing.

Fren. Sir, we have known together in Orleance.

Post. Since when I have bin debtr to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

Fren. Sir, you ore-rate my poor kindesse, I was glad I did atone my Countryman and you; it had bin pity you should have been put together, with so mortal a purpose, as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young Traveler, rather, shunn'd to go even with what I heard, then in my very action to be guided by others experiences: but upon my mended judgement (if I offend to say it is mended) my Quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith yes, to be put to the arbitrement of Swords, and by such two, that would by all likelihood have confounded one the other, or have faln both.

Iach. Can we with manners, ask what was the difference?

Fren. Safely, I think, 'twas a contention in publick, which may (without contradiction) suffer the report. It was much alike an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our Country Mistresses. This Gentleman, at that time vouching (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation) his to be more Fair, Vertuous, Wise, Chaste, Constant, Qualified, and lesse attemptible then any, the ratest of our Ladies in France.

Iach. That Lady is not now living: this Gentlemans opinion by this worn out.

Post. She holds her Vertue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far preferre her, 'fore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provok'd as I was in France: I would abate her nothing, though I professe my self her Adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair, and as good: a kind of hand in hand comparision, had been something too fair, and too good for any Lady in Britany: if she went before others. I have seen, as that Diamond of yours out-lusters many I have beheld. I could not believe she excelled many: but I have not seen the most precious Diamond that is, nor you the Lady.

Post. I prais'd her, as I rated her: so do I my Stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More then the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagon'd Mistris is dead, or she's out-priz'd by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold or given, or if there were wealth enough for the purchases, or merit for the gift. The other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which by their Graces I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but you know strange Fowle light upon neighbouring Ponds. Your Ring may be stolne too, so your brace of unprizeable, Estimations, the one is but frail, and the other Casual. A cunning Thief, or a (that way) accomplish'd Courtier, would hazzard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy, contains none so accomplish'd a Courtier to convince the honour of my Mistris: if in the holding or losse of that, you terme her frail, I do nothing doubt you have store of Thieves, notwithstanding I fear nor my Ring.

Phil. Let us leave here Gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy Signior I thank him, makes no stranger of me, we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair Mistris; make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moyty of my Estate, to your Ring, which in my opinion ore-values it something: but I make my wager rather against your Confidence, then her Reputation. And to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any Lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abus'd in too bold a perswasion, and I doubt not you sustain what y're worthy of, by your Attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A Repulse though your Attempt (as you call it) deserve more; a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this, it came in too suddenly, let it dye as it was born, and I pray you be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my Estate, and my Neighbours on th'approbation of what I have spoke.

Post. What Lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours, whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand Duckets to your Ring, that commend me to the Court where your Lady is, with no more advantage then the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence, that honour of hers, which you imagine so reserv'd.

Posthumus. I will wage against your Gold, Gold to it: My Ring I hold dear as my finger, 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are a friend, and therein the wiser: if you buy Ladies flesh at a Million a Dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting; but I see you have some Religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custome in your tongue: you bear a graver purpose I hope.

Iach. I am the Master of my speeches, and would under-go what's spoken, I swear.

Posthu. Will you? I shall but lend my Diamond till your return: let there be Covenants drawn between's. My Mistris exceeds in goodnesse, the hugeness of your unworthy things. I dare you to this match: here's my Ring.

Phil. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods it is one: if I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoy'd the dearest bodily part of your Mistris: my ten thousand Duckets are yours

So is your Diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in: She your Jewell, this your Jewell, and my Gold are yours: provided I have your commendation, for my more entertainment.

Post. I embrace these Conditions, let us have Articles betwixt us: onely thus far you shall answer, if you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand, you have prevail'd, I am no further your Enemy, she is not worth our debate. If she remain uneduc'd, you not making it appear otherwise: for your ill opinion, and th'assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your Sword.

Iach. Your hand, a Covenant: we will have these things set down by lawfull Counsell, and straight away for Britain, lest the Bargain should catch cold, and starve: I will fetch my Gold, and have our two Wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed.

French. Will this hold, think you.

Phil. Signior Iachimo will not from it.
Pray let us follow 'em.

Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Que. Whiles yet the dew's on ground
Gather those Flowers,
Make haste. Who has the note of them?

Lad. I Madam.

Que. Dispatch.

Exeunt Ladies.

Now Master Doctor, have you brought those drugs:

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, I: here they are, Madam:
But I beseech your Grace, without offence
(My Conscience bids me ask) wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous Compounds,
Which are the moovers of a languishing death:
But though slow, deadly.

Que. I wonder, Doctor,
Thou ask'st me such a Question; have I not been Thy Pupill long? hast thou not learn'd me how To make Perfumes? Distill? Preserve? Yea so,
That our great King himself doth wooe me oft
For my Confections? having thus far proceeded,
(Unlesse thou think'st me develish) is't not meet
That I did amplifie my judgement in Other Conclusions? I will try the forces
Of these thy Compounds, on such Creatures as We count not worth the hanging (but none humane)
To try the vigour of them, and apply
Allayments to their Aet, and by them gather
Their several vertues, and effects.

Corn. Your highnesse
Shall from this practise, but make hard your heart:
Besides, the seeing these effects will be
Both noysome and infectious.

Que. O content thee.

Enter Pisanio.

Here comes a flattering Rascal, upon him
Will I first work: He's for his Master,
And enemy to my Son. How now Pisanio?
Doctor, your service for this time is ended,
Take your own way.

Cor. I do suspect you, Madam.
But you shall do no harme.

Que. Hark thee a word.

Cor. I do not like her. She doth think she has Strange ling'ring poisons: I do know her spirit,
And will not trust one of her malice, with
A drug of such damn'd Nature. Those she has,
Will stupefie and dull the Sense a while,
Which first (perchance) she'll prove on Cats and Dogs,
Then afterward up higher: but there is
No danger in what shew of death it makes,
More then the locking up the Spirits a time,
To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd
With a most false effect: and I the truer,
So to be false with her.

Que. No further service, Doctor,
Untill I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave.

Exit.

Que. Weeps she still (saist thou)?
Do'st thou think in time

She will not quench, and let instructions enter
Where folly now possesses? do thou work:
When thou shalt bring me word she loves my Son,
I'll tell thee on the instant, thou art then
As great as is thy Master: Greater, for His Fortunes all lye speechlesse, and his name
Is at last gaspe. Return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being,
Is to exchange one misery with another,
And every day that comes, comes to decay
A dayes work in him. What shalt thou expect
To be dependor of a thing that leans?
Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends
So much, as but to prop him? Thou tak'st up
Thou know'st not what: But take it for thy labour,
It is a thing I make, which hath the King
Five times redeem'd from death. I do not know
What is more Cordial. Nay I prethee take it,
It is an earnest of a farther good
That I mean to thee. Tell thy Mistris how
The case stands with her: do't, as from thy self:
Think what a chance thou changest on, but think
Thou hast thy Mistris still, too boot, my Son,
Who shall take notice of thee. I'll move the King
To any shape of thy Preferment, such
As thou'lt desire: and then my self, I chiefly,
That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my women. Exit Pisanio.
Think on my words. A slye, and constant knave,
Not to be shak'd: the Agent for his Master,
And the Remembrancer of her, to hold
The hand fast to her Lord. I have given him that,
Which if he take, shall quite unpeople her
Of Leidgers for her Sweet: and which she after,
Except she bend her humor, shall be assur'd
To taste of too.

Enter Pisanio, and Ladies.

So, so: well done, well done:

The Violets, Cowslips, and the Prime-Roses
Bear to my Closset: Fare thee well, Pisanio,
Think on my words.

Exit Queen, and Ladies.

Pisa. And shall doe:

But when to my good Lord, I prove untrue,
I'll choak my self: there's all I'll do for you.

Exit.

Cccc 3

Scena

Scena Septima.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. A Father cruel, and a Stepdame false,
A foolish Suitor to a Wedded Lady,
That hath her Husband banish'd: O, that Husband,
My supream Crown of grief, and those repeated
Vexations of it. Had I bin Thief-Roln,
As my two Brothers, happy: but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious. Blessed be those How mean so ere, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort. Who may this be? Fic.

Enter Pisanio, and Iachimo.

Pisa. Madam, a Noble Gentleman of Rome,
Comes from my Lord with Letters.

Iach. Change you, Madam!
The Worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your Highness dearly.

Imo. Thanks, good Sir,
You're kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her, that is out of door, most rich:
If she be turn sh'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone th' Arabian-Bird; and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my Friend:
Arme me Audacity from head to foot,
Or like the Parthian I shall flying fight,
Rather directly flye.

Imogen reads.

He is one of the Noblest now, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tyed. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust. Leonatus.

So far I read aloud.

But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by th'rest, and take it thankfully.
You are as welcome (worthy Sir) as I
Have words to bid you, and shall find it so
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks fairest Lady:
What are men mad? hath Nature given them eyes
To see this valured Arch, and the rich Crop
Of Sea, and Land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery Orbes above, and the twinn'd Stones
Upon the number'd Beach, and can we not Partition make with Spectacles so precious
'Twixt fair, and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?

Iach. It cannot be ith'eye: for Apes, and Monkeys
'Twixt two such She's, would chatter this way, and Contemne with mowes the other. Nor ith' judgement:
For Ideots in this case of favour, would
Be wisely definit: Nor in the Appetite.
Sluttery to such neat Excellence, oppos'd
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allur'd to feed

Imo. What is the matter trow?

Iach. The Cloyed will,
That satiate yet unsatisfi'd desire, that Tub
Both fill'd and running: Ravening first the Lamb,
Longs after for the Garbage.

Imo. What, dear sir,
Thus rap's you? Are you well?

Iach. Thanks, Madam, well: Beseech you, sir,
Desire my Man's abode, where I did leave him:
He's strange and peevish.

Pisa. I was going, Sir,
To give him welcome.

Imo. Continues well my Lord?
His health beseech you?

Iach. Well, Madam.

Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant: none a stranger there,
So merry, and so gamefome: he is call'd
The Britain Reveller.

Imo. When he was here
He did incline to sadness, and oft times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.

There is a Frenchman his Companion, one
An eminent Monsieur, that it seems much loves
A Gallian-Girle at home. He furnaces
The thick sides from him; whiles the jolly Britain,
(Your Lord I mean) laughs from's free lungs: cries oh,
Can my sides hold, to think that man who knows
By History, Report, or his own proof
What woman is, yea what she cannot choose
But must be: will's free hours languish,
For assured bondage?

Imo. Will my Lord say so?

Iach. I Madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter,
It is a Recreation to be by
And hear him mock the Frenchman:
But heavens know some men are much too blame.

Imo. Not he I hope.

Iach. Not he:

But yet heavens bounty towards him, might
Be us'd more thankfully. In himself 'tis much;
In you which I account his beyond all Talents,
Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir?

Iach. Two Creatures heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir?

You look on me: what wrack discern you in me
Deserves your pity?

Iach. Lamentable: what
To hide me from the radiant Sun, and solace
I'th'Dungeon by a Snuff?

Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more opennesse your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do
(I was about to say) enjoy your-----but
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Nor mine to speak on't.

Imo. You do seem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me; pray you
Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more
Then to be sure they do. For Certainities
Either are past remedies; or timely knowing,
The remedy then born. Discover to me
What both you spur and stop.

Iach. Had I this cheek
To bath my lips upon: this hand, whose touch,
(Whose very touch) would force the feelers foul
To th'oath of Loyalty. This object, which Takes Prisoner, the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here, should I (damn'd then)

Slaver with lips as common as the staires
That mount the Capitol: joyn grypes, with hands Made hard with hourly falshood (falshood as
With labour:) then by peeping in an eye
Base and illustrious as the smoaky light
That's sed with stinking Tallow: it were fit
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.

Imo. My Lord, I fear
Has forgot Britain.

Iach. And himself, not I
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The Beggery of his change: but 'tis your Graces
That from my mute'st Conscience, to my tongue,
Charmes this report out.

Imo. Let me hear no more.

Iach. O dearest soul: your Cause doth strike my heart
With pity, that doth make me sick. A Lady
So fair, and fastned to an Empery
Would make the great'st King double, to be partner'd
With Tomboyes hyr'd, with that self-exhibition
Which your own Coffers yield: with dileas'd ventures
That play with all infirmities for Gold,
Which rottenesse can lend Nature, Such boy'l'd Ruff
As well might poison Poison. Be reveng'd,
Or she that bore you, was no Queen, and you
Recoyl from your great Stock.

Imo. Reveng'd:

How should I be reveng'd? if this be true,
(As I have such a heart, that both mine ears Must not in haste abuse) if it be true,
How shall I be reveng'd?

Iach. Should he make me

Live like Diana's Priest, betwixt cold sheets;
Whiles he is vaulting variable Ramps
In your despight, upon your purse: revenge it.
I dedicate my self to your sweet pleasure,
More Noble then that runnagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your Affection,
Still close, as sure.

Imo. What hoa, Pisanio?

Iach. Let my service tender on your lips

Imo. Away, I do condemne mine ears, that have
So long attended thee. If thou wert honorable Thou wouldst have told this tale for Vertue, not
For such an end thou seek'st, as base, as strange:
Thou wrong'st a Gentleman, who is as far
From thy report, as thou from honor: and Solicitst here a Lady, that disdains
Thee, and the Devil alike. What hoa, Pisanio?
The King my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy Assault: if he shall think it fit,
A sawcy Stranger in his Court, to Mart
As is a Romish Stew, and to expound
His beastly mind to us; he hath a Court
He little cares for, and Daughter, whom
He not respects at all. What hoa, Pisanio?

Iach. O happy Leonatus, I may say,
The credit that thy Lady hath of thee
Deserves thy trust, and thy most perfect goodnesse
Her assur'd credit, blessed live you long,
A Lady to the worthiest sir, that ever
Country call'd his: and you his Mistis, only
For the most worthiest fit. Give me your pardon.
I have spoke this to know if your Affiance
Were deeply rooted, and shall make your Lord,

That which he is, new ore; and he is one
The truest manner'd: such a holy Witch,
That he enchants Societies into him:
Half all mens hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.

Iach. He sits amongst men, like a descended god:
He hath a kind of honour sets him off,
More then a mortal seeming. Be not angry
(Most mighty Princeesse) that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a false report, which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgement,
In the election of a Sir, so rare,
Which you know, cannot erre. The Love I bear him,
Made me to fan you thus, but the gods made you
(Unlike all others) chaffesse. Pray your Pardon.

Imo. All's well, sir:

Take my power ith' Court for yours.

Iach. My humble thanks: I had almost forgot
T'intreat your Grace, but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns,
Your Lord, my self, and other Noble friends
Are partners in the businesse.

Imo. Pray what is't?

Iach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your Lord
(The best feather of our wing) have mingled sums
To buy a Present for the Emperor:
Which I (the factor for the rest) have done
In France: 'tis Plate of rare device, and Jewels
Of rich and exquisite forme, their values great,
And I am something curious, being strange,
To have them in safe stowage: May it please you
To take them in protection.

Imo. Willingly:

And pawn mine honor for their safety, since
My Lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my Bed chamber.

Iach. They are in a Trunk
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night:
I must aboard to morrow,

Imo. O no, no.

Iach. Yes I beseech you: or I shall short my word
By length'ning my return. From Gallia,
I cross the Seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your Grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains:
But not away to morrow.

Iach. O I must Madam.
Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your Lord with writing, do't to night,
I have out-stood my time, which is material
To th'tender of our Present.

Imo. I will write:

Send your Trunk to me, it shall be safe kept,
And truly yielded you: you're very welcome. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clotten, and the two Lords.

Clot. Was there ever man had such luck? when I kist the Jack upon an up-cast, to be hit away? I had an hundred pound on't; and then a whorson Jack-an-Apes, must must take me up for swearing, as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1. What got he by that? you have broke his pate with you Bowl.

2. If his wit had been like him that broke it: it would have run all out.

Clot. When a Gentleman is dispos'd to swear: it is not for any standers by to curtail his oaths. Ha?

2. No my Lord; nor crop the ears of them.

Clot. Whorson dog: I give him satisfaction? would he had bin one of my Rank.

2. To have smelt like a fool.

Clot. I am not vext more at any thing in the earth: a pox on't. I had rather not be so Noble as I am: they dare not fight with me, because of the Queen my Mother: every Jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a Cock, that no body can match.

2. You are a Cock and a Capon too, and you crow Cock, with your combe on.

Clot. Sayest thou?

2. It is not fit your Lordship should undertake every Companion, that you give offence to.

Clot. No, I know that: but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2. I, it is fit for your Lordship only.

Clot. Why so I say.

1. Did you hear of a Stranger that's come to Court to night?

Clot. A Stranger, and I not know on't?

2. He's a Strange fellow himself, and knows it not.

1. There's an Italian come, and 'tis thought one of Leonatus friends.

Clot. Leonatus? A banish'd Rascal; and he's another, wherefoever he be. Who told you of this Stranger?

1. One of your Lordships Pages.

Clot. It is fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

2. You cannot derogate my Lord.

Clot. Not easily I think.

2. You are a fool granted, therefore your Issues being foolish, do not derogate.

Clot. Come, I'll go see this Italian: what I have lost to day at Bowls, I'll win to night of him. Come: go.

2. I'll attend your Lordship.

Exit

That such a crafty Devil as is his Mother, Should yield the world this Ass: a woman, that Bears all down with her Brain, and this her Son, Cannot take two from twenty for his heart, And leave eighteen. Alas poor Princess, Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st, Betwixt a Father by thy Step-dame govern'd, A Mother hourly coyning plots: A Wooer, More hateful then the foul expulsion is Of thy dear husband, then that horrid Act Of the divorce, he'd make the heavens hold firme The walls of thy dear honor. Keep unshak'd That Temple thy fair mind, that thou maist stand T' enjoy thy banish'd Lord: and this great Land. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Imogen, in her bed, and a Lady.

Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lad. Please you Madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lad. Almost midnight, Madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then:

Mine eyes are weak,

Fold down the Leaf where I have left: to bed

Take not away the Taper, leave it burning:

And if thou canst awake by four o'th' Clock,

I prithee call me: Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly.

To your protection I commend me, gods,

From Fairies, and the Tempters of the night,

Guard me beseech ye.

Sleeps.

Iachimo from the Trunk.

Iach. The Crickets sing, and mans ore-labour'd sense

Repairs it self by rest: Our Targuin thus

Did softly presse the Rushes, ere he waken'd

The Chastity he wounded. Cytherea,

How bravely thou becom'st thy Bed; fresh Lilly,

And whiter then the Sheets: that I might touch,

But kisse, one kisse. Rubies unparagon'd,

How dearly they do't: 'Tis her breathing that

Perfumes the Chamber thus: the flame oth' Taper

Bows toward her, and would under-peep her lids.

To see th'inclosed Lights, now Canopied

Under the windows, White and Azure lac'd

With Blew of heavens own tinct, but my designe's

To note the Chamber, I will write all down,

Such, and such pictures: there the window, such

Th'adornment of her Bed; the Arras, Figures,

Why such, and such: and the Contents oth' Story.

Ah, but some natural notes about her Body,

Above ten thousand meaner Moveables

Would testifie, t'enrich mine Inventory.

O sleep, thou Ape of death, lye dull upon her,

And be her sense but as a Monument,

Thus in a Chappel lying. Come off, come off;

As slippery as the Gordian-knot was hard.

'Tis mine, and this witness outwardly,

As strongly as the Conscience do's within:

To th'madding of her Lord. On her left breast

A mole Cinque-spotted: Like the Crimson drops

I th'bottom of a Cowslip. Heres a Voucher,

Stronger then ever Law could make: this Secret

Will force him think I have pick'd the lock, and t'ane

The treasure of her honour. No more: to what end?

Why should I write this down, that's rivitted,

Screw'd to my memory. She hath bin reading late,

The Tale of Ternus, here the leaf's turn'd down

Where Philomela gave up: I have enough,

To th' Trunk again, and shut the spring of it.

Swift, swift, you Dragons of the night, that dawning

May bear the Ravens eye: I lodge in fear,

Though this a heavenly Angel: hell is here.

Clock strikes.

One, two, three: time, time.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clotten, and Lords.

1. Your Lordship is the most patient man in losse, the most coldest that turn'd up Ace.

Clot. It would make any man cold to loose.

1. But not every man patient, after the noble temper of your Lordship; You are most hot, and furious when you win.

Clot.

Winning will put any man into courage : if I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have Gold enough : it's almost morning, is't not ?

1. Day, my Lord,

Clot. I would this Musick would come : I am advised. to give her Musick a mornings, they say it will penetrate

Enter Musicians.

Come on, tune : if you can penetrate here with your fingering, so : we'll try with tongue too : if none will do, let her remain : but I'll never give o're. First, a very excellent good conceited thing ; after a wonderfull sweet aire, with admirable rich words to it, and then let her consider.

Song.

*Hark, hark, the Lark at Heavens gate sings,
and Phœbus 'gins arise,
His Steeds to water at those Springs on chalic'd Flowers that lies :
And winking Mary-buds begin to ope their Golden eyes
With every thing that pretty is, my Lady sweet arise :
Arise, arise,*

So, get you gone : if this penetrate, I will consider your Musick the better : if it do not, it is a voice in her ears which Horse-hairs, and Calves-guts, nor the voice of unpaved Eunuch to boot, can never amend.

Enter Queen and Cymbeline.

2. Here comes the King.

Clot. I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early : he cannot choose but take this Service I have done, fatherly. Good morrow to your Majesty, and gracious Mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter. Will she not forth ?

Clot. I have assail'd her with Musicks, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The Exile of her Minion is too new. She hath not yet forgot him, some more time Must wear the print of his remembrance out, And then she's yours.

Que. You are most bound to th'King, Who lets go by no vantages, that may Preferre you to his daughter : frame your self To orderly solicits, and be friended With aptnesse of the season : make denials Encrease your services : so seem, as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which You tender to her : that you in all obey her. Save when command to your dismissal tends, And therein you are senselesse.

Clot. Senselesse ? Not so.

Mes. So like you (Sir) Ambassadors from Rome ; The one is Cains Lucius.

Cym. A worthy Fellow, Albeit he comes on angry purpose now ; But that's no fault of his : we must receive him According to the honour of his Sender, And towards himself, his goodnesse fore-spent on us We must extend our notice : Our dear Son, When you have given good morning to your Mistis, Attend the Queen, and us, we have need T'employ you towards this Roman.

Come our Queen,

Exeunt.

Clot. If she be up, I'll speak with her : if not, Let her lye still, and dream : by your leave ho, I know her women are about her : what

If I do line one of their hands : 'tis gold Which buyes admittance (oft it doth) yea and makes Diana's Rangers false themselves, yield up Their Deer to th'stand o'th Stealer : and 'tis gold Which makes the True-man kill'd, and saves the Thief : Nay, sometime hangs both Thief, and True-man : what Can it not do, and undo : I will make One of her women Lawyer to me, for I yet not understand the case my self. By your leave.

Knocks.

Enter a Lady.

Lad. Who's there that knocks ?

Clot. A Gentleman.

Lad. No more.

Clot. Yes, and a Gentlewomans Son.

Lad. That's more

Then some whose Taylors are as deer as yours, Can justly boast of : what's your Lordships pleasure ?

Clot. Your Ladies person, is she ready ?

Lad. I, to keep her Chamber.

Clot. There is gold for you, Sell me your good report.

Lad. How, my good name ? or to report of you What I shall think is good. The Princess.

Enter Imogen.

Clot. Good morrow fairest, Sister your sweet hand.

Imo. Good morrow, sir, you lay out too much pains For purchasing but trouble : the thanks I give, Is telling you that I am poor of thanks, And scarce can spare them.

Clot. Still I swear I love you.

Imo. If you'd but said so, 'twere as deep with me : If you swear still, your recompence is still That I regard it not.

Clot. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say, I yield being silent, I would not speak. I pray you spare me, faith I shall unfold equall discourtesie To your best kindnesse : one of your great knowing Should learn (being taught) forbearance.

Clot. To leave you in your madnesse, 'twere my sin, I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clot. Do you call me fool ?

Imo. As I am mad I do :

If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad, That cures us both. I am much sorry (Sir) You put me to forget a Ladies manners By being so verbal : and learn now, for all, That I which know my heart, do here pronounce By th'very truth of it, I care not for you, And am so near the lack of Charity To accuse my self, I hate you : which I had rather You felt, then make't my boast.

Clot. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father, for The Contract you pretend with that base Wretch, One, bred of Almes, and foster'd with cold dishes With scraps oth' Court : It is no Contract, none ; And though it be allowed in meaner parties (Yet who then he more mean) to knit their souls (On whom there is no more dependancy But Brats and Beggery) in self figur'd knot, Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement, by

The consequence oth' Crown, and must not foyle
The precious note of it ; with a base Slave,
A Hilding for a Livory, a Squires Cloth,
A Pandler ; not so eminent.

Imo. Prophane Fellow :

Wert thou the Son of Jupiter, and no more,
But what thou art besides : thou wer't too base,
To be his Groom : thou wer't dignified enough
Even to the point of Envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your Vertues, to be stil'd
The under Hangman of his Kingdome ; and hated
For being preferr'd so well.

Clot. The South-Fog rot him.

Imo. He never can meet more mischance, then come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest Garment
That ever hath but clipt his body, is dearer
In my respect, then all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men : How now Pisanio ?

Enter Pisanio.

Clot. His Garment ? Now the devill.

Imo. To Dorothy my woman hye the presently.

Clot. His Garment ?

Imo. I am sprighted with a fool,
Frighted, and angered worse : Go bid my woman
Search for a Jewell, that too casually
Hath left mine Arme : it was thy Masters. Shrew me
If I would lose it for a Renewal,
Of any Kings in Europe. I do think,
I saw't this morning : Confident I am.
Last night 'twas on my Arme : I kiss'd it,
I hope it be not gone, to tell my Lord
That I kisse ought but him.

Pisa. 'Twill not be lost.

Imo. I hope so : go and search.

Clot. You have abus'd me :
His meanest Garment ?

Imo. I, I said so, sir,

If you will make't an Action, call witness to't.

Clot. I will enforme your Father.

Imo. Your Mother too :

She's my good Lady ; and will conceive, I hope
But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To th' worst of discontent.

Clot. I'll be reveng'd :
His meanest Garment ? Well.

Exit.

Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Posthumus, and Philario.

Post. Fear it not, sir : I would I were so sure
To win the King, as I am bold, her honour
Will remain hers.

Phil. What means do you make to him ?

Post. Not any : but abide the change of Time,
Quake in the present winters state, and wish
That warmer dayes would come : In these fear'd hopes
I barely gratify your love ; they failing
I must die much your debtor.

Phil. Your very goodnesse, and your company,
O're payes all I can do. By this your King,
Hath heard of Great Augustus : Caius, Lucius,
Will do's Commission throughly. And I think

He'll grant the Tribute : send th' Arrerages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe

(Statist though I am none, nor like to be)
That this will prove a War ; and you shall hear
The Legion now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing-Britain, then have tidings
Of any penny Tribute paid. Our Countrimen
Are men more order'd then when Julius Caesar
Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at. Their discipline,
(Now mingled with their courages) will make known
To their Approvers, they are People, such
That mend upon the world. Enter Iachimo.

Phil. See Iachimo.

Post. The swiftest hearts, have posted you by land ;
And Winds of all the Corners kiss'd your Sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phil. Welcome, sir.

Post. I hope the briefnesse of your answer, made
The speedinesse of your return.

Iach. Your Lady,

Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon

Post. And therewithall the best, or let her beauty
Look thorough a Casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.

Iach. Here are Letters for you.

Post. Their tenure good I trust.

Iach. 'Tis very like.

Post. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain Court,
When you were there ?

Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet,
Sparkles this Stone as it was wont, or is't not Too dull for your good wearing ?

Iach. If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in Gold,
I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortnesse, which
Was mine in Britain, for the Ring is won.

Post. The Stones too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit,
Your Lady being so easie.

Post. Make not, sir,
Your losse, your Sport : I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must
If you keep Covenant : had I not brought
The knowledge of your Mistris home, I grant
We were to question farther ; but I now
Professe my self the winner of her honour,
Together with your Ring ; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills,

Post. If you can make't apparant
That you have tasted her in Bed ; my hand,
And Ring is yours. If not the foul opinion
You had of her poor honour : gains, or looses,
Your Sword or mine, or Masterlesse leave both
To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my Circumstances
Being so nere the truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe : whose strength
I will confirme with oath, which I doubt not

You'll

You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her Bed-chamber (Where I confesse I slept not, but professe
Had that was well worth watching) it was hang'd
With Tapistry of Silk, and Silver, the Story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cidnus swell'd above the Banks, or for
The presse of Boats, or Pride: A piece of Work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In Workmanship, and Value, which I wonder'd
Could be so rarely, and exactly wrought
Since the true life on't was-----

Post. This is true:

And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars
Must justifie my knowledge

Post. So they must,
Or do your Honor injury.

Iach. The Chimney
Is South the Chamber, and the Chimney-piece
Chast Dian, bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves; the Cutter
Was as another Nature dumb, out-went her,
Motion, and Breath left out.

Post. This is a thing
Which you might from Relation likewise read,
Being' as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The Roofe o'th' Chamber,
With golden Cherubins is fretted. Her Andirons
(I had forgot them) were two winking Cupids
Of Silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their Brands.

Post. This is her honour:
Let it be granted you have seen all this (and praise
Be given to your remembrance) the description
Of what is in her Chamber, nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then if you can
Be pale, I beg but leave to aire this Jewel: See,
And now 'tis up again: it must be married
To that your Diamond, I'll keep them.

Post. Jove-----
Once more let me behold it: Is it that
Which I left with her?

Iach. Sir (I thank her) that
She stript it from her Arme: I see her yet
Her pretty Action, did out-sell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too: she gave it me,
And said she priz'd it once.

Post. May be, she pluck'd it off
To send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you? doth she?

Post. O no, no, no, 'tis true. Here take this too,
It is a Basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on't: Let there be no Honour,
Where there is beauty: Truth, where semblance: Love,
Where there's another man. The Vows of Women,
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Then they are to their Vertues, which is nothing:
O, above measure false.

Phil. Have patience, sir,
And take your Ring again, 'tis not yet won;
It may be probable she lost it: or

Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted
Hath stoln it from her.

Post. Very true,
And so I hope he came by't: back my Ring,
Render to me some corporal signe about her
More evident then this: for this was stole.

Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her Arme.

Post. Hark you, he swears: by Jupiter he swears.
'Tis true, nay keep the Ring; 'tis true: I am sure
She should not loose it: her Attendants are
All sworn, and honorable: they induc'd to steal it?
And by a Stranger? No, he hath enjoy'd her,
The Cognizance of her incontinency
Is this: she hath bought the name of Whore, thus dearly.
There, take thy hyre, and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you.

Phil. Sir, be patient:
This is not strong enough to be believ'd
Of one perswaded well of.

Post. Never talk on't:
She hath been colted by him.

Iach. If you seek
For further satisfying; under her Breast
(Worthy her pressing) lies a Mole, right proud
Of that most delicate Lodging. By my life
I kist it, and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her?

Post. I, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as Hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more?

Post. Spare your Arithmetick,
Never count the Turns: Once, and a Million.

Iach. I'll be sworn.

Post. No swearing:
If you will swear you have not don't, you lye,
And I will kill thee if thou do'st deny
Thou'st made me Cuckold.

Iach. I'll deny nothing.

Post. O that I had her here, to tear her Limb-meal;
I will go there and do't ith' Court, before
Her father. I'll do something.

Exit.

Phil. Quite besides.
The Government of Patience. You have won:
Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart.

Exeunt.

Enter Posthumus.

Post. Is there no way for Men to be, but Women
Must be half-workers? We are all Bastards,
And that most venerable man, which I Did call my father, was, I know not where
When I was stamp't. Some Coyner with his Tools
Made me a counterfeit: yet my Mother seem'd
The Dian of that time: so doth my Wife
The Non-pareill of this. Oh Vengeance, Vengeance!
Me of my lawfull pleasure she restrain'd,
And pray'd me oft forbearance: did it with
A pudency so Rosie, the sweet view on't
Might well have warm'd old Saturn:
That I thought her
As Chaste, as un-Sunn'd Snow. Oh, all the devils!
This yellow Iachimo in an hour, was't not?

Or

Or lesse; at first? Perchance spoke not, but Like a full Acorn'd Boar, a Jarinen on,
 Cry'd oh, and mounted, found no opposition
 But what he look'd for, should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
 The Womans part in me, for there's no motion
 That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
 It is the Womans part: be it Lying, note it,
 The Womans: Flattering, hers: deceiving, hers:
 Lust, and rank thoughts, hers, hers: Revenges hers:
 Ambitions, Coverings, change of Prides, Disdain,
 Nice-longing, Slanders, Mutability:
 All faults that may be named, nay, that Hell knows,
 Why hers, in part, or all: but rather all. For even to Vice
 They are not constant, but are changing still;
 One Vice, but of a minute old, for one
 Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,
 Detest them, curse them: yet 'tis greater Skill
 In a true Hate, to pray they have their will:
 The very Devils cannot plague them better.

Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter in State, Cymbeline, Queen, Clotten, and Lords at one door, and at another, Caius, Lucius, and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Caesar with us?

Luc. When Julius Caesar (whose remembrance yet
 Lives in mens eyes, and will to Ears and Tongues
 Be theam, and hearing ever) was in this Britain,
 And Conquer'd it, Cassibelan thine Uncle
 (Famous in Casars praises, no whit lesse
 Then in his Feats deserving it) for him,
 And his succession, granted Rome a Tribute,
 Yearly three thousand pounds; which (by thee) lately
 Is left untender'd.

Que. And to kill the mervail,
 Shall be so ever.

Clot. There be many Casars,
 Ere such another Julius: Britain's a world
 By it self, and we will nothing pay
 For wearing our own Noses.

Queen. That opportunity
 Which then they had to take from's, to resume
 We have again. Remember, sir, my Liege,
 The Kings your Ancestors, together with
 The Natural bravery of your Isle, which stands
 As Neptunes Park, ribb'd, and pal'd in
 With Oaks unskaleable, and roaring Waters,
 With Sands that will not bear your Enemies Boats
 But suck them up to th' Top-mast. A kind of Conquest
 Caesar made here, but made not here his brag
 Of came, and Saw, and Overcame: with shame
 (The first that ever touch'd him) he was carried
 From off our Coast, twice beaten; and his shipping
 (Poor ignorant Baubles) on our terrible Seas
 Like Egg-shells, mov'd upon their Surges crack'd
 As easily 'gainst our Rocks. For joy whereof,
 The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point
 (Oh giglet Fortune) to master Casars sword,
 Made Luds-Town with rejoycing Fires bright,

And Britains strut with Courage.

Clot. Come, there's no more Tribute to be paid. Our Kingdome is stronger then it was at that time: and (as I said) there is no more such Casars, other of them may have crook'd Noses, but to owe such strait Armes, none.

Cym. Son, let your Mother end.

Clot. We have yet many among us, can gripe as hard as Cassibelan, I do not say I am one: but I have a hand.
 Why Tribute? Why should we pay Tribute? If Caesar can hide the Sun from us with a Blanket, or put the Moon in his pocket: we will pay him Tribute for light: else sir, no more Tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
 Till the injurious Romans, did extort
 This Tribute from us, we were free. Casars Ambition,
 Which swell'd so much, that it did almost stretch
 The sides o'th' world, against all colour here,
 Did put the yoke upon's: which to shake off
 Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
 Our selves to be, we do. Say then to Caesar,
 Our Ancestor was that Mulmutius, which Ordain'd our Laws, whose use the sword of Caesar
 Hath too much mangled: whose repair, and franchise,
 Shall (by the power we hold) be our good deed,
 Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our
 Who was the first of Britain, which did put laws
 His brows within a golden Crown, and call'd Himself a King.

Luc. I am sorry Cymbeline,
 That I am to pronounce Augustus Caesar
 (Caesar that hath more Kings his Servants, then Thy self Domestick Officers) thine Enemy.
 Receive it from me then. War, and Confusion
 In Casars name pronounce I 'gainst thee: Look
 For fury, not to be resisted. Thus des't
 I thank thee for my self.

Cym. Thou art welcome Caius,
 Thy Caesar Knighted me; my youth I spent
 Much under him: of him, I gather'd Honour,
 Which he, to seek of me again, perforce,
 Behooves me keep at utterance. I am perfect,
 That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for Their Liberties are now in Armes: a President
 Which not to read, would shew the Britains cold:
 So Caesar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clot. His Majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day, or two, or longer: if you seek us afterwards in other tearmes, you shall find us in our Salt-water-Girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours: if you fall in the adventure, our Crows shall fare the better for you:
 and there's an end.

Luc. So, sir.

Cym. I know your Masters pleasure, and he mine:
 All the Remain, is welcome.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Pisania reading of a Letter.

Pis. How? of Adultery? Wherefore write you not What Monsters her accuse? Lematius:
 Oh Master, what a strange infection

Is

Is faln into thy ear? What false Italian,
(As poisonous tongu'd, as handed) hath prevail'd
On thy too ready hearing? Disloyal? No.
She's punish'd for her truth; and undergoes
More Goddess-like, then Wife-like; such Assaults
As would take in some Virtue. Oh my Master,
Thy mind to her, is now as low, as were Thy Fortunes. How? that I should murder her,
Upon the Love, and truth, and vov'es; which I
Have made to thy command? I her? Her blood?
If it be so, to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. How look I,
That I should seem to lack humanitie,
So much as this Fa&t comes to? Do't: the Letter.
That I have sent her, by her own command,
Shall give thee opportunitee. Oh damn'd paper,
Black as the Ink that's on thee: senseless bauble,
Art thou a Foedarie for this a&t; thou look'st
So Virgin-like without? Loe here she comes.

Enter Imogen.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Imo. How no, Pisanio?

Pis. Madam, here is a Letter from my Lord.

Imo. Who! thy Lord? that is my Lord Leonatus?

Oh, learn'd indeed were that Astronomer
That knew the Starres, as I his Characters,
Hel'd lay the Future open. You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd, relish of Love,
Of my Lord's health: of his content: yet not
That we two are a-sunder, let that grieve him;
Some griefs are medcinable, that is one of them,
For it doth physick Love, of his content,
All but in that. Good Wax, thy leave: blest be
You Bees that make these Locks of counsel. Lovers,
And men in dangerous Bonds pray not alike.
Though Forfeiture you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables: good Newes gods.

Justice, and your Father's wrath (should he take me in his Dominion) could not be so cruel to me, as you, (oh the dearest of Creatures) would even renew me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria at Milford-Haven: what your own Love, will out of this advise you, follow. So he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his Vow, and your increasing in Love.

Leonatus Posthumus.

Oh for a Horse with wings: Hear'st thou, Pisanio?
He is at Milford-Haven: Read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I
Glide thither in a day? then true Pisanio,
Who long'st like me, to see thy Lord; who long'st
(Oh let me bate) but not like me: yet long'st
But in a fainter kind. Oh not like me:
For mine's beyond, beyond: say, and speak thick
(Love's Counsellor should fill the bores of hearing, To th'smothering of the Sense) how far it is
To this same blessed Milford. And by th'way Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as T'inherit such a Haven. But first of all,
How may we steal from hence: and for the gap
That we shall make in time, from our hence-going,
And our return, to excuse: but first, how get hence.
Why should excuse be borne or e're begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Prythee speak,
How many score of Miles may we well ride

'Twillt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt Sun, and Sun,
Madam's enough for you: and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to's Execution, Man,
Could never go so slow: I have heard of Riding wagers,
Where Horses have been nimbler then the Sands
That run i'th'Clocks behalf. But this is Foolrie,
Go, bid my Woman feign a sickness, say
She'll home to her Father, and provide me presently
A Riding Suit: No costlier then would fit
A Franklins Huswife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me (Man) nor here, nor here,
Nor what ensues but have a Fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I prythee,
Do as I bid thee: there's no more to say:
Accessible is none but Milford way.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A goodly day, not to keep house with such,
Whose Rooofs as low as ours: Sleep Boyes, this gate
Instructs you how t'adore the Heavens; and bows you
To a mornings holy office. The Gates of Monarchs
Are Arch'd so high, that Giants may jet through
And keep their impious Turbands on, without Good morrow to the Sun. Hail thou fair Heaven,
We house i'th' Rock, yet use thee not so hardly,
As prouder livers do.

Guid. Hail Heaven.

Arvir. Hail Heaven.

Bela. Now for our Mountain sport, up to yond hill
Your leggs are young: I le tread these Flats. Consider,
When you above perceive me like a Crow,
That it is Place, which lessens and sets off
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you,
Of Courts of Princes; of the tricks in War.
This service, is not Service; so being done,
But being so allowed: To apprehend thus,
Draws us a profit from all things we see:
And often to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded Beetle, in a safer hold
Then is the full-wing'd Eagle. Oh this life,
Is Nobler, then attending for a check:
Richer, then doing nothing for a Babe:
Prouder then rustling in un-paid-for Silk:
Such gain the Cap of him, that makes him fine,
Yet keeps his Book uncross'd, no life to ours.

Gui. Out of your proof you speak: we poor unfledg'd,
Have never wing'd from view o'th'nest; nor know not What Air's from home. Hap'ly this life is best,
(If quiet life be best) sweeter to you
That have a sharper known; Well corresponding With your stiff Age; but untous, it is
A Cell of Ignorance: travailing a bed,
A Prison or a Debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit.

Arvi. What should we speak
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December? How
In this our pinching Cave, shall we discourse

D d d

The

The freezing hours away ? We have seen nothing :
We are beaftly ; subtle as the Fox for prey,
Like warlike as the Wolf, for what we eat :
Our Valour is to chase what flies : our Cage
We make a Quire, as doth the prison'd Bird,
And sing our Bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak ?

Did you but know the Citie's Usuries,
And felt them knowingly : the Art o'th' Court,
As hard to leave, as keep : whose top to climb
Is certain falling : or so slipp'ry, that
The fear's as bad as falling. The toil o'th' War
A pain that onely seems to seek our danger
I'th' name of Fame, and Honour, which dyes i'th' search,
And hath as oft a stand'rous Epitaph,
As Record of fair Act. Nay, many times
Doth ill deserve, by doing well : what's worse
Must cur'sie at the Censure. Oh Boyes, this Storie
The world may read in me : My bodie's mark'd
With Roman Swords ; and my report was once
First with the best of Note. Cymbeline lov'd me,
And when a Souldier was the Theme, my name
Was not far off : then was I as a Tree
Whose boughes did bend with fruit. But in one night,
A Storm, or Robbery (call it what you will)
Shook down my mellow hangings : nay my Leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Uncertain favour.

Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you oft)
But that two Villains, whose false Oathes prevail'd
Before my perfect Honour, swore to Cymbeline,
I was Confederate with the Romans : so
Followed my Banishment, and this twenty yeares,
This Rock, and these Demesnes, have been my World,
Where I have liv'd at honest freedome, payed
More pious debts to Heaven, then in all
The fore-end of my time. But, up to th' Mountains,
This is not Hunter's Language ; he that strikes
The Venison first, shall be the Lord o'th' Feast,
To him the other two shall minister,
And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater State :
I'll meet you in the Vallyes. Exeunt.
How hard it is to hide the sparks of Nature ?
These Boyes know little they are Sonnes to th' King,
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think they are mine,
And though train'd up thus meanly
I'th' Cave, whereon the Bow their thoughts do hit
The Roofes of Palaces, and Nature prompts them
In simple and low things, to Prince it, much
Beyond the trick of others. This Paladour,
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom
The King his Father call'd Guiderius. Jove,
When on my three-foot stool I sit, and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out
Into my story : say thus mine Enemy fell,
And thus I set my foot on's neck, even then
The Princely blood flows in his Cheek, he sweats,
Strains his young Nerves, and puts himself in posture
That acts my words. The younger Brother Cadwall,
Once Arviragus, in as like a figure
Strikes life into my speech, and shews much more
His own conceiving. Hark, the Game is rous'd,
Oh Cymbeline. Heaven and my Conscience knows
Thou did'st unjustly banish me : whereon

At three, and two years old, I stole these Babes, Thinking to bar thee of Succession, as
Thou rests me of my Lands. Euriphile,
Thou wast their Nurse, they took thee for their mother
And every day do honour to her Grave :
My self Belarius, that am Morgan call'd
They take for Natural Father. The Game is up. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Pisanio and Imogen.

Imo. Thou told'st me when we came from horse, the place
Was near at hand : Ne're long'd my Mother so
To seem first, as I have now : Pisanio, Man :
Where is Posthumus ? What is in thy mind
That makes thee stare thus ? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From th'inward of thee ? One, One, but painted thus
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication. Put thy self
Into a haviour of less fear, e're wildness
Vanquish my staid Senses. What's the matter ?
Why tender'st thou that Paper to me, with A look untender ? If't be Summer News
Smile to't before : if Winterly, thou need'st
But keep that count'nance still. My Husband's hand ?
That Drug-damn'd Italy, hath out-craftied him,
And he's at some hard point. Speak man, thy tongue
May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you read,
And you shall find me (wretched man) a thing
The most disdain'd of Fortune.

Imogen reads.

Thy Mistress (Pisanio) hath play'd the Strumpet in my Bed : the Testimonies whereof, lyes bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak Surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my Revenge.
That part, thou (Pisanio) must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers ; let thine own hands take away her life : I sh ll give thee opportunity at Milford Haven. She hath my Letter for the purpose ; where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the Pander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.

Pis. What shall I need to draw my Sword, the Paper
Hath cut her throat already. No, 'tis slander,
Whose edge is sharper then the Sword, whose tongue
Out-venoms all the Worms of Nile, whose breath
Rides on the posting winds, and doth belye
All corners of the World. Kings, Queens, and States, Maids, Matrons, nay the secrets of the Grave
This viperous slander enters. What cheer, Madam ?

Imo. False to his Bed ? What is it to be false ?
To lye in watch there, and to think on him ?
To weep' twixt clock and clock ? If sleep charge Nature,
To break it with a fearfull dream of him,
And cry my self awake ? that's false to's bed ? is it ?

Pisa. Alas, good Lady.

Imo. I false ? thy Conscience witness : Iachimo,
Thou did'st accuse him of Incontinencie,
Thou then look'd'st like a Villain : now, me thinks

Thy

Thy favours good enough. Some Jay of Italy
(Whose Mother was her painting) hath betray'd him :
Poor I am stale, a Garment out of fashion,
And for I am richer then to hang by th' walle,
I must be ript : To pieces with me : Oh !
Mens Vowes are womens Traitors. All good seeming
By thy revolt (oh Husband) shall be thought
Put on for Villany ; not born wher't growes,
But worn a bait for Ladies.

Pisa. Good Madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false Aneas,
Were in his time thought false : and Synons weeping
Did scandall many a holy teare : took pittie
From most true wretchednesse. So thou, Posthumus,
Wilt lay the leven to all proper men ;
Goodly, and gallant, shall be false and perjur'd
From thy great faile : Come, Fellow, be thou honest,
Doe thou thy Masters bidding. When thou seest him,
A little witness my obedience. Look,
I draw the Sword my self, take it, and hit
The innocent Mansion of my Love (my Heart :)
Fear not, 'tis empty of all things, but Grief :
Thy Master is not there, who was indeed
The riches of it. Do his bidding, strike,
Thou may'st be valiant in a better cause ;
But now thou seem'st a Coward.

Pis. Hence, vile Instrument,
Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must dye :
And if I doe not by thy hand, thou art
No Servant of thy Masters. Against Self-slaughter,
There is a prohibition so Divine
That cravens my weak hand : Come, here's my heart :
Something's afoot : Soft, soft, we'll no defence,
Obedient as the Scabbard. What is here,
The Scriptures of the Loyall Leonatus,
All turn'd to Heresie ? Away, away,
Corrupters of my Faith, you shall no more
Be Stomachers to my heart : thus may poor Fooles
Believe false Teachers : Though those that are betray'd
Doe feeble the Treason sharply, yet the Traitor
Stands in worse case of woe. And thou, Posthumus,
That didd'st set up my disobedience 'gainst the King
My Father, and makes me put into contempt the suits
Of Princely Fellowes, shalt hereafter finde
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of Rarenesse : and I grieve my self,
To think, when thou shalt be disc'dg'd by her,
That now thou trest on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me. Prethee dispatch,
The Lamb entreats the Butcher. Where's thy Knife ?
Thou art too slow to doe thy Masters bidding
When I desire it too.

Pis. Oh gracious Lady :
Since I receiv'd command to doe this businesse,
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eye-balles first.

Imo. Wherefore then
Didd'st undertake it ? Why hast thou abus'd
So many Miles, with a pretence ? This place ?
Mine Action ? and thine own ? Our Horses labour ?
The time inviting thee ? the perturb'd Court
For my being absent ; whereunto I never Purpose return. Why hast thou gone so farre
To be un-bent ? when thou hast tane thy stand,

Th' elected Deer before thee ?

Pis. But to win time
To loose so bad employment, in the which
I have consider'd of a course : good Lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy Tongue weary, speak :
I have heard I am a Strumpet, and mine care
Therein false strook, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent, to bottome that. But speak.

Pis. Then, Madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like,
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so neither :
But if I were as wise, as honest, then
My purpose would prove well : it cannot be,
But that my Master is abus'd. Some Villain,
I, and singular in his Art, hath done you both
This curst injury.

Imo. Some Roman Curtezian ?

Pis. No, on my life :
I'll give him notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it. For 'tis commanded
I should doe so : you shall be mist at Court,
And that will well confirm it,

Imo. Why, good Fellow,
What shall I doe the while ? Where bide ? How live ?
Or in my life, what comfort, when I am
Dead to my Husband ?

Pis. If you'll back to th' Court.

Imo. No Court, no Father : nor no more adoe
With that harsh, noble, simple nothing ?
That Clotten, whose Love-suit hath been to me
As fearfull as a Siege.

Pis. If not at Court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then ?
Hath Britain all the Sun that shines ? Day ? Night ?
Are they not but in Britain ? Ith' worlds Volunie
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in't :
In a great Poole a Swannes nest, prethee think
There's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad
You think of other Place : Th' Ambassador
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To morrow. Now, if you could wear a minde
Dark, as your Fortune is, and but disguise
That which t'appear it self, must not yet be,
But by self-danger, you should tread a course
Pretty, and full of view : yea, happily, near
The residence of Posthumus ; so nigh (at last)
That though his Actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your care,
As truly as he moves.

Imo. Oh for such meanes,
Though perill to my modesty, not death on't
I would adventure.

Pis. Well then, here's the point :
You must forget to be a Woman : change
Command into Obedience. Fear and Nicenesse
(The Handmaids of all Women, or more truly Woman it pretty self) into a waggish courage,
Ready in gybes, quick-answer'd, sawcy, and
As quarrellous as the Weazell : Nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your Cheek,
Exposing it (but oh the harder heart,

Alack no remedy) to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan : and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trimmes, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Imo. Nay, be brief:

I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pis. First, make your self but like one,
Fore-thinking this. I have already fit
('Tis in my Cloak-bagge) Doublet, Hat, Hose, all
That answer to them: VVould you in their serving,
(And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season) 'fore Noble Lucius
Present your self, desire his service : tell him
VVherein you're happy, which will make him know,
If that his head have care in Mufick, doubtlesse
With joy he will embrace you : for he's Honourable,
And doubting that, most holy. Your means abroad :
You have me rich, and I will never faile
Beginning, nor supplyment.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The Gods will diet me with. Prethee away,
There's more to be consider'd : but we'll even
All that good time will give us. This attempt,
I am Souldier too, and will abide it with A Princes Courage. Away, I prethee.

Pis. Well, Madam, we must take a short farewell, Lest being mist, I be suspected of
Your carriage from the Court. My Noble Mistris,
Here is a box, I had it from the Queen,
What's in't is precious : If you are sick at Sea,
Or Stomack-qualm'd at Land, a D amme of this Will drive away distemper. To some shade,
And fit you to your Manhood : may the Gods
Direct you to the best.

Imo. Amen : I thank thee,

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, and Lords.

Cym. Thus farre, and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, Royall Sir :

My Emperor hath wrote, I must from hence,
And am right sorry, that I must report ye
My Masters Enemy.

Cym. Our Subjects (Sir)
Will not endure his yoake ; and for our self
To shew lesse Sovereignty then they, must needs
Appear un-Kinglike.

Luc. So, Sir : I desire of you
A Conduet over Land, to Milford-Haven.
Madam, all joy befall your Grace, and you.

Cym. My Lords, you are appointed for that Office :
The due of Honour in no point omit :
So farewell Noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my Lord.

Clot. Receive it friendly : but from this time forth
I wear it as your Enemy.

Luc. Sir, the Event

Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my Lords,
Till he have cross'd Severn. Happinesse. Exit Lucius, &c.

Qu. He goes hence frowning : but it honours us
That we have given him cause.

Clot. 'Tis all the better,

Your valiant Britains have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the Emperor
How it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely,
Our Chariots, and our Horsemen be in readinesse :
The Powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves
His warre for Britain.

Qu. 'Tis not sleepy businesse,
But must be look'd to speedily, and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it should be thus Hath made us forward. But my gentle Queen,
Where is our Daughter ? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day. She looks as like
A thing more made of malice, then of duty,
We have noted it. Call her before us, for
We have been too light in sufferance.

Qu. Royall Sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd
Hath her life bin : the Cure whereof, my Lord,
'Tis time must doe. 'Beseech your Majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her. She's a Lady
So tender of rebukes, that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her.

Enter a Messenger.

Cym. Where is she, Sir ? How
Can her contempt be answer'd ?

Mes. Please you, Sir,
Her Chambers are all lock'd, and there's no answer
That will be given to th' loud of noise we make.

Qu. My Lord, when last I went to visit her,
She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close,
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you
Which daily she was bound to proffer : this
She wish'd me to make known : but our great Court
Made me too blame in memory.

Cym. Her doores lock'd ?
Not seen of late ? Grant Heavens, that which I Fear, prove false.

Exit.

Qu. Son, I say, follow the King.

Clot. That man of hers, Pisano, her old Servant
I have not seen these two dayes.

Exit.

Qu. Go, look after :
Pisano, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus,
He hath a Drugge of mine : I pray, his absence
Proceed by swallowing that. For he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone ? Haply despaire hath seiz'd her :
Or wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown
To her desired Posthumus : gone she is,
To death, or to dishonour, and my end
Can make good use of either. She being down,
I have the placing of the Brittish Crown.

Enter Cloten.

How now, my Son ?

Clot. 'Tis certain she is fled.
Go in and cheer the King, he rages, none
Dare come about him.

Qu. All the better : may
This night fore-tell him of the comming day. Exit Qu.

Clot. I love and hate her : for she's fair and Royall,
And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite

Then

Then Lady, Ladies, Woman, from every one
The best she hath, and she of all compounded
Out-sells them all. I love her therefore, but Disdaining me, and throwing Favours on
The low Posthumus, slanders so her judgement,
That what's else rare, is choak'd : and in that point
I will conclude to hate her, nay indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her. For, when Fooles-----

Enter Pisanio.

Who is here ? What, are you packing, sirrah ?
Come hither : Ah you precious Pander, Villain,
Where is thy Lady ? In a word, or else
Thou art straight way with the Fiends.

Pis. Oh, good my Lord.

Clo. Where is thy Lady ? Or, by Jupiter,
I will not aske again. Close Villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus ?
From whose so many weights of baseness, cannot
A dramme of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my Lord,
How can she be with him ? When was she miss'd ?
He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, Sir ? Come nearer :
No farther halting : satisfie me home,
What is become of her :

Pis. Oh, my all-worthy Lord.

Clo. All-worthy Villain,
Discover where thy Mistis is, at once,
At the next word : no more of worthy Lord :
Speak, or thy silence on the instant, is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, sir,
This Paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight.

Clo. Let's see't ; I will pursue her
Even to Augustus Throne.

Pis. Or this, or perish.
She's farre enough, and what he learns by this,
May prove his travell, not her danger.

Clo. Humh.

Pis. I'll write to my Lord she is dead : Oh, Imogen,
Safe may'st thou wander, safe return agen.

Clo. Sirrah, is this Letter true ?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus's hand, I know't. Sirrah, if thou would'st not be a Villain, but doe me true service :
undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry, that is, what villainy soe're I bid thee doe to perform it, directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man : thou should'st neither want my meanes for thy relief, nor my voyce for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good Lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me ? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare Fortune of that Beggar Posthumus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me ?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand, here's my Purse. Hast any of thy late Masters Garments in thy possession ?

Pisan. I have (my Lord) at my Lodging, the same Suit he wore, when he took leave of my Lady and Mistresse.

Clo. The first service thou do'st me, fetch that Suit higher ; let it be thy first service, go.

Pis. I shall, my Lord.

Exeunt.

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven : (I forgot to aske him one thing, I'll remember't anon :) even there, thou villain, Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these Garments were come. She said upon a time (the bitterness of it, I now belch from my heart) that she held the very Garment of Posthumus, in more respect, then my Noble and naturall person ; together with the adornment of my Qualities. With that Suit upon my back will I ravish her : first kill him, and in her eyes : there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the Ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, and when my lust hath dined (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the Cloathes that she so prais'd:) to the Court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despis'd me rejoycingly, and I'll be merry in my Revenge.

Enter Pisanio.

Be those the Garments ?

Pis. I, my Noble Lord.

Clo. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven ?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this Apparell to my Chamber, that is the second thing that I have commanded thee. The third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary Mute to my design. Be but dutious, and true preferment shall tender it self to thee.
My Revenge is now at Milford, would I had wings to soilow it. Come and be true.

Exit.

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my losse : for true to thee,
Were to prove false, which I will never be
To him that is most true. To Milford, go,
And find not her, whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow
You heavenly blessings on her : This Fool's speed
Be crost with slownesse ; Labour be his meed. Exit.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one,
I have tired my self : and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick,
But that my resolution helps me : Milford,
When from the Mountain top Pisanio shew'd thee,
Thou was't within a kenne. Oh, Jove, I think
Foundations flye the wretched, such I mean,
Where they should be reliev'd. Two Beggars told me,
I could not misse my way. Will poor Folks lye
That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis
A punishment, or triall ? Yes ; no wonder,
When Rich-ones scarce tell true. To lapse in Fulnesse
Is sorer, then to lye for Need : and Falshood
Is worse in Kings, then Beggars. My dear Lord,
Thou art one oth' false Ones : now I think on thee,
My hunger's gone ; but even before, I was
At point to sink for Food. But what is this ?
Here is a path to't : 'tis some savage hold :
I were best not call ; I dare not call : yet Famine
Ere it clean o're-throw Nature, make it valiant.
Plenty and peace breeds Cowards, Hardnesse ever
Of Hardinesse is Mother. Hoa ? who's here ?
If any that's civil, speak, if savage,

D d d d 3

Take

Take, or lend. Hoa? no answer? then I le enter,
Best draw my Sword; and if mine Enemy
But fear the Sword like me, he'll scarcely look on't.
Such a Foe, good Heavens.

Exit.

Scena Septima.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. You Polidore have prov'd best Woodman, and Are Master of the feast: Cadwall and I
Will play the Cook, and Servant, 'tis our match:
The sweat of industry would dry, and dye
But for the end it works to. Come, our Stomacks
Will make what's homely, savoury; Weariness
Can snore upon the Flint, when resty Sloth
Finds the Down-pillow hard. No peace be here,
Poor house, that keep'st thy self.

Gui. I am throngly weary.

Arvi. I am weak with toyle, yet strong in appetite.

Gui. There is cold meat ith' Cave, we'll brouz on that Whil'st what we have kill'd be Cook'd.

Bel. Stay, come not in:
But that it eats our victualls, I should think
Here were a Faery.

Gui. What's the matter, Sir?

Bel. By Jupiter an Angel: or if not,
An earthly Paragon. Behold Divinenesse
No elder then a Boy.

Enter Imogen.

Imo. Good Master, harme me not:
Before I enter'd here, I call'd, and thought
To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took: good troth
I have stoln nought, nor would not, though I had found
Gold strew'd ith' Floore. Here's money for my Meat,
I would have left it on the Boord so soon
As I had made my Meale: and parted
With Prayers for the Provider.

Gui. Money? Youth.

Arvi. All Gold and Silver rather turn doe durt,
As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those
Who worship durty gods.

Imo. I see you're angry:
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died, had I not made it.

Bel. Whether bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven.

Bel. What's your name?

Imo. Fidele, Sir; I have a Kinsman, who
Is bound for Italy: he embark'd at Milford,
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am fain in this offence.

Bel. Prethee (fair youth)

Think us no Churles: nor measure our good mindes
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd,
'Tis almost night, you shall have better cheere
Ere you depart, and thanks to stay and eat it:
Boyes, bid him welcome.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth,
I should wooe hard, but be your Groom in honesty;
I bid for you, as I doe buy.

Arvi. I'll make't my comfort
He is a man, I'll love him as my Brother:
And such a welcome as I'd give to him

(After long absence) such is yours. Most welcome:
Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.

Imo. 'Mongst friends.

If Brothers: would it had bin so, that they Had bin my Father's Sons, then had my prize
Bin lesse, and so more equall ballasting

To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some distresse.

Gui. Would I could free't.

Arvi. Or I, what ere it be,
What pain it cost, what danger: gods!

Bel. Harke, Boyes.

Imo. Great men

That had a Court no bigger then this Cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the virtue
Which their own Conscience seal'd them: laying by
That nothing-gift of differing Multitudes
Could not out-piece these twain. Pardon me gods,
I'd change my sex to be Companion with them,
Since Leonatus false.

Bel. It shall be so:

Boyes, we'll go dresse our Hunt. Fair, you come in;
Discourse is heavy, fasting: when we have supp'd
We'll mannerly demand thee of thy Story.

So farre as thou wilt speak it,

Gui. Pray draw near.

Arvi. The night to th' Owle,
And Morn to th' Larke lesse welcome.

Imo. Thanks, Sir.

Arvi. I pray draw near.

Exeunt.

Scena Octava.

Enter two Roman Senators, and Tribunes.

1. Sen. This is the tenour of the Emperors Writ;
That since the common men are now in Action
'Gainst the Pannonians, and Dalmatians,
And that the Legions now in Gallia, are Full weak to undertake our Warres against
The fain-off Britains, that we doe incite
The Gentry to this businesse. He creates
Lucius Pro-Consull: and to you the Tribunes
For this immediate Levy, he commands
His absolute Commission. Long live Cesar.

Tri. Is Lucius Generall of the Forces?

2. Sen. I.

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

1. Sen. With those Legions
Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy
Must be suppliant: the words of your Commission
Will tie you to the Numbers and the time
Of their dispatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Cloten alone.

Clot. I am near to th' place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapp'd it truly. How fit his Garments serve me? Why should his Mistris who was made by him that that made the Taylor, not be fit too? The rather (saving reverence of the Word) for 'tis said a Womans fitness comes by fits: therein I must play the Workman, I dare speak it to my self, for it is not Vain-glory for a man, and his Glasse, to conferre in his own Chamber; I mean, the Lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no lesse young, more strong, not beneath him in Fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in Birth, alike conversant in generall services, and more remarkable in single oppositions: yet this imperseverant Thing loves him in my despight. What Mortality is? Posthumus, thy head (which now is growing upon thy shoulders) shall within this houre be off, thy Mistress enforced, thy Garments cut to pieces before thy face: and all this done, spurn her home to her Father, who may (happily) be a little angry for my so rough usage: but my Mother having power of his testinesse, shall turn all into my commendations. My Horse is tyed up safe, out Sword, and to a fore purpose: Fortune put them into my hand: This is the very description of their meeting place and the fellow dares not deceive me.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Imogen from the Cave.

Bel. You are not well: Remain here in the Cave, We'll come to you after hunting.

Arvi. Brother, stay here: Are we not Brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be, But Clay and Clay differs in dignity, Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick,

Gwi. Go you to hunting, I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am not, yet I am not well: But not so Citizen a wanton, as To seem to dye, ere sick: So please you, leave me, Stick to your Journall course: the breach of Custome, Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by me Cannot amend me. Society is no comfort To one not sociable: I am not very sick, Since I can reason of it: pray you trust me here, I'll rob none but my self, and let me dye Stealing so poorly.

Gwi. I love thee: I have spoke it, How much the quantity, the weight as much, As I doe love my Father.

Bel. What? how? how?

Arvi. If it be sin to say so (Sir) I yoke me In my good Brothers fault: I know not why I love this youth, and I have heard you say, Love's reasons without reason. The Beer at door, And a demand who is't shall dye, I'd say My Father, not this Youth.

Bel. Oh noble strain! O worthinesse of Nature, breed of greatnesse! "Cowards, Father, Cowards, and base things, Sire, base: "Nature hath Meale and Bran; Contempt and Grace. I'me not their Father, yet who this should be, Doth miracle it self, lov'd before me. 'Tis the ninth hour oth' Morn.

Arvi. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arvi. You health.-----So please you, Sir.

Imo. These are kind Creatures.

Gods, what lyes I have heard: Our Courtiers say, all's savage, but at Court: Experience, oh thou disprov'st Report. Th'imperious Seas breed Monsters; for the Dish, Poor Tributary Rivers, as sweet fish: I am sick still, heart-sick: Pisanio, I'll now taste of thy Drugges.

Gwi. I could not stirre him: He said he was gentle, but unfortunate; Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.

Arvi. Thus did he answer me: yet said hereafter, I might know more.

Bel. To th' field, to th' field: We'll leave you for this time, go in, and rest.

Arvi. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray be not sick, For you must be our Hufwife.

Imo. Well or ill, I am bound to you.

Exit.

Bel. And shalt be ever. This youth, how e're distressed, appears he hath had Good Ancestors.

Arvi. How Angel-like he sings?

Gwi. But his neat Cookery?

Arvi. He cut our Roots in Characters, And sawe't our Broths, as Juno had been sick, And he her Dieter.

Arvi. Nobly he yokes A smiling with a sigh: as if the sigh Was that it was, for not being such a smile: The smile mocking the sigh, that it would flye From so divine a Temple, to commix With windes that Sailors raile at.

Gwi. I doe note, That grief and patience rooted in them both, Mingle their spurres together, Arvi. Grow patient, And let the stinking Elder (Grief) untwine His perishing root, with the encreasing Vine.

Bel. It is great morning. Come away: who's there?

Enter Cloten.

Clot. I cannot find those Runagates, that Villain Hath mock'd me. I am faint.

Bel. Those Runagates? Means he not us? I partly know him, 'tis Cloten, the Son oth' Queen. I fear some Ambush: I saw him not these many yeares, and yet I know 'tis he: we are held as Out-lawes; hence.

Gwi. He is but one: you, and my brother search What Companies are near: pray you away, Let me alone with him.

Clot. Soft, what are you That flye me thus? Some Villain Mountainers? I have heard of such. What Slave art thou?

Gwi. A thing, More slavish did I ne're, then answering A Slave without a knock.

Clot. Thou art a Robber, A Law-breaker, a Villain: yield thee, Thief.

Gwi. To whom? to thee? what art thou? Have not I An Arme as big as thine? a Heart as big: Thy words I grant are bigger: for I wear not My Dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art:

Why,

Why. I should yield to thee?

Clo. Thou Villain base;

Know'st me not by my Cloathes?

Gui. No, nor thy Taylor; Rascal,
Who is thy Grandfather: He made those Cloathes,
Which (as it seems) make thee.

Clo. Thou precious Varlet,
My Taylor made them not.

Gui. Hence then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some Foole,
I am loth to beat thee.

Clo. Thou injurious Thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What's thy name?

Clo. Cloten, thou Villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double Villain be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it, were it Toad, or Adder, Spider,
'Twould move sooner.

Clo. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy meer Confusion, thou shalt know
I am Son to th' Queen.

Gui. I am sorry for't: not seeming
So worthy as thy Birth.

Clo. Art not afeard?

Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear, the Wise:
At Fooles I laugh, not fear them.

Clo. Dye the death:

When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence:
And on the Gates of Luds-Town set your heads:
Yield Rustick Mountaineer.

Fight and Exeunt.

Enter Belarius and Arviragus.

Bel. No Company's abroad?

Arvi. None in the world: you did mistake him sure.

Bel. I cannot tell: long is it since I saw him,
But Time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of Favour
Which then he wore: the snatches in his voyce,
And burst of speaking were as his: I am absolute
'Twas very Cloten.

Arvi. In this place we left them;
I wish my Brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean to man; he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors: For defect of judgement
Is oft the cause of Fear.

Enter Guiderius.

But see thy Brother.

Gui. This Cloten was a Fool, an empty purse,
There was no money in't: Not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his Brains, for he had none:
Yet I not doing this, the Foole had born
My head, as I doe his.

Bel. What hast thou done?

Gui. I am perfect what; cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the Queen (after his own report)
Who call'd me Traitor, Mountaineer, and swore
With his own hand he'd take us in,
Displace our heads, where (thanks to th' gods) they grow
And set them on Luds-Town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy Father, what have we to loose,
But that he swore to take our Lives? the Law
Protects not us, then why should we be tender,
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us?
Play Judge, and Executioner, all himself?

For we doe fear no Law. What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soule

Can we set eye on: but in all safe reason
He must have some Attendants. Though his Honour
Was nothing but mutation; I, and that
From one bad thing to worse: Not Frenzy,
Not absolute madnesse could so farre have ray'd
To bring him here alone, although perhaps
It may be heard at Court, that such as we Cave here, haunt here, are Out-lawes, and in time
May make some stronger head, the which he hearing,
(As it is like him) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in, yet is't not probable
To come alone, either so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then on good ground we fear,
If we doe fear this body hath a taile
More perilous then the head.

Arvi. Let Ord'nance

Come, as the gods fore-say it, howsoe're
My Brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no minde

To hunt this day: The Boy Fideles sicknesse
Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own Sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have tane
His head from him: I'll throw't into the Creek
Behinde our Rock, and let it to the Sea,
And tell the Fishes, he's the Queens Son, Cloten,
That's all I reake.

Exit.

Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd:

Would (Polidore) thou hadst not done't: though valour
Becomes thee well enough.

Arvi. Would I had done't:

So the Revenge alone pursu'd me: Polidore,
I love thee brotherly, but envy much
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would Revenges
That possible strength might meet, would seek us through
And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 'tis done:

We'll hunt no more to day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I prethee to our Rock,
You and Fidele play the Cooks: I'll stay
Till hasty Polidore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arvi. Poor sick Fidele.

I'll willingly to him, to gain his colour,
I'd let a Parish of such Clotens blood,
And praise my self for charity,

Exit.

Bel. Oh thou Goddesse,

Thou divine Nature; thy self thou blazon'st
In these two Princely Boyes: they are as gentle
As Zephires blowing below the Violet,
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet, as rough
(Their Royall blood enchas'd) as the rud'st winde,
That by the top doth take the Mountain Pine,
And make him stoop to th' Vaile. 'Tis wonder
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To Royalty unlearn'd, Honour untaught,
Civility not seen from other: Valour,
That wildly growes in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd: yet still it's strange
What Clotens being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Enter Guiderius.

Gui. Where's my Brother?

I have sent Cloten's Cloot-pole down the streame ;
In Embassie to his Mother ; his Bodies hostage
For his return.

Solemn Musick.

Bel. My ingenious Instrument,
(Harke Polidore) it sounds : but what occasion
Hath Cadwall now to give it motion ? Hark.

Gui. Is he at home ?

Bel. He went hence even now.

Gui. What does he mean ?

Since death of my dear't Mother
It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn Accidents. The matter ?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys,
Is jollity for Apes, and grief for Boyes.
Is Cadwall mad ?

Enter Arviragus, with Imogen dead, bearing her in his Armes.

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his Armes,
Of what we blame him for.

Arvi. The Bird is dead
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skipt from sixteen yeates of Age, to sixty :
To have turn'd my leaping time into a Crutch,
Then have seen this.

Gui. Oh sweetest, fairest Lilly :
My Brother weares thee not the one half so well,
As when thou grew'st thy self.

Bel. Oh melancholly,
Who ever yet could sound thy bottome ? Finde
The Ooze, to shew that Coast thy sluggish care
Might easilest harbour in. Thou blessed thing.
Jove knowes what man thou might'st have made : but I,
Thou dyed'st a more rare Boy, of Melancholly.
How found you him ?

Arvi. Starke, as you see :
Thus smiling as some Flye had tickled slumber,
Not as deaths dart being laugh'd at : his right Check
Reposing on a Cushion.

Gui. Where ?

Arvi. O'th' floore :
His armes thus leagu'd, I thought he slept, and put My clouted Brogues from off my feet, whose rudenesse
Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleeps :
If he be gone he'll make his Grave a Bed :
With Female Faeries will his Tombe be haunted,
And Wormes will not come to thee.

Arvi. With fairest Flowers
Whil'st Sommer lasts, and I live here, Fidele, I'll sweeten thy sad grave : thou shalt not lack
The Flower that's like thy face. Pale-Primrose, nor
The azur'd Hare-bell, like thy Veins : no nor
The leaf of Eglantine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweetned not thy breath : the Raddock would
With Charitable bill (Oh bill sore shaming
Those rich-left-heires, that let their Fathers lye
Without a Monument) bring thee all this,
Yea, and furr'd Mosses besides. When Flowers are none
To winter-ground thy Coarse-----

Gui. Prethee have done,
And doe not play in Wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration, what
Is now due debt. To th' grave.

Arvi. Say, where's shall's lay him ?

Gui. By good Euriphile, our Mother.

Arvi. Be't so :

And let us (Polidore) though now our voyces
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to th' ground
As once to our Mother : use like note, and words,
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwall,

I cannot sing : I'll weep, and word it with thee,
For Notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worse
Then Priests, and Vanes that lye.

Arvi. We'll speak it then.

Bel. Great griefs I see med'cine the lesse, For Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a Queens Son, Boyes,
And though he came our Enemy, remember
He was paid for that : thou mean, and mighty rotting
Together have one dust, yet Reverence
(That Angel of the world) doth make distinction
Of place 'twixt high and low. Our Foe was Princely,
And though you took his life, as being our Foe,
Yet bury him, as a Prince.

Gui. Pray thee fetch him higher,
Thersites body is as good as Ajax,
VVhen neither are alive.

Arvi. If you'll go fetch him,
VVe'll say our Song the whil'st : Brother begin.

Gui. Nay Cadwall, we must lay his head to th' East,
My Father hath a reason for't.

Arvi. 'Tis true.

Gui. Come on then, and remove him.

Arvi. So, begin.

SONG.

Guid. Fear no more the heat oth' Sun,
Nor the furious Winters rages,
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and take thy wages.
Golden Lads and Girles all must,
As Chimney-Sweepers come to dust.

Arvi. Fear no more the frown oth' Great,
Thou art past the Tirants stroke,
Care no more to cloathe and eate,
To thee the Reed is as the Oake :
The Scepter, Learning, Physick must,
All follow this and come to dust.

Guid. Fear no more the Lightning flash.
Arvi. Nor th' all-dreaded Thunder-stone.

Gui. Fear no slander, Censure rash.

Arvi. Thou hast finish'd Joy and Moan.

Both. All Lovers young, all Lovers must,
Consign to thee, and come to dust.

Guid. No Exorciser harme thee,

Arvi. Nor no witch-craft charme thee.

Guid. Ghost unlaid forbear thee.

Arvi. Nothing ill come near thee.

Both. Quiet consummation have,
And renowned be thy grave.

Enter Belarius with the body of Cloten.

Gui. VVe have done our obsequies :
Come lay him down.

Bel. Here's few Flowers, but about midnight more :
The hearbs that have on them cold dew oth' night
Are strewings fitt'ft for Graves : upon their Faces.
You were as Flowers, now wither'd : even so
These Herbelets shall, which we upon you strew.
Come on away, apart upon our knees :
The ground that gave them first, has them again :
Their pleasures here are past, so are their pain.

*Exeunt.
Imogen*

Imogen awakes.

Yes, Sir, to Milford-Haven, which is the way?
 I thank you: by yond bush? pray how farre thicher?
 'Ods pitukins: can it be six mile yer?
 I have gone all night: 'faith, I'll lye down and sleep.
 But soft: no Bedfellow? Oh Gods, and Goddesse!
 These Flowers are like the pleasures of the World;
 This bloody man the care on't. I hope I dreame:
 For so I thought I was a Cave-keeper,
 And Cook to honest Creatures. But 'tis not so:
 'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
 Which the Brain makes of Fumes. Our very eyes,
 Are sometimes like our Judgements, blinde. Good faith
 I tremble still with fear: but if there be
 Yet left in heaven, as small a drop of pittie
 As a Wrens eye; fear'd Gods, apart of it.
 The Dreame's here still: even when I wake it is Without me, as within me: not imagin'd, felt.
 A headlesse man? The Garments of Posthumus?
 I know the shape of's Leg: this is his Hand:
 His Foot Mercuriall: his Martiall Thigh
 The Brawns of Hercules: but his Joviall face-----
 Murther in heaven? How? 'tis gone. Pisanio,
 All curses madded Hecuba gave the Greeks,
 And mine to boot, be darted on thee: thou
 Conspir'd with that irregulous devil Clotten,
 Hath here cut off my Lord. To write, and read,
 Be henceforth treacherous. Damn'd Pisanio
 Hath with his forg'd Letters (damn'd Pisanio)
 From this most bravest vessell of the world
 Strook the main top! Oh Posthumus, alas,
 Where is thy head? where's that? Aye me! where's that Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
 And left his head on. How should this be, Pisanio?
 Tis he and Clotten. Malice and Lucre in them
 Have laid this Woe here. Oh 'tis pregnant, pregnant!
 The Drugges he gave me, which he said was precious
 And Cordiall to me, have I not found it
 Murd'rous to th' Senses? that confirms it home:
 This is Pisanio's deed, and Clotten: Oh!
 Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
 That we the horrid may seem to those
 Which chace to finde us, Oh, my Lord! my Lord!

Enter Lucius, Captains, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them, the Legions garrison'd in Gallia
 After your will, have crost the Sea, attending
 You here at Milford Haven, with your Ships:
 They are in readinesse.

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The Senate hath stirr'd up the Confiners,
 And Gentlemen of Italy, most willing Spirits,
 That promise Noble Service: and they come
 Under the Conduct of bold Iachimo, Syenna's Brother.

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit oth' winde.

Luc. This forwardnesse

Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers
 Be mustered, bid the Captains look to't. Now, Sir,
 What, have you dream'd of late of this warres purpose.

Sooth. Last night the very gods shew'd me a vision
 (I feast, and pray'd for their Intelligence) thus:
 I saw Joves Bird, the Roman Eagle wing'd
 From the Spungy South, to this part of the West,
 There vanish'd in the Sun-beames, which portends
 Unlessse my Sins abuse my Divination)

Successse to th' Roman hoast.

Luc. Dreame often so,

And never false. Soft hoa, what Trunk is here?
 Without his top? the ruine speaks, that sometime
 It was a worthy building. How? a Page?
 Or dead, or sleeping on him? but dead rather:
 For Nature doth abhorre to make his bed
 With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.

Let's see the Boyes face.

Cap. He's alive, my Lord.

Luc. He'll then instruct us of his body. Young one,
 Inform us of thy Fortunes, for it seems
 They crave to be demand'd: who is this Thou mak'st thy bloody Pillow? Or who was he
 That (otherwise then noble Nature did)
 Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
 In this sad wrack? How cam'st? Who is't?
 What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
 Nothing to be were better: This was my Master,
 A very valiant Britain, and a good,
 That here by Mountainers lies slain: Alas,
 There are no more such Masters: I may wander
 From East to Occident, cry our for Service,
 Try many, all good: serve truly: never Finde such another Master.

Luc. 'Lack, good youth:

Thou mov'st no lesse with thy complaining, then
 Thy Master in bleeding: say his name, good Friend,

Imo. Richard du Camp: If I doe lye and doe,
 No harme by it, though the Gods hear, I hope
 They'll pardon it. Say you, Sir?

Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele, Sir.

Luc. Thou do'st approve thy self the very same:
 Thy name well fits thy Faith, thy Faith, thy Name:
 Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say
 Thou shalt be so well master'd, but be sure
 No lesse belov'd. The Roman Emperors Letters
 Sent by a Consull to me, should no sooner
 Then thine own worth preferre thee: Go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, Sir. But first, an't please the gods,
 I'll hide my Master from the Flyes as deep
 As these poor Pickaxes can dig: and when
 With wild wood-leaves & weeds I ha' strew'd his grave,
 And on it said a Century of prayers,
 (Such as I can) twice o're, I'll weep, and sigh,
 And leaving so his service, follow you,
 So please you entertain me.

Luc. I, good youth,

And rather Father thee, then Master thee: My Friends,
 The Boy hath taught us manly duties: Let us
 Finde out the prettiest Dazied-Plot we can,
 And make him with our Pikes and Partizans
 A Grave: Come, Arme him: Boy he is preferr'd
 By thee, to us, and he shall be interr'd
 As Souldiers can. Be cheerfull, wipe thines eyes,
 Some falls are means the happier to arise.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, and Pisanio.

Cym. Again: and bring we word how 'tis with her,
 A Fever with the absence of her Son;

A madness, of which her life's in danger : Heavens,
How deeply you at once do touch me. Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone : My Queen
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful Warres point at me : Her Son gone,
So needfull for his present ? It strikes me, me, past
The hope of comfort. But for thee, Fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll inforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will : But for my Mistress,
I nothing know where she remains : why gone,
Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your Highness,
Hold me your loyal Servant.

Lord. Good my Liege,
The day that she was missing, she was here ;
I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will no doubt be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome :
We'll slip you for a season, but with jealousy
Do's yet depend.

Lord. So please your Majesty,
The Roman Legions all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your Coast, with supply
Of Roman Gentlemen, by the Senate sent.

Cym. Now for the Counsel of my Son and Queen.
I am amaz'd with matter.

Lord. Good my Liege,
Your preparation can affront no less (ready :
Then what you hear of. Come more, for more you're
The want is, but to put these powers in motion,
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you : let's withdraw
And meet the time, as it seeks us, We fear not What can from Italy annoy us, but
We grieve at chances here. Away.

Pis. I heard no Letter from my Master, since
I wrote him Imogen was slain. 'Tis strange :
Nor hear I from my Mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings. Neither know I
What is betide to Cloten, but remain
Perplext in all. The Heavens still must work :
Wherein I am false, I am honest : not true, to be true.
These present warres shall find I love my Countrey,
Even to the note o'th' King, or I'll fall in them :
All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd,
Fortune brings in some Boats, that are not steer'd. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arvi. What pleasure, Sir, find we in life, to lock it
From Action, and Adventure ?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us ? this way the Romans
Must, or for Britains slay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural Revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sonnes,
We'll higher to the Mountains, there secure us
To the King's party there's no going : newness
Of Cloten's death (we being not known, nor muster'd Among the Bands) may drive us to a render Where we have liv'd ; and so extort from's that
Which we have done, whose answer would be death
Drawn on his torture.

Gui. This is (Sir) a doubt
In such a time, nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arvi. It is not likely,
That when they hear their Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd Fires ; have both their eyes
And eares so cloyd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. Oh, I am known
Of many in the Army : Many yeares
(Though Cloten then but young) you see, not wore him
From my remembrance. And besides, the King
Hath not deserv'd my service, nor your loves
Who find in my Exile, the want of Breeding ;
The certainty of this hard life, aye hopeless
To have the cotesie your Cradle promis'd,
But to be still hot Summer's tanlings, and
The shrinking Slaves of Winter.

Gui. Then be so,
Better to cease to be. Pray, Sir, to th' Army :
I, and my Brother are not known ; your self
So out of thought, and thereto so o're-grown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arvi. By this Sun that shines
I'll thither : what thing is it, that I never Did see man dye, scarce ever look'd on bloud,
But that of Coward Hares, hot Goats, and Venison ?
Never bestrid a Horse save one, that had
A Rider like my self, who ne're wore Rowel,
Nor Iron on his heel ? I am asham'd
To look upon the holy Sun, to have
The benefit of his blest Beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens I'll go,
If you will bless me, Sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care : but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me, by
The hands of Romans.

Arvi. So say I, Amen.

Bel. No reason I (since of your lives you set
So slight a valuation) should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you Boyes :
If in your Countrey warres you chance to dye,
That is my Bed too (Lads) and there I'll lye.
Lead, lead ; the time seems long, their bloud thinks scorn
Till it flie out, and shew them Princes born. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Posthumus alone.

Post. Yea bloody cloth, I'll keep thee : for I am wisht
Thou should'st be colour'd thus. You married ones,
If each of you would take this course, how many Must murder Wives much better then themselves

For

For wrying but a little ? Oh Pisano,
 Every good Seivant does not all Commands :
 No Bond, but to do just ones. Gods, if you Should have ta'ne vengeance on my faults, I never Had liv'd to put on this : so had you saved
 The noble Imogen to repent, and strook
 Me (wretch) more worth your Vengeance. But alack,
 You snatch from hence for little faults ; that's love
 To have them fall no more : you some permit
 To second ills with ills, each Elder worse,
 And make them dread it, to the doers thrift
 But Imogen is your own, do your best wills,
 And make me blest to obey. I am brought hither
 Among th' Italian Gentry, and to fight Against my Ladies Kingdome : 'tis enough
 That (Britain) I have kill'd thy Mistress : Peace,
 I le give no wound to thee : therefore good Heavens,
 Hear patiently my purpose. I'll disrobe me
 Of these Italian weeds, and suit my self
 As do's a Britain Pezant : so I'll fight Against the part I come with : so I'll die
 For thee (O Imogen) even for whom my life
 Is every breath, a death : and thus unknown,
 Pitied, nor hated, to the face of peril
 My self I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
 More valour in me, then my habits show.
 Gods, put the strength o'th' Leonati in me :
 To shame the guise o'th' world, I will begin,
 The fashion lets without, and more within.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and the Roman Army at one door : and the Britain Army at another : Leonatus Posthumus following like a poor Souldier. They march over, and go out. Then enter again in Skirmish Iachimo and Posthumus : he vanquisheth and disarmeth Iachimo, and then leaves him.

Iac. The heaviness and guilt within my bosome,
 Takes off my manhood : I have belyed a Lady,
 The Princess of this Countrey ; and the air on't
 Revengingly enfeebles me, or could this Carle,
 A very drudge of Natures, have subdu'd me
 In my profession ? Knighthoods, and Honours borne
 (As I wear mine) are titles but of scorn.
 If that thy Gentry (Britain) go before
 This Lowt, as he exceeds our Lords, the odds
 Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods.

Exit.

The Battel continues, the Britains flye, Cymbeline is taken : then enter to his rescue, Bellarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. Stand, stand, we have the advantage of the ground,
 The Lane is guarded : Nothing routs us, but
 The villany of our fears.

Gai. Arvi. Stand, stand and fight.

Enter Posthumus, and seconds the Britains. They rescue Cymbeline, and Exeunt.

Then enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Lue. Away boy from the troops, and save thy self :
 For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such

As War were hood-wink'd.

Iac. 'Tis their fresh supplies.

Lue. It is a day turn'd strangely : or betimes
 Let's re-inforce, or fly.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Posthumus, and a Britain Lord.

Lor. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand ?

Post. I did.

Though you it seems came from the Fliers.

Lo. I did.

Post. No blame to you, Sir, for all was lost,
 But that the Heavens fought : the King himself
 Of his wings destitute, the Army broken,
 And but the backs of Britains seen ; all flying
 Through a straight Lane, the Enemy full-hearted,
 Lolling the tongue with slaught'ring : having work
 More plentifull, then tools to do't : strook down
 Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling
 Merely through fear, that the strait pass was damnd
 With dead-men, hurt behind, and Cowards living
 To dye with length'ned shame.

Lo. Where was this Lane ?

Post. Close by the battel, ditch'd, and wall'd with turfe,
 Which gave advantage to an ancient Souldier
 (An honest one I warrant) who deserv'd
 So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
 In doing this for's Countrey. Awhart the Lane,
 He, with two striplings (Lads more like to run
 The Countrey base, then to commit such slaughter,
 With faces fit for Masks, or rather fairer
 Then those for preservation cas'd, or shame)
 Made good the passage, cryed to those that fled,
 Our Britain's hearts die flying, not our men,
 To darkness fleet soules that fly backwards ; stand,
 Or we are Romans, and will give you that Like beasts, which you shun beastly, and may save
 But to look back in frown : Stand, stand. These three,
 Three thousand confident, in act as many :
 For three performers are the File, when all
 The rest do nothing. With this word stand, stand, Accommodated by the Place ; more Charming
 With their own Noblenes, which could have turn'd
 A Distaff to a Lance, guilded pale looks ;
 Part shame, part spirit renew'd, that some turn'd coward
 But by example (Oh a sin in War, Damn'd in the first beginners) 'gan to look
 The way that they did, and to grin like Lyons
 Upon the Pikes o'th' Hunters. Then began
 A stop i'th' Chaser ; a Retire : Anon
 A Rout, confusion thick : forthwith they flie
 Chickens, the way which they stopt Eagles : Slaves
 The strides the Victors made : and now our Cowards
 Like Fragments in hard Voyages became
 The life o'th' need : having found the back door open
 Of the unguarded hearts : heavens, how they wound,
 Some slain before, some dying ; some their Friends
 O're-born i'th' former wave, ten chac'd by one,
 Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty :
 Those that would dye, or e're resist, are grown
 The mortal bugs o'th' Field.

Lor.

Lord. This was a strange chance:
A narrow Lane, an old man, and two Boyes.

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: you are made
Rather to wonder at the things you hear,
Then to work any. Will you Rime upon't,
And vent it for a Mock'ry? here is one:

"Two Boyes, an Old-man (twice a Boy) a Lane,
"Preserv'd the Britains, was the Romans bane.

Lord. Nay, be not angry, Sir.

Post. Lack, to what end?
Who dares not stand his Foe, I'll be his Friend:
For if he'll do, as he is made to do,
I know he'll quickly flye my friendship too.
You have put me into Rime.

Lord. Farewell, you're angry.

Exit.

Post. Still going? this is a Lord: Oh Noble misery
To be i'th' field, and ask what newes of me:
To day, how many would have given their Honours
To have sav'd their Carcasses? took heel to do'r,
And yet dyed too. I, in mine own woe charm'd,
Could not find death, where I did hear him groan,
Nor feel him where he strook. Being an ugly Monster,
'Tis strange he hides him in fresh Cups, soft Beds,
Sweet words; or hath more ministers then we
That draw his knives i'th' war. Well, I will find him:
For being now a Favourer to the Britain,
No more a Britain, I have resum'd again
The part I came in. Fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest Hind, that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by th' Roman; great the answer be,
Britains must take. For me, my Ransom's death,
On either side I come to spend my breath;
Which neither here I'll keep, nor bear agen,
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two Captains, and Souldiers.

1. Great Jupiter be prais'd, Lucius is taken,
'Tis thought the old man, and his Sonnes, were Angels.

2. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,
That gave th' Affront with them.

1. So 'tis reported:

But none of 'em can be found. Stand, who's there?

Post. A Roman,

Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds
Had answer'd him.

2. Lay hands on him: a Dog,

A leg of Rome shall not return to tell
What Crows have peckt them here; he brags his service
As if he were of note: bring him to th' King.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pi-sanio, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Posthumus, and Gaoler.

Gao. You shall not now be stoln,
You have locks upon you:
So graze, as you find Pasture.

2. Gao. I, or a stomach.

Post. Most welcome Bondage: for thou art a way
(I think) to liberty: yet am I better
Then one that's sick o'th' Gout, since he had rather

Groan so in perpetuity, then be cur'd
By th'sure Physician, Death; who is the key
T'unbarre these Locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd
More then my shanks, and writs: you good gods give me
The penitent Instrument to pick that Bolt,
Then free for ever. Is't enough I am sorry?
So Children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Mult I repent,
I cannot do it better then in Gyves,
Desir'd, more then constrain'd, to satisfie
If of my freedome 'tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me, then my All.
I know you are more element then vild men,
Who of their broken Debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement; that's not my desire.
For Imogen's dear life, take mine, and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life, you coyn'd it,
'Tween man, and man, they waigh not every stamp:
Though light, take Pieces for the figure's sake,
(You rather) mine being yours: and so great Powres,
If you will take this Audic, take this life,
And cancel those cold Bonds. Oh Imogen,
I'll speak to thee in silence.

Solemn Musick, Enter (as in an Apparition) Sicilius Leonatus, Father to Posthumus, an old man, attired like a warriour, leading in his hand an ancient Matron (his wife, and mother to Posthumus) with Musick before them. Then after other Musick, follows the two young Leonati (Brothers to Posthumus) with wounds as they dyed in the warres, They circle Posthumus round as he lyes sleeping.

Sicil. No more thou thunder-Master
Shew thy spite, on Mortal flies:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide, that thy Adulteries
Rates, and Revenges.

Hath my poor Boy done ought but well,
whose face I never saw:

I dy'd whil't in the womb he stai'd, attending Natures Law.

Whose Father then (as men report, thou Orphans Father art)
Thou should'st have bin, and shielded him, from this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid, but took me in my throwes,
That from me was Posthumus ript, came crying 'mongst his Foes.

A thing of pity.

Sicil. Great Nature like his Ancestry, moulded the stuff so fair:
That he deserv'd the praise o'th' World,
as great Sicilius heir.

1. Bro. When once he was mature for man;
in Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel?
or fruitfull object be?

In eye of Imogen, that best could deem his dignity.

Moth. With Marriage therefore was he mockt to be exil'd, and thrown From Leonati's Seat, and cast from her his dearest one:

Sweet Imogen?

Sicil. Why did you suffer Iachimo, slight thing of Italy,

E e e e

To

To taint his nobler heart & brain, with needless jealousy,
And to become the geek and scorn o'th'others villany?

2. Bro. For this, from stiller seats we came,
our Parents, and us twain,

That striking in our Countries cause,
fell bravely, and were slain,
Our Fealty, & Tenants right, with honour to maintain.

1. Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath to Cymbeline perform'd: (journ'd

Then Jupiter, thou King of gods, why hast thou thus ad-
The Graces for her Merits due, being all to dolours turn'd?

Sici. Thy Chrystal window ope; look out no longer exercise

Upon a valiant Race, thy harsh, and potent injuries:
Moth. Since (Jupiter) our Son is good, take off his miseries.

Sicil. Peep through thy Marble Mansion, help, or we poor Ghosts will cry

Toth'shining Synod of the rest, against thy Deity.

Bro. Help (Jupiter) or we appeal, and from thy justice flye.

Jupiter descends in Thunder and Lightning, sitting upon an Eagle: he throws a Thunder-bolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more you petty Spirits of Region low
Offend our hearing: hush. How dare you Ghosts
Accuse the Thunderer, whose Bolt (you know)
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling Coasts.
Poor shadows of Elizium, hence, and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of Flowres.

Benot with mortal accidents oppress,
No care of yours it is, you know 'tis ours.
Whom best I love, I cross: to make my gift
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content,
Your low-laid Son, our godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his Tryals well are spent:
Our Jovial Star reign'd at his Birth, and in Our Temple was he married: Rife, and fade,
He shall be Lord of Lady Imogen,

And happier much by his Affliction made
This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure, his full Fortune, doth confine,
And so away: no farther with your dinne
Express Impatience, lest you stir up mine:
Mount Eagle, to my Palace Chrystalline.

Sicil. He came in thunder, his Celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell: the holy Eagle
Scoop'd, as to foot use: his Ascension is
More sweet then our blest fields: his Royal Bird
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloyes his Beak,
As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks Jupiter.

Sici. The Marble Pavement closes, he is enter'd
His radiant Roof: Away, and to be blest
Let us with care perform his great behest. Vanish.

Post. Sleep, thou hast bin a Grandfire, and begot
A Father to me: and thou hast created
A Mother, and two Brothers. But (oh scorn)
Gone, they went from hence so soon as they were born;
And so I am awake. Poor Wretches, that depend
On Greatness, Favour; Dream as I have done,
Wake, and find nothing. But (alas) I swerve:
Many Dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steep'd in Favours; so am I
That have this Golden chance, and know not why:
What Fairies haunt this ground? a book? Oh rare one,

Be not, as is our fangled world, a Garment
Nobler then that it covers. Let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our Courtiers,
As good, as promise.

Reads.

*When as a Lyon's whelp, shall to himself unknown without seeking find, and be embrac'd by a piece of tender Air: And when from a stately Cedar shall be lop'd branches, which being dead many yeares, shall after revive, be joynted to the old Stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate,
and flourish in Peace and Plenty.*

'Tis still a Dream: or else such stuff as Mad-men
Tongue, and brain not: either both, or nothing,
Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such
As sense cannot untie. But what it is,
The Action of my life is like it, which I'll keep
If but for sympathy.

Enter Gaoler.

Gao. Come Sir, are you ready for death?

Post. Over-roasted rather: ready long agoe.

Gao. Hanging is the word, Sir, if you be ready for that, you are well Cook'd.

Post. So if I prove a good repast to the Spectators, the dish payes the shot.

Gao. A heavy reckoning for you, Sir: but the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more Tavern Bills, which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink: sorry that you have payed too much, and sorry that you are payed too much: Purse and Brain, both empty: the brain the heavier, for being too light; the Purse too light, being drawn of heaviness. Oh, of this contradiction you shall now be quit: Oh the charity of a penny Cord, it summes up thousands in a trice: you have no true Debtor, and Creditor but it: of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge: your neck (Sir) is Pen, Book, and Counters: so the Acquittance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die, then thou art to live.

Gao. Indeed, Sir, he that sleeps, feels not the Tooth-
Ache: but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a Hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his Officer: for look you, Sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes indeed do I, fellow.

Gao. Your death has eyes in's head then: I have not seen him so pictur'd: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or to take upon your self that which I am sure you do not know: or lump the after-enquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journies end, I think you'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, Fellow, there are none want eyes, to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink, and and will not use them.

Gao. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes, to see the way of blindness:
I am sure such hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Knock off his Manacles, bring your Prisoner to the King.

Post. Thou bring'st good newes, I am call'd to be made free.

Gao. I'll be hang'd then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer then a Gaoler; no bolts for

for the dead.

Gao. Unless a man would marry a Gallows, and beg young Gibbets, I never saw one so prone: yet on my Conscience, there are verier Knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be some of them too that die against their wills: so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good: O there were desolation of Gaolers and Gallowses: I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in't.

Exeunt.

Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this: And but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Corn. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love With such integrity, she did confesse Was a Scorpion to her sight, whose life (But that her sight prevented it) she had Tane off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend! Who is't can read a Woman? is there more?

Corn. More, sir, and worse. She did confesse she had For you a mortal Mineral, which being took, Should by the minute feed on life, and lingring, By inches waste you. In which time, she purpos'd By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'recome you with her shew: yes and in time (When she had fitted you with her craft, to work Her Son into th'adoption of the Crown: But failing of her end by his strange absence, Grew shamelesse desperate, open'd (in despite Of heaven, and men) her purposes: repented The evils she hatch'd, were not effected: so Dispaireing, died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her Women?

Lad. We did, so please your highnesse.

Cym. Mine eyes

Were not in fault, for she was beautifull: Mine ears that heard her flattery, nor my heart, That thought her like her seeming. It had been vicious To have mistrusted her: yet (Oh my Daughter) That it was folly in me, thou maist say, And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all.

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and other Roman prisoners, Leonatus behind, and Imogen.

Thou com'st not Caius now for Tribute, that The Britains have rac'd out, though with the losse Of many a bold one: whose Kinsmen have made suit That their good souls may be appeas'd, with slaughter Of you their Captives, which our self have granted, So think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of War the day Was yours by accident: had it gone with us, We should not when the blood was cool, have threatned Our Prisoners with the Sword. But since the gods Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives May be call'd ransome, let it come: sufficeeth, A Roman, with a Romans heart can suffer: Augustus lives to think on't: and so much For my peculiar care. This one thing only I will entreat, my Boy (a Britain born) Let him be ransom'd: never Master had A page so kind, so duteous, diligent, So tender over his occasions, true, So feat, so Nurse-like: let his vertue joyn With my request, which I'll make bold, your highnesse Cannot deny: he hath done no Britain harme, Though he have serv'd a Roman, Save him (Sir) And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him: His favour is familiar to me: Boy, Thou hast look'd thy self into my grace, And art mine own. I know not why, wherefore, To say, live boy: nere thank thy Master, live; And ask of Cymbeline what Boon thou wilt, Fitting my bounty, and thy state, I'll give it:

Exeunt

Yes,

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cymbeline, Bellarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, and Lords.

Cym. Stand by my side you, whom the gods have made Preservers of my Throne: wo is my heart, That the poor Souldier that so richly fought, Whose rags, sham'd gilded Armes, whose naked brest Stept before Targes of proof, cannot be found: He shall be happy that can find him, if Our Grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw

Such Noble fury in so poor a Thing; Such precious deeds, in one that promis'd nought But beggery and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Pisa. He hath bin search'd among the dead, and living, But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am

The heir of his reward, which I will adde To you (the Liver, Heart, and Brain of Britain) By whom (I grant) she lives. 'Tis now the time To ask of whence you are. Report it.

Bel. Sir,

In Cambria are we born, and Gentlemen: Further to boast, were neither true, nor modest, Unless I adde, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees:

Arise my Knights oth' Battle, I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you With Dignities becoming your estates.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.

There's businesse in these faces: why so sadly Greet you our Victory? you look like the Romans, And not oth' Court of Britain.

Corn. Hail great King,

To sowre your happinesse, I must repute The Queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse then a Physitian Would this report become; but I consider, By Med'cine life may be prolong'd, yet death Will seize the Doctor too. How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life, Which (being cruel to the world) concluded Most cruell to her self. What she confest, I will report so please you. These her Women Can trip me, if I erre, who with wet cheeks Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Prithee say.

Cor. First, she confest she never lov'd you: only Affected Greatnesse got by you: not you: Married your Royalty, was wise to your place:

Yea, though thou do demand a Prisoner,
The Noblest tane.

Imo. I humbly thank your Highness.

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good Lad,
And yet I know thou wilt.

Imo. No, no, alack,
There's other work in hand: I see a thing
Bitter to me as death: your life, good Master,
Must shuffle for it self.

Luc. The Boy disdains me,
He leaves me, scorns me: briefly dye their joyes,
That place them on the truth of Girls, and Boyes.
Why stands he so perplex?

Cym. What would'st thou Boy?
I love thee more, and more: think more and more
What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on? speak
Wilt have him live? Is he thy Kin? thy friend?

Imo. He is a Roman, no more kin to me,
Then I to your Highness, who being born your vassal
Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore ey'st thou him so?

Imo. I'll tell you (Sir) in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

Cym. I, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou'rt my good youth, my Page,
I'll be thy Master: walk with me: speak freely.

Bel. Is not this Boy reviv'd from death?

Arvi. One said another
Not more resembles that sweet Rosie Lad:
Who dyed, and was Fidele: what think you?

Gui. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace, see further; he eyes us not, forbear,
Creatures may be alike: wert he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.

Gui. But we see him dead.

Bel. Be silent: let's see further.

Pisa. It is my Mistress:
Since she is living, let the time run on,
To good, or bad.

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side.
Make thy demand aloud. Sir, step you forth,
Give answer to this boy, and do it freely,
Or by your Greatness, and the grace of it
(Which is our honour) bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood. On, speak to him.

Imo. My boon is, that this Gentleman may tender
Of whom he had this Ring.

Post. What's that to him?

Cym. That Diamond upon your finger, say
How came it yours?

Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken, that
Which to be spoke wou'd torture thee.

Cym. How? me?

Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that Which torments me to conceal. By Villany
I got this Ring: 'twas Leonatus Jewel,
Whom thou did'st banish: and, which more may grieve
As it doth me, a Nobler Sir ne're liv'd (thee,
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more my Lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That Paragon, thy daughter,
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits
Quail to remember. Give me leave, I faint.

Cym. My daughter what of her? Renew thy strength

I had rather thou shoul'dst live, while Nature will,
Then die ere I hear more: strive man, and speak.

Iach. Upon a time, unhappy was the clock
That strook the hour: it was in Rome, accurst
The Mansion where: 'twas at a feast, oh would
Our Viands had bin poison'd (or at least
Those which I heav'd to head:) the good Posthumus, (What should I say? he was too good to be
Where ill men were, and was the best of all Among't the rarest of good ones) sitting sadly,
Hearing us praise our Loves of Italy
For beauty, that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak: for Feature, laming
The Shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerva,
Postures, beyond brief Nature. For Condition,
A shop of the qualities, that man
Loves woman for, besides that hook of Wiving,
Fairness, which strikes the eye.

Cym. I stand on fire. Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou would'st grieve quickly. This Posthumus,
Most like a Noble Lord, in love, and one
That had a Royal Lover, took his hint,
And (not dispraising whom we prais'd, therein
He was as calm as virtue) he began
His Mistress picture, which by his tongue, being made,
And then a mind put in't, either our brags
Were crack'd of Kitchin-Trulls, or his description
Prov'd us unspeaking fots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to th' purpose.

Iach. Your daughters Chastity, (there it begins)
He spake of her, as Dian had hot dreams,
And she alone were cold: Whereat, I wretch
Made scruple of his praise, and wag'd with him
Pieces of Gold, 'gainst this, which then he wore
Upon his honor'd finger; to attain
In suit the place of's bed, and win this Ring
By hers, and mine Adultery: he (true Knight)
No lesser of her honour confident
Then I did truly find her, stakes this Ring,
And would so, had it been a Carbuncle
Of Phæbus Wheel; and might so safely, had it Bin all the worth of's Car. Away to Britain
Post I in this designe: well may you (Sir)
Remember me at Court, where I was taught
Of your chaste Daughter, the wide difference
'Twixt Amorous, and Villanous. Being thus quench'd
Of hope, not longing; mine Italian brain,
'Gan in your duller Britain operate
Most vildly: for my vantage excellent.
And to be brief, my practise so prevail'd
That I return'd with simular proof enough,
To make the Noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her Renown,
With Tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of Chamber hanging, Pictures, this her Bracelet
(Oh cunning how I got it) nay some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of Chastity quite crack'd,
I having tane the forfeit, whereupon,
Me thinks I see him now.

Post. I, so thou do'st,
Italian fiend. Ay me, most credulous fool,
Egregious murtherer, Thief, any thing
That's due to all the Villains past, in being
To come. Oh give me Cord, Knife, or Poison,

Some upright Justicer. Thou King, send out
For tortures ingenious: it is I
That all th'abhorred things oth'earth amend
By being worse then they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy Daughter: Villain-like, I lie,
That caus'd a lesser villain then my self,
A sacrilegious Thief to do't. The Temple
Of Vertue was she: yea, and she her self
Spert, and throw stones, cast myre upon me, set
The dogs oth'street to bait me: every villain
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus, and
Be villany lesse then 'twas. Oh Imogen!
My Queen, my life, my wife: oh Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen.

Imo. Peace, my Lord, hear, hear.

Post. Shall's have a play of this?

Thou scornfull Page, there lie thy part,

Pisa. Oh Gentleman, help,

Mine and your Mistris: Oh, my Lord Posthumus,
You ne're kill'd Imogen till now: help, help.
Mine honor'd Lady.

Cym. Does the world go round?

Post. How comes these staggers on me?

Pisa. Wake my Mistris.

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
To death with mortal joy.

Pisa. How fares my Mistris.

Imo. Oh get thee from my sight,
Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous Fellow hence,
Breath not where Princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen.

Pisa. Lady, the gods throw stones of sulphure on me, if
That box I gave you, was not thought by me
A pretious thing, I had it from the Queen.

Cym. New matter still.

Imo. It poyson'd me.

Corn. Oh gods!

I left out one thing which the Queen confest,
Which must approve thee honest. If Pisanio
Have (said she) given his Mistris that Confection
Which I gave him for Cordial, she is serv'd,
As I would serve a Rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Corn. The Queen (Sir) very oft importun'd me
To temper poisons for her, still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing Creatures vild, as Cats and Dogs
Of no esteem, I dreading, that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which being tane, would seize
The present power of life, but in short time,
All Offices of Nature, should again
Do their due Functions. Have you tane of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My Boyes, there was our error.

Gui. This is sure Fidele.

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded Lady fro you?
Think that you are upon a Rock, and now
Throw me again.

Post. Hang there like fruit, my sou,
Till the tree die.

Cym. How now, my flesh? my child?
What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this Act?
Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. Your blessing, sir.

Bel. Though you did love this youth I blame ye not,

You had a motive for't.

Cym. My tears that fall
Prove holy-water on thee; Imogen,
Thy Mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for't, my Lord.

Cym. Oh, she was nought; and long of her it was
That we meet here so strangely: but her Son
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pisa. My Lord,
Now fear is from me, I'll speak troth. Lord Clotten
Upon my Ladies missing, came to me
With his sword drawn, foam'd at the mouth, and swore
If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death. By accident,
I had a feigned Letter of my Masters
Then in my pocket, which directed him
To seek her on the Mountains nere to Milford,
Where in a frenzy, in my Masters Garments
(Which he inforc'd from me) away he posts
With unchast purpose, and with oath to violate
My Ladies honour, what became of him,
I further know not.

Gui. Let me end the Story: I slew him there.

Cymb. Marry, the gods forefend.
I would not thy good deeds, should from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence: prithee valiant youth
Deny't again.

Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a Prince.

Gui. A most incivil one. The wrongs he did me
Were nothing Prince-like; for he did provoke me
With Language that would make me spurn the Sea,
If it could so roar to me. I cut off's head,
And am right glad he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine,

Cym. I am sorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our Law: thou'rt dead.

Imo. That headlesse man I thought had bin my Lord

Cym. Bind the offender,
And take him from our presence,

Bel. Stay, Sir King.

This man is better then the man he slew,
As well descended as thy self, and hath
More of thee merited, then a band of Clottens
Had ever scar for. Let his Armes alone.
They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why old Souldier:
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for
By tasting of our wrath? how of descent
As good as we?

Arvi. In that he spake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three,
But I will prove that two on's are as good
As I have given out him. My Sons, I must
For mine own part, unfold a dangerous speech,
Though haply well for you.

Arvi. Your danger's ours.

Guid. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then, by leave
Thou had'st (great King) a Subject, who Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? he is a banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is that hath

Assum'd this age: indeed a banish'd man,

I know how, a Traitor.

Cym. Take him hence,
The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot;
First pay me for the Nursing of thy Sons
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have receiv'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my Sons?

Bel. I am too blunt, and sawcy: here's my knee:
Ere I arise, I will preferre my Sons,
Then spare not the old Father. Mighty Sir,
These two young Gentlemen that call me father,
And think they are my Sons, are none of mine,
They are the issue of your Loyns, My Liege,
And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How? my issue.

Bel. So sure as you, your fathers: I (old Morgan)
Am that Bellarius, whom you sometime banish'd:
Your pleasure was my near offence, my punishment
It self, and all my treason that I suffer'd,
Was all the harme I did. These gentle Princes
(For such, and so they are) these twenty years
Have I train'd up; those Arts they have, as I Could put into them. My breeding was (Sir)
As your Highnesse knows, their Nurse Euriphile
(Whom for the Theft I wedded) stole these Children
Upon my Banishment: I mov'd her too't,
Having receiv'd the punishment before
For that which I did then. Beaten for Loyalty,
Excited me to treason. Their dear losse,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd
Unto my end of stealing them. But gracious Sir,
Here are your Sons again: and I must loose
Two of the sweetest Companions in the World.
The benediction of these covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew, for they are worthy
To in-lay heaven with Starrs.

Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st:
The Service that you three have done, is more
Unlike, then this thou tell'st. I lost my children,
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier Sons.

Bel. Be pleas'd a while:
This Gentleman, whom I call Polidore,
Most worthy Prince, as yours, is true Guiderius:
This Gentleman, my Cadwall, Arviragus.
Your younger Princely Son, he sir, was lapt
In a most curious Mantle, wrought by th'hand
Of his Queen Mother, which for more probation
I can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had Upon his neck a Mole, a sanguine Star,
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he,
Who hath upon him still that naturall stamp:
It was wise Natures end, in the donation
To be his evidence now.

Cym. Oh, what am I
A Mother to the birth of three? Nere Mother
Rejoyc'd deliverance more; Blest, pray you be,
That after this strange starting from your Orbes,
You may reign in them now: Oh Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a Kingdome.

Imo. No, my Lord:
I have got two worlds by't. Oh my gentle Brothers,
Have we thus met? Oh never say hereafter

But I am truest speaker. You call'd me Brother
When I was but your Sister: I you Brother,
When we were so indeed.

Cym. Did you ere meet?

Arvi. I my good Lord.

Gui. And at first meeting lov'd,
Continu'd so, untill we thought he died.

Corv. By the Queens Dram she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct!
When shall I hear all through? this fierce abridgement,
Hath to it Circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. Where? how liv'd you?
And when came you to serve our Roman Captive?
How parted with your Brother? How first met them?
Why fled you from the Court? And whether these?
And your three motives to the Battle; with
I know not how much more should be demanded,
And all the other by-dependances
From chance to chance? But not the time, nor place
Will serve our long Interrogatories. See,
Posthumus Anchors upon Imogen;
And she (like harmlesse lightning) throws her eye
On him: her brothers, Me: her Master hitting
Each object with a Joy: the Counter-change
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smok the Temple with our Sacrifices.
Thou art my Brother, so we'll hold thee ever.

Imo. You are my Mother too, and did relieve me:
To see this gracious season.

Cym. All ore-joy'd
Save these in bonds, let them be joyfull too,
For they shall taste our Comfort.

Imo. My good Master, I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you.

Cym. The forlorn Souldier that so Nobly fought
He would have well becom'd this place, and grac'd
The thankings of a King.

Post. I am, sir,
The souldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching: 'twas a sinent for
The purpose I then follow'd. That I was he, Speak Iachimo, I had you down and might Have made your finish.

Iach. I am down again:
But now my heavy Conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech you,
Which I so often owe: but your Ring first,
And here your Bracelet of the truest Princesses
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to spare you:
The malice towards you, to forgive you. Live
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd:
We'll learn our Freeness of a Son-in-Law:
Pardon's the word to all.

Arvi. You help us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our Brother,
Joy'd are we, that you are.

Post. Your Servant, Princes. Good my Lord of Rome
Call forth your Sooth-sayer: As I slept, me thought Great Jupiter upon his Eagle back'd
Appear'd to me, with other sprightly shews
Of mine own Kindred. When I wak'd, I found
This Labell on my bosome: whose containing
Is so from sense in hardnesse, that I can Make no Collection of it. Let him shew

His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmorus.

Sooth. Here, my good Lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Reads.

When as a Lyon's whelp, shall to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embrac'd by a piece of tender Air: and when from a stately Cedar shall be lopt branches, which being dead many yeares, shall after revive, be joynted to the old Stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate,
and flourish in Peace, and Plenty.

Thou Leonatus art the Lyon's Whelp,
The fit and apt Construction of thy name
Being Leonatus, doth import so much:
The piece of tender Air, thy virtuous daughter,
Which we call Mollis Aer, and Mollis Aer
We term it Mulier: which Mulier I divine
Is this most constant Wife, who even now
Answering the Letter of the Oracle,
Unknown to you unsought, were clipt about
With this most tender Air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.

Sooth. The lofty Cedar, Royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee: And thy lopt Branches, point
Thy two Sonnes forth: who by Belarius stoln
For many yeares thought dead, are now reviv'd
To the Majestick Cedar joynt'd; whose issue

Promises Britain, Peace and Plenty.

Cym. Well,

My Peace we will begin: And Caius Lucius,
Although the Victor, we submit to Cesar,
And to the Roman Empire; promising
To pay our wonted Tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked Queen,
Whom Heavens in justice both on her, and hers,
Have laid most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the Powres above, do tune
The harmony of this Peace: the Vision
Which I made known to Lucius e're the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold-Battel, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd. For the Roman Eagle
From South to West, on wing soaring aloft
Lessen'd her self, and in the Beams o'th'Sun
So vanish'd; which fore-shew'd our Princely Eagle
Th'Imperial Cesar, should again unite
His favour, with the Radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the West.

Cym. Laud we the gods,
And let our crooked Smoaks climb to their Nostrils
From our blest Altars. Publish we this peace
To all our Subjects. Set we forward: let
A Roman, and a Brittish Ensign wave
Friendly together; so through Lud's-Town march,
And in the Temple of great Jupiter
Our Peace we'll ratifie. Seal it with feasts.
Set on there: Never was a VVar did cease
(E're bloody hands were wash'd) with such a Peace.

Exeunt.

FINIS.

The much admired Play,
CALLED,
PERICLES, PRINCE of TYRE.

With the true Relation of the whole History, Adventures, and Fortunes of the said Prince.

Written by W. SHAKESPEARE, and published in his life time.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gower.

TO sing a song that old was sung,
From ashes ancient Gower is come,
Assuming mans infirmities,
To glad your ear and please your eyes;
It hath been sung at Festivals,
On Ember eves, and holy-dayes,
And Lords and Ladies in their lives,
Have read it for restoratives.
The purchase is to make men glorious.
Et bonum quo Antiquius, eo melius.
If you, born in these latter times,
When wits more ripe, accept my Rimes;
And that to hear an old man sing,
May to your wishes pleasure bring:
I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you like Taper-light.
This Antioch, then, Antiochus the great,
Built up this City for his chiefest seat;
The fairest in all Syria.
I tell you what mine Authors say:
This King unto him took a Peer,
Who died, and left a female heir,
So bucksome, blishe, and full of face,
As heaven had lent her all his grace:
With whom the Father liking took,
And her to incest did provoke.
Bad childe, worse father, to entice his own.
To evil should be done by none:
But custome, what they did begin,
Was with long use, counted no sin.
The beauty of this sinfull Dame,
Made many Princesse thither frame,

To seek her as a bed-fellow,
In marriage pleasures, play-fellow:
Which to prevent, he made a Law,
To keep her still, and men in awe,
That who so aske her for his wife,
His Riddle told nor, lost his life:
So for her many a wight did die,
As you grim look: do testifie.
What ensues to the judgement of your eye,
I give my cause, who best can testifie.

Exit.

Enter Antiochus, Prince Pericles, and followers.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd
The danger of the task you undertake.

Per. I have (Antiochus) and with a soul emboldn'd
With the glory of her praise, think death no hazard,
In this enterprize.

Ant. Musick bring in our daughter, cloathed like a bride
For embracements, even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, till Lucina reign'd,
Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
The Senate house of Planets all did fit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter Antiochus Daughter.

Per. See where she comes, apparell'd like the Spring,
Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the King,
Of every vertue gives renown to men:
Her face the book of praises, where is read.
Nothing but curious pleasures as from thence,
Sorrow were ever rackt, and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion.

you gods that made me man, and sway in love,
That have inflam'd desire with in my brest,
To taste the fruite of yon celestiall tree,
(Or die in the adventure) be my helpe,
As I am sonne and servant to your will,
To compasse such a bondlesse happinesse.

Anti. Prince Pericles.

Per. That would be sonne to great Antiochus.

Anti. Before thee stands this faire Hesperides,
With golden fruite, but dangerous to be toucht:
For death like Dragons here affright thee hard?
Her face like heaven enticeth thee to view
Her countlesse glory, which desert must gaine:
And which without desert, because thine eye
Presumes to reach, all the whole heape must dye,
Yon sometimes famous Princes like thy selfe
Drawn by report, adventurous by desire,
Tell thee with speechlesse tongues, and semblance pale,
That without covering save yon field of starres,
Here they stand martyrs slaine in Cupids warres:
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist,
For going on deaths net, whome none resist.

Per. Antiochus I thank thee, who hath taught
My frail mortality to know it selfe,
And by those fearefull objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must:
For death remembred, should be like a Myrrour,
Who tels us, life's but breath, to trust in error:
He make my will then, and as sicke men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling woe,
Gripe not at earthly ioyes, as erst they did.
So I bequeath a happy peace to you
And all good men, as every prince should do,
My riches to the earth from whence they came:
But my vnspotted fire of Love to you,
Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I waite the sharpest blow (Antiochus)
Scorning advice. Reade the conclusion then.
Ant. Which read and not expounded, tis decreed
As these before thou thy selfe shalt bleed.

Dough. Of all said yet, thou prove prosperous,
Of all said yet, I wish Thee happinesse.

Per. Like a bold champion I assume the listes,
Nor aske advice of any other thought,
But faithfullnesse and courage.

The Riddle.

*I am no Viper, yet I feed
On mothers flesh which did me breed.
I sought a husband, in which labour,
I found that kindnesse in a father.
Hee's father, sonne, and husband milde,
I Mother, Wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, resolve it you.*

Sharp physick is the last? but O you Powers!
That gives heaven countlesse eyes to view mens actes
Why could they not their sights perpetually?
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it,
Faile glasse of light, I loved you, and could still,
Were not this glorious Casket stor'd with ill:
But I must tell you, now my thoughts revolt,
For he's no man on whom perfections wait;
That knowing finne within, will touch the gates:
You are a fair Vyol, and your sence the strings,

Who finger'd to make man his lawfull musick,
Would draw heaven down, and all the gods to hearken,
But being plaid upon before your time,
Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime:
Good sooth I care not for you.

Anti. Prince Pericles, touch not upon thy life,
For that's an Article within our Law,
As dangerous as the rest: your times expir'd,
Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

Peri. Great King,
Few love to hear the sins they love to act,
'Twould braid your self too near for me to tell it:
Who hath a book of all that Monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut, then shewn:
For vice repeated, is like the wandring wind,
Blows dust in others eyes, to spread it self;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear.
To stop the aire would hurt them, the blind Mole cast
Copt hills toward heaven, to tell the earth is throng'd
By mans oppression, and the poor worme doth die for't.
Kings are earths Gods: in vice their law's their will,
And if Jove stray, who dares say, Jove doth ill:
It is enough you know it, and 'tis fit;
What being more known, grows worse to smother it.
All love the womb that their Being bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. Heaven that I had it; he has found the meaning,
But I will gloze with him. Young Prince of Tyre,
Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
Your exposition mis-interpreting,
We might proceed to cancel off your daies;
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree,
As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise:
Forty daies longer we do respite you,
If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shews, we'll joy in such a son:
And untill then, your entertain shall be
As doth besit our honour, and your worth. Exit.

Manet Pericles solus.

Per. How curtesie would seem to cover sin,
When what is done is like an hypocrite,
The which is good in nothing but in sight,
If it be true that I interpret false,
Then were it certain you were not so bad,
As with the foul Incest to abuse your soul:
Where now you'r both a father and a son,
By your untimely claspsings with your child,
(Which pleasures fits an husband, not a father)
And the an eater of her mothers flesh,
By the defiling of her parents bed,
And both like serpents are, who though they feed
On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
Antioch farewell, for wisdom sees, those men
Blush not in actions blacker then the night,
Will shew no course to keep them from the light:
One sin (I know) another doth provoke;
Murder's as near to lust, as flame to smoak.
Poyson and treason are the hands of sin,
I, and the Targets to put off the shame;
Then least my life be cropt to keep you clear,
By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear. Exit.

Enter Antiochus.

Anti. He hath found the meaning,
For which we mean to have his head,

He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy,
Not tell the world Antiochus doth sinne
In such a loathed manner.
And therefore instantly this Prince must die,
For by his fall my honour must keep high,
Who attends us here?

Enter Thaliard.

Thal. Doth your Highnesse call?

Anti. Thaliard, you are of our Chamber,
And our mind pertakes her private actions
To your secrecie; and for your faithfulness
We will advance you, Thaliard.
Behold, here's poison and here's gold,
We hate the Prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him.
It fits thee not to ask the reason why:
Because we bid it: say, is it done?

Thal. My Lord, 'tis done.

Enter a Messenger.

Ant. Enough. Let your breath cool your self, telling your haste.

Mess. My Lord, Prince Pericles is fled.

Ant. As thou wilt live, flye after; and as an arrow, shot from a well experient Archer, hits the mark his eye doth level at: so do thou never return, unless thou say,
Prince Pericles is dead.

Tha My Lord, if I can get him within my pistols length,
I'll make him sure enough: so farewell to your Highness.

Anti. Thaliard adieu, till Pericles be dead,
My heart can lend no succour to my head. Exit.

Enter Pericles, Helicanus, with other Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us:

Why should this change of thoughts,
The sad companion dull-ey'd melancholly,
By me so us'd, a guest as not an hour,
In the dayes glorious walk or peacefull night,
The tombe where grief should sleep, can breed me quiet,
Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun them,
And danger which I fear'd, is at Antioch,
Whose arme seems far too short to hit me here,
Yet neither pleasures art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the others distance comfort me:
Then it is thus, that passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear, what might be done,
Grows elder now, and cares it be not done.
And so 'tis with me, the great Antiochus,
'Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make his will his act,
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence,
Nor boots it me to say I honour,
If he suspect I may dishonor him.
And what may make him blush in being known,
He'll stop the course by which it might be known,
With hostile forces he'll ore-spread the Land,
And with the stint of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state:
Our men be vanquish'd, ere they do resist,
And subjects punisht, that never thought offence,
Which care of them, not pitty of my self,
Who once no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend them,

Make both my body pine, and soul to languish,
And punish that before that he would punish.

1. Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast.

2. Lord. And keep your mind till ye return to us peacefull and comfortable.

Hell. Peace, peace, and give experience tongue:
They do abuse the King that flatter him,
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin,
The thing the which is flattered, but a spark,
To which that spark gives heart and stronger glowing;
Whereas reproof obedient and in order,
Fits Kings as they are men, for they may erre,
When Signior Sooth here doth proclaim peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life.
Prince, pardon me, or strike me if you please,
I cannot be much lower then my knees.

Per. All leave us else: but let your cares ore-look
What shipping, and what ladings in our Haven,
And then return to us: Helicanus how hast
Moov'd us: what seest thou in our looks:

Hell. An angry brow, dread Lord.

Per. If there be such a dart in Princes frowns,
How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

Hell. How dares the planets look up unto heaven,
From whence they have their nourishment?

Per. Thou know'st I have power to take thy life from Hell. I have ground the axe my self, (thee

Do you but strike the blow.

Per. Rise, prithee rise, sit down, thou art no flatterer,
I thank thee for it, and heaven forbid,
That Kings should let their ears hear their faults hid.
Fit Councillor, and servant for a Prince,
Who by thy wisdom makes a Prince thy servant,
What would'st thou have me do:

Hell. To bear with patience such griefs,
As you your self do lay upon your self.

Per. Thou speak'st like a Physician, Helicanus,
That minister's a por on unto me,
That thou would'st tremble to receive thy self.
Attend me then; I went to Antioch,
Whereas thou know'st (against the face of death)
I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propigate,
Are armes to Princes, and bring joyes to Subjects.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder,
The rest (hark in thine ear) as black as incest,
Which by my knowledge found, the sinfull father,
Seem'd not to strike, but smooth: But thou know'st this;
'Tis time to fear, when tyrants seem to kiss.
Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled,
Under the covering of a carefull night,
Who seem'd my good Protector: and being here,
Bethought what was past, what might succeed;
I knew him tyrannous, and tyrants fear
Decrease not, but grow faster then the years:
And should he think, as no doubt he doth,
That I should open to the listening air,
How many worthy Princes blood were shed,
To keep his bed of blackness unlaid ope,
To lop that doubt, he'll fill this Land with armes,
And make pretence of wrong that I have done him,
When all for mine, if I may call offence,
Must feel war's blow, who fears not innocence:
Which love to all, of which thy self art one,
Who now reproved'st me for it.

Hell. Alas, sir.

Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,
Musings into my mind, with a thousand doubts
How I might stop their tempest ere it came,
And finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve for them.

Hell. Well, my Lord, since you have given me leave to Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear, (speak,
And justly too I think you fear the tyrant,
Who either by publick war or private treason,
Will take away your life: therefore, my Lord, go travel for a while, till that his rage and anger be forgot; or till the Destinies do cut the thred of his life: your Rule direct to any, if unto me, day serves not light more faith-full then I'll be.

Per. I do not doubt thy faith,
But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?

Hell. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth,
From whence we had our being, and our birth.

Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tharsus
Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee;
And by whose Letters I'll dispose my self,
The care I had and have of Subjects good,
On thee I lay, whose wisdoms strength can bear it,
I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath,
Who shuns not to break one, will sure crack both:
But in our orbes we live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall nere convince,
Thou shewest a Subjects shine, I a true Prince.

Enter Thaliard solus.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this is the Court, here must I kill King Pericles, and if I do it not, I am sure to be hang'd at home: it is dangerous.

Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that being bid to ask what he would of the King, desired he might know none of his secrets. Now do
I see he had some reason for it: for if a King bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.

Hush, here comes the Lords of Tyre.

Enter Hellicanus, Escanes, with other Lords of Tyre.

Hell. You shall not need my fellow-Peers of Tyre, further to question me of your Kings departure. His sealed Commission left in trust with me, doth speak sufficiently, he's gone to travel.

Thal. How the King gone?

Hell. If further yet you will be satisfied, why (as it were unlicenc'd of your loves) he would depart? I'll give some light unto you: Being at Antioch.

Thal. What from Antioch?

Hell. Royal Antiochus (on what cause I know not) took some displeasure at him, at least he judged so: and doubting that he had erred or sinned, to shew his sorrow, he would correct himself; so puts himself unto the ship-
mans toy, with whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. Well, I perceive I shall not be hang'd now, although I would; but since he's gone, the Kings Seas must please: he scape the Land, to perish at the Sea: I'll present my self, Peace to the Lords of Tyre.

Hell. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

Thal. From him I come with message unto Princely Pericles; but since my landing I have understood, your Lord hath betook himself to unknown travels, my message must return from whence it came.

Hell. We have no reason to desire it, commended to our Master, not to us; yet ere you shall depart, this we desire as friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre. Exeunt.

Enter Cleon the Governor of Tharsus, with his wife and others.

Cleon. My Dionisia, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others griefs,
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?

Dion. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it,
For who digs hills because they do aspire,
Throws down one Mountain to cast up a higher:
O my distressed Lord, even such our griefs are,
Here they are but felt, and seen with mischiefs eyes,
But like to groves being top'd, they higher rise.

Cleon. O Dionisia.
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger till he famish?
Our tongues and sorrowes do sound deep:
Our woes into the air, our eyes to weep,
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim
Them louder, that if heaven slumber, while
Their creatures want, they may awake
Their helpers, to comfort them.

I'll then discourse our woes felt several years,
And wanting breath to speak, help me with tears.

Dion. I'll do my best, sir.

Cle. This Tharsus, ore which I have the government,
A City, on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strew'd her self even in the streets,
Whose towers bore heads so high, they kiss the clouds,
And strangers nere beheld, but wonder'd at,
Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd,
Like one anothers glasse to trim them by:
Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on, as delight,
All poverty was scorn'd and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dion. Oh 'tis true.

Cleon. But see what heaven can do by this our change:
These mouths, who but of late, earth, sea, and ayre,
Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance:
As houses are desil'd for want of use,
They are now starv'd for want of exercise;
Those pallars, who, not yet to favours younger,
Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it:
These mothers who to nouzle up their babes,
Thought nought too curious, are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they loved,
So sharp are hungers teeth, that man and wife,
Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life.
Here stands a Lord, and there a Lady weeping,
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall,
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?

Dion. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witnesse it.

Cleon. O let those Cities that of plenties cup,
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous ryots hear these tears,
The misery of Tharsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the Lord Governor?

Cleon.

Cleon. Here, speak out thy sorrows, which thou bring'st in haste, for comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have desiered upon our neighbouring shore, A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

Cleon. I thought as much.
One sorrow never comes but brings an heir,
That may succeed as his inheritour:
And so in ours; some neighbouring Nation,
Taking advantage of our misery,
That stuff the hollow vessels with their power,
To beat us down, the which are down already,
And make a conquest of unhappy me,
Whereas no glory is got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear.
For by the semblance of their flags displaid, they bring us peace, and come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cleon. Thou speak'st like hymnes untutur'd to repeat,
Who makes the fairest shew, means most deceit.
But bring they what they will, and what they can,
What need we fear, the ground's the lowest,
And we are half way there: Go tell their General we attend him here, to know for what he comes, and whence he comes, and what he craves.

Lord. I go, my Lord.

Cleon. Welcome is peace, if he on peace confist;
If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter Pericles with attendants.

Per. Lord Governor, for so we hear you are,
Let not our ships and number of our men,
Be like a Beacon fired, to amaze your eyes,
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets;
Nor come we to adde sorrow to your tears,
But to release them of their heavy load,
And these our ships, you happily may think
Are like the Trojan horse, was stuff within
With bloody veins expecting overthrow,
Are stor'd with corn, to make your needy bread,
And give them life, whom hunger starv'd half dead.

Omnes. The gods of Greece protect you,
And we'll pray for you.

Per. Arise, I pray you, arise; we do not look for reverence, but for love, and harbourage for our self, our ships, and men.

Cleon. The which when any shall not gratifie,
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children or our selves,
The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils:
Till when, the which (I hope) shall ne're be seen,
Your Grace is welcome to our Town and us.

Per. Which welcome we'll accept, feast here a while,
Untill our stars that frown, lend us a smile. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Gower.

Gower. Here have you seen a mighty King
His child, I wis, to incest bring:
A better Prince and benigne Lord,
That will prove awfull both in deed and word.
Be quiet then, as men should be,
Till he hath past necessity:
I'll shew you those in troubles reigne,
Loosing a myre, a Mountain gain:
The good in conversation,

To whom I give my benizon.

*Is still at Tharsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he spoken can:
And to remember what he does,
Build his Statue to make him glorious:
But tydings to the contrary,
Are brought t' your eyes, what need speak I.
Dumb show.*

Enter at one dooor Pericles talking with Cleon, all the Train with them. Enter at another door, a Gentleman with a letter to Pericles; Pericles shews the letter to Cleon, Pericles gives the Messenger a reward, and Knights him.

Exit Pericles at one door, and Cleon at another.

*Good Hellican that staid at home,
Not to eat hony like a Drone,
From others labours; for though he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive:
And to fulfill his Princes desire,
Sav'd one of all that baps in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with sin,
And had intent to murder him;
And that in Tharsus was not best,
Longer for him to make his rest:
He doing so, put forth to Seas,
Where when men bin, there's seldome ease,
For now the wind begins to blow,
Thunder above, and deeps below,
Makes such unquiet, that the ship
Should house him safe, is wrackt and split,
And he (good Prince) having all lost,
By waves, from coast to coast is tost:
All perisshen of man, of pelf,
Ne ought escapen'd but himself;
Till fortune tired with doing bad,
Threw him ashore to give him glad:
And here he comes; what shall be next,
Pardon old Gower, thus long's the Text.*

Enter Pericles wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry Stars of heaven,
Wind, Rain, and Thunder: Remember earthly man
Is but a substance that must yield to you:
And I (as fits my nature) do obey you.
Alas, the Seas hath cast me on the Rocks,
Washt me from shore to shore, and left my breath
Nothing to think on, but ensuing death:
Let it suffice the greatnesse of your powers,
To have bereft a Prince of all his fortunes,
And having thrown him from your watry grave,
Here to have death in peace, is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

1. What, to pelch?
2. Ha, come and bring away the Nets.
1. What patch-breech, I say.
3. What say you, Master?
1. Look how thou stirrest now.
Come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wannon.
3. Faith Master, I am thinking of the poor men
That were cast away before us, even now.
1. Alas poor souls, it grieved my heart to hear
What pittifull cries they made to us, to help them,
When (welladay) we could scarcely help our selves.
3. Nay Master, said not I as much,
When I saw the Porpas how he bounst and tumbled?
They say, they are half fish, half flesh:
A plague on them, they ne're come but I look to be washt.
Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the Sea?

1. Why as men do a Land,
The great ones eat up the little ones:
I can compare our rich Misers, to nothing so fitly
As to a Whale; he plaies and tumbles,
Driving the poor Fry before him,
And at last devour them all at a mouthfull.
Such Whales have I heard on a'th land,
Who never leave gaping, till they swallowed
The whole Parish, Church, Steeple, Bells and all.

Per. A pretty Moral.

3. But Master, if I had been the Sexton,
I would have been that day in the Beltrey.

2. Why man?

3. Because he should have swallowed me too,
And when I had been in his belly,
I would have kept such a jangling of the bells,
That he should never have left,
Till he cast Bells, Steeple, Church and Parish up again:
But if the good King Simonides were of my mind,

Per. Simonides?

3. We would purge the Land of these Drones,
That rob the Bee of her honny.

Per. How from the fenny subject of the sea
These fishers tell the infirmities of men,
And from their watry Empire recollect,
All that may men approve, or men detect.
Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2. Honest, good fellow, what's that, if it be a day fits you,
Search out of the Kalender, and no body look after it?

Per. Y'may see the sea hath cast me upon your coast.

2. What a drunken knave was the sea,
To cast thee in our way.

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,
In that vast Tennis-Court, hath made the Ball
For them to play upon, intreats you pity him:
He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1. No friend, cannot you beg?

Here's them in our Country of Greece,
Gets more with begging, then we can do with working.

2. Canst thou catch any Fishes then?

Per. I never practis'd it.

2. Nay then thou wilt starve sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-daies, unlesse thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been, I have forgot to know;
But what I am, want teaches me to think on:
A man throng'd up with cold, my veins are chill,
And have no more of life, then may suffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help:
Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead,
For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

1. Die ke-tha, now gods forbid, I have a gown here, come put it on, keep thee warme: now afore me a handsome fellow: Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for all day, fish for fasting dayes and more; or Puddings and Flap-jacks, and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

2. Hark you, my friend, You said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2. But crave? then I'll turn craver too,
And so I shall scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggers whipt then?

3. Oh not all, my friend, not all: for if all your beg-gers were whipt, I would wish no better office, then to be Beadle. But Master, I'll go draw the Net.

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour?

1. Hark you, sir, do you know where ye are?

Per. Not well.

1. I tell you, this is called Pantapolis,
And our King, the good Symonides

Per. The good King Symonides, do you call him?

1. I sir, and he deserves so to be call'd,
For his peaceable reigne, and good government.

Per. He is a happy King, since he gains from
His Subjects, the name of good, by his government.
How far is his Court distant from this shore?

1. Marry, sir, half a daies journey: and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birth-day, and there are Princes and Knights come from all parts of the world, to Just and Turney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires,
I could wish to make one there.

2. O sir, things must be as they may; and what a man
Cannot get, he may lawfully deal for his wives soul.

Enter the two Fisher-men, drawing up a Net.

2. Help, Master, help, here's a fish hangs in the Net, like a poor mans right in the law, 'twill hardly come out. Ha bots on't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a rusty Armor.

Per. An Armor, friends, I pray you let me see it.
Thanks Fortune, yet that after all crosses,
Thou givest me somewhat to repair my self:
And though it was mine own part of mine heritage,
Which my dead father did bequeath to me,
With this strict charge, even as he left his life:
Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a shield
'Twixt me and death; and pointed to this Brayse:
For that it saved me; keep it in like necessity:
The which the gods protect thee, Fame may defend thee.
It kept where I kept, I so dearly loved it,
Till the rough Seas (that spares not any man)
Took it in rage, though calm'd hath given't again:
I thank thee for't, my shipwrack now's no ill,
Since I have here my fathers gift in's will.

1. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you (kind friends) this coat of worth,
For it was sometime Target to a King,
I know it by this mark: he loved me dearly,
And for his sake, I wish the having of it:
And that you'd guide me to your Sovereigns Court,
Where with it I may appear a Gentleman:
And if that ever my low fortune's better,
I'll pay your bounties; till then rest your debter.

1. Why, wilt thou turney for the Lady?

Per. I'll shew the vertue I have born in Armes.

1. Why take it, and the gods give thee good an't.

2. But hark you, my friend, 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters: there are certain condolences, certain vails; I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had them.

Per. Believe it I will:

By your furtherance I am cloathed in Steel,
And spight of all the rupture of the sea,
This Jewell holds his building on my arme:
Unto thy value I will mount my self.
Upon a Courser, whose delightfull steps,
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread;
Only (my friend) I yet am unprovided of a payre of Bases.

2. We'll sure provide, thou shalt have
My best gown to make thee a pair;
And I'll bring thee to the Court my self.

Per. Then honour be but a Goal to my will,
This day I'll rise, or else adde ill to ill.

Enter

Enter Simonides with attendants, and Thaisa.

Are the Knights ready to begin the Triumph?

1. Lord. They are, my Liege, and stay your coming, To present themselves.

King. Return them; we are ready, and our Daughter In honour of whose birth, these triumphs are, (here, Sits here like a child, whom Nature gat, For men to see I seeing wonder at.

Thai. It pleases you (my royall father) to expresse My commendation is great, whose merit's lesse.

King. It's not it should be so; for Princes are A modell which heaven makes like it self:

As Jewels lose their glory, if neglected, So Princes their Renownes, if not respected.

'Tis now your honour (Daughter) to entertain The labour of each Knight, in his device.

Thai. Which to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

The first Knight passes by.

King. Who is the first, that doth preferre himself?

Thai. A Knight of Sparta (my renowned Father) And the device he beares upon his Shield, Is a black Æthiope reaching at the Sun; The word; Lux tua vita mihi.

King. He loves you well, that holds his life of you.

The second Knight.

Who is the second, that presents himself?

Thai. A Prince of Macedon (my royall Father) And the device he beares upon his Shield, Is an armed Knight, that's conquer'd by a Lady. The Motto thus in Spanish. Pue Per dolera kee per forsa.

The third Knight.

King. And what's the third?

Thai. The child of Antioch; and his device A wreath of Chivalry: the word, Me Pompey provexit.

The fourth Knight. (apex.)

King. What is the fourth?

Thai. A burning Torch that's turn'd upside down; The word, Qui me alit me extinguit.

King. Which shewes that beauty hath his power and Which can as well enflame, as it can kill. (will,

The fifth Knight.

Thai. The fifth, an hand environed with clouds, Holding out gold, that's by the touch-stone tri'd: The Motto thus: Sic spectanda fides.

The sixth Knight.

King. And what's the sixth and last, the which the Knight himself with such a gracefull courtesie deliverd?

Thai. He seems to be a stranger: but his Present is A withered Branch, that's onely green at top; The Motto, In hac spe vivo.

King. A pretty morall; from the dejected state wherein he is, he hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

1. Lord. He had need mean better then his outward shew can any way speak in his just commend: For by his rusty out side, he appears to have practised more the Whipstock, then the Lance.

2. Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes to an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.

3. Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust Untill this day, to scowre it in the dust.

King. Opinion's but a foole, that make us scan The outward habit by the inward man.

But stay, the Knights are coming, We will withdraw into the Gallery.

Great shouts, and all cry, the mean Knight.

Enter the King and Knights from Tilting.

King. Knights, to say you're welcome, were superfluous. I place upon the volume of your deeds,

As in a Title page, your worth in armes, Were more then you expect, or more then's fit, Since every worth in shew commends it self: Prepare for mirth, for mirth comes at a feast. You are Princes, and my guests.

Thai. But you, my Knight and guest, To whom this wreath of vict'ry I give, And Crown you King of this dayes happinesse.

Per. 'Tis more by fortune (Lady) then by merit.

King. Call it by what you will, the day is yours, And here, I hope, is none that envies it: In framing an Artist, Art hath thus decreed, To make some good, but others to exceed, And you her labour'd Schollar: come, Queen oth' Feast, For (Daughter) so you are, here take your place: Martiall the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honoured much by good Symonides.

King. Your presence glads our dayes, honour we love, For who hates honour, hates the gods above.

Marsh. Sir, yonder is your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

1. Knight. Contend not, sir, for we are Gentlemen, That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes, Envy the great, nor doe the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous Knights.

King. Sit, sit, sit.

By Jove (I wonder) that is King of thoughts, These Cates resist me, he not thought upon.

Thai. By Juno (that is Queen of Marriage) All Viands that I eat doe seem unfavoury, Wishing him my meat: sure he's a gallant Gentleman.

King. He's but a country gentleman: has done no more Then other Knights have don; has broken a staffe, Or so; let it passe.

Thai. To me he seems a Diamond to Glasse.

Per. Yon King's to me, like to my Father's picture, Which tells me in that glory once he was, And Prince sat like starres about his Throne, And he the Sun, for them to reverence; None that beheld him, but like lesser lights, Did vaile their Crowns to his supreamacy; Where now his Son, like a Glo-worm in the night, The which hath fire in darknesse none in light: Whereby I see that Time's the King of men, For he's their Parents, and he is their grave, And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

King. What, are you merry, Knights?

Knights. Who can be other in this royall presence?

King. Here, with a cup that's stir'd unto the brimme, As you doe love, fill to your Mistresse lips, We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your Grace.

King. Yet pause a while; yon Knight doth sit too me- As if the entertainment in our Court. (lancholly, Had not a shew might countervail his worth:

Note it not you, Thaisa;

Thai. What is't to me, my Father?

King. O, attend, my Daughter, Princes in this, should live like gods above, Who freely give to every one that come to honour them: And Princes not doing so, are like to Gnats, Which make a sound, but kill'd, are wondred at: Therefore to make his entrance now more sweet,

Here,

Here, ray we d ink this standing cowl of wine to him.

Thai. Atasse, my Father, it befits not me,
Unto a stranger Knight to be so bold,
He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take womens gifts for impudence.

King. How? doe as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Thai. Now by the gods, he could not please me better.

King. And furthermore tell him, we desire to know of
Of whence he is, his name and Parentage. (him,

Thai. The King my Father (sir) hath drunk to you.

Per. I thank him.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.

Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.

Thai. And further, he desires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.

Per. A Gentleman of Tyre, my name Pericles,
My education been in Arts and Armes.

Who looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough Seas rest of ships and men,
And after ship-wrack, driven upon this shore.

Thai. He thanks your Grace; names himself Pericles,
A Gentleman of Tyre, who only by misfortune of the seas,
Bereft of ships and men, cast on the shore.

King. Now by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
And will awake him from his melancholly.

Come, Gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time, which looks for other revels.

Even in your armours as you are addrest,

Will very well become a Souldiers dance:

I will not have excuse, with saying that

Loud Musick is too harsh for Ladies heads,

Since they love men in Armes, as well as beds.

They Dance.

So, this was well ask'd, 'twas well perform'd,

Come, sir, here's a Lady that wants breathing too:

And I have heard, you Knights of Tyre,

Are excellent in making Ladies trip,

And that their measures are as excellent.

Per. In those that practise them, they are (my Lord.)

King. Oh that's as much, as you would be deny'd

Of your fair courtesie: unclaspe, unclaspe.

They Dance.

Thanks, Gentlemen, to all; all have done well,

But you the best: Pages and lights, to conduct

These Knights unto their severall Lodgings:

Yours, sir, we have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your Graces pleasure.

King. Princes, it is too late to talk of love,

And that's the marke I know you levell at:

Therefore each one betake him to his rest,

To morrow, all for speeding doe their best.

Enter Hellicanus, and Escanes.

Hell. No, Escanes, know this of me,
Antiochus from incest liv'd not free:

For which, the most high gods not minding

Longer to with-hold the vengeance that

They had in store, due to his hainous

Capitall offence; even in the height and pride

Of all his glory, when he was seated in

A Chariot of an inestimable value, and his Daughter

With him; a fire from heaven came and shrivel'd

Up those bodies, even to loathing, for they so stunk,

That all those eyes ador'd them, ere their fall,

Scorn now their hand should give them buriall.

Escanes. It was very strange.

(great,

Hell. And yet but justice; for though this King were

His greatnesse was no guard to barre heavens shaft,
By sin had his reward.

Escan. 'Tis very true.

Enter two or three Lords.

1. Lord. See, not a man in private conference,
Or counsell, hath respect with him but he.

2. Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.

3. Lord. And curst be he that will no second it.

1. Lord. Follow me then: Lord Hellicanus, a word.

Hell. With me? and welcome, happy day, my Lords.

1. Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they over-flow their banks.

Hell. Your griefs, for what?

Wrong not your Prince you love.

1. Lord. Wrong not your self then, noble Hellican,
But if the Prince doe live, let us salute him,

Or know what ground's made happy by his breath:

If in the world he live, we'll seek him out:

If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there,

And be resolv'd, he lives to govern us:

Or dead, give's cause to mourn his Funerall,

And leave us to our free Election.

2. Lor. Whose death indeed, the strongest in our censure,

And knowing this Kingdome is without a head,

Like goodly buildings left without a Roof,

Soon fall to ruine: your noble self,

That best knowes how to rule, and how to reign.

We thus submit unto our Sovereign.

Omnes. Live, noble Hellican.

Hell. Try honours cause; forbear your suffrages:

If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear,

(Take I your wish, I leap into the Seas,

Where's hourelly trouble, for a minutes ease)

A twelve-moneth longer, let me entreat you

To forbear the absence of your King;

If in which time expir'd, he not return,

I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.

But if I cannot win you to this love,

Go search like Nobles, like noble Subjects,

And in your search, spend your adventurous worth,

Whom if you finde, and winne unto return,

You shall like Diamonds sit about his Crown.

1. Lord. To wisdom, he's a foole that will not yield,

And since Lord Hellican enjoyne us,

We with our travels will endeavour.

Hell. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands,

When Peeres thus knit, a Kingdome ever stands. Exit.

Enter the King reading of a Letter, at one door, and the Knights meet him.

1. Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.

King. Knights, from my Daughter this I let you know,

That for this twelve-moneth, she'll not undertake

A married life: her reason to her self is onely known,

Which yet from her by no meanes can I get.

2. Knight. May we not get access to her (my Lord)

King. Faith, by no meanes, she hath so strictly

Ti'd her to her Chamber, that 'tis impossible:

One twelve Moons more she'll wear Dianaes livery:

This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vowed,

And on her Virgin honour will not break.

3. Knig. Loth to bid farewell, we take our leaves. Exit.

King. So, they are well dispatcht,

Now to my daughters Letter; she tells me here,

She'll wed the stranger Knight,

Or never more to view nor day nor light.

'Tis well, Mistress, your choyce agrees with mine,

I like that well : nay how absolute she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no.
Well, I doe commend her choyce, and will no longer
Have it be delayed : soft, here he comes,
I must dissemble it.

Enter Pericles.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides.

King. To you as much : Sir, I am beholding to you,
For your sweet musick this last night :
I doe protest, my cares were never better fed
With such delightfull pleasing harmony.

Per. It is your Graces pleasure to commend,
Not my desert.

King. Sir, you are Musicks master.

Per. The worst of all her Schollars (my good Lord)

King. Let me aske you one thing.

What doe you think of my Daughter, sir ?

Per. A most virtuous Princessse.

King. And she's fair too, is she not ?

Per. As a fair day in Summer : wondrous fair.

King. Sir, my Daughter thinks very well of you,
I, so well, that you must be her Master,
And she will be your Schollar ; therefore look to it.

Per. I am unworthy to be her Schoolmaster.

King. She thinks not so, peruse this writing else.

Per. What's here, a Letter, that she loves the Knight of 'Tis the King's subtilty to have my life : (Tyre ?

Oh seek not to intrap me, gracious Lord,
A stranger and distressed Gentleman,
That never aim'd so high to love your Daughter,
But bent all offices to honour her.

King. Thou hast bewicht my Daughter,
And thou art a Villain.

Per. By the gods I have not ; never did thought
Of mine levy offence ; nor never did my actions
Yet commence, a deed might gain her love,
Or your displeasure.

King. Traitor, thou lyest.

Per. Traitor !

King. I, Traitor.

Per. Even in his throat, unlesse it be a King,
That calls me Traitor, I return the lye.

King. Now by the gods I doe applaud his courage.

Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts ;
That never relisht of a base descent :
I came unto the Court for honours cause,
And not be a Rebel to her state :
And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This Sword shall prove, he's honours enemy.

King. No? here comes my Daughter, she can witness it.

Enter Thaisa.

Per. Then as you are as virtuous, as fair,
Resolve your angry Father, if my tongue
Did e're sollicite, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you ?

Thai. Why, sir, if you had, who takes offence,
At that would make me glad ?

King. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory ?
I am glad of it withall my heart,
I'll tame you, I'll bring you in subjection.
Will you, not having my consent,
Bestow your love and your affections,
Upon a stranger ? who, for ought I know,
May be (nor can I think the contrary)
As great in blood as I my self.

Therefore hear you, Mistresse, either frame

Your will to mine ; and you, sir, hear you,
Either be iul'd by me, or I'll make you-----
Man and Wife ; nay, come your hands
And lips must seale it too : and being joyn'd,
I'll thus your hopes destroy, and for further grief,
God give you joy ; what, are you both pleased ?

Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir.

Per. Even as my life, or blood that fosters it.

King. What, are you both agreed ?

Amb. Yes, if it please your Majesty.

King. It pleaseth me so well, that I will see you wed,
And then with what haste you can, get you to bed.

Enter Gower.

Now sleep slaked hath the rout,
No din but snores about the house.
Made louder by the ore-fee beast,
Of this most pompous marriage feast :
The Cat with eyne of burning coale,
Now couches from the Mouses hole ;
And Cricket sing at the Ovens mouth,
Are the blither for their drouth :
Hymen hath brought the Bride to bed,
Where by the losse of Maiden-head,
A Babe is moulded, by artent,
And time that is so briefly spent,
Wish your fine fancies quaintly each,
What's dumbe in shew, I'll plain with speech.

Enter Pericles and Simonides at one door with attendants, a Messenger meets them, kneeles, and gives Pericles a Letter, Pericles shewes it Simonides, the Lords kneele to him ; then enter Thaisa with childe, with Lychorida a Nurse, the King shewes her the Letter, she rejoyces : she and Pericles take leave of her Father, and depart.

By many a dearne and painfull pearch
Of Pericles, the carefull search,
By the four opposing Crignes,
Which she world together joynes,
Is made with all due diligence,
That horse and saile, and high expence,
Can steed the quest at last from Tyre,
Fame answering the most strange enquire,
To th' Court of King Simonides,
Are Letters brought, the tenour these :
Antiochus and his Daughter's dead,
The men of Tyrus, on the head
Of Hellicanus would set on
The Crown of Tyre, but he will none :
The mutiny, he there haltes i' oppresse,
Sayer to them, if King Pericles
Come not home in twice six Moones,
He, obedient to their doomes,
Will take the Crown : the summe of this Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Irony shed the Regions round,
And every one with claps can sound,
Our heir apparant is a King :
Aside. Who dreamt ? who thought of such a thing ?
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre,
His Queen with child, makes her desire,
Aside. Which who shall crosse along to go,
Omit we all their dole and woe :
Lychorida her Nurse she takes,
And so to Sea ; then vessell shakes,

On Neptunes billow, half the flood,
 Hath their Keele cut : but fortune mov'd
 Varies again, the grisly North
 Disgorges such a tempest forth,
 That as a Duck for life that drives,
 So up and down the poor ship dives :
 The Lady shrieks, and well-a-need,
 Doth fall in travell with her fear :
 And what ensues in this self storme,
 Shall for it self, it self performe :
 I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey ;
 Which might not ? what by me is told,
 In your imagination hold :
 This Stage, the Ship, upon whose Deck,
 The Seas soft Pericles, appears to speak.

Enter Pericles on Shipboard.

Per. The God of this great vast, rebuke these surges
 Which wash both heaven and hell, and thou that hast
 Upon the windes command, bind them in Brasse,
 Having call'd them from the deep, O still Thy dearning dreadfull thunders ; daily quench
 Thy nimble sulphurous flashes : O how, Lychorida ?
 How does my Queen ? then storm venomously,
 Wilt thou spee all thy self ? the Seamans whistle
 Is a whisper in the eares of death,
 Unheard Lychorida ? Lucina, oh !
 Divineſt Patronesse, and my Wife, gentle
 To those that cry by night, convey thy Deity
 Aboard our dancing Boat, make swift the pangs
 Of my Queens travels. Now, Lychorida.

Enter Lychorida.

Lychor. Here is a thing too young for such a place,
 Who if it had conceit, would dye, as I am like to doe :
 Take in your armes this piece of your dead Queen.

Per. How ? how, Lychorida ?

Lychor. Patience, good sir, doe not assist the storme,
 Here's all that is left living of our Queen ;
 A little Daughter, for the sake of it
 Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. Oh you gods !
 Why doe you make us love your goodly gifts,
 And snatch them straight away ?
 We here below, recall not what we give,
 And we therein may use honour with you.

Lychor. Patience, good sir, even for this charge.

Ler. Now milde may be thy life,
 For a more blusterous birth had never Babe :
 Quiet and gentle thy conditions ;
 For thou art the rudelſt welcome to this world,
 That ever was Princes Childe : happy that followes,
 Thou hast as chiding a Nativity,
 As Fire, Aire, Water, Earth, and Heaven can make,
 To harold thee from the wombe :
 Even at the first, thy losse is more then can
 Thy portage quite, with all thou canst finde here :
 Now the good gods throw their best eyes upon it.

Enter two Saylors.

1. Sayl. What courage, sir ? God save you.

Per. Courage enough, I doe not fear the flaw,
 It hath done to me the worst : yet for the love
 Of this poor Infant, this fresh new Sea-farer,
 I would it would be quiet.

1. Sayl. Slack the bolins there ; thou wilt not, wilt thou ?
 Blow and split thy self.

2. Sayl. But Sea-room, and the brine and cloudy billow kisse the Moon, I care not.

1. Sayl. Sir, your Queen must over-board,
 The Sea works high, the winde is loud,
 And will not lie till the Ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

*1. Pardon us, sir ; with us at Sea it still hath bin observed,
 And we are strong in Eastern, therefore briefly yield her.*

Per. As you think meet, for she must o're-board
 Most wretched Queen. (straight,

Lychor. Here she lies, sir.

Per. A terrible Child-bed hast thou had (my Dear)
 No light, no fire, the unfriendly Elements
 Forgot thee utterly, nor have I time
 To bring thee hallowed to thy grave, but straight
 Must cast thee scarcely Coffind, in oare,
 Where for a Monument upon thy bones.

The ayre remaining lamps, the belching Whale,
 And humming water must o'rewhelme thy Corps,
 Lying with simple shells : Oh Lychorida,
 Bid Nestor bring me Spices, Ink and Paper,
 My Casket and my Jewels, and bid Nicander
 Bring me the Sattin Coffin ; lay the Babe
 Upon the Pillow ; hie thee, whiles I say
 A Priestly farewell to her : suddenly, woman.

2. Sayl. Sir, we have a Chest beneath the hatches, Caulkt and bittumed ready.

Per. I thank thee : Marriner say, what Coast is this ?

2. Sayl. We are near Tharsus.

Per. Thither, gentle Marriner,
 Alter thy course for Tyre : when canst thou reach it ?

2. Sayl. By break of day, if the winde cease.

Per. O make for Tharsus,

There will I visit Cleon, for the Babe
 Cannot hold out to Tyrus ; there I'll leave it
 At carefull nursing : go thy wayes, good Marriner,
 I'll bring the body presently. Exit.

Enter Lord Cerymon with a Servant.

Cer. Phylemon, ho.

Enter Philemon,

Phil. Doth my Lord call ?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men,
 It hath been a turbulent and stormy night.

Ser. I have been in many : but such a night as this,
 Till now, I ne're endured.

Cer. Your Master will be dead ere you return,
 There's nothing can be ministred to nature,
 That can recover him : give this to the Pothecary,
 And tell me how it works.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Good morrow.

2. Gent. Good morrow to your Lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen, why doe you stirre so early ?

1. Gent. Sir, our lodgings standing bleak upon the Sea,
 Shook as if the earth did quake :

The very principles did seem to rend and all to topple,
 Pure surprize and fear made me to leave the house.

2. Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early,
 'Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O you say well.

1. Gent. But I much marvell that your Lordship
 Having rich attire about you, should at these early houres
 Shake off the golden slumber of repose ; 'tis most strange,
 Nature should be so conversant with pain,
 Being thereto not compelled.

Cer. I hold it ever Virtue and Cunning.

Were

Were endowments greater, then Nobleness and Riches,
Careless heirs may the two latter darken and expend ;
But immortality attends the former,
Making a Man a God :

'Tis known, I ever have studied Physick,
Through which secret Art, by turning o're Authority,
I have together with my practise, made familiar
To me and to my aide, the best infusions that dwells
In vegetives, in Mettals, Stones : and can speak of the Disturbances that Nature works, and of her cures ;
Which doth give me more content in course of true de-
Then to be thirsty after tottering Honour, (light
Or tie my pleasure up in silken Bags,
To please the Fool and Death.

2. Gent. Your honour hath through Ephesus,
Poured forth your charity, and hundred call themselves
Your Creatures ; who by you have been restored,
And not your knowledge, your personall pain,
But even your purse still open, hath built Lord Cerimon
Such strong renown, as never shall decay.

Enter two or three with a Chest.

Ser. So, lift there.

Cer. What's that ?

Ser. Sir, even now did the Sea, toss up upon our shore
This Chest ; 'tis of some wrack.

Cer. Set it down, let us look upon it.

2. Gent. 'Tis like a Coffin, sir.

Cer. What e're it be, 'tis wondrous heavy ;
Wrench it open straight :

If the Seas stomach be o're-charg'd with gold,
'Tis a good constraint of Fortune it belches upon us.

2. Gent. 'Tis so, my Lord. (it up ?)

Cer. How close 'tis caulkt and bottom'd, did the sea cast

Ser. I never saw so huge a billow, sir, as tost it upon shore.

Cer. Wrench it open ; it smells most sweetly in my

2. Gent. A delicate Odour. (sence.)

Cer. As ever hit my nostrill : so, up with it.

Oh you most potent gods ! what's here, a Coarse ?

1. Gent. Most strange.

Cer. Shrowded in cloth of state, balm'd and entreaured
With full bags of Spices, a Passport to Apollo, Perfect me in the Characters.

*Here I give to understand,
If o're this Coffin drive a land ;
I King Pericles have lost
This Queen, worth all our mundane cost :
Who finds her, give her burying,
She was the Daughter of a King.
Besides this treasure for a fee,
The gods requite his charity.*

If thou livest Pericles, thou hast a heart
That even cracks for woe: this chanc'd to night.

2. Gent. Most likely, sir.

Cer. Nay certainly to night, for look how fresh she
They were too rough, that threw her in the sea. (looks,
Make a fire within, fetch hither all my boxes in my Closet,
Death may usurpe on Nature many houres,
And yet the fire of life kindle again the o're-prest spirits.
I heard of an Egyptian that had nine houres been dead,
Who was by good appliance recovered.

Enter one with Napkins and Fire.

Well said, well said, the fire and cloathes,
The rough and wofull musick that we have,

Cause it to sound I beseech you :
The Viall once more ; how thou stirrest, thou block ?
The Musick there : I pray you give her aire ;
Gentlemen, this Queen will live,
Nature awakes a warme breath out of her ;
She hath not been entrant above five houres,
See how she gins to blow into lifes flower again.

1. Gent. The heavens through you, encrease our wonder,
And sets up your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive, behold her eye-lids,
Cafes to those heavenly jewels which Pericles hath lost,
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold
The Diamonds of a most praised water doth appear,
To make the world twice rich, live, and make us weep,
To hear your fate, fair creature, rare as you seem to be.

She moves.

Thai. O dear Diana, where am I ? where's my Lord ?
What world is this ?

2. Gent. Is not this strange ?

1. Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush (my gentle neighbour) lend me your hands,
To the next chamber bear her, get linnen ;
Now this matter must be lookt too, for the relapse
Is mortall : come, come, and, Esculapins, guide us.

They carry her away. Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Pericles at Tharsus, with Cleon and Dionizia.

Per. Most honoured Cleon, I must needs be gone,
My twelve moneths are expir'd, and Tyre stands
In a peace : you and your Lady take from my heart
All thankfulness. The gods make up the rest upon you.

Cleon. Your shakes of fortune, though they hate you Mortally, yet glance full wondrously on us. (pleased

Dion. O your sweet Queen ! that the strict fates had
You had brought her hither to have blest mine eyes with

Per. We cannot but obey the powers above us ; (her.
Could I rage and rore as doth the Sea she lies in,
Yet the end must be as 'tis : my gentle babe Marina,
Whom (for she was born at Sea) I have named so,
Here, I charge your charity withall ; leaving her
The infant of your care, beseeching you to give her Princely training, that she may be manner'd as she is born.

Cleon. Fear not (my Lord) but think your Grace,
That fed my Countrey with your Corn ; for which,
The peoples prayers daily fall upon you, must in your Childe

Be thought on, if neglect should therein make me vile,
The common body that's by you reliev'd,
Would force me to my duty ; but if to that,
My nature need a spurre, the gods revenge it
Upon me and mine, to the end of generation.

Per. I believe you, your honour and your goodnesse,
Teach me too without your vows, till she be married,
Madam, by bright Diana, whom we honour,
All unlisten'd shall this heir of mine remain,
Though I shew will in't : so I take my leave :
Good Madam, make me blessed, in your care
In bringing up my Childe.

Dion. I have one my self, who shall not be more dear to my respect than yours, my Lord.

Per.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.

Cleon. We'll bring your Grace to the edge of the shore, then give you up to the masked Neptune, and the gentlest windes of heaven.

Per. I will embrace your offer, come, dearest Madam: O no teares, Lychorida, no teares; look to your little Mistris, on whose grace you may depend hereafter: come, my Lord.

Enter Cerymon, and Thaisa.

Cer. Madam, this Letter, and some certain Jewels, Lay with you in your Coffer, which are at your com- Know you the Character? (mand:

Thai. It is, my Lords, that I was shipt at Sea, I well remember, even on my eaning time: but whether there delivered, by the holy gods, I cannot rightly say: but since King Pericles, my wedded Lord, I ne're shall see again, a vestall lively will take me to, and never more have joy.

Cler. Madam, if this you purpose as ye speak, Dianaes Temple is not distant farre, Where you may abide till your date expire, Moreover if you please, a Neece of mine, Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompence is thanks, that's all, Yet my good will is great, though the gift small. Exit.

Enter Gower.

Gower. Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre,
Welcom'd and serv'd to his own desire;
His wofull Queen we leave at Ephesus,
Unto Diana, there's a Votaresse.
Now to Marina bend your minde,
Whom our fast growing scene must finde
At Tharus, and by Cleon train'd
In Musicks letters, who hath gain'd
Of education all the grace,
Which makes high both the art and place
Of generall wonder: but alack
That monster Envy oft the wrack
Of earned praise, Marina's life
Seek to take off by treason's knife,
And in this kinde, our Cleon hath
One Daughter and a full grown wench,
Even ripe for Marriage fight: this Maid
High Philoten: and it is said
For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be,
Be't when they weav'd the sleded silk,
With fingers long, small, white as milk,
Or when she would with sharp needle wound
The Cambrick, which she made more sound
By hurting it, or when to th' Lute
She sung, and made the night bed mute,
That still records within one, or when
She would with rich and constant pen,
Vaile to her Mistrisse Dion still,
This Phyloten contends in skill
With absolute Marina: so
The Dove of Paphos might with the Crow
Vie feathers white. Marina gets
All praises, which are paid as debts,
And not as given, this so darks
In Phyloten all gracefull markes,
That Cleon's Wife with envy rare,
A present Murderer do's prepare
For good Marina, that her Daughter
Might stand peerlesse by this slaughter.

The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,
Lychorida our Nurse is dead,
And cursed Dionizia hath
The pregnant instrument of wrath
Prest for this blow, the unborn event,
I doe commend to your content,
Onely I carried winged Time,
Passe on the lame feet of my rime,
Which never could I so convey,
Unlesse your thoughts went on my way,
Dionizia doth appear,
With Leonine a Murderer.

Exit.

Enter Dionizia, and Leonine.

Dion. Thy oath remember, thou hast sworn to do it, 'tis but a blow, which never shall be known, thou canst not doe a thing in the world so soon, to yield thee so much profit, let not conscience which is but cold, inflaming thy love bosome, enflame too nicely; nor let pity, which even women have cast off, melt thee, but be a soul-dier to thy purpose.

Leon. I will do't, but yet she is a goodly Creature.

Dion. The fitter then the gods should have her. Here she comes weeping for her onely Mistrisse death: Thou art resolv'd?

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter Marina with a Basket of Flowers.

Mar. No: I will rob Tellus of her weed, to strew thy Grave with Flowers: the yellows, blewes, the purple Violets and Marigolds, shall as a Carpet hang upon thy Grave, while Summer dayes doth last. Aye me, poor Maid, born in a tempest, when my Mother di'd: this world to me is like a lasting storme, hurrying me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina? why de'ye weep alone? How chance my Daughter is not with you? Doe not consume your blood with sorrowing, You have a Nurse of me. Lord? how your favour's Chang'd, with this unprofitable woe: Come give me your Flowers, ere the Sea marre it, Walk with Leonine, the aire is quick there, And it pierces and sharpens the stomach; Come, Leonine, take her by the arme, walk with her.

Mar. No I pray you, I'll not bereave you of your Servant.

Dion. Come, come, I love the King your Father, and your self, with more then foreign heart; we every day expect him here, when he shall come and finde our Paragon, to all reports thus blasted. He will repent the breadth of his great voyage, blame both my Lord and me, that we have taken no care to your best courses. Go I pray you, walk and be cheerfull once again; reserve that excellent complexion, which did steale the eyes of young and old. Care not for me, I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go, but yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you: Walk half an houre, Leonine, at the least, Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, Madam.

Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet Lady, for a while: pray walk softly, doe not heat your blood: What, I must have a care of you.

Mar. My thanks, sweet Madam. Is the winde Westerly that blowes?

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the winde was North.

Leon. Was't so?

Mar.

Mar. My Father, as Nurse saith, did never fear, but cryed good Sea-men to the Sailors, galling his Kingly hands hailing ropes, and clasping to the Mast, endured a Sea that almost burst the deck.

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born, never was waves nor winde more violent, and from the ladder tackle, washes off a Canvas clymet, ha, saith one, wilt out? and with a dropping industry they skip from stern to stern: the Boat-swain whistles, and the Master calls and trebles their confusion.

Leon. Come, say your prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer, I grant it, pay, but be not tedious, for the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn to doe my work with haste.

Mar. Why, will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfie my Lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd now? as I can remember by my troth, I never did hurt her in all my life, I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn to any living creature: believe me now, I never kill'd a Mouse, nor hurt a Flye. I trod upon a worme once against my will, but I wept for it. How have I offended, wherein my death might yield her any profit, or my life imply her any danger?

Leon. My Commission is not to reason of the deed, but do't.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope: you are well favoured, and your looks fore-shew you have a very gentle heart, I saw you lately when you caught hurt in parting two that fought: good-sooth it shewed well in you, do so now, your Lady seeks my life, come you between, and save poor me the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn, and will dispatch.

Enter Pirates.

Pirat. 1. Hold villain.

Pirat. 2. A prize, a prize.

Pirat. 3. Half part mates, half part. Come lets have her aboard sodainly.

Exeunt.

Enter Leonine.

Leon. These roguing thieves serve the great Pirate Valdes, and they have seized Marina, let her go, there's no hope she will return: I'll swear she's dead, and thrown into the Sea, but I'll see further, perhaps they will but please themselves upon her, not carry her aboard, if she remain,

Whom they have ravisht, must by me be slain.

Enter Pander, Boult and Bawd.

Pander. Boult.

Boult. Sir.

Pander. Search the market narrowly, Metaline is full of gallants, we lost too much money this Mart, by being too Wenchlesse.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures, we have but poor three, and they can doe no more then they can doe, and they with continuall action, are even as good as rotten.

Pander. Therefore let's have fresh ones what e're we pay for them, if there be not a conscience to be us'd in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou say'st true, 'tis not our bringing up of poor bastards, as I think, I have brought some eleven.

Boult. I too eleven, and brought them down again, But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? the stuffe we have, a strong winde will blow it to pieces, they are so pittifully sodden.

Pander. Thou say'st true, there's two unwholesome in conscience, the poor Transilvanian is dead that lay with the little baggage.

Boult. I, she quickly poupt him, she made him roast-meat for wormes, but I'll go search the market. Exit.

Pand. Three or four thousand Chickeens were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why, to give over I pray you? Is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. Oh our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger: therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amisse to keep our door hatch'd; besides the fore termes we stand upon with the gods, will be strong with us for giving o're.

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we, I, and better too, we offend worse, neither is our profession any Trade, it's no calling: but here comes Boult.

Enter Boult with Pirates, and Mirana.

Boult. Come your wayes, my masters, you say she's a Sayl. O sir, we doubt it not.

(virgin?)

Boult. Master, I have gone through for this piece you if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest. (See,

Bawd. Boult, has she any qualities?

Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good cloathes: there's no farther necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her price, Boult?

Boult. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my Masters, you shall have your money presently: wife, take her in, instruct her what she has to doe, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

Bawd. Boult, take you the markes of her, the colour of her haire, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity, and cry; He that will give most, shall have her first. Such a maiden-head were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been: Get this done as I command you.

Boult. Performance shall follow.

Mar. Alack that Leonine was so slack, so slow:

He should have struck, not spoke;

Or that these Pirates, not enough barbarous,

Had not o're-board thrown me, for to seek my Mother.

Bawd. Why weep you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are light into my hands,

Where you are like to live.

Mar. The more's my fault, to scape his hands,

Where I was like to dye,

Bawd. I, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes indeed shall you, and taste Gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions: what de'ye stop your eares?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me to be, if I be not a woman?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry whip thee, Gossing: I think I shall have something to doe with you. Come, y'are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have ye.

Mar. The gods defend me.

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, b

then

then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stirre you up: Boults return'd.

Enter Boults.

Now, sir, hast thou cry'd her through the Market?

Boults. I have cry'd her almost to the number of her hairs, I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Baud. And pritheer tell me, how do'st thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boults. Faith they listened to me, as they would have hearkned to thir fathers Testament. There was a Spaniards mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Baud. We shall have him here to morrow with his best ruffe on.

Boults. To night, to night, but Mistris, do you know the French Knight that cowres i'th hams?

Baud. Who, Monsieur Verollus?

Boults. I, he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation, but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to morrow.

Baud. Well, well, as for him he brought his disease hither, here he doth but repair it, I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boults. Well, if we had of every Nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this signe.

Baud. Pray you come hither a while, you have Fortunes comming upon you, mark me, you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly, despise profit, where you have most gain, to weep that you live as you do, makes pittie in your lovers seldome, but that pittie begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a meer profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boults. O take her home, mistris, take her home, these blushes of hers must be quencht with some present practise.

Baud. Thou sayest true ifaith, so they must, for your Bide goes to that with shame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boults. Faith some do, and some do not, but Mistris, if I have bargain'd for the joynt.

Baud. Thou maist cut a morsel off the spit.

Boults. I may so.

Baud. Who should deny it?

Come young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boults. I by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Baud. Boults, spend thou that in the Town, report what a sojourner we have, you'll lose nothing by custome. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn, therefore say what a parragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boults. I warrant you mistris, thunder shall not so awake the beds of Eels, as my giving out her beauty stirs up the lewdly enclined, I'll bring home some to night.

Baud. Come your wayes, follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep, Unto'd I still my virgin knot will keep.

Diana aid my purpose.

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? pray you go with us.

Exeunt.

Enter Cleon and Dionizia.

Dion. Why are you foolish, can it be undone?

Cleon. O Dionizia, such a piece of slaughter, The Sun and Moon ne're look'd upon.

Dion. I think you'll turn a child again.

Cleon. Were I chief Lord of all this spacious world, I'd give it to undo the deed. O Lady, much less in bloud then vertue, yet a Princess to equall any single Crown of the earth, in the justice of compare, O villain, Leonine, whom thou hast poisoned too, if thou had'st drunk to him, it had been a kindness becoming well thy face, what canst thou say, when Noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurfes are not the fates to foster it, nor ever to preserve, she di'd at night, I'll say so, who can crosse it, unlesse you play the Innocent, and for an honest attribute, cry out she di'd by foul play.

Cleon. O go too, well, well, of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those that thinks the pretty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence, and open this to Pericles; I do shame to think of what a Noble strain you are, and of how coward a spirit.

Cleon. To such proceeding, who ever but his approbation added, though not his whole consent, he did not flow from honorable courses.

Dion. Be it so then, yet none doth know but you how she came dead, nor none can know, Leonine being gone. She did disdain my child, and stood between her and her fortunes: none would look on her, but cast their gazes on Marina's face, whilst ours was blurred at, and held a Mawkin, not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorow, and though you call my course unnatural, you not your child well loving, yet I find it greets me as an enterprize of kindness perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cleon. Heavens forgive it.

Dion. And as for Pericles, what should he say? we wept after her hearse, and yet we mourn: her monument almost finished, and her Epitaph in glittering golden characters, expresse a general praise to her, and care in us, at whose expence 'tis done.

Cleon. Thou art like the Harpie, Which to betray, dost with thy Angels face, Ceaze with thine Eagles talents.

Dion. You are like one, that superstitiously Doth swear to th'gods, that wince kills the flies, But yet I know, you'll do as I advise.

Exit.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Gower.

Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short,
Sail seas in Cockles, have and wish but for't:

Making to take our imagination,
From bourn to bourn, Region to Region.

By you being Pard'ned, we commit no crime
To use one Language, in each several clime,
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you
To learn of me, who stands in gaps to teach you.

The stages of our story Pericles,
Is now again thwarting the wayward seas;
(Attended on by many a Lord and Knight)
To see his daughter, all his lives delight.

Old Hellicanus goes along behinde,
Is left to govern it: you bear in minde

Old Escanes, whom Hellicanus late
Advanc'd in time to great and high estate.
Well sailing ships, and bounteous windes have brought
This King to Tharsus, think this Pilate thought

So with his steerage, shall your thoughts grove
To fetch his Daughter home, who first is gone

Like

*Like meers and shadowes see them move a while,
Your eares unto your eyes I'll reconcile.*

Enter Pericles at one door with all his train. Cleon and Dionizia at the other. Cleon shewes Pericles the Tombe, whereat Pericles makes lamentation, puts on Sack-cloth, and in a mighty passion departs.

Gower. *See how belief may suffer by foule show,
This borrowed passion stands for true old woe :
And Pericles in sorrow all deuoured,
Wish sighes shot through, and biggest teares o're-show'd.
Leaves Tharsus, and again imbarks, he swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his haire,
He put on Sack-cloth and to Sea he beares,
A tempest which his mortall Vessell seares.
And yet he rides it out. Now take me our way
To the Epitaph for Marina, writ by Dionizia.*

The fairest, sweetest, and best lies here,
Who withered in her spring of year :
She was of Tyrrus the King's Daughter,
On whom foule death hath made this slaughter :
Marina was she call'd, and at her birth,
That is, being proud, swallow'd some part of th'earth :
Therefore the earth feareing to be o'reflow'd
Hath Thetis birth-childe on the heavens bestow'd.
Wherefore she does and swears she'll never flint,
Make raging Battry upon shores of flint.

*No vizor does become black villany,
So well as soft and tender flattery.
Let Pericles believe his Daughter's dead,
And bear his courtes to be ordered
By Lady Fortune, while our beare must play
His Daugh er woe and heavy well-a-day.
In her unholy service : Patience then,
And think you now are all in Metaline.*

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Did you ever hear the like ?
2. Gent. No, nor never shall doe in such a place as this, she being once gone.
1. Gent. But to have Divinity preacht there, did you ever dreame of such a thing ?
2. Gent. No, no, come, I am for no more Bawdy Houses, shall we go hear the Vestalls sing ?
1. Gent. I'll doe any thing now that is virtuous, but I am out of the road of rutting for ever. Exeunt.

Enter the three Bawdes.

Pand. Well, I had rather then twice the worth of her she had ne're come here.
Bawd. Fie, fie upon her, she is able to frieze the god Priapus, and undoe a whole generation, we must either get her ravisht, or be rid of her, when she should doe for clyents her fitment, and doe me the kindnesse of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees, that she would make a Puritane of the Devil, if he should cheapen a kisse of her.
Boul. Faith I must ravish her, or she'll disfigure us of all our Cavaleers, and make all our Swearers Priests.
Pand. Now the poxe upon her green sicknesse for me.
Ba. Faith there's no way to be rid of it, but by the way to the Pox. Here comes the Lord Lyfmachus disguised.
Boul. We should have both Lord and Lown, if the peevish Baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter Lyfmachus.

Lyf. How now, how a dozen of virginities ?
Bawd. Now the gods blesse your Honour.
Boul. I am glad to see your Honour in good health.
Lyf. You may so, 'tis the better for you, that your resorters stand upon sound Legs, how now ? wholsome impunity have you, that a man may deale withall, and defie the Surgeon ?
Bawd. We have one here, sir, if she would-----
But there never came her like in Metaline.
Lyf. If she'd doe the deeds of darknesse, thou would'st say.
Bawd. Your honour knowes what 'tis to say well-enough.
Lyf. Well, call forth, call forth.
Boul. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a Rose, and she were a Rose indeed, if she had but-----
Lyf. What prethee ?
Boul. O sir, I can be modest.
Lyf. That dignifies the renown of a Bawd, no lesse then it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.
Enter Marina.
Bawd. Here comes that which growes to the stalke, Never pluckt yet I can assure you.
Is she not a fair creature ?
Lyf. Faith she would serve after a long voyage at Sea, Well, there's for you, leave us.
Bawd. I beseech your honour give me leave a word, And I'll have done presently.
Lyf. I beseech you doe.
Bawd. First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.
Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.
Bawd. Next, he's the Governour of this Country, and a man whom I am bound to.
Mar. If he govern the Countrey, you are bound to him indeed, but how honourable he is in that, I know not.
Bawd. Pray you without any more virginall fencing, will you use him kindly ? he will line your Apron with Gold.
Mar. What he will doe graciously, I will thankfully receive.
Lyf. Have you done.
Bawd. My Lord, she's not pac't yet, you must take some pains to work her to your mannage, come, we will leave his Honour and her together. Exit Bawd.
Lyf. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade ?
Mar. What trade, Sir ?
Lyf. Why, I cannot name't but I shall offend.
Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade, please you to name it.
Lyf. How long have you been of this profession ?
Mar. E're since I can remember.
Lyf. Did you go to't so young, were you a gamester at five, or at seven ?
Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one,
Lyf. Why the house you dwell in, proclaimes you to be a creature of sale.
Mar. Doe you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into it ? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and the Governour of this place.
Lyf. Why ? hath your principall made known unto you, who I am ?

Mar. Who is my Principal?

Ly. Why your hearb woman, she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O you have heard some thing of my power, and so stand aloft for more serious wooing, but I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee; come bring me to some private place, come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, shew it now, if put upon you, make the judgement good, that thought you worthy of it.

Lyf. How's this? how's this? some more, be sage.

Mar. For me that am a maid, though most ungentele Fortune have plac'd me in this Stie, where since I came, diseases have been sold dearer then Physick, O that the gods would set me free from this unhallow'd place, though they did change me to the meanest bird that flies i'th purer aire.

Lyf. I did not think thou could'st have spoke so well, I ne're dream'd thou could'st; had I brought hither a corrupted mind, thy speech had altered it, hold, here's gold for thee, persevere in that clear way thou goest, and the gods strengthen thee.

Mar. The good gods preserve you.

Ly. For my part, I came with no ill intent, for to me the very doors and windows savours vilely, fare thee well, thou art a piece of vertue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been Noble, hold, here's more gold for thee, a curse upon him, die he like a thief that robs thee of thy goodness, if thou dost hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

Boul. I beseech your honour, one piece for me.

Ly. Avant thou damned door-keeper, your house but for this virgin that doth prop it, would sink and overwhelm you. away.

Boul. How's this? we must take another course with you? if your peevish chastity, which is not worth a break-fast in the cheapest Country under the coap, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel, come your wayes.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boul. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it, come your way, we'll have no more gentlemen driven away, come your wayes I say.

Enter Bawds.

Bawd. How now, what's the matter?

Boul. Worse and worse, Mistris, she hath here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O abominable.

Boul. He makes our profession as it were to stink before the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry hang her up for ever.

Boul. The Nobleman would have dealt with her like a Nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a Snow-ball, saying his prayers too.

Bawd. Boul., take her away, use her at thy pleasure, crack the glasse of her virginity, & make the rest maleable.

Boul. And if she were a thornier piece of ground then she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods.

Bawd. She conjures, away with her, would she had never come within my doors, Marry hang you, she's born to undo us, will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry come up my dith of chastity, with rosemary and bayse.

Exit.

Boul. Come mistress, come your wayes with me.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boul. To take from you the jewel you hold so deer.

Mar. Prithee tell me one thing first.

Boul. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What can'st thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boul. Why I could wish him to be my Master, or rather my Mistress.

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art, since they do better thee in their command; thou hold'st a place, for which the painedst fiend in hell would not in reputation change: thou art the damned door-keeper to every cusherel that comes enquiring for his Tib; to the cholerick fisting of every rogue, thy ear is liable, thy food is such as hath been belcht on by infectious lungs.

Boul. What would you have me do? go to the warrs, would you, where a man may serve seven years for the losse of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do any thing but this thou dost, empty old receptacles, or common-shores of filth; serve by Indenture to the common hangman, any of these wayes are yet better then this: for what thou professest, a Baboon, could he speak, would own a name too dear: Oh, that the gods would safely deliver me from this place: here, here's gold for thee, if that thy Master would gain by me, proclaim that I can sing, weave, sowe, and dance, with other vertues, which I'll keep from boast, and will undertake all these to teach. I doubt not but this populous City will yield many schollars.

Boul. But can you teach all this you speak off?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again, and prostitute me to the basest groom that doth frequent your house.

Boul. Well, I will see what I can do for thee: If I can place thee I will.

Mar. But amongst honest women.

Boul. Faith my acquaintance lies little among them; but since my master and mistress hath bought you, there's no going but by their consent: therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'll do for thee what I can, come your wayes.

Exeunt.

Enter Gower.

*Marina thus the Brothel scapes, and chances
Into an honest house, our story saies;
She sings like one immortal, and she dances
As goddess-like to her admired laies:
Deep Clearks she dumbs, and with her needle composes
Natures own shape, of bnd, bird, branch or berry,
That even her art, sisters the natural Roses,
Her Inle, Silk, Twine, with the rubied Cherry,
That pupils lack! she none of noble race,
Who pour their bounty on her, and her gain
She gives the cursed Bawd. Leave we her place,
And to her Father turn our thoughts again,
Where we left him at sea, tumbled and tost,
And driven before the wind, he is arriv'd
Here where his daughter dwells, and on this Coast,
Suppose him now at Anchor: the City striv'd
God Neptunes annual feast to keep, from whence Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,
His banners sable, trim'd with rich expence,
And to him in his Barge with fervour hies.*

*In your supposing, once more put your sight
On heavy Pericles, think this his Bark,
Where what is done in action (more of might Shall be discovered) please you sit and hark,*

Exit.

Enter Helicanus, to him two Sailors.

1. Sayl. Where is the Lord Helicanus? he can resolve you. O here he is, sir, there is a Barge put off from Metaline, and in it is Lyfimachus the Governor, who craves to come aboard, what is your will?

Hell. That he have his, call up some gentlemen.

2. Sayl. Ho, Gentlemen, my Lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

Hell. Gentlemen, there is some of worth would come aboard, I pray thee greet them fairly.

Enter Lyfimachus.

1. Sayl. Sir, this is the man that can in ought you would, resolve you.

Lyf. Hail, reverent sir, the gods preserve you.

Hell. And you to out-live the age I am, and die as I would do.

Lyf. You wish me well; being on shore, honoring of Neptunes triumphs, seeing this goodly vessel ride before us, I made to it, to know of whence you are.

Hell. First, what is your place?

Lyf. I am the Governor of this place you lie before.

Hell. Sir, our vessel's of Tyre, in it the King, a man, who for this three months hath not spoken to any one, nor taken sustenance, but to prolong his grief.

Lyf. Upon what ground is his distemperance?

Hell. It would be too tedious to repeat, but the main grief springs from the losse of a beloved daughter, and a wife.

Lyf. May we not see him?

Hell. You may, but bootless is your sight, he will not speak to any.

Lyf. Let me obtain my wish.

Hell. Behold him, this was a goodly person, till the disaster that one mortal wight drove him to this.

Lyf. Sir King, all hail, the gods preserve you, hail, Royal Sir.

Hell. It is in vain, he will not speak to you.

Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Metaline, I durst wager would win some words from him.

Lyf. 'Tis well bethought, she questionlesse with her sweet harmony, and other chosen attractions, would allure and make a battery through his defended parts, which now are mid-way stopp'd, she is all happy, as the fairest of all, and her fellow maids, now upon the levie shelter that abutts against the Island side.

Hell. Sure all effectles, yet nothing wee'l omit that bears recoveries name. But since your kindness we have strecht thus farre, let us beseech you, that for our gold we may have provision, wherein we are not destitute for want, but weary for the staleness.

Lyf. O, sir, a courtesie, which if we should deny, the most just God for every graffe would send a Caterpillar, and so inflit our Province: yet once more let me entreat to know at large the cause of your Kings sorrow.

Hell. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you; but see, I am prevented.

Enter Marina.

Lyf. O here's the Lady that I sent for.

Welcome fair one: Is't not a goodly present?

Hell. She's a gallant Lady.

Lyf. She's such a one, that were I well assur'd, Came of a gentle kind and noble stock, I'd wish no better choise, and think me rarely wed. Fair and all goodnesse that consists in beauty, Expect even here, where is a kingly patient, If that thy prosperous and artificial fate, Can draw him but to answer thee in ought, Thy sacred Physick shall receive such pay, As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use my uttermost skill in his recovery, provided that none but I and my companion maid, be suffered to come near him.

Lyf. Come, let us leave her, and the gods make her prosperous.

The Song.

Lyf. Markt he your musick:

Mar. No, nor lookt on us.

Lyf. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, sir, my Lord, lend ear.

Per. Hum, ha.

Mar. I am a maid, my Lord, that nere before invited eyes, but have been gazed on like a Comet: she speaks, my Lord, that may be, hath endured a grief might equall yours, if both were justly weighed, though wayward fortune did maligne my state, my derivation was from ancestors who stood equivoilent with mighty Kings, but time hath rooted out my parentage, and to the world and awkward casualties, bound me in servitude, I will desist, but there is something glows upon my cheek, and whispers in mine ear, Go not till he speak.

Per. My fortunes, parentage, good parentage to equal mine; was it not thus, what say you?

Mar. I said, my Lord, if you did know my parentage, you would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so, pray you turn your eyes upon me, y'are like some-thing that, what Countrey-women hear of these shews?

Mar. No, nor of any shews, yet I was mortally brought forth, and am no other then I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping: my dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one my daughter might have been: my Queens square brows, her stature to an inch, as wand-like straight, as silver voyc't, her eyes as jewel-like, and cast as richly, in pace another June. Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry, the more she gives them speech; where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger, from the deck you may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred? and how archiev'd you these endowments which you make more rich to owe?

Mar. If I should tell my history, it would seem like lies disdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Prithee speak, falsenesse cannot come from thee, for thou lookest modest as Justice, and thou seem'st a Pallas for the crowned truth to dwell in, I will believe thee, and make my senses credite thy relation, to points that seem impossible, for thou look'st like one I loved indeed; what were thy friends? Did'st thou not stay when I did push thee back; which was when I perceived thee that thou cam'st from good descent.

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage, I think thou said'st thou had'st been tost from wrong to injury, and that thou thought'st thought'st thy griefs might equall mine, if both were opened.

Mar. Some such thing I said, and said no more, but what my thoughts did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy story, if thine considered prove the thousand part of my endurance, thou art a man, and I have suffered like a girle, yet thou do'st look like patience, gazing on Kings graves, and smiling extremity out of act, what were thy friends? how lost thou thy name, my most kind virgin? recount I do beseech thee, Come sit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. Oh I am mockt, and thou by some insenced god sent hither to make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good sir, or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay I'll be patient, thou little know'st how thou dost startle me to call thy self Marina.

Mar. The name was given me by one that had some power, my father and a King.

Per. How, a Kings daughter, and call'd Marina?

Mar. You said you would believe me, but not to be a trouble of your peace, I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood?

Have you a working pulse, and are no Fairy?

Motion? well speak on, where were you born?

And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina, for I was born at sea.

Per. At sea? who was thy mother?

Mar. My mother was the Daughter of a King, who died the minute I was born, as my good Nurse Lycherida hath oft delivered weeping.

Per. O stop there a little, this is the rarest dream That ere dull sleep did mock sad fools withall, This cannot be my daughter; buried! well, where were you bred? I'll hear you more to the bottome of your story and never interrupt you.

Mar. You scorn, believe me 'twere best I did give ore.

Per. I will believe you by the syllable of what you shall deliver, yet give me leave, how came you in these parts? where were you bred?

Mar. The King my Father did in Tharsus leave me, Till cruel Cleon with his wicked wife, Did seek to murder me: and having wooed a villain To attempt it, who having drawn to do't, A crew of Pyrats came and rescued me, Brought me to Metaline.

But, good sir, whether will you have me? why do you weep? It may be you think me an imposture, no good faith. I am the daughter to King Pericles, if good King Pericles be.

Per. Hoe, Hellicanus?

Hell. Call's my Lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble Counsellor, Most wise in general, tell me if thou can'st, what this maid is,

Or what is like to be, that thus hath made me weep?

Hell. I know not, but here's the Regent, sir, of Metaline, speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She never would tell her parentage, Being demanded that, she would sit still and weep.

Per. Oh Hellicanus, strike me, honored sir, give me a gash, put me to present pain, least this great sea of joyes rushing upon me, ore-bear the shores of my mortality, and drown me with their sweetnesse: Oh come hither.

Thou that beger'st him that did thee beger,

Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tharsus,

And found at sea again: O Hellicanus, Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods, as loud As thunder threaters us; this is Marina. What was thy mothers name? tell me but that, For truth can never be confirm'd enough, Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, sir, I pray what is your Title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre, but tell me now my Droun'd Queens name, as in the rest you said, Thou hast bin god-like perfect, the heir of Kingdoines, And another like to Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it not more to be your daughter, then to say, my Mothers name is Thaisa? Thaisa was my mother, who did end the minute I began.

Per. Now blessing on thee, rise, thou art my child. Give me fresh garments, mine own Hellicanus, she is not dead at Tharsus, as she should have been by savage Cleon, she shall tell thee all, when thou shalt kneel, and justifie in knowledge, she is thy very Princes; who is this?

Hell. Sir, 'tis thee Governor of Metaline, who hearing of your melancholly, did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you; give me my robes; I am wild in my beholding. Oh heaven blesse my girle. But hark, what Musick's this Hellicanus? my Marina, Tell him ore point by point, for yet he seems to doat, How sure you are my daughter; but where's this musick?

Hell. My Lord, I hear none.

Per. None? the musick of the sphears, list my Marina.

Lys. It is not good to crosse him, give him way.

Per. Rarest sounds, do ye not hear?

Lys. Musick, my Lord, I hear.

Per. Most heavenly musick, It nips me unto listning, and thick slumber Hangs upon mine eyes, let me rest, Lys. A pillow for his head, so leave him all. Well my companion friends, if this but answer to my just belief, I'll well remember you.

Actus Quintus.

Diana.

Diana. My Temple stands in Ephesus, Hie thee thither, and do upon mine Altar sacrifice. There when my maiden priests are met together, before all the people reveale how thou at sea did'st lose thy wife, to mourn thy crosses with thy daughters call, and give them repitition to the like: or performe my bidding, or thou livest in woe: do't, and happy by my silver bow; awake and tell thy dream.

Per. Celestial Dian, Goddess Argentine, I will obey thee: Hellicanus.

Per. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to strike The inhospitable Cleon, but I am for other service first, Toward Ephesus turn our blown sayls, Eftsoons I'll tell why, shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore, and give you gold for such provision as our intents will need.

Lys. Sir, with all my heart, and when you come ashore, I have another sleight.

Pericl. You shall prevaile, were it to wooe my daughter.

daughter, for it seems you have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend me your arms.

Per. Come, my Marina.

Exeunt.

Enter Gower.

Now our sands are almost run,
More a little, and then dum,
This my last boon give me,
For such kindness must relieve me:
That you aptly will suppose,
What pageantry, what feast, what shews,
What Minstrelsie, what pretty din,
The Regent made in Meralin,
To greet the King; so he thrived,
That he is promised to be wived
To fair Marina, but in no wise,
Till he had done his sacrifice,
As Dian bad, whereto being bound,
The Interim pray, you all confound.
In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd,
And wishes fall out as their will'd.
At Ephesus the Temple see,
Our King, and all his company.
That he can hither come so soon,
Is by your fancies thankfull doom.

Enter Pericles, Lysimachus, Hellicanus,
Marina, and others.

Per. Hail Dian, to performe thy just command,
I here confels my self the King of Tyre.

Who frighted from my Country, did wed at Pentapolis, the fair Thaisa, at sea in childbed died she, but brought forth a Maid childe called Marina, whom, O goddess, wears yet thy silver livery, she at Tharsus was nurs'd with Cleon, who at fourteen years he sought to murder, but her better stars brought her to Meteline, 'gainst whose shore riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard to us, where by her own most clear remembrance, she made known her self my daughter.

Th. Voice and favour, you are, you are, O royal Pericles.

Per. What means the woman? she dies, help gentlemen.

Cer. Sir, if you have told Diana's Altar true, this is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no, I threw her over-board with these very armes.

Cer. Upon this Coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'Tis most certain.

Cer. Look to the Lady; O she's but overjoy'd.
Early in blust'ring morn, this Lady was thrown upon this shore. I opened the Coffin, found these rich jewels, recovered her, and placed her here in Diana's Temple.

Per. May we see them?

Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house, whether I invite you, look, Thaisa is recovered,

Thai. O let me look if he none of mine, my sanctity will to my sence bend no licentious ear, but curb it spight of seeing: O my Lord, are you not Pericles? like him you speak, like him you are: did you not name a tempest, a birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa.

Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead and drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian!

Thai. Now I know you better, when we with tears parted Pentapolis, the King my father gave yon such a ring.

Per. This, this, no more, you gods, your presed kindnesse makes my past miseries sport, you shall do well, that on the touching of her lips I may melt, and no more be seen; O come, be buried a second time within these armes.

Mar. My heart leaps to be gone into my mothers bosome.

Per. Look who kneels here, flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa, thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina, for she was yielded there.

Thai. Blest, and mine own.

Hell. Hail Madam, and my Queen.

Thai. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say when I did flye from Tyre, I left behind an ancient substitute; can you remember what I call'd the man, I have nam'd him off.

Thai. 'Twas Hellicanus then.

Per. Still confirmation, embrace him dear Thaisa, this is he, now do I long to hear how you were found?
how possibly preserved? and who to thank (besides the gods) for this great miracle?

Thai. Lord Cerimon, my Lord, this man through whom the gods have shewn their power, that can from first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir, the gods can have no mortal officer more like a god then you, will you deliver how this dead Queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my Lord, beseech you first go with me unto my house, where shall be shewn you all was found with her; how she came plac'd here in the Temple, no need-full thing omitted.

Per. Praise Dian bleste thee for thy vision, I will offer night oblations to thee; Thaisa, this Prince, the fair betrothed of your daughter, shall marry at Pentapolis, and now this ornament that makes me look dismal, will I clip to forme, and what this fourteen years no razor toucht to grace thy marriage day, I'll beautifie.

Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, Sir, my father's dead.

Per. Heavens make a Star of him, yet here, my Queen, we'll celebrate their Nuptials, and our selves will in that kingdome spend our following dayes; our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.

Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay,

To hear the rest untold, Sir, lead's the way.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Gower.

In Antiochus and his daughter, you have heard
Of monstrous lust, the due and just reward:

In Pericles his Queen and daughter seen,

Although assayl'd with Fortune fierce and keen,

Versue preferred from fell destructions blast,

Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last.

In Hellicanus may you well desery,

A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty:

In reverend Cerimon there well appears,

The worth that learned charity aye wears.

For wicked Cleon and his wife, when Fame

Had spread their cursed deed, and honor'd name

Of Pericles, to rage the City turn,

That him and his, they in his Pallace burn:

The gods for murder seemed so content,

To punish, although not done, but meant.

So on your paticences ever more attending,

New joy wait on you, here our play hath ending.

The London PRODIGAL.

Written by W. Shakespeare.

Enter old Flowerdale and his brother.

Fath.

B Rother, from Venice, being thus disguis'd,
I come to prove the humours of my son :
How hath he born himself since my departure,
I leaving you his patron and his guide ?

Unc. Ifaith, brother, so, as you will grieve to hear,
And I almost asham'd to report it.

Fath. Why how is 't, brother? what doth he spend
Beyond the allowance I left him?

Unc. How! beyond that? and far more: why, your exhibition is nothing. he hath spent that, and since hath borrowed, protested with oaths, alledged kindred to wring money from me, by the love I bore his father, by the fortunes might fall upon himself, to furnish his wants:
that done, I have had since, his bond, his friend and friends bond, although I know that he spends is yours; yet it grieves me to see the unbridled wildnesse that raigns over him.

Fath. Brother, what is the manner of his life? how is the name of his offences? if they do not relish altogether of damnation, his youth may priviledge his wantonnesse: I my self ran an unbridled course till thirty, nay almost till forty; well, you see how I am: for vice once looked into with the eyes of discretion, and well ballanced with the weights of reason, the course past, seems so abominable, that the Landlord of himself, which is the heart of his body, will rather intombe himself in the earth, or seek a new Tenant to remain in him, which once settled, how much better are they that in their youth have known all these vices, and left it, then those that knew little, and in their age runs into it? Belive me, brother, they that die most vertuous, hath in their youth, lived most vicious, and none knows the danger of the fire, more then he that falls into it: But say, how is the course of his life? let's hear his particulars.

Unc. Why I'll tell you, brother, he is a continual swearer,
And a breaker of his oaths, which is bad.

Fath. I grant indeed to swear is bad, but not in keeping those oaths is better: for who will see by a bad thing?
Nay by my faith, I hold this rather a vertue then a vice,
Well, I pray proceed.

Unc. He is a mighty brawler, and comes commonly by the worst.

Fath. By my faith this is none of the worst neither, for if he brawl and be beaten for it, it will in time make him shun it: For what brings a man or child, more to vertue, then correction? What raigns over him else?

Unc. He is a great drinker, and one that will forget himself.

Fa. Obest of all, vice should be forgotten: let him drink
So he drink not Churches.

(on,
Nay and this be the worst, I hold it rather happinesse in Then any iniquity. Hath he any more attendants? (him,

Unc. Brother, he is one that will borrow of any man.

Fa. Why you see so doth the sea, it borrows of all the Currents in the world, to encrease himself.

(small
Un. I, but the sea paies it again, & so will never your son.

Fath. No more would the sea neither, if it were as dry as my son.

Unc. Then, brother, I see you rather like these vices in Then any way condemne them.

Fath. Nay mistake me not, brother, for though I slur them over now,

As things slight and nothing, his crimes being in the bud,
It would gall my heart, they should ever raign in him.

Flow. Ho! who's within ho?

Flowerdale knocks within.

Unc. That's your son, he is come to borrow more money.

Fath. For Godsake give it out I am dead, see how he'll take it,

Say I have brought you news from his father.
I have here drawn a formal will, as it were from my self,
Which I'll deliver him.

Unc. Go too, brother, no more: I will.

Flow. Uncle, where are you, Uncle?

within.

Unc. Let my cousin in there.

Fath. I am a Saylor come from Venice, and my name is Christopher.

Enter Flowerdale.

Flow. By the Lord, in truth Uncle.

Unc. In truth would a serv'd, cousin, without the Lord.

Flow. By your leave, Uncle, the Lord is the Lord of truth.

A couple of rascalls at the gate, set upon me for my purse.

Unc. You never come, but you bring a brawl in your mouth.

(pound.

Flow. By my truth, Uncle, you must needs lend me ten

Unc. Give my cousin some small beer here.

Flow. Nay look you, you turn it to a jest now, by this light,

(rock,

I should ride to Croydon Fayr, to meet sir Lancelot Spur-
I should have his daughter Luce, and for scurvy

Ten pound, a man shall lose nine hundred three-score
and

and odde pounds, and a daily friend beside, by this hand, Uncle, 'tis true.

Unc. Why, any thing is true for ought I know.

Flow. To see now: why you shall have my bond Uncle, or Tom Whites; James Brocks: or Nick Halls, as good rapier and dagger men, as any be in England, let's be damn'd if we do not pay you, the worst of us all will not damne our selves for ten pound. A pox of ten pound.

Unc. Cousin, this is not the first time I have believ'd you.

Flow. Why trust me now, you know not what may fall: If one thing were but true, I would not greatly care, I should not need ten pound, but when a man cannot be believ'd, there's it.

Unc. Why what is it, cousin?

Flow. Marry this Uncle, can you tell me if the Katern-hue be come home or no?

Unc. I marry is't.

Flow. By God I thank you for that news. What is't in the pool can you tell?

Unc. It is; what of that?

Flow. What? why then I have six pieces of velvet sent I'll give you a piece, Uncle: for thus said the letter, A piece of Ash-colour, a three-pil'd black, a colour'd, de-A crimson, a sad green, and a purple: yes ifaith. (roy,

Unc. From whom should you receive this?

Flow. From who? why from my father? with commendations to you, Uncle, and thus he writes: I know, faith he, thou hast much troubled thy kind Unkle, whom God-willing at my return I will see amply satisfied; Amply, I remember was the very word; so God help me.

Unc. Have you the letter here?

Flow. Yes I have the letter here, here is the letter: no, yes, no, let me see, what breeches wore I on Saturday: let me see, a Tuesday, my Calymanka, a Wednesday, my peach-colour Sattin, a Thursday my Vellure, a Friday my Calymanka again, a Saturday, let me see, a Saturday, for in those breeches I wore a Saturday is the letter: O my riding breeches, Uncle, those that you thought had been velvet, In those very breeches is the letter.

Unc. When should it be dated?

Flow. Marry Didissimo tertios Septembris, no, no, tridissimo tertios Octobris, I Octobris, so it is.

Unc. Diditimo tertios Octobris: and here receive I a letter that your father died in June: how say you, Kester?

Fath. Yestruly, sir, your father is dead, these hands of mine help to winde him.

Flow. Dead?

Fath. I, sir, dead.

Flow. 'Sbloud, how should my father come dead?

Fath. Ifaith sir, according to the old Proverb, The child was born, and cryed, became man, After fell sick, and died.

Unc. Nay, cousin, do not take it so heavily.

Flow. Nay I cannot weep you extempory, marry some two or three dayes hence, I shall weep without any stintance. But I hope he dyed in good uememory.

Fath. Very well, sir, and set down every thing in good order,

And the Katherine and Hue you talkt of, I came over in; And I saw all the bills of lading, and the velvet That you talkt of, there is no such aboard.

Flow. By God I assure you, then there is knavery abroad.

Fath. I'll be sworn of that: there's knavery abroad, Although there were never a piece of velvet in Venice.

Flow. I hope he died in good estate.

Fath. To the report of the world he did, and made his

Of which I am an unworrry bearer.

Flow. His will, have you his will?

Fath. Yes, sir, and in the presence of your Uncle, I was willed to deliver it.

Unc. I hope, cousin, now God hath blessed you with wealth, you will not be unmindfull of me.

Flow. I'll do reason, Unkle; yet ifaith I take the denial of this ten pound very hardly.

Unc. Nay I deny'd you not.

Flow. By God you deny'd me directly.

Unc. I'll be judg'd by this good fellow.

Fath. Not directly, sir.

Flow. Why he said he would lend me none, and that had wont to be a direct denial, if the old phraze hold: Well, Uncle, come we'll fall to the Legasies, In the name of God, Amen.

Item, I bequeath to my brother Flowerdale, three hundred pounds, to pay such trivial debts as I owe in London.

Item, to my son Mat Flowerdale, I bequeath two bail of false dice, Videllicet, high men and low men, fullornes, stop cater crates, and other bones of function.

Flow. 'Sbloud what doth he mean by this?

Unc. Proceed, Cousin.

Flow. These precepts I leave him, let him borrow of his For of his word no body will trust him. (oath,

Let him by no means marry an honest woman, For the other will keep her self.

Let him steal as much as he can, that a guilty conscience May bring him to his destinate repentance, I think he means hanging. And this were his last will and Testament, the Devil stood laughing at his beds feet while he made it. 'Sbloud, what doth he think to sop off his posterity with Paradoxes.

Fath. This he made, sir, with his own hands.

Flow. I, well, nay come, good Uncle, let me have this ten pound, Imagine you have lost it, or rob'd of it, or misreckon'd your self so much: any way to make it come easily off, good Uncle.

Unc. Not a penny.

Fath. Ifaith lend it him, sir; I my self have an estate in the City worth twenty pound, all that I'll ingage for him, he faith it concerns him in a marriage.

Flow. I marry doth it, this is a fellow of some sense, this: come, good Uncle.

Unc. Will you give your word for it, Kester?

Fath. I will, sir, willingly.

Unc. Well, cousin, come to me some hoar hence, you shall have it ready.

Flow. Shall I not fail?

Unc. You shall not, come or send.

Flow. Nay I'll come my self.

Fath. By my troth, would I were your worships man.

Flow. What? would'st thou serve?

Fath. Very willingly, sir.

Flow. Why I'll tell thee what thou shalt do, thou shalt thou hast twenty pound, go into Burchin Lane, put thy self into cloaths, thou shalt ride with me to Croyden Fayr.

Fath. I thank you, sir, I will attend you.

Flow. Well, Uncle, you will not fail me an hour hence.

Unc. I will not, cousin.

Flow. What's thy name, Kester? Fath. I, sir.

Flow. Well, provide thy self: Uncle, farewell till anon. Exit Flowerdale.

Unc. Brother, how do you like your son?

Fath. Ifaith brother, like a mad unbridled colt,

Or as a Hawk, that never stoop'd to lure :
The one must be tamed with an iron bit,
The other must be watch'd, or still she is wild,
Such is my son, a while let him be so ;
For counsel still is follies deadly foe.

I'll serve his youth, for youth must have his course,
For being restrain'd, it makes him ten times worse :
His pride, his riot, all that may be nam'd,
Time may recall, and all his madness tam'd.

Enter Sir Lancelot, Master Weathercock, Daffidill, Artichoak, Luce, and Frank.

Lance. Sirrha Artichoak, get you home before,
And as you proved your self a calf in buying,
Drive home your fellow calves that you have bought.

Arti. Yes forsooth, shall not my fellow Daffidill go along with me.

Lance. No, sir, no, I must have one to wait on me.

Arti. Daffadill, farewell, good fellow Daffidill,
You may see, mistress, I am set up by the halves,
Instead of waiting on you, I am sent to drive home calves.

Lance. I faith Frank, I must turn away this Daffidill,
He's grown a very foolish sawcy fellow.

Fran. Indeed-law, father, he was so since I had him :
Before he was wise enough, for a foolish serving-man,

Wea. But what say you to me, Sir Lancelot ?

Lan. O, about my daughters, well I will go forward,
Here's two of them, God save them : but the third,
O she's a stranger on her course of life,
She hath refused you, Master Weathercock,

Wea. I by the Rood, Sir Lancelot, that she hath,
But had she tri'd me, she should a found a man of me in-

Lan. Nay be not angry, sir, at her daniel, (deed.
She hath refus'd seaven of the worshipfull'st and worthiest house-keepers this day in Kent :

Indeed she will not marry I suppose.

Wea. The more fool she.

Lance. What is it folly to love Charity ?

Wea. No, mistake me not, Sir Lancelot,
But 'tis an old proverb, and you know it well,
That women dying maids, lead apes in hell.

Lance. That's a foolish proverb, and a false.

Wea. By the mass, I think it be, and therefore let it go:
But who shall marry with Mistress Frances ?

Fran. By my troth they are talking of marrying me,

Luce. Peace, let them talk : (sister.

Fools may have leave to prattle as they walk.

Daff. Sentences still, sweet Mistress,
You have a wit, and it were your Allablast.

Luce. I faith and thy tongue trips trench-more.

Lance. No of my Knight-hood, not a suter yet:
Alas God help her, silly girle, a fool, a very fool:
But there's the other black-brows a shrewd girle,
She hath wit at will, and suters two or three:

Sir Arthur Green-sheld one, a gallant Knight,
A valiant Souldier, but his power but poor.

Then there's young Oliver, the Devon-shire lad,
A wary fellow, marry full of wit,

And rich by the Rood, but there's a third all aire,
Light as a feather, changing as the wind: young Flower-

Wea. O he, sir, he's a desperate dick indeed. (dale.
Bar him your house.

Lance. Fye, not so, he's of good parentage.

Wea. By my faie and so he is, and a proper man.

Lance. I proper enough, had he good qualities.

Wea. I marry, there's the point, Sir Lancelot :
For there's an old saying,

Be he rich, or be he poor,
Be he high, or be he low :
Be he born in Barn or Hall,
'Tis manners makes the man and all.

Lance. You are in the right, Master Weathercock.

Enter Mounseur Civet.

Civet. Soul, I think I am sure crossed,
Or witcht with an owle, I have haunted them, Inne after Inne, Booth after Booth, yet cannot find them ; ha, yonder they are, that's she, I hope to God 'tis she, nay I know 'tis she now, for she treads her shoos a little awry.

Lance. Where is this Inne ? we are past it, Daffidill.

Daff. The good signe is here, sir, but the black gate is before.

Civet. Save you, sir, I pray may I borrow a piece of a word with you ?

Daff. No pieces, sir.

Civ. Why then the whole.

I pray, sir, what may yonder Gentlewomen be ?

Daff. They may be Ladies, sir, if the destinies and mortality work.

Civ. What's her name, sir.

Daff. Mistress Frances Spurcock, Sir Lancelot Spurcock's daughter.

Civ. Is she a maid, sir ?

Daff. You may ask Pluto, and dame Proserpine that :
I would be loth to be ridelled, sir.

Civ. Is she married I mean, sir ?

Daff. The Fates know not yet what shoos-maker shall make her wedding shoos.

Civ. I pray where Inne you sir ? I would be very glad to bestow the wine of that Gentlewoman.

Daff. At the George, sir.

Civ. God save you, sir.

Daff. I pray your name, sir ?

Civ. My name is Master Civet, sir.

Daff. A sweet name, God be with you, good Master
Civet. Exit Civet.

Lance. A, have we spi'd you stout S. George ?
For all your dragon, you had best sell's good wine :

That needs no Ivy-bush : well, we'll not sit by it,
As you do on your horse, this room shall serve :

Drawer, let me have sack for us old men :

For these girls and knaves small wines are best.

A pinte of Sack, no more.

Draw. A quart of Sack in the three Tuns,

Lance. A pinte, draw but a pinte, Daffidill,
Call for wine to make your selves drink.

Fran. And a cup of small beer, & a cake good Daffidill.

Enter young Flowerdale.

Flow. How now, fie, sir in the open room, now good
Sir Lancelot, and my kind friend, worshipfull Master
Weathercock,

What at your pinte, a quart for shame.

Lan. Nay Royster, by your leave we will away.

Flow. Come, give's some Musick, we'll go dance,
Be gone Sir Lancelot, what, and fair day too ?

Lan. 'Twere fouly done, to dance within the fayr.

Flow. Nay if you say so, fairest of all faires,
Then I'll not dance, a pox upon my Taylor,
He hath spoyl'd me a peach-colour sattin sute,
Cut upon cloth of silver, but if ever the Rascal serve me such another trick, I'll give him leave, i faith, to put me in the calender of fools : and you, and you, Sir Lancelot ;
and Master Weathercock, my gold-smith too on tother side, I bespoke thee, Luce, a carkenet of gold, and thought thou

thou should'st a had it for a Fayring, and the Rogue puts me in rerages for Orient Pearle: but thou shalt have it by Sunday night, wench.

Enter the Drawer.

Draw. Sir, here is one that hath sent you a pottle of rennith wine, brewed with Rose-water.

Flow. To me?

Draw. No, sir, to the Knight; and desires his more acquaintance.

Lance. To me? what's he that proves so kind?

D. ff. I have a trick to know his name, sir, He hath a months mind here to Mistress Frances, his name is Master Civer.

Lance. Call him in, Daffidill.

Flow. O, I know him, sir, he is a fool, But reasonable rich, his father was one of these lease-mongers, these corn-mongers, these mony-mongers, but he never had the wit to be a whore-monger.

Enter Master Civer.

Lau. I promise you, sir, you are at too much charge.

Civ. The charge is small charge, sir, I thank God my father left me where withall, if it please you, sir, I have a great mind to this Gentlewoman here, in the way of marriage.

Lau. I thank you, sir: please you to come to Lewsome to my poor house, you shall be kindly welcome: I knew your father, he was a wary husband: to pay here Drawer.

Draw. All is paid, sir: this Gentleman hath paid all.

Lance. Ifaith you do us wrong, But we shall live to make amends ere long: Master Flowerdale, is that your man?

Flow. Yes faith, a good old knave.

Lance. Nay then I think you will turn wife, Now you take such a servant:

Come, you'll ride with us to Lewsome, let's away, 'Tis scarce two hours to the end of day. Exeunt.

Enter Sir Arthur Green-shood, Oliver, Lieutenant and Souldiers.

Arth. Lieutenant, lead your Souldiers to the ships, There let them have their coats, at their arrival They shall have pay: farewell, look to your charge.

Sol. I, we are now sent away, and cannot so much as speak with our friends.

Oli. No man what ere you used a zutch a fashion, thich you cannot take your leave of your vreens.

Arth. Fellow no more, Lieutenant lead them off.

Sol. Well, if I have not my pay and my cloaths, I'll venture a running away, though I hang for't.

Arth. Away sirrha, charme your tongue.

Exeunt Souldiers.

Oli. Bin you a presser, sir?

Arth. I am a commander, sir, under the King.

Oli. Sfoot man, and you be nere zutch a commander Shud a spoke with my vreens before I chid agone, so shud.

Arth. Content your self man, my authority will stretch to presse so good a man as you.

Oli. Presse me? I devy, presse scoundrels, and thy messels: presse me, chee scorns thee ifaith: For see'st thee, here's a worshipfull knight knows, cham not to be pressed by thee.

Enter Sir Lancelot Weathercock, young Flowerdale, old Flowerdale, Luce, Frank.

Lan. Sir Arthur, welcome to Lewsome, welcome by my What's the matter man, why are you vex? (troth,

Oli. Why man he would presse me.

Lan. Ofie, Sir Arthur, pres's him? he is a man of reckoning.

Wea. I that he is, Sir Arthur, he hath the nobles, The golden suddocks he.

Ar. The fitter for the warrs: and were he not in favour With your worships, he should see, (your That I have power to presse so good as he.

Oli. Chill stand to the triall, so chill,

Flow. I marry shall he, presse-cloath and karsie, White pot and drowfen broth: tut, tut, he cannot.

Oli. Well, sir, though you see vlouten cloth and karsie, chee a zeen zutch a karsie coat wear out the town sick a zilken Jacket, as thich a one you wear.

Flow. Well sed vlitan vlattan.

Oli. A and well sed cocknell, and boe-bell too: what doest think cham aveard of thy zilken coat, no fer vere thee.

Lance. Nay come no more, be all lovers and friends.

Wea. I 'tis best so, good Master Oliver.

Flow. Is your name Master Oliver I pray you?

Oly. What tit and be tit, and grieve you.

Flow. No but I'd gladly know if a man might not have a foolish plot out of Master Oliver to work upon.

Oli. Work thy plots upon me, stand a side, work thy foolish plots upon me, chill so use thee, thou wert never so used since thy dam bound thy head, work upon me?

Flow. Let him come, let him come.

Oli. Zyrtha, zyrtha, if it were not for shame, chee would a given thee zutch a whiffer poop under the ear, chee would have made thee a vanged another at my feet: stand a side let me loose, cham all of a vlaming fire-brand; stand aside.

Flow. Well I forbear you for your friends sake.

Oli. A vig for all my vreens, do'st thou tell me of my vreens?

Lan. No more, good master Oliver, no more, Sir Arthur. And maiden, here in the sight of all your suters, every man of worth, I'll tell you whom I faintest would preferre to the hard bargain of your marriage bed: shall I be plain among you Gentlemen?

Arth. I, sir, 'tis best.

Lance. Then, sir, first to you, I do confesse you a most gallant Knight, a worthy Souldier, and an honest man: but honesty maintains a French-hood, goes very seldome in a Chain of Gold, keeps a small train of servants: hath few friends: and for this wilde oats here, young Flowerdale, I will not judge, God can work myracles, but he were better make a hundred new, then thee a thrifty and an honest one.

Wea. Believe me he hath hit you there, he hath touch-ed you to the quick, that he hath.

Flow. Woodcock a my side, why, Master Weathercock, you know I am honest, howsoever trifles.

Wea. Now by my troth, I know no otherwise, O, your old mother was a dame indeed: Heaven hath her soul, and my wives too I trust: And your good father, honest Gentleman, He is gone a journey as I hear, far hence.

Flow. I God be praised, he is far enough, He is gone a pilgrimage to Paradise. And lest me to cut a caper against care, Luce look on me that am as light aire.

Luce. Ifaith I like not shadows, bubbles, broth, I hate a light a love, as I hate death.

Lance. Girle, hold thee there: look on this Devonshire lad:

Fat, fair, and lovely, both in purse and person.

Oli. Well, sir, cham as the Lord hath made me,

You

You know me well ivin, cha have three-score pack of kaisay, and Blackem hall, and chief credit beside, and my fortunes may be so good as an others, zo it may.

Lance. 'Tis you I love, whatsoever others say?

Arth. Thanks fairest.

Flow. What would'st thou have me quarrel with him?

Fath. Do but say he shall hear from you.

Lan. Yet Gentleman, howsoever I preferre this Devon-shire suter.

I'll enforce no love, my daughter shall have liberty to choose whom she likes best: in your love-sure proceed. Not all of you, but onely one must speed

Wea. You have said well: indeed right well.

Enter Artichook.

Arti. Mistris, here's one would speak with you, my fellow Daffidill hath him in the seller already, he knows him, he met him at Croydon fair.

Lance. O, I remember, a little man.

Arti. I a very little man.

Lance. And yet a proper man.

Arti. A very proper, very little man.

Lance. His name is Mounseur Civet.

Arti. The same, sir.

Lance. Come Gentlemen, if other suters come, My foolish daughter will be fitted too:

But Delia my saint, no man dare move,

Exeunt at all but young Flowerdale and Oliver, and old Flowerdale.

Flow. Hark you, sir, a word.

Oli. What ha an you say to me now?

Flow. Ye shall hear from me, and that very shortly.

Oli. Is that all, vare thee well, chee vere thee not a vig.
Exit Oliver.

Flow. What if should come more? I am fairly drest.

Fath. I do not mean that you shall meet with him, But presently we'll go and draw a Will:

Where we'll set down Land, that we never saw,
And we will have it of so large a sum,
Sir Lancelot shall intreat you take his daughter:
This being formed, give it Master Weathercock,
And make Sir Lancelot's daughter heir of all:
And make him swear never to shew the Will
To any one, untill that you be dead.

This done, the foolish changling Weathercock,
Will straight discourse unto Sir Lancelot,
The forme and tenor of your Testament,
Nor stand to pause of it be rul'd by me:
What will ensue, that shall you quickly see.

Flow. Come let's about it; if that a Will, sweet Kir,
Can get the Wench, I shall renown thy wit.

Exeunt.

Enter Daffidill.

Daff. Mistris, still froward?

No kind looks unto your Daffidill, now by the gods.

Luce. Away you foolish knave, let my hand go.

Daff. There is your hand, but this shall go with me:
My heart is thine, this is my true loves fee.

Luce. I'll have your coat stript o're your ears for this,
You sawey rascal.

Enter Lancelot and Weathercock.

Lance. How now maid, what is the news with you?

Luce. Your man is something sawcie. Exit Luce.

Lance. Go too, sirrha, I'll talk with you anon.

Daff. Sir, I am a man to be talked withall,
I am no horse I tro:

I know my strength, then no more then so.

Wea. A by the matkins, good Sir Lancelot, I saw him the other day hold up the Bucklers, like an Hercules, Ifaith God-a-mercy Lad, I like thee well.

Lan. I like him well, go sirrha, fetch me a cup of wine,
That ere I part with Master Weathercock,
We may drink down our farewell in French wine.

Wea. I thank you, sir, I thank you, friendly Knight,
I'll come and visit you, by the mouse-foot I will:
In the mean time, take heed of cutting Flowerdale,
He is a desperate dick I warrant you,

Lance. He is, he is: fill Daffidill, fill me some wine,
Ha, what wears he on his arme?

My daughter Luces bracelet, I 'tis the same:
Ha to you Master Weathercock,

Wea. I thank you, sir: Here Daffidill, an honest fellow and a tall thou art: well: I'll take my leave, good night, and hope to have you and all your daughters at my poor house, in good sooth I must.

Lance. Thanks Master Weathercock, I shall be bold to trouble you be sure.

Wea. And welcome, heartily farewell. Exit Weath.

Lance. Sirrha, I saw my daughters wrong, and withall her Bracelet on your arme; off with it: and with it my livery too: have I care to see my daughter matched with men of Worship, and are you grown so bold? go, sirrha, from my house, or I'll whip you hence.

Daff. I'll not be whipt, sir, there's your Livery.
This is a Servingmans reward, what care I,
I have means to trust to: I scorn service I.

Exit Daffidill.

Lance. I a lusty knave, but I must let him go,
Our servants must be taught, what they should know.

Enter Sir Arthur and Luce.

Luce. Sir, as I am a maid, I do affect you above any Suter that I have, although that Souldiers scarce know how to love.

Arth. I am a Souldier, and a Gentleman,
Knows what belongs to War, what to a Lady:
What man offends me, that my sword shall right:
What woman loves me, I am her faithfull Knight.

Luce. I neither doubt your valour, nor your love, but there be some that bares a Souldiers forme, that swears by him they never think upon, goes swaggering up and down from house to house, crying God payes: and.

Arth. Ifaith, Lady, I'll descry you such a man,
Of them there be many which you have spoke of,
That bare the name and shape of Souldiers,
Yet God knows very seldome saw the War:
That hant your Taverns, and your ordinaries,
Your Ale-houses sometimes, for all a-like
To uphold the brutish humor of their minds,
Being marked down, for the bondmen of despair:
Their mirth begins in wine, but ends in bloud,
Their drink is clear, but their conceits are mud.

Luce. Yet these are great Gentlemen Souldiers,

Arth. No they are wretched slaves,
Whose desperate lives doth bring them timelesse graves.

Luce. Both for your self, and for your forme of life,
If I may choose, I'll be a Souldiers wife.

Enter Sir Lancelot and Oliver.

Oli. And tyt trust to it, so then.

Lance. Assure your self,
You shall be married with all speed we may:
One day shall serve for Frances and for Luce,

Oli. Why che wood vain know the time, for providing Wedding Rayments.

Lance

Lance. Why no more but this, first get your assurance made touching my daughters Joynter; that dispatched, we will in two daies make provision.

Oli. Why man, chil have the writings made by to-morrow.

Lance. To-morrow be it then, let's meet at the Kings head in Fish-street.

Oli. No, fie man, no, let's meet at the Rose at Temple. That will be nearer your Counsellor and mine. (Bar,

Lance. At the Rose be it then, the hour nine, He that comes last, forfeits a pinte of wine.

Oli. A pinte is no payment, let it be a whole quart, or Enter Artichoak. (nothing.)

Arti. Master, here is a man would speak with Master Oliver, he comes from young Master Flowerdale.

Oli. Why chill speak with him, chill speak with him.

Lance. Nay, son Oliver, I'll surely see, What young Flowerdale hath sent to you. I pray God it be no quarrel.

Oli. Why man, if he quarrel with me, chill give him his hands full.

Fath. God save you, good Sir Lancelot.

Lance. Welcome honest friend.

Enter old Flowerdale.

Fath. To you and yours my Master wisheth health, But unto you, sir, this, and this he sends: There is the length, sir, of his Rapier, And in that paper shall you know his mind.

Oli. Here, chill meet him my friend, chill meet him.

Lance. Meet him, you shall not meet the Ruffin, fie.

Oli. And I do not meet him, chill give you leave to call Me Cut, where is't, sirrha? where is't? where is't?

Fath. The Letter shows both time and place, And if you be a man, then keep your word.

Lan. Sir, he shall not keep his word, he shall not meet.

Fath. Why let him choose, he'll be the better known For a base rascal, and reputed so.

Oli. Zirrha, zirrha: and 'twere not an old fellow, and sent after an arrant, chid give thee something, but chud be no mony: But hold thee, for I see thou art somewhat testorn, hold thee, there's vorty shillings, bring thy Master a veeld, chil give the vorty more, look thou bring him, chill mall him tell him, chil mar his dancing tressels, chil use him, he was nere so used since his dam bound his head, chil make him for capering any more chy vor thee.

Fath. You seem a man, stout and resolute, And I will so report, what ere befall.

Lance. And fall out ill, assure thy Master this, I'll make him fly the Land, or use him worse.

Fath. My Master, sir, deserves not this of you, And that you'll shortly finde.

Lan. Thy Master is an unthrift, you a knave, And I'll attach you first, next clap him up: Or have him bound unto his good behaviour.

Oli. I woud you were a sprite if you do him any harm for this: And you do, chil nere see you, nor any of yours, while chil have eyes open: what do you think, chil be abaffelled up and down the town for a messel, and a scoundrel, no chy bor you: zirrha chil come, zay no more, chil come tell him.

Fath. Well, sir, my Master deserves not this of you, And that you'll shortly finde. Exit.

Oli. No matter, he's an unthrift, I defie him.

Lan. No, gentle son, let me know the place.

Oli. Now chye vor you.

Lan. Let me see the Note.

Oli. Nay, chil watch you for zutch a trick.

But if chee meet him, zo, if not, zo: chil make him know me, or chil know why I shall not, chil vare the waise.

Lan. What will you then neglect my daughters love? Venture your state and hers, for a loose brawl?

Oli. Why man, chil not kill him, marry chil veze him too, and again; and zo God be with you vather. What man we shall meet to-morrow. Exit.

Lan. Who would have thought he had bin so desperate. Come forth my honest servant Artichoak.

Enter Artichoak

Arti. Now, what's the matter? some brawl toward, I warrant you.

Lan. Go get me thy sword bright scowred, thy buckler mended, O for that knave, that villain Daffidill would have done good service. But to thee.

Arti. I, this is the tricks of all you Gentlemen, when you stand in need of a good fellow. O for that Daffidill, O where is he? but if you be angry, and it be but for the wagging of a straw, then out a doors with the knave, turn the coat over his ears. This is the humour of you all.

Lan. O for that knave, that lusty Daffidill.

Arti. Why there 'tis now: our years wages and our vails will scarce pay for broken swards and bucklers that we use in our quarrels. But I'll not fight if Daffidill be a tother side, that's flat.

Lan. 'Tis no such matter man, get weapons ready, and be at London ere the break of day: watch near the lodging of the Devon-shire Youth, but be unseen: and as he goes out, as he will go out, and that very early without doubt.

Arti. What, would you have me draw upon him, As he goes in the street?

Lance. Not for a world man, into the fields: For to the field he goes, there to meet the desperate Flowerdale:

Take thou the part of Oliver my son, for he shall be my And marry Luce: Do'st understand me, knave? (son,

Arti. I, sir, I do understand you, but my young Mistris might be better provided in marching with my fellow Lad. No more; Daffidill is a knave. (Daffidill. That Daffidill is a most notorious knave. Exit.

Enter Weathercock.

Master Weathercock, you come in happy time, The desperate Flowerdale hath writ a Challenge: And who think you must answer it, but the Devon-shire man, my son Oliver.

Wea. Marry I am sorry for it, good Sir Lancelot, But if you will be rul'd by me, we'll stay the fury.

Lance. As how I pray?

Wea. Marry I'll tell you, by promising young Flowerdale the red lipped Luce.

Lan. I'll rather follow her unto her grave.

Wea. I, Sir Lancelot, I would have thought so too, but you and I have been deceived in him, come read this Will, or Deed, or what you call it, I know not: Come, come, your Spectacles I pray.

Lan. Nay, I thank God, I see very well.

Wea. Marry God blesse your eyes, mine hath bin dim almost this thirty years.

Lance. Ha, what is this? what is this?

Wea. Nay there is true love indeed, he gave it to me but this very morn, and bad me keep it unseen from any one, good youth, to see how men may be deceived.

Lan. Passion of me, what a wretch am I to hate this Loving youth, he hath made me, together with my Luce he loves so dear, Executors of all his wealth.

Wea. All,

Wea. All, all, good man, he hath given you all.

Lan. Three ships now in the Straits, & homeward bound,
Two Lordships of two hundred pound a year :
The one in Wales, the other in Gloster-shire .
Debts and accounts are thirty thousand pound,
Plate, Money, Jewels, sixteen thousand more,
Two houses furnished well in Cole-man street :
Beside whatsoever his Uncle leaves to him,
Being of great demeanors and wealth at Peckham.

Wea. How like you this good Knight? how like you this?

Lan. I have done him wrong, but now I'll make amends,
The Devon-shire man shall whistle for a wife,
He marry Luce, Luce shall be Flowerdale's.

Wea. Why that is friendly said, let's ride to London and prevent their match, by promising your daughter to that lovely Lad.

Lance. We'll ride to London, or it shall not need,
We'll cross to Dedford-strand, and take a boat :
Where be these knaves? what Artichoak, what Fop?

Enter Artichoak.

Ar. Here be the very knaves, but not the merry knaves.

Lan. Here take my Cloak, I'll have a walk to Dedford.

Arti. Sir, we have been scouting of our Swords and Bucklers for your defence.

Lance. Defence me no defence, let your swords rust, I'll have no fighting : I, let blows alone, bid Delia see all things be in readiness against the wedding, we'll have two at once, and that will save charges, Master Weather- cock. Arti. Well we will do it sir. Exeunt.

Enter Civet, Frank, and Delia.

Civ. By my troth this is good luck, I thank God for this. In good sooth I have even my hearts desire : sister Delia, now I may boldly call you so, for your father hath frank and freely given me his daughter Franck.

Fran. I by my troth, Tom, thou hast my good will too, for I thank God I longed for a husband, and would I might never stir, for one his name was Tom.

Delia. Why, sister, now you have your wish.

Civ. You say very true, sister Delia, and I prethee call me nothing but Tom : and I'll call thee sweet heart, and Frank : will it not do well sister Delia?

Delia. It will do very well with both of you.

Fran. But Tom, must I go as I do now when I am married?

Civ. No Franck, I'll have thee go like a Citizen
In a garded gown, and a French-hood.

Fran. By my troth that will be excellent indeed.

Delia. Brother, maintain your wife to your estate,
Apparel you your self like to your father :
And let her go like to your ancient mother,
He sparing got his wealth, left it to you,
Brother take heed of pride, some bids thrift adieu.

Civ. So as my father and my mother went, that's a jest indeed, why she went in a fringed gown, a single Ruffe, and a white Cap.

And my father in a mocado coat, a pair of red Sattin
Sleeves, and a Canvis back.

Del. And yet his wealth was all as much as yours.

Civ. My estate, my estate, I thank God, is forty pound a year in good leases and tenements, besides twenty mark a year at Cuckolds-haven, and that comes to us all by inheritance.

Delia. That may indeed, 'tis very fitly plied,
I know not how it comes, but so it falls out
That those whose Fathers have died wondrous rich,
And took no pleasure but to gather wealth,

Thinking of little that they leave behind :
For them they hope, will be of their like minds.
But falls out contrary, forty years sparing
Is scarce three seven years spending, never caring
What will ensue, when all their coyn is gone,
And all to late then Thrift is thought upon :
Oft have I heard, that Pride and Riot kist,
And then repentance cryes, for had I wist.

Civ. You say well, sister Delia, you say well : but I mean to live within my bounds : for look you, I have set down my rest thus far, but to maintain my wife in her French Hood, and her Coach, keep a couple of Geldings, and a brace of Gray-hounds, and this is all I'll do.

Del. And you'll do this with forty pound a year?

Civ. I, and a better penny, sister.

Fran. Sister, you forget that at Cuckolds-Haven.

Civet. By my troth well remembered, Frank,
I'll give thee that to buy thee pinns.

Delia. Keep you the rest for points, alas the day,
Fools shall have wealth, though all the world say nay :
Come, brother, will you in, dinner staies for us.

Civ. I, good sister, with all my heart.

Fran. I by my troth, Tom, for I have a good stomach.

Civ. And I the like, sweet Frank, no sister
Do not think I'll go beyond my bounds.

Delia. God grant you may not.

Exeunt.

Enter young Flowerdale and his Father, with foyles in their hands.

Flow. Sirrha Kis, tarry thou there, I have spied Sir Lancelot, and old Weathercock coming this way, they are hard at hand, I will by no means be spoken withall.

Fath. I'll warrant you, go get you in.

Enter Lancelot and Weathercock.

Lan. Now, my honest friend, thou dost belong to Mr.

Fath. I do, sir. (Flowerdale?)

Lance. Is he within, my good fellow?

Fath. No, sir, he is not within.

Lan. I prethee if he be within, let me speak with him.

Fath. Sir, to tell you true, my Master is within, but indeed would not be spoke withall : there be some termes that stands upon his reputation, therefore he will not admit any conference till he hath shook them off.

Lance. I prithee tell him his very good friend Sir
Lancelot Spurcock, intreats to speak with him.

Fath. By my troth, sir, if you come to take up the matter between my Master and the Devon-shire man, you do but beguile your hopes, and loose your labour.

Lan. Honest friend, I have not any such thing to him,
I come to speak with him about other matters.

Fath. For my Master, sir, hath set down his resolution,
Either to redeem his honor, or leave his life behind him.

Lance. My friend, I do not know any quarrel, touching thy Master or any other person, my business is of a different nature to him, and I prithee so tell him.

Fath. For howsoever the Denon-shire man is, my Ma-
Mind is bloody : that's a round O, (Rers)
And therefore, sir, intreaties is but vain :

Lan. I have no such thing to him, I tell thee once again.

Fath. I will then so signify to him. Exit Fath.

Lance. A sirrha, I see this matter is hotly carried.
But I'll labour to dissuade him from it.

Enter Flowerdale.

Good morrow Master Flowerdale.

Flow. Good morrow, good Sir Lancelot, good morrow, Master Weathercock.

By my troth, Gentlemen, I have been a reading over

Nick

Nick Machivel, I find him
Good to be known, not to be followed :
A pestilent humane fellow, I have made
Certain anations of him such as they be :
And how is't, Sir Lancelot ? ha ? how is't ?
A n ad world, men cannot live quiet in it.

Lan. Master Flowerdale, I do understand there is some Between the Devon-shire man and you. (jar)

Fath. They, sir ? they are good friends as can be.

Flo. Who Master Oliver & I ? as good friends as can be.

La. It is a kind of safety in you to deny it, & a generous Silence, which too few are indued withall : But, sir, such A thing I hear, and I could wish it otherwise.

Flow. No such things, Sir Lancelot, a my reputation,
As I am an honest man.

Lance. Now I do believe you then, if you do
Ingage your reputation there is none.

Flow. Nay I do not ingage my reputation there is not,
You shall not bind me to any condition of hardnesse :
But if there be any thing between us, then there is,
If there be not, then there is not : be, or be not, all is one.

Lance. I do perceive by this, that there is something between you, and I am very sorry for it.

Flow. You may be deceived, Sir Lancelot, the Italian
Hath a pretty saying, Questo ? I have forgot it too,
'Tis out of my head, but in my translation
If it hold thus, thou hast a friend, keep him ; If a foe trip him.

Lan. Come, I do see by this there is somewhat between
And before God I could wish it otherwise. (you,

Flow. Well what is between us, can hardly be altered :
Sir Lancelot, I am to ride forth to morrow,
That way which I must ride, no man must deny
Me the Sun, I would not by any particular man,
Be denied common and general passage. If any one
Saith Flowerdale, thou passest not this way :
My answer is, I must either on or return,
But return is not my word, I must on :
If I cannot, then make my way, nature
Hath done the last for me, and there's the fine.

Lan. Mr. Flowerdale, every man hath one tongue,
And two ears, nature in her building,
Is a most curious work-master.

Flow. That is as much to say, a man should hear more
Then he should speak.

Lan. You say true, and indeed I have heard more,
Then at this time I will speak.

Flow. You say well.

Lan. Slanders are more common then troths Master
But proof is the rule for both. (Flowerdale :

Flow. You say true, what do you call him
Hath it there in his third canton ?

Lan. I have heard you have bin wild : I have believ'd it.

Flow. 'Twas fit, 'twas necessary.

Lance. But I have seen somewhat of late in you,
That hath confirmed in me an opinion of Goodnesse toward you.

Flow. Ifaith sir, I am sure I never did you harme :
Some good I have done, either to you or yours,
I am sure you know not, neither is it my will you should.

Lance. I, your will, sir.

Flow. I my will, sir : 'sfoot do you know ought of my Begod and you do, sir, I am abused. (will,

Lan. Go Mr. Flowerdale, what I know I know :
And know you thus much out of my knowledge,
That I truly love you. For my daughter,
She's yours. And if you like a marriage better

Then a brawl, all quirks of reputation set aside, go with me presently : And where you should fight a bloudy battle, you shall be married to a lovely Lady.

Flow. Nay but, Sir Lancelot ?

Lan. If you will not imbrace my offer, yet assure your self thus much, I will have order to hinder your encounter.

Flow. Nay but hear me, Sir Lancelot.

Lance. Nay stand not you upon imputative honor,
'Tis meerly unsound, unprofitable, and idle :
Inferences your businesse is to wedde my daughter, therefore give me your present word to do it, I'll go and provide the maid, therefore give me your present resolution, either now or never.

Flow. Will you so put me to it ?

Luce. I a fore God, either take me now, or take me never.
Else what I thought should be our match, shall be our part-
So fare you well for ever. (ing,

Flow. Stay : fall out, what may fall, my love
Is above all : I will come.

Lance. I expect you, and so fare you well.

Exit Sir Lancelot.

Fath. Now, sir, how shall we do for wedding apparel ?

Flow. By the Mass that's true : now help Kir,
The marriage ended, we'll make amends for all.

Fath. Well, no more, prepare you for your Bride,
We will not want for cloaths, what so ere betide.

Flow. And thou shalt see, when once I have my Dower,
In mirth we'll spend,
Full many a merry hour :

As for this wench, I not regard a pin,
It is her gold must bring my pleasures in.

Fath. Is't possible, he hath his second living,
Forfaking God, himself to the devil giving :
But that I knew his modier firme and chaste,
My heart would say, my head she had disgrac't :
Else would I swear, he never was my son,
But her fair mind, so foul a deed did shun.

Enter Uncle.

Unc. How now, brother, how do you find your son ?

Fath. O brother, heedlesse as a libertine,
Even grown a Master in the School of Vice,
One that doth nothing, but invent deceit :
For all the day he humours up and down,
How he the next day might deceive his friend,
He thinks of nothing but the present time :
For one groat ready down, he'll pay a shilling,
But then the lender must needs stay for it.
When I was young, I had the scope of youth,
Both wild, and wanton, carelesse and desperate :
But such mad strains, as he's possest withall,
I thought it wonder for to dream upon.

Unc. I told you so, but you would not believe it.

Fath. Well I have found it, but one thing comforts me
Brother, to morrow he's to be married
To beauteous Luce, Sir Lancelot Sparcocks daughter.

Unc. Is't possible ?

Fath. 'Tis true, and thus I mean to curb him,
This day, brother, I will you shall arrest him :
If any thing will tame him, it must be that,
For he is rank in mischief, chained to a life,
That will increase his shame, and kill his wife.

Unc. What arrest him on his wedding day ?
That were unchristian, and an unhumane part :
How many couple even for that very day,
Hath purchast seven years sorrow afterward :

Forbear, him then to day, do it to morrow,
And this day mingle not his joy with sorrow.

Fath. Brother, I'll have it done this very day,
And in the view of all, as he comes from Church:
Do but observe the course that he will take,
Upon my life he will forswear the debt:
And for we'll have the sum shall not be slight,
Say that he owes you neer three thousand pound:
Good brother let it be done immediately.

Unc. Well, seeing you will have it so,
Brother I'll do't, and straight provide the Sheriff.

Fath. So brother, by this means shall we perceive
What Sir Lancelot in this pinch will do:
And how his wife doth stand affected to him,
Her love will then be tried to the uttermost:
And all the rest of them. Brother, what I will do,
Shall harm him much, and much avail him too. Exit.

Oli. Cham assured thick be the place, that the scoundrel
Appointed to meet me, if a come, zo: if a come not, zo.
And che war avise, he would make a Coystrel an us,
Ched vese him, and che vang him in hand, che would Hoyst him, and give it him too and again, zo chud:
Who bin a there, Sir Arthur, chill stay aside.

Ar. I have dog'd the Devon-shire man into the field,
For fear of any harme that should befall him:
I had an inkling of that yesternight,
That Flowerdale and he should meet this motning:
Though of my soul, Oliver fears him not,
Yet for I'd see fair play on eicher side,
Made me to come, to see their valours tri'd.
Good morrow to Master Oliver.

Oli. God an good morrow.

Arth. What Master Oliver, are you angry?

Oli. What an it be, tyt and grieven you?

Arth. Not me at all, sir, but I imagine
By your being here thus armed,
You stay for some that you should fight withall.

Oli. Why and he do, che would not dezire you to take his part.

Arth. No by my troth, I think you need it not,
For he you look for, I think means not to come.

Oli. No, and che war assure of that, ched avese him in another place. Enter Daffidill.

Daff. O, Sir Arthur, Master Oliver, aye me,
Your Love, and yours, and mine, sweet Mistris Luce,
This morning is married to young Flowerdale.

Arth. Married to Flowerdale! 'tis impossible.

Oli. Married man? che hope thou do'st but jest:
To make an a volowten merriment of it.

Daff. O'tis too true. Here comes his Uncle.

Enter Flowerdale, Sheriff, Officers.

Unc. Good morrow, Sir Arthur, good morrow, M. Oliv.

Oli. God and good morn, M. Flowerdale. I pray tellen
Is your scoundrel kinsman married? (us,

Ar. M. Oliver, call him what you will, but he is married
To Sir Lancelot's daughter here.

Unc. Sir Arthur, unto her?

Oli. I, ha the old yellow zerved me thick a trick?
Why man, he was a promise, chill chud a had her,
Is a zitch a vox, chill look to his water che vor him.

Unc. The musick playes; they are coming from the Church.

Sheriff, do your office: fellows, stand stoutly to it.

Enter all to the Wedding.

Oli. God give you joy, as the old zaid Proverb is, and some zorrow among. You met us well, did you not?

Lance. Nay, be not angry, sir, the fault is in me,
I have done all the wrong, kept him from coming to the field to you, as I might, sir, for I am a Justice, and sworn to keep the peace.

Wea. I marry is he, sir, a very Justice, and sworn to keep the peace, you must not disturb the weddings.

Lan. Nay, never frown nor storm, sir, if you do,
I'll have an order taken for you.

Oli. Well, well, chill be quiet.

Wea. M. Flowerdale, Sir Lancelot, look you who here is?
M. Flowerdale.

Lance. M. Flowerdale, welcome with all my heart.

Flow. Uncle, this is the ifaith: Master Under-Sheriff.
Arrest me? at whose sute? draw Kit.

Unc. At my sute, sir.

Lan. Why what's the matter, M. Flowerdale?

Unc. This is the matter, sir, this unthrift here,
Hath cozened you, and hath had of me,
In several sums three thousand pound.

Flow. Why, Uncle, Uncle.

Vnc. Cousin, Cousin, you have Uncled me;
And if you be not staid, you'll prove
A cozoner unto all that know you,

Lance. Why, sir, suppose he be to you in debt
Ten thousand pound, his state to me appears,
To be at least three thousand by the year.

Vnc. O, sir, I was too late informed of that plot,
How that he went about to cozen you:

And form'd a will, and sent it to your good Friend there Master Weathercock, in which was Nothing true, but brags and lies.

Lan. Ha, hath he not such Lordships, Lands, and Ships?

Vnc. Not worth, a groat, nor worth a half-penny he.

Lance. I pray tell us true, be plain, young Flowerdale.

Lan. My Uncle here's mad, & disposed to do me wrong,
But here's my man, an honest fellow

By the Lord, and of good credit, knows all is true.

Fath. Not I, sir, I am too old to lie, I rather know
You forg'd a will, where every line you writ,
You studied where to coat your Lands might lye.

Wea. And I prithee, where be thy honest friends?

Fath. Ifaith no where, sir, for he hath none at all.

Wea. Benedicity, we are ore reached I believe.

Lan. I am cozen'd, and my hopefull'st child undone.

Flow. You are not cozen'd, nor is she undone,
They slander me, by this light, they slander me:
Look you, my Uncle here's an Usurer, & would undo me,
But I'll stand in Law, do you but bail me, you shall do no more:

You, brother Civet, and Master Weathercock, do but Bail me, and let me have my marriage money
Paid me, and we'll ride down, and there your own
Eyes shall see, how my poor Tenants there will welcome
You shall but bail me, you shall do no more, (me.
And you greedy gnat, their bail will serve.

Unc. I sir, I'll ask no better bail.

Lan. No, sir, you shall not take my bail, nor his,
Nor, my son Civers, I'll not be cheated, I,
Sheriff, take your prisoner, I'll not deal with him:
Let's Uncle make false Dice with his false bones,
I will not have to do with him: mocked, gull'd, & wrong'd.
Come Girl, though it be late it falls out well,
Thou shalt not live with him in beggars hell.

Lnc. He is my Husband, and high heaven doth know,
With what unwillingness I went to Church,
But you enforced me, you compelled me to it:

The holy Church-man pronounc'd these words but now,
I must not leave my Husband in distresse:

Now I must comfort him, not go with you.

Lance. Comfort a cozener? on my curse forsake him:

Luc. This day you caused me on your curse to take him:

Do not I pray my grieved soul oppress,

God knows my heart doth bleed at his distresse.

Lan. O M. Weathercock, I must confess I forc'd her to Lied with opinion his false will was true. (this match.

Wea. A, he hath over-reached me too.

Lan. She might have liv'd like Delia, in a happy Vir-gins state.

Delia. Father, be patient, sorrow comes too late.

Lance. And on her knees she begg'd and did entreat,
If she must needs taste a sad marriage life,
She craved to be Sir Arthur Greensheild's Wife.

Ar. You have done her and me the greater wrong.

Lance. O take her yet.

Arthur. Not I.

Lanc. Or M. Oliver, accept my Child, and half my wealth is yours.

Oli. No, sir, chill break no Lawes.

Luce. Never fear, she will not trouble you.

Delia. Yet, sister, in this passion doe not run headlong to confusion. You may affect him, though not follow him.

Frank. Doe, sister, hang him, let him go.

Wea. Doe faith, Mistress Luce, leave him.

Luc. You are three grosse fooles, let me alone,
I swear I'll live with him in all moan.

Oli. But an he have his Legs at liberty,
Cham aveard he will never live with you.

Art. I, but he is now in hucksters handling for running away.

Lanc. Huswife, you hear how you and I am wrong'd, and if you will redresse it yet you may:

But if you stand on tearmes to follow him,

Never come near my sight, nor look on me,

Call me not Father, look not for a Groat,

For all the portion I will this day give Unto thy sister Frances.

Fran. How say you to that, Tom? I shall have a good Besides I'll be a good Wife, and a good Wife (deale,
Is a good thing I can tell.

Civ. Peace, Franck, I would be sorry to see thy sister
Cast away, as I am a Gentleman.

Lance. What, are you yet resolved?

Luc. Yes, I am resolved.

Lanc. Come then away, or now, or never come.

Luc. This way I turn, go you unto your feast,
And I to weep, that am with grief oppress.

Lanc. For ever flie my sight: come, Gentlemen,
Let's in, I'll help you to far better Wives then her.

Delia, upon my blessing talk not to her,

Base Baggage, in such haste to beggery?

Unc. Sheriffe, take your prisoner to your charge.

Flo. Uncle, be-god you have us'd me very hardly,
By my troth, upon my wedding Day.

Exeunt all: young Flowerdale, his Father, Uncle, Sheriffe, and Officers.

Luc. O, M. Flowerdale, but hear me speak,
Stay but a little while, good M. Sheriffe,
If not for him, for my sake pittie him:
Good sir, stop not your eares at my complaint,

My voyce growes weak, for womens words are faint.

Flo. Look you, she kneeles to you.

Unc. Fair maid, for you, I love you with my heart,
And grieve, sweet soul, thy fortune is so bad,
That thou should'st match with such a gracelesse Youth,
Go to thy Father, think not upon him,
Whom Hell hath mark'd to be the son of shame.

Luc. Impute his wildnesse, sir, unto his youth,
And think that now is the time he doth repent:

Alas, what good or gain can you receive,

To imprison him that nothing hath to pay?

And where nought is, the King doth lose his due,

O pittie him as God shall pittie you.

Unc. Lady, I know his humours all too well,
And nothing in the world can doe him good,
But misery it self to chain him with.

Luc. Say that your debts were paid, then is he free?

Unc. I, Virgin, that being answered, I have done.

But to him that is all as impossible,

As I to scale the high Piramidies.

Sheriffe, take your Prisoner, Maiden, fare thee well.

Luc. O go not yet, good M. Flowerdale:

Take my word for the debt, my word, my bond.

Flo. I, by God, Uncle, and my bond too.

Luc. Alas, I ne're ought nothing but I paid it;

And I can work, alas, he can doe nothing:

I have some friends perhaps will pittie me,

His chiefeest friends doe seek his misery.

All that I can, or beg, get, or receive,

Shall be for you: O doe not turn away:

Me thinks within a face so reverent,

So well experienced in this tottering world,

Should have some feeling of a maidens grief:

For my sake, his Fathers and your Brothers sake,

I, for your souls sake that doth hope for joy,

Pittie my state, doe not two soules destroy.

Unc. Fair maid, stand up, not in regard of him,

But in pittie of thy haplesse choyce,

I doe release him: M. Sheriffe, I thank you:

And Officers, there is for you to drink.

Here, maid, take this money, there is a hundred Angels;

And for I will be sure he shall not have it,

Here, Kester, take it you, and use it sparingly,

But let not her have any want at all.

Dry your eyes, Niece, doe not too much lament

For him, whose life hath been in riot spent:

If well he useth thee, he gets him friends,

If ill, a shamefull end on him depends.

Exit Vncle.

Flo. A plague go with you for an old fornicator:

Come, Kit, the money, come, honest Kit.

Fath. Nay by my faith, sir, you shall pardon me.

Flo. And why, sir, pardon you? give me the money,
You old Rascall, or I shall make you.

Luc. Pray hold your hands, give it him honest friend.

Fath. If you be so content, withall my heart.

Flo. Content, sir, 'sblood she shall be content

Whether she will or no. A rattle-baby come to follow me?

Go, get you gone to the greasie chuffe your Father,

Bring me your Dowry, or never look on me.

Fath. Sir, she hath forlook her Father, and all her friends for you.

Flo. Hang thee, her friends and Father altogether.

Fath. Yet part with something to provide her lodging.

Flo. Yes, I mean to part with her and you, but if I part with one Angel, hang me at a poste. I'll rather throw throw them at a cast at Dice, as I have done a thousand of their fellowes.

Fath. Nay then I will be plain degenerate, boy, Thou hadst a Father would have been ashamed.

Flow. My Father was an Ass, an old Ass.

Fath. Thy Father? proud licentious villain: What are you at your foyles? I'll foyle with you.

Luce. Good sir, forbear him.

Fath. Did not this whining woman hang on me, I'de teach thee what it was to abuse thy Father: Gohang, beg, starve, Dice, Game, that when all is gone Thou may'st after despaire and hang thy self.

Luce. O doe not curse him.

Fath. I doe not curse him, and to pray for him were It grieves me that he beares his Fathers name. (vain,

Flow. Well, you old Rascall, I shall meet with you: Sirrah, get you gone, I will not strip the livery Over your eares, because you paid for it:

But doe not use my name, sirrah, doe you hear? look you Use my name, you were best. (doe not

Fath. Pay me the twenty pound then that I lent you, Or give me security when I may have it.

Flow. I'll pay thee not a penny, and for security, I'll give thee none.

Minckins, look you doe not follow me, look you doe not: If you doe, Beggar, I shall slit your nose.

Luce. Alas, what shall I doe?

Flow. Why turn whore, that's a good trade, And so perhaps I'll see thee now and then.

Exit Flowerdale.

Luce. Alas-the-day that ever I was born.

Fath. Sweet Mistresse, doe not weep, I'll stick to you.

Luce. Alas, my friend, I know not what to doe, My Father and my friends, they have despised me: And I a wretched Maid, thus cast away, Knows neither where to go, nor what to say.

Fath. It grieves me at the soul, to see her teares Thus stain the crimson Roses of her cheeks:

Lady, take comfort, doe not mourn in vain, I have a little living in this Town,

The which I think comes to a hundred pound, All that and more shall be at your dispose;

I'll strait go help you to some strange disguise, And place you in a service in this Town:

Where you shall know all, yet your self unknown: Come grieve no more, where no help can be had, Weep not for him, that is more worse then bad.

Luce. I thank you, sir.

Enter Sir Lancelot, Master Weathercock and them.

Oli. Well, cha a bin zerved many a sluttish trick, But such a terripoop as thick ych was ne're a farved.

Lance. Son Civet, Daughter Frances, bear with me, You see how I am pressed down with inward grief, About that lucklesse Girl, your sister Luce: But 'tis saln out with me, as with many families beside, They are most unhappy, that are most beloved,

Civ. Father, 'tis so, 'tis even saln out so, But what remedy? set hand to your heart, and let it pass: Here is your Daughter Frances and I, and we'll not say, We'll bring forth as witty Children, but as pretty Children as ever she was: tho she had the prick And praise for a pretty wench: But, Father, done is The mouse, you'll come?

Lance. I, son Civet, I'll come.

Civ. And you, Master Oliver?

Oli. I, for che a vext out this veast, chill see if a gar

Make a better veast there.

Civ. And you, Sir Arthur?

Ar. I, sir, although my heart be full, I'll be a partner at your wedding scaft.

Civ. And welcome all indeed, and welcome, come, Franck, are you ready?

Fran. Jeshue how hasty these Husbands are, I pray, Father, pray to God to blesse me.

Lance. God blesse thee, and I doe: God make thee Send you both joy, I wish it with wet eyes. (wise, Fran. But, Father, shall not my sister Delia go along with us?

She is excellent good at Cookery, and such things.

Lance. Yes marry shall she: Delia, make you ready.

Delia. I am ready, sir, I will first go to Greenwich, From thence to my Cousin Chesterfield, and so to London.

Civ. It shall suffice, good sister Delia, it shall suffice, But fail us not, good sister, give order to Cooks, and o- For I would not have my sweet Franck (thers, To soile her fingers.

Fran. No by my troth not I, a Gentlewoman, and a married Gentlewoman too, to be companions to Cooks, And Kitchen-boyes, not I, ifaith, I scorn that.

Civ. Why, I doe not mean thou shalt, sweet heart, Thou seest I doe not go about it: well, farewell too: You, Gods pittie M. Weathercock, we shall have your company too?

Wea. Withall my heart, for I love good cheer.

Civ. Well, God be with you all, come, Franck,

Fra. God be with you, Father, God be with you, sir Arthur, Master Oliver, and Master Weathercock, Sister, God be with you all: God be with you, Father, God be with you every one.

Wea. Why, how now, Sir Arthur? all a most, Ma- ster Oliver, how now man?

Cheerely, sir Lancelot, and merily say, Who can hold that will away.

Lance. I, she is gone indeed, poor Girl, undone, But when these be self-willed, children must smart.

Ar. But, sir, that she is wronged, you are the chiefeest Therefore 'tis reason you redresse her wrong. (cause,

Wea. Indeed you must, Sir Lancelot, you must.

Lance. Must? who can compell me, M. Weathercock? I hope I may doe what I list.

Wea. I grant you may, you may do what you list.

Oli. Nay, but and you be well evisen, it were not good, By this vrapolnesse, and vrowardnesse, to cast away As pretty a dowffabell, as am chould chance to see In a summers day: chill tell you what chall doe, Chill go spy up and down the Town, and see if I Can hear any tale or tidings of her, And take her away from thick a messell, vor cham Ashured, heel but bring her to the spoile, And so var you well, we shall meet at your son Civets.

Lance. I thank you, sir, I take it very kindly.

Art. To find her out, I'll spend my dearest blood. Exit both.

So well I loved her, to affect her good.

Lance. O, Master Weathercock, what hap had I, to force my Daughter.

From Master Oliver, and this good Knight? To one that hath no goodnesse in his thought.

Wea. Ill luck, but what remedy?

Lance. Yes, I have almost devised a remedy, Young Flowerdale is shure a prisoner.

Wea.

Wea. Shure, nothing more shure.

Lance. And yet perhaps his Unkle hath releas'd him.

Wea. It may be very like, no doubt he hath.

Lance. Well if he be in prison, i'll have warrants To tache my daughter till the law be tried, For I will shue him upon cozenage.

Wea. Marry may you, and overthrow him too.

Lance. Nay that's not so; I may chance be scott, And sentence past with him.

Wea. Believe me, so he may, therefore take heed.

Lance. Well howsoever, yet I will have warrants, In prison, or at liberty, all's one:

You will help to serve them, master Weathercock?

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Flowerdale.

Flow. A plague of the devil, the devil take the dice, The dice, and the devil, and his damme go together: Of all my hundred golden angels, I have not left me one denier:

A pox of come a five, what shall I doe?

I can borrow no more of my credit:

There's not any of my acquaintance, man, nor boy, But I have borrowed more or lesse of:

I would I knew where to take a good purse, And go clear away, by this light I'll venture for it, Gods lid my sister Delia, I'll rob her, by this hand.

Enter Delia and Artichoake.

Delia. I prethee, Artichoake, goe not so fast, The weather is hot, and I am something weary.

Art. Nay I warrant you, mistress Delia, I'll not tire you With leading, we'll go an extream inoderate pace.

Flow. Stand, deliver your purse.

Art. O Lord, thieves, thieves.

Exit Artichoake.

Flow. Come, come, your purse Lady, your purse.

Delia. That voice I have heard often before this time, What, brother Flowerdale become a thiefe?

Flow. I, a plague ont, I thank your father; But sister, come, your money, come:

What the world must find me, I am borne to live, 'Tis not a sin to steal, when none will give.

Delia. O God, is all grace banisht from thy heart, Think of the shame that doth attend this fact.

Flow. Shame me no shames, come give me your purse, I'll bind you, sister, least I fare the worse.

Delia. No, bind me not, hold, there is all I have, And would that money would redeem thy shame.

Enter Oliver, Sir Arthur, and Artichoake.

Arti. Thieves, thieves, thieves. (Delia,

Oli. Thieves, where man? why how now, mistress Ha you a liked to bin a robbed?

Delia. No, master Oliver, 'tis master Flowerdale, he did but jest with me.

Oli. How, Flowerdale, that scoundrell? sirrah, you meten us well, vang the that.

Flow. Well, sir, I'll not meddle with you, because I have a charge.

Delia. Here, brother Flowerdale, I'll lend you this same money.

Flow. I thank you, sister.

Oli. I wad you were ysplitt, and you let the mezell have a penny;

But since you cannot keep it, chil keep it my self.

Art. 'Tis pity to relieve him in this sort,

Who makes a triumphant life his dayly sport.

Delia. Brother, you see how all men censure you, Farewell, and I pray God amend your life.

Oli. Come, chil bring you along, and you safe enough From twenty such scoundrells as thick an one is, Farewell and be hanged, zyrrah, as I think so thou Wilt be shortly, come, sir Arthur.

Exit all but Flowerdale.

Flow. A plague go with you for a karsie rascall: This Devonshire man I think is made all of Pork, His hands made onely for to heave up packs: His heart as fat and big as his face, As differing far from all brave gallant minds, As I to serve the Hogs, and drink with Hindes, As I am very near now: well what remedie, When money, means, and friends, do grow so small, Then farewell life, and there's an end of all.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Father, Luce like a Dutch Frow, Civet, and his wife mistress Frances.

Civ. By my troth God a mercy for this, good Christie I thank thee for my maid, I like her very well, (stopher, How doest thou like her, Frances?

Fran. In good sadnes, Tom, very well, excellent well, She speaks so prettily, I pray what's your name?

Luce. My name, forsooth, be called Tanikin.

Fran. By my troth a fine name: O Tanikin, you are excellent for dressing one head a new fashion.

Luce. Me fall doe every ting about da head.

Civ. What Countrey woman is she, Kester?

Fath. A Dutch woman, sir.

Civ. Why then she is outlandish, is she not?

Fath. I, Sir, she is.

Fran. O then thou canst tell how to help me to cheeks and ears?

Luce. Yes, mistress, very vell.

Fath. Cheeks and ears, why, mistress Frances, want you cheeks and ears? me thinks you have very fair ones.

Fran. Thou art a fool indeed, Tom, thou knowest what I mean.

Civ. I, I, Kester, 'tis such as they wear a their heads, I prethee, Kit, have her in, and shew her my house.

Fath. I will, sir, come Tanikin.

Fran. O Tom, you have not buffed me to day, Tom.

Civ. No Frances, we must not kisse afore folkes, God save my Franck, Enter Delia, and Artichoak.

See yonder, my sister Delia is come, welcome, good sister.

Fran. Welcome, good sister, how do you like the tire of my head?

Delia. Very well, sister.

Civ. I am glad you're come, sister Delia, to give order for Supper, they will be here soon.

Arti. I, but if good luck had not served, she had Not bin here now, filching Flowerdale had like

To pepper'd us, but for master Oliver, we had bin robbed, Delia. Peace, sirrah, no more.

Fath. Robbed I by whom?

Arti. Marry by none but by Flowerdale, he is turned thiefe.

Civ. By my faith, but that is not well, but God be For your escape, will you draw near, sister? (praised

Fath. Sirrah, come hither, would Flowerdale, he that was my master, a robbed you, I prethee tell me true?

Arti. Yes ifaith, even that Flowerdale, that was thy master.

Fath. Hold

Fath. Hold thee, there is a French Crown, and speak no more of this.

Arti. Not I, not a word, now do I smell knavery: In every purse Flowerdale takes, he is halfe: And gives me this to keep counsel, not a word I.

Fath. Why God a mercy.

Fran. Sister, look here, I have a new Dutch maid, And she speaks so fine, it would do your heart good.

Civ. How do you like her, sister?

Del. I like your maid well.

Civ. Well, dear sister, will you draw near, and give directions for supper, guesse will be here presently.

Del. Yes, brother, lead the way, I'll follow you.

Exit all but Delia and Luce.

Hark you, Dutch Frow, a word.

Luce. Vat is your villwit me?

Del. Sister Luce, 'tis not your broken language, Nor this same habit, can disguise your face From I that know you: pray tell me, what means this?

Luce. Sister, I see you know me, yet be secret: This borrowed shape that I have tane upon me, Is but to keep my self a space unknown, Both from my father, and my nearest friends: Untill I see how time will bring to passe, The desperate course of Master Flowerdale.

Del. O he is worse then bad, I prithee leave him, And let not once thy heart to think on him.

Luce. Do not perswade me once to such a thought, Imagine yet, that he is worse then nought: Yet one lovers time may all that ill undo, That all his former life did run into.

Therefore, kind sister, do not disclose my estate, If e're his heart doth turn, 'tis n'ere too late.

Del. Well, seeing no counsel can remove your mind, I'll not disclose you, that art wilfull blind.

Luc. Delia, I thank you, I now must please her eyes, My sister Frances, neither fair nor wise. Exeunt.

Enter Flowerdale solus.

Flow. On goes he that knows no end of his journey, I have passed the very utmost bounds of shifting, I have no course now but to hang my self: I have lived since yesterday two a clock, of a Spice-cake I had at a burial: and for drink, I got it at an Ale-house among Porters, such as Will bear out a man, if he have no mony indeed. I mean out of their companies, for they are men Of good carriage. Who comes here? The two Cony-catchers, that won all my mony of me. I'll trie if they'll lend me any.

Enter Dick and Rafe

What, M. Richard, how do you? How do'st thou, Rafe? By God, gentlemen, the world Grows bare with me, will you do as much as lend Me an Angel between you both, you know you Won a hundred of me the other day.

Raf. How, an Angel? God damn us if we lost not every Penny within an hour after thou wert gone.

Flow. I prithee lend me so much as will pay for my supper, I'll pay you again, as I am a Gentleman.

Rafe. Ifaith, we have not a farthing, not a mite:

I wonder at it, M. Flowerdale, You will so carelessly undo your self: Why you will lose more money in an hour, Then any honest man spends in a year; For shame betake you to some honest Trade, And live not thus so like a Vagabond.

Exit both.

Flow. A Vagabond indeed, more villains you: They gave me counsel that first cozen'd me: Those Devils first brought me to this I am, And being thus, the first that do me wrong. Well, yet I have one friend left in store. Not far from hence there dwells a Cokatrice, One that I first put in a Sattin gown, And not a tooth that dwells within her head, But stands me at the least in twenty pound: Her will I visit now my Coyn is gone, And as I take it here dwells the Gentlewoman. What ho, is Mistris Apricock within?

Enter Ruffin.

Ruff. What sawcie Rascal is that which knocks so bold, O, is it you, old spend-thrift? are you here? One that is turned Cozener about the town: My Mistris saw you, and sends this word by me, Either be packing quickly from the door, Or you shall have such a greeting sent you straight, As you will little like on, you had best be gone.

Flow. Why so, this is as it should be, being poor, Thus art thou served by a vile painted whore. Well, since thy damned crew do so abuse thee, I'll try of honest men, how they will use me.

Enter an ancient Citizen.

Sir, I beseech you to take compassion of a man, One whose Fortunes have been better then at this instant they seem to be: but If I might crave of you so much little portion, as would bring me to my friends, I should rest thankfull, untill I had requited so great a curse.

Citiz. Fie, fie, young man, this course is very bad, Too many such have we about this City; Yet for I have not seen you in this sort, Nor noted you to be a common beggar, Hold, there's an Angel to bear your charges, Down, go to your friends, do not on this depend, Such bad beginnings oft have worser ends. Exit Cit.

Flow. Worser ends: nay, if it fall out No worse then in old Angels I care not, Nay, now I have had such a fortunate beginning, I'll not let a six-penny-purse escape me: By the Masse, here comes another.

Enter a Citizens wife with a torch before her.

God blesse you, fair Mistris. Now would it please you, Gentlewoman to look into the wants of a poor Gentleman, a younger brother, I doubt not but God will treble restore it back again, one that never before this time demanded penny, half-penny, nor farthing.

Cit. Wife. Stay Alexander, now by troth a very proper man, and 'tis great pittie: hold, my friend, there's all the money I have about me, a couple of shillings, and God blesse thee.

Flow. Now God thank you, sweet Lady: if you have any friend, or Garden-house, where you may employ a poor Gentleman as your friend, I am yours to command in all secret service.

Citiz. W. I thank you, good friend, I prithee let me see that again I gave thee, there is one of them a brasse shilling, give me them, and here is half a crown in gold.

He gives it her.

Now out upon thee, Rascal, secret service: what dost thou make of me? it were a good deed to have thee whipt:

whipt : now I have my money again, I'll see thee hanged before I give thee a penny : secret service : on good Alexander.
Exit both.

Flow. This is villainous luck, I perceive dishonesty Will not thrive : here comes more, God forgive me, Sir Arthur, and M. Oliver, aforegod, I'll speak to them, God save you, Sir Arthur : God save you, M. Oliver.

Oli. Bin you there, zirrha, come will you ytaken your self To your tools, Coyttrel ?

Flow. Nay, M. Oliver, I'll not fight with you, Alas, sir, you know it was not my doings, It was onely a plot to get Sir Lancelot's daughter : By God, I never meant you harme.

Oli. And where is the Gentlewoman thy wife, Mezel ? Where is she, Zirrha, ha ?

Flow. By my troth, M. Oliver, sick, very sick ; And God is my Judge, I know not what means to make for her, good Gentlewoman.

Oli. Tell me true, is she sick ? tell me true itch wife thee.

Flow. Yes faith, tell you true : M. Oliver, if you would do me the small kindnesse, but to lend me forty shillings : So God help me, I will pay you so soon as my ability shall make me able, as I am a Gentleman.

Oli. Well, thou zaist thy wife is zick : hold, there's vorty shillings, gived it to thy wife, look thou give it her, or I shall zo veze thee, thou wert not zo vezed this zeven year, look to it.

Arth. Ifaith, M. Oliver, it is in vain To give to him that never thinks of her.

Oli. Well, would che could yvind it.

Flow. I tell you true, Sir Arthur, as I am a gentleman.

Oli. Well, farewell zirrha : come, Sir Arthur.
Exit both.

Flow. By the Lord, this is excellent. Five golden Angels compast in an hour, If this trade hold, I'll never seek a new. Welcome sweet gold, and beggery adieu.

Enter Uncle and Father.

Unc. See, Kesler, if you can find the house.

Flow. Whose here, my Uncle, and my man Kesler ? By the Masse 'tis they.

How do you, Uncle, how do'st thou, Kesler ?

By my troth, Uncle, you must needs lend

Me some money, the poor Gentlewoman

My wife, so God help me, is very sick,

I was rob'd of the hundred Angels

You gave me, they are gone.

Unc. I, they are gone indeed, come, Kesler, away.

Flow. Nay, Uncle, do you here ? good Uncle.

Unc. Out Hypocrite, I will not hear thee speak, Come leave him, Kesler.

Flow. Kesler, honest Kesler.

Fath. Sir, I have nought to say to you, Open the door to my kin, thou had'st best Lockt fast, for there's a false knave without.

Flow. You are an old lying Rascal, So you are.

Exit both.

Enter Luce.

Luce. Vat is de matter, Vat be you, yonker ?

Flow. By this light a Dutch Frow, they say they are Kind, by this light I'll try her. (cal'd Luce. Vat be you, yonker, why do you not speak ?

Flow. By my troth, sweet heart, a poor Gentleman that would desire of you, if it stand with your liking, the bounty of your purse.

Enter Father.

Luce. O here God, so young an Armine.

Flow. Armine, sweet-heart, I know not what you mean by that, but I am almost a beggar.

Luce. Are you not a married man, vere bin your wife ? Here is all I have, take dis.

Flow. What gold, young Frow ? this is brave.

Fath. If he have any grace, he'll now repent.

Luce. Why speak you not, were be your wife ?

Flow. Dead, dead, she's dead, 'tis she hath undone me ? Spent me all I had, and kept Rascals under my nose to brave me.

Luce. Did you use her vell ?

Flow. Use her, there's never a Gentlewoman in England could be better used then I did her, I could but Coach her, her Diet stood me in forty pound a month, but she is dead and in her grave, my cares are buried.

Luce. Indeed dat vas not scone.

Fath. He is turned more devil then he was before.

Flow. Thou do'st belong to Master Civet here, do'st thou not ?

Luce. Yes, me do.

Flow. Why there's it, there's not a handfull of plate But belongs to me, God's my Judge :

If I had such a wench as thou art,

There's never a man in England would make more Of her, then I would do, so she had any stock.

They call within.

O why Tanikin.

Luce. Stay, one doth call, I shall come by and by again.

Flow. By this hand, this Dutch wench is in love with Were it not admirall to make her steal (me, All Civet's Plate, and run away.

Fath. 'Twere beastly. O M. Flowerdale, Have you no fear of God, nor conscience :

What do you mean, by this vild course you take ?

Flow. What do I mean ? why, to live, that I mean.

Fath. To live in this sort, fie upon the course, Your life doth show, you are a very coward.

Flow. A coward, I pray in what ?

Fath. Why you will borrow six-pence of a boy.

Flow. 'Snails, is there such a cowardise in that ? I dare Borrow it of a man, I, and of the tallest man In England, if he will lend it me :

Let me borrow it how I can, and let them come by it how they dare.

And it is well known, I might a rid out a hundred times If I would, so I might.

Fath. It was not want of will, but cowardise, There is none that lends to you, but know they gain : And what is that but onely stealth in you ?

Delia might hang you now, did not her heart Take pity of you for her sisters sake.

Go get you hence, least lingering here you stay, You fall into their hands you look not for.

Flow. I'll tarry here, till the Dutch Frow Comes, if all the devils in hell were here.

Exit Father.

Enter Sir Lancelot, M. Weathercock, and Artichook.

Lan. Where is the door ? are we not past it Artichook ?
Arti.

Arti. By th' Masse here's one, I'll ask him, do you hear, sir?
What, are you so proud? do you hear, which is the way
To M. Civer's house? what, will you not speak?
O me, this is filching Flowerdale.

Lance. O wonderful, is this lewde villain here?
O you cheating Rogue, you Cut-purse, Cony-catcher,
What ditch, you villain, is my Daughters grave?
A cozening rascal, that must make a will,
Take on him that strict habit, very that:
When he should turn to angel, a dying grace,
I'll Father-in-Law you, sir, I'll make a will:
Speak villain, where's my Daughter?
Poysoned, I warrant you, or knocked a the head:
And to abuse good Master Weathercock, with his forged will,

And Master Weathercock, to make my grounded resolu-
Then to abuse the Devonshire Gentlemen: (tion,
Go, away with him to prison.

Flow. Wherefore to prison? sir, I will not go.

Enter Master Civer, his Wife, Oliver, Sir Arthur,
Father, Vnckle, and Delia.

Lance. O here's his Unckle, welcome, Gentlemen, welcome all:

Such a cozener, Gentlemen, a murderer too
For any thing I know, my Daughter is missing,
Hath been looked for, cannot be found, a vild upon thee.

Vnc. He is my kinsman, although his life be vild, Therefore, in Gods name, doe with him what you will.

Lance. Marry to prison.

Flow. Wherefore to prison, snick-up? I owe you nothing

Lan. Bring forth my daughter then, away with him.

Flow. Go seek your daughter, what do you lay to my charge?

Lance. Sulpition of murder, go, away with him.

Flow. Murder your dogs, I murder your daughter?

Come, Uncle, I know you'll bail me.

Unc. Not I, were there no more,
Then I the Jaylor, thou the prisoner.

Lance. Go, away with him.

Enter Luce like a Frow.

Luce. O my life, where will you ha de man?
Vat ha de yonker done?

Wea. Woman, he hath kill'd his wife.

Luce. His wife, dat is not good, dat is not seen.

Lance. Hang not upon him, hufwife, if you do I'll lay you by him.

Luce. Have me no, and or way do you have him,
He tell me dat he love me heartily.

Fran. Lead away my maid to prison, why, Toms, will you suffer that?

Civ. No, by your leave, Father, she is no vagrant:
She is my Wives Chamber-maid, and as true as the skin between any mans browes here.

Lance. Go to, you're both fooles: Son Civer,
Of my life this is a plot,
Some stragling counterfeit profer'd to you:
No doubt to rob you of your Plate and Jewels:
I'll have you led away to prison, Trull.

Luce. I am no Trull, neither outlandish Frow,
Nor he, nor I shall to the prison go:

Know you me now? nay never stand amazed.
Father, I know I have offended you,
And though that duty wills me bend my knees
To you in duty and obedience;
Yet this wayes do I turn, and to him yield
My love, my duty, and my humbleness.

Lance. Bastard in nature, kneel to such a slave?

Luce. O M. Flowerdale, if too much grief
Have not stopt up the organs of your voice,
Then speak to her that is thy faithfull wife,
Or doth contempt of me thus tie thy tongue:
Turn not away, I am no Ethiope,
No wanton Cressed, nor a changing Hellen:
But rather one made wretched by thy loss.
What turn'st thou still from me? O then
I guess thee wofull'st among haplesse men.

Flow. I am indeed, wife, wonder among wives I
Thy chastity and vertue hath infused
Another soul in me, red with defame,
For in my blushing cheeks is seen my shame.

Lance. Out Hypocrite, I charge thee trust him not.

Luce. Not trust him, by the hopes after blifs,
I know no sorrow can be compar'd to his.

Lan. Well, since thou wert ordain'd to beggery,
Follow thy fortune, I desie thee.

Oli. Ywood che were so well ydousfed as was ever white cloth in tocking mill, an che ha not made me weep.

Faith. If he hath any grace he'll now repent.

Arth. It moves my heart.

Wea. By my troth I must weep, I cannot choose.

Unc. None but a beast would such a maid misuse.

Flow. Content thy self, I hope to win his favour,
And to redeem my reputation lost:

And, Gentlemen, believe me, I beseech you,
I hope your eyes shall behold such change,
As shall deceive your expectation.

Oli. I would che were split now, but che believe him.

Lance. How, believe him.

Wea. By the Markins, I do.

Lan. What do you think that e're he will have grace?

Wea. By my faith it will go hard.

Oli. Well, che vorye he is changed: and, M. Flower- dale, in hope you been so, hold there's vorty pound toward your zetting up: what be not ashamed, vang it man, vang it, be a good husband, loven to your wife:
and you shall not want for vorty more, I che vor thee.

Arth. My means are little, but if you'll follow me,
I will instruct you in my ablest power:
But to your wife I give this Diamond,
And prove true Diamond fair in all your life.

Flow. Thanks, good Sir Arthur: M. Oliver,
You being my enemy, and grown so kind,
Binds me in all endeavour to restore.

Oli. What, restore me no restorings, man,
I have vorty pound more here, vang it:
Zouth chill devie London else: what, do not think me
A Mezel or a Scoundrel, to throw away my money? che have an hundred pound more to pace of any good spot-ation: I hope your under and your Uncle will vollow my zamples.

Unc. You have gueft right of me, if he leave off this course of life, he shall be mine Heir.

Lan. But he shall never get a groat of me;
A Cozener, a Deceiver, one that kill'd his painfull
Father, honest Gentleman, that passed the fearfull
Danger of the sea, to get him living & maintain him brave.

Wea.

Wea. What hath he kill'd his father?

Lance. I, sir, with conceit of his vild courses,

Fath. Sir, you are misinformed.

Lav. Why, thou old knave, thou told'st me so thy self.

Fath. I wrong'd him then : and toward my Master's There's twenty Nobles for to make amends. (Stock,

Flow. No Kester, I have troubled thee, and wrong'd thee more,

What thou in love gives, I in love restore.

Fran. Ha, ha, sister, there you plaid bo-peep with Tom, what shall I give her toward household?

Sister Delia, shall I give her my Fan?

Del. You were best ask your husband.

Fran. Shall I, Tom?

Civ. I do Frank, I'll buy thee a new one, with a longer

Fran. A russet one, Tom. (handle.

Civ. I with russet feathers.

Fran. Here, sister, there's my Fan toward household, to keep you warme.

Luce. I thank you, sister.

Wea. Why this is well, and toward fair Luces Stock, here's forty shillings : and forty good shillings more, I'll give her marry. Come Sir Lancelot, I must have you friends.

Lance. Not I, all this is counterfeit,
He will consume it, were it a Million.

Fath. Sir, what is your daughters dower worth?

Lance. Had she been married to an honest man,
It had been better then a thousand pound.

Fath. Pay it him, and I'll give you my bond,
To make her joynter better worth then three.

Lance. Your bond, sir, why what are you?

Fath. One whose word in London though I say it,
Will passe there for as much as yours.

Lan. Wert not thou late that unthrifst serving-man?

Fath. Look on me better, now my scar is off.
Nere muse man at this metamorphosie.

Lance. Master Flowerdale.

Flow. My father, O I shame to look on him.
Pardon, dear father, the follies that are past.

Fath. Son, son, I do, and joy at this thy change,
And applaud thy fortune in this vertuous maid,
Whom heaven hath sent to thee to save thy soul.

Luce. This addeth joy to joy, high heaven be prais'd.

Wea. M. Flowerdale, welcome from death, good Mr.
Flowerdale.

'Twas sed so here, 'twas sed so here good faith.

Fath. I caus'd that rumour to be spread my self,
Because I'd see the humours of my son,
Which to relate the circumstance is needlesse :
And firrha, see you run no more into that same disease :
For he that's once cured of that maladie,
Of Riot, Swearing, Drunkenness, and Pride,
And falls again into the like distresse,
That fever is deadly, dorth till death indure :
Such men die mad as of a calenture.

Flow. Heaven helping me, I'll hate the course as hell.

Unc. Say it, and do it Cousin, all is well.

Lan. Well, being in hope you'll prove an honest man,
I take you to my favour. Brother Flowerdale,
Welcome with all my heart : I see your care
Hath brought these acts to this conclusion,
And I am glad of it, come let's in and feast.

Oli. Nay zoft you a while, you promised to make
Sir Arthur and me amends, here is your wisest Daughter, see which an's she'll have.

Lan. A Gods name, you have my good will, get hers.

Oli. How say you then Damsel, tyters hate?

Delia. I sir, am yours.

Oli. Why, then send for a Vicar, and chill have it
Dispatched in a trice, so chill.

Del. Pardon me, sir, I mean I am yours,
In love, in duty : and affection.

But not to love as wife, shall nere be said,

Delia was buried, married, but a maid.

Arth. Do not condemne your self for ever
Vertuous fair, you were born to love.

Oli. Why you say true, Sir Arthur, she was y bore to it,
So well as her mother : but I pray you shew us
Some zamples or reasons why you will not marry?

Del. Not that I do condemne a married life,
For 'tis no doubt a sanctimonious thing :

But for the care and crosses of a wife,
The trouble in this world that children bring,
My vow is in heaven in earth to live alone,
Husbands howsoever good, I will have none.

Oli. Why then, chill live a Batchelor too,
Che zet not a vig by a wife, if a wife zet not a vig
By me : Come, shall's go to dinner?

Fath. To morrow I crave your companies in Mark-lane :
To night we'll frolick in M. Civer's house,
And to each health drink down a full Carouse,

F I N I S.

The History of the Life and Death of THOMAS Lord CROMWELL.

Enter three Smiths, Hodge, and two other, old Cromwell's men.

Hodge.

Come, Masters, I think it be past five a clock,
Is it not time we were at work?
My old Master he'll be stirring anon.
1. I cannot tell whether my old Master will be stirring or no: but I am sure I can hardly take my afternoon's nap, for my young Master Thomas,
He keeps such a quile in his Studie,
With the Sun, and the Moon, and the seven Starres,
That I do verily think he'll read out his wits.

Hodge. He skill of the starres? there's good-man Car of Fulham,

He that carried us to the strong Ale, where goody Trundel
Had her maid got with child: O, he knows the Starres,
He'll tickle you Charles Wain in nine degrees:
That same man will tell goody Trundel
When here Ale shall miscarry, only by the starres.

2. I, that's a great virtue indeed, I think Thomas
Be no body in comparison to him.

1. Well, Masters, come, shall we to our Hammers?

Hod. I, content; first let's take our mornings draught,
And then to work roundly.

2. I, agreed, go in Hodge. Exeunt omnes.

Enter young Cromwell.

Crom. Good morrow, morn, I do salute thy brightness,
The night seems tedious to my troubled soul:
Whose black obscuritie binds in my mind
A thousand sundry cogitations:
And now Aurora with a lively dye,
Adds comfort to my spirit that mounts on high.
Too high indeed, my state being so mean:
My studie like a mineral of Gold,
Makes my heart proud, wherein my hope's inroll'd;
My Books is all the wealth I do possess, Here within
And unto them I have ingag'd my heart; they must beat
O, Learning, how divine thou seems to me I with their Within whose armes is all felicity. Hammers.
Peace with your hammers, leave your knocking there,
You do disturb my study and my rest;
Leave off, I say, you mad me with the noise.

Enter Hodge, and the two Men.

Hod. Why, how now, Master Thomas, how now;

Will you not let us work for you?

Crom. You fret my heart, with making of this noise.

Hod. How, fret your heart? I but Thomas, you'll Fret your father's purse if you let us from working.

2. I, this 'tis for him to make him a Gentleman:
Shall we leave work for your musing? that's well ifaith;
But here comes my old Master now.

Enter old Cromwell.

Old Crom. You idle knaves, what are you loytring now?
No Hammers walking, and my work to doe?

What, not a heat among your work to day? (at all.

Hod. Marry, sir, your son Thomas will not let us work

Old Crom. Why knave I say, have I thus cark'd & car'd,
And all to keep thee like a Gentleman,

And dost thou let my servants at their work;

That sweat for thee, knave? labour thus for thee?

Crom. Father, their Hammers do offend my Studie.

Old Crom. Out of my doors, knave, if thou lik'st it not:

I cry you mercy, are your eares so fine?

I tell thee, knave, these get when I do sleep;

I will not have my Anvil stand for thee.

Crom. There's money, father, I will pay your men.

He throws Money among them.

Old Crom. Have I thus brought thee up unto my cost,

In hope that one day thou would'st relieve my age,

And art thou now so lavish of thy coin,

To scatter it among these idle knaves?

Crom. Father, be patient, and content your self,

The time will come I shall hold gold as trash:

And here I speak with a presaging soul,

To build a Pallace where now this Cottage stands,

As fine as is King Henrie's house at Sheen.

Old Crom. You build a house? you knave, you'll be a
Now afore God all is but cast away (beggar;

That is bestowed upon this thriftless Lad,

Well, had I bound him to some honest trade,

This had not been; but it was his mother's doing,

To send him to the University:

How? build a House where now this Cottage stands,

As fair as that at Sheen? he shall not hear me,

A good Boy Toms, I con thee thank Toms,

Well said Tom, grammaries Tom:

In to your work, knaves; hence saucie Boy.

Exeunt all but young Cromwell.

Cro. Why

Cro. Why should my birth keep down my mounting spirit ?

Are not all creatures subject unto time ?
To time, who doth abuse the world,
And fills it full of hodge-podge bastardy ;
There's legions now of beggars on the earth,
That their original did spring from Kings,
And many Monarchs now, whose Fathers were
The riffe-raffe of their age ; for time and fortune
Weares out a noble train to beggery ;
And from the Dunghill minions doe advance
To state : and mark, in this admiring world
This is but course, which in the name of Fate
Is seen as often as it whirls about :
The River Thames that by our door doth passe,
His first beginning is but small and shallow,
Yet keeping on his course growes to a Sea.
And likewise Wolfey, the wonder of our age,
His birth as mean as mine, a Butchers Son ;
Now who within this Land a greater man ?
Then, Cromwell, cheer thee up, and tell thy soul,
That thou may'st live to flourish and controule.

Enter old Cromwell.

Old Crom. Tom Cromwell, what Tom I say.

Crom. Doe you call, sir ?

Old Crom. Here is Master Bowser come to know if you have dispatch'd his petition for the Lords of the Council, or no.

Crom. Father, I have, please you to call him in.

Old Crom. That's well said, Tom, a good Lad, Tom.

Enter Master Bowser.

Bow. Now, Mr. Cromwell, have you dispatch'd this petition ?

Crom. I have, sir, here it is, please you peruse it.

Bow. It shall not need, we'll read it as we go by water.

And, Master Cromwell, I have made a motion
May doe you good, and if you like of it.
Our Secretary at Antwerpe, sir, is dead,
And the Merchants there hath sent to me,
For to provide a man fit for the place :
Now I doe know none fitter than your self,
If with your liking it stand, Master Cromwell.

Crom. With all my heart, sir, and I much am bound,
In love and duty for your kindnesse shown.

Old Crom. Body of me, Tom, make haste, least some Get between thee and home, Tom. (body

I thank you, good Master Bowser, I thank you for my Boy,

I thank you alwayes, I thank you most heartily, sir :

Ho, a Cup of Beer here for Master Bowser.

Bow. It shall not need, sir : Master Cromwell, will you

Crom. I will attend you, sir. (go ?

Old Crom. Farewell, Tom, God blesse thee, Tom,
God speed thee, good Tom. Exeunt omnes.

Enter Bagot a Broker solus.

Bag. I hope this day is fatal unto some,
And by their losse must Bagot seek to gain.
This is the Lodging of Master Friskiball,
A liberall Merchant, and a Florentine,
To whom Banister owes a thousand pound,
A Merchant-Banckrupt, whose Father was my Master.
What doe I care for pity or regard,
He once was wealthy, but he now is faine,

And this morning have I got him arrested
At the suit of Master Friskiball,
And by this meanes shall I be sure of Coyn,
For doing this same good to him unknown :
And in good time, see where the Merchant comes.

Enter Friskiball.

Good morrow to kind Master Friskiball.

Frisk. Good morrow to your self, good Master Bagot,
And whats the newes you are so early stirring ?
It is for gain, I make no doubt of that.

Bag. It is for the love, sir, that I bear to you.
When did you see your debtor Banister ?

Frisk. I promise you, I have not seen the man
This two moneths day, his poverty is such,
As I doe think he shames to see his friends,

Bag. Why then assure your self to see him straight,
For at your suit I have arrested him,
And here they will be with him presently.

Frisk. Arrest him at my suit ? you were too blame,
I know the mans misfortunes to be such,
As he's not able for to pay the debt,
And were it known to some, he were undone.

Bag. This is your pittifull heart to think it so,
But you are much deceiv'd in Banister :
Why, such as he will break for fashion sake,
And unto those they owe a thousand pound,
Pay scarce a hundred : O, sir, beware of him,
The man is lewdly given, to Dice and Drabs,
Spends all he hath in Harlots companies,
It is no mercy for to pity him :

I speak the truth of him, for nothing else,
But for the kindnesse that I bear to you.

Frisk. If it be so, he hath deceiv'd me much,
And to deale strictly with such a one as he,
Better severe than too much lenity :
But here is Master Banister himself,
And with him, as I take't, the Officers.

Enter Banister, his Wife, and two Officers.

Ban. O, Master Friskiball, you have undone me :
My state was well nigh overthrown before,
Now altogetner down-cast by your meanes.

Mist. Ba. O, Mr. Friskiball, pity my husband's case,
He is a man hath liv'd as well as any,
Till envious Fortune, and the ravenous Sea
Did rob, disrobe, and spoil us of our own.

Frisk. Mistresse Banister, I envy not your husband,
Nor willingly would I have us'd him thus :
But that I hear he is so lewdly given,
Haunts wicked company, and hath enough
To pay his debts, yet will not be known thereof.

Ban. This is that damned Broker, that same Bagot,
Whom I have often from my Trencher fed :
Ingratefull villain for to use me thus.

Bag. What I have said to him is nought but truth.

Mi. Ba. What thou hast said springs from an en-
A Cannibal that doth eat men alive : (vious heart.

But here upon my knee believe me, sir,
And what I speak, so help me God, is true,
We scerace have meat to feed our little Babes :
Most of our Plate is in that Broker's hand,
Which had we money to defray our debts,
O think, we would not bide that penury :
Be mercifull, kind Master Friskiball,
My husband, children, and my self will eat
But one meale a day, the other will we keep and sell,

Eri. Go to, I see thou art an envious man:
Good Mistress Banister, kneel not to me,
I pray rise up, you shall have your desire.
Hold officers; be gone, there's for your pains,
You know you owe to me a thousand pound,
Here take my hand, if e're God make you able;
And place you in your former state again,
Pay me: but if still your fortune frown,
Upon my faith I'll never ask you crown:
I never yet did wrong to men in thrall,
For God doth know what to my self may fall.

Ban. This unexpected favour undeserved,
Doth make my heart bleed inwardly with joy:
Nere may ought prosper with me is my own,
If I forget this kindness you have shown.

Mi. Ba. My children in their prayers both night and
For your good fortune and success shall pray. (day,

Eri. I thank you both, I pray go dine with me,
Within these three dayes, if God give me leave,
I will to Florence to my native home.

Bagot, hold, there's a Portague to drink,
Although you ill deserved it by your merit;
Give not such cruel scope unto your heart;
Be sure the ill you do will be requited:
Remember what I say, Bagot, farewell.
Come, Master Banister, you shall with me,
My fare's but simple, but welcome heartily.

Exit all but Bagot.

Bag. A plague go with you, would you had eat your last,
Is this the thanks I have for all my pains?
Confusion light upon you all for me:
Where he had wont to give a score of Crowns,
Doth he now foyst me with a Portague:
Well, I will be revenged upon this Banister.
I'll to his Creditors, buy all the debts he owes,
As seeming that I do it for good will,
I am sure to have them at an easie rate;
And when 'tis done, in Christendome he staves not,
But I'll make his heart t'ake with sorrow,
And if that Banister become my debter,
By heaven and earth I'll make his plague the greater.

Exit Bagot.

Enter Chorus.

Cho. Now Gentlemen imagine, that young Cromwell is In Antwerp, Ledger for the English Merchants:
And Banister to shun this Bagot's hate,
Hearing that he hath got some of his debts,
Is fled to Antwerp, with his wife and children,
Which Bagot hearing is gone after them:
And thither sends his bills of debt before,
To be revenged on wretched Banister,
What doth fall out, with patience sit and see,
A just requital of false trecherie.

Exit.

Enter Cromwell in his study, with bags of money before him, casting of account.

Crom. Thus far my reckoning doth go straight & even.
But, Cromwell, this same plodding fits not thee;
Thy mind is altogether set on travel,
And not to live thus cloystered, like a Nun;
It is not this same trash, that I regard,
Experience is the jewel of my heart.

Enter a Post.

Post. I pray, sir, are you ready to dispatch me?

Cro. Yes, here's those summes of money you must carry.

You go so far as Frankford, do you not?

Post. I do, sir.

Crom. Well, prithee make all the hast thou can'st,
For there be certain English Gentlemen
Are bound for Venice, and may happily want,
And if that you should linger by the way:
But in hope that you will make good speed,
There's two Angels to buy you spurrs and wands.

Post. I thank you, sir, this will adde wings indeed.

Crom. Gold is of power to make an Eagles speed.

Enter Mistress Banister.

What Gentlewoman is this, that grieves so much?
It seems she doth addresse her self to me.

Mi. Ban. God save you, sir, pray is your name Master Cromwell?

Crom. My name is Thomas Cromwell, Gentlewoman.

Mi. Ban. Know you not one Bagot, sir, that's come to Antwerp?

Crom. No, trust me, I never saw the man,
But here are bills of debt I have received
Against one Banister a Merchant fallen into decay.

Mi. Ba. Into decay indeed, long of that wretch:
I am the wife to wofull Banister,
And by that bloody villain am pursu'd,
From London, here to Antwerp:

My husband he is in the Governors hands,
And God of heaven knows how he'll deal with him,
Now, sir, your heart is framed of milder temper,
Be mercifull to a distressed soul,
And God no doubt will treble blesse your gain.

Crom. Good Mistress Banister, what I can, I will,
In any thing that lies within my power.

Mi. Ban. O speak to Bagot, that same wicked wretch,
An Angels voice may move a damned devil.

Crom. Why is he come to Antwerp, as you hear?

Mi. Ban. I heard he landed some two hours since.

Crom. Well, Mistress Banister, assure your self,
I'll speak to Bagot in your own behalf,
And win him t'all the pittie that I can:
Mean time, to comfort you, in your distresse,
Receive these Angels to relieve your need,
And be assured, that what I can effect:

To do you good, no way I will neglect. (heart.
Mi. Ban. That mighty God that knows each mortals
Keep you from trouble, sorrow, grief and smart.

Exit Mistress Banister.

Crom. Thanks, courteous woman,
For thy hearty prayer:
It grieves my soul to see her misery,
But we that live under the work of fate,
May hope the best, yet knows not to what state
Our stars and destinies hath us assign'd,
Fickle is Fortune, and her face is blind,

Enter Bagot solus.

Bag. So all goes well, it is as I would have it,
Banister, he is with the Governor:
And shortly shall have gyves upon his heels.
It glads my heart to think upon the slave;
I hope to have his body rot in prison,
And after here, his wife to hang her self,
And all his children die for want of food.
The Jewels I have brought to Antwerp

Are reckon'd to be worth five thousand pound,
Which scarcely stood me in three hundred pound;
I bought them at an easie kind of rate,
I care not which way they came by them
That sold them me, it comes not near my heart;
And least they should be stoln, as sure they are,
I thought it meet to sell them here in Antwerp,
And so have left them in the Governour's hand,
Who offers me within two hundred pound
Of all my price: but now no more of that,
I must go see and if my Bills be safe,
The which I sent to Master Cromwell,
That if the wind should keep me on the sea,
He might arrest him here before I came:
And in good time, see where he is: God save you, sir.

Crom. And you, pray pardon me, I know you not.

Bag. It may be so, sir, but my name is Bagot,
The man that sent to you the Bills of debt.

Crom. O, the man that pursues Banister,
Here are the Bills of debt you sent to me:
As for the man, you know best where he is;
It is reported y'ave a flintie heart,
A mind that will not stoop to any pittie;
An eye that knows not how to shed a tear,
A hand that's alwayes open for reward:
But, Master Bagot, would you be ruled by me,
You should turn all these to the contrary;
Your heart should still have feeling of remorse,
Your mind, according to your state, be liberal
To those that stand in need, and in distress;
Your hand to help them that do stand in want,
Rather then with your poise to hold them down,
For every ill turn show your self more kind,
Thus should I doe, pardon, I speak my mind.

Bag. I, sir, you speak to hear what I would say,
But you must live I know, as well as I:
I know this place to be Extortion,
And 'tis not for a man to keep safe here,
But he must lye, cog, with his dearest friend;
And as for pittie, scorn it, hate all conscience:
But yet I do commend your wit in this,
To make a show, of what I hope you are not,
But I commend you, and 'tis well done;
This is the onely way to bring your gain.

Crom. My gain? I had rather chain me to an Oare,
And like a slave there toil out all my life,
Before I'd live so base a slave as thou.
I, like an Hypocrite, to make a show
Of seeming virtue, and a Devil within?
No, Bagot, if thy conscience were as clear,
Poor Banister ne're had been troubled here.

Bag. Nay, good Master Cromwell, be not angry, sir,
I know full well that you are no such man,
But if your conscience were as white as Snow,
It will be thought that you are otherwise.

Crom. Will it be thought I am otherwise?
Let them that think so, know they are deceiv'd;
Shall Cromwell live to have his faith misconster'd?
Antwerp, for all the wealth within thy Town,
I will not stay here full two houres longer:
As good luck serves, my accounts are all made even,
Therefore I'll straight unto the Treasurer;
Bagot, I know you'll to the Governour,
Commend me to him, say I am bound to travel,
To see the fruitfull parts of Italy;
And as you ever bore a Christian mind,

Let Banister some favour of you find.

Bag. For your sake, sir, I'll help him all I can,
To starve his heart out ere he gets a groat;
So, Master Cromwell, do I take my leave,
For I must straight unto the Governour.

Exit Bagot.

Crom. Farewell, sir, pray you remember what I said:
No, Cromwell, no, thy heart was ne're so base,
To live by falshood, or by brokery;
But 't falls out well, I little it repent,
Hereafter, time in travel shall be spent.

Enter Hodge, his Father's man.

Hod. Your son Thomas, quoth you, I have been Thomas;
I had thought it had been no such matter to a gone by water: for at Putney I'll go you to Parish- Garden for two pence, sit as still as may be, without any wagging or joulting in my guttes, in a little Boat too: here we were scarce some four mile in the great green Water, but I thinking to go to my afternoons unchines, as 'twas my manner at home, but I felt a kind of rising in my guttes: at last one a the Sailers spying of me, be a good cheer sayes he, set down thy victuals, and up with it, thou hast nothing but an Eele in thy belly:
Well, to't went I, to my victuals went the Sailers, and thinking me to be a man of better experience then any in the shippe, asked me what Wood the ship was made of: they all swore I could them as right as if I had been acquainted with the Carpenter that made it; at last we grew near Land, and I grew villanous hungry, went to my bagge, the Devil a bit there was, the Sailers had tickled me; yet I cannot blame them, it was a part of kindness, for I in kindnesse told them what Wood the ship was made of, and they in kindnesse eat up my victuals, as indeed one good turn asketh another: well, would I, could I, find my Master Thomas in this Dutch Town, he might put some English Beer into my belly. (come:

Crom. What, Hodge, my father's man, by my hand wel-
How doth my Father? what's the newes at home?

Hod. Master Thomas, o God, Master Thomas, your hand, glove and all, this is to give you to understanding that your Father is in health, and Alice Downing here hath sent you a Nutmeg, and Best Makewater a race of Ginger, my fellow Will and Tom hath between them sent you a dozen of Points, and goodman Toll, of the Goat, a pair of Mittons, my Self came in person, and this is all the newes.

Cro. Gramarcy, good Hodge, & thou art welcome to me,
But in as ill a time thou comest as may be;
For I am travelling into Italy,
What say'st thou, Hodge, wilt thou bear me company?

Hod. Will I bear thee company, Tom? what tell'st me of Italy? were it to the furthest part of Flanders, I would go with thee, Tom; I am thine in all weale and woe, thy own to command; what, Tom, I have passed the rigorous waves of Neptune's blasts, I tell you, Tho- mas, I have been in danger of the Flouds, and when I have seen Boreas begin to play the Ruffin with us, then would I down a my knees, and call upon Vulcan.

Crom. And why upon him?

Hod. Because, as this same fellow Neptune is God of the Seas, so Vulcan is Lord over the Smiths, and therefore I being a Smith, thought his Godhead would have some care yet of me.

Crom. A good conceit: but tell me, hast thou din'd yet?
Hodge.

Hod. Thomas, to speak the truth, not a bit yet, I.

Crom. Come, go with me, thou shalt have cheer good
And farewell Antwerp, if I come no more. (store :

Hod. I follow thee, sweet Towr, I follow thee.

Exeunt ambo.

Enter the Governour of the English House, Bagot, Banister, his Wife, and two Officers.

Gover. Is Cromwell gone then ? say you M. Bagot,
What dislike, I pray ? what was the cause ?

Bag. To tell you true, a wilde brain of his own,
Such youth as they cannot see when they are well.
He is all bent to travell, that's his reason,
And doth not love to eat his bread at home.

Gov. Well, good fortune with him, if the man be gone.
We hardly shall find such a man as he,
To fit our turns, his dealings were so honest.
But now, sir, for your Jewels that I have,

What doe you say ? what, will you take my price ?

Bag. O, sir, you offer too much under foot.

Gov. 'Tis but two hundred pound between us, man,
What's that in payment of five thousand pound ?

Bag. Two hundred pound, birlady sir, 'tis great,
Before I got so much it made we sweat.

Gov. Well, Master Bagot, I'll proffer you fairly,
You see this Merchant, Master Banister,
Is going now to prison at your sute:

His substance all is gone, what would you have ?
Yet in regard I knew the man of wealth,
Never dishonest dealing, but such mishaps
Hath faine on him, may light on me or you :
There is two hundred pound between us,
We will divide the same, I'll give you one,
On that condition you will set him free :
His state is nothing, that you see your self,
And where nought is the King must lose his right.

Bag. Sir, sir, you speak out of your love,
'Tis foolish love, sir, sure to pitty him :
Therefore content your self, this is my minde,
To doe him good I will not bait a penny.

Ban. This is my comfort, though thou do'st no good,
A mighty ebbe follows a mighty flood.

Mi. Ba. O thou base wretch, whom we have fostered,
Even as a Serpent for to poyson us,
If God did ever right a womans wrong,
To that same God I bend and bow my heart,
To let his heavy wrath fall on thy head,
By whom my hopes and joyes are butchered.

Bag. Alas, fond woman, I prethee pray thy worst.
The Fox fares better still when he is curst.

Enter Master Bowser a Merchant.

Gov. Master Bowser ! your welcome, sir, from England,

What's the best newes ? how doth all our friends ?

Bow. They are all well, and doe commend them to
you :

There's Letters from your Brother and your Son :
So fare you well, sir, I must take my leave,
My haste and businesse doth require so.

G.v. Before you dine, sir ? what, go you out of town ?

Bow. I faith unless I hear some newes in town,
I must away, there is no remedy.

Gov. Master Bowser, what is your businesse, may I know it ?

Bow. You may, sir, and so shall all the City.
The King of late hath had his treasury robb'd,

And of the choyssest jewels that he had :

The value of them was seven thousand pounds,
The fellow that did steale these jewels is hanged,
And did confesse that for three hundred pound,
He sold them to one Bagot dwelling in London :
Now Bagot's fled, and as we hear, to Antwerpe,
And hither am I come to seek him out,
And they that first can tell me of his newes,
Shall have a hundred pound for their reward.

Ban. How just is God to right the innocent ?

Gov. Master Bowser, you come in happy time,
Here is the villain Bagot that you seek,
And all those jewels have I in my hands :
Officers, look to him, hold him fast.

Bagot. The Devil ought me a shame, and now he hath paid it.

Bow. Is this that Bagot ? fellowes, bear him hence,
We will not now stand for his reply ;
Lade him with Irons, we will have him tri'd
In England where his villanies are known.

Bag. Mischief, confusion, light upon you all,
O hang me, drown me, let me kill my self,
Let go my armes, let me run quick to hell.

Bow. Away, bear him away, stop the slaves mouth.

They carry him away.

Mi. Ba. Thy works are infinite, great God of heaven.

Gov. I heard this Bagot was a wealthy fellow.

Bow. He was indeed, for when his goods were seized,
Of Jewels, Coyn, and Plate within his house,
Was found the value of five thousand pound,
His furniture fully worth half so much,
Which being all strain'd for the King,
He frankly gave it to the Antwerpe Merchants,
And they again, out of their bounteous mind,
Have to a brother of their Company,
A man decay'd by fortune of the Seas,
Given Bagot's wealth, to set him up again,
And keep it for him, his name is Banister.

Gov. Master Bowser, with this happy newes,
You have revived two from the gates of death,
This is that Banister, and this his Wife.

Bow. Sir, I am glad my fortune is so good,
To bring such tidings as may comfort you.

Ban. You have given life unto a man deem'd dead,
For by these newes my life is newly bred.

Mi. Ba. Thanks to my God, next to my Sovereign
King,

And last to you that these good newes doe bring.

Gov. The hundred pound I must receive, as due
For finding Bagot, I freely give to you.

Bow. And, Master Banister, if so you please,
I'll bear you company, when you crosse the Seas.

Ban. If it please you, sir, my company is but mean,
Stands with your liking, I'll wait on you.

Gov. I am glad that all things doe accord so well :
Come, Master Bowser, let us to dinner :
And, Mistresse Banister, be merry, woman,
Come, after sorrow now let's cheer your spirit,
Knaves have their due, and you but what you merit.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Cromwell and Hodge in their Shirts, and without Hats.

Hodg. Call ye this seeing of fashions ?

Marry

Marry would I had staid at Putney still,
O, Master Thomas, we are spoiled, we are gone.

Crom. Content thee man, this is but fortune,

Hod Fortune, a plague of this Fortune, it makes me go wet-shod, the rogues would not leave me a shooe to my feet; for my Hose, they scorned them with their heels; but for my Doublet and Hat, O Lord; they embraced me, and unlaced me, and took away my cloathes, and so disgraced me.

Crom. Well, Hodge, what remedy?
What shift shall we make now?

Hodg. Nay I know not, for begging I am naught, for stealing worse: by my troth I must even fall to my old trade, to the Hammer and the Horse-heels again: but now the worst is, I am not acquainted with the humour of the Horses in this country; whether they are not coltish, given much to kicking, or no, for when I have one leg in my hand, if he should up and lay tother on my chops, I were gone, there lay I, there lay Hodge.

Crom. Hodge, I believe thou must work for us both.

Hod. O, Master Thomas, have not I told you of this? have not I many a time and often, said, Tom, or Master Thomas, learn to make a Horse-shooe, it will be your own another day: this was not regarded. Hark you, Thomas, what do you call the fellows that rob'd us?

Crom. The Bandetti.

Hod. The Bandetti, do you call them, I know not that they are called here, but I am sure we call them plain Thieves in Englad: O, Tom, that we were now at Putney, at the Ale there.

Crom. Content thee, man, here set up these two Bills, And let us keep our standing on the Bridge: The fashion of this countrey is such, If any stranger be oppressed with want, To write the manner of his misery, And such as are dispos'd to succour him, Will do it, what, hast thou set them up?

Hod. I they're up, God send some to read them, And not only to read them, but also to look on us: And not altogether look on us, One stands at one end,
But to relieve us, O cold, cold, cold. and one at tother.

Enter Friskiball the Merchant, and reads the Bills.

Frif. What's here? two Englishmen rob'd by the Bandetti,

One of them seems to be a Gentleman:
'Tis pitty that his fortune was so hard,
To fall into the desperate hands of thieves.
I'll question him, of what estate he is,
God save you, sir, are you an Englishman?

Crom. I am, sir, a distressed Englishman.

Frif. And what are you, my friend.

Hod. Who I, sir, by my troth I do not know my self, what I am now, but, sir, I was a Smith, sir, a poor Farrier of Putney, that's my Master, sir, yonder, I was robbed for his sake, sir.

Frif. I see you have been met by the Bandetti, And therefore need not ask how you came thus: But Friskiball, why do'st thou question them Of their estate, and not relieve their need? Sir, the coyn I have about me is not much: There's sixteen Duckets for to cloath your selves, There's sixteen more to buy your diet with, And there's sixteen to pay for your horse-hire:

'Tis all the wealth you see, my purse possesses.
But if you please for to enquire me out,
You shall not want for ought that I can do,
My name is Friskiball, a Florence Merchant:
A man that alwayes loved your nation.

Crom. This unexpected favour at your hands,
Which God doth know, if ever I shall requite it,
Necessity makes me to take your bounty,
And for your gold can yield you naught but thanks,
Your charity hath help'd me from despair;
Your name shall still be in my hearty prayer.

Frif. It is not worth such thanks, come to my house,
Your want shall better be reliev'd then thus.

Crom. I pray excuse me, this shall well suffice,
To bear my charges to Bononia,
Whereas a noble Earl is much distressed:
An Englishman, Russel the Earl of Bedford
Is by the French King sold unto his death,
It may fall out, that I may do him good:
To save his life, I'll hazard my heart blood:
Therefore, kind sir, thanks for your liberal gift,
I must be gone to aid him, there's no shift.

Frif. I'll be no hinderer to so good an act,
Heaven prosper you, in that you go about:
If Fortune bring you this way back again,
Pray let me see you: so I take my leave,

All good a man can wish, I do bequeath. Exit Friskib.

Cro. All good that God doth send, light on your head,
There's few such men within our Climate bred.
How say you now, Hodge, is not this good fortune?

Hod. How say you, I'll tell you what, Master Thomas,
If all men be of this Gentlemans mind,
Let's keep our standings upon this Bridge,
We shall get more here, with begging in one day,
Then I shall with making Horseshoes in a whole year.

Crom. No, Hodge, we must be gone unto Bononia,
There to relieve the noble Earle of Bedford:
Where if I fail not in my policy,
I shall deceive their subtle treachery.

Hod. Nay, I'll follow you, God bleesse us from the chieving Bandetti again. Exeunt.

Enter Bedford and his Host.

Bed. Am I betraid, was Bedford born to die,
By such base slaves, in such a place as this?
Have I escap'd so many times in France,
So many Battels have I over-passed,
And made the French stir, when they heard my name;
And am I now betraid unto my death?
Some of their hearts blood, first shall pay for it.

Host. They do desire, my Lord, to speak with you.

Bed. The traitors do desire to have my blood,
But by my Birth, my Honour, and my Name:
By all my hopes, my Life shall cost them dear.
Open the door, I'll venter out upon them,
And if I must die, then I'll die with Honour.

Host. Alas, my Lord, that is a desperate course,
They have begirt you, round about the house:
Their meaning is to take you prisoner,
And so to send your body unto France.

Bed. First shall the Ocean be as dry as sand,
Before alive they send me unto France:
I'll have my body first bored like a Sive,
And die as Hector, 'gainst the Mermydons,
E're France shall boast, Bedford's their prisoner,

Trecherous

Treacherous France, that gainst the law of armes:
Hath here betrayd thy enemy to death:
But be assured, my blood shall be revenged,
Upon the best lives that remains in France:
Stand back, or else thou run'st upon thy death.

Enter Servant.

Mef. Pardon, my Lord, I come to tell your honour
That they have hired a Neapolitan,
Who by his Oratory, hath promised them
Without the shedding of one drop of blood,
Into their hands, safe to deliver you,
And therefore craves, none but himself may enter,
And a poor swain that attends on him. Exit servant.

Bed. A Neapolitan? bid him come in,
Were he as cunning in his Eloquence,
As Cicero the famous man of Rome,
His words would be as chaffe against the wind.
Sweet tongu'd Ulysses, that made Ajax mad,
Were he and his tongue in this speaker's head,
Alive he winnes me not; then 'tis no conquest.

Enter Cromwell like a Neapolitan, and Hodge with him.

Crom. Sir, are you the Master of the house?

Hof. I am, sir.

Crom. By this same token you must leave this place,
And leave none but the Earl and I together,
And this my Pefant here to tend on us. (good.

Hof. With all my heart, God grant you do some Exit Hof. Cromwell shuts the door.

Bed. Now, sir, what's your will with me?

Crom. Intends your Honour, not to yield your self?

Bed. No good-man goose, not while my sword doth last;
Is this your eloquence for to perswade me?

Crom. My Lord, my eloquence is for to save you;
I am not, as you judge, a Neapolitan,
But Cromwell your servant, and an Englishman.

Bed. How? Cromwell? not my Farrier's son?

Crom. The same, sir, and am come to succour you.

Hod. Yes faith, sir, and am I Hodge, your poor Smith;
Many a time and oft have I shooed your Dapper Gray.

Bed. And what avails it me, that thou art here?

Crom. It may avail, if you'll be rul'd by me;
My Lord, you know the men of Mantua,
And these Bononians are at deadly strife,
And they, my Lord, both love and honour you;
Could you but get out of the Mantua port,
Then were you safe, despite of all their force.

Bed. Tut, man thou talk'st of things impossible;
Do'st thou not see, that we are round beset,
How then is't possible, we should escape?

Crom. By force we cannot, but by policie:
Put on the apparel here that Hodge doth wear,
And give him yours; the States they know you not,
For as I think, they never saw your face,
And at a watch-word must I call them in,
And will desire, that we two safe may pass
To Mantua, where I'll say my business lies;
How doth your honour like of this device?

Bed. O, wondrous good: But wilt thou venture, Hodge?

Hod. Will I? O noble Lord, I do accord, in any thing
I can;

And do agree, to set thee free, do Fortune what she can.

Bed. Come then, let's change our apparel straight.

Crom. Go, Hodge, make haste, lest they chance to call.

Hod. I warrant you I'll fit him with a Sure.

Exeunt Earl & Hodge.

Crom. Heavens grant this policie doth take success,
And that the Earl may safely scape away.
And yet it grieves me for this simple wretch,
For fear they should offer him violence;
But of two evils 'tis best to shun the greatest,
And better is it that he live in thrall,
Then such a noble Earl as he should fall.
Their stubborn hearts, it may be will relent;
Since he is gone, to whom their hate is bent.
My Lord, have you dispatched?

Enter Bedford like the Clown, and Hodge in his cloak and his hat

Bed. How dost thou like us, Cromwell, is it well?

Crom. O, my good Lord, excellent: Hodge, how do'st feel thy self?

Hod. How do I feel my self? why, as a Noble man should do.

O how I feel Honour come creeping on,
My Nobility is wonderfull melancholy:
Is it not most Gentleman-like to be melancholy?

Crom. Yes, Hodge; now go sit down in the study,
And take state upon thee.

Hod. I warrant you, my Lord, let me alone to take state upon me: but hark, my Lord, do you feel nothing bite about you?

Bed. No, trust me, Hodge.

Hod. I, they know they want their old pasture; 'tis a strange thing of this vermin, they dare not meddle with Nobility.

Crom. Go take thy place, Hodge, I will call them in.

Hodge sits in the study, & Cromwell calls in the States.
All is done, enter and if you please.

Enter the States, and Officers with Halberds.

Gov. What, have you won him? will he yield himself?

Crom. I have, an't please you, and the quiet Earl
Doth yield himself to be disposed by you.

Gov. Give him the money that we promis'd him:
So let him go, whither he please himself.

Crom. My business, sir, lies unto Mantua;
Please you to give me safe conduct thither.

Gov. Go, and conduct him to the Mantua Port,
And see him safe delivered presently. Exit Cromwell,
Go draw the curtains, let us see the Earl: and Bedford.
O, he is writing, stand apart a while.

Hod. Fellow William, I am not as I have been; I went from you a Smith, I write to you as a Lord: I am at this present writing, among the Polonian Cages. I do commend my Lordship to Raphe and to Roger, to Brid- get and to Dorisy, and so to all the youth of Putney.

Gov. Sure these are the names of English Noblemen,
Some of his special friends, to whom he writes:
But stay, he doth address himself to sing.

Here he sings a Song

My Lord, I am glad you are so frolick and so blithe;
Believe me, Noble Lord, if you knew all,
You'd change your merry vein to sudden sorrow.

Hod. I change my merry vein? no; thou Bononian, no;
I am a Lord, and therefore let me go;
And do despise thee and thy Cages:

Therefore stand off, and come not near my Honour.

Gov. My

Gov. My Lord, this jesting cannot serve your turn.

Hod. Do'st think, thou black Bononian beast,
That I do flout, do gibe, or jest;
No, no, thou Bear-pot, know that I,
A Noble Earl, a Lord par-dy.

Gov. What means this Trumpet's sound?

A Trumpet sounds. Enter a Messenger.

Cit. One come from the States of Mantua.

Gov. What, would you with us, speak, thou man of

Mes. Men of Bononia, this my message is, (Mantua?)

To let you know the Noble Earle of Bedford

Is safe within the Town of Mantua,

And wills you send the peasant that you have,

Who hath deceived your expectation;

Or else the States of Mantua have vowed,

They will recall the truce that they have made,

And not a man shall stirre from forth your Town,

That shall return unlesse you send him back.

Gov. O this misfortune, how it mads my heart?

The Neopolitan hath beguiled us all:

Hence with this fool, what shall we doe with him,

The Earl being gone? a plague upon it all.

Hod. No I'll assure you, I am no Earl, but a Smith, sir,

One Hodge, a Smith at Putney, sir:

One that hath gulled you, that hath bored you, sir.

Gov. Away with him, take hence the fool you came for.

Hod. I, sir, and I'll leave the greater fool with you.

Mes. Farewell, Bononians. Come, friend, along with me.

Hod. My friend, afore, my Lordship will follow thee.

Exit.

Gov. Well, Mantua, since by thee the Earl is lost,

Within few dayes I hope to see thee crost.

Ex. om.

Enter Chorus.

Cho. Thus far you see how Cromwell's fortune passed.

The Earle of Bedford being safe in Mantua,

Desires Cromwell's company into France,

To make requitall for his courtesie:

But Cromwell doth deny the Earl his suit,

And tells him that those parts he meant to see,

He had not yet set footing on the Land,

And so directly takes his way to Spain:

The Earl to France, and so they both doe part.

Now let your thoughts as swift as is the wind,

Skip some few yeares, that Cromwell spent in travell.

And now imagine him to be in England,

Servant unto the Master of the Rolles:

Where in short time he there began to flourish,

An hour shall show you what few yeares did cherish.

Exit.

*The Musick plays, they bring out the banquet. Enter
Sir Christopher Hales, Cromwell, and two Servants*

Hales. Come, sirs, be carefull of your Masters credit;

And as our bounty now exceeds the figure

Of common entertainment, so doe you

With looks as free as is your Masters soule,

Give formal welcome to the thronged tables,

That shall receive the Cardinals followers,

And the attendants of the great Lord Chancellor.

But all my care, Cromwell, depends on thee:

Thou art a man differing from vulgar form,

And by how much thy spirit is ranckt 'bove these,

In rules of Art, by so much it shines brighter by travell,

Whose observance pleads his merit,

In a most learned, yet unaffected spirit.

Good Cromwell, cast an eye of fair regard

'Bout all my house, and what this ruder flesh,

Through ignorance, or wine, doe miscreate,

Salve thou with courtesie: if welcome want,

Full bowles, and ample banquets will seem scant.

Crom. Sir, whatsoever lies in me,

Assure you I will shew my utmost duty. Exit Crom.

Hales. About it then, the Lords will straight be here:

Cromwell, thou hast those parts would rather sure

The service of the state then of my house:

I look upon thee with a loving eye,

That one day will prefer thy destiny.

Enter Messenger.

Mes. Sir, the Lords be at hand,

Hales. They are welcome, bid Cromwell straight attend us,

And look you all things be in perfect readinesse.

The Musick plays. Enter Cardinal Wolfsey, Sir Thomas Moore and Gardiner.

Wol. O, Sir Christopher, you are too liberall: what, a banquet too?

Hal. My Lords, if words could show the ample welcome,

That my free heart affords you, I could then become a

But I now must deale like a feast Politian (prater:

With your Lordships, deferre your welcome till the ban-

That it may then saive our defect of fare: (quet end,

Yet welcome now, and all that tend on you.

Wol. Thanks to the kind Master of the Rolles.

Come and sit down, sit down, Sir Thomas Moore:

'Tis strange, how that we and the Spaniard differ,

Their dinner is our banquet, after dinner,

And they are men of active disposition:

This I gather, that by their sparing meat,

Their bodies are more fitter for the Warres:

And if that famine chance to pinch their mawes,

Being us'd to fast, it breeds lesse pain.

Hal. Fill me some Wine: I'll answer Cardinal Wolfsey:

My Lord, we English-men are of more freer soules,

Then hunger-starv'd, and ill-complexion'd Spaniards;

They that are rich in Spain, spare belly food,

To deck their backs with an Italian hood,

And Silks of Civil: and the poorest Snake,

That feeds on Lemmons, Pilchers, and ne're heated

His pallet with sweet flesh, will bear a case,

More fat and gallant then his starved face,

Pride, the Inquisition, and this belly-evil,

Are in my judgement Spains three-headed Devil.

Mo. Indeed it is a plague unto their Nation,

Who stagger after in blind imitation.

Hal. My Lords, with welcome, I present your Lordships a solemn health.

Mo. I love health well, but when as healths doe bring

Pain to the head, and bodies sursetting:

Then cease I healths: nay spill not, friend,

For though the drops be small,

Yet have they force, to force men to the wall.

Wol. Sir Christopher, is that your man? (Guist,

Hal. And like your Grace, he is a Schollar, and a Lin-

One that hath travelled many parts of Christendome, my Lord.

Wol. My friend, come nearer, have you been a traveller?

Crom.

Crom. My Lord, I have added to my knowledge the Low Countreys,

France, Spain, Germany, and Italy :

And though small gain of profit I did find,
Yet did it please my eye, content my mind.

Wol. What do you think of the several States;
And Princes Courts as you have travelled?

Crom. My Lord, no Court with England may compare,
Neither for State, nor civil government:
Lust dwells in France, in Italy, and Spain,
From the poor peasant, to the Princes train,
In Germany, and Holland, Riot serves,
And he that most can drink, most he deserves:
England I praise not: for I here was born,
But that she laugheth the others unto scorn.

Wol. My Lord, there dwells within that spirit,
More then can be discern'd by outward eye:

Sir Christopher, will you part with your man?

Hal. I have sought to proffer him to your Lordship,
And now I see he hath prefer'd himself?

Wol. What is thy name?

Crom. Cromwell, my Lord.

Wol. Then, Cromwell, here we make thee soliciter of
And nearest next our self: (our causes,
Gardiner, give you kind welcome to the man.

Gardiner embraces him.

Moor. My Lord, you are a royal Winner.
Hath got a man, besides your bounteous dinner,
Well, Knight, pray we come no more:
If we come often, thou maist shut thy door.

Wol. Sir Christopher, had'st thou given me,
Half thy lands, thou couldest not have pleased me
So much as with this man of thine,
My infant thoughts do spell:

Shortly his fortune shall be lifted higher,
True industry, doth kindle Honours fire,
And so, kind Master of the Rolls, farewell.

Hal. Cromwell, farewell.

Crom. Cromwell takes his leave of you
That ne're will leave to love, and honour you.

Enter Chorus.

The Musick playes as they go out.

Cho. Now Cromwells highest fortunes doth begin.

Wolsey that lov'd him, as he did his life:

Committed all his treasure to his hands,

Wolsey is dead, and Gardiner his man

Is now created Bishop of Winchester:

Pardon if we omit all Wolsey's life,
Because our play depends on Cromwells death,

Now sit and see his highest state of all;

His height of rising: and his sodain fall,

Pardon the errors is already past,

And live in hope the best doth come at last:

My hope upon your favour doth depend,

And look to have your liking ere the end.

Exit.

Enter Gardiner Bishop of Winchester, the Dukes of Norfolk, and of Suffolk, Sir Thomas Moor, Sir Christopher Hales, and Cromwell.

Nor. Master Cromwell, since Cardinal Wolsey's death,
His Majestie is given to understand,

There's certain billes and writings in your hand,
That much concerns the state of England:

My Lord of Winchester, is it not so?

Gar. My Lord of Norfolk, we two were whilome fellows,
And Master Cromwell, though our Masters love:

Did bind us, while his love was to the King,

It is no boot now to deny those things,

Which may be prejudicial to the State:

And though that God hath rais'd my fortune higher,

Then any way I look'd for, or deserv'd.

Yet my life, no longer with me dwell,

Then I prove true unto my Sovereigne.

Suff. What say you, M. Cromwell? have you those writings, I, or no?

Crom. Here are the writings, and upon my knees,

I give them up, unto the worthy Dukes,

Of Suffolk, and of Norfolk: he was my Master,

And each veruious part

That lived in him, I tender'd with my heart,

But what his head complotted 'gainst the State,

My Countries love, commands me that to hate.

His sudden death, I grieve for, not his fall,

Because he sought to work my Countries thrall.

Suff. Cromwell, the King shall hear of this thy duty;

Whom I assure my self, will well reward thee:

My Lord, let's go unto his Majesty,

And shew those writings which he longs to see.

Exit Norfolk and Suffolk.

Enter Bedford hastily.

Bed. How now, whose this, Cromwell?

By my soul, welcome to England:

Thou once did'st save my life, did'st thou not, Cromwell?

Crom. If I did so, 'tis greater glory for me that you remember it,

Then for my self vainly to report it.

Bed. Well, Cromwell, now is the time,

I shall commend thee to my Sovereigne:

Cheer up thy self, for I will raise thy State,

A Russel yet was never found ingrate.

Exit.

Hal. O how uncertain is the wheel of State,

Who lately greater then the Cardinal,

For fear, and love: and now who lower lies?

Gay honours, are but Fortunes flatteries,

And whom this day, pride and promotion swells,

To morrow, envy and ambition quells.

Mo. Who sees the Cob-web intangle the poor Flie,

May boldly say the wretches death is nigh.

Gar. I know his state, and proud ambition,

Was too too violent to last over-long.

Hal. Who soars too near the Sun, with golden wings,

Melts them, to ruine his own fortune brings.

Enter the Duke of Suffolk,

Suf. Cromwell, kneel down in King Henric's name,

Arise Sir Thomas Cromwell, thus begins thy fame.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk,

Norf. Cromwell, the Majesty of England,

For the good liking, he conceives of thee:

Makes thee Master of the Jewel house,

Chief Secretary to himself, and withall,

Creates thee one of his Highness Privie Council.

Enter

Enter the Earl of Bedford.

Bed. Where is sir Thomas Cromwell? is he Knighted?

Suff. He is, my Lord.

Bed. Then, to adde Honour to his Name,
The King creates him Lord Keeper of his privy Seal,
And Master of the Rolls;
Which you, sir Christopher, do now enjoy;
The King determines higher place for you. (sest.)

Crom. My Lords, these honours are too high for my de-

Moor. O content thee, man, who would not chuse it?
Yet thou art wise, in seeming to refuse it.

Gard. Here's Honours, Titles and Promotions;
I fear this climbing, will have a sudden fall.

Norf. Then come, my Lords, let's altogether bring,
This new-made Counsellor to England's King.

Exeunt all but Gardiner.

Gard. But Gardiner means his glory shall be dim'd:
Shall Cromwell live a greater man then I?
My envy with his honour now is bred,
I hope to shorten Cromwell by the head. Exit.

Enter Friskiball, very poor.

Frif. O Friskiball, what shall become of thee?
Where shalt thou go, or which way shalt thou turn?
Fortune that turns her too unconstant wheel,
Hath turn'd thy wealth and riches in the Sea,
All parts abroad where-ever I have been,
Grows weary of me, and denies me succour;
My debtors they, that should relieve my want,
Forswear my money, say they owe me none:
They know my state too mean, to bear out Laws
And here in London, where I oft have been,
And have done good to many a wretched man,
And now most wretched here, despis'd my self;
In vain it is, more of their hearts to try;
Be patient therefore, lay thee down and die.

He lies down.

Enter good-man Seely, and his Wife Joan.

Seely. Come Joan, come, let's see what he'll do for us now? I wis we have done for him, when many a time and often he might have gone a hungry to bed.

Wife. Alas man, now he is made a Lord, he'll never look upon us; he'll fulfill the old Proverb, Set Beggars a horse-back, and they'll ride: A, well-a-day for my Cow; such as he hath made us come behind-hand, we had never pawn'd our Cow else to pay our Rent.

Seely. Well Joan, he'll come this way: and by God's dickers I'll tell him roundly of it, and if he were ten Lords:
a shall know that I had not my Cheefe and my Bacon for nothing.

Wife. Do you remember Husband, how he would mouch upon my Cheefe-cakes, he hath forgot this now, but now we'll remember him.

Seely. I, we shall have now three flapps with a Fox tail: but ifaith I'll gibber a joint, but I'll tell him his own: stay, who comes here? O, stand up, here he comes, stand up.

Enter Hodge very fine, with a Tip-staff, Cromwell, the Mace carried before him; Norfolk, and Suffolk, and attendants.

Hod. Come, away with these Beggars here, rise up, sirrah;

Come out, good people; run before there ho.

Friskiball riseth, and stands a-far-off.

Seely. I, we are kicked away now, we come for our own; the time hath been, he would a looked more friendly upon us: And you, Hodge, we know you well enough, though you are so fine.

Crom. Come hither, sirrah: stay, what men are these?
My honest Host of Hounslow, and his wife;
I owe thee money, father, do I not?

Seely. I, by the body of me, dost thou; would thou wouldst pay me, good four pound it is, I have a the Post at home.

Crom. I know 'tis true; sirrah, give him ten Angels,
And look your wife, and you do stay to dinner:
And while you live, I freely give to you,
Four pound a year, for the four pound I ought you.

Seely. Art not changed, art old Tom still?
Now God blefs thee, good Lord Tom:
Home Joan, home; I'll dine with my Lord Tom to day,
And thou shalt come next week.

Fetch my Cow; home Joan, home.

Wife. Now God blefs thee, my good Lord Tom;
I'll fetch my Cow presently.

Enter Gardiner.

Crom. Sirrah, go to yon stranger, tell him I desire him stay to dinner: I must speak with him.

Gard. My Lord of Norfolk, see you this same Bubble?
That same puffed; but mark the end, my Lord, mark the end.

Norf. I promise you, I like not something he hath done;
But let that pass: the King doth love him well.

Crom. Good morrow to my Lord of Winchester:
I know you bear me hard, about the Abbey lands.

Gard. Have I not reason, when Religion is wronged?
You had no colour for what you have done.

Crom. Yes, the abolishing of Antichrist,
And of his Popish order from our Realm:
I am no enemy to Religion,

But what is done, it is for England's good:
What did they serve for, but to feed a sort
Of lazy Abbots, and of full-fed Fryers?

They neither plow, nor sow, and yet they reap
The fat of all the Land, and suck the poor:
Look what was theirs, is in King Henrie's hands,
His wealth before lay in the Abbey lands.

Gard. Indeed these things you have alledg'd, my Lord,
When, God doth know, the infant yet unborn,
Will curse the time, the Abbies were pul'd down:
I pray now where is Hospitality?
Where now may poor distressed people go,
For to relieve their need, or rest their bones,
When weary travel doth oppress their limmes?
And where religious men should take them in,
Shall now be kept back by a Mastive dog:
And thousand thousand -----

Nor. O my Lord, no more: things past redress,
'Tis bootless to complain.

Crom. What shall we to the Convocation-house?

Nor. We'll follow you, my Lord, pray lead the way.

Enter old Cromwell, like a Farmer.

Old Crom. How? one Cromwell made Lord Keeper, since I left Putney,

And

And dwelt in York-shire? I never heard better newes:
I'll see that Cromwell, or it shall go hard.

Crom. My aged Father! state set aside:
Father, on my knee I crave your blessing:
One of my Servants go and have him in,
At better leisure will we talk with him.

Old Crom. Now if I die, how happy were the day,
To see this comfort rains forth showers of joy.

Exit old Cromwell

Nor. This duty in him shewes a kind of grace.

Crom. Goon before, for time drawes on apace.

Exeunt all but Friskiball.

Frif. I wonder what this Lord would have with me,
His man so strictly gave me charge to stay:
I never did offend him to my knowledge:
Well, good or bad, I mean to bide it all,
Worse then I am, now never can befall.

Enter Banister and his Wife.

Ba. Come, Wife, I take it be almost dinner time,
For Mr. Newton, and Mr. Crosbie sent to me
Last night, they would come dine with me,
And take their bond in: I pray thee hie thee home,
And see that all things be in readinesse.

Mi. Ba. They shall be welcome, Husband, I'll go
But is not that man Master Friskiball? (before)

She runs and embraces him.

Ba. O heavens! it is kind Master Friskiball:
Say, sir, what hap hath brought you to this passe?

Frif. The same that brought you to your misery.

Ba. Why would you not acquaint me with your state?
Is Banister your poor friend forgot?

Whose goods, whose love, whose life and all is yours.

Frif. I thought your usage would be as the rest,
That had more kindnesse at my hands then you,
Yet look'd asfance whenas they saw me poor.

Mi. Ba. If Banister should bear so base a heart,
I never would look my husband in the face,
But hate him as I would a Cockatrice.

Ba. And well thou mightest, should Banister deal so,
Since that I saw you, sir, my state is mended:

And for the thousand pound I owe to you,
I have it ready for you, sir, at home:
And though I grieve your fortune is so bad:
Yet that my hap's to help you makes me glad:
And now, sir, will it please you walk with me.

Frif. Not yet I cannot, for the Lord Chancellor,
Hath here commanded me to wait on him,
For what I know not, pray God it be for good.

Ba. Never make doubt of that, I'll warrant you,
He is as kind a noble Gentleman,
As ever did possesse the place he hath.

Mi. Ba. Sir, my Brother is his Steward, if you please,
We'll go along and bear you company:
I know we shall not want for welcome there?

Frif. Withall my heart: but what's become of Bagot?

Ba. He is hanged for buying Jewels of the Kings.

Frif. A just reward for one so impious,
The time drawes on, sir, will you go along.

Ba. I'll follow you, kind Master Friskiball.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter two Merchants.

1. Now, Master Crosbie, I see you have a care
To keep your word, in payment of your money.

2. By my faith I have reason upon a Bond,
Three thousand pounds is too much to forfeit,
Yet I doubt not, Master Banister.

1. By my faith your summe is more then mine,
And yet I am not much behind you too,
Considering that to day I paid at Court.

2. Masse, and well remembered:
What's the reason the Lord Cromwell's men
Wear such long Skirts upon their Coats?
They reach down to their very Hams.

1. I will resolve you, sir, and thus it is:
The Bishop of Winchester, that loves not Cromwell,
As great men are envied as well as lesse,
A while ago there was a jar between them,
And it was brought to my Lord Cromwell's ear,
That Bishop Gardiner would sit on his Skirts,
Upon which word he made his men long blew Coats,
And in the Court wore one of them himself:
And meeting with the Bishop, quoth he, my Lord,
Here's Skirts enough now for your Grace to sit on:
Which vexed the Bishop to the very heart;
This is the reason why they wear long Coats.

2. 'Tis alwayes seen and mark it for a rule,
That one great man will envy still another:
But 'tis a thing that nothing concerns me:
What, shall we now to Master Banister's?

1. I, come, we'll pay him royally for our dinner. Ex.

Enter the Usher and the Shewer, the meat goes over the Stage.

Usher. Uncover there, Gentlemen.

Enter Cromwell, Bedford, Suffolk, Old Cromwell, Friskiball, good-man Seely, and attendants.

Crom. My noble Lords of Suffolk and Bedford,
Your Honours welcome to poor Cromwell's house:
Where is my Father? nay, be covered Father,
Although that duty to these noble men doth challenge it,
Yet I'll make bold with them.

Your head doth bear the calender of care:
What? Cromwell covered, and his Father bare?
It must not be. Now, sir, to you:
Is not your name Friskiball? and a Florentine.

Frif. My name was Friskiball, till cruell fate,
Did rob me of my name, and of my state.

Crom. What fortune brought you to this Countrey now?

Frif. All other parts hath left me succourlesse,
Save onely this, because of debts I have
I hope to gain, for to relieve my want.

Crom. Did you not once upon your Florence bridge,
Help a distressed man, robb'd by the Bandetti,
His name was Cromwell?

Frif. I never niade my brain a Calender of any good I did,

I alwayes lov'd this nation with my heart.

Crom. I am that Cromwell that you there reliev'd,
Sixteen Duckets you gave me for to cloath me,
Sixteen to hear my charges by the way,
And sixteen more I had for my Horse hire,
There be those severall summes justly return'd:
Yet it injustice were, that serving at my need,
For to repay them without interest:

Therefore receive of me these four severall Bags

.... 2

In

In each of them there is four hundred Marke,
And bring to me the names of all your debtors,
And if they will not see you paid, I will.
O God forbid, that I should see him fall,
That helpt me in my greatest need of all.
Here stands my Father that first gave me life,
Alas, what duty is too much for him ?
This man in time of need did save my life,
And therefore cannot doe too much for him.
By this old man I oftentimes was fed,
Else might I have gone supperlesse to bed.
Such kindnesse have I had of these three men,
That Cromwell no way can repay agen.
Now in to dinner, for we stay too long,
And to good stomacks is no greater wrong.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Gardiner in his Study, and his man.

Gard. Sirrah, where be those men I caus'd to stay ?

Ser. They do attend your pleasure, Sir, within.

Gard. Bid them come hither, and stay you without,
For by those men the Fox of this same land,
That makes a Goose of better then himself,
Must worried be unto his latest home,
Or Gardiner will fail in his intent.
As for the Dukes of Suffolk and of Norfolk,
Whom I have sent for to come speak with me;
Howsoever outwardly they shadow it,
Yet in their hearts I know they love him not ;
As for the Earl of Bedford, he is but one,
And dares not gain-say what we do set down.

Enter the two Witnesses.

Now, my friends, you know I sav'd your lives,
When by the Law you had deserved death ;
And then you promised me upon your Oathes,
To venture both your lives to do me good.

Both Wit. We swore no more then that we will perform.

Gard. I take your words, and that which you must do,
Is service for your God, and for your King ;
To root a Rebell from this flourishing Land,
One that's an enemy unto the Church :
And therefore must you take your solemn Oathes,
That you heard Cromwell, the Lord Chancellor,
Did with a Dagger at King Henrie's Heart :
Fear not to swear it, for I heard him speak it ;
Therefore we'll shield you from ensuing harmes.

2. Wit. If you will warrant us the deed is good,
We'll undertake it.

Gard. Kneel down, and I will here absolve you both ;
This Crucifix I lay upon your heads,
And sprinkle Holy-water on your browes :
The deed is meritorious that you do,
And by it shall you purchase Grace from Heaven.

1. Now sir we'll undertake it, by our Soules.

2. For Cromwell never loved none of our sort.

Gard. I know he doth not, and for both of you,
I will prefer you to some place of worth ;
Now get you in, until I call for you,
For presently the Dukes mean to be here. Exeunt Wit.
Cromwell, sit fast, thy time's not long to reign ;
The Abbies that were pul'd down by thy means,
Is now a mean for me to pull thee down :
Thy pride also thy own head lights upon,

For thou art he hath chang'd Religion :
But now no more, for here the Dukes are come.

Enter Suffolk, Norfolk, and the Earl of Bedford.

Suff. Good even to my Lord Bishop.

Nor. How fares my Lord ? what, are you all alone ?

Gard. No, not alone, my Lords, my mind is troubled :
I know your honours muse wherefore I sent,
And in such haste : What came you from the King ?

Nor. We did, and left none but Lord Cromwell with him.

Gard. O what a dangerous time is this we live in ?
There's Thomas Wolsey, he's already gone,
And Thomas Moor, he followed after him :

Another Thomas yet there doth remain,
That is far worse then either of those twain ;
And if with speed, my Lords, we not pursue it,
I fear the King and all the Land will rue it.

Bed. Another Thomas ? pray God it be not Cromwell.

Gard. My Lord of Bedford, it is that Traitor Cromwell.

Bed. Is Cromwell false ? my heart will never think it.

Suff. My Lord of Winchester, what likelihood,
Or proof have you of this his treachery.

Gard. My Lord, too much, call in the men within ;

Enter the Witnesses.

These men, my Lord, upon their Oathes affirm,
That they did hear Lord Cromwell in his Garden,
Wished a Dagger sticking at the Heart
Of our King Henry, what is this but Treason ?

Bed. If it be so, my heart doth bleed with sorrow.

Suff. How say you, friends ; what, did you hear these

1. Wit. We did, an't like your grace. (words ?)

Nor. In what place was Lord Cromwell when he spake them ?

2. Wit. In his Garden ; where we did attend a suite,
Which we had waited for two yeares and more.

Suff. How long is't since you heard him speak these

2. Wit. Some half a year since. (words ?)

Bed. How chance that you conceal'd it all this time ?

1. Wit. His Greatness made us fear, that was the cause.

Gard. I, I, his Greatness, that's the cause indeed ;
And to make his Treason here more manifest,
He calls his servants to him round about,
Tells them of Wolsey's life, and of his fall,
Says that himself hath many enemies,
And gives to some of them a Park, or Mannor,
To others Leases, Lands to other some :
What need he do this in his prime of life,
An if he were not fearfull of his death ?

Suff. My Lord, these likelihoods are very great.

Bed. Pardon me, Lords, for I must needs depart ;
Their proofs are great, but greater is my heart.

Exit Bedford.

Nor. My friends, take heed of that which you have said ;

Your soules must answer what your tongues report :
Therefore take heed, be wary what you do.

2. Wit. My Lord, we speak no more but truth.

Nor. Let them depart, my Lord of Winchester ;
Let these men be close kept
Until the day of tryal.

Gard. They shall, my Lord ; ho, take in these two men.

Exeunt Witnesses.

My Lords, if Cromwell have a publick Tryal,
That which we do, is void, by his denial ;

You

You know the King will credit none but him.

Nor. 'Tis true, he rules the King even as he pleases.

Suff. How shall we do for to attache him then?

Gar. Marry, my Lords, thus, by an Act he made him-
With an intent to intrap some of our lives, (self,

And this it is: If any Counsellor

Be convicted of high treason,

He shall be executed without a publick triall.

This Act my Lords, he caus'd the King to make.

Suff. A did indeed, and I remember it,

And now it is like to fall upon himself.

Nor. Let us not slack it, 'tis for Englands good,
We must be wary, else he'll go beyond us.

Gar. Well hath your Grace said, my Lord of Norfolk.

Therefore, let us presently to Lambeth,

Thither comes Cromwell, from the Court to night,

Let us arrest him, send him to the Tower.

And in the morning, cut off the traitors head.

Nor. Come then about it, let us guard the town,

This is the day that Cromwell must go down.

Gar. Along my Lords, well, Cromwell is halfe dead,
He shak'd my heart, but I will shave his head. Exeunt.

Enter Bedford solus.

Bed. My soul is like a water troubled,
And Gardiner is the man that makes it so;

O Cromwell, I do fear thy end is near:

Yet I'll prevent their malice if I can,

And in good time, see where the man doth come,

Who little knows how near's his day of doom.

Enter Cromwell with his train, Bedford makes as though he would speak to him: he goes on.

Cro. You'r well encountred, my good Lord of Bedford,
Pray Pardon me, I am sent for to th' King,
And do not know the businesse yet my self,
So fare you well, for I must needs be gone.

Exit all the train.

Bed. You must, well, what remedy?
I fear too soon you must be gone indeed,
The King hath businesse, but little do'st thou know,
Whose busie for thy life: thou think'st not so.

Enter Cromwell and the train again.

Crom. The second time well met my Lord of Bedford.
I am very sorry that my haste is such,
Lord Marquess Dorset being sick to death,
I must receive of him the privy Seale
At Lambeth, soon my Lord, we'll talk our fill.

Exit the train.

Bed. How smooth and easie is the way to death.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord, the Dukes of Norfolk and of Suffolk, Accompanied with the Bishop of Winchester,
Intreats you to come presently to Lambeth,
On earnest matters that concerns the State.

Bed. To Lambeth, so: go fetch me pen and ink,
I and Lord Cromwell there shall talk enough:
I, and our lust, I fear, and if he come.

He writes a Letter.

Here, take this Letter, and bear it to Lord Cromwell,
Bid him read it, say it concerns him near,

Away, be gone, make all the haste you can,
To Lambeth do I go, a wofull man.

Exit.

Enter Cromwell and his train.

Crom. Is the Barge ready? I will straight to Lambeth,
And if this one dayes businesse, once were past,
I'd take my ease to morrow after trouble,
How now my friend, would'st thou speak with me?

*The messenger brings the Letter,
he puts it in his pocket.*

Mes. Sir, here's a Letter from my Lord of Bedford.

Crom. O good my friend, commend me to thy Lord,
Hold, take those Angels, drink them for thy pains.

Mes. He doth desire your Grace to read it,
Because he sayes it doth concern you near.

Crom. Bid him assure himself of that, farewell,
To morrow, tell him, he shall hear from me,
Set on before there, and away to Lambeth.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Winchester, Suffolk, Norfolk, Bedford, Ser-jeant at armes, the Herald, and Halberts.

Gar. Halberts stand close unto the water side,
Serjeant at armes, be bould in your office,
Herald, deliver your Proclamation.

Her. This is to give notice to all the Kings subjects.
The late Lord Cromwell, Lord Chancellor of England,
Vicar general over the Realm,
Him to hold and esteem as a traitor,
Against the Crown and dignity of England:
So God save the King.

Gar. Amen.

Bed. Amen, and root thee from the land,
For whil'st thou livest truth cannot stand.

Nor. Make a lane there, the traitor is at hand,
Keep back Cromwell's men:
Drown them if they come on, Serjeant your office?

Enter Cromwell, they make a lane with their Halberts.

Cro. What means my Lord of Norfolk by these words:
Sirs, come along.

Gar. Kill them, if they come on.

Ser. Lord Cromwell, in King Henries name,
I do arrest your honour of high treason.

Crom. Serjeant, me of treason?

Cromwell's men offer to draw.

Suff. Kill them, if they draw a sword.

Crom. Hold, I chaise you, as you love me, draw not a
Who dares accuse Cromwell of treason now? (sword,

Gar. This is no place to reckon up your crime,
Your Dove-like looks were view'd with serpents eyes.

Crom. With serpents eyes indeed, by thine they were,
But, Gardiner, do thy worst, I fear thee not,
My faith compar'd with thine, as much shall pass,
As doth the Diamond excell the glasse:
Attach'd of treason, no accusers by,
Indeed what tongue dares speak so foul a lie?

Nor. My Lord, my Lord, matters are too well known,
And is it time the King had note thereof.

Crom. The King, let me go to him face to face,
No better triall I desire then that,
Let him but say, that Cromwell's faith was fained,
Then Let my Honour. and my Name be stained:

If ever my heart against the King was set,
O let my soule in judgement answer it,
Then if my faith's confirmed with his reason,
'Gainst whom hath Cromwell then committed treason?

Suf. My Lord, your matter shall be tried,
Mean time with patience content your self.

Crom. Perforce I must with patience be content
O, dear friend Bedford, dost thou stand so near?
Cromwell rejoyceth one friend sheds a tear:
And whether is't? which way must Cromwell now.

Gar. My Lord, you must unto the Tower:
Lieutenant, take him to your charge.

Crom. Well, where you please, yet before I part,
Let me conferre a little with my men.

Gar. As you go by water so you shall.

Crom. I have some businesse present to impart.

Nor. You may not stay, Lieutenant, take your charge.

Crom. Well, well, my Lord, you second Gardiners text.
Norfolk, farewell, thy turn will be the next.

Exit Cromwell and the Lieutenant.

Gar. His guilty Conscience makes him rave, my Lord.

Nor. I, let him talk, his time is short enough.

Gar. My Lord of Bedford, come, you weep for him,
That would not shed a tear for you.

Bed. It grieves me for to see his sudden fall.

Gar. Such successe with I unto Traitors all. Exeunt.

Enter two Citizens.

1. Why? can this newes be true? is't possible?
The great Lord Cromwell arrested upon Treason,
I hardly will believe it can be so.

2. It is too true, sir, would it were otherwise, Condition I spent half the wealth I have;
I was at Lambeth, saw him there arrested,
And afterward committed to the Tower.

1. What was't for Treason that he was committed?

2. Kind, Noble Gentleman: I may rue the time;
All that I have, I did enjoy by him,
And if he die, then all my state is gone.

1. It may be hoped that he shall not die,
Because the King did favour him so much.

2. O, sir, you are deceived in thinking so:
The grace and favour he had with the King,
Hath caus'd him have so many enemies:
He that in Court secure will keep himself,
Must not be great, for then he is envied at.
The Shrub is safe, when as the Cedar shakes,
For where the King doth love above compare,
Of others they as much more envied are.

1. 'Tis pittie that this noble man should fall,
He did so many charitable deeds.

2. 'Tis true, and yet you see in each estate,
There's none so good, but some one doth him hate,
And they before would smile him in the face,
Will be the formost to doe him disgrace:
What, will you go along unto the Court?

1. I care not if I doe, and hear the newes,
How men will judge what shall become of him.

2. Some men will speak hardly, some will speak in Go you to the Court. I'll go into the City, (pity,
There I am sure to hear more newes then you.

1. Why then soon will we meet again. Exeunt.

Enter Cromwell in the Tower.

Crom. Now, Cromwell, hast thou time to meditate,

And think upon thy state, and of the time:
Thy honours came unsought, I, and unlooked for,
They fall as sudden, and unlooked for too:
What glory was in England that I had not?
Who in this Land commanded more then Cromwell?
Except the King, who greater then my self?
But now I see what after ages shall,
The greater men, more sudden is their fall.
And now I doe remember, the Earl of Bedford
Was very desirous for to speak to me:
And afterward sent unto me a Letter,
The which I think I have still in my Pocket,
Now may I read it, for I now have leisure,
And this I take it is. He reads the Letter.

*My Lord, come not this night to Lambeth,
For if you doe, your state is overthrown.
And much I doubt your life, and if you come:
Then if you love your self, stay where you are.*

O God, had I but read this Letter,
Then had I been free from the Lyons paw:
Deferring this to read untill to morrow,
I spurn'd at joy, and did embrace my sorrow.

Enter the Lieutenant of the Tower and Officers.

Now, Master Lieutenant, when's this day of death?

Lien. Alas, my Lord, would I might never see it:
Here are the Dukes of Suffolk and of Norfolk,
Winchester, Bedford, and Sir Richard Ratcliffe,
With others, but why they come I know not.

Crom. No matter wherefore, Cromwell is prepar'd,
For Gardiner has my life and state insnar'd:
Bid them come in, or you shall doe them wrong,
For here stands he, whom some thinks lives too long,
Learning kills Learning, and, instead of Ink
To dip his Pen, Cromwell's heart blood doth drink.

Enter all the Nobles.

Norf. Good morrow, Cromwell, what, alone so sad?

Crom. One good among you, none of you are bad:
For my part, it best fits me be alone,
Sadnesse with me, not I with any one.

What, is the King acquainted with my cause?

Norf. We have, and he hath answered us, my Lord.

Crom. How shall I come to speak with him my self.

Gard. The King is so advertised of your guilt,
He will by no meanes admit you to his presence.

Crom. No way admit me, am I so soon forgot?
Did he but yesterday embrace my neck,
And said that Cromwell was even half himself,
And is his Princely eares so much bewitched
With scandalous ignominy, and slanderous speeches,
That now he doth deny to look on me?
Well, my Lord of Winchester, no doubtr but you
Are much in favour with his Majesty,
Will you bear a Letter from me to his Grace?

Gar. Pardon me, I'll bear no Traitors Letters.

Crom. Ha, will you doe this kindeesse then?
Tell him by word of mouth what I shall say to you.

Gard. That will I.

Crom. But on your honour will you?

Gar. I, on my honour.

Crom. Bear witnesse, Lords.

Tell him, when he hath known you,
And try'd your faith but half so much as mine,
He'll find you to be the falsest hearted man
In England: Pray tell him this.

Bed. Be patient, good my Lord, in these extremities.

Crom. My kind and honourable Lord of Bedford,
I know your honour always lov'd me well,
But, pardon me, this still shall be my theme,
Gardiner is the cause makes Cromwell so extream:
Sir Ralph Sadler, pray a word with you;
You were my man, and all that you possess
Came by my means, to requite all this,
Will you take this Letter here of me,
And give it with your own hands to the King.

Sad. I kiss your hand, and never will I rest,
E're to the King this be delivered. Exit Sadler.

Crom. Why yet Cromwell hath one Friend in store.

Gard. But all the haste he makes shall be but vain;
Here's a discharge for your Prisoner,
To see him executed presently:
My Lord, you heare the tenor of your life.

Crom. I do embrace it, welcome my last date,
And of this glistening world I take last leave;
And, Noble Lords, I take my leave of you:
As willingly I go to meet with death,
As Gardiner did pronounce it with his breath;
From Treason is my heart as white as Snow,
My death onely procured by my Foe:
I pray commend me to my Sovereign King,
And tell him in what sort his Cromwell dy'd,
To loose his head before his cause was try'd:
But let his Grace, when he shall hear my name,
Say onely this, Gardiner procur'd the same.

Enter young Cromwell.

Liev. Here is your Son come to take his leave.

Crom. To take his leave?

Come hither, Harry Cromwell;
Mark, Boy, the last words that I speak to thee;
Flatter not Fortune, neither fawn upon her;
Gape not for state, yet lose no spark of honour;
Ambition, like the plague see thou eschew it;
I die for Treason, Boy, and never knew it;
Yet let thy faith as spotless be as mine,
And Cromwell's virtues in thy face shall shine:
Come, go along and see me leave my breath,
And I'll leave thee upon the floor of death.

Son. O father, I shall die to see that wound,
Your blood being spilt will make my heart to sound.

Crom. How, Boy, not look upon the Axe?
How shall I do then to have my head strook off?

Come on, my child, and see the end of all,
And after say that Gardiner was my fall.

Gard. My Lord, you speak it of an envious heart,
I have done no more then Law and equity.

Bed. O, my good Lord of Winchester, forbear;
It would better seemed you to been absent,
Then with your words disturb a dying man.

Crom. Who me, my Lord? no: he disturbs not me,
My mind he stirres not, though his mighty shock
Hath brought moe Peers heads down to the block.
Farewell, my Boy, all Cromwell can bequeath,
My hearty blessing, so I take my leave.

Hang. I am your death's-man, pray my Lord forgive me.

Cro. Even with my soul, why man thou art my Doctor,
And bring'st me precious Physick for my Soul;
My Lord of Bedford, I desire of you,
Before my death a corporal embrace.

Bedford comes to him, Cromwell embraces him.

Farewell, great Lord, my love I do commend:
My heart to you, my soul to heaven I send;
This is my joy, that e're my body fleet,
Your honour'd armes is my true winding-sheet;
Farewell, dear Bedford, my peace is made in heaven;
Thus falls great Cromwell a poor ell in length,
To rise to unmeasur'd height, winged with new strength.
The land of Wormes, which dying men discover.
My soul is shrin'd with heaven's celestial cover.

Exeunt Cromwell and the Officers, and others.

Bed. Well, farewell Cromwell, the truest friend
That ever Bedford shall possess again,
Well, Lords, I fear when this man is dead,
You'll wish in vain that Cromwell had a head.

Enter one with Cromwell's head.

Off. Here is the head of the deceased Cromwell.

Bed. Pray thee go hence, and bear his head away,
Unto his body, interre them both in clay.

Enter Sir Ralph Sadler.

Sad. How now my Lords, what is Lord Cromwell dead?

Bed. Lord Cromwell's body now doth want a head.

Sad. O God, a little speed had sav'd his life,
Here is a kind Reprieve come from the King,
To bring him straight unto his Majesty.

Suff. I, I, Sir Ralph, Reprieves come now too late.

Gar. My conscience now tells me this deed was ill,
Would Christ that Cromwell were alive again.

Nor. Come let us to the King, whom well I know,
Will grieve for Cromwell, that his death was so.

Exeunt omnes.

THE PROLOGUE.

TH E doubfull Title (Gentlemen) prefixt
Upon the Argument we have in hand,
May breed suspence, and wrongfully disturb
The peacefull quiet of your settled thoughts:
To stop which scruple, let this brief suffice.
It is no pampers'd Glutton we present,

Nor aged Counsellor to youthfull sin;
But one, whose vertue shone above the rest,
A valiant Martyr, and a vertuous Peer,
In whose true faith and loyalty exprest
Unto his Sovereigne, and his Countreies weal:
We strive to pay that tribute of our love
Your favours merits: Let fair truth be grac'd,
Since forg'd invention former time defac'd.

Sheriff.

MY Lords I charge ye in his Highness name,
To keep the peace, you and your followers.
Her. Good M. Sheriff, look unto your self.
Pow. Do so, for we have other businesse.

Proffer to fight again.

Sher. Will ye disturb the Judges, and the Assize?
Hear the King's Proclamation, ye were best.

Pow. Hold then, let's hear it.

Her. But be brief, ye were best.

Bail. O yes.

Davy. Cossone, make shorter O, or shall mar your Yes.

Bail. O yes.

Owyn. What, has her nothing to say, but O yes?

Bay. O yes.

Da. O nay, py cofs plut, down with her, down with her.

A Powesse, a Powesse.

Gough. A Herbert, a Herbert, and down with Powesse.
Helter skelter again.

Sher. Hold in the King's name, hold.

Owyn. Down with a kanaves name, down.

In this fight the Bailiff is knock'd down, and the Sheriff and the other run away.

Her. Powesse, I think thy welsh and thou do smart.

Pow. Herbert, I think my sword came near thy heart.

Her. Thy hearts best blood shall pay the los of mine.

Gough. A Herbert, a Herbert.

Davy. A Powesse, a Powesse.

As they are fighting, enter the Mayor of Hereford, his Officers and Towns-men with Clubs.

Mai. My Lords, as you are Liege-men to the Crown,
True Noblemen, and subjects to the King,
Attend his highnesse Proclamation,

Commanded by the Judges of Assize,
For keeping peace at this assembly.

Her. Good M. Maior of Hereford, be brief.

Mai. Serjeant, without the ceremonies of O yes,
Pronounce aloud the Proclamation.

Ser. The Kings Justices, perceiving what publick mischief may ensue this private quarrel: in his Majesties name, do straightly charge and command all persons, of what degree soever, to depart this City of Hereford, except such as are bound to give attendance at this Assize, and that no man presume to wear any weapon, especially Welsh-hooks, Forrest Bills.

Owyn. Haw? No pill nor Wells hoog? ha?

Mai. Peace, and hear the Proclamation.

Ser. And that the Lord Powess do presently disperse and discharge his retinue, and depart the City in the Kings peace, he and his followers, on pain of imprisonment.

Dav. Haw? pud her Lord Powess in prison? A Powess
A Powess. Cossone, her willlive and tye with her Lord.

Gough. A Herbert, a Herbert.

In this fight the Lord Herbert is wounded, and falls to the ground, the Maior & his company cry for clubs:

Powess runs away. Gough and Herberts faction are busie about him. Enter the two Judges, the Sheriff, and his Bayliffs afore them, &c.

1. Jud. Where's the Lord Herbert? Is he hurt or slain?

Sher. He's here, my Lord.

2. Jud. How fares his Lordship, friends?

Gough. Mortally wounded, speechless, he cannot live.

1. Jud. Convey him hence, let not his wounds take air,
And get him drest with expedition.

*Exit L. Herbert and Gough.
¶ A M. May-*

M. Mayor of Hereford M. Sheriff o'th' Shire,
Commit Lord Powess to safe custody,
To answer the disturbance of the peace,
Lord Herberts peril, and his high contempt
Of us, and you the Kings Commissioners,
See it be done with care and diligence.

Sher. Please it your Lordship, my Lord Powess is gone
Past all recovery.

2. Jud. Yet let search be made,
To apprehend his followers that are left.

Sher. There are some of them : sirs, lay hold of them.

Owen. Of us? and why? what has her done I pray you?

Sher. Disarme them, Bailiffs.

May. Officers assist.

Davy. Hear you, Lord Shudge, what reason for this?

Owen. Cossoon, pe puse for fighting for our Lord?

1. Jud. Away with them.

Davy. Harg you my Lord.

Owen. Gough my Lord Herberts man's a shitten kanave.

Davy. Ice live and tye in good quarrel.

Owen. Pray you do shustice, let awl be prison.

Davy. Prison, no,

Lord Shudge, I wool give you pale, good surety.

2. Jud. What bail? what sureties?

Davy. Her Cozen ap Rice, ap Evan, ap Morice, ap Morgan, ap Lluellyn, ap Madoc, ap Meredith, ap Griffin, ap Davy, ap Owen, ap Shinken Shones.

2. Jud. Two of the most sufficient are enow.

Sher. And't please your Lordship these are all but one.

1. Jud. To Jayl with them, & the Lord Herberts men,
We'll talk with them, when the Assize is done. Exeunt.
Riotous, audacious, and unruly Grooms,
Must we be forced to come from the Bench,
To quiet brawls, which every Constable
In other civil places can suppress?

2. Jud. What was the quarrel that caus'd all this stir?

Sher. About Religion as I heard, my Lord.
Lord Powess detracted from the power of Rome,
Affirming Wickliffs Doctrine to be true,
And Romes erroneous : hot reply was made
By the Lord Herbert, they were Traitors all
That would maintain it. Powess answered,
They were as true, as noble, and as wise
As he, that would defend it with their lives,
He nam'd for instance Sir John Oldcastle
The Lord Cobham : Herbert replied again,
He, thou, and all are Traitors that so hold.
The lye was given, the several Factions drawn,
And so enrag'd, that we could not appease it.

1. Jud. This case concerns the Kings Prerogative,
And'tis dangerous to the State and Common-wealth.
Gentlemen, Justices, M. Mayor, and M. Sheriff,
It doth behoove us all, and each of us
In general and particular, to have care
For the suppressing of all mutinies,
And all assemblies, except souldiers musters,
For the Kings preparation into France.
We hear of secret Conventicles made,
And there is doubt of some Conspiracies,
Which may break out into rebellious armes
When the King's gone, perchance before he go:
Note as an instance, this one perillous fray,
What factions might have grown on either part.
To the destruction of the King and Realme:
Yet, in my conscience, Sir John Oldcastle's
Innocent of it, onely his name was us'd.

We therefore from his Highnesse give this charge :
You Master Mayor, look to your Citizens,
You Master Sheriff, unto your Shire, and you
As Justices in every ones precinct
There be no meetings. When the vulgar sort
Sit on their Ale-bench, with their cups and cans,
Matters of State be not their common talk,
Nor pure Religion by their lips prophan'd.
Let us return unto the Bench again,
And there examine further of this fray.

Enter a Bailiff and a Serjeant.

Sher. Sirs, have ye taken the Lord Powess yet?

Bail. No, nor heard of him.

Ser. No, he's gone far enough.

2. Jud. They that are left behind, shall answer all. Exeunt.

Enter Suffolk, Bishop of Rochester, M. Butler, Sir John the Parson of Wrotham.

Suf. Now, my Lord Bishop, take free liberty
To speak your mind; What is your suit to us?

Bish. My noble Lord, no more then what you know,
And have been oftentimes invested with:
Grievous complaints have past between the lips
Of envious persons to upbraid the Clergy,
Some carping at the livings which we have;
And others spurning at the Ceremonies
That are of ancient custome in the Church.
Amongst the which, Lord Cobham is a chief:
What inconvenience may proceed hereof,
Both to the King, and to the Common-wealth,
May easily be discern'd, when like a frensie
This innovation shall possesse their minds.
These upstarts will have followers to uphold
Their damn'd opinion, more than Harry shall,
To undergo his quarrel 'gainst the French.

Suf. What proof is there against them to be had,
That what you say the Law may justifie?

Bish. They give themselves the names of Protestants,
And meet in fields and solitary groves.

S. Joh. Was ever heard (my Lord) the like till now?
That thieves and rebels, sblood hereticks,
Plain hereticks, I'll stand to't to their teeth,
Should have to colour their vile practises,
A Title of such worth, as Protestant?

Enter one with a Letter.

Suf. O but you must not swear, it ill becomes
One of your coat, to rap out bloody oaths.

Bish. Pardon him, good my Lord, it is his zeal,
An honest country Prelate, who laments
To see such foul disorder in the Church.

S. Joh. There's one they call him Sir John Oldcastle,
He has not his name for nought : for like a Castle
Doth he encompass them within his walls,
But till that castle be subverted quite,
We ne're shall be at quiet in the Realme.

Bish. This is our suit (my Lord) that he be tane
And brought in question for his heresie:
Beside, two Letters brought me out of Wales,
Wherein my Lord Hertford writes to me,
Whar tumult and sedition was begun,
About the Lord Cobham, at the Sizes there,
For they had much adoe to calme the rage,
And that the valiant Herbert is there slain.

Suf. A fire that must be quencht. Well, say no more,
The King anon goes to the Council Chamber,

There

There to debate of matters touching France,
As he doth passe by, I'll informe his Grace
Concerning your Petition. Master Butler,
If I forget, do you remember me.

But. I will my Lord.

Offer him a purse.

Bish. Not as a Recompence,
But as a Token of our love to you.
By me (my Lords) the Clergy doth present
This purse, and in it full a thousand Angels,
Praying your Lordship to accept their gift.

Suf. I thank them, my Lord Bishop, for their love,
But will not take their money, if you please
To give it to this Gentleman, you may.

Bish. Sir, then we crave your furtherance herein.

But. The best I can, my Lord of Rocheſter.

Bish. Nay, pray take it, trust me you shall.

S. John. Were ye all three upon New-Market heath,
You should not need strain cur'sie who should ha't,
Sir John would quickly rid ye of that care.

Suf. The King is coming: Fear ye not, my Lord,
The very first thing I will break with him
Shall be about your matter.

Enter King Harry and Huntington in talk.

Har. My Lord of Suffolk,
Was it not said the Clergy did refuse
To lend us Money toward our warrs in France?

Suf. It was my Lord, but very wrognfully.

Har. I know it was: for Huntington here tells me
They have been very bountifull of late.

Suf. And still they vow, my gracious Lord, to be so,
Hoping your Majesty will think on them
As of your loving Subjects, and suppress
All such malicious errors as begin
To spot their calling, and disturb the Church.

Har. God else forbid: why, Suffolk,
Is there any new rupture to disquiet them?

Suf. No new my Lord, the old is great enough,
And so increasing, as if not cut down,
Will breed a scandal to your Royal State,
And set your Kingdome quickly in an uproar.
The Kentish Knight, Lord Cobham in despight
Of any Law, or spiritual discipline,
Maintains this upstart new Religion still,
And divers great assemblies by his means
And private quarrels, are commenc'd abroad,
As by this letter more at large my Liege, is made apparent.

Har. We do find it here,
There was in Wales a certain fray of late
Between two Noblemen. But what of this?
Follows it straight Lord Cobham must be he Did cause the same? I dare be sworn (good Knight)
He never dreamt of any such contention.

Bish. But in his name the quarrel did begin,
About the opinion which he held my Liege.

Har. What if it did? was either he in place
To take part with them? or abet them in it?
If brabbling fellows, whose enkindled bloud
Seet's in their fiery veins, will needs go fight,
Making their quarrels of some words that past
Either if you, or you, amongst their cups,
Is the fault yours? or are they guilty of it?

Suf. With pardon of your Highnesse, my dread Lord,
Such little sparks neglected, may in time
Grow to a mighty flame. But that's not all,
He doth beside maintain a strange Religion,

And will not be compell'd to come to Mass.

Bish. We do beseech you therefore, gracious Prince,
Without offence unto your Majesty,
We may be bold to use authority.

Har. As how?

Bish. To summon him unto the Arches,
Where such offences have their punishment.

Har. To answer personally, is that your meaning?

Bish. It is, my Lord.

Har. How if he appeal?

Bish. My Lord, he cannot in such a case as this.

Suf. Not where Religion is the plea, my Lord.

Har. I took it alwayes, that our self stood on't
As a sufficient refuge: unto whom
Not any but might lawfully appeal.

But we'll not argue now upon that point.

For Sir John Oldcastle whom you accuse,

Let me intreat you to dispence a while

With your high Title of preheminance.

In scorn.

Report did never yet condemne him so,

But he hath alwayes been reputed loyal:

And in my knowledge I can say thus much,

That he is vertuous, wise, and honorable.

If any way his conscience be seduc'd

To waver in his faith, I'll send for him

And schoole him privately: If that serve not,

Then afterward you may proceed against him.

Butler, be you the Messenger for us,

And will him presently repair to Court.

Exeunt.

S. John. How now my Lord? why stand you discontent?

Insooth (methinks) the King hath well decreed

Bish. I, I, Sir John, if he would keep his word:

But I perceive he favours him so much

As this will be to small effect, I fear.

S. John. Why then I'll tell you what y'are best to do:

If you suspect the King will be but cold

In reprehending him, send you a Proceſs too

To serve upon him: so ye may be sure

To make him answer't, howsoere it fall.

Bish. And well remembered, I will have it so.

A Sumner shall be sent about it straight.

Exit.

S. John. Yea do so. In the mean space this remains

For kind Sir John of Wrotham, honest Jack.

Me thinks the purse of Gold the Bishop gave

Made a good shew, it had a tempting look:

Beshrew me, but my fingers ends do itch

To be upon those golden ruddocks. Well, 'tis thus;

I am not as the world doth take me for:

If ever wolfe were cloathed in sheeps coat,

Then I am he; old huddle and twang' ifaith:

A Priest in shew, but (in plain termes) a Thief:

Yet let me tell you too, an honest Thief;

One that will take it where it may be spar'd,

And spend it freely in good fellowship.

I have as many shapes as Proserus had,

That still when any villany is done,

There may none suspect it was Sir John

Besides, to comfort me (for what's this life,

Except the crabbed bitternesse thereof

Be sweetned now and then with Letchery?)

I have my Doll, my Concubine as 'twere,

To frolick with, a lusty bounding girl.

But whil'st I loyter here, the Gold may scape,

And that must not be so: It is mine own.

Therefore I'll meet him on his way to Court,

And thrive him of it, there will be the sport.

Exit.

Enje

Enter four poor people, some soldiers, some old men.

1. God help, God help, there's law for punishing,
But there's no law for our necessity:
There be more stocks to set poor soldiers in,
Than there be houses to relieve them at.

Old man. I, house-keeping decays in every place,
Even as S. Peter writ, still worse and worse.

2. Master Mayor of Rocheſter has given command,
That none shall go abroad out of the parish, and has set down an Order forsooth, what every poor householder must give for our relief: where there be some ceased (I may say to you) had almost as much need to beg as we.

1. It is a hard world the while.

Old. If a poor man ask at door for God's sake, they ask him for a licence or a certificate from a Justice.

2. Faith we have none, but what we bear upon our bodies, our maim'd limbs, God help us.

4. And yet as lame as I am, I'll with the King into France, if I can but crawl a ship-board, I had rather be slain in France, than starve in England.

Old. Ha, were I but as lusty as I was at Shrewsbury battle, I would not do as I do: but we are now come to the good Lord Cobham's house, the best man to the poor in all Kent.

4. God bless him, there be but few such.

Enter Lord Cobham with Harpool. (have?)

Cob. Thou peevish froward man, what would'st thou

Har. This pride, this pride, brings all to beggery,
I serv'd your Father, and your Grandfather,
Shew me such two men now: No, no,
Your backs, your backs; the devil and pride
Has cut the throat of all good house-keeping,
They were the best Yeomens Masters that Ever were in England.

Cob. Yea, except thou have a crew of filthy knaves
And sturdy Rogues still feeding at my Gate,
There is no hospitality with thee.

Harp. They may sit at the gate well enough, but the devil of anything you give them, except they'll eat stones.

Cob. 'Tis long then of such hungry knaves as you:
Yea sir, here's your retinue, your guests be come,
They know their hours, I warrant you.

Old. God bless your honour, God save the good Lord
Cobham, and all his house.

Soul. Good your honour, bestow your blessed almes
Upon poor men.

Cob. Now sir, here be your almes Knights:
Now are you as safe as the Emperour.

Harp. My almes Knights? Nay th'are yours:
It is a shame for you, and I'll stand to't,
Your foolish almes maintains more vagabonds
Then all the Noblemen in Kent beside.
Out you rogues, you knaves, work for your livings.
Alas poor men, they may beg their hearts out,
There's no more charity among men
Then amongst so many Mastive dogs.
What make you here, you needy knaves?
Away, away, you villains.

2. Soul. I beseech you sir, be good.

Cob. Nay, nay, they know thee well enough, I think that all the beggars in this land are thy acquaintance: go bestow your almes, none will controll you, sir.

Harp. What should I give them? you are grown so beggary, that you can scarce give a bit of bread at your door: you talk of your Religion so long, that you have banished charity from you: a man may make a Flax-shop in your Kitching chimnies, for any fire there is stirring.

Cob. If thou wilt give them nothing, send them hence:
Let them not stand here starving in the cold.

Har. Who, I drive them hence? If I drive poor men from the door, I'll be hang'd: I know not what I may come to my self: God help ye poor knaves, ye see the world. Well, you had a mother: O God be with thee good Lady, thy soul's at rest; she gave more in shirts and sinocks to poor children, then you spend in your house, and yet you live a beggar too.

Cob. Even the worst deed that ever my mother did,
was in relieving such a fool as thou.

Har. I, I am a fool still: with all your wit you'll die a beggar, go too.

Cob. Go, you old fool, give thee poor people something: Go in poor men into the inner Court, and take such almes as there is to be had,

Soul. God blesse your Honour.

Har. Hang you rogues, hang you, there's nothing but misery amongst you, you fear no Law, you. Exit.

Oldm. God blesse you good Master Rafe, God save your life, you are good to thee poor still.

Enter the Lord Powis disguised.

Cob. What fellow's yonder comes along the Grove?
Few passengers there be that know this way:
Me thinks he stops as though he staid for me,
And meant to shrow'd himself amongst the bushes.
I know the Clergy hates me to the death,
And my Religion gets me many foes:
And this may be some desperate rogue
Suborn'd to work me mischief: as it pleaseth God.
If he come toward me, sure I'll stay his coming,
Be he but one man, what soere he be. L. Powis comes on.
I have been well acquainted with that face.

Pow. Well met, my honorable Lord and friend.

Cob. You are welcome, sir, what ere you be;
But of this sudden, sir, I do not know you.

Pow. I am one that wisheth well unto your Honour,
My name is Powis, an old friend of yours.

Cob. My honorable Lord, and worthy friend,
What makes your Lordship thus alone in Kent,
And thus disguised in this strange attire?

Pow. My Lord, an unexpected accident
Hath at this time enforc'd me to these parts,
And thus it hapt. Not yet full five dayes since,
Now at the last assize at Hereford,
It chanc'd that the Lord Herbert and my self,
'Mongst other things discoursing at the Table,
To fall in speech about some certain points
Of Wickliff's doctrine 'gainst the Papacie,
And the Religion Catholick maintain'd
Through the most part of Europe at this day.
This wilfull testy Lord stuck not to say,
That Wickliff was a knave, a schismatick,
His Doctrine develish and Heretical:
And whatsoere he was maintain'd the same,
Was Traitor both to God, and to his Countrey.
Being moved at his peremptory speech,
I told him, some maintain'd those opinions,
Men, and truer subjects then Lord Herbert was:
And he replying in comparisons,
Your name was urg'd, my Lord, against this challenge,
To be a perfect favour of the truth.
And to be short, from words we fell to blows,
Our servants, and our Tenants taking parts.

Many

Many on both sides hurt : and for an hour
The broil by no means could be pacified,
Untill the Judges rising from the bench,
Were in their persons forc'd to part the fray.

Cob. I hope no man was violently slain.

Pow. Faith none I trust, but the Lord Herberts self,
Who is in truth so dangerously hurt,
As it is doubted he can hardly scape.

Cob. I am sorry, my good Lord, of these ill news.

Pow. This is the cause that drives me into Kent,
To shrowd my self with you so good a friend,
Untill I hear how things do speed at home.

Cob. Your Lordship is most welcome unto Cobham :
But I am very sorry, my good Lord,
My name was brought in question in this matter,
Considering I have many enemies,
That threaten malice, and do lye in wait
To take the vantage of the smallest thing.
But you are welcome, and repose your Lordship,
And keep your self here secret in my house,
Untill we hear how the Lord Herbert speeds :

Enter Harpool.

Here comes my man : sirrah, what news ?

Har. Yonder's one M. Butler of the privie Chamber, is sent unto you from the King.

Pow. Pray God the Lord Herbert be not dead, and the King hearing whether I am gone, hath sent for me.

Cob. Comfort your self, my Lord, I warrant you,

Har. Fellow, what ails thee ? do'st thou quake ? do'st thou shake ? do'st thou tremble ? ha ?

Cob. Peace, you old fool : sirrah, convey this Gentleman in the back way, and bring the other into the walk.

Har. Come, sir, y'are welcome, if you love my Lord.

Pow. Gramercy, gentle friend. Exeunt.

Cob. I thought as much, that it would not be long before
I heard of something from the King, about this matter.

Enter Harpool with M. Butler.

Har. Sir, yonder my Lord walks, you see him ;
I'll have your men into the feller the while.

Cob. Welcome, good M. Butler.

But. Thanks, my good Lord : his Majesty doth commend his love unto your Lordship, and wills you to repair unto the Court.

Cob. God blefs his Highness, and counfound his enemies, I hope his Majestie is well ?

But. In good health, my Lord.

Cob. God long continue it : me thinks you look as though you were not well, what ayle ye, sir ?

But. Faith I have had a foolish odde mischance, that angers me : coming over Shooters hill, there came one to me like a Sailor, and askt me money : and whilst i staid my horse to draw my purse, he takes th'advantage of a little bank, and leaps behind me, whips my purse away, and with a sudden jerk, I know not how, threw me at least three yards out of my saddle ; I never was so rob'd in all my life.

Cob. I am very sorry, sir, for your mischance ; we will send our warrant forth, to stay such suspicious persons as shall be found, they M. Butler we'll attend you.

But. I humbly thak your Lordship, I will attend you.

Enter the Sumner.

Sum. I have the Law to warrant what I do, and though the Lord Cobham be a Nobleman, that dispenses not with Law, I dare serve a Procefs were he five Noble men, though we Sumners make sometimes a mad slip in a corner with a pretty wench, a Sumner must not go a lwaies by seeing : a man may be content to hide his eyes where he may feel his profit. Well, this is Lord Cobham's house, if I cannot speak with him, I'll clap my citation upon's door, so my Lord of Rocheſter bad me ; but me thinks here comes one of his men.

Har. Welcome good fellow, welcome, who would'st thou speak with ?

Sum. With my Lord Cobham I would speak, if thou be one of his men.

Har. Yes, I am one of his men, but thou can'st not speak with my Lord.

Sum. May I send to him then ?

Har. I'll tell thee that, when I know thy errand,

Sum. I will not tell my errand to thee.

Har. Then keep it to thy self, and walk like a knave as thou camest.

Sum. I tell thee, my Lord keeps no knaves, sirrah.

Har. Then thou servest him not, I believe. What Lord is thy Master ?

Sum. My Lord of Rocheſter.

Har. In good time : and what would'st thou have with my Lord Cobham ?

Sum. I come by vertue of a Procefs, to seite him to appear before my Lord in the Court at Rocheſter.

Har. aside. Well, God grant me patience, I could eat this Counger. My Lord is not at home, therefore it were good Sumner, you carried your Procefs back.

Sum. Why, if he will not be spoken withall, then will
I leave it here, and see that he take knowledge of it.

Har. Zounds you slave, do you set up your bills here ; go too, take it down again. Do'st thou know what thou do'st ? Do'st thou know on whom thou servest a Procefs ?

Sum. Yes marry do I, on Sir John Oldcastle, Lord Cobham.

Har. I am glad thou knowest him yet ; and sirrah, do'st not know that the Lord Cobham is a brave Lord, that keeps good Beef and Beer in his house, and every day feeds a hundred poor people at's Gate, and keeps a hundred tall fellows ?

Sum. What's that to my Procefs ?

Har. Marry this, sir, is this procefs parchment ?

Sum. Yes marry is it.

Har. And this Seal wax ?

Sum. It is so.

Har. If this be parchment, and this wax, eat you this parchment and this wax, or I will make parchment of your skin, and beat your brains into wax. Sirrah, Sumner, dispatch, devour sirrah, devour.

Sum. I am my Lord of Rocheſter's Sumner, I came to to do my office, and thou shalt answer it.

Har. Sirrah, no railing ; but berake your self to your teeth, thou shalt eat no worse then thou bring'st with thee, thou bring'st it for my Lord, and wilt thou bring my Lord worse then thou wilt eat thy self ?

Sum. Sir, I brought it not my Lord to eat.

Har. O do you fir me now ; all's one for that, I'll make you eat it, for bringing it.

Sum. I cannot eat it

Har. Can you not ? sbloud I'll beat you till you have a stomach. Beats him.

Sum. O hold, hold, good M. Servingman, I will eat it.

Har. Be champing, be chawing, sir, or I'll chew you, you rogue, the purest of the honey.

Sum. Tough wax is the purest hony.

Har. O

Har. O Lord, sir, oh, oh,
Feed, feed, 'tis wholesome, Rogue, wholesome.
Cannot you like an honest Sumner, walk with the Devil your brother, to fetch in your Bailiff's rents; but you must come to a Noble mans house with proceffe? If thy Seal were as broad as the Lead that covers Rochester
Church, thou should'st eat it.

Sum. O, I am almost choaked, I am almost choaked.

Har. Who's within there? will you shame my Lord, is there no beer in the house? Butler I say.

But. Here, here.

Ent. Butler.

Har. Give him beer.

He drinks.

There: tough old sheepskins, bare dry meat.

Sum. O sir, let me go no further, I'll eat my word.

Har. Yea marry sir, I mean ye shall eat more then your own word, for I'll make you eat all the words in the Process. Why you drab-monger, cannot the secrets of all the wenches in a Shire serve your turn, but you must come hither with a citation with a pox? I'll cite you.

A cup of Sack for the Sumner.

But. Here, sir, here.

Har. Here, slave, I drink to thee.

Sum. I thank you, sir.

Har. Now if thou find'st thy stomach well, because thou shalt see my Lord keeps meat in's house, if thou wilt go in, thou shalt have a piece of beef to thy break-fast.

Sum. No I am very well, good M. Servingman, I thank you, very well, sir.

Har. I am glad on't, then be walking towards Rochester to keep your stomach warme. And Sumner, If I do know you disturba good wench within this Diocese, if I do not make thee eat her petticoat, if there were four yards of Kentish cloth in't, I am a villain.

Sum. God be w'ye, M. Servingman.

Exit.

Har. Farewell, Sumner

Enter Constable.

Con. Save you, M. Harpool.

Har. Welcome Constable, welcome Constable, what news with thee?

Con. And't please you, M. Harpool, I am to make hue and cry for a fellow with one eye, that has rob'd two Clothiers, and am to crave your hindrance to search all suspected places; and they say there was a woman in the company.

Har. Hast thou been at the Ale-house? hast thou sought there?

Con. I durst not search in my Lord Cobham's liberty, except I had some of his servants for my warrant.

Har. An honest Constable, call forth him that keeps the Ale-house there.

Con. Ho, who's within there?

Ale-m. Who calls there? Oh is't you, M. Constable, and M. Harpool? y'are welcome with all my heart, what make you here so early this morning?

Har. Sirra, what strangers do you lodge? there is a robbery done this morning, and we are to search for all suspected persons.

Ale-man. Gods bores, I am sorry for't. Ifaith, sir, I lodge no body but a good honest Priest, call'd Sir John a Wrotham, and a handsome woman that is his Neece, that he saies has some suit in law for, and as they go up and down to London, sometimes they lye at my house.

Har. What, is she here in thy house now?

Ale-m. She is, sir: I promise you, sir, he is a quiet man, and because he will not trouble too many rooms, he makes the woman lye every night at his beds feet.

Har. Bring her forth, Constable, bring her forth, let's see her, let's see her.

(stable.

Ale-m. Dorothy, you must come down to M. Con-

Dol. Anon forsooth.

She enters.

Har. Welcome, sweet Lasse, welcome.

Dol. I thank you, good sir, and M. Constable also.

Har. A plump girle by the Masse, a plump girle: ha,
Dol. ha. Wilt thou forsake the Priest, and go with me
Doll?

Con. A well said M. Harpool, you are a merry old man ifaith; you will never be old now by the mack, a pretty wench indeed.

Har. Ye old mad merry Constable, art thou advis'd of that? Ha, well said Doll, fill some Ale here.

Doll aside. Oh if I wist this old Priest would not stick to me, by Jove I wouldingle this old serving-man.

Har. Oh you old mad colt, ifaith I'll ferk you: fill all the pors in the house there.

Con. Oh well said M. Harpool, you are heart of oak when all's done.

Harp. Ha Dol, thou hast a sweet pair of lips by the Masse.

Dol. Truly you are a most sweet old man, as ever I saw; by my troth, you have a face able to make any woman in love with you.

Har. Fill, sweet Doll, I'll drink to thee.

Doll. I pledge you, sir, and thank you therefore, and
I pray you let it come.

Harp. Imbracing her. Doll, canst thou love me? a mad merry Lasse, would to God I had never seen thee.

Dol. I warrant you, you will not out of my thoughts this twelvemonth, truly you are as full of favour, as any man may be. Ah these sweet gray locks, by my troth, they are most lovely.

Con. Cuds bores, M. Harpool, I'll have one bufs too.

Har. No licking for you, Constable, hand off, hand off.

Con. Berlady I love kissing as well as you.

Dol. Oh you are an odde boy, you have a wanton eye of your own: ah you sweet sugar-lipt wanton, you will win as many womens hearts as come in your company.

Enter Priest.

Priest. Doll, come hither.

Har. Priest, she shall not.

Dol. I'll come anon, sweet love.

Priest. Hand off, old fornicator.

Har. Vicar, I'll sit here in spight of thee, is this Ruff for a Priest to carry up and down with him?

Priest. Sirra, do'st thou not know that a good fellow parson may have a chappel of ease, where his parish Church is far off?

Har. You whorson ston'd Vicar.

Priest. You old stale Ruffin, you Lion of Corfoll.

Har. Zounds, Vicar, I'll geld you. Flies upon him.

Con. Keep the Kings peace.

Dol. Murder, murder, murder.

Ale-m. Hold, as you are men, hold; for Gods sake be quiet: put up your weapons, you draw not in my house.

Har. You whorson bawdy Priest.

Priest. You old mutton-monger.

Con. Hold, Sir John, hold.

Dol. I pray thee, sweet heart, be quiet, I was but sitting to drink a pot of Ale with him, even as kind a man as ever I met with.

Har. Thou art a Thief, I warrant thee.

Priest. Then I am but as thou hast been in thy dayes, let's not be ashamed of our Trade, the King has been a Thief himself.

Doll.

Dol. Come, be quiet, hast thou sped?

Pri. I have wench, here be crowns ifaith.

Dol. Come, let's be all friends then.

Con. Well said Mistress Dorothy.

Har. Thou art the maddest Priest that ever I met with.

Pri. Give me thy hand, thou art as good a fellow:

I am a singer, a drinker, a bencher, a wench; I can say a Masse, and kisse a Lasse: Faith, I have a Parsonage, and because I would not be at too much charges, this wench serveth me for a Sexton.

Harp. Well said mad Priest, we'll in and be friends.

Exeunt.

Enter Sir Roger Atton, M. Bourn, M. Beverley, and William Murley the Brewer of Dunstable.

Atton. Now M. Murley, I am well assur'd

You know our errant, and do like the cause?

Being a man affected as we are?

Mur. Marry God dild ye dainty my dear: No Master, good Sir Roger Atton, M. Bourn, and M. Beverley, Gentlemen and Justices of the Peace, no Master, I, but plain William Murley the Brewer of Dunstable, your honest neighbour and your friend, if ye be men of my profession.

Bev. Professed friends to Wickliff; foes to Rome.

Mur. Hold by me, Lad, lean upon that staff, good Master Beverley, all of a house, say your mind, say your mind.

Atton. You know our faction now is grown so great Throughout the Realm, that it begins to smok Into the Clergies eyes, and the King's ears, High time it is that we were drawn to head, Our General and Officers appointed. And warrs ye wot, will ask great store of coyn, Able to strength our action with your purse, You are elected for a Colonel Over a Regiment of fifteen Bands.

Mur. Fue, paltry, paltry, in and out, to and fro, be it more or lesse upon occasion, Lord have mercy upon us, what a world is this? Sir Roger Atton, I am but a Dunstable man, a plain Brewer, ye know: will lusty caveliering Captains (Gentlemen) come at my calling, go at my bidding? Dainty my deer, they'll do a dog of wax, a horse of cheefe, a prick and a pudding; no, no, ye must appoint some Lord or Knight at least, to that place.

Bour. Why, Master Murley, you shall be a Knight: Were you not in election to be Sheriff? Have ye not past all Offices but that? Have ye not wealth to make your wife a Lady? I warrant you, my Lord, our General Bestows that honour on you, at first sight.

Mur. Marry God dild ye dainty my dear: But tell me, who shall be our General? Where's the Lord Cobham, Sir John Old-castle That noble almse-giver, house-keeper, vertuous, Religious Gentleman? Come to me there boyes, Come to me there.

Atton. Why who but he shall be our General?

Mur. And shall he Knight me, and make me Colonel?

Atton. My word for that, Sir William Murley Knight.

Mur. Fellow Sir Roger Atton Knight, all fellows I mean in armes, how strong are we? how many partners? Our enemies beside the King are mighty, be it more or lesse upon occasion, reckon our force.

Atton. There are of us our friends and followers, Three thousand and three hundred at the least: Of Northern lads four thousand, beside horse,

From Keut there comes with Sir John Old-castle Seven thousand: then from London issue out, Of Masters, servants, strangers, prentises, Forty odde thousands into Ficket field, Where we appoint our special Randevouze.

Mur. Fue, paltry, paltry, in and out, to and fro, Lord have mercy upon us, what a world is this? Where's that Ficket field, Sir Roger.

Atton. Behind S. Giles in the field, near Holborn.

Mur. Newgate, up Holborn, S. Giles in the field, and to Tyburn, an old saw. For the day, for the day?

Atton. On Friday next, the fourteenth day of January.

Mur. Tilly vally, trust me never If I have any liking of that day. Fue, paltry, paltry, Friday quoth a, dismal day, Childermas day this year was Friday.

Bev. Nay M. Murley, if you observe such dayes, We make some question of your constancie, All dayes are alike to men resolv'd in right.

Mur. Say Amen, and say no more, but say and hold Master Beverley: Friday next, and Ficket field, and William Murley and his merry men shall be all one: I have halfe a score jades that draw my Beer Carts, and every jade shall bear a knave, and every knave shall wear a jack, and every jack shall have a scull, and every scull shall shewa spear, and every spear shall kill a foe at Ficket field, at Ficket field: John and Tom, Dick and Hodge, Rafe and Robbin, William and George, and all my knaves shall fight like men, at Ficket field, on Friday next.

Bour. What sum of money mean you to disburse?

Mur. It may be modestly, decently, and soberly, and handsomely I may bring five hundred pound.

Atton. Five hundred, man? five thousand's not enough, A hundred thousand will not pay our men Two month's together, either come prepar'd Like a brave knight, and martial Colonel, In glittering gold, and gallant Furniture, Bringing in Coin, a Cart-load at least, And all your followers mounted on good horse, Or never come disgracefull to us all.

Bev. Perchance you may be chosen Treasurer, Ten thousand pound's the least that you can bring.

Mur. Paltry, paltry, in and out, to and fro: upon occasion I have ten thousand pound to spend, and ten too. And rather then the Bishop shall have his will of me for my Conscience, it shall all. Flame and flax, flax and flame. It was got with water and Malt, and it shall flye with fire and Gun-powder. Sir Roger, a Cart-load of money till the Axletree crack; my self and my men in Ficket field on Friday next: remember my Knight-hood and my place: there's my hand I'll be there. Exit.

Atton. See what ambition may perswade men to, In hope of honour he will spend himself.

Bour. I never thought a Brewer halfe so rich.

Bev. Was never bankerout Brewer yet but one, With using too much Malt, too little water.

Atton. That's no fault in Brewers now adayes: Come, away about our business. Exeunt.

Enter King Harry, Suffolk, M. Butler, Old-castle kneeling to the King

King. 'Tis not enough, Lord Cobham, to submit, You must forsake your grosse opinion; The Bishops find themselves much injured, And though for some good service you have don, We for our part are pleas'd to pardon you, Yet they will not so soon be satisfied.

Cob. My gracious Lord, unto your Majesty,

Next

Next unto my God, I owe my life;
And what is mine, either by Natures gift,
Or fortunes bounty, all is at your service.
But for obedience to the Pope of Rome,
I owe him none; nor shall his shaveling Priests
That are in England, alter my belief.
If out of holy Scripture they can prove
That I am in an error, I will yield,
And gladly take instruction at their hands:
But otherwise, I do beseech your Grace,
My conscience may not be inroach'd upon.

King. We would be loath to press our subjects bodies.
Much lesse their souls, the deer redeemed part
Of him that is the Ruler of us all:
Yet let me counsel you, that might command;
Do not presume to tempt them with ill words,
Nor suffer any meetings to be had
Within your house, but to the uttermost
Disperse the flocks of this new gathering sect.

Cob. My Liege, if any breath that dares come forth,
And say, my life in any of these points
Deserves th'attainder of ignoble thoughts:
Here stand I, craving no remorse at all,
But even the utmost rigour may be shown.

King. Let it suffice we know your loyalty,
What have you there?

Cob. A Deed of clemency,
Your highness pardon for Lord Powess life,
Which I did beg, and you my Noble Lord,
Of gracious favour did vouchsafe to grant.

King. But yet it is not signed with our hand.

Cob. Not yet, my Liege.

King. The fact you say was done
Not of pretended malice, but by chance.

Cob. Upon mine Honour so, no otherwise. Writes.

King. There is his pardon, bid him make amends,
And cleanse his soul to God for his offence,
What we remit, is but the bodies scourge.
How now, Lord Bishop? Enter Bishop.

Bish. Justice dread Sovereigne,
As thou art King, so grant I may have Justice.

King. What means this exclamation? Let us know.

Bish. Ah, my good Lord, the State's abus'd,
And our Decrees most shamefully prophan'd.

King. How? Or by whom?

Bish. Even by this Heretick,
This Jew, this Traitor to your Majesty.

Cob. Prelate, thou lyest, even in thy greasie maw,
Or whosoever twit's me with the name
Of either Traitor, or of Heretick.

King. Forbear I say: and Bishop, shew the cause
From whence this late abuse hath been deriv'd.

Bish. Thus mighty King: by general consent
A messenger was sent to scite this Lord
To make appearance in the Consistory:
And coming to his house, a Russian slave,
One of his daily followers, met the man,
Who knowing him to be a Parator
Assaults him first, and after in contempt
Of us, and our proceedings, makes him eat
The written Process, parchment, Seal and all:
Whereby this matter neither was brought forth,
Nor we but scorn'd for our authority.

King. When was this done?

Bish. At six a clock this morning.

King. And when came you to Court?

Cob. Last night, my Liege.

King. By this it seems he is not guilty of it,
And you have done him wrong t'accuse him so.

Bish. But it was done, my Lord, by his appointment,
Or else his man durst not have been so bold.

King. Or else you durst be bold to interrupt
And fill our ears with frivolous complaints.
Is this the duty you do bear to us?
Was't not sufficient we did passe our word
To send for him, but you misdoubting it,
Or which is worse, intending to forestall
Our Regal power, must likewise summon him?
This favours of Ambition, not of zeal,
And rather proves you malice his estate,
Then any way that he offends the Law.
Go too, we like it not: and he your Officer
Had his desert for being insolent,

Enter Huntington.

That was employed so much amiss here.
So Cobham when you please, you may depart.

Cob. I humbly bid farewell unto my Liege. Exit.

King. Farewell: what's the news by Huntington?

Hun. Sir Roger Aston, and a crew (my Lord)
Of bold seditious Rebels, are in Armes,
Intending reformation of Religion.
And with their Army they intend to pitch
In Ficker field, unlesse they be repuls'd.

King. So near our presence? Dare they be so bold?
And will proud War and eager thirst of blood,
Whom we had thought to entertain far off,
Press forth upon us in our Native bounds?
Must we be forc'd to hance our sharp blades
In England here, which we prepar'd for France?
Well, a Gods name be it. What's their Number? say,
Or who's the chief Commander of this Row?

Hun. Their number is not known, as yet my Lord,
But 'tis reported, Sir John Oldcastle
Is the chief man, on whom they do depend.

King. How? the Lord Cobham?

Hun. Yes, my gracious Lord.

Bish. I could have told your Majesty as much
Before he went, but that I saw your Grace
Was too much blinded by his flattery.

Suf. Send post, my Lord, to fetch him back again.

But. Traitor unto his Country, how he smooth'd
And seem'd as innocent as Truth it self?

King. I cannot think it yet he would be false:
But if he, no matter, let him go,

We'll meet both him and them unto their woe.

Bish. This falls out well, and at the last I hope
To see this heretick die in a rope. Exeunt.

Enter Earle of Cambridge, Lord Scroop, Gray, and Chartres the French Factor.

Scr. Once more, my Lord of Cambridge, make rehearsal
How you do stand intitled to the Crown,
The deeper shall we print it in our minds,
And every man the better be resolv'd,
When he perceiv's his quarrel to be just.

Cam. Then thus, Lord Scroop, Sir Thomas Grey & you
Monsieur de Chartes, Agent for the French.
This Lionel Duke of Clarence (as I said)
Third son of Edward (England's King) the third,
Had issue Philip his sole daughter and heir;
Which Philip, afterward was given in marriage
To Edmund Mortimer the Earle of March,
And by him had a son call'd Roger Mortimer;

Which

Which Roger likewise had of his delcent,
Edmund, Roger, Anne, and Elianor,
 Two Daughters and two Sons, but of those, three Di'd without issue: Anne, that did survive,
 And now was left her Fathers onely Heir,
 By fortune was to marry, Being too
 By my Grandfather of King Edward's Line:
 So of his Sir-name, I am call'd you know.

Richard Plantaginet, my Father was,
Edward the Duke of York, and son and heir
 To Edmund Langley, Edward the third's first son.

Scro. So that it seems your claim comes by your wife,
 As lawfull heir to Roger Mortimer
 The son of Edmund, which did marry Phillip
 Daughter and heir to Lyonel Duke of Clarence.

Cam. True, for this Harry, and his father both
Harry the first, as plainly doth appear,
 Are false intruders, and usurp the Crown.

For when young Richard was at Pomfret slain,
 In him the Title of Prince Edward di'd,
 That was the eldest of King Edward's sons:
William of Hatfield, and their second brother,
 Death in his nonage had before bereft:

So that my wife deriv'd from Lionel
 Third son unto King Edward, ought proceed
 And take possession of the Diadem

Before this Harry, or his Father King,
 Who fetch their Title but from Lancaster,
 Forth of that royal line. And being thus,
 What reason is't, but she should have her right?

Scro. I am resolv'd, our enterprize is just.

Gray. Harry shall die or else resigne his Crown.

Chart. Performe but that, and Charles the King of Shall aid you Lords, not only with his men, (France

But send yor money to maintain your wars:
 Five hundred thousand Crowns he bad me proffer,
 If you can stop but Harrie's voyage for France.

Scro. We never had a fitter time then now,
 The Realme in such division as it is.

Cam. Besides you must perswade you, there is due Vengeance for Richards murther, which although
 It be deferr'd, yet will it fall at last,
 And now as likely as another time.
 Sin hath had many years to ripen in,
 And now the harvest cannot be far off,
 Wherein the weeds of usurpation
 Are to be crop't, and cast into the fire.

Scro. No more, Earle Cambridge, here I plight my faith,
 To set up thee, and thy renowned wife.

Gray. Gray will performe the same, as he is Knight.

Chart. And to assist ye, as I said before,
Chartres doth 'gage the honour of his King.

Scro. We lack but now Lord Cobham's fellowship,
 And then our plot were absolute indeed.

Cam. Doubt not of him, my Lord, his life's pursu'd
 By th'incens'd Clergy, and of late
 Brought in displeasure with the King, assures
 He may be quickly won unto our faction.
 Who hath the Articles were drawn at large
 Of our whole purpose?

Gray. That have I, my Lord.

Cam. We should not now be far off from his house,
 Our serious Conference hath beguild the way:
 See where his Castle stands, give me the writing.
 When we are come unto the speech of him,
 Because we will not stand to make recount

Of that which hath been said, here he shall read
 Our minds at large, and what we crave of him.

Enter Cobham.

Scro. A ready way: here comes the man himself
 Booted and spurr'd, it seems he hath been riding.

Cam. Well met, Lord Cobham.

Cob. My Lord of Cambridge?

Your Honour is most welcome into Kent,
 And all the rest of this fair company.

I am new come from London, gentle Lords:

But will ye not take Cowling for your Host,
 And see what entertainment it affords?

Cam. We were intended to have been your guests:
 But now this lucky meeting shall suffice
 To end our businesse, and deferre that kindesse.

Cob. Busines my Lord? what busines should Let you to be merry? we have no delicacies;
 Yet this I'll promise you, a piece of Venison,
 A cup of wine, and so forth, hunters fare:
 And if you please, we'll strike the stag our selves
 Shall fill our dishes with his well-fed flesh.

Scro. That is indeed the thing we all desire.

Cob. My Lords, and you shall have your choice with me.

Cam. Nay but the Stag which we desire to strike,
 Lives not in Cowling: if you will consent,
 And go with us, we'll bring you to a Forrest,
 Where runs a lusty heard: among the which
 There is a Stag superiour to the rest;

A stately beast, that when his fellows run
 He leads the race, and beats the sullen earth,
 As though he scorn'd it with his trampling hoofs,
 Aloft he bears his head, and with his brest
 Like a huge bulwark counter-checks the wind:
 And when he standeth still, he stretcheth forth
 His proud ambitious neck, as if he meant
 To wound the firmament with forked horns.

Cob. 'Tis pittie such a goodly beast should die.

Cam. Not so, Sir John, for he is tyrannous,
 And gores the other Deer, and will not keep
 Within the limits are appointed him.

Of late he's broke into a several,
 Which doth belong to me, and there he spoiles
 Both corn and pasture, two of his wild race
 Alike for stealth, and covetous incroaching,
 Already are remov'd; if he were dead,
 I should not only be secure from hurt,
 But with his body make a royal feast.

Scro. How say you then, will you first hunt with us?

Cob. Faith Lords, I like the pastime, where's the place?

Cam. Peruse this writing, it will shew you all,
 And what occasion we have for the sport. He reads.

Cob. Call ye this hunting, my Lords? Is this the Stag
 You fain would chase, Harry our dread King?

So we may make a banquet for the devil?

And in the stead of wholesome meat, prepare

A dish of poison to confound our selves.

Cam. Why so, Lord Cobham? See you not our claim?
 And how imperiously he holds the Crown?

Scro. Besides, you know your self is in disgrace,
 Held as a recreant, and pursu'd to death.

This will defend you from your enemies,
 And stablish your Religion through the Land.

Cob. Notorious treason! yet I will conceal
 My secret thoughts, to sound the depth of it.
 My Lord of Cambridge, I do see your claim,
 And what good may redound unto the Land,

Aside.

By

By prosecuting of this enterprize.

But where are men? where's power and furniture
To order such an action? we are weak,
Harry, you know's a mighty Potentate.

Cam. Tut, we are strong enough; you are belov'd,
And many will be glad to follow you,
We are the like, and some will follow us:
Nay, there is hope from France: here's an Ambassador
That promiseth both men and money too.
The Commons likewise (as we hear) pretend
A sudden tumult, we will joyn with them.

Cob. Some likelihood; I must confesse, to speed:
But how shall I believe this in plain truth?
You are (my Lords) such men as live in Court,
And have been highly favoured of the King,
Especially Lord Scroop, whom oftentimes
He maketh choice for his bed-fellow.

And you, Lord Gray, are of his privy Counsel:
Is not this a train laid to intrap my life?

Cam. Then-perish may my soul: what, think you so?

Scr. We'll swear to you.

Gray. Or take the Sacrament.

Cob. Nay you are Noble men, and I imagine,
As you are honourable by birth, and blood,
So you will be in heart, in thought, in word.
I crave no other testimony but this.

That you would all subscribe, and set your hands
Unto this writing which you gave to me.

Cam. With all our hearts: who hath any pen and ink?

Scr. My pocket should have one; O, here it is.

Cam. Give it me, Lord Scroop. There is my name.

Scr. And there is my name.

Gray. And mine.

Cob. Sir, let me crave that would likewise write your name with theirs, for confirmation of your Masters words the King of France.

Char. That will I, Noble Lord.

Cob. So, now this action is well knit together,
And I am for you; where's our meeting, Lords?

Cam. Here if you please, the tenth of July next.

Cob. In Kent? agreed. Now let us in to supper,
I hope your honours will not away to night.

Cam. Yes presently, for I have far to ride,
A bout soliciting of other friends.

Scr. And we would not be absent from the Court,
Lest thereby grow suspicion in the King.

Cob. Yet taste a cup of wine before ye go.

Cam. Not now, my Lord, we thank you: so farewell. Exit.

Cob. Farewell, my Noble Lords, My Noble Lords?

My noble villains, base Conspirators,
How can they look his Highnesse in the face,
Whom they so closely study to betray?
But I'll not sleep until I make it known,
This head shall not be burthen'd with such thoughts,
Nor in this heart will I conceal a deed
Of such impiety against my King.
Madam, how now?

Enter Harpool, and the rest.

La. Cob. Y'are welcome home, my Lord:
Why seem ye so unquiet in your looks?

What hath befalln you that disturbs your mind?

La. Powis. Bad news I am afraid touching my husband.

Cob. Madam, not so: there is your husband's pardon;
Long may ye live, each joy unto the other.

La. Po. So great a kindnesse, as I know not how to reply, my sense is quite confounded.

Cob. Let that alone: and Madam stay me not,
For I must back unto the Court again,
With all the speed I can: Harpool, my horse.

L. Cob. So soon my Lord? what will you ride all night?

Cob. All night or day, it must be so sweet wife;
Urge me not why, or what my businesse is,
But get you in: Lord Powess, bear with me.
And Madam, think your welcome ne're the worse,
My house is at your use. Harpool, away.

Har. Shall I attend your Lordship to the Court?

Cob. Yea sir, your Gelding, mount you presently. Exit.

La. Cob. I prythee Harpool look unto thy Lord,
I do not like this sudden posting back.

Po. Some earnest businesse is a-foot belike,
What ere it be, pray God be his good guide.

La. Po. Amen, that hath so highly us bested.

La. Cob. Come Madam & my Lord, we'll hope the best;
You shall not into Wales till he return.

Pow. Though great occasion be we should depart, yet, Madam, will we stay to be resolv'd of this unlookt for doubtfull accident. Exeunt.

Enter Murley and his men, prepared in some filthy order for war.

Mur. Come my hearts of flint, modestly, decently, soberly, and handsomly; no man afore his Leader: follow your Master, your Captain, your Knight that shall-be, for the honour of Meal-men, Millers, and Malt-men, dun is the mouse: Dick and Tom for the credit of Dun- stable, ding down the Enemy to morrow. Ye shall not come into the field like beggars. Where be Leonard and Lawrence my two Loaders? Lord have mercy upon us, what a world is this? I would give a couple of shillings for a dozen of good Feathers for ye, and fourty pence for as many Scarffes to set ye out withall. Frost and snow, a man has no heart to fight till he be brave.

Dick. Master, we are no babes, our town foot-balls can bear witnesse: this little parrel we have shall off, and we'll fight naked before we run away.

Tom. Nay, I'me of Lawrence mind for that, for he means to leave his life behind him, he and Leonard, your two Loaders are making their Wills because they have wives, now we Batchellors bid our friends scramble for our goods if we dye: but Master, pray let me ride upon Cut.

Mur. Meal and salt, wheat and Malt, fire and tow, frost and snow, why Tom thou shalt. Let me see, here are you, William and George are with my Cart, and Ro- bin and Hodge holding my own two Horses; proper men, handsome men, tall men, true men.

Dick. But Master, Master, me thinks you are mad to hazard your own person, and a cart-load of money too.

Tom. Yea, and Master there's a worse matter in't; if it be as I heard say, we go fight against all the learned Bishops, that shauld give us their blessing, and if they curse us, we shall speed nere the better.

Dick. Nay birlady, some say the King takes their part;
and Master dare you fight against the King.

Mur. Fie paltry, paltry, in and out, to and fro upon occasion, if the King be so unwise to come there; we'll fight with him too.

Tom. What if ye should kill the King?

Mur. Then we'll make another.

Dick. Is that all? do ye not speak Treason?

Mur. If we do, who dare trip us? We come to fight for our conscience, and for honour: little know you what is in my bosome, look here mad knaves, a pair of gilt Spurs.

Tom. A.

Tom. A pair of golden spurs? why do you not put them on your heels? your horse's no place for spurs.

Mur. Be't more or lesse upon occasion, Lord have mercy upon us, Tom th'art a fool, and thou speak'st treason to Knight-hood: dare any wear gold or silver spurs till he be a Knight? No, I shall be knighted to morrow, and then they shall on: Sirs, was it ever read in the Church book of Dunstable, that ever Malt-man was made Knight?

Tom. No but you are more: you are Meal-man, Malt-man, Miller, Corn-Master and all.

Dick. Yea, and half a Brewer too, and the devil and all for wealth: you bring more money with you, then all the rest.

Mur. The more's my honour, I shall be a Knight to morrow. Let me spose my men, Tom upon Cur, Dick upon Hob, Hodge upon Ball, Raph upon Sorel, and Robin upon the fore-horse.

Enter Acton, Bourn, and Beverley.

Tom. Stand, who comes there?

Act. All friends, good fellow.

Mur. Friends and fellows indeed, Sir Roger.

Act. Why thus you shew your self a Gentleman, To keep your day, and come so well prepar'd. Your Cart stands yonder, guarded by your men, Who tell me it is loaden well with Coin, What summe is there?

Mur. Ten thousand pound, Sir Roger, and modestly, decently, soberly, and handsomely, see what I have here against I be Knighted.

Act. Gilt spurs? 'Tis well.

Mur. Where's our Army, sir?

Act. Dispers'd in sundry villages about; Some here with us in Hygate, some at Finchley, Totnam, Enfield, Edmunton, Newington, Islington, Hogsdone, Pancridge, Kennington, Some nearer Thames, Ratcliff, Blackwall, and Bow: But our chief strength must be the Londoners, Which ere the Sun to morrow shine, Will be near fifty thousand in the field.

Mur. Marry God dild ye dainty my dear, but upon occasion Sir Roger Acton, doth not the King know of it, and gather his power against us?

Act. No, he's secure at Eltham.

Mur. What do the Clergy?

Act. Fear extreemly, yet prepare no force.

Mur. In and out, to and fro, bully my boykin, we shall carry the world afore us, I vow by my worship, when I am Knighted, we'll take the King napping, if he stand on their part.

Act. This night we few in Hygate will repose, With the first Cock we'll rise and arme our selves, To be in Ficket field by break of day, And there expect our General.

Mur. Sir John Oldcastle, what if he come not?

Bour. Yet our action stands, Sir Roger Acton may supply his place.

Mur. True M. Bourn, but who shall make me Knight?

Bou. He that hath power to be our General.

Act. Talk not of trifles, come let's away, Our friends of London long till it be day. Exeunt.

Enter Priest and Doll.

Doll. By my troth, thou art as jealous a man as lives.

Priest. Canst thou blame me, Doll, thou art my Lands, my Goods, my Jewels, my Wealth, my purse, none walks within forty miles of London, but a plies thee as truly, as the Parish does the poor mans box.

Doll. I am as true to thee, as the stone is in the wall, and thou know'st well enough, I was in as good doing, when I came to thee, as any wench need to be: and therefore thou hast tryed me that thou hast: and I will not be kept as I ha bin, that I will not.

Priest. Doll, if this blade hold, there's not a Pedler walks with a pack, but thou shalt as boldly choose of his wares, as with thy ready money in a Merchants shop, we'll have as good silver as the King coins any.

Doll. What is all the Gold spent you took the last day from the Courtier?

Priest. 'Tis gone Doll, 'tis flown; merrily come, merrily gone; he comes a horse back that must pay for all; we'll have as good meat as money can get, and as good gowns as can be bought for gold, be merry wench, the Malt-man comes on Monday.

Doll. You might have left me at Cobham, untill you had been better provided for.

Priest. No sweet Doll, no, I like not that, yon old Ruffian is not for the Priest: I do not like a new Clerk should come in the old Bel-fry.

Doll. Thou art a mad Priest ifsaith.

Priest. Come Doll, I'll see thee safe at some Ale-house here at Cray, and the next sheep that comes shall leave behind his fleece. Exeunt.

Enter the King, Suffolk, and Butler.

K. in great haste. My Lord of Suffolk, post away for And let our forces of such horse and foot, (life,

As can be gathered up by any means. Make speedy randevouze in Tuttlo fields, It must be done this evening my Lord, This night the Rebels mean to draw to head Near Islington, which if your speed prevent not, If once they should unite their several forces, Their power is almost thought invincible, Away my Lord, I will be with you soon.

Suff. I go, my Sovereigne, with all happy speed. Exit.

Kin. Make hast, my Lord of Suffolk, as you love us. Butler, post you to London with all speed:

Command the Maior and Sheriffs on their allegiance, The City gates be presently shut up, And guarded with a strong sufficient watch, And not a man be suffered to passe, Without a special Warrant from our self. Command the Postern by the Tower be kept, And Proclamation on the pain of death, That not a Citizen stir from his doors, Except such as the Mayor and Sheriffs shall choose For their own guard, and safety of their persons: Butler away, have care unto my charge.

But. I go, my Sovereigne.

King. Butler.

But. My Lord.,

Kin. Go down by Greenwich, and command a boat, At the Friars Bridge attend my coming down.

But. I will, my Lord. Exit Butler.

King. It's time I think to look unto Rebellion, When Acton doth expect unto his aid, No lesse then fifty thousand Londoners. Well, I'll to Westminster in this disguise, To hear what news is stirring in these brawls.

Enter Priest.

Priest. Stand true-man, sayes a Thief.

King. Stand Thief sayes a true-man: how if a Thief?

Pri. Stand

Pri. Stand Thief too.

Kin. Then thief or true-man, I must stand I see, howsoever the world wags, the trade of thieving yet will never down. What art thou?

Pri. A good fellow.

Kin. So I am too, I see thou dost know me.

Pri. If thou be a good fellow, play the good fellowes part, deliver thy purse without more adoe.

King. I have no money.

Pri. I must make you finde some before we part, if you have no money you shall have ware, as many found blowes as your skin can carry.

Kin. Is that the plain truth?

Pri. Sirrha, no more adoe; come, come, give me the money you have. Dispatch, I cannot stand all day.

Kin. Well, if thou wilt needs have it, there it is: just the Proverbe, one thief robs another. Where the Devil are all my old thieves? Falstaffe that villain is so fat, he cannot get on's Horse, but me thinks Poynes and Peto should be stirring hereabouts.

Pri. How much is there on't of thy word?

Kin. A hundred pound in Angels, on my word. The time has been I would have done as much For thee, if thou hadst past this way, as I have now.

Pri. Sirrha, what art thou? thou seem'st a Gentleman?

Kin. I am no lesse, yet a poor one now, for thou hast all my money.

Pri. From whence cam'st thou?

Kin. From the Court at Eltham.

Pri. Art thou one of the King's Servants?

Kin. Yes that I am, and one of his Chamber.

Pri. I am glad th'art no worse: thou may'st the better spare thy money, and think thou might'st get a poor Thief his pardon if he should have need.

Kin. Yes that I can.

Pri. Wilt thou doe so much for me, when I shall have occasion?

Kin. Yes faith will I, so it be for no murder.

Pri. Nay, I am a pittifull thief, all the hurt I do a man, I take but his purse, I'll kill no man.

Kin. Then of my word I'll do't.

Pri. Give me thy hand of the same.

Kin. There 'tis.

Pri. Me thinks the King should be good to Thieves, because he has bin a thief himself, although I think now he be turned a true-man.

Kin. Faith I have heard indeed h'as had an ill name that way in's youth: but how canst thou tell that he has been a thief?

Pri. How? because he once robb'd me before I fell to the trade my self, when that foul villanous guts, that led him to all that Roguery, was in's company there, that Falstaffe.

King aside. Well, if he did rob thee then, thou art but even with him now I'll be sworn: Thou knowest not the King now I think, if thou sawest him?

Pri. Not I, if faith.

King aside. So it should seem.

Pri. Well, if old King Harry had liv'd, this King that is now, had made thieving the best trade in England.

King. Why so?

Pri. Because he was the chief Warden of our Company, it's pitty that e're he should have been a King, he was so brave a thief. But sirrha, wilt remember my pardon if need be?

King. Yes faith will I.

Pri. Wilt thou? well then, because thou shalt go safe, for thou may'st hap (being so early) be met with again, before thou come to Southwarke, if any man when he should bid thee good morrow, bid the stand, say thou but sir John, and they will let thee passe.

King. Is that the word? then let me alone.

Pri. Nay sirrha, because I think indeed I shall have some occasion to use thee, and as thou comm'st oft this way, I may light on thee another time not knowing thee, here I'll break this Angel, take thou half of it, this is a token betwixt thee and me.

King. God a mercy: farewell.

Exit.

Pri. O my fine golden slaves, here's for thee, wench, ifaith. Now, Doll, we will revell in our Bever, this is a Tythe Pig of my Vicarage. God a mercy, neighbour Shooters-hill, you ha paid your Tythe honestly. Well, I hear there is a company of Rebels up against the King, got together in Ficket-field near Holborn, and as it is thought, here in Kent, the King will be there to night in's own person: well, I'll to the Kings Camp, and it shall go hard, if there be any doings but I'll make some good boot among them.

Exit.

Enter King Henry, Suffolk, Huntington, and two with Lights.

King. My Lords of Suffolk and of Huntington, Who scouts it now? or who stands sentinels? What men of worth? what Lords do walk the round?

Suf. May't please your Highnesse.

King. Peace, no more of that, The King's asleep, wake not his Majesty, With termes nor Titles; he's at rest in bed, Kings do not use to watch themselves, they sleep, And let rebellion and conspiracy Revel and havock in the Commonwealth. Is London look'd unto?

Hun. It is, my Lord:

Your noble Uncle Exeter is there. Your Brother Glocester, and my Lord of Warwick, Who with the Mayor and the Aldermen Doguard the Gates, and keep good rule within. The Earl of Cambridge, and sir Thomas Gray. Do walk the round, Lord Scroop and Butler scout, So though it please your Majesty to jest, Were you in bed, well might you take your rest.

King. I thank ye Lords: but you do know of old, That I have been a perfect night-walker:

London, you say, is safely lookt unto, Alas, poor Rebels, there your aid must fail, And the Lord Cobham Sir John Oldcastle, Quiet in Kent, Alton, ye are deceiv'd: Reckon again, you count without your Hoste.

To morrow you shall give account to us, Till when, my friends, this long cold winters night How can we spend? King Harry is asleep, And all his Lords, these garments tell us so: All friends at Foot-ball, fellowes all in field, Harry, and Dick, and George, bring us a Drumme, Give us square Dice, we'll keep this Court of Guard, For all good fellowes companies that come. Where's that mad Priest ye told me was in Armes To fight, as well as pray, if need required.

Suf. He's in the Camp, and if he knew of this, I undertake he would not be long hence.

King. Trip Dick, trip George.

Hun. I must have the Dice: what doe we play at?

Suf. Passage if ye please.

Hun.

Hun. Set round then : so, at all.

Har. George, you are out.

Give me the Dice, I passe for twenty pound,
Here's to our lucky passage into France.

Hun. Harry, you passe indeed, for you sweep all.

Suf. A sign King Harry shall sweep all in France.

Enter Priest.

Pri. Edge ye good fellowes, take a fresh gamester in.

Har. Master Parson, we play nothing but gold ?

Pri. And, fellow, I tell thee that the Priest hath gold, gold : what ? ye are but beggarly soldiers to me, I think I have more gold then all you three.

Hun. It may be so, but we believe it not.

Har. Set, Priest, set, I passe for all that gold.

Pri. Ye passe indeed.

Har. Priest, hast any more ?

Pri. More ? what a question's that ?

I tell thee I have more then all you three,
At these ten Angels.

Har. I wonder how thou com'st by all this gold.
How many Benefices hast thou, Priest ?

Pri. Faith, but one, dost wonder how I come by gold ?
I wonder rather how poor soldiers should have gold : for I'll tell thee, good fellow, we have every day tythes, off'rings, christnings, weddings, burials : and you poor snakes come seldome to a booty. I'll speak a proud word,
I have but one Parsonage, Wrotham, 'tis better then the Bishoprick of Rocheſter : there's ne're a hill, heath, nor down in all Kent, but 'tis in my Parish, Barrham-down, Chobham-down, Gads-hill, Wrotham-hill, Black-heath, Cocks-heath, Birchen-wood, all pay me tythe, gold quoth a ? ye pas not for that.

Suf. Harry, ye are out ; now, Parson, shake the Dice.

Pri. Set, set, I'll cover ye, at all : A plague on't I am out the Devil, and Dice, and a Wench, who will trust them ?

Suf. Say'st thou so, Priest ? set fair, at all for once.

Har. Out, sir, pay all.

Pri. Sir, pay me Angel gold,
I'll none of your crackt French Crownes nor Pistolets,
Pay me fair Angel gold, as I pay you.

King. No crackt French Crownes ? I hope to see more crackt French Crownes ere long.

Pri. Thou mean'st of French-mens Crownes, when the King's in France.

Hun. Set round, at all.

Pri. Pay all : this is some luck.

King. Give me the Dice, 'tis I must shred the Priest :
At all, Sir John.

Pri. The Devil and all is yours : at that. 'Sdeath, what casting's this ?

Suf. Well thrown, Harry, ifaith.

King. I'll cast better yet.

Pri. Then I'll be hang'd : Sirrha, hast thou not given thy soul to the Devil for casting ?

Har. I passe for all.

Pri. Thou passest all that e're I plaid withall :
Sirrha, dost thou not cog, nor foist, nor slurre ?

King. Set, Parson, set, the Dice die in my hand.
When, Parson, when ? what, can ye find no more ?
Already dry ? was't you brag'd of your store ?

Pri. All's gone but that.

Hun. What ? half a broken Angel.

Pri. Why, sir ? 'tis gold.

King. Yea, and I'll cover it.

Pri. The Devil give ye good on't, I am blind, you have blown me up.

King. Nay, tarry, Priest, you shall not leave us yet,
Do not these pieces fit each other well ?

Pri. What if they doe ?

King. Thereby begins a tale :

There was a Thief, in face much like Sir John,
But 'twas not he. That thief was all in green,
Met me last day on Black-heath, near the Parke.
With him a Woman. I was all alone
And weaponlesse, my boy had all my tooles,
And was before providing me a Boat.
Short tale to make, Sir John, the Thief I mean,
Took a just hundreth pound in gold from me.
I stonn'd at it, and swore to be reveng'd
If e're we met ; he like a lusty Thief,
Brake with his Teeth this Angel just in two,
To be a token at our meeting next.
Provided, I should charge no Officer
To apprehend him, but at weapons point
Recover that, and what he had beside.
Well met, Sir John, betake ye to your tooles
By Torch-light, for, Master Parson, you are he
That had my Gold.

Pri. Zounds, I won't in play, in fair square play, of the Keeper of Eltham-Parke, and that I will maintain with this poor Whinyard : be you two honest men to stand and look upon's, and let's alone, and neither part.

King. Agreed, I charge ye doe not budge a foot,
Sir John, have at ye.

Pri. Souldier, ware your sconce.

As they proffer, enter Butler, and drawes his Sword to part them.

But. Hold, villain, hold : my Lords, what d'ye mean,
To see a Traitor draw against the King ?

Pri. The King ? Gods will, I am in a proper pickle.

King. Butler, what newes ? why dost thou trouble us ?

But. Please your Majesty, it's break of day,
And as I scouted near to Islington,
The gray-ey'd morning gave me glimmering,
Of armed men comming down Hygate-hill,
Who by their course are coasting hitherward.

King. Let us withdraw, my Lords, prepare our troops,
To charge the Rebels if there be such cause :
For this lewd Priest, this devillish Hypocrite,
That is a Thief, a gamester, and what not,
Let him be hang'd up for example sake.

Priest. Not so, my gracious Sovereign, I confesse I am a fraile man, flesh and blood as other are ; but set my imperfections aside, ye have not a taller man, nor a truer Subject to the Crown and State, than Sir John of Wrotham is.

King. Will a true Subject rob his King ?

Pri. Alas 'twas ignorance and want, my gracious Liege.

King. 'Twas want of grace. Why, you should be as
To season others with good document, (sai:
Your lives as lamps to give the people light,
As shepherds, not as Wolves to spoile the flock ;
Go hang him, Butler.

But. Didst thou not rob me ?

Pri. I must confesse I saw some of your gold, but, my dread Lord, I am in no humour for death : God will that sinners live, doe not you cause me to die, once in their lives the best may go astray, and if the world say true, your self (my Liege) have bin a Thief.

Kin. I confesse I have,
But I repent and have reclaim'd my self.
Pri. So will I doe if you will give me time.
Kin. Wilt thou? My Lords, will you be his sureties?
Han. That when he robs again he shall be hang'd.
Pri. I aske no more.
Kin. And we will grant thee that,
Live and repent, and prove an honest man,
Which when I hear, and safe return from France,
I'll give thee living. Till when, take thy Gold,
But spend it better then at Cards or Wine,
For better virtues fit that Coat of thine.
Pri. Vivat Rex, & currat Lex. My Liege, if ye have cause of Battel, ye shall see Sir John bestir himself in your quarrell.

An alarm. Enter King, Suffolk, Huntington, *Sir
John* bringing forth Alton, Beverly, and Murly prisoners.

King. Bring in those Traitors, whose aspiring minds
Thought to have triumpht in our overthrow:
But now ye see, base villains, what successe
Attends ill actions wrongfully attempted.
Sir Roger Alton, thou retain'st the name
Of Knight, and should'st be more discreetly temper'd
Than joyn with pezants, Gentry is divine,
But thou hast made it more then popular.

Al. Pardon, my Lord, my conscience urg'd me to it.

Kin. Thy conscience? then conscience is corrupt,
For in thy conscience thou art bound to us,
And in thy conscience thou should'st love thy Countrey,
Else what's the difference 'twixt a Christian,
And the uncivil manners of the Turk?

Bev. We meant no hurt unto your Majesty,
But reformation of Religion.

King. Reform Religion? was it that you sought?
I pray who gave you that authority?
Belike then we hold the Scepter up,
And sit within the Throne, but for a Cipher.
Time was, good Subjects would make known their grief,
And pray amendment, not enforce the same,
Unlesse their King were tyrant, which I hope
You cannot justly say that Harry is,
What is that other?

Suf. A Malt-man, my Lord,
And dwelling in Dunstable as he sayes.

King. Sirrha, what made you leave your Barley broth,
To come in armour thus against your King?

Mur. Fic, paltry, paltry, to and fro, in and out upon occasion, what a world is this? Knighthood (my Liege),
'twas Knighthood brought me hither, they told me I had wealth enough to make my Wife a Lady.

Kin. And so you brought those horses which we saw,
Trapt all in costly furniture, and meant
To wear these Spurres when you were Knighted once.

Mur. In and out upon occasion I did.

Kin. In and out upon occasion, therefore you shall be hang'd, and in the stead of wearing these Spurres upon your heeles, about your neck they shall bewray your folly to the world.

Pri. In and out upon occasion, that goes hard.

Mur. Fic, paltry, paltry, too and fro: good my Liege, a pardon, I am sorry for my fault.

King. That comes too late: but tell me, went there none beside Sir Roger Alton, upon whom
You did depend to be you Governour.

Mur. None, my Lord, but Sir John Oldcastle.

Enter Bishop.

Kin. Beares he a part in this conspiracy.

Al. We lookt, my Lord, that he would meet us here.

King. But did he promise you that he would come.

Al. Such Letters we received forth of Kent,

Bish. Where is my Lord the King? health to your grace.
Examining, my Lord, some of these Rebels,

It is a generall voyce among them all,

That they had never come into this place,

But to have met their valiant Generall

The good Lord Cobham as they title him:

Whereby, my Lord, your Grace may now perceive,

His Treason is apparant, which before

He sought to colour by his flattery.

King. Now by my Royalty I would have sworn,

But for his conscience which I bear withall,

There had not liv'd a more true hearted Subject.

Bish. It is but counterfeits, my gracious Lord,

And therefore may it please your Majesty,

To set your hand unto this precept here,

By which we'll cause him forthwith to appear,

And answer this by order of the Law.

Kin. Not onely that, but take Commission

To search, attach, imprison, and condemn,

This most notorious traitor as you please.

Bish. It shall be done, my Lord, without delay:

So now I hold Lord Cobham in my hand,

That which shall finish thy disdain'd life.

King. I think the Iron age begins but now,

Which learned Poets have so often taught,

Wherein there is no credit to be given

To either words or looks, or solemn oaths:

For if he were, how often hath he sworn,

How gently tun'd the musick of his tongue,

And with what amiable face beheld he me,

When all, God knowes, was but hypocrisie.

Enter Cobham.

Cob. Long life and prosperous reign unto my Lord.

Kin. Ah, villain, canst thou wish prosperity,

Whose heart includeth nought but treachery?

I do arrest thee here my self, false Knight,

Of treason capitall against the state.

Cob. Of treason, mighty Prince? your Grace mistakes,

I hope it is but in the way of mirth.

Kin. Thy neck shall feel it is in earnest shortly.

Dar'st thou intrude into our presence, knowing

How hainously thou hast offended us?

But this is thy accustomed deceit.

Now thou perceiv'st thy purpose is in vain,

With some excuse or other thou wilt come

To clear thy self of this Rebellion.

Cob. Rebellion, good my Lord, I know of none.

Kin. If you deny it, here is evidence,

See you these men; you never counselled,

Nor offered them assistance in their Warres.

Cob. Speak, sirs, not one but all, I crave no favour,

Have ever I been conversant with you?

Or written Letters to encourage you?

Or kindled but the least or smallest part

Of this your late unnaturall Rebellion?

Speak, for I date the uttermost you can.

Mur. In and out upon occasion, I know you not.

King. No, didst thou not say, that Sir John Oldcastle

Was one with whom you purposed to have met?

Mur. True, I did say so, but in what respect,

Because I heard it was reported so.

Kin. Was

King. Was there no other argument but that?

All. I must confesse we have no other ground
But onely runour to accuse this Lord,
Which now I see was meeterly fabulous.

Kin. The more pernicious you to taint him then,
Whom you know was not faulty, yea or no.

Cob. Let this, my Lord, which I present your Grace
Speak for my loyalty, read these Articles,
And then give sentence of my life or death.

Kin. Earl Cambridge, Scroop, and Gray corrupted
With bribes from Charles of France, either to win
My Crown from me, or secretly contrive
My death by Treason? Is't possible.

Cob. There is the platforme, and their hands, my Lord,
Each severally subscribed to the same.

Kin. Oh never heard of base ingratitude!

Even those I hug within my bosome most,

Are readiest evermore to sting my heart.

Pardon me, Cobham, I have done thee wrong,
Hereafter I will live to make amends,

Is then their time of meeting so near hand?

We'll meet with them, but little for their ease,

If God permit. Go take these Rebels hence,

Let them have martiall law: but as for thee,

Friend to thy King and Countrey, still be free. Exeunt.

Mur. Be it more or lesse, what a world is this?

Would I had continued still of the order of knaves,

And ne're sought Knight-hood, since it costs

So dear: Sir Roger, I may thank you for all.

Alton. Now 'tis too late to have it remedied,

I prethee, Murley, doe not urge me with it.

Hun. Will you away, and make no more to doe?

Mur. Fie paltry, paltry, too and fro, as occasion serves,
If you be so hasty, take my place.

Hun. No, good sir Knight, e'ne tak't your self.

Mur. I could be glad to give my betters place. Exeunt.

Enter Bishop, Lord Warden, Cromer the Shreeve, Lady Cobham and attendants.

Bish. I tell ye, Lady, it's impossible
But you should know where he conveyes himself,
And you have hid him in some secret place.

La. My Lord, believe me, as I have a soule,
I know not where my Lord my Husband is.

Bish. Go to, go, ye are an Heretick,
And will be forc't by torture to confesse,
If fair meanes will not serve to make you tell.

La. My Husband is a noble Gentleman,
And need not hide himself for any fault
That e're I heard of, therefore wrong him not,

Bish. Your husband is a dangerous Schismatick,
Traitor to God, the King, and Commonwealth,
And therefore, M. Cromer, Shreeve of Kent,
I charge you take her to your custody,
And feize the goods of Sir John Oldcastle
To the Kings use; let her go in no more,
To fetch so much as her apparell out,
There is your warrant from his Majesty.

L. War. Good my Lord Bishop, pacifie your wrath Against the Lady.

Bish. Then let her confesse
Where Oldcastle her husband is conceal'd.

L. War. I dare engage mine honour and my life,
Poor Gentlewoman, she is ignorant
And innocent of all his practices
If any evil by him be practised.

Bish. If, my Lord Warden? Nay then I charge you,
That all Cinque-ports whercof you are chief,

Be laid forthwith, that he escapes us not.

Shew him his Highnesse warrant, M. Sheriffe.

L. War. I am sorry for the Noble Gentleman.

Bish. Peace, he comes here, now do your office,

Enter Harpoole and Oldcastle.

Cob. Harpoole; what businesse have we here in hand?
What makes the Bishop and the Sheriffe here?

I fear my coming home is dangerous,

I would I had not made such haste to Cobham.

Har. Be of good cheer, my Lord, if they be foes, we'll scramble threwdly with them: if they be friends
they are welcome.

Cro. Sir John Oldcastle Lord Cobham, in the Kings name, I arrest ye of high treason.

Cob. Treason, M. Cromer?

Har. Treason, M. Sheriffe, what Treason?

Cob. Harpoole, I charge thee stirre not, but be quiet.
Do ye arrest me of Treason, M. Sheriffe?

Bish. Yea, of high Treason, Traitor, Heretick.

Cob. Defiance in his face that calls me so,

I am as true a loyall Gentleman

Unto his Highnesse, as my proudest enemy,

The King shall witnesse my late faithfull service,

For safety of his sacred Majesty.

Bish. What thou art, the Kings hand shall testifie,
Shew him, Lord Warden.

Cob. Jesu defend me,
Is't possible your cunning could so temper
The Princely disposition of his minde,

To sign the damage of a royall Subject?

Well, the best is, it beares an antedate,

Procured by my absence and your malice.

But I, since that, have shew'd my self as true,

As any Churchman that dare challenge me.

Let me be brought before his Majesty,

If he acquit me not, then doe your worst.

Bish. We are not bound to doe kinde offices,
For any traitor, schismatick, nor heretick:

The Kings hand is our warrant for our work,

Who is departed on his way for France,

And at Southampton doth repose this night.

Har. O that thou and I were within twenty miles of it, on Salisbury plain! I would lose my head if thou brought'st thy head hither again. Aside.

Cob. My Lord Warden o'th Cinque-ports, and Lord of Rochester, ye are joynt Commissioners, favour me so much on my expence, to bring me to the King.

Bish. VVhat, to Southampton?

Cob. Thither, my good Lord,

And if he doe not clear me of all guilt,

And all suspicion of conspiracy,

Pawning his Princely warrant for my truth:

I aske no favour, but extreamest torture.

Bring me, or send me to him, good my Lord,

Good my Lord VVarden, M. Shrieve entreat.

They bosh entreat for me.

Come hither, Lady, nay sweet wife, forbear

To heap one sorrow on anothers neck:

'Tis grief enough falsely to be accus'd,

And not permitted to acquit my self,

Doe not thou with thy kinde respective teares,

Torment thy husbands heart that bleeds for thee.

But be of comfort, God hath help in store

For those that put assured trust in him.

Dear VVife, if they commit me to the Tower,

Come up to London to your sisters house:

That being near me, you may comfort me.
One solace find I fetled in my soul,
That I am free from Treasons very thought,
Onely my conscience for the Gospels sake,
Is cause of all the troubles I sustain.

La. O, my dear Lord, what shall betide of us?
You to the Tower, and I turn'd out of doors,
Our substance seiz'd unto his Highnesseuse,
Even to the garments longing to our backs.

Har. Patience, good Madam, things at worst will mend,
And if they do not, yet our lives may end.

Bish. Urge it no more, for if an Angel spake,
I swear by sweet S. Peter's blessed keyes,
First goes he to the Tower, then to the stake.

Crom. But by your leave, this warrant doth not stretch
To imprison her.

Bish. No, turn her out of doors,
Even as she is, and lead him to the Tower,
With guard enough, for fear of rescuing.

La. O God requite thee thou bloud-thirsty man.

Cob. May it not be, my Lord of Rocheſter?
Wherein have I incurr'd your hate so far,
That my appeal unto the King's deny'd.

Bish. No hate of mine, but power of holy Church,
Forbids all favour to false Hereticks.

Cob. Your private malice more then publick power,
Strikes most at me, but with my life it ends.

Har. aside. O that I had the Bishop in that fear
That once I had his Summer by our selves.

Cro. My Lord, yet grant one suit unto us all,
That this same ancient servingman may wait
Upon my Lord his master in the Tower.

Bish. This old iniquity, this heretick?
That in contempt of our Church discipline,
Compel'd my Sumner to devour his Proceſſe?
Old ruffian past-grace, upstart schismatick,
Had not the King pray'd us to pardon ye,
Ye had fryed for't, ye grizeled heretick.

Har. Sblood, my Lord Bishop, ye wrong me, I am neither Heretick nor Puritan, but of the old Church, I'll swear, drink ale, kiss a wench, go to mass, eat fish all Lent, and fast Frydayes with cakes and wine, fruit and spicery, thrive me of my old sinnes afore Easter, and begin new before Whitsontide.

Cro. A merry mad conceited knave, my Lord.

Har. That knave was simply put upon the Bishop.

Bish. Well, God forgive him, and I pardon him:
Let him attend his master in the Tower,
For I in charity with his soul no hurt.

Cob. God bless my soul from such cold charity.

Bish. To th' Tower with him, & when my leisure serves
I will examine him of Articles;
Look, my Lord Warden, as you have in charge
The Shrieve perform his office.

War. I, my Lord.

Enter Sumner with Books.

Bish. What bring'st thou there? what books of heresie?

Sum. Yea, my Lord, here's not a Latine Book,

Not so much as our Ladies Psalter:

Here's the Bible, the Testament, the Psalmes in meeter,

The sick-man's salve, the Treasure of Gladness,

All English, no not so much but the Almanack's English.

Bish. Away with them, to th' fire with them, Clun,
Now fie upon these upstart Hereticks.

All English, burn them, burn them quickly, Clun.

Harp. But do not, Sumner, as you'll answer it, for I have there English books, my Lord, that I'll not part withall for your Bishoprick, Bevis of Hampton, Owle-glasse, The Fryer and the Boy, Ellen of Ramming, Re-bin-hood, and other such godly stories, which if you burn, by this flesh I'll make ye drink their ashes in S. Marger's Ale.

Exit.

Enter the Bishop of Rocheſter, with his men in Livery Coats.

1. Ser. Is it your honours we shall stay,
Or come back in the afternoon to fetch you.

Bish. Now have ye brought me here unto the Tower,
You may go back unto the Porter's lodge,
Where if I have occasion to employ you,
I'll send some officer to call you to me.
Into the City go not, I command you,
Perhaps I may have present need to use you.

2. We will attend your honour here without.

3. Come, we may have a quart of wine at the Rose at Barking, and come back an hour before he'll go.

1. We must bid us then.

3. Let's away.

Exeunt.

Bish. Ho, Mr. Lievtenant.

Liev. Who calls there?

Bish. A friend of yours.

Liev. My Lord of Rocheſter? your honour's welcome.

Bish. Sir, here's my warrant from the counſel,
For conference with Sir John Oldcastle,
Upon some matter of great consequence.

Liev. Ho, Sir John.

Har. Who calls there?

Liev. Harpool, tell Sir John, that my Lord of Rocheſter
Comes from the counſel to confer with him,
I think you may as safe without suspicion.

As any man in England as I hear,
For it was you most labour'd his commitment.

Bish. I did, sir, and nothing repent it I assure you.

Enter Sir John Oldcastle.

Mr. Lievtenant, I pray you give us leave,
I must confer here with Sir John a little.

Liev. With all my heart, my Lord.

Har. aside. My Lord, be rul'd by me, take this occasion while it is offered, & on my life your Lordship will escape.

Cob. No more I say, peace lest he should suspect it.

Bish. Sir John, I am come to you from the Lords of the Counſel, to know if you do recant your errours.

Cob. My Lord of Rocheſter, on good advice,

I see my errour; but yet understand me,
I mean not errour in the Faith I hold,
But errour in submitting to your pleasure,
Therefore your Lordship without more to do,
Must be a means to help me to escape.

Bish. What means, thou heretick?

Dar'st thou but lift thy hand against my calling?

Cob. No, not to hurt you for a thousand pound.

Har. Nothing but to borrow your upper garment a little, not a word more, peace for waking the children;
there, put on, dispatch, my Lord, the window that goes out into the Leads is sure enough: as for you, I'll bind you surely in the inner room.

Cob. This is well begun, God send us happy speed,
Hard shift you see men make in time of need.

Enter servingmen again.

1. I marvel that my Lord should stay so long.

2. He hath sent to seek us I dare lay my life.

3. We come in good time, see where he is coming.

Har. I beseech you, good my Lord of Rocheſter, be favourable to my Lord and master.

Cob. The

Cob. The inner roomes be very hot and close,
I do not like this air here in the Tower.

Harp. His case is hard, my Lord: you shall safely get out of the Tower, but I will down upon them; in which time get you away. Hard under Islington wait you my coming, I will bring my Lady ready with horses to get hence.

Cob. Fellow; go back again unto my Lord, and counsel him.

Har. Nay, my good Lord of Rocheſter, I'll bring you to S. Albons through the woods I warrant you.

Cob. Villain away.

Har. Nay since I am paſt the Towers liberty,
You part not ſo. He drawes.

Biſh. Clubs, clubs, clubs.

1. Murther, murther, murther.

2. Down with him.

Har. Out you cowardly rogues. Cobh. eſcapes.

Enter Lieutenant, and his men.

Liev. Who is ſo bold as to dare to draw a ſword ſo near unto the entrance of the Tower.

1. This Ruffian, ſervant to ſir John Oldcaſtle, was like to have ſlain my Lord.

Liev. Lay hold on him.

Har. Stand off if you love your puddings.

Rocheſter calls within.

Help, help, help, Mr. Lieutenant, help.

Liev. Who's that within? ſome Treason in the Tower on my life, look in, who's that which calls?

Enter Rocheſter bound.

Liev. Without your cloak, my Lord of Rocheſter?

Har. There, now it works; then let me ſpeed,
For now's the fitteſt time to ſcape away. Exit.

Liev. Why do you look ſo gaſtly and affrighted?

Biſh. Oldcaſtle that Traitor and his man,
When you had left me to conferre with him,
Took, bound, and ſtrip't me as you ſee,
And left me lying in this inner chamber,
And ſo departed, and I ----

Liev. And you I Nere ſay that the Lord Cobham's man
Did here ſet on you like to murther you.

1. And ſo he did.

Biſh. It was upon his Maſter then he did,
That in the brawl the Traitor might eſcape.

Liev. Where is this Harpool?

2. Here he was even now.

Liev. Where, can you tell? They are both eſcap'd.
Since it ſo happens that he is eſcap'd,
I am glad you are a witneſſe of the ſame:
It might have elſe been laid unto my charge,
That I had been conſenting to the fact.

Biſh. Come, ſearch ſhall be made for him with expedition, the Haven's laid that he ſhall not eſcape, and hue and cry continue through England, to find this damned, dangerous heretick. Exeunt.

Enter Cambridge, Scroop, and Gray, as in a chamber, and ſet down at a Table, conſulting about their Treason, King Harry and Suffolk liſtning at the door.

Cam. In mine opinion, Scroop hath well advis'd,
Poison will be the onely apteſt mean,
And fitteſt for our purpoſe to diſpatch him.

Gray. But yet there may be doubt in their delivery,
Harry is wiſe, therefore Earl of Cambridge,
I judge that way not ſo convenient.

Ser. What think ye then of this? I am his bedfellow,
And unſuſpected nightlie ſleep with him.

What if I venture in thoſe ſilent houres,
When ſleep hath ſealed up all mortal eyes
To murther him in bed? how like ye that?

Cam. Herein conſiſts no ſafety for your ſelf,
And you diſclos'd, what ſhall become of us?
But this day (as ye know) he will aboard,
The wind's ſo fair, and ſet away for France,
If as he goes, or entering in the ſhip
It might be done, then were it excellent.

Gray. Why any of theſe, or if you will,
I'll cauſe a preſent ſitting of the Council,
Wherein I will pretend ſome matter of ſuch weight;
As needs muſt have his royal company,
And ſo diſpatch him in his Council chamber.

Cam. Tuff, yet I hear not any thing to purpoſe;
I wonder that Lord Cobham ſtayes ſo long,
His counſel in this caſe would much avail us.

The King ſteps in upon them with his Lords.

Ser. What ſhall we rile thus, and determine nothing?

King. That were a ſhame indeed: no, ſit again,
And you ſhall have my counſel in this caſe:

If you can find no way to kill the King,

Then you ſhall ſee how I can furniſh ye;

Scroop's way by poiſon was indifferent,

But yet being bed-fellow to the King,

And unſuſpected, ſleeping in his boſome,

In mine opinion that's the likelier way.

For ſuch falſe friends are able to do much,

And ſilent night is Treason's fitteſt friend.

Now, Cambridge in his ſetting hence for France,

Or by the way, or as he goes aboard

To do the deed, that was indifferent too,

But ſomewhat doubtfull.

Marry Lord Gray came very near the point,

To have the King at Council, and there murder him.

As Cæſar was amongſt his deareſt friends.

Tell me, oh tell me, you bright honour's ſtaines,

For which of all my kindneſſes to you,

Are ye become thus Traitors to your King?

And France muſt have the ſpoil of Harrie's life.

All. Oh pardon us, dread Lord.

King. How, pardon ye? that were a ſin indeed,

Drag them to death, which juſtly they deſerve:

And France ſhall dearly buy this villany,

So ſoon as we ſet footing on her breaſt.

God have the praiſe for our deliverance,

And next our thanks, Lord Cobham, iſt to thee,

True perfect mirrour of Nobilitie. Exit.

Enter the Hoſt, L. Cobham, and Harpool.

Hoſt. Sir, y'are welcome to this houſe, to ſuch as iſt here with all my heart: but I fear your lodging will be the worſt. I have but two beds, and they are both in a chamber, and the Carrier and his daughter lies in the one, and you and your wife muſt lye in the other.

Cob. Faith ſir, for my ſelf I do not greatly paſs,
My wife is weary, and would be at reſt,
For we have travel'd very far to day,
We muſt be content with ſuch as you have.

Hoſt. But I cannot tell how to do with your man.

Har. What? haſt thou never an empty room in thy houſe for me?

Hoſt. Not a bed in troth. There came a poor Iriſh- man, and I lodg'd him in the barn, where he has fair ſtraw, although he have nothing elſe.

Har. Well mine Hoſt, I prythee help me to a pair of clean ſheets, and I'll go lodge with him.

Host. By the Mass that thou shalt, a good pair of hempen sheets were nere layn in : come. Exeunt.

Enter Constable, Mayor, and Watch.

May. What? have you searcht the Town?

Con. All the town, sir, we have not left a house unsearcht that uses to lodge.

May. Surely, my Lord of Rocheſter was then deceiv'd, Or ill inform'd of sir John Oldcastle, Or if he came this way, he's past the Town, He could not else have escap'd you in the search.

Con. The privy watch hath been abroad all night, And not a stranger lodger in the Town But he is known; onely a lusty Priest We found in bed with a pretty wench, That sayes she is his wife, yonder at the Shears: But we have charg'd the host with his forth coming To morrow morning.

May. What think you best to do?

Con. Faith, Mr. Maior, here's a few stragling houses beyond the bridge, and a little Inne where Carriers use to lodge, although I think surely he would nere lodge there: but we'll go search, and the rather, because there came notice to the town the last night of an Irish man, that had done a murder, whom we are to make search for.

Mayor. Come I pray you, and be circumspect. Exeunt.

Con. First beset the house, before you begin to search.

Off. Content, every man take a several place.

A noise within.

Keep, keep, strike him down there, down with him.

Enter Constable with the Irishman in Harpool's apparel.

Con. Come you villanous heretick, tell us where your Master is.

Irish. Vat mester?

May. Vatmester, you counterfeit Rebel? This shall not serve your turn.

Irish. Be sent Patrick I ha no mester.

Con. Where's the Lord Cobham, sir John Oldcastle, that lately escaped out of the Tower?

Irish. Vat Lort Cobham?

May. You counterfeit this shall not serve you, we'll torture you, we'll make you confesse where that arch-heretick is. Come bind him fast.

Irish. Ahone, ahone, ahone, a Cree.

Con. Ahone you crafty rascal? Exeunt.

Lord Cobham comes out stealing in his gown.

Cob. Harpool, Harpool, I hear a marvellous noise about the house, God warrant us, I fear we are pursued: what Harpool?

Har. within. Who calls there?

Cob. 'Tis I, dost thou not hear a noise about the house?

Har. Yes marry do I; zounds I cannot find my hose, this Irish rascal that lodg'd with me all night, hath stolen my apparel, and has left me nothing but a lowfie mantle, and a pair of broags. Get up, get up, and if the Carrier and his wench be asleep, change you with him as he hath done with me, and see if we can scape.

Noise heard about the house a pretty while, then enter the Constable meeting Harpool in the Irishman's apparel.

Con. Stand close, here comes the Irishman that did the murder, by all tokens this is he.

May. And perceiving the house beset, would get away: stand sirra.

Har. What art thou that bid'st me stand?

Con. I am the Officer, and am come to search for an Irish man, such a villain as thy self, thou hast murder'd a man this last night by the high way.

Harp. Shloud Constable art thou mad? am I an Irish-man?

May. Sirra, we'll find you an Irish-man befor we part: Lay hold upon him.

Con. Make him fast, O thou bloody rogue!

Enter Lord Cobham and his Lady, in the Carrier and wenches apparel.

Cob. What will these Ostlers sleep all day? Good morrow, good morrow, come wench, come; Saddle, saddle, now afore God two fair dayes, ha?

Con. Who goes there?

May. O 'tis Lancashire Carrier, let them pass.

Cob. What, will no body ope the gates here? Come, let's int'stable to look to our Capons.

The Carrier calling.

Host, why Ostler?

Zwooks here's such a bomination company of Boyes: A pox of this pigstie at the house end, It fills all the house full of fleas, Ostler, Ostler.

Off. Who calls there? what would you have?

Club. Zwooks, do you rob your guests? Do you lodge rogues, and slaves, and scoundrels, ha? They ha stoln our clothes here: why Ostler?

Off. A murren choak you, what a bawling you keep.

Host. How now? what would the Carrier have? Look up there.

Ostler. They say the man and the woman that lay by them, have stoln their clothes.

Host. What, are the strange folks up yet that came in yester night?

Con. What mine Host, up so early?

Host. What Mr. Maior, and Mr. Constable?

May. We are come to seek for some suspected persons, and such as here we found have apprehended.

Enter Carrier and Kate in Cobham and Ladies apparel.

Con. Who comes here?

Club. Who comes here? A plague found ome, you bawl quorth a, ods hat I'll forewear your house: you lodg'd a fellow and his wife by us, that ha run away with our parrel, and left us such gew-gaws here, come Kate, come to me, thowse dizeard yfaith.

Mayor. Mine host, know you this man?

Host. Yes, master Maior, I'll give my word for him, why neighbour Club, how comes this gear about?

Kate. Now a foule on't, I cannot make this gew-gaw stand on my head.

Con. How came this man and woman thus attired?

Host. Here came a man and woman hither this last night, which I did take for substantial people, and lodg'd all in one chamber by these folks: me thinks have been so bold to change apparel, and gone away this morning ere they rose.

May. That was that Traitor Oldcastle that thus escape us: make hue and cry after him, keep fast that traiterous Rebel his servant there: farewell, mine Host.

Car. Come Kate Owdham, thou and Ise trimly dizard.

Kate. Ifaith

Kate. Ifaith neam Club, Iſe wor nere what to do, Iſe be fo flouted and ſo ſhouſted at: but by th' Meſs Iſe cry.

Exit.

Enter Prieſt and Doll.

Prieſt. Come Doll, come, be merſy wench.

Farewell Kent, we are not for thee.

Be liſty my Eaſſe, come for Lancuſhire.

We muſt nip the Bounſ for theſe Crowns.

Doll. Why is all the gold ſpent alerady, that you had the other day.

Prieſt. Gone Doll, gone; flown, ſpent, vaniſhed, the Devil, drink, and dice, has devoured all.

Doll. You might have left me in Kent till you had been better provided.

Prieſt. No, Doll, no, Kent's too hot, Doll, Kent's too hot: the weathercock of Wrotham will crow no longer, we have pluckt him, he has loſt his feathers, I have prun'd him bare, left him thrice, is moulted, is moulted wench.

Doll. I might have gone to ſervice again, old M. Harpool told me he would provide me a Miſtris.

Prieſt. Peace, Doll, peace; come mad wench, I'll make thee an honeſt woman, we'll into Lancuſhire to our friends, the troth is, I'll marry thee, we want but a little money, and money we will have I warrant thee: ſtay, who comes here? ſome Iriſh villain me thinks that has ſlain a man, and now he is riſing on him, ſtand cloſe, Doll, we'll ſee the end.

Enter the Iriſhman with his dead Maſter, and riſes him.

Iriſh. Alas poe Maſter, Sir Riſhard Lee, be S. Patrick is rob and cut thy trote, for'de ſhain, and dy mony, and dy gold ring, be me truly is love de well, but now dow be kill de, be ſhitten kanave.

Prieſt. Stand, ſirra, what art thou?

Iriſh. Be S. Patrick Meſter, is poor Iriſman, is a leuſter.

Prieſt. Sirra, ſirra, y'are a damn'd rogue, you have kill'd a man here, and riſted him of all that he has: ſbloud you rogue deliver, or I'll not leave you ſo much as a hair above your ſhoulders, you whoſon Iris dog.

Rebs him.

Iriſh. We's me S. Patrick, Iſe kill my Meſter for ſhain and his ring, and now's be rob of all, me's undo.

Prieſt. Avant you Rascal, go ſirra, be walking: come Doll, the devil laughs when one thief robs another: come wench, we'll to S. Albans, and revel in our bower, my brave girl.

Doll. O thou art old Sir John when all's done ifaith.

Enter the hoſt of the houſe with the Iriſhman.

Iriſh. Be me tro Meſter is poor Iriſman, is want ludging, is have no mony, is ſtarve and cold, good Meſter give her ſome meat, is famiſe and tye.

Hoſt. Faith fellow I have no lodging, but what I keep for my Gueſſe: as for meat, thou ſhalt have as much as there is, and if thou wilt lie in the barn, there's fair ſtraw, and room enough.

Iriſh. Is tank my Meſter hertily.

Hoſt. Ho, Robin.

Rob. Who calls?

Hoſt. Shew this poor Iriſman to the barn, go ſirra.

Enter Carrier and Kate.

Club. Who's within here? who looks to the horſes? Uds har, here's fine work, the Hens in the manger, and the Hogs in the litter, a bots found you all, here's a houſe well lookt too ifaith.

Kate. Mas Goff Club, Iſe very cawd.

Club. Get in Kate, get into fire and warme thee.

John Oſtler?

Hoſt. What, Gaſſer Club, welcome to S. Albans,

How do's all our friends in Lancuſhire?

Club. Well, God a mercy John, how do's Tom? where is he?

Oſt. Tom's gone from hence, he's at the three Horſe-loves at ſtony-Stratford: how do's old Dick Dun.

Club. Uds har, old Dun is moyr'd in a ſlough in Brick hill-lane: a plague found it, yonders ſuch abomination weather as was never ſeen.

Oſt. Uds har Thief, have one half peck of peafe and oats more for that, as I am John Oſtler, he has bin ever as good a jade as ever travelled.

Club. Faith well ſaid old Jack, thou art the old lad ſtill.

Oſt. Come Gaſſer Club, unload, unload, and get to ſupper.

Enter Cobham and his Lady diſguiſed.

Cob. Come Madam, happily eſcapd, here let us ſit, This place is far remote from any path, And here a while our weary limbs may reſt, To take reſreſhing, free from the purſuit Of envious Rochester.

La. But where, my Lord, ſhall we find reſt for our diſquiet minds?

There dwell untamed thoughts that hardly ſtoop to ſuch abaſement of diſdained rags:

We were not wont to travel thus by night, Eſpecially on foot.

Cob. No matter, love, extremities admit no better choice:

And were it not for thee, ſay froward time

Impos'd a greater task, I would eſteem it

As lightly as the wind that blows upon us,

But in thy ſufferance I am doubly taſk,

Thou waſt not wont to have the earth thy ſtool,

Nor the moiſt dewy graſſe thy pillow, nor

Thy chamber to be the wide Horizon.

La. How can it ſeem a trouble, having you

A partner with me, in the worſt I feel?

No gentle Lord, your preſence would give eaſe

To death it ſelf, ſhould he now ſeize upon me:

Here's bread and cheeſe and a bottle.

Behold what my fore-ſight hath underrane

For fear we faint, they are but homely Cates,

Yet ſawe'd with hunger, they may ſeem as ſweet

As greater dainties we were wont to taſte.

Cob. Praise be to him, whoſe plenty ſends both this

And all things elſe our mortal bodies need:

Nor ſcorn we this poor feeding, nor the ſtate

We now are in, for what is it on earth,

Nay under heaven, continues at a ſtay?

Ebbs not the Sea, when it hath overflown?

Follows not darkneſſe when the day is gone?

And ſee we not ſometime the eye of heaven

Dim'd with ore-flying clouds? There's not that work

Of carefull Nature, or of cunning Art,

(How ſtrong, how beauteous, or how rich it be)

But falls in time to ruine: here, gentle Madam,

In

In this one draught I wash my sorrow down. Drinks.

La. And I encourag'd with your chearfull speech,
Will do the like.

Cob. Pray God poor Harpool come,
If he should fall into the Bishops hands,
Or not remember where we bad him meet us,
It were the thing of all things else, that now
Could breed revolt in this new peace of mind.

La. Fear not, my Lord, he's witty to devise,
And strong to execute a present shiftr.

Cob. That power be still his guide hath guided us.
My drowfie eyes wax heavy; early rising,
Together with the travel we have had,
Makes me that I could take a nap,
Were I perswaded we might be secure.

La. Let that depend on me, whilst you do sleep,
I'll watch that no misfortune happen us.

Cob. I shall, dear wife, be too much trouble to thee.

La. Urge not that,
My duty binds me, and your love commands,
I would I had the skill with-tuned voice
To draw on sleep with some sweet melody,
But imperfection and unaptness too
Are both repugnant; fear inserts the one,
The other nature hath denied me use.
But what talk I of means, to purchase that
Is freely happen'd? Sleep with gentle hand,
Hath shut his eye-lids: Oh victorious labour,
How soon thy power can charme the bodies sense?
And now thou likewise climb'st unto my brain,
Making my heavy temples stoop to thee,
Great God of heaven from danger keep us free.

Enter Sir Richard Lee and his men.

Lee. A Murder closely done, and in my ground?
Search carefully, if any where it were,
This obscure thicket is the likeliest place.

Ser. Sir, I have found the body stiff with cold
And mangled cruelly with many wounds.

Lee. Look if thou know'st him, turn his body up:
Alack, it is my son, my son and heir,
Whom two years since, I sent to Ireland,
To practise there the discipline of war,
And coming home, for so he wrote to me,
Some savage heart, some bloody devilish hand,
Either in hate, or thirsting for his coin,
Hath here fluc'd out his blood. Unhappy hour,
A cursed place, but most inconstant fate,
That had'st reserv'd him from the bullets fire,
And suffered him to scape the wood-kerns fury.
Did'st here ordain the treasure of his life,
Even here within the armes of tender peace,
To be consum'd by treasons wastfull hand?
And which is most afflicting to my soul;
That this his death and murder should be wrought
Without the knowledge by whose means 'twas done.

2. Ser. Not so, sir, I have found the authors of it,
See where they sit, and in their bloody fists
The fatal instruments of death and sin.

Lee. Just judgement of that power, whose gracious eye,
Loathing the sight of such a heinous fact,
Dazling their senses with benumbing sleep,
Till their unhallowed treachery was known.
Awake ye monsters, murderers awake,
Tremble for horror, blush you cannot choose,

Beholding this unhumane deed of yours.

Cob. What mean you, sir, to trouble weary souls,
And interrupt us of our quiet sleep?

Lee. Oh devilish I can you boast unto your selves
Of quiet sleep, having within your hearts
The guilt of murder waking, that with cries
Deafs the loud thunder, and solicits heaven
With more then mandrakes shrieks for your offence?

La. What murther? you upbraid us wrongfully.

Lee. Can you deny the fact? See you not here,
The body of my son by you misdone?
Look on his wounds, look on his purple hue:
Do we not find you where the deed was done?
Were not your knives fast closed in your hands?
Is not this cloth an argument beside,
Thus stain'd and spotted with his innocent blood?
These speaking characters were there nothing else
To plead against ye, would convict you both.
To Hartford with them, where the Sizes now are kept,
Their lives shall answer for my sons lost life.

Cob. As we are innocent, so may we speed.

Lee. As I am wrong'd, so may the Law proceed.

Enter Rochester, Constable of S. Albans, with Priest, Doll, and the Irishman in Harpool's apparel.

Bish. What intricate confusion have we here?
Not two hours since, we apprehended one
In habit Irish, but in speech not so;
And now you bring another, that in speech is Irish,
But in habit English: yea, and more then so,
The servant of that heretick Lord Cobham.

Irish. Fait me be no servant of de Lort Cobham,
Me be Mack Chane of Ulster.

Bish. Otherwise call'd Harpool of Kent, go too, sir,
You cannot blind us with your broken Irish.

Pri. Trust me, Lord Bishop, whether Irish or English.
Harpool or not Harpool, that I leave to the trial:

But sure I am, this man by face and speech,
Is he that muredred young Sir Richard Lee:
I met him presently upon the fact,
And that he slew his Master for that gold,
Those Jewels, and that chain I took from him.

Bish. Well, our affairs do call us back to London,
So that we cannot prosecute the cause
As we desire to do, therefore we leave
The charge with you, to see they be convey'd
To Hartford Size: both this counterfeit,
And you Sir John of Wrotham, and your wench,
For you are culpable as well as they,
Though not for murder, yet for felony.
But since you are the means to bring to light
This graceless murder, ye shall bear with you
Our Letters to the Judges of the Bench,
To be your friends in what they lawfull may.

Priest. I thank your Lordship.

Enter Goaler, bringing forth Oldcastle.

Goa. Bring forth the prisoners, see the Court prepar'd,
The Justices are coming to the Bench:

So, let him stand, away and fetch the rest. Exeunt.

Cob. Oh give me patience to endure this scourge.
Thou that art fountain of that virtuous stream,
And though contempt of witness, and reproach
Hang on these iron givies, to presse my life

As

As low as earth, yet strengthen me with faith,
That I may mount in spirit above the clouds.

Enter Goller, bringing in La. Cobham and Harpool.

Here comes my Lady, sorrow 'tis for her.
Thy wound is grievous, else I scoffe at thee.
What and poor Harpool! art thou i'th' bryars too?

Har. Ifaith my Lord, I am in, get out how I can.

La. Say (gentle Lord) for now we are alone,
And may confesse, shall we confesse in brief,
Of whence, and what we are, and so prevent
The accusation is commenc'd against us?

Cob. What will that help us? Being known, sweet love,
We shall for heresie be put to death,
For so they term the Religion we professe.
No, if we dye, let this our comfort be,

That of the guilt impos'd our soules are free.

Har. I, I my Lord, Harpool is so resolv'd,
I wreak of death the lesse in that I dye,
Not by the sentence of that envious Priest.

La. Well, be it then according as heavens please.

Enter L. Judge, Justices, Mayor of S. Albans, Lord Powis and his Lady, old Sir Richard Lee: the Judge and Justices take their places.

Judg. Now Mr. Maior, what Gentleman is that
You bring with you before us to the bench?

May. The Lord Powis, if it like your honour,
And this his Lady travelling toward Wales;
Who, for they lodg'd last night within my house,
And my Lord Bishop did lay wait for such,
Were very willing to come on with me,
Left for their sakes, suspicion we might wrong.

Jud. We cry your honour mercy, good my Lord,
Wilt please you take your place. Madam, your Ladyship
May here, or where you will repose your self
Until this businesse now in hand be past.

La. Po. I will withdraw into some other room,
So that your Lordship and the rest be pleas'd.

Jud. With all our hearts: attend the Lady there.

Pow. Wife, I have ey'd yon prisoners all this while,
And my conceit doth tell me, 'tis our friend
The Noble Cobham, and his virtuous Lady.

La. Po. I think no less, are they suspected for this murder?
Po. What it means

I cannot tell, but we shall know anon:
Mean time as you pass by them, ask the question,
But do it secretly you be not seen,
And make some sign, that I may know your mind.

As she passeth over the stage by them.

La. Po. My Lord Cobham? Madam?

Cob. No Cobham now, nor Madam, as you love us,
But John of Lancashire, and Jean his wife.

La. Po. Oh tell, what is it that our love can do,
To pleasure you, for we are bound to you.

Cob. Nothing but this, that you conceal our names;
So, gentle Lady, passe for being spyed.

La. Po. My heart I leave, to bear part of your grief. Exit.

Jud. Call the Prisoners to the Bar: sir Richard Lee,
What evidence can you bring against these people,
To prove them guilty of the murder done?

Lee. This bloody Towel, and these naked Knives;
Beside, we found them sitting by the place,
Where the dead body lay within a bush.

Ind. What answer you why Law should not proceed,
According to this evidence given in,
To tax ye with the penalty of death?

Cob. That we are free from murders very thought,
And know not how the Gentleman was slain.

1. Inst. How came th's linnen cloath so bloody then?

L. Cob. My husband hot with travelling, my Lord,
His nose gush't out a bleeding, that was it.

2. Inst. But how came your sharp edg'd knives unsheath'd?

L. Cob. To cut such simple victual as we had.

Jud. Say we admit this answer to those Articles,
What made you in so private a dark nook,
So far remote from any common path,
As was the thick where the dead corps was thrown?

Cob. Journeying, my Lord, from London, from the Term,
Down into Lancashire, where we do dwell;
And what with age, and travel being faint,
We gladly sought a place where we might rest,
Free from resort of other passengers,
And so we stray'd into that secret corner.

Ind. These are but ambages to drive off time,
And linger justice from her purpos'd end.
But who are these?

Enter Constable with the Irish-man, Priest, and Doll.

Con. Stay judgement, and release those innocents,
For here is he whose hand hath done the deed,
For which they stand endited at the Bar:
This savage villain, this rude Irish slave,
His tongue already hath confest the fact,
And here is witness to confirm as much.

Pri. Yes, my good Lord, no sooner had he slain
His loving Master for the wealth he had,
But I upon the instant met with him:
And what he purchas'd with the losse of blood,
With strokes I presently bereav'd him of,
Some of the which is spent, the rest remaining,
I willingly surrender to the hands
Of old Sir Richard Lee, as being his;
Beside, my Lord Judge, I greet your honour
With Letters from my Lord of Recheester.

Delivers them.

Lee. Is this the Wolf, whose thirsty throat did drink
My dear Son's blood? art thou the Snake
He cherish't, yet with envious piercing sting
Affail'dst him mortally? Were't not that the Law
Stands ready to revenge thy cruelty,
Traytor to God, thy Master, and to me,
These hands should be thy executioner.

Ind. Patience, sir Richard Lee, you shall have justice.
The fact is odious, therefore take him hence,
And being hang'd until the wretch be dead,
His body after shall be hang'd in chains,
Near to the place where he did act the murder.

Irish. Prythee, Lord Shudge, let me have mine own cloathes, my strouces there, and let me be hang'd in a wyth after my country the Irish fashion. Exit.

Ind. Go to, away with him. And now, sir John,
Although by you this murder came to light:
Yet upright Law will not hold you excus'd,
For you did rob the Irish-man, by which
You stand attain'd here of Felony:
Beside, you have been lewd, and many yeares
Led a lascivious, unbeseeming life.

Pri. O

Pri. O but, my Lord, sir John repents, and he will mend.

Ind. In hope thereof, together with the favour
My Lord of Rochester intreats for you,
We are content you shall be proved.

Pri. I thank your good Lordship.

Ind. These falsely here accus'd, and brought
In peril wrongfully, we in like sort do set at liberty.

Lee. And for amends,
Touching the wrong unwittingly I have done,
I give these few Crowns.

Ind. Your kindnesse merits praise, sir Richard Lee,
So let us hence.

Exeunt all but L. Powess and Cobham.

Pow. But Powess still must stay,
There yet remains a part of that true love
He owes his noble Friend, unsatisfied

And unperform'd, which first of all doth bind me
To gratulate your Lordship's safe delivery:
And then intreat, that since unlookt for thus
We here are met, your honour would vouchsafe
To ride with me to Wales, where though my power, (Though not to quittance those great benefits
I have receiv'd of you) yet both my house,
My purse, my servants, and what else I have
Are all at your command. Deny me not,
I know the Bishop's hate pursues ye so,
As there's no safety in abiding here.

Cob. 'Tis true my Lord, and God forgive him for it.

Pow. Then let us hence, you shall be straight provided
Of lusty geldings: and once entred Wales,
Well may the Bishop hunt, but spight his face,
He never more shall have the game in chace. Exeunt.

F I N I S.

The PURITAN: or, The WIDOW of Watling-street.

Actus Primus.

Enter the Lady Widow-Plus, her two Daughters, Frank and Moll, her husbands Brother an old Knight Sir Godfrey, with her Son and Heir Master Edmond, all in mourning apparell, Edmond in a Cypresse Hat. The Widow wringing her hands, and bursting out into passion, as newly come from the Buriall of her husband.

Widow.

H, that ever I was born, that ever I was born !
Sir Godfrey. Nay good sister, dear sister, sweet sister, be of good comfort, shew your self a woman, now or never.

Wid. Oh, I have lost the dearest man, I have buried the sweetest husband that ever lay by woman.

Sir God. Nay give him his due, he was indeed an honest, virtuous, discreet wife man, ---he was my Brother, as right, as right.

Wid. O, I shall never forget him, never forget him, he was a man so well given to a woman---oh !

Sir God. Nay, but kind sister, I could weep as much as any woman, but alas, our teares cannot call him again : me thinks you are well read, sister, and know that death is as common as Homo, a common name to all men ; ---a man shall be taken when he's making water, ---nay, did not the learned Parson Master Pigman tell us e'ne now, that all Flesh is frail, we are born to die, Man has but a time : with such like deep and profound perswasions, as he is a rare fellow you know, and an excellent Reader : and for example, (as there are examples abundance) did not Sir Humphrey Bubble die tother day, there's a lusty Widow, why she cri'd not above half an hour---for shame, for shame : then followed him old Master Fulsome the Usurer, there's a wife Widow, why she cry'd ne're a whit at all.

Wid. O ranck not me with those wicked women, I had a husband out-shin'd 'em all.

Sir God. I that he did, if alth, he out-shin'd 'em all.

Wid. Dost thou stand there and see us all weep, and not once shed a tear for thy fathers death ? oh thou ungracious son and heir thou ?

Edm. Troth, Mother, I should not weep I'm sure ; I am past a Child I hope, to make all my old School-fellowes laugh at me ; I should be mockt, so I should ; pray let one of my sisters weep for me, I'll laugh as much for her another time ?

Wid. O thou past-Grace thou, out of my sight, thou gracelesse Imp, thou grievest me more then the death of thy Father : oh thou stubborn onely Son : hadst thou such an honest man to thy Father---that would deceive all the world to get riches for thee, and canst thou not afford a little salt water ? he that so wisely did quite overthrow the right heir of those Lands, which now you respect not : up every morning betwixt four and five, so duely at Westminster-Hall every Tearm-time, with all his Cards and Writings, for thee, thou wicked Absalon---oh dear husband !

Edm. Weep, quotha ? I protest I am glad he's Churched ? for now he's gone I shall spend in quiet.

Fran. Dear Mother, pray cease, half your teares suffice, 'Tis time for you to take truce with your eyes, Let me weep now ?

Wid. O such a dear Knight, such a sweet Husband have I lost, have I lost ? ---if blessed be the Coarse the rain rains upon, he had it, pouring down ?

Sir God. Sister, be of good cheer, we are all mortall our selves, I come upon you freshly, I ne're speak without comfort, hear me what I shall say ; ---my brother has left you wealthy, y'are rich.

Wid. Oh !

Sir God. I say y'are rich : you are also fair.

Wid. Oh !

Sir God. Go to, y'are fair, you cannot smother it, beauty will come to light ; nor are your yeares so far enter'd with you, but that you will be sought after, and may very well answer another husband ; the world is full of fine Gallants, choyce enow, sister, ---for what should we doe with all our Knights I pray ? but to marry rich Widowes, wealthy Citizens Widowes ; lusty fair-brow'd Ladies ; go to, be of good comfort I say, leave snobbing and weeping---yet my Brother was a kind-hearted man---I would not have the Elf see me now ? ---come, pluck up a womans heart---here stands your Daughters, who be well estated, and at maturity will also be enquir'd after with good husbands, so all these teares shall be soon dried up, and a better world then ever---what, Woman ? you must not weep still ? he's dead, he's buried---yet I cannot chuse but weep for him.

Wid. Marry again ! no, let me be buried quick then ! And that same part of Quire whereon I tread To such intent, O may it be my grave : And that the Priest may turn his wedding prayers,

Even

Even with a breath, to funerall dust and ashes ;
Oh, out of a million of millions, I should ne're find such a husband ; he was unmatched---unmatchable : nothing was so hot, nor too dear for me, I could not speak of that one thing that I had not, beside, I had keyes of all, kept all, receiv'd all, had money in my purse, spent what I would, went abroad when I would, came home when I would, and did all what I would : Oh---my sweet husband ; I shall never have the like.

Sir God. Sister ? ne're say so, he was an honest Brother of mine, and so, and you may light upon one as honest again, or one, as honest again may light upon you, that's the properer phrase indeed.

Wid. Never : oh if you love me urge it not :
Oh may I be the by-word of the world,
The common talk at Table in the mouth
Of every Groom and Waiter, if e're more
I entertain the carnall suit of man.

Mol. I must kneel down for fashion too.

Franck. And I, whom never man as yet hath scal'd,
E'ne in this depth of generall sorrow, vow
Never to marry, to sustain such losse,
As a dear husband seems to be, once dead.

Mol. I lov'd my Father well too ; but to say,
Nay vow, I would not marry for his death,
Sure I should speak false Latin, should I not ?
I'd eas soon vow never to come in Bed :
Tut, Women must live by th' quick, and not by th' dead.

Wid. Dear Copy of my husband, oh let me kiss thee :

Drawing out her Husbands Picture.

How like him is their Model ; their brief Picture
Quickens my teares : my sorrowes are renew'd
At their fresh sight.

Sir God. Sister----

Wid. Away,
All honesty with him is turn'd to clay,
Oh my sweet husband, oh----

Franck. My dear Father ? Exeunt mother & daughters.

Mol. Here's a puling indeed ! I think my Mother weeps for all the women that ever buried husbands : for if from time to time all the Widowers teares in England had been bottled up, I doe not think all would have fill'd a three-half-penny Bottle : alas, a small matter bucks a Handkercher,----and sometimes the spittle stands too nigh Saint Thomas a Warrings : well, I can mourn in good sober sort as well as another ? but where I spent one tear for a dead Father, I could give twenty kisses for a quick husband.

Exit Mol.

Sir God. Well, go thy wayes, old Sir Godfrey, and thou may'st be proud on't, thou hast a kind loving sister-in-law : how constant ? how passionate ? how full of April the poor soules eyes are ; well, I would my Brother knew on't, he should then know what a kind Wife he had left behind him ; truth, and 'twere not for shame that the neighbours at th'next Garden should hear me betwixt joy and grief, I should e'ne cry out-right.

Exit Sir Godfrey.

Edmond. So, a fair riddance, my Father's laid in dust, his Coffin and he is like a whole Meat Pye, and the wormes will cut him up shortly : farewell, old Dad, farewell ; I'll be curb'd, in no more : I perceive a son and heir may quickly be made a fool and he will be one, but I'll take another order ; ---Now she would have me weep for him forsooth, and why ; because he cozen'd the right heir being a fool, and bestow'd those Lands on me his eldest Son ; and therefore I must weep for him, ha, ha :

why all the world knowes, as long as 'twas his pleasure to get me, 'twas his duty to get for me : I know the Law in that point, no Attorney can gull me. Well, my Uncle is an old Ass, and an admirable Coxcombe, I'll rule the Roast my self, I'll be kept under no more, I know what I may doe well enough by my Fathers Copy : the Law's in mine own hands now : nay now I know my strength,
I'll be strong enough for my Mother I warrant you ?

Exit.

Enter George Py-bord a Schollar and a Citizen, and unto him an old Souldier, Peter Skirmish.

Pye. What's to be done now, old Lad of War, thou that wert wont to be as hot as a turn-spir, as nimble as a Fencer, and as lowly as a Schoole-master ; now thou art put to silence like a Sectary, ---War sits now like a Justice of peace, and does nothing : where be your Muskets, Calivers and Hotshots ? in Long-lane, at pawn, at pawn ; ---Now keyes are our onely Guns, Key-guns, Key-guns, and Bawdes the Gunners,---who are your sentinells in peace, and stand ready charg'd to give warning ;
with hems, hums, and pocky-coffs ; onely your Chambers are licenst to play upon you, and Drabs enow to give fire to 'em.

Skir. Well, I cannot tell, but I am sure it goes wrong with me, for since the cessure of the wars, I have spent above a hundred Crownes out a purse : I have been a Soldier any time this forty yeares, and now I perceive an old Soldier, and an old Courtier have both one destiny, and in the end turn both into hob-nayles.

Pye. Pretty mystery for a Beggar, for indeed a hob-naile is the true embleme of a Beggar's Shoe-soale.

Skir. I will not say but that War is a bloud-sucker, and so ; but in my conscience, (as there is no soldier but has a piece of one, though it be full of holes like a shot Ancient, no matter, 'twill serve to swear by) in my conscience, I think some kinde of Peace has more hidden oppressions, and violent heady sins, (though looking of a gentle nature) then a profest warre.

Pye. Troth, and for mine own part, I am a poor Gentleman, and a Schollar, I have been matriculated in the University, wore out six Gowns there, seen some fools, and some Schollars, some of the City, and some of the Countrey, kept order, went bare-headed over the Quadrangle, eat my Commons with a good stomach, and Battled with Discretion ; at last, having done many sights and tricks to maintain my wit in use (as my brain would never endure me to be idle,) I was expell'd the University, onely for stealing a Cheese out of Jesus Col-ledge.

Skir. Is't possible ?

Pye. Oh ! there was one Welshman (God forgive him) pursued it hard ? and never left, till I turn'd my staffe toward London, where when I came, all my friends were pit-hold, gone to Graves, (as indeed there was but a few left before) then was I turn'd to my wits, to shift in the world, to towre among Sons and Heires, and Fooles, and Gulls, and Ladies eldest Sons, to work upon nothing, to feed out of Flint, and ever since has my belly been much beholding to my brain : But now to return to you, old Skirmish. I say as you say, and for my part with a Turbulency in the world, for I have nothing in the world, but my wits, and I think they are as mad as they will be :
and to strengthen your Argument the more, I say an honest warre, is better than a bawdy peace : as touching my

my profession; the multiplicity of Schollars, hatcht, and nourisht in the idle Calmes of peace, makes'em like Fishes one devour another; and the communitie of Learning has so plaid upon affections, and thereby almost Religion is come about to Phantasie, and discredited by being too much spoken of--in so many and mean mouths. I my self being a Schollar and a Graduate, have no other comfort by my learning, but the affection of my words, to know how Schollar-like to name what I want, and can call my self a Beggar both in Greek and Latine, and therefore not to cog with Peace, I'll not be afraid to say, 'tis a great Breeder, but a bad Nourisher: a great getter of Children, which must either be Thieves or Rich men, Knaves or Beggars.

Skirmish. Well, would I had been born a Knave then, when I was born a Beggar, for if the truth were known, I think I was begot when my Father had never a penny in his purse.

Pye. Puh, faint not old Skirmish, let this warrant thee, Facilis Descensus Averni, 'tis an easie journey to a Knave, thou maist be a Knave when thou wilt; and Peace is a good Madam to all other professions, and an arrant Drab to us, let us handle her accordingly, and by our wits thrive in despite of her; for the law lives by quarrels, the Courtier by smooth good-morrrows, and every profession makes it self greater by imperfections, why not we then by shifts, wiles, and forgeries? and seeing our brains are the onely Patrimonies, let's spend with judgement, not like a desperate son and heir, but like a sober and discreet Templer, ---one that will never march beyond the bounds of his allowance, and for our thriving means, thus, I my self will put on the Deceit of a Fortune-teller, a Fortune-teller.

Skirm. Very proper.

Pye. And you a figure-caster, or a Conjuror.

Skir. A Conjuror.

Pye. Let me alone, I'll instruct you, and teach you to deceive all eyes, but the Devils.

Skir. Oh I, for I would not deceive him and I could choofe, of all others.

Pye. Fear not I warrant you; and so by these means we shall help one another to Patients, as the condition of the age affords creatures enow for cunning to work upon.

Skir. Oh wondrous, new fools and fresh asses.

Pye. Oh, fit, fit, excellent.

Skir. What in the name of Conjuring?

Pye-board. My memory greets me happily with an admirable subject to graze upon. The Lady-Widow, who of late I saw weeping in her Garden, for the death of her Husband, sure she's but a watrish soul, and half on't by this time is dropt out of her eyes: device well manag'd may do good upon her: it stands firme, my first practise shall be there.

Skir. You have my voice, George.

Pye-board. Sh'as a gray Gull to her Brother, a fool to her onely son, and an ape to her youngest Daughter;---I over-heard'em severally, and from their words I'll drive my device; and thou old Peter Skirmish shalt be my second in all flights.

Skir. Ne're doubt me, George Pye-board,---only you must teach me to conjure.

Enter Captain Idle, pinion'd, and with a guard of Officers passeth over the Stage.

Pye. Puh, I'll perfect thee, Peter:
How now? what's he?

Skir. Oh George! this sight kills me,
'Tis my sworn Brother, Captain Idle.

Pye. Captain Idle.

Skir. Apprehended for some felonious act or other, he has started out, h'as made a Night on't, lackt silver; I cannot but commend his resolution, he would not pawn his Buff-Jerkin, I would either some of us were employed, or might pitch our Tents at Usurers doors, to kill the slaves as they peep out at the Wicket.

Pye. Indeed those are our ancient enemies; they keep our money in their hands, and make us to be hang'd for robbing of 'em, but come let's follow after to the Prison, and know the nature of his offence, and what we can stead him in, he shall be sure of; and I'll uphold it still, that a charitable Knave, is better then a soothing Puritan.

Exeunt.

Enter at one door Corporal Oath, a vain-glorious fellow, and at the other, three of the Widdow Puritans Servingmen, Nicholas Saint-Tanclings, Simon Saint Mary-Overies, and Frailty in black scurvy mourning coats, and Books at their Girdles, as coming from Church. They meet.

Nich. What Corporal Oath? I am sorry we have met with you next our hearts; you are the man that we are forbidden to keep company withall, we must not swear I can tell you, and you have the name for swearing.

Sim. I, Corporal Oath, I would you would do so much as forsake us, we cannot abide you, we must not be seen in your company.

Frail. There is none of us I can tell you, but shall be soundly whipt for swearing.

Corp. Why how now? we three? Puritanical Scrapeshoes, Flesh a good Fridayes; a hand.

All. Oh.

Corp. Why Nicholas Saint-Tanclings, Simon Saint Mary-Overies, has the De'il posselt you, that you swear no better, you half-Christened Katomites, you ungod-mother'd Varlets, do's the first lesson teach you to be proud, and the second to be Cox-combs; proud Cox-combs; not once to do duty to a man of Mark.

Frail. A man of Mark, quatha, I do not think he can shew a Beggars Noble.

Corp. A Corporal, a Commander, one of spirit, that is able to blow you up all drye with your Books at your Girdles.

Simon. We are not taught to believe that, sir, for we know the breath of man is weak. Corp breaths on Frailty.

Frail. Foh, you lie Nicholas; for here's one strong enough; blow us up, quatha, he may well blow me above twelve-score off on him: I warrant if the wind stood right, a man might smell him from the top of Newgate, to the the Leads of Ludgate.

Corp. Sirrah, thou hollow book of Wax-candle.

Nich. I, you may say what you will, so you swear not.

Corp. I swear by the----- Nich. Hold, hold, good Corporal Oath; for if you swear once, we shall fall down in a fown presently.

Corp. I must and will swear: you quivering Cox-combs, my Captain is imprisoned, and by Vulcan's Leather Cod-piece point-----

Nich. O Simon, what an oath was there.

Frail. If he should chance to break it, the poor man's Breeches would fall down about his heels, for Venus allows but one point to his hose.

¶ C

Corp.

Cor. With these, my Bully-Feet, I will thump ope the Prison doors, and brain the Keeper with the begging-Box, but I'll set my honest sweet Captain Idle at liberty.

Nic. How, Captain Idle? my old Aunts son, my dear Kinsman in Cappadochio.

Cor. I, thou Church-peeling, thou Holy-paring, Religious out-side thou; if thou had'st any grace in thee, thou would'st visit him, relieve him, swear to get him out.

Nic. Assure you, Corporal, indeed-la, 'tis the first time I heard on't.

Cor. Why do't now then; Marmaset; bring forth thy yearly-wages, let not a Commander perish?

Simon. But if he be one of the wicked, he shall perish.

Nic. Well Corporal, I'll e'en along with you, to visit my Kinsman, if I can do him any good, I will, --- but I have nothing for him, Simon Saint Mary Overies and Frailty, pray make a Lye for me to the Knight my Master, old Sir Godfrey.

Cor. A Lye? may you lye then?

Frail. O I, we may lye, but we must not swear.

Sim. True, we may lie with our Neighbour's wife, but we must not swear we did so.

Cor. Oh, an excellent Tag of Religion!

Nic. Oh Simon, I have thought upon a sound excuse, it will go currant, say that I am gon to a Fast.

Sim. To a Fast? very good.

Nic. I, to a Fast say, with master Full-belly the Minister.

Sim. Master Full-belly? an honest man: he feeds the flock well, for he's an excellent Feeder.

Exeunt Corporal & Nicholas.

Frail. O I, I have seen him eat up a whole Pig, and afterwards fall to the pettitoes. Exeunt Sim. & Frailty.

The Prison, Marshalsea.

Enter Captain Idle at one door, and old Souldier at the other.

George Pye-board speaking within.

Pye. Pray turn the key.

Skir. Turn the key I pray?

Cap. Who should those be, I almost know their voices? O my friends!

Entring.

Y'are welcome to a smelling Room here? you newly took leave of the air, is't not a strange favour?

Pie. As all Prisons have smells of sundry wretches; Who though departed, leave their scents behind 'em, By Gold Captain, I am sincerely sorry for thee.

Cap. By my troth, George, I thank thee; but, pish-- what must be, must be.

Skir. Captain, what do you lie in for? is't great? what's your offence?

Cap. Faith, my offence is ordinary, -- common, a High-way, and I fear me my penalty will be ordinary and common too, a Halter.

Pye. Nay, prophesie not so ill, it shall go hard But I'll shift for thy life.

Cap. Whether I live or dye, thou'rt an honest George. I'll tell you --- Silver flow'd not with me, as it had done, (for now the tide runs to Bawds and Flatterers) I had a start out, and by chance set upon a fat Steward, thinking his Purse had been as pursie as his body; and the slave had about him but the poor purchase of ten groats: notwithstanding being descryed, pursued, and taken, I know the Law is so grim, in respect of many desperate, unsetted Souldiers, that I fear me I shall dance after their pipe for't.

Skir. I am twice sorry for you, Captain; first, that your purchase was so small, and now that your danger is so great.

Cap. Push, the worst is but death, --- ha you a pipe of Tobacco about you?

Skir. I think I have thereabouts about me!

Captain blows a Pipe.

Cap. Here's a clean Gentleman too, to receive.

Pye. Well, I must cast about some happy flight: Work brain, that ever did'st thy Master right.

Cor. Keeper, let the key be turn'd.

Corporal and Nicholas within.

Nic. I, I, pray master Keeper give's a cast of your office.

Cap. How now? more visitants? -- what, Corporal Oath?

Pye. Skir. Corporal.

Cor. In prison, honest Captain? this must not be.

Nic. How do you, Captain Kinsman?

Cap. Good Coxcomb, what makes that pure, -- starcht fool here?

Nic. You see, Kinsman, I am somewhat bold to call in, and see how you do; I heard you were safe enough, and I was very glad on't, that it was no worse.

Cap. This is a double torture now, --- this fool by th' book doth vex me more then my imprisonment. What meant you, Corporal, to hook him hither?

Cor. Who, he? he shall relieve thee, and supply thee, I'll make him do't.

Cap. Fie, what vain breath you spend:

He supply? I'll sooner expect mercy from a Usurer when my Bond's forfeited, sooner kindnesse from a Lawyer when my money's spent: nay, sooner charity from the Devil, then good from a Puritan. I'll look for relief from him, when Lucifer is restor'd to his bloud, and in Heaven again.

Nic. I warrant my Kinsman's talking of me, for my left ear burns most tyrannically.

Pye. Captain Idle? what's he there? he looks like a Monkey upward, and a Crane downward.

Cap. Pshaw; a foolish cousin of mine: I must thank God for him.

Pye. Why the better subject to work a scape upon; thou shalt e'en change cloathes with him, and leave him here, and so ---

Cap. Push, I publisht him e'en now to my Corporal, he will be damn'd ere he do me so much good; why I know a more proper, a more handsome device then that, if the slave would be sociable, --- now Goodman Fleer-face?

Nic. Oh, my Cousin begins to speak to me now, I shall be acquainted with him again, I hope.

Skir. Look! what ridiculous Raptures take hold of his wrinkles.

Pye. Then what say you to this device, a happy one, Captain?

Cap. Speak low, George; Prison Rats have wider eares then those in Malt-lofts.

Nic. Cousin, if it lay in my power, as they say, -- to -- do --

Cap. 'Twould do me an exceeding pleasure indeed, that; nere talk forder on't, the fool will be hang'd ere he do't.

Cor. Pax, I'll thump'im to't.

Pye. Why do but try the Fopster, and break it to him bluntly.

Cap. And so my disgrace will dwell in his Jawes, & the Slave

Slave flaver out our purpose to his Master, for would I were but as sure on't, as I am sure he will deny to do't.

Nic. I would be heartily glad, Cousin, if any of my friendships, as they say, might -- stand, ah--

Pye. Why, you see he offers his friendship foolishly to you already.

Cap. I, that's the hell on't, I would he would offer it wisely.

Nic. Verily, and indeed-la, Cousin --

Cap. I have took note of thy fleers a good while, if thou art minded to do me good? as thou gapst upon me comfortably, and giv'st me charitable faces; which indeed is but a fashion in you all that are Puritans, wilt soon at night steal me thy Master's Chain?

Nic. Oh, I shall fowne!

Pye. Corp oral, he starts already!

Cap. I know it to be worth three hundred Crowns, and with the half of that, I can buy my life at a Brokers, at second hand, which now lies in pawn to the Law, if this thou refuse to do, being easie and nothing dangerous, in that thou art held in good opinion of thy Master; why 'tis a palpable Argument thou hold'st my life at no price, and these thy broken and unjoynted offers, are but only created in thy lip, now born, and now buried, foolish breath only: what, would do't? shall I look for happineffe in thy answer?

Nich. Steal my Master's Chain quoth he? no, it shall nere be said, that Nicholas Saint Tantlings committed Bird-lime!

Cap. Nay, I told you as much, did I not? though he be a Puritan, yet he will be a true man.

Nic. Why Cousin, you know 'tis written, Thou shalt not steal.

Cap. Why, and fool, thou shalt love thy Neighbour, and help him in extremities.

Nic. Mafs I think it be indeed; in what Chapter's that, Cousin?

Cap. Why in the first of Charity, the second verse.

Nic. The first of Charity, quoth a, that's a good jest, there no such Chapter in my book!

Cap. No, I know twas torn out of thy Book, and that makes so little in thy heart.

Pye. Come, let me tell you, y'are too unkind a Kinsman ifaith; the Captain loving you so dearly, I, like the Pomewater of his eye, &c you to be so uncomfortable, fie, fie.

Nic. Pray do not wish me to be hang'd, any thing else that I can do; had it been to rob, I would ha don't, but I must not steal, that's the word, the literal, Thou shalt not steal; and would you wish me to steal then?

Pye. No faith, that were too much, to speak truth; why wilt thou Nim it from him?

Nic. That I will.

Pye. Why enough, Bully; he will be content with that, or he shall ha none; let me alone with him now, Captain, I ha dealt with your Kinsman in a corner; a good, --kind-natur'd fellow, me thinks: go to, you shall not have all your own asking, you shall bate somewhat on't, he is not contented absolutely, as you would say, to steal the Chain from him, but to do you a pleasure, he will nim it from him.

Nic. I, that I will, Cousin.

Cap. Well, seeing he will do no more, as far as I see, I must be contented with that.

Cor. Here's no notable gullery?

Pye. Nay, I'll come nearer to you, Gentleman, because we'll have only but a help and a mirth on't, the Knight shall not lose his Chain neither, but be only laid out of the way some one or two dayes.

Nic. I, that would be good indeed, Kinsman.

Pye. For I have a farder reach, to profit us better, by the missing on't only, then if we had it out-right, as my discourse shall make it known to you; -- when thou hast the Chain, do but convey it out at a back-door into the Garden, and there hang it close in the Rosemary banck; but for a small season; and by that harmlesse device, I know how to wind Captain Idle out of prison, the Knight thy Master shall get his pardon, and release him, and he satisfie thy Master with his own Chain, and wondrous chanks on both hands.

Nic. That were rare indeed la, pray let me know how.

Pye. Nay, 'tis very necessary thou should'st know, because thou must be employ'd as an Actor?

Nic. An Actor? O no, that's a Player? and our Parson rails against Players mightily I can tell you, because they brought him drunk upo'th' Stage once, -- as he will be horribly drunk.

Cor. Mafs I cannot blame him then, poor Church-spout.

Pye. Why as an Intermedler then?

Nic. I, that, that.

Pye. Give me audience then; when the old Knight thy Master has rag'd his fill for the loss of the Chain, tell him thou hast a Kinsman in prison, of such exquisite Art, that the Devil himself is French Lackey to him, and runs bare-headed by his horse ----- belly (when he has one:) whom he will cause, with most Irish dexterity to fetch his Chain, though 'twere hid under a mine of Sea-coal, and ne're make Spade or Pick-axe his instruments; tell him but this, with farder instructions thou shalt receive from me, and thou show'st thy self a Kinsman indeed.

Cor. A dainty Bully.

Skir. An honest -- Book-keeper.

Cap. And my three times thrice honey-Cousin.

Nic. Nay, grace of God I'll rob him on't suddenly, and hang it in the Rosemary banck, but I bear that mind, Cousin, I would not steal any thing, me thinks, for mine own Father.

Skir. He bears a good mind in that, Captain.

Pye. Why well said, he begins to be an honest fellow, faith.

Cor. In troth he does.

Nic. You see, Cousin, I am willing to do you any kindness, alwayes saving my self harmless. Exit Nicholas.

Captain. Why I thank thee, fare thee well, I shall requite it.

Cor. 'Twill be good for thee, Captain, that thou hast such an egregious Ass to thy Cousin.

Cap. I, is not that a fine fool, Corporal? But George, thou talk'st of Art and Conjuring, How shall that be?

Pyb. Puh, be't not in your care, Leave that to me and my directions; Well, Captain, doubt not thy delivery now, E'en with the vantage, man, to gain by Prison, As my thoughts prompt me: hold on brain and plot, I aim at many cunning far events, All which I doubt not to hit at length, I'll to the Widow with a quaint assault, Captain be merry.

Cap. Who I? Kerry merry Buffe-Jerkin.

Pye. Oh, I am happy in more flights, and one will knit strong in another, -- Corporal Oath.

Cor. Hoh Bully!

Pye. And thou, old Peter Skirmish; I have a necessary task for you both.

Skir. Lay't upon George Pye-bord.

Corp. What e're it be, we'll manage it.

Pye. I would have you two maintain a quarrell before the Lady Widdowes door, and draw your Swords ith' edge of the Evening: clash a little, clash, clash.

Corp. Fuh.

Let us alone to make our Blades ring noon,
Though it be after supper.

Pye. I know you can;

And out of that false fire, I doubt not but to raise strange belief---and, Captain, to countenance my device the better, and grace my words to the Widow, I have a good plain Sattin Sute, that I had of a young Reveller tother night, for words pass not regarded now a dayes, unless they come from a good suit of cloathes, which the Fates and my wits have bestowed upon me. Well, Captain Idle, if I did not highly love thee, I would ne're be seen within twelve score of a prison, for I protest at this instant, I walk in great danger of small debts; I owe money to severall Hostesses, and you know such Jills will quickly be upon a mans Jack.

Capt. True, George?

Pye. Fare thee well, Captain. Come Corporall and Ancient, thou shalt hear more newes next time we greet thee.

Corp. More newes? I, by yon Bear at Bridge-Foot in heaven shalt thou. Exeunt.

Capt. Enough: my friends farewell,
This prison shewes as if Ghosts did part in Hell.

Enter Moll youngest Daughter to the Widow, alone.

Moll. Not marry? forswear marriage? why all women know 'tis as honourable a thing as to lie with a man; and I to spight my Sisters vow the more, have entertain'd a Suiter already, a fine Gallant Knight of the last Feather, he sayes he will Coach me too, and well appoint me, allow me money to Dice withall, and many such pleasing protestations he sticks upon my lips: indeed his short-winded Father ith' Countrey is wondrous wealthy, a most abominable Farmer, and therefore he may dore in time: troth I'le venter upon him; women are not without wayes enough to help themselves: if he prove wise and good as his word, why I shall love him, and use him kindly; and if he prove an Ass, why in a quarter of an houres warning I can transform him into an Oxe; --- there comes in my relief again.

Enter Frailty.

Frail. O, Mistresse Moll, Mistresse Moll.

Moll. How now? what's the newes?

Frail. The Knight your Suiter, Sir John Penny-Dub.

Moll. Sir John Penny-Dub? where? where?

Frail. He's walking in the Gallery.

Moll. Has my Mother seen him yet?

Frail. O no, she's---spitting in the Kitchen.

Moll. Direct him hither softly, good Frailty,
I'le meet him half way.

Frail. That's just like running a Tilt; but I hope he'll break nothing this time.

Enter Sir John Penny-Dub.

Moll. 'Tis happineffe my Mother saw him not:
O welcome, good Sir John.

Penny-Dub. I thank you faith,---Nay you must stand me till I kisse you: 'tis the fashion every where ifaith, and I came from Court enow.

Moll. Nay the Fates forfend that I should anger the fashion?

Penny. Then not forgetting the sweet of new ceremonies, I first fall back, then recovering my self; inake my honour to your lip thus: and then accost it.

Moll. Trust me, very pretty, and moving, y'are worthy on't, sir.

O my Mother, my Mother, now she's here,

Kissing. Enter Widow and Sir Godfrey.

We'll steale into the Gallery. Exeunt.

Sir Godf. Nay, Sister, let Reason rule you, doe not play the foole, stand not in your own light, you have wealthy offers, large tendrings, doe not withstand your good fortune: who comes a wooing to you I pray? no small fool, a rich Knight oth' City, Sir Oliver Muck-hill, no small fool I can tell you: and furthermore as I heard late by your Maid-servants (as your Maid-servants will say to me any thing, I thank 'em) both your Daughters are not without Suiters, I, and worthy ones too; one a brisk Courtier, Sir Andrew Tip-staffe, suiter afar off to your eldest Daughter, and the third a huge wealthy Farmers Son, a fine young Country Knight, they call him Sir John Penny-Dub, a good name marry, he may have it coynd when he lacks money: what blessings are these, Sister?

Wid. Tempt me not, Satan.

Sir Godf. Satan? doe I look like Satan? I hope the Devil's not so old as I, I trow.

Wid. You wound my senses, Brother, when you name A suiter to me,---oh I cannot abide it,
I take in poyson when I hear one nam'd.

Enter Simon.

How now, Simon? where's my son Edmond?

Sim. Verily, Madam, he is at vain Exercise, dripping in the Tennis-Court.

Wid. At Tennis-Court? oh, now his Father's gone, I shall have no rule with him; oh wicked Edmond, I might well compare this with the Prophecy in the Chronicle, though far inferiour, as Harry of Monmouth won all, and Harry of Windsor lost all; so Edmond of Briflow that was the Father, got all, and Edmond of London that's his son now, will spend all.

Sir Godf. Peace, sister, we'll have him reform'd, there's hope on him yet, though it be but a little.

Enter Frailty.

Frail. Forsooth Madam; there are two or three Archers at door would very gladly speak with your Ladiship.

Wid. Archers?

Sir Godf. Your Husbands Fletcher I warrant.

Wid. Oh,

Let them come near, they bring home things of his,
Troth I should ha forgot 'em, how now?
Villain, which be those Archers?

Enter the Suiters, Sir Andrew Tipstaffe, Sir Oliver Muck-hill, and Penni-Dub.

Frail. Why, do you not see 'em before you? are not these these Archers, what do you call 'em Shooters : Shooters and Archers are all one I hope.

Wid. Out ignorant slave.

Muck. Nay, pray be patient Lady, We come in way of honorable love.

Tipst. Penny. We do.

Muck. To you.

Tipst. Penny. And to your Daughters.

Wid. O why will you offer me this, Gentlemen ? indeed I will not look upon you ; when the tears are scarce out of mine eyes, not yet washt off from my cheeks, and my dear husbands body scarce so cold as the Coffin, what reason have you to offer it ? I am not like some of your Widows that will bury one in the evening, and be sure to another ere morning ; pray away, pray take your answers good Knights, and you be sweet Knights, I have vow'd never to marry ; ---and so have my daughters too !

Penny. I, two of you have, but the third's a good wench !

Muck. Lady, a shrewd answer marry ; the best is, 'tis but the first, and he's a blunt wooer, that will leave for one sharp answer.

Tip. Where be your Daughters Lady, I hope they'll give us better encouragements ?

Wid. Indeed they'll answer you so, take't a my word they'll give you the very same answer Verbatim truly la.

Penny. Mum : Moll's a good wench still, I know what she'll do ?

Muck. Well, Lady, for this time we'll take our leaves, hoping for better comfort.

Wid. O never, never : and I live these thousand years ; and you be good Knights, do not hope ; 'twill be all Vain, Vain, ---look you put off all your suits, and you come to me again.

Frail. Put of all their suits, quatha ? I that's the best wooing of a Widdow indeed, when a man's Nonfuted, that is, when he's a bed with her.

Going out Muckhill and Sir Godfrey.

Muck. Sir Godfrey ? here's twenty Angels more, work hard for me ; there's life in't yet. Exit Muckhill.

Sir Godf. Fear not Sir Oliver Muckhill, I'll stick close for you, leave all with me.

Enter George Pye-board the Schollar.

Pye. By your leave Lady Widow.

Wid. What another suiter now ?

Pye. A-suiter, no, I protest Lady ? if you'd give me your self, I'de not be troubled with you.

Wid. Say you so Sir, then you're the better welcome sir.

Pye. Nay, Heaven bleffe me from a Widow, unlesse I were sure to bury her speedily !

Wid. Good bluntnesse : well, your businesse, sir ?

Pye. Very needfull ; if you were in private once.

Wid. Needfull ? Brother, pray leave us ; and you sir.

Frail. I should laugh now, if this blunt fellow should put 'em all beside the stirrop, and vault into the saddle himself, I have seen as mad a trick. Exit Frailty.

Enter Daughters.

Wid. Now Sir ? ---here's none but wee----Daughters forbear.

Pye. O no, pray let 'em stay, for what I have to speak importeth equally to them as you ?

Wid. Then you may stay.

Pye. I pray bestow on me a serious ear,

For what I speak is full of weight and fear.

Wid. Fear ?

Pye. I, if 't passe unregarded, and uneffected, Else peace and joy : ---I pray Attention.

Widow, I have been a meer stranger for these parts that you live in, nor did I ever know the Husband of you, and Father of them, but I truly know by certain spiritual Intelligence, that he is in Purgatory.

Wid. Purgatory ? tuh ; that word deserves to be spit upon ; I wonder that a man of sober tongue, as you seem to be, should have the folly to believe there's such a place.

Pye. Well Lady, in cold blood I speak it, I assure you that there is a Purgatory, in which place I know your husband to recide, and wherein he is like to remain, till the dissolution of the world ; till the last general Bon-fire : when all the earth shall melt into nothing, and the Seas scald their finny labourers : so long is his abidance, unlesse you alter the property of your purpose, together with each of your Daughters theirs, that is, the purpose of single life in your self and your eldest Daughter, and the speedy determination of marriage in your youngest.

Moll. How knows he that, what, has some Devil told him ?

Wid. Strange he should know our thoughts : -----

Why but Daughter, have you purpos'd speedy Marriage ?

Pye. You see she tells you I, she says nothing.

Nay, give me credit as you please, I am a stranger to you, and yet you see I know your determinations, which must come to me metaphisically, and by a super-natural intelligence.

Wid. This puts amazement on me.

Frank. Know our secrets ?

Mol. I'de thought to steal a marriage, would his tongue Had dropt out when he blab'd it.

Wid. But sir, my husband was too honest a dealing man, to be now in any Purgatories----

Pye. O do not load your conscience with untruths, 'Tis but meer folly now to gild 'em ore :

That has past but for Copper ; Praises here, Cannot unbind him there : confesse but truth, I know he got his wealth with a hard gripe : Oh hardly, hardly.

Wid. This is most strange of all, how knows he that ?

Pye. He would eat fools and ignorant heirs clean up ; And had his drink from many a poor mans brow. Even as their labour brew'd it.

He would scrape riches to him most unjustly ;

The very dirt between his nails was ill got

And not his own, ---oh

I groan to speak on't, the thought makes me shudder ! ---shudder !

Wid. It quakes me too, now I think on't---sir, I am much griev'd, that you a stranger, should so deeply wrong my dead husband !

Pye-board. Oh ?

Wid. A man that would keep Church so duly ; rise early before his servants, and e'en for Religious hast, go ungarter'd, unbutton'd, nay sir Reverence untruss, to Morning Prayer ?

Pye. Oh uff.

Wid. Dine quickly upon high-dayes, and when I had great guesse, would e'en shame me, and rise from the Table, to get a good seat at an after-noon Sermon.

Pye. There's the devil, there's the devil, true, he thought it Sanctity enough, if he had kill'd a man, for 'ad bin done in a Pue, or undone his Neighbour, so 'ad bin neat

near enough to th' Preacher, Oh! -- a Sermon's a fine short Cloak of an hour long, and will hide the upper part of a dissembler, -- Church, I, he seem'd all Church, and his conscience was as hard as the Pulpit.

Wid. I can no more endure this.

Pye. Nor I, Widow, Endure to flatter.

Wid. Is this all your business with me?

Pye. No, Lady, 'tis but the induction to't, You may believe my strains, I strike all true.

And if your conscience would leap up to your tongue, your self would affirm it, and that you shall perceive I know of things to come, as well as I do of what is present; a Brother of your husband's shall shortly have a loss.

Wid. A loss? marry Heaven forfend, Sir Godfrey, my Brother!

Pye. Nay, keep in your wonders, 'till I have told you the fortunes of you all; which are more fearfull, if not happily prevented, -- for your part and your Daughters, if there be not once this day some blood-shed before your door, whereof the humane creature dyes, of you two the elder shall run mad.

Mother & Frank. Oh!

Mol. That's not I yet.

Pye. And with most impudent prostitution, show your naked Bodies to the view of all beholders.

Wid. Our naked Bodies? fie for shame.

Pye. Attend me, and your younger Daughter be stricken dumb.

Mol. Dumb? out alas; 'tis the worst pain of all for a Woman, I'de rather be mad, or run naked, or any thing: dumb?

Pye. Give ear: ere the evening fall upon Hill, Bog, and Meadow, this my speech shall have past probation, and then shall I be believed accordingly.

Widow. If this be true, we are all sham'd, all undone.

Mol. Dumb? I'll speak as much as ever I can possible before evening.

Pye. But if it so come to pass (as for your fair sakes I wish it may) that this preface of your strange fortunes be prevented by that accident of death and blood-shedding, which I before told you of; take heed upon your lives, that two of you which have vow'd never to marry, seek out Husbands with all present speed, and you the third, that have such a desire to outstrip Chastity, look you meddle not with a Husband.

Moll. A double Torment.

Pye. The breach of this keeps your Father in Purgatory, and the punishments that shall follow you in this world, would with horreur kill the ear should hear 'em related.

Wid. Marry? why I vow'd never to marry.

Frank. And so did I.

Mol. And I vow'd never to be such an Ass, but to marry: what a cross Fortune's this?

Pye. Ladies, though I be a Fortune-teller, I cannot better Fortunes, you have 'em from me as they are revealed to me: I would they were to your tempers, and fellows with your blouds, that's all the bitterness I would you.

Widow. Oh! 'tis a just vengeance, for my Husband's hard purchases.

Pye. I wish you to bethink your selves, and leave 'em.

Wid. I'll to Sir Godfrey my Brother, and acquaint him with these fearfull prefages.

Frank. For, Mother, they portend losses to him.

Wid. Oh I, they do, they do; If any happy issue crown thy words, I will reward thy cunning.

Pye. 'Tis enough, Lady,

I wish no higher.

Exit.

Moll. Dumb? and not Marry? worse, Neither to speak, nor kiss, a double curse.

Exit.

Pye. So, all this comes well about yet, I play the Fortune-teller, as well as if I had had a Witch to my Grannam: for by good happiness, being in my Hostess's Garden, which neighbours the Orchard of the Widow, I laid the hole of mine ear to a hole in the wall, and heard 'em make these Vowes, and speak those words, upon which I wrought these advantages; and to encourage my forgerie the more, I may now perceive in 'em a natural simplicity which will easily swallow an abuse, if any covering be over it: and to confirm my former preface to the Widow, I have advis'd old Peter Skirmish the Souldier, to hurt Corporal Oath upon the Leg, and in that hurry I'll rush amongst 'em, and in stead of giving the Corporal some Cordial to comfort him, I'll pour into his mouth a potion of a sleepy nature, and make him seem as dead; for the which the old Souldier being apprehended, and ready to be borne to execution, I'll step in, and take upon me the cure of the dead man, upon pain of dying the condemned's death: the Corporal will wake at his minute, when the sleepy force hath wrought it self, and so shall I get my self into a most admired opinion, and under the pretext of that cunning, beguile as I see occasion: and if that foolish Nicholas Saint Tantlings keep true time with the Chain, my plot will be found, the Captain delivered, and my wits applauded among Schollars and Souldiers for ever.

Exit Pye-board.

Enter Nicholas Saint Tantlings, with the Chain.

Nic. Oh, I have found an excellent advantage to take away the Chain, my Master put it off e'en now, to say on a new Doublet, and I sneakt it away by little and little, most Puritanically! we shall have good sport anon when has mist it, about my Cousin the Conjuror; the world shall see I'me an honest man of my word, for now I'me going to hang it between Heaven and Earth among the Rosemary branches.

Exit Nich.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Simon Saint Mary-Overies, and Frailty.

Frail. Sirrah Simon Saint Mary-Overies, my Mistress sends away all her suiters, and puts fleas in their eares.

Sim. Frailty, she does like an honest, chaste, and virtuous woman; for Widows ought not to wallow in the puddle of Iniquity.

Frail. Yet, Simon, many Widows will do't, what so ere comes on't.

Sim. True, Frailty, their filthy flesh desires a Conjunction Copulative; what strangers are within, Frailty?

Frail. There's none, Simon; but master Pilfer the Taylor: he's above with Sir Godfrey, praising of a Doublet: and I must trudge anon to fetch Master Suds the Barber.

Sim. Ma-

Sim. Master Sud's a good man, he washes the sins of the Beard clean.

Skir. How now, creatures? what's a Clock?

Enter old Skirmish, the Soldiers.

Frail. Why, doe you take us to be Jack at th' Clock-house?

Skir. I say again to you what's a Clock?

Sim. Truly la, we go by the Clock of our Conscience, all worldly Clocks we know go false, and are set by drunken Sextons.

Skir. Then what's a Clock in your Conscience?---oh, I must break off, here comes the Corporall---hum, hum:---what's a Clock?

Enter Corporall.

Corp. A Clock? why past seventeen.

Frail. Past seventeen? nay, h'as met with his match now, Corporall Oath will fit him.

Skir. Thou dost not bawke or baffle me, dost thou? I am a Souldier---past seventeen.

Corp. I, thou art not angry with the figures, art thou? I will prove it unto thee, 12. and 1. is thirteen I hope, 2. fourteen, 3. fifteen, 4. sixteen, and 5. seventeen, then past seventeen, I will take the Dials part in a just cause.

Skir. I say 'tis but past five then.

Corp. I'll swear 'tis past seventeen then: dost thou not know numbers? canst thou not cast?

Skir. Cast? dost thou speak of my casting ith' street?
Draw.

Corp. I, and in the Market place.

Sim. Clubs, Clubs, Clubs. Simon runs in.

Frail. I, I knew by their shuffling Clubs would be Trump; masse here's the Knave, and he can do any good upon 'em: Clubs, Clubs, Clubs.

Enter Pye-board.

Cap. O Villain, thou hast open'd a vein in my Leg.

Pye. How now? for shame, for shame, put up, put up.

Cap. By yon blew Welkin, 'twas out of my part, George, to be hurt on the Leg.

Enter Officers.

Pye. Oh peace now---I have a Cordiall here to comfort thee.

Off. Down with 'em, down with 'em, lay hands upon the Villain.

Skir. Lay hands on me?

Pye. I'll not be seen among 'em now.

Cap. I'me hurt, and had more need have Surgeons, Lay hands upon me then, rough Officers.

Off. Go, carry him to be dress'd then:

This mutinous Soldier shall along with me to prison.

Skir. To prison? where's George?

Off. Away with him. Exeunt with Skir.

Pye. So,

All lights as I would wish, the amaz'd Widow, Will plant me strongly now in her belief, And wonder at the virtue of my words: For the event turns these presages from 'em, Of being mad and dumb, and begets joy Mingled with admiration: these empty creatures, Souldier and Corporall, were but ordain'd

As instruments for me to work upon.

Now to my Patient, here's his Potion. Exit Pye-board.

Enter the Widow with her two Daughters.

Wid. O wondrous happinesse, beyond our thoughts! O luckky fair event! I think our fortunes Were blest e'ne in our Cradles: we are quitted Of all those shamefull violent presages By this rash bleeding chance: go, Frailty, run, and know Whether he be yet living, or yet dead, That here before my door receiv'd his hurt.

Frail. Madam, he was carried to the superiour, but if he had no money when he came there, I warrant he's dead by this time. Exit Frailty.

Franck. Sure that man is a rare fortune-teller, never lookt upon our hands, nor upon any mark about us, a wondrous fellow surely.

Moll. I am glad I have the use of my tongue yet, though of nothing else, I shall find the way to marry too, I hope shortly.

Wid. O where's my Brother sir Godfrey, I would he were here, that I might relate to him how prophetically the cunning Gentleman spoke in all things.

Enter Sir Godfrey in a rage.

Sir God. O my Chain, my Chain, I have lost my Chain, where be these Villains, Varlets?

Wid. Oh, h'as lost his Chain.

Sir God. My Chain, my Chain.

Wid. Brother, be patient, hear me speak, you know I told you that a Cunning-man told me, that you should have a losse, and he has prophesied so true.

Sir God. Out, he's a Villain to prophecy of the losse of my Chain, 'twas worth above three hundred Crowns, besides 'twas my Fathers, my Fathers Fathers, my Grandfathers huge Grandfathers: I had as lieve ha lost my Neck, as the Chain that hung about it; O my Chain, my Chain.

Wid. Oh, Brother, who can be against a misfortune, 'tis happy 'twas no more.

Sir God. No more! O goodly godly sifter, would you had me lost more? my best Gown too, with the Cloth of Gold-Lace? my holyday Gascoins, and my Jerkin set with Pearl? no more!

Wid. Oh, Brother, you can read---

Sir God. But I cannot read where my Chain is: what strangers have been here? you let in strangers, Thieves and Catch-poles: how comes it gone? there was none above with me but my Taylor, and my Taylor will not---steale I hope?

Moll. No, he's afraid of a Chain.

Enter Frailty.

Wid. How now, sirtha? the newes?

Frail. O, Mistresse, he may well be call'd a Corporall now, for his Corps are as dead as a cold Capons?

Wid. More happinesse.

Sir God. Sirtha, what's this to my Chain? where's my Chain, knave?

Frail. Your Chain, sir?

Sir God. My Chain is lost, Villain.

Frail. I would he were hang'd in Chains that has it then for me: Alas, sir, I saw none of your Chain since you were hung with it your self.

Sir God.

Sir God. Out varlet? it had full three thousand Lincks, I have oft told it over at my prayers :
Over and over, full three thousand Lincks.

Frail. Had it so, sir, sure it cannot be lost then ; I'll put you in that comfort.

Sir God. Why? why?

Frail. Why if your Chain had so many Lincks, it cannot chuse but come to light.

Enter Nicholas.

Sir God. Delusion. Now, long Nicholas, where is my Chain.

Nich. Why about your neck, is't not, sir?

Sir God. About my neck, Varlet? my Chain is lost, 'Tis stoln away, I'me robb'd.

Wid. Nay, Brother, show your self a man.

Nic. If it be lost or stole, if he would be patient, Mistressse, I could bring him to a Cunning Kinsman of mine that would fetch it again with a Sefarara.

Sir God. Canst thou? I will be patient, say, where dwells he?

Nic. Marry he dwells now, sir, where he would not dwell and he could choose, in the Marshalsea, sir; but he's an exlent fellow if he were out: h'as travell'd all the world o're, he, and been in the seven and twenty Provinces: why he would make it be fetcht; sir, if it were rid a housand mile out of town.

Sir God. An admirable fellow, what lies he for;

Nic. Why he did but rob a Steward of ten groats tother night, as any man would ha done, and there he lies for't.

Sir God. I'll make his peace, a trifle, I'll get his par-
Besides a botintifull reward, I'll about it, (don,
But see the Clerks, the Justice will do much;
I will about it straight, good sister pardon me,
All will be well I hope, and turn to good,
The name of Conjurer has laid my blood. Exeunt.

Enter Puttock and Ravenshaw two Serisants, with Yeoman Dogson, to arrest the Scholler George Pye-boord.

Put. His Hostesse where he lies will trust him no longer, she hath feed me to arrest him; if you will accompany me, because I know not of what nature the Schollar is, whether desperate or swift, you shall share with me, Serjeant Raven-shaw, I have the good Angel to arrest him.

Raven. Troth I'll take part with thee then, Serjeant. not for the sake of the money so much, as for the hate I bear to a Schollar: why, Serjeant, 'tis naturall in us you know to hate Schollars: naturall besides, they will publish our imperfections, knaveries, and Conveyances upon Scaffolds and Stages.

Put. I, and spitefully too; troth I have wondred how the slaves could see into our breasts so much, when our Doublets are button'd with Pewter.

Raven. I, and so close without yielding: oh, their parlous fellows, they will search more with their wits, than a Constable with all his Officers.

Put. Whist, whist, whist, Yeoman Dogson, Yeoman Dogson.

Dog. Ha? what sayes Serjeant?

Put. Is he in the Pothecaries shop still,

Dog. I, I.

Put. Have an eye, have an eye.

Raven. The best is, Serjeant, if he be a true Schollar he weares no weapon I think.

Put. No, no, he weares no weapon.

Raven. Masse, I am right glad of that: 'thas put me in better heart; nay if I clutch him once, let me alone to drag him if he be stiff-necked; I have been one of the six my self, that has dragg'd as tall men of their hands, when their weapons have bin gone, as ever baltinado'd a Serjeant---I have done I can tell you.

Dog. Serjeant Puttock, Serjeant Puttock.

Put. Hoh.

Dog. He's comming out single.

Put. Peace, peace, be not too greedy, let him play a little, let him play a little, we'll jerk him up of a sudden, I ha fisht in my time.

Raven. I, and caught many a fool, Serjeant.

Enter Pye-boord.

Pye. I parted now from Nicholas: the Chain's couch't, And the old Knight has spent his rage upon't, The Widow holds me in great admiration For cunning Art: 'mongst joyes I'me e'ne lost, For my device can no way now be crost, And now I must to prison to the Captain, and there---

Put. I arrest you, sir.

Pye. Oh---I spoke truer then I was aware, I must to prison indeed.

Put. They say you're a Schollar, nay sir---Yeoman Dogson, have care to his armes---you'll raile again Serjeants, and stage 'em: you tickle their vices.

Pye. Nay, use me like a Gentleman, I'me little lesse.

Put. You a Gentleman? that's a good jest ifaith; can a Schollar be a Gentleman,---when a Gentleman will not be a Schollar; ---look upon your wealthy Citizens Sons, whether they be Schollars or no, that are Gentlemen by their Fathers Trades: a Schollar a Gentleman!

Pye. Nay, let Fortune drive all her stings into me, she cannot hurt that in me, a Gentleman, Accidens inseparabile to my blood.

Raven. A rablement, nay you shall have a bloody rablement upon you I warrant you.

Put. Go, Yeoman Dogson, before, and enter the Action ith' Counter.

Pye. Pray doe not handle me cruelly, I'll go Ex. Dogf. Whether you please to have me.

Put. Oh, he's tame, let him loose Serjeant.

Pye. Pray at whose Suit is this?

Put. Why, at your Hostesses Suit where you lie, Mistressse Canniburrow, for bed and board, the summe four pound five shillings and five pence.

Pye. I know the summe too true, yet I presum'd Upon a farther day; well, 'tis my starres: And I must bear it now, though never harder. I swear now, my device is crost indeed.

Captain must lie by't: this is Deccits seed.

Put. Come, come away.

Pye. Pray give me so much time as to knit my garter, and I'll away with you.

Put. Well, we must be paid for this waiting upon you, this is no pains to attend thus. Making to tie his Garter.

Pye. I am now wretched and miserable, I shall ne're recover of this disease: hot Iron gnaw their fists: they have struck a Fever into my shoulder, which I shall ne're shake out again I fear me, till with a true Habeas Corpus the Sexton remove me, oh if I take prison once, I shall be preft prest to death with Actions, but not so happy as speedily; perhaps I may be forty year a pressing till I be a thin old man, that looking through the grates, men may look through me; all my means is confounded, what shall I do? has my wit served me so long, and now give me the slip (like a train'd servant) when I have most need of 'em: no device to keep my poor carcase from these Put-locks?...yes, happiness, have I a paper about me now? yes too, I'll try it, it may hit, Extremity is Touch-stone unto wit, I, I.

Put. 'Sfoot how many yards are in thy Garters, that thou art so lo long a tying on them? come away sir.

Pye. Troth Serjeant I protest; you could never ha took me at a worse time, for now at this instant, I have no lawfull picture about me.

Put. 'Slid how shall we come by our fees then.

Rav. We must have fees, sirra.

Pye. I could have wisht ifaith, that you had took me halfe an hour hence for your own sake, for I protest if you had not crost me, I was going in great joy to receive five pound of a Gentleman, for the Device of a Mask here, drawn in this paper but now, come, I must be contented, 'tis but so much lost, and answerable to the rest of my fortunes.

Put. Why how far hence dwells that Gentleman?

Rav. I, well said Serjeant, 'tis good to cast about for mony.

Put. Speak, if it be not far---

Pye. We are but a little past it, the next street behind us.

Put. 'Slid we have waited upon you grievously already, if you'll say you'll be liberal when you ha't, give us double fees, and spend upon's, why we'll show you that kindness, and go along with you to the Gentleman.

Rav. I, well said still Serjeant, urge that.

Pye. Troth if it will suffice, it shall all be among you, for my part I'll not pocket a penny, my Hostels shall have her four pound five shillings, and bate me the five pence, and the other fifteen shillings I'll spend upon you.

Ravinish. Why now thou art a good Schollar.

Put. An excellent Schollar ifaith; has proceeded very well alate; come, we'll along with you.

Exeunt with him, passing in they knock at the door with a knocker withinside.

Ser. Who knocks, whose at door? we had need of a Porter.

Pye. A few friends here. ---pray is the Gentleman your Master within?

Ser. Yes, is your business to him?

Pye. I, he knows it, when he sees me: I pray you, have you forgot me.

Ser. I by my troth, sir, pray come near, I'll in and tell him of you, please you to walk here in the Gallery till he comes.

Pye. We will attend his worship,---worship I think, for so much the posts at his door should signifie, and the fait coming in, and the wicker; else I neither knew him nor his worship, but 'tis happiness he is within doors, what so ere he be, if he be not too much a formal Citizen, he may do me good: Serjeant and Yeoman, how do you like this house, is't not most wholsomely plotted?

Rav. Troth prisoner, an exceeding fine house.

Pye. Yet I wonder how he should forget me; for he ne're knew me: No matter, what is forgot in you, will be remembred in your Master.

A pritty comfortable room this methinks:

You have no such roomes in prison now?

Put. Oh dog-holes to't.

Pye. Dog-holes indeed---I can tell you I have great hope to have my Chamber here shortly, nay and dyet too, for he's the most free-hearted'st Gentleman where he takes: you would little think it? and what a fine Gallery were here for me to walk and study, and make verses.

Put. O it stands pleasantly for a Schollar.

Enter Gentleman.

Pye. Look what maps, and pictures, and devices, and things, neatly, delicately? Masse here he comes, he should be a Gentleman, I like his Beard well;---All happiness to your worship.

Gent. You're kindly welcome, sir.

Put. A simple salutation.

Rav. Masse it seems the Gentleman makes great account of him.

Gent. I have the thing here for you, sir.

Pye. I beseech you, conceal me sir, I'm undone else,--I have the Mask here for you sir, Look you sir,---I beseech your worship, first pardon my rudeness, for my extreams makes me boulder then I would be; I am a poor Gentleman and a Schollar, and now most unfortunately false into the hands of unmercifull Officers, arrested for debt, which though small, I am not able to compass, by reason I'm destitute of lands, mony, and friends, so that if I fall into the hungry swallow of the prison, I am like utterly to perish, and with fees and extortions be pinched clean to the bone: Now, if ever pity had interest in the blood of a Gentleman, I beseech you vouchsafe but to favour that means of my escape, which I have already thought upon.

Gent. Go forward.

Put. I warrant he likes it rarely.

Pye. In the plunge of my extremities, being giddy, and doubtfull what to do; at last it was put in my labouring thoughts, to make a happy use of this paper, and to blear their unlettered eyes, I told them there was a Device for a Mask drawn in't, and that (but for their interception,) I was going to a Gentleman to receive my reward for't: they greedy at this word, and hoping to make purchase of me, offered their attendance, to go along with me, my hap was to make bold with your door, sir, which my thoughts shew'd me the most fairest and comfortablest entrance, and I hope I have happened right upon understanding, and pity: may it please your good worship then, but to uphold my Device, which is to let one of your men put me out at a back door, and I shall be bound to your worship for ever.

Gent. By my troth, an excellent Device.

Put. An excellent Device he sayes; he likes it wonderfully.

Gent. A my faith, I never heard a better.

Raven. Hark, he swears he never heard a better, Serjeant.

Put. O there's no talk on't, he's an excellent Schollar, and especially for a Mask.

Gent. Give me your Paper, your Device; I was never better pleas'd in all my life: good wit, brave wit, finely wrought, come in sir, and receive your mony, sir.

Pye. I'll follow your good Worship,--- You heard how he like't it now?

Put. Puh, we know he could not choose but like it: go thy wayes, thou art a fine witty fellow ifaith, thou shalt discourse it to us at the Tavern anon, wilt thou?

¶ D

Pye. I,

Pye. I, I, that I will,-- look Serjeants, here are Maps, and pretty toyes, be doing in the mean time, I shall quickly have told out the money, you know.

Put. Go, go, little villain, fetch thy chinck, I begin to love thee, I'll be drunk to night in thy company.

Pye. This Gentleman I may well call a part Of my salvation, in these earthly evils, For he has sav'd me from three hungry Devils.

Exit George.

Put. Sirrah Serjeant, these Maps are pretty painted things, but I could nere fancie them yet, me thinks they're too busie, and full of Circles and Conjurations; they say all the World's in one of them, but I could nere find the Counter in the Poultry.

Rav. I think so: how could you find it? for you know it stands behind the houses.

Dog. Mafs that's true, then we must look oth' back-side for't: sfoot here's nothing, all's bare.

Rav. I warrant thee that stands for the Counter, for you know there's a company of bare fellows there.

Put. Faith like enough, Serjeant, I never markt so much before. Sirrah Serjeant, and Yeoman, I should love these Maps out a cry now, if we could see men peep out of door in 'em, oh we might have 'em in a morning to our Break-fast so finely, and nere knock our heels to the ground a whole day for 'em.

Rav. I marry sir, I'de buy one my self. But this talk is by the way, where shall's sup to night: Five pound receiv'd, let's talk of that.

I have a trick worth all, you two shall bear him toth' Tavern, whilst I go close with his Hostess, and work out of her, I know she would be glad of the summe, to finger money; because shee knows 'tis but a desperate debt, and full of hazard: what will you say if I bring it to pass, that the Hostess shall be contented with one half for all, and we to share tother fifty shillings, Bullies.

Put. Why I would call thee King of Serjeants, and thou should'st be Chronicled in the Counter-Book for ever.

Ra. Well, put it to me, we'll make a Night on't ifaith.

Dog. Sfoot, I think he receives more money, he staves so long.

Put. He carries long indeed, may be, I can tell you, upon the good liking on't the Gentleman may prove more bountifull.

Rav. That would be rare, we'll search him.

Put. Nay be sure of it, we'll search him, and make him light enough.

Enter the Gentleman.

Ra. Oh here comes the Gentleman, by your leave, Sir.

Gen. God you god den sirs,--would you speak with me?

Put. No, not with your worship, sir; only we are bold to stay for a friend of ours, that went in with your worship.

Gen. Who? not the Schollar?

Put. Yes, e'en he, an it please your worship.

Gen. Did he make you stay for him? he did you wrong then: why, I can assure you he's gon above an hour ago.

Rav. How, Sir?

Gen. I paid him his money, and my man told me he went out at back-door.

Put. Back-door?

Gen. Why, what's the matter?

Put. He was out prisoner, sir, we did arrest him.

Gen. What he was not? you the Sheriff's Officers --- you were too blame then,

Why did you not make known to me as much; I could have kept him for you, I protest, He receiv'd all of me in Britain Gold, Of the last coyning.

Ra. Vengeance dog him with't.

Put. Sfoot has he gull'd us so?

Dog. Where shall we sup now, Serjeants?

Put. Sup Simon, now, eat Porridge for a month.

Well, we cannot impute it to any lack of good will in your Worship, -- you did but as another would have done, 'twas our hard fortunes to miss the purchase, but if e'er we clutch him again, the Counter shall charm him.

Ra. The Hole shall rot him.

Dog. Amen.

Exeunt.

Gen. So,

Vex out your Lungs without doors, I am proud, It was my hap to help him, it fell fit,

He went not empty neither for his wit:

Alas poor wretch, I could not blame his brain,

To labour his delivery, to be free,

From their unpitying fangs, -- I'me glad it stood,

Within my power to do a Scholar good. Exit.

Enter in the Prison, meeting George and Captain, George coming in muffled.

Cap. How now, who's that? what are you?

Pye. The same that I should be, Captain.

Cap. George Pye-board, honest George? why can'st thou in half-fac'd, muffled so?

Pye. Oh Captain, I thought we should nere ha laugh't agen, never spent frolick hour agen.

Cap. Why? why?

Pye. I coming to prepare thee, and with news As happy as thy quick delivery, Was trac'd out by the sent, arrested, Captain.

Cap. Arrested, George?

Pye. Arrested; guess, guess, how many Dogs do you think I'de upon me?

Cap. Dogs? I say, I know not.

Pye. Almost as many as George Store the Bear: Three at once, three at once.

Cap. How did'st thou shake 'em off then?

Pye. The time is busie, and calls upon our wits, let it Here I stand safe, and scap't by miracle: (suffice,

Some other hour shall tell thee, when we'll steep

Our eyes in laughter: Captain, my device

Leans to thy happiness, for ere the day

Be spent toth' Girdle, thou shalt be free:

The Corporal's in's first sleep, the Chain is mist,

Thy Kinsman has exprest thee, and the old Knight

With Palsy-hams now labours thy release.

What rests, is all in thee, to Conjure, Captain?

Cap. Conjure? sfoot, George, you know, the Devil a conjuring I can conjure.

Pye. The Devil of conjuring? nay by my fay, I'de not have thee do so much, Captain, as the Devil a conjuring: look here, I ha brought thee a Circle ready characterized and all.

Ca. Sfoot, George, art in thy right wits, dost know what thou say'st? why dost talk to a Captain a conjuring? did'st thou ever hear of a Captain conjure in thy life? dost call't a Circle? 'tis too wide a thing, me thinks; had it been a lesser Circle, then I knew what to have done.

Pye. Why

Pye. Why every fool knowes that Captain : nay then I'll not cog with you, Captain, if you'll stay and hang the next Sessions you may.

Cap. No, by my faith, George, come, come, let's to conjuring.

Pye. But if you look to be released, as my wits have took pain to work it, and all means wrought to farther it, besides to put Crowns in your purse, to make you a man of better hopes, and whereas before you were a Captain or poor Souldier, to make you now a Commander of rich fooles, (which is truly the onely best purchase peace can allow you) safer then High-ways, Heath, or Cony-groves, and yet a far better booty; for your greatest thieves are never hang'd, never hang'd; for why? they're wise, and cheat within doores; and we geld fooles of more money in one night, then your false-tail'd Gelding will purchase in a twelve-moneths running, which confirms the old Bedlams saying, he's wisest, that keeps himself warmest, that is, he that robs by a good fire.

Cap. Well opened ifaith, George, thou hast pull'd that saying out of the husk.

Pye. Captain Idle, 'Tis no time now to delude or delay, the old Knight will be here suddenly, I'll perfect you, direct you, tell you the trick on't: 'tis nothing.

Cap. 'Sfoot, George, I know not what to say to't, conjure? I shall be hang'd ere I conjure.

Pye. Nay, tell not me of that, Captain, you'll ne're conjure after you're hang'd, I warrant you, look you, sir, a parlous matter, sure, first to spread your circle upon the ground, then with a little conjuring ceremony, as I'll have an Hackney-mans wand silver'd o're a purpose for you, then arriving in the circle, with a huge word, and a great trample, as for instance: have you never seen a stalking, stamping Player, that will raise a tempest with his tongue, and thunder with his heeles?

Cap. O yes, yes, yes; often, often.

Pye. Why be like such a one? for any thing will blear the old Knights eyes: for you must note, that he'll ne're dare to venture into the room, onely perhaps peep fearfully through the Key-hole, to see how the Play goes forward.

Cap. Well, I may go about it when I will, but mark the end on't, I shall but shame my self ifaith, George, speak big words, and stamp and stare, and he look in at Key-hole, why the very thought of that would make me laugh out-right, and spoile all: nay I'll tell thee, George, when I apprehend a thing once, I am of such a laxative laughter, that if the Devil himself stood by, I should laugh in his face.

Pye. Puh, that's but the babe of a man, and may easily be hush't, as to think upon some disaster, some sad misfortune, as the death of thy Father ith' Countrey.

Cap. 'Sfoot, that would be the more to drive me into such an extasie, that I should ne're lin laughing.

Pye. Why then think upon going to hanging else.

Cap. Masse that's well remembred, now I'll doe well, I warrant thee, ne're fear me now: but how shall I doe, George, for boysterous words, and horrible names?

Pye. Puh, any fustian invocations, Captain, will serve as well as the best, so you rant them out well, or you may go to a Pothecaries shop, and take all the words from the Boxes.

Cap. Troth, and you say true, George, there's strange words enow to raise a hundred Quack-salvers, though they bene're so poor when they begin? but here lies the fear on't, how in this false conjuration, a true Devil should pop up indeed.

Pye. A true Devil, Captain? why there was ne're such a one, nay faith he that has this place, is as false a Knave as our last Church-warden.

Cap. Then h'as false enough a conscience ifaith, George.

The Cry at Marshalsea.

Cry prisoners. Good Gentlemen over the way, send your relief:.

Good Gentlemen over the way,---Good sir Godfrey?

Pye. He's come, he's come.

Nich. Master, that's my Kinsman yonder in the Buff-Jerkin---Kinsman, that's my Master yonder ith' Taffaty Hat---pray salute him intirely?

They salute: and Pye-boord salutes Master Edmond.

Sir God. Now my friend.

Pye. May I partake your name, sir?

Edm. My name is Master Edmond.

Pye. Master Edmond,---are you not a Welsh-man, sir?

Edm. A Welsh-man? why?

Pye. Because Master is your Christen name, and Edmond your sir-name.

Edm. O no: I have more names at home, Master Edmond Plus is my full name at length.

Pye. O cry you mercy sir? Whispering.

Cap. I understand that you are my Kinsmans good Master, and in regard of that, the best of my skill is at your service: but had you fortun'd a meer stranger, and made no meanes to me by acquaintance, I should have utterly denyed to have been the man; both by reason of the Act of Parliament against Conjurers and Witches, as also, because I would not have my Art vulgar, trite, and common.

Sir God. I much commend your care there, good Captain Conjurer, and that I will be sure to have it private enough, you shall do't in my Sisters house,---mine own house I may call it, for both our charges therein are proportion'd.

Cap. Very good, sir,---what may I call your losse, sir?

Sir God. O you may call't a great losse, a grievous losse, sir, as goodly a Chain of Gold, though I say it, that wore it: how sayest thou, Nicholas?

Nich. O 'twas as delicious a Chain a Gold, Kinsman you know,---

Sir God. You know? did you know't, Captain?

Cap. Trust a fool with secrets?---Sir he may say I know: his meaning is, because my Art is such, that by it I may gather a knowledge of all things.---

Sir God. I very true.

Cap. A pax of all fooles---the excuse stuck upon my tongue like Ship-pitch upon a Mariners Gown, not to come off in haste---ber-lady, Knight, to lose such a fair Chain a Gold, were a foule losse: Well, I can put you in this good comfort on't, if it be between heaven and earth, Knight, I'll ha't for you?

Sir God. A wonderfull Conjurer,---O I, 'tis between heaven and earth I warrant you, it cannot go out of the Realm,---I know 'tis somewhere about the earth.

Cap. I; nigher the earth then thou wor't on.

Sir God. For first my Chain was rich, and no rich thing shall enter into heaven, you know.

Nich. And as for the Devil, Master, he has no need on't, for you know he has a great Chain of his own.

Sir Godf. Thou say'st true, Nicholas, but he has put off that now, that lyes by him.

Cap. Faith Knight, in few words, I presume so much upon the power of my Art, that I could warrant your Chain agen.

Sir Godf. O dainty Captain!

Cap. Marry it will cost me much sweat, I were better go to sixteen Hot-houses.

Sir Godf. I, good man, I warrant thee.

Cap. Beside great vexation of Kidney and Liver.

Nic. O, 'twill tickle you hereabouts, Cousin, because you have not been us'd to't.

Sir Godf. No? have you not been us'd to't, Captain?

Cap. Plague of all fools still; -- indeed Knight I have not us'd it a good while, and therefore 'twill strain me so much the more, you know.

Sir Godf. Oh it will, it will.

Cap. What plunges he puts me to? were not this Knight a fool, I had been twice spoil'd now; that Captain's worse then accurst that has an Ass to a Kinsman, sfoot I fear he will drivell't out before I come to't. -- Now sir, -- to come to the point indeed, -- you see I stick here in the jaw of the Marshalsea, and cannot do't.

Sir Godf. Tut tut, I know thy meaning, thou wouldst say thou'rt a prisoner, I tell thee th'art none.

Cap. How, none? why is not this the Marshalsea?

Sir Godf. Wouldst hear me speak? I heard of thy rare Conjuring:

My Chain was lost, I sweat for thy release,
As thou shalt do the like at home for me:
Keeper.

Enter Keeper.

Keep. Sir.

Sir Godf. Speak, is not this man free?

Keep. Yes, at his pleasure, Sir, the Fees discharg'd.

Sir Godf. Go, go, I'll discharge them, I.

Keep. I thank your Worship. Exit Keeper.

Cap. Now, trust me, y'are a dear Knight; kindnesse unexpected! oh there's nothing to a free Gentleman. -- I will Conjure for you, sir, 'till Froth come through my Buffe-Jerkin.

Sir Godf. Nay, then thou shalt not passe with so little a bounty, for at the first sight of my Chain agen, --- Fourty five Angels shall appear unto thee.

Cap. 'Twill be a glorious show, ifaith Knight, a very fine show; but are all these of your own house? are you sure of that, Sir?

Sir Godf. I, I, no, no; what's he yonder talking with my wild Nephew, pray heaven he give him good counsel.

Cap. Who, he? he's a rare friend of mine, an admirable fellow, Knight, the finest Fortune-teller.

Sir Godf. Oh! 'tis he indeed, that came to my Lady sister, and foretold the losse of my Chain; I am not angry with him now, for I see 'twas my Fortune to lose it: By your leave, Mr. Fortune-teller, I had a glimpse of you at home, at my Sisters the Widows, there you prophesied of the loss of a Chain: -- simply though I stand here, I was he that lost it.

Pye. Was it you, sir?

Edm. A my troth, Nuncle, he's the rarest fellow, has told me my fortune so right; I find it so right to my nature.

Sir Godf. What is't? God send it a good one.

Edm. O, 'tis a passing good one, Nuncle: for he says I shall prove such an excellent Gamester in my time, that I shall spend all faster then my Father got it.

Sir Godf. There's a Fortune indeed.

Edm. Nay, it hits my humour so pat.

Sir Godf. I, that will be the end on't: will the Curse of the Beggar prevail so much, that the son shall consume that foolishly, which the father got craftily; I, I, I; 'twill, 'twill, 'twill.

Pye. Stay, stay, stay. Pye-board with an Almanack,

Cap. Turn over, George. and the Captain.

Pye. June, July; here, July, thats the month, Sunday thirteen, yesterday fourteen, to day fifteen.

Cap. Look quickly for the fifteen day, --if within the compasse of these two dayes there would be some Boystrous storm or other, it would be the best, I'de defer him off till then; some Tempest, and it be thy will.

Pye. Here's the fifteen day, --Hot and fair.

Cap. Puh, would't ad been, Hot and foul.

Pye. The sixteen day, that's to morrow; The morning for the most part, fair and pleasant.

Cap. No luck.

Pye. But about high-noon, Lightning and thunder.

Cap. Lightning and thunder? admirable! best of all! I'll Conjure to morrow just at high-noon, George.

Pye. Happen but true to morrow, Almanack, and I'll give the leave to lye all the year after.

Cap. Sir, I must crave your patience, to bestow this day upon me, that I may furnish my self strongly, -- I sent a Spirit into Lancashire tother day, to fetch back a knave Drover, and I look for his return this evening -- to morrow morning, my friend here, and I will come and break-fast with you.

Sir Godf. Oh, you shall be most welcome.

Cap. And about noon, without fail, I purpose to Conjure.

Sir Godf. Mid-noon will be a fit time for you.

Edm. Conjuring? do you mean to Conjure at our house, to morrow, Sir?

Cap. Marry do I, sir? 'tis my intent, young Gentleman.

Edm. By my troth, I'll love you while I live for't: o rare! Nicholas, we shall have Conjuring to morrow.

Nic. Puh I, I could ha told you of that.

Cap. Law, he could ha told him of that, fool, coxcomb, could ye?

Edm. Do you hear me, sir, I desire more acquaintance on you, you shall earn some money of me, now I know you can Conjure; but can you fetch any that is lost?

Cap. Oh, any thing that's lost.

Edm. Why look you, sir, I tell't you as a friend and a Conjuror; I should marry a Pothecharies Daughter, and 'twas told me, she lost her Maiden-head at Stonie-Stratford: now if you'll do but so much as Conjure for't, and make all whole agen --.

Cap. That I will, Sir.

Edm. By my troth I thank you, la.

Cap. A little merry with your sisters son, sir.

Sir Godf. Oh, a simple young man, very simple, come Captain, and you, sir; we'll e'en part with a gallon of wine 'till to morrow break-fast.

Tip. Cap. Troth, agreed, sir.

Nic. Kinsman -- Scholar.

Pye. Why now thou art a good Knave, worth a hundred Brownists.

Nic. Am I indeed, la: I thank you heartily, la.

Exeunt.

Alm.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Moll, and Sir John Penny-Dub.

Pen. But I hope you will not serve a Knight so, Gentlewoman, will you? to cashier him, and cast him off at your pleasure; what doe you think I was dubb'd for nothing, no by my faith Ladies daughter.

Moll. Pray Sir John Penny-Dub, let it be defer'd awhile, I have a heart to marry as you can have; but as the Fortune-teller told me.

Penny. Pax oth' Fortune-teller, would Derrick had been his fortune seven yeare ago, to crosse my love thus: did he know what case I was in? why this is able to make a man drown himself in's Father's Fish-pond.

Moll. And then he told me moreover, Sir John, that the breach of it, kept my Father in Purgatory.

Penny. In Purgatory? why let him purge out his heart there, what have we to doe with that? there's Physicians enow there to cast his water, is that any matter to us? how can he hinder our love? why let him be hang'd now he's dead? ---Well, have I rid post day and night, to bring you merry newes of my Fathers death, and now---

Moll. Thy Fathers death? is the old Farmer dead?

Penny. As dead as his Barn door, Moll.

Moll. And you'll keep your word with me now, sir John, that I shall have my Coach and my Coach-man?

Penny. I faith.

Moll. And two white Horses with black Feathers to draw it?

Penny. Too.

Moll. A guarded Lackey to run befor't, and py'd Liveries to come trashing after't.

Pen. Thou shalt Moll.

Mol. And to let me have money in my purse to go whether I will.

Pen. All this.

Moll. Then come, whatsoe're come's on't, we'll be made sure together before the Maids oth' Kitchin. Exe.

Enter Widow with her eldest Daughter, Franck, and Frailty.

Wid. How now? where's my Brother Sir Godfrey? went he forth this morning?

Frail. O no Madam, he's above at break-fast, with sir reverence a Conjuror.

Wid. A Conjuror? what manner of fellow is he?

Frail. Oh, a wondrous rare fellow, Mistresse, very strongly made upward, for he goes in a Buff-Jerkin: he sayes he will fetch Sir Godfrey's Chain agen, if it hang between heaven and earth.

Wid. What he will nor? then he's an exlent fellow I warrant: how happy were that woman to be blest with such a Husband, a man cunning? how do's he look, Frailty? very swartly I warrant, with black beard, scorcht cheeks, and smoaky eye-browes.

Frail. Foooh--he's neither smoak-dryed, nor scorcht, nor black, nor nothing, I tell you, Madam, he looks as fair to see to, as one of us; I do think but if you saw him once, you'de take him to be a Christian.

Franck. So fair, and yet so cunning, that's to be wonder'd at, Mother.

Enter Sir Andrew, Muck-hill, and Sir Andrew Tipstaffe.

Muck. Blesse you, sweet Lady.

Tip. And you, fair Mistresse.

Exit Frailty.

Wid. Coades, what doe you mean, Gentlemen? he, did I not give you your answers?

Muck. Sweet Lady?

Wid. Well, I will not stick with you for a kisse: Daughter, kisse the Gentleman for once.

Franck. Yes forsooth.

Tip. I'me proud of such a favour.

Wid. Truly la, sir Oliver, y'are much to blame to come agen when you know my mind, so well deliver'd--- as a Widow could deliver a thing.

Muck. But I expect a farther comfort, Lady.

Wid. Why la you now, did I not desire you to put off your suit quite and clean when you came to me again? how say you? did I not?

Muck. But the sincere love which my heart beares to you---

Wid. Go to, I'le cut you off; and Sir Oliver to put you in comfort, as far off, my fortune is read me, I must marry again.

Muck. O blest fortune!

Wid. But not as long as I can choose; nay, I'le hold out well.

Enter Frailty.

Frail. O Madam, Madam.

Wid. How now? what's the haste? In her ear.

Tipst. Faith, Mistresse Frances, I'le maintain you gallantly, I'le bring you to Court, wean you among the fair society of Ladies poor Kinswomen of mine in cloth of Silver, beside you shall have your Moncky, your Parrat, your Muskat, and your Pisse, Pisse, Pisse.

Franck. It will doe very well.

Wid. What, do's he mean to Conjure here then? how shall I do to be rid of these Knights, --please you Gentlemen to walk a while ith' Garden, to gather a pinck, or a Jilly-flower.

Beth. With all our hearts, Lady, and count us favour'd. Exit.

Sir God. within. Step in Nicholas, look, is the coast clear?

Nich. Oh, as clear as a Carter's eye, sir.

Sir God. Then enter Captain Conjuror: ---now--- how like you our Room, sir?

Enter Sir Godfrey, Captain, Pye-boord, Edmond, Nicholas.

Cap. O wonderfull convenient.

Edm. I can tell you, Captain, simply though it lies here, tis the fairest Room in my Mothers house, as dainty a Room to Conjure in, me thinks, --why you may bid, I cannot tell how many Devils welcome in't; my Father has had twenty in't at once!

Pye. What Devils?

Edm. Devils, no Deputies, and the wealthiest men he could get.

Sir God. Nay put by your chats now, fall to your business roundly, the Rescue of the Diall is upon the Crosse of Noon: but oh, hear me, Captain, a qualme comes o're my stomach.

Cap. Why, what's the matter, sir?

Sir God. Oh, how if the Devil should prove a knave, and tear the hangings.

Cap. Fuh,

Cap. Puh, I warrant you, Sir Godfrey.

Edm. I, Nuncle, or spit fire upo'th'fealing.

Sir Godf. Very true too, for 'tis but thin plaistered, and 'twill quickly take hold a the laths: and if he chance to spit downward too, he will burn all the boards.

Cap. My life for yours, Sir Godfrey.

Sir Godf. My sister is very curious and dainty ore this room I can tell you, and therefore if he must needs spit, I pray desire him to spit i'th'Chimney.

Pye. Why, assure you, Sir Godfrey, he shall not be brought up wit h so little manners, to spit and spawl a'th'floor.

Sir Godf. Why I thank you, good Captain, pray have a care I,--fall to your Circle, we'll not trouble you I warrant you, come, we'll into the next room, and because we'll be sure to keep him out there, we'll bar up the door with some of the Godlies Zealous works.

Edm. That will be a fine device, Nuncle; and because the ground shall be as holy as the door, I'll tear two or three Rosaries in pieces, and strew the pieces about the Chamber: Oh! the Devil already. runs in. Thunders.

Pye. Sfoot, Captain, speak somewhat for shame: it lightens and thunders before thou wilt begin, why when?

Cap. Pray peace, George, -- thou'lt make me laugh anon, and spoil all.

Pye. Oh, now it begins agen; now, now, now! Captain.

Cap. Rumbos-ragdayon, pur, pur, colucandrian, Hois-Plois.

Sir Godfrey through the key-hole, within.

Sir Godf. Oh admirable Conjuror! has fetcht Thunder already.

Pye. Hark hark, agen Captain.

Cap. Benjamino, - gaspois-kay-gosgothoeron-umbrois.

Sir Godf. Oh, I would the Devil would come away quickly, he has no conscience to put a man to such pain.

Pye. Agen.

Cap. Flowste-kakopumpas-dragone-leloomenas-hodge-podge.

Pye. Well said, Captain.

Sir Godf. So long a coming? Oh would I had nere begun't now, for I fear me these roaring Tempests will destroy all the fruits of the earth, and tread upon my corn--oh, i'th'Countrey.

Cap. Gog de gog, hobgoblin, huncks, hounslow, hockley te coome park.

Wid. O brother, brother, what a Tempest's i'th'Garden, sure there's some Conjuror abroad.

Sir Godf. 'Tis at home, sister.

Pye. By and by I'll step in, Captain.

Cap. Nunck-Nunck-Rip-Gascoines, Ips, Drip-Dropite.

Sir Godf. He drips and drops, poor man: alas, alas.

Pye. Now, I come.

Cap. O Sulphure Sootface.

Pye. Arch-Conjuror, what would'st thou with me?

Sir Godf. O, the Devil, sister, i'th'dining-Chamber: sing sister, I warrant you that will keep him out; quickly, quickly, quickly. goes in.

Pye. So, so, so; I'll release thee: enough Captain, enough: allow us some time to laugh a little, they're shuddering and shaking by this time, as if an Earthquake were in their kidneies.

Cap. Sirrah George, how was't, how was't? did I do't well enough?

Pye. Would believe me, Captain, better then any Conjuror, for here was no harm in this; and yet their horrible expectation satisfied well, you were much beholding to Thunder and Lightning at this time, it grac'ft you well, I can tell you.

Cap. I must needs say so, George: sirrah if we could ha convey'd hither cleanly a cracker, or a fire-wheel, t'ad been admirable.

Pye. Blurt, blurt, there's nothing remains to put thee to pain now, Captain.

Cap. Pain? I protest, George, my heels are forer then a Whison Morris-dancer's.

Pye. All's past now, -- onely to reveal that the Chain's i'th'Garden, where; thou know'st, it has lain these two dayes.

Cap. But I fear, that fox Nicholas has reveal'd it already.

Pye. Fear not, Captain, you must put it toth'venture now: Nay 'tis time, call upon'em, take pittty on'em, for I believe some of 'em are in a pittifull case by this time.

Cap. Sir Godfrey, Nicholas, Kinsman, -- sfoot they're fast at it still: George, Sir Godfrey?

Sir Godf. Oh, is that the Devil's voice? how comes he to know my name?

Cap. Fear not, Sir Godfrey, all's quieted.

Sir Godf. What, is he laid?

Cap. Laid: and has newly dropt Your chain i'th'Garden.

Sir Godf. I'th'Garden! in our Garden?

Cap. Your Garden.

Sir Godf. O sweet Conjuror! whereabouts there?

Cap. Look well about a banck of Rosemary.

Sir Godf. Sister, the Rosemary-banck, come, come; there's my chain he sayes.

Wid. Oh happiness! run, run. supposed to goe.

Edm. Captain Conjuror? Edm. at key-hole.

Cap. Who? Master Edmond?

Edm. I, Master Edmond; may I come in safely without danger, think you?

Cap. Puh, long agoe, 'tis all as 'twas at first: Fear nothing, pray come near, - how now, man?

Edm. Oh! this room's mightily hot ifaith: slid, my shirt sticks to my Belly already: what a steam the Rogue has left behind him? foh, this room must be air'd, Gentlemen, it smells horribly of Brimstone, - let's open the windows.

Pye. Faith, Master Edmond, 'tis but your conceit.

Edm. I would you could make me believe that, ifaith, why do you think I cannot smell his favour, from another: yet I take it kindly from you, because you would not put me in a fear, ifaith: a my troth I shall love you for this the longest day of my life.

Cap. Puh, 'tis nothing, Sir, love me when you see more.

Edm. Mafs, now I remember, I'll look whether he has singed the hangings, or no.

Pye. Captain, to entertain a little sport till they come: make him believe, you'll charm him invisible, he's apt to admire any thing, you see, let me alone to give force to't.

Cap. Go, retire to yonder end then.

Edm. I protest you are a rare fellow, are you not?

Cap. O Master Edmond, you know but the least part of me yet; why now at this instant I could but flourish my wand thrice ore your head, and charm you invisible.

Edm. What you could not? make me walk invisible man? I should laugh at that ifaith; troth I'll requite your kindness, an you'll do't, good Captain Conjuror.

Cap. Nay, I should hardly deny you such a small kindness, Master Edmond Plus, why, look you, sir, 'tis no more but this, and thus agen, and now y'are invisible.

Edm. Am I faith? who would think it?

Cap. You see the Fortune-teller yonder at farder end ath'.

a'th'chamber, go toward him, do what you will with him, he shall nere find you.

Edm. Say you so, I'll try that ifaith,--- Justles him.

Pye. Hoe now, Captain? whose that justled me?

Cap. Justled you? I saw no body.

Edm. Ha, ha, ha,---say 'twas a spirit.

Cap. Shall I?---may be some spirit that haunt the circle.

Pye. O my nose, agen, pray conjure then Captain.

Pulls him by the Nose.

Edm. Troth this is extlent, I may do any knavery now and never be seen,---and now I remember me, Sir Godfrey my Uncle abus'd me tother day, and told tales of me to my Mother--- Troth now I'me invisible, I'll hit him a sound wherrit a'th'ear, when he comes out a'th'garden,---I may be reveng'd on him now finely.

Enter Sir Godfrey, Widow, Frank, Nicholas with the Chain.

Sir Godf. I have my Chain again, my Chain's found again; Edmond strikes him.

O sweet Captain, O admirable Conjurer.

Oh, what mean you by that, Nephew?

Edm. Nephew? I hope you do not know me, Uncle?

Wid. Why did you strike your Uncle, Son?

Edm. Why Captain, am I not invisible?

Cap. A good jest, George,---not now you are not sir, Why did you not see me, when I did uncharme you?

Edm. Not I, by my troth, Captain:

Then pray you pardon me, Uncle, I thought I'd been invisible when I struck you.

Sir Godf. So, you would do't? go,---y're a foolish boy, And were I not ore-come with greater joy, I'de make you taste correction.

Edm. Correction, push---no, neither you nor my Mother, shall think to whip me as you have done.

Sir Godf. Captain, my joy is such, I know not how to thank you, let me embrace you, O my sweet Chain, gladness e'en makes me giddy, rare man: 'twas just i'th' Rosemary bank, as if one should ha laid it there,---oh cunning, cunning!

Wid. Well, seeing my fortune tells me I must marry; let me marry a man of wit, a man of parts, here's a worthy Captain, and 'tis a fine Title truly la to be a Captain's Wife, a Captain's Wife, it goes very finely, beside all the world knows that a worthy Captain, is a fit Companion to any Lord, then why not a sweet bed-fellow for any Lady,---I'll have it so---

Enter Frailty.

Frail. O Mistress, Gentlemen, there's the bravest fight coming along this way.

Wid. What brave fight?

Frail. Oh, one going to burying, and another going to hanging.

Wid. A ruefull sight.

Pye. 'Sfoot Captain, I'll pawn my life the Corporal's coffin'd, and old Skirmish the souldier going to execution, and 'tis now about the time of his waking; hold out a little longer sleepy potion, and we shall have extlent admiration; for I'll take upon me the cure of him.

Enter the Coffin of the Corporal, the souldier bound, and led by Officers, the Sheriff there, Frail. Oh here they come, here they come!

Pye. Now must I close secretly with the Souldier, prevent his impatience, or else all's discovered.

Wid. O lamentable seeing, these were those Brothers, that fought and bled before our door.

Sir Godf. What they were not, Sister?

Skirm. George, look to't, I'll peach at Tiburn else.

Pye. Mum,---Gentles all, vouchsafe me audience, and you especially Master Sheriff:

Yon man is bound to execution,

Because he wounded this that now lies coffin'd?

Sher. True, true, he shall have the law,---and I know the law.

Pye. But under favour, Master Sheriff, if this man had been cured and safe agen, he should have been releas'd then?

Sher. Why, make you question of that, Sir?

Pye. Then I release him freely, and will take upon me the death that he should die, if within a little season, I do not cure him to his proper health again.

Sher. How sir? recover a dead man?

That were most strange of all. Frank comes to him.

Frank. Sweet sir, I love you dearly, and could wish my best part yours,---oh do not undertake such an impossible venture.

Pye. Love you me; then for your sweet sake I'll do't: Let me entreat the corps to be set down.

Sher. Bearers set down the Coffin,-- this is wonderfull, and worthy Stoos Chronicle.

Pye. I pray bestow the freedome of the aire upon our wholsome Art,---Masse his cheeks begin to receive natural warmth: nay good Corporal wake betime, or I shall have a longer sleep then you,---'Sfoot if he should prove dead indeed now, he were fully reveng'd upon me for making a property on him, yet I had rather run upon the Ropes, then have the Rope like a Tetter run upon me, oh---he stirs--he stirs agen---look Gentlemen, he recovers, he starts, he rises.

Sher. Oh, oh, defend us---out alas.

Pye. Nay pray be still; you'll make him more giddy else,---he knows no body yet.

Cor. Zowns: where am I? cover'd with snow? I marvel?

Pye. Nay, I knew he would swear the first thing he did, as soon as he came to life again.

Corp. 'Sfoot Hostesse---some hot porridge,---oh, oh, lay on a dozen of Fagors in the Moon Parler, there.

Pye. Lady, you must needs take a little pitty of him ifaith, and send him into your Kitchen fire.

Wid. Oh, with all my heart sir, Nicholas and Frailty, help to bear him in.

Nic. Bear him in, quatha, pray call out the Maids, I shall nere have the heart to do't indeed la.

Frail. Nor I neither, I cannot abide to handle a Ghost of all men.

Cor. 'Slood, let me see, where was I drunk last night, hah-

Wid. Oh, shall I bid you once agen take him away.

Frail. Why, we're as fearfull as you I warrant you---oh--

Wid. Away villains, bid the maids make him a Cawdle presently to settle his brain--or a posset of Sack, quickly, quickly. Exeunt, pushing in the corps.

Sher. Sir, what so ere you are, I do more then admire you.

Wid. O I, if you knew all, Master Sheriff, as you shall do, you would say then, that here were two of the rarest men within the walls of Christendome.

Sher. Two of 'em, O wonderfull: Officers I discharge you, set him free, all's in tune.

Sir Godf.

Sir God. I, and a banquet ready by this time, Master Sheriffe, to which I most cheerfully invite you, and your late prisoner there: see you this goodly Chain, sir, mum, no more words, 'twas lost and is found again; come, my inestimable Bullies, we'll talk of your noble Acts in sparkling Charnico, and instead of a Jester, we'll ha the Ghost ith' white sheet sit at upper end oth' Table.

Sheriffe. Extent merry man ifaith.

Exit.

Franck. Well, seeing I am enjoyn'd to love and marry, My foolish vow thus I casheere to aire (ry,
Which first begot it, - now love play thy part;
The Schollar reads his lecture in my heart.

Actus Quintus.

Enter in haste Master Edmond and Frailty.

Edm. This is the Marriage morning for my Mother and my Sister.

Frail. O me, Master Edmond, we shall have rare doings.

Edm. Nay go, Frailty, run to the Sexton, you know my mother will be married at Saint Antlings, hie thee, 'tis past five, bid them open the Church door, my Sister is almost ready.

Fra. What already, Master Edmond?

Edm. Nay go hie thee, first run to the Sexton, and run to the Clerk, and then run to Master Pigman the Parson, and then run to the Milliner, and then run home agen.

Frail. Here's run, run, run----

Ed. But hark, Frailty.

Fra. What, more yet?

Edm. Has the Maids remembred to strew the way to the Church.

Fra. Foh, an hour ago I helpt 'em my self.

Ed. Away, away, away, away then.

Frail. Away, away, away, away, then. Exit Frailty.

Edm. I shall have a simple Father-in-law, a brave Captain, able to beat all our street: Captain Idle, now my Lady Mother will be fitted for a delicate name, my Lady Idle, my Lady Idle, the finest name that can be for a woman, and then the Schollar, Master Pye-boord for my Sister Frances, that will be Mistresse Frances Pye-boord, Mistresse Frances Pye-boord, they'll keep a good Table I warrant you: Now all the Knights noses are put out of joynt, they may go to a Bone-setters now.

Enter Captain and Pye-boord.

Hark, hark; oh who comes here with two Torches before 'em, my sweet Captain, and my fine Schollar? oh how bravely they are shot up in one night, they look like fine Britains now me thinks, here's a gallant change ifaith; 'slid, they have hir'd men and all by the Clock.

Cap. Master Edmond, kind, honest, dainty Master Edmond.

Edm. Foh, sweet Captain Father-in-law, a rare perfume ifaith.

Pye. What, are the Brides stirring? may we steall upon 'em think'st thou, Master Edmond?

Edm. Faw, their e'ne upon readinesse I can assure you: for they were at their Torch e'ne now, by the same token I tumbled down the staires.

Pye. Alafs, poor Master Edmond.

Enter Musicians.

Cap. O, the Musicians! I prethee, Master Edmond, call 'em in and liquor 'em a little.

Edm. That I will, sweet Captain Father-in-law, and make each of them as drunk as a common Fidler.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Sir John Penny-Dub, and Moll above lacing of her cloathes.

Pen. Whewh, Mistresse Moll, Mistresse Moll.

Moll. Who's there?

Pen. 'Tis I.

Moll. Who, Sir John Penny-Dub? O you're an early Cock ifaith, who would have thought you to be so rare a stirrer?

Pen. Prethee, Moll, let me come up.

Moll. No by my faith Sir John, I'll keep you down, for you Knights are very dangerous if once you get above.

Pen. I'll not stay ifaith.

Mol. Ifaith you shall stay: for, Sir John, you must note the nature of the Climates: your Northern Wench in her own Countrey may well hold out till she be fifteen, but if she touch the South once, and come up to London, here the Chimes go presently after twelve.

Pen. O th'art a mad Wench, Moll, but I prethee make haste, for the Priest is gone before.

Moll. Do you follow him, I'll not be long after.

Exeunt.

Enter Sir Oliver Muck-hill, Sir Andrew Tipstaffe, and old Skirmish talking.

Muck. O monstrous unheard of forgery.

Tip. Knight, I never heard of such villany in our own Countrey, in my life.

Muck. Why 'tis impossible, dare you maintain your words?

Skir. Dare we? e'ne to their wezen pipes: we know all their plots, they cannot squander with us, they have knavishly abus'd us, made onely properties on's to advance their selves upon our shoulders, but they shall rue their abuses, this morning they are to be married.

Muck. 'Tis too true, yet if the Widow be not too much besotted on flights and forgeries, the revelation of their villanies will make 'em loathsome, and to that end, be it in private to you, I sent late last night to an honourable personage, to whom I am much indebted in kindnesse, as he is to me, and therefore presume upon the payment of his tongue, and that he will lay out good words for me, and to speak truth, for such needfull occasions, I onely preserve him in bond, and sometimes he may doe me more good here in the City by a free word of his mouth, then if he had paid one half in hand, and took Doomesday for tother.

Tip. Introth, sir, without soothing he it spoken, you have publisht much judgement in these few words.

Muck. For you know, what such a man utters will be thought effectually, and to weighty purpose, and therefore into his mouth we'll put the approved theame of their forgeries.

Skir. And I'll maintain it, Knight, if she'll be true.

Enter

Enter a Servant.

Muck. How now, fellow.

Serv. May it please you, sir, my Lord is newly lighted from his Coach.

Muck. Is my Lord come already? his honour's early: You see he loves me well; up before heaven, Trust me, I have found him night-capt at eleven: There's good hope yet: come, I'll relate all to him.

Exeunt.

Enter the two Bridegrooms, Captain and Scholar after them, Sir Godfrey and Edmond, Widow changed in apparel, Mistress Frances led between two Knights, Sir John Penny-dub and Moll: there meets them a Noble man, Sir Oliver Muck-hill, and Sir Andrew Tip-staff.

Nob. By your leave, Lady.

Wid. My Lord, your honour is most chafly welcome.

Nob. Madam, though I came now from Court, I come not to flatter you: upon whom can I justly cast this blot, but upon your own forehead, that know not Ink from Milk, such is the blind besotting in the state of an un-headed woman that's a Widow. For it is the property of all you that are Widows (a bandfull excepted) to hate those that honestly and carefully love you, to the maintenance of credit, state, and posterity, and strongly to doat on those, that only love you to undoe you: who regard you least, are best regarded; who hate you most, are best beloved. And if there be but one man amongst ten thousand millions of men, that is accurst, disastrous, and evilly Planeted; whom Fortune beats most, whom God hates most, and all Societies esteem least, that man is sure to be a Husband-- Such is the peevish Moon that rules your blouds. An impudent fellow best woos you, a flattering lip best wins you, or in mirth, who talks roughly, is most sweetest; nor can you distinguish truth from forgeries, mists from simplicity: witness those two deceitfull Monsters, that you have entertain'd for Bridegrooms.

Wid. Deceitfull--

Pye. All will out.

Cap. Sfoot, who has blab'd, George? that foolish Nicholas.

Nob. For, what they have besotted your easie bloud withall, were nought but forgeries, the Fortune-telling for Husbands, and the Conjuring for the Chain; Sir Godfrey heard the falshood of all: nothing but meer knavery, deceit, and cozenage.

Wid. O wonderfull! indeed I wondred that my Husband with all his craft, could not keep himself out of Purgatory.

Sir Godf. And I more wonder, that my Chain should be gon, and my Taylor had none of it.

Moll. And I wondred most of all, that I should be tyed from Marriage, having such a mind to't: come Sir John Penny-dub, fair weather on our side, the Moon has chang'd since yesternight.

Pye. The Scing of every evil is within me.

Nob. And that you may perceive I feign not with you, behold their fellow-actor in those forgeries, who full of Spleen and envy at their so sudden advancements, ravel'd all their Plot in anger.

Pye. Bafe Souldier, to reveal us.

Wid. Is't possible we should be blinded so, and our eyes open?

Nob. Widow, will you now believe that false, which too soon you believed true?

Wid. O, to my shame, I do.

Sir Godf. But under favour, my Lord, my Chain was truly lost, and strangely found again.

Nob. Resolve him of that, Souldier.

Skir. In few words, Knight, then thou wert the arch-Gull of all.

Sir Godf. How, Sir?

Skir. Nay I'll prove it: for the Chain was but hid in the Rosemary-banck all this while, and thou gotst him out of prison to Conjure for it, who did it admirably fustianly, for indeed what needed any others, when he knew where it was?

Sir Godf. O villany of villains! but how came my Chain there?

Skir. Where's, Truly la, Indeed la? he that will not Swear, but Lye; he that will not Steal, but Rob; pure Nicholas Saint Antlings.

Sir Godf. O villain! one of our Society, Deem'd alwayes holy, pure, religious:

A Puritan, a thief? when was't ever heard?

Soon we'll kill a man, then Steal, thou know'st.

Out Slave, I'll rend my Lyon from thy back--with mine own hands.

Nich. Dear Master, oh.

Nob. Nay Knight, dwell in patience.

And now, Widow, being so near the Church, 'twere great pitty, nay uncharity, to send you home again without a Husband: draw near, you of true Worship, state and credit, that should not stand so far off from a Widow, and suffer forged shapes to come between you: Not that in these I blemish the true Title of a Captain, or blot the fair margent of a Scholar: for I honour worthy and deserving parts in the one, and cherish fruitfull Virtues in the other. Come Lady, and you Virgin, bestow your eyes and your purest affections, upon men of estimation, both in Court and City, that have long wooed you, and both with their hearts and wealth, sincerely love you.

Sir Godf. Good sister, do: sweet little Frank, these are men of reputation, you shall be welcome at Court: a great credit for a Citizen, sweet sister.

Nob. Come, her silence do's consent to't.

Wid. I know not with what face.

Nob. Pah, pah, with your own face, they desire no other.

Wid. Pardon me, worthy Sirs, I and my daughter have wrong'd your loves.

Muck. 'Tis easily pardon'd, Lady, If you vouchsafe it now.

Wid. With all my soul.

Fran. And I, with all my heart.

Moll. And I, Sir John with soul, heart, lights and all.

Sir Godf. They are all mine, Moll.

Nob. Now, Lady:

What honest Spirit, but will applaud your choice, And gladly furnish you with hand and voice; A happy change, which makes e'en heaven rejoice. Come, enter in your Joyes, you shall not want, For, fathers, now I doubt it not, believe me, But that you shall have hands enough to give me.

Exeunt omnes.

A YORK-SHIRE TRAGEDY,

Not so New, as Lamentable and True.

Enter Oliver and Raphe, two Serving-men.

Oliver.

Sirra Raphe, my young Mistris is in such a pitifull passionate humour for the long absence of her Love.

Raphe. Why can you blame her, why, Apples hanging longer on the tree then when they are ripe, makes so many fallings, viz. Mad wenches because they are not gathered in time, are fain to drop of themselves, and then 'tis common you know for every man to take them up.

Oliver. Masse thou saist true, 'tis common indeed, but sirrah, is neither our young Master returned, nor our fellow Sam come from London?

Raphe. Neither of either, as the Puritan Bawd sayes. 'Slid I hear Sam, Sam's comè, here tarry, come ifaith, now my nose itches for news.

Oliv. And so doth mine elbow.

Sam calls within. Where are you there?

Sam. Boy, look you walk my horse with discretion, I have rid him simply, I warrant his skin sticks to his back with very heat, if he should catch cold and get the cough of the lungs, I were well served, were I not? What Raph and Oliver.

Am. Honest fellow Sam, welcome ifaith, what tricks hast thou brought from London?

Furnisht with things from London.

Sam. You see I am hang'd after the truest fashion, three Hats, and two Glasses bobbing upon them, two rebato wyers upon my brest, a Capcase by my side, a Brush at my back, an Almanack in my pocket, and three Bal-lats in my codpiece, nay I am the true picture of a common servingman.

Oliv. I'll swear thou art, thou maist set up when thou wilt, there's many a one begins with lesse I can tell thee, that proves a rich man ere he dies, but what's the news from London, Sam?

Raph. I that's well sed, what is the news from London, sirrah. My young Mistris keeps such a puling for her Love.

Sam. Why the more fool she, I, the more ninny-hammer she.

Oliv. Why Sam, why?

Sam. Why, he is married to another, long ago.

Amb. Faith ye jest.

Sam. Why, did you not know that till now? Why he's married, beats his wife, and has two or three children by her; for you must note, that any woman bears the more when she is beaten.

Raphe. I that's true, for she bears the blows.

Oliv. Sirrah Sam, I would not for two years wages my young Mistris knew so much, she'd run upon the left hand of her wit, and nere be her own woman again.

Sam. And I think she was blest in her Cradle, that he never came in her bed, why he has consumed all, pawn'd his Lands, and made his University Brother stand in wax for him; There's a fine phrase for a Scrivener, puh, he owes more then his skin is worth.

Oliver. Is't possible?

Sam. Nay, I'll tell you moreover, he calls his Wife whore, as familiarly as one would call Moll and Doll, and children bastards, as naturally as can be, but what have we here? I thought 'twas something pull'd down my Breeches: I quite forgot my two potting sticks, these came from London, now any thing is good here that comes from London.

Oliver. I, far fetcht you know.

Sam. But speak in your conscience ifaith, have not we as good potting sticks i'th' Country as need to be put i'th fire, the mind of a thing is all, and as thou said 'st even now, far fetcht are the best things far Ladies.

Oliv. I, and for waiting gentlewomen too.

Sam. But Raphe, is our beer sower this thunder?

Raph. No, no, it holds countenance yet.

Sam. Why then follow me, I'll teach you the finest humour to be drunk in, I learn'd it at London last week.

Amb. Faith let's hear it, let's hear it.

Sam. The bravest humour, 'twould do a man good to be drunk in it, they call it knighting in London, when they drink upon their knees.

Amb. Faith that's excellent.

Come follow me, I'll give you all the degrees of it in order.

Exeunt.

Enter Wife.

Wife. What will become of us? all will away, My husband never ceases in expence, Both to consume his credit and his house, And 'tis set down by heavens just decree, That Riots child must needs be beggery. Are these the vertues that his youth did promise?

¶ E 2

Dice

Dice and voluptuous meetings, midnight Revels,
Taking his bed with surfets. Ill befitting
The ancient honour of his House and Name :
And this not all, but that which kills me most,
When he recounts his losses and false fortunes,
The weaknesse of his state so much dejected,
Not as a man repentant, but half mad,
His fortunes cannot answer his expence :
He sits and sullenly locks up his armes,
Forgetting heaven, looks downward, which makes Him appear so dreadfull, that he frights my heart :
Walks heavily, as if his soule were earth ;
Not penitent for those his sins are past,
But vext, his money cannot make them last :
A fearfull melancholy, ungodly sorrow.
Oh yonder he comes, now in despite of ills
I'll speak to him, and I will hear him speak,
And do my best to drive it from his heart.

Enter Husband.

Huf. Pox of the last throw, it made
Five hundred Angels vanish from my sight :
I'me damn'd, I'me damn'd, the Angels have forlook me ;
Nay 'tis certainly true : for he that has no coyn,
Is damn'd in this world ; he's gone, he's gone.

Wife. Dear Husband.

Huf. Oh ! most punishment of all, I have a Wife.

Wife. I doe entreat you as you love your soule,
Tell me the cause of this your discontent.

Huf. A vengeance strip thee naked, thou art cause,
Effect, quality, property, thou, thou, thou. Exit.

Wife. Bad turn'd to worse ?

Both beggery of the soule as of the body,
And so much unlike himself at first,
As if some vexed spirit had got his form upon him.

Enter Husband again.

He comes again,
He sayes I am the cause, I never yet
Spoke lesse then words of duty and of love.

Huf. If marriage be honourable, then Cuckolds are honourable, for they cannot be made without marriage.
Fool, what meant I to marry to get Beggars ?
Now must my eldest Son be a Knave or nothing ; he cannot live but upo' fool, for he will have no Land to maintain him : that mortgage fits like a snaffle upon mine inheritance, and makes me chaw upon Iron.

My second Son must be a promoter, and my third a Thief, or an under-putter, a Slave Pander.
Oh beggery, beggery, to what base uses doth it put a man.
I think the Devil scorns to be a Bawd :
He beares himself more proudly, has more care on his credite.

Base, slavish, abject, filthy poverty.

Wi. Good sir, by all our vowes I doe beseech you,
Shew me the true cause of your discontent.

Huf. Mony, mony, mony, and thou must supply me.

Wi. Alas, I am the least cause of your discontent.
Yet what is mine, either in Rings or Jewels,
Use to your own desire, but I beseech you,
As you are a Gentleman by many bloods,
Though I my self be out of your respect,
Think on the state of these three lovely boyes
You have been Father to.

Huf. Puh, Bastards, Bastards, Bastards, begot in tricks, begot in tricks.

Wi. Heaven knowes how those words wrong me,
But I'll endure these griefs among a thousand more :
Oh call to mind your Lands already morgag'd,
Your self wound into debts, your hopefull Brother
At the University into bonds for you,
Like to be seiz'd upon. And-----

Huf. Ha done, thou Harlot,
Whom though for fashion I married,
I never could abide. Think'st thou thy words
Shall kill my pleasure ? fall off to thy friends,
Thou and thy Bastards beg, I will not bate
A whit in humour : Midnight still I love you,
And revel in your company : curb'd in ?
Shall it be said in all societies,
That I broke custome ? that I flagd in money ?
No, those thy Jewels I will play as freely,
As when my state was fullest.

Wife. Be it so.

Huf. Nay I protest, and take that for an earnest,
He spurns her.

I will for ever hold thee in contempt,
And never touch the Sheets that cover thee,
But be divorc't in bed, till thou consent,
Thy dowry shall be sold to give new life
Unto those pleasures which I most affect.

Wife. Sir, do but turn a gentle eye on me,
And what the law shall give me leave to do,
You shall command.

Huf. Look it be done, shall I want dust,
And like a Slave wear nothing in my pockets,
Holds his Hands in his Pockets.

But my hands to fill them up with nayles ?
Oh much against my blood, let it be done,
I was never made to be a loker on :
A Bawde to Dice ; I'll shake the Drabs my self,
And make them yield, I say look it be done.

Wife. I take my leave, it shall. Exit.

Huf. Speedily, speedily, I hate the very hour I chose a Wife, a trouble, trouble, three Children like three evils hang upon me, sic, sic, sic, strumpet and bastards, strumpet and bastards.

Enter three Gentlemen, hearing him.

1. Gent. Still do these loathsome thoughts jar on your Tongue ?

Your self to stain the honour of your Wife,
Nobly descended ; those whom men call mad,
Endanger others, but he's more then mad
That wounds himself, whose own words
Do proclaime it is not fit, I pray forsake it.

2. Gen. Good sir, let modesty reprove you.

3. Gen. Let honest kindness sway so much with you.

Huf. God den, I thank you, sir, how do you ? adieu, I am glad to see you, farewell Instructions, Admonitions.
Exeunt Gent.

Enter a Servant.

How now sirra ? what would you ?

Ser. Onely to certifie you, sir, that my Mistresse was met by the way, by them who were sent for her up to London by her honourable Uncle, your Worships late Guardian.

Huf. So, sir, then she is gone, and so may you be,
But

But let her look that the thing be done she wots of,
Or hell will stand more pleasant then her house at home.
Exit Servant.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Well or ill met, I care not.

Huf. No nor I.

Gent. I am come with confidence to chide you.

Huf. Who me ? chide me ? do't finely then , let it not move me, for if thou chid'st me angry, I shall strike.

Gent. Strike thine own follies, for it is they Deserve to be well beaten ; we are now in private,
There's none but thou and I, thou art fond and peevish,
An unclean Rioter, thy lands and credit
Lie now both sick of a consumption,
I am sorry for thee ; that man spends with shame,
That with his riches doth consume his name,
And such art thou.

Huf. Peace.

Gent. No, thou shalt hear me further.
Thy fathers and fore-fathers worthy honours,
Which were our Countrey monuments, our grace,
Follies in thee begin now to deface.
The spring time of thy youth did fairly promise
Such a most fruitfull summer to thy friends,
It scarce can enter into mens beliefs,
Such dearth should hang on thee, we that see it,
Are sorry to believe it : in thy change,
This voice into all places will be hurld :
Thou and the Devil has deceiv'd the world.

Huf. I'll not endure thee.

Gent. But of all the worst,
Thy virtuous wife, right honourably allied,
Thou hast proclaim'd a strumpet.

Huf. Nay then I know thee,
Thou art her Champion thou, her private friend,
The party you wor on.

Gent. Oh ignoble thought,
I am past my patient blood, shall I stand idle
And see my reputation toucht to death ?

Huf. This has gal'd you, has it ?

Gent. No monster, I prove
My thoughts did onely tend to virtuous love.

Huf. Love of her virtues ? there it goes.

Gent. Base spirit, to lay thy hate upon
The fruitfull honour of thine own bed.

They fight, and the Husband is hurt.

Huf. Oh.

Gent. Wilt thou yield it yet ?

Huf. Sir, sir, I have not done with you.

Gent. I hope, nor ne're shall do. Fight again.

Huf. Have you got tricks ? are you in cunning with me ?

Gent. No, plain and right.

He needs no cunning that for truth doth fight.

Husband falls down.

Huf. Hard fortune, am I level'd with the ground ?

Gent. Now, sir, you lie at mercy.

Huf. I, you slave.

Gent. Alas, that hate should bring us to our grave,
You see, my Sword's not thisty for your life,
I am sorrier for your wound, then your self ;
Y'are of a virtuous house, shew virtuous deeds,
'Tis not your honour, 'tis your folly bleeds :
Much good has been expected in your life,
Cancel not all mens hopes, you have a Wife,
Kind and obedient : heap not wrongfull shame

On her and your posterity : let only sin be sore,
And by this fall, rise never to fall more.
And so I leave you. Exit.

Huf. Has the dog left me then,
After his tooth hath left me ? Oh, my heart
Would fain leap after him, revenge I say,
I'm mad to be reveng'd, my strumpet Wife,
It is thy quarrel that rips thus my flesh,
And makes my breast spit blood, but thou shalt bleed :
Vanquish't ? got down ? unable e'en to speak ?
Surely 'tis want of money makes men weak,
I, 'twas that ore-threw me, I'de nere been down else. Exit.

Enter Wife in a riding-sute, with a Serving-man.

Serv. Faith Mistress, if it may not be presumption
In me to tell you so, for his excuse
You had small reason, knowing his abuse.

Wife. I grant I had, but alas,
Why should our faults at home be spread abroad ?
'Tis grief enough within doors ; at first sight
Mine Uncle could run o're his prodigal life
As perfectly, as if his serious eye
Had numbred all his follies :
Knew of his morgag'd lands, his friends in bonds,
Himself withered with debt ; and in that minute
Had I added his usage and unkindness,
'Twould have confounded every thought of good :
Where now, fathering his riots on his youth,
Which time and tame experience will shake off,
Guessing his kindness to me (as I smooth'd him
With all the skill I had) though his deserts
Are in form uglier then an unshapt Bear.
He's ready to prefer him to some Office
And place at Court : a good and sure releif
To all his stooping fortunes, 'twill be a means, I hope,
To make new league between us, and redeem
His virtues with his lands.

Serv. I should think so : Mistress, if he should not now be kind to you, and love you, and cherish you up, I should think the Devil himself kept open house in him.

Wife. I doubt not but he will now, prythee leave me,
I think I hear him coming.

Serv. I am gone. Exit.

Wife. By this good means I shall preserve my lands,
And free my husband out of Usurers hands :
Now there is no need of sale, my Uncle's kind,
I hope, if ought, this will content his mind.
Here comes my husband. Enter Husband.

Huf. Now, are you come ? where's the money ? let's see the money, is the rubbish sold ? those wiseakers your Lands, why then, the money, where is it ? poure it down, down with it, down with it ; I say pour't on the ground, let's see it, let's see it.

Wife. Good sir, keep but in patience, and I hope
My words shall like you well, I bring you better
Comfort then the sale of my Dowry.

Huf. Ha, what's that ?

Wife. Pray do not fright me, sir, but vouchsafe me hearing. My Uncle, glad of your kindness to me and mild use-age (for so I made it to him) hath in pity of your declining fortunes, provided a place for you at Court, of worth and credit : which so much overjoyed me ----

Huf. Out on thee, filth, over and over-joyed,
When I'm in torment. spurns her.
Thou politick whore, subtiller then nine Devils, was this

this thy journey to Nunck, to set down the history of me, my state and fortunes:

Shall I, that dedicated my self to pleasure, be now confin'd in service to crouch, and stand like an old man ith' hams, my Hat off? I that could never abide to uncover my head ith' Church: base slut, this fruit beares thy complaints.

Wife. Oh, heaven knowes,
That my complaints were praises, and best words
Of you, and your estate; onely my friends
Knew of your morgag'd Lands, and were posselt
Of every accident before I came.
If you suspect it but a plot in me,
To keep my dowry, or for mine own good,
Or my poor Childrens (though it suits a mother
To shew a naturall care in their reliefs)
Yet I'll forget my self to calme your blood,
Consume it, as your pleasure counsels you,
And all I wish, e'ne Clemency affords,
Give me but pleasant looks, and modest words.

Huf. Mony, whore, mony, or I'll----- draws his dagger.

Enter a Servant hastily.

What the Devil? how now? thy hasty newes?

Ser. May it please you, sir.

Huf. What, may I not look upon my Dagger?
Speak, Villain, or I will execute the point on thee:
quick, short.

Ser. Why sir, a Gentleman from the University staves below to speak with you.

Huf. From the University? so, University,
That long word runs through me.

Exit.

Wife. Was ever Wife so wretchedly beset?
Had not this newes stept in between, the point
Had offered violence unto my breast.
That which some women call great misery,
Would shew but little here, would scarce be seen
Among my miseries: I may compare
For wretched fortunes, with all Wives that are,
Nothing will please him, untill all be nothing.
He calls it slavery to be prefer'd,
A place of credit, a base servitude.
What shall become of me, and my poor Children?
Two here, and one at Nurse, my pretty beggars,
I see how ruine with a palse hand
Begins to shake the ancient seat to dust:
The heavy weight of sorrow draws my lids
Over my dankish eyes: I can scarce see;
Thus grief will last, it wakes and sleeps with me.

Enter the Husband with the Master of the Colledge.

Huf. Please you draw near, sir, y'are exceeding welcome.

Ma. That's my doubt, I fear I come not to be welcome.

Huf. Yes, howsoever.

Ma. 'Tis not my fashion, sir, to dwell in long circumstance, but to be plain and effectual; therefore to the purpose.

The cause of my setting forth was pittious and lamentable; that hopefull young Gentleman your Brother, whose virtues we all love dearly; through your default and unnatural negligence, lies in bond executed for your debt, a prisoner, all his studies amazed, his hope struck dead, and the pride of his youth muffled in these dark clouds of oppression.

Huf. Hum, hum, hum.

Ma. Oh you have kill'd the towardest hope of all our University, wherefore without repentance and amends, expect ponderous and sudden judgements to fall grievously upon you; your Brother, a man who profited in his divine employments, and might have made ten thousand soules fit for heaven, now by your carelesse courses cast in prison, which you must answer for, and assure your spirit it will come home at length.

Huf. Oh God, oh.

Ma. Wise men think ill of you, others speak ill of you, no man loves you, nay, even those whom honesty condemns, condemns you: and take this from the virtuous affection I bear your Brother, never look for prosperous hour, good thought, quiet sleeps, contented walks, nor any thing that makes man perfect, till you redeem him: what is your answer? how will you bestow him? upon desperate misery, or better hopes? I suffer till I hear your answer.

Huf. Sir, you have much wrought with me, I feel you in my soule, you are your Arts master.
I never had sence till now; your syllables have cleft me, both for your words and pains I thank you: I cannot but acknowledge grievous wrongs done to my Brother, mighty, mighty, mighty, mighty wrongs.
Within there.

Enter a Servingman.

Huf. Fill me a Bowle of Wine. Alas poor Brother, Bruised with an execution for my sake.

Ma. A bruise indeed makes many a mortall sore,
Till the Grave cure them. Enter with Wine.

Huf. Sir, I begin to you, y'ave chid your welcome.

Ma. I could have wisht it better for your sake,
I pledge you, sir, to the kind man in prison.

Huf. Let it be so.

Now, sir, if you so please, to spend but a few minutes in walking about my grounds below, my man shall here attend you: I doubt not but by that time to be furnisht of a sufficient answer, and therein my Brother fully satisfied.

Ma. Good sir, in that the Angels would be pleased, and the worlds murmures calm'd, and I should say, I set forth then upon a lucky day. Exit.

Huf. O thou confus'd man, thy pleasant sins have undone thee, thy damnation has begger'd thee, that heaven should say we must not sin, and yet made women: gives our senses way to find pleasure, which being found, confounds us, why should we know those things so much misuse us? Oh would virtue had been forbidden, we should then have proved all virtuous, for 'tis our blood to love what we are forbidden, what man would have been forbidden, what man would have been fool to a beast, and zany to a swine, to shew tricks in the mire, what is there in three Dice, to make a man draw thrice three thousand acres into the compasse of a little round table, and with the Gentlemans palse in the hand shake out his posterity, thieves, or beggars; 'tis done, I have don't ifaith: terrible, horrible misery,-----how well was I left, very well, very well.

My Lands shewed like a Full-Moon about me, but now the Moon's in the last quarter, waining, waining, and I am mad to think that Moon was mine:
mine

mine and my fathers, and my fore-fathers generations, generations, down goes the house of us, down, down it sinks: Now is the name a beggar, begs in me that name which hundreds of years has made this Shire famous; in me and my posterity runs out.

In my seed five are made miserable besides my self, my Riot is now my Brothers Jaylor, my Wifes fighing, my three boyes penury, and mine own confusion.

He tears his hair.

Why sit my hairs upon my curst head?
Will not this poison scatter them? oh my Brother's
In execution among devils that stretch him:
And make him give; and I in want,
Not able for to live, nor to redeem him.
Divines and dying men may talk of hell,
But in my heart her several torments dwell,
Slavery and misery. Who in this case
Would not take up money upon his soul?
Pawn his salvation, live at interest:
I, that did ever in abundance dwell,
For me to want, exceeds the throws of hell.

Enter his little son, with a Top and Scourge.

Son. What aile you father, are you not well, I cannot scourge my Top as long as you stand so: you take up all the room with your wide legs, puh, you cannot make me afraid with this, I fear no vizards, nor bugbears.

He takes up the child by the skirts of his long coat in one hand, and draws his dagger with the other.

Huf. Up sir, for here thou hast no inheritance left.

Son. Oh what will you do father, I am your white boy.

Strikes him.

Huf. Thou shalt be my red boy, take that.

Son. Oh you hurt me father.

Huf. My eldest beggar, thou shalt not live to ask an usurer bred, to cry at a great mans gate, or follow, good your Honour by a Coach, no, nor your brother: 'tis charity to brain you.

Son. How shall I learn now my head's broke?

Huf. Bleed, bleed, rather then beg, beg, stabs him.
Be not thy names disgrace:
Spurn thou thy fortunes fist, if they be base:
Come view thy second Brother: Fates,
My childrens blood shall spin into your faces,
You shall see,
How confidently we scorn beggery. Exit with his son.

Enter a maid with a child in her armes, the Mother by her asleep.

Maid. Sleep sweet babe, sorrow makes thy mother sleep,
It boads small good when heaviness falls so deep,
Hush, pretty boy, thy hopes might have bin better,
'Tis lost at Dice, what ancient honour won,
Hard when the father plaies away the Son:
Nothing but misery serves in this house,
Ruine and desolation; oh.

Enter Husband with the Boy bleeding.

Huf. Whore, give me that Boy.

He strives with her for the child.

Maid. Oh help, help, out alas, murder, murder.

Huf. Are you gossiping, prating sturdy Quean,
I'll break your clamour with your neck,
Down stayers; tumble, tumble, headlong,

He throws her down.

So, the surest way to charme a womans tongue,
Is break her neck, a Polititian did it.

Son. Mother, mother, I am kill'd mother.

His wife awakes, and catches up the youngest.

Wife. Ha, who's that cry'd? O me my children,
Both, both; bloody, bloody.

Huf. Strumpet, let go the boy, let go the beggar.

Wife. Oh my sweet husband.

Huf. Filth, Harlot.

Wife. Oh, what will you do, dear husband?

Huf. Give me the bastard.

Wife. Your own sweet boy.

Huf. There are too many beggars,

Wife. Good my husband.

Huf. Do'st thou prevent me still?

Wife. Oh God!

Stabs at the child in her armes, and gets it from her.

Huf. Have at his heart.

Wife. Oh my dear boy.

Huf. Brat, thou shalt not live to shame thy house.

Wife. Oh heaven.

She is hurt and sinks down.

Huf. And perish, now be gone,
There's whores enow, and want would make thee one.

Enter a lusty Servant.

Ser. Oh sir, what deeds are these?

Huf. Base slave, my vassail,

Com'st thou between my fury to question me?

Ser. Were you the devil, I would hold you, sir.

Huf. Hold me? presumption, I'll undo thee for it.

Ser. 'Sbloud, you have undone us all, sir.

Huf. Tug at thy Master?

Ser. Tug at a monster.

Huf. Have I no power? shall my slave fetter me?

Ser. Nay then the devil wrestles, I am thrown.

Husband overcomes him.

Huf. Oh villain, now I'll tug thee, now I'll tear thee, set quick spurs to my vassail, bruise him, trample him;
so, I think thou wilt not follow me in haste.
My horse stands ready saddled, away, away,
Now to my brat at nurse, my sucking beggar;
Fates, I'll not leave you one to trample on.

The Master meets him.

Mr. How is't with you sir, me-thinks you look of a distracted colour.

Huf. Who, I sir? 'tis but your fancy,
Please you walk in, sir, and I'll soon resolve you,
I want one small part to make up the sum,
And then my brother shall rest satisfied.

M. I shall be glad to see it, sir, I'll attend you. Exeunt.

Ser. Oh, I am scarce able to heave up my self,
He has so bruised me with his devillish weight,
And torn my flesh with his blood-hasty spur,
A man before of easie constitution,
Till now hells power supplied, to his souls wrong,
Oh how damnation can make weak men strong.

Enter Master and two servants.

Ser. Oh the most pitious deed, sir, since you came.

Mr. A deadly greeting; hath he sum'd up these

To satisfie his brother? here's another,
And by the bleeding infants, the dead mother.

Wife. Oh, oh!

Ma. Surgeons, Surgeons, she recovers life,
One of his men all faint and bloudied.

1. Ser. Follow, our murderous Master has took Horse to kill his child at nurse, oh follow quickly.

Ma. I am the readiest, it shall be my charge
To raise the Town upon him.

Exit Master and Servants.

1. Ser. Good sir follow him.

Wife. Oh my children.

1. Ser. How is it my most afflicted Mistress?

Wife. Why do I now recover? why half live?

To see my children bleed before mine eyes,
A fight, able to kill a Mothers breast without an Executioner; what, art thou mangled too?

1. Ser. I thinking to prevent what his quick mischiefs had so soon acted, came and rusht upon him,
We struggled, but a fouler strength then his
Ore-threw me with his armes, then he did bruise me,
And rent my flesh, and rob'd me of my hair,
Like a man mad in execution,
Made me unfit to rise and follow him.

Wife. What is it hath beguil'd him of all grace?
And stole away humanity from his breast,
To slay his children, purposed to kill his wife,
And spoil his servants.

Enter two Servants.

Boch. Please you leave this accursed place,
A Surgeon waits within.

Wife. Willing to leave it:
'Tis guilty of sweet blood, innocent blood,
Murder hath took this chamber with full hands,
And will not out as long as the house stands. Exeunt.

Enter Husband, as being thrown off his horse, and falls.

Huf. Oh stumbling Jade, the spavin overtake thee,
The fifty diseases stop thee:
Oh, I am sorely bruis'd, plague founder thee,
Thou run'st at ease and pleasure, heart of chance,
To throw me now, within a flight o'th'Town,
In such plain even ground,
Sfoot, a man may dice upon it, and throw away the Meadows, ah filthy beast.

Cry within. Follow, follow, follow.

Huf. Ha? I hear sounds of men, like hue and cry;
Up, up, and struggle to my horse, make on,
Dispatch that little Beggar, and all's done.

Cry within. Here, this way, this way.

Huf. At my back? oh,
What fate have I, my limbs deny me to go,
My will is bated, Beggery claims a part,
Oh I could here reach to the infants heart.

Enter Master of the Colledge, three Gentlemen, and others with Halberds.

All. Here, here, yonder, yonder.

Ma. Unnatural, flinty, more then barbarous,
The Scythians in their marble-hearted fates,
Could not have acted more remorseless deeds

In their relentless natures, then these of thine:

Was this the answer I long waited on,
The satisfaction for thy prisoned brother?

Huf. He can have no more of us, then our skins,
And some of them want but fleaing.

1. Gent. Great sinnes have made him impudent.

Ma. Has shed so much blood, that he cannot blush.

2. Gent. Away with him, bear him to the Justices,
A Gentleman of worship dwells at hand
There shall his deeds be blazed.

Huf. Why all the better,
My glory 'tis to have my action known,
I grieve for nothing, but I mist of one.

Ma. There's little of a father in that grief:
Bear him away. Exeunt.

Enter a Knight, with two or three Gentlemen.

Knight. Endangered so his Wife, murdered his Children?

1. Gent. So the cry goes.

Knight. I am sorry I e'reknew him.
That ever he took life and natural being
From such an honoured stock, and fair descent,
Till this black minute without stain or blemish.

1. Gent. Here come the men.

Enter the Master of the Colledge, and the rest with the Prisoner.

Knight. The Serpent of his house: I'me sorry for this time, that I am in place of justice.

Ma. Please you, sir.

Knight. Do not repeat it twice, I know too much,
Would it had nere been thought on.
Sir, I bleed for you.

1. Gent. Your father's sorrows are alive in me:
What made you shew such monstrous cruelty?

Huf. In a word, sir,
I have consum'd all, plaid away long-acre,
And I thought it the charitablest deed I could do,
To cozen Beggery, and knock my house o'th'head.

Kni. I do not think, but in to morrow's judgement,
The terrour will sit closer to your soul,
When the dread thought of Death remembers you;
To further which, take this sad voice from me,
Never was aet plaid more unnaturally.

Huf. I thank you, Sir.

Knight. Go lead him to the Jayle.
Where justice claims all, there must pitty fail.

Huf. Come, come, away with me.

Exit Prisoner.

Ma. Sir, you deserve the worship of you place,
Would all did so, in you the Law is grace.

Knight. It is my wish it should be so;
Ruinous man, the desolation of his house,
The blot upon his predecessor's honour'd name:
That man is nearest shame, that is past shame. Exit.

Enter Husband with the Officers, the Master and Gentlemen, as going by his house.

Huf. I am right against my house, seat of my Ancestors: I hear my Wife's alive, but much endangered; let me intreat to speak with her before the prison gripe me.

Enter

Enter his Wife brought in a Chair,

Gent. See here she comes of her self.

Wife. Oh my sweet husband, my dear distressed husband, now in the hands of unrelenting laws, my greatest sorrow, my extreamest bleeding; now my soul bleeds.

Hus. How now? kind to me? did not I wound thee, leave thee for dead?

Wife. Tut, far greater wounds did my breast feel, Unkindnesse strikes a deeper wound then steel, You have been still unkind to me.

Hus. Faith, and so I think I have; I did my murders roughly out of hand, Desperate and sudden, but thou hast devis'd A fine way now to kill me, thou hast given mine eyes Seaven wounds apiece; now glides the devil from Me, departs at every joint, heaves up my nails. Oh catch him new torments, that were nere invented: Bind him one thousand more you blessed Angels, In that bottomlesse pit, let him not rise To make men act unnatural Tragedies, To spread into a Father, and in fury, Make him his childrens executioners, Murder his wife, his servants, and who not? For that man's dark, where heaven is quite forgot.

Wife. Oh my repentant husband.

Hus. My dear soul, whom I too much have wrong'd For death I die, and for this have I long'd.

Wife. Thou should'st not (be assured) for these faults Die, if the law could forgive as soon as I.

Children laid out.

Hus. What sight is yonder?

Wife. Oh our two bleeding boyes Laid forth upon the threshold.

Hus. Here's weight enough to make a heart-string crack, Oh were it lawfull that your pretty souls Might look from heaven into your fathers eyes, Then should you see the penitent glasses melt, And both your murders shoot upon my cheeks,

But you are playing in the Angels laps, And will not look on me, Who void of grace, kill'd you in beggery.

Oh that I might my wishes now attain, I should then wish you living were again; Though I did beg with you, which thing I fear'd, Oh 'twas the enemy my eyes so becar'd.

Oh would you could pray heaven me to forgive, That will unto my end repentant live.

Wife. It makes me e'en forget all other sorrows, And leave part with this.

Officer. Come, will you go?

Hus. I'll kisse the bloud I spilt, and then I'll go, My soul is bloudied, well may my lips be so.

Farewell dear Wife, now thou and I must part, I of thy wrongs, repent me with my heart.

Wife. Oh stay. thou shalt not go.

Hus. That's but in vain, you see it must be so.

Farewell ye bloody ashes of my boyes, My punishments are their eternal joyes.

Let every father look well into his deeds,

And then their heirs may prosper, while mine bleeds.

Exennt Husband with Officers.

Wife. More wretched am I now in this distresse. Then former sorrows made me.

Mr. Oh kind Wife, be comforted, One joy is yet unmurdered, you have a boy at nurse, your joy's in him.

Wife. Dearer then all is my poor husband's life: Heaven give my body strength, which is yet faint With much expence of bloud, and I will kneel, Sue for his life, number up all my friends, To plead for pardon for my dear husband's life.

Mr. Was it in man to wound so kind a creature? I'll ever praise a woman for thy sake.

I must return with grief, my answer's set,

I shall bring news weighes heavier then the debt.

Two Brothers; the one in bond lies overthrowen,

This, on a deadlier execution.

The Tragedy of L O C R I N E, the eldest Son of King B R U T U S.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Atey with Thunder and Lightning, all in black, with a burning Torch in one hand, and a bloudie Sword in the other hand; and presently let there come forth a Lion running after a Bear or any other beast, then come forth an Archer, who must kill the Lion in a dumb show, and then departs. Remain Atey.

Atey.

In pœnam sistatur & Vmbæ.

A Mighty Lion, ruler of the woods,
Of wondrous strength and great proportion,
With hideous noise scaring the trembling trees,

With yelling clamours shaking all the earth,
Travest the groves, and chac't the wandring beasts:
Long did he range among the shadie trees,
And drave the filly beasts before his face:
When suddenly from out a thorny bush
A dreadfull Archer with his bow ybent,
Wounded the Lion with a dismal shaft,
So he him strook, that it drew forth the blood,
And fill'd his furious heart with fretting ire;
But all in vain he threatneth teeth and pawes,
And sparkleth fire from forth his flaming eyes,
For the sharp shaft gave him a mortal wound:
So valiant Brute, the terrour of the world,
Whose only looks did scare his enemies,
The Archer Death brought to his latest end.
Oh what may long abide above this ground,
In state of blis and healthfull happines!

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Brutus carried in a chair, Locrine, Camber, Albanast, Corineius, Guendelin, Assaracus, Debon, Thrasimachus.

Brutus. Most loyal Lords, and faithfull followers,
That have with me, unworthy General,
Passed the greedy gulf of th'Ocean,
Leaving the confines of fair Italie,
Behold, your Brutus draweth nigh his end,

And I must leave you, though against my will:
My sinews shrunk, my numbred senses fail,
A chilling cold possesseth all my bones,
Black ugly death with visage pale and wan,
Presents himself before my dazeled eyes,
And with his dart prepared is to strike:
These armes, my Lords, these never daunted armes,
That oft have quell'd the courage of my foes,
And eke dismay'd my neighbour's arrogance,
Now yield to death, o'relaid with crooked age,
Devoid of strength and of their proper force;
Even as the lusty Cedar worn with yeares,
That far abroad her dainty odour throws,
'Mongst all the daughters of proud Lebanon,
This heart, my Lords, this ne're appalled heart,
That was a terror to the bording lands,
A dolefull scourge unto my neighbour Kings,
Now by the weapons of impartial death,
Is clove asunder and bereft of life;
As when the sacred oak with thunderbolts,
Sent from the fierie circuit of the heavens,
Sliding along the aires celestial vaults,
Is rent and cloven to the very roots.
In vain therefore I struggle with this foe,
Then welcome death, since God will have it so.

Assar. Alas my Lord, we sorrow at your case,
And grieve to see your person vexed thus;
But whatsoe're the fates determin'd have,
It lieth not in us to disannull,
And he that would annihilate his mind,
Soaring with Icarus too near the Sun,
May catch a fall with young Bellerophon:
For when the fatal sisters have decreed
To separate us from this earthly mould,
No mortal force can countermand their minds:
Then, worthy Lord, since there's no way but one,
Cease your laments, and leave your grievous moan.

Corin. Your Highness knows how many victories,
How many Trophees I erected have Triumphantly in every place we came;
The Grecian Monarch, warlike Pandrasus
And all the crew of the Molossians:
Goffarius the arme-strong King of Gantes,
Have felt the force of our victorious armes,
And to their cost beheld our Chivalrie,
Where ere Ancora handmaid of the Sun,
Where ere the Sun-bright gardiant of the day,

Where

Where e're the joyfull day with cheerfull light,
Where e're the light illuminates the world,
The Trojans glory flies with golden wings,
Wings that do soar beyond fell envious flight,
The fame of Brutus and his followers
Pierceth the skies, and with the skies the throne
Of mighty Jove, Commander of the world,
Then, worthy Brutus, leave these sad laments,
Comfort your self with this your great renown,
And fear not Death, though he seem terrible.

Brutus. Nay, Corinus, you mistake my mind,
In construing wrong the cause of my complaints,
I fear'd not t' yield my self to fatall death,
God knowes it was the least of all my thoughts,
A greater care torments my very bones,
And makes me tremble at the thought of it,
And in your Lordings doth the substance lie.

Thrafi. Most noble Lord, if ought your loyal Peers
Accomplish inay, to ease your lingring grief,
I in the name of all protest to you,
That we will boldly enterprise the same,
Were it to enter to black Tartarus,
Where triple Cerberus with his venomous throat,
Scareth the Ghosts with high resounding noyse,
We'll either rent the bowels of the earth,
Searching the entrails of the brutish earth,
Or with his Ixions overdaring soon,
Be bound in Chains of everduring Steele.

Bru. Then hearken to your Sovereign's latest words,
In which I will unto you all unfold,
Our royall mind and resolute intent.
When golden Hebe, Daughter to great Jove,
Cover'd my manly Cheeks with youthfull Down,
Th'unhappy slaughter of my lucklesse Sire,
Drove me and old Asarachus mine Eame,
As exiles from the bounds of Italy,
So that perforce we were constrain'd to flye
To Grecians Monarch, noble Pandrasus,
There I alone did undertake your cause,
There I restor'd your antique liberty,
Though Grecia frown'd, and all Molossia storm'd,
Though brave Antigonus, with martiall band,
In pitched field encountred me and mine,
Though Pandrasus and his contributaries,
With all the rout of their confederates,
Sought to deface our glorious memory,
And wipe the name of Trojans from the earth :
Him did I captivate with this mine Arme,
And by compulsion forc't him to agree
To certain Articles, which there we did propound,
From Grecia through the boisterous Hellepont,
We came into the Fields of Lestrigon,
Whereat our Brother Corineus was ;
Which when we passed the Cicilian gulf,
And so transfretting the Illician sea,
Arrived on the coasts of Aquitain ;
Where with an Army of his barbarous Gaules
Goffarius and his Brother Gathelus
Encountering with our host, sustain'd the foile,
And for your sakes my Turnus there I lost :
Turnus that slew six hundred men at Armes
All in an hour, with his sharp Battle-Axe:
From thence upon the stronds of Albion
To Cornus Haven happily we came,
And quell'd the Giants, come of Albions race,
With Gogmagog, Son to Samotheus,

The curst Captain of that damned crew,
And in that Isle at length I placed you.
Now let me see if my laborious toyles,
If all my care, if all my grievous wounds,
If all my diligence were well employ'd.

Corin. When first I followed thee and thine (brave King)
I hazarded my life and dearest blood,
To purchase favour at your Princely hands,
And for the same in dangerous attempts
In sundry conflicts, and in divers broyles,
I shew'd the courage of my manly minde :
For this I combated with Gathelus,
The Brother to Goffarius of Gaul :
For this I fought with furious Gogmagog,
A savage Captain of a savage crew :
And for these deeds brave Cornwall I receiv'd,
A gratefull gift given by a gracious King ;
And for this gift, this life and dearest blood,
Will Corineus spend for Brutus good.

Deb. And what my friend, brave Prince, hath vow'd
The same will Debon doe unto his end. (to you,

Bru. Then, loyal Peers, since you are all agreed,
And resolute to follow Brutus hoasts,
Favour my Sons, favour those Orphans, Lords,
And shield them from the dangers of their foes.
Locrine, the Column of my Family,
And onely Pillar of my weakned age:
Locrine, draw near, draw near unto thy Sire,
And take thy latest blessings at his hands;
And for thou art the eldest of my Sons,
Be thou a Captain to thy Brethren,
And imitate thy aged Fathers steps,
Which will conduct thee to true honours gate :
For if thou follow sacred virtues lore,
Thou shalt be crowned with a Lawrel branch,
And wear a wreathe of sempiternall fame,
Sorted amongst the glorious happy ones.

Locrin. If Locrine do not follow your advice,
And beare himself in all things like a Prince
That seeks to amplifie the great renown,
Left unto him for an inheritance
By those that were his Ancestours,
Let me be flung into the Ocean,
And swallowed in the bowels of the earth.
Or let the ruddy lightning of great Jove,
Descend upon this my devoted head.

Brutus taking Guendoline by the hand.

Bru. But for I see you all to be in doubt,
Who shall be matched with our Royal Son,
Locrine, receive this present at my hand :
A gift more rich then are the wealthy Mines
Found in the Bowels of America.
Thou shalt be spoused to fair Guendoline :
Love her, and take her, for she is thine own,
If so thy Uncle and her self do please.

Corin. And herein how your Highnesse honours me,
It cannot nowbe in my speech exprest :
For carefull Parents glory not so much
At their honour and promotion,
As for to see the issue of their blood
Seated in honour and prosperity.

Guend. And far be it from my pure Maiden thoughts,
To contradict her aged Fathers will.
Therefore since he to whom I must obey,
Hath given me now unto your Royal Self,
I will not stand aloof from off the lure,

Like crafty Dames that most of all deny
That, which they most desire to possesse.

Brutus turning to Locrine.

Locrine kneeling.

Then now my son thy part is on the stage,
For thou must bear the person of a King.

Puts the Crown on his head.

Locrine stand up, and wear the regal Crown,
And think upon the state of Majesty,
That thou with honour well maist wear the Crown,
And if thou tendrest these my latest words,
As thou requir'st my soul to be at rest,
As thou desirest thine own security,
Cherish and love thy new betrothed wife.

Locrine. No longer let me well enjoy the Crown,
Then I do peerlesse Guendoline.

Brut. Camber.

Cam. My Lord.

Brut. The glory of mine age,
And darling of thy mother Juneger,
Take thou the South for thy dominion,
From thee there shall proceed a royal race,
That shall maintain the honor of this land,
That sway the regal scepter with their hands.

Turning to Alabanact.

And Albanact thy fathers onely joy,
Youngest in years, but not the young'st in mind,
A perfect pattern of all chivalrie,
Take thou the North for thy dominion,
A country full of hills and ragged rocks,
Replenished with fierce untamed beasts,
As correspondent to thy martial thoughts.
Live long my sons with endlesse happinesse,
And bear firm concordance among your selves,
Obey the counsels of these fathers grave,
That you may better bear our violence,
But suddenly through weaknesse of my age,
And the defect of youthfull puissance,
My Maladie increaseth more and more,
And cruel death hasteneth his quickned pace,
To dispossesse me of my earthly shape,
Mine eyes wax dim, o're-cast with clouds of age.
The pangs of death compasse my crazed bones,
Thus to you all my blessings I bequeath,
And with my blessings, this my fleeting soul.
My glasse is run, and all my miseries
Do end with life: death closeth up mine eyes,
My soul in hast flies to the Elisian fields.

He dieth.

Loc. Accursed starrs, damn'd and accursed starrs,
To abreviate my noble father's life,
Hard-hearted gods, and too envious fates,
Thus to cut off my father's fatal thred,
Brutus that was a glory to us all,
Brutus that was a terror to his foes,
Alasse too soon by Demagorgon's kn fe,
The martial Brutus is bereft of life.
No sad complaints may move just Lacus.

Corin. No dreadfull threats can fear judge Rhodomanth,
Wert thou as strong as mighty Hercules,
That tam'd the hugie monsters of the world,
Plaid'st thou as sweer, on the sweet sounding Lute,
As did the sporse of fair Enridice,
That did enchant the waters with his noise,
And made the stones, birds, beasts, to lead a dance,
Constrained the hilly trees to follow him,
Thou could'st not move the judge of Crebus,

Nor move compassion in grim Pluto's heart,
For fatal Mors expecteth all the world,
And every man must tread the way of death,
Brave Tantalus, the valiant Pelops fire,
Guest to the gods, suffred untimely death,
And old Fleithonus husband to the morn,
And eke grim Minos whom just Jupiter
Deign'd to admit unto his sacrifice,
The thundring trumpets of bloud-thirsty Mars.
The fearfull rage of fell Tisphoen.
The boistrous waves of humid Ocean,
Are instruments and tools of dismal death.
Then noble cousin cease to mourn his chance,
Whose age and years were signes that he should die.
It resteth now that we interre his bones,
That was a terror to his enemies.
Take up his coarfe, and Princes hold him dead,
Who while he liv'd, upheld the Troyan state.
Sound drums and trumpets, march to Trinovant,
There to provide our chieftains funeral.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Strumbo above in a gown, with ink and paper in his hand saying.

Strum. Either the four Elements, the seven Planets and all the particular Starrs of the Pole Antastick, are adversitive against me, or else I was begotten and born in the wain of the Moon, when every thing, as Lactantius in his fourth book of Constultations doth say, goeth arsward. I Maisters, I, you may laugh, but I must weep; you may joy, but I must sorrow; shedding salt tears from the watry fountains of my moist dainty fair eyes, along my comely and smooth cheeks, in as great plenty as the water runneth from the bucking-tubs, or red wine out of the Hogs-heads: for trust me gentlemen and my very good friends, and so forth: the little god, nay the desperate god Cuprit, with one of his vengible bird-bolts, hath shot me unto the heel: so not only, but also, oh fine phrase, I burn, I burn, and I burn a, in love, in love, and in love a, ah Strum-bo, what hast thou seen, not Dina with the Ass Tom?
Yea with these eyes thou hast seen her, and therefore pull them out: for they will work thy bail. Ah Strum-bo, hast thou heard the voice of the Nightingale, but a voice sweeter then hers, yea with these ears hast thou heard them, and therefore cut them off, for they have caus'd thy sorrow. Nay Strumbo, kill thy self, drown thy self, hang thy self, starve thy self. Oh but then I shall leave my sweet heart. Oh my heart! Now pate for thy Master, I will dite an aliquant love-pistle to her,
and then she hearing the gland verbosity of my scripture,
will love me presently,

Let him write a little, and then read.

My pen is naught, Gentlemen lend me a knife, I think the more haste the worst speed.

Then write again, and after read.

So it is, Mistress Dorothie, and the sole essence of my soul, that the little sparkles of affection kindled in me towards your sweet self, hath now increased to a great flame, and will ere it be long consume my poor heart, except you with the pleasant water of your secret fountain,

tain.

rain, quench the furious heat of the same. Alas, I am a Gentleman of good fame, and name, majesticall, in apparell comely, in gate portly. Let not therefore your gentle heart be so hard, as to despise a proper tall young man of a handsome life, and by despising him, not only but also to kill him. Thus expecting time and tide, I bid you farewell. Your Servant, Signior Strumbo.

Oh wit, O pate, O memory, O hand, O Ink, O paper. Well, now I will send it away. Trompart, Trompart, what a Villain is this? Why surra, come when your Master calls you. Trompart.

Trompart entering saith

Anon, sir.

Strumbo. Thou knowest, my pretty Boy, what a good Master I have been to thee ever since I took thee into my service.

Trom. I, sir.

Strum. And how I have cherished thee alwayes, as if thou hadst been the fruit of my loynes, flesh of my flesh, and bone of my bone.

Trom. I, sir.

Strum. Then shew thy self herein a trusty servant, and carry this Letter to Mistress Dorothy, and tell her.

Speaking in his care.

Exit Trompart.

Strum. Nay, Masters, you shall see a Marriage by and by. But here she comes. Now must I frame my amorous passions.

Enter Dorothy and Trompart.

Doro. Signior Strumbo, well met, I received your Letters by your man here, who told me a pittifull story of your anguish, and so understanding your passions were so great, I came hither speedily.

Strum. Oh, my sweet and pigsnay, the fecundity of my ingenie is not so great, that may declare unto you the sorrowfull sobs, and broken sleeps that I suffered for your sake; and therefore I desire you to receive me into your familiarity.

*For your Love doth lie,
As near and as nigh:
Unto my heart within,
As mine Eye to my Nose,
My Leg unto my Hose,
And my Flesh unto my Skin.*

Dor. Truly, M. Strumbo, you speak too learnedly for me to understand the drift of your mind, and therefore tell your tale in plain termes, and leave off your dark riddles.

Strum. Alas, Mistress Dorothy, this is my luck, that when I most would, I cannot be understood: so that my great learning is an inconvenience unto me. But to speak in plain termes, I love you, Mistress Dorothy, if you like to accept me into your familiarity.

Dor. If this be all I am content.

Turning to the people.

Strum. Say'st thou so, sweet wench, let me lick thy Toes. Farewell, Mistress. If any of you be in love, provide ye a Cap-case full of new coyn'd words, and then shall you soon have the succado de labres, and something else.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Locrine, Guendoline, Camber, Albanast, Corineus, Asarachus, Debon, Thrasimachus.

Locrine. Uncle and Princes of brave Britany, Since that our noble Father is entomb'd, As best be seem'd so brave a Prince as he, If so you please, this day my Love and I, Within the Temple of Concordia, Will solemnize our royall marriage.

Thra. Right noble Lord, your subjects every one, Must needs obey your Highnesse at command, Especially in such a cause as this, That much concerns your Highnesse great content.

Locr. Then frolick, Lordings, to fair Concord's walls, Where we will passe the day in Knightly sports, The night in Dancing and in figured Maskes, And offer to God Risus all our sports.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Atey as before, after a little Lightning and Thundring, let there come forth this show: Perseus and Andromeda, hand in hand, and Cepheus also with Swords and Targets. Then let there come out of another door Phineus, all black in Armour, with Ethiopians after him, driving in Perseus, and having taken away Andromeda, let them depart. Atey remaining, saying.

Regit omnia numen.

When Perseus married fair Andromeda, The onely Daughter of King Cepheus, He thought he had establisht well his Crown, And that his Kingdome should for aye endure. But loe proud Phineus with a band of men, Contriv'd of sun-burnt Ethiopians, By force of Armes the Bride he took from him, And turn'd their joy into a flood of teares. So fares it with young Locrine and his Love, He thinks this marriage tendeth to his weale, But this foule day, this foule accursed day, Is the beginning of his miseries. Behold where Humber and his Scythians Approcheth nigh with all his warlike train, I need not I, the sequel shall declare, What tragick chances fell out in this Warre. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter, Humber, Hubba, Estrilo, Segar, and their Souldiers.

Hum. At length the Snaile doth climbe the highest Ascending up the stately Castle Walls, (rops, A

At length the water with continual drops,
Doth penetrate the hardest marble stone,
At length we are arriv'd in Albion,
Nor could the barbarous Dasian sovereign,
Nor yet the ruler of brave Belgia
Stay us from cutting over to this Ile;
Whereas I hear a troop of Phrygians
Under the conduct of Posthumus son,
Have pitch'd up lordly pavillions,
And hope to prosper in this lovely Ile:
But I will frustrate all their foolish hope,
And teach them that the Scythian Emperour
Leads fortune tied in a chain of gold,
Constraining her to yield unto his will,
And grace him with their Regal diadem:
Which I will have, maugre their treble hosts,
And all the power their petty Kings can make.

Hubba. If she that rules fair Rhannis golden gate,
Grant us the honour of the victory,
As hitherto she alwayes favour'd us,
Right noble father, we will rule the land,
Enthroniz'd in seats of Topace stones,
That Locrine and his brethren all may know,
None must be King but Humber and his son.

Hum. Courage my son, fortune shall favour us,
And yield to us the coronet of bays,
That decketh none but noble conquerors:
But what saith Elfrid to these regions?
How liketh she the temperature thereof?
Are they not pleasant in her gracious eyes?

Elfr. The plains, my Lord, garnisht with Flora's wealth,
And overspread with party-coloured flowers,
Do yield sweet contentation to my mind,
The aerie hills enclos'd with shade groves,
The groves replenisht with sweet chirping birds,
The birds resounding heavenly melodic,
Are equall to the groves of Thesaly,
Where Phœbus with the learned Ladies nine,
Delight themselves with musick harmony,
And from the moisture of the mountain tops,
The silent springs dance down with murmuring streams,
And water all the ground with chrystal waves,
The gentle blasts of Eurus modest wind,
Moving the pittering leaves of Silvanus's woods,
Do equall it with Tempe's paradice,
And thus comforted all to one effect,
Do make me think these are the happy Iles,
Most fortunate, if Humber may them win.

Hubba. Madam, where resolution leads the way,
And courage follows with emboldened pace,
Fortune can never use her tyranny;
For valiantnesse is like unto a rock
That standeth on the waves of Ocean,
Which though the billows beat one every side,
And Boreas fell with his tempestuous storms,
Bloweth upon it with a hideous clamour,
Yet it remaineth still unmoveable.

Hum. Kingly resolv'd, thou glory of thy fire:
But worthy Segar, what uncouth novelties
Bring'st thou unto our royal Majesty?

Seg. My Lord, the youngest of all Burns sonnes,
Stout Albanast, with millions of men,
Approacheth nigh, and meaneth ere the morn,
To try your force by dint of fatal sword.

Hum. Tut, let him come with millions of hosts,
He shall find entertainment good enough,

Yea fit for those that are our enemies:
For we'll receive them at the lances points,
And massacre their bodies with our blades:
Yea though they were in number infinite,
More then the mighty Babylonian Queen,
Semiramis the ruler of West,
Brought 'gainst the Emperour of the Scythians,
Yet would we not start back one foot from them:
That they might know we are invincible.

Hub. Now by great Jove the supreme King of heaven,
And the immortal gods that live therein,
When as the morning shews his chearfull face,
And Lucifer mounted upon his steed,
Brings in the chariot of the golden sun,
I'll meet young Albanast in the open field,
And crack my launce upon his burganet,
To try the valour of his boyish strength:
There will I shew such ruthfull spectacles
And cause so great effusion of blood,
That all his boyes shall wonder at my strength:
As when the warlike Queen of Amazon,
Penthesilea armed with her launce,
Girt with a corslet of bright shining steel,
Coopt up the faint-heart Grecians in the camp.

Hum. Spoke like a warlike Knight, my noble son,
Nay, like a Prince that seeks his father's joy.
Therefore to morrow ere fair Titan shine,
And bashfull Eos messenger of light,
Expells the liquid sleep from out mens eyes,
Thou shalt conduct the right wing of the host,
The left wing shall be under Segar's charge,
The rearward shall be under me my self;
And lovely Elfrid fair and gracious,
If fortune favour me in mine attempts,
Thou shalt be Queen of lovely Albion.
Fortune shall favour me in mine attempts,
And make thee Queen of lovely Albion.
Come let us in and muster up our train,
And furnish up our lusty souldiers,
That they may be a bulwark to our state,
And bring our wished joyes to perfect end.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Strambo, Dorothy, Trompart, cobling shoes, and singing.

Trom. We Coblers lead a merry life:

All. Dan, dan, dan, dan:

Strum. Void of all envy and of strife:

All. Dan diddle dan.

Dor. Our ease is great, our labour small:

All. Dan, dan, dan, dan.

Strum. And yet our gains be much withall:

All. Dan diddle dan.

Dor. With this art so fine and fair:

All. Dan, dan, dan, dan.

Trom. No occupation may compare:

All. Dan diddle dan.

Strum. For merry pastime and joyfull glee:

Dan, dan, dan, dan.

Dor. Most happy men we Coblers be:

Dan diddle dan.

Trom. The

Trum. The can stands full of nappy ale,

Dan : dan : dan : dan :

Strum. In our shop still withouten fail:

Dan diddle dan.

Dor. This is our meat, this is our food :

Dan : dan : dan : dan :

Trum. This brings us to a merry mood :

Dan diddle dan.

Strum. This makes us work for company :

Dan, dan, dan, dan :

Dor. To pull the Tankards cheerfully :

Dan diddle dan.

Trum. Drink to thy husband Dorothie,

Dan, dan, dan, dan :

Dor. Why then my Strumbo there's to thee :

Dan diddle dan :

Strum. Drink thou the rest Trumpart amain :

Dan, dan, dan, dan.

Dor. When that is gone, we'll fill't again :

Dan diddle dan.

Cap. The poorest state is farthest from annoy,

How merrily he sitteth on his stool :

But when he sees that needs he must be prest,

He'll turn his note and sing another tune,

Ho, by your leave Master Cobler.

Strum. You are welcome gentleman, what will you any old shoes or buskins, or will you have your shoes clouted, I will do them as well as any Cobler in Cathnes whatsoever ?

Captain shewing him press-money.

O Master Cobler, you are far deceived in me, for don you see this ? I come not to buy any shoes, but to buy your self ; come sir, you must be a souldier in the King's cause.

Strum. Why, but hear you sir, has your King any Commission to take any man against his will. I promise you, I can scant believe it, or did he give you Commission ?

Cap. O sir, ye need not care for that, I need no Commission : hold here, I command you in the name of our King Albanast, to appear to morrow in the town-house of Cathnes.

Strum. King Nactabell, I cry God mercy, what have we to do with him, or he with us ? but you sir master capontail, draw your pasteboard, or else I promise you, I'll give you a canvasado with a bastinado over your shoulders, and teach you to come hither with your implements.

Cap. I pray thee good fellow be content, I do the Kings command.

Strum. Put me out of your book then.

Cap. I may not.

Strumbo Snatching up a staff.

No will, come sir, will your stomach serve you, by gogs blew hood and halidom, I will have about with you.

Fight both.

Enter Thrasmachus.

Thra. How now, what noise, what sudden clamor's this ?

How now, my Captain and the Cobler so hard at it ?

Sirs what is your quarrel ?

Cap. Nothing, sir, but that he will not take press-money.

Thra. Here good fellow, take it at my command, Unlessse you mean to be stretch'd.

Strum. Truly, Master gentleman, I lack no mony, if you please I will resigne it to one of these poor fellows.

Thras. No such matter,

Look you be at the common house to morrow.

Exit Thrasmachus and the Captain.

Strum. O wife I have spun a fair thred, if I had been quiet, I had not been prest, and therefore well may I wayment ; But come sirra, shut up, for we must to the warrs.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Albanast, Debon. Thrasmachus, and the Lords.

Alb. Brave Cavaliers, Princes of Albany, Whose trenchant blades with our deceased fire, Passing the frontiers of brave Grecia, Were bathed in our enemies lukewarme blood, Now is the time to manifest your wills, Your haughty minds and resolutions, Now opportunity is offred To try your courage and your earnest zeal, Which you alwayes protest to Albanast, For at this time, yea at this present time, Stout fugitives come from the Scythians bounds Have pestred every place with mutinies : But trust me, Lordings, I will never cease To persecute the rascal runnagates, Till all the rivers stained with their blood, Shall fully shew their fatal overthrow.

Deb. So shall your Highnesse merit great renown, And imitate your aged father's steps.

Alb. But tell me cousin, cam'st thou through the plains ? And saw'st thou there the faint-heart fugitives Mustring their weather-beaten souldiers, What order keep they in their marshalling ?

Thra. After we past the groves of Caledone, We did behold the stragling Scythians Camp, Repleat with men, stor'd with munition ; There might we see the valiant minded Knights Fetching carriers along the spacious plains, Humber and Hubba arm'd in azure blew, Mounted upon their coursers white as snow, Went to behold the pleasant flowring fields ; Hector and Troilus, Priamus lovely sons, Chasing the Grecians over Simois, Were not to be compared to these two Knights.

Alba. Well hast thou painted out in eloquence The portraiture of Humber and his son ; As fortunate as was Polierates, Yet should they not escape our conquering swords, Or boast of ought but of our clemencie.

Enter Strumbo and Trompart crying often ;

Wild fire and pitch, wild fire and pitch, &c.

Thra. What sirs, what mean you by these clamors made, Those outcries raised in our stately Court ?

Strum. Wild-fire and pitch, wild-fire and pitch.

Thra. Villains I say, tell us the cause hereof ?

Strum. Wild-fire and pitch, wild-fire and pitch.

Thra. Tell me you villains, why you make this noise, Or with my Lance, I will prick your bowels out.

Al. Where are your houses, where's your dwelling place ?

Strum

Strum. Place, Ha, ha, ha, laugh a month and a day at him; place! I cry God mercy, why doe you think that such poor honest men as we be, hold our habitacles in Kings Palaces: Ha, ha, ha. But because you seem to be an abominable Chieftain, I will tell you your state.

*From the top to the toe,
From the head to the shoe;
From the beginning to the ending.
From the building to the burning.*

This honest fellow and I had our mansion Cottage in the suburbs of this City, hard by the Temple of Mercury. And by the common Souldiers of the Shittens, the Scythians what doe you call them? with all the suburbs were burnt to the ground, and the ashes are left there for the Countrey Wives to wash bucks withall. And that which grieves me most, my loving Wife, O cruell strife; the wicked flames did roast.

*And therefore Captain Crust,
We will continually cry,
Except you seek a remedy,
Our Houses to reedifie,
Which now are burnt to dust.*

Both cry. Wild-fire and Pitch, Wild-fire and Pitch.

Alba. Well, we must remedy these outrages, And throw revenge upon their hatefull heads, And you good fellows for your houses burnt, We will remunerate your store of Gold, And build your houses by our Pallace gate.

Strumbo. Gate! O petty treason to my person, no where else but by your backside; Gate! oh how I am vexed in my Coller: Gate! I cry God mercy, do you hear, Master King? If you mean to gratifie such poor men as we be, you must build our houses by the Tavern.

Alba. It shall be done, sir.

Strum. Near the Tavern, I, by Lady, sir, it was spoken like a good fellow. Do you hear, sir? when our house is builded, if you do chance to passe or re-passe that way, we will bestow a quart of the best Wine upon you? Exit.

Alb. It grieves me, Lordings, that my Subjects goods Should thus be spoyled by the Scythians, Who as you see with lightfoot forragers, Depopulate the places where they come, But cursed Humber thou shalt rue the day That ere thou cam'st unto Cathnesia. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Humber, Hubba, Segar, Trussier, and their Soldiers.

Hum. Hubba, go take a Coronet of our Horse, As many Launciers, and light-armed Knights, As may suffice for such an enterprize, And place them in the Grove of Calcedon, With these, when as the skirmish doth encrease, Retire thou from the shelters of the wood, And set upon the weakned Trojans backs, For policy joyned with Chivalry,

Can never be put back from victory.

Exeunt.

Enter Albanact, Clownes with him.

Alb. Thou base born Hunne, how durst thou be so bold, As once to menace warlike Albanact?

The great Commander of these Regions, But thou shalt buy thy rashnesse with thy death, And rue too late thy over-bold attempts, For with this Sword, this Instrument of death, That hath been drenched in my Foe-mens blood, I'll separate thy body from thy head, And set that Coward blood of thine abroad.

Strum. Nay with this staffe great Strumbo's Instru- I'll crack thy Cockscombe, paltry Scythian. (ment,

Hum. Nor wreak I of thy threats, thou princex boy, Nor doe I fear thy foolish insolency, And but thou better use thy bragging blade, Then thou dost rule thy overflowing tongue, Superbious Britain, thou shalt know too soon The force of Humber and his Scythians.

Let them fight.

Humber and his Soldiers run in.

Strum. O horrible, terrible.

Scena Sexta.

Sound the Alarm. Enter Humber and his Soldiers.

Hum. How bravely this young Britain, Albanact, Darest abroad the thunderbolts of warre, Beating down millions with his furious mood: And in his glory triumphs over all, Moving the massie squadrants of the ground; Heap hills on hills, to scale the starry skie: As when Briareus armed with an hundred hands, Flung forth an hundred mountains at great Jove, And when the monstrous gyant Monichus Hurl'd mount Olimpus at great Mars his targe, And shot huge Cedars at Minerva's shield. How doth he overlook with haughty front My fleeting hoasts, and lifts his lofty face Against us all that now do fear his force, Like as we see the wrathfull Sea from farre, In a great mountain heapt with hideous noyse, With thousand billowes beat against the Ships, And tesse them in the Waves like Tennis Balls.

Sound the Alarm.

Humb. Ay me, I fear my Hubba is surpris'd.

Sound again. Enter Albanact.

Alba. Follow me, Souldiers, follow Albanact; Pursue the Scythians flying through the field: Let none of them escape with victory:

That they may know the Britains force is more Than all the power of the trembling Hunnes.

Thra. Forward, brave soldiers, forward, keep the chase, He that takes captive Humber or his Son, Shall be rewarded with a Crown of gold.

Sound alarm, then let them fight, Humber give back, Hubba enters at their backs, and kills Debon, let Strumbo fall down, Albanact run in, and afterwards enter wounded.

Alba. Injurious fortune, hast thou crost me thus? Thus in the morning of my victories,

Thus

Thus in the prime of my felicity
To cut me off by such hard overthrow.
Hadst thou no time thy rancour to declare,
But in the spring of all my dignities?
Hadst thou no place to spit thy venoime out
But on the person of young Albanact?
I that ere while did scare mine enemies,
And drove them almost to a shamefull flight:
I that ere while full Lyon-like did fare
Amongst the dangers of the thick throng'd pikes,
Must now depart most lamentably slain
By Humber's treacheries and fortunes spights:
Curst be their charmes, damn'd be her curst charmes
That doth delude the wayward hearts of men,
Of men that trust unto her fickle wheele,
Which never leaveth turning upside down.
O gods, O heavens, allot me but the place
Where I may finde her hatefull mansion,
I'll passe the Alpes to watty Meroc,
Where fiery Phœbus in his charriot,
The wheelles whereof are deckt with Emeralds,
Cast such a heat, yea such a scorching heat,
And spoileth Flora of her chequered grasse,
I'll overturn the mountain Caucasus,
Where fell Chimera in her triple shape,
Rolleth hot flames from out her monstrous panch,
Scaring the beasts with issue of her gorge,
I'll passe the frozen Zone where Icy flakes
Stopping the passage of the fleeting ships
Do lie, like mountains in the congeal'd Sea,
Where if I find that hatefull house of Hers,
I'll pull the fickle wheele from out her hands,
And tie her self in everlasting bands:
But all in vain I breathe these threatnings,
The day is lost, the Hunnes are conquerors,
Debon is slain, my men are done to death,
The currents swift swimme violently with blood,
And last, O that this last night so long last,
My self with wounds past all recovery,
Must leave my Crown for Humber to possesse.

Strum. Lord have mercy upon us, Masters, I think this is a holy day, every man lies sleeping in the fields, but God knowes full sore against their wills.

Thra. Fly, noble Albanact, and save thy self,
The Scythians follow with great celerity,
And there's no way but fight, or speedy death,
Flee, noble Albanact, and save thy self.

Sound the Alarm.

Alba. Nay let them flie that fear to die the death,
That tremble at the name of fatal Mors,
Ne're shall proud Humber boast or brag himself,
That he hath put young Albanact to flight:
And least he should triumph at my decay,
This sword shall reave his Master of his life,
That oft hath sav'd his Masters doubtfull life:
But oh my brethren if you care for me,
Revenge my death upon his traiterous head.

*Et vos quæis dominus est nigrantis regia ditis,
Qui regitis rigido stigios moderamine lucos:
Nox caci reginæ poli furialis Erinnis,
Diique deaque omnes Albanum tollite regem,
Tollite flumineis undis rigidaque palude
Nunc me fata vocant, hoc condam pectore ferrum.*

Thrust himself through

Enter Trumpart.

O what hath he done? his Nose bleeds: but I smell a Fox,
Look where my Master lies, Master, Master.

Strum. Let me alone, I tell thee, for I am dead.

Trum. Yet one, good, good, Master.

Strum. I will not speak, for I am dead I tell thee.

Trum. And is my Master dead?

O sticks and stones, brickbats and bones,
and is my Master dead?

O you cockatrices, and you bablatrices,
that in the woods dwell:

You briars and brambles, you Cook shops and shambles, come howle and yell.

With howling and screeking, with wailing and weeping, come you to lament.

O Colliers of Croyden, and Rusticks of Royden, and Fishers of Kent.

For Strumbo the Cobler, the fine merry Cobler of Cathnes town:

At this same stoure, at this very hour lies dead on the ground.

O Master, thieves, thieves, chievers.

Strum. Where be they? cox me tunny, bobekin, let me be rising, be gone, we shall be robb'd by and by.

Scena Octava.

Enter Humber, Hubba, Segar, Thrassier, Estrild, and the Souldiers.

Hum. Thus from the dreadful shocks of furious Mars's
Thundring alarmes, and Rhamnusia's Drum
We are retired with joyfull victory,
The slaughter'd Trojans squeltring in their blood,
Infect the aire with their carcasses,
And are a prey for every ravenous bird.

Estrild. So perish they that are our enemies.
So perish they that love not Humber's weale,
And mighty Jove, Commander of the world,
Protect my love from all false treacheries.

Hum. Thanks lovely Estrild, solace to my soule.
But, valiant Hubba, for thy Chivalry
Declar'd against the men of Albany,
Loe here a flowing garland wreath'd of bay,
As a reward for this thy forward minde.

Set it on his head.

Hub. This unexpected honour, noble Sire,
Will prick my courage unto braver deeds,
And cause me to attempt such hard exploits,
That all the world shall sound of Hubba's name.

Hum. And now, brave Soldiers, for this good success,
Carouse whole cups of Amazonian Wine,
Sweeter then Nectar or Ambrosia,
And cast away the Clods of cursed care,
With goblets crown'd with Semeleius gifts,
Now let us march to Abis silver streames,
That clearly glide along the Champagne fields,
And moist the grassy meads with humid drops.
Sound Drums and Trumpets, sound up cheerfully,
Sith we return with joy and victory.

Actus Tertius. Scena prima.

Enter Ate as before. The dumb show. A Crocodile sitting on a rivers bank, and a little Snake stinging it. Then let both of them fall into the water.

Ate. Scelera in authorem cadunt.
High on a bank by Nilus boystrous streams,
Fearfully sat th' Egyptian Crocodile,
Dreadfully grinding in her sharp long teeth,
The broken bowels of a silly fish,
His back was arm'd against the dint of spear,
With shields of brasse that shin'd like burnisht gold,
And as he stretched forth his cruel paws,
A subtil Adder creeping closely near,
Thrusting his forked sting into his claws,
Privily shead his poison through his bones,
Which made him swell that there his bowels burst,
That did so much in his own greatnesse trust.
So Humber having conquered Albanact,
Doth yield his glory unto Locrine's sword.
Mark what ensues, and you may easily see,
That all our life is but a Tragedy. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Locrine, Guendoline, Corineus, Assaracus, Thrasimachus, Camber.

Locrine. And is this true, is Albanactus slain?
Hath cursed Humber with his stragling host,
With that his army made of mungrel currs,
Brought our redoubted brother to his end?
O that I had the Thracian Orpheus harp,
For to awake out of the infernal shade
Those ugly Devils of black Erebus,
That might torment the damned traitor's soul:
O that I had Amphion's instrument,
To quicken with his vital notes and tunes
The flintie joynts of every stonie rock,
By which the Scythians might be punished;
For, by the lightning of almighty Jove,
The Hunne shall die had he ten thousand lives:
And would to God he had ten thousand lives,
That I might with the arm-strong Hercules
Crop off so vile an Hydra's hissing heads.
But say me, Cousin, for I long to hear
How Albanact came by untimely death?

Thras. After the traitorous host of Scythians
Entred the field with martial equipage,
Young Albanact impatient of delay,
Led forth his army 'gainst the stragling mates,
Whose multitude did daunt our souldiers minds,
Yet nothing could disinay the forward Prince;
But with a courage most heroical,
Like to a lion 'mongst a flock of lambs,
Made havock of the faint-heart fugitives,
Hewing a passage through them with his sword;
Yea we had almost given them the repulse,

When suddenly from out the silent wood
Hubba with twenty thousand souldiers,
Cowardly came upon our weakned backs,
And murdered all with fatal massacre;
Amongst the which old Debon, martial Knight,
With many wounds was brought unto the death:
And Albanact oppress'd with multitude,
Whilst valiantly he feld his enemies,
Yielded his life and honour to the dust,
He being dead, the souldiers fled amain,
And I alone escaped them by flight,
To bring you tidings of these accidents.

Locr. Not aged Priam King of stately Troy,
Grand Emperour of barbarous Asia,
When he beheld his noble minded sonnes
Slain traiterously by all the Mirmidons,
Lamented more then I for Albanact.

Guen. Not Hecuba the Queen of Ilium,
When she beheld the town of Pergamus,
Her pallace burnt, with all-devouring flames,
Her fifty sonnes and daughters fresh of hue,
Murthred by the wicked Pyrhus bloody sword,
Shed such sad tears as I for Albanact.

Cam. The grief of Niobe fair Athens Queen,
For her seven sonnes magnanimous in field,
For her seven daughters fairer then the fairest,
Is not to be compar'd with my laments.

Cor. In vain you sorrow for the slaughtered Prince,
In vain you sorrow for his overthrow;
He loves not most that doth lament the most,
But he that seeks to venge the injury.
Think you to quell the enemies warlike train,
With childish sobs and womanish laments?
Unsheath your swords, unsheath your conquering sword?
And seek revenge, the comfort for this sore:
In Cornwall where I hold my regiment,
Even just ten thousand valiant men at armes
Hath Corineus ready at command:
All these and more, if need shall more require,
Hath Corineus ready at command.

Cam. And in the fields of martial Cambria,
Close by the boystrous Isca's silver streams,
Where lightfoot Fairies skip from bank to bank,
Full twenty thousand brave couragious Knights
Well exercis'd in feats of Chivalrie,
In manly manner most invincible,
Young Camber hath with gold and victual;
All these and more, if need shall more require,
I offer up to venge my brothers death.

Loc. Thanks loving Uncle, and good Brother too,
For this revenge; for this sweet word Revenge
Must ease and cease my wrongfull injuries;
And by the sword of bloudie Mars I swear,
Ne'er shall sweet quiet enter this my front,
'Till I be venged on his traiterous head
That slew my noble brother Albanact.
Sound drums and trumpets, muster up the camp,
For we will straight march to Albania. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Humber, Estrild, Hubba, Trussier, & the souldiers.

Hum. Thus are we come victorious Conquerors

Unto

Un to the flowing currents silver streams,
Which, in memorial of our victory,
Shall be agnominated by our name,
And talked of by our posterity :
For sure I hope before the golden Sun
Posteth his horses to fair Thetis plains,
To see the waters turned into blood,
And change his blewish hue to ruefull red,
By reason of the fatal massacre,
Which shall be made upon the virent plains.

Enter the Ghost of Albanact.

See how the Traitor doth presage his harm,
See how he glories at his own decay,
See how he triumphs at his proper loss.
O fortune wild, unstable, fickle, frail !

Hum. Me thinks I see both armies in the field,
The broken lances climb the crystal skies,
Some headless lie, some breathless on the ground,
And every place is strew'd with carcasses,
Behold the grafs hath lost his pleasant green,
The sweetest sight that ever might be seen.

Ghost. I, traitorous Humber, thou shalt find it so,
Yea to thy cost thou shalt the same behold,
With anguish, sorrow, and with sad laments ;
The grassie plains, that now do please thine eyes,
Shall ere the night be coloured all with blood ;
The shadie groves that now inclose thy camp,
And yield sweet favour to thy damned corps,
Shall ere the night be figured all with blood ;
The profound stream that passeth by thy tents,
And with his moisture serveth all thy camp,
Shall ere the night converted be to blood,
Yea with the blood of those thy stragling boyes :
For now revenge shall ease my lingering grief,
And now revenge shall glut my longing soul.

Hub. Let come what will, I mean to bear it out,
And either live with glorious victorie,
Or die with fame renown'd for chivalrie :
He is not worthy of the honey-comb,
That shuns the hives because the bees have stings ;
That likes me best that is not got with ease,
Which thousand dangers do accompany ;
For nothing can dismay our Regal mind ;
Which aims at nothing but a golden Crown,
The only upshot of mine enterprises.
Were they enchanted in grim Pluto's Court,
And kept for treasure 'mongst his hellish crew,
I would either quell the triple Cerberus
And all the armie of his hatefull hags,
Or roll the stone with wretched Syphus.

Hum. Right martial be thy thoughts, my noble son,
And all thy words favour of Chivalrie,
But, warlike Segar, what strange accidents
Makes you to leave the warding of the Camp ?

Segar. To armes, my Lord, to honourable armes ;
Take helm and targe in hand, the Britains come
With greater multitude then erst the Greeks
Brought to the ports of Phrygian Tenedos.

Hum. But what saith Segar to these accidents ?
What counsel gives he in extremities ?

Seg. Why this, my Lord, experience teacheth us,
That Resolution is a sole help at need.
And this, my Lord, our honour teacheth us,
That we be bold in every enterprise ;

Then since there is no way but fight or die,
Be resolute, my Lord, for victory.

Hum. And resolute, Segar, I mean to be,
Perhaps some blisfull star will favour us,
And comfort bring to our perplexed state :
Come let us in and fortifie our camp,
So to withstand their strong invasion.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Strumbo, Trampart, Oliver, and his son William following them.

Strum. Nay neighbour Oliver, if you be so whot, come prepare your self, you shall find two as stout fellows of us, as any in all the North.

Oliv. No by my dorth neighbour Strumbo, Ich zee dat you are a man of small zideration, dat will zeek to injure your old vrecnds, one of your vamiliar guests, and derefore zeeing your pinion is to deal withouten reason, Ich and my zonne William will take dat course, dat shall be fardest vrom reason ; how zay you, will you have my Daughter or no ?

Strum. A very hard question neighbour, but I will solve it as I may : what reason have you to demand it of me ?

Will. Marry sir, what reason had you when my sister was in the barn to tumble her upon the hay, and to fish her Belly.

Strum. Mafs thou say'st true ; well, but would you have me marry her therefore ? No, I scorn her, and you, and you. I, I scorn you all.

Oliv. You will not have her then ?

Strum. No, as I am a true Gentleman.

Will. Then will we school you, ere you and we part
hence.

Enter Margerie, and snatch the staff out of her brother's hand as he is fighting.

Strum. I, you come in pudding time, or else I had drest them.

Mar. You master sawce-box, lobcock, cocks-comb, you sloopawce, lickfingers, will you not hear ?

Strum. Who speak you to, me ?

Mar. I sir, to you, John lackhonestie, littlewit, is it you that will have none of me ?

Strum. No by my troth, mistress nicebice, how fine you can nick-name me ; I think you were brought up in the University of Bridewell, you have your Rhetorick so ready at your tongues end, as if you were never well warned when you were young.

Mar. Why then Goodman cools-head, if you will have none of me, farewell.

Strum. If you be so plain, mistress driggle-draggle, fare you well.

Mar. Nay, master Strumbo, ere you go from hence we must have more words, you will have none of me ?

They both fight.

Strum. Oh my head, my head, leave, leave, leave,
I will, I will, I will.

Mar. Upon that condition I let thee alone.

Oliv. How now master Strumbo, hath my daughter taught you a new lesson ?

Strum. I but hear you, goodman Oliver? it will not be for my ease to have my head broken every day, therefore remedy this, and we shall agree.

Oli. Well, Zon, well, for you are my Zon now, all shall be remedied, Daughter be friends with him.

Shake hands.

Strum. You are a sweet Nut, the Devil crack you, Masters, I think it be my luck, my first wife was a loving quiet wench, but this I think would weary the Devil. I would she might be burnt as my other Wife was; if not, I must run to the Halter for help. O Codpiece, thou hast undone thy Master, this it is to be meddling with warm plackers.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Locrine, Camber, Corineius, Thrasimachus, Asparachus.

Loc. Now am I guarded with an host of men,
Whose haughty courage is invincible;
Now am I hemm'd with troupes of Souldiers,
Such as might force Bellona to retire,
And make her tremble at their puissance;
Now sit I like the mighty god of warre,
When armed with his Coat of Adamant,
Mounted his Chariot drawn with mighty Bulls,
He drove the Argives over Xanthus streames.
Now, curst Humber, doth thy end draw nigh,
Down goes the glory of his victories,
And all his fame, and all his high renown,
Shall in a moment yield to Locrine's sword:
Thy bragging banners crost with argent streames,
The ornaments of thy pavillions,
Shall all be captivated with this hand,
And thou thy self at Albanact's Tombe
Shalt offered be, in satisfaction
Of all the wrongs thou didst him when he liv'd.
But canst thou tell me, brave Thrasimachus,
How far we are distant from Humber's camp?

Thra. My Lord, within your foule accursed Grove
That beares the tokens of our overthrow,
This Humber hath intrencht his damned camp.
March on, my Lord, because I long to see
The treacherous Scythians squeltring in their gore.

Locri. Sweet fortune, favour Locrine with a sinile,
That I may venge my noble Brothers death,
And in the midst of stately Troimovant,
I'll build a Temple to thy deitie
Of perfect marble, and of Jacinth stones,
That it shall passe the high Pyramides,
Which with their top surmount the firmament.

Cam. The arm-strong off-spring of the doubted
Stout Hercules Alcmenas, mighty Son, (Knight,
That tam'd the monsters of the three-fold world,
And rid the oppressed from the tyrants yokes,
Did never shew such valiantnesse in fight,
As I will now for noble Albanact.

Cori. Full fourscore yeares hath Corineius liv'd,
Sometime in warre, sometime in quiet peace,
And yet I feel my self to be as strong
As erst I was in summer of mine age,

Able to tosse this great unweildy Club,
Which hath been painted with my foe-mens brains:
And with this Club I'll break the strong array
Of Humber and his stragling Souldiers,
Or loose my life amongst the thickest presse,
And die with honour in my latest dayes:
Yet ere I die they all shall understand,
What force lies in stout Corineius hand.

Thra. And if Thrasimachus detract the fight,
Either for weaknesse or for cowardise,
Let him not boast that Brutus was his Eame,
Or that brave Corineius was his Sire.

Loc. Then courage, Souldiers, first for your safety.
Next for your peace, last for your victory. Exeunt.

Sound the Alarm. Enter Hubba and Segar at one door, and Corineius at the other.

Cori. Art thou that Humber, Prince of Fugitives,
That by thy treason slew'st young Albanact?

Hub. I am his Son that slew young Albanact,
And if thou take not heed proud Phrigian,
I'll send thy soule unto the Stigian lake,
There to complain of Humber's injuries.

Cori. You triumph, sir, before the victory,
For Corineius is not so soon slain.
But, curst Scythians, you shall rue the day,
That e're you came into Albania.
So perish they that envy Britains wealth,
So let them die with endlesse infamy,
And he that seeks his Sovereigns overthrow,
Would this my Club might aggravate his woe.

Strikes them both down with his Club.

Enter Humber.

Hum. Where may I find some desert wilderness,
Where I may breathe out curses as I would,
And scare the earth with my condemning voyce,
Where every ecchoes repercussion
May help me to bewaile mine overthrow,
And aid me in my sorrowfull laments?
Where may I find some hollow uncooth rock,
Where I may damn, condemn, and ban my fill?
The heavens, the hell, the earth, the aire, the fire,
And utter curses to the concave skie,
Which may infect the aery regions,
And light upon the Britain Locrine's head.
You ugly sprites that in Cocitus mourn,
And gnash your teeth with dolorous laments,
You fearfull dogs that in black Lathe howle,
And scare the Ghosts with your wide open throats,
You ugly Ghosts that flying from these dogs,
Do plunge your selves in Puryflegiton,
Come all of you, and with your shrieking notes
Accompany the Britains conquering host.
Come fierce Erinnis, horrible with Snakes,
Come ugly Furies, armed with your whips,
You threefold judges of black Tartarus,
And all the army of you hellish fiends,
With new found torments rack proud Locrine's bones.
O gods and starres, damn'd be the gods and starres,
That did not drown me in fair Thetis plains.
Curst be the sea that with outrageous waves,
With surging billowes did not rive my ships
Against the rocks of high Cerannia,
Or swallowed me into her watry gulf.

Would

Would God he had arriv'd upon the shore
Where Poliphemus and the Cyclops dwell,
Or where the bloody Anthropomphagie
With greedy jawes devours the wandring wights,

Enter the Ghost of Albanact.

But why comes Albanact's bloody Ghost,
To bring a corsive to our miseries?
Is't not enough to suffer shamefull flight,
But we must be tormented now with Ghosts?
With apparitions fearfull to behold?

Ghost. Revenge, revenge for blood.

Hum. So nought will satisfie your wandring Ghost,
But dire revenge, nothing but Humber's fall;
Because he conquered you in Albany.
Now by my soule, Humber would be condemn'd
To Tantals hunger, or Ixions Wheele,
Or to the vulture of Prometheus,
Rather then that this murther were undone.
When as I die I'll drag thy cursed Ghost
Through all the Rivers of soule Erebus,
Through burning sulphur of the Limbo-lake,
To allay the burning fury of that heat,
That rageth in mine everlasting soule.

Exeunt.

Alba. Ghost. Vindicta, vindicta.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Atrey as before. Then Omphale Daughter to the King of Lydia, having a Club in her hand, and a Lyons skin on her back, Hercules following with a distaffe. Then let Omphale turn about, and taking off her Pantofle, strike Hercules on the head, then let them depart, Atrey remaining, saying;

*Quem non Argolici mandata severa Tyranni,
Non potuit Juno vincere, vicit amor.*

Stout Hercules the mirrour of the world,
Son to Alcmene and great Jupiter,
After so many conquests won in field,
After so many Monsters quell'd by force,
Yielded his valiant heart to Omphale,
A fearfull woman void of manly strength,
She took the Club, and wore the Lyons skin.
He took the Wheele, and maidenly gan spin
So martiall Locrine cheer'd with victory,
Falleth in love with Humber's Concubine,
And so forgetteth peerlesse Guendoline.
His Uncle Corineus stormes at this,
And forceth Locrine for his grace to sue,
Loe here the summe, the proesse doth ensue.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Locrine, Camber, Corineus, Asarachus, Thrasimachus, and the Souldiers.

Loc. Thus from the fury of Bellona's broiles,
With sound of Drumme and Trumpets melody,
The Britain King returns triumphantly,
The Scythians slain with great occision,
Doe equallize the grasse in multitude,
And with their blood have stain'd the streaming brooks,
Offering their bodies and their dearest blood
As sacrifice to Albanactus Ghost,
Now cursed Humber hast thou paid thy due,
For thy deceits and crafty treacheries,
For all thy guiles, and damned stratagems,
With losse of life, and everduring shame.
Where are thy Horses tract with burnisht gold,
Thy trampling Coursers rul'd with foaming bits?
Where are thy soldiers strong and numberlesse?
Thy valiant Captains, and thy noble Peers?
Even as the Country Clownes with sharpest Scythes,
Doe mow the withered grasse from off the earth,
Or as the Ploughman with his piercing share
Renteth the bowels of the fertile fields,
And rippeth up the roots with Razors keen.
So Locrine with his mighty curtle-axe,
Hath cropped off the heads of all thy Hunnes,
So Locrine's Peers have daunted all thy Peeres,
And drove thine host unto confusion,
That thou maist suffer penance for thy fault,
And die for murdring valiant Albanact.

Cori. And thus, yea thus, shall all the rest be serv'd,
That seek to enter Albion 'gainst our wills.

If the brave Nation of the Troglodites,
If all the Cole-black Athiopians,
If all the forces of the Amazons,
If all the hoasts of the Barbarian lands,
Should dare to enter this our little world,
Soon should they rue their overbold attempts,
That after us our progeny may say,
There lie the beasts that sought to usurp our Land.

Loc. I, they are beasts that seek to usurp our Land,
And like to brutish beasts they shall be serv'd.
For mighty Jove, the supream King of heaven,
That guides the concourse of the Meteors,
And rules the motion of the azure skie,
Fights alwayes for the Britains safety.
But stay, me thinks I hear some shrieking noyse,
That draweth near to our pavillion.

Enter the Souldiers leading in Estrild.

Estrild. What Prince soc're adorn'd with golden Doth sway the Regall Scepter in his hand: (Crown,
And thinks no chance can ever throw him down,
Or that his state shall everlasting stand,
Let him behold poor Estrild in this plight,
The perfect platform of a troubled wight.
Once was I guarded with mavoriall bands,
Compact with Princes of the noble blood,
Now am I fajn into my foemens hands,

¶ G 3

And.

And with my death must pacifie their mood.
 O life the harbour of calamities,
 O death the haven of all miseries,
 I could compare my sorrows to thy woe,
 Thou wretched queen of wretched Pergamus,
 But that thou viewd'st thy enemies overthrow,
 Nigh to the rock of high Caphareus,
 Thou saw'st their death, and then departed'st thence.
 I must abide the victors insolence.
 The gods that pittied thy continual grief,
 Transform'd thy corps, and with thy corps thy care,
 Poor Estrild lives despairing of relief,
 For friends in trouble are but few and rare.
 What said I few? I, few or none at all,
 For cruel death made havock of them all.
 Thrice happy they whose fortune was so good,
 To end their lives, and with their lives their woes,
 Thrice haplesse I, whom fortune so withstood
 That cruelly she gave me to my foes.
 Oh souldiers is there any misery,
 To be compar'd to fortunes treacherie.

Loc. Camber, this same should be the Scythian Queen.

Cam. So may we judge by her lamenting words.

Loc. So fair a dame mine eyes did never see,
 With fouds of woes she seems o're-whelm'd to be.

Cam. O Locrine hath she not a cause for to be sad?

Locrine at one side of the stage.

Loc. If she have cause to weep for Humber's death,
 And shed salt tears for her overthrow:
Locrine may well bewaile his proper grief,
Locrine may move his own peculiar woe,
 He being conquer'd died a speedy death,
 And felt not long his lamentable smart,
 I being a conquerour, live a lingring life,
 And feel the force of Cupid's sudden stroke.
 I gave him cause to die a speedy death,
 He left me cause to wish a speedy death.
 Oh that sweet face painted with natur's dye,
 Those roseal cheeks mixt with a snowy white,
 That decent neck surpassing ivory,
 Those comely breasts which Venus well might spite,
 Are like to snares which wylie fowlers wrought,
 Wherein my yielding heart is prisoner caught.
 The golden tresses of her dainty hair
 Which shine like Rubies glittering with the Sun,
 Have so entrapt poor Locrine's lovesick heart,
 That from the same no way it can be won.
 How true is that which oft I heard declar'd,
 One dram of joy, must have a pound of care.

Estr. Hard is their fall, who from a golden Crown
 Are cast into a Sea of wretchednesse.

Loc. Hard is their thrall, who by Cupid's frown
 Are wrapt in waves of endlesse carefulnesse.

Estr. Oh Kingdome object to all miseries.

Loc. Oh love, the extreame'st of all extremities.

Let him go into his chair.

Sold. My Lord, in ransacking the Scythian Tents,
 I found this Lady, and to manifest
 That earnest zeal I bear unto your Grace,
 I here present her to your Majesty.

Another sold. Helies, my Lord, I found the Lady first,
 And here present her to your Majesty.

1. Sold. Presumptuous villain, wilt thou take my prize?

2. Sol. Nay rather thou depriv'st me of my right.

1. Sol. Resigne thy title (cative) unto me,
 Or with my sword I'll pierce thy cowards loins.

2. Sol. Soft words, good sir, 'tis not enough to speak:
 A barking dog doth seldome strangers bite.

Loc. Unreverent villains, strive you in our fight?

Take them hence Jaylor to the dungeon,
 There let them lie and trie their quarrel out.
 But thou fair Princess be no whit dismaid,
 But rather joy that Locrine favours thee.

Estr. How can he favour me that slew my spouse?

Loc. The chance of war (my love) took him from thee.

Estr. But Locrine was the causer of his death.

Loc. He was an enemy to Locrine's state,
 And slew my noble brother Albanact.

Estr. But he was link'd to me in marriage bond,
 And would you have me love his slaughterer?

Loc. Better to live, then not to live at all.

Estr. Better to die renowned for chastitie,
 Then live with sname and endlesse infamie.

What would the common sort report of me,
 If I forget my love, and cleave to thee?

Loc. Kings need not fear the vulgar sentences.

Estr. But Ladies must regard their honest name.

Loc. Is it a shame to live in marriage bonds?

Estr. No, but to be a Strumpet to a King.

Loc. If thou wilt yield to Locrine's burning love,
 Thou shalt be Queen of fair Albania.

Estr. But Guendoline will undermine my state.

Loc. Upon mine Honour, thou shalt have no harme.

Estr. Then lo brave Locrine, Estrild yields to thee,

And by the gods, whom thou do'st invoke,
 By the dread ghost of thy deceased Sire,
 By thy right hand, and by thy burning love,
 Take pity on poor Estrild's wretched thrall.

Cori. Hath Locrine then forgot his Guendoline,
 That thus he courts the Scythians paramour?

What, are the words of Brute so soon forgot?
 Are my deserts so quickly out of mind?

Have I bin faithfull to thy Sire now dead,
 Have I protected thee from Humber's hands,
 And do'st thou quit me with ungratitude?

Is this the guerdon for my grievous wounds,
 Is this the honour for my labours past?

Now by my sword, Locrine, I swear to thee,
 This injury of thine shall be repaid.

Loc. Uncle, scorn you your royal soveraigne,
 As if we stood for cyphers in the Court?

Upbraid you me with those your benefits?

Why, it was a subjects duty so to do.

What you have done for our deceased Sire,
 We know, and all know, you have your reward.

Cori. Avant proud princex, brav'st thou me withall,
 Assurance thy self, though thou be Emperour
 Thou ne're shalt carry this unpunished.

Cam. Pardon my brother, noble Corineus,
 Pardon this once, and it shall be amended.

Assar. Cousin, remember Brutus latest words,
 How he desired you to cherish them:
 Let not this fault so much incense your mind,
 Which is not yet passed all remedy.

Cori. Then Locrine, loe I reconcile my self,
 But as thou lov'st thy life, so love thy wife:
 But if thou violate those promises,
 Bloud and revenge shall light upon thy head.
 Comes, let us back to stately Troynovant,
 Where all these matters shall be settled.

Locrine to himself.

Millions of devils wait upon thy soul.

Legions

Legions of spirits vex thy impious ghost :
Ten thousand torments rack thy cursed bones.
Let every thing that hath the use of breath,
Be instruments and workers of thy death.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Humber alone, his hair hanging over his shoulders, his arms all bloodie, and a dart in one hand.

Hum. What Basilisk hath hatched in this place,
Where every thing consumed is to nought ?
What fearfull Furie haunts these cursed groves,
Where not a root is left for Humber's meat ?
Hath fell Alesto with envenomed blasts,
Breathed forth poison in these tender plains ?
Hath triple Cerberus with contagious foam,
Sow'd Aconitum 'mongst these withered hearbs ?
Hath dreadfull Fames with her charming rods
Brought barrenesse on every fruitfull tree ?
What nor a root, no fruit, no beast, no bird,
To nourish Humber in this wilderness ?
What would you more, you fiends of Erebus ?
My very intrails burn for want of drink,
My bowels cry, Humber give us some meat,
But wretched Humber can give you no meat,
These foul accursed groves afford no meat :
This fruitless soil, this ground brings forth no meat.
The gods, hard hearted gods, yield me no meat
Then how can Humber give you any meat ?

Enter Strumbo with a pitch-fork, and a Scotch-cap.

St. How do you, Masters, how do you ? how have you scaped hanging this long time ? I faith I have scape many a scouring this year, but I thank God I have past them all with a good couragio, couragio, and my wife and I are in great love and charity now, I thank my manhood and my strength ; for I will tell you, Masters, upon a certain day at night I came home, to say the very truth, with my stomack full of wine, and ran up into the chamber, where my wife soberly sate rocking my little babie, leaning her back against the bed, singing lullaby. Now when she saw me come with my nose foremost, thinking that I had been drunk, as I was indeed, snatcht up a fagot-stick in her hand, and came furiously marching towards me with a big face, as though she would have eaten me at a bit ; thundering out these words unto me. Thou drunken knave where hast thou been so long ? I shall teach thee how to benight me another time : and so she began to play knaves trumps. Now although I trembled fearing she would set her ten commandments in my face, ran within her, and taking her lustily by the middle, I carried her valiantly to the bed, and flinging her upon it, flung my self upon her, and there I delighted her so with the sport I made, that ever after she would call me sweet husband, and so banisht brawling for ever :
and to see the good will of the wench, she bought with her Portion a yard of land, and by that I am now become one of the richest men in our parish. Well,

Masters, what's a clock ? it is now break-fast time, you shall see what meat I have here for my break-fast.

He sits down and pulls out his victuals.

Hum. Was ever land so fruitless as this land ?
Was ever grove so gracelesse as this grove ?
Was ever soil so barren as this soil ?
Oh no : the land where hungry Fames dwelt,
May no wise equalize this cursed land ;
No, even the climate of the torrid zone
Brings forth more fruit then this accursed grove.
Ne'er came sweet Ceres, ne'er came Venus here ;
Triptolemus the god of husbandmen,
Ne'er sow'd his seed in this foul wilderness.
The hunger-bitten dogs of Acheron,
Chac't from the nine-fold Puriflegiton,
Have set their footsteps in this damned ground.
The iron-hearted Furies arm'd with snakes,
Scater'd huge Hydra's over all the plains,
Which have consum'd the grasse, the herbs, the trees,
Which have drunk up the flowing water springs.

Strumbo hearing his voice starts up, and puts his meat in his pocket, seeking to hide himself.

Hum. Thou great commander of the starry sky,
That guid'st the life of every mortal wight,
From the inclosures of the fleeting clouds
Rain down some food, or else I faint and dye :
Pour down some drink, or else I faint and dye.
O Jupiter, hast thou sent Mercury
In clownish shape to minister some food ?
Some meat, some meat, some meat.

Strum. O alas sir, ye are deceived, I am not Mercury,
I am Strumbo.

Hum. Give me some meat, villain, give me some meat,
Or 'gainst this rock, I'll dash thy cursed brains,
And rend thy bowels with my bloodie hands.
Give me some meat, villain, give me some meat.

Strum. By the faith of my body, good fellow, I had rather give an whole ox, then that thou should'st serve me in that sort. Dash out my brains ? O horrible, terrible. I think I have a quarry of stones in my pocket.

He makes as though he would give him some, and as he putteth out his hand, enter the Ghost of Albanast, and strikes him on the hand, and so Strumbo runs out, Humber following him. Exeunt.

Alba. Ghost. Lo, here the gift of fell ambition,
Of usurpation and of treachery.
Lo, here the harms that wait upon all those
That do intrude themselves in others lands,
Which are not under their dominion. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Locrine alone.

Loc. Seven yeares hath aged Corineus liv'd
To Locrine's grief, and fair Efrilda's woe,
And seven yeares more he hopeth yet to live ;
Oh supreme Jove, annihilatè this thought.

Should

Should he enjoy the aires fruition ?
 Should he enjoy the benefit of life ?
 Should he contemplate the radiant sun,
 That makes my life equall to dreadfull death ?
Venus convey this monster fro the earth,
 That disobeyerth thus thy sacred hefts.
Cupid convey this monster to dark hell,
 That disannulls thy mothers fugred lawes.
Mars with thy target all beset with flames,
 With murdering blade bereave him of his life,
 That hindreth Locrine in his sweetest joyes.
 And yet for all his diligent aspect,
 His wrathfull eyes piercing like Lincés eyes,
 Well have I overmatcht his subtiltie.
 Nigh Deucolium by the pleasant Lee,
 Where brackish Thamis slides with silver streams,
 Making a breach into the grassie downes,
 A curious arch of costly marble fraught,
 Hath Locrine framed underneath the ground,
 The walls whereof, garnisht with diamonds,
 With ophirs, rubies, glistering emeralds,
 And interlact with sun-bright carbuncles,
 Lightens the room with artificial day,
 And from the Lee with water-flowing pipes
 The moisture is deriv'd into this arch,
 Where I have plac'd fair Estriid secretly ;
 Thither Estroons accompanied with my page,
 I covertly visit my hearts desire,
 Without suspicion of the meanest eye,
 For love aboundeth still with policie :
 And thither still means Locrine to repair,
 Till Atropos cut off mine uncle's life. Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Humber alone, saying :

Hum. *O vita misero longa, felici brevis !
 Eheu malorum fames extremum malum.*
 Long have I lived in this desert cave,
 With eating hawes and miserable roots,
 Devouring leaves and beastly excrements.
 Caves were my beds, and stones my pillow-beres,
 Fear was my sleep, and horror was my dream ;
 For still me thought at every boisterous blast,
 Now Locrine comes, now Humber thou must dye ;
 So that for fear and hunger, Humber's mind
 Can never rest, but alwayes trembling stands.
 O what Danubius now may quench my thirst ?
 What Euphrates, what light-foot Euripus.
 May now allay the fury of that heat,
 Which raging in my entrails eats me up ?
 You ghastly devils of the ninefold Styx,
 You damned ghosts of joyless Acheron,
 You mournfull soules, vext in Abyssus vaults,
 You coal-black devils of Avernus pond,
 Come with your flesh-hooks, rend my famisht armes,
 These armes that have sustain'd their masters life ;
 Come with your razours rip my bowels up,
 With your sharp fire-forks crack my starved bones.
 Use me as you will, so Humber may not live.
 Accursed gods that rule the starrie poles,
 Accursed Jove king of the accursed gods,

Cast down your lightning on poor Humber's head,
 That I may leave this deathfull like life of mine :
 What hear you not, and shall not Humber dye ?
 Nay I will dye though all the gods say nay.
 And gentle Aby take my troubled coips,
 Take it and keep it from all mortal eyes,
 That none may say when I have lost my breath,
 The very fouds conspir'd 'gainst Humber's death.

Flings himself into the river.

Enter the Ghost of Albanact.

En cadem sequitur, cades in cade quiesco.
Humber is dead, joy heavens, leap earth, dance trees ;
 Now may'st thou reach thy apples Tantalus,
 And withem feed thy hunger-bitten limmes :
 Now Sisyphus leave the tumbling of thy rock,
 And rest thy restless bones upon the same :
 Unbind Ixion, cruel Rhadamanth,
 And lay proud Humber on the whirling wheel.
 Back will I post to hell mouth Tanarus,
 And pass Cocytus, to the Elysian fields,
 And tell my father Brutus of these newes. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

*Enter Ate as before. Jason leading Creon's daughter.
 Medea following, bath a garland in her hand, and putting it on Creon's daughters head, setteth it on fire, and then killing Jason and her, departeth.*

Ate. *Non tam Trinacriis exastuat Aetna cavernis,
 Lasa furtivo quam cor mulieris amore.*

Medea seeing Jason leave her love,
 And choose the daughter of the Theban King,
 Went to her devillish charms to work revenge ;
 And raising up the atuple Hecate,
 With all the rout of the condemned fiends,
 Framed a garland by her magick skill,
 With which she wrought Jason and Creon's ill.
 So Guendoline seeing her self misus'd,
 And Humber's paramour possesse her place,
 Flies to the Dukedome of Cornubia,
 And with her brother stout Thrasimachus,
 Gathering a power of Cornish souldiers,
 Gives battel to her husband and his host,
 Nigh to the river of great Mertia :
 The chances of this disinal massacre,
 That which ensueth shortly will unfold. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Locrine, Camber, Assaracus, Thrasimachus.

Assa. But tell me, Cousin, dyed my Brother so ?
 Now who is left to hapless Albion,
 That as a pillar might uphold our state,
 That might strike terrour to our daring foes ?
 Now who is left to hapless Britanie,

That

That might defend her from the barbarous hands
Of those that still desire her ruinous fall,
And seek to work her downfall and decay.

Cam. I Uncle, death is our common enemy,
And none but death can match our matchlesse power,
Witnesse the fall of Albionens crew,
Witnesse the fall of Humber and his Hannes,
And this foul death hath now increas'd our woe,
By taking Corineus from this life,
And in his room leaving us worlds of care.

Thra. But none may more bewaile his mournfull hearse,
Then I that am the issue of his loins,
Now foul befall that cursed Humber's throat,
That was the causer of his lingring wound.

Loc. Tears cannot raise him from the dead again,
But where's my Lady Mistris Guendoline?

Thra. In Cornwall, Locrine, is my sister now,
Providing for my Father's funeral.

Loc. And let her there provide her mourning weeds,
And mourn for ever her own widdow-hood:
Ne're shall she come within our Palace gate,
To countercheck brave Locrine in his love,
Go, boy, to Dentolium, down the Lee,
Unto the arch where lovely Estrild lies,
Bring her and Sabren straight unto the Court,
She shall be Queen in Guendolines room,
Let others waile for Corineus death,
I mean not so to macerate my mind,
For him that barr'd me from my hearts desire.

Thra. Hath Locrine then forsook his Guendoline?
Is Corineus death so soon forgot?
If there be gods in heaven, as sure there be,
If there be fiends in hell, as needs there must,
They will revenge this thy notorious wrong,
Ande pour their plagues upon thy cursed head.

Loc. What, prat'st thou, peasant, to thy Sovereigne?
Or art thou stricken in some extasie?
Do'st thou not tremble at our royal looks?
Do'st thou not quake when mighty Locrine frowns?
Thou beardless boy, were't not that Locrine scorns
To vex his mind with such a heartlesse child,
With the sharp point of this my battel-axe,
I'de send thy soul to Puryslegiton.

Thra. Though I be young and of a tender age,
Yet will I cope with Locrine when he dares.
My noble father with his conquering sword,
Slew the two gyants Kings of Aquitain.

Thrasimachus is not so degenerate,
That he should fear and tremble at the looks
Or taunting words of a veneration squire.

Loc. Menacest thou thy royal Sovereigne?
Uncivil, not befitting such as you.
Injurious traitor (for he is no lesse
That at defiance standeth with his King).
Leave these thy taunts, leave these thy bragging words,
Unlesse thou mean'st to leave thy wretched life.

Thra. If Princes stain their glorious dignitie
With ugly spots of monstrous infamie,
They lesse their former estimation,
And throw themselves into a hell of hate.

Loc. Wilt thou abuse my gentle patience,
As though thou did'st our high displeasure scorne?
Proud boy, that thou maist know thy Prince is mov'd,
Yea, greatly mov'd at this thy swelling pride,
We banish thee for ever from our Court.

Thra. Then, losell Locrine, look unto thy self,

Thrasimachus will venge this injurie.

Exit.

Loc. Farewell, proud boy, and learn to use thy tongue.

Assa. Alas, my Lord, you should have call'd to mind
The latest words that Brutus spake to you,
How he desir'd you, by the obedience
That children ought to bear their sire,
To love and favour Lady Guendoline:
Consider this, that if the injurie
Do move her mind, as certainly it will,
War and dissention follows speedily.
What though her power be not so great as yours,
Have you not seen a mighty Elephant
Slain by the biting of a silly Mouse?
Even so the chance of war inconstant is.

Loc. Peace Uncle, peace, and cease to talk hereof,
For he that seeks by whispering this or that,
To trouble Locrine in his sweetest life,
Let him perswade himself to die the death.

Enter the Page, with Estrild and Sabren.

Estr. O say me, Page? tell me, where is the King?
Wherefore doth he send for me to the Court?
Is it to die? is it to end my life?

Say me, sweet boy? tell me and do not fain.

Page. No, trust me, Madam, if you will credit the little honestie that is yet left me, there is no such danger as you fear, but prepare your self, yonder's the King.

Estr. Then, Estrild, lift thy dazled spirits up,
And blesse that blessed time, that day, that hour,
That warlike Locrine first did favour thee.
Peace to the King of Britany, my Love,
Peace to all those that love and favour him.

Locrine taking her up.

Doth Estrild fall with such submission
Before her servant King of Albion?
Arise, fair Lady, leave this lowly chear,
Lift up those looks that cherish Locrine's heart,
That I may freely view that roscall face,
Which so intangled hath my love-sick brest.
Now to the Court, where we will court it out,
And passe the night and day in Venus sports.
Frollick, brave Peers, be joyfull with your King. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Guendoline, Thrasimachus, Adrian, and souldiers.

Guen. You gentle winds that with your modest blasts,
Passe through the circuit of the heavenly vault,
Enter the clouds unto the throne of Jove,
And bear my prayers to his all-hearing ears,
For Locrine hath forsaken Guendoline,
And learnt to love proud Humbers concubine.
You happy sprites that in the concave skie
With pleatant joy, enjoy your sweetest love,
Shed forth those tears with me, which then you shed,
When first you woo'd your Ladies to your wills:
Those tears are fittest for my wofull case,
Since Locrine thuns my nothing pleasant face.
Blush Heavens, blush Sun, and hide thy shining beams,
Shadow thy radiant locks in gloomy clouds,

Deny

Deny thy cheerfull light unto the world,
Where nothing reigns but falshood and deceit.
What said I, falshood? I, that filthy crime,
For Locrine hath forsaken Guendoline.
Behold the heavens do wail for Guendoline:
The shining sun doth blush for Guendoline:
The liquid air doth weep for Guendoline:
The very ground doth groan for Guendoline.
I, they are milder then the Britain King,
For he rejecteth luckless Guendoline.

Thra. Sister, complaints are bootless in this cause,
This open wrong must have an open plague:
This plague must be repaid with grievous war,
This war must finish with Locrinus death,
His death will soon extinguish our complaints.

Guen. O no, his death will more augment my woes,
He was my husband, brave Thrasimachus,
More dear to me then the apple of mine eye,
Nor can I find in heart to work his scathe.

Thra. Madam, if not your proper injuries,
Nor my exile, can move you to revenge:
Think on our father Corineus words,
His words to us stand alwayes for a Law.
Should Locrine live that caus'd my fathers death?
Should Locrine live that now divorceth you?
The heavens, the earth, the air, the fire reclaims;
And then why should all we deny the same?

Guen. Then henceforth farewell womanish complaints,
All childish pittie henceforth then farewell:
But cursed Locrine look unto thy self,
For Nemesis the mistresse of Revenge,
Sits arm'd at all points on our dismal blades,
And cursed Estrild that inflam'd his heart,
Shall if I live, die a reproachfull death.

Madan. Mother, though nature makes me to lament
My luckless fathers froward lechery;
Yet for he wrongs my Lady mother, thus,
I, if I could, my self would work his death.

Thra. See Madam, see, the desire of revenge
Is in the children of a tender age.

Forward, brave souldiers, into Mertia,
Where we shall brave the coward to his face. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Locrine, Estrild, Habren, Asarachus, and the Souldiers.

Loer. Tell me, Asarachus, are the Cornish chuffes
In such great number come to Mertia,
And have they pitched there their host,
So close unto our Royal mansion?

Assa. They are, my Lord, and mean incontinent
To bid defiance to your Majesty.

Loer. It makes me laugh, to think that Guendoline
Should have the heart to come in armes 'gainst me.

Estr. Alas, my Lord, the horse will run amain
When as the spur doth gall him to the bone;
Jealousie, Locrine, hath a wicked sting.

Loer. Sayst thou so, Estrild, Beauties paragon?
Well, we will try her choler to the proof,
And make her know, Locrine can brook no braves.
March on, Asarachus, thou must lead the way,
And bring us to their proud pavillion. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter the Ghost of Corineus, with thunder & lightning.

Ghost. Behold, the circuit of the azure sky
Throws forth sad throbs, and grievous suspirs, Prejudicating Locrine's overthrow:
The fire casteth forth sharp darts of flames,
The great foundation of the triple world
Trembleth and quaketh with a mighty noise,
Presaging bloody massacres at hand.
The wandring birds that flutter in the dark,
When hellish night in cloudie chariot seated,
Casteth her mists on shadie Tellus face,
With sable mantles covering all the earth,
Now flies abroad amid the cheerfull day,
Foretelling some unwonted misery.
The snarling cures of darkned Tartarus,
Sent from Avernus ponds by Radamanth,
With howling ditties pester every wood;
The watrie Ladies and the lightfoot Fawns,
And all the rabble of the woodie Nymphs,
All trembling hide themselves in shadie groves,
And shrowd themselves in hideous hollow pits.
The boysterous Boreas thundreth forth revenge:
The stonie rocks cry out on sharp revenge:
The thornie bush pronounceth dire revenge.

Sound the alarme.

Now Corineus stay and see revenge,
And feed thy soul with Locrine's overthrow,
Behold they come, the Trumpets call them forth:
The roaring drums summon the souldiers.
Loe where their army glistereth on the plains.
Throw forth thy lightning, mighty Jupiter,
And pour thy plagues on cursed Locrine's head.

Stand aside.

Enter Locrine, Estrild, Asarachus, Habren and their souldiers at one door, Thrasimachus, Guendoline, Madan and their followers at another.

Loc. What is the Tygre started from his cave?
Is Guendoline come from Cornubia,
That thus she braveth Locrine to the teeth?
And hast thou found thine armour, pretty boy,
Accompanied with these thy stragling mates?
Believe me but this enterprise was bold,
And well deserveth commendation.

Guen. I Locrine, traiterous Locrine, we are come,
With full pretence to seek thine overthrow:
What have I done that thou should'st scorn me thus?
What have I said that thou should'st me reject?
Have I been disobedient to thy words?
Have I bewray'd thy arcane secrecie?
Have I dishonoured thy marriage bed
With filthy crimes, or with lascivious lusts?
Nay it is thou that hast dishonoured it,
Thy filthy mind overcome with filthy lusts,
Yieldeth unto affections filthy darts.
Unkind, thou wrong'st thy first and truest feir,
Unkind, thou wrong'st thy best and dearest friend;
Unkind, thou scorn'st all skilfull Brutus lawes,

For

Forgetting father, uncle, and thy self.

Estr. Believe me Locrine, but the girle is wise,
And well would seem to make a vestal Nun,
How finely frames she her oration.

Thra. Locrine we came not here to fight with words,
Words that can never win the victory,
But for you are so merry in your frumps,
Unsheath your swords, and trie it out by force,
That we may see who hath the better hand.

Locr. Think'st thou to dare me, bold Thrasimachus?
Think'st thou to fear me with thy taunting braves,
Or do we seem too weak to cope with thee?
Soon shall I shew thee my fine cutting blade,
And with my sword, the messenger of death,
Seal thee an acquittance for thy bold attempts. Exeunt.

Sound the alarum. Enter Locrine, Affaracus, and a souldier at one door, Guendoline, Thrasimachus, at another, Locrine and his followers driven back.

Then let Locrine and Estrild enter again in a maze.

Locr. O fair Estrilda, we have lost the field,
Thrasimachus hath won the victory,
And we are left to be a laughing stock,
Scoft at by those that are our enemies,
Ten thousand souldiers arm'd with sword and shield,
Prevail against an hundred thousand men,
Thrasimachus incest with fuming ire,
Rageth among'st the faint-heart souldiers
Like to grim Mars, when covered with his targe
He fought with Diomedes in the field,
Close by the banks of silver Simois. Sound the alarum.
O lovely Estrild now the chase begins,
Ne're shall we see the stately Troynovant
Mounted with coursers garnisht all with pearles
Ne're shall we view the fair Concordia,
Unlesse as captives we be thither brought.
Shall Locrine then be taken prisoner,
By such a youngling as Thrasimachus?
Shall Guendoline captivate my love?
Ne're shall mine eyes behold that dismal hour,
Ne're will I view that ruthfull spectacle,
For with my sword, this sharp curtle axe,
I'll cut in sunder my accursed heart.
But O you judges of the ninefold Stix,
Which with incessant torments rack the ghosts
Within the bottomlesse Abyssus pits,
You gods, commanders of the heavenly spheers,
Whose will and laws irrevocable stands,
Forgive, forgive, this foul accursed sin,
Forget O gods, this foul condemned fault:
And now my sword that in so many fights kiss his sword.
Hast sav'd the life of Brutus and his son,
End now his life that wisheth still for death,
Work now his death that wisheth still for death,
Work now his death that hateth still his life.
Farewell fair Estrild, beauties paragon,
Fram'd in the front of forlorn miseries,
Ne're shall mine eyes behold thy sun-shine eyes,
But when we meet in the Elysian fields,
Thither I go before with hastened pace.
Farewell vain world, and thy enticing snares.
Farewell foul sin, and thy enticing pleasures.
And welcome death, the end of mortal smart,
Welcome to Locrine's over-burthened heart.

Thrusts himself through with his sword.

Estr. Break heart with sobs and grievous suspirs,
Stream forth you tears from forth my watry eyes,
Help me to mourn for warlike Locrine's death,
Pour down your tears you watry regions,
For mighty Locrine is bereft of life.
O fickle fortune, O unstable world,
What else are all things, that this globe contains,
But a confused chaos of mishaps?
Wherein as in a glasse we plainly see,
That all our life is but a Tragedie.
Since mighty Kings are subject to mishap,
I, mighty Kings are subject to mishap,
Since martial Locrine is bereft of life;
Shall Estrild live then after Locrine's death?
Shall love of life bar her from Locrine's sword?
O no, this sword that hath bereft his life,
Shall now deprive me of my fleeing soul:
Strengthen these hands O mighty Jupiter,
That I may end my wofull miserie,
Locrine I come, Locrine I follow thee. Kills her self.
Sound the alarme. Enter Sabren.

Sab. What dolefull sight, what ruthfull spectacle
Hath fortune offred to my haplesse heart?
My father slain with such a fatal sword,
My mother murthred by a mortal wound?
What Thracian dog, what barbarous Mirmidon,
Would not relent at such a ruthfull case?
What fierce Achilles, what hard stony flint,
Would not bemoane this mournfull Tragedie?
Locrine, the map of magnanimitie,
Lies slaughtered in his foul accursed cave,
Estrild, the perfect pattern of renown,
Natures sole wonder, in whose beauteous brests,
All heavenly grace and vertue was inshrind,
Both massacred are dead within this cave,
And with them dies fair Pallas and sweet love.
Here lies a sword, and Sabren hath a heart,
This blessed sword shall cut my cursed heart,
And bring my soul unto my parents ghosts,
That they that live and view our Tragedy,
May mourn our case with mournfull plaudities.

Let her offer to kill her self.

Ay me, my virgins hands are too too weak,
To penetrate the bullwarke of my brest,
My fingers us'd to tune the amorous Lute,
Are not of force to hold this steely glain,
So I am left to waile my parents death,
Not able for to work my proper death.
Ah Locrine, honour'd for thy noblenesse.
Ah Estrild, famous for thy constancie.
Ill may they fare that wrought your mortal ends.

Enter Guendoline, Thrasimachus, Madan,
and the Souldiers.

Guen. Search souldiers search, find Locrine & his Love,
Find the proud strumpet, Humber's concubine,
That I may change those her so pleasing looks,
To pale and ignominious aspect.
Find me the issue of their cursed love,
Find me young Sabren, Locrine's only joy,
That I may glut my mind with lukewarme blood,
Swiftly distilling from the bastards brest,
My fathers ghost still hants me for revenge,
Crying, revenge my over-hastened death,
My brother's exile, and mine own divorce,
Banish remorse clean from my brazen heart,

All mercy from mine adamantine breasts.

Thra. Nor doth thy husband, lovely Guendoline,
That wonted was to guide our starlesse steps,
Enjoy this light; see where he murdered lies:
By lucklesse lot and froward frowning fate,
And by him lies his lovely paramour
Fair Estrild goared with a dismal sword,
And as it seems, both murdered by themselves,
Clasping each other in their feeble armes,
With loving zeal, as if for company
Their discontented corps were yet content.
To passe foul Stix in Charon's ferry-boat.

Guen. And hath proud Estrild then prevented me,
Hath she escaped Guendoline's wrath,
Violently by cutting off her life?
Would God she had the monstrous Hydra's lives,
That every hour she might have died a death
Worse then the twing of old Ixions wheel,
And every hour revive to die again,
As Titius bound to houles Caucason,
Doth feed the substance of his own mishap,
And every day for want of food doth die,
And every night doth live again to die.
But stay, me thinks I hear some fainting voice,
Mournfully weeping for their lucklesse death.

Sa. You mountain nymphs which in these deserts raign,
Cease off your hasty chase of savage beasts,
Prepare to see a heart oppress'd with care,
Addresse your ears to hear a mournfull stile,
No humane strength, no work can work my weal,
Care in my heart so tyrant like doth deal.
You Driades and lightfoot Satiri,
You gracious Fairies which at evening tide,
Your closets leave with heavenly beauty stor'd;
And on your shoulders spread your golden locks,
You savage bears in Caves and darkned Dens,
Come wail with me the martial Locrine's death.
Come mourn with me, for beateous Estrild's death.
Ah loving parents little do you know,
What sorrow Sabren suffers for your thrall.

Guen. But may this be, and is it possible,
Lives Sabren yet to expiate my wrath?
Fortune I thank thee for this curtesie,
And let me never see one prosperous hour,
If Sabren die not a reproachfull death.

Sa. Hard hearted death, that when the wretched call.
Art farthest off, and seldome hear'st at all.
But in the mid'st of fortunes good success,
Uncalled comes, and sheers our life in twain:
When will that hour, that blessed hour draw nigh,
When poor distressed Sabren may be gone.
Sweet Atropos cut off my fatal thred.

What art thou death, shall not poor Sabren die?

Guendoline taking her by the chin, shall say thus.

Guen. Yes damsel, yes, Sabren shall surely die,
Though all the world should seek to save her life,
And not a common death shall Sabren die,
But after strange and grievous punishments,
Shortly inflicted upon thy battards head,
Thou shalt be cast into the cursed streams,
And feed the fishes with thy tender flesh.

Sab. And think'st thou then, thou cruel homicid,
That these thy deeds shall be unpunished?
No traitor, no, the gods will venge these wrongs,
The fiends of hell will mark these injuries:
Never shall these bloud-sucking mally currs,
Bring wretched Sabren to her latest home.
For I my self in spite of thee and thine,
Mean to abridge my former destinies,
And that which Locrine's sword could not perform,
This present streame shall present bring to passe.
She drowneth her self.

Guen. One mischief follows anothers neck,
Who would have thought so young a maid as she
With such a courage would have sought her death.
And for because this River was the place
Where little Sabren resolutely died,
Sabren, for ever shall this same be call'd.
And as for Locrine our deceased spouse,
Because he was the son of mighty Brute,
To whom we owe our country, lives and goods,
He shall be buried in a stately tombe,
Close by his aged father Brutus bones,
With such great pomp and great solemnity,
As well befits so brave a Prince as he.
Let Estrild lie without the shallow vaults,
Without the honour due unto the dead,
Because she was the authour of this War.
Retire brave followers unto Troynovant,
Where we will celebrate these exequies,
And place young Locrine in his father's Tombe.

Exeunt omnes.

Atey. Lo here the end of lawlesse treachery,
Of Usurpation and ambitious pride,
And they that for their private amours dare
Turmoile our land, and set their broils abroad,
Let them be warn'd by these premisses,
And as a woman was the onely cause
That civil discord was then stirr'd up,
So let us pray for that renowned maid,
That eight and thirty years the Scepter sway'd
In quiet peace and sweet felicitie,
And every wight that seeks her graces smart,
Would that this sword were pierced in his heart. Exit.
